Cuban Jet Explodes On Takeoff, Kills 125

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — A Cuban jetliner bound for Italy exploded shortly after takeoff and crashed, showering flaming debris on a Havana suburb, officials and news reports said. Only one survivor was reported among 126 people aboard.

The crash of the Soviet-made plane during a thunderstorm Sunday evening also injured 63 people on the ground, damaged 20 homes and snapped power lines, blacking out an area around the airport, news agencies said.

In Rome, a Foreign Ministry employee said one man, believed to be Italian, survived the crash but was hospitalized in critical condition.

Officials said earlier that all aboard were killed.

The chartered Cubana de Aviacion jetliner was carrying 113 Italians, two Cubans and a crew of 11, said the Cuban ambassador to Rome, Javier Ardizones.

Italian television showed footage of emergency workers rushing through the wreckage carrying bodies on stretchers through the darkness. Firefighters aimed streams of water at the charred shell of the plane.

Nearby were the smoldering hulks of two trucks apparently hit by the plane. Youths in T-shirts stood at the door of a one-story house whose roof appeared damaged by the nearby plane. Flames leaped from a pile of rubble.

Soldiers in green uniforms surrounded the plane, helping rescue workers sort through the wreckage.

Prensa Latina, Cuba's official news agency monitored in Mexico City, said the plane exploded shortly after takeoff.

The dispatch said officials did not elaborate on the cause of the accident but that Gen. Rogelio Acevedo, Cuba's civil aviation chief, named a commission to investigate the crash.

Mexico's Excelsior news agency said there was a heavy downpour with thunder and lightning when Flight 9046 took off for Milan, Italy, with a scheduled refueling stop in Cologne, West Germany.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the four-engine Ilyushin 62 crashed a half mile from the runway and 20 houses were damaged.

Cuba's state-run television interrupted its regular programming to show the plane engulfed in flames, Excelsior reported, adding that that area around Havana's Jose Marti airport was plunged into darkness for a time when the falling wreckage snapped power lines.

Cuban authorities had not released a passenger list or disclosed any identities of victims by early this morning.

The Mexican news agency Notimex quoted Havana's Radio Reloj as saying 63 people on the ground were hospitalized with injuries after the wreckage rained down on the suburb.

Virginia Beach Imposes Curfew After Violence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — National Guardsmen with assault rifles helped enforce an indefinite curfew today after a second night of violence followed the looting of more than 100 stores by blacks.

Anyone on the resort's strip would be asked to go inside immediately or will be arrested, police declared at 1:25 a.m.

A 35-minute sweep by club-wielding officers late Sunday added dozens of arrests to the 160 arrests and 395 citations between Friday evening and Sunday afternoon.

"We will not tolerate lawlessness from anybody," Mayor Meyera E. Obendorf said. "Let the word go out that Virginia Beach will not stand by and watch as unruly individuals trash our city."

But Jack W. Gravely, president of the Virginia chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, faulted the city's tactics as much as "an element who came to disrupt" among the young people gathered for Greekfest, a Labor Day weekend celebration.

Sunday night, dozens of officers and 150 National Guardsmen armed with assault rifles and wooden batons left the Visitors Center for the beach area two blocks away.

"Once the police came on the scene, the tension level rose," Gravely said. "The students had what I call an attitude of controlled defiance. They did not understand what they had done to warrant this treatment."

He said Virginia Beach officials should have been better prepared for the annual gathering of students from predominantly black East Coast colleges.

City officials said they had no choice but to use force after young people went on a rampage early Sunday down beachfront Atlantic Avenue.

The authorities estimated 100,000 young people jammed a 30-block section around 2:15 a.m. When police tried to clear the streets, shots were fired, more than 100 businesses were looted and small fires were set in the streets, city officials said.

By the time order was restored around dawn, four people were reported injured. They remained in hospitals today, two with gunshot wounds, one critically injured in a balcony fall and one in serious condition after an auto accident during the disturbance.

By 6 p.m. Sunday, Atlantic Avenue was again crowded with young people, though many shops were boarded up. Two hours later, officials closed all streets leading into the beach, allowing in only residents.

Quake Hits Off Alaska

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALMER, Alaska — A powerful earthquake was recorded off Alaska today, and scientists warned that a tsunami, or sea wave, could hit the state and Canada.

There was no immediate indication the quake was felt on land. Scientists gave no estimate of how big a wave generated by the quake might be.

The quake, which struck at 9:15 a.m. EDT, registered 7.1 on the Richter scale and was centered 70 miles southeast of Chignik and 450 miles southwest of Anchorage, said George Carte, a seismologist at the Alaska Tsunami Warning Center.

Carte said a sea wave could be generated by the quake, and the first point hit would be Kodiak at about 7 a.m. ADT (11 a.m. EDT).

"We'll see then whether a tsunami has been generated," he said.

The first point in Canada to experience a tsunami would be near Prince Rupert at about 8:40 a.m., he said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion in which every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

An earthquake of 7 is a major quake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

The 1964 Alaska quake that killed 131 people measured 8.4, while the San Francisco quake of 1906 was estimated to register 8.3.

Holiday Mood Brings On Hot Dogs And Barbecues

By Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The last days of summer are at hand and people all over Greenville and eastern North Carolina are browning on the beach and on the barbecue.

Several area food stores expected a busy day as people started to head back from the beaches, said Linwood Jones, the assistant manager of Farm Fresh Super Savings Center on Greenville Boulevard.

"We expect a pretty busy day as far as people cooking out," said Jones. "It should pick up later this afternoon when people are on their way back from the beach. I expect that today will be bigger than the Fourth of July weekend because the students are back."

The most requested items, according to Jones, are meats like hamburgers, hotdogs and lunch meat, and then snacks and beverages such as potato chips, soda, beer and wine.

"Beer sales have already doubled," added Jones.

Businesses at the local beaches are reporting an excellent holiday period, too. Most of the hotels were either full or very close to it. Fishing piers also have reported a brisk business.

On the Iron Steamer Resort and fishing pier in Atlantic Beach, business has been good and people have been bringing in some nice fish, including some good size bluefish and Spanish mackerel, according to a pier spokesman.

"We have been at 100 percent all three nights," said Ann Rice, the manager of the Islander Motor Inn and Restaurant on Emerald Isle. "It seems like there have been more people than usual down here. I've never seen so much traffic in my life."

Atlantic Beach Police reported that it was a surprisingly calm weekend, except for the heavy weekend traffic.

While many local economies were enjoying the fruits of a pleasant holiday weekend, the emergency room at Pitt County Memorial Hospital had a busy weekend. Although the hospital has seen the usual scrapes and minor abrasions that come from increased outdoor activities, they also received a lot more trauma on this holiday weekend, said Dr. Jack Allison, the chief of emergency medicine at Pitt Memorial.

"It was like a M.A.S.H. unit down here on Friday night," Allison said. "(Friday night) was bad. Every bed on the acute side was filled with personal violence cases like fights, stabbings and shootings. We usually expect a lot more trauma on holiday weekends because people have a tendency to drink more and party down. We get a lot of motor vehicle trauma and personal violence."

Allison said PCMH tends to get more bad trauma cases because many regional hospitals will send Pitt Memorial the bad cases.

Labor Day Brings Uncertainties For Unions

By John King
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Striking Eastern Airlines employees, coal miners and phone workers are the symbol of both the uncertainty and solidarity the American labor movement reflects on this Labor Day.

In an extraordinary year, labor has suffered some major losses yet won some impressive victories, although the spotlight on the negatives has tended to obscure the bright spots.

A number of unions have proven that labor-management cooperation can work but, as in the case of the United Auto Workers, learned as well that too much of a "good" thing can prove troublesome.

Others have found hope in their solidarity — particularly in the Eastern and miners' strikes — but will spend labor's traditional holiday wondering if their jobs are the price they will pay for their pride and determination.

The movement has lost one nemesis, Ronald Reagan, but gained another, Frank Lorenzo.

Union workers here can take pride in remarkable developments in Poland — their dues helped support the Solidarity trade union from its underground days to its historic rise as leader of the first non-communist government in the East bloc. Through the AFL-CIO, U.S. unions funneled thousands of dollars worth of printing equipment and other supplies to Solidarity while it was outlawed.

"I think the role of the American trade union movement in this should not be overlooked," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said last week.

Kirkland, head of the 14-million member AFL-CIO, the major umbrella group for the nearly 18 million Americans who belong to unions, says those who are eulogizing the labor movement don't understand it.

"The key to any evaluation of the labor movement ought to examine what we regard as the most important measure and that is internal cohesiveness and solidarity," he said. "And I think it's fair to say that we do have a higher degree of solidarity and cohesion today than we've had in many, many years."

The most highly publicized failure of "Big Labor" was the Auto Workers' defeat in an election at a Nissan plant in Smyrna, Tenn., its first attempt to organize a U.S. plant fully owned by the Japanese. The UAW lost by a 2-1 margin in a fight many within labor said the UAW was too hasty to bring to a conclusion by calling the election.

Tobacco Barn Fires Drop, But Cost Goes Up

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The number of tobacco barn fires in Pitt County has dropped dramatically over the years, but the dollar amount of damage caused per fire has probably risen just as dramatically, according to Bobby Joyner, Pitt County's emergency services coordinator.

But, Joyner said, "We don't even keep up with them any more, they've gotten to be so few."

"For the past four years we've had about five a year," Joyner estimated.

In years past, farmers used tobacco barns made of wood and covered with tarpaper or tin, which had open interiors with four or five "rooms," or divisions, separated by tiered poles. Green tobacco tied to sticks was placed on the poles for curing, with heat supplied by wood, oil or gas furnaces.

idle today, replaced by factory-built "bulk barns" which hold metal racks filled with tobacco for curing. Oil or gas furnaces supply the heat which is circulated through the metal covered barns by large electric fans.

According to Joyner, "the biggest cause of fires in the old barns was sticks falling onto the burners" or flues that were spaced throughout the barn for more evenly distributed heat.

Probably the second biggest cause of fires in the old barns was "the rush of air" caused by someone entering the barn, "which would cause a burner to flare up," Joyner suggested.

"We think the bulk barns are safer. The fire (furnace that supplies the heat for curing) is outside of the barn and there are a lot more safety features in them," Joyner said.

What's the major cause of bulk barn fires?

"From what we've seen, a malfunction of the safety features or people going in there and bypassing some of the safety mechanisms," Joyner said.

Joyner said, "If you ever have a fire in a bulk barn, you almost always have to move the tobacco out before you can get the fire put out."

He also noted that "bulk barns are put so close together" that "if you have one on fire, it will usually spread to a second or third barn real easy."

Even at that, Joyner said, "You'd lose more old barns because of their construction."

Joyner estimated the value of an old-style barn at "about $3,000." But he said a bulk barn can go as "as high as $10,000 to $15,000."

A fire last week in Greene County that involved five bulk barns caused about $80,000, Joyner said.

Variable cloudiness through Tuesday. Low tonight 65 to 70. High Tuesday near 80.

Partly cloudy Wednesday through Friday. Highs 80 to 85. Lows in 60s.

"We used to have 100 or more tobacco barn fires a year," Joyner said. "I remember one year we had 150."

ECU Alumni Will Honor Four Greenville Residents Saturday

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Four Greenville residents will be among six individuals honored by the East Carolina University Alumni Association during its annual Leadership Conference on Saturday.

Larcenies Reported

Several larcenies, some by breaking and entering, were reported in Greenville during the weekend.

Officer Butler Lewis reported investigation of a breaking and entering and larceny at 607 Vance St. at 1:34 p.m. Sunday. A 19-inch black and white television set, 10 pocket-books and food items worth $300 were taken. Damage to the property was estimated at $75.

A car parked at Hard Times Nightclub was reported broken into at 12:24 a.m. Sunday. Two women who had arrived at the club in the car said their purses, valued at $50 each, were taken. Also taken were $350 in currency from one and 29 credit cards, a diamond ring and a gold necklace from the other. An estimated $100 in damage reportedly was done to the window to get into the car.

Paul Potter reported at 1 a.m. Sunday that $700 was taken from under a mattress in his room at the Hilton Hotel. Two suspects submitted to a search, but nothing was found and no arrests were made.

A gold necklace was reported stolen from the Friendly Wig Shop at 406 S. Evans St. Saturday. The value of the necklace was reportedly $400.

A breaking and entering at the Rent-A-Clown Store, 1306 N. Greene St., was reported at 9:52 Sunday. Entry was gained through a rear window, Officer J.G. Bridges said, and $48 in currency was reported taken.

What was stolen, if anything, in a breaking and entering at Cohen's House of Beauty, 1403 W. Fifth St., was not determined immediately after the incident was discovered by a patrolling officer. Officer D.R. Wyrick reported he found the front plate glass window of the shop broken and a piece of glass with blood on it inside. Three cabinets were ransacked, the owner Annie Cohen said. Damage to the window was estimated at $300.

A six-pack of beer was reportedly taken from the store at 220 Cotanche St. after a clerk advised a customer at 2:04 a.m. Sunday that it was after beer-selling hours and she took the beer from a display and walked out without paying for it. Arrested later, according to a reported by Officer J.L. Moody, was Jane Killian, 26, of Farmville.

James Leo Green, 37, of 500 Herbert Dr. was arrested at the K-Mart Department Store at 2:14 p.m. He was charged with stealing two videotapes.

A hammock was reported stolen from a residence at 1005 E. Third St. Sunday afternoon. Owner Gary Gasperini said the item was valued at $25.

Arthur Wayne Dempsey, vice president and manager of the Sales and Finance Department at Wachovia Bank; Don J. Edwards, president of University Book Exchange; and Ed Glenn, a former voice instructor in ECU's School of Music, and his wife Jef, proprietors of Jefferson Florist, will be named honorary alumni of ECU.

All are members of ECU's Chancellor's Society, a 350-plus member organization of the university's most generous benefactors.

Other members of this alumni class are Archie Burnette Jr. of Tarboro and W.H. "Billy" Massey of Rolesville.

"These special individuals deserve to be recognized for the time, effort and resources they have given for the betterment of the university," said James L. Lanier Jr., ECU vice chancellor for institutional advancement, who will present the awards with Chancellor Richard Eakin and Burney R. Rivenbark of Fayetteville, Alumni Association president.

"Because these individuals did not attend ECU, their exceptional devotion is especially admirable," Lanier added.

The six were selected by the Alumni Association's directors and will receive framed certificates designating them as honorary members of the ECU Alumni Association.

Dempsey is an avid supporter of ECU's athletic programs and currently holds the Pirate Club office of executive president. He served as president of the Pitt County Pirate Club fund drive in 1986 and has organized Pirate Club auctions for the past three years, a project that raises money for athletic scholarships.

A member of the Athletic and Hall of Fame committees, Dempsey also assisted in selecting ECU's football coach and Pirate Club director.

Edwards is a member of the ECU Foundation, the primary fund-raising organization of the university which receives and manages all private gifts.

Ed and Jef Glenn said they attribute much of the success of their business, Jefferson Florist, to ECU.

The two provide flowers and other decorations for many university functions, often at no charge. In addition, they frequently arrange entertainment for these functions through the school of music.

An induction ceremony for the honorees will be held during a 1 p.m. luncheon in the multipurpose room of Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus. It is open to all alumni and friends of ECU.

Halt Of Bakker's Trial Also Ends Public Sideshow

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — For now, the show is over. The suspension of Jim Bakker's fraud and conspiracy trial last week also halted a sideshow by impersonators and vendors hoping to make a few bucks off the misfortunes of the fallen PTL leader and his wife, Tammy Faye.

Throng of curiosity-seekers dispersed after Bakker suffered a breakdown and was sent away Thursday for psychiatric tests at the federal prison hospital in Butner.

Dr. Sally Johnson, who also evaluated presidential assailant John Hinckley Jr., is leading a team conducting tests to determine Bakker's competency to stand trial, said Bryan Bledsoe, executive assistant to the warden.

An hour before Bakker's U.S. District Court trial started a week ago today, a chauffeur-driven Cadillac marked "Jim and Tammy PTL Limousine" pulled up to the courthouse. The chauffeur hopped out and opened the car's door to let out two people who appeared from a distance to be Jim and Tammy Bakker.

Jeff and Lucille Thompson of Charlotte were wearing rubber Jim and Tammy masks and expensive-looking clothes and jewelry. A minute later, the impersonators climbed back into their limousine and left.

Then there was Lida Lee Pink and her cousin Paul, who said they drove from Topsy, Tenn., to peddle homemade Bible Belts — tiny black booklets that contained a few Bible verses and were attached by Velcro to belts made of black seat-belt webbing. The belts were offered for $22.39, including tax, postage and handling. However, Ms. Pink said no one was buying them.

Larry Starnes and Jerry Lowrance of Gastonia hawked recordings of their PTL Song from underneath a beach umbrella. Lowrance said he produced the country-tacky parody in 1986.

For nearly two days until they were persuaded to stop, they played the song from a portable tape recorder over and over: "To avoid that trip to Hell, join the P.T.L."

Judge Robert Potter had ordered marshals to keep the spectator sideshow off the courthouse's spacious grounds, so the commotion was limited to sidewalks and did not filter into the courtroom.

Bakker, 49, is accused of using nearly $4 million in ministry funds to finance a lavish lifestyle. If convicted, he could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million.

He was committed to Butner after psychiatrist Dr. Basil Jackson testified Bakker was hallucinating and hiding his head under a couch in his attorney's office.

Potter suspended the trial at least until Wednesday, telling the jury nothing about Bakker's condition.

Migrant Worker Advocates Believe New Law On Inspections Will Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Advocates for migrant workers hope a new law will signify improved housing conditions for thousands of blacks, Hispanics and Haitians who come into North Carolina every year to harvest tobacco, sweet potatoes, cucumbers and apples.

