Council Supports Cleanup On Tar

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After delaying a decision for three months, the City Council has agreed to support the Greenville Utilities Commission in its efforts to help speed the cleanup of the Tar River.

The council agreed during Monday's workshop session to back an independent study and management strategy for the river proposed by GUC Director Malcolm Green. Under the proposal, Greenville and other municipal dischargers along the Tar-Pamlico River would fund a model study of the waters and present an independent management strategy to the state.

The plan, as presented by Green, would not delay classification of the river as nutrient sensitive waters.

The council delayed a decision on the state's proposed nutrient sensitive designation for the Tar-Pamlico River during three previous meetings. And official comment from Greenville came from GUC and the Environmental Advisory Commission.

In June the state Division of Environmental Management proposed classifying the river as nutrient sensitive and limiting waste water treatment plants to present discharge levels of nitrogen and phosphorous, the two chemicals responsible for nutrient pollution.

At a meeting on Sept. 5, Green and officials from six cities along the Tar-Pamlico River heard a proposal which would bind the municipalities together as a compact to help solve the nutrient pollution problems in the river. Green said the compact could more efficiently reduce the amount of nutrient loading in the river.

Council member Lorraine Shinn opposed the measure, and removed herself from voting because of her job as regional office manager of Environment, Health and Natural Resources, the parent agency of DEM.

"I think we again just heard one side of the story," Ms. Shinn said.

The council had earlier refused to hear a presentation from Green because DEM could not comment on

West Reported On Hot Seat Again

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Education reportedly gave Superintendent Edwin L. West Jr. an ultimatum Monday — resign within one week, or face being fired. A board member denied the report, but confirmed that West's future is being debated.

After meeting for almost two hours in executive session, during which time West was called in and sent out three times, the board adjourned without taking any action.

The board's chairman, George E. Williams, would not confirm or deny that West was the reason for the executive session. "We just discussed a personnel matter, but no action was taken," he said.

Board member Anne McGaughey denied that West was given an ultimatum. No action was taken on West's contract, Ms. McGaughey said. She said she does not know when it will be discussed again by the board.

Board members Mary L. Williams, Donovan Phillips and Jack M. Collins Jr. would not comment, but Ms. Williams said she would have a statement Monday.

The board has a workshop session scheduled for Monday.

Repeated attempts to reach the other eight board members for comment were unsuccessful. Phone messages left at their offices and homes went unanswered.

West is in a meeting this morning and could not be reached for comment, his secretary said.

West is in the final year of a four-year contract that pays him $95,000 a year. Under state law, the board is required to tell West by April 1 whether or not it will renew the contract when it expires June 30. It may also purchase the final year of his contract.

This is the second time the board has called an executive session to review West's job performance. The board met July 10 for almost three hours, but took no action.

Under the state's Open Meetings Law, the board may discuss an employee's job performance in private, but any final decision must be made in open session.

Hungary Opens Door To West

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASSAU, West Germany — At least 10,000 East Germans jammed resettlement camps in West Germany today and thousands more arrived in Hungary, waiting to follow the newly opened path to the West.

Residents of this border town filled a convention hall with banners and balloons to welcome the immigrants.

"This reception is really amazing," said Ute Kindl, a young East

German woman. "I'm really speechless over the warmth and kindness here."

Resettlement camps were overflowing here today, one day after Hungary broke with East Germany, a Warsaw Pact ally, and allowed East Germans to cross freely into the West.

West Germany's ARD television network said the number of immigrants had reached about 10,000. Bavarian border police said later they estimated the number at "over 10,000."

There were conflicting reports about how many East Germans had crossed into Hungary since Monday morning. Maj. Janos Hornyak of the Hungarian border guards said 6,529 East Germans arrived between 6:30 a.m. Monday and 9:30 a.m. today.

He said all but 1,181 entered from Czechoslovakia, which is sandwiched between Hungary and East Germany, and the rest entered from Romania.

Hungarian radio had said Monday that 16,000 East Germans crossed from Czechoslovakia since Monday morning. But border authorities said today that the radio apparently misquoted an Interior Ministry official and had been giving a total figure for the weekend.

The remarkable path westward was cut by Hungary, which is embracing liberal political reforms and seeking closer economic and diplomatic ties with Western nations.

Police Chief Appeals

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Winterville Police Chief Lester Smith is appealing his five-year suspension from law enforcement by the state Criminal Justice Standards Commission on charges he "knowingly misrepresented" facts presented to the state agency.

Smith, who has been Winterville's police chief since January 1988, was suspended Aug. 25 by the agency after a hearing on charges of having "knowingly made misrepresentation of information needed for certification" of three police officers concerning operation of radar speed detection equipment.

Smith was notified of his suspension by the CJSJ office this week.

Smith said this morning that he requested Monday to appeal the suspension and has been told that he will be granted a hearing by the commission.

Poland Seats Cabinet

WARSAW, Poland — Lawmakers today approved the Soviet bloc's first government led by non-Communists after Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki urged them to change virtually every aspect of Polish life.

The vote was 402 in favor of Mazowiecki's Cabinet, none against and 13 abstentions.

Mazowiecki, smiling, lifted his hands in the "V" for victory sign that for so long represented illegal opposition to the Communist government. The parliament rose to applaud.

"My biggest dream has come true," he said.

The names of the new Cabinet ministers were read, with the loudest ovation going to Jacek Kuron, the new labor minister who spent nine years in prison for his opposition activism.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, who turned down a chance to lead the new administration to remain a private citizen, promised full support to the new government headed "by one of us."

"For the first time in half a century, Poland has a government that can be considered by millions of people as their own," he said in Gdansk.

'Marijuana Watch' Starts

By Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner unveiled a new anti-drug program Monday in Greenville that will give law enforcement officers permission to search the property of large landowners for marijuana across the state.

Gardner said at a press conference at the Pitt-Greenville Airport that the program, called "Operation: Marijuana Watch," involves a contract between the state and owners of large tracts of land. Besides giving law enforcement officers permission to enter areas to look for marijuana, it will provide the landowners' employees with instruction in marijuana identification and a toll free number in Gardner's office to be used if any marijuana is located.

Local representatives from Du Pont, Champion International and Timberlands Unlimited signed contracts with the state in Greenville and pledged to make about 165,000 acres in eastern North Carolina open to authorities.

Greenville was one of four stops for Gardner and Joseph Dean, the secretary of crime control and public safety, who flew around the state and received pledges of over a million acres to their new program. The officials also stopped in Wilmington, Raleigh and Asheville.

"As far as I know, this is the only program of its kind in the United States," said Gardner. "I consider

Pitt Seniors Hold Own On SATs As State Slips

By Jerry Raynor
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

While North Carolina high school seniors ranked lowest nationally in SAT scores this year, Pitt County's seniors scored higher in one section of the test than the statewide average and slightly lower in the second segment.

Barry Gaskins, public information officer for the Pitt County schools, said that Pitt seniors had higher scores in the math section of the Scholastic Aptitude Test than the mean scores for the state, and scored only two points lower than the state average in the verbal section.

Gaskins said that "the Pitt County scores are 395 in the verbal division, and 451 in the math section. Mean scores in North Carolina were 397 points in the verbal section and 439 points in the math section."

Gaskins said "Pitt County students continue to register improvement in SAT scores. While the state overall shows a 5 percent decline in test scores, Pitt County this year registered a 6 percent increase overall, 1 percent in the verbal section and 5 percent in math."

