Europeans Pay Tribute To War Victims

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Europe today paid solemn tribute to the millions of victims of World War II, which started 50 years ago on Sept. 1 when a German warship opened fire on a tiny Polish garrison.

Adolf Hitler's troops quickly overran Poland, and the war spread around the globe. In the end, 50 million people had died.

By then the Nazis had shocked the world with the extermination of 6 million Jews, and the United States had forever changed warfare by dropping nuclear bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945.

Many of Belgium's 6 million Dutch speakers woke up to a broadcast of Hitler declaring war on Poland. BRT state radio opened its foreign news report with a tape of the original declaration and Germans cheering for their fuhrer.

In London, a reunion was planned of some of the people who were evacuated during Hitler's savage Blitzkrieg bombings of the city.

Italy's leading daily, the Milan-based Corriere della Sera, told its readers that "Europe paid the price of its lacerations with the loss of its political supremacy."

West Germany's Chancellor Helmut Kohl told a special Parliament session in Bonn: "We feel sorrow for the unspeakable suffering which was caused to human beings and nations in the name of the Germans and by the hand of the Germans."

"We mourn for the many innocent victims from within our own people," Kohl added.

As he spoke, a group of young Poles sat in the visitors' gallery. The group had been invited as a sign of reconciliation between West Germany and Poland, which suffered more than any other country from the Nazi atrocities.

There still are nagging questions over West Germany's relationship with Poland. Kohl has been under pressure from the opposition Social Democratic Party to visit Poland, as he has promised to do, and provide more financial aid to Warsaw.

"By delaying his visit, the chancellor is wasting good chances to give a clear expression to the reconciliation process between Poles and Germans," party leader Hans-Jochen Vogel said Thursday.

The Communist Party daily in Czechoslovakia, Rude Pravo, called the fighting that spread to all corners of the globe "mankind's most terrible war."

In Communist East Berlin, Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer called today a day of "recollection and sorrow" during a speech to the 500-member People's Chamber.

Fischer also repeated the commitment "to do everything in our power to insure that war and fascism never again threaten our lives and the lives of our children."

Corriere della Sera called Hitler's Blitzkrieg "the technology of a new Genghis Khan," the dreaded Mongol conqueror of central Asia.

It noted that Hitler had the support of the "German masses," also pointing out that European political clout plunged after World War II.

Some of the most closely watched events were scheduled in Poland.

President Wojciech Jaruzelski was to speak at Westerplatte on the Baltic coast, where the first shots were fired.

"We will pay homage to all victims of the war, we will pay homage to its heroes and we will express the will to live in peace," said Wlodzimierz Lozinski, a spokesman for Jaruzelski.

Bakker's At Butner As 'Patient'

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C.— Jim Bakker spent his first night in prison after a federal judge ordered the fallen TV evangelist held for psychiatric evaluation when his attorneys reported he was covering in a fetal position with his head under a couch.

A team of psychiatrists and psychologists will evaluate Bakker's mental fitness to stand trial, said Dr. Sally Johnson, chief of psychiatric services at Butner.

"I wouldn't say he's an inmate," she said. "He's a patient."

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter suspended Bakker's fraud and conspiracy trial in its fourth day Thursday after Dr. Basil Jackson said the PTL ministry founder was depressed and hallucinating, seeing people as frightening animals out to attack him. Jackson, a Milwaukee psychiatrist, has been treating Bakker for nine months.

"If Mr. Bakker is handled gently and carefully he may be able to proceed with this trial," defense attorney George T. Davis said.

The defense suggested Bakker, 49, be put in a private psychiatric institution, but Potter ordered Bakker to the Federal Correctional Institute in Butner for up to 60 days for evaluation. Marshals transported Bakker in handcuffs and leg shackles.

Butner serves mainly as a federal prison, but has a psychiatric hospital that treats inmates with mental illnesses and determines whether people charged with crimes are competent to stand trial.

The operations officer on duty in Butner early today, Lt. R. Ellis, would say only that Bakker was "doing fine."

Bakker was given a standing ovation Thursday night by a large crowd of inmates when he was taken to a mental health housing unit at Butner, the Durham Morning Herald reported today.

As Bakker, still handcuffed and clad in an orange jumpsuit, walked past a group of patients, one of them spoke to him and Bakker smiled back, a source at the correctional institution told the newspaper.

Dr. Jackson declined to discuss Bakker's mental health, but speaking generally, Dr. Johnson said people can feign mental illness, adding that "it's not easy." She also said "it's possible for people who have been functioning well to become acutely ill."

While Bakker is being evaluated at Butner, a process Dr. Johnson says typically takes about 30 days, the staff will also diagnose any mental disorders he may have, she said. The staff will make recommendations to the court, but a federal judge will rule on whether Bakker is competent, she said.

Expanded Literacy Training Proposed

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

On-the-job literacy training enrolled over 8,000 new students last year, but the programs need to be expanded to combat a growing threat to the state's economic future, educators and business leaders say.

Local community college, business and political leaders met Thursday in Greenville to plan ways to expand the programs that bring literacy training to the workplace.

There are more than 22,600 people in Pitt County who do not have a high school diploma, according to 1980 census data. These individuals cannot read and write well enough to function in the workplace, education officials said. Unless they are educated, they will become a permanent underclass at a time when business and industry is starving for skilled workers, the officials said.

In 10 years there will be no jobs available for people without a high school diploma, Janice Kennedy-Sloan, vice president of adult and continuing education for the state Department of Community Colleges, said. These people will be shut out of the economy if they are not educated, she said.

"Economic development in this state is being seriously hindered (by illiteracy)," John Tarpley said. "Let's not fool ourselves."

Tarpley, manager of the Universal Bedroom Furniture Co. plant in Wendell, said literacy programs he started at his and other plants in Wake County improve the work environment for both employer and employee.

"Employee self-help and esteem-building can make your business more profitable, your community more peaceful and progressive," Tarpley said.

Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville today labeled as "preposterous" a suggestion in a new political newsletter that he is considering not seeking re-election in 1990.

The Aug. 28 edition of Inside Politics:NC, published in the Triangle area, suggests that Taft and Sen. R.L. "Bob" Martin of Bethel are pondering not being candidates in the 1990 races.

Published by Tricom-21st Inc. of Chapel Hill, the newsletter said Martin and Taft are among "fifteen Democratic state senators rumored to be considering not running for re-election in 1990..."

The newsletter said Martin "has not declared out or in," while "Taft is in the process of opening a branch of his law practice in Raleigh. Rumors say he may step down to become a lobbyist, with an eye toward a statewide race in the future."

Efforts to reach the newsletter's editors this morning were unsuccessful. But Taft said "that's all preposterous. Evidently they are suggesting half of the Democratic members of the Senate are not running again."

"We've had a law office in Raleigh for five years or more," Taft said, and "I don't intend to be a lobbyist. I don't have any immediate plans to run for statewide office and it's too early to file for the next election."

"Whoever is writing this material is dreaming, inaccurate and has never spoken to me," Taft said.

Efforts to contact Martin this morning were unsuccessful. But Taft said "Bob Martin hasn't said he's not going to run."

In addition to Taft and Martin, the Inside Politics:NC item said Bill Barker of New Bern and Marc Basnight of Dare County were also considering not running for re-election.

The Inside Politics:NC article said Basnight "is strongly contemplating a bid for the U.S. House in the 1st Congressional District." Walter Jones Sr. of Farmville is the incumbent 1st District representative.

This Time, He'll Go To The White House

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Henry Williams could not make it to the White House seven years ago when Ronald Reagan invited him, but Williams thinks he will take President George Bush up on the latest invitation.

"I'm invited to Washington, D.C., and I think I'll go this time," said Williams, a shoe salesman from Princeville in Edgecombe County who works in Greenville.

Williams' invitation from Bush came after he was nominated to become a member of the Republican Senatorial Inner Circle, a group of loyal Republicans. Bush will host a ball for the Inner Circle at the White House and Williams is on the guest list.

The ball usually kicks off the senatorial fund-raising drives, said Tom Ballus, communications director for the North Carolina Republican Party.

For Williams, invitations to meet with presidents and governors have almost become a common occurrence. He said it all started several years ago when he was credited with saving a man's life.

"This fellow got bitten by a snake in Princeville (near Tarboro) about seven years ago," said Williams. "All the other people left him down there but the man needed help and that's what I did."

He said that while everybody else ignored the injured man, Williams carried the man to a shaded porch and calmed him until the rescue team arrived.

After the incident was publicized, Williams enjoyed a hero's status. Reagan invited him to visit the White House and Gov. Jim Martin sent him an invitation to attend his inaugural ball, said Williams. However, he could not accept either invitation because he was out of town.

This time, Williams has decided to take Bush up on his invitation.

Williams said he has been closely associated with the Republican Party for many years. In 1964, he volunteered to work in Spiro Agnew's camp during his campaign for governor of Maryland and in 1968 Williams helped Agnew again when he ran for vice president on the ticket with Richard Nixon.

Williams is also a charter member of the Republican Task Force.

The nomination to become a member of the Republican Senatorial Inner Circle must come from a U.S. senator or congressman. Williams was sponsored by U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, whom he befriended soon after the incident in Princeville.

And after being around politicians for all these years, Williams said he has decided to try his hand at politics.

"I am thinking about running for the town manager of Princeville," he said.

At $9 Daily, Is AZT Too High Or A Bargain?

By Daniel Q. Haney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Five capsules of the AIDS drug AZT, one day's supply for infected people, contain an estimated 15 cents worth of ingredients.

They probably cost between $1.50 and $2.50 to manufacture. But they sell in the drugstore for $9.

By any standard, a lifetime of treatment with AZT will add up to a lot of money. Is the price too high, as some critics say? Or is the medicine really a bargain, as its maker maintains?

The disagreement highlights the arbitrary, often mysterious, fashion in which pharmaceutical companies decide how much to charge for the medicines they hold exclusive rights to sell.

"The only thing we know is there is no objective social way of determining what the price should be except what the market will bear," said Dr. Donald Rucker of the University of Illinois School of Pharmacy.

In this case, the market is likely to grow dramatically.

AZT, known generically as azidothymidine and sold as Retrovir, is the only approved AIDS drug. It is manufactured in Greenville, N.C.

Until recently, AZT was recommended only for the 40,000 people with AIDS or severe AIDS-related illness. But new research suggests that the medicine can also forestall AIDS in people at earlier stages of infection with HIV, the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus.

Federal officials estimate that the drug could become routine therapy for an additional 600,000 infected people — those who have very early symptoms or no signs of the disease at all except for abnormal blood counts.

Burroughs Wellcome Co., the only company that makes AZT, sells the drug for $1.50 per capsule. By the time wholesalers and drugstores take their markups, the retail price is about $1.80.

People with AIDS typically take about eight capsules a day, while five capsules daily are recommended for those with no outward symptoms. For them, the price is $9 a day, or about $3,300 a year. Some AIDS patients have spent about $8,000 a year taking 12 capsules daily, a dosage no longer recommended.

On Wednesday, 15 homosexual rights and AIDS activist organizations asked Burroughs Wellcome to lower the cost.

"Absolutely, it's overpriced," said Richard Dunne, director of the Gay Men's Health Crisis in New York. "It's clear that at the current price, there will be people who won't be able to afford this drug."

Museum Of Art Begins Campaign To Develop As Regional Operation

New Rotary Officers

John Ball has been installed as president of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club for 1989-90.

In addition to Ball, other Rotary officers include: Rick Croskery, vice president; Bruce Flye, president-elect; Mike Colombo, past president; Ron Kimble, treasurer, and Bill Hill, secretary.

The installations took place during a recent meeting of the club.

JOHN BALL

The Greenville Museum of Art will begin a campaign designed to establish its reputation as a regional facility for all of eastern North Carolina, according to an announcement released today by the museum's board of trustees.

A recent award from the American Association of Museums cited the GMA for being a "leading role model for long-range planning among museums of its size."

And the museum has received $300,000 from the N.C. General Assembly to begin expanding its facilities, including a planned 12,000-square-foot gallery addition.

Nelson Britt, executive director of the GMA, said the board plans to expand GMA services by "more than six counties" and anticipates having more national exhibits, regional artists and local volunteers than ever before in the museum's history.

"It's a natural progression in our evolution," Britt said.

In 1988 the museum served visitors from 33 North Carolina counties, 27 states and 11 countries.

"Clearly we can become a regional institution and our membership chairmen are pushing hard now to make sure that we become known for serving both the people located close to us and those outside of the immediate Greenville area," Britt said.

The regional campaign in Pitt County is being chaired by Ann Whichard and Betsy Carnighan.

They will target local art enthusiasts and cultural educators through direct mail and follow up personally with people expressing interest, Britt said. "After that, it should be possible to establish some of the networks that make the big picture work."

Current GMA programs include museum tours tailored for interested groups, musical event sponsorship, traveling exhibits, "Museum in Your Schools," teacher training workshops, and the "First Look" program.

Art museum members can participate in most events free of charge and generally have reciprocal privileges at other museums," according to Britt, who said individual membership is $20 per year, while a family membership is $35 a year.

The GMA now receives two-thirds of its operating budget funds from the Institute of Museum Services, the N.C. Arts Council and membership dues. The other one-third of the operating budget is raised through the Fine Arts Ball, a formal dinner and silent auction which is held annually.

This year's ball, for members and guests, will be held in October, with the silent auction featuring works of art from Southern artists and European artisans, according to Britt.

Interested individuals may contact the museum at 758-1946 for more information about the Fine Arts Ball or membership rates, benefits and programs.

Five Nurses Are Cited For Careers

Five Greenville area nurses have been named among "The Great 100" registered nurses of North Carolina for 1989.

Chosen from this area are Sister Edna English of Greenville, maternal-child health consultant in the N.C. Department of Human Resources; Georgia M. Garrett of Greenville, an assistant head nurse in a surgical unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital; Elaine James of Grifton, a staff nurse in the gynecology department at PCMH; Starr Treurniet of Falkland, flight nurse in Pitt Memorial's EastCare air ambulance program, and Pam White, a staff nurse in a recovery room of PCMH.

These and 95 other nurses will be honored at a formal dinner and dance in Raleigh on Sept. 9.

"RN Excellence - The Great 100" program is a project of nurses from the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area who plan to expand their salute to excellence in nursing efforts throughout the state in the coming year. Their purpose, said committee member Barbara McNeill, is to increase public appreciation of the nursing profession and to raise funds for nursing scholarships.

For further information, contact Ms. McNeill at 755-8603.

Orientation Held

The Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society recently held orientation for its new members.

Barbara Tucker, state chairman of the Reach to Recovery program, which deals with breast cancer patients, spoke to the group.

ECU Alumni Event

The East Carolina University Alumni Association will honor four Greenville residents during the association's annual leadership conference Sept. 9.

Arthur W. Dempsey, vice president and manager of the sales and finance department at Wachovia Bank; Don J. Edwards, president of University Book Exchange; Ed Glenn, a former voice instructor at ECU and his wife Jef, owners of Jefferson Florist, will be named honorary alumni at the conference in recognition of their efforts on the university's behalf, said James L. Lanier Jr., vice chancellor for institutional advancement.

The four were selected for the honor by the association's board of directors.

"Their outstanding advocacy for East Carolina has earned them all the rights, honors, privileges and responsibilities of membership in the alumni association," said Donald Y. Leggett, the association's executive secretary.

Commissioners Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Tuesday at 9 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda are public hearings on referendums to issue bonds for construction of public school and community college buildings and proposed changes in the county's subdivision ordinance as well as the consideration of a site for a proposed agricultural building.

DOT Board OKs N.C. 903 Contract

WILMINGTON — A $2.19 million contract to widen 10.7 miles of N.C. 903 in Pitt County — from N.C. 11-U.S. 13 to the Martin County line — was approved by the N.C. Board of Transportation this morning.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a transportation board member, said the board, meeting in Wilmington, awarded the contract for widening, grading, drainage, milling and pavement markings to Outer Banks Contractors of Kitty Hawk.

"We are pleased that this project has been awarded," Doub said, explaining that work on the widening project — including replacement of the Grindle Creek bridge — should begin by October and take about 18 months to complete.

Other Pitt County projects approved by the transportation board this morning, Doub said, include $9,000 for widening a section on N.C. 118 near Grifton, and $26,000 for installation of a traffic signal on N.C. 102 at the intersection of Secondary Road 1120 at Ayden Elementary School.

Hardin Says UNC System Should Be More Efficient

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Chancellor Paul Hardin today called for creation of a blue-ribbon panel to seek changes in state policies that would make the 16-campus UNC system more efficient.

"I believe that creation of such a panel would further stimulate much-needed public dialogue on state policy issues, including budget flexibility, that this university has discussed for some time now," Hardin said in a report on his first year in office prepared for the UNC Board of Trustees meeting today.

Hardin said the trustees should request that the UNC Board of Governors appoint the panel, which would study state laws and budget regulations and make recommendations that would make university administrators more accountable.

"The panelists, using national expertise and the experience of other states would examine the current policies objectively and produce suggestions that could have far-reaching effects on the quality of the service at the university of Chapel Hill and her sister institutions can give to North Carolina in the future," he said.

Hardin's report came one week after UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. issued recommendations to the Board of Governors to correct problems in North Carolina State University's basketball program.

Policy areas the UNC panel could address include management responsibility and efficiency, finances and personnel regulations, Hardin said.

He said UNC-Chapel Hill's effectiveness is hampered most seriously in those areas because of micromanagement by the state. Hardin noted that the 1989 legislature took action to give the state's public school districts more managerial flexibility.

On other matters, Hardin proposed that the UNC trustees ask the Board of Governors to:

— Develop written goals and policies on faculty and staff compensation at state universities.

— Ask the General Assembly to revise regulations and let state universities keep all funds generated by research grants to support academic and research activities. Currently, UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State University, the two research schools in the UNC system, must return 30 percent of the overhead receipts from the grants to the state.

— Study tuition policy and pricing at UNC system campuses.

Executives Complete United Way Seminar

Fourteen loaned executives recently completed a two-day training seminar to develop their knowledge of the United Way and gain first-hand experience with United Way member agencies.

The Loaned Executive program is a collaborative effort between the United Way and established business and service organizations. A loaned executive is an individual who is assigned to work in the United Way campaign for a period of 12 weeks, approximately eight hours per week.

The executives complement volunteer campaign leadership and United Way staff.

Loaned executives are characterized as middle management-level employees recognized as high achievers in their organizations.

This year's participants are Yvonne Alberty and Ruby Tisdale of NCNB; Joel Butler, Sandra Harrison and Linda Dunnum, Pitt County Memorial Hospital; Cathy Cox and Betsy Newton, Carolina Telephone; Arlene Ferren, Pitt County schools; Terry Flanagan, Yale Materials Handling Corp.; Ron Kimble, city of Greenville; Carter McKaughan, Wachovia Bank & Trust Co.; Steve Murray, Prepshirt; Chris Smith, Grady White Boats, and Mimi VanNortwick, Branch Banking and Trust.

ECU Police Say Rape Suspect May Be Connected To Other Assaults

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University police are looking for a suspect in an attempted rape on campus Thursday who they believe may also be connected to three nearby assaults that occurred this summer.

An unidentified female ECU student was assaulted Thursday night in a campus parking lot at Fifth and Reade streets, according to James DePuy, public safety director.

The victim fought off her attacker with the help of passers-by, DePuy said. Witnesses described the alleged assailant as a black male about 6'1", weighing between 175 and 200 pounds and wearing acid-washed blue jeans and a T-shirt.

A string of three rapes near campus this summer have university officials and city police concerned about the safety of area residents. In each case, the alleged assailant entered the victim's home without being seen and raped her.

Greenville police believe the three rapes were committed by the same person, Detective Janice E. Harris said. "The threats are similar. The time he gives himself to get away is similar," she said.

The best description police have of the alleged rapist is that he is a black man about 5'10" tall in his early 20s, Harris said. "He manages to make sure that whatever area he's in is so dark or he instills so much fear that we don't have any description of clothing," she said.

Campus police believe Thursday's assailant may be the same person. "The description in general would fit," DePuy said, "but there's not enough evidence to say that they were definitely connected."

The victim of Thursday's assault was in a lighted area near other people, DePuy said. He advised students to be careful, stay away from dark or unprotected areas at night and walk with others to avoid being victimized.

DePuy said his officers will work closely with Greenville police in an effort to catch the suspect. He asked anyone who sees anything suspicious to report it to the department of public safety immediately. "We can use all the help we can get," he said.

Economic Gauge Shows Increase

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government said today its chief economic forecasting gauge rose in July for the first time in three months, further chasing away fears of a possible economic downturn.

The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Economic Indicators rose a modest 0.2 percent in July after registering no gain in June and plunging by 1.3 percent in May, the biggest drop since late 1987 following the stock market crash.

The small July increase in the index was in line with expectations of many analysts, who believe growth should continue at a moderate pace for the rest of the year.

That view is a sharp reversal of the prevalent opinion just a month ago when weakness in the leading index and a variety of other government statistics had raised fears that the economy was about to topple into a recession.

But since that time, the government has basically rewritten economic history, issuing various revisions showing that everything from employment growth to consumer spending were stronger than originally believed.

"The image we had of an economy on the verge of a recession has been changed by these revisions," said Bruce Steinberg, senior economist at the New York brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch.

Economists are not forecasting that the country is on the verge of boom times, but they are now much more confident that the longest peacetime recovery in U.S. history, currently in its seventh year, should be able to continue for some time to come.

The leading index is a compilation of 11 forward-pointing business statistics designed to forecast economic performance three to nine months down the road.

In July, five of the economic statistics showed signs of increasing strength, five flashed weak signals and one was unchanged.

The biggest source of strength was a pickup in growth in the nation's money supply. The Federal Reserve, which had been restraining monetary growth in an effort to fight inflationary pressures, has now switched course and over the past two months has been loosening credit conditions.

Economists believe this change in Fed policy has already provided momentum for the economy in such key sectors as housing construction.

Other sources of strength in July were a jump in consumer confidence, a rise in stock prices, an increase in plant and equipment orders and an increase in the backlog of unfilled manufacturing orders.

