Trade Deficit Keeps Falling

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit narrowed to $27.72 billion from April through June, the smallest quarterly imbalance in four years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gap between imports and U.S. exports showed a 2.3 percent improvement from the first three months of the year, when the trade deficit totaled $28.38 billion.

The improvement stemmed from a 3.4 percent increase in exports, which climbed to a record $90.87 billion. This more than offset a 2 percent rise in imports, which also hit a record of $118.58 billion.

The April-June trade deficit, the difference between imports and exports, was at the lowest since a $25.7 billion deficit in the first quarter of 1985.

For the first six months of the year, the deficit was running at an annual rate of $112.2 billion, down 11.7 percent from the $127.2 billion deficit registered in all of 1988.

However, many economists are predicting the deficit will begin rising in the last half of this year. They are worried that the rising value of the dollar will make U.S. goods less competitive on overseas markets at the same time that Americans' appetite for imports remains undiminished.

USAir-Henson Mechanics Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LYNCHBURG, Va. — A small airplane carrying USAir employees crashed in patchy fog early today near the Lynchburg Municipal Airport, killing all five people aboard, state police said.

The Piper-31 aircraft was coming in for a landing when it went down at about 12:50 a.m., according to W.R. Stafford, a state police dispatcher in Appomattox.

USAir spokeswoman Susan Young said the airline had chartered the Bayland Aviation plane in Salisbury, Md. Those aboard included a pilot and co-pilot and three USAir-Henson Aviation mechanics who were going to Lynchburg to work on a passenger jet that was having mechanical problems.

State police withheld the identities of the victims until relatives were notified.

The plane missed the runway by a quarter mile and sheared through some trees in a wooded area before crashing in a corn field, according to Cmdr. S.K. Newby of the Lynchburg Police Department. The crash left no survivors.

Police Numbers Lag As Crimes Increase

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Violent crime rates in the nation's 59 largest cities rose 43 percent in the 1977-87 decade but manpower in the police departments of those cities increased only 2 percent in that period, according to a Department of Justice report released Sunday.

The study by Brian A. Reeves of the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics, found that there were 120,000 regular officers in departments serving cities of 250,000 or more in calendar 1987. After changes in population and areas served are considered, the study said, the average city employed 2.3 full-time sworn officers per 1,000 population, a shade fewer than the 2.4 per thousand recorded a decade earlier.

"This lack of increase in the number of sworn officers relative to population and land areas contrasts with changes in the volume of serious crimes reported to these police departments over the same period," according to the report.

Nationally, the number of violent crimes on the Justice Department's Uniform Crime Reports index increased from an average of 8,195 per 100,000 residents to 10,012 per 100,000, an average 22 percent jump during the decade, the report said. The violent crime index combines national data on murder, negligent manslaughter, rape, robbery and aggravated assault.

Although their enrollments are relatively stable, the report said, regular police departments in several cities cooperate with special units of other jurisdictions.

The nation's largest police department, New York City's 27,478-member force, was backed up by five specialized departments with 10,100 other officers, the report said. They have law enforcement jurisdiction over the city's transit system, public schools, public housing, transportation hubs and fire investigations.

The report noted an increasing trend toward "civilianization" of work not directly involved with law enforcement. It said that the proportion of non-uniformed employment has increased from 20.5 percent to 23 percent with non-uniformed personnel taking over such assignments as research and training, forensic analysis and equipment maintenance, as well as routine clerical and communications chores.

The survey, the Justice Department's first over-all study of big-city police departments, will make it

Schools Make Smooth Opening

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It was a typical first day for the 17,300 students in the 31 Pitt County public schools today, but school officials are still trying to cope with the effects of funding cutbacks and a shortage of bus drivers.

Cuts in Basic Education Program funding by the General Assembly forced local school officials to cut back or eliminate many programs. "We had to cut back on some teaching positions, especially those that were locally funded," Barry Gaskins, a spokesman for the county school system, said.

The system's financial flexibility was also cut by the elimination of a pilot school-finance program, Gaskins said.

The bus driver shortage is also causing headaches for county officials. The system has not fully recovered from the loss of 16- and 17-year-old bus drivers last year, Gaskins said. "We're still in need of bus drivers," he said. "This adult bus driver thing has been a bear for us."

As of this morning, the system was still short one driver, but Gaskins said staff members will fill in to keep the buses rolling. "Usually what happens is a staff member who's certified to drive a bus will drive them," he said.

However, the problems did not keep the school year from getting off to a good start, Gaskins said. Except for heavy traffic around some of the elementary schools caused by parents bringing their children to school, everything was been smooth, he said.

"It's a typical first day," Patrick Austin, principal of J.H. Rose High School, said. Except for four late buses and 30 students who planned to enroll today, Austin said he had no problems. "It's been extremely smooth," he said.

This year, the school system will emphasize dealing with parents and students as consumers of public education, Gaskins said. "The schools will be emphasizing a lot of different things regarding customer service," he said.

Literacy Awareness Promoted

Next week — Sept. 3-9 — has been declared Literacy Week in Greenville and Pitt County, with International Literacy Day being observed Friday.

In honor of the week, a Blue Ribbon Literacy Awareness Campaign is being sponsored by The Daily Reflector. Twelve-inch strips of blue ribbon are being taped to some 24,000 fliers to be inserted in the Sunday edition of the newspaper. Each subscriber is being asked to place the ribbon on a car door handle or radio antenna to proclaim support of efforts to improve literacy in Pitt County.

The city has announced that all police cars will display the ribbons. Sheppard Library is giving a ribbon with each book being checked out this week.

All the ribbon is being provided by The Daily Reflector — some 800 yards.

Jim Bakker Goes To Trial In Charlotte

By Dennis Patteson
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Television evangelist Jim Bakker headed to court today to defend himself against charges he stole from his flock to support an opulent lifestyle.

Prosecutors say Bakker and other executives of the PTL television ministry diverted for their own benefit at least $4 million of the $158 million they raised for "lifetime partnerships" at the ministry's resort hotels.

Bakker, joined by attorneys George T. Davis and Harold Bender, entered the federal courthouse today for the opening of his trial. When someone in the crowd shouted, "We love you," Bakker replied, "Have a nice day."

"There is a whole different side to this case and this man that just hasn't been revealed," Davis said earlier in an interview. "There are two sides to every story or we wouldn't be here."

If convicted of all 28 counts of fraud and conspiracy, Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $5 million.

"I was a pastor, and a businessman I was not," said Bakker in testimony during a lawsuit last summer. Bakker, who says he is innocent, and his attorney, George T. Davis, have declined to discuss their defense strategy.

Bakker, 49, resigned from PTL in March 1987 after revelations about his sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn and a $265,000 payoff to buy her silence. Three months after Bakker resigned, PTL was put under bankruptcy protection.

Outside the courthouse today, about 50 journalists and cameramen waited, hoping to get one of the two rows of seats reserved for news media. Other journalists signed up for one of the 28 spectator seats in the small courtroom.

Two men from Columbia, S.C., carried picket signs denouncing Bakker and several other television evangelists.

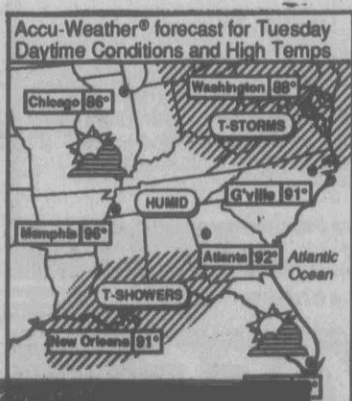

One of the pickets, Bob Eckhardt, said he and David Hallman didn't represent a specific denomination. "We just want people to know God isn't playing games. Anybody who reads the Bible knew that (PTL) wasn't right," Eckhardt said.

In a sentencing hearing for former PTL Vice President Richard Dortch last week, prosecutors gave a glimpse at their case against Bakker.

Murder Charge

A Winterville man was arrested and charged with murder Sunday following the stabbing death of another man living at the same address.

Arrested at the Route 2, Winterville, residence and charged with murder was Anadio Hernandez Romero, 22, Route 2, Winterville. The stabbing victim was identified as Jose E. Luciano Martinez Annoyo, 33, of the same address.

Pitt County sheriff officers said they arrived at the scene minutes after the 5:45 a.m. stabbing Sunday.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, witnesses told officers the two men had been fighting and that Annoyo was using a pool cue stick in the altercation. The two were living in a house on a farm near Haddock's Crossroads owned by Jack Allen of Route 2, Winterville.

Romero is being held in the Pitt County Jail without bond.

Marijuana Found

Pitt County sheriff officers on Wednesday destroyed 33 marijuana plants found off Route 1, Fountain.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the plants were discovered by a hunter behind a tobacco field about two miles east of Fountain near Dilda's Grove Free Will Baptist Church. He said he did not know the owner of the land, indicating that his officers have not checked county property records. He said no one has been arrested and that the investigation is continuing.

Each of the plants at maturity would have been worth approximately $1,600, he said.

Accident Reported

A Pitt County sheriff's deputy wrecked a car on State Road 1534 Friday night while answering a call to a mobile home park in the area.

Sheriff deputy Eddie H. Latham, 55, told investigating Highway Patrol officer J.B. Heath that he rounded a curve and saw an oncoming car on his side of the road. He said that rather than hit the oncoming car, he veered to the right, hitting a utility pole and a fence.

He was subsequently taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released.

According to investigating officer J.B. Heath, damage to the car was estimated at $5,000.

Teacher's Workshop

Several teachers and teacher's assistants who work with severely handicapped students from the Pitt County school system recently completed a two-day workshop at the Northeast Regional Education Center.

The focus of the workshop was curriculum development with emphasis on motor development, strategies in working with non-compliant behavior, assessment, language-communication development, and vocational skill development.

Participants in the workshop included Marty Daughtry and Kathy Jacoby, both are teachers at E.B. Aycock Junior High School; Douglas C. Fields, Norma Byrd and Ethel Northern, all teacher's assistants at E.B. Aycock; Cynthia R. Sprouse and Mary Argent, both teachers from Wahl-Coates lab school, and Elizabeth Williams and Olinka C. Little, both teacher's assistants from Wahl-Coates.

Officer J.G. Bridges said Elburtis Burtis Jones, 33, of 2735 E. 10th St. was charged with possession of marijuana in connection with a 9:20 p.m. incident Saturday in the 400 block of Cotanche Street.

Officer C.S. Candler said Robert Daniel Vernekof of Vienna, Va., was charged with possession of cocaine in connection with a 1:06 a.m. incident Sunday in a parking lot at the intersection of Reade and Fourth streets.

According to Officer R.J. Brewington, Harold Dean Buckner of New Bern was charged with possession of cocaine in connection with a 1:27 a.m. Sunday incident in a parking lot at the intersection of Reade and Fourth streets.

Embezzlement Charge

Jamie Tutton Kelley, 21, of 1205 E. Fifth St. was arrested by Greenville police on embezzlement charges Saturday.

Detective G.W. Williams said Ms. Kelley was charged in connection with an incident at Tom Togs at 1901 Dickinson Ave. which was reported to the department on Friday.

Rape Charge

Greenville police arrested Pierre Lamont Smith, 27, of the Greenville Homeless Shelter on rape and kidnapping charges Saturday.

Detective G.W. Williams said Smith was charged about 1:15 p.m. in connection with an incident reported to the department about 5:30 a.m. Saturday involving the rape of a woman in the Kearney Park area.

Wife Enters Plea To Poison Charge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAHAM, N.C. — Arsenic poisoning suspect Blanche Taylor Moore pleaded not guilty this morning to charges stemming from the death of her first husband and the near-fatal poisoning of her second husband.

Mrs. Moore was arraigned in Alamance County Superior Court. She will remain in jail without bond, and the court scheduled a bond hearing to follow the results of two exhumations.

Authorities have received permission to exhume the bodies of Mrs. Moore's first mother-in-law and a former co-worker at a Kernersville grocery store.

She has been charged in Alamance County with assault after her current husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore, was poisoned in April. She also is charged with murder in the death of her first husband, James N. Taylor.

Mrs. Moore is charged with murder in connection with the arsenic poisoning death of a boyfriend, Raymond C. Reid, in Forsyth County. Although she has been charged in that county, no warrant has been served.

Still to be considered are motions for a change of venue and for prosecutors to provide details of the facts to defense attorney Mitchell McEntire so he can prepare the defense.

Chess Tournament

Ed Forbes placed first and Wade Johnson Jr. placed second in a non-rated round-robin chess tournament held Sunday at the Community Building.

Other players were William Wrighten, Otto Dystra, Daniel Dawson, Carroll Webber, Joe Small and Mike Griffon.

The Greenville Chess Club meets each Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Building at the corner of Fourth and Greene streets. The club is sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks department. The next tournament will be held in the spring.

Services Planned

Consecration and dedication services will be conducted today through Friday at 7:30 p.m. each night at Friendship Holiness Church in Falkland.

The speaker tonight will be Sadie Randolph; Tuesday, Mary Teel; Wednesday, Louise Tucker; Thursday, Verna Perkins, and Friday, Thennie Graham.

Elizabeth Little is in charge of the services.

ACLU Says It Will Fight Anti-Loiter Law In Fayetteville

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — Officials with the state chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union say they are prepared to fight a Fayetteville ordinance that prohibits loitering for the purpose of dealing drugs.

"If we find someone convicted of loitering but no drugs are found, that would be a good case to appeal," said William Simpson, legal director for North Carolina's ACLU chapter.

But police are hailing the law aimed at street drug dealers as a valuable new weapon in the war on drugs.

"It is a tool that fills a void that has been a problem for us," said Maj. Philip Cannady in Fayetteville, where police have arrested eight people under the new law.

Simpson said he discussed the loitering laws with the ACLU board of directors this week and was told to find an appropriate case to appeal.

At least two other North Carolina cities, Wilmington and Winston-Salem, have adopted drug loitering ordinances. Winston-Salem police have not begun enforcing the law, and police in Wilmington have made several arrests, but no cases have gone to court, The Fayetteville Observer-Times reported Sunday.

The ordinance prohibits loitering for the purpose of dealing drugs and is patterned after similar laws aimed at prostitution that have been upheld by the state Court of Appeals.

The Fayetteville ordinance says violations of the law include "attempting to stop motorists or passers-by, being a known unlawful drug user or seller," "behaving in a manner that raises reasonable suspicion" that a law may be broken, exchanging objects or money, fleeing from police, being at a location frequented by drug users or sellers, or driving a vehicle registered to a known drug user or seller. The maximum penalty is a $50 fine and a 30-day jail term.

Cannady said the first eight arrests in Fayetteville were made by the career criminal intelligence unit, which is often involved in undercover operations.

"It is demoralizing for police officers and the citizens of Fayetteville to pull up at a street corner and see someone dealing drugs," he said. "It is unfortunate it is that blatant, but we have some areas of town where this is going on."

Fayetteville officers attended training sessions for enforcement of the ordinance, but Cannady said the department wanted to get a few test cases in court and see what happens before further arrests are made.

If judges uphold the ordinance, Cannady said many other cities in the state will adopt similar ordinances.

Other cities across the country, including Washington, D.C., Tacoma, Wash., and Kalamazoo, Mich., have adopted similar ordinances, and ACLU chapters are organizing efforts to convince judges to strike down the laws.

So far, those arrested by Fayetteville police are also charged with other crimes that are felonies, such as possession with intent to sell or deliver drugs. Because of the felony charges, the cases will bypass District Court and be heard in Superior Court. From there, the cases will go to the Court of Appeals.

Art Spitzer, legal director of the ACLU chapter in Washington said the city adopted a similar law a month ago. It designates certain areas as narcotic loitering zones. Police post notices at the zones and for five days can arrest two or more people who gather in the zone and refuse to move. Spitzer said police have designated only one zone for one five-day period.

Correction

Sunday's Reflector incorrectly reported the time that classes begin and end at two Pitt County schools. D.H. Conley High School will begin classes at 8:15 a.m. and end at 2:50 p.m. and E.B. Aycock Junior High School will begin classes at 8:30 a.m. and end at 3:15 p.m.

Move Forward

Voting Machines Necessary Expense

While it is proper for the Pitt County commissioners to be careful with the county's funds, they must move to provide adequate and modern voting equipment to conduct elections.

The board last week by a 6-3 vote rejected the purchase of new voting machines recommended by the Pitt County Board of Elections. The elections board wants to purchase the 126 Shouptronic 1242 machines to replace old machines that are no longer considered adequate. That board had hoped the purchase could be made prior to the 1989 municipal elections.

The consensus of those voting against the purchase at present seemed to be lack of competition in voting machines. Lack of cash in the county budget was also cited as a reason for not moving now. Purchase of enough units to serve Pitt County is estimated to cost $620,000. The Shouptronic is the only machine of its kind approved by the State Board of Elections.

With deference to the commissioners' desire to spend tax funds carefully, it is vital that they provide the best voting equipment possible. If the state board has only approved this particular equipment then it must be this is the one that adequately does the job.

The commissioners have an obligation to make the voting process as convenient and as accurate as possible for taxpayers. In this time of rapid communication they must also consider the need to provide election results as quickly and as accountably as possible.

The proposed equipment will provide totals almost instantly following the close of voting. It eliminates the cost of printing paper ballots and also the need to keep poll workers on hand far into the night tabulating votes following an election.

The machines could also virtually eliminate human error, which can be costly and confusing to voters. A case in point in the disputed D.D. Garrett-James Dupree contest for county commission in 1988, where the outcome was disputed and a special election necessary.

If the county commissioners are adamant in not providing the equipment for this year's municipal elections, then certainly they should be planning now to have the equipment in time for 1990 general elections. The county doesn't need another cliff hanger next year.

Parties Gear Up For '90 Elections

F. Alan Boyce

RALEIGH — State political parties are taking advantage of the late summer doldrums to map strategies they hope will heat up the 1990 legislative races.

With only county and municipal elections this November, Democrats and Republicans are starting early in recruiting legislative candidates and defining the issues they hope will sway voters.

"I think abortion is gonna right now be the biggest issue," said Tim Minton, a political coordinator at state GOP headquarters. "Now the issue is gonna be whether you're for it or against it. That will make it very interesting on both sides."

A recent U.S. Supreme Court decision opened the door to greater state intervention in abortions. Republicans, outnumbered 37-13 in the Senate and 74-46 in the House, hope to use that and a groundswell of public concern about illegal drugs to increase their numbers in the General Assembly, Minton said.