In results released by the National College Board, sponsor of the Scholastic Aptitude Test given to seniors in all 50 states, North Carolina this year dipped to 50th, the lowest ranking state in the nation.

Nationally, the mean verbal scores in the verbal section were 427 points, and in the math section, 476 points.

The national board in its report stressed that "state-by-state comparisons of the SAT do not give a true portrait of a state's educational quality because the proportion of students taking the test varies widely. Mississippi students, for example, scored an average of 988 on the exam, but only four percent of the seniors, presumably the brightest, took it. By contrast, 57 percent of North Carolina's students took the test."

"Still," the report said, "North Carolina ranked below such states as South Carolina, Virginia, New Mexico and Georgia, where similar or greater proportions of the students took the test."

Gaskins said that in Pitt County, "the percentage of students taking the test this year is about 45 percent or maybe a little more."

"One of the important considerations is the record being achieved by minority students in Pitt County," he said. "For this group, there is a 16 percent increase over the 1988 score, while the state showed no gain in scores by minority students."

William Friday, former president of the University of North Carolina system, told the Associated Press, "This is no posture for the state of North Carolina to find itself in. Whatever it takes to correct it, we must now undertake."

On the other hand, some educators are concerned over possible reaction to North Carolina's low ranking, the news service said. C. Owen Phillips, superintendent of High Point schools, for example, said he is worried that "politicians will react to North Carolina's last-place ranking by requiring more courses aimed solely at boosting SAT scores. My fear is that we will over emphasize it to the detriment of many things that need to be taught in education and that are not tested on the SAT."

Gaskins said, "In Pitt County we conduct workshops and training sessions to familiarize students with the processes, the procedures involved in taking the test, but this will not be over emphasized."

Report Still Out On Police Racism Charges

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council spent nearly 45 minutes in closed session Monday night, but returned with little to report on the internal investigation of the police department into charges of racism.

City Attorney Mac McCarley said the council heard a report on the probe from Assistant City Manager Ron Kimble and Detective J.E. Harris. McCarley said the report was not yet complete and the council heard no details of the investigation.

"They did not report to the council any of the details of what they're finding in their investigation," McCarley said. "Their report was strictly limited to a status report of the process of the investigation."

McCarley said the assistant manager and the detective "estimated that it will take at least three more weeks" to complete the report.

The internal investigation began nearly one month ago when a group of black city police officers and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference presented a list of grievances to Police Chief Jerry Tesmond complaining of racial discrimination. The petition, signed by 13 black officers and detectives, denounced the "jaded discriminatory ploys" in the police department.

The black officers, including one 13-year veteran, and the SCLC called for Tesmond and two other high-ranking police administrators — captains Nelson Staton and Randy Nichols — to step down. The two groups charged that racially motivated favoritism in promotions and assignments began at the head of the department.

Tesmond refused to comment Monday night.

Since Aug. 4, when the grievances were presented to Tes-mond, he has maintained that the charges are an internal matter for the police department and the city government to resolve. Tesmond did say in August the charges of racism came as a surprise and the SCLC had earlier sent him a letter supporting his leadership.

McCarley said Monday that Kimble and Harris had conducted interviews with approximately half of the officers involved and spent nearly 95 hours on the investigation so far. "They have been turned loose to commit their time to this process," McCarley said.

He also emphasized that the council heard no details of findings in the investigation. "They refuse to tell anyone what they're finding at this point."

In an open letter to the City Council, 80 officers and employees of the police department issued a statement supporting Tesmond, and questioned the validity of the charges against the chief and the department.

ECU Student Reports Rape

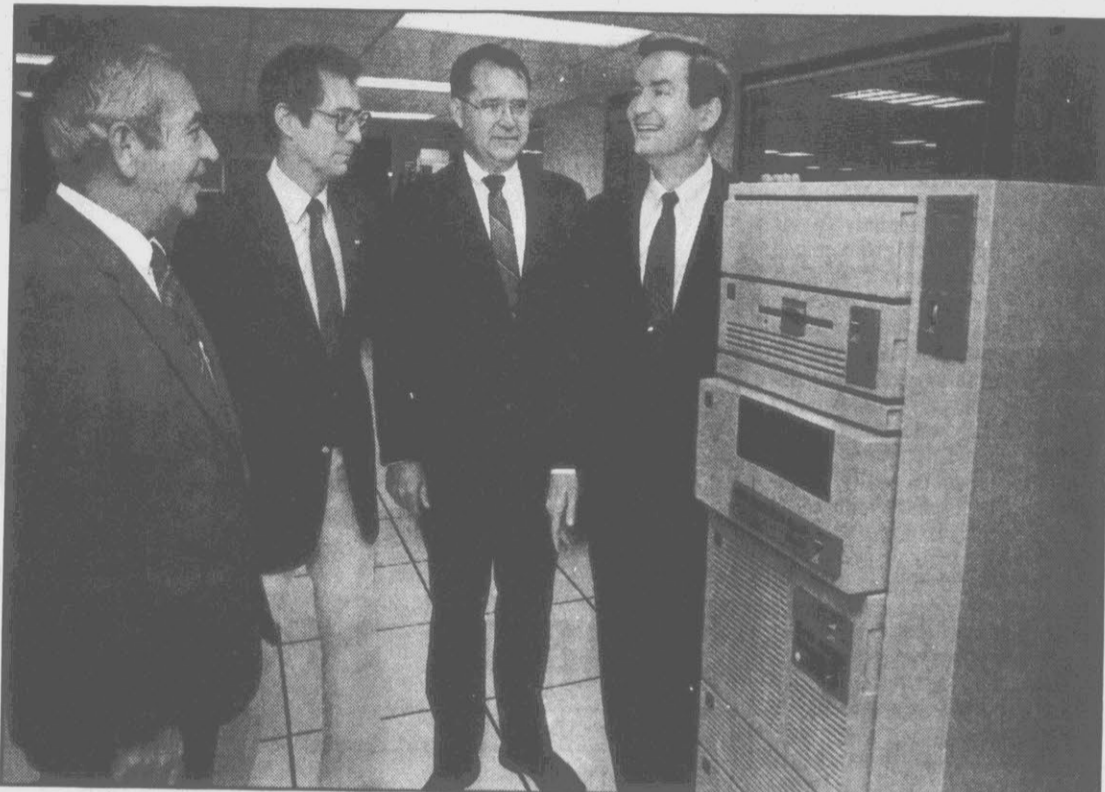

Greenville police said a 20-year-old East Carolina University student was raped in the yard of the Baptist Student Center at the intersection of 10th and Lawrence streets early today.

Detective S.B. Pass said the co-ed, who reported the rape about 1 a.m., had parked her car and was getting out when she was approached by a man from behind.

The attacker, Pass said, grabbed her and made the woman accompany him across a narrow section of parking lot and yard, then forced her to the ground near the building and attacked her.

The man, who fled on foot after the attack, Pass said, was described as a white male, 5-feet, 9-inches to 5-feet, 11-inches tall weighing from 150 to 170 pounds and wearing a red or burgundy ski mask, gray T-shirt and blue jeans.

City and campus police are investigating several other assaults, including one that occurred on Aug. 31 in a parking lot at Fifth and Reade streets, and three in the city during the summer.