Paula Eure, farm labor coordinator for the N.C. Farm Bureau, said farmers should have an easier time determining what sort of standards their migrant housing must meet. That, in turn, will make it easier for them to meet the standards, she said.

Mary Lee Hall, director of Farmworker Legal Services of North Carolina, said she hoped that farm groups, having agreed to the consolidated regulation, will educate farmers about the changes in the regulations.

"For the first time, agricultural interests agreed there was a problem with housing," she said. "I'm optimistic that we will see an increasing number brought up to standard."

The source of the optimism is a law enacted by the General Assembly this year that consolidates the regulation of migrant-worker housing — which had been dispersed among several federal and state agencies — under the state Department of Labor.

The change was the result of a rare agreement between agricultural and migrant workers' interests.

In enacting the law, the Legislature for the most part adopted existing federal requirements for health and sanitation, and state requirements for heating, fire safety and kitchen facilities.

"The fact that we were able to agree indicates the absolute need for the new legislation," said Henry Babb, a Wilson lawyer who represents the N.C. Pickle Packers Association, a trade group of manufacturers and major growers. "Everyone was in agreement that the prior legislation was absolute chaos."

The result is that all migrant camp will fall under the same regulations.

Until now, state laws and regulations have applied to migrant camps in which more than 12 workers lived. Federal regulations cover virtually all camps, regardless of size.

The result was that some farmers assumed incorrectly that their camps were exempt from all regulation if they had 12 or fewer migrant workers. And worker advocates say that, because of a shortage of federal inspectors, smaller camps rarely were inspected.

Under the new law, said Charles Jeffress, assistant state labor commissioner, "Clearly, there will be inspections at more camps."

A significant change made by legislators is a new requirement that farmers who provide housing have that housing inspected before it is occupied. That marks the first time that farmers will be required to report to the state the existence of a camp.

Estimates of the number of camps in North Carolina range from 3,000 to 5,000, but the state has records for only 1,000 camps. An estimated 20,000 migrant workers come into North Carolina each year.

But there are some concerns about whether the labor department has enough resources to handle the increased work load.

The Legislature set aside money for 10 additional field inspectors and four other employees to work with the program. Jeffress estimates that the department will be able to inspect about 600 camps next year.

"We either have to get much more efficient or more staff," he said. "It's going to be difficult."

Durham Integration Efforts Recalled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — The first seven black students to integrate three previously all-white Durham city schools were honored over the weekend — a contrast to the jeers and contempt they suffered when integration occurred 30 years ago.

Durham City Schools board vice chairman Betty Copeland remembered that two of the seven students — Henry Vickers and Andree McKissick — had been her classmates in all-black schools.

School board member Willa Bryant, a former teacher, recalled that as a mother she had faced the question of whether to enroll her daughter in a white school.

"I didn't have the courage you did," she said, nodding to Amanda Brame, the mother of two daughters, Anita and Claudette Brame, who were among the first seven. "She wanted to go. But I had seen too much."

The pioneers themselves — including Lucy Flagler, the Rev. Larry Scurlock and Joycelyn McKissick — acknowledged that they had suffered pain and isolation during their years in white schools.

"Nobody said life would be easy," said Mrs. Flagler, who said she had gone on to be among the first blacks in her Army unit. "I hope we made it easier for the next generation."

Bernard Dillard, student body president at Durham's Hillside High School, said the obvious question for the occasion was, "How is the integration process going now?"

He noted that his school is 99.9 percent black. Thirty years ago, Hillside was the city's all-black school.

"There should be more opportunities for black and white students to live, study and play together," he said.

"We have so much to teach each other. Besides, when we leave Durham's schools we will have to interact with each other. We need to learn to do that now."

Tarboro Pedestrian Killed On Highway

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least five people died on North Carolina roads during the long Labor Day holiday weekend, the state Highway Patrol said.

Charlie Lee, 51, of Wake Forest, was driving at a high speed when his vehicle crossed the center line on a rural road near Wendell in Wake County about 9:35 p.m. Saturday and hit an oncoming car head on, troopers said. Lee was thrown from his car when it overturned.

James Hagans, 42, of Tarboro, was killed Saturday at 8:05 p.m. when he walked into the path of an oncoming car on U.S. 64 near Princeville in Edgecombe County.

Martha Brady Richardson, 84, of Rockingham was killed at 4:55 p.m. Saturday on N.C. 177 in Richmond County.

Euland Abell Jackson, 71, of Pinehurst, was killed at 3:10 p.m. Saturday when the car in which he was a passenger in hit a tree off N.C. 2 in Moore County, troopers said.

Cloyce Eugene Deter, 73, of Cedar Grove, as killed at 8:15 p.m. Friday when his car pulled into the path of another vehicle on N.C. 86, 10 miles north of Hillsborough in Orange County, troopers said.

So far this year, 933 people have died in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads, compared with 1,007 at this same time last year.

Hurricane Picking Up Strength

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Hurricane Gabrielle was unusually large and packed 125 mph winds as it drifted westward in the open Atlantic, and forecasters said it should strengthen.

The fourth hurricane of the Atlantic season did not pose any immediate danger to land today, forecasters at the National Hurricane Center said.

"This is definitely a hurricane that needs to be respected," said forecaster Bob Case. "Gabrielle is a large Cape Verde type hurricane — which means it formed off the coast of Africa at the peak of the season when waters are the warmest and the atmosphere is the most favorable for strengthening."

At 10:30 p.m. EDT Sunday, Gabrielle's center was near 17.1 north latitude and 52.2 west longitude, about 640 miles east of the Lesser Antilles in the West Indies. It was moving west-northwest at 17 mph and was expected to continue that course and speed through today.

Gabrielle formed Thursday and its winds quickly surpassed minimum hurricane force of 74 mph. Case noted that Gabrielle has quickly become an unusually large hurricane, with an eye 20 miles across and a total size up to 350 miles across.

Far to the north, Tropical Storm Felix moved westerly and was expected to gradually turn toward the northwest today.

At 10:30 p.m., the center of Felix was near 34.2 north latitude and 45.4 west longitude, or about 840 miles southwest of the westernmost Azores.

Its winds were about 40 mph, just above the 39-mph threshold for a named storm. Little change in strength was expected through today.

published Sunday. "We thought their conditions were some of the worst we had ever seen. We have had ... just a ton of letters from people saying they can't believe bears can be kept in those conditions."

The Washington-based group, known for stridently opposing the use of animals for experimentation, decided to take on the Cherokee bear owners because of the unusually large number of complaints filed with PETA, Ms. Chynoweth said. She did not know how many had been received.

Ms. Chynoweth said PETA does not want to return the bears to the wild. It wants to put them in a habitat on Grandfather Mountain where 10 bears live in three natural areas on six acres.

CHEROKEE, N.C. — Members of the nation's largest animal rights group are planning a vigorous protest against Cherokee Indians who own caged bears in this Smoky Mountain resort town.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals want to put the bears in sanctuaries, possibly in one on Grandfather Mountain near Linville in Avery County. To accomplish that, they'll try to persuade tourists to boycott all animal exhibits on the reservation, especially bears, beginning Saturday.

Activists from North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia will meet that day at the Oconaluftee Visitor Center at the North Carolina entrance to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, armed with petitions, leaflets, and brochures, Ann Chynoweth, a PETA researcher, said.

Later, she said, some demonstrators might go onto the reservation even though Chief Jonathan L. "Ed" Taylor has threatened to arrest them. He could not be reached for comment.

"We want to make sure that the bears are not money-makers," Ms. Chynoweth told The News and Observer of Raleigh in a story

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Beginning

The Perspective Of Half A Century

Fifty years ago Adolph Hitler's German troops were marching into Poland.

They had attacked on Sept. 1 in a fateful move that was the beginning of World War II. It was to be a devastating war which would eventually involve the United States and all the world powers. It created the world that we live in today.

In September, 1939, however, there was not a great deal of sentiment in the United States for becoming involved in Europe. Though some recognized the threat the feeling was that our troops had gone once and it should be left to Great Britain, France and other European powers to handle the problem.

We were to learn, however, that the Hitler war machine was deadly. His tanks, planes and other modern weapons of warfare crushed Poland in 17 days. The British and French joined the fray but only in spirit. France recognized the threat to its security but relied on the Maginot Line for defense. Later that would be easily breached by Hitler's motorized army.

In September, 1939, though the world was disturbed, but had no conception of the horror which was ahead. Fifty million people would disappear. Some 70 million men and women would be mobilized in the world's armies and 17 million of them were to be killed.

In the United States the problems of depression were still paramount. Our leaders were concerned with the events unfolding in Europe, but also concerned about Japanese militarism in the Pacific.

It would be over two years before the realities of war would overwhelm the United States, but in this month in 1939 events were inexorably pulling our nation into war.

In the years ahead young men and women would leave their homes for far away destinations. Telegrams would regularly arrive informing family that their loved one was missing, wounded or killed in action.

The maps of the world were to be reshaped in ways that continue to concern us today. It was to be a horrible war which still scars us, repels us and fascinates us in 1989.

Did any good come of it? Well it changed the way we live. There has been no new economic depression since World War II pulled us out of the 1930s. We travel by jet aircraft which were developed during the war. The way of life of millions of people changed in the post war era. And we live with an unchained monster called nuclear power.

Perhaps the best that has come of World War II is that we have not had another like it in the post war era. Another world war would destroy us all. So far even the wildest, most insane leader of any country had understood that. World War II with all its devastation didn't settle much. It is universally recognized that another war between the giants of the world will benefit no one.

'Perhaps the best that has come of World War II is that we have not had another like it in the post war era. Another world war would destroy us all.'

Creatures Of Their Environment

NEW YORK — Across the river from where I sit, is a section of Brooklyn called Bensonhurst. It was there that a black man was killed for — as someone put it — being in the wrong place at the wrong time. He reportedly went into Bensonhurst to buy a used car and was shot to death for being black. It is as simple as that.

Richard Cohen

But not to some of the people I know and others I have been reading. They offer all sorts of explanations for what happened in Bensonhurst, everything from how this was not really a racial crime to descriptions of the economic plight of its young residents. They are industrial workers in a city where there is little industry, powerless people who compensate with a swaggering machismo. That is why Yusef Hawkins, 16, got killed.

Others brought up affirmative action. The young men of Bensonhurst, we were told, had been passed over in favor of blacks. For a job. For college admissions. For a scholarship. They thought they were being played for suckers, honoring the rules (hard work, stable families, loyalty to the community) while those who broke all the rules got the rewards anyway.

These were some of the explanations offered after Hawkins was killed. But Bensonhurst is where, as a youth, I sold magazines door-to-door. Way before industry fled New York, way before cushy union jobs became scarce or you could, through the good graces of the Democratic machine, work two hours at an eight-hour job, too many of the people of Bensonhurst were bigots.

Not all of them, of course — no, not all. But a significant number. They called blacks "niggers" and, even, names far worse than that. They thought blacks were their biological inferiors, not quite human and — all of them — menacing and dangerous. These young men were not particularly tolerant of other ethnic groups — Puerto Ricans, Jews, the Irish — but for blacks they reserved a special vehemence. They hated them with a passion.

It has been 30 years since I trudged the streets of Bensonhurst, peddling magazines no one seemed to want. Almost nothing has changed — but not exactly nothing. There is a difference and it comes down to this: Repeatedly over the last 20 years, the bigots of Bensonhurst, like the bigots elsewhere in America, have been courted by the political establishment. Their false sense of victimization (blacks get away with murder) has been reinforced by politicians seeking to win just one more election. This has been true on a local level and nationally as well.

You only have to go back to the 1972 presidential election. Then, Richard Nixon was determined not to be outflanked by George Wallace, the racist governor of Alabama. If whites bitterly opposed the busing of school children, then so did Nixon. If whites failed to understand the difference between desegregation and forced integration — between rectifying what was wrong and what you might call social engineering — then Nixon was not about to correct them.

As politics, this was a wonderful strategy. The white backlash helped put Nixon in the White House, formed a key constituency for Ronald Reagan and George Bush and helped move the South from the Democratic to the Republican column in presidential and local races. After each election — and sometimes during the campaign — politicians would respond "Who me?" when accused of pandering to racism.

But the voters sure got the message. How can you explain in a presidential race in which both candidates are white, how almost no blacks voted for George Bush? How can you explain that in areas where race was an issue Michael Dukakis ran poorer than elsewhere? Even a man from Mars could figure this one out.

New Yorkers have an exaggerated sense of their city's importance. But it is not an empire unto itself. It's just a little piece of the United States, part of it and affected by it. The punks of Bensonhurst were not born yesterday. They were raised in an environment where racism was tolerated — by their elders and by political leaders. They took their cue from the perceived views of politicians — by the pandering to racism, by the failure to rebuff. We cannot blame the Hawkins murder on politicians, but neither can we hold them completely innocent.

After a young investment banker was mugged and raped by a group of black and Hispanic youths in Central Park, some commentators did not hesitate to call them "evil." With more than a little contempt, they dismissed the efforts of some of us to explain — to say that these kids were creatures of their environment, the inner-city. Well, the punks of Bensonhurst are no different. They, too, are creatures of their environment — not poverty, but racism.

In a way, they shot at Willie Horton. Unfortunately, they killed Yusef Hawkins.

Nostalgic, Yes, But An Anniversary With Meaning

Haynes Johnson

WASHINGTON — There's an old saying in the newspaper business that a "sob story," the kind that brings tears to a reader's eyes, is the most difficult for a good reporter to write and for a bad reporter to avoid writing.

Only second in the to-be-avoided category is the anniversary story. Naturally, it has become the most unavoidable journalistic story, replacing the sob story in its ritual appearance, portraying old news as new.

As Russell Baker wrote the other day, in one of his delightfully iconoclastic columns: "Nowadays America seems afflicted with hardening of the arteries. How else explain this senescent preoccupation with the largely meaningless detritus of the past? This morbid interest in the long ago, is reflected in the steady stream of anniversary stories with which the press routinely stuffs us."

He gave, as worthy examples, the ridiculous recent outpouring of stories commemorating the 20th anniversary of Woodstock, an insignificant and wildly inflated event if ever there was one, the 50th anniversary of the Stalin-Hitler pact and the regularity with which anniversaries of rock concerts, similar media "happenings" and deaths of celebrities from Marilyn to Elvis are routinely given exhaustive — and exhausting — press notice.

The effect of all this, Baker said, "is to make the public feel old and melancholy, and old and melancholy often seems to be the way America feels at this pass in history."

Fair enough, so be forewarned, because this is an anniversary story, one that demands to be noted and comes with no apologies.

Fifty years ago Friday, World War II began when Hitler's Germany attacked Poland by land, sea and air without the formality of a declaration of war.

If you were in New York that day, you could pick up the last edition of The Sun and, beneath startling three-deck banner headlines, read that the Germans were denying that war had broken out. Their attack was "merely a counterblow in retaliation for last night's alleged Polish attack on Gleiwitz."

War it was, nonetheless, and a war that remains the seminal event of our time, eclipsing in importance everything since, from the birth of the atomic age to the exploration of outer space. In fact, the atomic bomb that made possible almost instantaneous mass extinction of human beings and the rockets that have permitted humans to explore space are among many legacies of that war. The world that exists today, its problems and opportunities, is a direct result of events set in motion Sept. 1, 1939.

The lives of everyone on the planet, the great majority of whom were not born then, were affected by that war and its outcome. Whether or not they know it, people everywhere continue to be influenced by those forces. Major events this summer in Europe, the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe and China are reminders of how inseparably linked to that past is the world today.

The war shaped existing national boundaries and international tensions. It led to emergence of the Soviet Union and the United States as the major competing superpowers and subsequently to China becoming a second great communist power.

The series of major and minor conflicts that have flared around the globe in the last half century — Korea, Vietnam, Cuba One (Bay of Pigs), Cuba Two (missile crisis), Israel versus the Arab world, Afghanistan and countless guerrilla actions — are part of the ideological divisions left by the war. Out of that conflict came partition of Germany, the appearance of the Iron Curtain sealing off the Eastern bloc and the Cold War that has defined East-West tension for decades.

And, of course, the war inflicted a ghastly price — and, especially for Europeans, one extracted for the second time in a generation. World War I had resulted in 38 million casualties, figures dwarfed by the carnage that began 50 years ago. In the Soviet Union, about 20 million military and civilian lives were lost; in China, more than 7 million, primarily civilian; in Germany, almost 7 million, and in Japan, about 2 million. The United States, which virtually alone among the warring nations escaped untouched at home by the destruction, lost 405,399 lives from battle and other causes.

Another 670,846 Americans were wounded.

From the U.S. standpoint, the war had three profound consequences. It thrust the nation into the position of world leadership that it continues to hold, though less securely and with new uncertainty. It reinforced the mythology of American invincibility and superiority, which in turn created costly complacency for which the nation now is beginning to pay in the face of far stiffer competition. Finally, it kindled a unity of spirit and national purpose that lasted for years and helped the United States to make stunning advances, though this unity has eroded steadily in recent years, making national consensus more difficult to achieve.

Melancholy? Wallowing in nostalgia? Perhaps. But as anniversaries go, this one hardly is meaningless.

President Finally Lands A Bluefish As His Three-Week Vacation Ends called upon to recite a verse at St. Ann's. He said he will ask the nation to become involved in community service to help fight the drug problem.

In addition to the $7.8 billion anti-drug plan, Bush is gearing up for rough sledding in Congress on how to reduce the federal deficit and other budget and taxation issues.

He has a full travel schedule, including an education summit for the nation's governors Sept. 27-28 in Charlottesville, Va., a trip to Costa Rica for a hemispheric meeting in October, and short jaunts to New Jersey, Maryland and then New York for an address to the United Nations on Sept. 24.

