Hungary Lets Refugees Pass Thousands Pour Into Austria

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASSAU, West Germany — Thousands of ecstatic East German refugees poured into West Germany today after Hungary defied a Warsaw Pact ally and boldly threw open a door to the West.

"You made it!" yelled one young emigre, hitting the hood of his Wartburg minibus after arriving in the largest mass migration from East Germany since the Berlin Wall went up in 1961.

East Germany angrily denounced the exodus and accused Hungary of "smuggling" human beings.

Hungary opened its border to the West at midnight to the East Germans. The decision came despite Hungary's concerns that the nation could become a conduit for tens of thousands of other refugees from Soviet bloc nations.

In Yugoslavia, meanwhile, about 100 Romanians who have fled from their Communist country gathered today at a U.N. office in Belgrade, applying to be resettled in the West.

Bavarian border police said more than 2,000 East German refugees — mostly young couples or families with young children — had arrived from Hungary through Austria by midmorning. The number was climbing rapidly.

Austria said 5,000 refugees had crossed into its territory by midmorning.

West Germany's ZDF television network said the total number expected to reach the West in the current exodus could be "well over 10,000."

A 40-year-old Leipzig man, who would not give his name, said: "I decided on escaping 27 years ago, and today it worked. It's a feeling that's just tops, just wild."

The emigration came despite efforts by die-hard Communists in East Berlin to dissuade Hungary's reform-minded leaders.

As it took place, a West German newspaper and television network today reported the condition of East German leader Erich Honecker, who underwent gall bladder surgery last month, has deteriorated badly. Government officials in Bonn declined comment.

Hungarian radio compared the East Germans' noisy departure by car, bus and train to a New Year's Eve celebration "with horns blaring and people shouting."

Thousands of East Germans had flooded into Hungary on tourist visas after it tore down its border fence with Austria in May.

East Germany accused Hungary of interfering in its internal affairs by allowing the mass flight and becoming the first East bloc government to help citizens of an ally freely leave their homeland.

The state-run news agency ADN said Hungary, under the guise of humanitarianism, "has engaged in the organized smuggling of human beings."

Collision On Danube Kills 150 Passengers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — At least 150 passengers were killed when their Romanian pleasure boat collided with a Bulgarian tugboat on the Danube River and sank, the Yugoslav state news agency reported today from Bucharest.

Romanian officials did not immediately confirm the Tanjug report, which gave no sources.

The accident occurred Sunday near the port city of Galati, about 125 miles northeast of Bucharest. The Romanian ship sank "in conditions of poor visibility," the official Romanian Agerpres news agency reported Sunday.

Agerpres said 18 of the ship's 169 passengers were rescued. The Romanian report was unclear on whether the 13 crew were among those saved.

Tanjung said the cruise ship sank so fast that only 18 people could be rescued. Tanjug also said the ship had only 10 crew members.

The reports did not give the nationalities of the passengers. A British newspaper reported that Western tourists were likely aboard the Romanian ship, the Mogosoia, when it sank.

The Bulgarian state-run news agency BTA said the Mogosoia collided with the Bulgarian tug Peter Karaminchev, which was hauling a convoy of loaded barges, then capsized and sank.

"After the alarm was sounded by the Bulgarian ship, its crew and the crew of the ships in the proximity ran to help," BTA said.

It said there were no reports of casualties aboard the tug.

There was no report on what caused the boats to collide, but Agerpres said the ship sank "in conditions of poor visibility."

In London, The Independent newspaper said that apart from the 13 crew, most of the 169 passengers aboard the Mogosoia "were almost certainly Western tourists." The newspaper report from Vienna quoted Danube shipping officials in the Austrian capital.

Pleasure cruises on the Danube are one of Romania's few sources of hard currency, it said.

Agerpres said rescue operations were continuing and a government commission was established to investigate the accident.

The Independent said blamed Agerpres for "sparse details" of the sinking, which only began to emerge 10 hours afterward. It said the Bulgarian BTA news agency (See SHIP, A-10)

Study Challenges Pitt School Policy To Group Pupils In Middle Grades

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The use of achievement test scores to assign Pitt County students to language arts and math classes is doing more harm than good, according to a recent study completed for the Board of Education.

The study, by the Center for Educational Research and Evaluation of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, found that grouping students in classes on the basis of achievement test scores caused a significant decline in academic achievement in most cases. Students grouped in that manner have also seen racial isolation in the classroom increase, the study said.

Fourth- through eighth-grade students in county schools are assigned to language arts and math classes on the basis of their achievement test scores. This practice is known as homogeneous grouping. In contrast, kindergarten through third-grade students are not grouped. High school students are assigned on the basis of informed parent and student choice.

The study focused on how homogeneous grouping affected Pitt County students during the 1986-87 and 1987-88 school years. Although the results indicate that some groups benefited from the grouping policy — particularly low-achieving black students in language arts classes — most students were harmed by it.

The harmful effect of homogeneous grouping is most pronounced in black students assigned to math classes, the study indicated. In nine of 10 instances, the study said, black students suffered a decline in academic achievement when they were grouped on the basis of achievement test scores. This decline was most pronounced in the group of students whose scores on the test were highest, the study said.

The study recommended that the board consider revising the policy. "On the basis of these results, the use of homogeneous grouping to assign grade 3 through grade 8 students to classes in mathematics or language arts should be questioned seriously," it said.

The study was prepared to provide the board with the means to evaluate its policy on grouping students. The U.S. Justice Department's Office of Civil Rights says the current policy violates provisions in the Civil Rights Act of 1964 that prohibits racially identifiable or racially isolated classes. The department has ordered the board to either prove that there is no violation or change the policy.

Under the law, any policy which results in racially identifiable or racially isolated classes must be justified in terms of academic benefits to students. The grouping must also be based on objective, non-discriminatory standards. According to the study, homogeneous grouping in Pitt County schools tends to create racially identifiable classes. "There can be no doubt that assignment of Pitt County students to language arts and mathematics classes through bona fide homogeneous grouping results in substantial racial isolation," the study said.

The study's results were presented to school board members during committee meetings in August. County school administrators are reviewing the study and preparing several possible grouping options, which the board's ad hoc instructional committee will review when it meets Sept. 15, Charles Ross, associate superintendent for instruction, said. The study will also be reviewed by the Office of Civil Rights for action, he said.

Former Mayor Killed In Colombia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Attackers today shot and killed a former mayor of Medellin, the heart of the nation's cocaine industry and focus of most of the violence in the country's narcotics war, police said.

At least two attackers dressed in black shot Pablo Pelaez Gonzalez as he was being driven to his office, where he operated a local plywood company, the Medellin police said by telephone.

Pelaez' driver was killed also, said a police spokeswoman who declined to be identified.

Radio stations reporting from the scene of the shooting said the killers, apparently on foot, fired 9mm automatic pistols at the ex-mayor's BMW sedan, shed their black outer garments and fled.

Pelaez, 45, was mayor of the city of 2 million, Colombia's second largest, until 1986.

No group immediately asserted responsibility for the killing. It is the latest in a string of daily bombings and shootings in Medellin, where wealthy drug lords have focused efforts to terrorize Colombians following an unprecedented government crackdown on traffickers announced Aug. 18.

The most-wanted cocaine chieftains remain at large and it doesn't appear the government knows where they are despite a $250,000 reward offered for information on their whereabouts. Colombia on Sunday signed extradition papers for three alleged traffickers.

The crackdown has been supported by President Bush and is the focus of a U.N. meeting that opened today in Vienna on the issue.

"If Colombia were to lose this war (against the traffickers), we should all be lost," Margaret J. Anstee, director general of the U.N. Office in Vienna, told top government and law enforcement officials from 100 countries.

Related stories on A-7

During the weekend, the army kept on confiscating the lavish properties the fugitive cocaine traffickers left behind.

At least five properties were seized, along with Olympic-sized swimming pools, 600 head of cattle, 200 exotic tropical birds, 80 fighting cocks, show horses, trucks and an idyllic estate on a so-called "Fantasy Island" on the Magdalena River running through Colombia's midwest.

The properties are said to belong to the top two and most wanted drug lords, Pablo Escobar and Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha. They are worth billions and the seizures are not believed to have drastically diminished the reputed drug barons' wealth.

For the first time since the drug sweep began, eight A-37 jets donated last week by the United States were used in reconnaissance flights over the properties, Colombian television reported.

"We are going to keep the seizures up," said an officer with the 4th Army Brigade, one of the units carrying out the anti-drug operations. He asked not to be identified for security reasons.

He said 49 properties, including ranches, mansions, and estates, have been confiscated and 26 people arrested in the past two weeks.

The three alleged traffickers who Colombia says are wanted in the United States are not believed to be high-ranking but are said to be active in the Medellin cartel, supplier of most of the cocaine sold on U.S. streets.

Eakin Backs Disclosure Of Graduation Rate

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The chancellor of East Carolina University says he supports the principle behind a congressional bill that would require all colleges to disclose graduation rates for their student athletes.

Dr. Richard R. Eakin said today said he favors a national requirement to publish graduation rates.

"I don't really see a problem with publishing those rates for students generally," he said. "We're not talking about individual students and whether they graduated."

Officials at other universities agreed, the Associated Press reported today. "I'm certainly not one of those who wants college athletics to be in the political arena, but I can see the logic in it," Gene Hooks, athletic director at Wake Forest University, said. "If what I hear is true, that in some schools the rates are down in the 10 and 20 percentiles, then I would certainly like to see those schools embarrassed."

The bill follows a federal study of National Collegiate Athletic Association statistics. The study found that at a third of U.S. colleges and universities with major men's basketball programs, only one in five players graduates. The rate for football was slightly higher.

In basketball, 35 of 97 schools surveyed had graduation rates of 0 percent to 20 percent among players. In football, 14 of 103 schools studied had graduation rates of 0 percent to 20 percent. The NCAA statistics covered 1982-87.

Like all schools in the UNC system, ECU releases graduation rates for student athletes. The university reported that 19 of 26 football players and all four of the basketball players recruited as freshmen in 1982 either graduated or left the university in good academic standing by August 1987. These are the most recent figures available.

The university reported to the NCAA that 41.23 percent of all student athletes recruited in 1982 graduated by Aug. 1987. The figure for all university students during the same period was 41.03 percent.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., requested the study. The Senate's Labor and Human Resources Committee, which he chairs, will hear testimony Tuesday regarding the bill.

Other officials, whose schools already make their graduation rates public, said the NCAA — not the federal government — should regulate college athletics.

John Swofford, athletic director at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said he approved of the proposal but thought action should be left to NCAA officials.

"I think it's a very valid piece of information for a young person and his parents to have during the recruiting process," Swofford said. "But I would prefer that it be done through the governing body of athletics instead of through Congress. The governing body is there to provide that leadership."

In The Area

GUC Meeting

The Greenville Utilities Commission board will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the utilities building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets.

Among items included for consideration: award of bids for a gas system improvements design; a drug-free workplace policy, and alternate proposals for the Tar-Pamlico River Basin.

Sierra Meeting

The local Sierra Club chapter will meet at 8 p.m. tonight at First Presbyterian Church. Sam Uzzell, Pitt County agricultural extension agent, will talk about his recent trip to Peru.

Uzzell visited Peru to observe agricultural practices in that country and to note the effects of the political climate there on agricultural development. His trip was sponsored by the North Carolina State University international program and the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Sierra Club meetings and outings are open to the public. The Greenville Cypress Group meets the second Monday of each month at 8 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church.

International Day

The steering committee organizing next year's International Day is seeking volunteers of varied ethnic backgrounds to help plan the festival.

International Day will showcase Greenville's increasing ethnic diversity with food, song, dance and crafts. Anyone interested in participating should contact Jesse Harris, Greenville's human relations officer, at 830-4497.

Steering committee members have appointed a subcommittee to consider possible sites for the celebration, scheduled for October 1990.

Estuarine Study

The Albemarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study will hold an agency overview Wednesday at the Civic Center in Washington, N.C., at 1 p.m.

The purpose of the meeting is to informally present the interaction of state and federal agencies with APES. Participants include representative from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Soil Conservation Service, U.S. Geological Survey and the Environmental Protection Agency.

State participants will include agency representative from the Division of Environmental Management, Coastal Management, Marine Fisheries, Soil and Water Conservation, Wildlife Resources Commission, the Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Extension and the Virginia Council on the Environment.

The format of the meeting is informal and public comment and participation are encouraged. For further information contact Joan Giordano at 946-6481.

Exchange Student

Julie Smith of Greenville recently returned from summer abroad as a Youth For Understanding International Exchange student.

Ms. Smith, the daughter of Linda Smith and a student at D.H. Conley High School, lived with a family in West Germany.

YFU, established in 1951, is one of the world's oldest and largest non-profit international exchange organizations, dedicated to international understanding and world peace. About 3,000 students participate in YFU's American Overseas program each year. For more information about YFU, call 1-800-TEENAGE.

PTA Officers

The South Greenville school PTA officers for the 1989-90 school year are: Kathy Taft, president; Gertha Crumpler, secretary; Penny Taft, treasurer; and Vernida Bowman, public relations.

The first PTA meeting will be at the school Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m.

Day Care

Dr. Susan Foreman will address the Pitt County Day Care Association at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the County Commissioners' Auditorium. Dr. Foreman's topic will be AIDS and day care.

PTA Meeting

The Wahl-Coates Parent-Teachers Association will have its proposed budget presented during a meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Wahl-Coates School Auditorium.

Also on the agenda are the introduction of the school's staff and open house in the classrooms. Officers of the PTA are Cheryl Esarey, president; Laura Nichols, president-elect; Georgie Hall, treasurer; and Alice Solomon, secretary.

Tammy Faye Uses Donahue's TV Show To Defend Bakker, Ministry

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — As Jim Bakker's fraud trial entered its second week today, his wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, defended the evangelist and his PTL ministry on the Phil Donahue television show.

Mrs. Bakker said during the hour-long taped interview broadcast from Charlotte that the accusations hurt, but she said they are not true.

"We know inside we are not guilty," she said in the interview taped Friday. "The Bible says those the son has set free are free indeed. If I was guilty, I'd hide my head, but when you're not guilty you're not guilty."

"We will fight 'til the day we die saying we are not guilty," Mrs. Bakker said.

The PTL television ministry simply outgrew its founders, she said.

"It got to where it didn't even feel a part of us," Mrs. Bakker said. "We almost couldn't catch up with it. ... I felt like a little girl who didn't know where she was supposed to be."

If contributions intended for the ministry were misused, it was never by intent.

"The wonderful thing about God is he says you give and it shall be given to you. I thought that was what was happening," she said. "I thought it was coming to us as a result of honoring his word."

Mrs. Bakker said she was sorry if anyone was hurt and vowed to make amends if the Bakkers someday get another chance.

"I think we will probably build another ministry, but I will always be very careful to remember not to forget this time from whence I came," she said.

Mrs. Bakker said she might have become insensitive to others when money flooded the ministry.

"There are times when you almost forget that $100 extra to spend to some people is all they have to spend," she said. "I could go spend $100. I really forgot that some women can't do that."

Meanwhile, Richard Dortch, the former top executive at the PTL ministry who turned state's evidence, was expected to testify this week against Bakker.

Until Dortch pleaded guilty Aug. 8, prosecutors were planning to prosecute him and Bakker in the same fraud and conspiracy trial. Dortch was sentenced last month to eight years in prison.

In cross-examining other witnesses, Bakker's attorney, Harold Bender, has sought to create an impression with the jury that Dortch directed some of PTL's most excessive spending. Dortch, on the other hand, is expected to testify that Bakker called the financial shots.

Bakker is charged with 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy and faces 120 years and prison and more than $5 million in fines. Prosecutors say he used nearly $4 million in ministry funds to finance a lavish lifestyle.

Bender and co-counsel George T. Davis aren't saying whether Bakker will take the stand on his behalf, and neither is Bakker. But prosecutors Jerry Miller and Deborah Smith could be expected to mount a harsh cross-examination if he does.

Bakker testified in 1988 in a civil suit in bankruptcy court. PTL had sued him, his wife and former aide David Taggart for millions of dollars it claimed they had been overpaid or that they had cost the ministry through mismanagement.

Bakker testified then that he was PTL's visionary, with day-to-day finances left to others. A source close to Bakker told the Greensboro News & Record last week that his lawyers wish that testimony was not on the public record to haunt him.

"It makes him look like a complete boob," the source said.

Also expected to testify this week against Bakker is former aide James Taggart, who, with his brother, David, was convicted in July of tax evasion and conspiracy related to their use of PTL cash advances for personal purchases.

Both were sentenced Friday — David to 18 years and 5 months and James to 17 years and 9 months.

The government's case opened with a day and a half of testimony from David Taggart.

Tammy Bakker will not testify, lawyers for both sides said Friday.

That came as news to U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter, who briefly interrupted testimony a few minutes into Friday's proceedings when he noticed her in the courtroom. Prospective witnesses in a case are not allowed to hear others' testimony, and she had left the courtroom Wednesday and Thursday before testimony began.

But Miller told Potter that Bender and Davis had just assured him Mrs. Bakker would not testify.

Televangelism Expert Says PTL Collapse Damaged Others

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The outcome of former PTL leader Jim Bakker's ongoing trial is less important than the ministry's collapse and scandal, a televangelism expert says.

"I think the damage has already been done," said Charles Lippy, a professor of religion at Clemson University who has concentrated on television ministry. "All of (the televangelists) have lost a viewing audience because all of them are suspect."

Bakker, who broadcast "The Jim and Tammy Show" with his wife, Tammy Faye, is on trial in federal court in Charlotte, N.C.

He is charged with 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy and faces 120 years and prison and more than $5 million in fines if convicted. Prosecutors say the PTL founder used nearly $4 million in ministry funds to finance a lavish lifestyle.

The trial was interrupted when Bakker was ordered by U.S. District Judge Robert Potter to undergo psychological testing after a psychiatrist testified he was covering under a couch in his attorney's office. It resumed Wednesday.

"My suspicion is the verdict is less important than the collapse of Bakker and the whole business," Lippy said, adding that Bakker's resignation from PTL also had a negative effect on televangelism.

"From what I've read and understand, the viewing audience for all kinds of religious broadcasting has stopped," he said. "Money is not flowing in, people are not calling in."

However, what the televangelists lose in terms of a viewing audience might become a gain for conservative religions, Lippy said.

