Diplomatic Snarl Tangles Refugees' Exodus

By Carol J. Williams
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TIEFENBACH, West Germany — A diplomatic standoff delaying an exodus of thousands of East German refugees from Hungary has left the would-be emigres in the cold and West German relief workers in the dark.

In Hungary, at least 30 of the thousands of East Germans huddling in refugee camps in and near Budapest said they will begin a hunger strike on Friday if their crisis is not solved by then.

"The situation is desperate," a 23-year-old East German identifying himself only as Rene told reporters outside the capital's largest refugee camp, known as Csillebenc. Hungarian officials said they stilled a mass emigration of East Germans to West Germany because of concern that East Berlin might react angrily to the unauthorized release of its citizens.

The Hamburg-based weekly magazine Stern quoted Hungarian Interior Minister Istvan Horvath as saying resolution of the refugee crisis could take up to 1½ months, or until West Germany and East Germany reach agreement.

The East German state-run news agency ADN reported Horvath's remarks and also quoted East German Foreign Ministry spokesman Wolfgang Meyer as repeating assurances that would-be emigres will not face prosecution if they return.

As recently as Sunday, West German and Hungarian officials had suggested the departure was imminent of at least 4,700 East Germans staying in tents and summer cabins at five makeshift refugee camps in Hungary.

East German refugees began fleeing to the West through Hungary after the liberal Communist regime in Budapest in May removed barbed wire and other obstacles from its frontier with Austria.

An estimated 6,000 East Germans have since fled to Austria. Their final destination is West Germany, which gives them automatic citizenship and generous help in starting new lives.

West German relief workers who toiled round-the-clock over the weekend to ready tent cities for the refugees in five border towns said

Monday they still assumed arrivals were imminent.

"We still expect the first refugees within the next few days," said Bruno Merck, president of the Bavarian Red Cross Society.

He spoke while touring the Tiefenbach camp, nestled between an alfalfa field and broad-roofed Bavarian farmhouses.

"We were informed just today that the movement would start no earlier than tomorrow, and that it could be later, but the fact of the matter is that none of us really knows," Merck said.

West German, Austrian and Hungarian officials had said last week that the unprecedented release of East Germans to the West could begin as early as last weekend.

Huge encampments of 10-person tents, feeding stations, first-aid shelters and job-finding bureaus were thrown together to help East Germans en route to new lives in the West.

The tent cities, in which refugees were to spend their first nights, are worked into the patchwork of cornfields, forest and pasture along a nearly 125-mile stretch of rolling

Bush Will Call For Major Crackdown On Drug Users; By American People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, issuing an anti-drug battle cry, tonight will urge a crackdown on drug users and ask Americans to join a $7.8 billion war on narcotics whose funding source he has yet to reveal.

For his first nationally televised address to the nation, scheduled for 9 p.m. EDT, Bush will talk about drugs in what White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater called "a personal message from himself to the American people that talks about the collective need of society to pull together to solve this problem."

In what the White House billed as a practice session this morning for a

22-minute speech, the president quipped to photographers that, "I have it memorized. I don't need teleprompters."

Bush will "talk considerably about users and the need to crack down on them and who they are and why this is such a pervasive problem in our society," Fitzwater said Monday.

The president today planned to discuss his drug plan with Cabinet members and members of Congress, and to join drug policy chief William Bennett in a meeting with groups involved in fighting drugs, including law enforcement, education and rehabilitation experts.

Just back from a three-week vacation in Kennebunkport, Maine, Bush rehearsed his speech Monday afternoon and went over last-minute refinements of the text. He got tips on delivery and style from his campaign media adviser, Roger Ailes.

All four major television networks — ABC, CBS, NBC and CNN — plan to broadcast the speech, which will be carried from the Oval Office.

The speech will outline the national drug strategy put together over several months by Bennett, with assistance from advisers across the government. The strategy has been billed as a coordinated effort to link the drug-fighting programs by various government agencies in a more cohesive way than has been seen in the past.

Some details have been revealed but officials have not disclosed where Bush will siphon off money from an already squeezed federal budget. However, they said the plan will address that issue. Sources have said it will come from various categories in next year's budget rather than cutting back in one or two places.

Bush's package for 1990 will be close to $2 billion above the current anti-drug spending levels.

In his televised address, the president will dwell more on a general outline of his strategy than on its cost specifics. The White House planned to release those figures to the media today.

Bush will urge Americans "to

ECU Has Room Left In Dorms

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Total enrollment at East Carolina University is up this year but school officials said today the demand for dormitory space is down. In fact, some rooms are vacant this year.

Carolyn Fulghum, assistant vice chancellor and director of residence life and housing, said "the demand for on-campus housing is down about 5 percent over last year" as students seek housing elsewhere.

This year there are 5,048 students living in the residence halls, while last year 5,429 students were housed. Because of the decrease in demand, it was not necessary to place three people in a room temporarily, as has been done in the past.

The decrease in demand for rooms in residence halls could have been triggered by the availability and convenience of off-campus apartments for students or by the increase in cost for residence halls, the university said. The cost went up $100 this year as compared to last year's $40 increase.

"ECU is still 11th in the system as far as rent is concerned with only five other institutions charging less," Ms. Fulghum said.

The department of residence life and housing has a five- to 10-year renovation plan under way. The plan includes a complete audit on all the residence halls with a concentration on Jones, Umstead and Slay.

Lenoir Player In Serious Condition After Injury

A South Lenoir High School football player injured during a Friday night game at Deep Run was listed in serious condition this morning by Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Bobby Davis, athletic director at South Lenoir, said senior running back Ronnie Isler suffered a spinal injury early in the game with North Lenoir.

"I haven't seen the film of the game," Davis said, "but I understand it shows that he was attempting to make a tackle and probably what he came in contact with was one of our boys' knees. They say the film shows he didn't hit the opponent."

Isler was attended at the game by Dr. Murphy McEirt, a Kinston orthopedist, and was then transported by the Pink Hill Rescue Squad to Lenoir Memorial Hospital, where his mother, Loretta Isler, met him. He and his mother were then brought to Pitt Memorial, where he is being treated in an intensive care unit of the hospital. His condition has been upgraded from critical to serious.

Davis said he has been told this week that Isler's spinal cord was not severed in the accident. "I hope this means that he will not be permanently paralyzed," he said.

Davis said he understands the injury was to a vertebra at shoulder level.

The athletic director said Isler was playing football for his fourth year. "Everybody here at school is still in a state of shock," he said. "I think that most of the guys are realizing that it's a tragic thing, but one that we'll all have to go beyond."

"Ronnie is a super young man. He has good principles about him. It's tragic that something like this has to happen. But we're all going to support him in his comeback in every way we can."

Democrats Turn Attention To Shinn, Friday For '90

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. — Democrats at a weekend retreat openly speculated about the possibility of Charlotte Hornets owner George Shinn running for governor in 1992 and focused on former University of North Carolina President Bill Friday as a top contender in the next U.S. Senate race.

"We think he would be a hell of a candidate," Wallace Hyde, a top

Democratic fund-raiser, said of Shinn. "He has the qualities that will sell."

Hyde was among 200 Democrats who gathered at the beach home of Marvin Speight of Farmville, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission during former Gov. Jim Hunt's administration.

Reports published today indicated most of the conversation focused on efforts to recapture the Governor's Mansion when Gov. Jim Martin leaves and to unseat U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms. Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner is expected to be the GOP nominee for governor.

Hyde said Shinn, a wealthy businessman from a modest upbringing, has a background attractive to voters.

"He's been successful with everything he's done," Hyde said. "That's made him quite a hero down there (in the Charlotte area)."

Storms Continue To Gain Strength

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The Caribbean's easternmost islands reported large swells and heavy surf as Gabrielle, the most powerful hurricane in the Atlantic this year, tossed gale-force winds in a 400-mile-wide spiral, forecasters said.

Meanwhile, Tropical Storm Felix was upgraded to a hurricane after its maximum sustained winds topped 74 mph, but was in the middle of the northern Atlantic and posed no threat to land, the National Hurricane Center reported.

With top winds of 130 mph, Gabrielle's center was expected to pass north of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands today, thrusting hurricane-force winds of at least 74 mph as far as 100 miles northward.

"It's a very large storm," hurricane specialist Jim Gross said today. "We don't have anything that looks like it would deflect it right now."

As of noon EDT, Gabrielle was centered near 21.1 north latitude and 57.9 west longitude, about 550 miles east-northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico. It was moving northwest at 12 mph.

Forecasters expected Gabrielle, the Atlantic season's fourth hurricane, to strengthen still further and continue that course through Wednesday morning, but said they wouldn't know until it nears the Bahamas Friday whether Gabrielle will hit the U.S. mainland or veer northward.

"The storm is actually a long way away from any potential impact," said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center, who nevertheless warned people in coastal areas to follow its progress closely.

According to reports from an Air Force reconnaissance plane that flew through the storm Monday, it

Doctor Welcomes Word AZT Forestalls AIDS

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville physician who regularly treats AIDS patients and HIV-positive individuals says he is heartened by recently released information that the Burroughs Wellcome-manufactured medication AZT can forestall AIDS in people in the early stages of HIV infection.

Dr. Harry G. Adams, chief of the Infectious Disease Section of the East Carolina University School of Medicine's department of medicine, also said he hopes that the AZT price will be reduced by its maker.

The indication for the expanded use of AZT as a prophylactic provides hope of escaping AIDS for hundreds of thousands of people who are HIV-positive, believes Adams.

"That taking five capsules a day can prevent AIDS in already-infected people is wonderful news," he said. "AZT has had such a positive effect on the treatment of AIDS. Already it's prolonged life and made the quality of life so much better for AIDS patients. This development really is a boon. I'm just delighted."

As delighted as he is, Adams admitted most of his information about using AZT for HIV-positive patients with a helper cell count below 500 has come from the news media. Adams said he feels that what he's read is accurate, but still would like to see a bulletin from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control or some other official source.

Adams said he expects that Burroughs Wellcome will soon get out letters to all physicians known to treat AIDS and HIV-positive patients. He expects to be among these.

"I'm looking forward to reading an article in a peer review journal," he said. "But I realize that this may be as far as six months off."

Adams says his most fervently held hope, now that this information has been made public, is that it provides incentive for people who fear they have the AIDS virus, but who have previously felt they'd rather not know, to find out.

"This development coupled with a fairly new use of a preventive medication in patients with a helper cell count of less than 200 for warding off pneumocystic (Carinii) pneumonia, the most common infection in AIDS patients, makes it only wise that people know whether they have the AIDS virus in their systems or not," he said.

Adams explained that the use of either Septra, also a Burroughs Wellcome-manufactured oral medication or Pentamidine, an aerosol to the lungs, have greatly reduced the likelihood of this potentially deadly infection so often associated with AIDS.

The announcement of AZT's prophylactic use was made by the U.S. Health and Human Services Department in early August. According to the department's announcements, the National Institute Lori L. Martin, an East Carolina University senior from Newton, has been named news editor of ECU's campus newspaper, The East Carolinian. The sports editor is Michael Glenn Martin, a sophomore from High Point.

Additional offices filled for the student-operated newspaper include business manager, Stuart Wayne Rosner of Charlotte; circulation manager, Matthew Thomas Richter of Lawrenceville, N.J.; credit manager, Artimesia D. Nixon of Edenton; and advertising technical supervisor, Matthew M. Shephard of Lake Toxaway.

Volunteer Firefighters

Two area firefighters were among 131 members of the North Carolina Division of Forest Resources who spent their summer vacations fighting fires in western states during August.

David Fields of Chocowinity and Tom Harris of Winterville were among those from North Carolina who volunteered for fire-fighting duties in Oregon and Idaho.

Officials said most of the fires in the two states have been contained, but there is a likelihood that other North Carolina Division of Forest Resource firefighters may be called on to fight forest fires in California.

Body Found

GREENSBORO (AP) — A partially decomposed body was found in the attic of a vacant apartment at a Greensboro housing project.

Greensboro police were called to the apartment about 6 p.m. Sunday by a neighbor who complained about an odor coming from the building. The entire building is being renovated and was unoccupied.

The body, believed to be that of a man, was lying across the panel of the push-up style attic door, and police could not immediately remove it. They called on the Greensboro Housing Authority — which manages the project — for instructions about entering the attic.

Tip Reward

WILMINGTON (AP) — The Wilmington Housing Authority has applied for a $15,000 federal grant to reward anonymous tipsters with cash if they report drug dealing in public housing projects.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development grant would reward anyone who called police with information that would lead to an arrest or an indictment in a drug case, said J. Alan Jones, housing authority executive director.

The program would be linked with Crime Stoppers of New Hanover County, a privately funded reward program launched in 1982.

Baby Hit By Blast From Dad's Shotgun

A baby injured in an apparent accidental shotgun shooting in Roanoke Rapids on Friday is listed this morning by Pitt County Memorial Hospital in fair condition.

Seventeen-month-old Johnathan Wayne Edwards and his babysitter, Lottie Edenbeck, 38, of 1013 Franklin St., Roanoke Rapids, were hit by the same round of birdshot, said Officer Karl Clark of the Roanoke Rapids Police Department.

Clark said the shot was fired, apparently inadvertently, from inside the pickup truck of the baby's father.

The officer said Roanoke Rapids resident Ricky Edwards went to Ms. Edenbeck's home to pick up his son about 7 p.m. Friday. As he was moving a shotgun that had been lying on the truck seat to a space behind the seat, it fired out the door, Clark said. The baby and the woman standing by the door holding him were hit from a distance of about three feet.

Clark said birdshot hit the baby in his face, neck and chest. He was first treated at Halifax Memorial Hospital, then flown to Pitt Memorial Hospital on Monday morning.

Mrs. Edenbeck, who was hit in the upper thigh, was treated at Halifax Memorial Hospital and released.

Clark said it was his opinion that the shooting was accidental. No charges have been filed.

D.C. Mayor Says He'll Fight Report

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Mayor Marion Barry says he'll fight new allegations that he used drugs with a convicted drug dealer, and he wants prosecutors to release his grand jury testimony on the case.

Barry said Monday he will ask U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens to release the record of more than five hours of questions Barry answered about his relationship with Charles Lewis, a former city employee facing drug charges in the nation's capital. Lewis has been convicted on cocaine charges in the Virgin Islands.

"I'm prepared to ask the prosecutor to release my testimony before the grand jury and Mr. Lewis' testimony, so therefore the public can see what was said," Barry said at a City Hall news conference. "A small group of character assassins have taken it upon themselves to take the law into their own hands ... to do in the press what they can't do in court."

Barry's move followed news reports that Lewis told prosecutors that he and Barry repeatedly used crack cocaine in Washington last December and in the Virgin Islands in early 1988.

Stephens, who has said he will investigate the news leaks, was not immediately available to comment Monday on whether the mayor's testimony would be released.

"We have nothing to hide regarding the testimony of the mayor or Mr. Lewis," said Barry's attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy.

The investigation of Lewis continues, and Mundy said release of Barry's testimony could be difficult to arrange because Barry might be called as a witness for the prosecution or defense.

The federal investigation began in January after city police inexplicably called off an attempt to make an undercover drug buy from Lewis when they discovered that Barry was in Lewis' hotel room. Barry has acknowledged making at least six visits to Lewis' room, but has said he did not see, use or purchase drugs from him.

Barry has testified twice before a grand jury on his visits with Lewis. The mayor made his remarks to a cadre of supporters at his side, including his wife Effi, several cabinet members, and the two co-chairman of his 1990 re-election bid.

"Nothing in the recent spate of rumors and innuendoes has caused the mayor's campaign committee to doubt the mayor's statements on these issues or to alter our dedication," said Robert Johnson, one of Barry's campaign directors. "We deplore the use of rumors and leaks in an attempt to distort the political process in this community."

Government Cracks Down On Liquor Tax Deadbeats

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government is cracking down on fraternal groups, taverns, convenience store owners and other small businesses that are behind — one by 50 years — on paying a federal tax on liquor retailers.