'With only county and municipal elections this November, Democrats and Republicans are starting early in recruiting legislative candidates and defining the issues they hope will sway voters.'

But Lawrence Davis, chairman of the state Democratic Party, said he is not concerned about focusing on matters traditionally championed by Republicans.

"We're glad that they're doing it. We'll be doing the same thing," he said. "That (abortion) is not a Republican issue, any more than a Democratic issue."

Democrats, seen by many as casting about for an agenda that is conservative enough to appeal to changing social mores, are spending their time on candidate recruitment, fund-raising and "party building," Davis said.

"The development of issues that are unifying and positive issues important to the people of our state and the nation is getting a lot of attention right now," he said.

"Basically, we think it's important to focus on those matters as to which there is substantial agreement such as drugs, education, and environment," Davis added. "Those three are paramount."

He cited the high dropout rate in high schools, Scholastic Aptitude Test scores on which North Carolina students ranked 49th in the nation and a high adult illiteracy rate among problems facing educators. Davis also said Democrats want to put more attention on such environmental issues as dealing with hazardous waste and protecting groundwater supplies.

Davis agreed that the wider focus of the Democrats could help turn attention away from abortion, an issue that has gotten Davis in trouble before. He once drew the ire of many Democratic women for suggesting the party move away from its support for a woman's right to abortion.

"I do think it's true that the public can identify a party or candidate with only so many issues and that once you get beyond three, additional issues begin to get lost in the shuffle," Davis said.

The GOP political arsenal still includes the issue of gubernatorial veto, which was left unresolved in the state House.

"I'm sure that will be mentioned prominently when it comes time to give reasons to vote Republican," Minton said.

Republicans followed Gov. Jim Martin's lead in supporting the proposed constitutional amendment to give the governor veto power while Democrats split on the issue.

Davis issued a statement late in the legislative session opposing attempts to tie the veto with four-year terms for legislators. But he said party leaders on the Democratic Policy Committee are not against the veto.

"The sentiment among members of that committee is in favor of the veto and opposed to the four-year term," he said. "Those are both matters on which reasonable minds can differ. ... What we object strenuously to is tying those issues" to a single vote by the public.

One other legislative issue may spill over into the political arena — the statewide lottery.

Minton said he believes a referendum on the lottery, already approved by the Senate, will get through the House next year in time to be on the 1990 ballot.

"We'll have a big turnout at the polls with a referendum such as that," he said.

While Minton said Republicans are generally opposed to a lottery, he said the higher turnout might work to the GOP's advantage.

"In off-year elections, one of the problems we have is getting a big turnout, especially of our own people," he said.

"We are in the midst of a revolution — a quiet, intellectual revolution spinning out dramatic insights into how the brain works, how we acquire language and how we construct meaning in our lives ..."

The 1987 California English Language Arts Framework

The literature-based reading program being introduced in California schools this fall, reflecting a revolutionary trend in schools nationwide, will fundamentally alter the way children learn to read, write and spell.

On the bright side, literature-based instruction heralds a renaissance of the love of reading. The colorful new readers are filled with classic literature instead of prose hacked out at publishing houses — progress, by anyone's standard. After a six-year transition, all readers may become obsolete. Classrooms of the future will be filled with what youngsters call "real books."

Parents may be surprised to find no spelling or grammar texts in their kids' backpacks. Phonics and skill instruction will once again take a back seat, along with paper-and-pencil drill, objective tests and detailed record-keeping.

California's new English-Language Arts Framework, cornerstone of the program, is a broad philosophical document. In practice, interpretation will vary from district to district and teacher to teacher.

Ideally, the classroom of the future will be an active place where reading, speaking and writing are the main occupations. Traditional reading groups — high, medium and low — are on the way out. Children will read self-selected books, books chosen by the teacher to meet individual needs, and "core literature," selected by district committees. They will respond to reading through a wealth of language-related projects.

The new wisdom is that reading skills should be taught in context, only as needed; likewise for grammar and spelling, 50 percent of which will optimally be culled from readings and student writing. Any loss in continuity from year to year is deemed negligible next to the benefit of making skills relevant. According to the latest research, mastering spelling words in isolation has little relation to becoming a good speller; grammar is best absorbed through listening.

These reforms represent a swing of the pendulum away from the hyper-rationalism of the '70s, when behavioral scientists tried to take the guesswork out of teaching by quantifying reading into hundreds of small, measurable skills, ushering in one of the most tedious and compulsive eras in schoolhouse history. Long-term results were disappointing — and little wonder, since skills had

Long-term results were disappointing — and little wonder: A pivotal 1985 national study, "On Becoming a Nation of Readers," revealed that 70 percent of the reading period in elementary classrooms was being spent on rote "seatwork" — filling in blanks and circling or underlining answers on mind-numbing skill sheets.

The backlash now sweeping across the nation is founded on a radically different assumption: Given meaningful experiences in reading and writing, the majority of children will become fluent readers without intensive, skill-based instruction. Just as figure-eights and compulsives do not constitute ice skating, mastering a sequence of skills does not necessarily add up to fluent reading. Thus, the new framework states that while some phonics is necessary in the primary grades, children learn to read primarily by reading.

As anyone who has marveled at a preschooler reading a favorite storybook will tell you, children who love books and hear stories frequently can acquire reading naturally, just as they acquire language.

Nevertheless, many teachers are concerned that the pendulum may swing too far. They argue that skill-based instruction in phonics, reading comprehension, spelling and grammar are essential to a balanced language-arts program. Because children have more than one learning style, effective teachers include varied strategies in their bags of tricks.

In a way, the issue boils down to a conflict between two learning modalities of the human brain. The '70s were dominated by a linear, analytic style characteristic of the left brain. The current program leans toward a holistic, whole-word approach. Most teachers tend to be eclectic, recognizing that both modes of learning are native to human intelligence and thus have a place in the classroom.

One controversial feature of the program requires that all students be exposed to the core literature, whether they can decode it or not. For years, individualized instruction — assigning books and workbooks according to ability levels — has been standard practice. Now, flying a banner called "equal access," proponents argue that all children need an opportunity to grapple with age-appropriate books and themes. Teachers and peers may read aloud to low students, who will learn by "following along."

Interpretations vary on how much classroom time should be spent on whole-group reading. There is also debate on what innovative techniques teachers can use to meet individual needs of students without assigning workbooks and readers at their functional level.

One thing is certain. Never has a program demanded more from teachers, who are gearing up to make literature-based instruction work. Extensive retraining would be desirable, but in some California districts, in part due to budget deficits, in-service training has been insufficient. California's new framework is idealistic in the best sense: It seeks to help students "unlock the doors of language and discover the best that human beings have thought, written and spoken." Since the benefits of producing "a nation of readers" are profound, in this age of TV, movies and video games, there is all the more reason to pause at the outset and take stock.

A global reading program in a state as diverse as California is best incorporated with balance and moderation. A renaissance is needed, not a revolution. Educators can ensure success of the program by embracing innovative strategies while still maintaining a commitment to structure, defined skill objectives and academic continuity.

Nor should Sacramento delude the public that pedagogic reforms will solve the crisis in our schools. The mediocre results of even excellent state programs is proof that methodology isn't the issue. Broken families, poor discipline, poverty, transiency, apathy and lack of follow-through at home, a multilingual population, low funding for education and the resulting overcrowded classrooms and underpaid teachers are the real issues.

These conditions undermine the best methods and the best teachers. In this context, new teaching methods and texts can have little effect without attention to real-world solutions: smaller classes, more help for limited English speakers, clear-cut standards for grade-level promotion, home involvement, tougher use of review and dismissal procedures to remove weak teachers and administrators, better pay to attract top educators to California, a uniform, statewide curriculum to meet the needs of a transient population and common-sense teaching strategies.

NCSU Names Panel To Seek New Chancellor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The head of the North Carolina State University Board of Trustees has named five members of a panel to search for a replacement for Chancellor Bruce Poulton who will resign next month.

John N. Gregg, newly elected chairman of the board of trustees, has named five trustees to serve on an eight-member search committee to begin the process of selecting a new chancellor.

Poulton announced last week that he would resign his position Sept. 30. His announcement came days before the University of North Carolina Board of Trustees received a report regarding athletics at N.C. State.

UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. said in his report that academic rules had been misused at N.C. State to keep basketball players eligible for play. It called for a list of reforms and for N.C. State basketball coach Jim Valvano to give up his dual role as athletic director.

Gregg said the search committee would be made up of five members of the board, including himself; at least two members from the N.C. State Faculty Senate; and one student. The final three committee members have not yet been chosen.

Gregg, president of Avtex Fibers Inc. in Valley Forge, Pa., chose the board members for the committee at a trustee meeting Friday.

William L. Burns Jr. of Durham was appointed chairman of the search committee. He is president of Central Carolina Bank and a former president of N.C. State's foundation.

Other members of the board of trustees on the committee are Doby, Klopman, and Alan Dickson of Charlotte, president of Ruddick Corp.

The faculty senate will select its own representatives on the search committee, Gregg said. He said all members would be selected within 10 days.

The search committee will submit the names of two chancellor candidates to Spangler, who will choose between the two. The UNC Board of Governors will make the final decision.

Gregg said that Spangler would appoint an interim chancellor to take over after Poulton's departure.

Meanwhile, N.C. State board of trustees member Troy Doby says he considered presenting a resolution to the board at its meeting Friday that would have called for Spangler to reject Poulton's resignation.

Doby said his decision came after an informal discussion with other trustees before the board's meeting on Friday.

He said he had written the resolution and had discussed it with Poulton before presenting it to the other trustees.

But sources told a Raleigh newspaper that a member of Poulton's staff had written the resolution. Copies of the proposal were made in the chancellor's offices for distribution to the trustees.

"One of Mr. Poulton's staff members did not draft the resolution," Doby told The News and Observer in an interview published Sunday. "That never happened. I did the drafting. I typed it out on my word processor."

Doby said he wanted the board to support Poulton and to persuade Spangler to reject the chancellor's resignation.

"I discussed it with Bruce, and he said, 'You all do whatever you want to do,'" said Doby, a Raleigh resident.

He said he thought Poulton had been forced out of office unfairly and was not responsible for academic abuses uncovered in a six-month investigation of N.C. State's athletics department by the Poole Commission, a UNC investigative panel.

"I felt like Bruce's resignation was for the convenience of NCSU, and it was done as a result of political pressure," he said.

He said he decided to withdraw the resolution after talking with other trustees.

"That was felt to be inappropriate at that particular meeting, and it was taken out," he said. "I put it in, and it was taken out. It wasn't that anybody convinced me."

But another N.C. State trustee,

Elizabeth Lee of Lumberton, said the board urged Doby to drop his resolution.

"You're right, he did have one, but we talked him out of it," Mrs. Lee said.

William Klopman, who served as a member of the Poole Commission and was sworn in Friday as a new member of the university's board of trustees, said, "I heard his resolution, but I don't think it's appropriate to discuss it."

Raymond Long, chairman of NCSU's faculty senate, said he heard when he arrived at the trustees' meeting about 4:30 p.m. that such a resolution had been discussed.

"No name was mentioned," Long said. "I heard when I arrived that this had occurred, but it didn't come up in open session."

Watkins Funeral Set For Tuesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Friends and family members prepared to bury state Rep. Billy Watkins as he was remembered for his 20 years of service in the General Assembly.

Watkins, 68, a lawyer and 10-term Granville County legislator, died of a heart attack at his home in Oxford on Saturday. A nursing supervisor at Granville Hospital in Oxford said Watkins apparently collapsed while working in his yard at about 8 p.m.

"As a legislator and as a lawyer, Billy Watkins worked hard to make his goals a reality," said Gov. Jim Martin. "He was dedicated to the good of the state of North Carolina and, most especially, to public education. We will surely miss him and his leadership."

A visitation was to be held today from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Gentry, Newell and Vaughan Funeral Home in Oxford from 7 to 9 p.m., spokesman John Newell said. A funeral service is scheduled for 11 a.m. Tuesday at Oxford Baptist Church, where Watkins was a member. Burial will follow at Elmwood Cemetery in Oxford.

Watkins was chairman of the powerful state House Appropriations Committee from 1981 through 1988 and a top lieutenant of former House Speaker Liston Ramsey until Ramsey's ouster in the opening days of the 1989 legislative session.

The primary target of complaints from 20 Democrats and 45 Republicans who formed a coalition to unseat Ramsey, Watkins surrendered the House chairmanship during Ramsey's unsuccessful bid for a fifth term as speaker.

Watkins sharply criticized the dissidents who backed House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, calling them "turncoats" who "will not be Democrats." Watkins refused to apologize for the way he ran the Appropriations Committee or for his conduct as Ramsey's closest ally.

During the legislative session, which ended Aug. 13, Watkins was seldom heard from and he was relegated to insignificant committees, all chaired by Republicans.

On Saturday Ramsey described Watkins as a "great North Carolinian" — one of his closest friends and one of the best legislators he ever knew.

"He was always for the underdog. His word was his bond," Ramsey said.

Two years ago, the News and Observer of Raleigh wrote: "There may be a few more powerful men in the General Assembly than Rep. William T. 'Billy' Watkins, but none is more feared."

Roger Bone, a former legislator, lobbyist and friend, often said of Watkins: "Billy would walk a mile out of his way to get into a fight."

He had little patience for the polish others expected from politicians.

"Being tough and taking part in the fight is part of getting the job done," Watkins said in a 1987 newspaper interview. "I like tough people. I can't stand sneakiness, and I can't stand wishy-washiness — these mealy-mouthed people who can't take a stand."

But he said he could be warm.

"A lot of people have called me tough, mean, a street fighter, but I don't perceive myself as tough or mean," Watkins said. "I think I'm a rather warm individual. I think my children would tell you that. I know my grandchildren would tell you that."

Watkins was first elected to the General Assembly in 1968. His father, John S. Watkins, served in the House in the 1920s and 1940s. An older brother was a representative in the early 1960s.

Watkins was particularly close to former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green when Green was House speaker from 1975 through 1976.

He sought to succeed Green as speaker in 1977 but lost the election to Carl Stewart, a Democrat from Gastonia. Watkins' absence from the inner circle lasted until 1981, when Ramsey was elected speaker.

State Schools Superintendent Bobby Etheridge, who helped Watkins chair appropriations from 1985-88, noted that Watkins had been a key architect of the Basic Education Program, an eight-year, $800 million effort to improve public schools. Begun in 1985, the program is now in its fifth year.

"A giant oak has fallen in my opinion," Etheridge said Saturday night. "He was one of those people that a lot of folks didn't always understand."

"The thing I remember most about Billy Watkins is how he always had a deep, deep caring for those who didn't have a champion," he said.

Watkins, a horse enthusiast, in 1988 considered seeking the Democratic nomination for governor. He held a fund-raiser at the House arena on the N.C. State Fairgrounds and rode into the event on the back of a donkey dressed in overalls.

"Billy Watkins had equal concern for rural and urban people," state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said Sunday. "For farmers he championed tobacco, marketing, beef cattle research and the horse industry. He was my friend and I'll miss him."

Born July 1, 1921, Watkins received a bachelor of science degree from Wake Forest College, and earned his law degree from Wake Forest Law School in 1952. He was in the U.S. Army from 1942 to 1946, earning the rank of staff sergeant.

He is survived by his wife, Louie Marie Best Watkins, and two daughters, Anabell Watkins Barker of Oxford and Alma Marie Watkins Brown of Raleigh.

State School Bus Accidents Decline With Older Drivers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Since federal officials barred state school officials from using bus drivers under age 18 last year, school bus accidents have dropped 16 percent, officials said.

The number of accidents dropped from 1,015 in 1987-88 to 852 last year, with the sharpest decreases in urban areas, said Alvin M. Fountain, an assistant safety bus director for the state Division of Motor Vehicles. Cumberland County, for example, cut its accidents in half from 36 to 18.

By contrast, the number of bus accidents in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system, which had switched to an all-adult force of bus drivers in 1985, changed little, going from 80 in 1987-88 to 79 last year.

In February 1988, the U.S. Department of Labor refused to renew an exemption that allowed the state to employ 17-year-old bus drivers. The exemption had been granted every year since 1968.

In the face of a possible driver shortage, state educators fought the ban, arguing students could drive buses as well as older drivers. In a compromise, the Labor Department allowed the 17-year-olds to continue their routes through the end of the school year.

"We still stand by our premises," said James O. Barber, formerly in charge of transportation as controller for the state Department of Public Instruction and now assistant superintendent for financial services.

The decline in accidents might have less to do with age and more to do with the efforts to select drivers with more care and to give them more training and pay, Barber said.

Schools for years relied heavily on 16- and 17-year-old drivers because low pay made it difficult to attract adults. After the federal ruling, however, the state began raising wages.

This year the General Assembly raised bus drivers' pay to an average $6.75 per hour. With local supplements, Wake County now can attract more reliable drivers with hourly pay ranging from $7 to $8, said Wyatt H. Harper, Wake transportation director.

"We have seen more interest this summer than we have seen in a long time," he said.

But while drivers are better, some people worry about the quality of some of the state's 13,200 buses. The N.C. School Bus Safety Committee thinks the state should replace 1,400 buses built before 1977.

Plants Pulled Up

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Robeson County sheriff's deputies pulled up more than 1,200 marijuana plants Saturday after discovering 30 plots during an air search by a state Highway Patrol helicopter.

No one was arrested. The plants were growing in the woods along N.C. 72 southeast of Lumberton, near the Carolina Power & Light Co. plant, according to Burnis Wilkins, county narcotics supervisor, who said sheriff's officers and two state Highway Patrol troopers found the plants during a routine air search.

"It's just an area we started at," he said. Once you get started, you just find them. That's not even probably half of what's in this county."

He said officers collected 1,258 plants with a street value of more than $1 million.

"The tallest one was 14 feet," he said, adding that the plants averaged 10 feet in height.

Swaggart Revival

RALEIGH (AP) — During a weekend crusade, The Rev. Jimmy Swaggart preached a revival and asked for money to pay off a debt to a television station.

"Sing to the devil and make him angry," Swaggart yelled to a crowd of about 3,000 while pounding a piano at the Raleigh Civic Center.

"During the Raleigh revival, there were white plastic collection buckets. Swaggart also had 'The Rock of Ages Family Edition Bible,' illustrated with some of the 'best art in the Protestant world,' which was given for each $100 donation.