He also is expected to make a swing west to Montana, South Dakota and Washington state this month.

U.S.-Soviet relations also are on the agenda, with Secretary of State James A. Baker III set to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in Wyoming. It is anticipated they could set a date for a summit meeting between Bush and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Also looming is what to do about continued problems in Nicaragua and Panama.

Reporters asked the president if he would be sad to leave the seaside resort where he has spent all but one wartime summer of his life.

"Yeah, but I'm ready to go back," he replied. "I'm ready to go to work."

The "icing on the cake" for a recreation-filled vacation was that he finally caught the bluefish, he said.

His press aides summoned reporters and photographers dockside for his triumphant return to his Walker's Point home.

Bush's inability to reel in a fish, despite daily outings since his Aug. 16 arrival, had become a media fixation. First lady Barbara Bush, son Marvin, and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft were aboard for the successful outing.

Bush brandished the fish aloft as he motored his speedboat to shore. He invited the press corps to stick around as he cleaned the fish and hacked its head off, saving it "for soup."

"A tremendous fish ... a very strong fish," he said, estimating its weight at "nine or 10 pounds."

He replied with an emphatic "No" when a reporter, voicing an ongoing vacation joke, asked if there was truth to the rumor that Navy divers were below the boat helping the fish get on Bush's hook.

Later, Bush pronounced a "great ending" to his vacation when he and golf pro Ken Raynor beat Scowcroft and friend Spike Heminway on the links.

Bush also beat Heminway in three sets of doubles tennis earlier, according to Heminway, who said the president was "on a roll" Sunday.

Concert Fight

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Several people were injured and police reported property damage early Sunday when hundreds of youths attending a concert began throwing rocks and bottles during a fight on a city street.

Wilson Police Sgt. Ed Moseley said a Wilson County deputy was slightly injured and several other people were treated and released at a local hospital after the disturbance.

The incident began about 12:15 a.m. when 300 to 400 youths who had been at a concert at the North Carolina National Guard Armory poured onto the street, Moseley said. A fight broke out in the crowd, he said, and soon dozens of other people were involved.

Several police cars and some private vehicles were damaged when hit by rocks, bricks and bottles, Moseley said. Windows were broken in the front door of the armory as well, he said. At least three people were arrested, and others were given citations for disorderly conduct and carrying concealed weapons, authorities said.

Emergency Landing

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A single-engine plane enroute to Hickory from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., made an emergency landing Saturday off N.C. 10 after it lost power at 2,500 feet, officials said.

No one was injured.

About 1:30 p.m., pilot William Witcher of Fort Lauderdale and a passenger were about 10 miles south of the Hickory Airport when the plane's engine suddenly stopped, said North Carolina Highway Patrol Trooper K.P. Pitts.

Witcher prepared to land at the nearest isolated road rather than try to glide to the airport, Pitts said.

The plane quickly lost altitude, Pitts said, and was on the ground within minutes. As it landed, the plane clipped several mailboxes, spun around, and struck a fence, he said.

Pot Bust

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg Police harvested 866 marijuana plants near the University of North Carolina at Charlotte on Saturday, and they say the crop would have been worth $1 million when cured and sold on the street.

Capt. J.R. Haston said the owner of the property, between Interstate-85 and U.S. 29 north of University City, apparently knew nothing of the plants until Friday.

In a remote area of undeveloped land, officers pulled up and hacked off the plants, which were 10 to 15 feet tall, said Haston.

They amounted to a pickup-truck load, which was delivered to Mecklenburg County police headquarters. The plants will be burned. The raid on the field is the first major marijuana crop destroyed in Mecklenburg in recent years, said Haston.

Fire Deaths

CRABTREE, N.C. (AP) — The bodies of two people were found in a Haywood County house that caught fire early Saturday morning, authorities say.

The bodies of a man and woman, which were burned beyond recognition, were sent to the chief medical examiners office in Chapel Hill for positive identification. The names were not released Sunday.

Haywood County Sheriff's Detective John Ruff said a preliminary autopsy indicated the two died of smoke inhalation.

Shooting Death

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — A Fayetteville woman was charged Sunday with second-degree murder in the shooting death of a Spring Lake man during a cookout, officials say.

Stacy Cornell Moore, 24, died after being shot in the chest and the leg, according to Spring Lake Police Chief Gil Campbell said. He said the bullet to Moore's chest pierced his heart and a lung.

Gwinda Lavon Barnes, 26, was charged with second-degree murder after surrendering at the Spring Lake Police Department on Sunday, Campbell said.

Campbell said Moore and Barnes were attending a cookout about 10 p.m. Saturday at the old bowling alley when they began arguing.

Moore was shot during an altercation outside the building, Campbell said.

Hurled Objects

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake Forest man was charged with disruptive behavior after he allegedly hurled newspaper vending machines and construction barricades at passing cars, authorities say.

Thomas Miller Hadsell, 37, was charged with eight counts of damage to property and one count of intoxicated and disruptive behavior.

Raleigh Police Officer M.S. Collins said he arrested Hadsell after spotting him picking up barricades and tossing them into the street at a downtown Raleigh construction site.

"He just made a damn mess," Collins said. "It looked like a hurricane had been through there. You could tell everywhere he had been."

Hadsell is accused of damaging nine newspaper vending machines belonging to three different newspapers and tearing the antennas off a parked truck, Collins said.

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — Summer vacation is over for President Bush, who returns to Washington today to launch a fall calendar packed with domestic and foreign issues.

The president was heading back to the capital from his vacation home in Maine after an 11-hour triumph at what became a consuming goal of his three-week trip — catching a fish.

"The jinx is broken!" he called jubilantly to reporters as he came ashore Sunday holding aloft a two-foot-long bluefish.

Even as he fulfilled his vow to catch one before his return, the president's mind was clearly turning back to the White House and the first major item on his schedule — a Tuesday night address to the nation revealing his national drug policy strategy.

"Tomorrow it starts all over again. I don't know what you guys have to do, but I know what I've got to do: head back to work," Bush told parishioners at St. Ann's Episcopal Church where the pastor invited him to take the pulpit.

He said he needed to "start studying hard" for the drug speech, the first presidential address he will deliver for broadcast on national television.

"It's the first speech I'll give from the Oval Office. I'm not going to be scared," he said, recounting how as a young child he would shake when

Army Expanding Drug Testing Despite Claim Usage Declining

By Susanne M. Schaler
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Army is expanding its drug testing program to include checks for use of speed, morphine and angel dust, amid Pentagon boasts that drug use already has dropped sharply in recent years.

Although there is little evidence that such drugs are being used widely by enlisted personnel or officers, Army officials say the top brass wants the tests as a new deterrent against drug use.

Since 1981, all active-duty military personnel have been subject to random urinalysis tests to check for the abuse of cocaine and THC, the active ingredient in marijuana and hashish.

The testing was later broadened to include the Army reserves and National Guard, and severe penalties were imposed.

Since July, the Army's five drug testing laboratories have added a new test at an expected cost of $1 million to $2 million per year, according to Donna Smith, head of the Army's alcohol and drug policy unit.

"The army leadership made the decision ... that we wanted to have a greater capability for deterrence, so that soldiers knew that (if they use drugs) they are going to be at risk for the consequences," Mrs. Smith said.

The new tests will include checks against opiates such as morphine and codeine; amphetamines such as speed; and phenylethylamine, more commonly known as PCP or angel dust, said Army spokeswoman Paige Eversol.

"Everyone can be expected to be tested at least once a year," Ms. Eversol said. "We mean business."

Drug use by military personnel already has dropped dramatically in recent years, officials say.

Steve Duncan, assistant secretary of defense in charge of drug policy, said about 27 percent of the military forces overall tested positive for drug use in 1980, but last year the number was down to 4.8 percent.

In the Army, Mrs. Smith said, "In 1983, 10 percent of all samples that we sent to the laboratory were positive. In 1988, less than 2 percent of all samples come back that way."

Not every sample among the 758,000-strong Army force will be tested for all the drugs, she said, adding that the new tests will be conducted on a rotating basis.

Soldiers in a unit that has been tested will not know which of the three newly added drug tests will be conducted on their samples. But since some of the new drugs included in the tests can be obtained with legally prescribed medications, soldiers who test positive for those drugs must be evaluated by a military physician to see if the drug use was proper, Mrs. Eversol said.

The Army began the broader testing more as a preventive measure than because of any evidence that use of heroin, amphetamines or angel dust is particularly high, Mrs. Smith said.

In fact, she noted, spot tests have shown that use of such drugs has not been "above one-half of 1 percent ... of the specimens that we have tested for that drug."

But the military leadership intends for the military to be drug-free, Ms. Smith said.

Army policy requires every officer or non-commissioned officer who has a single positive drug test to be processed for discharge from the service.

An enlisted soldier who tests positive once is offered a chance for counseling and rehabilitation. But a soldier who tests positive a second time must be kicked out of the service, she said.

Any soldier who is diagnosed as dependent upon a drug also must be discharged, she said, adding, "The Army program is not designed to rehabilitate the addict, it's designed to rehabilitate the user."

In the 1988 fiscal year, some 4,600 soldiers were kicked out for drug-related offenses, Ms. Eversol said.

Suit Challenges Management Act

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — South Carolina's sweeping Beachfront Management Act faces a crucial test this week when a lawsuit challenging the law as unconstitutional is aired in federal court.

U.S. District Judge Falcon Hawkins will hear the action brought by a group of Hilton Head Island property owners which asks the judge bar the state from enforcing the act.

The law, which took effect in July of last year, mandates a gradual retreat from the state's eroding shoreline and established, for the first time, statewide shorefront building setbacks.

Last month, the act flunked its first major test when a state judge ruled the building restrictions made two oceanfront lots on the Isle of Palms worthless.

Family Court Judge Larry Patterson ordered the state to pay David Lucas $1.2 million for the lots at the Wild Dunes resort.

Patterson did not rule the law unconstitutional but did decide Lucas was left with worthless property and so was entitled to compensation from the state.

The suit before Hawkins — really three suits which have been combined in one case for the hearing — challenges the very basis of the law.

But no witnesses are expected to testify late Tuesday morning when the case opens. Attorneys have agreed on, or stipulated, most of the facts in the case and will mainly argue points of law.

The arguments are expected to last about a day, said William Want, an attorney representing the South Carolina Coastal Council which is named as defendant in the suit.

Panda Cub Dies After Long Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — National Zoo officials are turning their hopes for a successful panda cub birth to next year, following the death of female panda Ling-Ling's fifth cub from an infection.

The unnamed male cub died Sunday after 39 hours of fighting the infection transmitted from its mother, zoo officials said.

Although Ling-Ling is 20 years old — the oldest panda surviving in any zoo — there have been cases in China where pandas older Ling-Ling have given birth, said zoo director Michael Robinson.

"Behaviorally, Ling-Ling has shown every indication of being an excellent mother," Robinson said.

"We're not doing this out of any whim or whimsy ... We're doing it to save a species," Robinson said.

"We'll face next year with more knowledge and experience than ever before," said Lisa Stevens, manager in charge of the zoo's Panda House.

As her human handlers recounted Ling-Ling's latest travails at a news conference Sunday, the black and white animal sat in her nest cradling apples put there in place of her missing baby.

The tiny cub, weighing only 3.1 ounces, was born prematurely Friday at the National Zoo and taken from its 230-pound mother six hours later because of concern of infection.

Zoo officials said the cub first began showing signs of strength but then weakened despite around-the-clock efforts by zoo veterinarians and pediatric experts enlisted from nearby Children's Hospital.

Washington Minister Lines Up Role Models For Youngsters

By Tamara Honey
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Young people need help to break the cycle of negative choices in their lives, says a minister who is lining up positive role models for youths living in the drug-infested, violence-riddled nation's capital.

The result is the youth group "Lean On Me" which recently completed a month-long experimental run financed mainly by the Rev. Elwood Gray and a few friends.

"I feel that education is a community responsibility," said Gray. "A child doesn't know if he wants to be an attorney, preacher or medical doctor.

"But just imagine in your own life if you were 11 or 12 years old and you would go to a place where there was an attorney, a physician, a teacher or a preacher, and you had a chance to sit and question them about real life."

Armed with evidence of the group's initial success — mainly anecdotal reports from dozens of the adolescents and teenagers who attended — Gray is beginning plans for a permanent organization.

At the last meeting of the summer, 14-year-old Michael Smith said he enjoyed the opportunity to chat with Rick Sanders, of a local radio station, about the importance of setting career goals and with Angele Moss, a prison psychologist, about developing and maintaining positive self-esteem.

The discussions, held at Howard University, turned into a free-for-all.

"Do you ever feel sometimes like you're about to go crazy?" asked Michael, prompting Ms. Moss to smile and the other youngsters to giggle.

Describing the pressures on today's youth, Ms. Moss assured the youngster his feelings are natural.

The District of Columbia is the nation's murder capital, with the death toll reaching 304 as of Monday, compared with 219 at the same time last year. Officer Quintin Peterson said 29 of the homicide victims were under age 18. Other statistics show that 75 percent to 80 percent of the homicides were drug-related.

The city had a record 372 homicides in 1988.

Gray is adamant about the need to provide positive role models for black children.

"We are not talking about ex-offenders, ex-drug addicts to move in and talk to the kids," said Gray who has worked for 10 years as a chaplain at the Lorton correctional complex in Virginia.

"We are not proclaiming 'Say No to Drugs.' We don't have anything against those but what we are doing is we are giving them positive choices so they can make positive selections. We need to give young people positive options. Don't tell them what not to do, tell them what to do," he said.

Gray also wants to teach youngsters to use their leisure time in positive ways.

"Metropolitan areas throughout America struggle with problems regarding their youth making positive use of their leisure time," said Gray.

A recent survey of adolescents in Minnesota found that for whites 20 percent of above average students had alcohol problems but almost 50 percent of below average students abused alcohol; only 5 percent of above-average female students were at serious risk for pregnancy because of their behavior while 21 percent of below-average females were similarly at risk.

"For many youth in our area, life is a series of failures and they are trapped in a cycle of negative and unproductive choices," said Gray.

"Lean On Me" will provide positive alternatives presented by role models ... in order to break this cycle of negative choices and unproductive use of leisure time," Gray said, adding that the group will provide "a supportive network to facilitate the involvement of community volunteers who want to make a difference in the lives of our young people."

Poll Finds Supporters For Higher Wage Base

By Gary Langer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Americans overwhelmingly favor an increase in the federal minimum wage, even though most workers are generally satisfied with their pay, a national poll has found.

Nearly nine in 10 respondents to the Media General Associated Press poll wanted the hourly minimum raised from $3.35, and two-thirds of them favored the $1.55 minimum approved by Congress but vetoed by President Bush in June.

At the same time, six in 10 supported Bush's proposal for a "training wage" under which new workers could be kept at $3.35 for their first six months on the job. Congress has not adopted that plan.

On other workplace issues this Labor Day, nearly four in 10 respondents said they would join a labor union at their workplace, even though most regarded management more favorably than they viewed unions.

Most workers gave favorable ratings to their salaries, job conditions and time off, the survey found. But pensions were a sore point, and more than a third were unhappy with their pay.

In a Gallup Poll, meanwhile, most full-time American workers said they were satisfied with their jobs. Twenty-eight percent said they were completely satisfied with their job and 60 percent said they were mostly satisfied, while 3 percent said they were completely dissatisfied.

Many of the 1,163 adult respondents to the Media General-Associated Press poll saw unions as weakening, and few objected to that trend. Still, 49 percent said workers are better off with a union, while 31 percent disagreed.

Overall, 47 percent said they were unwilling to join a union, while 37 percent said they would join one. Seven in 10 favored so-called right-to-work laws, which ban mandatory union membership. And while 44 percent had a favorable opinion of unions, 64 percent thought favorably of management.

Rating their own circumstances at work, respondents gave top grades to the safety of their workplace — 87 percent said excellent or good — and overall working conditions, with 81 percent favorable.

Nearly seven in 10 were happy with their time off, 61 percent rated their health benefits favorably and 60 percent said their salary was excellent or good, as opposed to fair or poor.

Pension benefits received the lowest ratings. Of those with an opinion, just 46 percent viewed their pension plans favorably, while 41 percent were dissatisfied. A quarter called their pension benefits poor.

But benefits were not the prime concern: Fifty-four percent said they would prefer better wages to better benefits. Just 15 percent said their salaries were excellent.

White collar, management employees were less concerned with wages: Seven in 10 rated their salaries favorably, compared with 57 percent of blue-collar workers and of non-management white collar workers.

While 83 percent of union members said that workers are better off with unions, 46 percent of management employees said that workers are better off non-unionized.

New Tax Law Will Let Senators Use Contributions For Expenses

By Anne Swardson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A vaguely worded provision inserted by Senate Republicans into last year's tax law allows election-campaign contributions to be spent for senators' office costs — from dry cleaning to new cars — from foreign travel — free of federal income tax.

The provision reverses longstanding tax law and Internal Revenue Service policy. Although federal election law allows campaign funds to be spent for office expenses, the IRS had said in two revenue rulings that such transfers were subject to a 34 percent tax.

One of the biggest beneficiaries of the change appears to be the National Republican Senatorial Committee, whose role is to promote the election of Republican senators.

Without last year's law, taxes would have to be paid on the millions of dollars the committee spends for senators' non-campaign costs, including thousands of dollars worth of "interviews" with senators recorded in the Senate's television studio and beamed by satellite to local television news programs.

"If it's going to be done, it ought to be done openly and above board, with congressional debate and IRS opinions," said Gregory Colvin, a San Francisco tax lawyer who discovered the provision while paging through the new law recently. "It looks to me like a secret move to reach from one pocket to the other one and transfer funds without tax."