IBM Selects East Carolina For Computer Partnership

By George A. Threewitts
ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University has been selected by International Business Machines Corp. for a three-year, $500,000 partnership project to study and demonstrate the use of computers in manufacturing, ECU officials announced today.

IBM will provide the computer equipment and software to set up a Computer-Integrated Manufacturing (CIM) education and demonstration system — the ECU School of Business and the ECU School of Industry and Technology.

The system, using an advanced mainframe computer and a network of microcomputers, will link business management and marketing classrooms to industrial design and application laboratories in the two schools.

The new system is designed to speed up and improve the flow of information in an organization and make complex industries easier to manage. At ECU the system will be used to teach and demonstrate CIM to students and to representatives of area industries.

At the hub of the system is a new AS/400 mid-range computer. Installed in the School of Business, the computer will connect to more than a dozen new microcomputers and two industrial microcomputers. One industrial microcomputer will be used on an industrial control system and the other will be used to control assembly lines in a manufacturing work cell, a laboratory in the School of Industry and Technology that simulates the production area of a manufacturing plant.

Because of its teaching significance and its potential for helping businesses learn more about CIM, ECU has dubbed the three-year partnership "an area of excellence" for the university.

"It will enable us to bring into the classroom some real, live situations on how an industry is run," said Dr. Paul F. Petersen, a business management professor at ECU. "This is something that can't be taught from textbooks," he said.

He said the system will let students see the effects of management decisions while providing them with the skills to manage the decision making and technical aspects of the CIM system.

One of the main objectives for the system is to develop and demonstrate how CIM is used in industry. Petersen said the system at ECU will be five to eight years ahead of the computer capabilities of most small to medium-size companies.

"We have to develop the methods and techniques for using the system in the classroom and laboratories because they don't exist anywhere else," said Petersen.

Petersen is co-directing the operation of the CIM system with David R. Hillis, a member of the manufacturing faculty in the School of Industry and Technology.

"One of the most interesting aspects of CIM," said Hillis, "is it can make a large business react and behave like a small one."

"The CIM concept is like a small group of individuals," said Hillis. "Everyone knows what everyone else is doing. It can make big business fun again," he said.

As part of its partnership agreement, ECU plans to demonstrate the decision making and technical aspects of CIM to area industries. In addition, short courses and seminars on CIM will be offered through ECU.

ECU is one of only 22 four-year universities in the nation to be picked for the IBM Computer-Integrated Manufacturing project that IBM hopes will spur development of new techniques and methods for using the system. IBM also hopes the program will accelerate a move by U.S. factories into CIM.

Installation of the system is expected to be completed this fall.

Pitt School Board Tables Proposal To Control Bands' Performances

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Board of Education members and parents of high school band students are marching to different drummers when it comes to band programs.

The board is studying ways to make sure the county's five high school bands perform in as many community events as possible. It is considering a policy that schedules performances by at least two bands for each of the major parades and festivals within the county.

But parents of band members say the board is missing the point. Without uniforms, instruments and financial support from the board, they say, the county's band programs will be too weak to march anywhere.

At its meeting Monday, the board tabled a proposed policy that would control how performances by the five bands would be scheduled. The policy, developed by a committee composed of school band directors, allows bands to choose four events from a list approved by a high school band committee. Bands will be required to play at events in their attendance area during the school year. Each festival would be guaranteed one band.

The board tabled the policy after board member Elbert T. Buck Jr. suggested that one band per festival would not be enough. He proposed a change that would require a second band to perform in each festival on a rotating basis. "We're talking about ensuring some of these smaller local communities get the representation they deserve," Buck said.

Parents of Ayden-Grifton High School band members who attended the meeting said the board is missing the point. Forcing bands to march in parades is useless when the board does not give schools enough money to support band programs, they said.

"The Board of Education can't tell me that I have to send my daughter to a parade," Jane Pridgen, secretary of the Ayden-Grifton band boosters, said.

The Ayden-Grifton band needs uniforms and instruments to march anywhere, Ms. Pridgen said. Parents have worked long hours raising money to support the band, she said, but they can't do it all.

"We have peddled everything except the parents (to raise money)," Ms. Pridgen said. "If the kids don't have anything to play who needs a band? We don't even have the money to get the piano tuned."

Laura Webb, another Ayden-Grifton parent, suggested that the board look at band funding, not band performances. "I do not feel that it should be left up to anyone other than the band directors, the principals and the students to decide which parade they want to march in," she said.

Ms. Webb, who organized this year's Ayden Collard Festival, said morale among band students is low because of a lack of board support. Bands need at least as much support as sports programs, she said. "I think it's great to have the moneys into the football program and into the basketball program. But once the student graduates from high school, what is he going to do with those skills?" Ms. Webb asked.

"If we can get the board to support us ... we will have a greater opportunity to show what we can do," she said.

Loitering Ordinance Approved

AYDEN — The Ayden Town Board approved an ordinance that will prohibit loitering for the purpose of engaging in drug-related activities at a meeting on Monday night.

The new ordinance is designed to be used by the police as a tool against the problem of drug use and trafficking, said William Ford, the town clerk and tax collector.

Ayden used a Greenville ordinance that prohibits loitering for the purpose of engaging in drug-related activities as a model. The ordinance will give the police the authority to arrest people who are known drug users or involved in drug-related activities.

The Ayden Board also approved Oct. 9 as the date to hold a public hearing on whether the properties of the Pitt County Group Home and the Anointed One's Church should be annexed as city property.

In other business, the names of the members of the new library board were announced. Four people, Glen Gaylor, Jene Jolly, Joyce Dixon and Amina Shahid-El, were appointed to serve three-year terms on the library board.

Board Cuts Allowable School Absences From 30 To 20 Yearly

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County students who miss more than 20 days of school in one year risk failure under a tighter attendance policy approved Monday by the Board of Education.

The policy reduces the number of allowable absences from 30 to 20. Students who miss more than the allowable number of days will not receive credit unless the school principal grants an exemption. Students may appeal the principal's decision to the board.

The board instructed Superintendent Edwin L. West Jr. to prepare guidelines for granting exemptions. These guidelines will be presented to the board at a later date.

The stricter policy is designed to keep students in school more often and to help the county school system meet state accreditation standards, which require an average daily attendance of 95 percent, school officials said.

The board also approved a revised policy on community use of school facilities that gives schools more flexibility to schedule school events. Under the revised policy, groups that want to use a school facility must wait until 30 days before the scheduled event before receiving final approval.

The revised policy also clarifies limits on use of schools by religious groups. These groups may still use school facilities for one-time special events or emergency use for up to six months, but the revised policy makes it clear that long-term use of schools for religious purposes will not be allowed.

Both policies were approved unanimously.

its proposal until a final decision on the classification. The Environmental Management Commission is scheduled to hear the proposal from DEM and Green during its meeting in Raleigh on Thursday.

Ms. Shinn said she supported any effort to clean the river, but she objected to the lack of information on Green's proposed management strategy for the river.

Council member Mildred Council voted against the proposal and Mayor Ed Carter abstained from voting.

While the proposal passed through the council easily, consideration of the city thoroughfare plan drew concerns from most council members, and was delayed for more public hearings.

A vote on approving the plan divided the council during Monday's meeting.

Ms. Council called for greater input on the proposal from residents of the city most impacted by the Department of Transportation's plan. She asked for, and was granted, at least two public hearings in neighborhoods in the northwest part of Greenville.