Five indicators held back the overall increase. The biggest negative factor was a decline in raw materials prices. While this indicated lessening inflationary pressures, it is read as a negative for the index because it can also signal lower demand. Other negative factors were a drop in orders for consumer goods, an increase in weekly unemployment claims, a fall in building permits and changes in business delivery times.

One indicator, the length of the work week, showed no change from June to July

The various changes left the index at 144.0 percent of its 1982 base of 100.

The Bush administration is projecting that the overall economy will grow at an annual rate of 2.9 percent this year. That growth target can be achieved even if the economy slows in the second half of the year from the 3.2 percent annual rate of first six months of 1989.

Many analysts are looking for a modest slowing of growth, but nothing close to a recession.

David Berson said he expected the rate of growth would slow slightly in the July-September quarter primarily because auto companies are working to reduce a high inventory of unsold cars.

Literacy

pital and the city of Greenville have workplace literacy programs in cooperation with Pitt Community College. The employer provides classroom space and time off for classes, while the college supplies the instructors. The programs are free.

But college officials say they aren't reaching enough people. Dr. Charles Russell, PCC president, asked businesses without literacy programs to start one. The college is willing and ready to help, he said.

PCC student Matthew Barnes discovered the value of an education when his employer moved him into a job as a stock clerk without knowing he couldn't read.

"Without an education it's very hard - and I'm a witness to that," Barnes said. The 37-year-old Plymouth native recalled what his mother told him when he dropped out of school in the seventh grade. "If you don't get an education, it's going to come back to you," he quoted her as saying.

Volcano Erupting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — The Nevado del Ruiz volcano that killed 23,000 people in 1985 spouted steam and ash today, and authorities ordered some people living nearby to leave their homes.

The volcano, 80 miles west of Bogota, began erupting Thursday night. Ash was drifting hundreds of miles north, according to radio reports.

People living along five rivers that could be flooded by melting ice from glaciers that cling to the 16,000-foot high volcano are in danger, the disaster emergency office of President Virgilio Barco said.

Only people living along the rivers are being ordered to evacuate, the assistant director of the emergency office, Nicolas Garcia Piedrahita, said in a broadcast interview today with the Colombian radio network RCN.

He said broadcast reports that towns around the volcano were ordered evacuated were incorrect.

Critics Challenge AZT Price

dustry, said that many drug prices are too high, in part because companies often have no competition for several years after they introduce innovative medicines.

Big profits are a way of life, he said, and maintenance drugs like AZT, taken daily for years, are especially lucrative.

"They are used by large numbers of people with serious problems for long periods of time," he said. "That's a gold mine, and I hate to see AZT being mined as gold. It's a basic equity problem of monopolistic producers and helpless consumers."

At Burroughs Wellcome, spokeswoman Karen Collins said the company "tried to price this drug compassionately." Dr. David Barry, the vice president of research, called AZT "a bargain."

Compared with drugs used for other chronic disorders, AZT is relatively expensive. For instance, maintenance doses of Zantac, the ulcer drug, and Vasotec, the high blood pressure medicine, both cost patients about 70 cents a day.

However, Barry noted that AZT is far cheaper than some new anti-infection drugs that can cost $50 a day or more, although these drugs are usually given for weeks at a time, not years.

Barry said that many factors go into setting drug prices, including the cost of production, the number of patients who will take it, the need for plant expansion and the cost of continuing to conduct research on the medicine.

But the overriding factor is the expense of paying for the company's search for new treatments and cures, which cost $289 million last year.

"The successful drugs and the revenues obtained from them must pay for all of the enormous research we do in basic scientific fields or in applied fields that fail," said Barry. "The biggest element that determines how much we charge for drugs is the bottom line — how much revenue do we need to get to keep our company out of the red and to sustain our research program."

Barry said AZT is difficult to make, requiring 23 steps. But the manufacturing cost is just one relatively minor factor in the price, and "determining that would be like determining the cost of surgery based on the cost of stainless steel used in scalpels. It makes no sense at all."

Johannah Walton of Shearson Lehman Hutton in London calculates that the raw material for making AZT, mainly thymidine, costs $300 per kilogram. Manufacturing costs between $3,000 and $5,000 per kilogram.

If she is right, this means the ingredients in a single milligram capsule cost 3 cents, and manufacturing the product costs 30 to 50 cents.

A few months after AZT was introduced in 1987, the company cut its price 20 percent to the current level.

Though the company refuses to speculate about further price cuts, Walton said she expects another 20 percent price reduction within the next year.

Nursing Program Healed Wounds

In the classic film, "The Miracle Worker," a character played by actress Anne Bancroft teaches Helen Keller, a blind, deaf mute girl, that she can achieve anything she wants. Overcoming large odds, Helen learns to speak, read and function in society. The result is a miracle.

That same spirit must be afoot in East Carolina University's nursing program. Someone has been working miracles, and the most recent test scores on the state nursing certification exam prove it.

When a nursing program at the state's third largest university winds up at rock bottom on certification test scores, it deserves some criticism. And when, in one year's time, that same program turns its test scores completely around — landing near the top — then that program has earned praise, respect and — well, a plain old hearty backpat.

After such a bounceback, ECU's nursing program can bask in some well-deserved glory. Last year more of the school's 1988 graduates failed the state nursing exam — a basic certification test required to enter the field — than graduates from any University of North Carolina system college. Only 63 percent passed.

But when the scores for the 1989 graduates rolled in, 95 percent passed the exam — an improvement of 32 percentage points. That's a phenomenal achievement. Academic improvement is often measured in only the smallest increments. Yet here is an improvement of monumental proportions. Clearly, some hard work has gone on in that program during the past year — hard work by administrators, faculty and students.

The reward for that effort is the fact that ECU's nursing program now stands where it should among its peers — striving for the top rather than struggling to avoid the bottom. Now, its challenge is to remain there.

When the abysmal performance in 1988 became public, it drew boos. The community, the university system and nursing graduates complained loudly — arrows flew from all directions. Its low passing rate put the school's standing in a perilous position, since a school must post a 60 percent passing score to remain accredited. As a result, the university sent an edict: there will be improvement.

The school faced a two-faceted task. Since test scores had been creeping down for three years, and since a school must maintain a 70 percent passing rate over a three-year period to avoid a review from the N.C. Board of Nursing, the immediate task had to be significant improvement in one year's time. That goal was achieved admirably.

But the school had to accurately pinpoint the sources of the problem and implement a long-term approach to continue improvement. With the increase in scores in 1989, it is apparent this job has already begun. How well it is carried out, however, will determine whether the effects of this healing are long-term or fleeting.

Harsh criticism comes easily when news is bad. Praise should flow just as readily when that news is good. The ECU nursing program has worked hard to heal its wounds. Its task now is to keep applying successful therapy.

To the editor:

The ceremony at the Grimesland Post Office which marked the local availability of the postage stamp commemorating the 200th anniversary of North Carolina's ratification of the Constitution of these United States not only honored the issuance of this lovely stamp, it celebrated our state's heritage of vigorous achievement and community pride. I would like to extend my sincere appreciation to our postmaster, Mrs. Ann Hudson, and all those whose efforts contributed to the success of this memorable event.

However, I must note that my great-great-grandfather who rode in the 75th North Carolina Regiment during the War of Northern Aggression would have probably appreciated the vacuous remarks delivered by Senator Tom Taft more than I did. His vapid expression of dedication to "states' rights" was reminiscent of an unfortunate period when that term was a polite synonym for "segregation," and his insipid praise of industrial development brought to mind the "Bourbon Democrats" who controlled our state after its readmission to the Union and served the railroad and industrial interests while ignoring the small farmers who have been the firm and resolute heart of Eastern North Carolina since Colonial times.

While Senator Taft's address was forgettable, one aspect of his participation in the ceremony did leave me with a particularly vivid impression. Although Senator Taft is a member of the Environment and Natural Resources Committee, the diesel Mercedes-Benz in which he and Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood arrived was parked with its engine running for the entire duration of their stay so that the air-conditioning could maintain the cool temperature within the passenger compartment. I will remember that revealing demonstration of the senator's personal commitment to protecting our environment when he is electorally reevaluated.

To the editor:

Perhaps my information is incorrect concerning a planned activity for the evening of August 24 at a residence near Lawrence and 10th streets — oh, I hope it's incorrect.

I'm told the police department gave permission for a section of Lawrence Street to be closed off (thus blocking other driveways) for an outdoor party with outdoor music and the presence of two policemen for four hours (my "informant" talked to one of the policemen).

However, rain prevented this party.

Are we Greenville citizens (and the taxpayers) going to be forced to witness the doings of the "visiting" students (and their parents are in another town enjoying the quiet evenings) and to pay for adult supervision?

It's the right of each individual to hear what he wishes to hear, but it's my right not to have to hear it! So shouldn't one's music be confined to one's own "four walls" or that someone who wishes to give an outside party should rent an area away from those who do not wish to hear the voices or music?

Greenville and its university make for a great place to live — trashy, noisy streets will undermine its desirability — young people need restrictions and encouragement to respect others.

Please say my information is incorrect.

On The Course Toward Civil War

Becker

PARIS — When Prince Norodom Sihanouk took the floor here Tuesday at the 20-nation conference discussing the fate of his country, he persuaded more than one delegation that Cambodia was headed for civil war.

"I am for genocide," he shouted. "I am for genocide."

Suddenly, Sihanouk realized his mistake and apologized, explaining that what he meant to say was that he approved of official conference language describing Khmer Rouge rule from 1975 to 1979 as genocidal.

"I am sorry," he told the assembled delegates. "I have not slept for 48 hours."

That performance symbolized why Sihanouk disappointed his strongest supporters at the Paris Conference, according to extensive interviews with sources close to the Japanese,

U.S., Singaporean and French delegations, among others. As such, Sihanouk is considered the man who lost most during this month-long conference, which despite early high hopes failed to bring peace to Cambodia and seems instead to have prepared the way for all-out civil war.

"Sihanouk is losing his credibility," said a senior delegate from a powerful supportive nation. "Without a credible Sihanouk there is little chance for a comprehensive or total political solution. We are going home and asking ourselves what this means for our policy and for Cambodia."

For years, a broad range of Western and Asian countries have based their Cambodian policy on Sihanouk, nominal head of the three-party rebel alliance combating Vietnam's ten-year occupation of that country and the government the Vietnamese installed in Phnom Penh.

All three rebel factions — the radical

Khmer Rouge and two small non-communist groups — have fought Vietnamese troops in Cambodia but can not claim to have won a victory. Instead, the estimated 50,000 Vietnamese soldiers are withdrawing largely because of international sanctions and political pressure against Hanoi, and because of the new Soviet policy to press for an end to regional conflicts involving its allies. For 10 years, Moscow has essentially bankrolled Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia.

Vietnam's scheduled Sept. 27 pullout while its client government remains in place thus leaves the country with the ambiguous and fragile situation of four heavily armed Cambodian parties facing off for a continued struggle that so far none has been able to win either on the battlefield or at the conference table.

Paris conference leaders expected Sihanouk to rise to the occasion and bring his countrymen together. A former Cambodian monarch and chief of state and a cofounder of the Non-Aligned Movement, Sihanouk seemed to embody Cambodian nationalism both abroad and at home. Now, however, some diplomats present at the debates have begun to wonder if Sihanouk's day has not passed.

"Sihanouk represents only himself," said one senior Western delegate. "This was his conference to prove he could be the father of his country and a bridge between the factions. He failed."

Delegates hastened to add they doubted that their countries could or would change policy immediately. Many said they would wait to watch the Vietnamese withdrawal and — if a civil war erupted — the level of fighting thereafter. China, the chief patron of Sihanouk and the Khmer Rouge and the main supplier to the antigovernment resistance, apparently remains staunchly supportive.

Special to The Washington Post

A Deadly Theme: 'There's Nothing You Can Do'

WASHINGTON — There were some very good things about 29th's ABC TV special, "Black in White America."

But for this viewer, at least, the good things were neutralized by the show's shortcomings, principally its lack of focus and its determinedly pessimistic tone.

First among the good things was ABC's decision to air the special, using black reporters and an overwhelmingly black production staff to take a deliberately nonobjective look at blacks in America.

It was also a relief to see these journalists search out a black America seldom seen on TV: Not the usual assortment of civil-rights leaders but successful business executives, educators, solidly middle-class households. The segment on the Tuskegee airmen of World War II was brilliant and instructive. Even when the reporters went into a public-housing complex, they managed to find not just dope-deadened illiterates but also bright, ambitious people in whom hope remains alive.

But they never arranged the pieces in a coherent pattern and — the bigger sin — they never suggested how blacks themselves might undertake to minimize the crippling effects of racism. They never even described the routes that led to their own considerable success in network television.

Maybe that was deliberate. The show seemed to be aimed at white viewers, calculated to elicit their guilt over the terrible plight of black Americans. Perhaps they feared that to point out methods of overcoming racism would imply that those who have not overcome it are victims of their own shortcomings and thereby diminish white guilt.

So what did white viewers learn? That blacks — even successful blacks — see racism as pervasive; that they seem reluctant to accept responsibility for their own disastrous choices; that the drug scourge that is destroying black neighborhoods and producing black-on-black homicides at a record-setting pace is viewed not as self-victimization but as the manifestation of a conspiracy whose aim is black genocide. (One of the correspondents, pressed for evidence of genocide, told of being passed up by taxicab drivers.)

But even if the special succeeded in inducing white guilt, it left whites without a clue as to what they might do to ease the plight of blacks, particularly the black underclass whose fatherless homes, drug-ridden neighborhoods and dreadful schools (even in black-run cities) are turning out yet another generation of hopeless, directionless, trouble-bound children.

The trouble with "Black in White America" was not that it told lies. Virtually everything it said — including the pervasiveness of racism — is true.

The trouble was that by making racism the overwhelming cause of all that has gone wrong in black America, it seemed to argue that the fate of black people is in the hands of those who manifestly don't love them.

I found myself wishing that the ABC correspondents had spent some time exploring the means by which the successful blacks they interviewed managed to overcome the effects of racism, how families in the most depressing circumstances manage to rear children who earn good grades and cling to grand ambitions.

Was it merely their innate brilliance combined with affirmative action that landed these journalists in their enviable careers, or did they have secrets to share on how to make the best of a bad situation?

In the discussion following the show, Spelman College president Johnetta Coles said she wished some attention had been given to interventions that work, and San Jose State's Shelby Steele said he wished for some exploration into the failure of so many young blacks to take advantage of the opportunities that do exist.

But mostly the show seemed to be an attempt to demonstrate the thoroughgoing racism of the American society and the inability of blacks to overcome it. The unarguably competent and ambitious men and women who put it together didn't intend it, but the ambition-killing message to young black viewers — at least to those whose parents lack the ability to deliver the counter message — was that their enemies are in control of their lives and there is nothing they can do about it.

The most vicious racist couldn't have devised a deadlier theme.

America's Cities: A Look At Life In The Human Zoo

Thomas Cangelosi

It's been a long, hot summer in Connecticut. Wars on drugs, violence and racism have all been waged from the streets of Bridgeport, Waterbury and Hartford to the halls of the Capitol and the courts of justice. People want to reclaim the streets from drug dealers. A group of people have sued the state for racial discrimination in education.

Spike Lee's movie, "Do the Right Thing," fanned the flames of controversy this summer about violence and racism, especially when he ended his movie with the quote from Malcolm X, which, in effect, said violence is the only intelligent response to inhuman repression. Some critics believe this ending was provocative and irresponsible. Yet how can we deny the instinctive intelligence underlying violent, and even self-destructive, behavior when it is expressed in every part of the world, from Beirut to Bridgeport, and on every level of animal life, from primate to human?

This summer I visited Berlin and saw the infamous wall that makes East Berlin a human zoo. Solid concrete stands about 15 feet high and, as far as the East Berliners are concerned, stretches endlessly long. Armed guards patrol the no-man's land on the east side and keep a binocular vigil from watchtowers. Standing before that wall, I found its existence outrageous and incomprehensible. It is a monument to what I call Stupid Power — power for power's sake. The loud-colored graffiti on the west side of the wall shouts political outrage into a deaf ear and dumb face.

To East Berliners, whose purpose, dignity and hope every day dashes against an unnatural barrier, their home must feel like a zoo. Lilies and roses have been twined in a metal fence in memory of those who have tried to escape. "Unknown" is the most frequent label marking the deceased, nameless and indistinguishable in death as they had been in the minds of their jailers in life. Their captors describe escape as an act of suicide. But the captives see these acts as courageous and intelligent. What good is life without quality?

When I returned to the United States, I focused on the graffiti-covered highway walls in New York City. They are identical in form and color to the writing, on the Berlin Wall, and I suspect, at bottom, similar in feeling. Graffiti in America, after all, had its popular birth in ghettos as an expression of outrage over political repression. Graffiti is a human imprint on an inhuman barrier.

Are the urban walls in America, in effect, any different from the one in Berlin? I'm not merely referring to the literal walls of highways and wide avenues that separate one social class or ethnic group from another, but also economic walls, racial walls and political walls. What impact do these invisible walls have? They devalue life — propagate violence instead of community, drugs instead of education, lust instead of love, death instead of life.

Some zoos have been redesigned to simulate natural habitats to help animals in captivity sustain their natural instincts and to encourage them to reproduce. Zoo keepers had discovered that housing animals in the traditional, concrete, barred cages and providing food handouts produced creatures that were repressed, depressed and frustrated.

Gorillas, for instance, would sink into a bored rage for hours. Some animals, as if to spite their jailers, but actually to protect their progeny from an unnatural existence, refused to mate. This was nature's form of protest against an artificial habitat that had, in effect, reduced their lives to slow suicide.

There seems an underlying similarity between animals in captivity who instinctively choose not to propagate their species and people who choose to risk death for freedom. When we create human zoos, we deny people the dignity and purpose essential to sustain intelligent life, except through violence and self-destruction.

In Lee's movie, policemen with intimidating stares patrol the Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood like East Berlin border guards. Sal's Famous Pizzeria stands like an unnatural wall, the only white business in an all-black neighborhood. When Sal bashes Radio Raheem's boom box as it plays his favorite rap song, "Fight the Power," Raheem shouts, "You killed my music," and attacks Sal. In the end, Raheem is pulled off of Sal by white policemen and choked to death.

I think the "intelligence" of Radio Raheem's response has been lost to most critics because of its violent form. Raheem's music is his voice, the only voice that can compete with the magnitude of the surrounding oppression. It is his last natural refuge in the face of an arbitrary wall that denied his identity in the only place he could call home. In effect, Sal had "killed" Raheem's tolerance for oppression and released his pent-up rage.

When East Berliners risk their lives in an almost suicidal leap for freedom, when animals in zoos stop reproducing to protect their progeny, these, too, are intelligent responses in the face of inhumane conditions.

To save the lives of animals that will not reproduce, should the zoo keeper say, "You are not being smart," or should he rethink his idea of intelligence? Should the East German government punish its people for not embracing their own incarceration? Similarly, can we deny the instinctive intelligence underlying violent and even self-destructive behavior in our urban streets?

Near the end of Lee's movie, the people in that Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood burned down the wall. Lee was not advocating violence. He was saying that violence and self-destruction are natural responses of intelligent creatures denied freedom by walls of stupidity. Don't corner an animal, especially a human animal, unless you expect a fight to the death.

It seems ironic that we are beginning to understand about animal life what we have not yet understood about human beings. Zoo keepers are beginning to understand that their good intentions to protect wildlife are counter productive if animals aren't given an environment that allows them freedom and a purposeful existence.

America's cities have become human zoos. Economic and racial walls trap people in a concrete environment with barred windows, welfare handouts, drugs and little hope for their children. Until we do the right thing and destroy the walls of Stupid Power, life will destroy itself by beating its head against them.

What Poles Must Understand

John Franklin Hall Jr.

Polish summers are usually hot. Those who can afford to vacation rarely resist the opportunity. Those who remain, however, usually make sure that the summer heat takes political form. So it was in August of 1980, when an electrician from Gdansk led a movement called "Solidarity" to international prominence and at least temporary acceptance as the first independent trade union in post-World War II Eastern Europe.

This August, the same man and his movement have achieved even greater prominence as they hold the reins of the first non-communist government in Eastern bloc history. They also hold the reins of Poland's future, but the future of democracy reborn in Poland is intrinsically bound to economic rebirth. Democracy without bread feeds only dictatorship. In the coming task of developing a healthy Polish economy that will last, the West has an opportunity to join with the Poles in assuring the success of the Polish Project.

The West joins the Poles in rejoicing in the renaissance of democracy in the Communist bloc, but there are skeptics both in and outside of Poland who express doubts as to its viability and who urge caution in dealing with the new Polish state. They are right to be cautious, but their caution should not take the form of inaction. Too much restraint either in Poland or outside its borders will only leave the new Polish democracy to starve.

Right now, Poland is without bread. Poland is saddled with a foreign debt of $39 billion, which stifles potential foreign investment. Solidarity is also an inherently socialist movement — a worker's movement in its truest form, which may stifle potential American investment.

Poland lacks the most essential of commodities on its shelves. It is only beginning to experience a credible service industry, largely through the growth of privatization. These shortcomings at home may stifle the labor and capital investments of the Poles themselves. While the reluctance of Westerners and Poles suddenly to change direction may thus be understandable, it may also sound the death knell for democracy in a nation with traditionally strong democratic bloodlines and in whose future the world, and especially the United States, must necessarily take a keen interest and an active role.

Western officials want to see a Polish plan that will avoid the disappointing results of the 1970s, when assets poured into Eastern Europe yielded only a short-term high that was rapidly depleted by government waste and excess consumption. Polish citizens want to see food on store shelves, apartments available within their lifetimes and an economy that works. These results are achievable, but they will necessarily require a willingness to believe and a willingness to try on the part of both the West and the Poles themselves.

The West should observe that the new Prime Minister, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, is a sharp, disciplined intellectual who enjoys the respect of both his allies and adversaries. Mazowiecki understands the need for economic discipline at home, and his government can likely enforce the discipline necessary to soothe the apprehensions of Western investors against recurrence of the 1970s letdown. He also understands the significance of the privatization that has already emerged in many sectors of the economy and the need to relax state control of the other sectors in order to allow the Poles to exercise command of their own economy.