The tax was increased by 463 percent last year, from $54 to $250 for each establishment. Accompanying the increase was a vigorous enforcement effort by the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The Elks Lodge 109 in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was stunned to get a bill 10 months ago for $9,776.98 from ATF representing unpaid taxes and penalties back to 1940, when the lodge got its liquor license.

The lodge, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary, said it had never heard of the tax.

"Our attitude, quite frankly, was that if you had notified us, we would have been more than happy to pay," said lodge attorney Peter Paul Olszewski. "How could you possibly have a tax that goes back 'ad infinitum' without a statute of limitations?"

Olszewski said the Elks recently settled with ATF for less than one-tenth the amount of the original demand.

About 600,000 beer, wine and distilled spirits dealers that sell directly to the public must pay the "special occupational tax."

The tax has been around for 123 years, but the government admits that a lot of retailers have never heard of it. Responsibility for collections shifted to ATF in 1986 from the Internal Revenue Service.

"Sixty percent of the retailers have known about it and paid it," said ATF spokesman Jack Killorin.

Killorin said it was uncertain how many deadbeats there are. He said the government expects to collect between $25 million and $30 million from the program this year in current and back taxes and penalties.

"The difficulty arises in identifying and notifying those parties for whom retail liquor sales is an ancillary or secondary part of their operation — a lodge or country club, a bait or tackle shop operator," Killorin said.

Since the crackdown began, ATF has been exchanging taxpayer information with the states, with the idea of making retailers aware of their obligations before their liability mounts.

"We knew that (when) it went to $250, we had to pull out all the stops because the accumulation was going to be dramatic," Killorin said.

"We know by the calls we're getting that the tax is upsetting people. It is not our desire to move in and foreclose and put someone out of business."

Bush Set To Name Arms Negotiator

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is prepared to name James Woolsey Jr., a conservative Democratic and weapons specialist, as the new American negotiator in 23-nation talks to reduce non-nuclear forces in Europe, a U.S. official said today.

Security checks have begun on Woolsey, a lawyer who apparently owes his nomination over two other candidates to his close ties to Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The two other candidates were Stephen Ledogar, a foreign service officer who now holds the job, and Phil Karber, vice president of the BDM Corp. who evidently had the backing of Vice President Dan Quayle.

News of Woolsey's likely selection was first reported in today's editions of The Washington Times.

The negotiations resume Thursday in Geneva between the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the seven-nation Warsaw Pact led by the Soviet Union.

Bush has raised expectations of an accord by the end of the year, but that now appears only a long-shot possibility.

Woolsey, whose nomination would require Senate approval, would bring to the job a reputation for political skill as well as weapons expertise.

Woolsey, 48, was undersecretary of the Navy in the Carter administration and has served on the staffs of the National Security Council and the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Shinn has not announced his candidacy but said last week, "If everything is going right ... I could easily be talked into becoming a candidate for the Democratic Party."

State Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, another potential gubernatorial candidate, downplayed Shinn's candidacy.

"Of course, I like the Charlotte Hornets," Thornburg said. "Certainly, he would be a good candidate. But I'm not saying he should be a ... candidate."

When talk turned to the U.S. Senate race, Friday's name was often mentioned.

"It's Bill Friday if he wants it," said Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare.

But Friday, in a telephone interview with The Charlotte Observer on Monday, did not say whether he would run.

"I have not been meeting with any of those Democratic leaders," he said. "I've been pretty busy with a poverty program. I've had people call me, but I just haven't put my mind to it. It's a long time away."

Among other Democrats said to be considering the race are former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt; Mike Easley, a district attorney from Southport; Betty McCain of Wilson, a former state party chairman; U.S. Rep. Tim Valentine of Nashville and D.G. Martin, who twice lost races to represent the Charlotte-area 9th Congressional District.

Basnight, a friend and sometime neighbor of Andy Griffith, said the television star will not run for the Senate despite some pressure from Democrats.

"Andy won't run," Basnight said. "He has no interest in running."

Britain Faces Decision This Fall On Trial Of At Least 3 Suspected Nazi War Criminals

By Maureen Johnson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Britain is to decide this autumn whether to allow its first trials of suspected Nazi war criminals living in this country.

If it opts for prosecution, it will mean hauling at least three aging men from the sheltered respectability of suburbia to answer charges as mass murderers of Jews.

A report commissioned by the government and published July 24 says there is enough evidence to prosecute four suspects — one of whom has since died — and urges further investigation of 124 other cases.

"To take no action would taint the United Kingdom with the slur of being a haven for war criminals," the report says.

But the government has made no immediate decision, preferring to leave it to a vote in Parliament, where lawmakers are deeply divided.

The year-long investigation, which amassed testimony from witnesses in the Soviet Union, was conducted by two eminent lawyers, one of them Sir Thomas Hetherington, 62, Britain's former director of public prosecutions.

With the videotaped accounts the lawyers obtained of death camp atrocities in Nazi-occupied Soviet territories, a legacy of World War II has returned to haunt Britain 50 years after it declared war on Hitler's Germany.

Immediately after the war in 1945, Britain and its allies accepted waves of refugees; war criminals slipped through perfunctory screening procedures.

There was also a tacit policy of letting bygones be bygones. By 1951, Britain had ceased to take part in war crimes proceedings.

Then the Cold War set in, and at least five Soviet requests for the extradition of war crimes suspects were rebuffed on the grounds that Britain had no extradition treaty with the Soviet Union.

Latterday concern about war criminals prompted the United States to set up an Office of Special Investigations, and Canada and Australia have changed their laws in the past five years to allow prosecutions.

Now Britain must decide, through the parliamentary vote set for October, whether to go ahead with the trials.

The British inquiry followed the submission of a list of suspects in October, 1986, by the Nazi-hunting Simon Wiesenthal Center to Home Secretary Douglas Hurd.

A Scottish Television documentary produced more names, and in the end the government inquiry checked allegations against 301 people living in Britain. Because of lack of time the investigators examined only seven cases in detail.

"I was surprised by the size of the crimes and by the quality of the evidence," Hetherington was quoted as saying in an interview with The Independent newspaper.

Moscow Store

NEW YORK (AP) — Bloomingdale's, symbol of conspicuous consumption, may be heading to Moscow. But the average Soviet citizen probably won't get a chance to line up for its perfume or jeans.

The department store chain's Soviet branches are expected to accept only Western currencies, but most Soviets have only rubles to spend. Rubles legally cannot be converted into other currencies.

The retailer has had serious discussions with Soviet officials about opening two shops by next spring — at a Moscow hotel and airport, said Bloomingdale's chairman, Marvin S. Traub.

He said they would be like the "Bloomie's Express" shops, where merchandise with the Bloomingdale label is sold.

Air Collision

HOUMA, La. (AP) — A helicopter collided with a small plane, killing three people and scattering debris over a rural subdivision, authorities said.

Two people in the helicopter and the pilot of the single-engine plane were killed in Sunday night's crash about a mile from the Houma-Terrebonne Airport, said police Capt. John Dixon.

"I was initially surprised by the memory of witnesses until, I think it was Simon Wiesenthal, pointed out that people who have been through that sort of horror don't forget."

The Scottish TV investigation focused on Antanas Gecas, now 73, a Lithuanian-born mining engineer, the only suspect who has been identified publicly.

Gecas, a tall, burly man who came to Britain in 1947, lives in a middle-class district of Edinburgh with his wife and daughter.

In the Scottish film he acknowledged witnessing atrocities while serving in one of the notorious Lithuanian police battalions that killed an estimated 220,000 Jews.

But he said he only watched and insisted he was now being victimized by a Soviet smear campaign.

He took no action against the Scottish TV program, "Crimes of War," when it was shown the first time in 1987. But when it was repeated this past July 24, the hour-long film had to be cut off 15 minutes early because he obtained an injunction against it.

The government report names the suspects in a separate section being kept secret, along with the videotaped witness accounts, to avoid prejudicing a trial.

The suspects in Britain are almost all former nationals of the Soviet territories of Lithuania, Ukraine and Latvia, scenes of some of the worst atrocities.

Mobile death squads, Einsatzgruppen, set up by the Nazi SS and often enthusiastically manned by locals, killed tens of thousands of Jews, rounding them up, shooting men, women and children and sometimes burying alive bullet-ridden victims who attempted crawl out from the mass graves.

Hetherington says the first court case could begin late next year if the law is changed speedily to allow the trial of naturalized Britons for crimes committed outside this country.

Some influential voices say nothing will be served; that elderly witnesses may make mistakes; that Soviet authorities may pinpoint men who were not criminals but anti-communists.

One such is Lord Shawcross, a distinguished lawyer who prosecuted top Nazis at the postwar Nuremberg trials.

"I cannot believe that a revival of all these sad and terrible matters by sensational trials of a small handful of aged men ... will help to promote understanding and friendship between the different peoples of the world, will help to eliminate the evil of anti-Semitism or — still less — enhance the respect for British justice," Shawcross said in a letter to The Times of London.

Legislator Spencer Batiste, of the governing Conservative Party, replied: "The simple fact is that those who have been guilty of horrendous crimes against humanity must never be able to feel that they are capable of achieving a safe haven in a civilized world."

Refugees Delayed

Bavarian farmland along the Danube and Inn rivers.

"We were told we were to have the reception camps ready by Sunday night, and we worked through the night and driving rain storms to meet that obligation," said Wolfgang Schmidt, director of the Red Cross camp in Vilshofen, across the Danube from Austria.

Asked why he thought the action had been delayed, he said, "That's a good question. But no one here can answer it."

In Budapest, a Hungarian official said the transfer of refugees was stalled because of fears over how Hungary's role would be viewed by allied East Germany.

Permission to emigrate is difficult for East Germans of working age to obtain, while travel visas to Hungary are relatively easy to get.

Hungarian Premier Miklos Nemeth estimated last month that as many as 20,000 other East Germans traveling in Hungary may seek passage to West Germany. Bonn expects more than 100,000 East Germans to arrive after illegal escapes by the end of the year.

About 4,700 East Germans have formally registered with the Hungarians for the westward exodus and are huddled in Red Cross tent villages in Hungary awaiting transfer to West Germany.

Many arrived in Hungary weeks ago with only light summer clothing.

Unseasonable cold has dropped temperatures to near freezing at night in both Hungary and at the Bavarian border camps.

"We now have to reckon with a lot of these people arriving with weather-related illnesses," said a nurse stocking a medical tent in Tiefenbach.

Red Cross administrators said the influx of East Germans would be easier if it began soon and was carried out in stages, rather than transporting thousands at once.

Bush To Outline Drug Strategy

think about what drugs are doing to our society, and the many ramifications that they have for other social programs," such as housing, medical care and education, Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said the speech would be "an expression of the magnitude of the problem, what it takes to deal with it, what can we expect, how long it will take."

Among the details that have emerged is that Bush will earmark some $260 million in economic and military aid to the three main cocaine producers, Colombia, Bolivia and Peru. The final figure could go higher, administration sources have said.

Bush already is sending $65 million worth of helicopters and military aid to Colombia to help President Virgilio Barco wage his war against the powerful drug lords.

Amnesty

An Offer Tax Evaders Can't Refuse

It's not often you get a chance to amend an error without paying a price, especially if that mistake involves taxes. Delinquent North Carolina taxpayers now have that opportunity, and, for those who take advantage of it, it's a good deal for them and the state.

If you failed to report an unexpected windfall on your North Carolina income tax forms, underpaid your income tax or just plain failed to file tax returns, you have three months to make things right through the state's tax amnesty program without prosecution or penalties.

North Carolina began its tax amnesty offer Sept. 1. So far, officials report early positive response.

Here's how the offer works.

North Carolina citizens and businesses have until Dec. 1 to pay any unpaid taxes and avoid penalties or prosecution. If those who have taxes in arrears pay during this period they will owe only the tax obligation plus interest.

It is a tax opportunity that seldom comes along. It includes individual income, corporate income, intangibles tax, gift tax, withholding, sales, use, motor fuels and inspection tax, license tax, franchise tax and inheritance tax.

That's one reason tax amnesty is a good deal for the public. Here's another: after the one-time amnesty period is over, tax evasion will become a class I felony, instead of a misdemeanor. That means a conviction could net an evader five years in prison and a fine up to $25,000.

It will also become tougher to get away with violations after the amnesty period. The Department of Revenue will be adding 135 auditors, collectors and agents.

Here why tax amnesty is a good deal for the state. The program is expected to be a boon to the state treasury. North Carolina wants to collect $20 million — money state coffers would likely never see without the amnesty period.

For North Carolina, collecting the money which it is owed is far more important than prosecuting someone. With the amnesty program the money will come in and there won't be the expense of tracking down, collecting and possibly prosecuting those who owe the government.

Everybody will benefit, but it is an offer that will not be repeated. If the state made such an offer every few years it would be tempting to some to cheat with the knowledge that there would be a future window of opportunity.

Thus delinquent taxpayers have a great opportunity to cleanse the conscience and set things straight. For those who owe, the tax amnesty program makes a world of sense.

'It's not often you get a chance to amend an error without paying a price, especially if that mistake involves taxes.'

They're Students, Aren't They?

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Simple answers are often incomplete answers — especially when they respond to complex problems. Despite its complexity, however, the problem of student-athletes at N.C. State and, for that matter, at every other college in America, begs for the obvious simple answer:

Why not treat these youngsters like students? Nothing more, nothing less.

The UNC Board of Governors has approved a set of recommendations from C.D. Spangler, system president. In some regards, the recommendations seek to make student-athletes more like other students. In others, the recommendations go in just the opposite direction.

The board accepted the notion that a student-athlete should not be admitted to the university unless he or she is capable of graduating. That's a tough prediction to make, but the admissions office makes it regularly for other students.

The board also decreed that an athlete must be making progress towards a degree to stay in school, and thus remain eligible to play. That may not be a written rule for all students, but any student's academic adviser will insist upon it before signing a course registration card.

The board adopted two proposals which would unwisely distinguish student-athletes from their peers.

One would have faculty keep special attendance records for athletes, in a sense pampering them. Part of the college experience is learning to become self-reliant. They should learn, just like everyone else that skipping class has ramifications.

Testing athletes for steroids makes sense because that abuse is tied directly to their athletic status.

But testing for other drugs unfairly singles out these youngsters from other students, and deprives them of their basic right to privacy.

Spangler failed to recommend several steps which would help eliminate the special status of athletes.

Athletic dorms and training tables should be banned. They separate athletes from other students, thus depriving them of the rich diversity of backgrounds and talents which can be found on campus.

Some teams spend too much time traveling. Schedules should be set to keep weeknight trips short, with a minimum loss of classroom time. Cross country travel, to tournaments or intersectional games, could be limited to vacations. No games should be played during exam weeks.

The underlying problem in the crisis at N.C. State, and in all of college athletics, is that athletes are given special treatment. They're allowed into school without the proper credentials, they're allowed to stay in without progressing towards a degree. In some ways, they are pampered. In other ways, more is expected of them in practice and travel time than is reasonable for a student.

Someone needs to remember that they are students, just like all other students on campus.

'The underlying problem in the crisis at N.C. State, and in all of college athletics, is that athletes are given special treatment.'

What A Lucky Break

Art Buchwald

My wife is one of the luckiest women in the world. Don't take my word for it — ask all her friends. Late this summer she tripped on a rock and broke her wrist. Ordinarily you would call this a piece of bad luck, but it turns out when she had the accident she did everything just right.

This is the way the conversation went a day after the accident.

"My wife broke her wrist."

"Was it the right wrist or the left wrist?" the friend asked.

"The left," I said.

"She's lucky it was the left. If she broke the right it could be twice as inconvenient."

I said, "My wife has always been lucky when it comes to breaking a bone. It runs in her family."

The next friend, when informed about the accident, wanted to know if after she tripped she fell forward or backward. I said I wasn't sure and wanted to know if it mattered.

"Of course, it matters," he replied. "If she fell forward it was the best thing that could happen because otherwise she could have injured her back. By breaking her fall with her hand she saved injuring her nose. You have one lucky woman there."