Darrell Hensdale, highway planning engineer with DOT, told the council his department has been working on a revision to the 1979 thoroughfare plan since 1985, and wanted a final decision from the council.

"We've been beating this thing to death trying to get it to the City Council," Hensdale said. "We just can't keep beating a dead horse."

Hensdale also said approving the concept of the plan would not lock the city into the specific changes proposed for the roadways.

Proposals to build new roads through established neighborhoods and changes to Fourth and Fifth streets drew the most fire from the council.

Council members Rufus Huggins and Inez Fridley joined with Ms. Council and Ms. Shinn in delaying approval of the plan until further hearings.

The council also granted verbal approval to City Manager Greg Knowles to proceed with a regional storm water drainage plan for Stanfordsburg Road and the area near the hospital.

The plan would be the first step to solving drainage problems on a regionwide basis, Knowles said. He said the concept was only in planning, but could include a joint venture by the city, developers and land owners to solve drainage problems for large areas of the city.

Smith Files Appeal

Smith will be allowed to continue in law enforcement until the hearing is completed, said David Cashwell, director of the Criminal Justice Standards Division.

If it is shown during the appeals hearing that Smith is innocent of the misrepresentation charges, his full law enforcement certification will be reinstated, Cashwell said today. If not, his suspension will stand and the commission will have the option of either reducing or lengthening the time it will be in force, the spokesman said.

Cashwell said that three men reported by Smith to have been properly certified to operate radar equipment have had their certifications suspended by the same commission, also on Aug. 25. He identified them as Paul Speight Jr., now a Pitt County jailer; David Syth, still a Winterville police officer, and Ralph Whitehurst, no longer in law enforcement.

The three also may request hearings, but Cashwell said that none of the three have at this point.

Cashwell said Smith signed documents showing that each of the three had completed a 40-hour training course and had 16 hours of supervised use of radar equipment. He said the commission believes, based on evidence presented, that the three did not have the required 16 hours of supervised use. He said the commission believes, however, that some supervision did occur.

"I haven't done anything wrong," Smith said, "and I am confident that everything will be straightened out during the hearing."

He said he did not attend the commission meeting during which his reporting of three officers' radar operation was being questioned. "I was busy on an important case at the time," he said. "and didn't feel like I could responsibly take the time away. Never in my wildest dreams did I know that such serious accusations were being made against me."

Whitehurst was dismissed from the Winterville police department last January, along with officers Harold Evans and Tony Smith. Speight resigned in November 1988. A State Bureau of Investigation investigation of the department's policies and activities was made, following those dismissals, at the request of Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood.

Smith was accused at the time of having directed officers not to arrest town officials and their family members for speeding or similar offenses. "I somehow think what was going on last January and this are connected," Smith said. "I know I haven't done anything wrong, but I just can't seem to get out of the limelight."

Smith has been in civilian law enforcement since 1986 and is a veteran of 24 years in the U.S. Army.

The Criminal Justice Standards Division of the state attorney general's office is the staff for the Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission, Cashwell said.

drugs to be the number one priority in the state of North Carolina. Right now North Carolina has about $1.5 billion worth of marijuana being grown."

The lieutenant governor said that marijuana is the largest cash crop being grown in North Carolina, and it is even bigger than tobacco.

"We usually find about three or four plots of marijuana each year on our property," said Steve Bond, who represented Champion International at the signing. "They are usually pretty small plots, maybe a couple of pickup truck loads."

A new law which requires the marijuana grower to forfeit the land he is utilizing if caught has driven many growers onto the property of the large landowners, said Tina Wilson, director of communications for Gardner. However, she said there is no penalty to the landowners who participate in the new program if marijuana is found on their property.

"Ten years ago, the marijuana was planted on half-acre and acre fields and it was easily spotted from the air," said Dean. "The growers are getting smarter and they grow in small clusters. Right now we reach about ten percent of the marijuana through the extraction program and we hope to get a lot more with this program. We have a chance to mobilize hundreds and hopefully thousands of people with (Operation: Marijuana Watch)."

Gardner said he got the idea for the program from a friend of his who owns large tracts of land in the western part of the state. Some of his friend's employees found what they thought was marijuana but they did not know what marijuana looked like, said Gardner.

"This first step is dealing with marijuana," he said. "We will have similar programs for dealing with crack and cocaine."

YOUR EYEGGLASS PRESCRIPTION

What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions"?

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?
A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?
A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?
A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?
A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?
A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580

Tatters

Wall More A Symbol Than A Barrier

Can it be that the most visible symbol of the Cold War will come down in the next few years? Already, the Berlin Wall appears to be in tatters.

President Bush predicted such an occurrence in an interview with British journalist David Frost. The president said the Berlin Wall could be dismantled during his presidency.

Given the startling and sometimes breathtaking developments in Eastern Europe over recent months, the presidential prediction cannot be brushed off. The bold move by Hungary to open its border to the West to the East Germans is yet more reinforcement that the wall will indeed fall. That decision defied the Warsaw Pact and drew accusations from East Germany that Hungary was smuggling human beings.

The result of that phenomenal open border was the largest mass migration from East Germany since the Berlin Wall went up in 1961. Bavarian border police reported 2,000 young East German refugees had arrived from Hungary through Austria by midmorning of the first day the border was opened. Austria said 5,000 refugees crossed its territory in the same time frame. The reaction of the East German people is an astounding condemnation of East bloc repression and a resounding celebration of freedom. It is an indication that the wall is now more a symbol than a real barrier.

At the same time it is well to understand that the wall, constructed by East Germany in 1962, is there for a definite purpose. And that purpose is not to keep westerners out, but to keep East Germans in.

Still the Berlin Wall is symbolic of repression, an image that is being shed in much of Eastern Europe. It is also an impractical artificial barrier that cannot be maintained forever separating people with a common heritage.

The known factor is that changes are taking place in the Communist countries which will never be turned back. The changes are affecting relations between Communist and capitalist nations that the world cannot fully comprehend even as it experiences the era.

The Wall embraces all that the West has come to visualize as the Iron Curtain. Improved east-west relations call for destruction of this ugly symbol of divisiveness, repression and bitterness. To accommodate better relations, the Wall will have to tumble. President Bush sees it happening before he leaves office, and, given Hungary's startling action and the response to it, his vision may be accurate. If it is, it will be a foreign relations benchmark for the Bush administration. It will also be a victory for freedom and the human spirit that seeks it.

'The reaction of the East German people is an astounding condemnation of East bloc repression and a resounding celebration of freedom.'

Skip The War, Go To The Marshall Plan

BOSTON — War-talk again. This time it's the war on drugs, inanimate chemicals that have acquired the human characteristics of an insidious enemy. Fighting words now fill the air now like bugle sounds.

The President calls for an "assault on every front." A Democratic critic, Joe Biden, says we need "another D-Day, not another Vietnam." A Republican supporter, Bob Dole, says: "It's a war on drugs, not a war on the American taxpayer."

The great massing of the metaphors has begun anew. We hear about attacks and weapons, front lines and battle plans. Even the media "mobilizes" its "arsenal" of war rhetoric to fill the headlines and leads.

What was it last time? The War on Poverty. The War on Waste. The moral equivalent of war. We leap to this language. Nothing but war seems to have the same power to mobilize, to engage people in some communal effort against a perceived enemy, a named threat. Only a declaration of war stir the juices enough to call us to sacrifice, to get civilians to join up.