Colvin apparently was the first person to make the provision public when he wrote an article about it in the trade publication Tax Notes. Tax Notes followed with other articles about the provision and senators' use of campaign funds for non-campaign expenses.

According to campaign reports to the Federal Election Commission, the NRSC this year has bought a $539 subscription to National Journal for Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.), $50 worth of dry cleaning for Sen. Larry Pressler (R-S.D.), a $119.60 subscription to the Casper (Wyo.) Star-Tribune for Sen. Alan Simpson (R-Wyo.), a $636 television-recording session for Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.), a $102.65 media-clipping service for Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), a $177 booth at the Kansas State Fair for Sen. Nancy Kassebaum (R-Kan.) and $198 worth of photos from the Senate Photographic Studio for Sen. Pete V. Domenici (R-N.M.), among other expenses. Democratic senators receive no such aid from their election committee but instead have used leftover funds from their own campaign committees to cover non-campaign costs.

Sen. Bill Bradley (D-N.J.), for example, spent $1,111 in campaign funds on a trip to Switzerland in May. The campaign committee for Sen. Spark Matsunaga (D-Hawaii), bought a $27,000 Cadillac for use in Washington. And Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen (D-Tex.) spent $8,267.50 in campaign funds earlier this year for use of the Senate television recording studio.

Like many tax provisions with special-interest beneficiaries, this one is couched in obscure language. It does not mention senators or their campaign committees. The congressional report on the law describes it as a "conforming change" allowing holders of elective office to be reimbursed for their expenses without tax penalty.

But NRSC staffers said many senators were told before the provision was written that the tax penalty — the result of a limitation on business deductions in the Tax Reform Act of 1986 — was looming. Senate Republicans attempted to insert the exemption from tax into the tax bills of 1986 and 1987 before finally succeeding in 1988.

(The change does not benefit House members, who are prohibited by House rules from using campaign funds for office expenses. State legislators can take advantage of the provision.)

Campaign committees generally are exempt from federal taxation. The contributions they collect are not taxable income as long as they are spent for legitimate campaign purposes. (Committees do pay income taxes on interest earned on their bank accounts.)

Until the 1986 law, legislators could use the campaign funds for office expenses freely, either without reporting them at all, or by reporting them as income and then deducting them as business expenses — a net tax liability of zero.

When the 1986 tax act limited that deduction for business expenses, the possibility arose that legislators would be liable for tax, yet not allowed to take the deduction.

Thus came the 1988 provision, which expanded the definition of "exempt" purposes for campaign spending to include any "ordinary and necessary" expense of holding office.

Titan Rocket Lifts Secret Military Payload Into Space

By Howard Benedict
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The last Air Force Titan 3 rocket roared into space with a secret Pentagon satellite today, ending 25 years of launches by a workhorse booster that has hurled more than 200 satellites into space.

The 16-story-tall rocket, a 34D model, blazed away from its launch pad at 1:54 a.m., brilliantly illuminating the darkness as it rumbled skyward.

"The vehicle is right on track," said Air Force Lt. Col. Ron Rand, the launch commentator.

The Air Force said it was the 135th success in 141 launches for the Titan 3.

"We close the book of the Titan 34D and move on to another generation of launch vehicles," said Brig. Gen. Thomas W. Honeywill, commander of the Air Force Systems Command. "I'd like to thank the entire Air Force and industry team for dedicated and dependable service."

Officials provided no information on today's payload, saying only that it was classified. Sources speaking on condition of anonymity said the rocket may have carried an advanced reconnaissance satellite.

A secrecy label has been placed on many of the satellites carried by Titan 3 rockets since the first was launched here in 1964.

The payloads, most built for the Defense Department, have performed many strategic military assignments. Among them were photo reconnaissance, communications, monitoring missile tests, intercepting military and diplomatic messages, verifying Soviet compliance with arms control treaties and establishing an orbiting system to provide instant alert of a hostile missile attack.

The Titan 3s also have had some notable non-classified launches, including two Viking spacecraft boosted toward landings on Mars in 1976 and the Voyager 1 and 2 probes dispatched in 1977 toward the outer planets.

Voyager 1 and 2 probed Jupiter and Saturn, while Voyager 2 two weeks ago week sent back stunning images of Neptune and its moon Triton as it completed a grand tour that included closeup looks at Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus.

The Titan 34D launched today was the 15th for that model, which is the most powerful in the Titan 3 series. It can boost 31,650-pound payloads into low Earth orbit or 4,200 pounds to stationary orbit 22,300 miles out.

The Air Force is replacing the Titan 34D with the more powerful Titan 4, the first of which successfully boosted a missile warning satellite into orbit on June 14. The new rocket can hoist 39,000 pounds to Earth orbit or 10,000 pounds to stationary orbit.

Martin Marietta Space Launch Systems in Denver has a contract to build 23 Titan 4s for the Air Force for $5.1 billion.

U.S. Military Gear Arrives In Colombia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — In the latest apparent strike by drug barons, a bomb tore through shops in an industrial suburb of the cocaine trafficking center of Medellin and wounded five people, authorities said.

The Sunday night attack came just hours after U.S. military gear began arriving, along with ground crews, trainers and technicians, for use in the government's two-week-old offensive against the ruthless cocaine underworld.

The bomb blast in the southern Medellin suburb of Itagui heavily damaged a two-story commercial building including a bank, an insurance company office, a shoe store and an optical shop, an Itagui police spokesman said by telephone. He asked to remain anonymous.

Five people were wounded, Alonso Villanueva of the Colombia Red Cross in Itagui said by telephone. The blast came half an hour before a 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew took effect in Medellin and several suburbs, including Itagui.

There was no claim of responsibility, but the attack was similar to others carried out by drug traffickers who are combating an unprecedented government anti-narcotics sweep that began Aug. 18 when a leading presidential hopeful was assassinated.

In the sweep, authorities have seized hundreds of millions of dollars in property and arrested thousands of suspects.

Two bombs were tossed from a motorcycle into a garden of Medellin's Intercontinental Hotel on Sunday but no one was hurt, police said.

In the northwestern city of Monteria, a C-123 airplane of the U.S. State Department's anti-narcotics division burned at an airport Sunday, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Bogota said.

The plane was bound from Peru to the United States when it made an emergency landing in Monteria because an engine failed, the spokesman said. He said the cause of the fire was being investigated.

Drug traffickers have declared a "total and absolute war" on the state, judges, industrialists and journalists in response to the government crackdown, which has included seizure of their property and renewal of extradition to the United States.

Eight A-37 observation and attack jets from Air National Guard bases in Illinois and Michigan were expected to be delivered today to the country's military at the Caribbean port city of Barranquilla.

According to U.S. Ambassador Thomas McNamara, the shipment also includes other, unspecified gear as part of part of a $65 million emergency aid package approved by President Bush to help Colombia wage its anti-drug war.

The United States also has promised rifles, pistols, machine guns, rockets and grenades — even bullet-proof vests for Colombian officials and judges who prosecute drug traffickers.

The aid began arriving Sunday when two hulking U.S. C-130 transport planes landed at a Bogota air base. They were formally handed over by U.S. air force officials and McNamara to the Colombian military.

Local military sources said C-130s were 30 years old, but McNamara said they "are in excellent condition and should serve the Colombian armed forces for many years."

The high-tailed C-130s, powered by four turboprop engines, can take off and land on unpaved runways as short as 3,000 feet and could be used in raids on remote coca-leaf plantations and clandestine cocaine-refining laboratories.

Five UH-1H transport helicopters, which the Pentagon already said would be given to Colombia's anti-drug forces, were to arrive Tuesday, McNamara said.

Washington has said as many as 200 American military personnel may come to Colombia to assist security forces in installing and operating the American equipment. This is a potential sore point, as Colombian officials have said they don't want American troops.

"Coming in with these (referring to the C-130s) will be a few ground crews to handle the aircraft," said McNamara. "These crews will be here for a few hours or days. Ditto for the A-37 crews."

"We will have a few trainers come in and assist with the transfer of the equipment and the training" for the Colombians, he added.

He said he could not specify how many are already in the country.

London Bombing Linked To Threat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad today said it was investigating a bomb blast linked to the campaign against Salman Rushdie, the target of death threats for his novel "The Satanic Verses."

Police said an anonymous caller, who mentioned Rushdie's book, telephoned with a bomb threat shortly before the device exploded late Sunday outside Liberty's department store in central London. A woman passer-by was injured.

The store was closed at the time, but by day the area is one of the busiest in London's congested West End.

Until recently, Liberty's housed a Penguin bookstore concession. "The Satanic Verses," was published last year under the Viking imprint, which is part of the Penguin group.

The novel angered religious Moslems around the world, who claim it blasphemes their religion.

Viking Penguin received death threats against its staff after the Islamic campaign began and two London bookstores, one specializing in Penguin books, were damaged in arson attacks on April 9.

"There used to be a Penguin paperback bookshop in the store, on the ground floor near the area of our present bookshop, but it closed a couple of months ago," said a spokeswoman for Liberty's.

The new bookstore does not stock "The Satanic Verses," she said, requesting anonymity.

Airliner With 54 Aboard Is Missing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — A domestic jetliner with 54 people on board disappeared over the northern Amazon jungle after the pilot radioed that he was trying to make an emergency landing, a Varig airline official said today.

The Boeing 737 vanished Sunday evening on the last leg of a regular run between Sao Paulo and Belem at the mouth of the Amazon river, Varig spox Gilberto Brito.

The plane was carrying 48 passengers and a crew of six, all Brazilian, he said.

In an official communique, Varig said the cause of the disappearance was unknown. Officials said the pilot did not indicate why he needed to make the emergency landing.

Brito said the plane took off from Sao Paulo Sunday morning and made scheduled stops in Uberaba, Uberlandia, Goiania, Brasilia, Imperatriz and Maraba.

The plane departed in good weather from Maraba at 5:25 p.m. and was scheduled to arrive an hour later in Belem.

"In his last contact, the pilot said he would try an emergency landing," Brito said.

Varig and air force rescue teams began searching for the plane Sunday night in the dense jungle area and resumed the operation after daybreak today.

Red Cross Says East German Exodus To Begin This Week

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Authorities this week will begin the long-awaited exodus of East Germans seeking asylum in West Germany, Red Cross officials disclosed on Sunday.

West German Red Cross official Wolfgang Wagner also said authorities believed East German police have infiltrated the emergency camps in Hungary that are holding thousands of people awaiting safe passage to the West.

"We reckon that's so, but we're not equipped to do anything about it," he said in response to a question.

He sought to dampen speculation that the transfer would begin Sunday, telling reporters the East Germans would leave "sometime" this week. Asked what was holding up the exodus, Wagner said: "We're awaiting word from the West German Embassy."

Since vacationing East Germans began crowding the embassy in Budapest to demand passage to the West in July, the embassy has declined to comment on the developments.

While legal travel to the West is difficult for most East Germans, they have relatively little difficulty getting permission from their Communist government to visit Hungary, a liberal Soviet bloc country. More than 1 million have vacationed here annually in the last few years.

More than 200,000 East Germans were thought to be in Hungary before the weekend, and Premier Miklos Nemeth has estimated that up to 20,000 of them want to go to West Germany.

A bilateral agreement obliges Hungary to send East Germans trying to flee to the West back to their homeland. But Hungarian officials have refused to do so, and their decision to permit the East Germans to go West has led to tensions with East Berlin.

It also has resulted in a strengthening of ties with West Germany, where government officials have praised Hungary's handling of the problem.

Karsten Voigt, a senior West German opposition official, last week called on government officials to provide financial and moral support for Hungary's reform-minded Communist leaders.

On Saturday, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl appealed to countrymen to welcome the East Germans, while other officials and politicians called on the East Berlin leadership to stop the exodus by introducing reforms.

Holidaying East Germans, frustrated by political rigidity and economic stagnation at home, began using Hungary as a springboard to the West after it started removing barbed wire and other barriers from its border with Austria in May.

Since then, more than 6,000 are estimated to have fled to Austria en route to West Germany, which grants them automatic citizenship and helps them start new lives by giving them financial and social aid.

Others seeking to emigrate first crowded the West German Embassy in Budapest. With government approval, Hungarian charitable organizations opened the first camps for East Germans in mid-August, after the crush of would-be refugees staying in the embassy forced Bonn to close it.

Wagner said that 4,000 East Germans had been placed in four camps and a small boarding house by early Sunday afternoon, following more than 1,000 new arrivals during the weekend.

Hundreds more were staying in tents and trailers near the Zanka camp, about 90 miles southwest of Budapest, said other Red Cross officials.

BONN, West Germany — U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters declared Sunday that the current flight of East Germans to the West indicated that East and West Germany might be united in the near future.

It marked the first time a senior Allied diplomat has spoken of the possibility of German reunification in the short term — rather than in the distant future.

And it underscored a new feeling among West German analysts that the exodus of East Germans from the Communist state, and the illness of East German leader Erich Honecker, 77, might lead to dramatic changes in the East Berlin regime sooner rather than later.

Interviewed in German by West German radio, Ambassador Walters was asked whether he could "foresee a united Germany in the near future," and the veteran American diplomat answered: "Yes."

"It is not normal with two Germanies," added the 72-year-old Walters. "We must live with realities. We have an embassy in East Germany. But I believe that this stream of people coming out shows that Germans are concerned about the division."

About 90,000 East Germans are expected to obtain legal visas to leave the Communist state this year.

Many of them are young and in their most productive working years.

About 6,000 more have fled from East Germany by way of Hungary since May when the Budapest regime began dismantling the border fences with Austria.

Currently, several thousand East Germans are in Hungary awaiting a possible deal between Bonn and Budapest that would allow them to emigrate to West Germany via Austria.

Hungarian diplomats were in East Berlin last week reportedly seeking East Germany's approval for Budapest to let the East Germans vacationers leave, in what is said to be a one-of-a-kind deal.

While it has been the policy of the United States and its European allies to support eventual German reunification, most Western officials have privately been chary about seeing a massive, reunited Germany in the middle of Europe.

Thus, in the past the "German question" — reunification — has been kept on the diplomatic back burner in order not to arouse hopes and passions on both sides of the fenced and walled frontier.

Not long ago senior officials such as West German Chancellor Helmut

Kohl believed that reunification was a distant goal, but now with the influx of East Germans, Kohl and others have been urged to make contingency plans for rapid developments in East Germany.

In his remarks Sunday, Walters said, "President Bush has said that we are for such a development, if it were to be achieved peacefully and through free elections by the population."

Walters, who took up his post here in April, said that Eastern Europe could be helped by a new Marshall-type plan, with financial credits earmarked for specific projects that would aid the economies of East bloc nations.

The veteran American diplomat made his remarks on the same day that East Germany opened its semi-annual Trade Fair in Leipzig, where the top West German official based in East Berlin, Franz Bertele, declared bluntly of the massive exodus: "The problems started in the DDR (East Germany) and they must be solved here too."

The East German regime, which has resisted Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's call for reform and liberalization, seems at the loss to devise a workable policy to keep its young citizens from fleeing to the West.

Honecker is recuperating from an operation on his gall bladder, and he did not make a scheduled appearance in Leipzig.

Instead, he was represented by Prime Minister Willi Stoph, 75, who replied to West German Bertele's remarks by declaring that East and West Germany must "proceed by mutually respecting sovereignty and without interfering in internal affairs."

The Leipzig fair is the showcase for East German products and, a major source of foreign exchange from the business deals that are signed there.

Many of the East Germans vacationing in Hungary and other Eastern European countries are due back at work and school Monday. Some authorities in Budapest believe that there will be a rush for the Austrian border if word comes that the frontier will be opened this week.

Some West Germans Grumble About Incoming Refugee Tide

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VILSHOFEN, West Germany — West German officials and Red Cross volunteers battled cold, rainy weather and growing public resentment as they prepared Sunday for the arrival of thousands of East German refugees.

Groups of curious Bavarians lingered at the outskirts of an old concrete factory in this Medieval town across the Donau River from Austria, watching relief workers erect tents and feeding stations for the first of as many as 20,000 East Germans who are expected to begin arriving Monday.

Five Red Cross encampments capable of taking in about 5,000 refugees were readied during the weekend in Vilshofen and in other small border towns in this staunchly conservative farming region in southeastern West Germany.

Steady downpours and temperatures dropping to near freezing overnight hampered the work by 300 Red Cross and Bavarian state civil defense workers.

Nevertheless, they met their Sunday night deadline for completing basic facilities in Vilshofen, Tiefenbach and in the border towns of Freilassing, Trostberg and Hengersberg.

While West Germany's Constitution regards East Germans as citizens and a generous social security system offers financial support and help in resettling, some have expressed resentment about the refugee tide.

"I wouldn't mind if it was just temporary, but I know it's not," grumbled an elderly Vilshofen man in traditional Bavarian dress of loden-green knickers, high-buttoned jacket and plumed cap. "This is a small town and there's no industry here to take them in," added his wife.

The couple moved off when asked for their names.

The reluctance of some West Germans to take in those fleeing economic stagnation or repression in the East is a subject few will discuss openly.

But some resent the immediate benefits afforded the new arrivals, who are entitled to the same unemployment or pension funds collected by West Germans who contributed to the system for decades.

"If it were wartime, one could understand this, but not now," complained Anna Berger, a local farmer selling produce in the Vilshofen public market on Saturday. "How can all these people just simply abandon their native land? They ought to stick it out over there a little longer."

Bavarian state Interior Minister Gebhard Glueck, who visited the tent cities in Vilshofen and Tiefenbach on Sunday, declared the expected influx of East Germans "the largest refugee movement in Germany since the post-war expulsions."

Echoing a plea from federal Chancellor Helmut Kohl a day earlier, Glueck called on West Germans to welcome those driven from their homeland in the same spirit that allowed the assimilation of 12 million refugees in West Germany following the forced migrations after World War II.

