Storm Churns N.C. Coast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Hurricane Gabrielle churned toward Bermuda and the East Coast with winds of 135 mph today, raising 10-foot swells up to 1,300 miles away on North Carolina's Outer Banks.

Gabrielle's 500-mile wide spiral bypassed the Caribbean and was expected to reach Bermuda by Friday or Saturday.

Already the Atlantic season's biggest hurricane, it was upgraded Tuesday evening to a Category 4 hurricane, with 5 the strongest.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane flew over Gabrielle late Tuesday and reported rising barometric pressure and a slightly expanding eye in the hurricane, signs that strengthening could be unlikely, forecasters said.

But by 6 a.m. EDT today, Gabrielle's pressure decreased slightly and its eye constricted again.

"Gabrielle may have reached its peak intensity, but it is too early to tell," said hurricane specialist Hal Gerish at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

As of 6 a.m., Gabrielle was centered near 23.6 north latitude and 59.2 west longitude, 700 miles south-southeast of Bermuda. It was moving northwest at 12 mph and was expected to hold its course for 24 hours.

While it was uncertain how close Gabrielle would come to Bermuda, its considerable size prompted forecasters to advise residents of the island and the East Coast to monitor it closely.

City Council Rift Widens

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Reaction to an emergency meeting of the City Council has divided members of the governing board, and fueled the campaign for the November mayoral election.

An emergency session of the council was called Friday to "counsel" City Manager Greg Knowles over his handling of communications between the council and the administration, according to Mayor Ed Carter.

Carter said a majority of the council members were present for the meeting, but three members — Nancy Jenkins, Inez Fridley and Bill Hadden — could not be reached to attend.

However, Ms. Jenkins, who is running against Carter for the mayor's seat, said today she was available and felt deprived of a chance to serve in her position as a council member.

"I was in my home until 11:50 (a.m.). I was not contacted. I was available to serve," Ms. Jenkins said.

Carter and City Clerk Louis Worthington said calls to Ms. Jenkins' home were not answered Friday morning. And Carter today called any attempt to portray him or the city clerk as untruthful "ridiculous."

Ms. Jenkins also questioned the need for an emergency session, and

Pact Proposed For Tar-Pamlico

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

This summer's controversy over protecting the Tar-Pamlico River from nutrient pollution may produce a regional compact of municipalities along the river and a protection strategy acceptable to the state, environmentalists and local governments.

But time is running short for the parties to work out an agreement.

Officials from the municipalities and wastewater treatment plants of Greenville, Oxford, Tarboro, Louisburg, Rocky Mount, Franklinton and Washington, N.C., met Tuesday night in Greenville to discuss preparation of an independent management strategy for reducing nutrient pollution in the river.

The state Environmental Management Commission will make the final decision on a nutrient sensitive designation for the Tar-Pamlico and a state proposed nutrient pollution management strategy at its meeting Sept. 14 in Raleigh.

John C. Hall, an attorney and environmental engineer, told the group it could solve the problems facing the river and the monetary burden facing the municipalities through a regional compact. The compact could prepare a management strategy acceptable to the state over its own proposal which could also provide greater nutrient reduction in the river. The final cost of pollution reduction could save all the municipalities, Hall said.

Earlier this summer the state

S. Africa Holds Crucial Election

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government held a general election today that measured white attitudes toward apartheid and a proposal by the governing party to share limited power with blacks.

Hundreds of thousands of disenfranchised blacks staged a general strike that capped a nationwide protest of the parliamentary election.

Government officials said the vote was the most crucial since the governing National Party came to power on promises of strict race segregation in 1948.

More than 90 percent of black workers stayed home in major cities, according to employer organizations and transportation companies.

Most black schools and many attended by Indian and mixed-race students were closed, along with most businesses in the black townships.

Police used tear gas and whips to disperse mixed-race protesters who marched in the mixed race township of Reiger Park near Boksburg, east of Johannesburg. Many demonstrators were children. Police arrested two men.

Before they attacked, police escorted television crews away from the demonstration, banned along with any other election defiance gatherings.

Police arrested 13 anti-election protesters at a voting station in the port city of Durban, and dispersed 30 mixed-race protesters at a polling booth near Cape Town, arresting a television crew filming the scene.

Train service into Cape Town was delayed by damage from an early morning explosion on the track, the South African Transport Service said. No injuries were reported.

Bush Tries To Sell Drug Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush was embarking today on a sales campaign for his "block by block, child by child" war on drugs, as his drug policy chief and Democrats sparred over the adequacy and financing of the $7.9 billion plan.

Bush was using a midday meeting with out-of-town journalists to push the program he unveiled Tuesday night in his first prime-time address to the nation. In that speech, the president held up a bag of crack cocaine seized across the street from the White House and declared drugs the "gravest domestic threat facing our nation."

But he said, "We can pay for this fight ... without raising taxes or adding to the budget deficit," instead diverting money from other federal programs.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, fired back, saying: "Unless the president supports the tax increases that will be necessary to fight this war, the drug dealers are going to win."

To that, the administration's drug policy coordinator, William J. Bennett, said today: "Does anybody really believe that the reason we have a drug problem in this country is because ... our taxes are too small? That's obviously not the issue."

"If they have a better idea, let's hear the idea, but I think the first responsibility of Congress is to review the budget to see if there are some things in there that can be reduced without hitting the taxpayer again," Bennett said on NBC's "Today" as he made the rounds of the morning television news shows.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that Bush's battle plan "is a very, very positive start. He's going to get everything he asked for."

But, Biden said, "The question is whether or not we're going to take it step further and really take hold of the problem or we're just going to try to do ... only what the president is suggesting."

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations narcotics subcommittee, was more critical, saying on "CBS This Morning" that "there simply isn't the kind of bold, overall, sweeping initiative to win the war on drugs."

Bush called for expanded treatment and education programs, but he also urged the country to demonstrate "zero tolerance for casual drug use" and repeated his support

Shackled Bakker returns to Charlotte for court appearance

Bakker Returns To Courtroom

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jim Bakker left a prison psychiatric unit under guard today and arrived at court in leg irons and handcuffs for a hearing on whether the TV evangelist is mentally competent to stand trial.

Bakker, who is accused of defrauding followers of his PTL ministry, kept his head down and said nothing to reporters as he was escorted into the federal courthouse by U.S. marshals.

Last week, a judge suspended the trial and committed Bakker to a prison hospital for evaluation after Bakker's psychiatrist reported the evangelist was hallucinating and cowering in an office with his head under a couch.

Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye, arrived with defense attorney George T. Savis shortly after her husband this morning and brought him a suit, shirt, tie and shoes. He was wearing gray pants and a sport shirt as he entered the building.

Asked whether Bakker is all right, she said, "I don't know, that's what I'm here to find out." On Tuesday, Mrs. Bakker has said her husband's collapse was due to stress and not mental illness.

Bakker's psychiatrist, Dr. Basil Jackson, said today that he believed a report prepared at the prison hospital would "show he is significantly improved."

Defense lawyer Harold Bender filed a request for a mistrial late Tuesday. The defense maintains that the jury at Bakker's trial was affected when a government witness collapsed last week while undergoing cross examination.

Former PTL vice president Steve Nelson passed out after testifying that he had told Bakker and another PTL official that "someone would go to jail" over the ministry's fundraising practices.

Jurors might blame defense attorneys — who were heatedly questioning Nelson — for his collapse, Bender said in his motion.

Bender also filed a motion asking for a delay until Sept. 11 in the event that a mistrial isn't granted.

Tobacco Costs May Outstrip Market Gains

By L.L. Grimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Some growers appear to be overcoming pessimism about North Carolina's flue-cured tobacco crop, but state officials say it is still too early to tell how this season's sales will fare.

"The market prices have been very encouraging, especially if compared to prices 12 months ago," said John Parker, a spokesman with the North Carolina Farm Bureau.

Reports from the bureau have said the crops range from "good" to "light" to "lost" after the deluge of rainfall this spring.

"Because of weather conditions this year expenses in growing this crop are going to be substantially greater than in the past," Parker said. And regardless of how successful this year's crop is, he said, the chances of most growers breaking even is slim.

"It's a difference in the market price for tobacco compared to the net income," Parker said.

Even if the farmers sell it at a market average that is five to six cents higher than a year ago, it is still costing them nine cents more a pound to grow it.

"It's the net income that keeps the roof over the heads and feeds and clothes and educates the children," he said.

As markets opened across the tobacco belt last month, the reactions varied widely, leaving the crop's success open to much speculation.

Eastern Belt tobacco farmers, including Earl Hale of Halifax County, have been hit hardest. Parker said.

"Rain drowned out 35 of my 75 acres," Hale said. "The remaining acreage is only producing 80 to 90 percent of yield potential."

"Given the weather conditions that we had during the months of March right on through to mid August, it's surprising to me that the crop has done as well as it has," Parker said. "But we're not sure yet. We'll not know until late October or early November before all of the flue-cured markets are closed."

He said reports are showing that the crop is lighter in weight and the yield average is going to down, yet speculation varies from 5 percent from previous years to as much as 20 percent, depending on which farmer you talk with.

Growers in the Old Belt are judging this season's markets cautiously. Trudy Early in Guilford County said that carryover leaf — high-grade tobacco from last season — is still dominating area markets and new leaf being sold may not be typical.

"Carryover leaf will typically bring better prices and the new leaf we're seeing is of high quality," she said. "Prices on primings are up 15 cents a pound, but quality is the highest we've seen in five years."

Red Cap May Aid Rape Investigation

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Campus police at East Carolina University hope that a red baseball hat will lead them to a suspect in Thursday's attack on an ECU coed.

James DePuy, ECU director of public safety, called a press conference Tuesday to show the best lead police have so far — a red corduroy baseball hat with a Snowshoe logo across the front. DePuy said the attacker lost the hat at the scene of Thursday's assault in a parking lot at the corner of Fifth and Reade streets.

Snowshoe is a ski resort in West Virginia. DePuy said the hat is not common for the area, and could help lead to the attacker.

"It was a big break," DePuy said about finding the hat at the scene.

"Under the circumstances, it was a blessing."

DePuy said ECU police had the hat analyzed by the State Bureau of Investigation for any traces of hair or blood that could link a suspect with the attack.

DePuy and Capt. John Burrus of the campus police said the description of Thursday's attacker was similar to the description of a man responsible for three rapes in the city this summer. But both men cautioned that the description was the only similarity between the assault and the three rapes.

Police are looking for a black man, approximately 6-feet tall, weighing 180 to 190 pounds with a muscular build. Descriptions of the man say he has a medium complexion with close cut hair. He was wearing acid-washed jeans and a red T-shirt during Thursday's attack, police said.

"The general description is the only thing that may link (the attacks)," Burrus said.

In the rapes, the man was waiting in a dark house for his victim, the officers said. Thursday's attack occurred in a well-lighted area at about 11:15 p.m.

The victim of Thursday's attack fought with the man, and three male students passing by the area helped chase the man away, campus police said.

DePuy asked that anyone who may have seen the man in the area call the ECU "Crimebusters" at 757-6787 or 757-6150. University police are offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the attacker.

Public School, PCC Bond Elections Planned Dec. 12

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County commissioners took another step Tuesday in the process leading to a vote on whether to issue $25.7 million in bonds for a public school building program and $10 million in bonds for construction at Pitt Community College.

Following a public hearing — at which the only comments came from a League of Women Voters representative supporting a referendum — the board adopted formal bond orders calling for the referendum to be held on Dec. 12.

Voters participating in the referendum will have the opportunity to vote separately on the proposed $25.7 million for public schools and the $10 million for the community college.

As proposed, both bond issues would be paid off over a period of 15 years, with no property tax increase needed to retire the public school bonds and only a small increase needed to retire the community college bonds.

Commissioners also adopted changes in the county's subdivision ordinance Tuesday following a public hearing at which no objections were voiced.

The subdivision ordinance amendment will allow developers greater flexibility in setting the size of lots in some cases, provided soil and drainage conditions will permit the smaller lots.

In other business, the board voted to: increase the professional and police liability insurance coverage carried by the county from $500,000 to $1 million, which will increase the premium from the present $45,502 per year to $62,201; reappoint John McConney and Robert Halstead to the Pitt County Planning Board; reappoint Spencer Hill, David Hammond, David H. Stowe and James H. Ward III to the Pitt County Development Commission; appoint Noel Baucom and Karen Hause to the mental health board; name Faye Bleicher to the Pitt Area Transit System board, and to reappoint Charles Hough and Pat Carr to terms on the Youth Services Advisory Committee.

Commissioners, who were told that the county has been approved to receive $600,000 under the Community Development Block Grant program to continue the Hanrahan redevelopment program started a year ago, also heard officials of the city of Greenville and the state Department of Transportation review the city's proposed thoroughfare plan.

Among the items included in the long-range thoroughfare plan are proposals to extend First Street along the Tar River to Memorial Drive; make Fourth and Fifth streets one-way corridors; possibly build an inner loop, and widen a number of other major streets.

The board's next meeting will be held in the District courtroom at the Ayden Town Hall, 221 West Ave., at 9 a.m. on Sept. 18.

Housing Workers Get Pay Raise

Greenville Housing Authority employees will get a pay raise Oct. 1.

The authority's board of directors approved a 4 percent raise for employees Tuesday. It also authorized a study of the pay system, to be completed by April 1990.

In other business, Housing

Authority Director Ken Noland told the board that frames for two of the five buildings in the Dubber-Laney Woods project on State Road 1204 had been erected. He also told the board the average rent for August was $130.92.

Accident Causes Spill

Firemen use foam to contain 35 gallons of gasoline spilled in an accident Tuesday afternoon at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and U.S. 13. According to Trooper John Tomer, a gasoline tanker truck driven by Albion Moore of Greenville was stopped for a red light when his truck and a tractor trailer coming up from the rear collided. The second truck was driven by Stephen Seymore of Columbia, S.C., Tower said. The force of the impact broke pipes under the fuel truck, spilling the gas. According to Walker Allen of W.L. Allen Oil Co., owners of the truck, the gas was contained at the site and did not get into the storm sewer.

Farmville Board Approves Increase In Electric Rates

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — Commissioners approved Tuesday night a 6.8 percent increase in the town's electric rates, effective with its Oct. 1 billing.

Board members said the increase will cover increases to the town from its supplier, Carolina Power & Light, of 8.5 percent Sept. 1 and another 6 percent April 1 of 1990.

There will be no increase after the April 1 increase, commissioners promised. The increase to retail customers will cover both CP&L adjustments, with the town absorbing about half of the total 14.5 percent increase.

"This kind of increase goes hard with people, especially people on fixed incomes," Commissioner Oliver Murphrey said. "I'm against it, but I don't know anything we can do but pass on some of our costs. We've always absorbed all we can and we're continuing to do this. This bothers me. It bothers me a lot."

It was announced that Farmville has received a $600,000 Community Development Block Grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The grant will be used to rehabilitate 26 houses.

Commissioners gave the go-ahead for acting town manager Dillon Watson to arrange advertising and other services related to the project so it can begin as soon as the money arrives.

Watson said that the East Group architectural firm was to give a preliminary report this morning on the town's project to expand its fire station, possibly making use of municipal building property.

There was no public input at a public hearing to consider a planning board recommendation to amend the town's subdivision ordinance to establish definition of street types and to increase the width of local streets from 28 to 30 feet.

Commissioner Marvin Speight said

Billboard Proposal Doesn't Apply Here

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Billboards in Pitt County and Greenville apparently will not be affected by a state Board of Transportation committee's recommendation against tighter outdoor advertising restrictions.

Both Pitt and Greenville already have strict rules dealing with billboards and where they may be erected, according to county and city planners.

A business that wants to put up a sign that is larger than 20 square feet in Pitt County must first submit a plan and then must prove that the business engages in bona fide commercial or industrial activities, said James Rhodes, one of Pitt County's planners. Signs smaller than 20 square feet do not fall into this ordinance, Rhodes said.

The business must be located within a certain number of feet from the sign and there are criteria that enable a business to be considered commercial, said Rhodes. In order to be commercial, the activities of that business must be visible from the highway and it must not be a transient business.

"Unless your business is out in the county, you really can't construct (a sign)," said Rhodes.

He said that four billboards out on U.S. 264 west of Greenville were put up before the county ordinance was adopted and are not affected by the regulation.

A billboard in Greenville must be located in a properly zoned area and it can only have a single pole holding it up, said Merrill Flood, the zoning administrator for Greenville. The signs are only allowed in three zones — highway commercial zones, unoffensive industrial zones and industrial zones, said Flood.

"They are required to have a maximum height of 35 feet, they must have vegetation around them and they can not be less than 300 feet from a residential zone," said Flood. "These are only a few of the requirements. The city has a very good sign ordinance and we do have some stringent requirements."

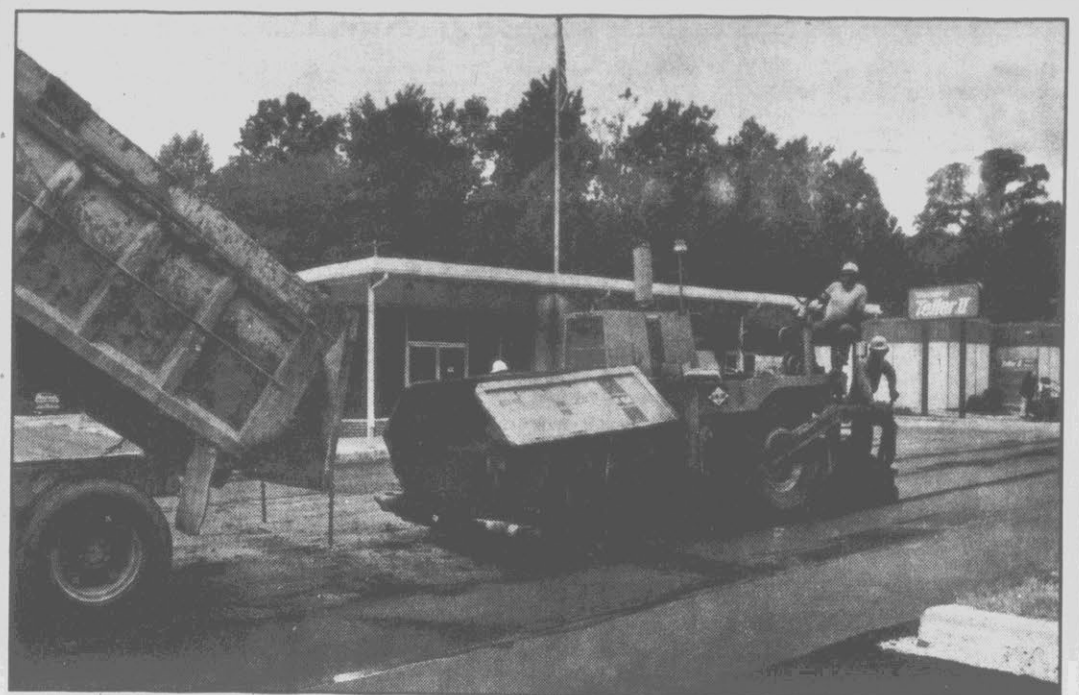

The Drivers and Owners Committee for the N.C. Board of Transportation met last week to discuss changing the requirements for billboards in unzoned areas after complaints were received from environmental groups, according to the Associated Press.

Under the present restrictions on outdoor advertising, a single business must prove that it makes more than $25,000 a year in order to be eligible to erect a sign.

"People put up sham operations to put up billboards," said Randy Doub, a Greenville lawyer and a member of the transportation board. "Then when the billboards go up, the company goes out of business. But if the present policy is properly enforced, there will be enough safeguards."

According to the news service, the committee rejected a staff proposal that would have permitted billboards only where at least three businesses exist within 1,500 feet of one another. Current regulations allow billboards in any unzoned area where at least one business is present and visible from the road.

The panel recommended, instead, that the Department of Transportation staff tighten its definition of what constitutes a business and improve enforcement techniques, the news service said.

Penny's Worth

A Right Way & A Wrong Way

There's a right way and a wrong way to conduct public business. Four of Greenville's elected officials picked the wrong way Friday when they held a last-minute emergency meeting that excluded three of six city council members.

Three council members — Lorraine Shinn, Mildred Council and Rufus Huggins — met with Mayor Ed Carter Friday in a hastily-arranged meeting. These four officials, in a closed session, "counseled" the city manager about the way he was conducting city business. Reportedly, no action was taken.

The other three council members — Inez Fridley, Nancy Jenkins and Bill Hadden — could not be reached to be told about the meeting. Hadden, out of town, had left word with city hall he would return Friday night.

While the meeting was legal, the circumstances surrounding it raise important questions about propriety.

First, what was the urgent problem that demanded an emergency meeting yet required no official action to resolve?

Second, why is what appears to be a "committee" of the city council counseling the city manager about his performance? If there is a conflict serious enough to warrant immediate action, why not wait until the entire city council can give the issue judicious consideration? When only three of six council members and the mayor hold a meeting to discuss the city manager's performance, that looks more like a rump session than a duly-authorized public meeting.

That appearance is not seemly. Neither does it represent a sound way to proceed with public business. The four elected officials that met Friday may know the legal parameters governing the actions of public boards, but they need a refresher course in propriety.

A city council should operate in an up-front manner, not in a way that prompts doubts about their actions. Its members are, after all, put in office by the votes of citizens. Those citizens deserve accountability and adherence to decorum when issues involving their tax dollars and their government are at stake. They got scarce more than a penny's worth of either from the meeting Friday.

First, what was the urgent problem that demanded an emergency meeting yet required no official action to resolve?

To the editor:

I was very disturbed on returning from my vacation in Michigan to find that the Mayor had called a special executive session of the council last Friday at noon, the day before the Labor Day weekend. I had informed the mayor's office and administration that I would be out of town and would return Friday evening, Sept. 1. This meeting was scheduled to meet a few hours before my arrival home.

1. It made me very uncomfortable that not only I, but two other members of the council, Mrs. Fridley and Mrs. Jenkins, were not informed of this meeting, either.

2. There was nothing so urgent for such action that could not have been handled by the full council at the following Tuesday night meeting.

3. An executive session, in most instances, is not covered by written minutes. This means that one half of the council was left in the dark as to the substance of the meeting.

4. This emergency meeting was probably a legal one — but it was on the boundary.

I do hope the Mayor will reconsider such actions in the future. We have heavy questions to solve such as the Police Department problems, the nutrient-free Pamlico basin question and others. It is important that the entire city council be involved in these matters.

To the editor:

I read the editorial concerning adult illiteracy with special interest since I am a middle school language arts teacher. What a tragedy and hardship it is for those adults who can't read well enough to buy medicine, function at work or read a bedtime story to their children. Another group exists, however, that should concern us during Literacy Week — school children who are on their way to being functionally illiterate adults. For example, seventh and eighth graders who read on a fourth, fifth or even sixth grade level are unlikely to develop enough skills by the time they graduate from high school to be considered functionally literate.

Why is this? Certainly it isn't because they haven't had capable teachers, enough materials and ample class time devoted to reading, language, spelling and writing skills. Perhaps a large part of these students' lack of success is due to lack of practice. Skills must be practiced in order to develop. Simply put, students need to read more outside of school as well as to complete all homework and studying assignments. I urge all parents of students from first grade through high school to establish a family reading time in addition to a structured study time and to insist that their children read or have read to them books, magazines and newspapers as well as complete every class assignment.

If preventive measures are begun now during Literacy Week, the problem of adult functional illiteracy in the future will not be as bad as it is today.

To the editor:

Newspapers across the State report the former State Democratic Party Chairman Betty McCain will announce soon whether she will seek nomination to oppose Senator Jesse Helms in November 1990. Quoting Mrs. McCain: "You've got to have money to run against Jesse Helms. He is a fundraising machine."

Indeed Jesse has a fund raising machine. Yet Helms has had less money to actually spend politically than many candidates, including opponents.

Jesse Helms has no powerful labor unions with huge treasuries and with dues-paying organized "volunteer workers"; no industries which seek his election so as to have a voice in the Senate. Jesse Helms must rely on individual citizens for financial support as well as for precinct work.

Helms must reach hundreds of thousands of citizens who might contribute. This must be done by letters. Most letters mailed by fund-raisers get no contributions whether for cancer research, for environmental protection or for any other cause. The Associated Press reports that Helms raised $1,076,006 in the first half of 1989, but cleared only $158,556. Seeking contributions by mail is expensive. By contrast, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., raised $1,034,778 in the same time and cleared $1,023,450. Sen. Biden has both labor unions and industries which fill his treasury at little cost.

One citizen can contribute to a candidate a maximum of $2,000. According to my memory, there were about a score of such contributors to Helms in the 1984 election. If contributions to Jesse Helms re-election averaged $20 or even $50, there must have been a great host Helms supporters. That is why Jesse Helms has been elected three times to the Senate in spite of there being three times as many registered Democrats as there are Republicans.

Why The Democrats Are In Ericksdahl, Texas

WASHINGTON — If you want to find the House Democratic leadership this weekend, the place to look is Ericksdahl, Texas. You may have trouble locating the town, because it doesn't have a post office and it's not in the atlas. But out in west Texas' Jones County, about 50 miles north of Abilene, there's a place with a Lutheran church, a cotton gin and a grain elevator. That's Ericksdahl.

Once a year, more than 1,000 people descend on Ericksdahl for the annual Fun Day of its most celebrated native son, Rep. Charles W. Stenholm (D-Texas). This year, the crowd will include House Speaker Thomas S. Foley (D-Wash.) and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt (D-Mo.).

It's not all fun and games. Charley Stenholm, an 11-year veteran of the House, is among other things the chairman of the Conservative Democratic Forum, better known as the Boll Weevil caucus. It has 48 members and another 15 who attend its meetings without formally affiliating. And with no Southerner in the House Democratic leadership for the first time in memory, Foley and Gephardt will go a long ways to cultivate their conservative brethren from Dixie.

In the first eight months of 1989, the House Democrats presented a relatively unified picture to the world. Despite the disruption following the forced resignations of Speaker Jim Wright (D-Texas) and Majority Whip Tony Coelho (D-Calif.), there were relatively few policy issues on which Southern Democrats and Northern Democrats went off in opposite directions. Fewer than two dozen roll-calls — about one out of eight — produced the kind of regional and philosophical Democratic divisions which once were commonplace.

But those roll-calls involved some of the most troubled issues in American politics. Among them were school prayer, drug testing, housing discrimination, budget priorities (space exploration vs. housing and the environment), the minimum wage for all workers and the "prevailing wage" for employees of government contractors, aid to the contras and to El Salvador and a whole series of defense spending questions. In the Pentagon budget battles, Northern Democrats and Southern Democrats took opposing stands on funding or slashing the Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars), the Stealth bomber, the MX mobile missile, the Midgetman missile, development of a successor to the Lance short-range missile and preparations for ending nuclear tests.

The defense battles recalled one of the key issues in the 1988 presidential campaign, with Northern Democrats voting to slash or end programs criticized by nominee Michael Dukakis and the Southern Democrats voting to preserve programs favored by President Bush.

Although the Southern Democrats sometimes were able to produce as few as 40 votes in opposition to a majority of the Northern Democrats, and never more than 75, they were a vital part of the "conservative coalition." Of the 23 roll-calls where the majority of Republicans and the majority of Southern Democrats lined up together against the majority of Northern Democrats, the "conservative coalition" triumphed 18 times and lost only five. That high percentage of victories enabled Bush to prevail on many issues where he otherwise would have been defeated in the House.

When Stenholm is asked if the pattern of the past few months suggests the re-emergence of the "conservative coalition" as the controlling force in the House, he says: "We haven't had that many opportunities, but you're seeing some of it." Is it being orchestrated by the White House? "We have excellent communications," Stenholm says. "George Bush is my longtime friend."

He is quick to add that he and his colleagues are not out to embarrass the new House leadership — or to kick down the Democratic barn. "They (Foley, Gephardt and new Majority Whip William H. Gray III) have been extremely receptive," Stenholm says. "It's as close a relationship as I can remember."

Gephardt, in a separate interview, argues that the situation is "a lot different from 1981," when Reagan regularly enlisted scores of Southern Democrats and took control of the House on many issues away from Speaker Tip O'Neill (D-Mass.). "We've developed a way for there to be real consultation and discussion with our more conservative members within the caucus," Gephardt says.

But Gephardt concedes that, "Since 1981, the South has continued to change. People are switching (parties) and there's a concern it's becoming more Republican. Certainly it's a more competitive situation." Just last week, another Southern district, this one in Florida, switched to the GOP in a special election.

Stenholm makes the same point — in a more barbed fashion. "We bring a message to the leadership and the party — not in a threatening way but in a way we think is helpful: We are a minority, and we can be ignored or run over. But you have difficulty winning without us. The people we represent have been leaving the national Democratic Party in droves. We don't want them to leave the congressional party, too."