"One thing that always is missing from TV religion is a commitment to the life and values," he said. "You're not drawn into the community. I think that it's healthy — that it may give a shot in the arm to other religions that televangelism has eclipsed."

And people who become disillusioned with the TV ministries will probably stay away from mainline denominations, flocking instead to the most conservative ones who claim to stand for traditional values, he said.

But despite what Lippy calls "some erosion of interest" in religion, he suspects people disillusioned by televangelism will not completely desert religion.

"I would hope that could be a tradeoff," he said. "I think you may see (people) look to say, 'All right, what more is there?'"

Regardless of Bakker's legal woes, the PTL's highly touted Heritage USA theme park and resort probably "would have blown apart for other reasons," Lippy said.

"I suspected they promised way more than they delivered," he said. "I also think having the Christian theme park fulfills some cultural needs. Because this was done in the framework of Christianity, it was seen to be safe."

Bakker is accused of overselling lifetime PTL partnerships that guaranteed free lodging at Heritage USA.

The PTL has a hearing scheduled September 27 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia.

Farm Scene

By Phillip Rowan
PITT EXTENSION AGENCY

Our office often gets calls about what pasture is best for this area. And the answer to that question often depends on the caller's specific situation.

Is a permanent pasture wanted? What type of livestock will be grazing the pasture? Is access to equipment (tractor, disk harrow, mower, etc.) available? How intensively will the pasture be managed? What do you expect to spend to establish and maintain the pasture? What is the soil in which the pasture will be planted?

Many times fescue is the pasture that is planted for grazing or a permanent cover for areas. Tall fescue is the best-adapted cool-season perennial grass for our area. In contrast, bermudagrasses (Coastal, Tift 44) which are perennials only grow in the warm months of the year. Fescue grows best in the cool spring months (March-May) and in the fall (Sept.-Nov.). Fescue or the bermudagrasses are the best-adapted perennial grass pastures for the Pitt County area.

The primary advantages to establishing fescue as pasture is its adaptability, hardiness, length of grazing season, ease of establishment and cost of establishment. However, a fescue pasture does have some disadvantages. The major problem is the high incidence of endophyte fungus found in tall fescue pastures. This fungus causes animals to perform poorly, particularly in the summer. Abortions and other reproduction disorders have been reported in broodmares grazing fescue pastures. For this reason, it is suggested to withdraw broodmares from fescue pastures three to four months prior to foaling.

There are methods to utilize to minimize the effects of the endophyte fungus in fescue. Testing by laboratory analysis (available through the NCDA) is the only method to determine if the fungus is present. Endophyte-free fescue seed varieties are now available.

Fescue can be planted by seed at a broadcast rate of 15 pounds to 20 pounds per acre (10 to 15 pounds drilled) in pure stands. When mixing with clovers, the seeding rate should be reduced to about 10 pounds per acre. September is the best month to plant fescue for pasture. It can also be planted in October and late February through March. Lime and fertilization should be applied based on a soil test.

New stands of fescue should not be grazed until growth has reached 6 inches to 10 inches and the soil is firm enough to withstand trampling. For more information about fescue pastures and the establishment and management of fescue, call the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 830-6361.

Thefts Reported

Investigators said a dozen thefts were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer C.A. Elks said $400 in cash was taken from 205 S. Pitt St. in a break-in reported at 2:09 p.m. Saturday, while Officer C.M. Credle said a purse was taken from 603 E. Gum Road in an incident reported at 7:24 p.m.

U.S. Schools Fall Short, Study Says

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — American students have little incentive to achieve good grades as many are lured into low-paying jobs to earn money for designer clothes touted by television advertisers, the head of the nation's largest school administrator group said today.

Scott Thomson, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, examined the learning conditions in America and compared them with those in South Korea and West Germany.

Concluding that "American society doesn't measure up," Thomson prepared a "National Report Card" in the October issue of the association's journal that awarded South Korea an A-minus and West Germany a B-plus. The United States received a C-plus.

Thomson pointed to a 1988 North Carolina survey that found half of the high school juniors were working, with 67 percent of these students holding jobs 20 hours or more a week.

In South Korea, he said students "simply do not hold jobs while attending school." In West Germany, students through all 13 years of schooling are not employed in the job market except perhaps informally in family businesses.

"Compared to their international counterparts, most American students not only have fewer incentives to achieve good grades, they also have more incentives to hold jobs during the school week," Thomson said in the article.

"A high demand for cheap labor and a premium on teen-age consumption lure students into the job market," said Thomson, who examined five broad categories that researchers say consistently affect learning.

As for television, Thomson said 71 percent of 13-year-old Korean students consistently watch science programs, while only 37 percent of Americans of similar age watch science programs, the lowest of any group studied in an international assessment of math and science schooling.

Thomson said the market analysis firm, Teenage Research Unlimited, found that television's focus on the teen-age consumer market has now dropped from age 18 to 15 because the typical high school junior has nearly $60 a week in spending money from jobs and allowances.

"Brand loyalties are established at an early age, hence the hard sell to youth. The American television industry tends to view children and youth as consumers rather than as learners," he said.

The pressure on students to consume may soon extend to the school classroom as well, said Thomson. Whittle Communications, a subsidiary of Time-Life Publishing Corp., is offering schools a daily 10-minute news show with two minutes of advertising in return for an offer of free television monitors.

America received a D for prevalence of illegal drugs and Bs for the percentage of Gross National Product devoted to public education, place of schooling in family value structure and the percentage of families below the poverty line.

The only A for America was in the percentage of youth age 16 in school.

Five Hurt In Rampage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn. — Labor turmoil in which protesters burned trailers, hurled rocks and overturned cars has some officials questioning the state's commitment to squelching violence.

Residents in this town of 6,500 tried Sunday to rebound from Saturday's rampage by pro-union activists, who for weeks have been incensed at a contractor's use of non-union labor on a $535 million expansion of Boise Cascade Corp.'s paper mill.

Damage was estimated at $1.3 million in the biggest disturbance since an estimated 150 union workers at the mill went on a wildcat strike in July. Five people were injured and 32 arrested, and officials criticized Gov. Rudy Perpich for not calling out the National Guard.

Authorities planned more arrests after reviewing videotapes, and Perpich said evidence would be sent to the U.S. attorney's office for possible federal charges.

"Yesterday was a sad day for us in International Falls," the Rev. Robert A. Kitchen, pastor of Faith United Church of Christ, said Sunday. "It was a day of desperation, of anger, of hopelessness, perhaps."

Kitchen described the unrest as "an open wound that we know has ripped our community apart," and he prayed that the community pull together and denounce the violence.

About 370 non-union workers in five buses entered the construction site under police escort early Sunday. Police reported no problems.

Capital Gains Tax Change Sought

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A House Ways and Means Committee member said today he will attempt to amend a capital-gains tax cut that the panel is expected to approve this week so none of the benefit would go to people with incomes over $200,000 a year.

"If we are going to offer a capital-gains exclusion, we should offer it to those who need it," Rep. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., told a news conference. "Those who have incomes in the millions can well afford the modest top tax rates under today's tax system."

Dorgan's limited capital-gains reduction would be financed by raising from 28 percent to 33 percent the maximum tax rate that applies to all types of income earned by wealthier taxpayers.

The Ways and Means Committee will resume consideration Tuesday of a plan, endorsed by President Bush, that would allow investors to avoid tax on 30 percent of capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stock and other assets. Congressional staff experts estimate that 80 percent of the benefit of such a reduction would go to those with annual incomes above $100,000.

Frank Faces Review By Bar

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Massachusetts Bar has opened preliminary disciplinary proceedings against Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., who recently admitted paying a male prostitute for sex, the Washington Times reports.

The proceedings were triggered when George Washington University professor John F. Banzhaf III last week filed a complaint with the state's Board of Overseers.

Assistant Board Counsel Terence Troyer told The Times in an interview from Boston on Friday. "The board's proceedings are confidential, and I can neither confirm or deny that proceedings are under way against any individual."

But Troyer confirmed that such proceedings are automatic once a complaint has been filed. Frank has 20 days to respond in writing, and Banzhaf may then submit a counter-response.

A bar association in the state could produce sanctions as serious as disbarment. Frank has never practiced law and is listed as an inactive lawyer by the board.

Such inquiries are normally kept confidential, but Banzhaf has asked Frank to agree to open them.

"He says the matter should be cleared up," Banzhaf said. "Certainly, the public wants to know, and the best way is through a relatively neutral forum (the Board of Overseers), which has the expertise to resolve these kinds of issues."

Frank, who is gay, admitted last month that he paid prostitute Stephen Gobie for sexual services, then hired the man to be his personal aide. Frank said he knew Gobie was continuing to work as a prostitute, but denied knowledge that Gobie was running a prostitution service from the congressman's basement apartment on Capitol Hill. He said he fired Gobie in 1987 when he found out.

Frank also said he wrote several letters to Gobie's probation officer seeking to suspend the prostitute's probationary period, and that he used his congressional immunity to void Gobie's traffic tickets.

Frank himself has called for an investigation into the matter by the House ethics committee, saying he wants to clear the public record.

Grocers' Help Solicited

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Environmentalists want to enlist grocery chains as allies in their fight against pesticides on foods, but the campaign is showing only limited success and meeting stiff resistance from the largest retailers.

One environmental group, the National Toxics Campaign, announced today it has signed up a half-dozen grocery chains in a pledge to shift growers away from using pesticides, especially cancer-causing chemicals.

Environmentalists called the agreement a major breakthrough, although it amounted to little more than a general pledge to work toward elimination of pesticide use.

"This is the beginning of a national campaign," said Craig Merrilees of the National Toxics Campaign, calling the pact a "first of a kind... dramatic breakthrough" for the environmental movement.

The participants represent fewer than 200 stores in the United States and are firms primarily in California and Arizona that have broken ranks before with their industry colleagues on the pesticide issue.

The agreement, which involves five grocery chains and a produce distributor, represents only the kickoff of a national campaign to enlist grocers in the fight against pesticides, the environmentalists told a news conference.

Merrilees said he expects other grocers to join but acknowledged that the industry hierarchy, including grocers' trade associations, is strongly opposed to pushing growers to reduce their pesticide use.

At a separate news conference, the Food Marketing Institute and several producer associations denounced the environmentalists' plans.

Robert L. Carey, a spokesman for the industry group, accused the environmentalists of "seeking to create a major crisis of confidence in the food supply."

"They apparently believe they can coerce supermarket retailers into assuming the job of government," he said. "Their intention is to pit company against company and retailers against their suppliers."

Karen Brown of the National Food Institute accused the environmentalists of "more scare tactics."

"We don't think it's our job to play the role of government or science," said Ms. Brown, whose group represents 1,500 grocery companies including the country's 100 largest chains.

Pesticide use has received heavy attention following the uproar earlier this year over the pesticide Alar.

United Way Meets Many Needs

An annual reminder:

The Pitt County United Way campaign began with a kickoff meeting last week.

This year United Way will be seeking to raise $1,258,341 million through gifts and pledges. The budget is a 9.1 percent increase over last year's figure.

That is a substantial increase and a large amount of money. When it is weighed against the participating agencies and the good work they do in Pitt County, the inevitable conclusion is that United Way contributions buy a lot of service.

Pitt County is steadily growing in population and so are the needs of its citizens. Many public service needs cannot be met through government and thus through tax dollars. Various nonprofit agencies fill the gap. They depend on public contributions to meet their budgets and the participating agencies of United Way look to the consolidated fund raising campaign to meet their needs.

It is a rare citizen of Pitt County who does not at some time look to at least one of the participating agencies for service. And, even with a budget now exceeding $1 million annually, there will still be some deserving projects that will go unmet. Nevertheless the proposed budget will do a lot of good things for all of us in Pitt County.

Recognizing that United Way agencies offer great benefits to Pitt County, it falls on each citizen to contribute willingly and do his or her part in keeping the agencies functioning. Remember, too, that hundreds of people volunteer their time to the United Way campaign. If everyone pledges promptly, the campaign can be concluded in short order and the community can put that time to other public endeavors.

Give willingly and give without delay to the Pitt County United Way campaign. It is an investment in the community which is certain to return great dividends.

An Ossified National Security Budget

Stephen Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON — It is impossible not to be dismayed by the difficulty of producing very small amounts of new money for national security purposes that reflect the vast changes being registered on the international scene. Most of the money goes to the old places — $300 billion for defense, $14 billion for foreign aid, perhaps $5 billion to 10 billion for intelligence. The new causes — Poland's new non-Communist government, the assault on cocaine production in South America, the global environment — are fortunate to be funded in the $100 million to $200 million range.

Set aside for the moment whether these expenditures, old and new, and the programs they pay for are just what they ought to be. The rigidity and unresponsiveness of the system are striking. For the new causes are not pariahs. They are widely regarded as worthy and urgent. Democrats and liberals cheer on a post-Cold War transition, and while some conservatives drag, President Bush has adopted a slogan of "beyond containment" that provides a good rationale for broad Republican support of policy and budgeting departures.

Yet things limp along.

It was not ever thus. Just a decade ago, President Carter and especially President Reagan galvanized the country and Congress into immense spending increases for defense. There was nothing rigid about the system then. Under two presidents, it responded instantly to the fear of Soviet power. It is sobering, though not exactly surprising, that nothing else so effectively opens the national wallet. For better or worse, people viscerally understand the threat posed by Soviet power on the march, and do not much need to have it explained to them.

Of the new causes, you might think that the historic opportunity to sustain a friendly non-Communist regime in Poland would touch the same sources of political conduct that nourish defense spending. It seems, however, that the reduction of a Soviet threat by political means just does not stir the same action-oriented patriotic juices as the confronting of a Soviet threat by military means.

Again, you might think that combating the drug scourge would be a pretty good surrogate for fighting communism. Cocaine is a killer, a poisoner, a tremendous community burden and a destroyer of what is sacred. But the people it hurts the most or hurts the most conspicuously, in minority communities, do not have the political resources — the clout of their own, the alliances with others — to come up with big new money.

It's not merely that minorities are minorities. It's that most of what's in the budget is already spoken for by powerful constituencies that have been at it for a long time. In theory Bush could draw from one of the old accounts—forgo one or two Stealth bombers, for instance, as various impatient people who find Stealth a dubious investment have suggested. But that ignores the fact that defense money (and Social Security money, etc.) is politically locked in. It also ignores the fact that if Stealth is a dubious investment, it shouldn't be built at all.

But of course there is a further and sadder explanation of why funds are limited for new-wave enterprises in a post-Cold War era, and it lies not in the tyranny of the budget but simply in the president's arbitrary decision not to seek more revenues to pay for pressing national needs.

It falls to the Europeans to lead the necessarily large and long Western effort to revive Poland, but now that there is actually a non-Communist government in place — a development that could scarcely be imagined at the beginning of the summer — the United States should be considering more ambitious ways to help and especially to fill the food gap. Certainly Americans can put up more than the $10 million-$10 million—that Bush has shamelessly proposed as a first-year delivery on his Polish aid pledge.

It falls to the Latin countries whence cocaine comes to conduct the total mobilization, as in a war, that is required for them to cut the flow to the United States; cutting use is our business. But to offer for this purpose aid amounting barely to a few days take by the drug cartel does not even faintly match what solidarity with the beleaguered Latins compels.

Bush has enunciated a promising policy line of "beyond containment." But it remains to be filled out. In crucial aspects his commitment to his policy seems tentative and weak.

Spared

Hurricane Season Not Over

The huge hurricane named Gabrielle was aimed at the east coast of the United States as it made its way across the Atlantic last week.

At that time it had winds up to 135 mph and was rated as a major hurricane. Once such storms begin headed westward it is only by chance that their directions are finally determined. Luck was with North Carolina, once again. Gabrielle, which was headed west-northwest, turned northward. The hurricane even missed Bermuda which at one time seemed certain to feel its fury. As far out at sea as it was, however, some of the east coast caught its effects in the form of rough surfs. There were big ocean swells around Bermuda and some preparations were made for the storm. In the end, though, Gabrielle passed largely east of Bermuda.

Headed northward, the storm passed over cooler waters. Then, like its predecessor Hurricane Felix, it lost its power and become a relatively harmless storm at sea.

For North Carolina the passing of Gabrielle brought a collective sigh of relief. It has been almost a generation since an Atlantic hurricane hit the North Carolina coast full force. There are still plenty of coastal residents, along with those further inland, who can attest to the destructive power of these storms when they hit land.

Virtually everyone tracks the storms in eastern North Carolina. At worst, they can destroy the coastline. At the least, Gabrielle could have brought torrential rain ashore to wash out football games and many other weekend activities.

The 1989 hurricane season could draw to an end next month with the North Carolina coast once again spared. But for those at the coast, the hurricane watch will continue. The state was spared from Gabrielle's fury but eventually a hurricane will crash into the North Carolina Outer Banks once again. It is not pleasant to contemplate.

Take Away The Customers

WASHINGTON — If you read the newspapers or watch the evening news, you could be forgiven for raising an eyebrow over President Bush's call for a crackdown on drug users.

Isn't it the drug dealers who constitute the scourge of cities across America? Isn't it the drug merchants whose turf wars and "discipline" have raised the big-city murder rate to record levels? Aren't the people who use drugs largely victims of the drug dealers: despairing youths, pitiful junkies, the hopeless poor desperate for a little pleasure in their oppressive lives?

How can it be fair to further victimize these luckless victims in the name of waging a "war on drugs"?

Well, what you have seen on television and read in the newspapers is true, but it is by no means the whole truth. The inner cities may be peculiarly devastated by drugs. It is the inner cities whose children are dying, whose young men are destroying their lives, whose neighborhoods have been transformed into places that are no longer fit for habitation.

But the non-poor in the cities and suburbs also play a major role in the devastation.

A minute's thought tells you why it must be so.

A lot of people — and not just the international traffickers and money-launderers — have grown rich in the drug business. One Washington dealer, Rayful Edmond III, at the time of his arrest was reported to own dozens of luxury cars, a half-dozen real-estate properties and a number of businesses. Bonuses to his sales force included everything from Super Bowl trips, exotic vacations and expense-paid outings to prize fights.

Virtually every major city has dozens of inner-city dealers who not only own expensive automobiles and jewelry but who are also able to spread the wealth to those who work for them, who transport their contraband and operate their "stash houses." Even adolescent children who work as look-outs, to warn the dealers of the presence of law-enforcement officers, earn hundreds of dollars a week.