Swaggart, who raised $141.6 million in 1986, needs funds to broadcast his weekly television program. Money he collects in Raleigh will help reduce his debt at WRDQ-TV, Channel 16 in Burlington.

Swaggart's Baton Rouge-based empire almost collapsed after he confessed Feb. 21 to unspecified sin. Some accused him of asking a prostitute to perform a pornographic act. Authorities in his denomination, the Assemblies of God, asked him to leave the pulpit for a period of rehabilitation.

But Swaggart says he will continue to preach on television if he can continue raising money.

Equality Parade

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 150 people took part in a parade for Women's Equality Day, which marked the 69th anniversary of giving women the right to vote.

Many participants wore clothing to reflect the styles of the early 1900s. About a dozen groups, including the Gaston County Women's Commission, turned out for the parade on Saturday.

Fran Bostic, one of the participants, read a speech by Susan B. Anthony, an early women's activist.

"There was never a true marriage where tyranny and servitude took part," Ms. Bostic read from the speech, which called on women to rebel against laws that favored men.

"I can see the woman of the future before me. She will surpass the one of the present," she read.

Grain Fire

WILMINGTON (AP) — About 85 firefighters were called to battle a blaze at the bottom of a 120-foot-high grain bin at Carroll's Foods Inc. near Warsaw on Sunday morning, officials said.

A man spotted smoke when he drove to the bin near Warsaw to pick a load of feed about 10:30 a.m. Firefighters discovered the fire near the bottom of the bin, which is roughly 16 stories high, said John Blackmore, assistant fire chief of the Warsaw Fire Department.

Carroll's Foods produces pork and poultry and supplies growers with feed. The grain is stored in the bin, which holds about a million bushels of grain, before it is moved to the nearby mill where it is ground for feed, Blackmore said.

Jackson Rally

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Jesse Jackson begins a two-day stay in Charlotte on Tuesday, when he will urge more than 1,000 high school students to shun drugs, alcohol and teenage pregnancy in favor of academics.

The motivational rally at 10 a.m. Wednesday will be part of Jackson's national PUSH for Excellence Inc., an organization committed to helping communities, schools, students, parents and educators correct educational and social problems within schools.

Jackson's visit includes a rally at West Charlotte High School. After the rally, student leaders from other Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools will meet with Jackson, officials said. Students will have a chance to register to vote and to sign PUSH (People United to Serve Humanity) contracts pledging commitment to academics.

Jackson also may promote the upcoming PUSH Excel Pro Basketball Classic, a Sept. 23 game at the Charlotte Coliseum that may feature such NBA players as Michael Jordan and Magic Johnson.

EPA Study Says 129 Blue Ridge Streams May Become Acidic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — If sulfur emissions remain steady, as many as 129 streams in the Southern Blue Ridge Mountains will become acidic within 30 years, a new study by the Environmental Protection Agency says.

The EPA study released last week is a final installment in a 10-year national acid rain assessment program. Researchers at EPA's environmental research laboratory in Corvallis, Ore., made 50-year projections of the impact of acid rain on watershed quality in three areas — the Southern Blue Ridge mountains, the Northeast and the mid-Appalachian region.

In the Blue Ridge mountains, the researchers studied 35 streams and watersheds that were selected as representative of about 1,300 streams in the region.

An additional 203 streams in the Blue Ridge region of North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia will occasionally be acidic during the next half century if sulfur emissions remain at their current level, the researchers concluded in the study.

Acid rain is formed when sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide are converted in the atmosphere into acids, which then fall to the earth. The leading sources of sulfur dioxide are coal-burning power plants and industrial facilities, while nitrogen oxides are emitted in approximately equal amounts by cars and industry.

President Bush has proposed requiring a 10-million ton reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions by the year 2000 and a 2 million ton reduction in nitrogen oxide emissions anticipated over the next decade. Congress is expected to take up the proposal this fall.

Researchers calculated the effect on the streams of continued sulfur emissions for the next 50 years at the same level as today, as well as the effect of increasing sulfur emissions by 20 percent beginning in 10 years and continuing for 15 years, then keeping that level of emissions constant for the next 25 years.

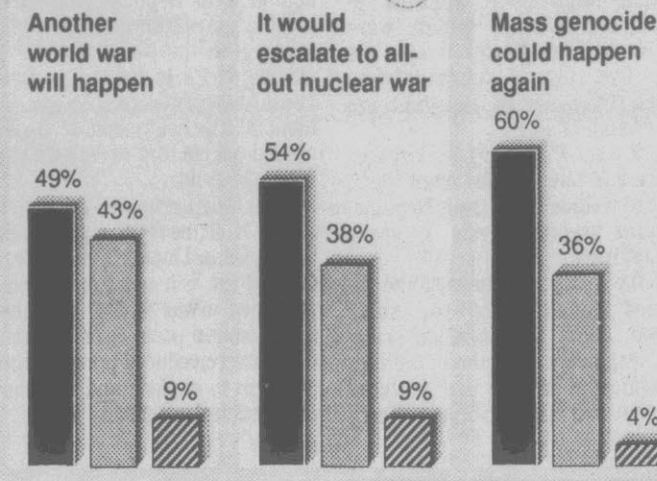

At the increased level of emissions, the study estimated that 159

Majority Of Americans Think World Will Have Another War

By Gary Langer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Fifty years after World War II erupted, half of all Americans believe global war will consume the world again one day, a Media General-Associated Press poll has found.

A majority of those who expect another world war believe it will happen within two decades, the survey found. And if it does recur, most Americans fear it will escalate into an all-out nuclear conflagration.

A majority of respondents to the poll also said one of World War II's darkest episodes could recur: A holocaust on the order of Nazi Germany's murder of more than 6 million Jews.

The 1,163 respondents were asked: "Do you think that kind of thing could happen again — that is, the killing of millions of people because of their religion or ethnic background?" Six in 10 said it could.

More than a million German soldiers invaded Poland on Sept. 1, 1939, prodding France and Britain to declare war on Germany a few days later. World War II lasted until 1945, claiming the lives of an estimated 50 million people.

The United States joined the war in 1941 after the Japanese attacked the U.S. Pacific Fleet at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Four years later, the U.S. Air Force hastened Japan's surrender by dropping atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki — still the only time nuclear weapons have been used in war. Six in 10 poll respondents said the Hiroshima bombing, in which up to 200,000 people died, was right. Seventy percent of the men in the survey supported the bombing; half the women agreed.

Two in 10 respondents said they sometimes think of Japan as the enemy because of the war. And with Japan now one of the world's leading economic powers, nearly four in 10 said the United States did too much to help rebuild Japan after the war.

A smaller group, 24 percent, said the United States did too much to help rebuild West Germany, which also is one of the world's strongest economies today. One in 10 said they sometimes think of Germany as the enemy.

Respondents strongly supported the reunification of Germany, which was divided after the war into democratic West Germany and communist-controlled East Germany. Seventy percent favored the two Germans' coming together again as one country.

Overall, nearly 70 percent considered themselves familiar with the events of World War II. Older people were far more apt to rate themselves as "very familiar" with the war — 57 percent of those older than age 64 chose that category, compared with just 12 percent of those younger than 45.

Familiarity with one aspect of the war was overwhelming: Ninety-five percent said they had heard of the Holocaust. Age was not a factor.

Respondents in the oldest group were less likely to believe there will be another world war. But they were more likely to expect that if one did occur, it would escalate into all-out nuclear war.

Safety Regulations Urged For Minivans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Auto safety advocates say it's no longer a question of whether minivans and light trucks will have to pass the same safety regulations as passenger cars — but when.

"You look at auto safety in general and the issue of minivans stands out like a sore thumb," said Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, the nonprofit agency founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Ditlow says there has been enough public outcry and statistical information that the government can no longer ignore the regulation discrepancy between passenger cars and minivans.

Jeffrey Miller, acting administrator of the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration, agrees that regulations will be implemented within the next few years. But he says the reason is mostly to reassure the public, not because minivans are less safe.

"It's very important for motorists to understand that most safety standards already apply," said Miller. "We are trying to build on what already is a pretty good safety record. It helps to reassure the public."

Statistics from the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety show that the accident death rate per 10,000 vans last year was 1.4, an increase over the year before but only slightly higher than the 1.3 rate of large cars and much lower than the 3.0 rate of small cars.

Minivans, along with light trucks and off-road vehicles, are classified as multipurpose passenger vehicles — a category that doesn't have the same restrictions as passenger cars. Minivans are manufactured by Chrysler, General Motors, Ford, Toyota, Volkswagen, Nissan, Mitsubishi and Mazda.

Minivans are fast usurping the market for station wagons among large families, and those people worry about the lack of government regulation for side and roof strength, shoulder-lap seat belts and head restraints.

But Albert Slechter, federal government affairs director for Chrysler Corp., which has 56 percent of the U.S. minivan market, says some of the safety measures required of cars don't make sense for vans.

For years, the Center for Auto Safety and others have tried unsuccessfully to extend government auto safety rules to minivans and light trucks.

Last session, the Senate passed a bill requiring such rules, but the legislation died after 18 months with no action in the House committee chaired by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., whose district includes Detroit and whose wife works for General Motors Corp.

Of the 49 percent who said they expect another world war at some point, 6 percent said it was likely within five years, 29 percent within 10 years and 26 percent within 20 years. Thus 61 percent of this group — or 30 percent overall — foresaw World War III within two decades.

The poll was conducted by telephone July 7-16 among a random sample of adults in the continental United States. It has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Voyager Finds Active Volcano On Neptune Moon

By Lee Siegel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Calif. — Voyager 2 found Neptune's moon Triton a world in which volcanoes blast nitrogen ice 20 miles skyward and where giant craters once overflowed with ocean-size floods of frozen lava, scientists believe.

The discovery announced Sunday makes Triton only the third object in the universe known to have active volcanoes.

"It's one of the most interesting and provocative worlds in the solar system," says Charles Kohlhaas, Voyager spacecraft mission design manager at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Triton apparently has three types of volcanoes. Scientists announced two of them

Friday: huge inactive crater-shaped volcanoes, called calderas, filled with lava made of ice instead of molten rock; and long fault-line valleys filled with oozing ice, a process likened to toothpaste coming out of a tube slit with a razor blade.

Triton's biggest surprise came Sunday, when U.S. Geological Survey geologist Laurence Soderblom announced that a third kind of volcanic activity apparently had been identified. The latest recorded photographs sent by Voyager reveal what look like active ice volcanoes that erupt explosively, spewing nitrogen ice particles and gas 12 to 20 miles high.

"The stuff comes shooting up like gas out of a gun barrel," said University of Arizona planetary scientist Bradford Smith, leader of Voyager's photographic imaging team.

Soderblom cautioned that the volcanic theory could turn out to be a "crazy idea," but other scientists expressed their support.

"It sounds like a very reasonable hypothesis," said Voyager project scientist Edward Stone.

Voyager has discovered six moons orbiting Neptune in addition to Triton and Nereid, which were discovered from Earth. It also has found five rings of debris orbiting the planet, including two that are broad bands of dust.

By 9 p.m. PDT tonight, Voyager will be 2.76 billion miles from Earth and 3.65 million miles from Neptune, speeding toward interstellar space at 37,600 mph.

As the craft sped toward the ill-defined boundary of the solar system, about 1,500 mission scientists, engineers and their families celebrated at a bash that featured rock 'n' roll legend Chuck Berry singing "Go, Voyager, go!" a slightly modified version of his classic "Johnny B. Goode."

A recording of that song and other earth sounds was among the cultural and historical items aboard aboard Voyager.

The spacecraft made its closest approach to Neptune on Thursday night when it skimmed about 3,000 miles over the planet's north pole cloudtops. Early Friday, it zoomed about 24,000 miles past Triton. Since then, it has been sending back recorded photos that revealed Triton's volcanic activity.

Soderblom compared the new type of ice volcanoes to sulfur-spewing volcanoes on Jupiter's moon Io. But he said the volcanoes on Triton are produced when liquid nitrogen in underground pools rises to the surface, where reduced pressure means "it's got to explode and will shower ice particles and gas."

"I believe they are active," Soderblom said. "There's 10 or 20 or 30 — lots."

Based on dark-colored, plume-shaped deposits that stretch up to 50 miles downwind from the volcanoes, Soderblom estimated the eruptions eject frosty debris at scores of mile per hour, perhaps faster.

Smith said the deposits apparently contain radiation-darkened ices that fell to the surface after being carried skyward by the blast.

Earth's volcanoes spew molten rock, and Io's erupts sulfur. Venus also may have active volcanoes, but none has been spotted on the cloud-shrouded planet.

On Sunday, NASA also revealed more surprises about Triton's apparently inactive caldera-like volcanoes, which measure up to hundreds of miles wide and fill with what Smith described as flows of viscous ice, possibly water ice, that gushes up from below.

The new photos show Triton's ice-lava lakes "can come up and overflow," Smith said. "You see that happen in Hawaii all the time" when lava overflows calderas such as the one atop Kilauea volcano.

So eruptions from Triton's calderas once produced a sea of ice-like lava in repeated eruptions, resulting in massive, oceanic-scale flooding, Soderblom said.

A volcano is considered active if it has erupted within the 100 years. Smith said he believes the newly discovered nitrogen ice volcanoes erupted within the past century because they are located on Triton's huge south polar ice cap.

A year on Neptune and Triton lasts about 165 Earth years. So if the ice cap had gone through a summer, evidence of volcanic deposits would have been erased as the ice cap receded, he added.

Two Uhuru Party members give 'black power' hand salute over Newton's casket

Thousands Pay Respects At Huey Newton Funeral

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — A wake for slain Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton drew 6,000 mourners in a rare public show of support for the "black power" politics he espoused in the '60s.

"This here is for those who really meant a lot to Huey; the people who needed him the most, the everyday people from the streets," said 48-year-old Hillary Jones, standing in line Sunday as people filed through a mortuary two at a time to view his body.

Thousands more admirers and friends were expected at today's funeral at the Allen Temple Baptist Church, where Newton's body was moved Sunday evening as supporters gave the clenched fist "black power" salute.

Also today, a self-proclaimed prison gang member and drug dealer who police say admitted killing Newton faced arraignment on a homicide charge in Alameda County Municipal Court.

Mourners on Sunday lined up for three blocks outside the funeral home in a rundown section of east Oakland.

"This is a terrible tragedy for blacks. He stood for black pride in the '60s and now he stands for the decimation of blacks by crack," said LeRoy Johnson, 44, as he waited to attend the daylong wake.

Newton, 47, was shot to death Tuesday in what police said was a dispute over crack cocaine in the drug-ridden west Oakland neighborhood where he began organizing blacks more than 20 years ago.

He founded the Black Panther Party with Bobby Seale in 1966, and as its minister of defense became one of the most articulate leaders of the black militancy movement. The party dissolved in the mid-70s.

"He made us have black pride," said Norma Corman, 38, who knew Newton casually for the last decade. "He was a good man destroyed by the badness of drugs."

However, many in line at the funeral home said they didn't believe the police account of Newton's death and blamed it on authorities.

"The police were always after Huey," said Jeffrey deLeong, 28. "The Man got him."

A television cameraman taping interviews with mourners was attacked by a group of men who had warned him earlier that they didn't want their pictures taken, police and KTVU-Channel 2 officials said.

Cameraman Henry Faybusovic suffered cuts and scrapes and was being X-rayed for internal injuries at Highland Hospital, said police Sgt. C. Vierra.

Police said Tyrone Robinson, a 25-year-old member of the Black Guerrilla Family, admitted shooting Newton in self-defense after Newton brandished a gun and demanded crack shortly before dawn Tuesday. Newton had a history of drug and alcohol abuse.

Police have disputed the ex-convict's account, instead believing the killing was an attempt by Robinson to make a name for himself in the notorious gang. Police said Newton had stolen drugs and money from the gang in recent years.

Newton's family has declined to comment since the police announcement Friday of Robinson's arrest 14 hours after the slaying.

The Black Guerrilla Family was founded in the prisons in the 1960s by inmate George Jackson, a Black Panther who died in a notorious escape attempt at San Quentin prison in 1971.

Postal Service May Seek Rate Increase

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The cost of a first-class postage stamp will likely rise to 28 to 32 cents early in 1991, Postmaster General Anthony Frank said today.

That means two more Christmases at the current 25-cent rate for first-class letters, Frank said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Frank had said previously that the Postal Service would apply for a rate increase sometime next year, to take effect in 1991, but had not specified the amount.

He said today that the increase would be 20 to 25 percent, later specifying a range of 28 cents to 32 cents for the new rate.

The cost of mailing a letter rose from 22 cents to 25 cents in the spring of 1988 and a new increase effective in 1991 would continue the recent policy of increases every three years.

Private Satellite Launched

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A communications satellite is orbiting Earth after being propelled by a privately owned rocket in a launch that opens a new era in the space age.

The 2,700-pound Marcopolo 1 satellite was drilled into space Sunday by a three-stage Delta rocket that performed flawlessly during a 27-minute climb into orbit.

The launching was the first in which a privately owned rocket sent a payload into orbit. Consort I, the nation's first licensed commercial spacecraft, released a payload on a suborbital voyage in March.

"Delta 187 has placed the British Satellite Broadcasting satellite in orbit; we wish the spacecraft folks good luck," reported Ray Adams of McDonnell Douglas, which made the $30 million Delta.

The satellite was sent into an elliptical orbit ranging from about 100 to 22,300 miles high.

On Tuesday, ground controllers are to send a signal to fire an on-board motor to place it in a stationary orbit 22,300 miles high, parking it over the middle Atlantic Ocean within view of the British Isles.

Marcopolo 1 is the first of two satellites designed to transmit television programs direct to British homes equipped with 12-inch dish antennas, a set-top box and a remote control unit. The equipment will cost about $450, said Anthony Simonds-Gooding, chief executive officer of British Satellite Broadcasting Ltd., operator of the satellite system.

The launch was a milestone in the U.S. commercial space program that started after the 1986 Challenger explosion. After the space shuttle disaster, then-President Reagan told the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to stop launching payloads for commercial customers. Reagan said the job should be done by private industry with unmanned rockets.

"This is not just another launch; it's the beginning of a new industry, a landmark event," said Stephanie Lee-Miller of the U.S. Department of Transportation, which licenses commercial launches. She said 27 additional launches are scheduled through 1993.