That's why Foley and Gephardt are taking time to find their way to Ericksdahl, Texas.

Bingo Ruling

RALEIGH (AP) — Bingo is still bingo no matter how promoters spell it, the state Court of Appeals ruled.

A three-judge panel upheld a lower court ruling that games operated by IRF Inc. for two Durham charities are bingo, even though the company called them a "charity sales promotion." The court said the games violate the state's bingo laws.

"It is the character of an activity which determines what it really is, not what the parties choose to call it," Judge Charles Becton wrote.

In the promotion for the Animal Protection Society of Durham and the Durham Council of the Blind, bingo cards were given to people who paid $5 for a 19-cent plastic comb or $1 for a one-cent peppermint candy, the court said. People who did not buy combs or peppermints also could get cards, but not as many as those who made purchases.

"The evidence before us unequivocally shows that bingo, not combs and candies, was the product promoted," Becton wrote.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Saying they wanted to be among the first to open their books to the public, officials with a foundation connected with the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill released its tax return and list of donors.

"We believe in openness and freedom of speech and open government and sunshine laws and all that stuff," journalism school Dean Richard Cole said Tuesday. He said UNC system President C.D. Spangler's recent recommendations to address academic problems in athletic programs should apply equally to all foundations, not just those involved with athletics.

The foundation has about $3.4 million and this year is budgeting $154,000 for purposes ranging from academic scholarships and awards to postage and printing.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Divers found the body of a Kannapolis teen-ager in a rock quarry west of Mooresville, where he and two friends had gone Sunday to spray paint their names on quarry walls.

Johnny Lewis, 19, drowned about 6:30 p.m. Sunday after falling from a steep cliff into the deep water, authorities said.

Banks Cashing In On Consumer Loans As State Prospers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Banks across the state are attempting to cash in on the prosperity being enjoyed by consumers by stepping up their marketing of consumer loans.

"Consumer lending has been a steady business," said Fritz Elmendorf, vice president for the Washington-based Consumer Bankers Association. "We have gone through a period of prosperity, and the consumer is feeling good about borrowing more money."

For years, banks have depended on consumer loans to generate profits. At most of the state's smaller banks, those loans make up about 40 percent all loans. At major banks, such as NCNB, consumer loans make up about one-third of all loans.

"Consumer banking is growing by leaps and bounds," said Flora Phillips, a senior vice president in Raleigh for First Union National Bank. "We see it becoming just as important as the commercial side of banking."

Hugh McColl Jr., chairman of NCNB Corp., has said he expects that over the next few years NCNB's biggest loan growth will stem from serving consumers. That's a big change for the South's largest bank, which traditionally has depended on making loans to businesses.

Even smaller banks are finding consumer loans are enjoying a new-found popularity.

In March, First Citizens Bank launched its first advertising campaign in more than 10 years aimed at attracting loans. The campaign, called "Move to Greener Pastures" focuses largely on building the bank's consumer loans and deposits. On an annual basis, First Citizens' volume of consumer loans has grown 30 percent this year.

At Branch Banking and Trust Co. in Wilson, growth in consumer loans is outpacing growth in commercial loans, Kenneth Chalk, a senior executive vice president, said in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Likewise, comparing 1988 to 1987, the rate of growth in consumer loans at Durham-based Central Carolina Bank was four times the rate of growth in commercial loans.

Consumer loans typically are used to help customers buy a wide range of items and services, from boats and cars to college educations and even orthodontist work. Home equity and credit card loans also make up a big portion of consumer lending.

The big appeal among bankers for consumer loans is their interest rates, analysts said. Most rates for consumer loans are not tied to the prime rate — the rate of interest charged by a bank to its best and biggest commercial customers — and most bankers set rates for those loans regardless of what the prime rate is. By comparison, interest rates on commercial loans are tied to the prime rate.

Recently, the prime rate has been declining, giving bankers a bigger incentive to push consumer loans, analysts said. As of Friday, the prime was 10.5 percent.

"The vast majority of the commercial loans are prime-based, so with a higher percentage of consumer loans, banks are less subject to having to re-price their loans," said Anthony Davis, an analyst with Wheat, First Securities Inc. in Richmond, Va.

"The (profit) margins on consumer loans hold up whereas that's not always the case with commercial loans," Davis said.

Bankers, however, deny the reason they push consumer loans is that their rates are higher than those on commercial loans. They say consumer loans have higher rates because it costs more to service a consumer loan than a commercial loan.

Last year, rates on consumer loans offered by North Carolina's biggest banks were at least one percentage point higher than rates on loans for businesses and commercial real estate loans. Credit-card loans, the most profitable for bankers, have rates that are capped by North Carolina law at 18 percent.

"Obviously the draw here is profitability," said Gerard O'Meara, an analyst with The Robinson-Humphrey Co. in Atlanta.

Another reason bankers have put a new emphasis on consumer loans is that opportunities to make loans in two other major lending areas — commercial and real estate — are becoming highly competitive, and even drying up.

To step up their efforts to focus on consumer banking, some banks have reorganized their operations, assigning more lenders to call on customers. Some have started ambitious advertising campaigns, while others have introduced new services from checking accounts to loan programs.

Other banks also have management structures that lend an important focus on consumers. At First Union, Phillips oversees consumer banking for most of Eastern North Carolina. And BB&T reorganized its entire operations earlier this year, a move designed to help emphasize consumer banking.

Still, some banks say they made few new efforts to push consumer banking. Richard Furr, executive vice president at CCB, said most of the new services being introduced by bigger banks have long been offered by the Durham bank.

Wachovia Bank and Trust in Winston-Salem, best known for its role as a corporate banker and for its trust services for consumers, said it is putting little new emphasis on consumer banking. Even so, the bank has introduced several new services in the last year, such as one that provides consumers with information on their accounts over the telephone.

Most of the new consumer services are targeted at affluent customers, bankers said. With pressure from consumer groups, some banks have begun offering low-cost checking accounts, but few banks have launched any massive marketing programs targeted at low-income customers.

Mobil Pledges Full Spill Protection On Coast

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Saying they might find the largest natural gas field discovered in the United States since 1968, officials with Mobil Oil Corp. said they would do all they can to prevent damaging the environment while drilling off Cape Hatteras.

Officials from the oil company on Tuesday unveiled their plans for the test well and proposals on how they would respond to a spill.

"Given offshore exploration's record of environmental protection, the real risk is to turn our backs on what could be the biggest new find of natural gas in this country since 1968," said Jim Martin, Mobil's project director for the project.

Martin said "not one drop of crude oil" has been spilled from nearly 8,000 test wells drilled in American waters.

But in case of an accident, he said equipment would be on hand.

"For the first time in the history of offshore exploration, we're going to station a fully-manned and equipped clean-up vessel at the well site from start-to-finish of our drilling operations," Martin said.

Martin said back-up ships, equipment and trained crews would also be available from a proposed base in Morehead City.

Mobil has submitted a 1,500-page draft proposal to federal officials and the state, outlining its plans for the test well off Cape Hatteras and how it plans to respond in case of a spill.

Martin said if a final proposal is accepted by state and federal officials in January, the company could begin drilling May 1.

Donna Moffitt, director of the state's Outer Continental Shelf Office, said state officials had no immediate response to the proposal.

"Because the document is so large, state agencies have not yet had an opportunity to thoroughly review Mobil's proposal," she said. "We will be looking to the public, state environmental agencies and experts in the academic community to help review the plan and to provide comments."

Company officials said the chances of finding a commercially producible field were small, although they considered the odds better than average in comparison to other exploratory wells.

"This could conceivably be the biggest natural gas find in the United States since Prudhoe Bay (Alaska) in 1968," said Michael Kimmitt, spokesman for Mobil's exploration branch in Dallas, Texas. "That amount of natural gas is worth going after."

"Our geologists say the chances of finding natural gas are one-in-10," Martin said. "The chances of finding oil are one-in-100. If we don't find commercial quantities of natural gas or oil, Mobil won't do any more drilling out there."

Lark Hayes, director of the Southern Environmental Law Center, a Chapel Hill firm that represents several conservation groups in the state, said environmentalists were particularly concerned about the onshore effects that could result if Mobil made a large discovery.

"The analysis of cost and benefits, from our viewpoint, must include the onshore development impacts," Ms. Hayes said. "And I'll be interested to see whether they've included that in their conclusion that overall risks and harm would be reduced by a major find."

Meanwhile, the Hyde County Board of Commissioners voted Tuesday to ban any activity on Ocracoke Island that supports drilling for oil and natural gas off the Outer Banks.

Dare County, which includes Hatteras Island and the Nags Head area, already has taken similar action.

The unanimous Hyde County vote came shortly before Mobile Oil unveiled its drilling plan. The board voted to change the Ocracoke portion of its county land use plan to restrict oil-related development on the island. The change must be approved by the Coastal Resources Commission.

Martin said the well will be drilled in 2,690 feet of water and is expected to reach 14,000 feet deep. He said the drilling will be done by a special ship, and no drilling platform will be required.

State officials had insisted on a full environmental impact statement for the test well, which Mobil and federal officials said was not necessary.

But in an agreement signed in July, Mobil agreed to submit its draft plan now and not submit a final request for a drilling permit before Jan. 18, 1990.

Public meetings on the draft plan are scheduled for October in Wilmington, Greenville, Elizabeth City and Buxton.

Martin Says He'll Recall Legislators Sept. 21 To Deal With Waste Accord

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The month after the General Assembly ended its longest session in history, Gov. Jim Martin said he intends to call the body back to consider a regional hazardous waste agreement.

Lawmakers would be called into session Sept. 21 to consider the waste agreement if it is adopted by representatives from eight Southern states, Martin said. The representatives meet Sept. 15 to develop a final agreement.

The preliminary agreement calls for North Carolina to develop a 40,000-ton hazardous waste incinerator, which would accept wastes from other states. The residue from the incinerator would be buried at existing landfills in South Carolina and Alabama.

"If our General Assembly says yes, we will go ahead and sign the agreement," Martin said. "If it says no, the other states will sign and we will have to find another way to deal with the waste," Martin told the Council of State during an early morning meeting.

Martin said the regional agreement, which has been under negotiation since early this year, would allow the state to build only the incinerator, not an entire treatment complex. That will be better for the state in the long run, he said.

"Certainly, there will be people who don't think we should offer an incinerator in North Carolina," Martin said. But he said the reaction would be the same no matter what kind of facility the state takes.

"It is clear that while people do like the benefits of the textile industry, the furniture industry, the electronics industry ... and don't object to locating such facilities, they have a different reaction when it comes to the byproducts of those industries," Martin said.

The state's negotiators have shown "quite a lot of diplomatic brilliance in dealing with our neighboring states," Martin said.

But Bill Holman, a lobbyist for the Conservation Council of North Carolina and the Sierra Club, said he hoped to develop alternatives for lawmakers to consider during the special legislative session, which is expected to last one or two days.

"The regional agreement assumes that the landfills in South Carolina and Alabama will stay open," Holman said. "Given the strong opposition in those states, I don't know if that is true."

Holman said his group wants waste reduction as the top priority, while the agreement addresses only treatment and disposal.

States that do not certify that they have the capacity to handle their hazardous wastes by Oct. 17 face the loss of federal Superfund money, a factor that Holman said might make his alternatives less attractive.

"I admit I have an uphill argument," he said.

Tuesday's session was billed as a briefing for legislative leaders, but the only legislator to show up was Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke. Two other legislators sent representatives and three called to say they support a special session and a regional agreement.

DeVane warned that the state of Mississippi would need to strengthen its proposal if legislators are to approve the agreement. Mississippi has agreed to increase its share of energy recovery from hazardous wastes, but nothing in incineration, treatment of liquid wastes or storage of wastes.

"I think it's very important that they come up with another proposition," DeVane said. "I don't believe it can pass the way it stands right now."

Darrell Hinnant of the Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission said his agency estimates that North Carolina will produce about 27,000 tons of waste for incineration by the year 2009. Adding the state's share of wastes generated in other states comes to about 40,000 tons, he said.

Martin and House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, had indicated that veto power for the governor also might be raised at the special session, but Martin said he does not intend to resurrect the issue now.

"It would be my thought that a special session should be called for that issue (hazardous wastes) ... and not for other subjects," Martin said. "The veto ... could be taken up, but it is my feeling that it could overly prolong that extra session."

"I have had other legislators asking for other issues to be put on the agenda, but I am not disposed to do that at this time," he said.

Judge Bars Four Attorneys From Representing Hatcher

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUMBERTON, N.C. — A Superior Court judge barred four attorneys from representing accused hostage-taker Eddie Hatcher in a raucous hearing that saw Hatcher order one lawyer to leave the room.

New York civil rights lawyer William Kunstler, two other out-of-state attorneys and a Chapel Hill lawyer could not represent Hatcher at Tuesday's arraignment because they had not properly completed required paperwork, said Judge Robert Farmer.

Farmer also barred Barry Nakell, a law professor at the University of North Carolina, from representing Hatcher, saying he had appointed a public defender to the case.

Farmer delayed the hearing until today at 9:30 a.m.

Hatcher is facing 14 counts of kidnapping stemming from a hostage-taking incident at The Robesonian newspaper on Feb. 1, 1988. Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs said they took the action to publicize their allegations of drug-related corruption within local law enforcement agencies and the county's judicial system.

They held about 20 people hostage for 10 hours before setting them free, unharmed. The two said they were not guilty because they took the action to keep from being killed.

The two were tried on federal charges and acquitted in October 1988. A state grand jury indicted them on kidnapping charges in December.

Jacobs pleaded guilty and was sentenced to six years in prison. Hatcher has continued to fight the charges.

Kunstler, Ron Kuby and Stephanie Moore came from New York City to represent Hatcher, saying they had been given permission by Judge Dexter Brooks last winter after filing a motion.

But Judge Farmer told the attorneys that no counsel of record had been listed other than public defender Angus Thompson.

Hatcher was assigned Thompson, whom he fired almost immediately. He yelled out in the courtroom that the situation was part of a set-up.

"The way it's looking, I don't have any counsel at all, your honor," Hatcher said. "It looks like you don't have any respect for Judge Brooks ruling."

Hatcher then accused the judge of being part of a set-up.

Pentagon Says Iowa Blast Still Unsolved

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Navy is unable to cite a specific reason for the explosion that killed 47 sailors aboard the USS Iowa, and is expected to point only to the "probability" that human intervention could have caused the tragedy, Defense Department officials say.

Three Navy admirals — including the service's No. 2 man — are slated to release the report Thursday.

The study wraps up the investigation into the April 19 explosion in the battleship's No. 2 gun turret, which occurred during open seas gunnery practice near Puerto Rico.

Defense Department officials, speaking privately, say the report is not expected to point to a single cause of the blast. Investigators were hampered by the fact that no eyewitnesses survived.

"There is no specific cause cited," said one official, who spoke on condition his name not be used. "It's very complicated, and the report goes into a considerable amount of detail. It's very complex."

Another official, who also spoke on background, said the report "cites a probability" that human action, calculated or otherwise, could have caused the explosion.

"When they can't find a mechanical reason in an investigation, they look to see whether there was a human factor involved," the second official said.

That official said investigators tried to look at all the circumstances that could have led to the explosion, but that none appears to have been the overriding reason for the disaster.

The Naval Investigative Service launched a criminal investigation into the allegations of murder and sabotage, but failed to come up with any solid conclusions, and will instead provide a summary of the evidence compiled through interviews, statements and other research, the official said.

The official said the report will show a number of "lapses in procedures," involving maintenance and the certification of sailors to operate the ship's complex guns.

But such problems were discounted as the primary causes of the explosion, both officials said.

At his daily briefing, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said the 1,100-page report will be discussed by the Vice Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Leon Edney and the investigating officer, Rear Adm. Richard Milligan at a formal Pentagon briefing Thursday.

"It will be a very thorough briefing," Williams said.

The two admirals will be joined by the head of the NIS, Rear Adm. William Schachte.

The long-awaited study has been the subject of much speculation, including numerous television and newspaper reports.

Officially, the Navy has withheld comment on the investigation, as reports contended investigators were looking into the possibility that suicide or murder was involved in the explosion.

Protester Enters Restricted Area

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARTFORD, Conn. — A nuclear-weapons protester said she was able to swim unnoticed into a top-secret Navy research center and beat on a Trident-missile-firing submarine with a hammer before she was arrested.

Jacqueline Allen, 24, of Volun-town, discussed the Labor Day attack on the moored USS Pennsylvania after an appearance Tuesday in U.S. District Court, where she and six others were charged with trespassing on Navy property and with destruction of government property.

They were released by a magistrate after signing promises to appear in court to face the charges.

Allen said the protesters wanted to send a message to the Navy that "these weapons don't make us secure and you can't secure the weapons."

Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., said the incident raises "grave questions about security at the underwater systems center."

"From a political standpoint, you wouldn't want to equate an act of protest with an act of sabotage. From a security standpoint, however, the fact that protesters could actually climb up on a nuclear sub at a naval installation suggests the potential for far more serious mischief."

Study Says Pill Doesn't Raise Risk Of Breast Cancer In Middle Ages

By Daniel Q. Haney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Researchers found reassuring evidence that birth control pills haven't raised the breast cancer risk for middle-age women. Now, they are starting a major new study to see if that's true for a younger generation.

Birth control pills became available in the early 1960s, and women now in their mid-40s and 50s typically began using the pill when they were in their mid-20s or beyond.

Since then, however, millions of American women have begun taking the pill while still in their teens.

Troubling data has begun to emerge that these people may be at substantially higher than usual risk of breast cancer.

"It really becomes very important to either refute that or substantiate it in a clear way, since that kind of use is routine for a large number of women," said Dr. Walter Willett of the Harvard School of Public Health.

"If there is such a risk and it continues throughout life, that's a major problem."

Willett and his colleagues began mailing questionnaires this week to about 500,000 nurses across the United States between ages 25 and 42.

That study will be called the Nurses' Health Study II, and is a successor to a survey of 118,273 female nurses between ages 30 and 55 that began in 1976.

Experts say the results of the first nurses study are reassuring for women now approaching menopause.

"Past use of oral contraceptives does not appear to increase the risk of breast cancer for women in their mid-40s and 50s," said Willett.

The new study is the largest of a series of reports this year that have provided conflicting evidence about the possible role of the pill in triggering breast cancer.

Breast cancer, according to the American Cancer Society, will kill an estimated 43,000 people this year and follows lung cancer as the leading cancer killer of American women.

Some doctors worry that taking the pill during the early reproductive years may somehow increase the risk. Others note that the amount and ratio of sex hormones in birth control pills have changed since their introduction in the early 1960s, and this might also have made the pill more hazardous.

"The epidemiologists are all confused, myself included," commented Dr. Samuel Shapiro of Boston University's Sloan Epidemiology Unit.

Shapiro was a co-author of a study of pill users under age 45. Among those who took oral contraceptives for 10 years or more, the risk of breast cancer was increased four times.

A study from University Hospital in Lund, Sweden, found that women who took the pill while teen-agers in the 1960s have about five times the usual risk of breast cancer before they reach menopause.

An Oxford University study of women under age 35 who had been early pill users found a 74 percent increase in the breast cancer risk after eight years.

"Our study does not directly contradict those studies," said Willett. "It raises an element of doubt about them, but there is no strong refutation, because it's possible that the effects really are different in very young women."

The newly released Harvard study was published in today's issue of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute. Willett said the massive amount of data collected provides "a very clear and reassuring answer to the women of the age of those participating in the study."

Forty-eight percent of the women had used oral contraceptives. While 1,799 of the total participants developed breast cancer, there was no difference in the cancer rate between those who had taken the pill and those who did not.

The study found about a 50 percent increase in the risk among women who took the pill after age 40.

CHILDREN FROM FIRST MARRIAGES

Striking a workable balance requires that couples continually communicate about control and territorial issues, as well as attempt to cooperatively establish clear boundaries between ex-spouses. This is a task that many did not accomplish well in their first marriages, and it worsens as more parties become involved.

Several important guidelines to consider are:

- Be open with one's spouse about conflicts as they arise; talking things through before a gap develops.
- Don't try to conceal differences in child-rearing strategies; work them through.
- Establish clear rules and expectations for the household that all minor children need to follow, to avoid the appearance of "playing favorites".
- The assistance of an experienced family counselor may help to identify areas of conflict before they become unmanageable.

Nancy Says Education Is The Key

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Nancy Reagan, who launched an anti-drug effort during her eight years as first lady, said education remains the key in fighting drug abuse.

She also told a women's conference Tuesday that her "Just Say No" campaign produced positive results.

"They talk about Colombia and how terrible it is, which it is. But they don't talk about the fact that at the lower age levels there has been progress made," she said hours before President Bush unveiled his $7.9 billion plan to attack drug abuse.

"I'd like to think that was a little bit due to the work that we did."

Mrs. Reagan said education may be the "long way around" to conquer drug abuse, but it is necessary.

"I think we have to take the customer away from the drug. We can only do that through education," she said.

Recently, U.S. attention has focused on violence sweeping through Colombia because of the recent crackdown on cocaine traffickers. Colombia's efforts were started after the assassination of a presidential candidate opposed to the drug trade.

"They have to realize that, yes, there may be the cartels in Colombia, or wherever. And it's sometimes easier to talk about that than it is about the fellow on the corner who you can arrest or the Wall Street broker who's dealing or using."

"Yes, the cocaine may be foreign-grown but the users are homegrown," she said.

Mrs. Reagan also talked about her years in the White House during the speech to the Southern California Conference on Women.

"Everything is larger than life, the highs are higher ... by the same token, the lows are lower," she said of life on Pennsylvania Avenue.

After moving from Washington back to California, "I was exhausted for a month," Mrs. Reagan said.

Study Says Tax Deferrals 'Cruel Hoax'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Many Americans should avoid tax-deferred savings plans such as IRAs because they merely shift income to a time when they'll be subject to higher tax rates, a private research group says.

Many middle-income retirees "are discovering their marginal tax rate is up to four times higher than the rate they paid while working," the National Center for Policy Analysis, a non-profit group based in Dallas, said in a report released Tuesday.

"For many people, the promise of tax-deferred savings is a cruel hoax," the study said.

Many retirees are worse off because they put their savings in IRAs rather than ordinary savings accounts, the study said, adding that many younger people also would be better off avoiding tax-deferred savings programs, which include IRAs and 401Ks.

The higher tax rates for the elderly exist because some Social Security benefits now are taxed and some elderly people pay a new surtax for Medicare coverage against catastrophic illnesses, the report said.

"These two taxes combined can raise the marginal tax rates of elderly retirees as much as 37 percentage points," said Aldona Robbins, a former Treasury Department economist and a coauthor of the study.

For example, an elderly widow with $24,000 of income from interest, dividends and a pension in addition to her Social Security benefits faces a 1989 marginal tax rate of 48.3 percent on income from savings, the study said. Without the Social Security and Medicare taxes, she would be in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket.

"The value of IRAs, company pensions and other tax-deferred savings has been severely eroded for about 60 percent of today's workers" by the two taxes, the group said.

The report warned that the higher tax rates for the elderly jeopardize the nation's ability to stimulate the personal savings needed to fuel investment in the U.S. economy and increase productivity.

"Under the current system, about $70 billion per year is deposited into tax-deferred savings by younger people not yet aware that they are deferring taxes to the time when they will be facing the highest marginal tax rates," the study said. "Once this fact is widely known, the effect on saving in the U.S. will be devastating."

Street Dealers Say Cocaine Will Stay Strong

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Along Blue Hill Avenue, where crack dealers openly sell their wares and women stake out corners to sell their bodies for drugs, cynicism was rampant as President Bush announced his $7.9 billion plan to fight drugs.

"It won't make any difference down here," said E.Z. Ty, 21, who interrupted a conversation on a dingy corner in the Roxbury neighborhood to say he sells crack.

"Drugs is very heavy down here. And you know why? McDonald's doesn't pay anything. Cocaine is here to stay. It's not going anywhere."

While he spoke, Ty, who wore heavy gold jewelry around his neck, reached under his sweatshirt to flash a chrome-plated revolver stuck in his waistband.

"It's bull," added 29-year-old Ronald Gardner, who said he uses and sells drugs. "They're not going to get rid of it. No way."

Farther up the avenue of dirty vacant lots and boarded up storefronts, two members of the Humboldt Raiders gang, which police said is known for drug dealing, declared Bush's anti-drug plan pointless. The two wore fancy sweatsuits and heavy gold medallions.

"I think it's crazy," said Huckleberry Ross, 18. "They ought to go right to Colombia and do something. It won't do any good to get rid of it here. You won't keep the gangs from selling it."

Ross' friend and fellow gang member, 19-year-old Tyrone Stevens, said the White House should focus on providing more educational opportunities for blacks to help keep them away from drugs.

"They say they're going to spend money to fight drugs but at the same time they're taking money out of our public schools," said Stevens, referring to the recent closure of several Boston public schools. "We can't get no education so we all do what we know best — try and make money off drugs."

Three young boys walking down Blue Hill Avenue who said they run drugs for dealers were as pessimistic as the others.

"The gangsters all want to make money, it's bad," said Jerry Tyler, 14. "The only way they (the Bush administration) will do any good is to pay them off with more money."

About a mile down the street, 37-year-old Billy Bush sat among a group of men outside a convenience store and questioned the president's plan.

"There ain't nothing he can do about the ghetto," said the occasional sandblaster who acknowledged being a cocaine and heroin user. "He can't win. There's 10 times more crack down here than heroin. They stopped heroin a little bit but they'll never stop crack."

As he spoke, he gestured to a young woman standing on a nearby corner waving at cars.

"See, women in the ghetto are selling themselves for base," he said. "Blacks are suffering because they're strung out on base. There ain't nothing these guys can do. They can't infiltrate the ghetto."

The conversation ended abruptly when an incoherent friend of his approached and tussled with an AP photographer, tearing her strobe light from her grasp and running away.

Activists Disappointed After Meeting On AZT Prices

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Activists who met with officials from Burroughs Wellcome Co. to plea for a drop in the cost of the AIDS drug AZT say they were disappointed with the results of the meeting.

"What Burroughs Wellcome offered was nothing," said Peter Staley, a representative of a New York AIDS support group called ACT UP, as he left the two-hour meeting at a Research Triangle Park hotel. "We were promised substance and got none. We came away disappointed."

A spokesman for Burroughs

Wellcome said the company had agreed to meet with the activists to listen to their concerns. But any decision to change the price of the drug would not be made at such a meeting. W. "Thack" Brown said.

"I think Burroughs Wellcome has had a social responsibility from the beginning," Brown said. "Yes, we have a social obligation, and yes, we meet it."

A Z T, also known as azidothymidine, is the only AIDS drug approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration for about 40,000 people in the United States who are seriously ill with AIDS. Recent studies, however, have shown it can offer some protection to nearly 600,000 more people who are infected with the AIDS virus but are not yet seriously ill.

The drug costs between $7,000 and $8,000 for a year's supply of full doses.

AIDS activists long have criticized the drug's price, saying it keeps the drug out of reach for people who have no health insurance and cannot afford it. Staley was one of four people arrested in April for sneaking into Burroughs Wellcome's U.S. headquarters in Research Triangle Park and taking over an office.

Charges against the four men were dismissed when their organization paid the pharmaceutical maker $9,180 for damages.

But the company has faced more widespread questions in recent weeks as policymakers have begun to estimate the price tag for buying enough AZT for 600,000 people who might need it.

"We have long been discouraged by the high cost of the drug, which limits its use among the most needy and discourages support by third-party payers," said a letter signed by 16 AIDS support groups, from New York to California, and sent to Burroughs Wellcome last week.

"Now that the evidence suggests a vastly expanded need for the drug, these problems are greatly amplified," Brown said he could not comment on news reports estimating that Burroughs Wellcome's profit margin on AZT was 80 percent.

Any revenues from AZT, he said, would be used to recover costs of research and development of not only AZT but also the company's "entire research program."

Studies have shown the drug is equally effective at a lower dose that could cost closer to $3,300 a year.

Even at the lower dose, however, the total price tag for 600,000 people would be close to $2 billion.

AIDS activists say such a high price could discourage Congress from renewing a government program that buys AZT for AIDS patients who cannot afford it and otherwise could die. That program is due to expire at the end of September.

"We are facing a mounting crisis because of the high cost of AIDS health care, part of which is due to the high price of Retrovir," said the letter sent by the AIDS support groups. "Thus, the cost of a continued high price must be measured not only in dollars, but in lives."

said she has yet to be informed of the contents of Friday's meeting. She also said the flap over the meeting was an attempt to divert attention from the substantial issue of the meeting.

"Maybe (Carter's) clutching at a straw to divert attention from this event," Ms. Jenkins said.