The power of the military image remains so enormous in our minds that even pacifists are trapped by its vocabulary. Martin Luther King, Jr., used to talk about the army of non-violence, Gandhi about his soldiers. Religious leaders talk about holy crusades as if the model had been a moral mission and not a bloody mess.

To the American ear, surely to the veteran-President, the war on drugs is meant to conjure up that good war, World War II. A war that we were forced into by tyranny, a war that we won while remaining good guys. In our image-making we have expunged the firestorms and atom bombs and nisei internment, so we also have a war as cleansed of moral ambiguity as it is of mud.

What would happen to the power of the metaphor if we were to accept the message of someone like Paul Fussell whose new book on World War II, "Wartime," opens with the hard thought that ultimately, at the daily troops' eye level, even the "just" war "was a war and nothing else and thus stupid and sadistic." Would we so easily adopt the war cry?

If the martial sounds of this past week sounded false to my ear, it was not just a matter of linguistics. War is just the wrong metaphor for the drug problems of this country and this hemisphere.

War simplifies the complex. It draws sides, us and them, good and evil. War demands a human enemy, people that in time become dehumanized. It eventually wipes out the differences between the coca farmer and the drug baron, the street dealer and the user. The pregnant woman and the pusher can lose their distinction in the process of becoming simply enemies.

War has only one set of responses to a myriad number of situations: violence. It has only one approved pattern of behavior: power. Once begun it can only respond with more.

And, of course, war, especially a "just war", demands sacrifice, even of our liberties. The one end it can see or accept without humiliation is total victory — zero tolerance — or abject surrender.

Where imagery leads, policy follows. And the way we label things, talk and think about them, inevitably has an effect on how we behave. So the military cast to this declared War on Drugs easily becomes a disastrous way of thinking and planning. A variation of the old oxymoron of Military Intelligence. A one-dimensional fight.

This is the likely outcome of this military strategy, not only because an overwhelming proportion of the money goes to making prisoners of war. Not only because "ultimate victory," a Victory Over Drugs Day, is an impossible goal. But because this war, like most, offers the least to the poor. It emphasizes enemies and not allies, combatants and not civilians, aggression and not protection, destruction over building.

What is needed is less of an assault mentality and more of a healing one. But metaphor makes the mind-set, and so it appears that, once again, it's off to war we go. Too bad that this time we didn't skip the war and go directly to the Marshall Plan.

MEOW: In The Drug War, The Lion Roars Like A Pussycat

WASHINGTON — A number of critics of President Bush's drug program have pointed out the inaccuracy — and perhaps the danger — of talking about it as a "war on drugs."

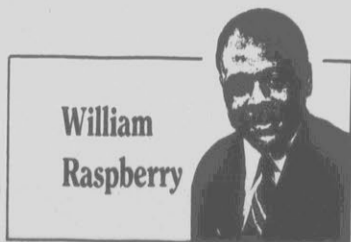

War, they argue, suggests the presence of an enemy so menacing, such a threat to national security, as to justify resistance by any means necessary. For all our talk about drug trafficking and its attendant violence, is that really how we perceive drugs?

Sometimes it appears that it is only the enemy that is taking the war seriously. Dealers in the big-city ghettos are already at war. In Washington, D.C., alone, drugs have claimed some 300 casualties so far this year, most of them victims of turf battles, drug deals gone bad, or attempts to collect drug money.

The drug lords of South and Central America have declared war. A group linked to the Medellin cartel has threatened to kill 10 Colombian judges for every drug suspect sent to the United States for trial. A measure of the seriousness of that threat is the fact that drug traffickers already have slain some 350 Colombian court officials since 1980.

But are the rest of us really ready for war? Is President Bush serious about war when he lays out a program but refuses to provide the money to pay for it? Is middle America ready for war when it targets the ghetto peddlers but refuses to aim its big guns at the so-called casual users who supply the bulk of the drug profits?

"This drug war is a peculiar war," Jesse Jackson said the other day in a speech at the University of the District of Columbia. "Treason abounds. Pushers and consumers have allied with the drug cartel against themselves, their religion and their country."

"This is a war where the enemy is exploiting the soft underbelly of our national character. For the greedy, drugs represent excess; for the poverty-stricken, money; for the pusher, a flash of power. Drug pushers are terrorists, and those who consume drugs are engaged in treason. We are the largest drug-consuming nation on earth, consuming $150 billion worth of drugs a year."

Jackson's description suggests what should by now be obvious: that if we are to have any hope of success, we must do simultaneous battle on a number of fronts.

We have to reduce supply. That means providing military help to those countries whose governments are under attack by drug cartels, helping the peasants in those countries find alternative cash crops, and also punishing the financiers and money-launderers here and elsewhere.

We have to reduce demand, both by moving harshly against users and by helping them to understand how their purchase of drugs is responsible for the drug murders and the destruction of neighborhoods.

The people in those drug-ravaged neighborhoods have to move against the drug traffickers and their customers with as much determination as an earlier generation moved against the Klan, the White Citizens Councils and the bigotted Southern sheriffs.

But we also need to take away the need for drugs and drug money. We have to find ways to ease the pain and hopelessness that lures the children of the ghetto into drugs, and we have to make certain that the youngsters who are tempted into selling drugs have a realistic hope for a legitimate livelihood.

We need to move drug education beyond the relatively useless notion of teaching young people what they already know: that drugs can kill them, make them unemployable and land them in jail. What they don't know and what we need to teach them is that working hard, staying straight and preparing for their future is a worthwhile sacrifice.

And we need to get smart. I still like the idea a friend suggested a year and a half ago: Confiscate the property of those convicted of drug trafficking and split the proceeds with those who turn them in.

As my friend noted, you and I might be afraid to "drop a dime on a pusher," but no such fear would inhibit those who already risk their lives selling drugs. The prospect of a minimum-wage job is meaningless to a youngster who stands to make several hundred dollars a day working for a dealer. But if he could earn that same money by turning the dealer in, he might find the courage to do it.

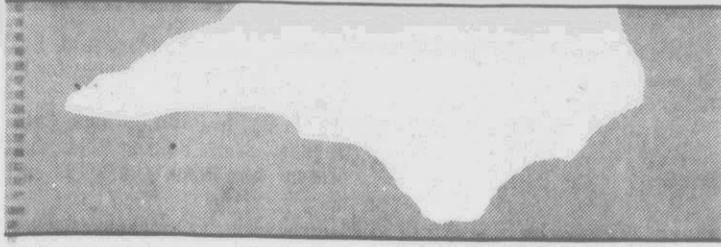

Unless we are prepared to move on every front, it's no good talking about a "war on drugs" — or even speaking of an anti-drug campaign as the "moral equivalent of war."

As one wag observed when the Carter administration used that phrase in describing the energy crisis, the lion's roar of the "moral equivalent of war" is betrayed by its pussycat initials: MEOW.

Coliseum Pleas

GREENSBORO (AP) — A four-year scandal involving the Greensboro Coliseum culminated in a plea agreement in which two former coliseum officials pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges.

The pleas came Monday in exchange for the dropping of 19 felony charges against each of them.

James Oshust, former coliseum manager, pleaded guilty in Guilford Superior Court to six counts of willfully failing to discharge duties. Kenneth Burgess, Oshust's former concessions manager, pleaded guilty to six counts of aiding and abetting the willful failure to discharge duties.