"Don't I know it," I said proudly.

By this time word had gotten out about the accident and experts on bones from all over the world were checking in.

One eyewitness said, "I was five feet behind her when she fell. At that moment I said to myself, if she has to break anything, I hope it's her wrist and not her leg."

"You were thinking what I was thinking," I said.

"I'm a skier so I know about fractures. Your luck depends on how you fall."

"Over the years she's always fallen right," I said.

The next-door neighbor said, "I heard your wife had a fall."

"Yes, she broke her wrist."

"I always look at the bright side. It could have been her hip. Some women are born lucky."

"It will be in a cast for six weeks," I told him.

"She's fortunate it didn't happen at the beginning of the summer because you perspire under a cast and then you go crazy from the itch."

"That seems to be the consensus. Everyone is congratulating her that she didn't break it on the Fourth of July."

"The trick of any bone injury is to break it in the right place at the right time."

"How can you do that?"

"When you break something you have to be in close proximity to an orthopedic surgeon who isn't out playing golf when you need him. The real luck of falling down is to find the surgeon in his empty office playing solitaire."

"Our doctor wasn't even out fishing."

"Then she really is a lucky woman. I hope she realizes it."

"She does — she counts her blessings every time she falls."

Forget The Racists, Find A Useful Role For Those Who Care

WASHINGTON — Members of the civil-rights establishment and other advocates on behalf of the black underclass, let me introduce you to Bob Holloway of Decatur, Texas.

He won't tell you how to solve the problems to which you devote so much earnest effort, but you should meet him anyway. It may help to shift your focus away from racists who have no interest in the people you care about and toward those who would like to be a part of the solution but don't know what to do.

Meet Bob Holloway.

"I am a farmer down here in Texas (he writes) and I sometimes travel around in the Midwest for Webber Farms of Cynthiana, Ky., promoting their good sausage. I usually sit around a store and sign pictures and just talk to folks.

"The other day, I was working in a new store in East St. Louis, Ill., and in two days there I saw not one Hispanic, no Asians, and maybe 10 white people. All the folks were of African-American descent. Some were whiter than me, and some were really black folks, but all were real nice.

William Raspberry

"But I was going to tell you about the kids. The little boys and little girls were around me every day. The little boys especially. They seemed to have been fascinated by a white-haired, white-bearded, good old friendly white man. Maybe they had never seen one. But we got to be good friends in two days.

"I was wishing there was something I could do to change the inevitability of losing them to society. I study faces, and these kids had a variation of the African features, but they were good little old American kids and were really precious.

"I had lots of fun and different experiences there in that store. Several young women wanted to kiss me; a couple did. One young gal plopped down in my lap. I did not have anything unfriendly happen at all.

"Well, when I got back home, one of the first papers had your 'Save the Boys' column in it. I will tell you what I, a sure-enough Texas 'redneck,' think. If there were two foreign armies poised on our northern and southern borders and a fleet on each shore, waiting to invade us, I will tell you I don't think our country would be in any more danger than it is if we ignore this growing army of lost youth in our cities.

"We need to feed them, but food stamps just ain't gonna cut it. We have to feed their souls and their inner hunger. I don't know the answer, but I can see the problem."

Now that you've met Bob Holloway, I've got a suggestion for you members of the civil-rights establishment:

Forget the still-too-prevalent racists, who don't give a damn about poor black children. Tell the decent, concerned white people what they might do to address the problem. Tell them what programs and proposals of yours they ought to support; tell them how to help keep bright young children of the inner-city ghettos from succumbing to hopelessness and crime and drugs. Tell what they might do, and what they might stop doing, that would make a difference.

I don't underestimate either the persistence of racism or its effects. But it does seem to me that you spend too much time thinking about racism. You cite statistics on everything from black-white income gaps and test scores to differential infant mortality and longevity rates as proof of racism. You publish reports on the plight of black America, implying that racism, almost alone, explains that plight. You hold rallies in Queens and you march through Forsyth County, Ga., to expose racism.

It is as though your whole aim is to get white people to acknowledge their racism and accept their guilt. Well suppose they did: What would that change?

What would guilt-ridden white people be expected to do about black babies having babies, black children dropping out of school, black youths trafficking in drugs and murdering each other to protect their drug turf? What would white guilt do to restore black families, or make inner-city neighborhoods safe places to bring up children, or ease the problems created by the collapse of America's industrial sector and the concomitant loss of the entry-level jobs that helped an earlier generation begin the climb out of poverty?

My guess is that there are a lot of Bob Holloways out there who worry almost as much as you do over what is happening to our children. What we need from them is not a confession of their racism but help in carrying out programs that would make a difference.

My suggestion: Let's get busy devising those programs — legislative, social and otherwise. Once we've decided just what it is we want to do, maybe we can find a useful role for the Bob Holloways of this world.

IN THE STATE

Enforcement

GREENSBORO (AP) — State officials who enforce securities laws have seen a jump in complaints after a dramatic growth in the industry.

"I feel like a little dutch boy, holding my finger in the dike," said Stephen M. Wallis, deputy securities administrator with the N.C. Secretary of State's office.

In what would amount to a near-tripling of its caseload in three years, the office's securities division expects to log 300 "matters under inquiry" before the end of 1989. Already, 163 instances of potential securities-trading abuses are being examined — 53 more than the total investigated in all of 1986.

The office does not keep a formal count of administrative complaints issued after inquiries, but the complaints received from disgruntled investors have more than doubled in the past year, from 578 in 1988 to 1,161 so far this year, Wallis said.

Garden Fire

GREENSBORO (AP) — Clement and Pat Soviero had planned to spend Labor Day Weekend celebrating the grand opening of Soviero's Tri-County Garden Center, but their work went up in flames Sunday night.

NCNB Chief Sees Megabank System

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — NCNB Corp.'s Hugh McColl expects the number of United States banks to shrink, leaving 50 or fewer "megabanks." And he is working to make sure NCNB is one of them.

McColl, chairman of the Charlotte-based firm, expects the number of banking companies to contract from today's 14,000 to perhaps 1,400 — including hundreds of community banks and 50 or fewer of the megabanks which will be able to operate nationally and internationally.

"You could argue there would be 10," said McColl. NCNB must keep growing to make sure it's one of the survivors, he says.

One of the bank's strategies is to acquire savings and loans or their deposits.

"We have looked at every savings and loan in the eight states we operate in," McColl said. "We know exactly which ones we'd want in each of the market areas. We've got every one there is on our system. We're very thorough."

In an interview last week, the first since NCNB took full ownership of its Texas bank Aug. 9 and became the nation's ninth largest banking company, McColl summed up his plans, saying:

— NCNB's $2.8 billion Texas tax break will be even more valuable than first thought, since much of it will now be applied against total corporate earnings — slashing the company's federal income tax bill this year and for several years to come.

— Rising profits at NCNB's non-Texas banks, where a new team took over after five of NCNB's 10 highest-ranking managers were sent to Texas, show a breadth and depth of management. McColl says this indicates the company can expand further without draining its talent pool.

— The number of U.S. banking firms will dwindle from 14,000 today to perhaps 1,400. McColl says the drastic consolidation will take several years, and will include the wholesale restructuring of the savings and loan industry.

NCNB Corp. became a $60 billion bank in August, officially merging the $28 billion NCNB Texas National Bank into the corporate fold. The Charlotte company had run the bank since July 1988, when it took over management of the failed First RepublicBank system in Texas as a part-owner with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

He says NCNB won't go nationwide, but has room to grow in the South.

"We have three states we're concentrating on in the Southeast — Florida, South Carolina and Virginia," says McColl.

Coastal Alliance Gains Clout

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON — Four years after its formation, a group formed by a handful of coastal businessmen seeking "balanced" environmental regulation is drawing concern from some who say it might be too influential.

The Wilmington-based Economic Alliance of North Carolina has members throughout the coastal region and growing clout in state government. And it plans to expand statewide, reflecting that goal by changing its name recently from the Alliance for Balanced Coastal Management.

"We consider ourselves to be the top drawer in the development community," said Ken D. Stewart, the group's executive director and former head of the state Division of Coastal Management from 1976 to 1983. "We're a moderate voice in the business community."

But some observers are concerned about the organization's newfound political influence.

Three alliance members sit on each of the two key boards that regulate coastal pollution and development, the Environmental Management Commission and Coastal Resources Commission. The 17-member environmental commission adopts regulations for controlling pollution, while the 15-member coastal commission manages land use in 20 coastal counties.

"If you start getting bloc votes, I think that would be a real loss to the process," said David W. Owens, an assistant director of the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "The commissions are meant to be a collection of people representing a variety of backgrounds and points of view."

Owens directed the Division of Coastal Management, which provides administrative support to the coastal commission, for five years until he resigned in January.

Environmentalists say the alliance already has voting blocs on both commissions, a measure of influence not achieved by any other advocacy group.

"I'm not aware of any group that's ever had so many appointments," William E. Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of North Carolina, said in an interview published today.

"Traditionally, the members of the CRC and the EMC have been kind of independent-minded folks who came to the commissions with a bias, but also with an open mind. Now, particularly on the CRC, you've got a bloc of folks who have already made up their minds — and have a strategy to stop progress on environmental protection."

The group's influence could be apparent later this month, when the Environmental Management Commission considers new rules to protect coastal "outstanding resource waters." The environmental commission can designate outstanding resource waters, or ORWs, in areas with pristine water quality and other valuable resources, such as highly productive fisheries.

At its Sept. 14 meeting in Raleigh, the environmental commission plans to consider nominations for eight outstanding resource waters as well as protective measures, such as limits on the density of nearby development. The coastal commission already has adopted rules limiting land use around outstanding resource waters, and may revise those rules pending Environmental Management Commission actions.

The alliance has questioned whether some of the outstanding resource water nominations qualify for the protective classification.

"We're not opposed to ORWs," Stewart said. "But we believe there are several of them that don't meet the criteria."

Environmentalists say the Environmental Management Commission should approve the nominated areas and both commissions should adopt strict limits on nearby developments. They also say that alliance members on both commissions could profit by supporting weaker regulations.

The state Board of Ethics has advised four alliance members appointed by Gov. Jim Martin that their business interests posed "potential for conflicts of interest," and that they should refrain from voting on issues that could benefit them financially.

Bakker's Trial May Resume Soon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUTNER, N.C. — Jurors continued to wait for word on whether they would be needed this week for the trial of PTL founder Jim Bakker who has been undergoing psychological testing.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter suspended Bakker's trial Thursday and sent the TV evangelist to the Federal Correctional Institution here to determine whether he is competent to stand trial.

Jurors were told to check in with the court today to see whether court proceedings would continue Wednesday.

Dr. Basil Jackson, Bakker's psychiatrist, said he was told that Butner officials had stepped up their evaluation of Bakker.

"If that's true, then it's conceivable one of their people could come back into court Tuesday or Wednesday to certify that he's (Bakker) ready to come back into trial," he said.

Bakker, with chains on his hands and legs, was escorted by federal marshals to Butner after Jackson testified Bakker was hallucinating and hiding his head under a couch in his attorney's office.

Brian Bledsoe, a spokesman at Butner, declined to comment today on the progress of the evaluation. But he did confirm reports from Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, that her husband was handcuffed during her visits with him and was stripsearched afterward.

"When he leaves the unit and goes for visits ... that is standard operating procedure for that unit," Bledsoe said in a telephone interview today.

Bledsoe also confirmed Bakker was not given a pillow his first night there, another standard procedure for prisoners.

"It's standard in all these cases to first observe a person and observe his condition before giving them something they may hurt themselves with," he said.

Bakker is in a single room and must wear handcuffs only when he is moved, Bledsoe said.

Attorneys and others in the case are forbidden to discuss it under a gag order by Potter. But Jackson said Monday the resumption of the trial is "still a little bit up in the air."

Jackson, who said he has not been permitted to talk with Bakker since his arrival at Butner, said he has been in daily contact by phone with Mrs. Bakker, and Bakker's attorneys for news on his condition. He also said he has heard Bakker has tried to contact him daily.

"I think that he has settled down and certainly has improved a lot from the way he was Thursday morning," Jackson said in a telephone interview from Milwaukee. "... I continue to be impressed with the emotional strength of this man and his resilience."

He said it was possible Bakker would be ready to return to court this week.

"I'd like to see what condition he's in and have an opportunity to make a clinical judgment as to the likelihood of whether he might have a similar reaction to stress in the days ahead," Jackson said. "I'm interested not in his ability to be competent to withstand trial on one day but competent for the entire trial."

Bakker is charged with 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy and faces 120 years and prison and more than $5 million in fines. Prosecutors say Bakker used nearly $4 million in ministry funds to finance a lavish lifestyle.

Dr. Sally Johnson, chief of psychiatric services at Butner, said evaluations of patients like Bakker typically last 30 days but could take 45 days or more.

Jackson, who had pushed for Bakker to be evaluated at a private institution, said Mrs. Bakker had a right to complain.

"This is a very sensitive individual ... I wonder if it really was necessary. I can't help but wonder as to the fact that a man who has not been tried yet, a man who has not been judged guilty yet, yet he's being treated like a nefarious criminal," Jackson said. "I wonder what they would have done if I said he had appendicitis."

Too Much Dancing Can Lead To A Cell

Old State Laws Linger Despite Changing Views On Society's Needs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don't procure your neighbor's pigeon or make off with his ginseng. If you deal in a baby bunny, be the buyer not the seller. And don't get caught at a dance marathon when the ninth hour has struck.

It's the law in North Carolina. Just check the books. Some of them have been there for more than 100 years.

Take selling cotton after dark. You can't do it unless you're selling bales. That's been the law for 116 years. Check General Statutes 14-345.

Or G.S. 14-285. It's been a misdemeanor since 1887 to fail to enclose your marl bed. A marl bed is "a loose or crumbling earthy deposit (as of sand, silt or clay) that contains a substantial amount of calcium carbonate and is used especially as a fertilizer for soils deficient in lime," according to Websters.

And too much dancing can land you in the pokey.

If dance marathons are more than eight hours long, with or without prizes, they're illegal. Same for walkathons. No law against running, though. G.S. 14-310.

There are a number of laws applying to the animal kingdom.

It is a crime to capture someone else's homing pigeon "by use of any pit, pitfall, scaffold, cage, snare, trap, net, baited hook or similar trapping device." The misdemeanor is punishable by up to six months in prison and a $500 fine. G.S. 14-389.

"It shall be unlawful for any owner or keeper of a dog to permit the same to run at large on the Capitol grounds known as 'Capitol Square.' ... Or to pursue, worry or harass any squirrel or other wild animal kept on such grounds." G.S. 14-396.

Enacted by Raleigh legislators in 1925, evidently to protect the fauna closest, geographically, to their legislative hearts.

You can buy a baby bunny or duckling for the kids. The seller, however, could face a $200 fine and 30 days in jail. G.S. 14-363.

Flora and fauna haven't been forgotten in North Carolina law.

It is a felony to steal the herb ginseng, a reputed cure-all and rumored aphrodisiac. G.S. 14-79. For that matter, if ginseng is growing anywhere but on your property, G.S. 14-392 makes it a crime to dig for it between April 1 and Sept. 1. That's the off-season. Dig it up then, and there won't be enough to go around.

Jamaica ginger is not related to ginseng, and there's no law against digging for the powdered ginger extract. But it is illegal to sell it without a prescription. G.S. 14-389.

Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary says Jamaica ginger is used as a flavoring or to relieve intestinal gas.

Sex hasn't been forgotten.

A man and woman who aren't married to each other are each guilty of a misdemeanor if they live together and have "habitual intercourse." According to court interpretations, 14 days of cohabitation is enough to qualify. G.S. 14-184

Virginia Beach Sees Quiet End To Holiday After Street Violence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — Labor Day weekend ended quietly after two nights of clashes between police and black youths along the oceanfront strip.

Atlantic Avenue, jammed by an estimated 100,000 young people 48 hours earlier, was nearly deserted early today with many shops boarded up.