There's no way all this money could come from the inner-city "victims" you see on the news. The total of the cash in the typical inner city — welfare payments, rent and food money, savings and the rest of it — would not be enough to account for the wealth accumulated by the Rayful Edmonds and the lesser dealers. You can't create very many millionaires by simply turning over the money in a poor neighborhood. A substantial share of the drug money that is making so many people rich has to be coming in from the outside. According to some estimates, as many as 80 percent of the drug users in America are not the hard-pressed poor blacks but well-off whites.

William Raspberry

It must, in fact, be these outsiders — the middle-class "casual" users — who are making the drug traffic sufficiently lucrative to enrich not just the operators of the ghetto drug markets but also the suppliers, shippers and financiers of the international drug cartels.

And while it is appealing to speak of going after these Mr. Bigs, the fact is most of them are so well insulated by power and money that they are all but immune.

The one thing their power and money can't protect them from is a decision by the consumers of drugs — including the affluent "casual" users — to stop consuming.

And what better way to encourage that decision than by assessing heavy penalties against the users. The inner-city drug merchants and their minions, for whom the alternative to drug dealing is likely to be either unemployment or some dreary, low-paid job, are not intimidated by the threat of jail. The risk of a few years' imprisonment is, for them, just another cost of doing their lucrative business.

But for the middle-class user, the prospect of even a weekend in jail may be sufficient sanction. Threaten to publicize their names or take away their drivers' licenses and confiscate their fancy cars, and they are likely to quit cold turkey. It's simply not worth the risk.

Am I saying that America should forget about interdiction, forget about efforts to halt production at the source, forget about the white-collar participants in the narcotics industry?

Not at all. President Bush correctly called for stepped-up action at these levels as well.

But the plain fact is that the most effective way of stamping out the drug business is to take away the customers: by education, by social sanction and by stiff legal penalties. The President may have been a bit disingenuous as to how he intends to finance his $7.8 billion drug war. But in targeting drug users for special attention, he was right on the mark.

Escapes Caught

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — Two men, one charged with murder, assault and armed robbery, were back in custody Sunday, a day after they fled the Surry County jail by cutting through a fence and scaling a wall during a recreation period.

Joseph Edward Lynch, 20, of Germantown, was captured late Saturday night, while Lindsey Bowman Jr., 28, whose address is unknown, turned himself into authorities about 11 a.m. Sunday, a Surry County sheriff's dispatcher said.

The two men escaped about 2:15 p.m. Saturday.

Lynch was arrested Oct. 29 and charged with killing David Lee Carlisle in what Surry County detectives said was a drug-related robbery. He is awaiting trial on charges of first-degree murder, first-degree burglary, assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury and two counts of armed robbery.

Bowman was jailed for a probation violation.

House Candidate

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Jonathan Jordan, editor in chief of Wake Forest University's newspaper, Old Gold and Black, says he will run for the state House, seeking the seat Republican Ann Duncan will leave this month.

Jordan, 21, said Saturday that he decided to run for the 39th District seat because he's interested in seeing the Republican Party move successfully into the 1990s.

Ms. Duncan is leaving her seat Sept. 15, to work with the N.C. Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources. The executive committee of the Forsyth County GOP plans to pick her successor Sept. 18.

Others who have expressed interest in the seat include two former candidates in the state Senate —

Social Worker Fired Over AIDS Protest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — The firing of a blind social worker who refused to provide services to an AIDS victim is apparently the first in North Carolina under a new state law barring discrimination against patients with the deadly disease.

Thelma Lu Mendenhall, who has a master's degree in rehabilitation counseling, said she regarded the incident as a matter of risk to her health, but her superiors viewed it as insubordination.

For her refusal, Miss Mendenhall, who has worked for the N.C. Division of Services for the Blind since 1978, was fired Friday from her $26,076-a-year job in the regional office in Winston-Salem. The firing appears to be the first in the state since the Legislature enacted the anti-AIDS discrimination law on July 31.

S. Stewart Vick, the regional director who fired Miss Mendenhall, said that she was a competent employee who worked well with clients in the 16-county area of northern-central North Carolina. Asked if her job performance weighed in the decision, Vick said: "It arose out of this incident. This person applied for services, and she (Miss Mendenhall) declined to take the application. We are legally obligated to serve all eligible clients."

Vick said Miss Mendenhall, 37, was assigned to provide instruction to newly blind clients, such as the male patient in Greensboro's Moses Cone Hospital whose case arose July 24.

"She refused to even go and take the application," he said. "Her job was to teach living skills to blind applicants, and eventually it could involve some hands-on instruction. It's possible there could be some contact."

Vick declined to say whether the AIDS patient has since been admitted into programs for the blind. He declined to answer further questions.

"This is the first incidence of this that I've heard of," said Drake Maynard, the legal specialist for the Office of State Personnel. "It could very well be the test case on this issue."

Bald Heads Get Their Respect

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. — "Bald Is Beautiful" was clearly the message over the weekend at the 16th Annual Bald Headed Men of America Convention.

More than 30 of the organization's 30,000 members, many with their families, gathered Saturday to discuss problems associated with baldness, to engage in a marathon of bald humor, and to publicize the organization through competitions — Most Kissable Bald Head, Smoothest, Sexiest and Best All-Round.

This year's winners included Stephen Comer of Dobson for Most Kissable, Best All-Round Bald Head went to James Gafner of Annapolis, Md. Newton Cumming of Maxton was judged Smoothest, and Dude Harting of Cincinnati was named Solar Dome for 1989.

Winning the competition for Bald Spot was Bob Bridge of Manassas, Va. His 5-year-old son, Mike, also was awarded a prize — Most Potential.

Campbell University Police Seeking Off-Campus Powers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUIES CREEK, N.C. — Campbell University is preparing to expand the power of its police officers by extending their jurisdiction beyond campus — a move some students fear will infringe on their off-campus lives.

"You kind of figure, well, it's a Baptist school," said a sophomore who did not want his name used because he feared retribution from Campbell officials. "It's their campus; they can do whatever they want to. But once you're off campus, you don't feel like they have a right to tell you how to live."

Students say administrators have broken up parties, taken names and suspended students for drinking beer off campus, something not done at many other Baptist schools.

Lt. J. Ricky Symmonds, a Harnett County sheriff's deputy whose assignment is to head the campus police, said his men need enforcement powers off the college grounds to help with distress calls from local residents and to crack down on speeders and drunken drivers who race along the highways that pass through or next to the campus.

Those highways, said Phillip Melvin, dean of student life at Campbell, sometimes have provided a haven for lawbreakers. People could run off campus, onto a public highway and out of a campus officer's grasp.

The new arrangement means "someone can't just walk into middle of the highway and thumb their nose at you," he said.

Some students, however, remain unconvinced. They fear campus officers will become spies for the administration. They say the university has no right to tell them how to live, once they move out of campus dormitories or leave for semester breaks.

Melvin sees things in a different light.

He said police officers have not been used to check on students and they would not be once their jurisdiction is widened. They will deal with criminal violations of law, he said.

However, Melvin noted, every student admitted to Campbell signs a contract that is a pledge to honor the student code.

Six Missing As Gabrielle Lashes Coast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gabrielle was downgraded to a tropical storm after it sent waves smashing into the coast, capsizing boats from Maine to New York and enticing sightseers to the shore where some were swept to sea.

"People shouldn't be out there," said Jarred Randall, a Narragansett, R.I., police sergeant who rescued two teen-agers from the water Saturday night. "It's just so majestic and inviting, but it isn't safe."

At least six people were reported missing and three people apparently drowned. Officials attributed the deaths to the sea swells, undertow and waves that reached 15 feet in height, even on rivers.

Though hundreds of miles from land, Gabrielle's silent, windless surges stirred waters along the Northeast.

By late Sunday, Gabrielle's wind weakened to 65 mph and it was sitting about 350 miles south-southwest of Sable Island, Nova Scotia, the National Hurricane Center in Florida said.

Gabrielle has been churning in the Atlantic since Aug. 31. Its vastness and power has prompted comparisons with last year's Hurricane Gilbert, which devastated Jamaica.

Jeff Waldstreicher, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service in Boston, said the waves and undertow were fierce up and down the coast.

"You have these strong, 100-plus mile an hour winds that generate all these waves and long after the waves have crested you have all this energy, moving the water from east to west," Waldstreicher said.

A 19-year-old Cushing, Maine, woman apparently fell into the surf while walking with her brother and cousin Saturday night along the rocky shore at the fishing village of Tenants Harbor, the Coast Guard said.

The two men went into the water after her and also were quickly swept away from shore. A fishing boat picked them up. Despite a Coast Guard search, the woman remained missing Sunday.

A Coast Guard helicopter rescued two surfers who got in trouble off New Hampshire on Sunday. At the time, the chopper was heading to Salisbury Beach, Mass., to search for a missing swimmer, said Coast Guard Quartermaster 1st Class David Jersey in Boston.

No one was found, Jersey said.

And north of Boston, an Ipswich police patrol boat searched for a 25-year-old man who vanished in the rough waters of the Ipswich River north of Cape Ann. The man was with two other men and a baby sailing in an 18-foot motor boat Saturday when the vessel capsized, the Coast Guard said. The others were rescued by a passing vessel.

Off New York, divers searched the Atlantic for a 37-year-old man missing after a houseboat capsized two miles out.

Authorities recovered the body of a 58-year-old woman who was on the houseboat when it capsized. She apparently drowned.

Two fishermen in their 30s were swept off a New York City jetty Saturday afternoon by a large wave. Searchers could not find the men.

In New Jersey, a man died after being pulled unconscious from heavy surf Sunday at Barnegat Light, said police. A woman who was pulled out with him was revived and under intensive care at a hospital.

A man drowned at Normandy Beach, but no other details were available, Dover Township police said.

Reagan May Be Released From Hospital Tuesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Former President Reagan is rapidly recovering from surgery to remove fluid from the surface of his brain but won't be released from St. Marys Hospital until at least Tuesday, his spokesman said.

Reagan will "go home when the doctors tell him he can," spokesman Mark Weinberg said Sunday.

Weinberg said he knows of no further procedures planned for Reagan.

The 78-year-old former president had a restful night and awoke shortly after 6:30 a.m. Sunday, Weinberg said. After breakfast, he read newspapers and visited with his brother-in-law Dr. Richard Davis, then had lunch with his wife, Nancy, Weinberg said.

Reagan also walked unassisted outside his room, watched football on television, wrote letters, posed for a photographer while wearing a Minnesota Twins cap and read some of the hundreds of greeting cards he has received since entering the hospital Friday.

"The team of Mayo Clinic physicians and nurses managing President Reagan's care ... report that he continues to make an excellent recovery," Weinberg said.

On Friday, surgeons drilled a hole in Reagan's skull to remove a buildup of blood. Weinberg said the problem stemmed from a July 4 accident in which Reagan was thrown by a bucking horse and hit his head. The fluid was detected during a routine physical examination.

Reagan's neurosurgeon, meanwhile, said an earlier brain clot had been detected but it had healed on its own without an operation. The New York Times reported today.

The neurosurgeon, Dr. Thoralf M. Sundt, said Sunday the first clot was smaller and in a different area of the brain than the one removed Friday. Because of the first clot, brain tests were included as part of the checkup, Sundt said.

Reagan's spokesman had not previously disclosed the earlier blood clot, detected in early July by doctors in Los Angeles, where Reagan lives.

The Reagans on Saturday sent a message of good wishes to Mother Teresa, who was hospitalized in Calcutta, India, after suffering a heart attack.

President Bush telephoned Reagan on Saturday evening from Camp David and spoke with his predecessor for about five minutes, Weinberg said.

"The president wished him well," said White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk. "President Reagan sounded strong and very well. He said he had no pain. He stated that he hopes to get out soon and expressed his appreciation for the flowers the president and Mrs. Bush sent."

Many others also have sent flowers, Weinberg said, including the king of Morocco and the White House executive residence staff.

Because of the limited space in Reagan's room, Weinberg said the flowers were being shared with other patients.

Miss America Show Puts More Emphasis On Brains

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The people who run the Miss America Pageant are faced with a dilemma: proving Miss America has brains and maintaining a television audience.

"The pageant has to continue to be an entertainment vehicle," said director Leonard Horn. "If it turned into a two-hour documentary, nobody would tune in."

The 69-year-old pageant, which airs nationally on NBC-TV Saturday, will still capture loyal audiences with dazzling evening gowns, the 10 finalists' talent performances and the ever-popular — albeit ever-controversial — swimsuit competition.

But since he took over the pageant last year, Horn has aimed to show off the intelligence of the beauty queens. Last year, he showed clips of contestants' interviews with the judges, and the 10 finalists were asked thought-provoking questions on live television.

This year, Horn has gone one step further. Each of the 51 contestants has submitted an essay outlining what issues she might want to take a stand on during her year as Miss America 1990. The winner will have the opportunity to use her reign as a soap box to promote her cause, he said.

"Many of the essays deal with the environment, health issues, child abuse, poverty — all the issues we read about every day," Horn said. "I was impressed with their seriousness and concern."

The judging process also has been revised to give more credit to the contestants' interviews with a preliminary panel of judges.

Interviews will count for 30 percent of the final night's competition. Talent will weigh 40 percent, and evening gown and swimsuit each will count for 15 percent. Swimsuits have never counted for so little.

Less emphasis on body and more on brains represents a far cry from the "bathing beauty" pageant started by Atlantic City businessmen. It was originally held the weekend after Labor Day as a public relations gimmick to prolong the summer season.

"We're trying to close the gap between what some people perceive this program to be and the reality we know it is," Horn said.

He said that the ambitions of many contestants speak for themselves.

For instance, five contestants aspire to be attorneys; others want to be a doctor, a medical researcher and a pharmacist. More than a dozen see their future on stage.

Miss America 1989, Gretchen Elizabeth Carlson, is a Stanford University student who plays classical violin and hopes to attend law school.

This year's celebrity judges include developer Donald Trump, entertainer Merv Griffin, TV psychologist Joyce Brothers, actresses Phylissia Rashad and Debbie Allen, baseball great Mike Schmidt and journalist Claudia Cohen. Co-hosts are Gary Collins and Miss America 1971 Phyllis George.

The new Miss America will receive a $35,000 scholarship and fees from personal appearances. More than $5 million in cash and tuition is available through the Miss America program to the thousands of young women who enter local contests each year.

The theme of this year's national pageant is "A Moment in Time" and will feature performer Clint Holmes. The two-hour program starts at 10 p.m. EDT on Saturday.

Task Force Calls For Required Safety Work On Airliners

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A government-industry task force, reporting today on aging airliners, recommends mandatory work to increase the safety of older DC-8, DC-9 and DC-10 jetliners, officials say.

The group proposes parts replacement and other work on 1,500 McDonnell Douglas airliners, its advice resembling recommendations already made by another task force for Boeing airliners, said government and industry officials familiar with the task force's yearlong work.

The Federal Aviation Administration, which made the Boeing recommendations mandatory in May, participated in the latest group along with airlines, manufacturers and some foreign aviation safety officials. The regulatory agency is expected to adopt the McDonnell Douglas recommendations for U.S. airlines, and most foreign carriers are likely to comply.

A third study will cover older airliners built by other manufacturers.

Details of the McDonnell Douglas study were being released at a news conference today by the Air Transport Association, which represents airlines.

ATA spokesman Tim Neale said the report does not differ significantly from the study of older Boeing jetliners and is primarily based on a review of service bulletins issued by the manufacturer.

James Brown, spokesman for American Airlines which participated in the task force, said the recommendations include "terminating actions (parts replacements) that need to be made on Douglas products as they age."

An industry analyst, Paul Turk of AVMARK Inc., said mandatory work on McDonnell Douglas aircraft should be less extensive than that required for Boeing models because "the Douglas construction philosophy is heavier" with fewer corrosion problems.

AVMARK lists 306 DC-8s, which were first built in 1958, as still carrying passengers or freight throughout the world; 888 DC-9s, first manufactured in 1964; and 372 DC-10s, which entered commercial fleets in 1971 and are no longer in production.

The Boeing recommendations called for $800 million worth of mandatory work on more than 1,300 early 747, 737 and 727 airliners, amounting to about $600,000 for each aircraft. Airlines said most of the alterations were already accomplished or scheduled.

When the FAA adopted the report on Boeing planes, it marked a major change in the government's approach to aging airliners.

Previously, the FAA had required periodic inspections with replacement required only when corrosion, cracking or other signs of metal fatigue were found.

For Boeing planes, the FAA issued a series of "airworthiness directives" initially affecting 115 airliners and others as they age or accumulate flying hours.

The decision to set up the task forces came after an Aloha Airlines 737 with nearly 90,000 flights lost an 18-foot section of fuselage in an April 1988 flight over Hawaii. A flight attendant was sucked out of the plane and killed, but the aircraft landed with no other fatalities.

The McDonnell Douglas task force work is separate from a review by another government-industry group ordered last month by FAA Administrator James B. Busey of all wide-bodied airliners, including the DC-10. That study is aimed at determining whether design changes are needed to increase the safety of hydraulic systems during explosive engine failures or problems with other components.

A loss of hydraulic systems, necessary to guide an airliner, figured in the July 19 crash of a DC-10 at Sioux City, Iowa, that killed 112 people. Investigators believe disintegration of the plane's tail engine caused the loss of control.

Anthony Broderick, FAA associate administrator, said last week the task force study would have no bearing on the Iowa crash since age of the airliner was not a factor.

Unauthorized Activity

CHARLOTTE (AP) — State and local officials are investigating an unknown group that has placed collection jars in the Charlotte area seeking for change to help abused children and battered wives.

The National Antibus Society doesn't have a charitable solicitation license from the state, and representatives of four state agencies, two local social service departments, a district attorney's office and three abuse-prevention groups said they'd never heard of the society.

Display cards with the jars list two toll-free numbers, one of which is nonexistent, while the other reaches a Charlotte answering service. Repeated messages left by a social services attorney, a prosecutor and two reporters were not answered.

Typhoon Sarah Leaves 11 Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — Typhoon Sarah roared today toward Taiwan with winds up to 81 mph after triggering floods and landslides that claimed at least 11 lives, officials said.

The government weather service said that as of mid-morning, the storm center was located about 120 miles north-northeast of Batanes, the Philippines' northernmost province, heading for northern Taiwan at about 9 mph.

Although the storm skirted the Philippines, weather officials said it triggered widespread squalls and storms that lashed northern provinces of the main island Luzon with strong winds and heavy rains. Floods triggered by the storm destroyed bridges and houses and left more than 1,000 families homeless, the government's Office of Civil Defense said.