Reagan's decision revitalized a U.S. unmanned space rocket program that was almost dead because of the nation's growing reliance on the manned space shuttle to launch all payloads.

Three major U.S. aerospace companies took on the commercial space program in earnest, and the McDonnell Douglas Delta was the first to the launch pad.

Today's Stealth Bomber Is Almost Ancient History

By Lee Byrd
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — It rests, in pieces, in a grimy corner of a museum warehouse in suburban Silver Hill, Md., long forgotten by the nation that conceived its menacing promise as the least detectable bomber in the skies.

Re-assembled, it would look like a huge vampire bat or a stub-tailed manta ray. Underlying its design was the notion that the enemy wouldn't see it at all, because this jet-powered flying wing's skin would be made of composite materials to absorb radar waves, rather than reflect them.

No, the Northrop B-2 bomber, the world's most expensive airplane, hasn't already become a dust-gathering relic — although some critics, convinced the albatross is the only sea-creature to which it should be compared, wish that were so.

The astonishing lookalike in Silver Hill is indeed a stealth warplane, but it was secretly built and test-flown 45 years ago by Nazi Germany.

For all the fanfare surrounding the use of the word "stealth" since it was introduced to the U.S. military vocabulary in 1980, the B-2 and such radar-evading relatives as the F-117A fighter represent concepts which, by aviation standards, are almost ancient.

The B-2 has been financed, until this year, out of the Pentagon's mysterious "black" budget. For eight years, the taxpayers spent $22.4 billion without knowing it, and without knowing what they were getting for it.

What they got, when it was finally nosed heavenward in July, was a strange, plastic bird that carries a smaller payload and probably won't fly much higher, much farther or any faster than the Strategic Air Command's old reliable, the B-52.

The B-2 is 17 feet tall, 69 feet long and has a wingspan of 172 feet. It is powered by four General Electric F-118 engines, virtually the same engines as used on the F-14 fighter but without afterburners. Its range is 6,900 miles without refueling, and 11,500 miles with one midair refueling. It will have a maximum takeoff weight of 350,000 pounds and be able to carry up to 50,000 pounds of bombs or missiles, nuclear or conventional, 10,000 pounds less than the B-52. Private experts estimate it will fly at altitudes of up to 55,000 feet at cruising speeds of mach 0.8 to 0.85, or about 530-560 mph.

In coming months, Congress must decide whether the B-2 "stealth bomber," the most expensive plane ever designed and built, is a weapon the United States can't afford to do without, or simply can't afford. Yet for all the secrecy surrounding this high-tech marvel, the ideas behind it are, by aviation standards, almost ancient history.

There's nothing especially dazzling about any of those numbers. What is dazzling, presumably, is the stuff the Air Force won't talk about — the stealth technology, computerized flight controls, "quiet" on-board radar, and other electronic systems, possibly employing fiber optics, designed to withstand the electromagnetic interference generated by nuclear blasts.

The Air Force wants to spend an additional $50 billion or so to produce 132 of the planes designed by a company, Northrop, which for years hadn't made a warplane other than a lightweight fighter, the F-5.

Former Pentagon procurement chief Robert B. Costello, who left as undersecretary of defense in May, wanted to scuttle the program. In an interview with The Washington Post, he said he told then-Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci last year that "it's being brought to you by the same company that brought you" a series of troubled programs, including guidance systems for the MX and air-launched cruise missiles. "What makes you think they'll do better (with the B-2)?"

Eight days after the B-2's maiden flight July 17, Pentagon and congressional officials confirmed an investigation was under way by the Justice Department's fraud unit concerning Northrop's billing practices on the project. The company said it was unaware of the probe.

Northrop Chairman Thomas V. Jones says without reservation that the B-2 is an "extraordinary" success. Defense Secretary Richard B. Cheney calls it "absolutely vital" to strategic deterrence. President Bush says doing without it would be "devastating" to arms-control negotiations with the Soviets.

The security and secrecy surrounding the project have been phenomenal, perhaps rivaled only by elements of the Star Wars program and the Manhattan Project that developed the atomic bomb in World War II. Northrop removed it from the rest of its own organization, forming a new division called Advanced Products and housing it at a closed auto plant in Pico Rivera, Calif. It surrounded the plant, as well as the sister assembly complex at Palmdale, Calif., with fences topped by razor wire.

According to Costello, security has accounted for 5 percent of the costs to date. With more than $22.4 billion spent so far, that amounts to more than $1 billion.

The tight security imposed additional costs. Efficiency suffered from compartmentalization so severe some supervisors didn't know what their subordinates were doing. "I couldn't even ask," one former Northrop official told the Los Angeles Times last year. "For all I knew, they were going to the movies every day."

Some could have. When employees were hired, they could not go directly to work until their security clearances were finished. Many were assigned for weeks to make-work jobs in an area of the plant they nicknamed the "drunk tank."

Unbeknownst to the public, the biggest snag occurred halfway through the seven-year design period when the Air Force changed its mind about the B-2's mission. The Pentagon originally ordered a high-altitude bomber. Now it wanted one that could penetrate at low levels as well, probably because it was fearful the Soviet Union was developing the same new radar technology, called OTHB for Over the Horizon Backscatter. The still super-secret radar system, the Pentagon has privately acknowledged, offers new possibilities for detecting stealth airplanes, though it is said to be ineffective within 500 miles.

Northrop's designers redesigned the wing for flight at lower altitudes, where turbulence is greater. That took a year and another $1 billion. An additional six-month delay was necessary for other design changes, related especially to the engine inlets. In 1987, two years before Congress began public debate over funding for the B-2, the Pentagon moved its production schedule back two more years in the face of Gramm-Rudman budget restrictions. Cheney has postponed production yet another year; the Pentagon now hopes to build all 132 planes by 1999, versus the original target of 1995.

In 1986, then-Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger offered no hint of the design delays and escalating costs when he testified before Congress that the program "is on schedule; the technology is well-understood and working, and we expect the system to be operational in the early 1990s."

Weinberger was also far off the mark when he offered Congress the first public figures about the plane's cost. The B-2, he said, would cost $277 million for each plane, and the entire program would tally about $36.6 billion. Just two years later, the Pentagon went back to Congress, weeks before the B-2's first test flight, with figures roughly doubling Weinberger's: $530 million per plane, total program cost of more than $70 billion.

With those numbers now out in the open, some in Congress are questioning whether the United States can afford the plane that Gen. Bernard P. Randolph, head of the Air Force Systems Command, calls nothing less than "a quantum leap into the 21st century."

For all the secrecy surrounding the B-2's high-tech features, there is no dark secret about either the stealth concept itself or the flying-wing design. Each is nearly as old as powered flight.

Simply put, the stealthiness of an airplane, or any other weapons system, is measured by its ability to thwart an enemy's capacity to detect it, by whatever means. It is a matter of degree — there is no such thing as total stealth; pure invisibility remains the exclusive domain of science fiction.

Hauptmann Petroczy von Petroczy probably qualified as the inventor of the stealth airplane when, at a time when the unaided human eye was the principal aerial tracking device, he removed the fabric covering of an Etrich Taube monoplane and replaced it with transparent celluloid. The engine and skeleton still showed, but residents of the Austrian countryside had to strain to make out the wraith-like source of the noise generated by Petroczy's test flights.

That was in 1912, two years before an Englishman, John W. Dunne, took to the skies in an airplane with no tail, no fuselage — the first flying wing. Aircraft designers, from Hugo Junkers to John W. Northrop, have been entranced by its possibilities, despite repeated setbacks, ever since.

Two Bell Companies Reach Agreements

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bell of Pennsylvania reached agreement with its largest union early today, and progress was reported in settling phone strikes around the country.

Ohio Bell and Wisconsin Bell reached tentative agreements with the Communication Workers of America during the weekend, and talks continued with the other three companies that make up Chicago-based Ameritech.

"Negotiations are continuing to progress" in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan, said Ameritech spokesman Steve Ford, "and we're hopeful that settlements will be reached in the not-too-distant future."

In New York, NYNEX Corp. plans to resume bargaining with striking workers Wednesday, the first formal talks since that walkout started almost three weeks ago. The regional company serves New York and most of New England.

Nationally, 200,000 workers in 20 states went on strike earlier this month against four of the so-called "Baby Bell" regional telephone companies formed after the 1984 breakup of AT&T. Tentative settlements have been reached at Pacific Telesis, which serves California and Nevada; and Bell Atlantic, which covers West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Washington, D.C., and New Jersey.

While talks continued on local issues for some Bell Atlantic units, Bell of Pennsylvania tentatively agreed on a new contract with CWA Local 13900, representing more than 8,900 employees.

Union spokesman Alex Minishak said the settlement offers gains in such areas as vacations, layoffs and the use of contract labor.

In the Midwest, Ohio Bell on Saturday agreed to a tentative three-year contract with 10,000 CWA members. Wisconsin Bell settled with its 4,200 striking employees Sunday.

Neither side would discuss details of the contract.

Talks with Bell subsidiaries in Illinois, Michigan and Indiana recessed Sunday night. Negotiators were scheduled to meet again today, officials said.

"There's certainly momentum all around at this point, and we're hopeful to reach settlements with all the companies," said CWA spokesman Steve Rosenthal.

"We made excellent progress today and feel we're very close. Only a few minor details need to be worked out," said Indiana Bell spokesman Dennis McCabe after the two sides recessed their negotiations.

Worden drives his 350-pound solar car through the streets of Cambridge, Mass.

Commuter Defies Skeptics, Drives Solar-Powered Car

By Sonni Efron
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Skeptics say solar-powered cars still aren't feasible. But James Worden commutes to work every day in a solar car he built himself.

The car is a 350-pound, silver three-wheeler covered with solar panels that suggests a cross between a golf cart and a Honda Civic. It holds two people, can reach 35 mph, and for four years has taken him on his regular 13-mile commute.

Worden keeps it parked in a sunny spot outside his lab at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. When he drives it at night, or takes it more than about 50 miles, he plugs it into an ordinary electric outlet to recharge its nickel-cadmium battery.

Worden easily kept up with traffic during a recent spin through crowded Cambridge, where the most significant trouble the car encountered was giant potholes.

One advantage was its silence. "Has it stalled?" a passenger inquired as the car sat noiselessly waiting for a green light.

"No," Worden replied, "it's recharging." In a month or two, the 22-year-old entrepreneur expects to produce a four-wheel prototype that will look more like a more traditional automobile.

"We hope to be making a car a day in two years," said Worden, who was a high school student when he built his first solar car and had yet to graduate from MIT when he founded his company, Solelectron Corp.

Worden said his next generation solar-electric commuter car will weigh 800 to 1,000 pounds, accommodate two people plus 300 pounds of cargo and reach 45 mph. It also will be able to go for 40 miles at night and 60 miles in full sunlight before recharging.

"It's a city car," Worden said.

"The idea is, it'll be sprightly and clean and easy. There's no gas and no fuel charge and no oil changes. You'll never have to get a brake job. ... There won't be a muffler either. ... The only service you'll need, except the tires, is watering the battery every year or so."

The car should sell for about $10,000, Worden said. Extra solar panels, which could be left on a roof for recharging, would cost another $500 to $1,000.

Solelectron also is working on a $20,000 racing car model to go faster and farther.

His four-wheel commuter car has limitations. In full sunlight, it will go only 20 mph before drawing on its high-tech lead battery. Parked a full day in the sun, it will soak up only enough light to run 40 miles. Recharging the battery will take up to five hours.

Still, Worden and other entrepreneurs of solar energy say that smog, ozone depletion and global warming make electric cars more attractive, even in places where frequently cloudy skies obscure the sunlight.

Solar-electric cars are on the market in Europe. For instance, a Swiss compact sells for about $20,600.

Some proponents, such as Robert Wills, an engineer at Dartmouth College, predict solar cars will be commercially available in this country before the end of the century.

"There just aren't any better solutions to air pollution in the major cities," said Wills, an organizer of the New England Tour De Sol solar car races.

At the same time, solar technology has advanced enormously in recent years, due in part to lessons learned from long-distance solar car races.

In 1987, General Motors' Sunraycer was driven 1,950 miles across Australia in 5½ days, averaging 41.5 mph. And just this summer, Worden's racing car, the 270-pound Solectria, drove 3,200 miles from Los Angeles to Washington, D.C., in two weeks, with few troubles other than some flat tires.

But although GM has learned much about engineering lightweight solar cars from the Sunraycer, "we feel this probably has more application to a lightweight efficient electric commuter car than to a solar car," said GM spokesman Bruce McCristal in Detroit.

McCristal would not say whether GM is working on an electric car.

Many observers still believe that barring soaring gasoline prices or regulatory incentives offered by states trying to reduce air pollution, widespread use of solar cars is a long way off.

"I would agree with Worden that he has a vehicle that can easily encompass the needs of the average commuter, but whether the commuter will buy it is another question," said Edward A. Campbell, publisher of Alternate Energy Transportation, a monthly newsletter based in New York.

"Will the commuter accept something that can only go 40 miles a day and has to be laid up at night?"

New Social Security Chief Takes Charge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The nation's new Social Security chief, Gwendolyn S. King, is taking charge with a mixture of grace and grit: stressing compassion for the public and vowing to snarl like a "junky dog" if anyone tries to siphon trust fund reserves.

"When I say I want more responsive service, I don't want to just sit back and answer questions. I want to be out there on the forefront figuring out how we can help people better," Mrs. King said in an interview.

Sworn in Aug. 1 as commissioner of the Social Security Administration, Mrs. King commands an agency second in size only to the Defense Department. SSA provides monthly Social Security benefits to 38 million Americans and distributes Supplemental Security Income checks to another 4 million needy people who are aged, blind or disabled.

Mrs. King, a 48-year-old former congressional, state and federal employee who breezed through Senate confirmation proceedings, said one of her first concerns was "how do you get your hands on the levers of an agency that has 65,000 employees."

She is working to improve service to retirees and other beneficiaries, protect Social Security reserves for future generations, and boost morale in a work force slashed by 20 percent during the Reagan years.

"Part of what I am doing is letting people at Social Security know that the important part of their job is doing it right, with accuracy and consideration, and with some compasion," she said. "I go ballistic when I hear that people have been rudely treated."

Social Security employees in recent years have complained that heavy staff reductions made it impossible for them to do their jobs right, but Mrs. King, who replaced Dorcas Hardy as SSA chief, said a modernization program will ease workloads.

A nationwide toll-free telephone network will be in full force by Oct. 1, allowing more people to take care of simple transactions by phone and giving office workers more time to handle complex problems, she said.

Author Irving Stone, 85, Dies Of Heart Failure

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Irving Stone, whose pioneering biographical novels of Vincent Van Gogh, Michelangelo, Sigmund Freud and others brought history to life for millions, is dead. He was 86.

Stone died of heart failure late Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. His family said he had been receiving treatment for cancer there since July 24.

With the 1934 epic "Lust For Life" about Van Gogh, Stone perfected the art form of telling history with a human focus. During the next half-century, he wrote a stream of best-selling biographical novels, including "The Agony and the Ecstasy."

Doubleday & Co. Inc., Stone's publisher, estimates his books have sold more than 30 million copies.

Stone's fictionalized portraits include Jack London in "Sailor on Horseback," Abraham and Mary Lincoln in "Love is Eternal," Michelangelo in "The Agony and the Ecstasy," Sigmund Freud in "The Passions of the Mind," Charles Darwin in "The Origin," Andrew and Rachel Jackson in "The President's Lady" and Eugene V. Debs in "Adversary in the House."

Five books were made into movies. "Lust for Life," released in 1956, starred Kirk Douglas as Van Gogh. "The Agony and the Ecstasy," released in 1965, starred Charlton Heston as Michelangelo.

Black Nun Is A Catholic Pioneer

She's Still Beaming, Despite Cancer

By Kathy Eyre
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CANTON, Miss. — She was a Roman Catholic nun in an African robe, booming out black spirituals and dancing joyfully on national television.

Today, at age 51, Sister Thea Bowman is largely confined to a wheelchair and any movement is painful. Cancer. But she's still beaming.

A movie and a book about her life are in the works.

"This makes me smile," says Sister Bowman, the granddaughter of former slaves and a pioneer in incorporating African rituals, dance and black spirituals into the Catholic Mass.

Actress Whoopi Goldberg has agreed to portray her in a movie being produced by Harry Belafonte and expected to be completed by next year.

Also, author Margaret Walker Anderson, a Mississippian who wrote the novel "Jubilee," has been commissioned to write a book on Sister Bowman's life for Harper and Row.

Sister Bowman converted to Catholicism at age 12 and is the only black member of the Catholic order of the Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration. She was a participant in the National Black Congress last year at The Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

She says her parents enrolled her in a Catholic school in her native Canton — a rural central Mississippi town where she still lives — because she wasn't learning to read well in the then-segregated public school.

The door to that small Catholic school opened several other educational opportunities for her. With a master's degree and doctorate in English language and literature from The Catholic University of America, she has shared the pride of her black heritage as a teacher, first at Blessed Sacrament School in La Crosse, Wis.; then at Holy Child Jesus High School back in Canton, and later as an instructor at The Catholic University of America and at Viterbo College in La Crosse.

Sister Bowman has written numerous articles on black spirituality, and has spoken and sung at youth rallies, workshops and worship services throughout the United States, Canada, and in the African countries of Nigeria and Kenya.

Though restricted for the past year to a wheelchair as her four-year battle with breast cancer has spread to her bones, Sister Bowman still retains a full schedule of speaking engagements. She fits in the appearances around her radiation and chemotherapy treatments.

"She's been out of the house at least twice a week since Christmas," says a longtime friend, Sister Dorothy Kunding. The retired Canton teacher became Sister Bowman's full-time companion last September after the ailing nun decided she could no longer live and travel by herself.

Sister Bowman still travels frequently to Xavier University in New Orleans, where she has taught at the Institute of Black Catholic Studies since 1979. She also has been the Catholic Diocese of Jackson's "Consultant for Intercultural Awareness" since 1979.

In addition, she recently produced an audio tape of songs for Krystal Records of Boston. Titled "Sister Thea: Songs of My People," the tape includes such favorite black spirituals as "Old Time Religion" and "Dem Bones." She explains that she learned these joyful songs from her grandfather and older family friends who were ex-slaves.

Sister Bowman says she hopes her cadences will sound clear enough to echo the voices of those before her.