For American investors, the fact that Poland will remain socialist should be no bar to assistance. The European Community is the United States' largest trading partner, and most of its members are states with economic systems that are socialist to some extent. If the Mazowiecki government can offer a credible plan of discipline and economic restructuring, the West should not hesitate to lend its hand to the survival of Polish democracy.

The Poles, for their part, should see that they stand at a historic precipice. The Mazowiecki government will demand discipline and hard work, but for the first time in four decades Poles will have a real stake in the Polish system. Moreover, Solidarity's leader, Lech Walesa, should be the figure to whom the Poles look for guidance and inspiration in their efforts. Unlike Mazowiecki, Walesa is not an intellectual. He is a common worker with uncommon vision.

The Mazowiecki government must demand discipline and effort on the part of the Poles to ensure their future. Walesa can deliver on this, as he did yesterday when striking railroad workers in Lodz heeded his call to return to work. He helped workers across the country to understand and appreciate the need for cooperation and hard work in their efforts to achieve human rights and democracy in Poland. He brought sanity and control to situations that were by all accounts insane and uncontrollable, often through appeals that brought tears to the eyes of his listeners and touched the hearts of both followers and adversaries.

During a visit to Poland in 1984, I was given a photo of a young protester carrying a placard that read: "Walesa struggles. What about you?" This message should not be lost on the Poles of this new era, who have never lost the fortitude to struggle in the face of even certain defeat. They should understand that by joining their diligence with his they can achieve an economically sound, democratic state to take them into the 21st century.

The stage is now set for Poland to establish, and the West to assist, the first stable democracy in the Communist bloc's history. If Poland's economy fails during this democratic rebirth, both the West and the Poles will bear the responsibility for that failure and for the reappearance of dictatorship fed by the absence of bread in a struggling democracy.

IN THE STATE

Decision Soon

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Former state Democratic Party chairman Betty McCain says she will decide by the end of next week whether she will challenge U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms.

"Once you see what the possibilities are, that's what you base it on," Mrs. McCain said. "It really boils down to a personal decision about your own life."

Mrs. McCain is among several North Carolina Democrats considering a challenge against the Republican senator since former Gov. Jim Hunt announced Aug. 16 he would not be a candidate.

Since Hunt's announcement, Mrs. McCain said she had been talking to friends and political associates across the state, including the money folks.

"I am a candid, realistic person," she said. "You've got to have the money to run against Jesse Helms. He is a fund-raising machine."

Prison Changes

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Responding to recent turmoil at Piedmont Correctional Institution, the N.C. Department of Correction on Thursday took disciplinary action against three staff members and announced the addition of 25 guards.

N.C. Department of Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson cited "unprofessional behavior" by employees and "evidence that the risks faced by staff within the institution have escalated."

DOC also announced that the physical design of the institution may not be appropriate for its current mission, The Salisbury Post reported.

The return of Piedmont from a close-custody to a medium-custody facility is being considered, Johnson said, pending construction of a close-custody facility somewhere in western North Carolina.

Names and ranks of employees affected were not released. One employee was dismissed; a second was demoted and transferred to another facility; and a third was reprimanded and will remain at Piedmont.

Expulsion

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 16-year-old Dudley High School student charged with raping another student during the school day has been permanently expelled from the Greensboro school system.

Damon Jamall Owens will no longer be able to attend a school in the Greensboro system, principal Lenwood Edwards said.

Police said Owens was charged Tuesday afternoon with second-degree rape and second-degree sexual offense. Owens has the right to appeal the decision and request a formal hearing. Expulsions are used in only two cases — a student 14 years old or older has been convicted of a felony or the student's presence in school constitutes a clear threat to the safety and health of other students or school employees.

Edwards would not elaborate on why he chose to expel Owens rather than to suspend him pending the outcome of the case. He would not say whether school officials received more information regarding the incident.

Low Cables

EDENTON, N.C. (AP) — High voltage cables that sag dangerously close to sailboat mast-height in Albemarle Sound will be raised to a 70-foot clearance over the water, engineers of North Carolina Power Co. said Thursday.

The wires will be higher than the 65-foot authorized clearance for fixed bridges over the Intracoastal Waterway, officials said.

The Albemarle Commission on Aug. 14 filed a complaint with the North Carolina Utilities Commission, seeking to eliminate the electrocution threat to boaters. The agreement reached Thursday ends the Utilities Commission's involvement, officials said.

At present the 115,000-volt conductors at their lowest point are only 52 feet above the sound between Edenton and Mackeys — lower than the metal masts of many sailboats.

Bicycle Accident

DALLAS, N.C. (AP) — A 4-year-old boy on a bicycle was struck by a car and killed Thursday while peddling in front of his grandparents' house, authorities said.

Yates Lineberger was dead on arrival at Gaston Memorial Hospital, officials said.

The boy had recently learned to ride his two-wheeler without training wheels, said grandmother Tenice Lineberger. He often rode in the driveway but never in the street, she said.

"He'd always turn around in our drive, and we told him not to go past the mailbox," Mrs. Lineberger said. "But this time he got a notion to go a little further."

The car, driven by Cynthia Clark Aurora, 57, of Iron Station, was traveling between 30 and 35 mph, police said. The posted speed limit is 45 mph.

Tax Amnesty Period Begins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina has a simple message for residents who are behind on paying their taxes: Pay now, or you might go to jail later.

Beginning today and continuing through Dec. 1, people and companies who owe the state taxes can pay and avoid penalties or prosecution.

All they will owe is the amount of taxes due, plus interest.

But after Dec. 1, state tax evasion becomes a felony. Conviction could mean a prison term of five years and a fine up to $25,000. And in the next two years the Revenue Department will be adding 135 auditors, collectors and agents.

While the amnesty offer began today, revenue officials have collected $200,000 since the plan was announced.

"I think it's very positive, the response we've had so far," said Charles Collins, assistant director of the department's sales and use tax division.

The one-time amnesty is for those who have underreported income, overstated deductions, failed to file a return or just not paid.

If you want to participate:

— Get an application by calling any of the 61 Revenue Department offices across the state or its headquarters in Raleigh.

— File the application by Dec. 1, along with delinquent or amended tax returns and payment of all taxes and interest owed. If you don't pay the taxes and interest owed, you could be prosecuted after Dec. 1.

If you need help determining how much you owe, you may call a local revenue office or the Raleigh number.

Those who owe state taxes may owe federal taxes also. The N.C. Revenue Department will not provide the federal Internal Revenue Service with a list of people who pay during the amnesty period.

However, if the IRS requests information on an individual, the state is required to provide that information.

The amnesty program covers taxes on income, intangibles, gifts, withholdings, sales and use, motor fuels, inspections, licenses, franchises and inheritances.

The state expects to receive at least $20 million, and possibly two to three times that. New York aimed for $200 million and received twice that; Kentucky predicted $40 million and has received $60 million. North Carolina will be the 33rd state to have a tax amnesty program and will advertise it with a $800,000 campaign.

The Revenue Department has mailed applications to 42,000 people that it knows owe taxes.

Officials also hope to receive applications from those the department has not identified, like the man who recently called amnesty manager Dewey Sanders.

The man did not identify himself and said he was calling for himself and friends who had never paid income taxes.

"He said it had bothered him for several years," Sanders reported, "and it had made sleeping difficult."

The Department of Revenue in Raleigh can be contacted at 1-800-446-2829.

Two More Bodies Examined For Poison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BURLINGTON, N.C. — As part of a widening probe into possible arsenic poisonings, two more bodies were exhumed for testing for the chemical.

The bodies of Isla Taylor and Joseph E. Mitchell were exhumed Thursday as part of the investigation into slayings allegedly committed by Blanche Taylor Moore.

Isla Taylor, who was 83 when she died in 1970, was Mrs. Moore's first mother-in-law. Mitchell, who was 57 when he died in 1985, was a co-worker.

The exhumations began at dawn when the vault containing the casket and remains of Mrs. Taylor was removed from Alamance Memorial Park west of Burlington.

Her body was already en route to the state Medical Examiner's office in Chapel Hill by the time workmen at Graham Memorial Park exhumed the vault containing the remains of Mitchell. He was a meat cutter for the Kroger grocery store chain before his death.

Mrs. Moore has been in jail in Graham since July 18 on a charge of first-degree murder in the 1973 death of James N. Taylor, who was her first husband and Mrs. Taylor's son.

Mrs. Moore, also a former Kroger Co. employee, is also charged with felonious assault with intent to kill in the poisoning of her second husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore. The pastor of Carolina United Church of Christ fell ill shortly after marrying Mrs. Moore in April.

She also is charged in Forsyth County with first-degree murder in the October 1986 death of a boyfriend, Raymond Reid, who was a Kroger store manager.

When Reid's body was exhumed from Pine Hill Cemetery in Burlington earlier this summer, an autopsy revealed a lethal amount of arsenic.

About a dozen members of the Taylor family, many of them weeping, watched the exhumation of Mrs. Taylor's body, but there were no known members of the Mitchell family on hand at the exhumation in the Graham cemetery.

Members of the homicide investigation unit at the Greensboro Police Department have joined Burlington and Alamance County authorities in a probe of Mitchell's death. Greensboro police Detective Ken Brady said he was observing the exhumation of Mitchell's body because he died at Moses Cone Memorial Hospital in Greensboro.

He said he would follow the autopsy to determine what caused Mitchell's death. Lt. Steve Lynch, head of the Burlington police detective division, said Greensboro detectives are working jointly with his staff in the Mitchell death probe.

Lynch also refused to say whether the exhumations, now numbering five in the Moore investigation, have been completed. He said his office will be working with Dr. John Butts, the state medical examiner, in deciding on any additional exhumations.

Environmentalists Say Water Plan Needed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Environmentalists applauded a proposal to reclassify seven coastal rivers and sounds, but developers say the plan fails to address the cost of protecting the waters.

The state Environmental Management Commission should reclassify the seven waters — ranging from the Aligator River to Masonboro Sound — and adopt protective measures for those areas at its next meeting Sept. 14. EMC vice chairman Virgil L. McBride of Henderson urged in a report released Wednesday.

"We're very pleased with the results," said Derb S. Carter Jr., a lawyer for the N.C. Coastal Federation. "If the commission adopts the recommendations, it probably will be one of the commission's most significant decisions in recent years as far as protecting the coastal environment."

The report is a strong endorsement for protecting the waters, something the commission has considered for more than a year. McBride heads the EMC's water-quality committee and presided over a series of public hearings on the topic in June. And the report goes further than commission staff, which earlier recommended protection for six of the eight waters.

But the president of the Economic Alliance of North Carolina, an organization representing coastal developers, said his group probably would ask the commission to delay voting on the recommendations. Three members of the alliance sit on the 17-member panel.

"We have concerns that there needs to be an economic analysis done on all of these areas, and that they should not be designated until this is done," said Ken M. Kirkman, a Morehead City lawyer who heads the alliance. "The law is very clear, on any water reclassification, that an economic analysis be done."

Lower Stalk Leaf Prices Increasing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON — A shortage is causing flue-cured tobacco buyers in the South to pay high prices for lower-stalk leaves compared with upper-stalk tobacco, officials said.

Last week, buyers paid 50 cents or more per pound above the federal price support for some "priming" grades of tobacco. Some grades that don't carry a price support were bought for more than $1.45 per pound, nearly as much as for grades that carry price supports.

Although upper-stalk tobacco is just beginning to be offered for sale, demand this week seemed light and buyers paid only a few cents above the price support for some "B" grades. Warehouses bought some of the tobacco in hopes that prices would rise later in the season. Tobacco that was not bought by buyers and warehouses went to the flue-cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., a grower-owned cooperative.

The cooperative borrows money to buy the tobacco, processes it and sells the tobacco later to repay the loans.

There is a shortage of "priming" grades or lower-stalk leaves, which are the first to be harvested, said James Starkey, senior vice president with Universal Leaf Tobacco Co. in Richmond, Va.

"Unfortunately, the way the system works," Starkey said, farmers want to sell more upper-stalk tobacco because price support levels are higher. Because they can sell only a certain number of pounds, they want to market the upper-stalk leaves if they think they may have produced a surplus, he said.

Much of the upper-stalk tobacco, Starkey told the Wilmington Morning Star, is bought by foreign buyers. Because they shop on world markets, he said, they may be able to buy upper-stalk leaves elsewhere for 90 cents to $1 per pound, compared with more than $1.80 a pound for U.S. leaf.

But he predicted that all good-quality upper-stalk domestic tobacco will be bought this year.

Industry officials have said tobacco prices have been good despite wet weather, which has produced some thin, washed-out leaves, meaning the tobacco weighs less and contains less nicotine.

Although leaves may be thin in some areas, Starkey said, the crop still is a generally good one.

Doctor Says Bakker's Strain, If Real, Similar To War Stress

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Jim Bakker could be experiencing symptoms similar to those suffered by some war veterans, said a psychiatrist at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

Bakker was committed to the Federal Correctional Institute in Butner on Thursday after his attorneys said he was not capable of taking part in his defense. Bakker is on trial in Charlotte for fraud and conspiracy.

If Bakker's condition is real, it may be similar to post-traumatic stress disorder suffered by Vietnam veterans, said Dr. William Bakewell Jr. But he pointed out the condition varies widely with the person involved.

"Different people have different levels of tolerance to stress," Bakewell added. "Some people freak out easily and others can stand a whole lot of stress. Ultimately I suppose everyone has a breaking point."

Bakewell also said the symptoms can be "easily feigned."

Bakewell said his conclusions would be "speculative at the very best" because he had not treated the former television evangelist.

Bakewell, acting chairman of the psychiatry department, agreed to respond generally to a description of the symptoms that led a judge to order psychiatric testing for Bakker.

Dr. Basil Jackson, a psychiatrist from Milwaukee who had been treating Bakker for nine months, testified in U.S. District Court in Charlotte that he found Bakker "lying in the corner of his attorney's office with his head under a couch, hiding."

Jackson said Bakker suffered hallucinations Wednesday after a witness collapsed while being cross-examined.

"Mr. Bakker reported that when he left the courthouse, suddenly people outside took on the form of frightening animals which he felt were intent on destroying him, attacking him and hurting him," Jackson said.

Jackson said Bakker was suffering from "acute depression and confusional reaction with episode decomposition in which he loses the ability to adequately judge and relate to reality."

Jackson said Bakker had been treated with Xanax, an anti-anxiety tranquilizer and sedative.

Bakewell said in a telephone interview from Chapel Hill that the symptoms were not unusual.

"Put it this way," he said. "Some people, when greatly stressed, can react by this kind of psychiatric withdrawal. Curling up in the fetal position is withdrawing from just the overload of stress."

"Things such as having ideas that people are out to harm him, that they are becoming frightening animals ... some people under acute stress can have that kind of psychotic break," Bakewell said.

He speculated that one reason for an evaluation might be to determine whether Bakker could be faking the symptoms.

"All of these things are possible to feign," Bakewell said. "It is certainly possible to dissemble. It is not too hard for a psychiatrist to spot someone who is faking it, so this evaluation may be an attempt to have a more thoroughgoing investigation of his competence."

"Sometimes it goes away," he said. "You take the person out of the pressure cooker and they go back to being their normal, competent selves."

Bakewell said Bakker's position might be "pretty noxious," but he said it would be unusual for someone to suffer delusions and hallucinations suddenly.

"If you're faced with a sudden just horrendous or catastrophic event, that can happen instantaneously," he said. "I would be surprised if he hadn't been showing some signs of stress all along."

"Who knows what it was really like inside his skin through all of this preparation for the trial."

Ex-Aides Say Bakker Was Unpredictable

could fake such an illness, Bakker's symptoms are consistent with stress-induced psychosis.

"Sure, you could fake it," said Dr. William Bakewell Jr., acting chairman of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine's psychiatry department. "But you'd have to be an awfully good actor to sustain it."

The Charlotte Observer quoted a former PTL employee as saying Thursday's events were a reminder of what it was like to work for Bakker.

"The unpredictability, the drama of it — what the American judicial system is experiencing is what we experienced at PTL, the roller coaster that we who have been around him and worked at PTL were on," said Al Cress, who worked in Bakker's executive offices in 1984-85.

By his own telling, Bakker suffered a nervous breakdown 20 years ago while working as an evangelist for Pat Robertson's TV ministry in Portsmouth, Va. In his 1976 autobiography, Bakker blamed the collapse on overwork, saying that for a month, he lay in bed at his home, begging, "Please, God, don't let me lose my mind."

And later, when he began questioning the loyalty of Jerry Falwell, the man to whom he had given control of PTL in 1987, Bakker appeared "the literal picture of death," said Don Hardister, his former security chief.

"I stayed up with him for three days and three nights keeping razors and knives and everything else away from him to make sure he didn't hurt himself," Hardister said.

Jackson told the judge that Bakker began hallucinating Wednesday after a former PTL executive, Steve Nelson, collapsed on the stand while testifying for the prosecution. At the prompting of an attorney, Bakker knelt by Nelson's side and prayed. Nelson recovered later from what hospital officials said was dehydration from flu.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry Miller argued before the judge Thursday that the psychiatrist was a "hired gun."

"It's hard to interpret it any other way other than Mr. Davis has once again — this time he didn't summon his client up to pray — this time he summons a psychiatrist up to say that his client can't go forward with the defense, and it's awfully suspect," Miller said.

The jury was not told Thursday about his condition or about Bakker's commitment.

"Something unexpected has come up," Potter told jurors, saying the trial would be delayed, possibly until Wednesday.

But the judge added: "I'm really not sure at this time how long."

Prosecution and defense lawyers are under court order not to discuss the case outside court.

Bakker was indicted with another PTL executive on charges of diverting for their own use more than $4 million raised from followers. If convicted on all 24 counts, Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $5 million.

Jackson said Bakker's condition worsened between Wednesday and Thursday, even after he was given Xanax, an anti-depressant sedative.

"To put it in lay language, the man is stressed out," Jackson said.

Bakker appeared distraught when he was led from his attorney's office by U.S. marshals to the courthouse for processing of the commitment order.

"Please don't do this to me," a sobbing, disheveled Bakker said. He curled up in a fetal position in the back seat.

His wife, Tammy Faye, said from her home in Orlando, Fla., she hoped to visit Bakker at Butner, but she said she did not know when that might happen.

Five States Ready To Sign Regional Waste Pact

By Dick Pettys
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Five of eight Southern states have signaled they are ready to sign a cooperative regional agreement for the disposal of hazardous waste, but a federal official said three — Georgia, Mississippi and Kentucky — might not.

James Smith, chief of policy for the Environmental Protection Agency's Region IV, offered that assessment Thursday after meeting for four hours with environmental officials from the states.

He said it appeared Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Tennessee were "well along" to be ready to sign. Monday's session was the latest in a series of staff level working sessions, under way for months but just now receiving wide attention, designed to develop a cooperative agreement under which each state in Region IV would play some role in handling waste.

EPA officials are promoting the arrangement as a means for the eight states to meet a congressional Oct. 17 deadline.

States across the country have until that date to demonstrate they can handle the hazardous wastes they expect to be generated within their states for the next 20 years, or risk the loss of non-emergency federal Superfund environmental cleanup money.

For the eight states making up the region — Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina and South Carolina — the loss would amount to $117 million.

There is internal pressure for a regional agreement, as well. Alabama and South Carolina, which now receive much of the region's hazardous waste at landfills in their states, have taken steps to ban shipments from states which are not developing treatment facilities of their own.

Thursday's meeting produced no final agreement, but:

— Many of the states submitted plans and, for the first time, projected timetables for waste disposal facilities; and — All states produced refined figures for current and projected generation of hazardous waste.

Another staff-level meeting was scheduled for Sept. 15, to be followed on Sept. 27 by a meeting of the top environmental officials from the states.

Alabama and South Carolina proposed no new facilities. Regional EPA officials have said they believe the two states have been doing more than their share all along.

North Carolina declared it can have an incinerator operational by February 1994.

Florida, which is considering either building a state facility or licensing a private operator for incineration of hazardous waste, said the private facility could be operating by January 1993 at the latest while a state facility would take until August 1994.

Tennessee said it can license an aqueous treatment facility and have it operational by November 1990 at the latest, and solvent recovery and energy recovery facilities by 1995.

"I can't imagine anybody would say that what these five are proposing isn't enough," Nessmith said.

But he added that Kentucky's representative to the meeting acted only as an observer and offered no proposals, while Mississippi's plan for an energy recovery facility did, not meet the region's needs. "We have plenty of capacity there. They're not increasing the mix."

Georgia and Kentucky are the only two states whose top environmental officials have not yet signed a preliminary agreement to work toward the development of a regional plan.

States which do not join the regional agreement can still maintain Superfund eligibility by demonstrating they can handle all of their own waste or have negotiated interstate agreements on their own.

But regional federal officials contend the agreement they are promoting allows states to meet the requirement without unnecessary duplication of services.

Sue Robertson, chief of the Alabama Department of Environmental Management's land division, said after the meeting that environmental staffers from the eight states "are committed to the (regional) agreement" but that the proposal may not sit well with the elected decision makers in some states.

She had tough words for some, including Georgia.

"I'm concerned the Georgia incinerator site seems to have become involved in politics," she continued, adding that her state intends to monitor efforts in Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee, among others, to determine whether they should be added to the list of states whose shipments to Alabama have been banned.

"We think we have taken responsible steps," she said. "We are not trying to limit (them)... We are trying to get additional hazardous waste capacity (in other states)."

The states offered these commitments Thursday for handling waste:

— Florida, 30,000 tons per year of solid incineration and 40,000 tons of aqueous treatment.

— Georgia, 18,000 tons of liquid incineration, 27,000 tons of solid incineration and 40,000 tons of above ground storage.

— Kentucky, 15,624 tons of liquid incineration and 79,321 tons of solid incineration.

— Mississippi, 188,000 tons of energy recovery.

— North Carolina, 15,000 tons of liquid incineration and 25,000 tons of solid incineration.

— Tennessee, 659,902 tons of solvents recovery, 31,115 tons of liquid incineration, 46,673 tons of solid incineration, 240,192 tons of energy recovery and 460,785 tons of aqueous treatment.

The region now has a capacity of disposing of 2,783,779 tons of hazardous waste per year, according to figures released by EPA after Thursday's meeting. The state commitments would boost the total by 1,957,112 tons, or 50 percent, the figures indicated.