She would not say that the meeting or counseling the city manager would become a political issue, but said, "My style of leadership would be quite different."

Carter said a decision by Ms. Fridley and the city manager to advertise the meeting held Tuesday by the wastewater treatment plant operators in the region led to Friday's meeting. And he said it was a ploy by Ms. Fridley to advertise the meeting as a council activity and a ploy to support Ms. Jenkins' bid for election.

Carter also included Hadden in his statements for "making an issue out of nothing."

"It is obvious that (Ms. Fridley) and Hadden are trying to help Nancy Jenkins," Carter said.

Carter said the upcoming election would decide the outcome of the last in-fighting among the council members.

"I think the people of Greenville are going to decide they're going to get some people on the council who will not stoop to petty games," Carter said. "I think November will decide."

Rate Increase OK'd

he believes local street width should be greater than 30 feet, at least 32. He said he thinks it should be possible for cars to be parked on both sides of a street with enough space left for a fire truck to get through. This is not possible with 28- or 30-foot-wide streets, he said.

George Wheatington of Kinston asked guidance on establishing a taxi service in Farmville. The board directed him to the acting town manager and told him that the board would have no input into his business's rates but would have to approve them if his base of operation is within the city limits.

Public hearings were set for Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m. on amendments to the town's sedimentation and erosion control ordinance and its zoning ordinance map. A hearing was also set for Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m. on a request by James W. Harrell that a 15-acre tract at the intersection of the Farmville East Thoroughfare and the Southern Railroad be rezoned from R-15, (residential with 15,000-square-foot lot size), to RA-20, (residential agricultural with 20,000 square-foot lot size).

The board accepted a bid by Herring International of Wilson for providing a two-ton cab and chassis for the utilities department. The cost of the truck is $24,388, about $150 more than a bid from a Raleigh firm, Northstate Ford. The commissioners accepted the Wilson firm's bid, they said, because they feel that service on the truck will be easier to come by in the closer city.

There was detailed discussion of fees charged by each of the town's departments and for rental of their equipment.

Board members approved rates set by the utilities and public works departments, saying they agree with the department heads' ideas that prices should be high so as to discourage the public's requesting to rent town equipment instead of going to privately run firms. They changed only one fee — rental of a backhoe, with operator, from the public works department should cost $50 an hour, they said, if the same piece of equipment's rental fee from the utilities department is that price. It was made clear that town equipment can only be rented with operators.

The commissioners said they would like to drop the $500 fee charged by the recreation department for use of baseball field for tournaments run by Farmville non-profit organizations. The fee will still be charged for-profit organizations, they said.

The board adopted a resolution authorizing the finance director to establish accounts with J.C. Bradford and Company's Greenville office and the Shearson Lehman Hutton Co. Carl Blackwood is the Bradford representative; Bill Oden, the Shearson Lehman Hutton representative.

A ordinance was passed concurring with the state regulation of the speed limit in front of the Guardian Care Nursing Home at 45 mph. The concurrence was needed because the town has recently annexed this section of road.

Bids on surplus real property being sold by the town were accepted. George C. Blount Jr. and his wife Keren M. Blount paid $8,600 for two parcels, while L.S. Willoughby paid $3,100 for another.

The board approved Mayor Edna Earle Baker's reappointment of Edith Warren to the town's tree board. They also approved her appointment of Mary Willoughby to the housing authority and Eligh Whitfield to the housing authority grievance panel.

Bush Tries To Sell Drug Plan

for harsh penalties on users as well as dealers.

Still, it would be left to the states to carry out most of Bush's recommendations targeting casual drug users, such as stiffer fines, auto seizures, drivers' license suspensions and publication of offenders' names in newspapers.

Bush also promised stronger efforts to attack drugs at their source, in South America and elsewhere.

"When requested, we will for the first time make available the appropriate resources of America's armed forces" to nations fighting drug production, he said.

In addition to his public appearances today, the president plotted out a week's worth of activities designed to promote the plan. Included are speeches on Thursday in Baltimore, Friday in New Orleans and next Tuesday in the White House — a noontime address that will be available for live broadcast to schools and libraries.

Republicans generally embraced the plan, but some Democrats said it didn't go far enough, while others complained it envisioned cuts in immigration and other programs.

"As despicable as drug dealers are, they understand economics," said Rostenkowski in urging a tax increase. "If you want to play, you've got to pay."

But Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole replied, "This is a war on drugs, not a war on the American taxpayer."

The national drug control strategy Bush unveiled calls for a $2.2 billion increase in budget authorization for the drug war in 1990, with decisions on where the money will actually come from yet to be made. Bush wants to finance the plan in part by cutting $751 million from other programs, many with strong congressional support, such as juvenile justice, housing, immigration and economic development.

"He is suggesting that we do it out of funds the Congress isn't going to cut," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

And House Speaker Thomas Foley said, "It's very difficult to assume we can, at least over the long term, meet the cost of the drug war without some additional revenue coming into the government."

Only $6.4 billion of the $7.9 billion would be spent next year, the rest held over for longer term projects such as prison construction.

Bush revealed plans to quadruple military and law enforcement aid for Colombia, Bolivia and Peru, to $261.2 million in 1990 — as a down payment on some $2 billion over the next five years.

He warned drug cartels that "the rules have changed."

The president said it "promises to be a very difficult fight" that will require "an assault on every front," at home as well as abroad.

"The war on drugs will be hard-won, neighborhood by neighborhood, block by block, child by child," he said.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market dropped sharply today amid uncertainty over the outlook for Federal Reserve policy and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 37.23 points to 2,707.45 by noon on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 7 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 282 up, 1,085 down and 448 unchanged.

Analysts said a belief was spreading among investors that the Federal Reserve was unlikely to relax its credit policy further any time soon, given a stronger-than-expected economy.

Losers among the blue chips included General Motors, down 1/8 at 49 7/8; American Telephone & Telegraph, down 3/4 at 39 1/8; Merck, down 1 1/2 at 71 1/8; McDonald's, down 1/4 at 28 3/4; and Union Carbide, down 1/4 at 29 1/4.

Pep Boys — Manny, Moe & Jack fell 1 1/2 to 13 3/4 in active trading. Late Tuesday the company reported lower earnings for the second quarter.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 2.23 to 193.61. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.18 at 382.35.

Volume on the Big Board came to 89.74 million shares at noon, up from 65.85 million at the same point Tuesday.

seemed to have been the least affected by the torrential rains that soaked North Carolina's soils this spring.

Gene Lanier in Pender County said the rains they received were generally light, and as long as he didn't lose any weight in the leaf, he believes he's got a shot at a good season.

Sales on the South Carolina and Border North Carolina Belt continued a strong trend, according to the Federal-State Tobacco Market News Service.

The weekly average of $163.63 a hundred last week was up $5.72 from the previous week.

An average of $160.87 a hundred on the Old and Middle Belt last week was also an increase — up $2.99 from the week before.

But, Parker said, this is only the beginning of flue-cured sales.

"It really is too early in the season to tell what the bottom line is going to be," he said.

Dole Speeches

DURHAM (AP) — U.S. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole will be in Durham on Dec. 7 to deliver two speeches.

Mrs. Dole will speak at the 15th annual meeting of the Durham Daycare Council. While in Durham, Mrs. Dole also will speak at the fourth annual Founder's Day convocation at Duke University.

Mrs. Dole, a native of Salisbury and a graduate of Duke University, will make her first visit to central North Carolina since she was appointed labor secretary by President George Bush in December.

Mrs. Dole, the highest-ranking woman in the Bush administration, received a bachelor's degree from Duke University and master's and law degrees from Harvard University.

CP&L Rate

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Utilities Commission on Tuesday approved a fuel-cost increase for Carolina Power & Light Co. that will add 99 cents to the monthly bill of the typical residential customer.

The increase, set to go into effect Sept. 15, is based on the cost of fuel for CP&L, said Robert H. Bennink, general counsel for the Utilities Commission.

The increase is expected to generate $24.7 million annually for the utility.

Zoo Attendance

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Attendance at the North Carolina Zoological Park reached an all-time, one-day high over the Labor Day weekend — twice.

Zoo attendance reached the mark on Sunday, and it was broken on Monday.

The previous single-day attendance record of 10,851 was set May 28, Memorial Day Sunday. Last weekend, 10,941 passed through turnstiles Sunday, 11,067 on Monday.

Obituaries

Boyd
Mr. James Charles "J.C." Boyd, 65, died Wednesday at his home, 1406 W. Ragsdale Road.

A funeral will be conducted at 3 p.m. Friday in the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church by the Revs. Dan Rivers and Floyd Cherry. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mr. Boyd, a native of Pitt County, lived his early life in the Black Jack community until moving to Greenville in 1946. Employed by the N.C. Department of Transportation for 37 years, he retired in 1983 as traffic service supervisor. He was a member of Black Jack F.W.B. Church where he had served as a deacon, trustee and Sunday school superintendent. He had served as a trustee for both Mount Olive College and the Free Will Baptist Children's Home in Middlesex. He was a member and past president of the Greenville Host Lions Club and was a member of the Improved Order of Red Men, Withlacooche Tribe No. 35 of Greenville.

Surviving are his wife, Mary Clark Boyd; one daughter, Phyllis Boyd Echerd of Gulfport, Miss.; two brothers, Woodrow Boyd of Greenville and Thurman Lee Boyd of Grimesland, and two grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday.

Memorials may be made to the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church, Route 3, Box 325, Greenville, N.C., 27858, or the American Cancer Society, P.O. Box 377, Greenville, N.C., 27835.

Lynch

PRINCEVILLE — A funeral for Mr. Curtis Ray Lynch will be conducted at 3 p.m. Saturday in Pine Chapel Missionary Baptist Church in Pinetops by the Rev. James Lindsay. Burial will be in East Lawn Memorial Gardens in Tarboro.

Mr. Lynch was employed by Barnhill Construction Co. of Tarboro. He was a 1973 graduate of North Edgecombe High School and a member of Pine Chapel Church.

Surviving are his wife, Shirley Ann Lynch; four daughters, Kartasha Lynch, Tonesia Lynch, Shilta Lynch and Christia Lynch, all of the home; his grandmother, Lannie S. Hyman of Conetoe; a brother, Dennis Lynch of Tarboro, and four sisters, Sandra Hyman of Baltimore and Shandra Vines, Lisa Evans and Teresa Evans, all of Tarboro.

The family will receive friends from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday at the Hemby-Willoughby Mortuary in Tarboro. At other times they will be at the home in Princeville.

Whitehurst

Mrs. Allie P. Whitehurst, 88, of 300 Meade St. died Tuesday.

Her funeral will be conducted Thursday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Home Chapel by the Rev. Glenn Evans. A graveside service will be conducted at 4:30 p.m. at Amity Christian Church Cemetery near Arapahoe by the Rev. Pascal Woodard.

Mrs. Whitehurst was a native of Pamlico County. She had been a resident of Greenville for more than 60 years and was a member of First Christian Church. In 1966 she retired as director and treasurer of First Federal Savings and Loan Association after 29 years of service.

Surviving are a son, Norwood P. Whitehurst of Greenville; two daughters, Mrs. Bobby C. Gaylor and Mrs. John F. Minges, both of Greenville; a sister, Lola Brinson of Grantsboro; seven grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today and at other times at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Minges, 2000 Pinecrest Drive.

Obituary

Ashton

Mrs. Sarah J. Ashton, 79, died Tuesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The funeral service will be conducted at 11 A.M. Friday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church by Rev. Lawrence P. Houston, Jr., and Rev. Middleton Wooten, III. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mrs. Ashton, a native of Mystic, Connecticut, was a resident of Elizabeth City from 1950 until 1966, when she came to Greenville. She was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the American Legion Auxiliary, where she served as president and district president; was a member of the New London, Connecticut, Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star and the Advisory Board of March of Dimes. A member and president of Town and Country Senior Citizens Club, she served on the Steering Committee of Senior Games, and was a participant in Simulated Patient Program at East Carolina University School of Medicine. She was a recipient of the Governor's Volunteer Award and was named Volunteer of the Year for Greenville Parks and Recreation.

Surviving are a daughter, Dr. Betty A. Levey of Greenville; a son and daughter-in-law, Peter Paul Ashton, Jr. and Doris M. Ashton of Port St. Lucie, Florida; three grandchildren: Tammara L. Estes of Raleigh, Paige L. McLawhon of Raleigh and Lt. Peter Paul Ashton III of the United States Navy, now stationed in Norfolk, Virginia; two grandsons-in-law: Edward B. Estes and Craig E. McLawhon; and one great-grandchild: James William Estes of Raleigh.

Memorials may be made to St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 401 E. 4th Street, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7-9 P.M. Thursday.

The name of a survivor in the obituary for Mrs. Lizzie Mayo Mills Colville in Tuesday's paper was spelled incorrectly. The correct name is Annabelle Heath of Grimesland.

River Pollution Pact Proposed

Division of Environmental Management proposed classifying the Tar-Pamlico River "nutrient sensitive waters." DEM also proposed a management strategy which aims to hold to present levels the amount of nutrients going into the waters.

The management strategy would bind treatment plants planning to expand capacity to strict limits of nitrogen and phosphorus, the two chemicals believed responsible for excessive algal growth and subsequent fish kills in the river.

At a public hearing in June, environmentalists objected to the proposed strategy, calling it weak and ineffective.

Malcolm Green, director of Greenville Utilities, and other municipalities along the river claim the strategy will place too heavy a burden on wastewater treatment plants, which account for an estimated 15 percent of the nutrient pollution entering the river.

Hall proposed to the group Tuesday that the municipalities in the river basin pay for an independent model study of the basin, and present to the state a management strategy which is mutually acceptable to the state and the municipalities involved. The proposed clean-up plan would include an immediate evaluation of treatment plants along the river, a more flexible approach to overall nutrient reduction and a better attempt at reducing nutrient pollution from non-point sources in the basin.

Wastewater treatment plants and industries account for point source, or direct discharges into the waters. Non-point sources — indirect discharges — include run-off from agricultural sites, logging operations and municipalities.

Green, who helped organize Tuesday's meeting, met with the staffs of nine treatment plants at the end of August when the idea of an independent study and management strategy was first reviewed.

Green said the management strategy suggested by Hall would better address the whole problem of nutrient pollution in the river basin than the plan proposed by the state. He said he would work toward a consensus of the municipal governments in the basin and hoped to present the plan to the Environmental Management Commission next week.

Green said he was encouraged by the turnout of elected officials at Tuesday's meeting, and said he felt a majority of the governments would support the regional compact and the proposed management plan.

"This approach, I think, better addresses (the) concerns than the other one did," Green said.

Green said the proposed strategy, which he will present to the EMC if agreed to by the municipal governments, would better handle nutrient pollution and take effect sooner.

"What we're suggesting in no way slows down anything regarding nutrient (removal) on the Pamlico," Green said.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, who also attended Tuesday's meeting, warned that the state would not tolerate any delay in cleaning the Tar-Pamlico River.

"I personally have supported that classification because we have a system under stress," Taft said about the state's nutrient sensitive designation.

"If this approach can do it for less money I'm interested in looking at it," Taft said. "What I'm not interested in is a system to buy more time."

Green said today he would not know of a consensus from the municipal governments "until the last minute." And he said he would present a more detailed and technical management plan to the EMC at next Thursday's meeting.

Environmentalists attending Tuesday's meeting expressed optimism about an improved plan for cleaning and protecting the river, but were worried about the time left for preparing and implementing the management strategy.

Doug Rader, senior scientist with the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund, said Wednesday, "EDF is looking for the maximum reduction of nutrients as quickly as possible." He said the time left to work the plan could cause a problem, but he said he is encouraged by a regional compact to address the problems of the river.

But Rader warned, "I am not ever going to counsel delay for delay's sake. The designation must go forward immediately."

smiled, shook hands and enjoyed a champagne breakfast at his Pretoria-area polling booth. His long-governing National Party was expected to lose up to 30 of its 123 parliamentary seats, mostly to the Conservative Party which favors strict race discrimination.

Nevertheless, the Nationalists were expected to retain a majority in Parliament's dominant white chamber after promoting a plan to begin sharing some power with the country's 28 million blacks.

The government said 3,170,667 whites were eligible to vote. Turnout was reported sluggish because of freezing temperatures and biting winds early today, but lines formed at polling places after noon, government radio said.

Whites voted for members of the white House of Assembly. More than 665,000 Indians and 1.7 million people of mixed race were eligible to vote for separate Parliament chambers with little power. Blacks have no vote.

The polls opened at 7 a.m. and were to close at 9 p.m. Final election results were not expected until Thursday.

Police armed with handguns were stationed at most polling booths. Major black townships around Durban, Cape Town, Pretoria, Johannesburg and eastern Cape cities were quiet.

Excitement Building For Bucs' Opener

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It's what they've been working for these last several weeks. All of the hard work, the hot days, the physical pain and the pounding.

At last it's here.
It's GAME WEEK!

And East Carolina University head football coach Bill Lewis is just as excited about the opening game this Saturday against Bowling Green as a rookie freshman.

"All of a sudden it's hit home that we're in game week," Lewis said at the first of his weekly press conferences. "All of a sudden, my stomach is churning faster than it has at any time since I've been here."

Come 7 p.m. Saturday night, Lewis and the Pirates will kick off the 1989 season, Lewis' first at ECU. It will be his second head coaching job. He served as head coach at Wyoming from 1977-79, where his teams went 14-20-1. After that, he served on Bill Dooley's staff at Georgia for the past nine seasons.

At ECU, he will be attempting to end a streak of five consecutive losing seasons. In fact, in the 80's, the Pirates have had only two winning years, 1982 and 1983, under Ed Emory.

"When it's 10 days away, you've got a lot to do. But when you get into game week, the excitement really builds," Lewis said. "That's one of the things about coaching and athletics."

Lewis said coaching is not like any other profession. "No matter how hard I tried to talk him into it, I could not get Dave (Hart, ECU athletic director) to call Bowling Green and get them to cancel the game until Sunday or Monday.

"You can get to a point and say, 'Hey, we're not quite ready. Would they agree to push it back?' That's one thing that makes (the profession) unique. We've only got so many hours. We know that at 7 o'clock that ball is in the air. And you've got to make sure you make as good of use of your time as you can."

"There are certain things that have to be done on Monday, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, it's all over because we've got to kick it off. There's no extension, there's no delays, there's no postponements. And that's where the excitement comes on the part of the coaches and the players."

"They know, too, that the other team's going to be waiting for them in that stadium and they better be ready to play," Lewis said.

The coach said he was pleased with the way the team has approached this final week of preparation.

"They are getting caught up in the feeling of game week. There was a lot of talk on the field (Monday) night about Bowling Green," he said, adding that the team has seen its scouting report, knows the Falcon personnel and what they can do.

"I hope that the enthusiasm will continue to build, but I don't want it to come too quickly. We want to continue to step up the ladder as we continue to build toward Saturday."

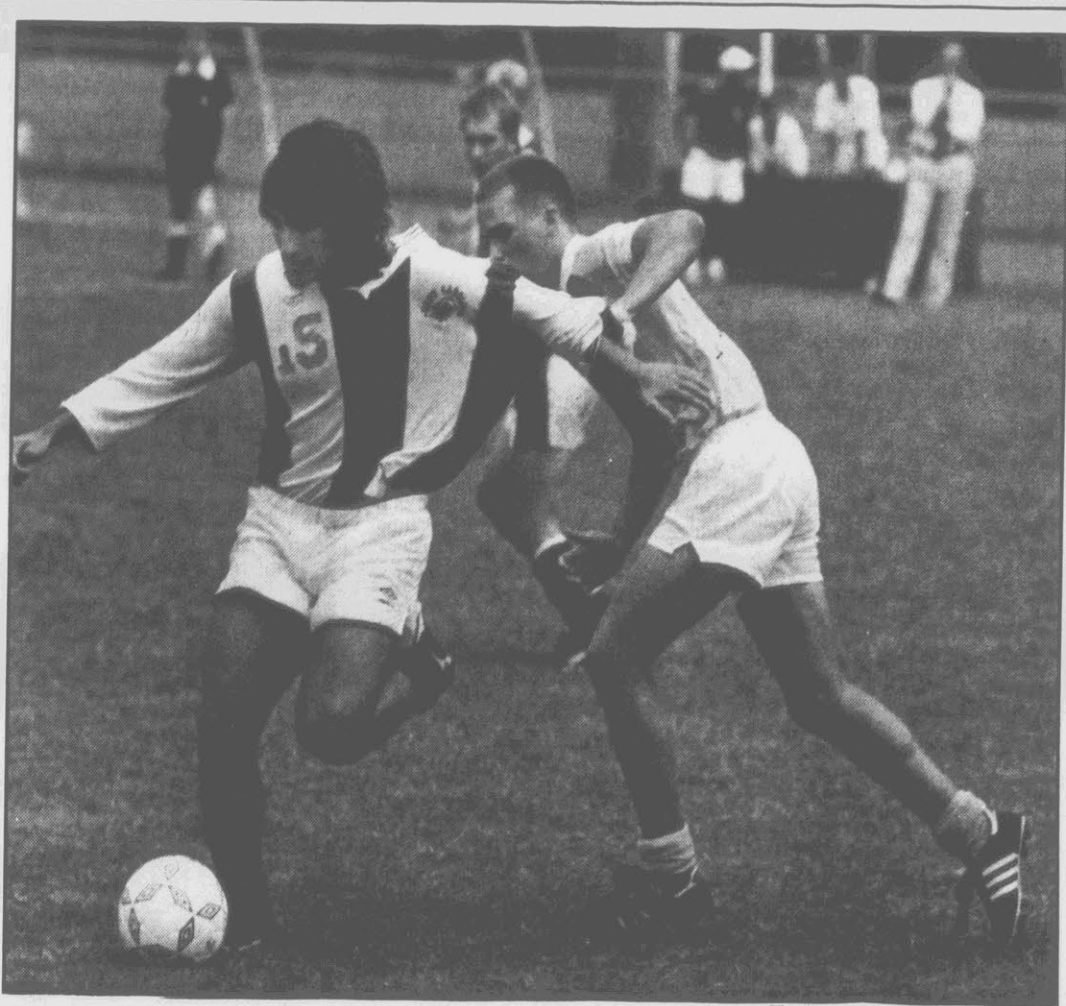

Lewis said he was almost hesitant to say it, but he felt that the Pirates are healthy as can be expected. "I just Leery Notre Dame Remains At No. 1.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Being the defending national champion of college football, Notre Dame should be used to being voted No. 1. Yet the Fighting Irish appeared defensive when told the 1989 season has begun the way that 1988 ended.

Coach Lou Holtz, as usual, suffered no loss of words, but chose to paraphrase Shakespeare.

"I don't like being number one. It's like the saying goes, 'Heavy is the head that wears the crown,'" Holtz said.

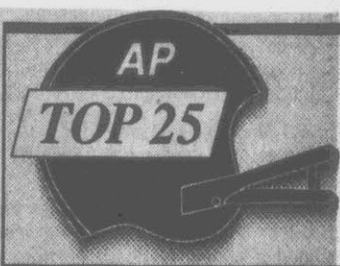

Like it or not, Notre Dame vaulted over idle Michigan to take over the No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press college football poll on Tuesday after an impressive 36-13 victory over Virginia in the Kickoff Classic.

Season-opening losses, meanwhile, dropped Southern California, Florida State and Louisiana State out of the Top 10.

"All I know is, we're better than Virginia. I don't know if we're better than anybody else," Holtz said. "I wouldn't even know about it if the media didn't keep reminding me. I'd like to know we're number one when we walk off the field, not when the phone rings with rankings."

In the first regular-season Top 25, Notre Dame received 31 first-place votes and 1,430 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and

Warning To Giamatti Was Based On A Mistake

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Two weeks after insisting that the hands of A. Bartlett Giamatti forecasted the baseball commissioner's sudden death, a surgeon admitted he had made a mistake.

Giamatti was at the game at Shea Stadium and at one point a TV camera zoomed in for a 15-second closeup. The commissioner, a chain-smoker, brought a cigarette to his lips. It was a disturbing scene for Cahan, a lung cancer specialist.

Cahan gazed at his 45-inch TV screen and thought he saw Giamatti's fingers. The fingernails were curved up from the sides and the front, where the nail joins the cuticle, the result of expansion of the first joint in the finger.

Cahan told New York Daily News columnist Mike Lupica that he became so alarmed at the condition that he contacted American League president Bobby Brown, a retired cardiologist, and urged him to have Giamatti have a chest X-ray.

Brown relayed the warning last Thursday to Giamatti. "He smiled that smile and told me it sounded like a good idea," Brown was quoted as saying by Lupica.

Giamatti died Friday of a heart attack at his summer home on Martha's Vineyard.

On Tuesday, Cahan reviewed taped footage of the Aug. 20 scene at the studios of WNYW in New York. In doing so, he realized that the hands which triggered his alarm were those of the man seated behind Giamatti.

"When you review the film you see the hand is not Mr. Giamatti's; it's the hand of the man behind him," Cahan told WNYW.

Dr. William Zane, who performed the autopsy on Giamatti, told WNYW he found no evidence of clubbing of Giamatti's fingers.

Lupica had asked Cahan if Giamatti might have been saved by a chest examination.

"I don't know," he said. "We've all heard about the guy leaving the doctor's office and going home and having a heart attack. I want to think it might have saved him. But I just don't know."

Among the diseases associated with clubbing of the fingernails are lung cancer and emphysema. Cahan has had extensive experience with both in 50 years as a doctor.

Lung disease is just one area where clubbing of the fingernails can be an early sign that something is wrong, said Dr. Mark Laviates, a pulmonologist and an associate professor of medicine at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark.

"It could also mean an infection of the heart, congenital heart disease or diseases of the liver and bowel," Laviates said. "There are 10-12 things with which clubbing can be associated."

He said he was not aware of constrictive coronary disease — which an autopsy showed to be caused Giamatti's death — as being one of them.

Laviates, who coincidentally was a neighbor of Giamatti at Yale 25 years ago, said "a small percentage of people inherit clubbing of the fingernails, and in those cases, it's not associated with disease. But that's rare. Generally, the condition is not a sign of good health."

Dr. Michael L. Nochomovitz, medical director of the pulmonary treatment center at the University Hospital of Cleveland, said he doubted whether clubbing of the fingernails would indicate a constrictive artery condition.

A-G Battling Youth Young Chargers Face Plymouth

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Plymouth is the opponent for Ayden-Grifton and coach B.T. Chappell this week, but he's got his hands full trying take care of matters at home.

"As young as we are, we are just trying to take it from a fundamental standpoint," said Chappell, whose team fell to D.H. Conley 48-6, last Friday. "We're not at the point where we can look at another team and concentrate only on stopping them."

Indeed, youth is the key word at Ayden-Grifton, and that inexperience, especially along the offensive line, showed against Conley.

"In studying the film, we got beat physically and we were slow," Chappell said. "They just overpowered us. We hurt ourselves being slow coming off the ball. Conley was much more hungry to win that game."

"Our guys, since they haven't been on the varsity, they hadn't played in a game with that kind of intensity. I can say one thing — they got some experience."

"Physically, they just didn't know how to get themselves ready. We've got a long way to go."

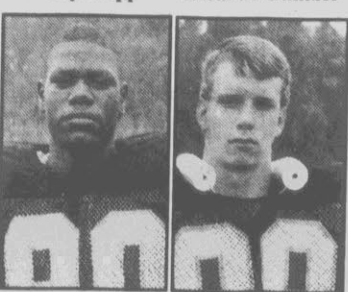

The Chargers start only one senior on the offensive line and have underclassmen at many key positions on both sides of the ball. With a 1-1 record, Chappell has spent a lot

Evert Bows Out Of Open

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The winds of change blew through Flushing Meadow, sweeping Chris Evert out of the U.S. Open and away from tennis.

Oh, sure, Evert will play the Federation Cup, some exhibitions and, perhaps, a couple of tournaments. But her 7-6, 6-2 loss to Zina Garrison on Tuesday was her last match in a Grand Slam event, her last battle on the tour she graced for nearly two decades.

"It's just playing a lot of matches in my career, I think that has caught up to me," Evert, 34, said. "Mentally, I cannot sustain that intensity every single match."

So she is leaving, taking with her a legacy of on-court patience, magnificence from the baseline and the two-handed backhand that has been copied ever since she first reached stardom by making the U.S. Open semifinals in 1971.

"I think that as I got older, the victories meant more to me," said Evert, winner of 18 Grand Slam titles — six U.S. Opens, seven French championships, three Wimbledon and two Australian.

"I was feeling more of what they meant and the hard work that I put into them."

But the work had become too hard.