"We want, and we will, handle this situation as a community," Glueck stated in a speech in the town of Marktredwitz before visiting the tent camps.

Kohl on Saturday called on West Germans to show "solidarity" with the refugees, apparently attempting to ease public strains over the short-term burdens imposed by the newcomers.

West Germans owe the refugees support "because we have had the good fortune after the war to live in this part of Germany," Kohl said.

The East Germans are expected to strain the public coffers initially.

But federal labor officials have pointed out that the mostly youthful and healthy refugees crowding the government reception camps are relieving the national shortage of blue-collar workers and will probably provide an economic boost after a few months.

Name Changed

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The Wichita Eagle-Beacon is now The Wichita Eagle, laying to rest a newspaper name that survived nearly 117 years.

With the Sunday editions, the newspaper dropped the word Beacon from its name. Its publishing company retains its corporate name, The Wichita Eagle and Beacon Publishing Co. Inc.

"We're not changing the name. We're shortening the name," said Executive Editor Davis "Buzz" Merritt Jr. "If we were changing it to 'The Gazette,' or something, I think that would cause a stir. And it should. We're just dropping the name of a newspaper that hasn't existed for nine years."

The Wichita Beacon, which like the Eagle was founded in 1872, was last published as a separate afternoon newspaper in October 1980.

Open Your World Learn To Read

Our world is full of exciting people and places just waiting to be discovered. But many people are trapped in another world, a world of illiteracy. In Pitt County 1 out of every 4 adults do not have the reading skills necessary to fulfill their own needs as family, community members, citizens, consumers or employees.

There is no single reason, no one cause on which to place the blame. Many didn't receive the individual help they needed in school. Many left school to earn a living. Others came to America from foreign lands. Regardless of their reasons, illiteracy hurts us all.

Adult non-readers do not need pity, but do need help to take the first step toward reaching their potential. You can provide that help, by teaching someone to read and opening up the world.

To show your support of the literacy effort in Pitt County, tie a blue ribbon on your car's antenna or door handle during International Literacy Week, September 3-9, 1989.

Museum Recreates New England Village

TOWN & COUNTRY

An early New England village, complete with stagecoach inn, blacksmith's shop and jail with stocks for incorrigibles, stands in northern Vermont.

It is the Shelburne Museum which was assembled from all over New England by one woman, Electra Havemeyer Webb.

She recreated the homes and the life of Americans of two centuries earlier, using her own determination and a great deal of money.

In a lifetime (1888-1960) of omniverous buying, she amassed more than 200,000 objects that form what J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, called "one of the great combined repositories of American arts, architecture and artifacts."

The Shelburne Museum in Shelburne, Vt., near Lake Champlain, includes 37 buildings, not only homes, shop, inn and jail, but also — on a hill two miles from the nearest body of water — the paddlewheel steamboat Ticonderoga, the last one to ply Lake Champlain.

Webb's accumulations of quilts, weather vanes, cigarstore Indians, carousel figures, duck decoys and other Americana were so extensive she referred to Shelburne as "a collection of collections."

She came by her passion naturally. Her parents, Louise and Henry Osborne Havemeyer, were premier American collectors. The family's amassing of art and their prominent position in New York society were underwritten by a sugar refining fortune.

The Havemeyers were listed in the first Social Register in 1874 and among the original Four Hundred deemed worthy of Mrs. Astor's ballroom.

Electra's father, H.O. Havemeyer, collected tea jars — 475 of them. His second wife, Louise Waldron Elder, introduced her husband to the French Impressionists, whose paintings she had begun to buy on the advice of her lifelong friend, Mary Cassatt.

She bought her first work, a pastel by Edgar Degas, for $100. She and her husband owned 120 works by Degas, 28 by Monet, 24 by Manet and 11 by Cezanne, as well as old master paintings by Rembrandt, Goya and El Greco and many other objects of art.

Louise bequeathed almost 2,000 works to the Metropolitan Museum and large legacies of paintings to her children.

Electra preferred simpler works. She was fascinated by arts and crafts and her first purchase as a young girl was a $15 cigar store Indian. Her mother called her horde of quilts, decoys, candlesticks, dollhouses, shell work and scrimshaw, "kitchen furniture."

In 1910, Electra married James Watson Webb, whose mother was the granddaughter of Commodore Vanderbilt, and whose family lived in a 110-room mansion on Lake Champlain in Shelburne. The Webbs gave the newlyweds a home on their property, The Brick House, which Electra furnished with early American furniture.

By the late 1940s, she began buying entire buildings of architectural distinction and moving them to the property she had acquired in Shelburne. Wooden buildings were trundled down tracks into place; brick buildings were taken apart, the bricks numbered, then reconstructed on the grounds.

She imported a covered bridge, then dug a pond beneath. A lighthouse was moved from Lake Champlain, piece by piece, in small boats. The Ticonderoga was set up two miles inland.

Dead Bugs, Lively Husband

Editor's note: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

Dear Abby: Is there anything in insecticides that could excite a man?

Arthur is 55 — just the age most men start to slow down, but he's still going strong. He gets especially aroused right after he sprays our property for bugs.

I noticed it last year when we moved into this house. We had ants and roaches, and right after Arthur sprayed he started looking for me and would get so passionate that he didn't care if I did my housework or even cooked. On weekends he sprays sometimes two and three times a day. It's really getting me down.

We live in Florida. What brand of bug bomb will kill the bugs down here without bringing out my husband's manhood so strong?

He uses Raid, TNT and Rid-a-Bug, and they all have the same effect on him. The brands that don't affect him don't have any effect on the bugs either. Please help me. — Tired

Dear Tired: My chemical experts know of nothing in any brand of insecticide that would rejuvenate the waning desire of a man. If there were, we'd have a lot more dead bugs, livelier husbands and tired wives.

Dear Abby: I am 77 and Nick is 80. We've been married for 60 years. Nick has always been a flashy dresser. I have a one-carat diamond ring I don't wear anymore because I am afraid of being robbed or killed. Nick said as long as I'm not wearing my diamond, he'd like to make it into a ring for himself.

Abby, it's not that I don't want him to have the diamond, it's just that I am afraid of what might happen to him.

Since I have refused him the ring, he is barely speaking to me. He also quit making love to me every Sunday afternoon, which he has done for 60 years. I suppose I could live without it, but I got so accustomed to it I feel deprived.

Should I give him the ring so he will be his old sweet and loving self again? — Nick's Wife

Dear Wife: If Nick doesn't realize that you don't want him to have the ring because you are concerned about his welfare, shame on him. (P.S. Someone should tell him if he doesn't use it, he'll lose it, and I don't mean the ring.)

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I know boys will be boys, but my "boy" is 73 and he's still chasing women. Any suggestions? — Annie

Dear Annie: Don't worry. My dog has been chasing cars for years, but if he ever caught one, he wouldn't know what to do with it.

Dear Abby: I am 11 years old but I know all the facts of life because we live in a dirty neighborhood. My problem is that in my family we get pregnant quick. What I mean is, my sister got pregnant when she was 15 just sitting next to a boy in church. That is what they say anyway. Can this be true? — Donna Lee

Dear Donna Lee: No. Somebody must have moved.

Dear Abby: Between you and me, I think the people who write to you are either morons or they're just plain stupid. — Henry

Dear Henry: Which are you?

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

ADAIRVILLE, Ky. — Members of a church founded by freed slaves gave a resounding "Amen!" to four whites who came to say they were sorry for setting their building on fire.

Farm Scene

By Sam Uzell
PITT COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT

Pitt County peanut farmers in general have been largely "behind the eight ball" due to the late planting season and the many effects of an extremely wet growing season.

Although the abundant rains have brought some pleasant surprises, such as a good corn crop and no corn earworm problems on peanuts or soybeans, the stage is definitely set for more severe disease problems in September. With the lateness of the season, it will be important for growers to be looking closely at their peanuts to protect them from treatable diseases and maintain the quality of the pods set on the plants.

Both early and late leafspot diseases can be expected at this time of year. They can both cause severe defoliation and loss of yield. Also, other diseases such as Southern stem rot, can become worse when peanut leaves are shed. It is imperative that growers maintain a 14-day spray schedule to maintain the vigor of the peanut vines. In situations where late leafspot is an emerging problem, only chlorothalonil (Bravo) will be effective in control where early leafspot can be managed with many other fungicides.

Another leafspot disease that sometimes appears in late season with dire consequences is web blotch. Web blotch has not shown up in Pitt County this year, but often shows itself when abundant moisture and rainfall occur. Again, chlorothalonil has had the best track record in control of this disease. This disease is characterized by large, brownish-gray lesions that have no well-defined margins. It also spreads rapidly and quickly defoliates peanut plants.

Sclerotinia blight is a common disease in Virginia and the more northerly countries of North Carolina. It is a rare disease in Pitt County but can be found in some years. Sclerotinia thrives where there is abundant moisture, thick vines and cool temperatures. Also, where there is damage due to tractor tires crushing the vines, this disease may get started in a field. This fungus can be treated with Iprodione (Rovral 50WP). It is imperative to have the disease identified conclusively before beginning treatment. Other diseases look similar to sclerotinia and would not respond to chemicals well. Chlorothalonil may make this disease worse and, consequently, it is a good practice to try other fungicides to control leafspot if sclerotinia is present.

Black root rot, caused by Chlindrocladium (CBR), generally is observed in late July. It has become a severe disease in many fields in Pitt County. There is no remedial treatment for CBR. Long rotations between peanut crops helps, especially when soybeans have not been planted within the rotation. Growers must plan to plant a resistant variety such as N.C. 8C or N.C. 10C. In addition, peanut land must be fumigated two weeks prior to planting with metam-sodium (Vapam).

CBR is beginning to be quite visible in many fields. Due to excessively wet fields this spring, many farmers who intended to fumigate were not able to do so. As a result, CBR will be more apparent, especially after soils begin to become dry again. It should be kept in mind that CBR does not spread from plant to plant in the field. This fungus disease does not have the ability to "go down the row" like Southern stem rot, or spread all over the field like early leafspot does during periods of warm, humid weather.

Instead, CBR infects early in the season from fungal bodies that germinate and infect peanut plant tissue growing close by the fungus in the soil. Consequently, all the peanut plants that are going to be infected in the field in a given year will be infected by mid-season. The reason that growers feel that the disease looks as if it is spreading is because the plants that are most heavily infected early in the season will die out early, and those that are not will withstand the fungus for a longer period of time.

One final disease that is on again, off again, is Southern stem rot. It is a disease that can flare up whenever there is a period of hot, damp nights. It is one that is not easily predicted, and is not easily controlled by fungicidal sprays. Like Sclerotinia, it is very important to identify the disease correctly. In the future, plans can be made to manage the disease to reduce production inputs or lessen the incidence of disease.

Earnhardt Captures Southern 500; Waltrip Denied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — The 40th Southern 500 was a time of memories and millions.

Derrell Waltrip missed his million, but Dale Earnhardt got his memories, winning the last of NASCAR's four major races with a record speed on Sunday at Darlington Raceway.

The victory came just a day after his father, Ralph, who died of a heart attack while working on his race car in 1973, was inducted into the National Motorsports Hall of Fame.

"I kept thinking when we got home to the motel (Saturday) after the hall of fame banquet, wouldn't it be great if we could win the race,"

Earnhardt said. "I came to the race ... and just sort of had it in my mind that we're going to have a great day."

"It's worth a million to me to just have my dad in the hall of fame," Earnhardt said. "Heck, I've won three Winston Cup championships and hadn't made it there. One of these days maybe I can get there and be in there with him."

Earnhardt, who started 10th, led eight times for a total of 153 laps in the 367-lap event, averaging 135.462 mph to break the record of 134.033 mph established in 1983 by Cale Yarborough.

It was the third victory of the year for Earnhardt, but the first since the Budweiser 500 in early June. Earnhardt, who won the rain-shortened 1987 Southern 500, earned $71,150 for his latest victory at the circuit's oldest superspeedway.

While Earnhardt added to his winnings, Waltrip missed out on a chance at the $1 million bonus that goes to any driver who wins three of the NASCAR's four major races.

Waltrip, who started ninth, went a lap down on lap 152 after pitting under green. He then hit the wall twice just past the midway point of the race and lost two more laps after a series of pit stops.

"I just drove too hard. I got a little loose up in the middle of turns three and four and got the car in the wall once," Waltrip said. "That wasn't so bad, if I'd just cooled out and waited for a while and got a caution and fixed the thing."

"But I didn't have enough sense to slow down and got it in the wall the same spot again about two or three laps later. That's what did me in."

Waltrip, who has never won the Southern 500 during his 17-year career, finished 22nd, eight laps back. Waltrip won $12,890.

"We knew coming down here that this was not the easiest place in the world to come and try to collect $1 million," Waltrip said. "I told those cats before the race started that if I had $1 million and wanted to bet on one guy down here for a race, I'd feel I'd be pretty safe and wouldn't have to worry about losing it."

Pole-sitter Alan Kulwicki also had a long day. He finished 32nd, retiring with engine problems after 184 laps on an overcast afternoon at the 1.366-mile oval.

There were 27 lead changes among 10 drivers in a race that did not have a major accident. There were four cautions for 27 laps.

Earnhardt grabbed the lead for good on lap 305, when a caution flag was brought out as Dave Marcis slammed into the retaining wall as he attempted to enter the pits. While Earnhardt remained in front for the rest of the race, there was momentary scare when he scraped the wall in turn two on lap 342. But he righted his Chevrolet and finished with a 1.45-second victory over Mark Martin's Ford.

Ricky Rudd, driving a Buick, was third, followed by Rusty Wallace in a Pontiac and Ken Schrader in a Chevrolet. Defending champion Bill Elliott was ninth.

Earnhardt also increased his Winston Cup points lead. With eight of 29 races left, Earnhardt has 3,037 points, 73 ahead of Wallace. Martin is third, 133 points back, followed by Waltrip with 2,813 points and Elliott with 2,682.

Earnhardt and Wallace, who led seven times for 93 laps, battled for the lead much of the day. Kulwicki led for the first 17 laps, but gave way as Earnhardt and Wallace led 56 of the next 69 laps. Harry Gant led four times during the race for a total of 83 laps.

Earnhardt, who was down by a lap briefly early in the race, said his car was "mediocre." But it was good enough on a slick track that had

Norman Slips But Hangs On In Milwaukee

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKLIN, Wis. (AP) — Victory has sometimes eluded Greg Norman when golf tournaments were in his grasp, and it appeared to be happening again in the Greater Milwaukee Open.

After 54 holes, Norman appeared a cinch to win the tournament. But putting troubles caused a four-shot lead to evaporate in only nine holes of Sunday's final round.

"If you know you have ebb and flow, you say, 'Just don't give up. There are plenty of holes. Just don't panic,'" Norman said. "If you panic and lose another shot, then you're really behind the 8-ball and you have to get two shots back instead of one."

When he missed a 12-foot putt and made bogey on the 11th hole to fall into a three-way tie with Andy Bean and Wayne Levi, Norman didn't panic.

He gave himself a lecture, then posted three birdies in the last seven holes to gain a three-shot victory over Bean. Norman shot a final-round 70 for a 269, 19 shots under par for the Tuckaway Country Club.

"The putt that won me the tournament was the one I missed on the 11th," Norman said. "When I missed that putt, I was so mad and fired up inside, it kind of reversed my whole psychological thinking."

"From there on in I said to myself, 'Look, you got seven holes to go. Are you good enough to birdie them?' And I said, 'Yeah, I know I can birdie three of them.'"

He made a 2-footer on No. 12 to regain the lead, dropped a 25-footer on No. 13 for a two-shot lead, and then he holed a 5-footer at 16 to cinch it.

Bean, who had already completed his final-round 66, could only watch helplessly as Norman took control down the stretch. Levi, who was 4-under on the front nine in gaining a share of the lead, had three bogeys on the back to end his challenge. He shot 71 to finish at 274, five behind Norman and one back of Mark Lye and Ted Schulz, who shared third after closing with 68s.

Bean had a chance to take the lead alone on No. 18, but missed a 35-foot putt. That's about the time Norman began his late drive.

Chris Evert advanced to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open with a 6-0, 6-2 win

Evert Advances Plays Near Perfect To Reach Quarterfinals, Meets Garrison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — In the twilight of her tournament career, Chris Evert reached back for one more sunrise in the U.S. Open. She played practically perfect tennis to defeat the teen-ager who had pushed her to the brink of retirement.

Evert produced a nearly flawless 6-0, 6-2 victory over 15-year-old Monica Seles on Sunday to advance to the Open quarterfinals for the 19th consecutive year, then admitted she surprised even herself with the efficiency of her victory.

"I certainly didn't expect to win by those scores," she said. "Up until two days ago, I really didn't expect to win the match with the way I was playing. I knew that I had to play a lot better than I did in my first three rounds."

It was a loss to Seles on clay in Houston earlier this year that convinced the 34-year-old Evert to make the Open her last major event. Evert, seeded No. 4, advanced through the first three rounds of the Open, playing just well enough to survive. And then she found the 12th-seeded Seles waiting in the fourth round.

"I kept thinking two days ago when I knew I had to play Monica, that isn't it ironic that I would draw her of all people," Evert said. "If this is my last big match, wouldn't it be more ironic if she beat me?"

That would not happen, not on this court, not on this day. This time, it was Evert who played like an energized teen-ager, like a player just setting out on her career instead of one winding it down.

"She wasn't missing any balls," the pony-tailed Seles said between giggles. "She was hitting everything hard. She beat me physically and mentally."

This was Seles' first appearance on Center Court, a spotlight in which Evert has played countless times. That and the support of the crowd, anticipating that this might be her last match, seemed to excite Evert.