Martin Says Hazardous Waste Incinerator May Go Anywhere

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND — Gov. Jim Martin could not indicate where a proposed hazardous waste incinerator might be located in the state, but he said he urged local officials to be prepared for the worst.

"I don't know it's going to go where it's going to go and then you won't be disappointed," Martin said.

Environmental and political officials have proposed volunteering North Carolina for an incinerator as part of a regional approach to deal with hazardous wastes.

The governor said if all goes well at meetings in Atlanta, he expects each of eight Southern states to agree to take responsibility for one type of waste treatment or disposal. He said if an agreement is reached, a special legislative session could be called the week of Sept. 18 to formally accept it.

"I will be recommending the agreement to them (lawmakers)," Martin said.

North Carolina's part would be to operate one of four hazardous waste incinerators for North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Kentucky. The others would be those already operating in South Carolina and Kentucky and a new one in Florida, he said in his weekly news conference Thursday.

Alabama and South Carolina would continue operating landfills and other states would take care of chemical treatments for contaminated water, metal recovery and recovery of waste solvents.

Martin said an incinerator would be no more controversial than any other waste facility. And the agreement will help North Carolina meet an Oct. 17 deadline for handling hazardous waste, thus avoiding the loss of federal Superfund money for cleaning up waste spills.

"There will be opposition to anything that we try to do," he said. But he added that the agreement has the obvious benefit of exempting North Carolina from operating every kind of facility needed.

"It's an advantage to only have to find a site for one of them," he said.

Martin said it was ironic that communities that embrace hazardous waste but shy away from hosting an incinerator.

One other issue that might come up during the extra legislative session is a proposed constitutional amendment on gubernatorial veto, the governor said. The proposal to let the public vote on the idea passed the Senate but failed to pass the House when supporters failed to find the 72 votes needed for a three-fifths margin.

"We're continuing to look for converts," Martin said. "If I have a lock on it, sure I'd go ahead and put it to a vote."

Martin also said he and other officials are preparing for their biennial trade-mission season, with officials planning to spend part of September with Hollywood film executives, October in the Far East and November in Europe.

The governor has traditionally used the fall season of odd-numbered years for luring investments to the state, and he credited the missions to Hollywood for North Carolina's third-place ranking in revenues from movie productions.

However, this fall schedule may have added clutter to the special legislative session to ratify the hazardous waste agreement.

Martin, Commerce Secretary Jim Broyhill and members of the N.C. Film Office will visit 18 executives in the film industry plus 11 studios and corporations during their trip Sept. 24-27, said Bill Arnold, director of the Film Office.

"I will be recommending the agreement to them (lawmakers)," Martin said.

North Carolina's part would be to operate one of four hazardous waste incinerators for North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Kentucky. The others would be those already operating in South Carolina and Kentucky and a new one in Florida, he said in his weekly news conference Thursday.

Alabama and South Carolina would continue operating landfills and other states would take care of chemical treatments for contaminated water, metal recovery and recovery of waste solvents.

Panel Rejects New Rules For Billboards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A committee of the N.C. Board of Transportation has recommended more restrictive outdoor advertising regulations along highways in urban areas of the state.

The move is a blow to environmental groups who say billboards litter the roadsides.

Applicants for state and local permits that have tried to fight what they say is the proliferation of billboards in North Carolina said they were disappointed but not surprised.

"They've come up with other recommendations, but this, I'm afraid, is the heart of it," said Katherine St. John, a staff attorney with the Southern Environmental Law Center in Charlottesville, Va. "Unfortunately, in North Carolina the billboard industry is very powerful. I'm really disappointed with the result of this vote today."

The Drivers and Owners Committee unanimously turned down Thursday a staff proposal that would have permitted billboards only where at least three businesses exist within 1,500 feet of one another. Current regulations allow billboards in an unincorporated area where at least one business is present and one from the road.

The committee recommended, instead, that the Department of Transportation staff tighten its definition of what constitutes a business and improve enforcement procedures. Staff members had said the business rule was tough to enforce because almost any small enterprise — even a "sham" operation — could be considered commercial.

They also contend that the presence of a single business does not make an area truly commercial. New billboards require proof that the business earns $25,000 a year in gross income, but committee members say any enterprise that makes a profit is a business. They would increase the income requirement and establishing minimum height and square footage requirements.

"They obviously represented the interests of the billboard industry," Peter Davis, who has been active in campaigns to restrict billboards in New Hanover County and elsewhere. The traveling public he said, "has been totally ignored."

Texas and Florida have regulations similar to the ones being proposed.

"There's obviously a certain constituency out there that does not want any billboards anywhere," said transportation board member Randy Doub, a Greenville lawyer.

The biggest impact of the proposed regulations would have been on the placement of new billboards. Any billboard already standing would be permitted to stay in place as long as it was in use and properly maintained.

Thousands Protest Racism

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — A march protesting racism and the slaying of a black youth produced a violent clash at the Brooklyn Bridge on Aug. 23. An 18-year-old suspect surrendered and was charged with murder.

Police estimated Thursday's protest drew 7,500 people — by far the largest demonstration since Yusuf Hawkins, 16, was killed during a racial attack in Brooklyn on Aug. 23. "This was an absolute success!" proclaimed Sonny Carson, a protest leader. "This will make the city wake up. This will let the city know that there are young black people who will not take this any more."

The march was orderly until those at the front reached barricades police erected to keep demonstrators off the bridge's roadways during the evening rush hour. Demonstrators threw bottles and bricks and police responded with nightsticks as marchers shouted, "Take the bridge, take the bridge!"

Twenty-three police officers were injured, none seriously, police said. An unknown number of others were injured.

Four people were arrested for disorderly conduct and harassment; two also were charged with assault.

Billed as a "Day of Outrage and Mourning," the protest came a day after Hawkins' funeral, and just hours after Joseph Fama, 18, was brought back to Brooklyn under tight security. He had surrendered earlier to police in Oneonta, some 150 miles north of New York City.

Chief of Detectives Joseph Colangelo said it was "with a great deal of satisfaction" that he announced late Thursday that Fama, the subject of an eight-day manhunt, had been charged with murder.

Other charges against Fama included two counts of criminal possession of a weapon, first-degree assault, first-degree riot, aggravated harassment, civil rights violation and menacing in connection with Hawkins' death last week.

The six other suspects charged in the attack are all free on bail.

Hawkins was shot twice in the chest after he and three black friends, answering a used-car ad in the mostly white Bensonhurst section, encountered a mob of up to 30 whites. The attackers, carrying bats and golf clubs, were said to be spurred by a neighborhood girl's interracial dating.

The slaying inflamed racial tensions in the city just as Mayor Edward I. Koch faces a strong challenge in the Sept. 12 Democratic mayoral primary from a black candidate, Manhattan Borough President David Dinkins.

Spike Lee, the writer, director and co-star of "Do the Right Thing," a movie about racial violence in Brooklyn, argued in a guest column today in the Daily News for making Hawkins' death an election issue.

"The atmosphere of hate in this city has everything to do with who is occupying the mayor's chair," Lee wrote. "The man sitting there now has to go, plain and simple."

Supports May Have Failed On Collapsed Road Bridge

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LAUREL, Md. — Federal investigators believe that the collapse of a bridge over the Baltimore-Washington Parkway Thursday was caused by the failure of timber and steel-beam supports that temporarily propped up the structure while the concrete deck was being poured.

The overpass fell into the southbound lanes of the parkway just before the start of morning rush hour, injuring 14 people — four from two cars passing under the bridge when it collapsed and 10 construction workers who had been on the bridge itself.

"The failure was instantaneous," said Gene McCormick, a deputy administrator at the Federal Highway Administration who visited the site. "There was little forewarning."

The collapsed bridge is part of a $6.3 million project involving the construction of four stone-faced concrete arch bridges, ramps, and connecting roads to carry highway 198 over the parkway. That project is part a $100 million, five-year plan to rebuild parts of the aging parkway, which is owned and maintained by the National Park Service.

The bridge that collapsed is about 100 feet long and 40 feet wide; it stood 15½ feet over the parkway.

Thursday night, 400 tons of concrete and metal wreckage continued to block the southbound lanes of the parkway, which will remain closed for at least the next two days as investigators examine the rubble.

Although federal investigators were still checking the half-poured concrete bridge deck, twisted steel beams and splintered wood for clues to determine the actual cause of the accident, preliminary indications were that failure of the supports — known as false work, a type of structural scaffolding — was responsible for the collapse.

HUD Report Says Woes Still Exist

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An internal audit criticizes HUD Secretary Jack Kemp for making "little visible improvement" in a scandal-plagued agency program.

Although the report praises Kemp's commitment to ridding the Department of Housing and Urban Development of mismanagement, it said some of the blame for the slow pace of improvements in the single-family home program rests at his feet.

"Problems still exist and will continue to exist unless there is a coordinated leadership drive by the various offices in headquarters who are responsible for property disposition activities," the auditors said in an Aug. 25 report obtained by The Associated Press.

"This leadership and coordination was not apparent during our review."

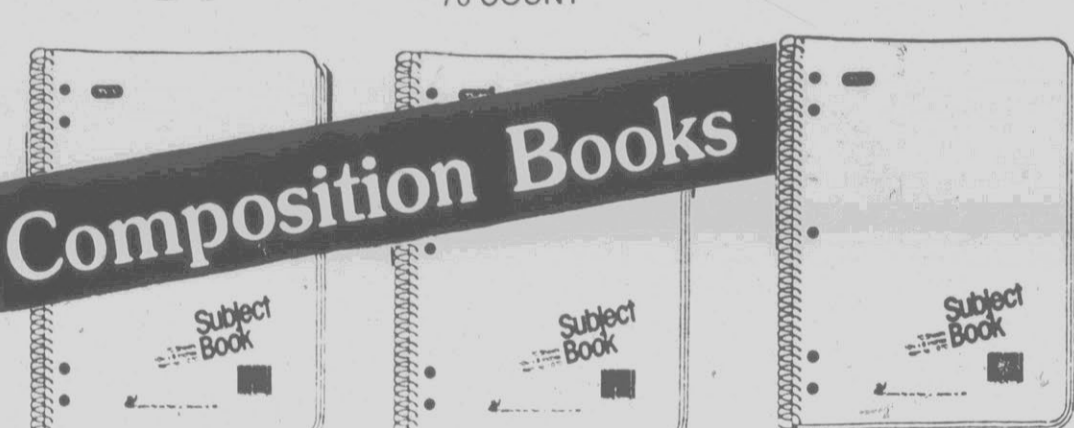

HUD spokesman Jack Flynn said further changes in the program would be part of a reform package Kemp will announce later this month.

The audit focused on eight HUD field offices and their handling of a program that has received considerable attention during the recent investigations of mismanagement, fraud and influence-peddling at HUD during the Reagan administration.

A 1987 nationwide review of HUD's sales and acquisitions of single-family properties found many private closing agents hired by HUD were late in paying the agency millions of dollars — and in some cases weren't paying at all.

VOA's Megastar Unknown At Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Philomena Jurey wrote her memoirs but can't get them published. She's known around the world, but a stranger in her own land. It's the story of her life, she sighs.

Mrs. Jurey, who ends a 37-year career in journalism today, covered American presidents for the Voice of America for 14 years.

In hamlets in Albania and huts in Borneo, her radio voice is familiar to millions.

To people who never heard of Dan Rather, she is a megastar.

And people who watch Rather every night never had the chance to hear her. The Voice of America broadcasts to millions — 130 million a week by its estimate — but is prohibited by law from beaming its broadcasts to America.

Mrs. Jurey's boss, Sid Davis, relishes telling about an incident that illustrates the upside-down life of a VOA broadcaster.

When President Gerald R. Ford went to China in 1975, a huge press corps accompanied him.

"You had some of the titans of the broadcasting industry making the trip — Barbara Walters, all the top anchor people," says Davis. "We arrived in China and you had all these Chinese people lining the street ignoring the television stars with their vast audiences and asking, 'Where is Philomena? Where is Philomena?'"

"Yes, it's true," laughs Mrs. Jurey in an interview. "The same thing happened when we went back to China with President Reagan. The rest of the press corps loved teasing Sam Donaldson about that."

"It was fun, because we labor in obscurity here."

Even though she has been off the air for 19 months, working as editor-in-chief of VOA news and English broadcasts, she still gets mail from around the world.

Many correspondents want to know what happened to her, why she disappeared from the radio. Some still write to propose marriage. To which she replies that at age 61, "I'm old enough to be a young grandmother."

She says she covered the White House for the Voice the way any reporter covers the news: "The adrenalin gets going and you just report what's going on."

One difference: She had to remember to speak slowly for an audience for whom English is a tricky language and she had to take pains to put the news in a context for her listeners.

When a president submitted a request for foreign aid for some Third World country, for example, she would stress that Congress always has the final word on such matters.

Bush To Meet Kaifu

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Despite "economic frictions" between Japan and the United States, Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said in an interview broadcast today he hopes his talks with President Bush ensure that overall relations remain firm.

Bush interrupted his Maine vacation to return to Washington for talks with the new prime minister about trade and other issues.

Although the two countries have very good economic relations, "there are economic frictions over various issues," Kaifu said in an interview on "CBS This Morning," and "Japan wishes to make as much effort as possible in order to resolve those economic frictions."

He said, "I would like to, through my talks with the president, make sure that this relationship of mutual trust will remain unshakeable and firm."

Bush and Kaifu were to discuss "the overall economic agenda" and have lunch before the president returns to Maine for the final days of his summer vacation, said National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft.

New Drug Plan Will Cost $7.8 Billion And Portions Will Remain Top Secret

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House is putting a $7.8 billion price tag on its new drug strategy but intends to withhold from the American public details about 30 percent of the plan, according to an administration source.

Speaking on the condition of anonymity, the source said Thursday the government plans to keep secret classified sections outlining intelligence operations and detailing how it far it will go in pursuing drug traffickers.

White House chief of staff John Sununu said Thursday in Kennebunkport, Maine, that assembling the $7.8 billion could involve shifting money from other programs. President Bush is scheduled to announce the new policy in a nationally televised speech Tuesday night.

"You don't want the narco-traffickers to know what the limits are," the source said. "We can't let them know how far we would go before retaliation or how far before we pump more money in."

The document draws from suggestions submitted by several federal agencies to drug czar William Bennett.

It has been learned the strategy will call for more penalties against users, stepped-up law enforcement and expanded treatment programs. Up to $260 million in economic and military aid will be sent to Colombia, Bolivia and Peru to stop cocaine at its South American origin, sources said.

The Pentagon announced Thursday that the first shipments in a $65 million emergency aid package for Colombia are scheduled to leave Sunday. A final list of supplies still is being drafted, but Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said two C-130 B medium range cargo planes will ferry the initial supplies.

President Bush, on vacation in Maine, said an international effort to aid Colombia in its war on drugs "would be useful."

The administration source said Bush will reveal as much of the drug strategy as he can without compromising operations against traffickers.

"The idea is to tell as much as possible to the people," the source said, "but it is obvious we can't tell all."

Sections of the plan that will remain classified deal with precise areas of drug operations and strength of U.S. anti-drug forces overseas, the source said. Some portions dealing with strategies at home also will remain under wraps.

Also to be kept secret are which third-party countries give information to the United States, the source said. The U.S. intelligence community frequently relies on its allies to pass on secret data.

The plan attempts to lay to rest bureaucratic infighting among various agencies in the drug war. Sources say it calls for an increased role for the military. More U.S. troops will be committed to advising and training overseas forces. But the plan stops short of calling for direct U.S. military intervention.

The strategy, according to sources, delineates the overseas operations of the Drug Enforcement Administration, the State Department, which runs drug eradication programs, and the CIA, which gathers intelligence data.

The CIA set up a Counter Narcotics Center in April to "combine operational and analytical support to our country's fight against international drug trafficking," according to spokesman Bill Devine.

He said the plan is to unite the entire intelligence community — the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Defense Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency, Customs and the DEA, along with the CIA — in that effort.

Attempts to stop the cocaine flow into the United States by working directly in South America were all but stopped earlier this year by security threats to American personnel from leftist guerrillas in Colombia and Peru and insufficient guidelines and cooperation among U.S. agencies.

Reactor Startup Report Denied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department says no decision will be made until spring on an exact date for resuming production of tritium, a gas needed to make nuclear warheads.

In a statement issued Thursday, Energy Secretary James D. Watkins denied a report that he had decided on a date for restarting the Savannah River nuclear reactors that produce tritium.

The three active reactors at Savannah River, near Aiken, S.C., have been closed for more than a year to correct mechanical and management problems, leaving the nation without fresh tritium supplies for the first time in the nuclear age.

The Washington Post reported Thursday that Watkins had decided to recommend to President Bush that the first of the three reactors be restarted in July 1990.

"I have made no final decision on a recommended restart schedule for any of the department's Savannah River production reactors, and do not intend to speculate prematurely on possible restart dates," Watkins said.

Watkins also said that even after he makes a recommendation on a proposed restart date, no exact date could be set until next spring.

Baptist-Catholic Study Group Says It Finds Similarities In Doctrines

By George W. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Southern Baptists and Roman Catholics, the nation's two largest denominations, generally have been regarded as doctrinally far apart, but their scholars find they basically agree.

Despite varied terminology and some real differences, "we do share a basic understanding of what it means to be followers of Jesus Christ by the grace of God," says their joint report.

Labor Day Message Cites Unions' Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Labor unions, resented by totalitarian states and sometimes by corporate managers, are regarded by most historic churches as buttressing the rights and dignity of ordinary workers.

Their entitlement to organize and negotiate contractual standards also have become protected by law in democratic countries.

That point was underlined in the 1989 Labor Day message of the U.S. Catholic Conference. It cited a particularly dramatic modern example — the union-spawned turn to democracy in Poland.

Similar union-backed thrusts for democracy were noted in other long-oppressive lands, sometimes meeting countermeasures. Some anti-union moves also were seen in this country.

Americans "can now see how trade unions in Eastern Europe, Africa and Asia unite and uplift the aspirations for freedom and solidarity of oppressed peoples," the message said.

Called "Freedom, Justice and the Role of Unions," the statement pointed up the union-energized dawn of fuller rights in Poland, long under communist oppression, and said:

"All men and women of good will are heartened by the successful struggle of Poland's workers, whose free, democratic trade union, 'Solidarnosc' (Solidarity) has become the instrument of progress, and we hope, liberation. ...

"Working people in Hungary, in China, in South Africa and in Siberia and the Ukraine are asserting the same social values of human dignity, freedom and solidarity ... as they work ... to create the democratic trade unions. ...

Christianity and Judaism have special grounds for concern with the labor movement drawn from the Bible and its emphasis on mutual community responsibility for all persons in it, including its lowliest workers.

"We are members one of another," the apostle Paul wrote, stressing the duty of all to share the burdens and needs of fellow toilers, and also to uphold and celebrate their well-being.

A tentmaker himself, as well as evangelist, he saw work as honorable and essential, a part of God's unfolding creation. "We are coworkers with God," Sloth, termed by the church one of seven deadly sins, also drew Paul's scorn. "Let him who won't work not eat."

Major churches in this century have voiced their support for union organization and collective bargaining to set standards for workers.

The "important social contributions of the labor movement" has been recognized "by almost every branch of the Christian church," says the National Council of Churches, including most Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations.

However, labor had a long and often difficult struggle in its early years, sometimes marked by violence on both sides, as in efforts of coal miners led by the late John L. Lewis to gain contractual standards.

But the upheavals of the Depression in the 1930's and ensuing government reforms shored up legal rights of workers to organize and negotiate with their companies for basic conditions and wages.

While strains and antagonism sometimes arise in the process, many company managements have come to appreciate the mutual stability and atmosphere of equity that labor agreements establish.

After 10 years of periodic discussions, the Baptist-Catholic dialogue group, quoting Ephesians 4:5, concludes, "We not only confessed but experienced 'One Lord, one faith and one baptism.'"

The 163-page report is seen as the most full-scale, mutual examination of respective positions of the two traditions. Achieving it was an unprecedented experience for Southern Baptists, commonly averse to ecumenical affairs.

Both sides admitted past unfairness toward each other, with predominantly Roman Catholic countries discriminating against Southern Baptist missionaries and the latter laboring among Catholics without respecting their faith.

Such "competition and conflict" in missionary work "can become a stumbling block to those who have not heard the gospel," the dialogue team said.

Its report was issued recently in a special issue of "Theological Educator," a journal of the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, and in a book called "To Understand Each Other," published by Paulist Press.

The Rev. Fisher Humphreys, a Southern Baptist theologian and participant in the dialogue, said it was a rare process for his denomination, which generally has shunned ecumenical efforts for Christian unity.

The talks, sponsored by the Catholic Bishops' Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs and the Southern Baptist Department of Interfaith Witness, involved 18 meetings between 1978 and 1988.

There were about 20 participants in each meeting, but due to turnover through the decade, 39 people altogether took part. A new set of meetings is to begin next March.

Dealing with such topics as Scripture, salvation, spirituality, church and ministry, grace, missions and eschatology (end of time), the team agreed "that the ultimate authority and object of faith is the triune God — Father, Son and Holy Spirit."

Participants concurred that the "primary source of our knowledge of God" is the Bible, which is "the inspired Word of God, authoritative for faith and practice."

But the report notes that Baptists, while valuing past tradition in understanding the Bible, say tradition must be tested by Scripture, while Catholics say interpretation of Scripture may be measured by tradition.

"The Bible has always been the center of Southern Baptist life," the report notes, adding that since the reforming Second Vatican Council of 1962-65, Catholicism "has also become strongly biblical."

On the central Christian task, the report says: "We all agree that the proclamation of the offer of salvation to all peoples is the prime mission of the church."

However, the report says Baptists "stress the experience of salvation when; in faith, a person accepts Jesus as ... personal Savior," while Catholics stress the redemptive "work of Christ" through faith and church sacraments.

"We both set the highest priority on seeking a conscious relationship with God in this life and on striving for the ultimate goal of living in glory with God in heaven," the report says.

"We affirm that our love for God is best achieved in a close relationship with Jesus, coupled with a Christ-like love of neighbor."