Students from predominantly black East Coast colleges made up much of the weekend crowd, in town for the annual Greekfest that marks the end of summer.

By Monday afternoon most of the students had left. Police in riot gear remained on every corner, however, and arrested several people Monday night for minor offenses.

During the weekend, at least 260 people were arrested, half area residents, and hundreds of summonses issued, authorities said. At least 43 people were injured, including 30 police officers and 13 youths. Property damage was in the millions of dollars, said Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf.

At the start of the weekend, businessmen in the town of 260,000 year-round residents had hoped for a large turnout to offset a slow summer.

The turnout was greater than expected, but early Sunday dreams of a prosperous weekend evaporated.

City officials ordered police to clear Atlantic Avenue, the major thoroughfare that was packed from sidewalk to sidewalk for about 30 blocks.

As a wedge of officers moved down the street, they were pelted with bottles. Ahead of police, groups of youths began breaking out storefront windows and looting shops.

At least 100 businesses were looted before order was restored shortly before dawn Sunday. At the request of city leaders, a military police unit of the Virginia National Guard was called out by Gov. Gerald L. Baliles.

On Sunday night, city police, officers from neighboring localities, at least 200 state troopers and about 150 Guardsmen cleared an estimated 45,000 people from Atlantic Avenue.

The beach section was closed and those on the beachfront were told to return to their rooms or face arrest.

"It appears to be a case of too many people in a confined space," Mayor Oberndorf said. "It appears to be a case of critical mass of people building up a rapid mood changes in a huge crowd."

Civil rights leaders said problems developed, in part, because the city failed to make any preparations for the visitors other than to call out the police.

"The city had no damn idea what it was getting into. It had no contact with the black community and no idea of the numbers involved," said Jack W. Gravelly, president of the state National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP said police overreacted, and that the city and merchants had made the students feel unwelcome. Gravelly said, however, that those responsible for the looting should be prosecuted.

Black leaders said had the crowd been predominantly white, police would have reacted differently.

Salt Girl Turns 75

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — She's been out in the rain with her umbrella for 75 years, demonstrating the slogan that helped make Morton Salt a household standby: "When it rains it pours."

Customers still occasionally write Morton Salt Co. claiming to know the child's true identity, but officials say she's the product of a forgotten artist's imagination.

"Some people say they modeled for the illustration. Others swear it's their daughter or granddaughter," Earl C. Thorne, advertising and promotion manager for the Chicago-based company, said recently.

The Morton Salt girl first appeared in 1914 as a chubby child with curly hair, standing in a downpour with a container of salt carelessly tucked under one arm and spilling to the ground.

Since then, she's been made over five times to update her dress, hair and face. For a while she had pigtails. These days she has sleek, dark hair.

But the idea is the same. All but the original are taking a step with the right foot. All are spilling salt, though the 1966 version and the current model, introduced in 1968, are losing just a sprinkle, rather than pouring it out in a stream.

And the slogan hasn't changed, though the scientific process it promotes has ceased to be a novelty.

In 1911, Jay Morton wanted his young company to stand out from the competition. At the time, salt tended to cake in humidity, making it difficult to use, and it was sold in bags.

Morton added magnesium carbonate to prevent caking and designed the now-familiar moisture-resistant container with the patented spout.

He then went to advertising agency N.W. Ayer & Co. for a campaign to promote the merits of his salt.

When the agency came up with some ideas, Morton's son, company secretary Sterling Morton, was struck by a drawing of a little girl in the rain with an umbrella, salt spilling freely from the container under her arm.

Bush Predicts Berlin Wall's Demise In His Term

By Jack Nelson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Bush, who three months ago called for tearing down all physical barriers that divide Europe, now flatly predicts that the Berlin Wall will be dismantled during his presidency.

His comments, the latest sign that Washington expects dramatic changes in the East Berlin regime in the near future, comes as thousands of East Germans wait in Hungary for a possible deal between Bonn and Budapest that would allow them to emigrate to West Germany through Austria.

Three times during an interview with British journalist David Frost, Bush said that he expects the heavily guarded wall, which has divided Berlin since the East Germans constructed it in 1961, to be torn down.

Recalling his visit to Budapest in July when he was presented with a symbolic snippet of wire representing the barbed wire barrier that separated Hungary and Austria before it was dismantled, Bush said he found the ceremony "so moving." "And yes," he added, "that Berlin Wall will come down."

His prediction, made in an interview recorded last week for a one-hour show that will air on public television stations Tuesday night, coincides with a statement Sunday by Vernon Walters, U.S. Ambassador to West Germany, that he can "foresee a united Germany in the near future."

A video cassette and a transcript of the interview, which was recorded on a patio outside at Bush's home in Kennebunkport, Maine, where the president ended a three-week vacation Monday, were made available here by David Paradine Television, Inc., which produced the program. First lady Barbara Bush also was interviewed for part of the show.

The president, in an overall assessment of U. S. foreign relations that was generally optimistic, praised Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev as someone whose word he trusts and who appears to be in no danger of ouster despite severe economic problems in the Soviet Union and serious problems encountered by Gorbachev's reform programs.

Addressing the drug crisis in Colombia and the escalating problems of drugs in the United States, Bush said that he would not rule out sending troops to that country if requested by Colombian officials, but they have made no such request.

He recalled that as a presidential candidate last year he "talked of the possibility of the U.S. helping a country that didn't have the military means to go in there and wipe out some of these factories of death." But he indicated that since becoming president, his thinking has changed and he is more guarded in addressing such matters and "very sensitive to the sovereign rights, in this instance, of the state of Colombia."

The anti-narcotics fight must be won, said Bush, who Tuesday night will outline a new anti-drug strategy in a televised address to the nation. He vowed to "try my hardest, my best, to mobilize the nation."

Contemplative and at times philosophical during the interview with Frost, Bush said that he has not found the presidency lonely, but hastened to add he hasn't "been tested by fire — been through hell in this job."

By the time he finishes his presidency, he said, he hopes that he has not had "to reach out for understanding about 'the loneliest job in the world' because it is too fulfilling and ... you get too many good people helping and sharing the problems and trying to take the problems off your shoulders to feel that you need, what I would say, self-pity."

In the interview — dominated by foreign affairs — Bush also said that he:

—Disagrees with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that revenge is always wrong and that there is "clearly" a case for retribution against terrorists, and if there is a further escalation of state-sponsored terrorism against Americans, "the United States will not and must not be impotent."

—Believes that it would help things "a great deal" in South Africa if Frederik W. de Klerk, in one of his first acts upon formally assuming the presidency after Wednesday's parliamentary elections, were to free political prisoner Nelson R. Mandela. "And I've heard good things about Mr. De Klerk ... but you need something like freeing Mandela, the world needs it."

—Wants to see Japan redouble its efforts to permit fair trade and free access to its markets, but does not want to see discriminatory impulses by some Americans push Japan into "a reinvigorated militance."

—Would welcome restoring diplomatic relations with Iran, but "as long as Americans are held hostage — and from time to time their officials make statements indicating they have some control over that situation — then that's got to change dramatically, before there can be the kind of relations that I personally would like to see."

—Hopes that China could revert to business as usual "pretty soon" even though relations with the United States and other Western countries remain strained because of the way the Chinese government crushed the pro-democracy demonstrations and has invoked repressive measures against dissidents.

During the interview, both Frost and Bush wore dark sweaters over open-collar shirts as they sat on a patio outside Bush's home overlooking the Atlantic Ocean.

Frost, using a chatty conversational method rather than adversarial questioning to draw out Bush, laughingly referred to the president as "Mr. Smooth," the nickname Bush has given himself.

He said the name came from "throwing a smooth horseshoe, yeah, it's a phenomenal shoe, actually. I'm not very good in horseshoes, but we've had more fun with that game for the last four or five years. All the kids can play it, they all have the same arrogance factor as their grandfather, or their dad, and it's a great family sport."

Bush offered a spirited defense for both Vice President Quayle, whose selection as his running mate and performance in office have been widely criticized, and Republican Party Chairman Lee Atwater, whom Democrats have accused of dirty tactics.

Mrs. Bush, reminded that in 1984 she had said that if she were ever in the White House she would be like "a caged animal," said, "I thought that, but it's not true. I just love it. I do a lot of things there. ... I feel very spoiled, but I swim a mile a day at the White House, I walk Millie (the Bushes' spaniel) every day. I had puppies — something I always wanted to do. I don't feel caged at all."

She said she thinks people like her because "I don't threaten anybody. I don't make any big decisions, I'm trying to say this nicely so I won't hurt my own feelings. But, I mean, no Marilyn Monroe am I. I'm just not a threat to anybody. I like people. And I feel for them."

Government Puts Limit On Checks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Treasury Department today warned people holding millions of U.S. government checks that effective Oct. 1 they will have only one year in which to cash them. After that, they will have to seek a replacement.

Commissioner W.E. Douglas of the department's Financial Management Service said the public now holds about 6 million uncashed government checks worth more than $2.5 billion that are more than a year old.

The service said the checks range in value from two cents for a 1945 income tax refund to a $8,606 compensation check dated April 9, 1954. The oldest uncashed check, it said, is one dated April 15, 1919 for $1.01 in interest on a World War I Liberty Bond.

Currently, there is no time limit for cashing the checks. But a new law that goes into effect Oct. 1 requires checks to be cashed within one year of issue.

Although the new law sets a time limit on cashing a check, it does not affect entitlement to payment, the service said. People holding expired checks will have to contact the government agency writing the check for a replacement.

The law also provides that government checks issued before Oct. 1 will have to be cashed no later than Sept. 30, 1990.

Nixon Postpones Visit To China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Former President Nixon has postponed a visit to China because of the political unrest there.

Nixon, who made a historic visit to China in 1972, was to have traveled to China this month along with former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, Pacific Business News reported Monday. Nixon was invited by the government of China and the purpose of the trip was personal, Nixon spokesman John Taylor said.

Roy Doumani, Simon's business partner, said the trip has been delayed until after the first of the year, Pacific Business News reported.

Simon leads an investment group that is interested in buying an interest in Xiamen International Bank, the only joint-venture bank incorporated in China.

Teacher Strikes Spread, Will Now Affect More Than 110,000 Students

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Teachers without a contract for 14 months embraced a last-minute deal so schools could open today in San Jose. But elsewhere in California, 2,500 Sacramento teachers prepared to join strikes affecting more than 110,000 students around the nation.

Teachers upset by a proposed 1 percent pay raise threatened to strike today in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, where officials pledged to keep schools open for 6,800 pupils.

Teacher walkouts in 12 districts in Illinois, Michigan, Montana, Ohio and Pennsylvania affected about 66,000 students as of Labor Day.

Negotiators worked through the holiday to try to head off a strike in the Sacramento City Unified School District, which with 48,000 students would be the biggest district nationally to have a walkout.

"There doesn't seem to be very much hope of a settlement at this point," said City Teachers Association President Pat Walden. A wage offer that 87 percent of the teachers voted to reject Monday night differed little from one they refused to even consider last week, Walden said.

The teachers want a 12.7 percent raise this year, and are seeking class-size limitations and hiring deadlines for new teachers. The district ended the past school year with about $10 million in unspent reserves, but is saving the money for construction and unanticipated emergencies.

District officials bolstered security around schools and told parents buses would be running and substitute teachers would be on hand today.

San Jose school officials also hired temporary teachers but headed off a strike by more than 1,500 union members in California's third-largest city.

"The agreement was reached at the stroke of midnight after the school district presented the association board of directors with its latest offer," said Bill Hayward, a spokesman for the San Jose Teachers Association.

He said details would not be made public until the union leadership could present the plan to teachers for ratification.

The 29,000-student district earlier had offered a 6 percent wage increase this year with a 1 percent bonus, and the teachers demanded a 10 percent raise with a retroactive raise of 6 percent covering last year.

An all-day negotiating session Monday settled a strike by 225 teachers in the Upper St. Clair School District in suburban Pittsburgh, but two other Pennsylvania strikes — in Cumberland and Clarion counties — remained unresolved.

Schools in the Great Falls district in Montana were scheduled to reopen today with 540 substitute teachers for 12,500 students. Only 45 of 723 teachers showed up for work there last week. Salaries top the list of several unresolved contract issues. Superintendent Larry Williams and Gene Lemelin, president of the teachers' union, said no talks were scheduled.

Laurel, Mont., teachers voted Saturday to accept a contract giving them a 2.5 percent raise. The 104 teachers, who had said they were locked out of the schools last week, were to return to their 1,900 students today.

In Michigan, 1,010 teachers in Wayne County's Livonia school district voted late Monday to join four other districts on strike in the state.

In Illinois, pay negotiations continued as a strike in Quincy entered a second week, extending the summer break for 6,800 students.

No Trace Found Of Lost Airliner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Despite picking up the plane's emergency signal, rescuers were still trying to locate a Varig jetliner that disappeared over the Amazon jungle with 54 people aboard, an air force spokesman said.

The Boeing 737-200 was far off course, low on fuel and flying on one engine with faulty navigational equipment when it vanished Sunday while on a domestic flight, air force spokesman Col. Ronaldo Borges said Monday.

It was on the last leg of a regularly scheduled flight from the southeastern city of Sao Paulo to Belem.

"The plane's beacon emits an emergency signal that is being picked up. But it takes time to pinpoint the exact spot where the signal is coming from and we have not located the plane yet," Borges said.

He said the search for the plane was suspended Monday night because of darkness but air force planes, private planes and helicopters would resume their work early this morning.

The colonel said officials did not rule out the possibility the plane was hijacked.

Varig airline officials denied various Brazilian press accounts that said the plane had landed safely with all aboard alive.

Joao Luis de Souza, a company spokesman in Rio, said the reports were "completely false."

A Varig official in Belem, who asked not to be identified, also denied the reports.

"We've checked two rumors, one that the plane landed in Amazonas state and another that it landed on an Indian reservation in southern Para state. But nothing has been confirmed," he said.

Varig provided a list of 48 passengers and 6-crew members, all Brazilian, who were on the plane when it disappeared.

Borges said the plane's pilot took off from the city of Maraba at 5:25 p.m. to make a 40-minute flight to Belem, capital of Para state, 2,140 miles northwest of Rio at the mouth of the Amazon river. Borges said the pilot noted in his flight plan that he had fuel for about three hours.

But Borges said the plane's pilot strayed far from his route and radioed the airport at Carajas, 600 miles from Belem at 8:30 local time, asking for runway lights to be lit so he could land.

Ten minutes later, a Cruzeiro airline plane received the pilot's last communication, saying he was flying at 8,000 feet with only one engine working and would try to make an emergency landing in the jungle guided by a forest fire, Borges said.

Borges said the plane's pilot had been in contact with other planes and airports after leaving Maraba but never said anything about being lost, though he had complained of problems with his navigational equipment.

Based on information provided by other planes in the air at the time of the flight and by satellites that monitor Brazilian airspace, officials believe the Boeing may have gone down near the Xingu Indian reservation in the southern part of Para state, Borges said.

But he said the plane could have covered over 1,200 miles during its flight of over three hours, which made locating the plane extremely difficult.

The plane took off early Sunday morning from Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city with 10 million residents, and made regular stops in Uberaba, Uberlandia, Goiania, Brasilia, Imperatriz and Maraba.

The possibility of a plane having been hijacked "could not be discarded," Borges said.

U.S. Sends 5 Helicopters To Join Colombian Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEDELLIN, Colombia — More U.S. military aid was on its way today to bolster the government in its fight against drug gangs, which have battled back with bombings and are blamed for a bloody attack at Medellin's airport.

Five U.S. military helicopters were due to arrive today, following weekend deliveries of two C-130 transport planes and eight A-37 reconnaissance and attack jets.

Medellin police said four bombs exploded Monday night in or near the city — home base of the world's most powerful cocaine cartel, injuring two people.

Officials blamed the drug barons for an attack in which a man in a camouflage uniform fired an automatic rifle at a line of people waiting outside the Medellin airport terminal, killing one man and wounding 14 people before he was fatally shot by security forces.