Oshust and Burgess had faced 19 counts each of felony embezzlement and other charges. Sentencing was scheduled for today. Each of the defendants faced up to 12 years in prison.

Remains Found

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Skeletal remains discovered by loggers near the Craven-Pamlico county line are those of a New Bern convenience store clerk who disappeared mysteriously from work in December, authorities believe.

Associate Medical Examiner Dr. Page Hudson has tentatively identified the remains as being those of Christine Grady, Craven County Sheriff Pete Bland said Monday.

Ms. Grady, 37, has been missing since Dec. 18, when police responded to an alarm at the Kwik Mart and found the store empty.

A cause of death has not been determined, Bland said.

The skeletal remains, identified as those of a white woman about 40 years old, were found around 3:15 p.m. Saturday, Bland said.

Ms. Grady disappeared from the Kwik Mart around 2:02 a.m. Dec. 18 after an alarm either on her body or on the counter of the store was activated. New Bern police officers arrived within one minute and found the store empty. No money or property was taken from the store, according to authorities. Ms. Grady's purse, coat and car had not been moved and there was no sign of a struggle.

McCain Out?

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Former state Democratic Party Chairman Betty R. McCain was expected to announce that she will not run for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate, a newspaper reported.

Mrs. McCain was expected to make the announcement today that she would not pursue a challenge to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in 1990.

She declined to discuss her plans Monday night at a fund-raiser in Wilson, saying she would announce her decision in the morning. But several sources told The News and Observer of Raleigh that Mrs. McCain mailed a letter Monday to supporters telling them she would not run.

Driver Shot

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — A Lenoir taxi driver working overtime on the midnight shift was found shot to death in his cab early Sunday, Caldwell County authorities said.

Horseback riders found Fritz Lovins dead in his taxi around 9 a.m. Monday in woods off N.C. 18 west of Lenoir.

Lovins, 58, was dispatched to Westgate Shopping Center on N.C. 18 around 2:20 a.m. to take two men to a convenience store about 5 miles away.

He radioed that he was taking the men to Gamewell Superette, also on N.C. 18 west of Lenoir, employees of Howard's Yellow Cab said Sunday.

When the dispatcher didn't receive word that Lovins had arrived, he tried reaching the driver by radio. He called police around 3 a.m.

Road Closed

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — N.C. 134 in Randolph and Montgomery counties was still closed Monday following a gas tanker wreck last week in which which 8,800 gallons of gasoline were spilled.

A Highway Patrol spokesman said the road from Ulah to Troy probably will remain closed until Wednesday or until all contaminated dirt is removed and hauled to a dumpsite in South Carolina.

Cost of the dirt removal will be around $140,000, the spokesman said.

Highway Patrol Trooper T.R. Blackwelder said the cause of the wreck still is unknown.

Study Pinpoints Failure By State To Clean Up Groundwater Areas

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina, which ranks second in the nation in household water wells, is facing a severe threat due to an ineffective state groundwater protection program, according to a study released today.

However, the chief of the state's groundwater section disputed many of the findings, saying they were based on outdated records and did not take into account voluntary cleanup efforts.

The study by the Clean Water Fund of North Carolina, released at news conferences in Raleigh and Asheville, said no cleanup has taken place at any of 84 sites of contaminated groundwater ranked "high priority" by the state, even though some sites had been discovered as early as 1979.

At 59 of the 84 sites there was no evidence of any fines, penalties or enforcement action by the responsible state agencies, even though 71 of the sites had chemical levels exceeding state groundwater standards, the report said.

Of the 84 sites surveyed in the study, 32 are active hazardous waste treatment facilities permitted under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act and continue to operate without groundwater contamination cleanup plans even though RCRA requires a cleanup plan as a permit condition, the report said.

Within three miles of 75 of the sites, groundwater is a drinking water source, the study showed.

"These findings not only demonstrate the inadequacy of the state groundwater protection program, but also show that, in key areas, the implementation of groundwater protection laws and regulations is inadequate," said Clean Water Fund spokesman Chip Hughes in a prepared statement. "In addition, efforts to protect groundwater have been hampered by the fractured nature of the state regulatory system and by the absence of effective interagency coordination."

But Groundwater Section Chief Perry Nelson said he was mystified by the way the study chose 84 critical areas from 1,000 active sites. And he said Hughes, who did the research, may have neglected to check seven regional offices for cleanup plans.

"Our files don't contain remedial action plans," Nelson said in a telephone interview. "Those are all approved at our seven different regional offices across the state. A great number of cleanup operations have been undertaken voluntarily."

"It's been our practice where we have not found evidence of intent or negligence but rather problems resulting from procedures which were fairly standard in the past ... to utilize the resources of the responsible party for responsible action and cleanup rather than to institute fines," Nelson said.

The Clean Water Fund recommended that the newly-formed Department of Environmental Health and Natural Resources establish an intra-agency task force on groundwater protection "to clarify responsibilities to protect groundwater."

"He makes some good points. I think, in his expressions of concern," said Nelson. But he said some of the consolidation Hughes favors has already been accomplished with the creation of the DEHNR.

The study investigated 84 sites with confirmed groundwater contamination selected from 6,834 suspected groundwater contamination incidents in North Carolina as reported by seven regulatory agencies. The study also ranked 22 of the sites as needing immediate attention. Those sites are in Henderson, Guilford, Davidson, Iredell, Cleveland, Cabarrus, Richmond, Scotland, Robeson, Brunswick, Lenoir, Onslow, Pasquotank, Halifax, Nash, Wake and Person counties.

North Carolina has an estimated 822,000 household wells and is fifth in the nation in the number of public water supply wells with about 16,000. In addition, groundwater replenishes 30 percent to 70 percent of the surface water from which the rest of the state's drinking water is drawn, fund officials said.

Groundwater contaminants range from nitrates and bacteria generated by private septic systems to toxic chemicals from hazardous waste facilities and cancer-causing gasoline components from leaking underground storage tanks.

Fort Bragg Tightens Security

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Security is being tightened at Fort Bragg as part of a Defense Department program to protect classified material, officials said.

The program will require searches of briefcases, handbags and packages upon entering and leaving restricted access areas, officials said.

"The inspections will be random and unannounced," said Maj. Doug Foster, a post spokesman. "They may not inspect each individual, but they will keep a pattern, and every person regardless of rank or position will be searched."

The Command Entry and Exit Inspection program will be conducted at buildings where classified material is processed to ensure the material is properly handled.

"The program's purpose is to deter and detect unauthorized introduction or removal of classified material," Foster said.

The program was started because of recent cases of classified materials taken from sensitive areas and given to foreign agents, although no such instances occurred at Fort Bragg, officials said.

The searches will not include items that are obviously personal, officials said. "They're not going to search an individual's person, wallet or change purses, clothing or cosmetic cases," Foster said.

Military police assisted by security personnel will examine items that include envelopes, packages, tapes, film and microfiche likely to contain classified information, officials said.

Former Aide Says Bakker Had Lavish Lifestyle

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — With testimony in the Jim Bakker trial sounding like a script from "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous," witnesses described the PTL founder's lavish homes, a $5,000 Christmas tree and a two-story, air-conditioned tree house.

With a wooden pointer, convicted former PTL interior decorator James Taggart used enlarged photographs of the Bakkers' homes Monday as he described the decorating work he did for the evangelist.