"I've had letdowns this year and

that puts me in with the average players," said Evert, who retires from the Open with a record 101 victories. "I was thinking I would be relieved when the tournament was over. But after losing a match like today, I'm not relieved. Two days ago, I thought I was playing the type of tennis I could challenge players. I had high hopes for myself."

The Citadel Tops Pirate Booters, 4-1

East Carolina lost its second straight soccer match of the season Tuesday, falling to The Citadel, 4-1, in their home opener.

We played badly," Coach Bob Lust said. "We didn't do anything as well as we did Friday against Richmond, which is disappointing because I didn't think our competition was as strong as it was Friday. We should have put the game out of reach in the first half."

But it was the Bulldogs who put the game out of reach with four straight goals. John Ritchie, who was the Bulldogs' leading scorer last season, scored two goals and Craig Smalley and Chris Leavitt each added one.

East Carolina's only goal came late in the game when Clarke Payne scored off assists from Eddie Shockley and Rick Miller.

Freshman goalie Todd Aspdon recorded five saves on the day. "Todd is doing a solid job in the goal," Lust said. "He's not to a place where he is a game-breaker in the goal, but he is one of the most consistent players on the team."

The Citadel took nine shots on goal, while the Pirates had six.

The Pirates fall to 0-2 on the year while The Citadel goes to 1-0.

East Carolina will host George Mason on Friday at 6 p.m., while James Madison comes to town on Sunday for a 1 p.m. match. Mason has been ranked in the top 20 in pre-season polls.

Williamston, Roanoke Take Net Wins

Williamston High School took an 8-1 tennis win over Greene Central while Roanoke defeated Hertford County, 7-2, in a pair of non-conference matches Tuesday.

Rose High School's match with Wilson Fike was postponed until today, while a match between D.H. Conley and Washington was postponed with no date set as yet.

Greene Central's lone victory came in he number two doubles where Missy Saunders and Bridget Williams combined for the win. Greene Central falls to 0-3 while Williamston is now 2-0.

Greene Central hosts Fuquay-Varina today while Williamston returns the visit to Greene Central on Thursday.

Roanoke, in its opening match of the year, swept the singles, but managed only one of the three doubles matches. The Lady Redskins return to action on Thursday, traveling to C.B. Aycock.

Singles — Carrie Russell (W) d. Jennifer Roberts 6-2, 6-0; Dawn Bundy (W) d. Megan Wyatt 6-1, 6-0; Hope Robinson (W) d. Lisa Cullipher 6-1, 6-0; Beverly Bullock (W) d. Jenny Barrow 6-0, 6-0; Dee Dee Mills (W) d. Catherine Irwin 6-0, 6-0; Nancy Bullock (W) d. Allison Wilkes 6-0, 6-1.

Doubles — Bundy-Mills (W) d. Roberts-Wyatt 8-2; Russell-Robinson (W) d. Cullipher-Barrow 8-1; Missy Saunders-Bridget Williams (GC) d. Jamie Henderson-Kris Manner 8-1.

Roanoke 7, Hertford County 2

Singles — Dawn Briley (R) d. Cathy Elmore 6-0, 6-1; Rhonda Bailey (R) d. Leigh Jenkins 6-2, 6-0; Amy Oakley (R) d. Tammy Joyner 6-3, 6-1; Shannon Warren (R) d. Wendy Yang 6-1, 6-1; Michelle Roberson (R) d. Susan Adams 6-0, 6-0; Cindy Powell (R) d. Julian Surface 6-0, 6-0.

Doubles — Briley-Oakley (R) d. Elmore-Marlee Wilson 8-0; Yang-Joyner (HC) d. Sarah Carson-Krista Ayers 8-1; Kelly Anderson-Joyner (HC) d. Brandie Knox-Leslie Roberson 8-0.

Northern Nash Runners Down Rose

Northern Nash took first place in both the boys' and girls' divisions in a cross country meet at Rose High School Tuesday. It was the opening meet of the year for the Rampant teams.

Northern Nash finished the boys' meet with the low score of 22 points while Rose had 34. Northern's Jeffrey Winstead took first place in a time of 19 minutes, 10 seconds. Second place went to Frederick Silver of Northern in 19:39. Rose's first finisher came in third as Mike Jolley was timed in 19:50.

Others in the top 10 included Tim Hedgepeth of Northern, fourth in 19:54; Greg Parker of Rose, fifth in 20:11; Dave Jolley of Rose, sixth in 20:22; Kim Hedgepeth of Northern, seventh in 20:49; Ryan Snyder of Northern, eighth in 20:51; Richard Gowen of Rose, ninth in 20:52; and Daniel Kulynych of Northern, 10th in 21:55.

Other Rose finishers were Joel Metzger, (11th, 22:29); Brian Poust, (12th, 23:00); Mike Bode, (13th, 23:04); Jim Greene (14th, 23:31); Ken Wu, (16th, 24:07); Josh Howard (17th, 24:22) and Peter Brinson, (20th, 25:25).

Northern's girls finished with 23 points while Rose had 32.

Rose's Tyler Hill took the individual title with a time of 23:04, but Northern took the next two places. Holly Marquette was second in 23:04 while Sarah Clements was third in 25:04. Rose's Laura Howell took fourth in 26:01, followed by Northern's Cathy Drum in 26:19. The second five, respectively, were Carley Bell of Northern, 26:59; Marcy Bell of Northern, 27:15; Christy Manuel of Rose, 27:40; Andrea Coble of Rose, 28:05 and Alicia Pascasio of Rose, 28:14.

Others from Rose included Jill Wooten in (12th, 31:58) and Lou Ann Gaylord, (13th, 32:00).

Rose Kickers Defeat Goldsboro, 3-1

GOLDSBORO — Rose High School rolled up to a 3-1 victory over host Goldsboro Tuesday in a non-conference soccer match.

Aaron Tschetter scored the first Rose goal 11 minutes into the match on a pass from Roger Kramer. Rose then added its second goal at the 32:45 mark when J.W. Blair took a pass from Scott Laing and slipped it past the Cougar goalie.

Less than two minutes into the second half, Jason Bizzaro lofted a direct kick toward the goal and Edwin Manning headed it in for the third Rampant goal.

Goldsboro's only goal came late in the match after Coach Charlie Harvey had gone to his bench.

"It's nice to have a win," Harvey said. "We seem to be heading in the right direction. If we work on a few key areas, we'll be all right. Right now we need to create links between the fullbacks and midfield and the midfield and forwards."

"I moved a few people around today to try and get more scoring. I moved Aaron from midfield to forward and he scored our first goal."

Harvey plans to make several other changes on Thursday when the Rampants host Southern Wayne in a 5 p.m. match.

West Craven, Conley Post Net Wins

LITTLEFIELD — West Craven High School swept a pair of volleyball matches from host Ayden-Grifton Tuesday.

The Eagles won the opening match, 15-5, 15-10, then came back to win the nightcap, 15-2, 15-9.

In the opening match, Amy Bizzel led West Craven with 14 service points while Keisha Raynor and Allison Mark each added six. Shameeka Edwards and Yolanda Kelly each had five and Kesha Jones had three for Ayden-Grifton.

In the second match, Toi Wesley led the Lady Eagles with 12 while Brande Harper added seven, Terri Davis had six and Annette Miller had three for Ayden-Grifton.

The Chargers' match with South Lenoir, scheduled for Thursday, has been canceled. They will return to action on Tuesday, entertaining D.H. Conley.

Conley 2, North Pitt 0

BETHEL — D.H. Conley continued its winning streak with a pair of wins over North Pitt in a cross-county volleyball match Tuesday.

Conley won the opening match 15-8, 15-0, then came back with a 15-10, 15-11 win in the second match.

Lauri Waters, a freshman, had a string of seven straight points in the opening match, while Lauri Kuykendall, also a freshman, and sophomore Anna Foster had five each in the second match. Sharon Ross led North Pitt's service.

Anice Daughtry had two effective hits and one kill for Conley, while Rose again highlighted North Pitt's hitting.

North Pitt drops to 0-2 on the year while Conley climbs to 7-0. North Pitt will travel to West Craven on Thursday for a tri-match with Southwest Onslow. Conley will entertain Durham Jordan and SouthWest Edgecombe on Thursday.

Cleveland Browns' Club Formed

A Cleveland Browns fan club has been organized in Greenville, according to Tim Seavers.

The group will hold its first meeting on Sunday at The Final Score restaurant at 4 p.m. to watch Sunday's game.

Anyone interested in joining the group may come at that time. For further information, contact Seavers at 355-2300 during the day, or at 756-4315 in the evening.

RALEIGH — Its been nine months since North Carolina's four defending high school football champions were in prime form, but all are back at the top of the heap this week in the first Associated Press prep poll of the 1989 season.

Richmond County in 4-A, Burlington Cummings in 3-A, Thomasville in 2-A and Swain County in 1-A are off to fast starts and were named No. 1 in their respective classifications.

The Raiders, who won last year's North Carolina High School Athletic Association 4-A title with a 15-0 mark, received all nine first-place votes cast Tuesday by a statewide panel of prep sportswriters. Richmond County opened its season Friday night with a 58-point victory over Fayetteville Pine Forest.

Asheville Reynolds, a team which has outscored opponents 89-8 in its first two victories, took the second spot with 67 points.

Garner, a team that rolled to the 4-A title two years ago with a young squad, was ranked third, followed by Fayetteville Smith and Greensboro Page.

The second 10 consisted of Fayetteville 71st, Northern Durham, Rocky Mount, Greensboro Grimsley and West Mecklenburg.

Cummings received seven of a possible eight first-place votes for 79 points. The Cavaliers are 2-0 and have two shutouts.

Eight other teams in the 3-A poll are 2-0. The only exception is No. 8 Shelby. The Golden Lions are 0-1 are losing 21-16 to 4-A Gastonia Hunter Huss on Friday night, but have made the 3-A title game the past three years, winning two.

Fourth-ranked Statesville received the only other top vote in 3-A.

Bertie, Havelock, Statesville and Lexington round out the top five, followed by South Iredell, Lincolnton, Shelby, Smoky Mountain and West Craven.

Three 2-A teams split the top votes, but defending champ Thomasville garnered five for the top spot with 74 points.

Second-ranked Wallace-Rose Hill received two votes for 46 points, while No. 5 Farmville Central got the other top vote.

Sixth-ranked Forest Hills and No.

9 Whiteville already have losses, but both fell in close games to 4-A teams.

Five teams received first-place votes in the 1-A poll. Included in that group was defending champion Swain County. The Maroon Devils got three first-place votes for 64 points.

Second-ranked Midway got one top vote, while No. 3 Murphy received two.

Eighth-ranked Cherokee, also in the Smoky Mountain Conference with Swain County and Murphy, garnered a top vote, as did 10th-ranked South Stanly.

Following are The Associated Press high school football polls with team, first place votes in parenthesis, record and total points as voted upon by a panel of North Carolina prep sportswriters:

ND Holds Strong At No. 1 ...

sportscasters. Michigan was second with 18 first-place votes and 1,419 points.

Senior linebacker Ned Bolcar, no doubt eyeing Notre Dame's Sept. 16 date with Michigan at Ann Arbor in what will be the Wolverines' opener, expressed befuddlement over the voting.

"I'm not the one voting, but it doesn't make sense for Michigan to drop down when they haven't played a game yet. They were good enough to be number one last week, and they're just as good a football team this week," Bolcar said. "As far as I'm concerned, Michigan's the best team in the country right now."

The last time No. 1 met No. 2 was last Nov. 26, when top-ranked Notre Dame beat Southern California 27-10.

"Being ranked number one now doesn't mean anything," junior defensive tackle Chris Zorich said. "It only counts at the end of the year. All it means now is that people try even harder to beat you."

Miami, which has a Nov. 25 game with the Irish after a 31-30 loss last year that cost the Hurricanes the national title, is ranked No. 3 this week. Miami received four first-place votes.

The Hurricanes are followed by four other teams that have yet to play a game — Nebraska, Auburn, UCLA and Arkansas. Nebraska, No. 1 on six ballots, was the only other team to receive a first-place vote.

Oklahoma, Colorado and Clemson round out the Top 10. Oklahoma moved up seven spots after crushing New Mexico State 73-3. Colorado jumped from No. 14 to No. 9 after beating Texas 27-6 and Clemson went from 12th to 10th following a 30-9 victory over Furman, the defending Division I-AA champion.

Southern Cal. beaten 14-13 by Illinois, fell from fifth to 13th. Florida State dropped from sixth to 16th after losing 30-26 to Southern Mississippi, and LSU plummeted 14 spots to 21st after a 28-16 loss to Texas A&M.

Texas A&M and Southern Mississippi used their victories to climb into the Top 25, and Illinois jumped from 22nd to 11th. Texas A&M is ranked No. 15 and Southern Miss. in the rankings for the first time since 1981, is No. 18.

Five teams dropped in the poll despite winning games — Arizona, from 18th to 20th; Houston, 21st to 22nd; Pittsburgh, 20th to 23rd; Brigham Young, 19th to 24th, and North Carolina State, 24th to 25th.

Arizona beat Stanford 19-3, Houston clobbered Nevada-Las Vegas 69-0, Brigham Young downed New Mexico 24-3, Pittsburgh routed Pacific 38-3, and N.C. State edged Maryland 10-6.

West Virginia remained 17th after beating Ball State 35-10. No. 12 Penn State, No. 14 Syracuse and No. 19 Alabama did not play. Iowa and Ohio State dropped out of the Top 25 despite not playing.

Mets Take Advantage Of Williams

Kansas City Continues To Struggle Against Detroit Following A 10-2 Defeat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mitch Williams is one of those "here-it-is-see-if-you-can-hit-it" guys.

With the guesswork eliminated, New York's Tim Lincecum and Juan Samuel knew what was coming. And because they did, the Mets are a little healthier today in the National League East.

"I hadn't been up to the plate in eight days," said Teufel, whose double to the center field wall off the fastballing Chicago relief ace started a ninth-inning rally that pulled the Mets within 3½ games of the front-running Cubs. "He blew two by me. On the third one, I swung a little earlier."

Gregg Jefferies flied to center, sending pinch-runner Lou Thornton to third, and Samuel followed with a single to right off Williams, 4-3, to give the Mets a crucial 3-2 victory Tuesday night. It snapped a four-game losing streak and earned New York a split in the two-game series with the Cubs.

The Mets remained in fourth place, one-half game behind Montreal, a 6-2 winner of St. Louis. The Cardinals are 1½ behind the Cubs.

Astros 3, Dodgers 2

Glenn Wilson threw out Billy Bean at home in the fifth inning and hit a game-winning single in the eighth for Houston.

"What more could you ask?" Houston manager Art Howe said.

"It wasn't that hard of a throw, I just guided it in there," Wilson said.

It kept the Los Angeles lead — built on RBI hits by Bean and Mike Marshall — at 2-0.

Reds 6, Giants 5

Ken Griffey hit a three-run homer to cap a five-run third inning, and Cincinnati won by a few inches to snap San Francisco's five-game winning streak.

The Giants, who came back from an 8-0 deficit in the final three innings Monday night to win 9-8, rallied from a 6-2 deficit this time. Rookie Jim Weaver's two-run double in the eighth hit the top of the wall in right field. The Reds got strong pitching from Jack Armstrong, 2-1, who allowed a two-run homer by Matt Williams. John Franco got his 30th save.

Padres 7, Braves 5

Tim Flannery's pinch-hit RBI single in the 10th inning snapped a 5-5 tie as San Diego won for 12th time in 13 games. Mark Davis pitched a scoreless 10th for his major league-leading 36th save.

Atlanta starter John Smoltz allowed only two hits — two-run homers by Benito Santiago and Roberto Alomar — before being relieved in the seventh. Smoltz struck out nine and walked three.

Expos 6, Cardinals 2

A grand slam and five RBIs by Tim Wallach and strong pitching by Pascual Perez awakened Montreal.

Wallach, who entered the game batting .189 against St. Louis, hit his fourth career grand slam and 12th homer of the season in the seventh inning.

Perez, 8-12, gave up six hits in 8 1-3 innings, struck out seven and walked one as Montreal won for only the 11th time in 31 games. The loss ended a three-game winning streak for St. Louis.

Phillies 3, Pirates 2

Bob Dernier's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Ricky Jordan as Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh to end a five-game losing streak.

The Pirates scored an unearned run in the first off Pat Combs, making his major-league debut. Combs, Philadelphia's top pick in the 1988 draft, allowed only three hits in six innings.

Reliever Jeff Parrett, 12-4, became the winningest Philadelphia pitcher.

American League

The Kansas City Royals continued to struggle against Detroit, as they fell to the Tigers, 10-2 Tuesday.

The loss dropped Kansas City 3½ games behind Oakland in the American League West. The Athletics beat Boston 13-1.

The Royals, with the second-best record in baseball, struggle at the plate against the Tigers, scoring only 21 runs while losing their last 12 games, a club record, at Tiger Stadium.

Detroit rookie Kevin Ritz pitched seven strong innings and Doug Strange's two-run double keyed a six-run first against Kansas City rookie Tom Gordon, 16-6.

"It's been a struggle here in Tiger Stadium for a long time," Royals manager John Wathan said. "We'll come back and try it again (Wednesday). We'll see what we're made of."

Athletics 13, Red Sox 1

Curt Young allowed one unearned run in five innings and Oakland scored four unearned runs in the third off Roger Clemens. The A's wrapped it up with eight runs against four Boston pitchers in the eighth. The inning included three consecutive walks with the bases loaded, pinch-hitter Felix Jose's two-run single, and RBI singles by Mark McGwire and Dave Henderson. Oakland had only seven hits in the game.

Oakland's 3½-game lead is its biggest of the season. The third-place Red Sox fell six games behind Toronto in the AL East.

Angels 8, Brewers 4

California, back home from a 4-11 road trip, snapped a five-game losing streak as Brian Downing and Chili Davis each homered and drove in three runs. The Angels have won six in a row at Anaheim Stadium, where they are 45-23, the second-best home record in the league.

Kirk McCaskill, 15-8, went 5 2-3 innings for the victory, allowing eight hits and three runs. Willie Fraser worked 3 1-3 innings for his second save.

Davis gave the Angels a 3-2 lead with his 21st homer off Mark Knudson in the third inning after Max Venable's double scored Devon White. After Lance Parrish's leadoff single in the fourth chased Knudson, Bill Krueger yielded a run-scoring double to Kent Anderson, who scored on Venable's single to make it 5-2.

Blue Jays 6, White Sox 1

Dave Stieb pitched a three-hitter over seven scoreless innings and beat Chicago for the 18th time in 22 decisions as the Blue Jays remained one game ahead of Baltimore in the American League East. Manny Lee drove in two runs with a double and a single off Steve Rosenberg, and Mookie Wilson had a pair of singles and scored twice.

Wilson's single and Lee's double gave Toronto a 1-0 lead in the third inning. In the fourth, the Blue Jays loaded the bases on singles by Fred McGriff, Kelly Gruber and Tony Fernandez. McGriff scored as Pat Borders hit into a double play.

Orioles 3, Indians 1

Baltimore's Cal Ripken became the first shortstop in baseball history to hit 20 or more home runs in eight consecutive seasons and then doubled home the tie-breaking run in a two-run seventh. Winner Bob Milacki scattered seven hits in 7 1-3 innings, including Cory Snyder's fourth-inning homer. Gregg Olson picked up a rookie-record 24th save with 1 2-3 scoreless innings.

After hitting his 20th home run with two out in the first, Ripken hit a tie-breaking bloop double in the seventh following Steve Finley's two-out single off loser John Farrell. Ripken scored on Larry Sheets' double.

Yankees 12, Mariners 2

Deion Sanders, who expected to be gearing up for the start of the NFL season next weekend, drove in four runs with a pair of doubles and one of New York's three homers as the Yankees won their sixth straight game.

The Yankees rapped out 17 hits, including home runs by Roberto Kelly and Steve Sax, and a single, two doubles and three RBIs by Steve Balboni. Meanwhile, Eric Plunk held Seattle to four hits in seven innings, including Jay Buhner's 434-foot, two-run homer in the fourth.

Twins 8, Rangers 4

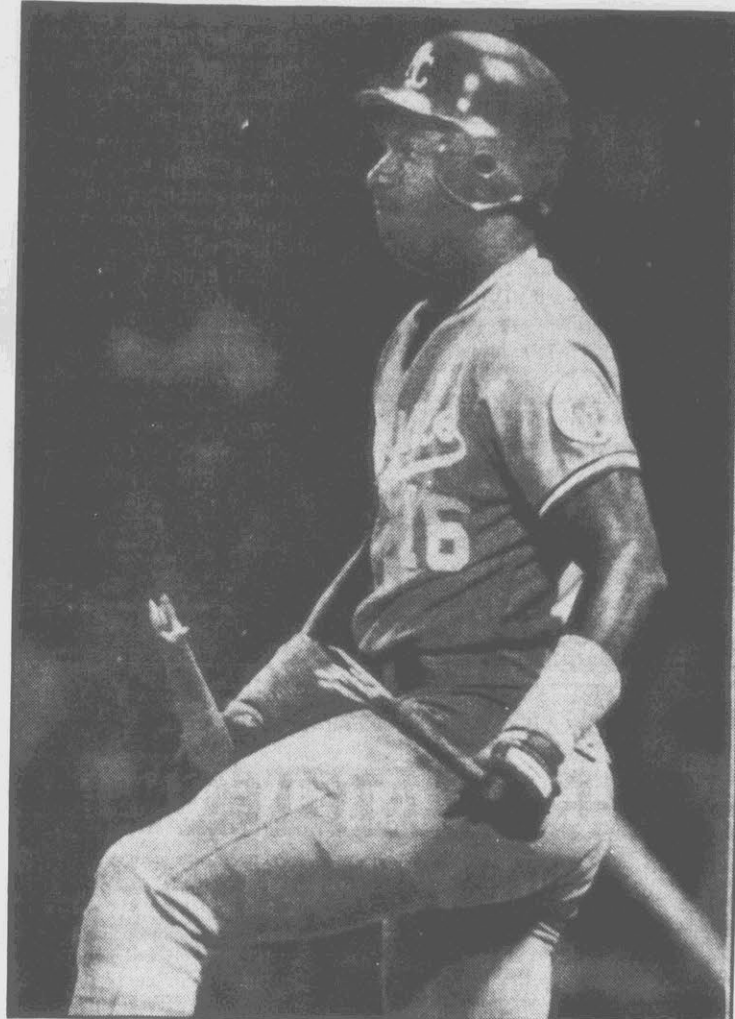

Carmen Castillo's second home run of the game, a two-run shot, triggered a tie-breaking, four-run seventh inning and Kevin Tapani scattered six hits over seven innings in his first major-league start.

Canseco, Quinones Gain Weekly Honor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oakland's Jose Canseco and Cincinnati's Luis Quinones are the respective Major League baseball players of the week for the American and National League.

Canseco hit five home runs and drove in 14 runs last week, was named the AL winner after batting .520 with 13 hits in 25 at-bats. He had a slugging percentage of 1.160 and a .600 on-base percentage.

Quinones who batted .440 with 11 hits in 25 at-bats, was named the NL winner thanks to a slugging percentage of .720 and on-base percentage of .481.

Top Matchup

Boston at Oakland (3:15 p.m. EDT). Mike Smithson, 7-13, pitches against Bob Welch, 15-7.

Stats, Streaks, Swings & Swings

Of Fred McGriff's 90 career home runs, 11 have come against Chicago pitching, including five this season. ... Cory Snyder of the Indians is 29-for-73 at Memorial Stadium, a .397 average, with nine homers and 15 RBIs. ... The Toronto Blue Jays have won 16 of the last 17 games in which Tom Henke has appeared. ... Kevin Ritz of the Tigers, who gave up a home run to Seattle's Alvin Davis in the first inning of his major-league debut, has not allowed a home run in 60 innings since.

Ryne Sandberg hit his career-high 27th home run Monday night. He hit 26 in 1985. ... San Diego's Jack Clark has 10 homers and 32 RBIs since Aug. 1. ... Lance Parrish of the California Angels has four hits in his last 38 at-bats. ... Baltimore's Cal Ripken became the first shortstop ever to hit 20 home runs for eight consecutive seasons when he homered off Cleveland's John Farrell on Tuesday. Ripken and Ernie Banks were tied with seven straight 20-plus years.

Boston's Roger Clemens is 1-6 against Oakland and above .500 against every other AL team. ...

Baseball Notes

Greg Maddux (16), Mike Bielecki (14) and Rick Sutcliffe (14) give the Cubs their first trio of 14-game winners since 1973, when Ferguson Jenkins, Rick Reuschel and Burt Hooten each won 14.

Dave Stieb of Toronto is 18-4 lifetime against Chicago and teammate Jimmy Key has won 12 of 15 career decisions versus the White Sox. ... Jeff Russell's 32nd save gave him 37 lifetime for the Rangers, tying Jim Kern's club record.

Lonnie Smith of the Atlanta Braves has been hit by a pitch 10 times this year, the second highest total in a season since the Braves moved to Atlanta. Felipe Alou was hit 12 times in 1966.

Craig Biggio needs one steal to become only the seventh catcher since 1900 to steal at least 20 bases. The most ever by a catcher is 36 by John Wathan with Kansas City in 1982.

Roster Moves

Boston's John Dopson, who recently missed four weeks with a strained right elbow, will get about five more starts as the Red Sox' third starter.

Chicago sent infielder Phil Stephenson to the Padres Tuesday, completing the Aug. 31 trade that sent Calvin Schiraldi and Darrin Jackson to San Diego for Luis Salazar and Marvel Wynne.

— St. Louis center fielder Willie McGee, who has played in only 50 games because of injuries, has a hamstring injury and is day-to-day.

Mandarich's Signing A Matter Of Timing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Green Bay Packers vice president Tom Braatz figured Tony Mandarich, the team's celebrated and outspoken top draft choice, would sign just before the start of the NFL season.

Why? That's when players are ready to receive their first-game checks. It's also the time when football players without shoulder pads get nostalgic for the game.

Mandarich said he didn't want to miss all of training camp, and admits there were times during his 45-day contract holdout when he wasn't so sure he'd ever sign.

He spent the time lifting weights in California, doing talk shows and a sitcom. He even considered a fight with heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

Finally, on Tuesday, the sides agreed on a contract that makes the 6-foot-5, 310-pound Mandarich one of the highest-paid offensive linemen in NFL history. He signed a four-year contract worth $4.4 million and also got a $2 million signing bonus.

Braatz said the negotiations began to come into focus after Mandarich visited the Michigan State campus last month.

"He visited his old teammates and I think he started to miss football. That was the breakthrough," Braatz said.

Mandarich signed a week after the Packers lost tackles Keith Uecker and Mike Arey, who were suspended for a month after testing positive for steroids. Braatz insisted that had nothing to do with speeding up the negotiations.

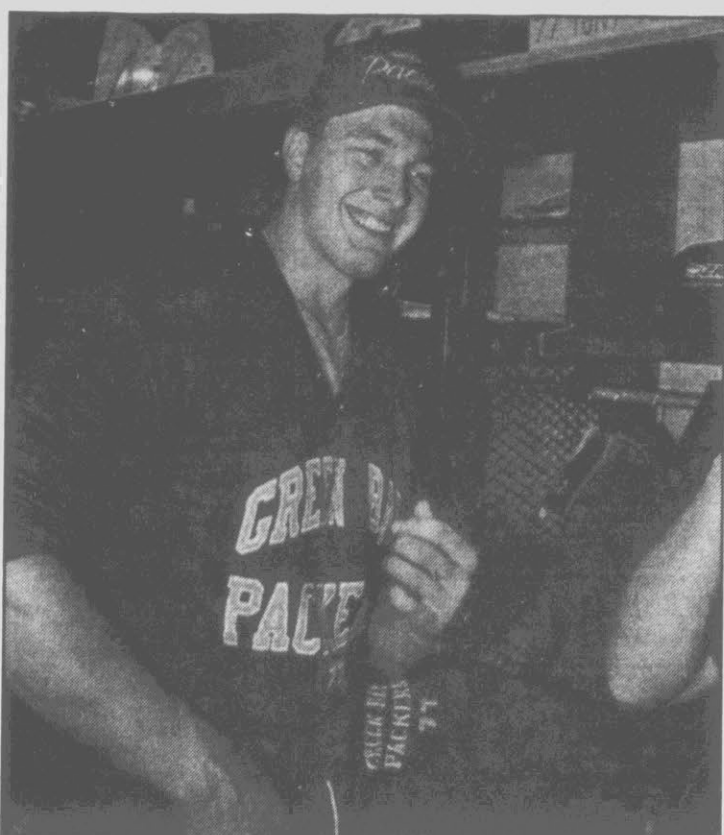

Braatz also denied the release Monday of veterans Randy Wright, Walter Stanley and Phil Epps, all with sizeable salaries, had anything to do with the Mandarich negotiations.