"It was horrendous. I was hit. I fell," said Rodolfo Montoya, a Colombian who lives in the New York City and was hospitalized with an ankle wound.

Montoya, who was visiting his mother, said he and his wife had been on their way to Bogota, 150 miles south of Medellin, for a connecting flight to New York.

He said his wife had just passed the security inspection at the door and was safe inside the building when the gunman opened fire. Among the wounded were eleven civilians and three airport security officers.

Investigators were checking the fingerprints of the assailant in an effort to identify him. They said his car was towed away in case it contained a bomb, but a search found no explosives.

The Caracol radio network said some marijuana was found in the vehicle.

Airport security was increased throughout Colombia. At El Dorado airport in Bogota, police and soldiers searched passengers and checked bags outside the terminal.

Five UH-1H helicopters were to arrive today at Bogota's main airport, carried inside a huge U.S. C-5 transport plane. The helicopters are the final big-ticket items announced in President Bush's $65 million special aid package for Colombia's anti-drug forces.

Two four-engine C-130 transport planes landed in Bogota Sunday and on Monday eight A-37 reconnaissance and attack jets, formerly stationed at Air National Guard units in Illinois and Michigan, were turned over to Colombia at a military base in the Caribbean city of Barranquilla.

"These aircraft, which will be piloted by Colombians, will strengthen our combat capacity," Gen. Alfonso Amaya, commander of the Colombian air force, said as the A-37s were delivered. The fast-climbing, twin-engine jets can be equipped with rockets and machine guns. Colombia already has some A-37s.

Search Continues For Crash Victims

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Workers in Cuba searched for more bodies in the wreckage of a Cuban jetliner and the homes destroyed when the plane crashed just after taking off in a thunderstorm, killing at least 150 people, news reports said.

Most of the dead were Italians on their way home from a Cuban vacation.

At least 600 people continued searching for bodies through pieces of the chartered Cubana de Aviacion jet and what was left of 33 homes in a Havana suburb. Cuba's official news agency Prensa Latina reported Monday night.

The Soviet-made Ilyushin 62, bound for Milan, Italy, exploded Sunday evening shortly after taking off in a heavy thunderstorm from Havana's Jose Marti airport, Prensa Latina reported.

The news agency said flaming debris from the jet plummeted into neighborhoods on the capital's southern outskirts. It quoted the Municipal People's Committee in Boyeros, the suburb where the crash occurred, as saying at least 150 people were killed — 125 on the plane and 25 on the ground.

Only one person, an Italian, survived the crash, officials said. The neighborhood group said 26 people on the ground were hurt, most of them seriously.

A taxi driver and his three passengers riding near the airport were among the injured, Prensa Latina said. "The explosion lit up the sky," one injured person told Cuban television. "We thought it was all over," said another.

Cuban and Italian authorities had identified 22 bodies by Monday evening, including four crewmembers and nine people on the ground, Prensa Latina reported. It did not release names of victims except 44-year-old Cuban film critic Jose Antonio Gonzalez.

The news agency reported that 104 bodies had been taken to the medical examiner's office by Monday night.

The jetliner was carrying 113 Italian tourists, two Cuban passengers and a crew of 11.

Uranium Offered To Americans

TOKYO (AP) — Five Japanese have been arrested after trying to sell nearly nine pounds of mostly low-grade uranium to the American Embassy for 2,000 times the market price, police and experts said today.

The Tokyo Metropolitan Police Department said the group brought a capsule containing about 3.5 ounces of uranium to the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo in early August and offered 8.8 pounds of the same substance for $83 million.

The five were arrested Friday for illegal possession of nuclear substances, but have not been formally charged, officials said.

If convicted of violating nuclear safety laws, they could face up to a year in prison or a fine of up to $3,500.

Officials identified the ringleader as a 43-year-old woman, Toshiko Nishijima, who owns several small companies. Also arrested were Koichi Tsuru, 33, president of a securities firm in Hong Kong, Toshitada Mizuno, 44, a real estate firm owner, Kazutoshi Okazaki, 44, a master of the traditional Japanese tea ceremony, and Tomoyuki Nishida, 39, owner of a trading company.

Takaharu Ushikoshi, head of police department's public security section, said the group offered the uranium to the U.S. Embassy because "they probably thought ordinary people or companies wouldn't buy such an outrageous thing."

Upon receiving the uranium sample, the embassy immediately notified the Japanese police and handed over the substance, which was sent to the Science and Technology Agency for analysis.

The agency concluded that the capsule contained refined natural uranium of 70.7 percent purity.

It said less than 1 percent of the uranium was uranium-235, the radioactive element used for power generation and for bombs, while the rest was uranium-238, an isotope from which plutonium is produced.

Plutonium, if refined, can be used in nuclear weapons or as reactor fuel.

Agency officials said the uranium brought by the group was not harmful to the human body unless it is directly touched or swallowed.

One expert said the price the group demanded shows it did not know the uranium's value. The same type is being sold at around $275 an ounce, making the price the group demanded more than 2,000 times greater than its market value.

Ushikoshi said police believe the group was motivated purely by greed.

"At this point, we have not obtained the remaining uranium and we can't say how large the entire scheme is," said Ushikoshi. "But we believe the substance was brought in from abroad and there must be collaborators who helped to smuggle it into Japan."

He said police have been questioning the five to determine where the 8.8 pounds of remaining uranium is kept, where the substance came from and whether there are other collaborators.

U.S. Officials Demand Japanese Reform Their Business Practices

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TOKYO — Depicting themselves as friends of Japan's consumers, Bush administration officials spent nearly nine hours Monday outlining the most exhaustive list of complaints against Japanese business practices that the United States has ever issued.

They demanded reforms of systems, regulations, business practices, and customs that they said impeded imports, kept prices artificially high, and even restricted leisure and said the United States is prepared to respond, in kind, with reforms of its own.

The so-called Structural Impediments Initiative negotiations, which will continue through next summer, "is a process that is a two-way street and will take cooperative efforts of the part of both governments to be a success. Both of us have work to do and policy to change.

Both sides need to take action and take action soon," an American official said.

Success in the talks, he added, "is vital to our relationship."

He and three other officials, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, said a second day of talks Tuesday would be devoted to an airing by Japan of its complaints against structural defects in the American economy which Japanese officials say are impeding a correction of the $50 billion trade imbalance between the two countries.

All four U.S. officials described the American demands as designed to remove obstacles to access to Japan's market and increase sales of U.S. products — while, at the same time, "improving the quality of life for Japanese consumers" by increasing their purchasing power and lowering prices.

"Japan needs to start giving its consumers a break, and become an 'import superpower,' at the same time," one of the Washington officials said.

With time out only for lunch and coffee breaks, the presentation of American complaints started at 9 a.m. and finished after 8 p.m. One of the U.S. officials said the actual time spent in discussions was nearly nine hours.

The Washington delegation charged, for the first time, that the "government sector" in Japan "is beginning to show a substantial and growing surplus" — despite more than a decade of deficits in Japan's national budget. When questioned about his remark, the official backtracked, saying, "we have some further work to do with our Japanese counterparts" in defining what is meant as a surplus.

He complained, nonetheless, that public spending on infrastructure had "fallen short in recent years," and said, "Why not channel some of

(the) surplus into roads, airports, sewers and public parks?"

Another official complained that Japan permitted even anti-competitive practices that violate Japanese law, such as bid-rigging and "group boycotts" against foreign products.

U.S. complaints were leveled against what the Americans regarded as policies that prevent land from being made available to housing, public investment and business use. "Lack of true competition" in wholesaling and retailing, as well as in trucking and air transportation, was criticized. Business practices that exclude new companies from entering markets and prevent mergers and takeovers also were singled out.

In Washington Friday, President Bush told Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu that the structural talks must produce concrete results by next spring.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Hundreds of thousands of blacks went on strike today on the eve of segregated elections, and Archbishop Desmond Tutu angrily accused police of desecrating his church in breaking up rallies.

Leading anti-apartheid groups and the country's two largest black labor federations have endorsed the planned two-day strike, another action in a nationwide defiance campaign protesting the exclusion of blacks from Wednesday's parliamentary balloting.

The campaign has included mass strolls by blacks on "whites-only" beaches and anti-government demonstrations by whites and blacks that police have broken up with tear gas, water cannon and batons.

On Monday, police detained Tutu and fellow anti-apartheid activist the Rev. Allan Boesak for 90 minutes after they refusing to move away from a Cape Town church when police blocked its door with an armored truck.

"They have gone berserk," Tutu said of police. "I want to say to the world that the terrorists in South Africa are the South African government."

In the major cities of Johannesburg, Durban and Cape Town today it appeared students and trade union members were striking, but most other black workers were on the job.

Rush-hour traffic into cities was only slightly less heavy than usual, according to several reports.

The National Union of Mineworkers, the country's largest union, said 78,000 members at 16 mines refused to go underground for their morning shifts. Tens of thousands of miners were expected to join the strike later in the day, the union said.

Employers in heavily unionized industries said they expected the strike, and most have adopted a "no work, no pay, no punishment" stance toward the workers.

Across the country, black, mixed-race and Indian schools were closed.

People Should Schedule Time For Themselves

By Jeannie Golden

Your Mental Health

Do you push yourself to be a skilled homemaker, a terrific parent, the greatest husband or wife, the very best friend anyone ever had, the kindest neighbor?

Do you expect yourself to be calm, rational, pleasant, well-organized, respectful (and respected), a pillar of strength and inspiration to all who know and love you?

And on top of that, do you work at being in shape, attractive and fun just to please the people around you?

Then you are probably a Type E Personality, a person who struggles to be Everything to Everybody.

While Harriet Braiker coined the term and description in her best-selling book, "The Type E Woman: Overcoming the Stress of Being Everything to Everybody," both men and women may be Type E personalities. If you're a Type E person, you'll easily recognize the description.

The standards you set for yourself are unreachable, and yet you probably say you are a failure because you don't meet those standards in every aspect of life. You likely feel pulled in a thousand directions at once as you try to make everyone around you happy and comfortable, always putting their interests ahead of your own.

With the many demands on your time, you find your schedule so precariously balanced that a minor inconvenience like having to wait for a train or clean up spilled coffee can trigger rage or near panic. And you even get depressed worrying about other people's troubles and become frustrated when you can't make everything all better for them.

Trying new ways of thinking and approaching the people in your life can reduce the Type E stresses you feel. This thinking begins with a realization that you don't have to do everything everyone expects of you. While this may sound simplistic, convincing ourselves isn't easy.

Contrary to what you may believe, friends and family probably won't reject you for not doing what they expect. In fact, they may even gain a new respect for your honesty in expressing what you are and are not willing to do.

Who better to decide what's of greatest value in your life than you? We each have a limited supply of time and energy, and saying no to those things you do only out of fear of disapproval allows you to use your limited resources for those things you consider of more importance.

Rehearsing with a friend and then using "no" scripts will help you to say no in just the right way to each person.

"No. Mommy would like you to do it yourself."

"No, sir. I can't work overtime today. I'll be glad to work next week."

"No, I won't pick up your clothes, but I'll wash the ones in the hamper."

"No, I won't go to the bank for you. If you'll put your check in an envelope, I'll stick it in the mailbox on my way out."

In many situations, you can lower your standards or let others help. You don't have to do it all yourself, and it doesn't have to be perfect.

You could get someone else to make the bed or just shut the bedroom door. The car will still run if it isn't washed every Saturday, or your daughter could wash it. You could find a hairdo that doesn't require daily curling, let the lawn go a few extra days, or let your teen-ager do some of the cooking.

To give your life a boost, schedule time for yourself, too. Instead of being just one more thing to accomplish, time for yourself reduces stress, and you'll be better able to deal with all the other items you want to get done.

Such activities don't have to be fattening, time-consuming or expensive. Instead, try simple, relaxing pleasures such as a warm bath, a walk, reading or listening to a few minutes of music.

Positive self talk plays a major role in reducing stress. Such statements as "I'm a good person," "I have a right to decide for myself what I like," or "I'm OK just the way I am" affirm that you are a worthwhile person.

You might try finding at least 10 things you like about yourself or things that you do well and give yourself daily compliments. And it doesn't hurt to say them out loud to friends and family.

Reducing the Type E stresses in your life will leave you relaxed, happy and actually more capable of being everything to everybody — including yourself.

Children Remember A Great Variety Of Happenings

Scores of little people are hitting the streets this week. They move with the clumsiness of newborn field mice as they climb onto buses wearing new underwear, clutching lunches they are too excited to eat, and clinging desperately to the hands of strangers as they go to the bathroom.

Behind these children entering school for the very first time are mothers who view it as the end of an era. They reflect on what they have taught and what their kids will remember.

What do kids retain from the vast experience of their childhood? Do they remember the wonderfulness of a mother who gave them thick, soft towels caressed in water softener?

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Do they remember she provided toothpaste laced with fluoride? Do they cherish the memories of clean ovens and well-balanced meals? Or are those the things that mothers think they will remember?

From time to time, I have been enlightened on what children are thinking by a wonderful newsletter written by Tom Bernaguzzi's third-grade class at Gardiner Manor School in Bay Shore, N.Y. These are some of the special moments in their lives they have carried with them from childhood into the third grade:

"When I was a baby I used to love my Pampers boxes. As soon as they were empty, I would get in them and ride them all over."

"There was a time at age 3 I had Mom's nightgown on and it was too long for me. I tripped and hit my head and it hurt a lot."

"Mom and I were playing Hide and Seek and I couldn't find her. I felt so alone and scared."

Inica remembers when she threw up on the baby sitter; Eliza recalls how her father told her when she was born she looked like a red, plump tomato; and John savors the memory of the time he threw a toy at his mother and she predicted, "You were born to pitch." Many of them cling to memories of pets they had owned — a rabbit or a fish that had died, a snake that got lost, or a parrot that had escaped.

"When I was a baby I drank Wind-song perfume and my mother called a doctor. He told her to give me a lot of milk."

"I used to feed the dog and once I remember dumping a whole box of Cheerios over his head. He was really a bad dog. If you told him to sit he would pee. In fact, if you told him to do anything he would pee."

It's hard to know how children select what part of their childhood they choose to hang on to. All I can do is to assure you that not one child remembered a mother who was fussy over what brand of peanut butter she fed him, how she set a table with glassware that sparkled and

Mayo Clinic Doctor Says Wine Makes Bad Medicine

Dear Abby: You were way off base in your response to "Mom," who needed a glass of wine in the evening to relax after a stressful day. The lady is NOT necessarily a candidate for Alcoholics Anonymous.

Two glasses of wine a day actually helps save lives. Moderate use of alcoholic beverages, especially wine, which is the most moderate of them all, is beneficial to the cardiovascular system. It increases the level of "good" cholesterol in the blood, which in turn blocks the formation of "bad" cholesterol — the kind that leads to arteriosclerosis and other ills.

Doctors consider wine so beneficial that it is now on the menus of over half the hospitals nationwide; it is part of the evening routine at many rest homes because it relaxes people, contributes to social interaction, improves sleep patterns and generally cheers folks up. Until very recently, it was regularly prescribed by doctors as a mild sedative.

In addition, researchers at the University of California at Berkeley have recently discovered that red wine contains the largest percentage of quercetin, the most potent anticancer agent known in any food including broccoli and zucchini. In short, wine is good for you. Do you have the guts to print

the truth? — Cherie Morrison, San Francisco

Dear Cherie: According to Dr. P.J. Palumbo, director of nutrition at the Mayo Clinic, medical editor of the Mayo Clinic Nutrition Letter, and an expert on lipids (cholesterol and triglycerides), alcohol has no proven beneficial effect on preventing heart disease. And the fraction of "good" cholesterol affected by alcohol is not the fraction that prevents heart disease.

As for wine being on the menu at "half the hospitals nationwide," one hospital where it is not offered is the world-famous Mayo Clinic. Alcohol should be avoided entirely by people taking many medications, and is known to disrupt — not enhance — sleep patterns. Perhaps the reason it is no longer regularly prescribed by doctors as a "mild sedative" is that, like most sedatives, alcohol is addictive. To be effective over a period of time it must be taken in ever-increasing quantities, which can result in liver damage.