At least five people were killed in Ilocos Sur province and eight were missing after floodwaters swept away their homes, officials said.

Five people were killed in landslides in Benguet province and one person was electrocuted when winds blew down a power line in La Union province.

Bennett Says Troops Would Not Go Into Combat

By Bryan Brumley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A secret directive signed by President Bush could expand the U.S. military role in the war on drugs, but a top aide says the plan does not call for sending American troops into combat.

Bush sent security advisers to Colombia as part of a $65 million package designed to help that nation fight cocaine, and he said last Tuesday that an additional $261 million in security aid could go to Colombia, Peru and Bolivia for the drug war.

Drug czar William J. Bennett said in a televised interview Sunday that Bush is willing to send Special Forces advisers to the Andean nations.

"There is no plan for any Special Forces to accompany troops in Peru or Bolivia into combat missions," Bennett said in the ABC-TV program "This Week with David Brinkley."

"That is not in the plan. ... There is no such plan," Bennett said.

As part of his anti-drug efforts, Bush signed a National Security Decision Directive outlining the goals and limits of military involvement, said another administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Over the next two weeks, government agencies will flesh out details of that classified program and decide how to allocate the $261 million in extra aid, the source said.

Bennett said "we see now in Colombia the presence of American trainers working with the Colombians, giving them advice, training them on equipment. This is the kind of thing we would anticipate if Peru and Bolivia take the steps."

Meanwhile, drug enforcement administrator John Lawn said Sunday that the Bush administration is reconsidering whether to ban the sale of assault weapons produced in the United States.

The administration has banned the import of assault rifles, but President Bush has said he opposes a ban on domestic assault weapons.

Lawn, appearing on CBS' "Face the Nation," was asked about Colombia's request that the United States stem the flow of U.S.-made assault weapons to that country.

"We must look now at our own procedures here in the United States," Lawn said. "...I believe it is something that is under review, and certainly citizens feel very strongly about the gun issue ... We in the law enforcement community feel very strongly when we're out there on the firing line, and our view isn't always necessarily the view of our leaders."

About two dozen members of the U.S. Special Forces based in Panama have been rotating into Bolivia's Chapare Valley, training anti-narcotics police there, but they have been barred from patrols.

The Washington Post, in its Sunday editions, said the directive would allow the advisers to accompany Bolivian drug forces on patrol. However, the administration source said that "the military is not allowed to go out into the jungle on patrol. That is the way it has been and the way it remains."

The Post report quoted an unidentified senior administration official as saying that "several hundred" U.S. military advisers could be sent to the three nations under the "Andean initiative" announced by Bush.

Bennett said the military advisers in Colombia, although they were barred from combat, were in "a dangerous environment. They are not going to seek out combat or conflict. And we just all hope that nothing befalls them."

A possible expanded U.S. military role in Latin America received mixed reviews from Democrats in Congress.

"It could be a good idea," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., who has emerged as Democratic spokesman on Bush's plan for a war on drugs. "I can say that I do not dismiss the notion of using U.S. troops in certain circumstances in the Andean effort."

Any plan to involve U.S. ground troops in Latin America drew fire from another Democrat, Rep. Charles B. Rangel, who represents New York City's Harlem section, which is plagued by drug-related violence.

"It outrages me to think that every time there is an international problem, we have to talk about the introduction of American troops," said Rangel. Biden and Rangel appeared on the ABC-TV program.

This 'Fantasy Island' river retreat was seized by Colombian authorities in new drug raids

Colombia Signs Extradition For 3 Suspected Traffickers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — In a new push against cocaine barons, Colombia signed extradition orders for three alleged traffickers and the army seized ranches, cattle, show horses, fighting cocks and an idyllic island estate.

If carried out, the extraditions to the United States would be the second such action by the government of President Virgilio Barco since it declared war three weeks ago on the drug cartels that supply most of the world's cocaine.

The crackdown has unleashed the fury of the wealthy drug lords, especially in the city of Medellin where daily bombings and shootings terrorize residents who have been living under a nighttime curfew for two weeks.

The most-wanted cocaine chiefs remain at large and it doesn't appear the government knows where they are despite a $250,000 reward offered for information on their whereabouts.

But the army continues confiscating the lavish properties the fugitive cocaine traffickers left behind.

Over the weekend at least five properties were seized, along with Olympic-sized swimming pools, 600 head of cattle, 200 exotic tropical birds, 80 fighting cocks, show horses, trucks and an idyllic estate on a so-called "Fantasy Island" on the Magdalena River running through Colombia's midwest.

The properties are said to belong to the top two and most wanted drug lords, Pablo Escobar and Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha. They are worth billions and the seizures are not believed to have drastically diminished the reputed drug barons' wealth.

For the first time since the drug sweep began, eight A-37 jets donated last week by the United States were used in reconnaissance flights over the properties, Colombian television reported.

"We are going to keep the seizures up," said an officer with the 4th Army Brigade, one of the units carrying out the anti-drug operations. He asked not to be identified for security reasons.

He said 49 properties, including ranches, mansions, and estates, have been confiscated and 26 people arrested in the past two weeks.

The three alleged traffickers who Colombia says are wanted in the United States are not believed to be high-ranking but are said to be active in the Medellin cartel, supplier of most of the cocaine sold on U.S. streets.

An official of the government's Drug Council, created to deal with narcotics trafficking, said authorities signed the extradition order on the three — two men and a woman — who are accused by the United States of cocaine trafficking and money laundering.

The official, who asked not to be identified because the government has not made the extradition order public, identified the three as: Ana Helena Rodriguez, 37; Bernardo Londono Quintana, 47, and Alberto Orlandez Gamboa, 37.

The first reputed high-ranking Colombian drug figure to be extradited to the United States in more than 2 years, Eduardo Martinez Romero, was flown to Atlanta on Wednesday to stand trial on charges of laundering millions of cocaine dollars for the Medellin cartel.

The three awaiting extradition have five days to appeal the order. Martinez appealed and lost.

The drug cartels have vowed to kill judges and businessmen if the government keeps up its crackdown, which began on Aug. 18 after drug-backed assassins killed Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, the leading presidential candidate and an anti-drug crusader.

But the Barco government has defied the threats and enlisted the support of the United States, the largest drug consumer.

The Bush administration is giving Colombia's narcotics forces $65 million worth of military equipment, which includes planes, helicopters, jeeps and weapons, for the campaign.

But in the three weeks of fighting, neither the government nor traffickers appear to be making much headway and cocaine-linked violence appears to be on the rise.

On Sunday, assailants killed the foreman of a ranch belonging to Carlos Ossa Escobar, the head of the Agrarian Reform Institute, and set the property ablaze. Ossa Escobar advocates giving seized drug traffickers' property to landless peasants.

In Medellin, the country's second-largest city, a bomb damaged a liquor factory over the weekend and hooded assailants, who have been roaming the city, set fire to 18 vehicles.

U.S. Reviews Ban On Weapons

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Drug Enforcement Agency Administrator John C. Lawn said Sunday that the Bush administration is reconsidering whether to ban assault weapons produced in the United States, a potential shift from the government's current policy of banning only the importation of assault weapons.

A White House official said he could not confirm that such a review is underway, however. Other remarks by Lawn indicated that the statement could represent an effort to reopen an internal administration debate that national drug policy director William J. Bennett last week told the Senate Judiciary Committee was closed.

Despite criticism from legislators, who say a ban on the domestic weapons would cut violent crimes by drug pushers and others, President Bush has said he opposes a ban because it would unfairly punish sportsmen.

Jury Selection Beginning In 'Son Of Leher' Trial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A 15-year saga of cocaine smuggling by Colombia's violent Medellin cartel will be told by witnesses in the "Son of Leher" trial.

However, some major defendants for this week's trial were missing. Among them: cartel leaders Pablo Escobar Gaviria, Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, Jorge Ochoa Vasquez and Fabio Ochoa Vasquez. They are on the list of the U.S. government's most wanted Colombian drug kingpins but remain at large in their homeland.

Others indicted but not here to face charges are U.S. financier Robert Vesco, who lives in Cuba, and Everette Bannister, an associate of Bahamian Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling.

Jury selection was scheduled to begin today in U.S. District Court.

The case grew out of testimony from Carlos Leher Rivas' cocaine-smuggling trial, which lasted 7½ months and saw witnesses implicate others in a conspiracy that the government says began in 1974 and continued until this year.

Leher, 40, believed to have been one of the leaders and architects of the Medellin cartel, was convicted in May 1988 of operating a continuing criminal enterprise and was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole. He is being held in isolation at the federal prison in Marion, Ill.

Leher was convicted of operating a cocaine-smuggling operation that used the Bahamian island of Norman's Cay as an "aircraft carrier" to fly 20 tons of cocaine into the United States from Colombia from 1978 to 1981.

The indictment charges that in October 1984, Leher sent a messenger from Nicaragua to Cuba asking Vesco to use his influence in Cuba to arrange for Leher's aircraft to fly over Cuba on smuggling runs from Nicaragua to Andros Island in the Bahamas.

A few days later, Vesco supplied Leher's messenger with a document approving the cocaine overflights.

Vesco, who was indicted on one count alleging he conspired to import cocaine, is believed to have lived in Cuba since 1982. He has been wanted in the United States since 1973 on charges of looting an investment firm of $224 million.

Also at large was Bannister, a Nassau resident accused of taking money from the cartel to allow the Bahamas to be used as a way station for drug imports.

Facing trial today are Jack Carlton Reed, 58, who was convicted with Leher on one conspiracy count and sentenced to 15 years in prison; Thomas Howard Herington, 35, of Mill Valley, Calif.; attorney Barry Kane, 52, of Hyannis, Mass., and Fort Lauderdale; Donald Kenneth Lady, 41, of Pomona, Calif., and Samuel Thomas Stewart, 53, of Anaheim, Calif.

If convicted, they could be sentenced to prison terms of 10 years to life.

Leher's former wife, Yemel Nacel, 34, of New York City, and nine others have pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges and are among the 98 people on the government's witness list.

Prosecutors expected the trial to last two months.

The Medellin cartel is described as the world's largest illegal cocaine operation. It is believed to supply 80 percent of the cocaine sold in the United States.

YOUR EYEGLOSS PRESCRIPTION

What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions"?

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?

A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?

A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?

A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?

A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?

Government To Have Final Say On Cleaning Up Valdez

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government will have the final word next spring on whether Exxon has adequately cleaned up the 11-million-gallon oil spill caused by one of its tankers in Alaska, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Reilly says.

"There's a lot still to do," Reilly said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" program. "Exxon is going to have to go back in the spring, as they intend to do, and survey what the problems are and if there's remaining work to do, to do it."

If the government determines more cleanup is necessary and Exxon refuses to go along, the EPA chief said, "We'll take the road which has always been open which is to undertake the direct cleanup ourselves and to bill Exxon for the cost."

The company has announced it is pulling out thousands of cleanup workers this week because of the limited daylight and rough weather of Alaska's early winter.

Exxon has been in disagreement with state and federal agencies over the adequacy of the company's cleanup efforts since the Exxon Valdez struck a reef in Prince William Sound on March 24, spilling nearly 11 million gallons in the nation's worst crude oil spill.

The company says it has treated more than 1,000 miles of shoreline and only four miles remain to be treated. State authorities say the company is overstating the work it has done and is leaving before the job is unfinished.

Reilly defended Exxon's decision to withdraw its cleanup workers now. "My sense is that the weather is such there that it would be very risky to leave a lot of those folks in that exposed position," he said.

Yeltsin Says Change Needed But No Coup

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Soviet maverick Boris N. Yeltsin says newly elected officials will take power from the Communist party into their own hands as President Mikhail Gorbachev's political fortunes decline.

"We're having an economic crisis, a financial crisis, a political crisis, the living standard is falling," Yeltsin said at a news conference Sunday during his first trip to the United States.

"We need a person who is more decisive than Gorbachev," he said. "What we need is a revolution from below, since we're not really getting a revolution from above."

But Yeltsin, chairman of a newly-formed independent caucus in the Soviet Congress, ruled out the possibility of a coup.

"A coup d'etat is pretty unrealistic," said Yeltsin, who arrived in New York on Saturday to begin a private trip of about two weeks sponsored by the Esalen Institute's Soviet-American Exchange Program.

Yeltsin, 58, lost his position as Moscow's Communist party chief in 1987 after criticizing the slow pace of change under Gorbachev. But this year he was elected with 90 percent of the vote to the Soviet Congress, where he is an outspoken member of a radical bloc.

He said his country should learn from American democracy while changing its own political system.

"We have to take what is positive ... from America's more than 200 years of democratic experience, and on the basis of that create a new model of socialism," he said on CBS News' "Face the Nation."

"I think you have a very healthy society here," he said. "It seems as if capitalism is not rotting away and will not soon rot itself into extinction as we were told — rather it seems to be prospering."

Yeltsin said he hoped to meet with President Bush to discuss how the United States "could participate in measures to rescue perestroika."

But he said he has received no indication from the White House about the possibility of such a meeting.

Roman Popadiuk, a White House spokesman, said he was not aware of Yeltsin's desire to meet with Bush and that there were no plans for such a meeting.

Yeltsin said the Soviet Union needs a new model of socialism, possibly including a multi-party system.

"We have to stop being so dogmatic as we were before," he said.

He said the countries of Eastern Europe that were once "pulled along" by the Soviet Union have now "overtaken it."

"They're now pulling us along, because they can at least feed and clothe their own citizens."

The $25,000 fees sponsors say Yeltsin will receive for speeches during his tour will help fund AIDS research in the Soviet Union.

Latest Destroyer Ready For Launch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BATH, Maine — The Bath Iron Works built 83 destroyers in World War II, more than turned out by all the shipyards of Japan. This week it launches the lead ship in the Navy's new class of destroyers, hailed as the world's most advanced surface combat ship and 200 times more expensive than those built here 4½ decades ago.

Sailor-turned-shipbuilder Bob Bourget spent three years aboard one of the "tin can" destroyers produced in Bath during the war, so he speaks from experience when he praises the combat capability of the ships built in this small city along the Kennebec River.

Bourget was on the USS Stembel, seeing action in the Pacific from Tarawa to Okinawa before returning home to build ships at BIW. Bourget says the durable destroyer is still in service with the Argentine navy.

"That's the same kind of ship they're going to get there except with a lot more technology," Bourget said, pointing to the ways cradling the Navy's new destroyer, the Arleigh Burke.

The new ship is to be launched Saturday in a ceremony that will focus on one of the legendary leaders of World War II.

Burke, an 87-year-old retired admiral, will be guest of honor at the launching. His wife, Roberta, will christen the ship, and about 400 veterans who served in Burke's famed "Little Beavers" destroyer squadron are scheduled to join him at a post-launch dinner.

Known as "31-Knot Burke" for the speed with which he pushed his destroyers in pursuit of the Japanese, Burke has kept tabs on the design and construction of the ship that will bear his name.

Wide-beamed with a low profile, the 466-foot ship bears little resemblance to the earlier generations of destroyers. The roughly $1 billion it cost to build is more than double the price of all of the destroyers built here in World War II, when the yard turned out one every 17 days at the height of production.

While critics suggest the nation might be better served by a larger number of smaller, less expensive ships, Navy and BIW officials maintain the Arleigh Burke destroyers are being built for the type of warfare in which threats from aircraft, submarines and surface ships must be dealt with instantly.

"It's really the first surface ship that's been designed and built to meet the warfare requirements of the 21st century," said William E. Haggett, BIW chairman and chief executive officer.

Much of the cost is earmarked for sophisticated Aegis computers, electronics and weaponry including Tomahawk cruise missiles, anti-aircraft missiles, anti-submarine torpedoes and a 54-caliber gun.

To enhance its prospects of survival, the 8,500-ton Arleigh Burke was designed with a more expensive all-steel superstructure instead of one that was part aluminum and would be more prone to splintering and fire damage. Designers also built in better protection against nuclear blast, radioactive fallout and chemical warfare agents.

Haggett says ships of the future must have capabilities far more advanced than those of today's fleet.

"They have to be able to detect, engage and eliminate targets that can come from any direction, at almost any speed and in large numbers. A lot of inferior ships out there in the kind of battle a destroyer is designed to engage in would be meaningless."

"This ship is as capable as perhaps 20 or 40 ships that are of an older design," he said.

The Arleigh Burke program is also seen as the key to future prosperity of the 105-year-old shipyard, which has found itself competing for a dwindling number of Navy contracts at a time when civilian ship construction is virtually non-existent in the United States.

While other major yards have closed or gone into bankruptcy, Bath and its archrival, Litton's Ingalls Shipbuilding Division in Mississippi, are among a handful of survivors.

Thanks to its participation, with Ingalls, in the Aegis cruiser program, BIW now has a $2 billion construction backlog and a workforce that remains at a peacetime high of 11,000.

But with cruiser construction winding down, the Aegis destroyer program was viewed as vital because it was seen as the last surface ship the Navy plans to build for some time.

Unlike the cruisers, which combined the Aegis systems with the modified design of an existing destroyer, the Arleigh Burke is an entirely new ship designed from the keel up to accommodate the advanced technology.

Winning the contract for design and construction of the lead ship gave BIW a leg up and the yard now has contracts for five of the destroyers to Ingalls' three. Haggett said the Navy plans to build five more per year for an indefinite period and his yard plans to compete vigorously for its share of the contracts.

World Bank To Increase Lending For Environment

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — The World Bank, long criticized for funding environmentally damaging projects, today announced increased lending to population-control projects and forestry development to help combat global atmospheric warming.

Bank President Barber Conable told a conference on the environment that the bank "is committed to environmental issues and, what is more, this commitment does not detract at all from our primary mission of global development."

The American president of the leading institution for funding Third World development spoke at the opening of a conference called to address how to raise living standards in poor countries while preserving the environment.

Sponsored by the Japanese government and the United Nations Environment Program, the conference has drawn dozens of officials and experts from many countries and international organizations.

At the end of the conference Wednesday they are expected to issue recommendations on ways to combat the main problem on the agenda: global warming. Scientists warn that the so-called "Greenhouse Effect" could scorch parts of the Earth and raise sea levels unless checked.

Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, whose country is under environmentalists' attack as the biggest importer of tropical forest products, pledged increased assistance to research on sustainable development of tropical forests.

Kaifu, welcoming the conferees, said Japan intends to raise its foreign environmental aid to $2.25 billion in three years.