Clothed in a brightly colored, ankle-length Nigerian dress, she points to the photographs of her now-deceased parents and grandparents which line the walls of her childhood home.

"People have been very important in my life," she says. "The people I grew up around, grew up with. People who helped form me and teach me at times and in ways I didn't even realize I was being taught."

She says she hopes the movie, book, tape and her continuing public appearances will remind adults that they are important to the children in their own lives.

"It concerns me that there are many black children who don't know their history," she says. "They don't know black history, they don't know African history, they don't know about slavery times."

"Some of them don't even know how their parents and their grandparents survived. Some of them don't know what went on during the Civil Rights movement."

Such ignorance severely handicaps blacks, or members of any other culture, Sister Bowman says.

"When we can come together conscious of our history, conscious of our experience, conscious of our culture, conscious of who we are — and we can come to one another bringing our cultural and spiritual gifts, then I think we can make a better world for all of us," she says.

SISTER THEA BOWMAN

Good Luck Can Come Disguised As Disaster

Editor's note: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

Dear Abby: I am married to a man I love with all my heart. He says he no longer loves me and wants a divorce. We have three children. At first he said there was no one else and he just wanted to be free, then after I begged him to reconsider, he admitted there was another woman.

I would get down on my hands and knees if I thought it would do any good. I tried to tell him how much I loved him. I even kissed him, but he stood there like a statue with his hands in his pockets. Abby, I am desperate. How can I get him to love me again? The divorce is coming up soon in court. No fault. No chance. Help me. I don't want to live without him. — Alone And Crying

Dear Alone: You aren't alone. You have three children, which are three good reasons for living.

Since there is another woman in the picture, your chances for making him "love you" again are zilch. Furthermore, there is nothing less appealing to a man than a begging, prideless woman. So dry your tears, square your shoulders, and chin up. Concentrate on making a new life for yourself. Sometimes good luck comes disguised as disaster.

Dear Abby: My husband has always been a heavy smoker. (Four packs a day for the last 30 years.) Al had a heart attack last year, and the doctor gave him some orders. Quit smoking (which he did, believe it or not) and avoid all excitement. (He was more specific: absolutely no fooling around with young girls unless he wanted to die in bed.)

Now Al tells me he's nervous and restless. He says he has to lead a more "normal" life and can't give up everything he enjoys. He's asked me if I would rather have him go back to smoking again or fooling around with young girls. Isn't that a choice for you?

How should I answer him? With all his faults, I do love him and don't want to be a widow. But which is worse, lung cancer or a heart attack? — Al's Wife

Dear Wife: It's a draw. But with a choice like that, you'd probably worry less if you saw Al smoking. (P.S. Your Al certainly is a shrewd trader.)

Dear Abby: When our daughter was a baby, I found her pacifier in our bed. I thought it had dropped out of her mouth while she was in our bed, but later I found the pacifier in the drawer of our nightstand table, and I couldn't for the life of me figure out how it got there.

Then one morning I woke up early and saw my husband sound asleep with the pacifier in his mouth! We had a good laugh over it, and that evening when I fixed the baby's bottle I jokingly asked him if he wanted a bottle too. He said yes, so I fixed him one.

He loved it, so I kept fixing him a bottle right along with the baby's. I took the baby off the bottle when she was 14 months old, but my husband still has one every night, and he is 37. Please don't use our names as my husband is well known here. He works on the space program. Thank you. — Happy Wife

Fulford-Mizelle Pair Wed

WILLIAMSTON — Vickey Lynn Mizelle and Kenneth Dale Fulford were married at 6 p.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church.

Organist Charley Hopkins, vocalists Lori McLelland, Mark Williams and Lesley Daniels and trumpeter Don Mizelle presented wedding music. The Revs. Irving Cook and Wally Ellis officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford T. Paenta Jr. of Williamston, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Judy Fulford of Washington, N.C., and Bobby Fulford of Williamston are parents of the bridegroom.

Janie Mizelle of Williamston was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids included Amy Ausbon of Greenville; Stacey Fulford of Washington, sister of the bridegroom; Beth Lindsey of Mooresville; Beverly Lohorn of Apex, and Candy Creech of Laurinburg. Flower girls were Shae Cherry of Washington, cousin of the bridegroom, and Ella Bullock of Greenville. Ashley Reddick of Williamston and Blair Boyd of Marietta, Ga., cousin of the bride, were junior attendants.

The best man was the bridegroom's brother, Bobby S. Fulford Jr. of Washington. Ring bearers were Zane Fulford of Williamston, brother of the bridegroom, and Ryan Boyd of Marietta, Ga., cousin of the bride. Ushers included Thomas Wynne Jr., Craven Gurganus and Jay Fulford, all cousins of the bridegroom of Williamston, Wilson Lohorn of Apex and Dennis Taylor of Washington.

The bride wore a gown of satin, alencon lace and seed pearls with a scoop neckline, V-back and Victorian sleeves. The bouffant skirt, trimmed with matching lace, extended cathedral length. She wore a wreath of white flowers and pearls with a back pouf attached to a chapel-length veil. The bride carried a bouquet of dendrobium, orchids, roses and stephanotis.

The attendants wore tea-length floral print dresses and carried contemporary arm bouquets of aqua and lilac flowers. The flower girls wore white eyelet dresses with aqua and lilac bows in their hair and carried matching baskets.

A reception was held at the Roanoke Country Club in Williamston.

The couple will live in Buies Creek.

The bride is a student at Campbell University and graduated from Bear

MRS. FULFORD

Grass High School. The bridegroom attended Washington High School and is a specialist in the U.S. Army stationed at Fort Bragg.

A bridal luncheon Saturday and a pig picking were given for the couple before their marriage.

possible to measure "how law enforcement agencies are meeting their challenges" when a follow-up study is undertaken next year. Joseph M. Besette, acting director of the statistical bureau, said in a foreword to the report.

The report, which is based entirely on data for 1987 and earlier years, makes these points:

—While the largest cities generally have the highest ratio of police to population, Washington, D.C., with 622,000 inhabitants and a 3,878-member force — and a current reputation as the nation's "murder capital" — headed this list, with 6.2 officers per 1,000 inhabitants. The ratios for the biggest cities: New York, with 7.2 million inhabitants, 3.8 police per 1,000, Chicago, 3 million and a 4.1 ratio, Los Angeles, 3.3 million and a 2.1 ratio, Philadelphia, 1.6 million inhabitants and a 4.1 ratio, and Detroit, 1.1 million inhabitants and a 4.7 ratio. The lowest ratio was 1.5 police per 1,000, recorded both in San Diego, with 1 million inhabitants, and San Antonio, with 920,000.

—More than 93 percent of patrol hours on the average big-city force were allocated to vehicular units but cities of 1 million or more assigned an average of 10 percent of their forces to foot patrol.

—Cities of more than 1 million averaged 27.1 cars for every 100 officers, while cities of less than 500,000 averaged 46 cars for each 100.

—Use of computers to log arrests, service calls and stolen property was widespread among police departments and universal in departments responsible for 500,000 or more people.

—Police training required more than 1,000 hours of classroom and field work in departments of all sizes

Retirees Profit From Careers in Tax Preparation

Retirement can be a lot harder to take than a full-time job, especially if you've spent a lifetime working with people. That's why so many retirees enroll in the H & R Block Basic Income Tax Course. Graduates enjoy an exciting, rewarding, new career working flexible hours and helping clients in the tax preparation industry.

Our experienced instructors take you step-by-step through the tax preparation process using actual tax forms and practice problems. Students who satisfactorily complete the course may be offered employment as H & R Block tax preparers. Block is, however, under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation

Carawan
KINSTON — Mrs. Laura Frances Carawan, 82, died today in Lenoir Memorial Hospital.

Her funeral will be conducted at 3 p.m. Tuesday in the chapel of Farmer Funeral Home in Ayden by the Revs. Ed Walker and Jeff Heath. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery in Greenville.

Mrs. Carawan was a member of Grace Church of Greenville. Surviving are a daughter, Elizabeth Braddy of Tarboro; a foster daughter, Ruth Hines of Deep Run; two grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

The family will receive friends at Farmer Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. today.

Bakker Trial Starts

from 1984 to 1987, pleaded guilty to four fraud and conspiracy charges in a bargain that requires him to testify against Bakker. He was sentenced to eight years in prison and fined $200,000.

At Dortch's sentencing hearing, prosecutors set up large charts showing PTL raised $158 million between 1984 and 1987 through partnerships that promised supporters who gave $1,000 three nights lodging per year for life in hotels being constructed at Heritage USA, PTL's expansive retreat and park near here.

Money was diverted to support the Bakkers' extravagant lifestyle, the prosecutors said. During those years, Bakker and his wife, Tammy, drew $3.5 million in bonuses plus other perks, and other funds were used for day-to-day operations at PTL, prosecutors said.

Pope Receives Death Threat

BEIRUT, Lebanon — An underground extremist faction today threatened to kill Pope John Paul II if he comes to Lebanon on a peace mission.

The wording of the threat by the Organization for the Defense of the Oppressed suggested it was made by Shiite Moslem zealots.

A newspaper in Iran, a sponsor of Moslem Shiite extremism in Lebanon, said Sunday the pope should stay out of Lebanon, but it did not make an overt threat.

It was the second time in four days that the previously unknown Organization for the Defense of the Oppressed has made a statement.

Delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut, the statement said: "To his holiness Pope John Paul II: We address our words to him, wishing that he writes his will before he comes to Beirut."

"The organization emphasizes that his holiness the Pope will be one of the victims of the criminal war our beloved homeland Lebanon is living through," the statement said.

Other Moslem groups have said that a Lebanese peace mission by the Roman Catholic leader would really be intended to boost the Christian side in the country's 14-year-old civil war.

However, a senior Shiite cleric, Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, was quoted Sunday as saying he would welcome the pope and "give him full security guarantees" to visit Moslem west Beirut.

The Vatican said it is studying the possibility of a visit to Lebanon, but no date has been set.

Manning
Mrs. Rosa Thigpen Manning, 85, died Sunday at Carolina Care Rest Home.

A funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Wilkerson Funeral Home Chapel by the Revs. James Heath and Gordon Braxton. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mrs. Manning, a native of Duplin County, lived most of her life in Pitt County.

She is survived by four sons, Rudolph E. Manning Jr. of Williamsburg, Va., Thomas F. Manning of Chesapeake, Va., Carl M. Manning of Vanceboro and Clyde E. Manning of Maysville; two daughters, Virginia Fussell of Winterville and Inez Manning of Greenville; 20 grandchildren, and 23 great-grandchildren.

Too Much Debt?

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday, and at other times will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Manning, Route 13, Box 461, Greenville.

Fall Into Shape

nearly half of the money raised through lifetime partnerships — $74.2 million — was for the Towers Hotel project, but only $11.4 million was actually spent on the unfinished 20-floor hotel.

In another lifetime partnership plan, the 1100 Club, 492,000 people were offered the chance to buy partnerships and take their choice of "brand new" lodgings at Farmland USA.

According to the charts, 7,783 people bought partnerships with donations of $1,100 each, but only one "bunkhouse" with 16 rooms was built. Only eight of those rooms were designated for lifetime partners.

Tapes of PTL's television program, which were reviewed by a grand jury and will be shown to Bakker's jury, show Bakker and Dortch promising that there was a limit of 30,000 lifetime partnerships in the Towers project.

But government auditors said 68,755 partnerships were sold. "Mr. Bakker and Mr. Dortch later told viewers of their television show that 900 additional partnerships had opened up because of people who had not made good on their pledges," Justice Department prosecutor Deborah Smith told U.S. District Judge Robert Potter on Thursday.

She said that sales pitch was an example of the "calculated attempts" by Bakker and Dortch to mislead their viewers and the PTL board about the ministry's financial condition.

"Mr. Dortch presented himself as a religious leader and man of God while lying to them to induce them to send in their money," she said.

Ribbons

The Reflector has developed a series of advertisements which show a single blue ribbon wrapped around books, newspaper and the world. These ads depicting the world that reading opens up for people will be published during Literacy Week.

An employee of The Daily Reflector will appear on the WNCT "Carolina Today" show Friday to explain the campaign. East Carolina University football spectators at the Sept. 9 football game will see a Literacy Week message throughout the game below the scoreboard.

Various marquee around the city will display the Literacy Week message.

A recent work session and party held to prepare the blue Literacy ribbons was attended by Greenville City Council members and Mayor Ed Carter.

Moore
FOUNTAIN — Mr. John Alton Moore Sr., 80, of Route 1, Fountain, died Sunday.

A funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Fountain Presbyterian Church by the Revs. Bruce Ford and Russ Riter. Burial will be in Queen Anne Cemetery, Fountain.

Mr. Moore was a native and long-time resident of the Fountain community of Pitt County. He was a member of the Fountain Presbyterian Church and the Farmville Masonic Lodge. He was also a Shriner.

Rose Cleared Of Any Involvement In Cocaine Ring

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose has been cleared of any involvement in a cocaine ring, but that doesn't lessen his problems with the IRS.

The local office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation found no evidence that Rose was part of a cocaine ring operated by former gym associates, an FBI spokesman said Sunday.

"We had an ongoing cocaine distribution investigation and it's been well documented that those folks knew Pete Rose, and we are totally satisfied that Pete Rose wasn't involved in any way in that type of criminal enterprise," FBI spokesman Edwin H. Boldt Jr. said in a telephone interview.

Also, there are no plans to prosecute Rose for his admissions to baseball investigators that he placed bets with bookmakers. Boldt said the bureau generally concentrates on bookmakers, not bettors.

Rose's admission was part of the basis for baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti giving a lifetime ban last week to the former Cincinnati Reds' manager. Under baseball rules, Rose can ask for reinstatement in one year.

Some of those who cooperated with baseball's investigation of Rose also cooperated with federal authorities.

Paul Janszen, who claims he ran

Rose's bets to bookmakers, said Rose had shown an interest in getting involved in a cocaine ring run by operators of a Gold's Gym in Cincinnati where Rose worked out. However, Janszen said Rose never actually got involved in the drug deals.

The FBI looked into the matter and concluded Rose was in the clear.

"We were satisfied (of that) quite some time ago," Boldt said.

Former Rose housemate Tommy Gioiosa is on trial in federal court in Cincinnati, accused of being part of the cocaine ring that smuggled the drug from Florida to Cincinnati.

Although the FBI no longer is investigating him on the drug matter, a federal grand jury in Cincinnati is looking into whether Rose paid all his taxes on racetrack winnings and income from memorabilia sales and autograph sessions. Any indictment on such charges would carry the possibility of a jail sentence and large fines.

There's no indication when the grand jury might conclude its investigation.

Only one piece of evidence uncovered in the FBI investigation was shown to baseball investigators and Rose's lawyers, according to Boldt. The two sides were allowed to see the three so-called betting sheets that Janszen gave the FBI after a federal judge in Columbus, Ohio, ordered the agency to do so. The sheets were tested for Rose's fingerprints.

However, Boldt said the bureau shared no other information with baseball investigators, and were barred by law from doing so. That contradicts a newspaper report over the weekend that the FBI had promised to cooperate with baseball's investigators.

"We would never do that," he said. "The (federal) privacy statute would prohibit the FBI from turning over information from FBI files to any private organization. That's what major league baseball is."

"Without that court order, we would not have released those (fingerprint) documents. We certainly haven't and wouldn't turn our records over to any private organization."

Gioiosa's trial on cocaine and tax charges is scheduled to resume Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati. Janszen is expected to testify against him this week.

The tax charge in part involves a $47,646 Pik Six ticket from Turfway Park in Florence, Ky. Federal prosecutors are trying to convince a 12-member jury that Gioiosa claimed it on his taxes when the winning ticket actually belonged to Rose. Gioiosa was in a much lower tax bracket at the time, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney William Hunt.

Rose isn't a defendant in the trial, and it's not known if he'll be called to testify.

Frost Calls On Experience, Wins World Series Playoff

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AKRON, Ohio — David Frost learned to play golf on the fast greens and tree-lined fairways of his native South Africa.

Frost drew on those experiences Sunday to defeat Ben Crenshaw in sudden death to win the World Series of Golf.

Three of the last seven winners in the World Series at the Firestone Country Club are South African natives. Despite their recent successes elsewhere, no European player has won the tournament.

Firestone was the first course Frost saw when he first came to the United States in 1983. He felt an affinity for it almost immediately.

"I grew up playing a lot of golf courses that had big trees like this," Frost said. "I think the key to winning on this golf course is you have to drive the ball well. You check the guys who have won (from South Africa), and Denis Watson can drive long and straight, as can Nick Price and I..."

"Also, we have good minds on the golf course. You have to have a way of thinking. This is not a golf course that you play aggressive all the time. You have to take out all your ammunition, but you have to think all the time."

The victory was worth $180,000 to Frost and pushed him over the $2 million mark in career earnings on the PGA Tour. He followed rounds of 70, 68, and 69 with a closing 69 to finish regulation at 4-under-par 276.

On a day when Firestone swallowed many a would-be contender — only three players broke par in the final round — it came down to Frost and Crenshaw.

Crenshaw, who led after the first and second rounds, took the lead with a six-foot birdie putt at the 16th hole, but PGA champion Payne Stewart also birdied the hole to pull even with Crenshaw at 4-under.

Frost then rolled in an 18-foot uphill birdie putt at the 17th, with Stewart dropping out of contention with back-to-back bogeys on the final two holes.

Greg Norman, who was near the top of the leader board all day, also saw his shot at a playoff go out the window with a bogey on the closing hole.

Frost and Crenshaw each saved par on the finishing hole with chip shots to three feet and both parred the first playoff hole, with Crenshaw just missing a 25-foot birdie putt that he said "burned the right edge" of the hole.

On the second playoff hole, the par-4 18th, Crenshaw sprayed his drive to the right. His second shot was short and right of the green. A chip left him nine feet from the hole, and Crenshaw, considered by many to be the finest putter in the game, just missed.

"You can never write him off when the putter's in his hands," Frost said. Except this time.

Frost salvaged a par after hitting a 5-iron from the right rough to the back fringe of the green. He then chipped to two feet and knocked in the putt for the third victory of his five-year career.

"The most thrilling feeling is to beat Crenshaw, Stewart, and Norman," Frost said. "Those are not players who have only been around a couple years."

The loss was another playoff misery for Crenshaw. His record is 0-7 in playoffs.