Carter Suggests Benching

Wide receiver Anthony Carter is suggesting the Minnesota Vikings bench him for Sunday's NFL season opener against the Houston Oilers because he wants to be traded and wouldn't play well.

But Vikings general manager Mike Lynn doesn't sound worried.

"I don't believe that for one minute," Lynn said. "Anthony

Tony Mandarich checks in with the Packers after signing

Carter is a fierce competitor. He'll do what's in the best interest of this team at all times. I have no doubts about that whatsoever."

He should also have no doubts that Carter is upset.

Carter, who held out for the first month of training camp, was miffed when the Vikings didn't meet his contract demands.

"I'm still (upset) because nothing happened and with the way I've been treated. If it's up to me, I won't put my best foot forward on Sunday. They might as well bench me," Carter said.

Carter, in the last year of a five-year contract, was seeking a boost to $1 million. His contract calls for him to be paid $400,000 in base salary, plus the last $200,000 of a pro-rated signing bonus.

Fralic Finally Reports
Three-time Pro Bowl guard Bill Fralic has ended his six-week holdout by signing a contract that Atlanta Falcons officials called "the highest ever negotiated by a veteran NFL offensive lineman."

Fralic, who signed a reported $2.1 million contract Tuesday, is expected to play in Sunday's NFL season opener against the Los Angeles Rams.

"Thank God. Time for football again," said Fralic, who reported to training camp for a physical before signing the agreement. "I'm happy with the contract; I just wish it hadn't taken so long, that's all."

Fralic, who missed 39 days of training camp and has only four days to practice for Sunday's game, said he plans to be on the field this weekend. "That's what they're paying me for," he said.

The Falcons have the option of requesting a two-week roster exemption for Fralic, the club's No. 1 draft pick in 1985. But Coach Marion Campbell said that possibility was not being considered.

"We've got to get him ready to play," Campbell said. "I don't know how long we can go with him, but we've got to prepare him for football again."

Bengals Go For Youth

The Cincinnati Bengals are getting ready for the 1989 season without receiver Cris Collinsworth and kicker Jim Breech, released as they were poised to set records.

Back in the Bengals' fold are two All-Pro players from last year's Super Bowl team, tight end Rodney Holman and right guard Max Montoya. Montoya signed a contract Sunday and Holman signed Monday to end long holdouts in which they missed training camp and all four preseason games.

Contract details were not disclosed. Both players could be activated for Sunday's season opener in Chicago.

Still holding out is Bengals wide receiver Eddie Brown. He led the team's pass catchers last season, but wants a contract reportedly in the $900,000-a-year range. The Bengals are said to be offering about $650,000.

Collinsworth, 30, an eight-year pro who needed three catches to tie Isaac Curtis' team record of 420 career receptions, and Breech, 33, a 10-year veteran who is Cincinnati's all-time leading scorer, were released Monday on the final roster cut-down day.

Also among 10 players cut was second-round draft pick Freddie Childress of Arkansas, an overweight 350-pound guard who became the second-highest draftee ever released by the Bengals during an initial training camp.

The only player drafted higher and released by the Bengals before his first season was Kansas linebacker Kirby Criswell, an early second-round pick in 1980.

The Bengals released Breech to keep a younger kicker, free agent James Gallery. Collinsworth was released in favor of younger receivers Carl Parker, a second-year pro, and rookie Kendal Smith.

NFL Notes

Anderson Next In Line

Ottis Anderson walked into the New York Giants' training camp this year knowing his career was a bad play, a fumble or blown assignment away from ending.

At thirty-something, Anderson was old man trying to hang on in a league that could easily forget that he was the leading active rusher in the NFC, especially in the presence of a player younger and quicker legs.

Anderson, 32, not only survived, he has become the Giants' No. 1 halfback with Joe Morris out for the season with a broken right foot.

"I fooled you guys again," Anderson said, flashing a big smile. "You guys are always counting out the guys over 30."

Just as quickly, Anderson turned serious.

"This is where the hard part starts," he said. "I've made the team and now I have to prove I belong here."

Anderson is going to have plenty of chances to do that with Morris, the Giants all-time leading rusher, out for the season. There is little doubt he deserves them. He was the Giants' leading rusher in the preseason, running from both one-back and two-back formations and gaining 137 yards on 31 carries, a 4.5-yard average.

Secules Beats Odds

The Miami Dolphins' youth movement includes a new backup quarterback who doesn't have a driver's license.

Scott Secules is old enough to drive, but he lost his wallet on a preseason road trip and hasn't had a chance to get a new license.

Still, Secules is young — 10 years younger than Cliff Stoudt, the player he beat out for the backup job. And Secules, 24, has yet to take a snap in an NFL game, one reason he was surprised when the Dolphins released Stoudt.

"I really didn't put this scenario together," Secules said Tuesday. "Working to make Coach (Don) Shula keep three quarterbacks was my mindset the entire time. I was never targeting the No. 2 spot."

The Dallas Cowboys selected Secules from Virginia in the sixth round of the 1988 draft, and he was active for 13 games last season. But when Dallas drafted Troy Aikman and Steve Walsh this year, Secules knew his NFL future was elsewhere.

The Cowboys traded him to the Dolphins on Aug. 6 for an undisclosed draft choice.

"In Dallas, it was obvious I wasn't going to get an opportunity," he said. "This move to Miami probably was the best thing for me."

In preseason games, Secules completed 26 of 48 passes for 269 yards and two touchdowns, with no interceptions.

"We've been pretty pleased with everything that we've seen of him," Shula said. "He's a good athlete with a strong arm and a good understanding of our offense. It's been apparent right from the beginning that he was going to come in here and compete for that No. 2 spot."

Evert Ends Tennis Career ...

Evert played like a teenager in beating 15-year-old Monica Seles 6-0, 6-2 in the fourth round. But that was as high as she could get.

Against Garrison, Evert actually led 5-2 in the first set. Even then, she admitted she wasn't really in control.

"I think it was more Zina putting me there," she said.

Evert was correct. Garrison finally got untracked, won four straight games, took the tie-breaker 7-1 and broke Evert's serve three times in the second set.

"It was probably the hardest match I've played in my life. It was such an emotional match," Garrison said. "I actually was really happy I was down 5-2. It made me relax."

"I thought I'd have a very good chance to beat her," added Garrison, who was 1-9 lifetime against Evert. "This time, I was going to make her beat me if she was going to beat me."

Because Evert couldn't handle the No. 5 seed, Garrison gets to meet a surging Martina Navratilova in Friday's semifinals. Navratilova, who lost to Garrison in last year's Open quarterfinals and hasn't won a Grand Slam tournament since the 1987 Open, routed No. 7 Manuela Maleeva 6-0, 6-0 in a night match that took 46 minutes.

It was the latest round for a shutout in Open history.

Navratilova obviously was relieved that it would be Garrison, and not her close friend Evert, across the net in her next match.

"It would have taken all my mental powers to put all those years of friendship aside," Navratilova said.

"One part of me wanted to play her and one part of me didn't. Emotionally, it will be easier. With Zina, it's a tennis match; with Chris, it would be a lot more."

"It would have been hard to keep in perspective. It would have been the most emotional match of my life. I can do without it."

She can also do without the emotions Evert must have experienced Tuesday, with her superb career now behind her.

"You want to go out feeling that you played well," Navratilova said. "If you play well against somebody, it's easier to swallow. She put so much emotion into the Seles match, there was not much left."

Navratilova has plenty left. Navratilova recalls telling Anne Miner before the semifinals of the Canadian Open "that I'm playing as good as I did when I was No. 1," a ranking she surrendered to Steffi Graf in August 1987. "She didn't believe me, but when I played her, she said I convinced her. ...

"It's due to very hard work and a commitment on and off the court, physically and also emotionally," Navratilova said. "That's where I've been lacking — I hadn't gotten into a good mindset."

Graf, who seems to be in an equally strong mindset, drew Helena Sukova, and Gabriela Sabatini faced Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in today's women's quarterfinals. The men's matches had Jay Berger against Aaron Krickstein in the afternoon and Boris Becker against Yannick Noah at night.

Navratilova said she would call Evert today. But the fact that their magnificent rivalry — which Navratilova leads 43-37 — is over won't hit home for months.

"I guess I'll have all the geriatric fans," the 32-year-old Navratilova joked. "They've had their emotions divided between Chris and I, but now I guess they'll root for me."

"It will get lonely but I'm not planning to play (Grand Slam events) before Wimbledon. It won't hit me until then but, by then, Chris will be gone a while."

Brown Concerned With UNC Opener

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina football coach Mack Brown says he doesn't expect Virginia Military Institute to run up the white flag when the Tar Heels open their season against the Keydets.

"None of the military teams will give you anything," Brown said Tuesday at the first of his weekly news conferences. "They will not surrender. Our players need to go in there and focus on their jobs."

The Tar Heels are coming off a 1-10 season, while the Keydets went 2-9 last year and dropped their season opener to East Tennessee State last Saturday. North Carolina has won 15 of the 22 games between the two teams, and has won the last four, scoring no less than 51 points in those four victories.

Ten players who have never started a Tar Heel game will be in the opening-day lineup, Brown said. Three of those players are true freshmen.

Perhaps the most experienced player on the field will be North Carolina quarterback Jonathan Hall, a fifth-year senior. Brown said Hall must serve as the Tar Heels' field general.

"Jonathan is a real confident player and is our established No. 1 quarterback," Brown said. "I feel good about that because the teams with the best quarterbacks are the ones that are the most successful. Jonathan has good command our offense, which makes us further along offensively than we are at this point last year."

Brown said sophomore Doxie Jordan, originally slated to start Saturday's game at press safety, will not play because of injuries sustained in a motorcycle accident Saturday.

"It was not his fault," Brown said. "He was riding a motorcycle that was borrowed to go to the store. A car pushed him off the road, and he slid into a construction site."

"Thank God, he's alive, and nothing's broken. But he can't play because of abrasions on his body. The abrasions are the only thing wrong with him. Because of all the rubbing, it hurts him to put his clothes on."

Brown said true freshman Rondell Jones would start in Jordan's place.

Ford: 'Noles Are Dangerous

Clemson coach Danny Ford said Tuesday that Florida State will be an even more dangerous team than usual because the Seminoles are coming off a surprise loss in their season opener.

"Even though they lost the football game last week, I don't anticipate that bothering them except on their won-loss record," Ford said during his weekly news conference.

"I believe their attitude will be, 'Well, someone will have to pay, and it might as well be Clemson because they're next.'"

Southern Mississippi stunned the sixth-ranked Seminoles 30-26.

The Tigers will be hurt by the absence of tailback Terry Allen. Allen, who rushed for 1,192 yards last year and needs 750 yards to become Clemson's all-time leading rusher, was suspended for the Furman game after being charged Aug. 27 with driving under the influence.

Allen was back at practice Monday, but Ford said he wasn't sure whether the 5-foot-11, 200-pound junior would start against the Seminoles.

Another question mark is at quarterback. Senior Chris Morocco is expected to start Saturday for the second straight week. But Ford said that could change.

Asked if Morocco would be under center on Clemson's first snap. Ford said: "If he wants to. He's captain this week. I guess he will, but we haven't even made that determination yet."

Regardless of who starts, Ford said Morocco and sophomore DeChane Cameron will both play "a lot." Morocco, in only his second start, completed eight of 14 passes for 99 yards Saturday. Cameron completed all six of his passes for 67 yards.

FSU Worried About Revenge Factor

Remember the "puntooskie"? Florida State coach Bobby Bowden knows Clemson may remember it too well.

"I imagine that has not set well with them," Bowden said. "On a Tuesday telephone conference call with football writers, 'That was our thing last year.'"

The Seminoles used a fake punt from their own 21 with just 1:30 left and LeRoy Butler ran 28 yards to Clemson's one, setting up Richie Andrews' game-winning field goal of a 24-21 classic.

"I'm sure that has really got Danny (Ford) challenged to get after us," Bowden said. "I can imagine how tired his team is of hearing about that. I can imagine they'll take it out on us this time."

Butler was positioned as a blocker for punter Tim Corley. The ball was snapped to fullback Dayne Williams, who then put the ball between Butler's legs while many defenders were running after Corley, who was pretending the snap had gone over his head.

Bowden knows what goes around comes around. Clemson's coaches, players and fans have been anxiously awaiting Saturday's game.

"They (Clemson) might run it (puntooskie) on us," said Bowden, who said he enjoys the label of a "gambling" coach.

"Last year, they physically beat us up," Bowden said. "They had the game tied and were in a position to win it when that thing happened."

Ross Will Open Up Attack

Georgia Tech football Coach Bobby Ross said he is eager to jump into the season and his team is going to be wide open on offense.

Ross's itchiness to kick off the season does not seem to be tempered by the fact that for the second consecutive season, he is starting with a redshirt freshman at the helm of the offense.

"I'm damn anxious for this season to start. I really am. I have to control myself, because I'm getting emotional just sitting right here," Ross said at a Tuesday news conference. "I think we've got a good football team. I don't think we're a great team by any stretch of the imagination, but we're going to line up with a fighting chance, and I feel very good about that."

Starting at quarterback will be freshman Shawn Jones of Thomasville, who won the spot over three other candidates, all of whom were interchanged during pre-season practice.

"Our players have taken to him extremely well," Ross said. "He doesn't get rattled over a bad play. He has a lot of confidence in his ability."

The Yellow Jackets begin their season Saturday against North Carolina State in Raleigh, N.C.

The Wolfpack likely will put Tech's offense to the test. N.C. State held Maryland's offense to less than 300 yards last Saturday.

of time teaching, trying to coax what he can out of the Chargers.

"I felt like Conley had a more talented team, but not that much more talented," he said. "That was the fact that I tried to get across to my players."

"There is a difference between playing up to your potential and getting beat and playing sorry and getting beat. We played sorry."

In Plymouth, Ayden-Grifton takes on one of the top quarterbacks in the eastern prep ranks in Shawn Walker, who passed for over 1,000 yards last year.

"When you consider that in our defensive secondary, we have two people playing hurt (Jay Tripp, shoulder, and Rashid Williams, thigh) and a third person (Chad Tulloch) who hasn't played any football since junior high, we've got a big question mark stopping a passing team like Plymouth," Chappell said.

The Chargers also will likely be without starting fullback Scott Cannon, who suffered a hip pointer against Conley.

Farmville Central

The 2-0 Jaguars are on the road this week, traveling to Louisburg, 0-2, for a non-conference matchup.

With a non-conference game the following week against cross-county rival D.H. Conley, Farmville coach Dixon Sauls is keeping firmly focused on the task at hand — Louisburg.

"It's most important," he said. "We're trying to build momentum. We're only concerned with this week. We want to play hard and we want to play well."

"We're pretty simplistic in our approach. We want to be an improved football team over what we've been the last two weeks."

Louisburg, which plays in the Capital Area 2-A, runs out of the pro-I and utilizes a shotgun formation in the passing dominated offense.

Farmville overcame a slow start

Friday against Roanoke before rolling to a 38-6 win.

"We were distracted early with so many penalties," Sauls said. "It upset the rhythm early. In the second quarter, we did some good things. It was 32-0 at one time. We were ready to play. We just lost our concentration."

Farmville is relatively healthy, with the lone exception being defensive lineman/running back Calvin Jordan, who is likely out for the game to an injury sustained against the Redskins.

Farmville accumulated 245 yards rushing against Roanoke, including 133 by Rasel Daniels. Two of quarterback Morris Foreman's three completions went for touchdowns.

North Pitt

North Pitt is seeking its first win of the season this week against D.H. Conley after a 19-6 loss to North Edgemore last Friday.

"I thought the ballgame was much closer than the score indicated," Panther coach Stuart Ennis said. "At one point, it was 13-6 and we had the ball on the six and turned it over."

"They had two big gainers. They had 249 yards rushing and 152 of that came on two big plays. One was good execution on their part and one was poor execution on our part."

North Pitt, which lost heavily off last year's team, has had a challenging early schedule which has taken its toll. In the first two games alone, the Panthers have faced one of the top running backs in the East in West Craven's Lee Becton, and one of the area's top quarterbacks in North Edgemore's Orlando Whitaker.

"It's been pretty darn tough," Ennis said. "I don't know of many folks that have any tougher of a schedule the first part of the season that we have. West Craven is picked preseason fifth in the East. North Edgemore is picked number one in the east. Conley is up there."

"We have a very tough schedule, but I can't help but believe it is going to help us. If we can survive this, I think our kids know the situation. Week by week, it's tough to look at those kids and say let's go, let's keep going."

"Last week we had a good week of practice. Monday, I was real pleased. We were out of school and every kid was at practice. Our kids know where we want to get and they believe that we are going to get there. We're just going through some rocky times."

One bright spot has been the play of converted running back Reggie Daniels, who was a three-year starter at end.

In two games, Daniels has 264 yards on 39 carries with one touchdown to lead area running backs.

"I think Reggie had the best football game he's ever had at North Pitt Friday night," Ennis said. "He did a real good job running the ball. He delivered blows instead of taking them. As well as having a good offensive game, he had a good game defensively."

U.S. Airlifts Ambassador From Beirut Embassy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. Ambassador John McCarthy and his staff were evacuated by helicopter today and on their way home after hundreds of Christians besieged the U.S. Embassy to press for action against Syria.

The 30 diplomats were flown to Cyprus because "deteriorating local circumstances ... no longer permitted the embassy to function effectively," said Keith Peterson, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Nicosia.

The sudden decision to pull out of Lebanon, where Christian forces and Syrian troops have been battling for six months, came after hundreds of angry Christians surrounded the embassy compound Tuesday in hopes of forcing Washington to take a tougher stand against the Syrian presence in Lebanon.

Gen. Michel Aoun, who heads the Christian Cabinet in Lebanon's dual government, said in a statement released by his office: "It seems the American Caine couldn't endure the stare of the Lebanese Abel so he left."

Peterson called the evacuation temporary. Dismissing accusations the traditionally pro-American Lebanese Christians have repeated in recent days, he stressed: "The United States of America is not abandoning Lebanon."

He said the diplomatic staff would return "when the situation permits."

The U.S. Embassy is in the country's Christian enclave, where some 1 million Christians have been trapped for six months, ringed by the hostile Syrians and their allies and angry that the West has not come to their rescue.

Peterson added: "The personnel were evacuated to Cyprus and are being flown from Cyprus to their final destination." He would not give details of their travel plans.

The ambassador and 29 American staff were flown by helicopter to a British sovereign base in Cyprus. Three hours later, they took off aboard a military aircraft for Italy, informed sources in Cyprus said.

The sources, who insisted on not being identified further, said the DC-9 aircraft departed at noon from the Akrotiri base in southern Cyprus bound for a NATO military base in Sigonella, Sicily.

But sources said the DC-9 and "several" helicopters flown from Sixth Fleet ships in the Mediterranean landed at Akrotiri Tuesday night.

Three helicopters took off at first light and returned about two hours later, landing at Akrotiri at about 8:45 a.m. with the diplomats aboard. British officers on the base declined comment.

One of the sources said the helicopters airlifted McCarthy and the diplomats from the embassy compound, and not from any of the regular Lebanese army air bases in the Christian heartland.

A diplomatic source, insisting on anonymity, said the British Embassy in Beirut was informed of the decision to evacuate the American embassy staff Tuesday night.

The Foreign Office in London said its diplomats had no immediate plans to follow suit. About 15 British embassy staff are in Beirut.

A Lebanese army spokesman, who insisted on anonymity, said the Americans had notified Aoun of their "intention to leave."

The Christians besieging the embassy compound were angry at the United States for not coming to their aid against the Syrian army and its Moslem allies since hostilities began March 8. Fighting between the factions has since claimed the lives of 827 people and wounded 2,452.

The crowd went into a frenzy Tuesday, shouting "McCarthy Go Home" and waving placards and posters denouncing America.

Christian sources said the embassy siege was designed by Aoun to whip up anti-American sentiment among Christians inside and outside Lebanon, to bring pressure to bear on the United States.

The demonstrators said Tuesday that their peaceful siege would go on "until our demands are met."

They demanded that McCarthy submit his credentials to "the legitimate Lebanese authorities represented by General Aoun" and official U.S. recognition of Aoun's authority.

Acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss, a Sunni Moslem, is competing for legitimacy with Aoun's three-member Christian Cabinet.

McCarthy took up his post in September 1988 after the emergence of the dual government and has not submitted his credentials to either Cabinet. He has publicly criticized Syria for not responding to a U.S. behest to negotiate with Aoun, but Aoun has charged that Washington is not turning sufficient heat on Syria.

The Christian enclave has taken a fearful pounding from Syrian artillery since March, when Aoun launched his self-proclaimed "war of liberation" to force the Syrians to withdraw their 40,000 troops in Lebanon.

Even though his forces are outnumbered and outgunned, his objective appeared to be to mobilize U.S. and European support for the Christians.

That strategy has patently failed. Washington has made sympathetic noises, but has made it clear it has no intention of getting drawn into the Lebanese quagmire again.

The U.S.-trained Aoun has sharply attacked the United States in recent statements.

Last week, he told a news conference that Washington has sold Lebanon to Syria and was "giving Syria one chance after the other to strike at Lebanon militarily without even denouncing any crime being committed in Lebanon."

U.S. Backs Plan For Arab Voting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, in a move to break a diplomatic impasse in the Middle East, is seeking Arab and Israeli support for a proposal by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak for holding Palestinian elections, U.S. officials say.

Among the 10-point proposal's key elements are provisions for voting by Palestinian residents of Jerusalem and for the temporary withdrawal of Israeli troops from voting areas throughout the West Bank and in Gaza.

"This is a start," an official said Tuesday. "It's the kind of thing we need."

But he and other U.S. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said it was not clear if Mubarak's ideas were acceptable to Israel or to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

A plan pushed by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has the administration's endorsement. The PLO, which has the power to block its implementation, is cool to a key provision: temporary self-rule but not statehood for the 1.4 million Palestinian Arabs who live on the West Bank and in Gaza.

The territories were captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Six-Day war and are under Israeli control. The PLO demands a state — an outcome opposed by both Israel and the United States.

Shamir's idea is to have elected Palestinians negotiate with Israel a temporary arrangement for self-rule in the territories. This would be followed by talks on an overall Middle East settlement involving also Jordan and Egypt.

Among Mubarak's suggestions, officials said, were the temporary withdrawal of Israeli troops from polling areas and participation in the balloting by Palestinians who live in East Jerusalem.

Also, leaders of the Palestinian insurrection on the West Bank and in Gaza who have been deported would have a role to play by conveying their negotiating ideas to Palestinian residents.

Israel, which has vowed never to relinquish control of Jerusalem, its capital, is opposed to balloting by Palestinians who live in the city. It is one of the main sticking points in the so-far unsuccessful U.S. effort to launch negotiations.

Mubarak's idea, the official said, is to have the Palestinians vote outside Jerusalem and then return to their homes.

The PLO, meanwhile, has denounced the election plan as a ploy to ward off establishment of a Palestinian state.

In light of these and other differences, Mubarak's proposal was warmly received by the Bush administration.

"Mubarak's approach is a way of getting the election proposal to take a few steps forward," an official said. "He has offered himself as a mediator, to bridge the gap."

Another U.S. official, also insisting on anonymity, said "these are interesting ideas. The Egyptians are trying to help the process of getting to elections."

Outdoor Gatherings Banned In Bogota

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Bogota's mayor has banned large public gatherings, fearing terrorist attacks by drug gangs trying to halt a U.S.-backed crackdown that police say has virtually paralyzed Colombia's cocaine-producing labs.

In Washington Tuesday night, President Bush declared war on drug traffickers and users and praised the Colombian government's 2½-week-old offensive against the world's most powerful drug barons.

The speech was broadcast live in Colombia and within a half-hour two bombs exploded at banks in the cocaine trafficking center of Medellin, injuring seven people, the radio network Caracol reported.

An army colonel's wife was shot to death earlier in the day on a Bogota street, but police said it was not clear if the killing was related to the campaign against the cocaine cartels.

The government, meanwhile, remained silent about a pending decision on the extradition of Eduardo Martinez Romero, an alleged finance chief for the Medellin drug cartel, the world's largest.

"I have no information on that," said Communications Ministry spokesman Eduardo Barcha.

The communications minister, Carlos Lemos Simonds, is filling in for traveling Justice Minister Monica de Greiff and would have a say in deciding Romero's fate. Mrs. de Greiff is in the United States.

The U.S. Embassy also issued a "no comment."

Romero, a 35-year-old economist, is wanted by a federal court in Atlanta for participating in a $1.2 billion money laundering operation.

He was arrested in the first days of the anti-narcotics offensive launched by President Virgilio Barco on Aug. 18 in response to the assassinations of a judge, a police colonel and a highly popular presidential candidate, Luis Carlos Galan.

As part of the campaign, Barco revived extradition to the United States, which had been nullified by Colombian Supreme Court rulings in 1967 and 1989. The last Colombian suspect shipped to the United States was cocaine cartel boss Carlos Lehder, sentenced to life in prison by a Florida court last year.

Salvadoran Rebels Agree To Peace Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Salvadoran rebels have discarded previous conditions and accepted an offer by Salvador's new rightist president to hold talks aimed at ending the country's 10-year-old civil war, proposing they begin next week.

"We're taking away practically all obstacles," Ana Guadalupe Martinez, a rebel commander, told a Mexico City news conference on Tuesday.

There was no immediate response from the Salvadoran government, but it did announce a 48-hour cease-fire to begin Sept. 14 and coincide with the celebration of Central America's independence from Spain in 1821.

If the Salvadoran government agrees to peace talks, it would be the first meeting between representatives of the belligerents since President Alfredo Cristiani took office June 1 and called for peace talks.

The guerrillas agreed at the time but the effort stalled because of a failure to agree on the details.

In a significant softening of previous rebel conditions, Ms. Martinez said the rebels would bargain with any committee the government names.

Before, they had insisted that an army representative and high-level officials be at the negotiating table. They rejected one delegation the government considered on grounds its members would not have the power to negotiate.

The rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front represents five left-wing guerrilla groups that have been fighting a succession of U.S.-backed Salvadoran governments since 1979.

In announcing the cease-fire Tuesday in El Salvador, Col. Innocente Montano, the vice minister of defense, did not mention the rebel proposal for peace talks. But he but told reporters the cease-fire "is a positive initiative ... as long as it is respected" by the rebels.

A cease-fire for the independence festivities had been suggested Monday by the Permanent Committee of the National Debate for Peace, an organization representing more than 70 church, union, humanitarian and civic groups.

The government and rebel announcements followed a battle in northeastern El Salvador Tuesday in which at least 16 soldiers were killed. Salvadoran armed forces spokesmen reported the deaths and said the rebels also suffered "numerous casualties."

The rebels suggested the period of Sept. 10-14 as dates and Mexico as a site for talks in a proposal sent to Cristiani on Friday through Monsignor Arturo Rivera Damas, the Roman Catholic archbishop of San Salvador, Ms. Martinez said.

Thirty East Germans Make Dash From Hungary To Reach Austria

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUDAPEST, Hungary — At least 30 East Germans tired of waiting for a promised mass exodus to the West made a risky overnight dash across the Hungarian border into Austria, the Red Cross said today.

They escaped Tuesday as East German officials set up camp outside a tent community in Budapest sheltering 5,500, would-be emigres and began trying to persuade the refugees to return to East Germany.

The number of escapees was much higher than in recent days, when increased Hungarian border patrols and prospects of an imminent, sponsored exodus to West Germany apparently deterred East Germans from fleeing illegally to Austria.

Austrian Red Cross officials said the 30 East Germans made it across the border, where Hungary began dismantling fortifications in May but still maintains some stretches of barbed wire and other barriers.

In Budapest, refugees gathered near a brown-and-white trailer of the East German Embassy towed into place across the road from their camp.

But none approached the door in the first hour, and several of those waiting to leave for Austria and then West Germany derided their hard-line Communist country's attempts to win them back.

"They must really be stupid to come here," said a heavy-set East German who was among the first to set up residence at the Zugliget tent camp when it opened mid-August. "But I guess they have no choice, it's either victory or Siberia for them."

"It's a disgrace," yelled a woman in another small group. "No one is going to go in there anyway."

Relief worker Csilla Von Boeselager said camp residents have been asked to refrain from "unwise actions" against the East German diplomats or their trailer.

First Secretary Dieter Grahmann of the East German Embassy told reporters crowding their trailer that any refugees were free "to discuss the situation" with him or Second Secretary Wolfgang Forster.

East Germany increased efforts Tuesday to persuade the refugees to return home, with Grahmann handing out leaflets promising no penalties for those who give up their quest to go West.

He retreated after being mobbed by a hostile crowd.

Several refugees told reporters today that they are resigned to long stays in Hungary, after officials deflated hopes that their departure for West Germany was imminent.