"I felt like Margaret Court out there and Chris Evert was on the other side," Evert said. "I was 15 when I played Margaret Court and beat her for the first time." Seles, however, did not fare as well the teen-aged Evert had against Court. Evert was close to perfect but she couldn't say why.

"I just concentrated really well and moved well," she said. "I don't know why it happened. I'm so pleased it happened."

Next for Evert is fifth-seeded Zina Garrison, who advanced with a 6-4, 7-6 victory over Donna Faber.

"She's beaten me the last couple of times and I've only beaten her once," Garrison said of Evert.

"Zina is probably going to come to the net more and rush me," Evert said. "I'm going to have to have a lot of good passing shots and get some good first serves in."

Also reaching the quarterfinals were second-seeded Martina Navratilova, who defeated Regina Rajchrtova 6-2, 6-0, and Manuela Maleeva, the No. 7 seed, who defeated No. 13 Natalia Zvereva 6-2, 6-0.

Navratilova avoided a break point at 3-2 in the first set and then raced to victory.

"You are not concerned about the match at 3-2 in the first set," she said, "but I was concerned about seeing the ball. The shadow going across the court was unbelievable. It was so light and dark. I had a hard time seeing groundstrokes."

On the men's side, second-seeded Boris Becker led the charge to the quarterfinals, recovering after dropping the first set to Mikael Pernfors to win 5-7, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1. He next plays Yannick Noah, who knocked off No. 10 Alberto Mancini 6-3, 3-6, 6-7, 6-3, 6-3.

Becker struggled with his first serves throughout the match, getting just 47 percent in.

"Sometimes it goes too high, sometimes it goes too low," he said. "I just didn't serve well at all."

NCSU Begins AD Search

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH (AP) — The search for an interim athletic director at North Carolina State to replace basketball coach Jim Valvano began Sunday with doubts the selection process would be quick and painless.

"Right now we're still trying to figure out what the process will be," said Daniel Gunter, chairman of the Student and Campus Affairs Committee of the N.C. State Board of Trustees.

No names were mentioned publicly, but Gunter said the six-member search committee did discuss a few names at its hour-long meeting.

"I'm sure every person here has a candidate in mind," he said. After a brief statement, the panel voted to go into executive session in a conference room of the Wolfpack Club headquarters to discuss possible choices to fill the position. The committee includes Gunter, head football coach Dick Sheridan, head women's basketball coach Kay Yow, faculty representative Dr. Lawrence Clark, student body President Brian Nixon and Tom Stafford, vice chancellor of student affairs.

"We want to make sure we're on the right track as far as how the selection process is supposed to go," said Gunter. He said the committee met to establish what University of North Carolina system President C.D. Spangler wanted when he made the recommendation to separate the position of athletic director and coach.

"We want every group on campus to be involved in the process," including the faculty, the Athletic Council and students, Gunter said.

The search committee was formed by the NCSU Board of Trustees, and that has made a difference in the way the selection will take place, he said.

Valvano has said he will step down from the administrative position, but officials said Valvano will remain athletic director until the NCAA has released findings of its investigation into the Wolfpack basketball program.

"Coach Valvano has been most cooperative and willing to serve this committee in any way," Gunter said. "He would like to see us make this decision as soon as possible."

He said the NCAA's ruling could come down sometime this month, and he expects N.C. State will be charged with some minor rules infractions.

"In light of the (UNC) system's own report, it follows that the NCAA would make some decisions itself," he said.

This panel will recommend its choice to the N.C. State board, of which Gunter and Nixon are members. The choice will then go to the chancellor for final approval, although that step remains in question.

Chancellor Bruce Poulton resigned four days before Spangler released the Poole Commission report on the Wolfpack basketball program. His resignation is effective Sept. 30, but Gunter expressed confidence that a new chancellor will be picked by then.

"That really doesn't matter at this point because Coach Valvano will remain as athletic director until the NCAA investigation is over," he said.

As far as possible interim replacements go, no names were made public.

"I have someone in mind," Stafford said. "I think everyone does." But he declined to say who his choice would be.

Gunter said his ideal choice would be someone who was familiar with the NCAA and the Atlantic Coast Conference and with the local community.

"Yes, someone in our own administration would probably be ideal," he said.

But he emphasized that the interim athletic director will not be considered for the permanent position.

"That's just the way I feel about it," he said. "We need someone to come in and do the job, not worry about getting the permanent job of athletic director."

Faculty representative and associate provost Clark agreed that the spot should be filled by someone familiar with the school — both athletically and academically.

Giamatti Funeral Closed To The Public

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bartlett Giamatti's body was taken to a Hamden, Conn., funeral home late Saturday and baseball announced Sunday that the funeral and burial will be closed to the public.

"At the request of the family, funeral services for Dr. Giamatti will be private and limited to the family," acting commissioner Fay Vincent said in a statement. "The family hopes that his many friends and admirers will respect its wishes for privacy during this difficult time. A memorial service for Dr. Giamatti will be held at some point in the future, but plans are not yet complete."

The memorial probably will be held at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., according to school and baseball officials. They said the date of the memorial was still being discussed. Giamatti, who died at the age of 51 from a heart attack last Friday, was president of Yale from 1978 to 1986.

Giamatti continued to be remembered at the nation's ballparks on Sunday. Moments of silence are being observed before all games through Monday and flags will be lowered to half staff until further notice.

Vincent, the deputy commissioner, on Saturday was named acting commissioner by baseball's executive council, which consists of the two league presidents and seven owners.

Barr Wins On Third Playoff Hole

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Dave Barr sank a 30-foot putt worth $80,000 on the third playoff hole to capture the 1989 Cadillac Classic with a total of $125,000 on Sunday.

Curtis Strange won $35,000, Fuzzy Zoeller earned $25,000 and Arnold Palmer won $15,000 in the $200,000 skins game at the Glen Abbey Golf Club.

The value of each hole — which had to be won outright — varied from $5,000 to $15,000, with the 18th hole worth $35,000.

McBee Wins Senior Golf Classic

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Rives McBee became just the third qualifier in the history of the Senior PGA Tour to win a tournament when he captured the Senior Golf Classic on Sunday with a final-round 69.

McBee finished the 54-hole event an 8-under-par 202 total, two strokes better than Harold Henning. Larry Ziegler finished third at 205.

Ritzman Leads LPGA Rail Classic

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Alice Ritzman birdied the final two holes to finish with a 6-under-par 66 and to take a two-shot lead after two rounds of the LPGA Rail Classic with a 135 total on Sunday.

Cathy Gerring and Betsy King are tied for second at 137.

Ballesteros Rules European Masters

CRANS-SUR-SIERRE, Switzerland (AP) — Seve Ballesteros birdied two of the final three holes to card a 5-under-par 67 and a 266 total for a two-stroke victory over Craig Parry in the $655,000 European Masters on Sunday.

Jose Rivero and Paolo Quirici finished four strokes back at 270.

No Book, No Investigation At State

RALEIGH (AP) — Had there been no book, there may have been no investigation into the basketball program at North Carolina State University, which officials say underlines the true value of "Personal Fouls."

"It's sort of like the commercial for the after shave lotion when the guy stands up, slaps himself in the face and says, 'Thanks, I needed that,'" said Samuel Poole, head of the investigative commission University of North Carolina system President C.D. Spangler appointed to look into allegations at the school.

"The public airing of some problems generated a cohesiveness that was not there before. ... It would have been sort of difficult to imagine a year ago being able to walk into a Board of Trustees meeting at State and saying, 'There have been mistakes and here's what you need to do about it.' There would've been almost a revolt."

Thus is raised the question of how long it would have taken to put necessary changes into effect if there had never been a book to provide an impetus.

"There have been many times in the past when good advice from the faculty and the faculty senate have not been received with favor by the administration," Raymond Long, head of N.C. State's faculty senate, told The Charlotte Observer. "But by coming back to it again, a year later, by establishing further dialogue, one could see some changes in that position."

"With that in mind, I'd like to think some progress would have been made anyway. However, maybe it would have been a number of years before some changes would have taken place. And maybe never in some areas, given the personalities involved."

Asked what he would say if he ran into Golenbock, whose book makes strong allegations against him and his basketball program, N.C. State coach Jim Valvano laughed.

"I guess I might tell him that for someone who is so concerned — or who purports to be so concerned — with education, I'm surprised he doesn't spell better than he does," Valvano said.

Opinions on the book's credibility vary because of factual and spelling errors and unsubstantiated charges. Some sources were unidentified and some clearly have a grudge against the program.

Guerrero, Browning Players Of The Month

NEW YORK (AP) — Pedro Guerrero of the St. Louis Cardinals and Tom Browning of the Cincinnati Reds have been named National League Player and Pitcher of the Month for August.

Guerrero batted .363, with six doubles, four home runs and 26 RBI in 30 games. Browning had a 6-0 record with a 1.70 ERA in six starts.

IOC Praises Atlanta's Efforts

ATLANTA (AP) — International Olympic Committee members praised Atlanta's efforts to win the 1996 Summer Games, but whether the flashy show put on by the city so far has raised its chances of hosting the event remains a question.

"For the IOC, the most important things are who has the facilities, who has the will, and who can stage the Games properly," Agustin Carlos Arroyo, an IOC representative from Ecuador, said Sunday. "If they can stage them luxuriously, better still."

Arroyo and 23 other IOC members spent the weekend getting the red carpet treatment from the Atlanta Organizing Committee and Mayor Andrew Young as they toured proposed sites for Olympic events and saw plans for new buildings.

Their visit started with a lavish dinner Saturday at City Hall. Each IOC committee member was assigned a hostess as a guide and caretaker. Some were given interpreters, though most of the committee members speak English.

Committee members seemed pleased with their reception.

"This city is very impressive, very impressive," said Anton J. Geesink, the Netherlands' representative to the IOC. "Atlanta makes a perfect candidate. The people are very nice, very friendly."

"From what I have seen, if I had to act as a judge, you are an A-plus," Arroyo said.

The delegation is part of the 92-member panel that next year will select the host cities for the '96 Games. Athens, Greece, is considered the front-runner in the competition, but the Atlanta committee is spending $5.3 million in its effort to bring the Olympics to the Deep South.

"I would love for Athens to have the Games, but you cannot close your mind," Arroyo said. "Athens we consider the mother of the Olympic Games. But we cannot give a city the Games on our hearts; we have to use our heads, too."

A coalition of Greek leaders has promised to quiet the political turmoil that tarnished Athens' bid for the games, but the IOC members are waiting to see if the promises are carried through.

"They have to prove to the IOC they will have the stability," said Sinan Erdem, the IOC member from Turkey. "They have told us they would, but they will have to prove it."

Other contenders for the Games are Melbourne, Australia; Toronto, Canada; Manchester, England; and Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

Pirates Hold Ceremony For Tekulve

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For the first time in 15 years in the majors, Kent Tekulve got to stand on the mound before a game rather than at the end.

The Pittsburgh Pirates held a pregame tribute Sunday honoring the recently retired Tekulve, one of the top relievers in their history and the major-league record-holder with 1,050 career relief appearances.

"Teke was a true professional," said former Pirates manager Chuck Tanner. "He took the ball any time I gave it to him. If I had asked him to pitch seven days in a row, he'd say, 'Give me the ball.'"

In a 40-minute ceremony before their game against the Cincinnati Reds, the Pirates presented Tekulve with a black-and-gold golf cart adorned with his No. 27, golf clubs, an oil painting and a necklace for his wife, Linda, bearing 27 diamonds.

The day was designated "Kent Tekulve Day" in Pittsburgh by Mayor Sophie Masloff.

Tekulve, who retired July 17 after pitching for the Pirates, Philadelphia Phillies and Reds from 1974-89, said, "Who would have thought 15 years ago I'd pitch in so many games and make so many friends?"

Among those honoring Tekulve were Tanner, who managed the Pirates during their 1979 world championship season; Hall of Fame slugger Willie Stargell; former teammates Dave Giusti, Ed Ott and

Baseball Notes

Jim Gott; and former Reds teammates Rick Mahler and Tom Brown.

The Reds, for whom Tekulve pitched this season, gave the right-hander a miniature-sized golf bag bearing 184 golf balls, emblematic of his career save total.

"This is a special moment for me, because Kent Tekulve is the kind of guy you'd want to share a foxhole with ... and I enjoyed sharing a foxhole with Teke for so many years," Stargell said.

Stargell recalled a 1979 game in San Francisco in which Tanner moved Tekulve to left field so Grant Jackson could pitch to a left-handed batter with two outs in the ninth. Tekulve would have returned to the mound if Jackson didn't retire the hitter.

"Chuck told Buck (Jackson) to make the batter hit the ball to left, and that's what he did," Stargell said. "Instead of running out to shake hands with Buck, we all ran to left field to shake hands with Teke."

Tekulve also owns the major-league record for most innings pitched in relief (1,436 1-3) and the National League record for career games finished (638). He owns the Pirates' club record with 158 saves, including 31 for the '79 world champions.

A Whistle Could Be Trouble For Trojans Against Illinois

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Smith will perk up his ears and listen for a whistling sound.

And the Southern California coach will hope against hope that he doesn't hear one.

Saying Illinois quarterback Jeff George reminds him of John Elway, Smith said he'll use the whistle test on George during warmups prior to Southern Cal's game against the Illini tonight at the Coliseum.

"With Elway out there, you can be on the other end of the field and still hear the ball whistle when he throws it," Smith said. "That will be the final test for Jeff George, so I'm going to listen."

While the fifth-ranked Trojans begin the season with a red-shirt freshman, Todd Marinovich, at quarterback, Smith is more worried about the quarterback for the 22nd-ranked Illini.

"Everybody seems focused on Marinovich, but how well our defense can do against Jeff George is the key to the game," Smith said.

"The key to their offense is Jeff George," Smith said. "He's got a quick release, he's very physical. He's a lot like Elway. He's got zip on the ball, has touch on the short stuff and the arm to put the ball down the field."

"We've got to put pressure on him or he'll complete 45 passes."

George, a junior, threw for 2,257 yards last season in his first year at Illinois. He sat out the 1987 season after transferring from Purdue.

Marinovich, who set a national scholastic record by throwing for 9,125 yards at Capistrano High in Mission Viejo, Calif., got the Trojans' starting job Aug. 25 when junior Pat O'Hara went out for the season with a knee injury.

While Smith is concerned about George, Illinois coach

John Mackovic is worried about the Trojans' unpredictability with a new quarterback.

"When you lose a starter at ... quarterback, it can change what you do, especially when you have a youngster who doesn't have a lot of experience," Mackovic said.

"We'll just have to watch and see what they (the Trojans) are going to do with him, whether they'll keep him under wraps or let him go."

Smith implied that he won't keep Marinovich under wraps.

"We've got to have balance running and passing," he said. "Todd is going to have to be able to check off plays, handle automatics, blitz control."

"We have to expose Todd, let him get his confidence."

The Illini, 6-5-1 last season and returning 18 starters, are led defensively by nose tackle Mo Gardner, inside linebacker Darrick Brownlow and free safety Marlon Primous.

Junior fullback Howard Griffin, who averaged 5.6 yards per rush on 109 carries last year, leads the Illinois ground attack.

Southern Cal, with 18 starters back from its 10-2 team of last season, is led defensively by tackle Tim Ryan and safeties Mark Carrier and Cleveland Colter.

With a freshman at quarterback, the Trojans may rely heavily on their fine ground game, with Scott Lockwood, Aaron Emanuel and Ricky Ervins sharing tailback duties and Leroy Holt at fullback.

Marinovich said he's relatively certain he knows what the Illinois defense will try to do.

"I figure they're going to blitz us. That's what most defenses will try to do against a young quarterback," he said. "All we have to do is burn them on the blitz a few times and they'll come right out of it."

Football Starts Anew At Southern Methodist

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS (AP) — There is life after the NCAA "death penalty."

At least Southern Methodist showed a strong pulse on Saturday night in its comeback from the ruins of an alumni slush fund scandal.

Starting 17 freshmen, the Mustangs even led 3-0 before succumbing 35-6 to Rice, which snapped an 18-game losing streak.

It was the start of what Athletic Director Doug Single called "our grand experiment. I don't know if it will work but we'll die trying."

The Mustangs did give it the try-or-die effort before 23,227 sweating fans in on-campus O'wby Stadium. It was about half the size of crowds the Mustangs drew for Southwest Conference games in their previous home, Texas Stadium.

Temperatures were near 100 degrees on the field at the kickoff and the east side stands were a hot box.

SMU coach Forrest Gregg, a former playing star with the Mustangs and the Green Bay Packers, even found a moment of humor in the loss.

"I've never seen so many writers in a losing dressing room," he quipped.

Gregg turned serious and put his game-face back on.

"I'm not happy by any means," he said. "But we were playing as hard there at the end as we did at the beginning and that says some things."

SMU gave its fans false hope by jumping ahead 3-0.

Matt Lomenick, whose opening kickoff to the Owls was fumbled and recovered by the Mustangs, hit a 23-yard field goal for the lead.

But Rice quarterback Donald Hollas ran for two touchdowns and passed for two more to make Coach Fred Goldsmith's debut a success.

None of the rogue alumni who plunged the program in shame was available to talk about the Mustangs' return.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements, who gave a green light to a player payroll when he was head of the SMU board of regents, was on safari in Africa.

Single said the festive atmosphere on campus before the game made it all worthwhile to move back to O'wby.

"This is exactly what we wanted," Single said. "It was a big party."

Lamar Hunt, an SMU graduate and owner of the Kansas City Chiefs, said it was great to see the first game in O'wby in 41 years.

"This makes it a different kind of attraction for SMU," Hunt said. "I always thought we should play here. It's a different flavor. We shouldn't be trying to compete with the Dallas Cowboys and the Texas Rangers."