Evert Bids Farewell In Open

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Chris Evert is on her way out and John McEnroe is on his way back on the eve of the U.S. Open.

Evert says the Open, which starts today at the National Tennis Center, will be her last major tournament. After winning 157 singles championships, more than any player in history, she is going to retire from tennis and start a family with husband Andy Mill.

"This is it," she wrote in the current Sports Illustrated. "No more 'maybes.' No more 'probablys.' Even though I hate dealing with this... my mind is made up."

Evert is ending her Grand Slam career where it all began.

She made her first big splash at the Open in 1971 as a 16-year-old semifinalist. Since then, she has won six times and reached at least the semifinals every year except 1987.

Evert would love to win it one more time, but she knows her chances are slim with a field that includes defending champion Steffi Graf, four-time winner Martina Navratilova and last year's runner-up, Gabriela Sabatini.

"It's not likely that I'll win the tournament for the seventh time, but I'm going to try my best," Evert said.

McEnroe hasn't won a Grand Slam event since capturing his fourth U.S. Open title in 1984. But the 30-year-old New York native is playing his best tennis in years and feels capable of winning another major title.

"I can still beat anybody if I play my best," he said.

McEnroe has won three titles and 34 of 39 matches this year. His best Grand Slam showing was at Wimbledon, where he lost to Stefan Edberg in the semifinals.

Edberg has lost the last two Grand Slam finals, to Michael Chang at the French Open and Boris Becker at Wimbledon. This time, he's seeded third, behind Ivan Lendl and Becker and just ahead of McEnroe.

Football To Imitate Baseball's Mediocrity?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

All year, the NFL tries to think up ways to outdo baseball.

This year, it has one — the AFC West, a replay of six mediocre baseball teams fighting it out in the American League East.

In fact, the AFC West is beyond mediocrity.

The strongest position on four of the teams may be public relations director. The Raiders are an exception — they don't have one.

Because the division has to put someone in the playoffs, the guys in Las Vegas have actually rated Seattle in the top half of the league, making the Seahawks 15-1 to win the Super Bowl. The Seahawks are defending champions, winning a 43-37 defensive struggle with the Raiders on the final day of the last season to finish 9-7.

Had the Seahawks lost, Los Angeles would have won at 8-8.

This year, 8-8 should do it.

Start with Seattle. (Why not?)

But the Seahawks have grown weaker at the critical position of owner since Ken Behring, a man of Steinbrennerish tendencies, bought the team last year. He's stuck paying $11 million to Brian Bosworth, a linebacker with rainbow-colored hair, a big mouth and a sore shoulder and knee whose main accomplishment in two years has been to alienate most of his teammates.

The Raiders are considered strong at owner, where Al Davis is one of the few who knows Xs from Os.

But Davis spent so much time in court in the early '80s that the team declined.

Vowing to return to excellence, he has obtained Jay Schroeder, Willie Gault, Tim Brown and such golden oldies as Otis Wilson and Bob Golic.

He forgot, however, to get an offensive line and a secondary; his best running back, Bo Jackson, is playing baseball; his second best, Marcus Allen, is unsigned. And Davis himself is overextended — he's on the commissioner selection committee; the committee overseeing the NFL's new international league, and is trying to decide whether to stay in Los Angeles or move to Irwindale, Oakland or Sacramento.

The Raiders also have a coach, whose name no one can remember (see below).

"I like Kansas City," Art Still, a defensive end who played there for a decade and is now plying his trade in Buffalo, said one day in late July.

"Why not?"

Still, 6-foot-7 and 260 pounds, probably could have done better in the secondary than the guys the Chiefs had out there last week against the Giants. Jeff Rutledge (Jeff Rutledge????) was 8-for-8 for 156 yards and three touchdowns as the Chiefs lost 45-7.

Oh yes. For anyone who's interested, the coach of the Raiders is named Mike Shanahan.

Ditka Says Bears Stink

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Will Mike Ditka's words be as prophetic as Dallas Green's?

Early in the baseball season, Green said of his New York Yankees, "We stink." Not only was he proved right, he also lost his job as manager.

The NFL exhibition season is upon us and Ditka summed up the Chicago Bears' 22-17 loss to the Kansas City Chiefs on Sunday night by saying, "We stunk."

Turnovers and penalties stymied the Bears, although they never trailed until Ron Jaworski's 19-yard touchdown pass to Robb Thomas with 4:03 left. Ditka wouldn't have been satisfied with the Bears' performance even had they won.

"We couldn't do the basic things, we had countless penalties, we couldn't make a 27-yard field goal," he said. "We're not as good as we think we are. We stink."

"No more is it going to be their way; it's going to be my way. A lot of those guys aren't going to be around (Monday). That's two weeks in a row. You put the quarterback out there and he has to take his life in his own hands. We weren't flat mentally, we just stunk."

In Saturday games, it was Phoenix 21, Cleveland 7; Houston 23, Los Angeles Raiders 21; Denver 24, Dallas 21 in overtime; New York Giants 21, New York Jets 17; Los Angeles Rams 24, Minnesota 14; Green Bay 27, Buffalo 24; Indianapolis 30, Tampa Bay 0; Philadelphia 38, Pittsburgh 14, and New England 23, Atlanta 7.

Tonight, Cincinnati plays New Orleans.

If Ditka was upset with the Bears, Jaworski, who competed all six passes in the final touchdown drive for 69 yards, was ecstatic about the Chiefs.

"The offensive line did a good job and the receivers made it easy for me," said Jaworski, who is battling Steve DeBerg for the starting quarterback job. "We beat a good football team, and that has to give you confidence."

It was the first victory after two setbacks for Marty Schottenheimer, Kansas City's new coach.

"Two things pleased me most," Schottenheimer said. "We went toe-to-toe with a good team like the Bears and we won on the road, something Kansas City hasn't done much of recently."

Mike Tomczak quarterbacked the first half for the Bears and completed eight of 14 passes for 127 yards but he was intercepted twice and sacked twice. Jim Harbaugh, who played the second half, was 8-of-15 for 107 yards but gave up a safety when he stepped out of the end zone in the final minute.

Player Of The Week

Washington's Brian Jones opened the season with a big showing in a 22-13 loss to Wallace-Rose Hill, but the effort was still good enough to earn him the initial Player of the Week award from The Daily Reflector.

Jones, a 6-1, 180-pound senior quarterback, passed for 225 yards and both Pam Pack touchdowns while hitting on 16 of 39 pass attempts.

Jones' first scoring pass went to Rod Gorham from nine yards out. His second touchdown toss was a 18-yard to Juarez Rouse.

Prep Honor Roll

•Farmville quarterback Morris Foreman: Foreman, a junior, ran for two touchdowns and passed for another along with a two-point conversion as Farmville defeated North Edgecombe 30-14. Foreman had 56 yards rushing and another 42 passing for 98 yards in total offense. He also led the defense with eight tackles.

•North Pitt halfback Reggie Daniels: Daniels, a senior, ran for 117 yards on 17 carries in North Pitt's 27-13 loss to West Craven. Daniels, a former starter at end for the last three seasons, was in his first game at running back since junior high.

•Ayden-Grifton offensive lineman Patrick Simmons, James Williams, Fernando Hicks, Jon Lee and John Phillips: The Charger linemen, an unknown heading into the season, came through in the season opener to help Ayden-Grifton take a 20-6 win over Richlands. As a team, Ayden-Grifton rushed for 232 yards en route to the win.

•Ayden-Grifton running back Rashid Williams: Williams, a senior, ran for 92 yards on 10 carries in the Chargers' 20-6 win over Richlands.

•Rose running back Maurice Hines: Hines, a senior, rushed for 128 yards on 16 carries, including a 12-yard touchdown run, as Rose defeated Tarboro, 32-13 win over Tarboro.

Conley Wins Athens Drive Tournament

RALEIGH — The D.H. Conley volleyball team opened its season on an impressive note by sweeping to the Athens Drive Invitational Tournament title over the weekend.

Conley, with only one senior on its roster, posted wins over Raleigh Broughton (15-8, 15-1), East Duplin (15-10, 10-15, 15-4) and Southern Durham (15-0, 15-3).

"It was not as strong a tournament as it has been in the past but we were happy to win it," DHC coach Martha McCaskill said. "I felt like we were the best team in it so I would have been disappointed if we had not have won. But we still have a long way to go."

A string of seven consecutive service points by freshman Lori Waters keyed Conley against Raleigh Broughton.

Virginia Hall was credited with four kills and eight effective hits while senior Tracy Sumrell had four kills and five effective hits in the second match.

Against Southern Durham, junior Nikki Adams had a string of eight service points, Hall delivered two kills and had four effective hits and sophomore Angie Jones had three effective hits.

Adams finished with 29 assists in the tournament while sophomore Jamie Hart had 15.

DHC visits non-conference rival SouthWest Edgecombe Thursday at 5 p.m.

Allison To Return As Owner

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Bobby Allison, out of racing since he was injured more than a year ago, plans to return to the sport next year as the owner of a Winston Cup team on the NASCAR circuit.

He has not named a driver or secured a sponsor, but the team will race Buicks and be based at Charlotte.

"There are several people I think a lot of as drivers," Allison said by telephone from his condominium in Charlotte, "but nothing is set, and I don't want to start saying names at this time."

The Birmingham News reported Friday that Mike Alexander probably will drive for Allison. He substituted for Allison after a crash June 19, 1988, in Pennsylvania that has kept Allison from racing since then.

The 51-year-old Allison said he still hopes to return to racing. "I do feel I am truly getting well," he said. "It's too slow for me, but I am getting there."

Bob Bilby of Lansing, Mich., will be a co-owner of his racing team, Allison said, and Nathan Sims of Ventura, Calif., will be a minor partner.

"We've bought a piece of property at the Charlotte Motor Speedway industrial park and our building will be there," Allison said.

He said he considered basing the team in Hueytown, Ala., his home, but decided on the Charlotte area, where many teams and mechanics are located.

"It's so difficult to get the whole effort out of Hueytown, to get the people you need to move there," Allison said.

Crewmen haven't been hired for the team. "It probably will take 12 to 15. It will take a pretty well-manned operation. We will have a car shop and an engine shop. I think you have to build your own engines. There are engines for sale, but I never felt I could race as well with a bought engine as with a built engine."

Deacons' Black, Cheeley To Transfer

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest basketball players Tony Black and Darryl Cheeley have decided to transfer from the school.

Black, a 6-foot-4 junior, who was sidelined last season with a broken leg suffered in practice in February 1988, said he needed to find a new direction. "It's best for me to move on," Black said in an interview from his home in Florence, S.C.

Black, who plays both small forward and big guard, said he was concerned about the playing time that he might receive this season. Wake Forest has 11 players returning from last season's team and is well stocked at small forward and big guard.

Black broke his leg during his sophomore season in 1988, his best at Wake Forest. He started the first 17 games of the season and was averaging 7.4 points when injured. In his career at Wake Forest, he played in 28 games, mostly as a reserve, and averaged 5.9 points.

Black has two seasons of eligibility left, but if he enrolled at another NCAA Division I school, he would have to sit out the year as a transfer and that would cost him a season. He said he had not chosen a school.

Cheeley, a 6-1 sophomore guard, played in 19 games last season, but scored only 21 points. He had been a late recruiting addition last summer for Bob Staak, the former Wake Forest coach. Cheeley averaged 23 points a game as a senior in high school at Burlington Williams.

Cheeley could not be reached for comment, but in a statement released through the Wake Forest Sports Information office, he said:

"After talking with Coach (Dave) Odom and my family, I have decided to transfer to another school. It appears the situation at Wake Forest offers me little opportunity for playing time over the next three years, and that is very important to me."

Wake's Odom Adds Two Assistants

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest basketball coach Dave Odom has added two assistants to his staff.

Larry Davis, an assistant the last four years at Delaware, joins Odom as a full-time assistant. Frank Haith will serve as a graduate assistant, and will be enrolled as a full-time student.

Odom said both Davis and Haith will be involved in recruiting. Haith also will focus on academics, Odom said.

France To Miss At Least Four Weeks

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest tailback Darrell France suffered a sprained right knee in practice and will be lost to the team at least four weeks, coach Bill Dooley said Friday.

France played as a freshman last year and was expected to contribute to a position affected by the loss of Mark Young because of academic problems.

"One of our concerns entering the preseason was our depth at tailback," Dooley said. "Losing Darrell at this time certainly compounds our problems there."

"He has as much speed as any of our backs and can really break the big play for you. We just hope to have him back in action as soon as possible," he said.

France was examined Friday morning by team Wake Forest team physician Dr. Walt Curl.

The Demon Deacons, who open their season against Appalachian State on Sept. 9, will have junior Tony Rogers and sophomore Anthony Williams available at tailback.

Darrell Waltrip celebrates Busch 500 victory

Waltrip Serves Notice In Busch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Dollar signs and championship rings were swimming in Darrell Waltrip's eyes after his victory in the Busch 500.

Waltrip led the final 205 laps of the 500-lap NASCAR event Saturday night on the half-mile oval at Bristol International Raceway.

That wasn't unusual for the 42-year-old driver from Franklin, Tenn., who now owns a record 11 career victories at Bristol.

But even before he reached the victory podium, the exhausted Waltrip was thinking about the $1 million bonus he can earn by winning Sunday's Southern 500 at Darlington, S.C., and about the fourth Winston Cup championship that he is still hopeful of earning.

"Tonight was the kind of performance we need to take this (championship). Tonight, we wanted to serve notice," Waltrip said. "We didn't want to take any prisoners."

The victory, his fifth of the season and the 78th of his career, helped Waltrip gain 59 points on Dale Earnhardt, who continues to lead the season series with nine of 29 races remaining.

Earnhardt, who dominated the first half of the race, wound up far off the pace after a crash on lap 295, when he gave up the lead to Waltrip. Earnhardt wound up 14th.

Second-place Rusty Wallace, the only other driver with five victories this season, was sixth Saturday night and gained 29 points on Earnhardt. He now trails by 53.

Mark Martin, who was 20th, is third, 118 points behind, followed by Waltrip, who now is just 141 in back of Earnhardt.

Alan Kulwicki, who started from the pole, made up a lost lap late in the race and wound up second, five seconds behind Waltrip. But his failure to win raised the bonus for a pole-sitter who also wins a race to $144,400 for the Southern 500.

Unocal puts up $7,600 per event to any driver who can win both the pole and race. Kulwicki had a shot at $136,800 at Bristol.

Tigers Try To Focus On Football

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Clemson coach Danny Ford predicted the 1989 season would be one of the stiffest challenges a Tiger team has faced in many years. Now with the cloud of an NCAA investigation hanging over their heads, the task becomes that much tougher.

Reports first surfaced last week in the Atlanta-Journal Constitution that Clemson was being formally investigated for recruiting violations. Athletic Director Bobby Robinson said that he was unaware of any investigation and that he didn't want Ford or any players talking to reporters.

The Tigers enter this season gunning for their fourth consecutive ACC title but gone are 37 lettermen, including 18 four-year letter winners, and 13 starters from last year's 10-2 team that whipped Oklahoma in the Citrus Bowl and finished with a No. 9 national ranking.

Among the missing are quarterback Rodney Williams, two-time All-America cornerback Donnell Woolford, dependable fullback Tracy Johnson, two-time all-conference offensive tackle Jeff Nunamacher and All-ACC middle guard Mark Drag.

But, Ford's tank of talent is not exactly sitting on empty, considering the return of 11 starters and 30 letter winners. That group includes tailback Terry Allen, big-play receiver Gary Cooper, kicker Chris Gardocki, standout free safety James Lott and offensive line mainstays Eric Harmon and Jeb Flesch.

However, Ford says his concern is that every team in the ACC should be a notch better than last year.

"Our biggest concern is not what we have at Clemson but what everybody else has around the league," Ford said. "Everybody else in the league is better except Clemson."

"Last year we lost a great many football players. I don't know if it's a rebuilding year but we have many problems we have to get fixed before September 2 (the season-opener at home against Furman)."

The big question mark is the quarterback slot vacated by Williams, who was not always pretty in doing the job but finished with the most career wins by a starting quarterback in ACC history with 32.

And win is all Ford asks. "We don't ask our quarterback to do what everybody else does, we just ask him to win," Ford said.

Chris Morocco, who played in seven games last year as well as serving as the holder on field goals and extra points, is vying for the starting nod along with DeChane Cameron.

Michael Carr was also vying for a starting job but left school after poor practice performance. He has since returned to the squad.

A stable of running backs is spearheaded by the exciting Allen, the top Tiger ground gainer in each of the last two years. Allen has 2,165 yards and needs only 750 more to become the top rusher in Clemson history.

Joining Allen in the backfield will be senior Wesley McFadden, who was converted from tailback to fullback last year. He also is an effective kick returner.

Joe Henderson, who amassed 538 yards a year ago, and Charlie James provide depth at tailback while Tony Kennedy and Junior Hall back up McFadden at fullback.

The wide receiver spot features Cooper, Rodney Fletcher, Chip Davis, speedster Doug Thomas and Fernandez West. Stacy Fields and Chris Twiss man the tight end slot.

Ford says getting Cooper more involved in the offense is critical. The 6-2, 191-pound senior averaged 26.1 yards per catch last year and had 11 plays that totaled 40 yards or more.

Hank Phillips has been moved from guard to center and will join Flesch and Harmon as the nucleus of the offensive line. Stacy Long, Bruce Batton and Kelvin Hankins are available to fill in the remaining spots.

On defense, where the Tigers ranked among the top 15 in the nation in rushing, scoring and total defense last year, eight starters must be replaced.

The linebacking spots are solid with the return of Ed McDaniel, who led Clemson in tackles (104) as a freshman last year, Doug Brewster, Vince Taylor and Dorian Mariale at the inside slots and Levon Kirkland, John Johnson, Wayne Simmons and Wayne Harps at the outside slots.

Candidates to start up front, where four, four-year lettermen were lost, are Vance Hammond, Otis Smith, Otis Moore and Chester McGlockton at tackle and David Davis and Al Richard at guard.

Lott and Dexter Davis return in the secondary but the void left by Woolford, a four-year starter must be filled. Jerome Henderson and Arlington Nunn, a pair of letter-winners, are the top candidates along with Tony Mauney, Marc Taylor and Tyron Mouzon.

Gardocki, a sophomore, masterfully handles both the punting and place-kicking duties. He was an honorable mention choice by both AP and UPI last year when he knocked through 19 field goals and averaged 42.7 yards a punt.