Dr. Terrance Leighton, professor of biochemistry at the University of California at Berkeley, did the studies of quercetin in red wine. The studies were undertaken to ascertain whether the quercetin content of the wine would offset the carcinogenic properties of the alcohol. He concluded that the percentage of quercetin in a glass of red wine is 100 times lower than in an onion. So, onions (and garlic, incidentally) are even better for you than broccoli, zucchini AND red wine.

And that, "Ma Cherie," is the truth I have the guts to print.

Dear Abby: My elderly mother died last week after being in an extended-care facility for some time. She was able to go to the dining room for her meals until the last three months. It was there that she saw the other residents.

Instead of having the usual family floral piece at her funeral, we placed a bouquet of flowers on each of the tables in the dining room in her memory.

Not only did it brighten the room, it brought smiles to many faces. — HAZEL Teegarden, Columbus, Ind.

Dear Hazel: I offer my sincere condolences on the loss of your beloved mother. Your idea of dividing the flowers so that all the residents could enjoy them was both innovative and generous. Thank you for an idea well worth sharing.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69410, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Learn To Read

Right now there are over 27 million American adults who can't read well enough to fill out a job application, read the label on a medicine bottle or read the front page news. By 1990 it is estimated that 3 out of 4 jobs in the U.S. will require an education beyond high school. As a result, basic education will become increasingly important, and those who lack the ability to read, write and do common tasks in the work force will more than likely become unemployed altogether.

Is this the legacy we want to leave our children? If not, help mold the future by helping a person learn to read.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices opened slightly lower today, the first day of trading following the long Labor Day weekend.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 0.38 at 2,751.71 at 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Among broader market barometers, the New York Stock Exchange composite index of all listed issues fell 0.17 to 196.20. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.11 to 383.85.

Declining NYSE issues led advances slightly after the first 30 minutes of trading, with 519 down, 450 up and 485 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.86 million shares.

Last week, the Dow average soared to new highs amid an upbeat attitude about the nation's economy. Several reports showed continued economic strength, including the August employment report, which buoyed market sentiment.

The news indicated that the economy isn't slowing as much as expected, which has raised fears that the Federal Reserve may raise interest rates instead of lowering them.

On Friday, the Dow industrials rose 14.82 to a new high of 2,752.09, surpassing the previous peak of 2,743.36 reached a week ago and bringing its gain for last week to 19.73 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones Friday by about 9 to 5, with 897 up, 498 down and 561 unchanged. Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 133.30 million shares, down from 143.42 million on Thursday.

The nation's financial markets were closed on Monday for the Labor Day holiday.

Physician Welcomes New Reports On AZT

of Allergy and Infectious Diseases has judged its early double-blind tests of AZT in HIV-positive patients to be conclusive enough that it stopped them and put the test's placebo users on the drug.

Now that the medication, first approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for sale in 1987, has become an even more valuable commodity, Burroughs Wellcome is being called upon to reconsider its price — $1.50 a capsule. Last week some 14 activist AIDS organizations delivered a joint letter urging the company to cut the cost.

The groups said that lowering the cost would benefit patients and their insurers and would make it easier to persuade Congress to appropriate money to supply AZT to those who cannot afford it.

But so far, the company hasn't budged on price and isn't discussing what the new uses of the medication might mean in terms of production and distribution.

Kathy Bartlett, a spokeswoman for Burroughs Wellcome, said, "Basically, we review the prices of all our medications on an ongoing basis. Retrovir (BW's brand name for AZT) is no different from the others. The letter is under consideration now by the appropriate company officials."

Contacted at corporate headquarters in the Research Triangle Park, Ms. Bartlett said that BW has already cut the price from its original charge. After having been released in March 1987, the drug had its price to the wholesaler reduced from $1.88 to $1.50 in December 1987, she said.

Current recommended dosage of people with AIDS symptoms is 12 capsules a day. This is the dosage that Adams says he and other physicians in the ECU Infectious Disease Section generally prescribe. The anticipated recommended dosage for those using it prophylactically would be five capsules, Ms. Bartlett said she understands. However, she emphasized that usage and dosage are up to individual physicians of patients.

Adams said he has received no official word about dosage. However he said he has treated some HIV-positive patients who requested AZT in smaller doses than those recommended for patients with already-developed symptoms.

Adams said he, like most other physicians, feels that the drug is so high-priced that it works a tremendous hardship on patients and their insurers and, of course, on taxpayers who ultimately pay for the care of Medicaid patients. He said he would like to see the price reduced.

Ms. Bartlett pointed out the way that drug companies work and the extensive lengths they must go to get their products marketed. She said that, in addition to the cost of research and development of the product, the company gave some 30 million capsules to the federal government for the AZT trials that led to the drug's being approved by the FDA.

Between October 1986 and March 1987, some 5000 AIDS patients were given the drug. This was done under a special program of the FDA to allow the use of life-saving new drugs to patients when the benefits have been shown and the drug is not yet approved by the FDA for marketing.

"Our company has a need to finance ongoing research on Retrovir and its uses, as well as on other potential therapies for AIDS and therapies for other diseases. The sale of our existing marketed products is what pays for our ongoing research," Ms. Bartlett said. "We will do what we feel is best for the most people."

Asked about the company's expansion plans, if any, in light of the suddenly expanded market possibility, Ms. Bartlett said only, "At this time, we are confident that we have adequate supply to meet whatever demand for Retrovir develops. We will be monitoring the supply and production very carefully over the months and years ahead. We will ensure that we are able to supply patients with the Retrovir that they need."

Asked if he will be speaking out about the high price of the drug, Adams said, "I'm not going to go out and carry placards around Burroughs Wellcome, but I will do all I can to point out the value to us all of reducing the price, at the same time continuing to acknowledge what a useful drug it is."

At the same time he revels in the usefulness of the new prophylactic treatment, Adams said he advocates continued research into the AIDS virus's ability to develop resistance to AZT and other drugs.

"I have to admit," he said. "I still have some concern about using AZT on someone who has no symptoms, because there is that possibility of resistance buildup that would make it less effective later on."

"But I think, given that it seems to offer real hope of preventing development in many patients, it's worth the risk. I just welcome all the research that can be done by the Burroughs Wellcome Company and others."

had winds of tropical-storm force, at least 39 mph, 250 miles northeast of the center and 150 miles in the opposite direction.

"A place 250 miles up the coast from the eye could still receive damage from tropical storm-force winds (if Gabrielle reached land)," Hurricane Center spokesman Martin Nelson said.

Gabrielle was spawned near the Cape Verde Islands Thursday and its growth since then has been typical of some of the most destructive hurricanes, forecasters said.

"This is definitely a hurricane that needs to be respected," forecaster Bob Case said earlier. "Gabrielle is a large Cape Verde type hurricane — which means it formed off the coast of Africa at the peak of the season when waters are the warmest and the atmosphere is the most favorable for strengthening."

However, little additional strengthening was expected for Hurricane Felix, which had 80 mph winds at noon EDT. Its center was located near 36.7 north latitude and 49.0 west longitude, or about 975 miles west of the westernmost Azores, and it was drifting north-northwest at 5 mph.

Walesa Proposes Unified Europe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUESSELDORF, West Germany — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa arrived in West Germany today and called for East and West to overcome economic and political barriers, creating a Europe "where everyone feels that they are free."

Walesa spoke upon arrival at Duesseldorf airport at the start of a five-day visit to West Germany.

He is expected to lobby for Western aid to help promote Polish reform under the new government of Solidarity activist Tadeusz Mazowiecki, who was named last month as the East bloc's first non-Communist government leader.

In his remarks today, Walesa called for a strong and united Europe, "a Europe in which there is a place for everybody and where everyone feels that they are free."

Players May Get Revenue Shares

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Revenue sharing, rebuffed by baseball owners since the first pro teams were formed, may be offered to players during this winter's collective-bargaining negotiations, The Associated Press has learned.

Barry Rona, executive director of management's Player Relations Committee, said revenue-sharing proposals were under development but he was unsure if they would be offered to the Major League Baseball Players Association.

"I think the genesis of forming a partnership with the players came from basketball, which has had a working partnership with their players in the salary area and the revenue area for the second collective bargaining agreement," Rona said.

Under basketball's collective-bargaining deal, NBA players are guaranteed 53 percent of the sport's gross revenue. In exchange, teams are allowed to have a salary cap, which this year is $9.8 million per team. Clubs must have a minimum payroll of $8.3 million.

"It seems to be a successful, amicable and profitable arrangement for the players and the clubs," Rona said. "It seems to be almost uniquely suited to the sports area. That's why we're taking a long and hard and serious look and developing a partnership."

Donald Fehr, executive director of the players' association, said, "It's hard for me to comment until I know more about it."

"Does revenue-sharing mean 85 percent?" he said. "Does it mean 15 percent? Just to say revenue sharing doesn't mean anything until you see what the proposal is."

The Basic Agreement between baseball and the union expires on Dec. 31. During the period covered by the current collective-bargaining agreement, the union has filed three collusion grievances against owners, charging a conspiracy against free agents. Arbitrators found owners guilty in the 1985 and 1986 cases and a decision is expected before the end of the year in the third.

In baseball's current structure, players do not have substantial bargaining rights for their first three seasons. After their third season, they become eligible for salary arbitration. After their sixth season, they become eligible for free agency.

The three-part system was agreed to after arbitrator Peter Seitz declared Dave McNally and Andy Messersmith free agents in 1976. General managers and agents have said it produces a salary structure skewed more toward longevity than performance in some instances.

Andy MacPhail, the Minnesota Twins general manager, said he was not opposed to the principle of revenue sharing. MacPhail's father, Lee McPhail, was American League president.

"I don't think it's communist or anti-American or anything like that," MacPhail said. "If it'll do anything to settle some of the problems we have in this industry, then I'm for it."

But he also said "until I can measure what tradeoffs we get back, it's hard for me to comment on it."

Randy Hendricks, one of baseball's top agents, had similar thoughts.

"I don't think there's anything wrong in sports with an incentive pool for people that are competent and win," he said, "but I reserve judgment on revenue sharing until I see the entire structure of their proposal."

A proposed new league being planned by agent Richard Moss and lawyer David Lefevre calls for revenue-sharing with players.

There has been a previous attempt at revenue-sharing. The Players League was formed in 1890 after the Brotherhood of Professional Ball Players rebelled when unable to win concessions from the National League and the American Association. The competition over players proved to be a financial disaster for all three leagues and the Players League folded after one year. The American Association collapsed the following season.

Connors' Verve, Nerve Move Him To Semifinals

Veteran Defeats Edberg; Graf, Lendl Also Advance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Back in his favorite tennis setting, Jimmy Connors put aside the issues of age and stamina, replacing them with some oldtime verve and nerve to advance to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open.

He did it with a 6-2, 6-3, 6-1 romp over Stefan Edberg Monday night, a victory so thorough that one of the games Edberg won was on a default when Connors got into one of his old-fashioned debates with the chair referee. He was fined $2,250 for his rowdiness, but it was probably worth every penny to produce this unlikely triumph.

"I went out and played the kind of match everybody dreams of playing, hitting the ball that way and just making things happen," Connors said.

It was the kind of match he isn't supposed to be capable of playing anymore, not at age 37, not two days after he was so severely crippled by cramps that he needed intravenous liquids.

But this is the Open, his favorite tennis playground, a tournament he has won five times on three different surfaces.

"I love this place," Connors said. "The atmosphere, the people. You open the gates and they flood in, everybody's pushing and shoving. They're animals."

"But I put myself in that group. That's the way I've always played, like an animal my whole life. To be put in a cage with these people is a lot of fun."

Against Edberg, a finalist in the French and Wimbledon tournaments and seeded No. 3 in the Open, Connors played brilliant tennis. There was none of the old-fashioned fist-pumping and playing to the crowd. Connors said he was too worn down for those kinds of histrionics.

Certainly after the way he finished Saturday's straight-sets victory over Andres Gomez, there was speculation Connors might not even be able to show up for the next round. His legs cramped up and his body went rigid, forcing emergency treatment.

He practiced for 15 minutes Sunday, declared himself ready, and beat the 23-year-old Edberg convincingly.

"To still be able to play that kind of tennis in the Open and reach the quarters, to play like that and beat him, it was an excellent feeling," Connors said.

The victory earned Connors a quarterfinal date with sixth-seeded Andre Agassi, who took out Jim Grabb 6-1, 7-5, 6-3.

Also moving to the men's quarters were ninth-seeded Tim Mayotte, who defeated No. 7 Michael Chang 7-5, 6-1, 1-6, 6-3, and top-seeded Ivan Lendl, who survived a grueling 3-hour, 45-minute duel with No. 16 Andrei Chesnokov, finally winning 6-3, 4-6, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3.

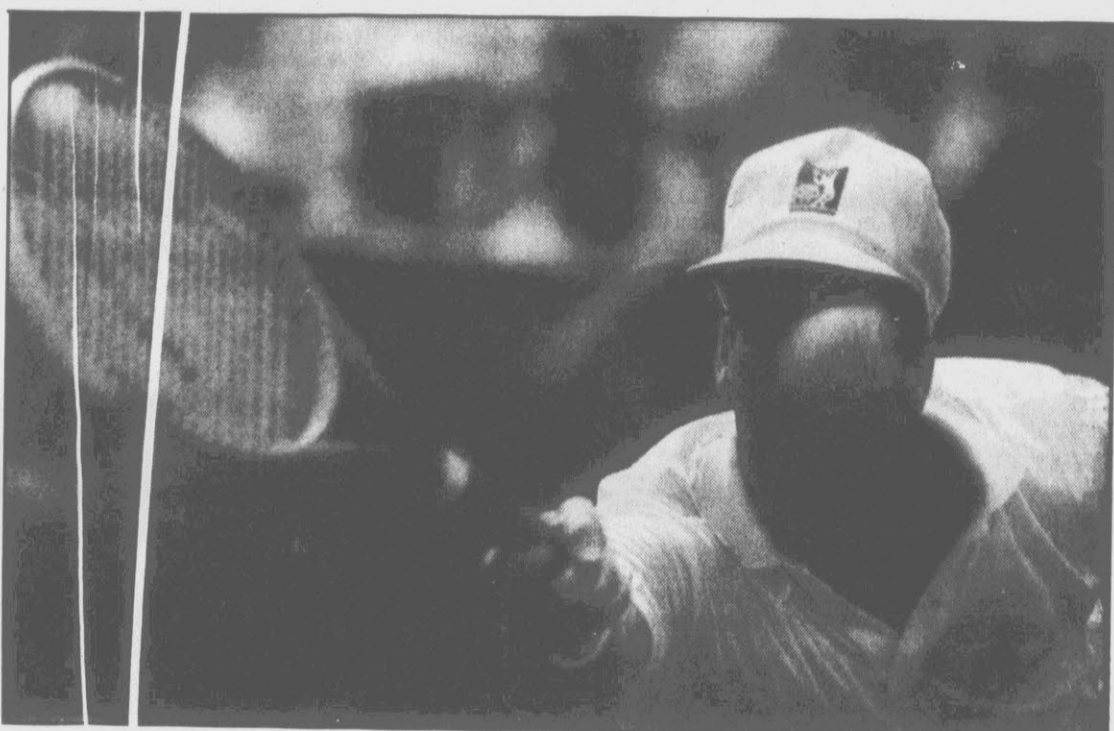

On the women's side, defending champion Steffi Graf overcame a slow start, winning the last 10 games in a 6-4, 6-0 rout of Rosalyn Fairbank to reach the quarters.

Also advancing were No. 8 Helena Sukova, who defeated Larisa Savchenko 4-6, 6-1, 6-2, No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini, who beat No. 15 Conchita Martinez, 6-1, 6-1, and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, a 6-2, 6-2 winner over Barbara Paulus.

While Connors played Edberg in a half-empty stadium, the grandstand was packed to watch the struggle between Lendl and Chesnokov.