"Japan is ready to take on global environmental issues with positive vigor," he said, reporting that he discussed such issues in depth during his just-completed series of summit meetings in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Conable said the world's population, currently about 5 billion, will grow to 6 billion by the year 2000, adding to the use of fossil fuels that is blamed for the greenhouse effect and atmospheric warming.

He announced that the bank is establishing a Gas Development Unit to promote use of natural gas because it is the least polluting of fossil fuels.

"I am also pleased to announce a tripling of our lending to forestry in the next few years," Conable said.

On population-control projects, he said lending has amounted to over $500 million in the last five years, and that level will increase to over $800 million in the 1990-92 period.

Mostafa K. Tolba, executive director of the United Nations Environment Program, said depletion of the ozone layer, caused by chlorofluorocarbons and other chemicals, was increasing skin cancer and eye cataracts.

"The human immunity system may be weakening. Agricultural patterns may be impacted, and marine food chains affected," he told delegates.

Tolba called for "full partnership in all countries" to phase out all ozone-destroying chemicals and said he was concerned that just 13 of the world's 120 developing countries have ratified the Montreal protocol on those chemicals.

"Brazil, China, India, the Republic of (South) Korea and some other major producers and users of chlorofluorocarbons in the Third World are yet to join the protocol," he said.

Regarding other "greenhouse gases" such as carbon dioxide, Tolba urged developed countries, which now emit three-fourths of such gases, to decrease energy use and increase energy conservation and efficiency.

"But we have to be quite objective," he went on. "If the industrialized world meets the challenge, the results of its efforts could be completely wiped out if China and India continue to burn their huge reserves of coal. And they will continue to do so unless they are assisted financially and technologically to use alternatives."

Accord On Dollar Broken, Experts Say

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Cooperation among the United States and six major allies to keep a low price for the dollar apparently has broken down, two U.S. experts say today as the international value of the dollar is rising again.

"In May and June (the dollar) shattered its upper limit against the yen — 140 (yen to one dollar) — and the mark — 1.90-1.92 (marks to one dollar), rising above 150 and 2.00 respectively to a two-and-a-half year high," wrote I.M. Destler and C. Randall Henning.

Destler is professor in the School of Public Affairs at the University of Maryland. Henning is a research associate at the Institute for International Economics, which published their new book "Dollar Politics: Exchange Rate Policymaking in the United States."

The institute is a private study group with financing from the United States and other countries.

The price of the dollar is important because of its effect on trade. A low dollar makes U.S. goods cheap, encouraging exports and discouraging imports. A rise in the dollar has the opposite effect.

Governments, including the Bush administration, agree that this country buys far too much in comparison with what it sells. The resulting trade deficit has made the United States the world's biggest debtor nation.

On Friday the price of the dollar was above 146 yen and 1.99 marks, despite efforts to keep it down. One report said the central banks of 10 countries had been selling dollars in an unsuccessful attempt to keep their price down.

A 1985 agreement to work together on the price of the dollar and other currencies was made by Secretary of State James A. Baker III — then secretary of the Treasury — and his counterparts from Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada.

They have never published their targets for the dollar's price. The upper limits named by Destler and Henning are often cited by unofficial experts.

The two authors complained that U.S. exchange rate policy is made by a small group of senior officials and should be more closely coordinated with broader economic policies and private business.

They proposed setting up new committees in Congress to watch the dollar's price, a private sector group to advise Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, and more involvement by other government agencies.

This Fortune-Telling Family Details Lives Of Past, Future

By Raju Gopalakrishnan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOSHIARPUR, India — Taking a cue from the Hindu belief in rebirth, the fortune-telling Tiwari family doesn't stop at making predictions about this life.

The Tiwaris spill details of past and future incarnations.

The Tiwaris don't wear saffron robes or sprinkle holy ash on their foreheads, the usual trappings of India's vast fortune-telling profession.

Almost all are educated and prosperous, one a former college professor. And they claim their information comes from interpreting the sayings of the sage Bhrgu, believed to be the son of Lord Brahma, one of the Hindu trinity of gods.

Bhrgu, say the Tiwaris, wrote the future of the world and detailed the various lives of its inhabitants on rocks and tree bark in the Himalayan mountains. They say the writings were copied on orders from Emperor Akbar, the Moslem ruler of India in the 16th century, and later found their way to Hoshiarpur, where the Tiwaris have been telling fortunes for at least three generations.

"The history of almost everyone in the world can be read from these," said Shyamcharan Tiwari, a bespectacled former physics professor, holding up a bunch of yellowing parchments covered with spidery, indecipherable script. "All we need is the name, time of birth and place of birth."

Tiwari sat cross-legged on a low bed. At least 30 people squatted on the floor before him, awaiting their fortunes.

Tiwari says the parchments divide people according to first names, and places of birth according to proximity to major Indian rivers.

He hastens to add that a sage doesn't confine himself to India but also speaks of other countries.

"Bhrgu calls Britain Angaldeep (Angal Island) and the United States is named Varundweep (Sun God Island)," he says.

Another fortuneteller from the Tiwari clan, Ratish Mohan, says he consults Bhrgu's sayings but relies more on the position of stars at the time of birth.

A row of cars was parked outside Mohan's modest two-story house. Scores of people thronged his drawing room, and many more waited outside.

Satwant Kaur, a middle-aged housewife who had traveled 900 miles from Vishakhapatnam, wanted to know what business her husband should go into. She said he currently manufactures automobile parts but wants to switch to something more profitable.

Raj Kumari said she was trying to learn where her son, who died in 1985, had been re-born.

"I still haven't been able to find out," she said. "But I know that my husband and I lived in Bengal in our previous lives and were married to each other."

The Indian state of West Bengal is about 750 miles southeast of Kumari's home in Ludhiana in Punjab state.

Mohan charges $6.30 for his services. Tiwari says he accepts donations but does not set fees. The fortunetellers have their detractors.

"It's all a well-organized racket," says Joseph Edamaruku, vice president of the Indian Rationalist Association whose 20,000 members try to eradicate superstition and belief in the supernatural.

Speaking from New Delhi, he said: "They have this fleet of informants who tell them something about their clients. Then, when the clients are before them, they are astounded by the accuracy."

"As for previous and future births, how can you be sure? If you're told you were a king in your last life, would you question it?"

Edamaruku, who runs a book publishing house called Indian Atheist Publishers, has offered $6,250 to anyone who can prove he has extrasensory powers.

"No one has yet taken me up," he says, "and certainly not the Bhrgu saints from Hoshiarpur."

Handling Obscene Calls

Dear Abby: I would like to pass along a recent experience to your women readers:

The other afternoon, I received a telephone call from a man who said he was calling to deliver a "love-a-gram" from my husband. (He knew my husband's name.) He had a pleasant, cultured voice and sounded very professional, so I stayed on the line and listened to what he had to say. I had expected a love poem or something on the order of a singing telegram, but he started to describe in very graphic terms the act of lovemaking, and it turned out to be an obscene phone call!

I felt deceived, used and violated! When my husband came home that evening, I asked him if he had sent me a "love-a-gram," and he said he had never heard of such a thing.

Abby, please print this as a warning to other women. I assume the caller used the telephone directory as his source for names. Tricked In Pasadena

Dear Tricked: Thanks for the tip as well as the opportunity to tell my readers how to handle obscene phone calls.

The most effective way to handle an obscene call is to hang up immediately. Or, if you don't mind having your own telephone tied up for a while, carefully lay the receiver down and walk away for as long as you wish.

If the calls persist, contact your local phone company.

Dear Abby: I read in your column the question of whether it was proper to ask a stranger for the name of her perfume. Let me tell you, I did, and I have never regretted it.

Two women came out of a fine department store and passed me. Both were wearing a lovely fragrance, so I asked what it was. They replied, "Norell." I promptly purchased some for my wife. Forty-four years have passed and it's still our favorite. But that's not the end of the story. My wife told me that what first attracted her to me was my after-shave lotion. It was Menen's Skin Bracer. You guessed it — to this day that's still my brand. Little things have a way of influencing our lives! — Frank H. Curtis, Beverly, Mass.

Dear Abby

Dear Frank: Little things? Don't underestimate the power of the olfactory (the sense of smell). Odors are of primary importance in attracting the opposite sex in animals — including the human animal.

Dear Abby: I must object to your response to "Pro-Life Mom," who became hysterical when she saw the term "abortion" in her medical record. This woman said that a D and C was performed to save her life, but had she known that the term "abortion" would appear on her record, she'd have refused the procedure because she's anti-abortion. How utterly ridiculous! Worse yet, she asked the doctor to change the terminology on her records.

Abby, medical records are legal documents and terminology is universal. This woman had a "spon-aneous abortion" whether she likes the terminology or not. If her physician altered her records to accommodate her, his integrity would be diminished among his peers.

I feel that you've set her up for a futile battle with her physician. He'd have to be an idiot to put a non-medical term into a patient's record.

You do a fantastic job of educating your readers. Please don't advise anyone to demand that a professional person lower him/herself to accommodate ignorance.

I've been a patient's rights advocate all along, and, yes, I am a nurse. — Jacquie Gordon, University Heights, Ohio

Mr. Sutton And Miss Little Are Wed

Lori Ann Little and Rodney Gene Sutton were married at 2 p.m. Sept. 3 in Carson Memorial Pentecostal Holiness Church.

The bride is the daughter of Rebecca Steward of Route 4, Greenville, and Julian Little of Falkland. The bridegroom is the son of David Earl Sutton of Route 4, Greenville, and the late Linda A. Sutton.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by Junior Sutton. Wedding music was presented by organist and vocalist Marie Sutton.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Kathy Davis of Bells Fork was matron of honor, and bridesmaids included Rhonda Turner and Beth Herring, both of Greenville. Tonya Sutton of Greenville was flower girl for her sister.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom, and ushers included David E. Sutton Jr., brother of the bridegroom, and James E. Sutton Jr., cousin of the bridegroom, both of Greenville. The ring bearer was Justin T. Little of Greenville, brother of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long, antique white gown of embroidered lace with beads. It had an open neckline and chapel-length train. She wore a veil of antique white with silk roses and pearls, and carried a bouquet of blue and white silk flowers with twirled ribbons.

The matron of honor wore a royal blue tea-length dress and carried three red, silk roses with baby's breath. The attendants were dressed similarly, and carried carried single, red silk roses with baby's breath. The flower girl wore a light blue dress, and carried a basket of rose petals.

A reception was held at the church.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip.

The bride and bridegroom attended North Pitt High School and Pitt Community College. She is employed by Allen C. Brown, attorney, and he is employed by Bunch, Inc., both in Greenville.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: The trend is 50 cents to 1.60 lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 41.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 41.50; Wilson 42.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 37.00; Wallace 37.50; Spivey's Corner 38.00; Rowland 38.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 58.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 100 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a final weighted average of 60.17 cents. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 2,230,000, compared to 863,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 cent higher, 2.39-2.56 in East and mostly 2.64-2.74 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 5 to 6 cents higher at 6.29-6.59 1/2 in East and mostly 6.19-6.29 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.55-3.75; new crop soybeans 5.54-5.85; P.I.K. certificates steady and ranged from 100 to 103 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground today, getting off to a sluggish start on a new week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 7.60 to 2,701.94 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 3 to 2 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 381 up, 567 down and 485 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 17.90 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said buying interest was limited, as it had been last week, by concern that the market was due for at least a pause after its sharp rise through the first eight months of the year.

There also has been much talk on Wall Street that the Federal Reserve will be reluctant to relax its credit policy any further over the next several weeks.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph rose 3/8 to 39 3/4; International Business Machines was unchanged at 116; Exxon dropped 1/8 to 44 1/4, and Woolworth was down 1/8 at 71 3/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .45 to 193.50. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .49 at 383.61.

East Germans Flee

was occasion for tumultuous celebration.

Lines of cars, horns honking, formed on the Hungarian side, with some passengers waving champagne bottles out of car windows. On arrival in Nickelsdorf, an Austrian border town, dozens jumped from their cars to dance in the street, cheered on by a growing crowd of Austrians.

While the crossing into West Germany was more subdued for most, some of the East Germans again were overtaken by emotion.

A man from Thuringen, accompanied by his wife and their 3-year-old son, told reporters of the joy he and his countrymen experienced when told Sunday night that they could leave for the West.

"My wife and I bawled, and the little one laughed," he said, chuckling.

"This is great!" shouted Udo, a 26-year old from Dresden, one of a group of four East Germans in their 20s who shared a car for the freedom convey.

"We applied to leave three years ago, and we got rejected a month ago," he said, explaining his decision to flee through Hungary.

For those without cars, the Austrian Federal Railways had readied 90 rail cars capable of carrying 8,000 people, West German rail officials said.

West Germany moved an additional 40 railway cars to several border points, while Austrian transport officials had more than 50 buses ready.

The fate of the refugees had been discussed for weeks by East and West Germany, but Hungary said without elaboration that the talks had failed.

"The Hungarian government has chosen to illegally allow East German citizens to travel to West Germany in violation of international treaty," ADN charged Sunday night.

planning to curb travel to Hungary, but the East Berlin leadership has denied it intends to impose such restrictions.

But while Hungary risked worsened relations with an East bloc ally, it could develop closer and potentially lucrative ties with Common Market member West Germany.

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, whose country offers East Germans automatic citizenship and help getting settled, hailed Hungary's move as representative of "its humane policies." An estimated 60,000 East Germans were in Hungary on Sunday and the Hungarian foreign minister, Gyula Horn, suggested that many more than the 6,500 formally registered as wanting to leave might cross into Austria.

Even as the first convoys of refugees made their way into Austria, new East German arrivals were reported at several refugee camps in Hungary.

Hungarian radio compared the East Germans' noisy departure to a New Year's Eve celebration "with horns blaring and people shouting."

In Bavaria, the refugees lined up to register with charities and border authorities. As parents stretched, filled out forms or cupped hands around containers of coffee handed out by volunteers, children lined up in the morning mist for teddy bears, picture books and other donated playthings.

West German Red Cross workers had braced for the onslaught by hastily erecting tent communities in several Bavarian towns late last month. But most of those arriving early today opted to drive on to relatives in cities as far away as Hamburg.

For many of the thousands who began crossing into Austria shortly after midnight, leaving Hungary

Bush
RICHLANDS — A funeral for Mrs. Lorraine Bush will be conducted at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Harrison Chapel AME Church in Richlands by the Rev. Thomas Campbell. Burial will be in the Sanders Cemetery in Richlands.

Surviving are a daughter, Jocynthia McCoy of Farmville; two sons, Cordell Bush of the home and Reginald Bush of Okinawa; three sisters, Oglatha Lanver of Richlands, Mary Walls of Waterbury, Conn., and Myrtle Falls of Jacksonville; a brother, Carlton Rhodes of Waterbury, Conn., and four grandchildren.

The body will be on view from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. today at Mitchell's Funeral Home in Richlands.

Conley
 Dr. Albert R. Conley, 75, of 100 Fieldside Drive died Sunday.

The funeral will be conducted Tuesday at 11 a.m. at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church by the Rev. Sid Huggins. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Dr. Conley, a native of Stillwater, Okla., received his undergraduate and master's degrees from Oklahoma State University and his doctorate in agriculture economics from Ohio State University. A Navy veteran of World War II with service in the Pacific, he was a former professor at the University of Missouri and worked as an economic consultant in Springfield, Ill., for 15 years.

Moving to Greenville in 1963, he taught marketing in the East Carolina School of Business until his retirement in 1984. He was a member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church and the Golden K Kiwanis Club, did extensive volunteer work at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and was a recipient of The Governor's Award in 1986.

Surviving are his wife, Jessie Conley; a son, Micheal J. Conley of Atlanta, and two sisters, Lola Taylor and Inez Conley, both of Washington, D.C.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. today and has suggested in lieu of flowers memorials be made to Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, 510 S. Washington St., Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Home in Sarasota. Burial will be in a Sarasota cemetery.

Born in Rocky Mount, Mrs. Schmidt spent most of her adult life in Balboa, Panama Canal Zone. She and her husband lived for a short time in Greenville after his retirement and, before moving to Sarasota, she lived for six years with a sister in Farmville.

Surviving are her daughter, Dr. Arline Winerman of the home; Mrs. Rhoderick T. Williams of Farmville, and three brothers, James R. Worsley, Guilford C. Worsley and Francis H. Worsley, all of Greenville.

Memorials may be made to the charity of one's choice.

Festival Ends On Strong Note

Ayden's Collard Festival, completed Saturday at midnight, was "exciting and fun, with a really good turnout of people," festival chairman Laura Webb said.

Ms. Webb said she believes the number attending was "at least 3,000 more" than on Friday night. Her estimate was 18,000.

She said the winner of the collard-cooking contest was Patrick Roberson of Ayden. The collard-eating winner was D.A. Rogers of Snow Hill. Rogers, who has won the eating contest before, ate five and one-fourth pounds in 30 minutes Saturday.

Phyllis Joyner, arts and crafts show chairman, announced show winners. They are Mary Hardy in sewing and crocheting; Mary McCoy in dolls and stuffed items; Sheila Gray in miscellaneous decorative items; Marcia Sanders in painting, Lana Hardee in drawing; Bonnie Rogerson in cross stitch; Ulla Godwin in decorative arrangements; Terri Riggs in woodcraft items; and Naomi Olivera in furniture. The work of Mary Hardy was declared the "best in show."

'Doomsday Clock' Adds Environment

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists, whose clock has ticked ominously a few minutes before nuclear midnight for 42 years, is shifting its focus to include environmental concerns.

The "Doomsday clock" logo will soon consist of the face of the clock superimposed on a globe, Editor Len Ackland said.

"In the past year and a half, we have certainly seen progress in improving the U.S.-Soviet Union arms control negotiations," Ackland said in a telephone interview from his suburban Oak Park home.

"Once tensions dropped down, it enabled us to take a look around and recognize there are many other dangers that threaten our survival, and environmental concerns are probably the most conspicuous."

The new logo makes its debut this week in the October issue.

"It's a recognition that international security has to be thought about in more than simple military terms," Ackland said. "It doesn't mean in any way that military security is less important."

The clock, which first appeared in 1947, now has hands at 6 minutes to midnight. It represents an estimate by the editors and an international board of scientists of the world's proximity to the final midnight of nuclear destruction.