Taggart's testimony came three days after he was sentenced to more than 17 years in prison and fined $500,000 on tax evasion convictions.

Taggart and his brother David were convicted of evading $525,000 in income taxes on money they received from PTL. Prosecutors have indicated they might support a reduction in the Taggarts' sentences in exchange for testimony against Bakker.

Taggart, 35, said Bakker ordered him to give his Highland Beach, Fla., condominium "a very glamorous look." PTL bought and renovated the condo in 1982 at a cost of $500,000.

Taggart said he sought to give the oceanfront unit the "theatrical presence" Bakker liked — plenty of the mirrors and motorized drapes with none of the visible seams he hated.

Taggart said he decorated the condo for Christmas 1982 with a tree that cost $5,000 and featured hand-blown glass ornaments.

He said he used a special hoist to bring seamless, 25-foot cornices into the condominium. Draperies, bedspreads and headboards were added to a bedroom at a cost of $40,000. The master bedroom draperies could be opened and closed with a switch, he said.

Bakker is charged with 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy and faces 120 years and prison and more than $5 million in fines. Prosecutors say he used nearly $4 million in ministry funds to finance a lavish lifestyle.

"The Bakkers had a tendency to grow very bored with what they had," Taggart testified. "It was not unusual to see something completely replaced more than once."

The Bakkers' five-level Tega Cay,

S.C., parsonage underwent extensive redecorating, Taggart said. The master bedroom was changed completely at least twice and the living room was redone three times, he said, including a complete change of the brick on the fireplace.

Taggart continued his testimony today, taking the jury on a video tour of the presidential suite at the Heritage Grand Hotel, where the Bakkers stayed at times. The fourth-floor suite had 4,000 square feet, he said.

Reporters could not see the video screen, which was about 10 feet in front of the jury box, as Taggart described gold-plated bathroom fixtures, antique beds and mirrored walls in the bedroom.

Taggart said he completed the project within 12 working days.

"Who requested you to do the work?" prosecutor Jerry Miller asked.

"Mr. Bakker," Taggart responded.

Under cross-examination, Taggart testified that other celebrities stayed in the presidential suite, but they had to be cleared through Bakker's office.

Three PTL partners then testified, including a mother of 13 who has 21 grandchildren.

Sarah Combs of Spanishburg, W.Va., said she and her husband, a disabled coal miner were living on $400 a month. But they decided to use $1,000 of a $19,000 "black lung fund" that her husband received for medical compensation for a partnership in the Heritage Grand Hotel.

But she was never able to stay there, despite repeated attempts, she said.

"Every time I called, I would talk to someone else and they would give me a different reason why there wasn't any room," she said.

A request to speak to Bakker was denied, so she sent a certified letter to Bakker with her complaint. She never received a response and later filed a claim in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in South Carolina.

In all, 23 witnesses testified Monday, most about the Bakkers' lifestyle.

Don Hardister, the Bakkers' former bodyguard, testified that the Bakkers' son Jamie had a two-story tree house at their Tega Cay parsonage that at one time was air conditioned.

Miller asked what happened to the air conditioner.

"I know who removed it. I took it out and put it in the doghouse," Hardister said.

Other witnesses described details from the Bakkers' opulent lifestyle, including:

- Renovation projects at Bakker's Tega Cay home, including $140,000 of kitchen and dining room renovations; a $25,592 garage and atrium addition; a 15-by-18-foot closet added to the master bedroom and a bedroom for Jamie Bakker son at a cost of $92,278.
- A $570 shower curtain for daughter Tammy Sue's bathroom and $439 worth for throw pillows for her bedroom.
- An insurance policy that covered more than $158,000 worth of furs and jewelry, including a $45,000 ring. PTL paid the insurance premium, which totaled about $2,500 in 1985.
- Security equipment at the Bakker's Gatlinburg, Tenn., home valued at $83,000.
- A $10,910 presidential Rolex watch Mrs. Bakker purchased in December 1984.
- Undescribed procedures performed at a Charlotte plastic surgery clinic valued at $5,705.

At least once, Taggart said, Bakker joked about the finances for expensive trips.

On a trip to Palm Springs, Calif., Taggart said, Bakker told those present to "thank the PTL partners."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Bakker appeared on the "Phil Donahue Show," saying they never intended to misuse PTL contributions.

"We know inside we are not guilty," she said in the interview recorded Friday and broadcast Monday. "If I was guilty, I'd hide my head, but when you're not guilty you're not guilty."

If contributions were misused, it was never by intent, she said.

"The wonderful thing about God is he says you give and it shall be given to you. I thought that was what was happening," she said. "I thought it was coming to us as a result of honoring his word."

She said she might have become insensitive to others when money flooded the ministry.

"There are times when you almost forget that $100 extra to spend to some people is all they have to spend," she said. "I could go spend $100. I really forgot that some women can't do that."

Smelly Fog Irritates Residents Along Pamlico River

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAYVIEW, N.C. — Residents along the Pamlico River complain that a fog that smells like rotten eggs sometimes hangs over the river, and officials say they are starting a study to find the source.

"It's got a bad odor, no doubt about it," said Dr. M.J. Gregg, a retired veterinarian who lives on the north shore of the river.

"If we have high humidity, it will lay right down on the river. It smells like rotten eggs."

Gregg and others along the Pamlico River in Beaufort County have sniffed and snorted for years during occasional encounters with the irritating vapor that rides ashore on southwesterly winds.

Officials of the state Division of Environmental Management said "choking fogs" have been the subject of eight to 15 complaints a year, but the division has been unable to determine exactly what causes the problem.

A study under way this fall might help shed some light on the fog.

Researchers with monitoring equipment are planning to take air samples and compare their findings with observations from about 40 area residents who will keep journals of health symptoms. The study will cover an area from Washington, N.C., to Pamlico Point near the mouth of the river.

Participants in the project include the Air Toxics Unit of the environmental management division, Texasgulf Inc., the University of North Carolina School of Public Health, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, an environmental organization based in Washington. Collecting of data began recently and will continue through mid-October.

Victor Copeland, a spokesman for the Air Toxics Unit in Washington, said previous investigations had indicated that the irritants probably were acidic aerosols. Tests for specific types of airborne materials have been conducted, he said, but "nothing has really been conclusive."

While some area residents blame the problem on the Texasgulf Inc. phosphate mine and fertilizer plant on the south side of the river, Copeland declined to speculate.

"I don't want to prejudice anyone as to what it might be," he told the News and Observer of Raleigh in an interview published today.

According to the environmental management division, people have complained about a pungent, biting odor that is sometimes strong enough to burn their eyes, nose or sensitive parts of their face. Gregg, who has lived on the north shore of the river for 35 years, said the fog has awakened his wife from sleep and has burned the skin of some neighbors.

By his account, the fog is elusive. There is no set time of the day or night when it appears, and it varies in strength among the shaded residential areas that grace the shoreline.

"Sometimes we smell it and others don't, and sometimes they smell it and we don't," he said.

The constant aspect, Gregg said, is that it usually comes on a southerly or southwesterly wind. That's why he points to the Texasgulf plant 3.5 miles away across the river as the likely source.

J. Randolph Carpenter, a Texasgulf spokesman, said the company had fielded complaints and questions about the discharges from smokestacks at the huge complex and welcomed the study as a way to determine what is causing the fog. He said the company was providing weather data and funding for the study.