"They're going to let us out anyway, there's no reason for desperation," said one refugee. "I've waited to leave for the West for seven years at home, another few months won't matter."

With legal travel difficult to the West but relatively easy to Hungary, a liberal Soviet bloc country, East Germans began fleeing from Hungary to Austria in droves after Hungary removed some wire barriers and observation posts from its 120-mile westernmost border.

Hungary has defied a bilateral agreement with East Germany and refused to send back East Germans trying to flee their homeland.

West German politicians said last week the Hungarian leadership also has promised to let would-be emigres go to West Germany, which grants them automatic citizenship and generous social benefits.

Expectations were lifted last week when West German authorities built five tent cities to house the East Germans in Bavaria. But senior Hungarian officials cautioned Monday and Tuesday that departure could be weeks away because Hungary still is seeking grudging East German agreement.

Peter Dickscheidt of the West German Maltesian Aid Organization said about 5,500 would-be emigres were registered by early today at the four Budapest camps and a fifth on Balaton Lake, 90 miles southwest of the capital.

46 Survive Crash Of Brazilian Jet

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — A disabled Brazilian jetliner crash-landed in a remote wilderness area of the Amazon basin with 54 people aboard, and 46 of them survived, the Aeronautics Ministry reported Tuesday. The news came two days after the Boeing 737-200 disappeared.

The last radio contact with the Varig plane had been Sunday evening. It reported trouble with its navigation equipment and with an engine.

An air search Monday and early Tuesday across a huge area of tropical forest in Para and Mato Grosso states, south of the Amazon River, failed to find the missing craft. Four survivors then appeared on a ranch near the northern border of Mato Grosso, a spokesman for the Aeronautics Ministry said by telephone from Brasilia, the national capital.

The spokesman said eight persons were killed, but the dead were not immediately identified.

Although the plane was located, the 42 survivors at the site had to spend a third night in the wilderness because rescue operations were suspended until daylight Wednesday, the spokesman said.

According to one report, the plane landed in a small clearing in the dense tropical forest. "It must have been a good place for so many to survive," the ministry spokesman said.

Another ministry spokesman, Col. Ronaldo Borges, said the survivors, including all six crew members, were in good condition.

"The information we have is that the general condition of the survivors is good," Borges told reporters. "We are expecting the last survivor to be efficiently rescued by midday tomorrow (Wednesday)."

Rio's Radio Nacional said earlier that one survivor, Epaminondas Chaves, had walked to a ranch and used a shortwave radio to call his wife in the city of Maraba. The wife told Radio Nacional that four persons aboard the airliner were killed and six others were in "grave" condition. Apparently, four of the injured persons later died.

Joao Alves da Silva Jr., a ham radio operator in Sao Paulo state, said he also spoke by radio with Chaves. Silva said Chaves told him that the plane landed in a clearing the size of a soccer field and that he had walked about three hours before reaching a ranch.

The ranch had no radio, but the owner took Chaves to a neighboring ranch that did, Silva said. After Chaves' radio contact, Brazilian air force plane spotted the grounded airliner, but by then it was late in the afternoon.

Chaves and two other passengers were taken to the Caximbo air force base in southern Para state, where rescue operations will be coordinated, said the government news agency Radiobras.

Paper Says Plant Blast Killed Hundreds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — As many as 700 Iraqis and Egyptians were killed last month in an explosion at a secret missile center near the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, a British newspaper reported today.

The Independent, quoting unidentified diplomats and Middle East sources, said the Aug. 17 blast started a fire that took firefighting planes nearly a week to extinguish. It said no reports of the disaster had appeared in the official Iraqi news media.

The paper said Iraq, with Egyptian assistance, is believed to be developing missile technology at the center near Al Hillah, 40 miles south of Baghdad.

The British Broadcasting Corp. quoted an unnamed Egyptian Defense Ministry official and Western diplomats in Baghdad as confirming that there had been an explosion, but saying details were sketchy.

The official spokesman for the Egyptian Defense Ministry is on vacation and his office in Cairo referred calls today to military intelligence, where a spokesman told The Associated Press he had not heard about the incident.

The Independent quoted U.S. diplomats as saying they had received information from Iraqi sources of a major accident in the second half of August in which the casualty toll numbered in the low hundreds. But it quoted unspecified other sources as saying that 700 bodies had been recovered.

BBC Radio quoted an Egyptian official as saying there had been an explosion, but he had no details of any Egyptians injured in the blast.

It quoted unnamed Western diplomats in Baghdad as saying there was an explosion in a factory south of the city on or about Aug. 19 but that details were sketchy and they had no reliable information about deaths, injuries or the extent of injuries.

The Independent quoted sources as saying the blast destroyed a third of the huge center, which contained workers' housing as well as armament factories.

The paper said there was no immediate suggestion of sabotage.

"The casualties appear to have included Egyptian military and civilian engineers as well as Iraqi defense workers," The Independent said. "Sources in Cairo said that three Egyptian Air Force transports flew from Iraq to the al-Mazha air base on 18 August, apparently carrying dead and injured from the explosion. ..."

"Egyptian sources said the Maadi military hospital in Cairo was closed to civilian visitors from 19 August and doctors and nurses specializing in skin grafts, respiratory disorders and burns were drafted in."

A senior administrative official at the hospital, who requested his name not be used, told the AP today that the hospital was not closed to civilians last month. He denied that any large numbers of Egyptian engineers had been treated there.

The Independent said Egyptian personnel have been based in Iraq for two years. It reported: "The joint Egyptian-Iraqi team succeeded in producing a longer-range version of the Soviet-made Scud-B missile by adding a North Korean-made supplementary fuel tank and reducing the payload. ..."

"The team also developed the Badr-2000, an improved version of the Argentine Condor-2."

Surprises Surface For ECU Divers

Team Surveys Lakes' Graveyard

By George A. Threewitts
ECU NEWS BUREAU

An underwater graveyard in a notorious passageway for ships on the Great Lakes turned up some surprises for East Carolina University divers and archaeologists this summer.

"It was a junkyard of 19th-century ship parts," said Bradley A. Rodgers, an ECU underwater archaeologist with the graduate program in maritime history and underwater research.

Rodgers led a summer field school team of divers to the northern tip of Wisconsin in July and August to survey an area known as Death's Door Passage, a rocky channel linking Lake Michigan with Green Bay.

The biggest surprise, Rodgers said, was that out of the more than 500 ships known to have sunk in the area, only a handful of wrecked ships remain intact. Ship's timbers, iron plates and other parts are scattered across the rocky bottom and along shorelines stirred by strong currents, winter ice packs and unruly weather conditions.

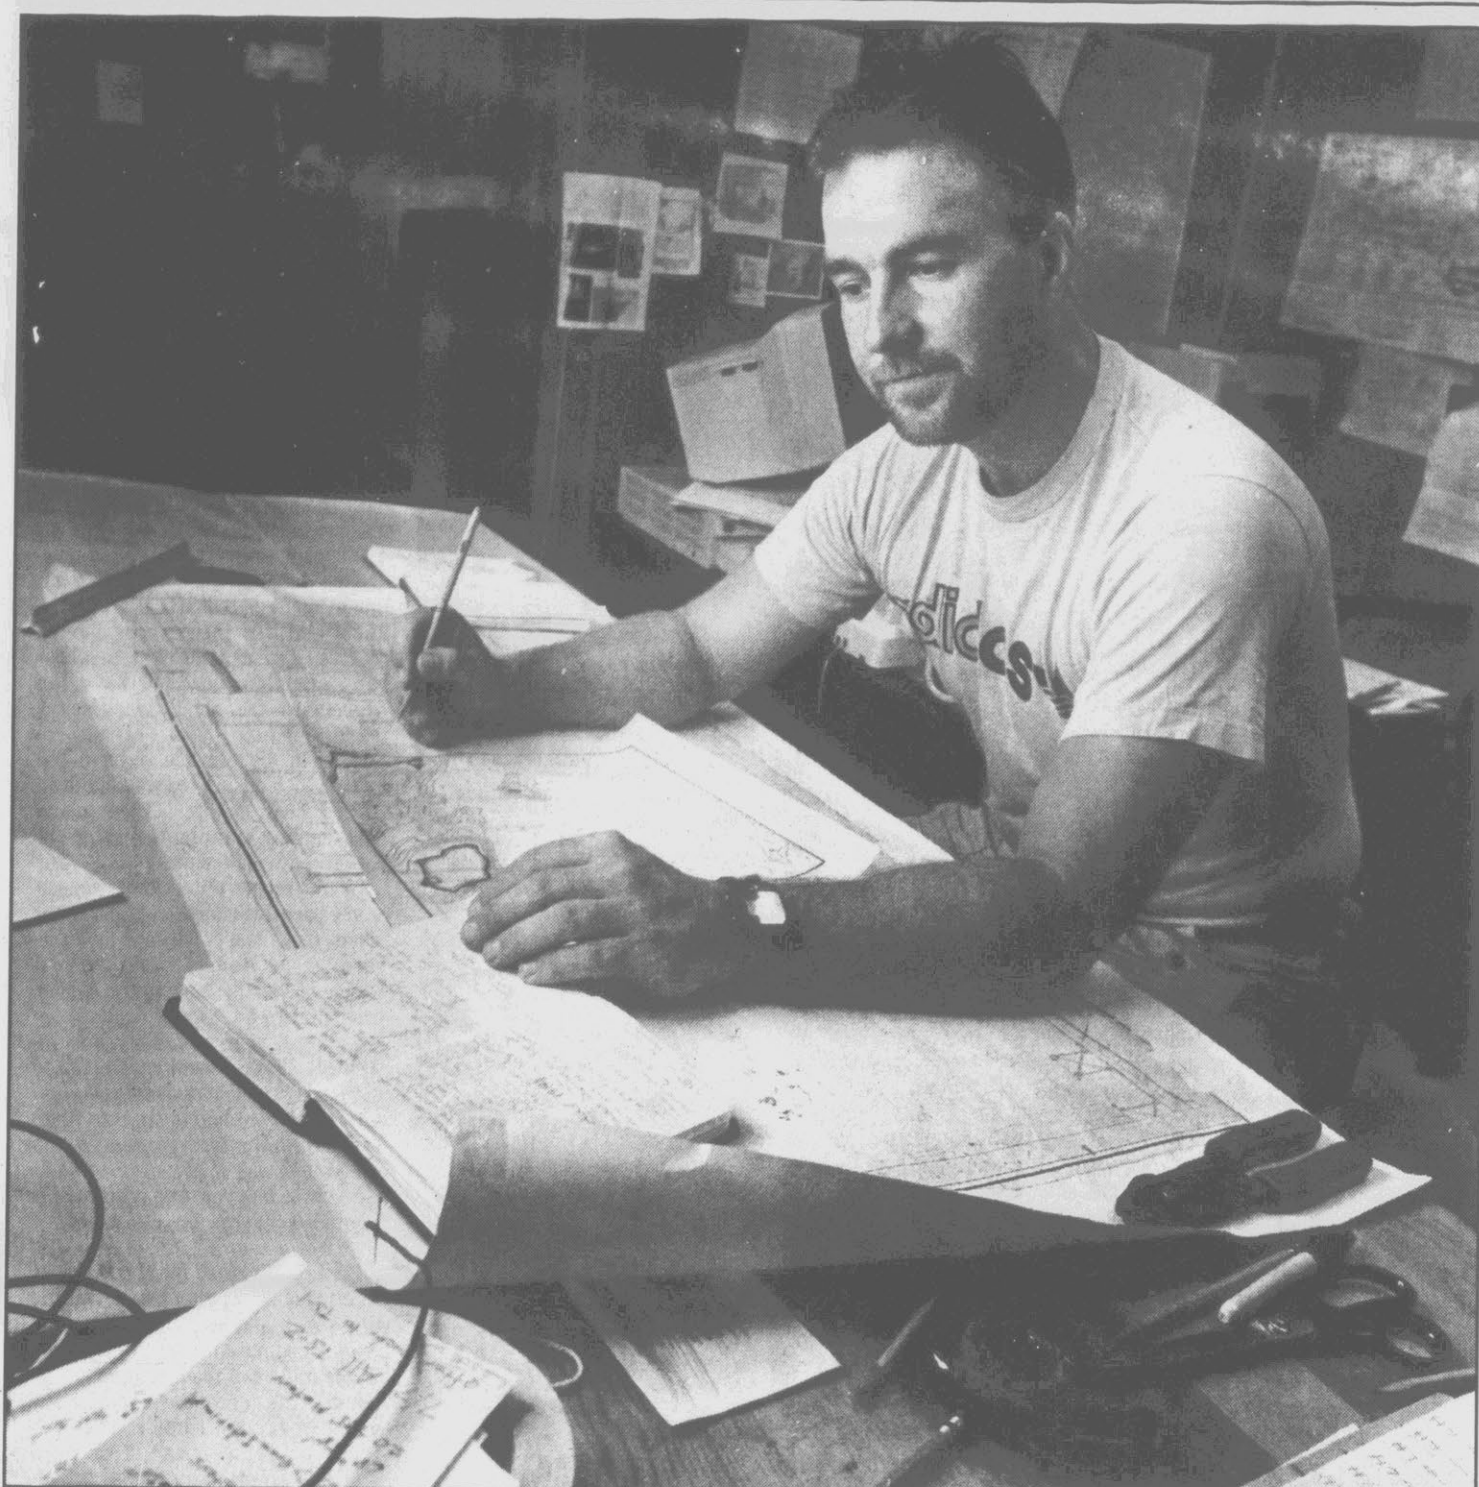

"It was as if the ships were thrown in a blender, stirred, and dumped back out again," Rodgers said.

Using electronic instruments, the ECU team scanned the bottom working along straight lines that extended out like wheel spokes for over a mile from Pilot Island in the center of the passage. With bottom-sensing instruments towed behind a power boat, the team charted the location of submerged objects. When a target was noted, divers were sent below to recover or identify the artifact.

"The ships' parts gave our students a good look at how ships changed from wood to iron," Rodgers said.

He said the water, although cold, also provided good visibility for the divers.

Rodgers said only six shipwrecks could be located in the survey area, all on the shoals around Pilot Island. Although the ships were battered by storms and ice, their hulls were intact. Cold, fresh water of Lake Michigan kept the timbers and fittings preserved.

ECU News Bureau/Tony Rumble

Rodgers led the ECU team to 'Death's Door Passage,' which links Lake Michigan to Green Bay, Wisc.

At one site, the hull of a vessel had been piled up on top of another as if the two had been swept up by a bulldozer.

The survey was sponsored by the Historical Society of Wisconsin, which along with the state of Wisconsin is considering ways to better manage the resources of the area.

While surprised by the absence of intact ships, Rodgers said the scattered remains provide science with interesting information. It could lead to more study of the environmental conditions in the area.

Ice is one of the factors damaging the shipwreck sites, according to Rodgers. He said packs of ice may have 'bulldozed' over the shipwrecks scattering the parts.

Another factor is the heavy currents and a solid bottom that causes the ship parts to move about like tumbleweed.

Weather is a factor affecting the breakup of the shipwrecks too. Differing weather patterns from Lake Michigan and Green Bay collide in Death's Door Passage, creating the sometimes violent weather that may have contributed to both loss of ships and the absence of complete shipwrecks.

Rodgers said one storm the team experienced in Wisconsin produced 40 mile-per-hour winds and eight-foot seas. He said the storm was so bad they had to haul their boat out of the water at the marina in Ellison Bay where the boat was docked.

In addition to their survey at Death's Door Passage, the team visited the site of Fort Niagara on the Niagara River in New York where they helped with the excavation of an 18th-century French, British and American site.

Archaeologists at the site are trying to locate the shoreline that existed in the 1700s. The excavation there began on land but now extends out into the river where numerous well-preserved artifacts are being found.

Rodgers said the project in New York is important to archaeology because work at the site could prove that soil stratigraphy, an important aspect of surface or terrestrial archaeology, also occurs underwater. He said land-based archaeologists have tended to ignore underwater archaeology because of the absence of stratigraphy at underwater sites.

The team also dived at the site of another underwater project in Buffalo, N.Y. This shipwreck is believed to be the paddle-wheel steamer Alabama that sank in 1853 in the Buffalo Harbor.

The 1989 field school team from ECU was comprised of Rodgers, a native of Green Bay, Wis.; Steve Sellers of ECU, a dive safety officer, and students John Jensen of Homer, Ala.; Chris Gober of Bloomington, Ind., and Lolly Ritchey of Carmel, Calif.

Ayden Collard Festival Begins

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

AYDEN — The introduction of several exhibitions should make this year's Ayden Collard Festival, which began Tuesday, bigger and better than ever, according to a festival spokeswoman.

In addition to the traditional events like the crowning of Miss Collard and collard-eating contests, the 1989 festival features a shag exhibition, a Suzuki violinist and a horticulture and agriculture demonstration.

The latter is like the demonstration seen at the county fair, said Laura Webb, festival chairwoman. Oddities like the largest watermelon and pumpkin will be shown, as will foods such as homemade breads.

"They will show cream of the crop produce," Mrs. Webb said.

The parade, which begins at 11 a.m. Saturday, and will go up Third Street, turn on West Avenue and proceed back down Second street. It is expected to last about an hour.

The collard-eating contest is set for the outdoor stage. It is open to the first 15 people who get there. Contestants will be provided with collards, cornbread and tea, but will be judged only on the amount of collards they eat.

The top collard-eater wins a trophy and $50. If the winner breaks the festival record by more than a quarter pound, an additional $25 bonus will be awarded.

Tuesday night's womanless beauty pageant was cancelled for lack of participation, Mrs. Webb said, but she doesn't expect that to be a reflection of the entire festival.

"We anticipate a large crowd and we have something for everybody," Mrs. Webb said. "This is a festive occasion for all to enjoy."

Here's a look at the festival schedule:

Wednesday

- 6 p.m. Rides open on East Avenue.
- 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Talent show at the outdoor stage on West Avenue.
- 8:30 p.m. Live DJ and music from Hot 104 radio station.

Thursday

- 6 p.m. Rides open on East Avenue.
- 8 p.m. Miss Collard Beauty Pageant, Ayden Recreation Center.

Friday

- 5 p.m. Rides open on East Avenue.
- 7 p.m. Square Dancers perform at outdoor stage on West Street.
- 8 p.m. to 12 p.m. Street dance with music provided by the country and western band Runner, performing at the outdoor stage on West Street.

Saturday

- 8 a.m. Golf tournament at Ayden Golf and Country Club. Information: Tim Smith at 746-3389.
- 9 a.m. Horticulture and Agricultural Fair, Ayden Recreation Center.
- 9 a.m. Tennis tournament, Third Street Park.
- 9:30 a.m. A Suzuki violinist will perform at the outdoor stage.
- 10 a.m. Rides and game booths open on East Street.
- 10 a.m. Judging and selling of arts and crafts at the community building on East Second Street.
- 10:30 a.m. Official opening activities, reviewing stand, West Avenue.
- 11 a.m. Collard Festival Parade begins.
- 1:15 p.m. Collard-cooking contest, outdoor stage, West Avenue.
- 2 p.m. Collard-eating contest, outdoor stage.
- 3 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. The Buck Swamp Kicking Cloggers from Goldsboro will perform at the outdoor stage.
- 3:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. Jerry Jolly and Steve Creech will perform at the outdoor stage.
- 4 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. The Buck Swamp Kicking Cloggers, outdoor stage.
- 5 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. McDonald Karate School gives demonstration at outdoor stage.

Very Little New In The New Fall Television Shows

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — If you didn't know better, you'd swear it was this TV season, not last year's, suffering from the creative woes of a writers strike.

The 1989-90 season that officially begins Sept. 18 offers witches, nuns, inner-city teachers, cute families and buddy cops.

Very little here hasn't been seen before.

Alarmingly, there are fewer exceptions to the rule that network fare must strive to reach new depths of mediocrity. This isn't going to help the networks stem the audience erosion that has plagued them in recent years. Who wouldn't rather rent a movie that be stuck with "Baywatch?"

In seasons past, previewing the fall shows generally revealed a few that broke the same-old-stuff mold — the "Frank's Places" and "Miami Vices" and "Hill Street Blues."

Most of this year's new shows range from dismal to mediocre — BUT...

ABC does have the admirable "Life Goes On," a wry and realistic family drama whose cast includes a real-life Down's syndrome actor playing a teen-age son who has the condition.

And CBS has "The Famous Teddy Z," a sophisticated, inside-show business comedy starring Jon Cryer ("Pretty in Pink") as a mail-room nobody instantly elevated to high-powered agent. It was created by Hugh Wilson, who was owed one by CBS after the network canceled his critically acclaimed "Frank's Place."

Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner, producers of the hits "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne" and "A Different World," will try to do it again with "Chicken Soup," on ABC, starring stand-up comic Jackie Mason as a nice Jewish man having an affair with his Catholic neighbor, played by Lynn Redgrave.

And CBS has "Major Dad," a sitcom starring the bankable Gerald McRaney ("Simon & Simon") as a macho, right-wing Marine trying to adjust to married life with a liberal wife (Shanna Reed) and three stepdaughters.

NBC could break some ground with the political crime drama "Mancuso, FBI," starring Robert Loggia as the burned-out FBI agent he played in the provocative miniseries "Favorite Son."

And no one can accuse ABC's "Doogie Howser, M.D." of copycatting. The half-hour "dramedy," from Steven Bochco ("L.A. Law," "Hooperman") revolves around a 16-year-old boy wonder who is a physician.

Otherwise, the fall lineup looks like rehashes, also-rans and sleep aids.

NBC had little room for improvement, having already pummeled ABC and CBS for four seasons. But in its effort to seek the perfect prime-time schedule it has deigned to do some minor tinkering, adding five new shows. ABC and CBS added nine and eight, respectively.

There's NBC's "Sister Kate," starring Stephanie Beacham, former glamour girl on "Dynasty," who is surprisingly well-cast as a crotchety nun with a passel of precious urchins.

"Nutt House" is mindless slapstick about an ill-run New York hotel, starring Harvey Korman and Cloris Leachman. It comes from Mel Brooks who teamed with wunderkind Alan Spencer, creator of "Sledge Hammer!" It is paired with "Night Court," which looks like educational television by comparison.

What would society do without a network hour devoted to the emotional involvements of scantily clad lifeguards? NBC has met the

Knit Vest Fun, Fast To Finish

Looking for a quickie project — one that you could finish in a weekend? As hard as that may be to believe, this knit vest is great fun to do as well as fast to finish. Cloud-soft brushed acrylic yarn and large needles are used to create alternating panels of shell stitch and stockinette stitch.

This figure-flattering design, knitted from side to side, features a deep V-neck and extended armholes, which can be adjusted easily depending on the length of your side seam. A bare minimum of shaping is required. The gauge is a quick 2½ stitches to the inch, and easy-to-follow directions are for small, medium and large.

To obtain directions for making the Special Vest, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-090389 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-090389 by sending a check or money order for $10.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of the following colors: jade; mauve; coral-rose; off-white; red or French blue.

If you would like to try the pattern stitch panels used in today's featured vest, cast on 24 stitches. We used double strands of worsted-weight brushed acrylic yarn and size 13 needles, but you can practice with any needles and yarn you have on hand. Start with 1 knit row and 1 purl row, then begin the shell pattern that follows.

Pat's Pointers By PAT TREXLER

Repeat Steps 1 and 2 across to end of row.

Row 2 — Slip 6 stitches from the left-hand needle to the right-hand needle purlwise, dropping the wrapped loops (thus creating long stitches). Step 2: Slip these 6 long stitches back to the left-hand needle. Step 3: Slip 3 stitches from the left needle to a cable stitch holder and hold behind your work. Step 4: Purl 3 from the left needle. Step 5: Purl 3 from the cable holder. Repeat these five steps across to the end of the row.

Rows 3 through 8 at least once more or until you are at ease with the shell pattern stitch.

Dear Pat: Could you discuss methods of enlarging a pattern? So many patterns that I like are not large enough for me. — A Knitter, Whitensville, Mass.

Dear Knitter: The vest featured today would be an easy choice for enlarging as it is worked from side to side, beginning and ending with stockinette stitch rows at each side edge. For each size larger that you need on this particular pattern, add two extra rows of stockinette stitch at the beginning and end of the front and back sections.

The only shaping needed is for the deep V-neck, and this would remain just as it is given on the pattern leaflet. The deep armholes will probably be large enough unless your upper arms are unusually large. On this pattern, you sew the side seams up to the point where the armholes begin. So, if you do need more ar-whole depth, just make the side seams shorter by an inch or two.

In the more common method of working from the bottom edge to the shoulders and neck, you would have to add extra stitches instead of extra rows. With this method of working, you will need to have a good understanding of stitch gauge — which is the term most often ignored by knitters and crocheters — and how it affects the width of your garment. Also, adjustments, based on stitch gauge, will have to be made for armhole, neck and shoulder shaping. Since this will require more in-depth explanations, I will save this subject for a later column.

She Said 'No' Then, They Say 'Yes' Now

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: My heart went out to "Upset in Minnesota," who had saved his money to splurge on a nice Father's Day brunch, only to have his father show up with his new wife. No doubt "Upset" was looking forward to a father-and-son brunch.

I notice so many letters in your column contain problems created by the second wife who always wants to be "in the picture," so to speak. In most cases, the second marriage is a traumatic experience for the children, who deserve more consideration than they really get.

As a second wife, during the early years of our marriage, I encouraged my husband to attend his family's graduations, weddings, family reunions and special occasions without me. Though etiquette decrees that the spouse should be invited, there is nothing that says the spouse cannot decline, and I found it was very much appreciated when I did. I might add that the rewards I have received for insisting that my husband attend without me have far outweighed the small sacrifices I made.

Now, in my old age, I have the love and friendship of these children — and their children. They are a part of my family. — A Well-Rewarding Second Wife

Dear Second Wife: Most second wives have two strikes against them when they marry a man with a ready-made family. And second husbands usually have to try harder when they're No. 2.

I admire your sensitivity and insight. It paid off handsomely. Other "seconds" could learn from you.

Dear Abby: I had to chuckle when I read the letter from the reader who asked if it was appropriate to compliment a lady on her perfume. It reminded me of an experience I once had.

I'd been divorced for about a year when another woman persuaded me to go to a singles dance. A gentleman asked me to dance. I accepted. In the middle of the first number, he leaned over and whispered in my ear, "What's the name of that perfume you're wearing? You smell just like my dead aunt." With that, he walked off the floor.

Another fellow asked me to dance.

The band started off with a real fast number, and he split his pants when he attempted to do the splits. He backed off the floor, leaving me standing there.

It was quite a while before I attended another singles dance. — Two-Time Loser

Dear Loser: Thanks for passing on your chuckle. Not every man who asks "Shall we dance?" turns out to be Yul Brynner.

Dear Abby: Your advice to "Enraptured in Phoenix," who was upset about close friends who were always late, brought back a hilarious memory. (You advised: "If you want them there by 7 p.m., invite them for 6 p.m.")

I was chronically late to everything, so when "Alan" and "Julie" invited me to dinner at 7 p.m., it was Julie's idea to tell me to be there at 6 p.m. Alan didn't like the idea, but Julie insisted. Little did they know that a dear friend had just sat me down and lectured me on the importance of punctuality!

I arrived at Alan and Julie's at 6:03 p.m. When Alan answered the door, he was laughing so hard he could barely get the door open. Julie, who had just stepped out of the shower, was running down the hallway to the bedroom trying to cover her backside with a less-than-adequate towel.

So, Abby, when you advise people to invite the "chronically late" an hour early to be sure that they'll arrive on time, tell them to shower early, or have a very large towel handy. — Peter Punctual, Vista, Calif.

Dear Peter: You'll get no argument from me. But my sympathies are with Julie in Vista, whose embarrassment you so graphically detailed.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6946, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

The Start Of A Work Day Is Tough Time For Most Working Mothers

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Stress is the working mom's biggest enemy, but there are ways to get relief.

Ladies' Home Journal has charted four of the biggest stress points and offers some mom-tested solutions.

The start of the work day is one of the toughest times for working mothers. One key coping strategy: prepare as much as possible the night before. Set the breakfast table, put coffee in the percolator. Lay out work clothes, briefcase, and car keys, and clothes for the kids. But let the children choose their own clothes to eliminate the usual power struggle over what to wear. (Exercise influence by limiting a child's options: instead of asking the child to choose from a jumble of socks in the dresser drawer, ask if he or she wants the red ones or the blue ones.)

A really chaotic house can try anybody's sanity. Rearrange cleanup so that even little kids can help. In the kitchen, put all breakfast and snack foods, as well as plastic cups and dishes at kid level. Kids can get their own breakfast and snacks. Even 4-year-olds can clear their plates and place them near the kitchen sink or even in the dishwasher. In bedrooms, organize with colorful crates or plastic boxes so toys can be tossed in. Buy decorative comforters for the bed so even a 5-year-old can make it.