SMU even won the third quarter, 3-0, a consolation prize on a night that the returnees to the SWC were heavily outmanned.

"We were in a daze out there for awhile," said wide receiver Mike Bowen. "But I think the crowd appreciated how hard we played. I think a lot of them will be back."

"It's fun again. SMU is back."

Beanballs Lead To Brawl As Royals Whip Rangers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Texas Rangers got their man — five of them, in fact.

The accuracy by the modern-day Rangers with baseballs would have done credit to their counterparts of yesteryear with six-shooters.

Kevin Brown drilled Kansas City's Kevin Seitzer and Frank White, Drew Hall nailed Kurt Stillwell and George Brett, and Craig McMurtry got Mike Macfarlane. That one, in the eighth inning, triggered a bench-clearing brawl as the Royals beat the Rangers 13-2 on Sunday.

"Apparently they can't beat us with their bats or their arms so they tried to knock us down physically," Kansas City manager John Wathan said. "They have nothing to lose by throwing at us, and I thought they did. They're not in the pennant race. We are. All they can do is destroy teams in front of them, and they did a good job of it today."

White and Brett left the game after being hit. Not to be outdone, Kansas City's Mark Gubicza and Larry McWilliams each hit one Texas batter. The seven hit batsmen tied an American League record.

The Royals won for the 16th time in 19 games and remained 2½ games behind first-place Oakland in the American League West.

When the Royals weren't being hit by pitches, they were doing some hitting of their own — 13 hits, including Jim Eisenreich's two-run single that keyed a five-run second inning, and Bo Jackson's 29th homer, a three-run shot that capped a five-run seventh. Jackson has homered in three straight games.

In the eighth, McMurtry's pitch got Macfarlane in the ribs and the Royals catcher charged the mound. McMurtry waited with his hands out in a gesture of apology but Macfarlane tackled him as both benches cleared. Macfarlane was ejected. (Plate umpire) Ted Hendry hadn't warned anybody, so that was as good a way as any to give warning. It was a team thing," Macfarlane said.

Wathan agreed with Macfarlane's ejection, but added: "I don't blame Macfarlane for going out there. I can't believe nobody went out there before that. I've never seen a game in which seven men had to get hit before somebody was warned. That's the umpire's job, and he let it get out of hand."

Athletics 5, Brewers 0
Carney Lansford doubled and singled and Walt Weiss drove in two runs to support the eight-hit pitching of Storm Davis and Gene Nelson. Davis, 16-6, left the game in the seventh after twisting his right knee.

Oakland took a 1-0 lead with an unearned run off Jaime Navarro in the third. Jose Canseco's RBI single made it 2-0 in the fifth, Lansford had an RBI single in the seventh and Weiss singled home the final two runs in the eighth.

Yankees 5, Angels 2
Don Mattingly went 4-for-4, including a single that started a five-run rally in the sixth inning. The Yankees won their fourth straight game, tying their longest winning streak of the season. California, which trails Oakland by 4½ games in the AL West, has lost four in a row and 10 of 14.

Andy Hawkins gave up two runs in six innings and won for the first time since Aug. 5. Lance McCullers finished for his third save. Bert Blyleven, 14-4, lost his second consecutive decision after a 10-game winning streak.

Twins 9, Blue Jays 4
Rick Aguilera, making his seventh AL start, won his first decision as a starter since Oct. 3, 1987, and left fielder Dan Gladden homered and threw two runners out at the plate as Minnesota snapped Toronto's five-game winning streak.

Aguilera, 1-3, acquired from the New York Mets in the Frank Viola trade on July 31, gave up an unearned run and six hits in seven innings.

White Sox 4, Orioles 2
Melido Perez held Baltimore to six hits in 7½ innings and Carlton Fisk hit a two-run single as the Orioles were prevented from climbing into a first-place tie in the AL East. They remained one game behind Toronto.

Bobby Thigpen recorded his 29th save.

Loser Jeff Ballard, 15-7, who had won his last four starts, allowed all the Chicago runs in the first four innings. The Orioles took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on Craig Worthington's RBI single.

But Chicago scored three times in the third. With two out and Ron Karkovice on second, Dave Gallagher walked and Scott Fletcher singled to tie the score. A walk to Ivan Calderon — Ballard's third of the inning — loaded the bases and Fisk's single put the White Sox ahead 3-1. Sammy Sosa's third homer made it 4-1 in the fourth.

"We're not scoring any runs. Our pitchers have got to be perfect to win," Baltimore manager Frank Robinson said. "We let an opportunity go by today. We could have been back in first place. You hate to miss an opportunity like this."

Mariners 3, Red Sox 2
Henry Cotto hit a two-run homer and Dave Valle doubled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning to spoil the return of Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd.

Boyd, 2-2, allowed the three Seattle runs, six hits, walked three and struck out three in 5½ innings in his first major-league appearance since May 1. He had been sidelined with a blood clot condition in his right arm.

"I saw a new light about myself today," Boyd said. "I'm very positive about me. I have to tip my hat to my hat to Henry Cotto. He hit a good pitch. I know what mistakes I made out there, and there weren't many."

Cotto tied the score 2-2 with his eighth homer with two out in the fifth. In the sixth, Ken Griffey Jr. drew a leadoff walk, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Valle's two-out double, chasing Boyd.

Tigers 12, Indians 3
Fred Lynn drove in four runs with his 298th and 299th career homers. It was the last-place Tigers' third straight victory and sixth in a row over the fifth-place Indians, who have lost seven of nine. Winner Jack Morris, 4-11, yielded nine hits in pitching his seventh complete game.

Giants Sweep By Mets

Williams Homers Again To Key 4-0 Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While Leon Durham's star has lost much of its luster, that of Matt Williams is rising in the west.

The 32-year-old Durham, once considered among the best left-handed power hitters in the National League, is trying to hang on in baseball after experiencing substance abuse problems that preceded his release last season by the Cincinnati Reds. The 23-year-old Williams is emerging as one of the better young sluggers in the NL.

Both had their moments in the sun on Sunday. Durham hit a game-winning, pinch-hit sacrifice fly to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a crucial victory. Williams hit his 11th home run in 23 games as the San Francisco Giants continued to pull away in the National League West.

"That run meant a lot to me," Durham said after his fly in the ninth inning capped a comeback that gave the Cardinals a 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros. "It feels like I'm finally contributing to the ballclub."

Durham, just recalled from the minor leagues, stepped to the plate with a .083 batting average — one hit in 12 at-bats — and hit a fly ball to center field that brought the Cardinals within 1½ games of the Chicago Cubs in the East.

For a player who compiled a .280 lifetime average and hit more than 20 homers five times for the Cubs through 1987, his first RBI of the season was one more than many figured he'd attain.

What Williams may attain in the future has Giants manager Roger Craig filled with anticipation.

"It's unbelievable to think what Matt might do next year with 600 at-bats," Craig said after his third baseman hit a two-run homer in a 4-0 victory over New York that completed a sweep of a three-game series.

To be precise, Williams, with 15 homers in 199 at-bats — including a woeful start that preceded his shipment to the minors — would project to 45 homers over a full season.

The Cardinals, in second place, drew a game closer when the Cubs dropped an 8-5 decision to Atlanta. The Mets fell to fourth in the East, a half-game behind Montreal, which drew within three of Chicago by beating Los Angeles 4-0. Houston, second in the West, fell six games behind the Giants and only a game in front of surging San Diego, which beat Philadelphia 9-5.

Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati 3-1 in the only game with no bearing on either divisional race.

Cardinals 4, Astros 3
"I knew pretty much what I wanted to do," said Durham, whose fly-saddled reliever Danny Darwin with only his fourth loss in 15 decisions. "I was just looking to put the ball in play."

Terry Pendleton, who scored the winning run, led off the inning with a single and Denny Walling singled preceding an intentional walk.

Todd Worrell, 3-5, worked a scoreless ninth for the victory which sent Houston, which blew a 3-0 sixth-inning lead, to its eighth loss in 11 games.

Giants 4, Mets 0
"Knowing the Astros lost gave us some incentive, and I had some good stuff going," said Don Robinson, who blanked the Mets on seven hits. "I had my adrenaline pumping, and I wanted the shutout because I hadn't pitched one all season."

Williams' two-run homer in the sixth inning off Bob Ojeda, 10-10, was his second in as many days. He also hit 26 at AAA Phoenix for a season total of 41.

The victory snapped a five-game winning streak for Ojeda.

Braves 8, Cubs 5
Jeff Blauser had three singles and three RBIs as Atlanta overcame two homers by Andre Dawson to end a six-game winning streak by Chicago's Mike Bielecki, 14-6.

Blauser capped a three-run first inning with an RBI single and highlighted a five-run fourth with a two-run hit.

Dawson's 30th multi-homer game of his career featured a two-run homer in the fourth and a solo shot, his 17th of the season, in the sixth.

Expos 4, Dodgers 0
Kevir Gross pitched a six-hitter and Montreal capitalized on four Los Angeles errors in the first two innings to defeat run-starved Orel Hershiser.

Gross, 11-9, pitched his third shutout and fourth complete game of the season.

Hershiser, 14-11, absorbed his third straight loss. It was the fifth straight winless start for last year's NL Cy Young winner, whose last victory was Aug. 8 against Atlanta.

The Dodgers have not scored a run for Hershiser in his last three starts.

Padres 9, Phillies 5
Rookie pitcher Andy Benes hit a two-run homer en route to his third consecutive victory and Benito Santiago hit his second career grand slam for San Diego.

Pirates 3, Reds 1
Pittsburgh's Andy Van Slyke answered Chris Sabo's game-tying homer in the top of the seventh with one in the bottom of the inning to back Doug Drabek.

Dowis A Marked Man But Sets Record

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Statistical evidence to the contrary, Air Force Academy quarterback Dee Dowis was a marked man the first time he carried the ball against San Diego State.

"You won't believe this but, yes, we were ready for him," San Diego State coach Al Luginbill said after Dowis had dashed and darted for a school-record 249 yards and a Western Athletic Conference-record six touchdowns in Air Force's 52-36 romp over the Aztecs on Saturday. He did all that in only 13 carries.

"We had people there where they were supposed to be. The young man is just a tremendous athlete," said Luginbill, who carries considerable defensive credentials. He was defensive coordinator at Arizona State in 1982 when the Sun Devils led the nation in total defense. Yet nothing seemed to work on Saturday.

Dowis scored on runs of 55, 28, 12, 16, 60 and 17 yards, the last jaunt also breaking the previous single-game rushing mark of 241 set by Dowis against Utah in 1987.

"You could say it was poor tackling on our part, but you have to give some of the credit to him," Luginbill said. "That was the best performance I've seen by an individual player ever. Air Force is certainly not a one-man team, but they were close to one today."

Air Force coach Fisher DeBerry said he had "never been a part of a game where a player dominated the way Dee Dowis did today."

Dowis, the littlest Falcon at 153 pounds, has been zipping through defenses at a record pace since taking over the Air Force wishbone attack in 1987. As a sophomore, he ran for 1,315 yards, an NCAA record for a quarterback. He also threw for 600 yards.

Last year, he ran for 972 yards and passed for 870.

As the man in charge of the triple-option offense, Dowis' main responsibility isn't so much carrying the ball as it is getting it into the hands of the runner left unguarded by the defense. He has succeeded to the point that Air Force has been second in the nation in rushing each of the last two years.

The Air Force is at it again, rolling up 559 yards on the ground against San Diego State.

"There is no question in my mind that Dee is the best option quarterback in America today," DeBerry said. "He showed the kind of surgeon he is. He cut them up."

Salzburg Festival Changes Image To Admit New Art

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALZBURG, Austria — With the death of conductor Herbert von Karajan, the Salzburg Festival is changing its image to open up the celebrated cultural event to new forms of art and musicians who've never been invited to play.

"The festival has become an old museum, unaware of what's going on artistically in the world. We should give modern music and drama the place they deserve," said Hans Landesmann, a member of the festival board, in an interview.

"There is no crisis but just time for change. This necessity has been in the air for years."

Gerard Mortier, director of the Brussels Opera, was recently named artistic director of the Salzburg Festival with a mandate to revamp the cultural showcase.

For years, the festival had been criticized for being too expensive and a storehouse of the artistic totems of Karajan, its longtime guiding spirit who died July 16 of a heart attack at age 81.

The five-week festival opened July 27 with Giuseppe Verdi's opera "Un Ballo in Maschera," under the baton of Sir Georg Solti.

Karajan had been criticized for his domineering and conservative stance. Italian media called the festival an "intrigue nest," totally subordinated to Karajan's commercial interests.

In his long career, Karajan made more than 800 recordings, many of them with the Berlin and Vienna orchestras. His fortune was estimated at 3.5 billion schillings ($270 million). Although he resigned from the five-member directorate last August after an illness, he had retained a veto over virtually all productions.

Landesmann, a wealthy Vienna businessman with international contacts, was asked by the government to work out a reform program. In June, before Karajan's death, the board, overruling him, agreed in principle to Landesmann's plan to modernize festival management. Under the plan, to be formally adopted in fall, the unpaid honorary five-man directorate will be replaced by a permanent salaried three-member board.

The new board, comprising a president, an artistic director and an economic director will work full time for the festival, Landesmann said.

"We need new, forward-thinking people in the management, much more aware of the contemporary scene," he said.

Albert Moser, the festival president and a Karajan loyalist who is to retire in 1991, will also be replaced.

In another major change, Landesmann said he would like to include artists in the new artistic advisory board to counsel on new projects. He would also like to see more film and video galas and exhibits to be staged during the festival — the world's longest-running and most costly one.

While not playing down the merits of Italian traditional operas, which have been performed here every year, Landesmann proposes to include other composers, such as Richard Strauss or Alban Berg, the Austrian artist who combined atonality with the lyric and dramatic features of the Viennese romantic tradition.

There is talk among festival organizers to devote the 2,600-seat Great Festival Hall to foreign classical opera and the Little Festival Hall to Mozart productions.

"We want a repertoire consistent with the line of Mozart's heritage, something specific, typical of Salzburg," Landesmann said.

In an attempt to prevent the rise of another domineering maestro such as Karajan, Landesmann said no permanent conductor will be named, but invitations will go out to such well-known figures as Solti, Ricardo Muti, Claudio Abbado or Sir John Pritchard, all of whom were in Austria this summer.

"Karajan was opposed to reforms. He was an old man and he didn't like changes. He was opposed to see new people and he used to ask why should we change the structure of the festival," Landesmann said.

Karajan, a native of Salzburg, who had conducted at the festival since 1948, was its sole artistic director in 1956-60 and a member of the directorate since 1964.

Now in its 69th year, the Salzburg festival pays some of the highest performer fees in Europe, and charges some of the continent's top ticket prices.

Five years ago, government auditors urged festival organizers to spend less. Press chief Hans Widrich said the festival runs an annual budget of $27 million, of which state subsidies total $7.7 million with the rest coming from ticket sales, radio and TV rights.

Ticket sales this year range from $4 for standing room at a concert of sacred music to $250 for the best seat at one of the opera performances.

Solti, musical director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, who replaced Karajan for the Verdi opera, said the ticket prices should stay as they are.

"I don't believe that lowering their price and making them cost 10 schillings (77 cents) apiece would solve anything. All hotel doormen will rush to buy them officially and then resell them on the black market at a high profit," he said.

Solti said he was not concerned about the artistic quality of the festival, which he considers very good.

"Politicians are talking too much. Once its quality goes down then you can say, 'hey, we must change something.' But not for the time being," he said.

British film director John Schlesinger, who staged Verdi's opera on the opening night, praised Salzburg, saying "There is no house in the world offering the kind of facilities, expertise and officialdom's support we get here. We don't think we will find again similar conditions."

Jerry Lewis Kicks Off 24th Annual Telethon In Search Of $41 Million

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Jerry Lewis kicked off his 24th annual telethon for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Sunday night, saying inroads made against the disease the past three years are "stunning to the heart, stunning to the mind."

Lewis, opening the 21½-hour telethon from the Jerry Lewis Theater at the city's Cashman Field Center, said the show, carried by 200 television stations, would reach 100 million people in the United States and Canada.

"We are playing to a lot of people who are becoming fans of what we do," Lewis said. "That's what makes my kids figure, 'Hey, I got a chance.' If nothing more happens from this program than for my kids to say, 'Hey, I've got a chance,' isn't it worth all the effort?"

Lewis introduced his co-hosts for the evening, including singer Tony Orlando, who recalled advice from his grandmother to "shoot for the moon, because the worst that can happen is that you miss and fall among the stars."

Last year's show was watched by about 90 million people in 34.8 million households, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co. The 1988 event raised a record $41,132,113 and Lewis said in an interview last week he thought this year's telethon could meet his annual goal of "one dollar more."

More than 50 stars planned appearances, including Frank Sinatra, Liza Minnelli, Sammy Davis Jr., Billy Crystal, Alabama, the Oak Ridge Boys, Robert Goulet, LaToya

Jackson, Ringo Starr, Waylon Jennings and Maureen McGovern.

Co-hosts include Davis, Ed McMahon, Casey Kasem, Julius La Rosa and Norm Crosby.

Lewis has been a spokesman for the New York City-based Muscular Dystrophy Association for 40 years and held the annual Labor Day weekend telethons since 1966.

They have raised $484 million, and the money is paying dividends, Lewis said, with medical science starting to unlock the mysteries of 40 neuromuscular diseases that cripple thousands annually.

Lewis said the 1989 telethon has special meaning for him.

This spring Lewis and his wife, Sam, 38, learned she was pregnant. On May 5, two months into the pregnancy, they learned that the fetus' heart had stopped beating. Lewis, 63, has six sons by a previous marriage.

Lewis said his loss cannot compare to the trials faced by parents who lose a child after years of suffering, but now he has new understanding of their plight.