Noting that Catholic devotion to Mary and the saints "has been a source of division and misunderstanding," the report says:

"While Roman Catholics affirm with Baptists the sole mediatorship of Christ," they also honor the Virgin Mary as "inseparably linked" with her son's "saving work" and invoke her support in prayers.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

DAVID AND SAUL

ONCE AGAIN, KING SAUL IS OUT IN THE FIELD WITH AN ARMY OF PICKED SOLDIERS, SEARCHING FOR DAVID AND HIS FOLLOWERS—AS DAVID'S PARTY OF SCOUTS HAS JUST FOUND OUT, NOW....

DAVID'S MEN SCRAMBLE FELL-MELL DOWN THE SLOPE....

...THE SCOUTS BRING THE NEWS TO DAVID IN HIS CAMP....

THERE IS INSTANT ACTION AT THE CAMPSITE AS....

...EVERY BIT OF BAGGAGE IS RAPIDLY BUNDLED BY THESE EXPERIENCED MEN AND, IN NO TIME AT ALL, NOT A TRACE OF THE CAMP REMAINS—NOT EVEN THE SMALLEST OF JUGS IS LEFT BEHIND—AS DAVID AND HIS MEN DISAPPEAR DEEPER INTO THE WILDERNESS TO LEAVE KING SAUL STILL PUZZLED OVER DAVID'S WHEREABOUTS!

Next Week
A TIRED KING!

Bishop Says Merged Lutheran Church 'Right To Be Together'

By George W. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROSEMONT, Ill. - The three denominations that merged last year into the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America proved this week in their first national legislative assembly that they could work well together, leaders said.

"The predominant spirit by far was one I would characterize as a strong mixture of joy and commitment," the church's president, Bishop Herbert W. Chilstrom, told reporters at the end of the assembly Wednesday.

He said the 1,041 delegates demonstrated "that it was right for us to be together."

The 5.3-million-member denomination was formed by the combination of the largely eastern and urban Lutheran Church in America and the largely midwestern and rural American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

The diverse composition resulted in some difficult debates on social concerns.

In the final session, the assembly adopted resolutions urging support for striking Appalachian coal miners and charging Israel with abuse of Palestinians. The assembly also supported U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa to pressure it to end apartheid.

Not everyone was happy about the nation's fourth-largest Protestant denomination entering such political matters.

It's a "political sideshow" suggesting church people "have a telephone line to God," protested the Rev. John Forum of Portland, N.D. "It's pointless and ineffective." He said it "abandoned faith for a political gospel."

Bishop Kenneth Sauer of Columbus, Ohio, defended the apartheid resolution, saying, "It's clear support for the cause of justice." Bishop William Lazareth of New York City said it was demanded by "the whole word of God."

"The Lord we proclaim is the word of God," he said. "We do have a political law which is part of God's holy word."

The legislative sessions were preceded and followed by worship, hymns and Bible study.

Church Dress Code Upheld
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTON, Ohio - A Roman Catholic priest who banned shorts, miniskirts and other scanty apparel in his church has angered some parishioners, but the archdiocese says it has no plans to overrule his policy.

Since he began enforcing the dress code this summer, the Rev. Roger Griesse has turned away worshippers four times from Sacred Heart Church, where he has been pastor since 1968 in this southwest Ohio city.

He also has posted notices reminding congregation members they must wear modest attire if they are to receive communion.

Denial of communion is highly unusual in Roman Catholic doctrine, said Monsignor Lawrence Breslin of suburban Kettering, a former vice rector of the American College in Rome.

"My responsibility is to see to the proper and reverent use of the house of God," Griesse, 73, said Thursday. "My responsibility is to God and the church."

Griesse's feelings about churchgoers' attire did not represent those of the archdiocese, said a Dayton spokesman for Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk.

"I hope that people don't think that his opinion is the general opinion of all priests," said the Rev. Robert Monnin, who also is pastor of St. Christopher Church in nearby Vandalia.

New Forms Of Art To Create New Festival Look

By Viorel Urma
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALZBURG, Austria — With the death of conductor Herbert von Karajan, the Salzburg festival is changing its image to open up the celebrated cultural event to new forms of art and musicians who've never been invited to play.

"The festival has become an old museum, unaware of what's going on artistically in the world. We should give modern music and drama the place they deserve," said Hans Landesmann, a member of the festival board, in an interview.

"There is no crisis but just time for change. This necessity has been in the air for years."

For years, the festival had been criticized for being too expensive and a storehouse of the artistic totems of Karajan, its longtime guiding spirit who died July 16 of a heart attack at age 81.

The five-week festival opened July 27 with Giuseppe Verdi's opera "Un Ballo in Maschera," under the baton of Sir Georg Solti.

Karajan had been criticized for his domineering and conservative stance. Italian media called the festival an "intrigue nest," totally subordinated to Karajan's commercial interests.

In his long career, Karajan made more than 800 recordings, many of them with the Berlin and Vienna orchestras. His fortune was estimated at 3.5 billion schillings ($270 million). Although he resigned from the five-member directorate last August after an illness, he had retained a veto over virtually all productions.

Landesmann, a wealthy Vienna businessman with international contacts, was asked by the government to work out a reform program. In June, before Karajan's death, the board, overruling him, agreed in principle to Landesmann's plan to modernize festival management. Under the plan, to be formally adopted in fall, the unpaid honorary five-man directorate will be replaced by a permanent salaried three-member board.

The new board, comprising a president, an artistic director and an economic director will work full time for the festival, Landesmann said.

"We need new, forward-thinking people in the management, much more aware of the contemporary scene," he said.

Albert Moser, the festival president and a Karajan loyalist who is to retire in 1991, will also be replaced.

In another major change, Landesmann said he would like to include artists in the new artistic advisory board to counsel on new projects. He would also like to see more film and video galas and exhibits to be staged during the festival — the world's longest-running and most costly one.

While not playing down the merits of Italian traditional operas, which have been performed here every year, Landesmann proposes to include other composers, such as Richard Strauss or Alban Berg, the Austrian artist who combined atonality with the lyric and dramatic features of the Viennese romantic tradition.

There is talk among festival organizers to devote the 2,600-seat Great Festival Hall to foreign classical opera and the Little Festival Hall to Mozart productions.

"We want a repertoire consistent with the line of Mozart's heritage, something specific, typical of Salzburg," Landesmann said.

In an attempt to prevent the rise of another domineering maestro such as Karajan, Landesmann said no permanent conductor will be named, but invitations will go out to such well-known figures as Solti, Ricardo Muti, Claudio Abbado or Sir John Pritchard, all of whom were in Austria this summer.

"Karajan was opposed to reforms. He was an old man and he didn't like changes. He was opposed to see new people and he used to ask why should we change the structure of the festival," Landesmann said.

Karajan, a native of Salzburg, who had conducted at the festival since 1948, was its sole artistic director in 1956-60 and a member of the directorate since 1964.

Now in its 69th year, the Salzburg festival pays some of the highest performer fees in Europe, and charges some of the continent's top ticket prices.

Five years ago, government auditors urged festival organizers to spend less. Press chief Hans Widrich said the festival runs an annual budget of $27 million, of which state subsidies total $7.7 million with the rest coming from ticket sales, radio and TV rights.

Ticket sales this year range from $4 for standing room at a concert of sacred music to $250 for the best seat at one of the opera performances.

However, not all agree on the need for reform.

Solti, musical director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, who replaced Karajan for the Verdi opera, said the ticket prices should stay as they are.

"I don't believe that lowering their price and making them cost 10 schillings (77 cents) apiece would solve anything. All hotel doormen will rush to buy them officially and then resell them on the black market at a high profit," he said.

Solti said he was not concerned about the artistic quality of the festival, which he considers very good.

"Politicians are talking too much. Once its quality goes down then you can say, 'hey, we must change something.' But not for the time being," he said.

British film director John Schlesinger, who staged Verdi's opera on the opening night, praised Salzburg, saying "There is no house in the world offering the kind of facilities, expertise and officialdom's support we get here. We don't think we will find again similar conditions."

Outdoor Ceremony Performed Aug. 19

WINTON — Sheila Virginia Jones of Murfreesboro and Jeffrey Tyler Wilson of Greenville were united in marriage Aug. 19 in an outdoor evening ceremony.

The Rev. Raymond Hoggard officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie A. Jones Jr. of Murfreesboro, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wilson of Greenville. His grandparents are Basil O'Rear and Lolus Williams, both of Alabama.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral train of satin and alencon lace. The gown had a fitted bodice, scalloped neckline and puffed Juliet sleeves. Alencon lace motifs encrusted with pearls and sequins trimmed the bodice. The A-line skirt extended into a train trimmed in pearls and sequins. She wore a band of braided pearls accented with pearl sprays and silk flowers attached to a fingertip veil outlined in pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white and pink roses, ivy, lilies and matching streamers.

Bea Harris of Ahoskie was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Lisa Wilson of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom; Billie Harrell of Ahoskie; Yvonne Harrell of Colerain, and Debbie Williford of Windsor, all sisters of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included William Lee III of Greenville, Mike Campbell of Salisbury, James Jones of Aulander, brother of the bride, and Joseph Edward Harrell III of Ahoskie, nephew of the bride.

Brandi Jo Jones was flower girl and Lee Woodson Williford was ring bearer. They are niece and nephew of the bride.

Wedding music was presented by the Southern Shakers Band.

Billie Jo Harrell of Durham, Shirley Martin of Ahoskie, Melissa Jones of Aulander and Angela Cole of Raleigh were mistresses of ceremonies.

A Hawaiian luau reception and dance followed the ceremony.

The couple will live in Winton after a wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands.

The bride completed Barbizon Modeling School and attended N.C. State University. She is attending Martin Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed at Perdue Farms in Lewiston.

Owner Warns Others About Car Vandals

Dear Abby: Last week my brand-new car was stolen from a nightclub parking lot and vandalized. Although my car was subsequently recovered and can be repaired, my coat and purse (inconveniences in a nightclub and, therefore, stashed under the seat) are gone forever. At first I thought I was a victim of circumstances. In retrospect, there were precautions I might have taken to have prevented the theft. Perhaps if I list them, they'll save others from this very unpleasant experience.

Never park beside a van or any large vehicle that obstructs a view of your car from the street or the entrance to the building. While I parked in a lighted parking lot by the nightclub, I parked beside a large van, which probably contained the person or persons who stole my car.

Be sure no one is loitering in the vehicles parked near you. If you have credit cards, keep them with you at all times. Leave coats, purses and wallets at home, unless they are on your person. Putting purses or wallets under the seat "out of sight" is unsafe - it's the first place a thief will look after he has broken into your car. Also, don't put them in the trunk. Someone may be watching.

Be sure to remove all unnecessary items from the car unless they are to be used that night - this means workout clothes, briefcase and cassettes for the car stereo.

Investigate exactly what coverage your insurance company provides in the event that your car is stolen and vandalized. You may be in for a rude awakening as to what is and what is not covered. I will lose more than $300 in deductibles and non-reimbursable items because someone stole my car! - Sadder But Wiser In Pennsylvania

Dear Sadder: It's generous of you to take the time and trouble to warn others. Some people need to be reminded of what they already know.

Dear Abby: I am a girl who just celebrated her 21st birthday. On this occasion my boyfriend took me out to dinner. He doesn't drink much and neither do I, but before dinner we each had three martinis. During dinner (just to celebrate), we split a bottle of champagne. After dinner, we each had four brandies.

Did I do wrong? - Blondie
Dear Blondie: Probably.

Dear Abby: Concerning your staid British clergyman who finds the American practice of bear-hugging the clergy too close for comfort:

I wonder what he would think of our wonderful Bishop Francis Quinn of Sacramento, who sports a bumper sticker on his car that says: Have You Hugged Your Bishop Today?

He means it, too, judging from the way this beautiful man offers himself to hugs galore to any and all of the flock he shepherds. - Therese Malouf, Sacramento

Couple Marries Saturday

Temple Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony Saturday of Velma Cristina McLawhorn and Johnny Becton Briley.

Daughter of Howell Claxton and Velma Garris McLawhorn of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of J.B. and Elizabeth Stocks Briley of Route 6, Greenville.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by Bobby Parker at 11 a.m. Pianist Gordan Toudt and soloist Candy Boswell presented music.

Alisa McLawhorn of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Sherry Buck of Greenville was bridesmaid. Erica Briley of Route 6, Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

The best man was Kerry P. House of Route 1, Farmville. Ushers were

MRS. BRILEY

Jonathan McLawhorn and Daniel McLawhorn, brothers of the bride.

The bride wore a formal gown of chantilly lace with a Victorian neckline accented by a yoke ruffle effect around the bodice. The empire waistline was accented by a bow and ribbon and the full A-line skirt extended into a semi-cathedral train with rows of chantilly lace. She wore a Juliet cap with sequins and pearls attached to a two-tiered illusion veil.

The bride carried a cascade of white roses, pink lilies, pink rosebuds, pearls and ivy.

Each of the attendants wore a blue floral printed cotton gown and carried bouquets of pink and blue rosebuds, baby's breath and pearls. The flower girl carried a white basket.

The mother of the bride wore a pink tea-length dress of chiffon, and the mother of the bridegroom wore a seafoam green tea-length dress of chiffon.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip to Atlantic Beach.

The bride graduated from D.H. Conley High School and is employed by the Pitt County School Bus Transportation Department. The bridegroom graduated from Greenville Christian Academy and attended Liberty University and East Carolina University. He is employed by Larry House Construction.

Pre-nuptial parties honoring the couple before their marriage included a bachelor and bachelorette parties, several miscellaneous showers, and an after-rehearsal party given by the bridegroom's parents.

Attic Struggle

HIGH POINT (AP) - A police officer and the suspect he was tangling with in an attic Thursday crashed through a ceiling, landed without major injuries in a crowded living room and continued their fight, authorities said.

Sgt. Dick Shuping said the suspect, Bobby Lamont Wall, 20, continued to resist Officer Danny Rogers even after the two fell about eight feet to the floor. At that point, he said, Officer Bruce Williams joined in, and he and Rogers were able to handcuff Wall.

Wall was charged with non-support and assault on a female from previous warrants.

Evening Wedding Vows Solemnized

WASHINGTON, N.C. - The wedding ceremony of Martha Tomlinson Massey and John Robert White Jr., both of Greenville, took place Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Pamlico Plantation.

The outdoor, candlelight ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Lewis E. Lint. Hubert Leggett of Greenville was trumpeter.

Parents of the bridal couple are Geraldine P. Tomlinson of Rocky Mount, and the late James C. Tomlinson, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis K. Wetzel of Dothan, Ala.

Ava Taylor of Asheville was honor attendant for her sister, Jennifer M. Massey, daughter of the bride, and Jennifer A. White, daughter of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Both are from Greenville. Christopher White, son of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride wore a black and white full-length matte taffeta gown with spaghetti straps and black V-shaped bodice with sequins. The white taffeta skirt was accented with ruffles and antebellum pick-ups of black sequin bows. She wore a headpiece of white flowers with pearl cascades and carried an arm bouquet of long-stemmed red roses, miniature carnations, baby's breath with satin streamers.

The honor attendant wore a red full-length gown and carried an arm bouquet of white long-stemmed roses. Bridesmaids wore white satin dresses with red sequins trimming the midriff and carried single long-stemmed white roses, baby's breath and white streamers.

A reception was held at the Pamlico Plantation Clubhouse.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to New Orleans.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of East Carolina University. She is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and he is owner of Down East Heating and Air Conditioning Services and Energy Marketing Services.

FAITH SHOWS YOU HOW TO BEAT THE LATE SUMMER DOLDRUMS
 About this time every year, some of us experience a condition known as the late summer doldrums. Suddenly we long for the cooler, more colorful days of autumn that we see on the horizon, and this fills us with a listlessness and lack of purpose. If you are feeling these symptoms, there are remedies at hand. Do something! Write those letters you've been putting off. Clean out that closet and check your fall wardrobe. Take those things you never wear and give them to the poor. Above all, go to church each week. It will help revive your spirits and renew your inspiration. Moreover, with a lot of the congregation still away on trips, your presence there will be appreciated more than ever. Faith knows no season, and there's no better time than now to reaffirm yours.
 "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven."

Browns' Mack Gets 30-Day Suspension

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEREA, Ohio — The Cleveland Browns will be without starting fullback Kevin Mack for the next 30 days as he serves an NFL-imposed suspension for cocaine use. Commissioner Pete Rozelle suspended Mack on Thursday, one day after the player pleaded guilty to a criminal charge of cocaine use. Mack, who has rushed for 2,989 yards in four seasons with the Browns, said he would continue to work to rehabilitate himself from his admitted tendency to use the drug. Last season, he rushed for 485 yards on 123 carries but missed all or part of 10 games with a variety of injuries. He ran for 1,104 yards on 222 carries in his rookie season in 1985. This was the first time Mack was held to be in violation of the league's substance abuse policy, so he would have escaped a suspension had he not pleaded guilty to the criminal charge. "It was Rozelle's decision, and I think it's fair. I don't like it, but I do think it's fair," said Browns owner Art Modell, who discussed the suspension during a news conference attended by Mack and Coach Bud Carson. "I asked for an expeditious determination on this matter ... so that on Monday we can make the appropriate player cuts," Modell said. "Having it include a preseason game made it slightly more palatable." Mack, 26, was arrested June 28 while sitting in a car on an inner-city street. He was charged with cocaine possession, cocaine sale, aggravated drug trafficking and possession of criminal tools, but the charges were reduced to cocaine use as part of a plea bargain. Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Richard J. McMonagle said he would sentence Mack after receiving a presentence parole and dependency report. The maximum sentence is 18 months in jail and a $2,500 fine. "The judge has to make his decision and it's something I'll have to live with," Mack said Thursday.

Mack is the 16th NFL player suspended this week for violating the league substance abuse policy. Thirteen were suspended after testing positive for steroid use and two others were found to be second-time offenders of the drug rules. Modell said that, with Mack's permission, the Browns waived a hearing before the commissioner. Rozelle received a report from a doctor at the Cleveland Clinic who supervised Mack's month-long rehabilitation program following the arrest, Modell said.

Norman Rolls At Milwaukee

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKLIN, Wis. — The Greater Milwaukee Open was supposed to represent uncharted waters for Greg Norman, who had never played in the tournament before this year.

But once Norman recovered from an early tee time, got his bearings and located Lake Michigan, he played the Tuckaway Country Club course as if he'd been on it all his life.

"Everybody told me the greens played extremely fast but they were much slower," Norman said after an opening-round, 8-under-par 64 on Thursday that put him one shot ahead of four players.

"The grain can be misleading," Norman said of the surface of the greens. "The putts don't always go the way you think they do. They break toward Lake Michigan. That knowledge helped me the rest of the day."

Learning how the putts break was a factor in Norman's favor, but so was playing with fellow Australian Wayne Grady, who shot 65. That score was matched by Americans Steve Pate, Phil Blackmar and Curt Byrum.

Norman had nine birdies after an opening-hole bogey, but Grady put together some of the first-round's best shots — two 40-foot putts, another from 60 feet and an eagle-2 on the 390-yard fourth hole using a sand wedge.

"Wayne's very easygoing and he's one of the best putters out here," Norman said. "You see a guy like him and he makes a couple of 40-footers and it's like 'Ho-hum, it's no big deal.'"

"He's very loose and I admire him for what he's done."

Irish Roll Holtz' Worries Prove Groundless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Lou Holtz is one of the best storytellers of all time and the Notre Dame coach told a whopper before the Kickoff Classic.

He said the defending national champions were lacking in a lot of areas, and weren't even worthy of being in the Top 20.

Nice try, Lou. But the story just isn't true. Notre Dame is for real again. And the Irish might even win a second straight national title if they learn to harness what they showed in the opening 25 minutes of Thursday night's Kickoff Classic against outmanned and overmatched Virginia.

With Tony Rice at the helm and the offensive line opening holes at will, the second-ranked Irish scored touchdowns on their first five possessions, opened a 33-0 halftime lead and defeated Virginia 36-13 in college football's annual season opener at Giants Stadium.

It was a performance reminiscent of Notre Dame's 34-21 victory over West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl in January. The Irish jumped out early and were never threatened.

The only difference was this Virginia didn't have a West in front of its name.

Holtz didn't care for the comparison, and tended to focus on the final 35 minutes, during which Notre Dame was outscored 13-3.

"The first 20 minutes we were a top 20 team," Holtz said. "The rest of the game we played like a bottom 20 team. My biggest concern is the defense. We just weren't consistent."

Actually, the Irish didn't need to be consistent after the first 25 minutes. The game was over by then.

Cornerback Todd Lyght intercepted a Shawn Moore pass on the third play from scrimmage and returned it 10 yards to the Virginia 31. Six running plays later, Ricky Watters took a pitch from Rice and followed a great block by Anthony Johnson around right end to score from two yards out.

After Virginia, a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference, came up a yard short of a first down on its next series, Notre Dame went 57 yards on nine running plays with Johnson scoring on a 1-yard dive over left tackle.

Notre Dame, which limited Virginia to just three first downs in the opening half, again forced Virginia to punt and Watters returned it 34 yards to the Irish 46. Rice then threw his first pass of the night and hit Raghbi Ismail for 52 yards on a deep post pattern, setting up a 2-yard scoring run by Rodney Culver.

"Before the game the offensive line told me they'd open up some holes and they did," said Rice, who completed seven of 11 passes for 147 yards. "Basically it was easy for us because we made it easy for ourselves. The first team said we wanted to get the ball in the end zone and we did."

Before the half was over, Johnson added a second touchdown on a 1-yard run and Rice scored on a 3-yard scamper after finding all his receivers covered. The only thing the Irish did wrong was miss the point after on the

Wolfpack Must Overcome Nerves

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — When North Carolina State trailed Maryland last year, the Wolfpack went to a no-huddle offense to catch up. Coach Dick Sheridan might consider the same approach against the Terrapins on Saturday, but to help them get rid of the jitters.

Sheridan's team is ranked 24th to open the season and is considered the top challenger to Clemson's run of three straight ACC titles. But the fourth-year coach is seeing a case of nerves overtake a team which has already been without substantial preseason contact work due to injuries along the offensive line. "I've been able to sense a tenseness among them," Sheridan says. "It's like they're taking on the burden of replacing our seniors from last year — a Fred Stone, a Michael Brooks — and just don't want to let anybody down."