The hands have been reset 12 times, including in 1983, when they were moved forward to 11:57 after U.S.-Soviet arms-control talks were suspended. The clock has remained at 11:54 since January 1988, when the United States and Soviet Union signed a treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

"We felt this was a very important time to redefine what national security is," Ackland said Sunday.

"We need to also recognize there are a lot of connections with environmental issues, economic depression and poverty around the world because those are the kinds of things that could escalate quickly."

John Peoples, director of the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory near Chicago, said the change in focus is necessary and important, if not tardy.

"Irrespective of whether the Cold War is dissolving, one has to pay attention to the environment," he said.

"was no more informative." Tanjug said the accident received only scant attention in the state-controlled Romanian media, with the government daily Romania Libera today publishing a brief communique on its last page.

In the Bulgarian capital of Sofia, an official at the U.S. Embassy said: "There's been almost nothing on this in the papers."

"Certainly things like Chernobyl ... and Bhopal, they have to have equal priority."

In 1986, the Chernobyl nuclear power plant in the Soviet Union exploded, spewing radiation that killed at least 32 people and eventually swirled around the globe. A gas leak from a Union Carbide pesticide plant killed more than 3,400 people in Bhopal, India, in 1984.

The journal began as a newsletter among scientists of the Manhattan Project — the top-secret U.S. effort during World War II to develop the atomic bomb before the Axis powers.

The first six-page Bulletin was published in 1945. Today's journal, about 50 pages long, is published 10 times a year. Though paid subscribers are relatively few — about 20,000 in 70 countries — they have included members of of lawmaking bodies around the world.

Beached Whale

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A 3-week-old sperm whale died a week after washing ashore.

The 1,200-pound whale, a male dubbed Odie, died Sunday.

It had suffered from a pneumonia-like lung infection but the cause of death was unknown, said Christy Benson, a spokeswoman for Sea-Arama MarineWorld, where the whale had received constant care since beaching itself.

The whale was found in the surf west of Sabine Pass on Sept. 2 and taken to Sea-Arama the next day after members of the Texas Mammal Stranding Network couldn't find the mother.

At Sea-Arama, it received round-the-clock care from marine workers and volunteers who helped feed it a special lactose-free formula about every four hours.

"The effort by the volunteers has been incredible," Ms. Benson said.

The whale was young enough to nurse and he had not cut its teeth.

Obituary

Gurganus

Mrs. Bernice House Gurganus, age 87, died Sunday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Her funeral service will be conducted Tuesday at 4 p.m. at Bethel United Methodist Church by the Reverend Earl Dulaney and Rev. Ellis J. Bedsworth. Burial will follow in the Bethel City Cemetery. The family will receive friends from 7-9 p.m. Monday at Ayers-Gray Funeral Home and at other times will be at the home of J.L. Gurganus, Jr.

A 1924 graduate of East Carolina Teachers College, she taught for a number of years in the Robersonville school system. She was a lifelong member of the Bethel United Methodist Church, being active in all phases of its work. A Sunday School teacher of long tenure, she was Superintendent of the Jr. Department for 17 years. She also served 2 four year terms as President of the

Early Match Keyed Becker's Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — After Boris Becker conquered the sunbaked hardcourts of the National Tennis Center to win his first U.S. Open championship, he tried to put his achievement in perspective.

"I was two match points down against No. 62 a week ago," he said. Two match points down and a net cord away from elimination.

Only a fortuitous bounce off the cord kept Derrick Rostagno from eliminating Becker in the second round of this tournament. The 21-year-old West German survived that crisis, though, and went on to win the title, defeating Ivan Lendl 7-6 (7-2), 1-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) Sunday.

Did Becker think about the Rostagno scare at all as he moved to his first Grand Slam title other than Wimbledon?

"I thought about it for the last 10 days," he said. "All the time."

"Over the years, those things (net cords) even out. Sometimes they're good for you and sometimes they're bad. To win a Grand Slam, you have to come through a match when you are almost out of it."

For Becker, Rostagno provided that match in the tournament's second round.

"I thought after that, things can only get better," Becker said.

Among the things that improved for him was the court. Becker has always thrived on the green grass of Wimbledon, where he has won the prestigious All-England championship three times. The hardcourts of Flushing Meadow have never been as friendly for his serve-and-volley game.

But by Sunday, Becker noticed that had changed. "The court was much quicker than it was two weeks ago," he said. "It was quicker every day because of playing on it and sliding on it. The balls were sliding a little bit more, which was good for my backhand slice and for my serve. I was able to play my game out there."

All of that added up to bad news for Lendl, playing in a record-tying eighth consecutive Open final but still with just three titles to show for it.

Twice, in the first and fourth sets, he forced Becker to tiebreakers but each time, he came up short. "Tiebreakers are usually shootouts, but with a serve like his, there's not much you can do about it," Lendl said. "He just has more power in his game than I do and his game was putting a little more pressure on me."

Any time he was in trouble,

Becker's booming serve usually bailed him out. Lendl knows that will be more and more of a problem for him as Becker's game continues to mature.

"The game is changing," he said. "It's more powerful than it was 10 years ago when I came up and it's going to be more difficult."

"I think that I have improved with experience and I'm able to make up for something which, at times, other players have and I don't. But there is only so much you can do. You have certain limits."

For Lendl, the limit may be

Monday Quarterback:

Watching from the press box Saturday night, I couldn't help but feel a little restrained about the success being enjoyed by East Carolina's Pirates in their 41-6 win over Bowling Green.

Certainly, I expected the Pirates to be able to move the ball, but I also had not expected the Pirate defense to be as good as it looked. East Carolina's scout team had moved the ball better against the number one defense than Bowling Green's actual team did.

But please pass the salt, because I need a grain.

I can remember all of the hub-bub raised following last year's rout of Tennessee Tech, 53-12, in the season opener. It foretold a glorious year with all of the opportunity for a winning season. Instead, that victory was followed by a horrible performance against Virginia Tech and eight straight losses before Art Baker finally resigned and the Pirates managed to get things put together and win their last two outings.

So, the jury is not quite ready to make its findings known on the Bill Lewis era at ECU yet. A few more games must be played before any definite decision can be reached.

Certainly there were things Saturday night that were very positive. Offensively, the Pirates came out throwing the ball — something I haven't seen since the days of Sonny Randle. Pat Dye seldom threw the ball and his successors followed suit to a large extent. It was the joke of the press box that you could write down ECU's first play of the game before the season started — fullback up the middle.

But Saturday night, quarterback Travis Hunter threw on three of the first four plays, completing all three and engineering a four-play 56-yard touchdown drive.

The Pirate offense ground out a total of 401 yards on the ground and added another 111 through the air. It could have been more, but Lewis went to his reserves early on in the second half, testing those reserves and building their bank of experience for the future.

Two key injuries may call forth some of that reserve experience quickly too. Two defensive ends, starter George Koonce and back-up Joe Bright, both went down with injuries. Koonce could miss several weeks while Bright appears lost for the season. That leaves only Anthony Thompson and Brian McPhatter with a great deal of experience in those positions.

Defensively, the Pirates did an outstanding job, even when Bowling Green went into what Coach Moe Ankray calls the Po' Ditch Rat offense, a spread that sent players from one sideline to the other. The Pirates reacted to it quickly, and mostly on the field — a tribute to the coaching staff. Bowling Green was able to move the ball, but was unable to put the ball into the end zone.

Twice the Pirates came up with terrific defensive plays. Once, they stopped the Falcon offense on fourth and inches at midfield. Then, later in the game, with Bowling Green gaining a first down at the four, they again kept them out of the end zone.

Like Pogo used to say, "We have met the enemy and they is us." ECU was its own worst enemy in the game, garnering 13 penalties for 121 yards. The number of flags was just one under the school record. That certainly cannot have pleased Lewis and his staff. Against a more formidable opponent, it could have meant a disaster. Such penalties must be avoided in future games.

Bowling Green certainly did not live up to the reputation that had been painted for it. The Falcons will probably turn out to be one of the worst teams on the Pirate schedule.

So we must wait. Other, tougher opponents lie ahead. Once we have seen how the Pirates perform against them, then judgment can be made.

Cincinnati is next — the Pirates' first road game. The Bearcats, under a new coach, are also trying to rebuild their fortunes. They opened with a tie against Rutgers a week ago and had this past Saturday off, giving them two weeks to prepare for the Pirates.

Last year at this time, all looked bright before ECU traveled for the first time to Virginia Tech. But the memory of that Saturday afternoon is still fresh in the mind.

Defense Trying To Change Pattern

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The end zone was a popular meeting place for East Carolina's opponents last season, but Saturday night against Bowling Green, the Pirates made the area off limits.

The ECU defense shutdown the Falcons' offense, allowing them only two field goals in the season-opening 41-6 win under new coach Bill Lewis.

The Pirates have adopted a more aggressive, blitzing style scheme under defensive coordinator Tom McMahon, and the results were evident Saturday night.

"What we had in our game plan, we're the type of defense that blitzes," inside linebacker Robert Jones said. "They had no idea we were the kind of defense that blitzes and shows them a lot of pressure."

"Tonight, our main goal was to just go in and pressure them. I think they were really shocked."

It's a style that makes sense. The Pirates don't have a lot of depth or size along the defensive front, but they do possess good quickness as a unit and an experienced secondary, led by three returning starters.

McMahon has installed a 5-2 alignment that featured a lot of ball-hawking aggressiveness against Bowling Green.

"We figured if we go at it with 11 people flying to the ball, then that's great defense," Jones said. "That's what we got in our heads. We got adjusted that we wanted to win. The main objective was not to let them get in the end zone and that's what we did."

Strong safety Derrick Fields and backup cornerback Donald Porch led the ECU defense, with seven total tackles, including four solos. Inside linebacker Adrian Barnhill, a former Rose standout, had six total stops in his first collegiate start, three of which were solo hits.

"The defensive line, they kept the lineman off me and gave me time to react," Barnhill said.

So true. It's tough for a linebacker to step up and make the tackle if he constantly has to fend off charging offensive linemen. If the defensive linemen occupy their blockers, the linebackers are free to flow to the ball.

Barnhill, a 5-11, 240-pound sophomore who came to ECU as a fullback/linebacker in 1988, spent last year on the defensive as a noseguard, but happily moved to linebacker last spring.

He was a reserve behind Ken Burnette coming into fall camp, but

2nd Decision Aids Wallace

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND, Va. — Rusty Wallace, who began the day by making a bad decision, ended it with a very good one that boosted his bid for the Winston Cup championship.

"I got lucky today, no doubt about it," Wallace said after coasting, out of fuel, to an 8.9-second victory over Dale Earnhardt in Sunday's Miller 400.

The 400-lap event at Richmond International Raceway was run in 94-degree heat and stifling humidity, and many drivers wore so-called cool suits to help them battle fatigue. Wallace wasn't among them.

"I tried to tough it out," he said. "I elected not to use the suit, and that was the stupidest thing I ever did."

"If I would have had the cool suit, it would have made me feel so much better, and I would have drove that much harder and been that much more alert."

Wallace, who began the day 73 points behind leader

Earnhardt in this year's Winston Cup season standings, trimmed the deficit to 63 points with seven races left on the 29-event schedule.

A year ago, Wallace left Richmond 119 points out of the lead in his campaign to capture his first driving title on NASCAR's premier circuit. Wallace won four of the season's last five races, but still came up 24 points shy of Bill Elliott.

"Last year, we won six races, and we won four of them right there at the very end," Wallace said. "Now, I've already won six of them this year, and my very best tracks for me are all coming up right now."

This week's stop is at Dover, Del., a track that has been good to Earnhardt. He led 454 of 500 laps in winning the June race at Dover.

Like his friend Wallace, Earnhardt also thought he could run without special clothing on Sunday.

Simms Set For Start

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The start of the new NFL season couldn't come soon enough for Phil Simms, who is still tortured by memories of the New York Giants' final game of 1988.

Nine months time hasn't eased the pain Simms felt when the New York Jets knocked the Giants out of the playoffs with an improbable 27-21 upset. Simms threw three touchdown passes that December day despite being harried by a rush that sacked him eight times.

"Disappointment is probably a mild word for it. That was one of the low points of my career," Simms said. "We worked so hard to get to that point, then came away with nothing."

The Giants start anew tonight against an old rival, the Washington Redskins, in a rematch of last season's opener. New York won 27-20 last year to set the tone for the Redskins' unpleasant 7-9 campaign.

Washington, like New York, ended the 1988 season with a bitter loss. The Redskins fell in overtime to the AFC champion Cincinnati Bengals after a 29-

Steelers Humbled

51-0 Loss Is Worst In Team History

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was no fun for Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll. But for David Grayson, Cleveland's 51-0 victory over the Steelers was a runaway hit.

Grayson returned a fumble 28 yards for a touchdown and an interception 14 yards for another score. He also recovered another fumble, setting up the first of Matt Bahr's three first-half field goals.

"It was real unusual. I've never seen anything like it," linebacker Clay Matthews said after the Browns caused five fumbles, sacked Pittsburgh quarterback Bobby Brister six times and limited the Steelers to five first downs and 53 net yards. "It was almost comical. How could you ever have figured it?"

Or as Noll said of the worst loss in the Steelers' 58-year history: "It was the bad ... the worst I've ever seen as a coach. A game like this is no fun. That must have been a record for an offense setting up points for a defense."

Tim Worley, the Steelers' first-round draft pick, lost three fumbles in his first NFL start, including two during the Browns' 17-point first quarter. The victory marked the head coaching debut of Cleveland's Bud Carson, a former Steelers defensive coordinator.

"I've got 15 games and the rest of my career left," Worley said. "I've got to put this one behind me."

Tim Manoa score on two short runs and Bernie Kosar completed 16 of 25 passes for 207 yards as the Browns beat the Steelers for the seventh straight time since 1985.

Eagles 31, Seahawks 7
Randall Cunningham passed for 240 yards and two touchdowns, leading Philadelphia over Seattle. The Eagles defense, which scored one touchdown, had three interceptions, three sacks, a blocked punt and held Seattle to 77 yards rushing.

Seattle lost All-Pro wide receiver Steve Largent for six weeks when he suffered a fractured elbow sometime during the first half. Largent played briefly in the second quarter but saw no action in the second half.

Scott Comes In Second At Triathlon

JACKSONVILLE — Greenville's Barry Scott came in second place out of a field of 250 at the Toughman Triathlon at Camp Lejeune Saturday. The triathlon, sponsored by the Special Services at Camp Lejeune, included an eight-mile swim, a 26-mile bicycle ride and a 10-kilometer (6.2 miles) run. Scott recorded a time of 1:55:27. Scott won the event in 1986 and 1987, but was unable to compete last year due to an injury. Next up for Scott is training for the National Championships to be held in Hilton Head Island, S.C. Sept. 30.

ECU's Griffiths Takes First Place

PEMBROKE — Senior Kim Griffiths claimed top honors with a time of 18:35 to lead the East Carolina women's cross country team to a tie for first with Coastal Carolina in an eight-team meet at Pembroke Saturday. The ECU men placed sixth among 15 teams. In the women's meet, ECU and Coastal Carolina each finished with 35 points. College of Charleston was third with 84 points, followed by Campbell with 104, Pembroke State with 139, North Carolina Central 186. Fayetteville State, Shaw and St. Andrews were entered but did not qualify in the team standings. Top finishers for ECU were Terri Lynch (4th, 19:43), Dawn Tillson (10th, 20:39), Denise Wehrburg (11th, 20:47), Jen Hough (13th, 21:04), Susan Hu (14th, 21:05) and Rosey Daniels (7th, 22:27). "Our girls had a tremendous effort," ECU assistant coach Choo Justice said. "Kim outran Coastal's Shelly Tyler in the last mile and Terry Lynch passed four runners in the last mile to take fourth place." Duke ruled the men's meet with 25 points. The Citadel placed second with 102, followed by Pembroke State with 139, Coastal Carolina with 167, East Carolina with 183, Francis Marion with 195, Campbell with 206, College of Charleston with 293, Pfeiffer with 307, High Point with 325, North Carolina Central and St. Andrews with 375 each, Fayetteville State with 439 and Shaw with 448. Leading the Pirates were Matt Schweitzer (13th, 27:42), Ricky Chann (40th, 29:20), Kyle Sullivan (42nd, 29:25), Rusty Meador (43rd, 29:28) and Matt Morris (45th, 29:40). Other ECU finishers were David Levet (30:16), Calvin Graves (30:27), Pete Higgins (30:46), Tony Chadwick (30:47), Brian Stover (30:58) and Kirk Jones (31:51). John Storms of Methodist set the pace with a time of 25:44. ECU will travel to UNC-Wilmington next Saturday for its third meet of the season.

Jackson Doesn't Respond To Charge

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Former Auburn football star Bo Jackson, accused by the author of a book on North Carolina State's basketball program of not "coming cheap," refused to tackle the writer's allegation. While on a call-in show on a Birmingham radio station, Peter Golenbock also said he knows of illegal tactics by Southeastern Conference schools. Golenbock, whose controversial book lured NCAA attention to the Wolfpack program, said he is friends with a former Auburn teammate of Jackson's who has discussed Auburn's 1985 Heisman Trophy winner with him. "...Bo did not come cheap" to Auburn, Golenbock said Sept. 5, attributing the statement to his conversations with the unnamed Jackson teammate. Golenbock, who wrote "Personal Fouls: The Broken Promises and Shattered Dreams of Big Time Basketball at Jim Valvano's North Carolina State," did not elaborate and later declined to identify the SEC schools. "I don't need my name in the headlines," Golenbock said. Jackson, in a statement issued through Kansas City Royals spokesman Steve Fink, said he was "not going to get involved and respond to something like that." Fink said Jackson showed no emotion about Golenbock's claim.

Ex-UNC Star Set To Sign With CFL Team

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina tailback Kennard Martin is negotiating a contract to play professional football for the Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Football League, a newspaper reported. "He didn't want to play college football anymore," Martin's mother, Johnnie, told The Chapel Hill Newspaper in an interview from her Winston-Salem home Saturday night. "He wanted to finish out the year up there and stay in shape, maybe play two years there and come back down here." Martin participated Saturday in run-downs with the team, which is an informal workout to determine each player's flexibility the day after a game, according to a source close to the team. Calgary lost to Edmonton Friday night 38-27.