"I thought I knew what I was talking about," Lewis said, recalling decades of relating to parents whose children die of muscular dystrophy.

Lewis also said he was "shocked and saddened" by the death last week of the Rev. Paul O'Conner, a Catholic priest from Detroit who was to appear on the telethon to describe his battle with one of the diseases MDA hopes to cure.

O'Conner flew to Las Vegas Thursday and was hospitalized later in the day after suffering breathing problems. He died Friday of respiratory complications from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, known as Lou Gehrig's disease because it took the life of the famed baseball player.

A film chronicling O'Conner's battle with the disease was to be shown on the telethon.

Joan Rivers Makes Switch Tuesday From Late-Night To Day TV Host

By Jerry Buck

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — After being fired on her last outing, Joan Rivers was wary when she was offered a chance to be host of a new television talk show.

She got over it.

Her new venture, "The Joan Rivers Show," premieres Tuesday as an afternoon TV magazine with a heavy emphasis on gossip.

The comedian was fired in 1987 from "The Late Show," the inaugural series on Fox Broadcasting, after an eight-month feud over low ratings.

"I was so burned on my previous show, I was so leery of things, that I called Geraldo Rivera," says Rivers, whose new show and "Geraldo" are both produced by Tribune Entertainment Co.

"I said, 'Tell me the truth. Are they gentlemen? Are they honorable? Do they stand behind their word? Otherwise, I don't need this again.' He came over to my apartment in New York and we talked for an hour. He said, 'Go with them.'"

Rivers calls her new show an alternative to "Geraldo," "Oprah" and "Donahue."

"I don't want to do those shows," she says. "You can only watch so much about cross-dressing. My show's going to be entertaining. We'll have personalities and gossip. We'll have some issues. We'll get into the pros and cons of abortion. Mainly, it will be a magazine with four segments. But no recipes. Hey, look at these hands."

"I'm going to do the book reviews I couldn't do at night. I'm going to bring out the cystic fibrosis parents I couldn't have on before. It's going to be what interests me."

"Sure, I'm going to ask outrageous questions. Sometimes you get some unexpected answers. I'm not creating any new art form, nor do I see why I need to. Pat Sajak and Oprah Winfrey didn't have to create a new format."

Rivers was the permanent substitute host for NBC's "Tonight Show" when she quit in 1986 to challenge her mentor, Johnny Carson, with a new late-night show that was the first offering of Fox's new "fourth network." Carson protested bitterly that he learned of her departure on the day her Fox show was announced.

"The Late Show" made a highly publicized debut Oct. 9, 1986, and after some initial curiosity from viewers quickly sank into the ratings oblivion that has been the fate of most Carson competitors.

Rivers left the show after the May 15, 1987, telecast and was replaced by a series of rotating hosts. The final host of "The Late Show" was Arsenio Hall, who later created his own syndicated late night show that is now seen on 160 stations nationwide.

Rivers says Fox promised advertisers and its affiliate stations a 6.2 rating for "The Late Show," which was unrealistic. The show actually delivered numbers that were only about half of that.

"They pulled the number out of the air," she says. "They had nothing else on the air. The star was ARIES (March 20 to April 19): Don't take too seriously comments made by a fellow worker who is upset. You now can go forward and meet interesting persons who have not been close to you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 19): You need all self-control possible to avoid a confrontation with argumentative fellow workers. Be very precise in planning and executing your usual routine work.

GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Rely more upon an available couple to give you the support you need in your activities. You really get in dutch with attachment now unless you do fair share of chores.

MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Conditions at your daily duties are taking a decided turn for the better. Join with another person to put into motion a joint business undertaking. Use care together on highway.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Do not allow a demanding co-worker to depress you on your usual work. A great day to get everything at home in tip-top shape. A trip with your attachment would be good for both of you now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Plan carefully with good friends before going to any entertainment. Cut down on business expenses not directly connected with your work.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Your work is not best done by using own talent without consulting others. Persons of financial stability can now be helpful to you in recreational interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Don't be upset because a friend cannot carry through with a social activity you had counted upon. Put in motion a progressive plan to improve your home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Attending large affairs of a social nature brings more standing with everyone. State only to co-workers you can trust, intimate details of private work conclusions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Pay no heed to chatty friends who try to control your daily affairs—avoid time wasting friends and concentrate on those with your sense of humor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Get approval of every higher-up now before doing anything important on your routine work. An advisor who works alone gives you valuable financial and/or business suggestions.

PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Accept at face value work suggestions that come to you from afar off. Don't argue with a partner about money already spent. Home expenses seem endless.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠763 ♥962 ♦AK54 ♣652
Partner opens the bidding with three no trump (25-27 points). What do you respond?
A.—Your ace and king are wonderful assets, but your square shape has its disadvantages. We would invite slam by raising to four no trump (no, that's not Blackwood), and we would not be disappointed if partner passed.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ8 ♥984 ♦654 ♣A1063
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner has asked you to proceed to game if you are in the upper range for your response. Since you promised 6-10 points, you are right on the borderline. While your flat shape is a liability, your intermediate cards offset that flaw. Raise to three no trump.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K95 ♥762 ♦842 ♣AQ93
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—Even if you play four-card majors, partner usually has five cards in the suit for a one-spade opening.

Therefore, we prefer a raise to two spades over a one-no-trump response—the former is more encouraging and we have a maximum in support.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♥J107652 ♦QJ53 ♣93
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—You have a hand which, only on a good day, will produce a trick on defense. On offense, however, it has tremendous trick-taking potential. Make a preemptive jump to four hearts in an attempt to keep the opponents out of the auction.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ9852 ♥63 ♦J104 ♣K8
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 1 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—We won't quibble with a jump to four spades, the same action you would take had partner opened the bidding with one no trump. However, we would prefer a jump to three spades (forcing) to give partner a choice of contracts. If he persists with no trump, we would respect his decision because our minor-suit cards should prove most useful.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ63 ♥K95 ♦Q92 ♣63

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—A difficult choice. A jump to three spades overstates the quality and length of the suit; four diamonds bypasses three no trump; and three no trump with an un-stopped suit is unthinkable. The least of evils is to bid two hearts. That action is forcing. If partner bids 2 NT, raise to game. If he raises hearts, he must have an unbalanced hand and you can jump to five diamonds.

Common Market Moves Into Foreign Policy

By Sally Jacobsen
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The European Economic Community is fast shedding its role as solely a trading bloc of West European nations to assume a more prominent place in foreign affairs.

The dozen nations that make up the community, also known as the Common Market, are virtually certain to take more political stands as their economies become tightly linked at the end of 1992, analysts say.

That may well mean a diminished role for the United States in Europe and perhaps beyond, they say.

"It's a bit inevitable that where the United States was once the only and therefore dominant initiator and influence in these matters, it will be an equal or one of many nations," said Richard Fieldhouse, research fellow at the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute in Sweden.

Encouraging the European closeness is the drive by the EEC to remove by Dec. 31, 1992, the many trade barriers separating the members.

The aim of 1992 is to create a single market in which people, money, goods and services can move freely among member nations Belgium, Britain, Denmark, France, West Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal and Spain.

The 12 nations, with a whopping 320 million consumers, can wield much more economic power together than individually — so too in world affairs.

"The completion of the internal market will undoubtedly have external implications," said Willy De Clercq, who formerly was the community's top foreign affairs official.

"The object of the game is not just economic integration," said Peter Ludlow, director of the Center for European Policy Studies, a Brussels-based think tank. "(It) is only part of a general design to create a European union."

"Some measure of greater political cooperation will be had. ... How and to what degree all depends on the shape of economic integration," said Alfred Kingon, the former U.S. ambassador to the EEC.

A recent poll by the European Commission, the community's executive body, indicated that 72 percent of the Europeans questioned felt the community should handle foreign policy issues. A little more than half said it should also decide security and defense matters.

"You can't exclude closer cooperation in security questions if you really want to realize a United States of Europe," said Charles Goerens, president of the legislative arm of the Western European Union, a forum for foreign and defense ministers that discusses security issues.

With their unity push, Western Europeans are gaining a stronger sense of identity and becoming less dependent on the United States, long their protector against a possible threat from the Soviet Union.

The United States appears more willing, at least to analysts on this side of the Atlantic Ocean, to give up its once-supreme position in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Western military alliance. They point in part to increased grumbling in the U.S. Congress that Americans are paying too much — and Europeans not enough — of the costs for the common Western defense. With the federal budget crunch, there will be more pressure to pare the U.S. contribution.

*Members outside of Europe: Cuba, Vietnam, Mongolia

They also note President Bush's endorsement of the European bonding. "Let me say clearly a stronger Europe, a more united Europe, is good for my country," he said in a July speech in the Netherlands. "And it's a development we welcome, a natural evolution within our alliance, the product of true partnership 40 years in the making."

The community's world standing got an unexpected lift in July when Bush and leaders of other rich democracies put it in charge of coordinating economic aid for Poland and Hungary.

The move, which delighted community officials, was seen as a sign of their growing importance.

"It was a brilliant stroke on the part of the United States," said Kingon. Community spokesman Claus-Dieter Ehlermann said the assignment was "certainly the biggest boost and also the greatest challenge" for the EEC in foreign relations.

"We have never been charged (before) with coordinating the activities of countries outside the 12."

Officials of two dozen Western nations met in Brussels in early August to take an initial look at ways to help Poland and Hungary. The talks produced pledges of emergency food aid to shortage-plagued Poland. More discussions will be held in the fall.

The community was given the job most likely because of its contacts with the Soviet-led economic bloc, called the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, also known by the acronym Comecon. It brought to an end three decades of estrangement between Europe's economic halves.

In June 1988, it signed a declaration establishing official relations with the Soviet-led economic bloc, called the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, also known by the acronym Comecon. It brought to an end three decades of estrangement between Europe's economic halves.

Since then, the EEC has signed or initiated trade agreements with Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Poland. Negotiations are under way with the Soviet Union and Bulgaria.

At a summit in June, the leaders of the 12 member countries made known their desire to play an active role in encouraging reforms in Eastern Europe.

They also acted together to sanction China for its crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators and urged a negotiated solution to the Middle East conflict.

Earlier in the year, they recalled their ambassadors from Iran to protest the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's appeal for the death of the author Salman Rushdie, who holds British citizenship.

That action was agreed on at a regular monthly meeting of foreign ministers, gatherings that have become an important feature of community life.

The governments also coordinate their views by issuing statements, under the title European Political Cooperation, on the troubles of the day, whether in Burma in Asia or the Middle East. A tiny EPC office, opened in Brussels in 1987, issues about four or five statements a month.

"The 12 have a common position in almost every single problem in the world," said one community official.

Yet, it's unclear how much farther the community can go. Further steps might be limited if neutral Austria, bridging the East and the West in Europe, were to join. In a recent letter applying for membership, the Austrian government insisted on safeguarding its neutrality.

Even so, the Soviet Union has expressed concern. EEC membership would not be exclusively economic, the Kremlin said.

Ireland, which entered the community in 1973, also is neutral. Its status has not yet been troublesome, although it might be were the community to expand forcefully into defense and security matters. Ireland, unlike other community members, does not belong to NATO.

The Western European Union was revived in 1984 to bring together European foreign and defense ministers to tackle security issues. Defense chiefs do not meet within the EEC.

Acting through the union in 1987, the nations sent naval minesweeping forces to the Persian Gulf in the Iran-Iraq war.

"We have to become the European pillar of NATO," said Goerens, who is also a Luxembourg legislator.

Belgium, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands are members of the organization. Spain and Portugal will join shortly. All belong to NATO.

Catholic Leaders Split Over Auschwitz Convent

By Charles Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Conflict has heightened in the Roman Catholic church over Polish primate Cardinal Jozef Glemp's refusal to honor an agreement to move a convent away from the Auschwitz death camp.

Three of the four cardinals who signed the pact with Jewish leaders in 1987 insisted Sunday that it be carried out. They include the leaders of France and Belgium's Catholics.

The three were responding to Glemp's suggestion last week that the accord be renegotiated.

Prelates Albert Decourtray of Lyon and Godfried Danneels of Brussels and fellow Cardinal Jean-

Marie Lustiger of Paris said in a statement that Glemp "could only have been speaking for himself."

Cardinal Franciszek Macharski of Krakow, Poland, the other cardinal who signed the agreement, said Aug. 19 that he was suspending the accord because of "aggressive" demands and protests by Jewish activists at the convent located in his diocese.

Glemp later angered many Jews and non-Jews with a sermon Aug. 26 in which he said Polish anti-Semitism would disappear if Jews would abandon anti-Polish sentiments.

He asked Jews to understand that it offended Poles' religious sensibilities and feelings of sovereignty to insist on removal of the Carmelite convent, which in 1984 was set up just outside the fence surrounding the former Nazi concentration camp.

"Dear Jews, do not talk to us from the position of a nation elevated over all others and do not put to us conditions that are impossible to meet," Glemp said in the sermon.

Glemp offended many Jews by suggesting Jews helped spread Communism, and by mentioning that some collaborated with Nazis during World War II or as businessmen neglected or detested Poles.

Pope John Paul II has not commented on the dispute. Vatican officials said in Rome that the Polish-born pope believes the Polish church must resolve it.

Jewish groups say the convent and its Christian religious symbols, including a 23-foot cross, offend the memory of the 2.5 million Jews who died there during World War II.

Under the 1987 agreement between a Jewish delegation and the four archbishops, the nuns were to have been moved by Feb. 22 to an interfaith prayer center to be built several thousand yards away.

Glemp was quoted Saturday in Italian newspapers as saying it was "a scandal" to move the convent.

"I want this accord to be renegotiated," Glemp was quoted as saying. "It has to be done by competent people and not by just any cardinal who doesn't understand the things."

In their statement issued in Paris, Decourtray, Lustiger and Danneels defended the agreement, which they said was "patiently and loyally negotiated over two years," and the capacity of the negotiators on the two sides.

"If the Jewish delegation at the Geneva meetings, led by Mr. Theo Klein, then president of the European Jewish Congress, is 'not competent,' who would be?" they asked.

"And if four cardinals, including the archbishop of Krakow, are not qualified to represent the Catholic side, who might be? The Auschwitz camp is in the Krakow diocese. According to church law, its archbishop has full authority there. The cardinals who accompanied him belong to nations who, in the West, were among the chief victims of the Hitler barbarism."

Many Poles argue that there is nothing offensive about nuns praying at a site where large numbers of Roman Catholics, as well as Jews, were killed.

"The Jews should understand that devoting oneself to a life of prayer near the place where Christians were martyred doesn't offend their feelings," Glemp was quoted as saying in the Italian interview.

Speaking to reporters Sunday in Lyon, Decourtray said he hoped the dispute could be resolved without requiring intervention by the pope, who was Macharski's predecessor as archbishop of Krakow.

Only several thousand Jews remain in Poland from a pre-war population of 3.5 million.

Voting Rights Suits Bring 'Second Reconstruction'

By Garry Mitchell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOBILE, Ala. — Only one Alabama city still clings to a city commission form of government elected at-large, a system once commonplace but now mostly dismantled in what one scholar calls the South's "Second Reconstruction."

But change may come to the holdout, Muscle Shoals. A federal judge is considering whether to order the creation of seven voting districts that could bring the first black into office in the city, which is about 10 percent black.

Similar rulings swept the state because of litigation prompted by the 1965 Voting Rights Act. The major victim of the lawsuits was the at-large commission form of government, viewed as a bastion of white political power because blacks seeking representation from their areas were outvoted by the white majority.

There still are some at-large-elected councils, but only one such city commission. County commissions and school boards did not escape restructuring, either. Of the 67 county commissions, only a handful are elected at-large, most in northern Alabama where there are fewer blacks. The pattern applies to the 67 county school boards and the three city systems — Huntsville, Jacksonville and Scottsboro — that elect their boards. The other 62 boards are appointed.

"It amounts to a Second Reconstruction," said Chandler Davidson, a political sociologist at Rice University, referring to the Reconstruction Era after the Civil War. Davidson testified in many federal hearings on lawsuits challenging the at-large method of electing city officials in many cities.

Davidson and other political scientists will meet Thursday in Atlanta to discuss the full impact of the Voting Rights Act on the South.

One of the most far-reaching lawsuits stemming from the act was filed in the late 1970s against Mobile, which Davidson ranked among the most segregated cities in the country in terms of jobs, education, housing and politics.

Bolden vs. City of Mobile paved the way for a 1982 amendment to the Voting Rights Act eliminating the need to prove intentional discrimination in efforts to change at-large election systems that perpetuated white dominance. No longer could all-white governments defend at-large election systems by saying simply that the intent of the system had nothing to do with racial discrimination.

Mobile changed from a city commission, elected citywide, to a mayor and a council chosen from seven districts. Three blacks were elected.

The 1982 amendment ended cities' resistance to racial change. And it didn't go unnoticed that Mobile's legal bill was over $1 million. Soon, the financial burden and the increasing likelihood of courtroom defeat moved scores of local governments to change.

The commission form of government is "history," said Tuscaloosa City Attorney Bob Ennis. "You can no longer have a form of government that is not constantly aware of how cities operate on a daily basis." Tuscaloosa settled a voting rights lawsuit quickly six years ago, switching to a mayor and council.

"We're constantly aware of the Voting Rights Act every time there's an annexation, redistricting or substantive change," Ennis said.

There are 440 cities in the state, with an average of five council districts each. Some 410 council members are now blacks, and there are 31 black mayors, said the Alabama Democratic Conference, a black political caucus. There were 12 black mayors and 94 black council members in 1979.

However, changes in city hall don't necessarily reflect changed cities.

Some "Black Belt" cities in western Alabama were forced to change through state legislation. Each has unique circumstances, and most officials report political acceptance of choosing council members from districts.