N.C. State is without half its starters from last year, but has been picked to finish second in the league and is an 11-point favorite to beat the Terrapins. That can add to the nerves, too.

"I want our players to relax. I want 'em to just get after it, to not try and keep something bad from happening, but rather try to make something good happen," he said.

The mood is much improved at Maryland, where part of the focus this year is trying to post a winning record for the first time since 1985.

Agassi, Chang Advance With Wins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Andre Agassi and Michael Chang, the established veterans of the tennis kiddie corps, already are looking over their shoulders.

Agassi, 19 and ranked sixth in the world, and Chang, 17 and rated seventh, easily won second-round matches in the U.S. Open on Thursday. They've already survived longer than Mats Wilander, John McEnroe and Brad Gilbert.

Not that they feel comfortable. Even though their best tennis is ahead of them — and even though Chang won the French Open this year — both teen-agers know losses to up-and-coming players like themselves always are lurking on the next court.

"It doesn't matter who you play, you can't take it lightly," Agassi said after beating Neil Broad 6-3, 6-2, 6-3. "I think we bring out the best in each other."

"It's kind of like what happened with Martina and Chrissie. They brought out the best of each other for a lot of years. When you have a lot of competition around you, it definitely brings your game to a whole different level."

Chang, who beat Thomas Hogstedt 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, brought his game to a higher level at Paris. He has catapulted from 30th in the world rankings, but he knows there are plenty of players who can duplicate his streak of success.

"I think that we are a really good group of young, good players, particularly because we grew up playing together and everybody pushed everybody to their limit," Chang said. "If you didn't work hard, you would basically be at the bottom of the group. Having that, everybody wanted to be the best in the group and everybody pushed everybody."

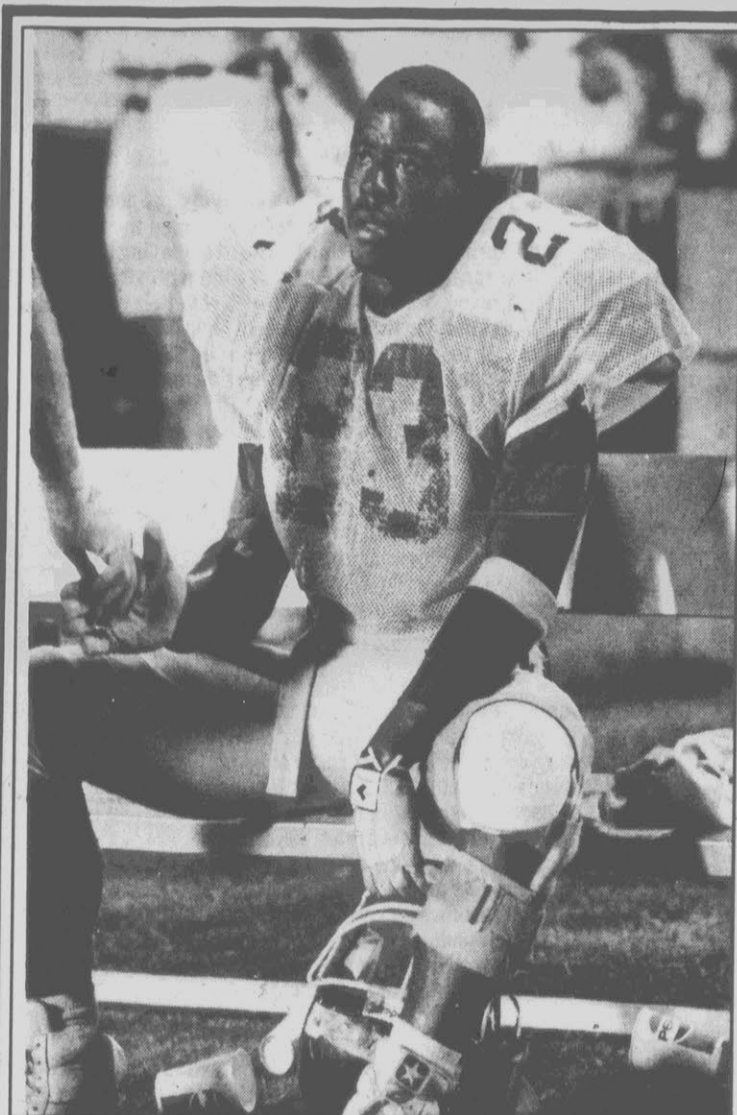

Other American members of the new wave include Jim Courier, 19; Pete Sampras, 18, who ousted Wilander Wednesday night, and David Wheaton, 20. The foreign contingent includes 10th-seeded Alberto Mancini of Argentina, 20; Nicolas Pereira of Venezuela, 18, and Goran Ivanisevic of Yugoslavia, still two weeks shy of his 17th birthday.

Agassi thinks the young Americans could be dominant in the 1990s.

"Chang has proven himself to be a great player," he said. "You have to be a great player to win a Grand Slam tournament."

"We've got Courier, Sampras. Sampras proved last night that he can play with the top players, and Courier has proven that."

"In the next year or so, we're going to be a real dominating force in men's tennis, providing that things go as well as they have so far. There's no doubt about it."

Answering A Need

Bucs' McPhatter Fills A Hole

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Brian McPhatter has bounced around the East Carolina football program for the last three years, but his latest shift in position has filled a hole for the Pirates.

When defensive end James Singletary was lost for the year with academic problems early in the preseason, what had been a very solid position suddenly became a big question mark.

Originally, ECU coaches felt they had solid bookends in Singletary and Anthony Thompson, a pair of seniors, with ample depth behind them. But when Singletary was lost, the situation changed quickly.

That's where McPhatter stepped in. A senior from Fayetteville, McPhatter played running back his freshman year and defensive end his sophomore and junior years, though there were different schemes each season.

For his senior year, he moved to strong safety during the spring where he battled Derrick Fields for a starting spot.

With Singletary gone, McPhatter was switched to defensive end to back up Thompson. Joe Bright and Stephen Braddy were looked to as the likely replacements for Singletary.

Once McPhatter moved back to defensive end, though, the depth chart again got shuffled. At 6-2 and 201 pounds, McPhatter was somewhat light for the position, but his speed, experience and strength helped him push Thompson for a starting spot.

"When we lost James Singletary, the coaching staff and team didn't know how we were going to adjust right away," McPhatter said. "I was playing behind Anthony Thompson."

"One of us had to move. It didn't make a difference to either one of us."

The solution came in a reshuffling of the depth chart. Thompson moved over to the strong side with Bright and George Koonce. McPhatter stayed on the weak side, where he is presently backed up by Jerry Dillon and Braddy.

"It kind of caught me by surprise. I told coach I'd do whatever it would take for us to win," McPhatter said. "They felt like me moving would help the team, so it didn't bother me that much."

Pirates Lose Davenport To Shoulder Injury

East Carolina senior wide receiver BoJack Davenport injured a shoulder in Wednesday's scrimmage and is likely out for the year. Davenport (6-1, 180) was battling junior Al Whiting for a starting spot opposite Walter Wilson. A senior from Fayetteville, Davenport could take this season as a redshirt and return next year, but has not yet decided on his future plans.

His absence leaves ECU with only two experienced receivers in Wilson and Whiting. The injury has been diagnosed as a separated shoulder.

Junior Charlie Tyson is the likely replacement for Davenport.

ECU head football coach Bill Lewis and his staff practiced their team in shorts and shoulder pads here Thursday afternoon. The practice lasted for one hour and thirty minutes under beautiful but very hot conditions.

"Today we went over a lot of the mistakes that were made in (Wednesday) night's scrimmage," Lewis said. The Pirates were to practice Friday under similar conditions and then scrimmage again on Saturday in a closed session.

ECU coaches are also doing some experimenting along the defensive line, using senior Mike Applewhite at noseguard in addition to tackle.

The Pirates open the season one week from Saturday at home against Bowling Green at 7 p.m.

DR Panel Set To Pick 'Em Once Again

Woody Peele

Tigers Set To Forget

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's hard to believe that college football season is here. The heat of August is still with us and few trees have started to show some color.

Back in the olden days, as my children used to say, when I was in college, football didn't start until late September, continuing on until early December with no open dates and 10 games.

But those days are gone forever. Now, we have teams opening at the very start of September, having several open dates and closing in December — if they don't go to a bowl game.

Bowls at that time, too, were a reward for a successful season. Now, they are a reward for a successful ticket sales campaign.

Nevertheless, it's upon us, and our panel is back to try and guess the winners.

We have one new member of our panel this year. With the departure of Tim Chandler from our sports staff, Mike Grizzard moves in to take his place. We've informed him that rookies are expected to trail the pack, but he's not buying that line.

Meanwhile, Greg Laudick, who brought up the tail-end last season, is vowing to move up the ladder.

Vickie Spivey (114-43) returns as our defending champ, while Tom Baines (108-49) finished second. Chandler was third with a 106-51 record followed by Tom Morris at 103-54. I finished fourth at 98-59, while Laudick was 93-64.

It's often tough to pick some games at the start of the season, as our last week's high school picks showed. I was only 6-3, but a little more is know about what's going on now.

Rose High School travels to Jacksonville for its annual test against the Cardinals. Although Jacksonville is one of the state's more successful teams, the Cards seem to always have trouble with the Rampants in the regular season. Rose was impressive in its first game against Tarboro, but Jacksonville should be a little more of a test.

Nevertheless, the Rampants should have the stuff to pull this one out against the smaller Jacksonville club. I pick the Rampants in a 24-7 victory.

North Pitt opens its home campaign against strong 1-A power North Edgecombe. The Panthers are battling the numbers problems while the Warriors bring in one of the East's top quarterbacks. The Panthers are struggling to get out of the blocks and need this one, but I must go with Edgecombe, in a 15-13 decision.

Roanoke opens its season at Farmville Central. The Jaguars have the advantage of having played a game, while Roanoke has the advantage of having scouted their opponent. Still, Farmville has to rate as one of the East's top 2-A clubs this season. Farmville is the choice here, 28-14.

In other area games, it will be West Craven over Greene Central, Washington over Northside, Jamesville over Gates and Bertie over Williamston.

Turning to the panel, our high school feature game of the week is D.H. Conley at Ayden-Grifton. The Chargers are coming off a big win over a 1-A opponent, while the Vikings suffered a loss at the hands of 2-A Clayton. Last year, the Chargers were lopsided winners in the contest, and the Vikings will be sure to be seeking some revenge this year. The Chargers have the momentum, but the Vikes may have the incentive. Still, I pick the Chargers, 21-17. The panel, meanwhile, splits down the middle, each team getting three votes.

Our other consensus picks: South Carolina over Duke; Arizona over Stanford; Mississippi and Memphis State, a toss-up; Western Michigan over Temple; Toledo over Ohio; Clemson over Furman; N.C. State over Maryland; Louisiana State over Texas A&M; Rice over Southern Methodist; Texas-El Paso over Tulsa and Florida State over Southern Mississippi.

Basketball Tourney In Grimesland

GRIMESLAND — Proctor Memorial Christian Church will sponsor a basketball tournament Sept. 15-17, church officials announced.

The event will be double-elimination and entry fee is $125 per team. For information call 752-2429 or 752-3566.

Farmville, Conley Take JV Wins

Farmville Central 34, Camden 0

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central took a 34-0 shutout win over Camden in a JV high school football game Thursday night.

Brandon Terrell scored three touchdowns and rushed for 116 yards to lead the Jaguars to victory. Terrell scored on runs of one yard, 15 yards and 32 yards.

Farmville's other scores came from a 30-yard pass from Reggie Tyson to Corey Carson. The final score was the result of a two-yard run by Al Eason.

Pete Gorham had eight tackles while Al Eason had seven to lead the defensive effort.

D.H. Conley 38, Ayden-Grifton 12

D.H. Conley's junior varsity football team romped to a 38-12 victory over Ayden-Grifton Thursday night.

After a scoreless first period, Conley broke the game open with three second period scores. Kevin Anderson scored on a two-yard run and Anthony Edwards added an eight-yard scoring burst. Jesse Corey, who ran over the PAT after each of the first scores, added a touchdown of his own on a six-yard run to close the half. Cary Turnage added the PAT for a 24-0 lead.

Conley upped the lead to 30-0 with a 21-yard run by Turnage in the third period. Ayden-Grifton also broke the ice on a 17-yard pass from Carl Artis to Derrick Gardner during the period.

The Vikes closed out their scoring in the final quarter on a 39-yard run by Mickey Elliott with Derrick Cox adding the PAT. Terry Williams then grabbed a 60-yard pass from Artis on the final play of the game for Ayden-Grifton's other score.

Conley, 2-0, entertains North Pitt on Thursday. Ayden-Grifton, 0-2, plays at home against Plymouth.

North Edgecombe 42, North Pitt 0

LEGGETT — Marvin Tucker scored twice to lead North Edgecombe's junior varsity football team to a 42-0 win over North Pitt Thursday night.

Jamael Bryant put North Edgecombe on the scoreboard with a 72-yard run on the first Warrior play from scrimmage in the game. Michael Council added a one-yard run later in the period for a 14-0 lead.

Tucker scored his first touchdown on a nine-yard run in the second period and David Kearney caught a 40-yard pass from Larry Stokes for a fourth score to up the lead to 26-0 at the half.

Stokes added a 10-yard run in the third period and Tucker scored on a 27-yard run in the final quarter to close out the scoring.

North Pitt, now 0-1, travels to D.H. Conley on Thursday.

Conley Captures Two Volleyball Wins

PINETOPS — D.H. Conley's Valkyries struggled but came away with a pair of volleyball victories Thursday night at SouthWest Edgecombe.

Conley defeated the host team, 11-15, 15-13, 15-1, in the opening match of the afternoon. Angie Jones posted a seven-point service string during the third game of the match. Virginia Hall had four kills and Darvetta Patrick added four effective hits.

In the second match, against Smithfield-Selma, Conley took a 15-9 win in the first game, then fell, 16-14, before coming back to take the match with a 15-13 victory. Patrick had a five-point service string in the match and added three effective hits and one kill. Hall added four effective hits and two kills.

Nikki Adams led the team in assists on the evening with 24.

The lone senior on the Valkyrie team, Tracy Sumrell, went down with an injury in the opening game of the day and Coach Martha McCaskill said it would be sometime today before the injury was evaluated.

"We struggled at times, but we didn't die," she said of the matches. Now 5-0, Conley travels to North Pitt on Tuesday.

Rose, Conley Take Tennis Victories

J.H. Rose and D.H. Conley posted tennis victories Thursday afternoon in their opening matches of the year.

Rose defeated New Bern, 8-1, in its match in Greenville. New Bern's only win came in the number one singles where Katrine Higgins bested Taylor Evans in three sets, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4. The Rampettes were without their top player, Paige Powell, the state runner-up last year, who was out of town.

Conley took an 8-1 victory over Greene Central in its match. Again, the lone loss by the Valkyries came in the number one singles. Jennifer Roberts of Greene Central topped Nichol Bloodworth, 7-6 (7-3), 4-6, 7-5.

Rose is now 1-0 and travels to Wilson Fike on Tuesday, while Conley is now 1-0 and visits Washington on Tuesday. Greene Central falls to 0-2 and travels to Williamston on Tuesday.

WNCT-AM To Carry Rose Football Games

WNCT-AM radio, 1070 on the dial, has been awarded exclusive rights for Rose High School football this year.

All 10 regular season games are on the schedule, each airing at 7:45 p.m., except for the Bertie game on Sept. 15, which will air at 7:15 p.m. Any post-season games which Rose might play in will also be carried.

Jim Woods will handle the play-by-play for the games while Bob Myers will supply color commentary.

Kulwicki Makes Quick Progress

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Alan Kulwicki has come a long way in a short time at Darlington Raceway.

During his rookie test in 1986, Kulwicki spun out on the track renowned for testing a driver's courage as well as his patience.

"I didn't even hit anything, either," he said. "I think they figured if you could spin out and not hit anything, you're good enough to race."

They were right. Kulwicki showed just how right on Thursday when he captured the pole for the 40th annual Southern 500 NASCAR race, touring the 1.366-mile oval in 1:56.156.

"To make that kind of progress and come back and win a pole here really is a great feeling of accomplishment," said Kulwicki, the 25th of 37 drivers to attempt to qualify.

Darrell Waltrip, who can take home a $1 million bonus by winning Sunday's race, will start ninth after qualifying at 158.479 mph in a Chevrolet Lumina on a sunny afternoon at the oldest superspeedway on the circuit.

Kulwicki's speed was off the race record of 160.827 mph set last year by Bill Elliott. But it puts Kulwicki in position to win the Unocal 76 Challenge award, which has climbed to $144,400. The bonus money — $7,600 per event — goes to the pole winner who also wins the race.

Kulwicki, a Greenfield, Wis., native who now lives in Concord, N.C., said winning the pole gave him a taste of what the Southern 500 means to race fans in the South.

"I'm not that old, and I wasn't born in the South," he said. "So I haven't really experienced all the tradition of the Southern 500. But winning this pole makes me feel some of it."

"It's something I've never dealt with before because I haven't even been close to pulling it off before."

Kulwicki, who has never finished in the top 10 in the Southern 500 since joining the NASCAR circuit in 1985, has now won four poles this year and two in a row, having started from the top spot a week ago in the Busch 500 at Bristol, Tenn. Ironically, Waltrip has won each of the races in which Kulwicki started from the pole.

"We're going to change that this weekend," Kulwicki said.

While Kulwicki will be on the pole, many eyes will be on Waltrip as he tries to win the Winston Million. The bonus goes to the driver who wins three of NASCAR's four 500-mile superspeedway races.

Waltrip won the Daytona 500 to open the season and then captured the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte, N.C., to set up his run for the $1 million. Bill Elliott is the only driver to win the bonus, in 1985, the first year it was offered.

"We'll be tough on Sunday, you can count on it," Waltrip said. "That was a good lap for us. It was quicker than we had practiced, and quicker than we had tested, so we're real happy. I'm tickled. We're going to be OK."

Kulwicki said he doesn't plan to change how he races against Waltrip because of the big money that will be on the line.

"I don't intend to cut him any breaks at all," Kulwicki said. "Giving the guy a break would be like to throw the race, and we're certainly not going to do that."

Ken Schrader will be alongside Kulwicki on the front row after a lap at 160.021 mph in a Chevrolet. Schrader set the track qualifying mark of 162.657 mph in last year's TransSouth 500.

Schrader qualified with his race engine after the engine he planned to use for qualifying blew in practice earlier in the day.

"The car felt OK for qualifying, but I wouldn't want to race it like that," Schrader said. "It was just a little sideways all the way around the track, but it was fast. You can do that for a lap."

A pair of Fords will be in the second row. Mark Martin went 159.761 mph and Elliott was fourth at 159.678 mph. Rusty Wallace rounds out the top five in a Pontiac at 159.68.

The second five spots went to Harry Gant, Geoff Bodine, Ricky Rudd, Waltrip and Dale Earnhardt.

McPhatter ...

"Basically, because I had played that position before, I knew what was going on. It helped me out. It kind of put me ahead or even with everybody else that had been there a while."

Still, it was an adjustment. McPhatter said if he has any aspirations at playing pro football he will likely have to make it as a safety. He gladly accepted the move to the secondary in the spring and was looking forward to playing there.

"At the end of the spring I was very comfortable with strong safety," he said. "I had no doubts in my mind that I could play the position. I think if I'd have known in the spring, I could have added weight."

"But this summer, I thought I was playing strong safety so I kept myself around 203 pounds. I feel I can play the position with no problem. My weight, I don't let that get in the way."

At defensive end, McPhatter has a variety of responsibilities, from rushing the passer, stringing out the run or dropping back in pass coverage to picking up backs coming out of the backfield.

It's a position that requires correct reads and good instincts, but most of all versatility. One minute, there's a guard coming at you on a sweep and the next you're covering the tailback headed out in the flat on a pass route.

"It's suitable to me, as far as my speed and my abilities," McPhatter said. "The kind of end I am, I'm really a rush end. I don't have to play on the tight end much. (Weakside) Really, I free lance."

"I think that's a big asset to me doing so well so far at the position because I'm able to go without any holdbacks. If I see something, I'm able to go to it right away and not sit and wait about it."

McPhatter arrived at ECU in 1986 ready to be playing running back. He had been a standout running back at Fayetteville Douglas Byrd High School and he ended up getting in some time in the backfield his first year at ECU, albeit not much (19 carries, 49 yards).

By the next spring, he was a defensive end, where he stayed for two seasons. Then came the move to safety and yet another move, this time back to the end spot for his senior year.

"I was bouncing around, move here, jump over there," McPhatter said. "You never know what to expect. You come in one day a running back and the next day you might be a linebacker."

"I've learned to be patient. If you are not patient in this game or outside of this game, things just won't go right."

"When Coach McMahon told me (of the latest switch), I thought it was going to be a setback for me," McPhatter added. "They (the other ends) had a spring to learn the position."

"I had thoughts of, 'was I going to start or was I going to even play.' I told myself that I was going to do whatever the team needed me to do, play the role and let everything take care of itself."

The Daily Reflector Top 12

Rocky Mount, the preseason pick to win the Big East Conference, landed the top spot in the first Daily Reflector Top 12 area prep football poll. The Gryphons received two first-place votes and amassed 35 points. Rose is second with 31 points followed by Farmville Central with 28. The Jaguars had one first-place vote.

Following Farmville are Wilson Fike, Bertie, Havelock, North Lenoir, North Edgecombe, West Craven, East Carteret, Ayden-Grifton, Plymouth and Hertford County.

The poll rates teams from the Big East, Colonial, Coastal, Eastern Plains, Northeastern and Tobacco Belt conferences regardless of classification and is conducted by the Daily Reflector sports department. Twelve points are awarded for first, 11 for second, etc.