Adams-Creech, Stowe-Moore Take Wins

AYDEN — Ann Adams and Steve Creech took the wins in the mixed doubles and Guy Stowe and Cliff Moore were tops in the mens' open doubles at the Ayden Collard Festival Tennis Tournament Sunday. After a bye in the first round, Adams and Creech advanced to the finals with wins over the tandem of Jill Hobson and Holly Murray. Teresa Stille and Joe Peszko moved into Sunday's final round with a win over Tim and Sharon Devinyne. In the mens' open doubles, Stowe and Moore moved to the finals with wins Saturday over Tommy Roach and Levi Rasberry. Their opponents, Peszko and Al King took wins over Tim Devinyne and David Shackelford. Results: Mixed Doubles — Ann Adams-Steve Creech defeated Teresa Stille and Joe Peszko 6-3, 6-3; Men's open doubles — Guy Stowe-Cliff Moore d. Joe Peszko-Al King 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Hulbert Wins In Sudden Death

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Mike Hulbert parred the first playoff hole on Sunday to beat Bob Estes and win the B.C. Open for his second PGA Tour victory. Hulbert and Estes finished with 16-under-par 268s and each missed long birdie putts on the final hole of regulation, forcing the playoff. Hulbert, 31, who started the day three strokes behind Estes, shot a 6-under-par 65 and pocketed $90,000.

Spencer-Devlin Claims Cellular 1 Win

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Muffin Spencer-Devlin, playing steady golf while the other leaders faltered, claimed a one-stroke victory in the $300,000 Cellular One-Ping Championship on Sunday. Spencer-Devlin, who began the day four strokes off the lead, shot a 1-under 71 for a 2-under 214 total and her first victory on the LPGA Tour in three years. She won $45,000.

Defense Holds ...

(Continued from B-1) Burnette is out for around four weeks with a knee injury, giving Barnhill a chance to get on the field. "It felt great," he said of the switch. "That's where I always wanted to play. I played linebacker in high school." "At noseguard, you're down in the trenches. It's kind of hard to get off the ground. I didn't think I weighed enough to play down lineman." ECU was worried about the long-play potential of Bowling Green coming in, but limited the Falcons to 172 yards through the air. Cornerbacks Chris Hall and Ricky Torain were big keys. Hall returned an interception 68 yards for a score in the second quarter to key a 21-6 run by the Pirates that put them up, 31-6, at the half. Torain came up with a leaping interception early in the third quarter on a deep post pattern.

"We prepared for the things that they did extremely well, starting with their ability to throw the football," Lewis said. "I thought our secondary responded to that challenge."

A's Beginning To See The Light

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's some daylight showing in the American League divisional races and the Oakland Athletics hope it continues.

After defeating the New York Yankees 6-2 on Sunday, the A's are 44-14 in day games this season. They also are 19-4 on Sundays, but after dark they are only one game over .500. Since the World Series will be played exclusively at night this year, the A's may face a repeat of last year, when they lost in five games to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

First, of course, they have to get there. But they own a 4½-game lead over Kansas City, matching their largest of the season, after downing the Yankees behind Dave Parker's hitting and the pitching of Storm Davis.

"Baseball was meant to be played in the daytime," said Parker, who drove in two runs with a single and his 20th homer, the eighth time in his career he has reached that mark. "But in this organization, it's a great situation when you can get 35,000 or 40,000 people to come out for a weekday game and consistent sellouts on the weekend. You always want to play better in front of a lot of people."

Blue Jays 5, Indians 4

Pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli rolled an RBI single through the left side of the infield with one out in the 10th inning as the red-hot Blue Jays won for the 11th time in their last 13 games.

Tony Fernandez opened the Toronto 10th with a single off rookie Steve Olin, took second on a groundout and scored on Mazzilli's single. Since coming to the Blue Jays on July 31, Mazzilli is 3-for-5 as a pinch-hitter with a homer and four RBIs.

Rangers 8, Orioles 1

Mike Stanley keyed Texas' six-run first inning with a three-run double and Jamie Moyer pitched a six-hitter for his first complete game of the season.

Moyer, making his second start since missing almost three months with a shoulder injury, shut the Orioles down after Phil Bradley's first-inning homer.

The Rangers sent 11 batters to the plate in the bottom of the first against Dave Schmidt, who has allowed 10 runs and 11 hits in his last 11-3 innings, and Jose Bautista.

Twins 8, Royals 2

Minnesota dealt Kansas City's division title hopes another blow behind the pitching of Royals nemesis Allan Anderson and the hitting of Brian Harper and Randy Bush.

Anderson yielded one run and eight hits in six innings and has given up just five runs in 23 innings against the Royals in three games while going 2-0. Harper had a double and three singles while Bush homered and singled twice.

Angels 2, Red Sox 1

Boston shortstop Luis Rivera's error on Brian Downing's bases-loaded grounder with one out in the 14th inning enabled the winning run to score.

With the infield drawn in, Downing hit a slow roller to Rivera, who intended to throw home for a force but mishandled the ball as Claudell Washington scored.

Brewers 7, Mariners 1

Mark Knudson pitched a two-hitter for his first complete game of the season and Greg Vaughn stole home to key a four-run fifth inning as Milwaukee completed a three-game sweep of Seattle. The loss extended Seattle's club-record home losing streak to 11 games. The Mariners have lost six straight and 20 of 24.

Knudson allowed only a bunt hit to Omar Vizquel in the third inning and a single to Ken Griffey Jr. in the seventh. The 28-year-old right-hander won his fourth game in five starts after moving from the bullpen into the starting rotation on Aug. 11 and the Seattle run was unearned.

Tigers 6, White Sox 5

Lou Whitaker's bases-loaded walk, the fourth walk of the inning off Chicago relief ace Bobby Thigpen, forced home the last of three ninth-inning runs as last-place Detroit completed an 8-1 homestand, its best of the year.

Matt Nokes and Scott Lusader opened the ninth with walks and RBI singles by Doug Strange and Mike Heath tied the game. Mike Brumley sacrificed and Strange was then cut down at the plate on Gary Ward's grounder to short. But Dave Bergman walked to load the bases and Thigpen walked Whitaker on five pitches.

Glenn Davis hit his 32nd homer in the eighth off Lefferts. It gave Davis a new single-season high for homers, topping his total in 1986.

Dodgers 14, Padres 8

Mickey Hatcher, Rick Dempsey and Eddie Murray homered at Jack Murphy Stadium as Los Angeles posted season highs with 14 runs and 19 hits. San Diego remained tied with Houston in second place in the West, six games behind San Francisco.

John Shelby and Dave Anderson had three hits each for the Dodgers and Anderson and Murray drove in three runs apiece.

Cubs 4, Cardinals 1

Steve Wilson, who pitched in relief a day earlier, struck out 10 in five innings as four Chicago pitchers combined to fan 18 at Wrigley Field.

Chicago widened its National League East lead over the Cardinals to 2½ games. The Cubs, who won two of three from the Cardinals, lead Montreal by four games and the New York Mets by 4½.

Phillies 4, Expos 2

Rookie Pat Combs struck out eight in seven innings for his first major-league victory. Montreal has lost eight of 13 games and 23 of 36.

Combs, 1-0, allowed one run and seven hits and walked one in his second major-league start. Roger McDowell pitched two innings of four-hit relief for his 18th save. Loser Pascual Perez, 8-13, allowed six hits and three runs in 6 1-3 innings.

Pirates 4, Mets 1

John Smiley, 11-7, allowed four hits in 8 1-3 innings at Shea Stadium, improving to 7-1 lifetime against the Mets, and Gary Redus' home run broke a seventh-inning tie. Bob Kipper finished for his third save.

Sid Fernandez, 11-4, slipped to 9-3 lifetime against the Pirates with his first loss to them since July 1, 1985.

Reds 5, Braves 4

Pinch-hitter Ken Griffey singled in the winning run in the ninth off Dwayne Henry, 0-1, after John Franco, 4-7, blew a save for the seventh time in 37 opportunities.

Franco allowed Jeff Blauser's sacrifice fly and Jody Davis' RBI single in the ninth to the visiting Braves.

National League

Bob Knepper held his former teammates to five hits over six innings and Pat Sheridan hit a three-run double in the first inning Sunday, leading the San Francisco Giants over the Houston Astros 5-3.

Rick Rhoden, 1-6, was knocked out after 1 1-3 innings in his shortest outing of the season. He allowed four runs and four hits.

Robby Thompson singled, Will Clark walked and Rhoden hit Matt Williams with a pitch before Sheridan's three-run double to the wall in left. Thompson hit an RBI double in the second off Rhoden for a 4-0 lead.

Player Of The Week

D.H. Conley running back Mike Clark came up with 166 yards rushing to lead the Vikings to a 40-18 win over cross-county rival North Pitt Friday night and for his efforts he is The Daily Reflector's Player of the Week.

Clark opened up the scoring with a 51-yard scoring dash to put the Vikings ahead early. He added a 31-yard touchdown run in the second quarter. Clark now had 300 yards rushing on the season.

Prep Honor Roll

•D.H. Conley quarterback Scott Seymour: Seymour hit on four of eight passes for 140 yards with no interceptions and two touchdowns, both to Junior Farrow, as the Vikings rolled past North Pitt, 40-18.

•Rose defensive tackle Joe Rowe: Rowe recovered a pair of fumbles, returning one 39 yards for a touchdown in Rose's 39-0 shutout victory over Eastern Wayne.

•Greene Central running back John Dixon: Dixon returned a kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown and also had a 13-yard scoring run in the third quarter that put the Rams ahead of North Lenoir by two touchdowns en route to a 21-6 upset win Friday night.

•Greene Central Defense: The Rams limited highly-acclaimed running back Tim Smith of North Lenoir to 47 yards on 17 carries to key a 21-6 upset victory.

•Farmville Central end LaMont Parker: Parker tackled

Mike Clark

Louisburg quarterback Brian Edwards in the end zone for a safety and later caught a 14-yard scoring pass from Morris Foreman as the Jaguars rolled to a 32-18 win.

•Washington running back Damien Moore: Moore ran for 116 yards on 13 carries as the Pam Pack eased to a 27-0 win over Pamlico County Friday night.

•North Pitt fullback Malcolm Wiggins: Wiggins scored on a 80-yard touchdown run and had 102 yards rushing in the Panthers' 40-18 loss to D.H. Conley.

Becker Wins ...

Becker, who has won their last four meetings to draw even at 7-7 with his rival. "We're close," Becker said. "We're the same more or less. Today, was a difference of about two shots, maybe. That will always be the difference between No. 1 and No. 2."

Even with the loss, Lendl will maintain the No. 1 position in computer rankings. His major action remains winning Wimbledon, the only Grand Slam title that has eluded him. The problem though, remains Becker. There, Becker doesn't even have to wait two weeks for the surface to suit his game. Becker's triumph completed a West German sweep of the Open singles titles. On Saturday, Steffi Graf came from behind for a 3-6, 7-5, 6-1 victory over Martina Navratilova.

The victory gave Graf seven of the last eight Grand Slam titles. Her only miss came in the French, when she was a game away from the victory but came up short and was beaten by Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain.

Graf realized she was in deep trouble against Navratilova after losing the first set and trailing in the second. "I knew it would be very hard to come back and win it," she said. "I just kept hanging in there."

Navratilova, desperately disappointed at the loss to Graf, recovered somewhat by capturing the doubles title Sunday, teaming with Hana Mandlikova to defeat Pam Shriver, her ex-doubles partner, and Mary Joe Fernandez, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

"This helps a lot," Navratilova said. "(Saturday) was a nightmare. I don't think I ever lost being up like that in a Grand Slam. I was two points from winning 3 and 2. It's rough when you're so close. It's the best I've ever played and lost!"

NFL Opens Regular Season ...

Bears 17, Bengals 14
cisco beat Indianapolis. The touchdown reception was the 50th of Rice's career.

Rams 31, Falcons 21
Jim Everett threw for one touchdown and ran for another as the Rams upstaged the debut of Atlanta's Deion Sanders. Everett threw a 46-yard "Hail Mary" scoring pass to Henry Ellard on the final play of the first half, giving the Rams a 17-14 lead.

Sanders signed with the Falcons on Thursday, the day after he finished his major league baseball season with the New York Yankees. On his second punt return of the day, he ran 68 yards for a touchdown. Not a bad week for Sanders, who homered and hit two doubles, with four RBIs, for the Yankees on Tuesday.

Cardinals 16, Lions 13
Al Del Greco's 33-yard field goal with 13 seconds remaining lifted Phoenix past Detroit and spoiled the debut of Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders.

Sanders, who signed on Thursday, entered the game in the third quarter and led the Lions on a scoring drive with runs of 18, 3, 5 and 3 yards, the latter into the end zone. Sanders finished with 71 yards on nine carries.

"This young man will restore the roar," Detroit coach Wayne Fontes said of Sanders. "He's everything we thought he was. Everyone knew he was going to carry the ball and he still did what he did. Hopefully, he'll make me a great coach."

Gary Hogeboom completed 21 of 35 passes for 264 yards for Phoenix.

Buccaneers 23, Packers 21
Lars Tate scored on two short touchdown runs, set up by the passing of Vinny Testaverde, and Mark Robinson intercepted a pass by Green Bay quarterback Don Majkowski at the 8-yard line with five minutes left, stopping a final Packers drive.

Testaverde completed 22 of 27 passes for 205 yards and one touchdown, a 9-yarder to William Howard.

Saints 28, Cowboys 0
New Orleans used a ball-control offense to hand Dallas its first regular-season shutout loss since 1985 and spoil the debut of Jimmy Johnson as coach.

The Saints held Dallas to just 20 yards total rushing — 10 by Herschel Walker — and Bobby Hebert directed the offense that saw the Saints possess the ball for 44:02 to just 15:58 for Dallas. Hebert completed 16 of 19 passes for 153 yards without an interception.

Derrick Shepard returned a punt 56 yards for a New Orleans touchdown.

Tomczak rallied the Bears to victory with a 20-yard touchdown pass to James Thornton in the fourth quarter.

Tomczak, in his first game as the Bears' undisputed No. 1 quarterback, completed just six of 16 passes in the first three quarters. But he completed four of seven in the fourth quarter, including the TD toss to Thornton with 4:54 left.

Dan Hampton blocked a field goal, stopped two drives with sacks and blocked two passes for the Bears.

Raiders 40, Chargers 14
Steve Beuerlein replaced injured Raiders quarterback Jay Schroeder in the first quarter and passed for 206 yards and two touchdowns as Los Angeles spoiled new coach Dan Henning's debut.

Jim McMahon, traded to San Diego from Chicago, completed just seven of 18 passes for 91 yards and was replaced by David Archer midway through the third quarter.

Schroeder separated his left collarbone on the Raiders' first series and was replaced by Beuerlein. Later, the Raiders said Schroeder could have returned to the game if needed.

Broncos 34, Chiefs 20
Denver converted four Kansas City turnovers into 24 points, including touchdowns on interception returns by Tyrone Braxton and Randy Robbins, as Marty Schottenheimer lost his first game as Chiefs coach.

Kansas City turnovers on consecutive plays from scrimmage in the first quarter helped stake Denver to a 17-0 lead.

Braxton intercepted a Steve DeBerg pass and returned it 34 yards for a 10-0 lead. On the next play from scrimmage, DeBerg fumbled and Denver's Greg Kragen recovered at the 8. Sammy Winder scored four plays later.

Vikings 38, Oilers 7
Anthony Carter caught seven passes for 123 yards, including a touchdown, as Minnesota downed Houston.

Wade Wilson, starting his first season as the team's undisputed No. 1 quarterback after a two-year battle with Tommy Kramer, completed 16 of 25 passes for 218 yards, including TD tosses of 32 yards to Carter and two yards to Steve Jordan.

The Vikings' defensive line — tackles Keith Millard and Henry Thomas and ends Chris Doleman and Al Noga — sacked Houston quarterback Warren Moon seven times and controlled Houston's running game.

Patriots 27, Jets 24
A 4-yard scoring run by Reggie Dupard with 1:55 to play helped New England beat New York after the Patriots blew a 21-point halftime lead. The Jets scored 24 points in the second half, taking a 24-21 lead when Ken O'Brien connected with JoJo Townsell on a 49-yard touchdown pass with 7:28 left.

Dupard's run around left end capped a 38-yard, three-play drive that featured a 31-yard pass from Tony Eason to Cedric Jones after a New York punt.

Bills 27, Dolphins 24
Jim Kelly scored on a 2-yard run up the middle as time expired, completing a rally from 11 points back as Buffalo beat Miami. Trailing 24-20, the Bills got the ball back on Nate Odomes' second interception of Dan Marino with 1:44 left at the Buffalo 49.

Kelly hit five of six passes before an incompletion and an off-sides penalty against Miami put the ball at the 2 with two seconds left. Kelly ran the ball in from the shotgun formation.

Cheech Marin Sees Himself As Outsider In Hollywood

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — For Cheech Marin, the 1960s was an awakening. "It was like I came out of my shell, and I found other people were thinking like thoughts," he said. "I became aware of my own power to change events and people around me, no matter what a small degree. I found the power of uniting with other people and effecting change."

Marin and his partner, Tommy Chong, became symbols of those turbulent years, the poets laureate of pot culture. Their first album, "Cheech and Chong," went gold; the second, "Big Bambu," was voted top comedy album of 1972; the third, "Los Cochinos," won the Grammy. Much of the comedy was centered on getting stoned.

The theme continued with their first movie, "Up in Smoke," which was the top-grossing comedy of 1978. Cheech and Chong made five more films and came appearances in "Yellowbeard" and "After Hours" before splitting as a team four years ago.

Marin is exploring the '60s once more in the Orion release, "Rude Awakening," co-starring with Eric Roberts, Julie Hagerty and Robert Carradine. Roberts and Marin play a couple of hippies who return from 20 years of self-exile to find their former comrades transformed into money-mad yuppies.

Recalling his own transformation in the '60s, Marin reflected: "I was kind of a straight college guy, belonged to a fraternity and went to school every day. My dad was a cop, and I was straight down the center. Then — change picture!"

"I discovered pottery and pot, and friends and ideas and other bohemians and Topanga Canyon (a hippie hangout). So it was 'goodbye, see you later.' This was another life. I left the country and went to Canada for three years, and I met Chong and came back and did 'Cheech and Chong.' "I really feel sorry for kids who didn't experience (the '60s). It was a great awakening, a great time of unity when everybody was thinking the same thought."

Although the "Cheech and Chong" years made him rich, Marin denies he has embraced the Establishment, like his old buddies in "Rude Awakening."