The match turned in the final set when, after battling to deuce seven times, Chesnokov held serve for a 3-2 lead. However, it was the last game the Soviet player would win.

"He wasn't missing," said Lendl, who survived 72 unforced errors. "If I look at it now, there were a lot of moments when I could have gone down. I decided if I was going to go down, I was going to go down swinging."

Lendl, who has reached the finals of the Open every year since 1982, simply would not yield.

"You have to do whatever it takes to win," he said. "Today it was being patient until I could get easy shots, waiting for my chances. In the end, I was so aggressive he couldn't keep up."

Agassi wore down Grabb. "I think he was a little tired from his last match," he said. "I played the percentages. I set the stage early. If you're going to beat me, you're going to hit a lot of balls and work for it."

"I've been working on my serve and come a long way with it. It's more of a weapon now. Before, it was not a weakness or a strength, just a way to get the point started. Now, it has turned into a strength."

Mayotte said serves were the key as well in repeating his Wimbledon wipeout of Chang, the French Open champion and youngest Grand Slam event winner in history.

"I can take his serve, and feel like we're starting better than equal, which I need to be if we're both going to be in the backcourt," Mayotte said.

Graf struggled through a slow start against Fairbank and was broken in the first game. She battled back, winning the last 10 games and continuing her straight-sets march through the tournament.

Heros, All-Stars, Top Picks All Out Of Work

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Super Bowl heroes, Pro Bowlers and No. 1 draft picks were once again making news. This time, they are losing their jobs.

Wide receivers Cris Collinsworth and Steve Watson, running back Paul Palmer, linebacker Bob Brudzinski and punter Brian Hansen all received pink slips Monday as NFL teams cut down to the 47-man roster limits for the start of the season.

"Quite frankly, this is probably one of the saddest days in Bengals history," Cincinnati quarterback Boomer Esianon said upon learning that Collinsworth, the Bengals' No. 2 career receiver, and Jim Breech, the team's kicker since 1980, had been let go.

"There comes a time when cold, hard, tough decisions have to be made, and you make them," Coach Sam Wyche said.

Brudzinski was released by Miami along with cornerback Don McNeal and safety Bud Brown. All were members of the Dolphins' last Super Bowl team five seasons ago.

"The tough decisions involved the veterans that have contributed to any success the Dolphins have had in the past," Coach Don Shula said. "They're guys that have given you everything that they have to give in the practices and when they line up and play."

Kansas City cut Palmer, its No. 1 draft pick in 1987 and runner-up to Vinny Testaverde in voting for the 1986 Heisman Trophy after rushing for 1,866 yards at Temple. He was the No. 2 rusher and receiver for the Chiefs last year and led the AFC in kickoff returns as a rookie.

"It didn't quite work out the way I wanted it to, I have to say that," Palmer said. "I can't really say it hasn't gone well. It just hasn't gone as well as I hoped it would. In most cases, when opportunity permitted, I think I ran fairly well."

Joe Morris, who ran for 1,516 yards in leading the New York Giants' drive to the NFL title in 1986, and All-Pro linebacker Andre Tippett of New England are lost for the season, each a victim of the league's new injured-reserve rules.

Morris, the Giants' career rushing leader with 5,296 yards, broke a bone in his right foot in Saturday night's 13-10 exhibition loss to Pittsburgh and was placed on injured reserve before the team got down to its limit of 47 players.

Tippett, the mainstay of the Patriot defense, was placed on injured reserve after undergoing surgery to repair muscle damage in his right shoulder. Two other New England starters, cornerback Ronnie Lippett and defensive end Garin Veris, also went on injured reserve after undergoing knee surgery on Saturday.

Brian Washington, who started 14 of 16 games at free safety for Cleveland last year, also went on the list with a broken nose and elbow injury. Miami put placekicker Fuad Revez on IR, and Buffalo lost all-purpose running back Robb Riddick the same way.

In previous seasons, players placed on injured reserve before the final cuts could be activated after six games if healthy. Beginning this year, those inactivated before the 47-man limit is established can't return during the season or practice with the team unless they go through waivers.

Thus, rookie quarterback Rodney Peete of Detroit, who would have been the Lions' starter, was kept on the roster although his sprained left knee will keep him out three to five weeks.

A half-dozen Denver Broncos who played key roles for the two Super Bowl teams were cut, including Watson and running back Gerald Willhite.

Another player from those Denver teams, linebacker Ricky Hunley, was cut by the Phoenix Cardinals. Hunley, obtained in a trade last year, was expected to start at middle linebacker, but missed 12 days in a contract dispute and then played poorly in exhibition games.

There were other casualties among name players as the league's 28 teams got down to the regular-season limit.

Many of those cut, however, could be brought back quickly as teams maneuver with the injured reserve list. Many teams will put players on the regular-season IR — making them eligible to come back — and will re-sign released players if they pass through waivers.

Younger players — rookies and first-year free agents — could also return if they clear waivers on a six-man developmental squad established by the league. They will receive $1,000 a week and be permitted to practice.

Other name players released were linebacker Barry Krauss of Cleveland, an 11-year veteran picked up as a "Plan B" free agent this year; Hansen, a Pro Bowler for New Orleans in 1984; Matt Bouza, who caught 71 passes for the Indianapolis Colts in 1986, and Ray Alexander, who caught 54 passes as a starter last year for Dallas.

Denver's cuts included six former regulars — Watson, Willhite, linebacker Jim Ryan, offensive tackle Dave Studdard, defensive back Mike Harden and defensive end Freddie Gilbert.

Buffalo cut wide receiver Trumaine Johnson, a one-time USFL star, and Gordie Lockbaum, a celebrated two-way player during his college days at Holy Cross who had been switched from running back to safety.

Illini Nip Trojans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Illinois quarterback Jeff George and Southern Cal's Todd Marinovich played on relatively even terms for most of the game, with neither very successful.

But at the end, George's edge in experience paid off.

The junior quarterback threw two touchdown passes in the final six minutes Monday night to rally the 22nd-ranked Illini to a 14-13 upset of fifth-ranked Southern Cal in a college football season opener.

Marinovich, a redshirt freshman pressed into starting duty when junior Pat O'Hara injured a knee in a scrimmage last month, had two more chances to pull out the victory after Illini went ahead with 2:09 left to play.

But he threw an interception on Southern Cal's next possession, then was unable to move the team when the Trojans got the ball at their own 20 with 54 seconds left.

"We didn't win; that's a sign of how well I played," said Marinovich, who set a national prep record by passing for 9,125 yards during his career at Capistrano High School in Mission Viejo, Calif.

"We didn't put the ball into the end zone," Marinovich said. "We have to improve, score some points."

George, who threw for 2,257 yards last year after transferring from Purdue, said he wasn't particularly worried in the closing minutes of the game even though the Illini trailed 13-0. "It's just a matter of confidence. We had to come back from behind all last year," said the Illini quarterback, who finished the game with 27 completions in 43 attempts for 248 yards, with one interception.

Colorado Rolls By Texas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOULDER, Colo. — Except for sub-par production from the tailback position, Colorado coach Bill McCartney found little to fault after his 14th-ranked Buffaloes kicked off the 1989 football season in fine fashion.

Sophomore quarterback Darian Hagan, starting his first game, ran for one touchdown and passed for another as the Buffs romped over Texas 27-6 Monday night.

Hagan passed five yards to fullback George Hemingway to put the Buffs ahead 14-0 in the first quarter, and he ran four yards for a fourth-quarter score that produced the final margin. His 75-yard dash on the game's second play from scrimmage set up the first Colorado score.

Meanwhile, the Colorado defense sacked Texas quarterbacks five times and forced them to make numerous hurried passes.

Kick returns also played a part in the Colorado victory. Jeff Campbell, whose fumbled punt return set up a Texas field goal, redeemed himself with punt returns of 21 and 33 yards that led to Colorado scores. M.J. Nelson's 47-yard kickoff return late in the half helped produce a Buffalo field goal.

"It was a complete victory, the kind you enjoy, where everybody plays hard," McCartney said. "Our quarterback did a good job in his first start. His big-play ability gave us a lift. Defensively, our pressure on their quarterbacks was enough to keep their passing game in check. Our kick returns were key plays."

"Any time you beat Texas, it's a heck of a victory." It was Colorado's first victory over Texas in five games.

McCartney's only real complaint was with the relative paucity of yardage from tailbacks Eric Bieniemy and J.J. Flannigan. Bieniemy, who averaged 124 yards per game rushing a year ago, had 66 yards on 16 carries Monday night. Flannigan got 51 yards on 11 carries in a relief role.

"Our tailbacks are accustomed to gaining more yards," he said. "We'd like them to be more productive, and we'd like to control the line of scrimmage better than we did. We had a lot of second-and-longs. But any time you play a team that's as big and strong as they are and commit that many guys to stopping the run, it's going to be tough to gain yards."

The Buffs have little time to savor the victory. They have just four days to prepare for their next game, on Saturday against Colorado State.

Hagan accounted for 116 yards rushing and 95 passing as Colorado rolled up 385 total yards.

Sports Notes

Lewis Wary Of Falcon Passing Game

East Carolina will host Bowling Green in the season opening football game for both teams on Saturday, and Pirate head coach Bill Lewis says that his defense will face a challenge in stopping the Falcon's passing game.

Bowling Green, 2-8-1 last season, is led by senior quarterback Rich Dackin, who has amassed just under 4,200 career passing yards despite missing most of last season with a broken hand. The Falcon signal caller has three veteran receivers who combined for 109 receptions last season to use as targets.

"Any team that returns a starting, senior quarterback, is in a good position," Lewis said after ECU's two-hour light workout Monday. "We are fortunate to be in that position with Travis Hunter returning."

"Dackin is a fine throwing quarterback and should have his most productive year. Their receivers are outstanding and could be the best group of receivers to come to Ficklen Stadium this year."

Bowling Green's Reggie Thornton, a senior wide receiver, has 108 career catches including nine for touchdowns. Flanker Ron Heard caught 35 passes last year for 622 yards and tight end Kyle Hockman has 70 career receptions. Combined, the Falcon trio has 266 career receptions.

"They also have a lot of seniors on the offensive line, which is a big plus. And their kicking game is outstanding."

Falcon placekicker Jason Zeller is an All-America candidate, and has connected on 43 consecutive extra points. Junior punter Chris Shale averages 41.5 yard per kick.

Sheridan Worried Over Yellow Jackets

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State coach Dick Sheridan is relieved to have escaped with victory against Maryland, but he still worries about Georgia Tech, even though the Yellow Jackets haven't won an Atlantic Coast Conference game in two years.

"We have a sense of great relief to get the Maryland game behind us," Sheridan said in Raleigh, speaking of the Wolfpack's 10-6 victory Saturday over the Terrapins. "Now, we're going to face a similar type situation. We've got a conference game against an opponent that we feel like is going to be very difficult for us to beat. Again, we're expecting a knock-down, drag-out type of game."

The Yellow Jackets have played the Wolfpack tough, losing 14-6 last season. Sheridan hopes this season's game won't come down to the last play as was the case against Maryland. Terrapin quarterback Neil O'Donnell's 17-yard pass to Barry Johnson was batted down by Wolfpack defender Barry Anderson.

Sheridan said he is especially concerned about Georgia Tech's offensive line — the five starters average 6-foot-5, 277 pounds.

"Their linemen get in your face and (tailback Jerry) Mays is so little, you can't see him zipping around back there," Sheridan said. "He's hard to wrap up anyway, but it's doubly tough when you can't find him in the first place."

Spurrier Cites Bad Luck In Game

DURHAM (AP) — When Duke coach Steve Spurrier looked at the highlight films on the Blue Devils' loss to South Carolina, he saw some promise on offense, some disappointments on defense and some bad luck overall.

Duke gained 454 total yards in its 27-21 loss to the Gamecocks on Saturday. Quarterback Billy Ray threw for 341 yards, the second-highest total in a quarterback's debut under Spurrier. Anthony Dilweg passed for 353 yards against Northwestern last season. Spurrier attributed his three interceptions to inexperience and bad luck.

"He's just now getting into the competitive flow of the game," Spurrier said at his Monday press luncheon. "Now, the competitive part in him has to come forward."

"And I can't recall a game where we dropped five passes and two other balls were in our hands that turned into interceptions."

Wide receiver Clarkston Hines caught two touchdown passes to become the ACC's all-time leader with 23 career touchdown receptions. Tailback Roger Boone had 143 total yards.

But Spurrier says the defense may not have enough size on the front line to keep teams from "running the ball down our throat."

"I really believe we can play better defense," Spurrier said. "I know we came out looking like paper (against South Carolina). But we've got some players who don't seem quite tough enough. But most of them are."

Duke hosts Northwestern on Saturday.

Cavaliers Must Forget Notre Dame

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — The first step in preparing for Saturday's game against Penn State is forgetting Notre Dame, Virginia coach George Welsh said Sunday.

"It's up to the coaching staff and the players to put the Notre Dame game behind us," Welsh said at his weekly news conference.

The Fighting Irish piled up 333 first-half yards and scored on their first five possessions en route to a 36-13 drubbing of the Cavaliers last Thursday in the Kickoff Classic in East Rutherford, N.J.

"We didn't need to look at our technique and correct some mistakes, I wouldn't even have looked at the film of that game," Welsh said. He said the film showed that very few of his players received passing grades.

The good news about playing Penn State is that the Nittany Lions, who defeated the Cavaliers 42-14 last season, probably will not run the option attack that Irish quarterback Tony Rice guided so successfully against Virginia.

The bad news is that Penn State's team speed is similar to Notre Dame's.

Woods, Gamecocks Happy To Be Winners

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — After South Carolina's football team experienced a troubled off-season, coach Sparky Woods and his players finally felt the joy of being winners again.

But the coach said Monday at his weekly news conference he was nervous near the end of Saturday's close victory over Duke, wondering if his team was in store for yet another disappointment.

Woods said he was feeling good until Duke scored a touchdown with 49 seconds remaining in the game to cut South Carolina's lead to 27-21. Then he became concerned.

"I was thinking, all that we've gone through in the last six months and here we are about to let it slip out of our hands if we're not careful," Woods said.

But the Gamecocks recovered the ensuing onside kick and ran the clock out before a record opening game crowd of 74,232 at Williams-Brice Stadium.

"It was a tremendous victory," Woods said. "I can't tell you how great a feeling it was to win Saturday night."

Scrubs Rally By Reds, 9-8

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Roger Craig delivered no motivational speech to the San Francisco Giants. In fact, he had given up.

With the Giants trailing the Cincinnati Reds 8-0 after six innings, the San Francisco manager began sending his starters to the showers and putting the scrubs in to play out the string.

But a funny thing happened on the way to defeat. Guys named Speier and Bathe and Laga and Litton and Nixon and Riley simply refused to lose. They reeled off clutch hit after clutch hit in a comeback never to be forgotten, and beat the Reds 9-8.

"What a team contribution! ... Unbelievable ... incredible," said Craig, who used 25 players. "I got a lot of guys in the game because I wanted to give them a chance to play. Did they even play!"

The comeback began as a distant rumble, given life in the seventh by the last of the regulars, Will Clark and Terry Kennedy. Cincinnati's Tim Lary was cruising with a two-hitter when Clark hit his 21st home run and Kennedy his fifth.

"I've been around for 11 years and I've never seen a game like that," Kennedy said. "Usually when it's the sixth or seventh inning and it's 8-0, it's almost automatic. When Will and I hit the home runs, it was almost incidental."

That's what winning pitcher Ernie Camacho figured.

"When we were down 8-4, Chris Speier said, 'We're going to win this game,'" said Camacho, who struck out the side in the eighth and watched as Steve Broderson worked out of a ninth-inning jam. "You could just feel the excitement starting to build up in the dugout."

Craig noticed it, too.

"We just felt that everybody who was walking up to the plate could get a hit," he said.

Among those who did was Mike Laga, who hit a two-run homer after replacing Clark in the eighth and added a game-winning single in the ninth.