- Rocky Mount: The Gryphons opened the season with a 40-7 drubbing of SouthWest Edgecombe as J.J. Jones rushed for 141 yards on 12 carries and scored three touchdowns. They play at Tarboro tonight.
- Rose: Maurice Hines led the Rampants past Tarboro 32-13 with 128 yards rushing and two touchdowns. They visit Jacksonville tonight.
- Farmville: Quarterback Morris Foreman ran for two touchdowns, ran for another and collected eight tackles to guide Farmville over North Edgecombe 30-14. The Jaguars host Roanoke tonight while North Edgecombe entertains North Pitt.
- Fike: Fike got off to a fast start by defeating Goldsboro 27-6. The Golden Demons host Fayetteville Douglas Byrd tonight.
- Bertie: The Falcons blasted Edenton Holmes 47-19 in the debut of head coach Spencer White. Tracy Leary's 58-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage sparked the Falcons, who host Williamston tonight.
- Havelock: Defending Coastal Conference champion Havelock edged New Bern 10-7 thanks to a 12-yard toss from Vinson Norris to Silas George with 1:13 left. The Rams travel to 4-A Wilmington Laney tonight.
- Northern Nash: The Knights bombed Fayetteville Pine Forest 39-6 in its opener. The Knights are at SouthWest Edgecombe tonight.
- North Lenoir: Preseason All-American Tim Smith rushed for 99 yards in North Lenoir's 20-8 win over Jones Senior. The Hawks visit rival South Lenoir tonight.
- West Craven: Lee Becton piled up 225 yards and scored two touchdowns in West Craven's 27-13 triumph over North Pitt. The Eagles are at Greene Central tonight.
- East Carteret: The Mariners buried Lejeune 41-6 behind 146 yards rushing and two touchdowns from Tom Davis. The Mariners visit Manteo tonight.
- Ayden-Grifton: The Chargers opened with a 20-7 win over Richlands. The Chargers host D.H. Conley tonight.
- Plymouth: Three touchdown passes by quarterback Shawn Walker helped Plymouth outscore Gates County 34-20 in its opener. The Vikings entertain Perquimans tonight.
- Hertford County: Defending Northeastern Conference champion Hertford County fell to Oxford Webb 19-18 last week. The Bears travel to Henderson Vance tonight.

(First-place votes in parenthesis)

1. Rocky Mount (2) 1-0 35;
2. Rose 1-0 31;
3. Farmville Central (1) 1-0 28;
4. Wilson Fike 1-0 26;
5. Bertie 1-0 24;
5. Havelock 1-0 24;
7. Northern Nash 1-0 14;
8. North Lenoir 1-0 10;
9. North Edgecombe 0-1 7;
10. West Craven 1-0 6;
10. East Carteret 1-0 6;
12. Ayden-Grifton 1-0 5;
12. Plymouth 1-0 5;
12. Hertford County 0-1 5

Others receiving votes: Tie: Northside and Northampton East 3. Tie: Northside and West Carteret 1.

Rice Owls Get First Crack At SMU

Mustangs Rise Again After Two Years Of NCAA's Death Penalty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At Rice, they don't remember the last time the Owls were big favorites in a football game. But that will be the case Saturday night, even though the Owls are lugging an 18-game winless streak.

That's because Rice will be playing Southern Methodist, a school with an even sorer record over the last two years.

The Mustangs, once a power in the Southwest Conference, will be on everybody's patsy list this year after two years without a team. SMU was the first NCAA school to receive the "death penalty" — suspension of an athletic program — for two major rules violations within five years.

Restricted to a mere 40-man roster, the Mustangs return to action as college football opens with a rush. Eleven ranked teams are in action on the first weekend of play.

The season officially opened Thursday night with second-ranked Notre Dame's 36-13 rout of Virginia in the Kickoff Classic. Quarterback Tony Rice guided the Fighting Irish to touchdowns on their first five possessions and Notre Dame led 33-0 at the half.

Football will be played at Ownby Stadium on the SMU campus for the first time in 41 years. The Mustangs played their last three seasons in Texas Stadium, home of the Dallas Cowboys, and before that in the Cotton Bowl.

SMU will be coached by Forrest Gregg, who starred for the Mustangs before going on to NFL fame with the Green Bay Packers.

The Owls also will have a new coach, Fred Goldsmith, who was defensive coordinator at Arkansas last year.

"We didn't think the day would ever get here but we're ready to line up against somebody with a different colored jersey on," Gregg said. "The players and the fans are ready, too."

Rice is a big favorite for the first time since "Moby Dick was a minnow," joked Owls public relations director Bill Cousins.

"I don't know why everybody is making us such a big favorite," Goldsmith said. "We're not Notre Dame."

Rice, long a doormat in the SWC, was a 13-point pick over SMU.

In games Saturday involving ranked teams, the contest pitting No. 7 Louisiana State against Texas A&M seemed to be the most competitive. LSU was a two-point favorite over the Aggies.

R.C. Slocum, who took over when Jackie Sherrill resigned, opens his first season as the man in charge of the Aggies. Slocum was the defensive coordinator under Sherrill.

Slocum actually ran the team against Texas Christian last season when Sherrill, responding to a variety of allegations that eventually would lead to his resignation, decided to sit out the game rather than disrupt his team's preparedness. The Aggies beat TCU 18-0.

LSU, among the favorites for the Southeastern Conference title, has won the last three meetings and leads the series 25-14-3. The Tigers pin their hopes on one of the country's top quarterbacks, Tommy Hodson.

Texas A&M's Darren Lewis is the top returning rusher in the nation, gaining over 1,600 yards last year in earning a spot in the All-America backfield with Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State.

Starting with sixth-ranked Florida State's contest with Southern Mississippi, many of Saturday's games involving ranked teams appear to be mismatches.

Clemson, Oklahoma, Brigham Young and Pittsburgh were also among the overwhelming favorites.

Clemson, ranked 12th, rates a prohibitive favorite over Furman, a Division I-AA team; No. 15

Oklahoma figures to blow out New Mexico State, No. 19 BYU is favored by more than four touchdowns over New Mexico, and No. 20 Pitt hosts an outmanned Pacific team.

Elsewhere Saturday, Stanford visits No. 18 Arizona and Maryland travels to No. 24 North Carolina State.

On Monday, No. 22 Illinois is at Southern Cal and No. 14 Colorado plays host to Texas.

The Southern Cal game "will be a good indicator of what we'll have to do," Illinois linebacker Steve Glasson said.

Glasson expects "a defensive struggle ... a low-scoring game, especially if we can shut down their run."

Illinois were 6-4-1 in John Mackovic's first season as coach, earning a bid to the All American Bowl. Florida edged the Illini 14-10 in that game.

The Trojans were 10-2 in 1988, dropping a 22-14 decision to Michigan in the Rose Bowl. USC has a 9-1 edge over Illinois in previous meetings.

Wilkins Signs Big Bucks Pact

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Atlanta Hawks forward Dominique Wilkins signed a five-year contract Thursday, reportedly worth $14.5 million, and said joining the NBA's top moneymakers was "a great neighborhood to be in."

At a news conference after the signing, Wilkins and Hawks President Stan Kasten refused to confirm The Atlanta Journal-Constitution's report of the $14.5 million figure, but Wilkins said the amount was "somewhere around there."

At that rate, Wilkins, who has led Atlanta's rise to a top contender over the past four years, would make an average of $2.9 million annually and would be the league's fifth-highest paid player. The newspapers said New York's Patrick Ewing tops the list at an average of $3.5 million a year.

Wilkins negotiated a contract that had two years remaining at $1.4 million each. He will be 34 years old when the new contract expires.

"I'm very happy. I can't tell you how happy," he said.

Wilkins, who has averaged 26 points a game over his seven NBA seasons, said that with financial concerns out of the way he can concentrate on basketball. The Hawks have won 50 or more games in each of the past four seasons but have faltered in the playoffs.

"The main thing is I can go into the season thinking about basketball," said Wilkins, 29. "The main thing is to prove ourselves to Atlanta and to the league."

Wilkins, who led the league in scoring in the 1985-86 season, said he felt no added pressure to be the Hawks' team leader.

Orioles Fall To Cleveland, 11-0

Despite Loss, Ripken Is Beginning To Believe Baltimore Has A Shot At Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When the Baltimore Orioles, losers of 107 games a year ago, moved into first place on May 26, few expected them to stay there very long.

Among those who figured it might not last was Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken. Today, he isn't so sure.

"It's something we never expected at the start," Ripken said Thursday night after Cleveland routed Baltimore 11-0 to dump the Orioles into a tie with Toronto for the top spot in the American League East.

Ripken

"We wanted to become competitive and improve in certain areas this year, with an eye toward the future," Ripken said. "And all of a sudden we're in the middle of a pennant race."

When you go into the last month of the season with a chance to win the division...

The Orioles, who for the first time since that Friday night in May are not alone in first, have reached the point where they are taking both victory and defeat in stride.

"We're not worried about this game," outfielder Joe Orsulak said of the rout in Cleveland. "We're not ready to put too much emphasis on any one game. There are 28 games to go. What counts is who's in first at the end of the season."

It may be the Orioles or the Blue Jays, who forged the tie with a 5-1 victory over Chicago. Don't count out the Boston Red Sox, who drew within four games by beating California 5-2, and Milwaukee is only six games back after a 6-1 victory over Seattle.

In other games, it was Kansas City 3, Detroit 0, and Minnesota 8, Texas 6.

Regardless, the presence of Baltimore in the race shows how much one team can improve in one season. The Orioles are 72-62. A year ago on this date, they began play 46-86.

"A lot of people may think this team is not going to be able to hold up now, but this club has been able to hold up through some difficult periods in August," losing pitcher Dave Johnson said. "Every game the past month has affected the standings."

"Ever since we lost 13 of 14, it's been a one- or two-game lead. We still have 28 games to go, and it's just a matter of who wins more games the rest of the season. As you walk through the clubhouse, I don't think you'll see anybody down in the dumps."

Ripken agreed with that, adding that he's already been entertained far beyond all expectations.

"It's fun to be in the race," he said.

Baltimore manager Frank Robinson wasn't upset with the loss.

"Just because we have company for a day, it's no big deal," he said of the defeat which brought Baltimore's lonesome reign to an end after 97 days. "We'll see how they (the Blue Jays) like it, and then we'll evict them."

Joe Carter hit two home runs and John Farrell pitched a five-hitter for his second career shutout for the Indians, who won two of three games in the series. Carter has 20 multiple-homer games in his career.

The Orioles are 24-25 since the All-Star break. But are 7-2 in games with their lead on the line.

Jerry Browne had four of Cleveland's 15 hits. Brook Jacoby added three.

Farrell, 8-13, got his sixth complete game, striking out five and walking two.

Johnson, 4-3, proved no mystery at all for the Indians. Carter led off the fourth inning with his first homer of the night and 27th of the season, and the next four Cleveland batters got hits to chase the rookie right-hander.

Blue Jays 5, White Sox 1

George Bell extended his club-record hitting streak to 22 games — longest in the league this season — and drove in three runs, two with his 16th homer. The Blue Jays won for the ninth time in 10 games.

Dave Stieb, 14-8, allowed four hits in six innings, struck out two and walked two. Jim Acker followed with two hitless innings and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for a combined six-hitter.

Steve Rosenberg, 4-10, gave up five runs and nine hits in his second complete game.

The Blue Jays have been within three games or less of the Orioles since July 30.

Red Sox 5, Angels 2

Subtract Lance Parrish and Jack Howell from the California lineup, and Rogers Clemens didn't have such a great night. But it doesn't work that way. Clemens, 14-9, fanned Parrish and Howell four times apiece en route to a season-high 13 strikeouts in pitching his seventh complete game.

Clemens, who reached double figures for the 37th time in his career, had fanned 12 against Chicago on June 16.

Jody Reed remained red-hot, getting four hits to extend his streak to eight games as the Red Sox rebounded following a loss Wednesday night that ended a nine-game winning streak. Reed has 17 hits for his last 31 at-bats, a .516 average.

California's Kirk McCaskill, 14-8, lost for only the second time in his last seven decisions.

Royals 3, Tigers 0

Bret Saberhagen won his eighth consecutive game as Kansas City handed woeful Detroit — this season's version of the 1988 Orioles — its 12th straight loss. The Tigers are 47-89. Their percentage is .346. At this time last season, Baltimore's was .348.

Saberhagen, 17-5, has won 14 of his last 15 decisions. He pitched eight innings allowed five hits and struck out seven without a walk. Jeff Montgomery worked the ninth for his 15th save.

Kevin Seitzer led the offense with three of Kansas City's six hits. The victory moved the Royals within 2½ games of idle Oakland in the West.

Rookie Kevin Ritz, 3-3, allowed five hits, walked four and struck out seven in seven innings.

Brewers 6, Mariners 1

Mark Knudson combined with two relievers on a five-hitter and Billy Spiers drove in three runs to lead Milwaukee.

Knudson, 5-4, walked one, struck out two and allowed four hits and an unearned run in 7 1-3 innings.

Robin Yount singled in two runs in the first off Brian Holman, 5-8. Spiers singled in two more runs in the fourth and another in the sixth.

Twins 8, Rangers 6

Chip Hale's first major league RBI broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning and he made an over-the-shoulder catch in short right field to keep Texas from drawing closer during a three-run ninth.

Hale hit a sacrifice fly to score Brian Harper and added an RBI single in the seventh.

National League

Dennis Rasmussen's bid for a no-hitter was spoiled, but San Diego's National League West title hopes remain intact following the left-hander's fourth victory in five outings.

"There are a lot of games left," Rasmussen said after the Padres' 5-1 victory over Philadelphia on Thursday. The third-place Padres moved within 6½ games of idle San Francisco in the division race, and trail second-place Houston by 2½ games.

Owners Must Pay

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baseball owners were ordered to pay players more than $10.5 million as compensation for the clubs' collusion against free agents between the 1985 and 1986 seasons.

Arbitrator Thomas Roberts, asked both sides to work out how much money would go to each of the 139 players affected in the first conspiracy case and said if they could not, he would hold hearings for each player to determine individual awards.

Roberts also decided that players were damaged by their loss of multiyear contracts, signing bonuses, bonus clauses and no-trade clauses. He said players could submit additional claims in those areas.

Owners said they would place the $10,528,086.71 penalty in an escrow account that will be used once the money is apportioned among the players. Each of the 26 teams will pay approximately $404,926.41.

Gioiosa Trial

Federal prosecutors are wrapping up their case against Thomas P. Gioiosa, having presented testimony implicating both the former bodybuilder and Pete Rose in tax fraud.

The mother of Gioiosa's former girlfriend testified Thursday that Gioiosa bragged he was claiming Rose's track winnings to shelter the former Cincinnati Reds' manager from paying taxes on them.

Shirley Fehrenbach, whose daughter, Rose, dated Gioiosa for a year, was the seventh witness in Gioiosa's drug and tax-evasion trial to offer testimony implicating Rose in tax fraud.

Gioiosa, 31, is charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and tax evasion. If convicted of all charges, he would face up to 38 years in prison and $2 million in fines.

Top Matchup

Montreal at Los Angeles (10:35 p.m. EDT). Mark Langston (10-5) pitches for the Expos against Tim Lincecum (10-12). Langston is eligible for free agency at the end of the season and the Dodgers are one of the teams he's interested in.

Stats, Streaks & Swings

Baltimore's 11-0 loss in Cleveland dropped the Orioles into a first-place tie with Toronto, the first time the Orioles have had company in first place since May 26. ... Chicago, last in the AL West, is 24-20 since the All-Star break. ... Seattle has played in an American League-high 45 one-run games. The Mariners are 19-26 in one-run decisions. ... Julio Franco of the Texas Rangers has 88 RBIs, the most by an American League second baseman since Bobby Grich had 101 in 1979. ... Toronto set a team record with 19 victories in August.

Toronto's George Bell extended his hitting streak to 22 games, the longest in the American League this season. ... Detroit's 12-game losing streak is the Tigers' longest since they lost 19 straight in 1975. ... The Blue Jays have won nine of their last 10 games. ... Boston has won 10 of its last 11.

The Detroit Tigers entered the final month of last season in first place in the AL East, two games ahead of Boston and 29 in front of last-place Baltimore. The Tigers start this September with the worst record in baseball and 26 games behind the first-place Orioles and Blue Jays.

Roster Moves

San Francisco put catcher Kirt Manwaring on the disabled list and recalled veteran Bob Brenly, who was signed as a free agent after being released by Toronto. Manwaring injured his left foot when he was hit by a pitch on Wednesday.

The New York Yankees acquired third baseman Mike Blowers from Montreal to complete an earlier trade for John Candelaria. Blowers hit .267 at Class AAA Indianapolis with 14 homers.

Ben McDonald, the No. 1 pick in

Baseball Notes

June's amateur draft, was recalled by the Baltimore Orioles as most teams expanded their rosters. Among the other Sept. 1 callups were pitchers "Oil Can" Boyd (Boston) and Paul Kilgus (Cubs), infielder Mark McLemore (Angels) and outfielder Deion Sanders (Yankees), a first-round pick by the NFL's Atlanta Falcons.

Shortly After Delivery, Most Direct Mail Will Have Already Reached Its Target.

They promised your message would make it through the front door and they were absolutely right. Through the front door, down the hall and whammo, right smack into the old round file. Unopened, unread and unfortunately, totally ineffective.

Instead of being the exception, this scenario is more like the rule. According to a 1988 study by The Gordon S. Black Corporation, an independent Washington, D.C. media and opinion research firm, of the Greenville/Pitt County adults who report receiving some direct mail literature within a one-week period, 16% throw it away while less than one in five read it thoroughly.

It all comes down to how you define the term, "target customer." If it's a living, breathing, spending human being, then perhaps your advertising dollars should go into something that's more effective in reaching them. Namely, The Daily Reflector. With a paid circulation of 18,300 Monday through Friday and 20,800 on Sundays, let The Reflector work for you. The Daily Reflector reaches 74% of the Greenville/Pitt County market weekly.

Most importantly, it reaches them at their request! That means you not only have a better chance of getting their attention, you have a better chance of holding it. Think about it - people paying to read your message at their convenience!

Nashville Network Thrives On Talk With A Twang

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Programs on The Nashville Network may look like "The Tonight Show" and "Entertainment Tonight," but there's a twang with the talk on this ambitious channel.

TNN, an upstart 6-year-old cable station, is using guitars, fiddles and fringe as keystones of programming that highlights country music.

The toe-tapping sounds and a potpourri of other shows are aimed at the American heartland by TNN, a cousin to the cornpone show "Hee Haw" in the Gaylord Broadcasting corporate umbrella.

"Our target audience is you and me," said general manager David Hall. "We own a home, have cars, have kids. Our audience is America."

Since 1983, TNN has brought a flavor to the screen that distinguishes it from its cable comrades.

On ESPN, you see football helmets; it's cowboy hats on TNN.

HBO has movies, but TNN has the legendary Grand Ole Opry.

MTV offers screeching electric guitars, but TNN's music is wrenching country weepers about heartache and roaming romance.

"Our mission is to be the No. 1 source for country music entertainment and information," said Hall, who swept floors at the Opryland USA theme park while in high school.

Some country music stars say TNN, which uses a guitar neck as its logo, is indeed reaching a receptive middle-American audience.

Fiddler-guitarist Charlie Daniels observes, "We were on the 'Tonight' show recently and I'll bet no more than six people mentioned seeing us. But after we're on TNN, people everywhere come up and say they saw us."

Says singer Randy Travis, "TNN has taken country music to a lot more people and I think that's good for us all."

"Nashville Now," broadcast for 90 minutes each weeknight, is TNN's answer to the "Tonight" show. It has music, talk, a live studio audience and host Ralph Emery sitting behind a desk much like Johnny Carson.

It is TNN's most popular weeknight show, seen by up to 750,000 households.

TNN's "Crook and Chase" is similar to "Entertainment Tonight" except there's a live studio audience and emphasis on country music performers, who often appear to talk with the hosts.

The network, available to about 46 million households on cable systems across the country, hasn't restricted itself to rhinestones to attract viewers. It has drawn on some prominent non-country celebrities in an effort to widen its audience.

Dinah Shore has a talk show. John Davidson and Florence Henderson star on cooking shows. Wolfman Jack is host of a rock 'n' roll oldies show. Kent McCord and Martin Milner, who formerly starred in "Adam 12," have reunited in a two-hour movie for TNN to be aired later this year.

"If you can find stars who don't offend your core of support and might broaden your appeal, you try to do that," Hall said. "You bring them in to open things up and give people a sample and they find that country music is very enjoyable."

Other programming includes country music videos, western movies, concerts, rodeos, stock car racing features, fishing, remodeling, gardening, motor home use and a talent show resembling "Star Search."

TNN was started by WSM, Inc., the same broadcasting company that launched the Grand Ole Opry radio show in 1925. Gaylord bought the Opry, TNN, Opryland and related properties in 1983.

The Opry music show is broadcast on the network for 30 minutes every Saturday night. Another half-hour is devoted to backstage interviews.

"If you're a country music fan and you have the chance to watch the Opry at home on a Saturday night, you do it," Hall said.

TNN is privately held and doesn't release how much money the network makes.

According to Paul Kagan Associates Inc., a Carmel, Calif., consulting company, TNN has made a financial recovery since a loss of $6 million in 1985. The network has made money every year since and is expected to earn $25 million this year after taxes, the consultant said.

There are shortfalls in the country's two biggest markets. TNN is not available in parts of New York City and has to share a channel in Los Angeles.

Still, TNN says it penetrates 50 percent of American TV homes and 90 percent of all cable TV homes.

Says Hall, "For a 6-year-old cable TV network to reach 50 percent in such a short span of time and continue to grow at a dramatic pace is remarkable."

Rolling Stones Open Tour In Philadelphia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — The Rolling Stones proved they've still got hot stuff as they rocked a crowd of 50,000 to kick off their first tour in eight years.

"They're better than ever," Joy Harrington, 43, of Philadelphia, said following Thursday's sold-out show that lasted more than 2½ hours.

The Stones are "the best partying band," said Anne Reissig, 51, from New York's Long Island.

They were among the crowd that packed Veterans Stadium to see the Stones launch their 36-city "Steel Wheels" tour with fireworks and Mick Jagger's trademark strut. The group opened its last tour in Philadelphia in 1981.

"We've started in Philadelphia two times in a row," Jagger told crowd. "I hope it's not too tough on you."

"I think they're better this show," said Randy Coppola, 27, of Medford, N.J., who also saw the British band in 1981. "I think Mick Jagger was in top form."