Evenings can also be stressful because they quickly evaporate before there's time for chores. Start by setting a bedtime for kids age 2 and up, and sticking to it. This helps guarantee mom a little time at night while giving them some needed structure. With an infant or toddler, keep the same schedule of meals and naps on the weekends as the child follows in day care. Another crucial step: get a standing baby-sitting arrangement for one night a week.

Women often find time to meet everybody's needs but neglect their own. A working mother must insist on time for herself, at least once a week.

Consider making a deal with someone who has kids the same age: take her children for an afternoon or overnight each week in exchange for equal time. Several women in this situation can start a baby-sitting co-op. And make the kids play quietly at least 15 minutes a night while reading or taking a bath. Gradually, they'll learn to respect the fact that mom needs time for herself.

Begin A New Chapter Learn To Read

Literacy involves more than recognizing the alphabet, sounding out letters and pronouncing words in a sentence. Literacy involves bringing meaning to the reader from the printed page.

One fourth of Pitt County residents have never read a nursery rhyme or written a letter. They can't even look up names in the phone book or words in the dictionary. These people live in a world that seems confusing and difficult. Open up a new chapter in someone's life. Help someone learn to read.

Beggar Is Well-Known To Birmingham Leaders

By Kathy Kemp
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Municipal Judge Tennant Smallwood, decked out in the black-robed finery of the law, is behind the bench when a shriveled little man in dirty red overalls walks into Courtroom 115 in City Hall.

For Smallwood, it's business as usual. The drunks, the shoplifters, the drug users — they're all here, as they are every day. But the man in the red overalls, 59-year-old Jerry Lyons, is not as accustomed to such goings-on.

At 9 o'clock most Monday mornings, Lyons would be starting his day on the corner of 21st Street and Fourth Avenue North. There, five days a week (allowing for an occasional holiday), he sits cross-legged on the sidewalk, rattling a plastic cup full of pocket change and instructing passers-by to "have a real nice day."

Such unauthorized cup-rattling and well-wishing are the very things that have brought Jerry to court today. In a relatively unusual turn of events in the life of this full-time seeker of the public's spare change, Lyons was arrested — for begging, a misdemeanor.

He is, by turns, outraged and elated. He is outraged, he says, because, "I don't beg. Them's all donations." He seems elated — although he'd probably not admit it — because important-looking people doing important-looking things at City Hall are, today at least, interested in what he has to say.

While the facts might suggest Lyons did indeed break a city ordinance against loitering for the purpose of begging, the upholders of the law — for the moment — seem largely on his side.

Tony Falletta, a local attorney who has dropped coins into Lyons' cup for years, spots him in the courtroom and tells him not to worry. "We're going to get you off," Falletta promises, even though he is not Lyons' attorney.

It won't be the first time the lawyer has helped the little man. A while back, Falletta gave Lyons a chair, complete with arm rests and a holder for his cup. "I thought if he sat in a chair instead of on the sidewalk, it wouldn't be so demeaning. I was even going to get him an umbrella. But the next day, I walked by, and he was sitting on the sidewalk again. Somebody had stolen his chair."

Another dark-suited man, Roger Conville, sits next to Lyons on the wooden bench in Smallwood's courtroom. He's here, he explains, to offer moral support. An insurance agent who's frequently downtown on business, Conville gives both money and conversation to Lyons, who seems to appreciate the latter as much as the former.

"He really considers (begging) his work," Conville says.

"He's out there every day, like any other businessman. If he didn't have (panhandling) to do, what would he do? I think he doesn't do it so much for the money as he does it to be around people, to have someone to talk to, to be a part of the world, like you and me."

Lyons slips out to the hallway to have a smoke. He squats beside the courtroom door and lights an unfiltered Pall Mall. Ted Gideon, the city prosecutor, rounds the corner, greets Lyons cordially and presses some coins into Lyons' dirty hand. "We're going to take care of you, Jerry," Gideon tells him.

"This is an unfortunate man," Gideon says when Lyons is out of earshot. "When he was little, he was crippled, and his people didn't have a place for him, so they put him in an insane asylum. He was there for years, until they started letting people like that out."

"I'm not encouraging people to go out and beg. But I don't want to prosecute Jerry. We think he's suffered enough."

Even Smallwood — who, in his career as a judge, has heard thousands of pitiable excuses for illegal behavior — thinks Lyons is a particularly sad case. "We've known about Jerry for years and years and years," Smallwood says.

"I give him money myself sometimes. It's difficult to understand what to do when you see somebody like him. I do what I feel like is right for me. I can't turn anybody down who tells me they're hungry."

The story of Lyons' life is sketchy, with Lyons himself confused about many of the details. He has limited use of his arms and legs and walks very slowly. He sometimes says, for instance, that his crippled body is the result of an early childhood disease. But he is just as likely to tell you he broke his back at age 8 in an accident.

By most accounts, including court records, Lyons was committed as a youngster to the Partlow State School where the director judged him to be "functioning in the borderline range of mental retardation."

In 1972, after new laws and more modern views of mental illness began to empty many institutions and asylums, Lyons was released, sent into the world, at age 42, to do the best he could.

Since then, the best he could do is rent himself a room in a cheap

Jerry Lyons sits on a street corner accepting donations from a passerby downtown hotel, collect his disability checks and earn a little spending money on the street.

The Associated Press

Successful panhandling, he'll tell you, requires a certain finesse.

"I say hello to everybody. If somebody puts a penny in my cup, I say, 'Well, that's more than I had.' I always say something good about somebody when they're coming down the street, and when they come back up, they'll give you money. I always say, 'Have a nice day' or 'God bless you.' I don't cuss nobody."

Sometimes, when a merchant complains loudly enough, police will arrest Lyons and take him to jail. He'll use some "donations" to pay for his bail. Then he'll have his day in court, when important-looking people such as Smallwood and Gideon and Falletta will put their heads together and ponder what they should do.

This time, the charges are dropped. Gideon and the others move on to more important matters. The shriveled-up little man in the dirty red overalls heads back toward the street, where all he can do is the best he can.

Researchers Trying For Giant Crappie

By Jack Elliot
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSON, Miss. — Researchers at a Mississippi university want to create a giant crappie for the dinner table, one that will dwarf the stunted runts overpopulating ponds and lakes in the South.

"The crappie is one of the favorite of sports fishes. Everyone eats them. The flavor is good. The problem is they over-reproduce. If you take fertile crappie and put them in a small pond, they reproduce like mad, and what you have is a pond full of small, stunted crappie," said University of Mississippi assistant biology professor Glenn Parsons.

The research into creating a giant crappie from its stunted relatives is under way at the Biological Field Station at Ole Miss. Joining Parsons in the research program is Keith Meals, a fisheries biologist with the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks.

The idea, conceived by fisheries division chief Ron Garovelli, is to produce sterile crappie — called triploids — in the laboratory so they can be stocked profitably in ponds and lakes and reach a good eating size.

"These crappie would never reproduce, grow bigger, more meat, and that's what everybody wants," Parsons said. "They're basically sterile. Even if they participate in reproduction, the gestures of other fish, they would shoot blanks. Actually, they just wouldn't be attracted."

Parsons said researchers are creating a fish with three sets of chromosomes rather than two sets. "The extra set causes errors which creates a sterile fish," he said.

The crappie eggs are subjected to cold water immediately after fertilization occurs. Researchers said this makes the eggs retain 72 chromosomes instead of the normal 48.

Garovelli said the first set of triploids were produced in 1987 and are just now growing to maturity.

"We don't know how big they will get. We're in the initial stages of the project."

"Using past experiences with these types of fish, they tend to grow larger. We're hoping we're on to something here," he said.

He said crappie generally run three-quarters a pound to a full pound.

"The world record catch was out of Mississippi at five pounds, three ounces at the Enid Reservoir. But that's unusual. On the average, the ones people take home are about a half-pound," he said.

Garvoelli said comparisons of the growth of the sterile crappie with others begin next year.

"The diploids (unsterile) fish will be beginning to put energy into producing their reproductive organs — the ovaries and other organs. Their energy will be focused on reproducing. The triploid will focus all that energy on growth, no reproduction structures.

"I hate to do that to the little fellows, but we hope to produce a larger fish with more meat production," Garvoelli said.

Garvoelli said farmers have found that by stocking ponds with crappie, the highly procreative species takes control of the pond from competing species.

Revamped, Robust MTV Rises Above Stagnation

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The 1980s burned through a lot of fads, but MTV: Music Television has refused to join the trendsetter trash heap.

Growing stagnant, MTV and its music-video format have been revamped from top to bottom, and have emerged on its eighth anniversary as one of television's more robust and diverse enterprises.

In the wake of a two-year overhaul spread across MTV and its two affiliated channels — VH-1 and Nickelodeon-Nick at Nite — MTV Networks now features a mix of game shows, children's programs, newscasts, dance shows, sitcom reruns and rap music.

MTV's archly irreverent "Remote Control" quiz show has become so popular that it's now a hit in the TV syndication market. Nickelodeon, jammed with offbeat children's shows, will deliver 2,343 episodes this year, an increase of more than 300 percent since 1986.

After losing about $50 million in its first two years, MTV Networks now has a combined subscriber base of 125 million viewers, MTV says, and a growing following overseas. Earnings for the three channels through the second quarter of this year were up 21 percent from a year ago, to $17.9 million.

All the same, MTV's evolution has been clumsy at times, and the future is dotted with challenges. Even after a redesign, soft-rock VH-1 still attracts meager ratings. And Nick at Nite has yet to become more than a rest home for old sitcoms.

In the coming months both MTV and Home Box Office will introduce all-comedy cable channels.

"We think a comedy channel is a real logical next step for us," said Tom Freston, MTV Network's president and chief executive officer. "But I think that you probably will see only one (comedy channel) surviving."

With HA!, as MTV's comedy channel will be called, MTV will be chasing the competition.

"I think that what we're doing is unique and innovative and what they're doing is already available on other cable channels," said Dick Beahrs, president of HBO's Comedy Channel.

The Comedy Channel, which debuts in November, will be composed of brief comedy sketches culled from movies and nightclub performances, complemented by occasional feature-length films and sitcoms. HA!, using longer-form program packages, premieres April 1.

MTV's other channels continue to be reworked. VH-1, now 4 years old, faces perhaps the most difficult battle.

Freston labels VH-1 "a work in progress." A few cable operators have called it something else: unnecessary.

When the Consumer News and Business Channel began in April, several cable systems bumped VH-1 to make room at a cost of nearly a million subscribers, according to CNBC. MTV, however, says it's closer to 250,000.

VH-1's problem is that it is still seen as the drydock for MTV flot-sam. "It was a repository for everything MTV didn't want to play," Freston said. "And it still has a way to go."

VH-1 these days offers an eclectic musical blend of artists such as Enya, Fine Young Cannibals, 10,000 Maniacs and Edie Brickell & New Bohemians. Gone for good, VH-1 promises, are Julio Iglesias and Neil Diamond.

The channel also has added lifestyle reports, entertainment news, nostalgia programming such as "My Generation" and the Sunday jazz show "New Visions." A new comedy program will join the VH-1 lineup this fall.

"What music videos did to music, we can do to information and entertainment," said Ed Bennett, VH-1's president. Ratings have yet to take off.

John Reardon, the new president of MTV, echoed the theme of diversifying as he explained the burst of packaged shows now arriving on MTV's schedule: "Clearly, we've been trying to keep the viewer interested longer."

So MTV's videos from acts such as Bon Jovi, Madonna and Prince are being supplemented by the dance program "Club MTV," the rap show "Yo! MTV Raps," "Monty Python's Flying Circus," regular news broadcasts, occasional concerts and a variety of other original programs including "Remote Control."

Among other projects discussed for MTV's future are a daily soap opera, at least two movies and a music-rating show.

Cleavon Little In One-Man Play

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Tony award-winning actor Cleavon Little has come to the Alabama Shakespeare Festival for preview performances of a one-man play in which he portrays an elderly sharecropper.

Little, whose grandfather was a sharecropper, opens Wednesday in "All God's Dangers," which is scheduled to run at the 17-year-old festival through Oct. 1, and then move to New York.

The play tells the story of Ned Cobb, who was born in 1885 in Tallahassee, 40 miles northeast of Montgomery, and transcended his humble beginnings as a son of a former slave. Theodore Rosengarten, who co-wrote the play with co-producers Michael Hadley and Hadley's sister Jennifer, profiled Cobb under the pseudonym Nate Shaw in a book on which the play is based.

Little said the role is the greatest challenge of his career.

"I play an 85-year-old man, but I tell a number of different stories and I become a number of different characters. I don't change," said 50-year-old actor.

Natalie Cole To Wed Producer

By Mary Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Singer Natalie Cole's "I Do" is climbing the rhythm 'n' blues charts.

And on Sept. 17 she'll say "I do" to record producer Andre Fischer in a wedding ceremony in Los Angeles.

"I've got my gown. I never had a wedding gown before. I didn't have a traditional wedding the first time."

Fischer was the original drummer and founder of the R&B group Rufus with Chaka Khan. He and Cole met about 15 years ago at a Tokyo music festival.

"Chaka and I became friends," she said. "I had no idea he (Fischer) liked me."

"Last October I received a call from one of my background singers that Andre had some material he wanted to submit. I later found out what he really wanted was a date. He was very cool and a little shy. I figured it was going to be a business relationship, and it was for several months."

"We did work on the 'Good to Be Back' album. He arranged and produced 'Matter of Fact' and 'Gonna Make You Mine.'"

"In January I was performing in Lake Tahoe and he called. Would it be OK if he came to see the show, and he wanted to bring his children. He has three. I said, 'sure.'"

"He told me he'd been in love with me 15 years," Cole said.

Fischer proposed after her 39th birthday in February.

Cole has been on a 40-city tour since July, promoting her new "Good to Be Back" album of mid-tempo ballads on EMI Records. In a recent relaxed, happy interview, she said it's her first such tour in at least seven years.

The song "I Do" is a duet with Freddie Jackson. "It is a getting-married song. Freddie told me his sister is getting married and wants to play it at her wedding. It is definitely a love ballad."

On her tour, Cole's cousin, Eddie, sings it with her. Her father, Nat "King" Cole, had three brothers, Ike, Freddie and the late Eddie Sr. All were singers.

Cole's first husband was Marvin Yancey, co-producer of her first album, "Inseparable," which won her Grammy awards in 1976 as best new artist and best rhythm 'n' blues female vocal performance for her single "This Will Be." They divorced nine years ago. He died of a heart attack three years ago.

The "Good to Be Back" album isn't a comeback album. It refers to Cole's 1987 "Everlasting" album, her first for EMI, which was a comeback and was a success. The biggest single from it was "Pink Cadillac."

"I think rock fans were a little upset," she said. That's by their buddy, Bruce (Springsteen). How could I do a song he wrote? He must have hated it because I never heard a word."

Her album, "Dangerous," on Modern Records in 1985 was her first since going through drug rehabilitation six years ago. "That album was OK. It wasn't a big deal but it was better than some things I had done. That was a very difficult time for me."

Even though she knows how bad addiction can be, Cole doesn't give advice about drugs. "You can advise all day long and it doesn't mean anything. I was advised. Kids are going to do what they're going to do."

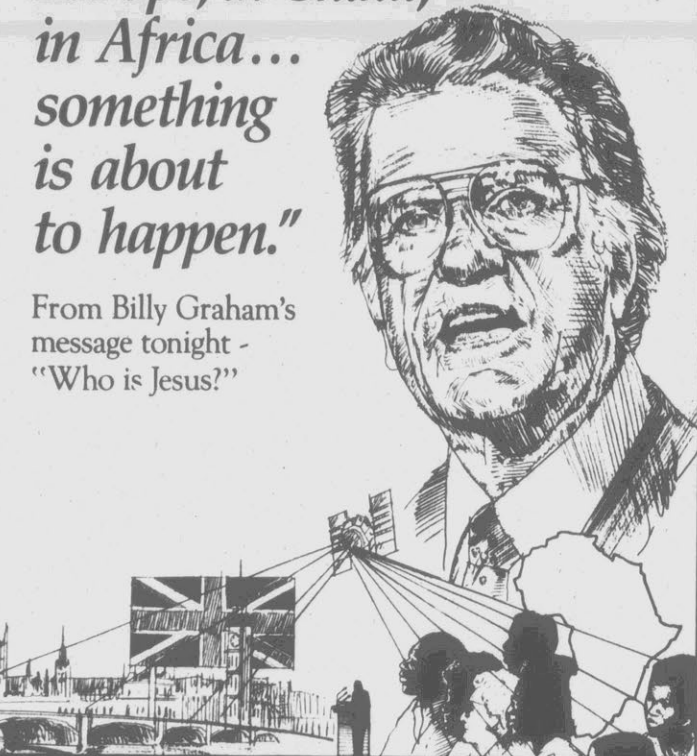

But she does have advice for parents. "You try to show them the road. If kids are brought up with a lot of animosity, friction and non-communication, where everybody walks around holding everything inside, you're going to get in trouble," she said. "We need to keep the line of communication open with young people. My biggest concern as a parent is that my son will be able to talk to me."

"Kids in the era I was brought up in weren't allowed to talk about certain things. It wasn't right to have certain thoughts going on in your head. You'd feel guilty if you brought them up to your mom or your dad. I found my answers outside of the home, which isn't the greatest place to experiment."

The natural tendency is to conserve one's assets. Once in a while, however, you have to spend a little to gain rich dividends at some future time.

South's jump to two no trump showed a balanced 19-20 points. Since North had a balanced hand, there was little point in looking for any game contract other than three no trump.
West's lead of the queen of diamonds attacked dummy's entry, so declarer could not afford to hold up on the first round. After winning the king, declarer cashed the king and queen of spades and crossed to the ace of diamonds to cash the ace of spades. When the jack failed to come down, declarer had to be satisfied with eight tricks.
This result was highly satisfactory to East-West. Although North-South were in their best spot (four spades rated to fail), declarer had not found the winning line. Indeed, the contract was unbeatable once West had followed to the second spade with the nine.

Now there was only one spade missing that was higher than dummy's 10 8—the jack. Therefore, declarer could have afforded to overtake the queen of spades with the ace to continue with the ten, forcing East to win with the jack. East's diamond continuation goes to dummy's ace, but the eight of spades draws the last outstanding spade and dummy's long spade becomes the fulfilling trick. Declarer collects four spades, a heart and two tricks in each minor suit.

How Elephants Got A Trunk

By Galvin Williams

Once upon a time there was an elephant named Fred. Fred did not have a trunk. He had a nose like we do. One day Fred came across a slimy snake. The snake was mean and tried to start a fight. The snake told the elephant to come closer so he could tell him a secret. The elephant went up to the snake. The snake bit the elephant's nose and pulled it hard. The elephant's nose began to stretch. Then the elephant pulled back and flipped the snake over his head and he ran away. Then the elephant looked at his nose. It was long. That is how they got their trunks.

Galvin Williams, 11, a student at H. B. Sugg School receives special mention.

My Horse And Me

By Jane Pridgen

Even though I have never owned one, I have always loved horses. My horse would be a grey mare no more than four years old. She would have a long white tail.

I have never learned how to ride but hope to soon. After I learn, I will be able to go horseback riding by myself! Also by learning to horseback ride, I will learn to keep better balance and hand-eye coordination. I can easily keep better balance in riding by learning to stay on because you can't horseback ride without staying on. Hand-eye coordination comes because your hands steer the reins. I would also find enjoyment in horseback riding because I could go hunting for foxes and rabbits. I would get a great deal of exercise. This would be the kind of exercise I enjoy.

If I had a horse, I would never get lonely. I could easily talk to my horse and even though she couldn't answer, she'd be great company! If I wanted to, we could go on a walk through the woods or we could take a nice ride through the country. We would have fun together.

I'd love to be able to take care of my horse. I would brush her everyday. After riding six miles in the country, I would take off her crupper, saddle, and bit and polish them. After that I'd hang them up.

I have always had a love

My Dorky Robot

By David Rees

One day I found an old robot. He looked like he had been broken for over a hundred years! He had about three inches of dust all over him. I scraped away some of the dust and saw an ON button. I pushed the button and the robot jumped up and said, "What can I do for you?"

It had a keyboard with all the letters of the alphabet on it. I wanted it to get me some Hawaiian Punch, so I typed in "Punch". But the robot hit me in the face! I had a black eye for three weeks!

One day Miss Hodges gave me a real hard assignment. I wanted the robot to do my homework. I was so mad, I just typed in, "Go to sleep". But you know what he did? He threw me into my bed and turned out all the lights.

When I woke up that dorky robot was standing over me. So this time, I looked for an OFF switch but all it had was an ON switch. So I knew what I had to do. I typed in, "Take a walk to New York City". But it pushed me out the door and into the direction of New York City!

I was sick and tired of that robot. What seemed to be a great dream was turning out to be a nightmare! I was stuck with that dumb robot and my parents were going away for the weekend. They were actually going to leave me alone with this hunk of junk. When my parents left, I went to the S.S.T.Q. (Scientists' Solutions to Questions). When I got there, I told them about the robot and they said, "You've actually found our missing robot!" And they rewarded me with one hundred billion dollars! Now I have enough money to buy a better robot but I just pray that the same people don't make it.

David Rees, 10, a student at Wahl-Coates School wins this week's writing contest.

A Million Dollars

By Julie Coker

If I were given a million dollars, I would give half of it to my parents. Then I would give some to my friends. Next I would go out and buy things that my parents never bought me. I would buy makeup, a color TV with a remote control, a black Cocker Spaniel, a water bed, and a hot tub for the whole family. I will try to pay as many bills as I could pay. Then I would buy my mom a new 14Kt necklace and I would buy my dad a new car.

Then I would buy my sister a new wardrobe and then I would be broke.

Julie Coker, 11, a student at Greenville Middle School receives special mention.

State Capitol

The first official state capital of North Carolina was in New Bern. Today the state capital is Raleigh. In 1792 the state legislature chose a permanent sight for the capital. It was named after Sir Walter Raleigh who helped to establish the first colony on Roanoke Island.

Raleigh is located in Wake County and is in the piedmont section of the state. The state legislature, called the General Assembly, meets there to consider new laws for the people. The legislature meets in the State Legislative Building which was finished in 1963. The old capitol building was completed in 1840 and was used until 1963. People still like to tour the old capitol building when visiting Raleigh. Offices for the state as well as the state court system are headquartered in Raleigh.

The first home provided by the state for the governor was Tryon Palace in New Bern. It was completed for the royal governor William Tryon. It burned in 1798 after the capital had been moved to Raleigh. After moving the seat of government to Raleigh, the legislature provided a home for the governor and his family. However, at times, governors had to live in hotels, rented houses or their own homes. Finally in 1891, Governor Daniel Fowle moved into the official home of NC governor's, the Governor's Mansion.

Several colleges and universities are located in Raleigh. North Carolina State University, Peace College, St. Augustine College, Shaw University and Meredith are in the capital city.

The NC Museum of Art, the NC Symphony and the NC Museum of History are just a few of the cultural interests located in Raleigh. A civic center hosts athletic and cultural events also.

Fall Television Line-Up Is Offering Very Little That's Different

Do you miss "Miami Vice?" NBC replaces it with another buddy-cops show. This time, it's old cop-young cop and called "Hardball." Not as much style as "Vice," but good character possibilities.

Third-place CBS, which has the greatest need for breakout shows, has settled instead for a bottom-of-the-barrel ratings ploy, "Rescue 911," a graphic "reality-based" show about emergency calls. It is a throwback to the early days of last season when the writers strike crippled production of fiction shows and the networks had to stoop to stuff like this. This season, CBS is putting it on by choice.

CBS' "Island Son" lured perennial miniseries star Richard Chamberlain back to series television with a Hawaii locale and a role as a doctor. It wasn't available for pre-season scrutiny.

"The People Next Door," a sitcom about a cartoonist and his family, relies on special effects and apparently hopes to capitalize on the success of "Who Framed Roger Rabbit." It's an ambitious attempt, but doesn't work.

"Wolf" stars Jack Scalia in another version of the discredited cop who becomes a private eye and tries to clear his name. There's nothing to help viewers pick this one out of a lineup.

CBS' "Peaceable Kingdom" stars the durable Lindsay Wagner as a remarkably boring zoo administrator. The cheetah is a better actor.

Stephen Cannell ("Wiseguy," "Hunter") has a third network show, "Top of the Hill," starring William Katt ("Greatest American Hero") as a long-haired surfer who takes over his ailing father's congressional seat. Civics 101 was more riveting.

"Snoops" is a screwball mystery-comedy starring Tim and Daphne Maxwell Reid, former stars of "Frank's Place." He is a professor of criminology, she is a protocol officer. Nothing was available for pre-screening, but these are likable stars.

ABC's ballyhooed deal with Bocho has yielded the questionable but competent "Doogie Howser," starring Neil Patrick Harris as the 16-year-old genius with a medical license.

CBS made a little headway with the Western "Paradise" last season.

ABC, perhaps inspired more by the success of CBS' "Lonesome Dove," adds another of the long-missing Western genre, "The Young Riders," about the Pony Express. It needs better writing.

ABC has two innocuous spinoffs. From "Who's the Boss?" comes "Living Dolls," a sitcom about four teen-aged models sharing an apartment in New York. Michael Learned stars as their den mother. The other is "Family Matters," a black family sitcom centered on the extended family of acerbic elevator operator, Harriette, of "Perfect Strangers."

A writer-producer spun off ABC's "Head of the Class" to create a "Back of the Class" Kotter" in the new "Homeroom."

In ABC's "Free Spirit" a housekeeper who's a witch goes to work for a single father. What comic possibilities!

To recap, CBS has two good bets in "Major Dad" and "Teddy Z," both joining the reasonably successful Monday comedy lineup. But they'll likely be moved to other nights.

ABC's "Life Goes On" deserves a break and might get one. It's in a time period opposite the top-10 "60 Minutes" and isn't expected to do boffo numbers, so it might stay around a while. Critical response should help it.

ABC's "Chicken Soup" is an acquired taste, but it has a cushy time slot, behind "Roseanne." Hey, a lot of people think Jackie Mason is very funny.

Likely goners, due to low quality and-or tough competition, include "Homeroom," "Peaceable Kingdom," "Wolf" and "Free Spirit."

"Nutt House" could get a cult following of over-medicated viewers, but don't bet on it.

The rest of the pack merit little more than a shrug.

So there you have one of the reasons that almost two-thirds of homes with televisions also have cable and why a third of viewers opted for something other than network programs last season.

This season, those people will pay their cable bills happily.

Fall Movies Like Old Home Week

By Stephen Hunter
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The battle anthem of the fall movie season may well be, "Look who's back in town!"

Lots of people are back in town. Why, the next few months at the movies will be like old home week. Marlon Brando, you've been gone so long we hardly remember you; Mickey Rourke, it seems like ages since you've been up there on screen. And, my goodness, isn't that tall, distinguished-looking gringo the former Gregory Peck? And even his eminence Leatherface, the chain saw guy, is back to massacre a few new victims. But for pure horror, there's John Travolta.

So here's the rundown on what's coming through Thanksgiving, with the customary disclaimer that films sometimes disappear from the schedule or are shunted through alternative dates until their studios can find the perfect windows of opportunity for inserting them into the public consciousness.

The season gets off with a thump and a half Sept. 15 when six pictures open.

The biggest of them probably is the Al Pacino-Ellen Barkin film, "Sea of Love." Pacino plays a tough New York City cop in search of a killer who may work through the personal ads. As part of a trap, he takes out an ad, meets several women and falls in love with Barkin, who may be the killer.

"Cookie," directed by Susan ("Desperately Seeking Susan") Seidelman and written by Nora ("When Harry Met Sally") Ephron, features Peter Falk, Dianne Wiest and Emily Lloyd as a mafia family.

"The Big Picture" is a satire about a young film director (Kevin Bacon) who gets a shot at making a big studio picture. It's being released by big studio Columbia.

"Look Who's Talking" watches as pregnant Kirstie Alley tries to find a daddy for the kid. This is the one with John Travolta. Just keep telling yourself it's only a movie. Anyway, the gimmick is that the baby in the Alley belly has rude comments to make (in Bruce Willis' voice) about the potential husbands. Maybe it saw "Perfect" on video. Amy Heckerling directed.

"True Love," from MGM, is a love story set in the Bronx, written, directed by and starring unknowns.

And finally, there's "Hearts of Dixie," which follows a senior year at a Southern university in 1957 and watches, dewy-eyed, as Ally Sheedy becomes a woman.