Cubs 7, Mets 3

Ryne Sandberg hit his career-high 27th home run and reliever Les Lancaster pitched four shutout innings as Chicago won the opener of a crucial two-game series, handing New York its fourth straight loss and ninth in 12 games.

Rick Sutcliffe, 14-11, escaped three bases-loaded jams in five innings.

David Cone, 12-7, lost for the second time in 11 decisions despite striking out 11 batters in eight innings. He allowed Sandberg's homer in the first.

Shawon Dunston's dribbler up the third-base line with two out in the third broke a 1-1 tie, and Rick Wrona added a two-run single.

Padres 10, Braves 9

Clark, who has 17 RBIs in the last eight days, hit a grand slam in the seventh inning and a three-run homer in the eighth to rescue San Diego from an 8-3 deficit. The grand slam was indeed grand, being measured at 454 feet.

"I thought the first one was going out of Fulton County — not the stadium, the county," Atlanta manager Russ Nixon said.

The Padres, who have won four in a row and 10 of 11, also got a three-run homer from Darrin Jackson. San Diego has hit 15 homers in its last 10 games.

Bullpen ace Mark Davis got his major league-leading 35th save.

Cardinals 4, Expos 1

Pedro Guerrero, batting .400 against Montreal and .419 with runners in scoring position, hit a game-tying single, and shoddy defense led to the rest of the runs as surging St. Louis beat slumping Montreal.

The Cardinals, backing Jose DeLeon, 15-11, have won eight of 11 overall. The Expos have lost five of their last seven and 20 of 30.

Dodgers 7, Astros 5

Houston's Mike Scott failed in a bid to become the first 19-game winner. His wild pitch in the seventh inning allowed the go-ahead run to score after the tying run came home on a bunt single by Alfredo Griffin.

The loss snapped Scott's seven-game winning streak over the Dodgers in the Astrodome dating back to Aug. 13, 1986. Scott's record dropped to 18-8.

Mike Scioscia hit a three-run homer for the Dodgers and Glenn Wilson matched that for the Astros.

Pirates 7, Phillies 5

Bobby Bonilla and Jay Bell drove in two runs apiece and Pittsburgh rallied twice in sending Philadelphia to its fifth straight loss.

Bonilla, Gary Redus and Dann Bilardello had two doubles apiece for the Pirates. Bill Landrum got his 22nd save.

White Sox, yielded two runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. He left with a 3-0 lead after a one-out walk to Sammy Sosa and a single by Lance Johnson in the seventh. Tom Henke relieved and the White Sox scored on Ozzie Guillen's sacrifice fly and Dave Gallagher's RBI single before Henke nailed down his 16th save.

Chicago starter Richard Dotson went seven innings, giving up three runs and seven hits. Lloyd Moseby opened the Toronto sixth with a double and, two outs later, McGriff hit a pitch the opposite way into the left-field stands for his fifth home run against the White Sox this season and 11th of his career.

Toronto runs in each of the last three innings on RBI singles by Nelson Liriano, Tony Fernandez and George Bell.

Red Sox 8, Athletics 5

Dwight Evans homered and Mike Greenwell continued his hot hitting with three hits and an RBI to back John Dopper's strong pitching. Dopper, who missed four weeks with a muscle strain in his right elbow, held Oakland to two runs and four hits until the ninth and won his first game since July 27.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Blue Jays 5, White Sox 2

The Baltimore Orioles suddenly remembered how to hit home runs. Unfortunately for them, Toronto's Fred McGriff never forgot.

McGriff broke a scoreless tie with his league-leading 36th homer, a two-run shot in the sixth inning, and the Blue Jays defeated the Chicago White Sox 5-2 Monday night to maintain a one-game lead over Baltimore in the American League East.

Meanwhile, the Orioles, who hadn't homered in their last six games, got a two-run blast from Cal Ripken in the third inning and a game-winning solo shot from Tim Lulett with two out in the bottom of the ninth to beat Cleveland 5-4.

"This was the biggest thrill of my career," said Lulett, who, after playing most of 1985, 1986 and 1987 in the majors with the White Sox, languished in the minors the last two seasons. He was called up late last month by the Orioles, who had signed him as a free agent last November.

"I just about gave up," he said. "It didn't look like there was a chance to get back to the big leagues. It's been a long year. This is the payoff for being patient."

Blue Jays 5, White Sox 2

The victory was Toronto's ninth in 10 games against Chicago this season and Jimmy Key won his fourth straight start since coming off the disabled list Aug. 19.

Key, 12-3 lifetime against the Yankees 2, Angels 1

Don Mattingly's solo homer broke a tie in the sixth inning and gave the Yankees their first five-game winning streak of the season. With emergency starter Clay Parker — Chuck Cary showed up with a torn fingernail — winning his first game since July 1, New York completed a four-game sweep of the Angels, who have lost five straight.

Rangers 8, Twins 5

Julio Franco went 3-for-3, including a tie-breaking two-run single in the sixth inning. Brad Arnsberg hurled four innings of four-hit shutout relief for the victory and Jeff Russell pitched the ninth for his league-leading 32nd save.

Tigers 5, Royals 1

Fred Lynn hit his 300th career home run and rookie Doug Strange hit his first as Detroit ended Bret Saberhagen's eight-game winning streak. Saberhagen, 17-6, had won 14 of his last 15 decisions. He pitched seven innings, giving up four runs.

Doyle Alexander, 6-16, won his first game since July 25, allowing four hits in 6 2-3 innings. Alexander's record in the month of September since 1983 is 27-6.

WEEKLY PRIZES

1st Prize $25.00
2nd Prize $15.00

CONTEST RULES

1. Thirty-two football games are placed on these pages. Pick the winner of each game (not the score) and write the team name opposite the advertiser's name on the entry blank. The entrant picking the most correct winners each week will be awarded $25.00. Second place $15.00.
2. Pick a number which you think will be the most number of points scored by both teams in any one of the week's games listed and write your answer in the space provided on the entry blank. This will be used to break ties. In the event of a further tie the money will be equally divided between the winning entrants.
3. Only one entry per person per week. The contest is open to all except employees of The Daily Reflector and their immediate families.
4. Entries must be in The Daily Reflector office not later than 5:00 p.m. Friday or postmarked not later than Friday, 7:00 p.m. Address entries to: FOOTBALL CONTEST, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835. (Reasonable facsimiles also accepted).

DUNKEL INDEX COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY Sept. 6

ARIES (March 20 to April 19): You now will have a more analytical approach to your activities. An associate will have excellent suggestions now for how you can have more assets. This is the day of cooperation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 19): Much action on your job requires getting in greater harmony with a fellow-worker. Making revisions on your daily activities will bring you higher efficiency and greater benefits.

GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Put that extra vitality with which you are now endowed into your constructive work activities. Be sure you put forth business ideas that appeal to the public.

MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Delays on doing work could have longtime adverse consequences. Put in motion now a campaign to have long-range benefits at your residence.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Don't let other pressing obligations keep you from being equally efficient on your job. You need to dig deeply to find what can improve your business affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Don't stick to the same old course at work. You are tempted to spend more than is feasible on business. You have to arrange matters at your residence better before considering the offer of a friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Use an opportunity now to let fellow workers aid you at work with their views. You can learn how to handle recreation better by observing active friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Obstacles in path of business or money action requires you cultivate patience. Now you can obtain that improvement you have desired for your home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Look now for ways you can combine accepted business methods and new formulas. Plan home changes but time is not just right to put them in motion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Don't be critical of directives given by higher-up how work is to be performed. Keep long-standing appointments even though better ones come along socially.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): A friend will confidentially be of service to you in a business matter. This is the day to take your family out of the town, do civic activities.

PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Get a new attitude of mind that goes along harmoniously with new projects. A new organized campaign to improve your work should be in full swing.

Most of the plays available to declarer can be made by the defense as well. As a corollary, the counter-thrusts that declarer has at his command also can be employed by the defense.

The auction was straight from the old textbook. Since North didn't have diamonds stopped, he made a forcing jump raise in clubs, and South, with a dead minimum and stoppers in the unbid suits, settled for the obvious no trump game.

West led the six of diamonds, taken by East's ace. Declarer held up the king of diamonds until the third round of the suit, then took the club finesse. That lost, but East did not have another diamond—and if he did, that would have meant the suit had split evenly and the defenders could score only three diamond tricks, plus a club trick in the bank. As a result, declarer collected 10 tricks. Was this a normal result?

Anything but! Had East taken effective countermeasures, the contract would probably have gone down to defeat.

With 15 points in sight in dummy, East should have worked out that, including the 10 points in his hand, some 38 points could be accounted for. Therefore, West could not possibly have a fast entry.

Since it would appear that declarer could not come to nine tricks without taking at least some club tricks, East's strategy should have been designed to prevent declarer from holding up the king of diamonds.

Look what would happen had East played the queen of diamonds to the first trick! Declarer could not afford to refuse the trick since the defenders might be able to collect five diamond tricks off the bat when there were 11 tricks to be had with a winning club finesse. Now, when East gets in with the king of clubs, ace of diamonds and another allows the defenders to collect four diamond tricks for a one-trick set.

Diana Rigg Takes Over As Host For 'Mystery!'

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Diana Rigg started her acting career in Shakespeare, but she will be forever known as the exotically beautiful, black-leather-clad countess on the British series "The Avengers."

Although that was more than 20 years ago, her stint as Mrs. Emma Peel was unforgettable. Since then, other than a short-lived and unmemorable American sitcom in 1973-74 called "Diana," she has rarely been seen in this country.

Ms. Rigg makes up for it this season as she succeeds Vincent Price as host of "Mystery!" on PBS at the start of the new season on Thursday, Oct. 12. The show is an anthology of the best English mysteries.

"I don't think there will be a major difference other than the question of our personalities," she said on a visit to this country to promote the show and tape her appearances at WGBH in Boston.

"Mystery!" is noted for Edward Gorey's Gothic style engravings for the title sequences, and Gorey has designed a new black and white set for the host that has a one-dimensional look.

"I'm not playing a part. I am myself. I suppose it will evolve, but it's always dangerous to speak up front. I'd rather wait and see. My job is to introduce each show. For those who know the characters it's an affirmation and for those who don't it's an explanation.

"Plus, we'll also take a wider approach to the subject at hand. For example, we'll talk about the rules of law as they developed in England for the 'Rumpole of the Bailey' series. I like the idea of giving a tinge of information."

Ms. Rigg recently completed a miniseries for the BBC called "Mother Love" that may show up on "Mystery!" It's a decidedly different role from Emma Peel.

"It's the story of a woman who brings up her son by herself after her divorce," she said. "She loves her son passionately and believes he's never seen his father in the years since the divorce. But the father and son carry on a deception, and when the mother finds out, murder and mayhem ensue."

She plays the mother, David McCallum ("Man From U.N.C.L.E.") is the father and the son is James Wilby, who stars in a new version of "A Tale of Two Cities" for "Masterpiece Theatre" this season.

"The Avengers," British television's version of James Bond, starred Patrick Macnee as a suave secret agent in a bowler. It was witty, absurd and diabolical. His first female partner was Honor Blackman, who left to play Pussy Galore in the Bond movie "Goldfinger." Ms. Rigg was his partner, Emma Peel, when the show began its run on ABC in 1966. She stayed with it two years, then was replaced by Linda Thorson. It left ABC in 1969, but was later seen on late-night on CBS.

"It was a very stylistic show and it set the tone for a lot that followed," she said. "It certainly set the pattern for women as equal partners. James Bond hasn't reached that yet. It was ahead of its time and quite original for television."

Ms. Rigg played a Spanish contessa in the 1969 Bond film "On Her Majesty's Secret Service." It was the only movie in which 007 got married and in which George Lazenby played Bond. She and Price, her predecessor on "Mystery!" were in "Theater of Blood" in 1973.

Ms. Rigg, who is married to British producer Archie Sterling, said she has tapered off her career since the birth of her daughter 12 years ago. Still, she was in a new version of "Witness for the Prosecution" for CBS and recently was on the stage in London in "Follies."

Jerry Lewis Telethon Collects Record $42 Million In Pledges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Jerry Lewis drew a record $42,209,727 in pledges from viewers of his 24th-annual Labor Day Telethon, with muscular dystrophy victims appealing for an end to the deadly disease that devastates families.

The figure surpassed the 1988 record by slightly more than $1 million.

Corporate sponsors donated an additional $36,228,846 during the 21½-hour event that ended Monday afternoon, drawing an estimated 100 million television viewers.

The donations soared to a record shortly after Bob Sampson, an airline executive crippled by muscular dystrophy, appeared in the final hour.

"No telethon for my kids will ever be anything without him," Lewis said in introducing Sampson, who contracted as a teen-ager during the Depression and first appeared on the telethon in 1967.

Sampson, who has lost two of his six grandchildren to muscular dystrophy, told Lewis last week he couldn't return to the telethon this year because of the emotional toll.

"You can't turn your back on your grandchildren or these kids," Lewis told him.

"I told him he's living on borrowed time; I'm living on borrowed time," Lewis said of his plea to get Sampson to return for another show. "I said while we're here, let's do some good stuff."

On television, Sampson hailed the advances made against muscular dystrophy, but said much needs to be done.

"There's been enough of this disease killing children and devastating families," the United Airlines executive said, drawing a standing ovation from the 2,000 people in the Jerry Lewis Theater.

Lewis opened the show Sunday by saying that inroads had been made against 40 neuromuscular diseases that the Muscular Dystrophy Association is involved in fighting.

The telethons have raised $526,524,210 for the New York City-based association since Lewis began the annual event in 1966. Corporate contributions, which have amounted to hundreds of millions of dollars, are not included in the telethon totals.

As in previous years, it was the victims and their families who provided the most touching moments.

Lewis was moved to tears when former high school football coach Charlie Wedemeyer, the subject of the television movie "Quiet Victory," told the audience: "You never know which dollar it will be to make the difference and win the fight."

Wedemeyer, of Los Gatos, Calif., is paralyzed by amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease. He conveyed his message through his wife, Lucy, who read his lips.

Contestants Gather For Miss America

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Here they come, Miss America hopefuls.

For the 51 contestants coming to Atlantic City today, the next two weeks won't be all glamour and glitz.

After they check into hotels, they will begin hours of rehearsals, interviews, photograph sessions and cocktail parties.

Although preliminary competitions for the 69-year-old Miss America Pageant do not begin until Sept. 12, the contestants will spend the week rehearsing an elaborate television production, said pageant director Leonard Horn.

This year, each contestant was required to submit an essay on an issue of her choice. The winner will be able to promote that issue during her yearlong reign.

Traditionally, Miss America travels the country on behalf of pageant sponsors. But giving Miss America a voice on her own issue will only enhance her status, Horn said.

"It is not a beauty pageant, and it is not just a scholarship pageant," he said. "This program fosters personal growth and achievement, and scholarship is not an end in itself, it's a means to an end."

A panel of preliminary judges will choose the top 10 finalists. A celebrity panel of judges will choose the new Miss America on the final night — Sept. 16.

This year's celebrity judges are developer Donald Trump, entertainer Merv Griffin, psychologist Joyce Brothers, actresses Phyllicia Rashad and Debbie Allen, baseball great Mike Schmidt and journalist Claudia Cohen.

Gary Collins will be host of the pageant for the eighth year and Miss America 1971 Phyllis George Brown will be co-host.

The theme of this year's pageant, televised by NBC-TV, is "A Moment in Time."

The new Miss America will succeed Gretchen Elizabeth Carlson of Minnesota. The winner receives a $35,000 scholarship and fees from personal appearances during her reign.

Likely Hit

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — ABC's "Chicken Soup," starring comic Jackie Mason and Lynn Redgrave, is the most likely hit of the new TV season, says TV Guide.

The magazine's editors also said they like CBS' "The Famous Teddy Z," according to the magazine's Sept. 9 edition.

Last year, the editors selected three sitcoms as potential hits: ABC's "Roseanne," a contender this year for the No. 1 spot, and NBC's "Empty Nest" and "Dear John," which finished 9th and 11th respectively in the ratings.