The Stones took the stage about 9:30 p.m. with the 1981 hit "Start Me Up" and immediately had the crowd dancing. They followed with "Bitch" from 1971 and "Shattered" from 1978.

They then left the stage briefly, explaining they had lost power.

Jagger, guitarists Keith Richards and Ron Wood, bassist Bill Wyman, and drummer Charlie Watts were joined on stage by three backup singers, two keyboard players and five horn players.

Shortly after midnight, they finished their only encore with "Jumping Jack Flash," which was followed briefly by fireworks.

"The Stones not only have it, they have it better than most bands in the last 10 years," said Mark Moatz, 29, of Philadelphia. "I enjoyed it immensely."

Todd Harrington, 23, Mrs. Harrington's son, said the band was "just as good" as ever and now were "more mature, better dressed."

Jagger paraded around the stage, singing in his raunchy style and wearing black pants and a kelly green tuxedo jacket. Later, he wore a red jacket.

The Stones performed on a stage that measured 110 feet high and 300 feet wide and showed a scene of industrial decay with catwalks, gray girders and black nets.

Another show is scheduled for Veterans Stadium tonight before the band goes to Toronto on Sunday.

Fox TV's 'Married' Tops Big Network Competition

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Housewife Peg Bundy is crass, pushy, all dolled up and yearning to be appreciated and loved.

As such, the star of Fox Broadcasting Co.'s "Married...With Children" is much like the upstart network that the sitcom has led out of the ratings wilderness.

This past week "Married...With Children" got a 13.4 rating, the highest ever for a Fox show, and for the second time this summer it beat the network competition. The A.C. Nielsen Co. rating is the percentage of the estimated 90.4 million homes with television in the United States.

The show ranked 17th in the Nielsen ratings, right there with the big-time competition of NBC's "The Golden Girls" and "Empty Nest."

"Married...With Children," which pokes fun at the happy, wholesome families on television sitcoms, has been criticized as too raunchy, but

Fox has no intention of toning it down. The publicity, if anything, has helped the show. The show does push the limits, but it's also incredibly funny.

Katey Sagal stars as Peg Bundy, the lazy, sex-starved housewife, and Ed O'Neill is loutish Al Bundy, who'd rather roll his socks than satisfy his wife's longing. They have a sluttish daughter, a delinquent son and two love-dovey neighbors they are eager to disillusion.

"We're quite happy around here," said Peter Chernin, president of the Fox Broadcasting Entertainment Group. "It's a happy place these days."

That wasn't always the case for Fox Broadcasting.

Media mogul Rupert Murdoch's challenge to the three commercial networks is at last being taken seriously after getting off to a shaky start three years ago with a single late-night show. That show, starring Joan Rivers, was a ratings bomb and lasted less than a year.

It didn't begin prime-time programming until April 1987, first on Sunday, then on Saturday. This fall it expands to Monday.

Two other Fox shows, "America's Most Wanted" and "Totally Hidden Video," have also done well in the ratings this summer. "Open House," a revamp of "Duet," premiered last week in 47th place.

"21 Jump Street," a police show about young detectives, has attracted a large following among young people, although its ratings have never gotten it out of the cellar.

This fall, it spawns "Booker," in which maverick policeman Dennis Booker, played by Richard Grieco, gets his own show. "Booker" debuts on Sunday, Sept. 24. "Jump Street" moves to Monday on Sept. 18, where it will be joined by a new show, "Alien Nation."

Fox expects to move its movie night to Tuesday in October.

"The Tracey Ullman Show," although not highly rated, is one of the most critically acclaimed shows on television.

Lewis MD Telethon Scheduled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Jerry Lewis says he has a renewed empathy for parents whose children die of muscular dystrophy since he and his wife suffered the loss of an unborn child.

"I thought I knew what I was talking about," Lewis said, recalling years of dealing with parents of MD victims. Lewis has been national chairman of the Muscular Dystrophy Association for 40 years.

The comedian's 2½-hour, annual Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon begins at 9 p.m. EDT Sunday and will be carried on 200 TV stations in the United States and Canada. Some 90 million people watched at least part of last year's fund-raiser.

Earlier this year Lewis and his wife, Sam, 38, learned she was pregnant. On May 5, two months into the pregnancy, they learned the baby's heart had stopped. Lewis, 63, has six sons by a previous marriage.

Lewis has conducted his MDA telethons since 1966, coaxing $484 million out of viewers of the entertainment extravaganza. And the years of pitching for "one dollar more" are beginning to pay off, he said.

"We now know that the cure is right around the corner," Lewis said in an interview Wednesday. "Can you believe it! In 1986 we were talking about a cure in our lifetime."

More than 50 top-name entertainers will be featured on this year's show, including Frank Sinatra, Liza Minnelli, Sammy Davis Jr., Tony Orlando, Billy Crystal, Alabama, the Oak Ridge Boys, Jack Jones, Robert Goulet, the McGuire Sisters, LaToya Jackson, Ringo Starr, Waylon Jennings and Maureen McGovern.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Sept. 2
ARIES (March 20 to April 19): Your many fine creative ideas won't do you or anyone else any good if you don't get them out in the open and figure out just exactly how you are going to use them.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 19): Entertaining at home this evening may not produce the intended results. Be careful of a guest that can be easily offend-ed or overdrinks.
GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): As long as you are certain to stay away from any questionable scheme your financial-matters can be improved by following a workable plan.
MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Avoiding persons who tend toward jealousy may be more of a task than you would think. Don't allow an individual with a tale of woe into your home.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Take care of personal desires today while avoiding the crowd. Get clear information on any health program that you have been considering for yourself.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Spending the time with imaginative associates and friends who share common interests pays big dividends as long as you use sterling methods to gain your goals.
LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Some minor setbacks that are unavoidable with the current aspect of three moon squares can be diffused somewhat by avoiding a head-on conflict with authority.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Despite the poor aspects today you have an unusual opportunity to get in focus on a very interesting project that re-quires your special abilities.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Today's difficult aspects will be keep-ing you on your toes but you will have assistance from your subconscious, which will guide you.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): It is going to be difficult for you to re-main neutral in a public situation that is taxing on all conc... Don't at-tempt to form a new alliance now.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Even though the aspects are difficult you are going to need to use the afternoon to concentrate on personal affairs. Show your interest in a civic matter.
PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Try to forget and forgive a direct rebuff you receive today under the existing, negative aspects. Stay far removed from anything controversial at work.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of ♣ Great holdup men of the past got their names on wanted posters. The holdup artists of the bridge table are written up in bridge columns. South was an old-fashioned play-er who still believed an opening bid of two no trump showed a balanced hand of 22-24 points. North had no interest in a major-suit contract, but he had plenty in reserve to raise to three no trump.

 Simple souls would have a 50 per-cent chance of making the contract. They would win the first trick and lead a red suit. If they opted for hearts, all would be well. West's entry would be knocked out early, and the spade suit would wither on the vine.
 Those who chose diamonds would not be so lucky. East would win and return a spade, forcing out declarer's remaining stopper. When West got in with the ace of hearts, there would be just enough spade tricks for the defense to register a one-trick set.
 The winning play is simplicity it-self. Most players are familiar with a holdup play when they have only one stopper in the enemy suit. Many do not realize it can be just as im-portant not to win the first trick when the enemy suit is doubly stopped

 Suppose declarer were to with-hold a spade honor at trick one and win the continuation. Now it makes no difference which red ace he forces out first. If South selects the one where East holds the ace, that defender will not have a spade to return or, if he does, the suit will break 4-3 and the most the enemy can collect would be two spade tricks and the two aces.

Black Unionists Stage Walk Protesting New Labor Law

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Thousands of black union members, joining in a nationwide campaign to defy apartheid laws, marched at factories today to protest a labor law that they say cripples their power to strike.

In Cape Town, about 100 college and university teachers were arrested for staging an illegal anti-government protest on a pedestrian mall. Police gave the protesters five minutes to disperse, then led them away.

About 20 protesters, most of them clergymen or church workers, gathered outside a Cape Town police office to protest the detention of two prominent activists. Members of the group said they were driven away by police who beat them with batons.

One of the biggest union protests was at a Unilever Ltd. factory in Boksburg, east of Johannesburg, where about 1,000 workers marched around the premises, many carrying placards denouncing the year-old Labor Relations Amendment Act.

The two main black labor federations on Thursday called on their 1.5 million members to stage protests against the act, which limits the ability of workers to strike, during work hours today.

The federations also joined other major anti-apartheid groups in calling for a national protest on Tuesday and Wednesday against the segregated parliamentary elections on Wednesday. In the past, such protests have taken the form of a general strike.

The same organizations have been orchestrating a campaign since early August to challenge segregation laws and mobilize opposition to the elections. On Saturday, activists plan to attempt an illegal march toward the Parliament buildings in Cape Town, and on Sunday blacks plan to hold a mass picnic on a whites-only beach in Durban.

Police have arrested or detained scores of activists in the past week and have banned at least two protest rallies planned for this weekend, including a "peace service" in Soweto which was to be addressed by Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu.

The Detainees Aid Center, which assists families of detainees, said two black activists were detained Thursday in Soweto when they made their daily appearance at a police station in accordance with restrictions imposed when they were released from a previous stint in detention.

On Cape Town's outskirts, where police and militant youths have clashed daily for several weeks, several mixed-race students reportedly were wounded today when officers fired tear gas and birdshot to disperse a rally.

The independent South African Press Association quoted a teacher as saying several students were arrested.

Police said three mixed-race men were injured Thursday night when a small mine exploded at a civic center in Athlone, near Cape Town. There was no claim of responsibility.

The Labor Relations Amendment Act has been the subject of a bitter dispute among the government, employers and unions since it was drafted by government officials last year.

Employers agreed to changes after unions complained that it would virtually eliminate their ability to strike. But several provisions remain which the unions say are unacceptable, including a prohibition on sympathy strikes. Today's protest was endorsed by the 1-million-member Congress of South African Trade Unions and by the 500,000-member National Council of Trade Unions.

Police headquarters said five black men were found dead from bullet wounds at a house in Natal Province. Much of the province has been wracked by a three-year power struggle pitting supporters of militant anti-apartheid groups against members of the more conservative Zulu political organization Inkatha.

Ethnic Moldavians Protest Compromise On Languages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Thousands of ethnic Moldavians marched today to protest a law that satisfies their demand to make their native tongue the republic's official language but which still allows the use of Russian.

The law, passed by Moldavian legislators on Thursday, was a compromise measure meant to appease ethnic Russians and other minorities who opposed making Moldavian the official language.

In the three Baltic republics, meanwhile, nationalist group leaders sharply criticized the Kremlin for attacking their efforts to gain more autonomy. Latvia's activist organization demanded that the central government recognize the region's "special economic and political status."

The Moldavian Supreme Soviet legislature met today to consider how to apply the controversial language law. Moldavian was made the official language in a show of independence from the Soviet Union and an attempt to preserve Moldavian culture.

Ethnic Moldavians make up 64 percent of the republic's population, and Russian and other ethnic groups comprise the rest.

The law makes Moldavian the official language of government and economic affairs but allows use of both Russian and Moldavian in everyday life.

The provision that sanctions some use of Russian was aimed at ending strikes at an estimated 200 businesses and industries by ethnic Russians angered by the law.

Tens of thousands of Moldavians poured into the streets of the capital, Kishinev, on Thursday night to protest the compromises, and several thousand massed again today, official and unofficial sources said.

"People are dissatisfied with all the compromises the deputies agreed to," Konstantin Bogdanash, a journalist with the People's Front group that has led the campaign for preservation of the Moldavian language, said in a telephone interview.

Bogdanash said protesters outside Kishinev's opera theater, where the 350-member Supreme Soviet meets, held signs reading, "People want Freedom," and "Respected Russians, Mother Russia Calls You Home."

"The people are scandalized. We need only one language," said Vasily Nestase, another People's Front member.

He said the group would call a general strike if the decision is not reversed and that the next step would be secession from the Soviet Union.

"We are not a legal part of the Soviet Union," Nestase said, pointing to the Soviet annexation of Moldavia from neighboring Romania in 1940 under a Nazi-Soviet agreement of the year before, which also divided Poland and the Baltic states.

Tutu, Wife Among Arrested Activists

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Archbishop Desmond Tutu, his wife and 30 other activists were arrested today as they began a march protesting the alleged beating of clergy and church workers during an anti-apartheid protest.

The Anglican archbishop, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, had been angered by reports that police beat about 20 protesters from the Western Province Council of Churches who had gone to a Cape Town police office earlier today to condemn recent detentions.

Police formed a human barrier near St. George's Cathedral, stopped the marchers and told them to disperse, then led them into vans when they refused.

The marchers carried placards with slogans such as "To Hell With Restrictions!" and "Stop Killing Our People!"

There was no immediate comment from police about the incident. The march today was part of an escalating campaign by activist groups to defy apartheid restrictions of the white-led government.

Tutu's wife, Leah, was among 200 women arrested in Cape Town on Wednesday for staging an unauthorized protest march. The women were released without bail and told to appear in court next month.

Tutu, the first black to lead the Anglican Church in southern Africa, was last arrested in February 1988 when he led clergymen on a demonstration outside Parliament. No prosecution ensued.

Earlier today, police arrested about 100 college and university teachers for staging an illegal anti-government protest on a pedestrian mall in Cape Town. Police gave the protesters five minutes to disperse, then led them away.

Gadhafi Marks 20th Year In Power

By Terry Leonard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TRIPOLI, Libya — Col. Moammar Gadhafi celebrates 20 years in power today with a peace accord with Chad and festivities attracting a host of African and Arab leaders, testimony to his effort to turn old enemies into friends.

Today is the 20th anniversary of the coup that deposed the aging, pro-Western King Idris and established Gadhafi and his radical socialist revolution.

Gadhafi spent Thursday welcoming foreign leaders who were to attend the anniversary festivities, including a military parade and air show.

A special session of the General People's Congress, or parliament, also was planned.

Twenty-one-gun salutes boomed for arriving guests, including Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat and presidents Hafez Assad of Syria, Chadli Bendjedid of Algeria and Zine El Abidine Ben Ali of Tunisia.

The arrival of King Hassan II of Morocco was announced by a blaring horn as he sailed into Tripoli's harbor aboard a small white ship flanked by escort vessels.

A Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Libya also sent invitations to President Bush and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, whose countries accuse Gadhafi of supporting terrorism.

The highest-ranking Western leader to attend was Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis of Italy, whose participation reportedly irritated some Western governments.

De Michelis, in comments apparently aimed at his country's Western allies, said Italy welcomed efforts to resolve differences with Libya so the nations can talk "in a climate entirely free of suspicions of any kind of action deemed unacceptable to the international community."

His attendance and that of high-ranking envoys

The Associated Press

Smiling Gadhafi greets newsmen Thursday from Egypt and Chad underlined the success of Gadhafi's efforts in recent years to move away from a radical, go-it-alone policy to one of cooperation with his North African neighbors and Western Europe.

Libya was at its most isolated in April 1986 when U.S. warplanes bombed this Mediterranean port and Benghazi.

Gadhafi's adventurism over the years has created other enemies he now wants to turn into friends, aides say.

On Thursday, Libya and Chad announced that they had signed an accord to end 16 years of warfare and hostilities that began when Libyan tanks invaded northern Chad and soldiers annexed the mineral-rich Aouzou desert strip.

The accord calls for the countries to reach a political agreement over the 40,000-square-mile border region within a year or turn the dispute over to the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

Another former Libyan enemy, Egypt, announced Thursday that it sent Deputy Prime Minister Youssef Waly to Tripoli for the anniversary celebration. He is the highest-ranking Egyptian to travel to Libya since the nations fought a five-day border war in 1977 after Cairo refused Gadhafi's offers to merge the countries.

A surprise guest was Syria's Assad, who rarely travels. He is believed to have gone to Libya, an ally, because of Syria's isolation in its war against Lebanon's Christians.

It was not known if Assad and Arafat would meet during the celebration. However, it was considered a triumph for Gadhafi that he arranged the visit of the pair, who have been at odds since Syria backed a mutiny in PLO ranks in 1983.

Today's celebrations also come as Tripoli works on details of an economic union, or common market, of the five Northwestern African countries — Libya, Algeria, Tunisia, Morocco and Mauritania.

However, a West European diplomat said meetings this week apparently broke off over differences involving finances, including unpaid debts. The diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, did not provide details.

Tripoli had a new look for the celebrations, at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars.

The city was freshly painted in white trimmed in green — the color after which Gadhafi named his revolution — and streets were repaved. Also, a huge new pool was built in front of the seaside fortress near Green Square.

Strolling families have crowded downtown streets, enjoying the balloons, flags and strings of lights.

Noriega Keeps Control As Panel Rejects Election

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega will remain Panama's most powerful figure when a provisional president loyal to him is sworn in.

But the president and Noriega will face strong opposition from the U.S. government, which has renewed accusations that the general is a drug trafficker.

Panama's Council of State declared Thursday that elections cannot be held until U.S. economic sanctions and "aggression" end. Washington said it is considering additional economic sanctions.

The council, a body of Cabinet ministers and heads of the military and agencies that Noriega is presumed to control, said it will evaluate the situation in six months to determine whether elections are possible.

Meantime, the council said, Francisco Rodriguez will head a provisional government that will rule with a legislative commission of 41 appointed members.

It said the national legislature will be abolished and the government will draft a new constitution.

Washington has said it will not recognize the government of Rodriguez, a 50-year-old career bureaucrat who was a high school classmate of Noriega and served in the Cabinet of the late Gen. Omar Torrijos in the mid-1970s.

He was to be sworn in today in a ceremony at the Supreme Court. Members of the diplomatic corps were not invited to attend.

"I guess they do not want to run the chance of being turned down by some," said a South American, noting that several ambassadors had been recalled by their governments or had "gone on vacation," apparently to show displeasure with the break in constitutional procedure.

Paint Factory Explosion Wounds 13 In Colombia

By Bruce Handler
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — An explosion damaged a paint factory and wounded at least 13 people in Medellin, and authorities reportedly were considering widening a curfew to halt the wave of drug-related violence.

In Washington, officials said Thursday that some of the $65 million worth of equipment pledged by the Bush administration to fight the narcotics trade should begin arriving Sunday. U.S. military personnel were to arrive today for preparations.

Also Thursday, the Colombian government said that under emergency rules, judges' identities would be kept secret in drug cases. Since 1980, 220 judges and court officials have been murdered in a reign of terror aimed at intimidating them into dropping drug cases.

The government began fighting back in its boldest attempt ever after a leading presidential hopeful, Luis Carlos Galan, was assassinated Aug. 18. Drug lords responded with threats to kill more officials and with bombings.

They were particularly angry over a government decree that re-established Colombia's extradition treaty with the United States, where many drug dealers are wanted.

On Thursday, 33 pounds of dynamite strapped to an ice cream vendor's bicycle exploded at the Medellin paint factory, causing $300,000 worth of damage in addition to injuring at least 13 people, police and fire department spokesmen said.

The bomb was in a box on the back of the bicycle, which was left leaning against a retaining wall around a paint storage tank, Colombian news reports said.

The blast also damaged about 20 cars, a police spokeswoman said on condition of anonymity.

An anonymous caller told radio stations that the so-called Group of Extraditables, Colombia's cocaine barons, carried out the bombing and said there would be more attacks "with more victims."

The group issued a statement Aug. 24 declaring "total war" on the government. The group apparently speaks on behalf of the 12 Colombians the United States wants extradited to stand trial on drug charges.

Medellin, Colombia's second-largest city in the northwestern part of the country, is the home of the most powerful cocaine trafficking organizations in the world. The cartels are believed to supply up to 80 percent of the cocaine in the United States.

Police officers and soldiers in camouflage gear and carrying automatic rifles patrolled the streets of Medellin Thursday.

A 10 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew, imposed Wednesday, remained in effect for the city's 2.5 million residents and in eight other nearby towns.

The National Security Council met Thursday night to decide whether to extend the anti-drug curfew to other cities, according to the independently produced network TV news program "24 Hours."

President Virgilio Barco said Thursday the $65 million Bush offer for Colombia's war on drugs was important but that the real solution is "to put the brakes on the demand."

Barco, speaking during a visit to the north-central city of Bucaramanga, also said industrialized nations should put tighter controls on chemicals used to refine cocaine and crack down on "fiscal paradises" for laundered drug money. Colombian authorities, acting under special emergency decrees, have rounded up suspected traffickers without formally charging them and have seized $200 million worth of property belonging to alleged drug dealers.

Drug kingpins, worried mostly about summary extradition to the United States under the emergency measures, have promised reprisals against the government, judges, reporters, politicians and "leaders of industry."

The Pentagon said Thursday that two C-130 military transport planes will be among the first shipments to Colombia. Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said 200 U.S. military personnel will be involved in operations in Colombia ranging from training to unloading.

A Bush administration source said that part of the president's new drug strategy for the United States will be classified to keep narcotics traffickers from benefiting from the information.

Bush is to announce details of the plan in a nationally televised broadcast Tuesday. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Bush would not disclose the precise areas of drug operations, the strength of U.S. anti-drug forces overseas and details of intelligence-gathering operations.

Nine Latin American countries holding a drug enforcement conference in Mexico City Thursday praised Colombia for its battle against narcotics traffickers.

Nonaligned Nations Prepare For Summit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Nonaligned nations welcomed Venezuela into their movement today and began preparing for a summit that is intended to salvage the waning influence of the 28-year-old organization.

Ministers from nonaligned countries met behind closed doors to iron out final details of next week's summit. The group formally accepted Venezuela as the 102nd member of the movement, the state news agency Tanjug said.

Nicaragua and Indonesia also put in bids to host the next summit in 1992, conference sources said. The preparatory meeting that the representatives from the Bahamas, Belize, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Jamaica and Mexico also agreed that drug violations should carry stiffer penalties.

begin today is to conclude on Saturday. Ministers are expected to adopt a formal agenda for the summit that begins Monday.

Next week's summit will focus on ways to revamp and modernize the movement, the role of which has declined steadily in the past decade.

"We are to some extent out of step with ... times that are dynamic and wait for no one," Yugoslav Foreign Minister Budimir Loncar told today's gathering.

"We must catch up (and) equip ourselves for the future so as to be able to influence it with the strength of our vision," he said. Minutes later the meeting was declared closed by the media.