"We won't be second to anybody in the kicking game at Clemson," Ford said.

Cubs Get Reprieve While Mets Sink To Fourth

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Chicago Cubs, who have led the National League East for the last three weeks, have been slipping. The New York Mets, who were supposed to be leading it all season, have been sliding.

The Cubs, losers in seven of their previous eight games, found a little traction Sunday when they came from behind in the ninth inning to tie the Atlanta Braves before Andre Dawson's two-out single gave them a much-needed 3-2 victory in the 10th.

The Mets weren't so fortunate. They didn't pitch. They didn't field, and they lost 13-7 to the San Diego Padres to stretch their losing streak to five games.

Chicago, now two games ahead of Montreal in the East, was a winner in part because Atlanta manager Russ Nixon chose to play the percentages.

"Yes, it was the righty-lefty thing," Nixon said of his decision have right-hander Mark Eichhorn walk left-handed-hitting Mark Grace to get to the right-handed-swinging Dawson.

"I couldn't believe it," Grace said. "That's got to be a career-first, walking me to get to Dawson."

But Dawson, who hit a 1-2 pitch from Eichhorn, 4-5, into center field to score Shawon Dunston with the winning run, didn't think it was such a bad idea.

"He's real tough," Dawson said of the sidearming Eichhorn. "I just wanted to put the ball in play somewhere."

The victory, which delighted a full house of 35,107 at Wrigley Field, enabled the Cubs to win the three-game series 2-1. They had been swept back-to-back by Houston and Cincinnati in losing six straight prior to Atlanta's arrival in Chicago.

Dawson wasn't celebrating, however.

"That's what we are trying to do," he said. "Win two out of three."

The Mets found themselves trying to win just one of three in San Diego. They didn't come close.

"We're going out there like we're waiting to get beat," center fielder Juan Samuel said. "We're not playing like we're in a pennant race."

Samuel was to a large extent being self-critical. He turned a short fly ball by Mark Parent into a three-run double that gave the Padres an 8-4 lead in the fifth inning.

But he wasn't the only culprit.

"When you walk 10 people, you should get slaughtered," Mets manager Davey Johnson said.

The Mets did that and more. A wild pitch by reliever John Mitchell on a strikeout kept the fifth inning alive for Parent, who wound up with four RBIs. Shortstop Kevin Elster started it with an error.

Cubs 3, Braves 2
Chicago tied the game with two outs in the ninth against Joe Boever when Darrin Jackson singled home Lloyd McClendon, who had reached on a leadoff walk and was sacrificed to second.

Mitch Williams, 4-2, pitched two scoreless innings, striking out four. Oddibe McDowell had tripled to tie

Minnesota's Kirby Puckett is tagged out at home by lunging Seattle catcher Dave Valle the game and Atlanta took the lead on an RBI single by Jeff Blauser in the seventh.

Padres 13, Mets 7
Roberto Alomar had a career-high five RBIs as San Diego swept New York in a three-game series for the first time in eight years.

Alomar hit a two-run homer, his fourth and second in three games, in the sixth and had a two-run single in the seventh.

Elster hit a two-run homer for the Mets, who blew a 4-0 lead and lost starter Bob Ojeda for two or three starts with a knee injury.

The Mets are in fourth place in the East, 3½ games behind the Cubs.

Expos 6, Giants 3

Andres Galarraga hit a grand slam and drove in five runs to match a career high, and Bryn Smith won for the first time in eight starts. Galarraga's other RBI came on a base-loaded walk by Mike LaCoss. It was the 11th time San Francisco pitchers have walked in a run this season.

San Francisco's lead over Houston was trimmed to four games in the West.

Craig Lefferts replaced LaCoss, 7-9, in the seventh inning and Galarraga hit his first career grand slam.

Astros 6, Cardinals 3

Ken Caminiti drove in three runs, two on a decisive double in the sixth inning, as Houston broke a five-game losing streak. St. Louis trails Chicago by 2½ games.

With Houston trailing 3-2, Glenn Davis reached on an infield single with one out against Ted Power, 5-6. One out later, Terry Puhl walked before Caminiti lined a one-hopper against the right-field wall. Glenn Wilson added a two-run double in the seventh.

Bob Forsch, 4-4, went six innings. Dave Smith, the third Houston pitcher, worked the final inning for his 23rd save in 27 opportunities.

Reds 1, Pirates 0

Tom Browning recorded his seventh consecutive victory. Browning, 14-10, allowed just three hits but left after walking Gary Redus to start the ninth. John Franco came on for his 28th save in 33 opportunities.

Herm Winningham scored the only run in the third inning when he scored from third as Randy Kramer, 4-7 — who was to leave shortly thereafter with a groin injury — lost a race to first base against Todd Benzinger on a difficult 3-6-1 double-play attempt.

Dodgers 8, Phillies 1

Fernando Valenzuela won for the fourth time in his last five decisions and slump-ridden Mike Scioscia hit a two-run homer for Los Angeles.

Scioscia, batting .218 this month, gave the Dodgers a 3-0 lead in the second inning with his sixth homer. It followed a leadoff single by Jeff Hamilton, who added an RBI double in the fifth.

Dave Anderson added two run-scoring singles in support of Valenzuela, 9-12, who allowed six hits in seven innings, struck out five and walked two.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

The next time Oakland plays Kansas City, the stakes figure to be a lot higher.

Bob Welch pitched eight strong innings and Oakland avoided a three-game sweep at Royals Stadium, beating Kansas City 6-0 Sunday.

Oakland ended a three-game losing streak, one shy of its season high, and stayed one game ahead of California in the American League West. The Royals, who have won 11 of 13, fell 3½ games behind the Athletics.

double figures in strikeouts. But singles by Downing and Jack Howell put runners on first and third before Ray hit a ball that second baseman Julio Franco couldn't make a play on as Downing scored.

Twins 8, Mariners 5

John Moses got two hits in a seven-run fifth inning and Minnesota sent Seattle to its 11th straight loss. The Twins won their fifth consecutive game and moved over .500 for the first time since July 2.

Mark Guthrie, 1-0, got his first major-league victory. He allowed three runs in 6½ innings and Juan Berenguer got his third save.

Scott Bankhead, 11-6, lost for the only the second time in 11 decisions.

Orioles 8, Yankees 5

Cal Ripken and Bob Melvin each homered and rookie Bob Milacki pitched his third complete game in 29 starts as Baltimore won for the ninth time in 10 games.

The Orioles won for the fourth straight day at Yankee Stadium and stayed 1½ games ahead of Toronto in the AL East. New York fell to 2-9 under Manager Bucky Dent.

Melvin hit a three-run homer in the second inning, his first home run since Aug. 14, 1988, against Orel Hershiser. Melvin later added an RBI triple.

Ripken hit his 18th homer. Don Mattingly and Bob Geren hit two-run homers for the Yankees.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 4

George Bell's two-run triple capped a five-run fifth inning and led Toronto over Milwaukee at the SkyDome. The Blue Jays won their sixth consecutive game and the Brewers lost their sixth straight.

Bell extended his hitting streak to a career-high 18 games when his two-out fly ball fell out of center fielder Robin Yount's glove.

Todd Stottlemyre, 5-5, went five innings for the victory and Duane Ward got his 13th save. Chris Bosio, 14-8, left one batter after Bell's triple.

Red Sox 7, Tigers 1

Ellis Burks hit his fifth career grand slam as Boston won its sixth straight game and handed Detroit its eighth consecutive loss.

The Red Sox have scored 27 runs, 14 of them unearned, in the first four games of the five-game series. The visiting Tigers have made 11 errors.

Burks' slam came in the fifth off Brian DuBois, 0-2, after an error by third baseman Rick Schu. Nick Esasky hit his 25th homer, a three-run shot, in the eighth after an error by pitcher Steve Searcy.

White Sox 9, Indians 3

Ron Karkovice hit the first grand slam of his career and added an RBI single as Chicago completed a three-game sweep in Cleveland.

Karkovice's homer capped a six-run third inning against John Farrell, 7-13, and made it 7-1. Greg Walker and Carlos Martinez each got three of the White Sox's 14 hits.

Rappoport Wants To Buy Yankees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Boxing manager Dennis Rappoport says he has held telephone conversations with some New York Yankees stockholders about purchasing the team but added that principal owner George Steinbrenner has refused to meet with him.

"I'm prepared to make a deal, to close a deal," Rappoport told the Associated Press on Sunday. "All I need is to have the door opened. I would like to present him an offer he could not refuse."

Rappoport, manager of former heavyweight contender Gerry Cooney and former WBA and WBC heavyweight champion Tim Witherspoon, said Steinbrenner must bow completely out of the picture if he sells.

The Yankees are mired in sixth place in the American League East with a 58-74 record, 13½ games behind first-place Baltimore, and have lost nine of 11 games since Steinbrenner fired Dallas Green as manager and replaced him with Bucky Dent.

Fans at Yankee Stadium, angry over their team's poor play, loudly booed Steinbrenner on Sunday, chanting "George Must Go" during an 8-5 loss to Baltimore.

The Yankees were unaware of Rappoport's comments and spokesmen said the team had no reaction.

Rappoport called himself a Yankees' fan "since I was a kid."

Polish Changes Cast Doubt On Troops' Loyalty

By Bryan Brumley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Kremlin cannot trust the Polish Army in case of an East-West European confrontation — but neither can Western war planners bank on Polish troops breaking ranks with their Soviet allies during a conflict, experts say.

"It is an unreliable force. I think that has been the Soviet General Staff calculation for years, and I think it has got to be even more the conclusion" now that the communists have lost control of the Polish government, said A. Ross Johnson, a former RAND Corp. expert on Warsaw Pact military forces who now heads Radio Free Europe.

Unless the Soviets have firm control of Polish rail lines, they would face grave difficulties waging a ground war in Europe, according to analysts who have studied the issue for the Pentagon.

Ian Cuthbertson, a British expert on Eastern Europe, said, "The Soviets long have realized the unreliability of the Polish Armed Forces. Most of them are earmarked to protect Soviet communications lines in Poland for the Group of Western Forces," the half-million Soviet troops in East Germany.

The chances that Polish or other Warsaw Pact units actually would see combat in a European war would be greatly diminished if Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev carries out his proposal to reduce Soviet troop levels Eastern Europe from 625,000 to 350,000, while cutting Red Army tank forces in half. President Bush has proposed smaller cuts in Atlantic Alliance forces.

"Gorbachev is in the process of withdrawing the forces that would give the Soviets surprise capability," said a U.S. intelligence analyst.

Questions about the loyalties of the Polish army began long ago, although the emergence of a Solidarity government marks a watershed in western perception of the issue.

Poland has the second largest military in the Warsaw Pact, with just over 600,000 Army and uniformed police forces, including reserves, according to a 1986 RAND study written for the Pentagon by a former Polish officer, Michael Sadykiewicz, now a consultant in London.

According to Sadykiewicz and other analysts with access to intelligence data, Kremlin war plans call for most of the Polish forces to guard rail and communication lines that would be needed to reinforce frontline Soviet units in East Germany.

As many as 1 million Soviet troops would move across Poland in the event of war, occupying the country along the way, according to some Western estimates.

Many Polish generals, including President Wojciech Jaruzelski, were trained in the Soviet Union, but loyalty to the Kremlin decreases down the ranks of the mainly conscript army, said Johnson and Cuthbertson, a scholar at the Institute for East-West Security Studies in New York.

"They had conscripts coming directly out of Solidarity and there is evidence that they were seen as much less reliable than the conscripts of the 1970s," said Johnson.

But analysts, cautioning against the assumption that the Polish Army will refuse to fight alongside the Soviets, cite contradictory evidence of Polish loyalties.

Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa and the new Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki have given assurances that the Communist Party will head the defense and interior ministries, which control the military and the police, and that Poland will remain in the Warsaw Pact.

Additionally, President Wojciech Jaruzelski, the communist leader who declared martial law against Solidarity on Dec. 13, 1981, remains president, with the power to declare a new state of emergency.

The army, in cracking down on Solidarity eight years ago, proved that it could be used by the government against popular unrest. However, one defector, Ryszard Kuklinski, a former colonel in the Polish Armed Forces, has written that Jaruzelski long resisted Kremlin pressure to use the military against the independent trade union.

The uncertainty of Polish loyalties has led the Kremlin to assign just over half of Poland's military and police units to defend the "internal front" against domestic unrest, said Sadykiewicz, drawing on his years in the Polish military.

A smaller group, including elite and maritime paratroop units, would advance with Soviet forces on a so-called "second echelon front" across the Baltic and into Denmark, away from the main battleground, Germany, according to Sadykiewicz and other experts.

Red Army generals have planned to position "Soviet forces in front of, beside and even behind the Polish forces" to ensure that they would advance across Western Europe in step with any Soviet offensive, said Johnson.

Walesa Wants To Delay Strikes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said today he plans to appeal to workers for at least a six-month strike moratorium to give the new government some time to solve Poland's pressing problems.

The independent Gazeta Wyborcza newspaper said Walesa would issue a statement in the next few days to affirm the need for a moratorium of at least six months.

Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a Solidarity activist and a close adviser to Walesa, was approved by parliament Thursday as the East bloc's first non-Communist leader.

Asked by reporters in Gdansk today when the moratorium request would be issued, Walesa replied, "We should do it together with the appointment of the government."

"We have the biggest chance ever to make the Poland of our dreams. We can go in this direction, but we cannot do it if we are going to suffer economic losses," he said.

Mazowiecki has been holding talks with other political leaders to decide how to allot government ministries among Solidarity, the Communist Party and two smaller parties that joined Solidarity to form a majority coalition in parliament.

Walesa has said in the past that an end to labor unrest and Western aid are necessary to help reverse Poland's economic decline and provide a favorable climate for the new government.

The Gazeta Wyborcza article said Walesa told workers with pay demands that Solidarity would help negotiate their demands with management.

Pay disputes have broken out on an almost daily basis over the past six months, but most stoppages have been brief.

Workers are frustrated by annual inflation of more than 100 percent, price increases, and empty shelves. They are also upset about the lack of visible economic improvement since Solidarity was legalized in April after a seven-year ban and Poland's freest elections in more than four decades were held in June.

Railway workers in the central city of Lodz ended a one-day strike on Saturday under pressure from Walesa. They sent an appeal to Mazowiecki asking him to satisfy their pay demands.

Student Sentenced In China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — A student charged with spreading rumors to the Voice of America during the pro-democracy protests has been given a nine-year prison term, a state newspaper reported today. It was the first announced sentencing of a student participant since the government's June crackdown.

The China Youth News said Zhang Weiping was sentenced Saturday by the Hangzhou Intermediate People's Court for spreading counter-revolutionary propaganda and instigating criminal acts.

Zhang, a fourth-year student at Zhejiang Fine Arts Institute in the eastern city of Hangzhou, admitted some of the charges against him but would not acknowledge that his acts were counter-revolutionary, the daily said.

The court said that on June 6, two days after the bloody military crackdown of the student movement in Beijing, Zhang called the U.S.-funded Voice of America and falsely reported that students in Hangzhou forced local authorities to fly the Chinese flag at half-staff to mourn victims of the Beijing massacre.

It said Zhang sent a tape of the VOA broadcast of his report to his university, and "it created a very bad political influence."

The court also accused Zhang of drawing eight cartoons vilifying Communist Party and government leaders.

The newspaper did not say when Zhang was convicted, but conviction and sentencing often happen at the same time. It also did not say under what clause of the criminal code he was tried or what the maximum sentence was.

One clause covering counter-revolutionaries who incite the masses says those found guilty of serious cases shall not serve terms of less than five years. A counter-revolutionary can get a life term if the offense is deemed serious enough.

Chinese police have arrested thousands of workers and students who took part in the pro-democracy movement and have publicly sentenced dozens of workers to long prison terms for rioting and causing social disturbances. At least 12 non-students have been executed for destroying public property and attacking police.

Authorities have announced the arrests of eight out of 21 student leaders put on a nationwide wanted list following the military crackdown, but so far none has been brought to public trial.

VOA, which has a large Mandarin-language audience in China, has been accused by the government of "rumor-mongering" in its reports on the military push to drive students from Tiananmen Square, in which at least 200 unarmed people were killed.

The VOA Beijing bureau chief and another VOA reporter were expelled from China for their reporting activities.

Depression Moves Out Into Pacific

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LA PAZ, Mexico — Reduced by rough Baja California terrain to a tropical depression, the remains of Pacific Hurricane Kiko drifted seaward today.

Kiko battered the southeastern coast of the sparsely populated Baja California peninsula with 115 mph winds and dumped up to 11 inches of rain late Saturday and early Sunday but no casualties were reported.

The storm toppled trees and electrical poles, sent water gushing down normally dry gullies and drove 1,300 residents to shelters, officials said.

By Sunday night, its winds had died to 35 mph, with higher gusts and a few squalls, the National Weather Service in Miami said.

Francisco Zatarain, state security coordinator for Baja California Sur, said the number left homeless in La Rivera, the town hardest hit by the storm, was not yet known. Officials said about 20 homes of laminated cardboard and thin wood blew away in the town of 4,000.

La Rivera is about 75 miles south of La Paz. Zatarain said no damage was reported in La Paz, the state capital about 760 miles southeast of San Diego that with 160,000 inhabitants accounts for half the state's population.

Filipinos Arrest Rebel In Shooting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAVAO CITY, Philippines — Troops arrested a communist rebel who admitted taking part in the April slaying of a U.S. Army colonel in a Manila suburb, the military announced today.

Juanito Itaas, 25, was arrested with a companion in a public jeep here Sunday evening after intelligence reports linked him to the April 21 slaying of Col. James Rowe, the military said.

Rowe, a decorated Vietnam War veteran who escaped after five years in a Vietcong prison camp, was slain on his way to work at the Joint U.S. Military Assistance Group in Quezon City.

Communist rebels claimed responsibility for the assassination. Maj. Gen. Ramon Montano, acting military chief of staff, said he considered the Rowe case solved.

It was the first time the military has claimed to have arrested one of the assassins. Last June, police arrested a messenger for a university newspaper in connection with the slaying but said later he was not believed to have been among the actual assailants.

During an interrogation in front of reporters, Itaas said he was part of a seven-man rebel team that ambushed Rowe a few blocks from his office.