Sept. 22 offers "Black Rain" and "Dry White Season." The former is an expensive police melodrama shot in Osaka, Japan, produced by the "Fatal Attraction"/"Accused" team of Sherry Lansing and Herb Jaffe, directed by high stylist Ridley ("Blade Runner") Scott and starring Michael Douglas. It went millions over budget, ho ho ho.

"Dry White Season" is a South African drama that returns Marlon Brando to the screen after a nine-year absence. Also in the cast are Donald Sutherland, Zakes Mokae and Susan Sarandon. It was directed by Euzhan Palcy, who did "Sugar Cane Alley" a year or so ago. It's from a novel by Andre Brink.

Sept. 29 brings us one of the strangest films of the year. "Johnny Handsome" is about a disfigured criminal who, after capture and imprisonment, receives at state expense some plastic surgery. And he decides to look like Mickey Rourke? Yes. The movie has been directed by akionmeister Walter ("48 Hours") Hill and also stars Morgan Freeman and Ellen Barkin (again).

History Joins The Recipes In 'Iron Pots'

By Sujata Banerjee
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

When Jessica B. Harris writes about the spread of black cooking, she describes a long, curving line sweeping from Africa to South America, the Caribbean and United States. In "Iron Pots and Wooden Spoons," (Atheneum; $19.95), Harris travels back and forth across this line, capturing the savory smells of roasted pumpkin seeds, the spice of curried okra, the tang of Bananas Foster.

"Iron Pots and Wooden Spoons" is as much a history book as it is a collection of recipes. The introduction gives interesting details about cooking in Africa, and what slaves ate themselves in the New World and what they cooked in the "big houses" or plantations. Harris is interested in showing how the same basic dish, give or take a few chilies or coconuts, turns up in five countries. Such a dish is Hoppin' John, the Southern dish of dried black-eyed peas and rice. In New Orleans, a mix of rice, onions and chicken livers is called "Dirty Rice," and in the Caribbean, "Peas and Rice" are sweetened with coconut milk.

Harris has collected these recipes from family and friends around the world, modifying some to her own tastes. There are a number of nouvelle Caribbean recipes from the Jamaica, Jamaica resort that are particularly attractive, given their low-fat nature. But when it comes to authentic Southern American cooking, Harris is not afraid to leave in classic flavor makers such as pork butt, lard, and streaky bacon—unhealthy to some, but the spice of life to others.

KULINKULI

1 lb. roasted peanuts
¼ cup peanut oil
Peanut oil for frying

Grind the nuts in a food processor adding enough oil to make a smooth paste. With wet hands, knead and squeeze the paste to remove the excess oil. Shape the peanut paste into balls or other shapes, adding a bit of water if necessary to make them hold together. Heat the frying oil to 350° to 375°. Drop the balls into the hot oil and cook for three to four minutes until the outsides are crisp. The Kulinkuli may be served hot or cold. Serves 4 to 6.

JAMAICA CHICKEN RUN DOWN
6 chicken breasts cut into ¼-inch strips
1 cup coconut milk
2 springs fresh thyme, minced
1 medium-sized onion, chopped fine
3 whole allspice berries
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Place all of ingredients except the salt and pepper in a heavy skillet and simmer over low heat, stirring occasionally, for 45 minutes or until the chicken is tender. Add salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste. Serve hot, over white rice. Serves 6.

DIRTY RICE

3 tbsps. peanut oil
1 large red onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
½ lb. chicken livers
2 scallions, green tops included, chopped
1 sprig parsley, minced
1 small red hot chile, seeded and diced
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste.

Boil rice in ¾ cups water until almost done (about 15 minutes). Heat the oil in a heavy skillet and brown the onion and garlic. Cut up the chicken livers, add them to the onion and garlic mixture, and saute until they are cooked and crumbly. Add the scallions, parsley, chile, salt and pepper. Add the rice along with whatever cooking liquid remains in the pot. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until the rice is done and the ingredients are well-mixed. Serves 6 to 8.

CURRIED OKRA

1 lb. fresh okra, topped and tailed
3 tbsps. vegetable oil
2 medium-sized onions, sliced
½ tsp. dried hot red chilies
¼ tsp. ground turmeric
¼ tsp. mild curry powder
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Wash the okra and slice it into half-inch pieces. Heat the oil in a heavy skillet, add the okra, and fry it for 10 minutes, turning to keep it from sticking. When the okra is lightly brown, add the remaining ingredients. Continue frying for an additional three minutes. The dish is ready when the onions are soft. Curried Okra can be served as a vegetable or used as a filling for sandwiches. Serves 6 to 8.

Dieter's Desserts

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Eliminating calories and fat from dessert does not have to mean eliminating taste, or the psychological pleasure that indulging in it provides, just to achieve balance and moderation in the diet.

While most health professionals recommend the strict approach for calorie-wise consumers, the Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition and Information Service says that there is a place in the diet for dessert. Because fresh fruit does not completely replace the desire for after- or in-between-meal treats that are sticky and rich, the key is to choose these desserts in modest amounts, then balance them with foods that are lower in fat, sugars and calories the rest of the day.

The service suggests that consumers have half the usual amount of fats and sugars throughout the day to make room for a dish of ice cream or other favorite treat. Or, modify traditional desserts so that they utilize low-fat ingredients.

For this type of imaginative cookery, base desserts on ingredients such as unflavored gelatin, low-fat yogurt, evaporated skim milk, egg whites and angel food cake. Then, choose fresh fruits like raspberries, peaches, strawberries and cherries, which make exceptional flavor accompaniments.

Start out with Frozen Raspberry Yogurt, which takes advantage of plain low-fat yogurt instead of whole milk or cream, for nearly half the calories of ice cream. To re-create the rich and creamy smoothness of traditional frozen desserts, raspberries and cranberry juice cocktail are blended with unflavored gelatin to give the treat its frosty smoothness.

Another light but silky fruit dessert is Peach-Almond Mousse. In it, evaporated milk, fresh peaches and almond extract are whipped up into a sweet puree. Instead of a whipped cream topping, garnish with sliced or chopped fresh peaches.

Cherry Party Compote features layers of sweet cherries, blueberries, pineapple chunks and apricot halves, all arranged in an attractive trifle bowl, and topped with a splash of white wine and orange liqueur. After a generous chilling to allow the flavors to mingle, pour club soda over just before serving to add effervescence.

Cherries also are highlighted in another calorie-sparing dessert, Cherry-Brandy Ice Cream.

Keys To Indulgence Balance, Moderation

This cool and refreshing dessert tastes rich — evaporated milk and low-calorie whipped topping mix provide its texture. Low-calorie sweetener and brandy extract contribute flavor.

Other featured light fruit desserts include Berry Meringue Pie, Nectarine-Brandy Sorbet, Raspberry Angel Roll and Orange Cheesecake with Raspberry Sauce.

ORANGE CHEESECAKE

1½ cups plus 3 tbsps. Grape Nuts cereal
1 tbsps. sugar
½ tsp. ground cinnamon
2 tbsps. corn oil margarine, melted
1 whole egg
2 egg whites
3 tbsps. orange juice
1 tbsps. pure vanilla extract
2 tbsps. grated orange peel
1½ lbs. (3 cups) 1 percent milkfat cottage cheese
½ cup sugar
1 container (8 oz.) vanilla low-fat yogurt
Raspberry Sauce (recipe follows)

Preheat oven to 375°. In a medium bowl, combine 1½ cups cereal, sugar, cinnamon and margarine. Mix well. Press against the bottom of an 8-inch springform pan. Bake for 10 minutes. Cool. Reduce oven temperature to 325°. In a blender or food processor fitted with a metal wing blade, place the egg, egg whites, orange juice, vanilla extract, orange peel, cottage cheese and sugar; whirl until smooth. Pour into prepared pan. Bake until a knife inserted half way between the edge and center comes out clean, about 40 minutes. Spoon yogurt onto filling; spread evenly to edges. Bake for 15 minutes longer. Cool. Cover and chill at least 2 hours; sprinkle remaining 3 tablespoons cereal around edge 1 hour before serving. Remove metal rim. Garnish with raspberries and orange slices, if desired. Serve with Raspberry Sauce. Makes 10 servings.

Raspberry Sauce

In a small saucepan combine 1 package (10 oz.) quick-thaw raspberries and 1 teaspoon cornstarch. Heat and stir until mixture comes to a boil; boil for 1 minute longer. Press mixture through a wire mesh sieve; discard seeds. Cover and chill until ready to serve. Makes 1 cup.

CHERRY-BRANDY ICE CREAM

1 cup pitted and chopped cherries
1 tbsps. brandy extract
9 pkgs. low-calorie sweetener
2 tbsps. unflavored gelatin
1 cup evaporated skim milk
1 packet low-calorie whipped topping mix
2 egg whites or ¼ cup egg substitute

Gently toss cherries with 1 teaspoon extract and 1 package sweetener. Set aside.

Sprinkle gelatin over ½ cup skim milk in small saucepan. Let stand 5 minutes. Stir constantly over low heat until gelatin dissolves, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat, then stir in remaining sweetener and cool.

Prepare whipped topping according to package directions, substituting remaining skim milk for water and remaining brandy extract for vanilla. Whip in cooled gelatin. Beat egg whites until soft, but not dry, peaks form. Gently fold whipped topping mixture and cherries into egg whites. Freeze until firm. Makes 8 (½ cup) servings.

CHERRY PARTY COMPOTE

2 cups fresh or frozen blueberries
2 cup fresh, frozen or canned pineapple chunks, drained
4 cups sweet cherries, stemmed and pitted
2 cups apricot halves
½ cups chilled white wine
2 tbsps. orange liqueur
1 cup club soda
Mint springs

Arrange layers of blueberries, pineapple, half of cherries, apricots

RASPBERRY ANGEL ROLL

1 (16-oz.) pkg. angel food cake mix
2 (10-oz.) pkgs. frozen sweetened raspberries, thawed
1 tbsps. cornstarch
1 tbsps. frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 envelope whipped topping mix
½ cup non-fat milk
1 tbsps. powdered sugar
½ tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. almond extract
½ cup chopped blanched almonds, toasted

Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Line jellyroll pan with wax paper and spread half of batter, about 5 cups, into pan. Spread remaining batter into ungreased (9 by 5-inch) loaf pan. Bake at 300° until top springs back when touched lightly in center, 20 to 25 minutes for jellyroll pan, 45 to 50 minutes for loaf pan.

Cool jellyroll 10 minutes, then loosen edges from pan and invert on towel sprinkled with powdered sugar. While still hot, carefully roll cake and towel from narrow end. Place on wire rack until completely cool, about 2 hours. Invert loaf pan to cool. Remove from pan and freeze for later use.

Reserve 3 whole raspberries, then place remaining raspberries in blender container. Cover and blend 1 minute. Strain. Mix pureed raspberries and cornstarch in 1-quart saucepan over low heat, stirring constantly, until smooth and bubbly. Cook and stir 1 minute. Remove from heat and stir in orange juice and lemon juices. Cover and refrigerate until chilled, 1 to 2 hours.

Prepare topping mix as directed on package, using non-fat milk. Add powdered sugar, vanilla and almond extract during last minute of beating. Reserve ¼ cup topping. Unroll cake, removing towel. Spread remaining topping over cake. Sprinkle with almonds. Roll up carefully, top with reserved topping and whole raspberries. Serve with raspberry sauce. Makes 8 servings.

Q. I really like the list of frozen foods that are OK to eat. Do you have other suggestions for quick meals? M.P., Greenville

A. We were surprised and delighted to have so many of you request the handout on frozen dinners. Thank you, too, for all your kind notes. Your letters certainly show that we all are busy folks with less time than we would like to prepare meals, but still concerned with our family's health.

The USDA has a new booklet out that you may want to write for. It is called "Shopping for Food and Making Meals in Minutes Using the Dietary Guidelines." This booklet is Home and Garden Bulletin No. 232-10.

The first part is about saving time. Eighteen excellent recipes that are quick and nutritious are also included.

Write the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402. There will be a small charge, but the booklet is worth it.

Some of the time-saving strategies promoted in the booklet include:

- Focus preparation efforts on one portion of the meal.
- Do some preparation steps ahead.
- Use time-saving food preparation methods.
- Collect quick and easy menu ideas and recipes.
- Be efficient, and when you do cook, make more and freeze.

Since we are talking about publications you may want to read, the USDA publication aimed at consumers called, "Food News For Consumers," is a quarterly magazine loaded with information about food buying, health and nutrition and food safety. It costs $5 per year and is also available from the Superintendent of Documents.

Here is some more of this and that in the food news:

President Bush and pork rinds make the news every now and then. If you are on a cholesterol lowering diet, don't follow the President's example and eat these too often.

The pork rind is made from smoked, fried hog skin and one ounce has 160 calories. One ounce of pork rinds has more fat than a typical four-ounce serving of eastern-style barbecue!

The pork rinds have a whopping 10 grams of fat, while a barbecue sandwich will have between five and 10 grams of fat.

There is cholesterol in pork rinds, about 25 mg. in a one-ounce serving. And if you have to watch your blood pressure by watching your salt intake, note that one ounce of pork rinds has 850 mg. of sodium.

Lots of folks are snacking on popcorn. We talk about popcorn from time to time, since it can be a rather low-calorie and low-fat snack, or it can be a high-calorie, high-fat snack, depending on how you prepare it.

Some of the major popcorn manufacturers are coming out with lower-salt, lower fat versions.

For example, Orville Redenbacher Light has ½ less salt, ½ fewer calories and ¾ less fat than their regular product. Basically, less oil is used for the popcorn to pop.

Can you believe more than 142 million tons of popcorn is sold in the U.S. each year.

Pan Size Important For Making Cakes

By Joan Drake
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Basics

A number of readers have requested information on baking cakes, particularly those made using some type of fat — butter, margarine, oil or vegetable shortening. Generically, they are called shortened cakes.

The simplest of these cakes is made with the fat plus sugar, whole egg, cake flour, liquid, baking powder and flavoring. The category, however, also includes white, chocolate, spice, gingerbread and pound cakes as well as those studded with raisins and nuts.

Cake making begins with selection and preparation of the baking pans. Proper size is important — too large a pan and the cake may not rise properly and is likely to brown unevenly; too small and the texture may be coarse or the batter could overflow before it sets — so be certain to use the size pan called for in the recipe.

Medium-weight shiny metal pans deflect some of the oven heat and produce a thin, evenly browned crust. For heavier, darker crusts, choose darker colored glass and enamel pans that absorb and hold more heat. When using enamel pans,

Greasing and flouring the pans will prevent the cake from sticking. Apply about one-half tablespoon of soft shortening with a pastry brush (Step 1) or crumpled wax paper, evenly coating the bottom and sides of the pan.

Sprinkle approximately the same amount of flour into the pan and tap and shake until it is evenly coated (Step 2). Invert the pan and tap out any excess.

As an added precaution against sticking, pans may be lined with wax paper or cooking parchment. Set the pan on a sheet of paper and trace around it (Step 3). Cut along the line with scissors (multiple liners may be cut at one time).

Place the liner in the bottom of the pan (Step 4). If using wax paper, it should be greased; this is not necessary for parchment. Pans with non-stick coating do not need to be greased, but a bottom liner will prevent too solid a crust from forming.

Future columns will be devoted to the conventional method of preparing the batter and baking shortened cakes.

Step 1: To prevent cakes from sticking to the pan when baking, brush the bottom and sides of the cake pan with about 1/2 tablespoon of soft shortening

Step 2: Tap and shake the pan to coat the bottom and sides evenly with flour

Step 3: Place the pan on a sheet of parchment or wax paper and trace around it

Step 4: Place the liner in the bottom of the pan. If using wax paper, grease again

Long-Term Success Is Uncommon In The Changing Grocery Market

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Food company executives dream about developing products that will remain popular with the public over a decade or more. Currently, a new item is considered successful if it generates strong sales for just a few years before fading to the whims of changing consumer buying habits.

So the fact that several products have just passed the quarter-century mark as supermarket fixtures is all the more noteworthy, a food industry journal says.

Chief among these are Pop-Tarts from Kellogg. The line of shelf-stable, fruit-filled pastries that are heated in the toaster continues to dominate the category it created.

Lucky Charms cereal from General Mills also is 25 years old. The product is still promoted heavily by the manufacturer, indicating that the company has confidence in the staying power of this children's cereal.

There is no surprise to be found in Diet Pepsi's success, however. Introduced as a low-calorie beverage in 1964, Diet Pepsi is now the fourth best-selling soft drink, with 5.2 percent of America's soda sales.

Steps Make Souffles Simple

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

You'll be surprised at how simple a glorious souffle can be. Remember these five important steps:

— Beat the egg whites until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight). Perfectly beaten egg whites will not slip and slide when you tilt the bowl.

— Add a little cream of tartar to stabilize the egg whites.

— Preheat the oven; don't open the oven door to peek during the first 20 to 25 minutes of baking. A cool draft can deflate a partially baked souffle.

— Have your family and guests ready at the table before souffle comes out so you can bring it to the table high, hot and handsome.

— To serve, use two forks held back to back to break the top crust into serving-size portions. Then use a large spoon to serve. Include some of the yummy crust with each serving.

BLUE CHEESE AND BROCCOLI SOUFFLE

4 egg yolks
1/4 cup margarine or butter
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 tsp. salt
Dash ground red pepper
Dash ground dry mustard
1 cup milk
1 cup finely chopped cooked broccoli flowerets, drained
1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese or finely shredded Cheddar cheese (2 oz.)
4 egg whites
1/2 tsp. cream of tartar

Measure enough foil to go around a 1 1/2-quart souffle dish plus a 2-inch overlap. Fold foil into thirds lengthwise. Lightly butter one side of foil. Position foil, buttered side in, around dish, letting collar extend 2 inches above top of dish; fasten foil with masking tape.

Lightly beat egg yolks with a fork; set aside. In a medium saucepan melt margarine. Stir in flour, salt, red pepper and dry mustard. Stir in milk. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir 1 to 2 minutes more. Remove from heat.

Add broccoli and cheese to sauce, stirring until cheese is melted. Slowly add broccoli mixture to egg yolks stirring constantly. Cool slightly.

In a large mixer bowl beat egg whites and cream of tartar with electric mixer on high speed until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight). Gradually pour yolk mixture over beaten egg whites, folding to combine. Pour egg mixture into ungreased souffle dish.

Bake in 350° oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until souffle jiggles when gently shaken. Do not open the oven door during the first 20 to 25 minutes of baking. Test for doneness while souffle is still in the oven. Makes 4 servings.

Catfish Institute Offers Set Of Color Recipe Cards

BELZONI, Miss. (AP) — The Catfish Institute, an association of catfish processors based in the Mississippi Delta region, has published a set of 10 full-color, 3-by-5-inch recipe cards.

The recipes include 'Catfish Fingers with Three Sauces, Catfish en Papillote (microwave recipe), Grilled Catfish with Salsa, and Easy and Elegant Catfish Gumbo. (To order a set, send $1 in check or money order to: RECIPE CARDS, The Catfish Institute, Box 327, Dept. P, Belzoni, MS 39038.)

Mississippi Prime farm-raised catfish is high in protein and lower in calories and fat than equal portions of beef, lamb and pork, the Institute says. Catfish filets are boneless, and they are virtually odorless when cooking.

Desserts For Dieters Possible With Balance And Moderation

FROZEN RASPBERRY YOGURT

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 3/4 cup frozen cranberry juice cocktail concentrate, thawed
- 1 cup fresh or frozen unsweetened raspberries, thawed
- 2 cups plain low-fat yogurt

Sprinkle gelatin over cold water in small saucepan and let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatin is dissolved, about 3 minutes. Stir in sugar.

Combine juice concentrate and raspberries in blender container and blend until smooth. While blender is running, gradually add gelatin mixture through feed cap and blend thoroughly. Blend yogurt with gelatin mixture in medium bowl. Pour into 9-inch baking pan and freeze 3 hours or until firm.

Using electric mixer or food processor, beat frozen mixture until smooth, then return to pan and freeze 3 more hours until firm. Makes about 3 1/2 cups.

PEACH CHAMPAGNE SORBET

- 1 tsp. gelatin
- 1/4 cup water
- 6 peaches, quartered
- 1 cup sugar, about
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 2 cups Champagne

Soften gelatin in water in saucepan. Stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves. Combine peaches, sugar (to taste depending upon sweetness of peaches) and lemon juice in large bowl and mix well to combine. Place half of mixture in blender and blend until smooth. Repeat with remaining half of peach mixture.

Combine gelatin, Champagne and peach puree. Turn into metal pan and freeze until mushy, overnight if necessary. Remove from freezer and beat until smooth. Refreeze until firm. Makes about 2 quarts.

BERRY MERINGUE PIE

- 3 egg whites

- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. cream of tartar
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 1/2 tsp. almond extract
- 1 pint strawberries, hulled and halved
- 3 tbsps. orange liqueur
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1 pint blackberries or blueberries, drained
- 1 pint raspberries, drained

Beat egg whites until foamy in large bowl. Add salt and cream of tartar. Beat in sugar, 1 tablespoon at time, beating until stiff and glossy. Fold in almond extract. Spray 9-inch pie plate with non-stick vegetable coating spray. Spread meringue in pan, covering bottom and sides, but not rim. Make sides little thicker than bottom and 1/2-inch higher than rim of plate.

Bake at 250° 1 hour or until firm. Turn oven off and let meringue dry in oven until oven cools. Do not open oven until completely cooled.

Combine strawberries, liqueur and sugar in medium bowl. Cover and chill 1 hour, turning berries occasionally. Add blackberries and raspberries. Spoon fruit into meringue shell. Serve immediately. Makes 8 servings.

NECTARINE-BRANDY SORBET

- 6 large nectarines, quartered
- 1/2 cup sugar

- 1/2 cup brandy
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 1/2 tsp. grated lemon zest

Puree nectarines in blender to measure about 3 to 4 cups. Add sugar and heat slowly in saucepan until sugar dissolves. Stir brandy, lemon juice and zest into puree and pour into canister of ice cream freezer. Freeze according to manufacturer's directions. Makes 10 servings.

Microwave Is Great For Potatoes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A potato is a nutrient-dense food. One medium potato provides 50 percent of the daily RDA for vitamin C, 15 percent for vitamin B6 and 8 percent for iron, thiamin and folacin.

One medium potato (6 to 8 ounces) contains only 110 calories.

Potatoes are an excellent source of complex carbohydrates. Nearly 100 percent of a potato's calories come from complex carbohydrate and protein. Potatoes also contain plenty of dietary fiber, especially if eaten with the skin.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the average American consumes 120 pounds of potatoes annually.

"Americans ate more potatoes than any other vegetable last year — more than twice as much by weight than the No.2 vegetable, tomatoes. This made potatoes the second greatest source of vitamin C in the American diet, after oranges," the January 1989 issue of the "University of California, Berkeley Wellness Letter" reported.

A baked potato can be cooked in the microwave in 3 to 5 minutes; 7 to 10 minutes for boiled potatoes. Just follow these tips from The Potato Board, which is based in Denver.

Baked Potatoes

Scrub a 6- to 8-ounce potato; pierce with fork. Place in microwave on rack or paper towel. Cook on high (100 percent power) 4 to 6 minutes, turning once. After removing from oven, let stand 2 minutes. Baking time can vary depending on size, shape and variety of potato.

To test for doneness, hold the potato with a cloth or paper towel and firmly press. The potato should give only slightly under your fingers right under the surface; the center will still feel firm.

Cooking Tips:

— Be sure to pierce the potato skin once on top and bottom before cooking to release steam that may build up later.

— When a potato bursts or explodes, it is often not because of overcooking, but because of heat and steam buildup under a skin when no holes were pierced.

— Cook potatoes on a paper towel to absorb any excess moisture.

— Cook all potatoes on high (100 percent power).

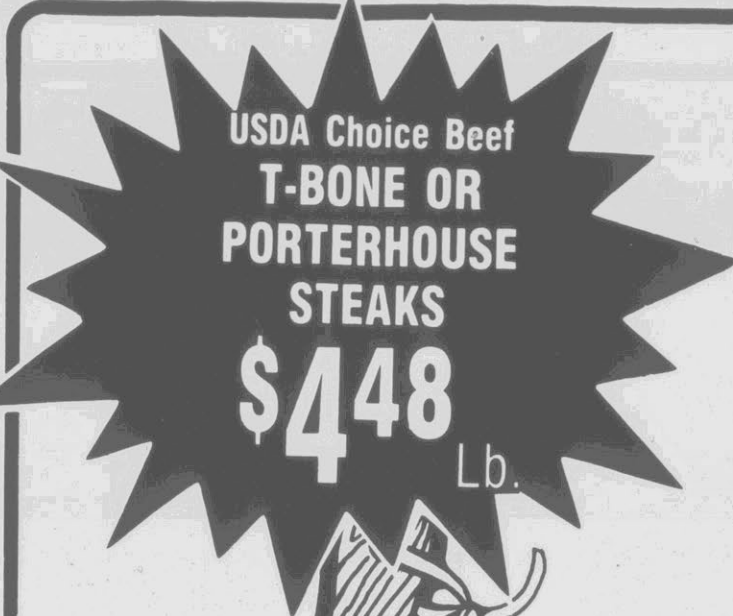

— Potatoes will continue cooking during standing time, but they should not be covered. Use a terrycloth towel to hold in the heat but keep them from becoming soggy.

BOILED POTATOES

For sliced boiled potatoes: Scrub a 6-ounce potato. Slice 1/8-inch thick. Place in microwave dish. Add 1 tablespoon water; cover with plastic wrap. Cook on high (100 percent power) 4 to 5 minutes. Let stand 3 minutes.

For cubed boiled potatoes: Scrub a 6-ounce potato. Cut into 1-inch cubes. Place in microwave dish; cover with plastic wrap. Cook on high 5 to 6 minutes. Let stand 3 minutes.

To test for doneness, potatoes should be easily pierced with a fork but still remain slightly firm. They should not break apart when pierced.

Credit-Terms Details
 A minimum purchase of $100 is required to qualify for 90-day deferred credit. Finance charges will be assessed during the deferral period. The deferral period begins with delivery of merchandise. If you have an existing Wickes Lumber Charge Account balance, addition of any new purchase may or may not change your current monthly payment, depending on the highest balance of your account. Delivery charges (if any) and state sales tax may cause quoted minimum monthly payments to be higher.

Raincheck Policy
 Should we be out of stock on any advertised sale item, our manager will be happy to order this item for you at the same advertised sale price. If the same item is not available for reorder, the manager will make available to you a comparable item of the same value at the advertised price. It is our intention to maintain the prices in this circular until Sept. 16, 1989. However, special circumstances beyond our control may make it necessary to increase or reduce the prices before that date. For example, unusual market conditions in many commodities may result in price fluctuations after this circular is issued. In such cases we reserve the right to revise our prices. You will be notified of the changes at our store prior to processing your purchase.

READ ALL ABOUT NBC'S TERRIFIC STARS —AND HOW TO BECOME ONE YOURSELF!

BAYWATCH

David Hasselhoff and Parker Stevenson are Southern California lifeguards whose adventures are often dramatic, sometimes romantic, always exciting!
TERRIFIC NEW DRAMA!

SISTER KATE

Stephanie Beacham is a hard-edged nun with a real fight on her hands—seven unruly, outrageous orphans. Say your prayers, kids, here comes Sister Kate!
GREAT NEW COMEDY!

HARDBALL

Take one veteran cop (John Ashton from "Beverly Hills Cop"), partner him with a cocky young newcomer (Richard Tyson), for an exciting new breed action show!
DYNAMITE NEW SERIES!

MANCUSO FBI

Mancuso gets the cases no one else wants—the touchy, politically dangerous, top secret ones—because no one else can handle them. Robert Loggia ("Jagged Edge") stars.
PROVOCATIVE NEW SERIES!

THE NUTT HOUSE

In a hotel called the Nutt House, with Harvey Korman as the manager, and Cloris Leachman as a crazy housekeeper, you just know that Mel Brooks had a hand or a foot in it.
OUTRAGEOUS COMEDY SERIES!

SEARS PRICING PLEDGE: Yes, we'll meet or beat the competition's current advertised price on the identical item. Just bring the competition's current ad to any of our Retail Stores.

This offer applies to current merchandise in our Retail Stores only. Excludes clearance, factory closeouts, Sears catalogs and special services such as eyewear and dentistry. Merchandise in this circular available at most larger Sears stores. Unless otherwise stated, all prices shown are Sears everyday regular prices. A special purchase, though not reduced is an exceptional value. Unless otherwise specified, delivery charges not included in selling prices of merchandise. Installation available on many products. See store for details.

Every effort is made to have adequate stock of advertised items to meet anticipated demand. If an out-of-stock occurs, Sears will, at its option, substitute an equal or better item at the advertised price or provide a "raincheck." Excludes limited offers.