"I always consider myself an outsider as much as I'm a part of Hollywood," he said. "I don't really hang out in Hollywood too much. I don't go to parties or hobnob with producers. I live way out at the end of Malibu, almost to Oxnard."

Some of his old compatriots have turned yuppie, he observed, but others have remained "dyed-in-the-wool, live-in-the-woods-in-a-tepee-with-no-electricity hippies who have the same ideals."

"The people I hang out with more or less cling to those ideals, the same as I do," he said.

He admitted that today's younger generation does not have the unifying factor of the Vietnam War. "It was a real and present danger that you were going to get drafted and shipped over there."

Saving the Amazon rain forest is not quite the same, but Marin is pleased that young Americans are beginning to embrace such issues.

After the friendly breakup with Chong, Marin sought new avenues of endeavor. He wrote, directed and starred in "Born in East L.A.," which was a modest success last year.

Marin, who actually was born in central Los Angeles and grew up in the San Fernando Valley, is writing a new script, "Angel of Oxnard," which he plans to shoot in the spring. It's all about his present home grounds, which he calls "a small town that might be in Kansas, an agricultural community caught in the midst of change."

As one time prophets of the drug generation, Cheech and Chong might seem antithetical in today's "just say no" atmosphere. But Marin has no regrets.

"Not a bit, absolutely not. I loved what we were doing. I loved the Cheech and Chong movies and the albums. They will probably outlast anything I've ever done. They're rented all the time in video; the albums still sell today. We've become part of people's vocabulary. Kids today see the movies and buy the albums. They make people laugh, and that's what counts."

"The 'Just Say No' campaign comes out of where the scene had gone," he said. "There's a real whole world of difference between a bunch of hippies sitting around the fire smoking a joint and trying to find God, and 14-year-old Uzi-toting, beeper-carrying crack dealers. They have nothing to do with our generation and are totally devoid of the message we were saying."

Van Cliburn Ends His Sabbatical

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Van Cliburn signed hundreds of records and compact discs at a music store, meeting the public for the first time since he ended his long sabbatical.

More than 500 classical music fans waited several hours Saturday to shake hands with Cliburn, the Fort Worth pianist who won the Tchaikovsky competition in 1958.

"I'm excited and thrilled that you're all here," Cliburn told the crowd. "It's a vote of confidence for classical music."

He recently began playing public-

Koppel Prepares Special Study Of Television News

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — With the fall tube-watching season at hand, it's perhaps fitting that on Wednesday ABC News' "The Koppel Report" special will devote a prime-time hour to what television hath wrought.

Some Americans will say TV hath wrought many awful shows, way too many commercials, and way, way too many promotions for more awful shows.

But Ted Koppel's "Television — Revolution in a Box" isn't about that. Rather, it concerns the worldwide impact of new technology — portable satellite dishes, videocassette recorders and camcorders — on newsgathering, global politics and history itself.

He calls it "the democratization of television," a wide range of viewing options not possible in the old-tech days when power over what viewers were offered largely was restricted to government or a few megabuck conglomerates.

Ironically, that democratization has in a sense made possible what once was the unthinkable in network news, at least where Koppel is concerned.

Had ABC News president Roone Arledge turned down Koppel's proposal for what became Wednesday's "Report," the "Nightline" anchorman says, the program still could have emerged elsewhere on TV, although not on a rival network.

And even with ABC airing it, Koppel still can eventually sell the program domestically, even to cable companies, and overseas a year after its ABC broadcast, he says.

The reason: Koppel's ABC contract, signed last year, in which his own company, Koppel Communications, Inc., produces "The Koppel Report" specials "in cooperation with ABC News," as the credits say.

The deal was made public when signed. But it still strikes some as unusual, as if, say, a mild-mannered reporter for a great metropolitan newspaper got a new contract in which the founder of Clark Kent Communications, Inc., would henceforth produce features for the Daily Planet.

Koppel himself says he thinks his ABC deal is unprecedented. Under its terms, he says, he makes "Koppel Report" proposals to Arledge. If the ABC News' chief says no dice, Koppel is free to take the idea elsewhere.

But the freedom is restricted, unlike the network entertainment side of things. There, in an unusual move, NBC recently asked ABC-owned ABC Productions to create and produce for it a prime-time drama series.

"I'm precluded by my contract from selling to NBC, CBS, CNN and Fox," Koppel says, referring to both "Koppel Reports" that have been or will be made, and "Reports" proposals that ABC News turns down.

With programs his company makes for ABC, he says, the network owns the rights for a year and can air the shows twice during that time. On the first anniversary of a given program's broadcast, both its domestic and overseas rights revert to his company, he says.

The company already has sold one "Report" overseas — last April's special on drug-related crime in urban ghettos that used the nation's capital as its focus and was called "D.C. — Divided City."

Japan's NHK network bought that one, he says. He doesn't know what accounted for NHK's purchase, but "they were enormously interested in it. They were the ones who came after it the most anxiously."

Koppel, who has been with ABC News for 26 years, thinks it's very likely that others in network news eventually will do as he's done, form news production companies of their own.

"The fact of the matter is, there are now so many potential customers out there for programs ... it's not that the audience is getting any larger, but the number of customers (for programs) is getting larger."

It harks back to what he'd been saying earlier, he says, referring to the technological change in television that has widened both viewing choices and program markets.

Twenty years ago, he said, alluding to the three major TV networks, "you only had three customers. And if you wanted to sell something else on television, where were you going to sell it?"

Newman, Woodard Find Star Watchers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Residents of a neighborhood where Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward are making a film have been nonchalantly trying to get a glimpse of the stars.

"There's a lot of people walking by, pretending to walk their dogs, and they ... walk by 10 times," said onlooker Kim Massman. "I'm going to take a little walk, but I'm not going to spend my whole day doing this."

The filming of "Mr. and Mrs. Bridge" began Saturday. Production staffers said director James Ivory had planned to shoot outside but rain forced filming indoors.

A few people trying to see the stars gathered at barricades that had been set up to keep crowds and traffic away from the residential neighborhood during the shooting.

The film is based on Evan S. Connell's novels, "Mr. Bridge" and "Mrs. Bridge," which are set in Kansas City from the late 1920s through the beginning of World War II.

Haig Making Stage Debut

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OCEANSIDE, Calif. — Alexander Haig, the feisty career Army officer and former Cabinet member, says his life in zoo-like atmospheres prepared him well for his stage debut as a narrator for "Carnival of the Animals."

On Sunday night, Haig and his wife, Pat, narrated Ogdan Nash's verses that accompany Camille Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Sept. 12
ARIES (March 20 to April 19): An outside associate gives some very good ideas to aid you in increasing your assets. Take your attachment in the world to meet some influential persons.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 19): Your work now goes along very satisfactory lines because of the great cooperation you get from fellow workers. In future social arrangements be sure to include members of your household.
GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): New formulas added to your proven business can add to your current security. An excellent time to get your home in spic and span order.
MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Your home will be the perfect place to entertain your friends. Get into the long range plans to have more financial well-being.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): To have more success in business get all possible data from various sources. Study your home carefully to see what you can do to improve operative skill there.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Conflict between work and social life should be resolved by more intelligently planning your hours. What you do in practical problems now can bring long term security.
LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): You are the one to extend the olive branch to a friend with whom there has been some friction. A good time to visit one who is shut-in or has been restricted.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Look into costs of pleasure that tempt you before committing yourself. Don't bring into the open now that there are cross purposes between you and family.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Work diligently still at a project requiring more time than anticipated. Home should be the central focus of most of your activity so plan events there.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Arrange career and social life so you get maximum of your duties performed. Getting rid of present problems at home will clear the way for a new well-being there.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Heighten conditions at home by inviting especially charming guests there. Get some fresh new slant how to best improve business and financial affairs.
PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Your family could have a good time getting away from the house. Don't argue with a partner now over some piddling sums of money.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ
Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K984 ♥K83 ♦J642 ♣83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
 4 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
 A.—For the moment, you have done all you can with your positive response. With no first-round control to show, be content with four spades. It is up to partner to make another move toward slam.
Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠74 ♥9862 ♦AKJ3 ♣Q84
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Dbl ?
What action do you take?
 A.—With 10 points you have enough to redouble. However, what do you intend doing if your left-hand opponent bids two clubs or two hearts and that gets passed back to you? To avoid that dilemma, bid one no trump now, which shows a good balanced hand—exactly what you have.
Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J82 ♥KQ765 ♦1052 ♣53
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
 A.—You have the values for one forward-going bid, and you have taken it. Pass. To rebid two hearts, you should have a six-card suit since partner, who has already shown two suits, rates to be short in hearts.
Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠53 ♥K765 ♦1052 ♣J83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
 A.—The same conditions apply as above. However, you must bid two clubs. You prefer partner's first suit by a wide margin, so tell him so. This is not a forward-going bid, just a correction.
Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠53 ♥KQJ76 ♦1052 ♣983
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
 A.—We said in a previous answer that you should have a six-card suit to bid two hearts. However, you must think for yourself. This hand is likely to take three or four tricks with hearts as trumps, but nothing playing in any other strain. Bid two hearts. Partner's high cards will help your cause.
Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J762 ♥6 ♦AK953 ♥J94
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 1 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
 A.—This time you are easily worth another bid, and the choice is obvious. You have a four-card major suit, so go ahead and tell partner about it. Bid one spade.

Soviet Territory Sees Strike End

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — Workers in the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan ended a weeklong strike today that had been called to protest Kremlin control of a disputed territory.

Leaders of the Azerbaijan People's Front, a nationalist group that called a republic-wide strike more than a week ago, said on television Sunday night that most of their political demands had been met, local activists and journalists said.

The People's Front will be officially recognized and allowed to speak at a special session of the republic's Supreme Soviet legislature on Friday, group spokesman Ekhtibar Mamedov said.

The legislature is to address the strikers' principal demand, the return of the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh to Azerbaijani control, Mamedov said, speaking by telephone from Azerbaijan's capital, Baku.

Armenians and Azerbaijanis have been locked in a dispute over the mountainous enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh for more than 18 months. The conflict has cost 100 lives and forced thousands to flee their homes.

Moscow took the region, which is in Azerbaijan but populated mainly by ethnic Armenians, under its direct control last winter to try and calm the area, but both sides continue to press their claims to it.

Azerbaijan's idled railroads resumed operating today and workers at all enterprises went back to work, journalist Nazim Ragimov said from Baku. The city's many oil refineries were reported to be at least partially functioning throughout the strike.

Trains were running everywhere in Azerbaijan except on routes to the neighboring Caucasus republic of Armenia, Ragimov said.

In the republic of Moldavia, the newspaper Pravda said today that organizers called for an end to a 3-week-old walkout, but the republic's strike committee issued a statement this morning denying the report.

South African Police Lay Aside Whips

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police headquarters said today that officers would stop whipping anti-apartheid demonstrators because of a "negative reaction" from the public inside and outside the country.

Police have used whips along with live ammunition, rubber bullets, tear gas and stun grenades to break up repeated anti-apartheid protests in recent weeks.

The whips, which police refer to as quirts, often were employed because "as a rule it may result in less serious injuries than, for example, batons," a police statement said.

But, the statement added, "the use of quirts has resulted in negative reaction from the public, also internationally, (so) it has been decided to stop its use."

Police and demonstrators have clashed almost daily since anti-apartheid groups launched a nationwide defiance campaign Aug. 2. The protests were designed to mobilize opposition to the segregated parliamentary elections Sept. 6, but activists have vowed to press on with their campaign.

A march protesting police violence is planned in Cape Town on Wednesday, when the Electoral College is expected to give Acting President F.W. de Klerk a full five-year term.

Cape Town Mayor Gordon Oliver and several anti-apartheid members of the city council say they will help lead the protest along with such prominent activists as Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and the Rev. Allan Boesak.

Oliver has called on Cape Town police, who are controlled by the national government, to "stay away, or if they must be there, they should take a low-profile role and not intervene."

The protest is intended to focus attention on 29 black and mixed-race people activists say were killed in election night violence instigated by police.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok has called Tutu and Boesak liars and disputed their claims about the deaths. Vlok says 10 people were killed in a black-on-black factional fight and five additional deaths are under investigation.

Relatives of several victims say police were responsible for the killings, and journalists and residents saw police marching through the townships firing live ammunition.

A pro-government newspaper, Beeld, today called for a full accounting of the violence.

"Did those who maintain law and order commit all those deeds attributed to them?" Beeld asked in an editorial. "Are Archbishop Tutu and Dr. Boesak's allegations totally false, or do they contain a grain of truth? Even a grain would be too much."

Vlok said today that the State Security Council would meet in Cape Town but declined to divulge the agenda.

Gandhi Visits Mother Teresa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CALCUTTA, India — Mother Teresa was feeling better today as she continued to recover from a heart attack, a nursing home said, and the famed humanitarian got a visit and a bouquet of flowers from Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

The 79-year-old Roman Catholic nun, who was put on a pacemaker during the weekend after suffering the heart attack on Friday, was feeling "much better," according to statement by Woodlands Nursing Home.

"Mother Teresa had a good night's sleep. Her heartbeat is regular and she has no temperature," the statement said.

Gandhi and his wife, Sonia, flew to Calcutta to see the Mother Teresa, who gave up a comfortable life as a convent teacher to care for the poor and dying in the slums of this eastern Indian city. She won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work.

Syrian Shells Trap Thousands In Lebanese Mountain Villages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian forces hammered Lebanon's beleaguered Christian enclave with artillery, rockets and tank fire early today, setting pine forests on fire and trapping thousands of people in mountain towns.

Police said 11 people were killed and 34 wounded in the shelling duels in the central mountains that form the eastern flank of the enclave, and in clashes along Beirut's dividing Green Line.

That raised the casualty toll since fighting erupted March 8 to at least 844 killed and 2,508 wounded.

Police said the artillery battles that intensified Sunday night after several days of sporadic clashes were the heaviest in the mountains since the United Nations Security Council issued a vain appeal for a cease-fire Aug. 16.

The upsurge of violence that raged through the night came two days before an Arab League mediation committee was due to meet in Saudi Arabia to discuss reactivating a stalled peace initiative.

Christian radio stations blamed the Syrians for the escalation, claiming they were out to sabotage the three-nation committee's efforts.

"We're back to the same old game," said an announcer on the Voice of Free Lebanon radio. "Whenever the committee schedules a new meeting, the Syrians let all hell break loose while publicly pledging cooperation to defuse the fighting."

The storm centers of the fighting during the night were Ein el-Tuf-faha, 18 miles east of Beirut, and the Christian stronghold of Souk el-

Gharb, 16 miles to the south.

The two towns control road networks leading into the besieged Christian heartland from the predominantly Shiite Moslem Bekaa Valley and the Druse Moslem hinterland in the Chouf mountains.

Syrian guns battered the Christian town of Bikfaya, hometown of former President Amin Gemayel, for seven hours through the night, setting surrounding pine forests on fire.

A police spokesman, who cannot be named under standing regulations, said Bikfaya's estimated 15,000 people were trapped in basements throughout the battle because the fires blocked all escape routes from town.

Both sides battled with tanks around Souk el-Gharb, under siege by Syria's Moslem allies since 1983.

The Syrians and their militia allies have been increasingly pressuring the Christian defenses along the 66-mile mountain front over the last few weeks.

But so far there has been no sign that they plan a major ground offensive into the 310-square-mile enclave where an estimated 1 million Christians are trapped with their backs to the Mediterranean Sea.

Along the Green Line, Syrian and Christian troops clashed with automatic weapons behind howitzer and mortar batteries that kept most of Beirut's remaining 150,000 people in bomb shelters from dusk to dawn.

The rest of the battered city's 1.5 million people have fled over the last six months, seeking refuge in north, east and south Lebanon.

The foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia, Morocco and Algeria, which form the Arab League committee on Lebanon, were scheduled to meet Wednesday in Jeddah on the Red Sea following weeks of high-level diplomatic efforts by the Soviet Union and France.

It will be the committee's first meeting since July 28, when it said its efforts had been stymied by Syrian intransigence.

Since then the Soviets and French have sought to persuade the committee to try again.

Christian military commander Gen. Michel Aoun, who wants to mobilize international support for his "war of liberation" against the Syrians, suffered a setback Sept. 6 when the Americans withdrew their diplomats from Beirut to climax a growing rift between the Christians and Washington.

With Aoun and Syrian President Hafez Assad deeply entrenched, there were no clear signs that a renewed Arab effort will succeed in ending the carnage and finding a settlement of the 14-year-old Lebanese civil war where previous attempts failed.

The Syrians have refused to withdraw their 40,000 troops deployed in mainly Moslem areas of Lebanon under a 1976 Arab League mandate to quell the civil war.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) has received an application for financial assistance from the Eastern Pines Water Corporation. The specific elements of this proposal are the construction of approximately 43.1 miles of water distribution lines, two 400 gallons per minute wells, two pump houses, a telemetry control system, and one 300,000 gallon elevated storage tank. FmHA has assessed the potential environmental impacts of this proposed action and has determined that it will not significantly affect the quality of the human environment. Therefore, FmHA will not prepare an environmental impact statement for this proposed action. Any written comments regarding this determination should be provided within fifteen (15) days of this publication to District Director, Farmers Home Administration, 2002 South Glenburnie Road, New Bern, N.C. 28560. FmHA will make no further decisions regarding this proposed action during this fifteen day period. Requests to review the FmHA environmental assessment upon which this determination is based or to receive a copy of the assessment should be directed to the address above.

REBATE PROGRAM ENDS

Greenville Utilities' CASH BACK Rebate Program for new energy efficient heating/cooling equipment will officially end September 12, 1989. Rebate applications will now be considered on a first-come, first-serve basis until the program's remaining funds are depleted. Funding for the program was provided by the N.C. Department of Commerce, Energy Division, from money made available through Exxon oil overcharges. Greenville Utilities was the only North Carolina utility to offer rebates to its customers.

During the course of the successful CASH BACK Rebate Program, which began December 9, 1987, Greenville Utilities issued over 550 cash rebates averaging $230. First year energy savings for these customers may total more than $70,000.

Before the program started, less than 20% of all new heating/cooling equipment purchased in our area were high-efficient models. According to one local contractor, since GUC started the Rebate Program, sales of high-efficient equipment have increased ten fold over the previous year, and there is more interest in high-efficient equipment than ever before.

The CASH BACK Rebate Program is just one example of how Greenville Utilities, your public power utility, works to provide YOU with the lowest cost energy (electric and gas) available. If you have questions about any GUC programs, call 752-7166.