Itaas said he was ordered by rebel leaders to travel from Davao City to Manila to attend a meeting on organizational problems. After arriving, Itaas said he was ordered to take part in an assassination but did not know the intended target.

Itaas said he was among four assailants in one of two cars which took part in the attack. Three other assailants were in a backup vehicle, he added.

Military officials claimed Itaas also admitted taking part in three other assassinations of police and military officers in the Davao City area. His companion, Angelito Moralla, 23, was held as a suspected member of the rebel logistic command.

Officials said Itaas would be flown to Manila, where he would be charged with murder.

Rowe, 51, of McAllen, Texas, was assigned to a unit which provides training and logistical support to the Philippine armed forces. Rebels claim the organization also assists the military clandestinely in its counter-insurgency operations.

Rowe was the most senior U.S. official to be slain by communist rebels during their 20-year insurgency. In October 1987, rebels killed three Americans, including two Air Force enlisted men, and a Filipino civilian in attacks outside Clark Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila.

Colombian Minister Flees As Bombers Hit 10 Banks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Ten banks were blown up by bombs in the cocaine manufacturing center of Medellin, and local reports said the justice minister who was leading a crackdown on drug lords has fled to the United States in fear of her life.

News reports also said Sunday that an appeals court revoked an arrest order accusing a top drug kingpin of ordering two assassinations.

The bombs that went off throughout Colombia's second-largest city early Sunday caused extensive damage to seven branches of the government-owned Banco Cafetero and three branches of the private Banco de Colombia and Banco del Estado, authorities said.

A police spokesman said a young man was killed, apparently while planting one of the bombs.

Police refused to say which organization was responsible for the bombings. Other attacks in recent months were conducted by leftist guerrillas that sometimes cooperate with drug traffickers.

The spokesman said police patrols in Medellin, 215 miles north of Bogota, were tightened to prevent new attacks. He said extra units were stationed throughout Medellin to protect private and public buildings.

The city is hometown for the Medellin Cartel, the world's biggest drug organization and reportedly responsible for 80 percent of the cocaine sent by air, sea and land to the United States.

President Virgilio Barco meanwhile "denied reports related to the resignation of the justice minister," Monica de Greiff, but he failed to clarify whether the minister had actually resigned, according to a spokesman late Sunday.

The presidential communique followed a weekend of speculation over the alleged desertion of Mrs. de Greiff at a time when the government is conducting an unprecedented campaign against the drug lords.

Newspapers, radio networks and television stations repeatedly reported Sunday that Mrs. de Greiff had resigned after less than two months in charge.

Asked to clarify the communique, a spokesman at the Presidential Press Office said, "I cannot add a single word to the document."

Mrs. de Greiff, 32, had been the target of death threats against her, her husband and their 3-year-old child since the government launched a nationwide crackdown on drug traffickers after a string of killings that included presidential candidate Sen. Luis Carlos Galan on Aug. 18.

Since Galan's death, the government has arrested more than 11,000 people and seized hundreds of millions of dollars in property. The United States last week pledged $65 million in helicopters and other military aid for the government effort.

Rumors of Mrs. de Greiff's resignation circulated after a TV interview last week in which she said, "I wasn't prepared to work in times of war, such as now."

Rodrigo Lara Bonilla, a predecessor of Mrs. de Greiff, was killed by drug hitmen in 1984.

Last week, the traffickers declared war after the government began a crackdown in response to the assassinations of a magistrate, a police colonel and Sen. Galan over a 48-hour period.

The presidential communique on Mrs. de Greiff appeared untimely, as the government was calling on Colombians to become "fighters for the moral" and help them defeat the cocaine traffickers.

She traveled to Washington on Friday where she was scheduled to confer with U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh on extradition of arrested drug suspects. But she failed to show up at the meeting and no explanation was given by Colombian authorities.

Thornburgh said Sunday that Mrs. de Greiff would be welcome in United States if she applied for refugee status to escape from political prosecution.

Private radio network Caracol said Mrs. de Greiff had told President Barco she wanted to resign. Other news reports said she would be replaced temporarily by Communications Minister Carlos Lemos Simmonds.

Police launched an inquiry Sunday into possible involvement of Israelis with Colombian assassination squads.

Yehoshua Caspi, head of the investigations unit, said police would examine "all aspects of Israelis suspected of selling military services and know-how without Defense Ministry permission to unofficial groups in Colombia." He said the Defense Ministry requested the probe.

The possible involvement of Klein and other Israelis with the Medellin drug cartel drew a renewed defense today from Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

"I know our officers. I cannot believe that they have been involved in such crimes," Shamir said.

He said the government was not responsible for its citizens' actions overseas but that it would prosecute those who broke laws. "We have to do what we can. ... I am concerned with everything that is doing harm to our image," he said.

Reports from Colombia said four Israelis were involved.

Retired Israeli Asked About Militia Training

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — A retired Israeli officer was questioned by police today about allegations he trained private militias for Colombian drug lords, and claimed he did no more than other former Israeli officers working in the region.

Retired Lt. Col. Yair Klein told reporters at police headquarters in the Tel Aviv suburb of Petah Tikva he believed he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

"If I did break the law, a lot of other people did," he said.

Israeli newspapers have said Klein was the officer seen in an NBC film showing the training of death squads for the Medellin drug cartel in Colombia. He has denied he trained squads for Colombian drug dealers.

On Sunday, Klein said he would name high-ranking officers, including one now sitting in Israel's Parliament, who were involved in training operations in Latin America. But today he continued to refuse to make any names public.

South African Outlines His Racial Plans To Kaunda

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia — South African leader F.W. de Klerk today outlined a plan for resolving his country's racial conflict to President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, who praised some of de Klerk's ideas.

The trip has been viewed as a major step toward improving South Africa's relations with its black neighbors. Kaunda has been one of the harshest critics of South Africa's white-led government for the past 25 years.

De Klerk and Kaunda covered a range of regional issues during two hours of talks at a hotel in Livingstone, a tourist town in southern Zambia near Victoria Falls.

"I had the opportunity to give a positive vision of the future in which South Africa is going to break out of the cycle of conflict," De Klerk said at a brief news conference after the talks. "We are going through with negotiations and dialogue."

Asked about de Klerk's ideas, Kaunda said: "There are certain democratic principles which he says he intends to implement. About those, I see no disagreement at all."

Both leaders declined to be more specific.

Kaunda led a Zambian delegation of about 100 in greeting de Klerk, South Africa's acting president, at the airport today.

In their talks, De Klerk and Kaunda also discussed the crumbling effort to end Angola's 14-year civil war and the independence process in Namibia, the territory South Africa has ruled for 74 years.

On Namibia, de Klerk said he and Kaunda agreed that the year-long independence plan was on track with elections scheduled for early November.

De Klerk met Sunday in Johannesburg with Angola guerrilla leader Jonas Savimbi, who softened his stance a week after canceling a cease-fire with Angola's Marxist government.

De Klerk's predecessor, P.W. Botha, was forced to resign from the presidency Aug. 14 after the Cabinet overrode his objections to the talks with Kaunda.

De Klerk, leader of the governing National Party, is favored to win a five-year term as president.

Israel Denies Its Warplanes Raided Base In E. Lebanon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Police and the Israeli army denied radio reports that Israeli warplanes today blasted Shiite Moslem guerrilla bases in a new air raid on east Lebanon.

The Voice of Lebanon, the most popular Christian radio station in east Beirut, and Voice of the Nation, the main broadcast for the Moslem sector, were among those to report a raid on Lebanon's Bekaa valley, the second in less than 24 hours.

"There hasn't been any air raid today," said a police spokesman, who cannot be named under standing regulations.

The spokesman said supersonic jets broke the sound barrier in reconnaissance runs over the village of Janta and the ancient city of Baalbek, drawing heavy anti-aircraft fire from Hezbollah's positions.

The sonic booms apparently prompted speculation that the Israelis bombed Janta, 43 miles southeast of Beirut.

An Israeli army spokeswoman, who could not be identified under standing military rules, also said there was no raid today. She described the report as "disinformation."

A Hezbollah statement today said nine people were killed and 27 wounded in the Israeli air attack Sunday on a party base in south Lebanon's village of Ain Abu-Suar.

The statement said the victims included 15 students wounded when their school was hit in the attack.

Police had put Sunday's casualty toll at only three guerrillas killed and nine wounded.

Ain Abu-Suar is 40 miles southeast of Beirut near the northern edge of Israel's self-designated "security zone" in south Lebanon.

Sunday's attack was Israel's ninth on Lebanon this year. It apparently was in retaliation for an Aug. 9 suicide car bomb attack by a Hezbollah activist in the security zone.

Five Israeli soldiers and an militiaman of the Israel-backed South Lebanon Army were wounded.

Hezbollah said the bombing was to avenge the kidnapping of a Shiite Moslem cleric, Sheikh Abdul-Karim Obeid, by Israeli commandos south Lebanon on July 28.

'Matlock' Premier Features N.C. Show

By Robin P. Teater
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANTEO, N.C. — Andy Griffith is a man who likes to bring his work home, but this is the first chance he's had to do that in more than 40 years.

This historic village on the North Carolina coast where Griffith's acting career began is the backdrop for the season opener for his television series "Matlock."

"I always wanted to bring a show here," Griffith said recently in a break from filming. "I thought it would be good for the town and good for the company."

A native of Mount Airy and graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Griffith put fictional Mayberry, N.C., on the map.

That was in his popular TV series "The Andy Griffith Show" and yet, he said, the producers of that show saw no point in taping in the state because people already believed it was done here.

When Griffith suggested filming an episode of "Matlock" in North Carolina, he had no trouble persuading the producers.

"We took a flight down here and fell in love," said supervising producer Jeff Peters. "He loved the show so much he brought it home. Andy puts himself totally into this, especially in this episode. These are his people and his friends."

The two-hour show, which will air on NBC on Sept. 19, was filmed entirely on and around Roanoke Island, where the first English colonists landed and where Griffith has had a home for more than 30 years.

The episode, "The Hunting Party," has Ben Matlock called to defend a man accused of killing a member of his brother's hunting group. Matlock discovers a hostile environment that may hinder a fair trial.

About 20 local residents were hired for the crew and dozens as extras in the cast.

"This is a valentine from Andy for the whole community," said Della Basnight, whose family has been friends with Griffith since he played Sir Walter Raleigh for five summers in the outdoor musical drama, "The Lost Colony."

During the "Matlock" taping, art sometimes imitated life. In the closing scene, the crowd cheered as Matlock, a big city lawyer from Atlanta, emerged victorious from the courthouse.

Ms. Basnight and a handful of her relatives, who play themselves, descend on Matlock for photos as part of the scene.

"Smile," said Ms. Basnight's 79-year-old mother, Cora Mae Basnight, as she is pushed next to Matlock for a pose to complete the scene.

"Andy came up to the house and asked me 'did I like to play in it' and I said 'yes,'" explained Mrs. Basnight, whose late husband, Saint Clair Basnight Sr., and Griffith were good friends.

"Daddy also went barefoot around town and so did Andy," recalled Saint Clair Basnight Jr., who has a few speaking lines in the show. "Two or three times a year you see him (Griffith) in town, in the hardware store. ... To him, I think this is home. He's never lost touch."

Griffith, center, and two actors leave Dare Courthouse

Griffith made sure a lot of the local flavor shows through in the episode. Beach scenes were shot in Nags Head, while other segments were shot at the Lost Colony Theater and along the Roanoke Sound waterfront.

Griffith said playing Ben Matlock has been the highlight of his career, which has included characters ranging from the bumbling Will Stockwell in the comedy film "No Time For Sergeants" to Sheriff Andy Taylor in "The Andy Griffith Show."

"It's the best role I ever played," Griffith said. "Andy Taylor was a wonderful character, and it was the best experience of my professional life."

Michael Caine Turns Monstrous For Televised 'Jekyll And Hyde'

By Matt Wolf
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — When some actors tire of filmmaking, they take a break. Not Michael Caine — he turns to television movies instead.

"This'll save people saying, 'Oh, he made another movie,'" the 56-year-old actor said as he joked about his prolific celluloid output.

He was talking on a break in filming "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," the latest film version of Robert Louis Stevenson's 1886 horror classic. Others have starred John Barrymore (1921), Frederic March (1931) and Spencer Tracy (1941).

It is Caine's second Victorian-era TV melodrama in two years. "Jack the Ripper" was aired last October.

The two-hour, $6.3 million "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," co-starring Cheryl Ladd and written and directed by David Wickes, is to be shown early next year on ABC in the United States, and around Christmas in Britain on the Independent Television Network.

"The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," as the novel was titled, tells of kindly Dr. Jekyll who experiments with chemical changes in his body, believing he can distill the good in himself from the evil. The evil persona, whom he names Mr. Hyde, gradually takes over and commits murder. The book ends with Jekyll's suicide.

Caine sees the story as "one man fighting a battle against himself."

"He's always fighting the evil within him," he said in an interview.

"When he's Jekyll, he's never evil, and when he's evil he's a monster; he turns into this thing. Once I've got (Hyde's) mask on, I'm not Mr. Sympathy, believe me."

The producers won't reveal what Hyde looks like but promise he'll be terrifying. They use modern makeup techniques — devices and effects unknown to Barrymore when he played the role in a silent movie 68 years ago.

Ladd plays Sara Crawford, sister of Jekyll's dead wife, who falls for Jekyll and discovers too late the Hyde that lurks beneath. Crawford is Wickes' invention, one of several departures from the original story, which the director said needed shaking up.

"The book is told second-hand by this lawyer as a retelling of what happened some years back," said Wickes. "Also, there's no female interest at all. I invented Cheryl's character as my ideal girl, that is to say tough and feminine all at once."

Ladd, best known as one of TV's "Charlie's Angels," said she was drawn to the project by the prospect of working with her Academy Award-winning co-star.

"Michael is just sensational," she said, keeping an eye on her 14-year-old daughter, Jordan, who appears in the restaurant scene as an extra. "He makes me laugh all the time; he's very funny."

Caine said the movie gives him a part he could never get to do on the big screen: "I thought, 'When else am I going to get a chance to play Jekyll and Hyde? They're not going to do it in movies again.'"

The story has been filmed often. March won an Oscar for his version a decade after Barrymore's.

De Palma Defends 'Casualties'
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
MONTREAL — Criticism of "Casualties of War" reflects the continuing American conflict over the Vietnam war, says director Brian De Palma, rather than a fundamental problem with his film's portrayal of the war.
The film, starring Michael J. Fox and Sean Penn, depicts the rape and murder of a Vietnamese woman by American soldiers and is based on a 1969 report in The New Yorker magazine.
Veterans organizations say the film promotes false stereotypes about American soldiers' conduct in the war, while other critics have characterized it as gratuitously violent.

"Are there any hugs left in your arms for me?"

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Aug. 29
ARIES (March 20 to April 19): Use extreme care in communicating lest an improper remark cause an unnecessary problem for you when you can't afford it. Stay on the alert for helpful facts.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 19): Start that new campaign early in order to work out any errors. Listen carefully to the advice of a close confidante who has quite a different viewpoint.
GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Stick to practical methods on this no-aspect day and you won't go wrong. This evening would be best spent with your family or very special friends.
MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Some of your old friends are going to "feel" different today and you may want to replace some of them. Remain tactful and avoid long explanations.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): A friendly suggestion from a well-wisher makes your life less difficult in the future if you listen and apply it to your expanding situation.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Make sure your car is in good repair prior to starting out on any kind of motor trip. Don't do anything that could cause one in authority to feel you are dispensable.
LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Make some additions to your present philosophy of life so that you and those around you gain more benefits from your time together. Learn to express yourself better.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Get into some group activities that you will enjoy with others and show them that you can handle play just as well as you do work. Gain the respect of your family.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Ask a co-worker to a sit-down meeting alone and really try to resolve your differences. You may find that you are not all that far apart from a basic point of view.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Your work at the present time is complicated so be sure to study it well before tackling strange territory. Tonight is good for just relaxing. So take it easy.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Make absolutely sure that you do nothing that could try the patience of your romantic partner, especially if you are away from home on a vacation together.
PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Try to clear up all that unfinished business so that you will be free to enjoy being with your family. A new friend is taking a lot for granted. Slack off.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ6 ♥873 ♦AQ653 ♣93

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ 2 ♥ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—The choice is between a gross overbid, three diamonds, and a slight underbid, two spades. Since gross overbids lead to major disasters, we would opt for the conservative two spades in the hope of getting a chance to catch up later.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ1073 ♥AKJ ♦Q107 ♣62

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Your hand values to 17 points, so you are worth a try for game. We would bid three diamonds, asking partner to evaluate his holding in that suit for game purposes.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A9874 ♥KJ6 ♦83 ♣AQ7

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Your task is to warn partner that you have no fit, a thin suit and values in the unbid suits. The way to get all that information across in one fell swoop is to bid three no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠97 ♥AKJ95 ♦63 ♣AKQ4

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 Pass Pass 1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—If you moved toward slam, we hope it was because you forgot that partner was a passed hand. If not, we question your hand valuation. You have five possible losers, and you can hope for at most three cover cards from partner. That still leaves you with two losers. Sign off in four hearts.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K763 ♥8 ♦AKJ987 ♣K6

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♦ Pass 4 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—To all intents and purposes all side-suit losers have been accounted for. (The only exception is where partner holds specifically three low diamonds.) Therefore, a grand slam depends only on the trump situation. To find out whether partner holds both missing top spade honors, use the Grand Slam Force. Bid five no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K763 ♥8 ♦AKJ987 ♣K6

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♦ Pass 4 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—To all intents and purposes all side-suit losers have been accounted for. (The only exception is where partner holds specifically three low diamonds.) Therefore, a grand slam depends only on the trump situation. To find out whether partner holds both missing top spade honors, use the Grand Slam Force. Bid five no trump.

Let's Get Something Straight.

What we want to get straight is our name.

First Federal Savings and Loan has provided banking services to the Pitt County community for more than 50 years. But the savings and loan part of the name doesn't tell the whole story.

So we're changing our name to First Federal Savings Bank.

Why? Because we want to be sure our customers know us for what we are—Pitt County's community bank. The best place to go for mortgage loans, checking and savings accounts, consumer loans, certificates of deposit. In other words, all your banking needs.

It's really very simple. When you want the best in personal banking services—talk to a reliable old friend with a new name—First Federal Savings Bank.

First Federal Savings Bank

The Best Place To Bank.