Carpenter said the mining and fertilizer complex has at least 25 air quality permits that regulate what the company can discharge. The emissions, which include fluoride and sulfur dioxide, are within limits allowed by environmental agencies, he said.

The parts of the plant that people usually see from the river, he said, are huge calciners or ovens that heat phosphate rock to 1,500 degrees Fahrenheit. "What you see coming off is largely steam," he said.

Non-Smokers Get Break

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tar Heel motorists who refuse to smoke can cut their automobile insurance premiums by 5 percent through a program offered by a Massachusetts company.

Hanover Insurance Co. of Westchester, Mass., has become the first company to receive permission from the state Department of Insurance to offer reduced auto insurance rates to non-smokers.

"Our statistics have clearly shown that households that do not have any smokers have fewer accidents in their homes and cars," said Charles C. Lynch, a general manager for Hanover in Richmond, Va. "It's a simple matter of distraction, and for smokers, it's one more thing to take their minds off the road."

To illustrate the savings, Lynch cited a family of four that owns a 1988 Ford Taurus sedan and a 1985 Nissan pickup truck. If the parents are non-smokers, they would pay $225 for collision and comprehensive insurance every six months. That would be $12 — or $24 a year — less than the premiums charged to smokers.

Lynch said a study sponsored by Hanover showed non-smokers had 10 percent fewer claims than smokers. Hanover offers similar reductions on auto policies in other states and to owners of homes and boats.

The rate reduction was approved Aug. 18 and applies to collision and comprehensive insurance but not to liability coverage. State law requires all drivers to carry liability insurance, and lenders typically require borrowers to buy collision and comprehensive coverage on their cars.

Bernard Cox, a policy and rate analyst, said Hanover was the first company in the state to demonstrate statistically that non-smokers posed a lesser risk of accident than smokers.

Reagan Had Blood Clot Last July

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The horseback riding accident that doctors believe produced the blood clot removed from former President Reagan's brain last Friday also caused a similar but smaller clot last July that disappeared without surgery, Reagan's doctor has disclosed.

According to a report in Monday's New York Times, Dr. Thoralf M. Sundt, chief neurosurgeon at the Mayo Clinic and the head of the team caring for Reagan, said the earlier clot showed up on medical tests performed in Los Angeles several days after the accident, which occurred July 4 on a Mexican ranch.

Doctors watched the clot, called a subdural hematoma, on periodic brain tests until it disappeared spontaneously, Sundt told the Times. Sundt could not be reached Monday, but Reagan spokesman Mark Weinberg confirmed the report.

Because the clot had developed following the July head injury, Reagan's doctors at Mayo recommended repeating the brain test, called a CAT scan, as part of his routine physical examination last week to make sure the problem had not recurred, Weinberg said.

He said Reagan, 78, had not been suffering from headaches, drowsiness, muscle weakness or any of the other symptoms frequently produced by a subdural hematoma, which can press upon the brain and affect its function. But the scan disclosed a new, larger hematoma located farther forward than the original one. Both clots formed on the right side of the head, in the space between the brain tissue and its tough outer covering, the dura mater.

Reagan, who is recuperating at St. Mary's Hospital, a Mayo Foundation hospital in Rochester, Minn., has reportedly received hundreds of cards and messages from well-wishers. He is continuing to make an excellent recovery from last week's surgery and may be able to return to California at the end of this week, according to a statement issued by Weinberg Monday afternoon.

Tire Fire

Weary firefighters in Danville, N.H., walk along a wall of burning motor vehicle tires Monday before relieving colleagues who had spent the night fighting a fire at a tire dump. Officials said more than one million tires were in the dump. They estimated the fire would burn for two weeks before it could be extinguished.

Dress Codes Are 'In' For Most High Schools

By Curt Anderson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For more and more high school students, mousse abuse is taboo. So is hair down to there. And though they don't necessarily have to dress for success, some say they must dress under duress.

Along with perpetual peer pressure to wear "in" clothes and sport the latest trendy haircuts — whether it's a Batman insignia or a moussed-up do — American teen-agers are facing dress and hair codes that impose official ideas of fashion.

In a flashback to the '60s, some students are protesting what they consider infringements on their right to free expression.

"It's very regrettable when educators fail to see that kids have rights and that breathing down their necks about ways they should be able to express themselves is not encouraging real education," said Leanne Kats, executive director of the National Coalition Against Censorship.

In Henry County, Ga., for example, about 100 students picketed the school superintendent's office last month when dozens of boys were sent home because their hair touched the collar in violation of a new policy.

The same rule in Jasper, Ala., resulted in an angry school board meeting.

Shelia Whitfield, whose son Duane, a 10th-grader, was sent home because his hair is an inch longer than allowed, complained the rule was an invasion of privacy.

"His hair doesn't have anything to do with his education," Mrs. Whitfield said.

New dress codes are in effect in several Texas school systems, mostly to guard against offensive or suggestive T-shirts, and in Baltimore, where furs, costly jewelry and leather coats were banned.

Dozens of other systems, including some in Michigan, New York and Louisiana, have adopted voluntary dress codes for their schools to consider.

Gary Marx, a spokesman for the American Association of School Administrators, said stricter dress and hair codes have not yet become a national trend but sentiment is growing to strengthen such rules.

"We do see indications here and there that schools are thinking about dress codes and how students are attired may affect their education and the education of others," Marx said. "I think there is a sense in society that we sometimes act the way we look."

Lawrence Tribe, a Harvard University law professor who specializes in First Amendment issues, said the U.S. Supreme Court has never dealt directly with the issue and the lower federal courts have ruled both ways.

The high court would likely side with school boards if it ruled today, he said.

"I think it stretches the free expression clause to apply it in schools," Tribe said. "The power of compulsory education already involves a major intrusion into a person's ability to express himself. The school board has a broad range of powers over its students."

In Baltimore, schools' spokesman Dick Holden said the new code was aimed at eliminating "the uniform of the drug culture." He said the clothes also are too expensive for some students to afford, leading to violence.

"The dress code became a major topic of discussion after some violent incidents in our schools involving outsiders stealing, or attempting to steal, jackets or jewelry of our students," Holden said. "Clothing had become attractions to criminal activity."

The New Orleans school board instituted a voluntary uniform policy for schools, and spokeswoman Rose Peterson said about 100 schools have "adopted some kind of uniform."

She cited three reasons: "It's a security issue. When the schools are wearing a uniform, it's easy to recognize an outsider. For the parents, they perceive it as a lot cheaper. And it takes the pressure off kids to wear designer clothes."

In Clovis, N.M., a one-year trial dress code is in effect after students rewrote an old one that banned shorts for boys but allowed miniskirts for girls. In protest, some boys wore miniskirts to school.

The new policy allows shorts and skirts if neither is shorter than 5 inches above the knee.

And in San Antonio, a 13-year-old student was forced to get rid of two Batman emblems emblazoned on each side of his head with bleach. Officials banned him from class until he came back with a flattop.

Among students, though, opinions can be divided.

Many see the restrictions as arbitrary, and others worry that some adults assume a given style of dress means a student is taking drugs or involved in illegal activity.

Still others, including student body President Jason Thompson of Allen High School in Dallas, support policies encouraging neat appearance.

"Fads come and go," Thompson said. "Last year, when stud earrings were allowed for the first time, almost everyone went out and got his ear pierced. But now you don't see earrings that much."

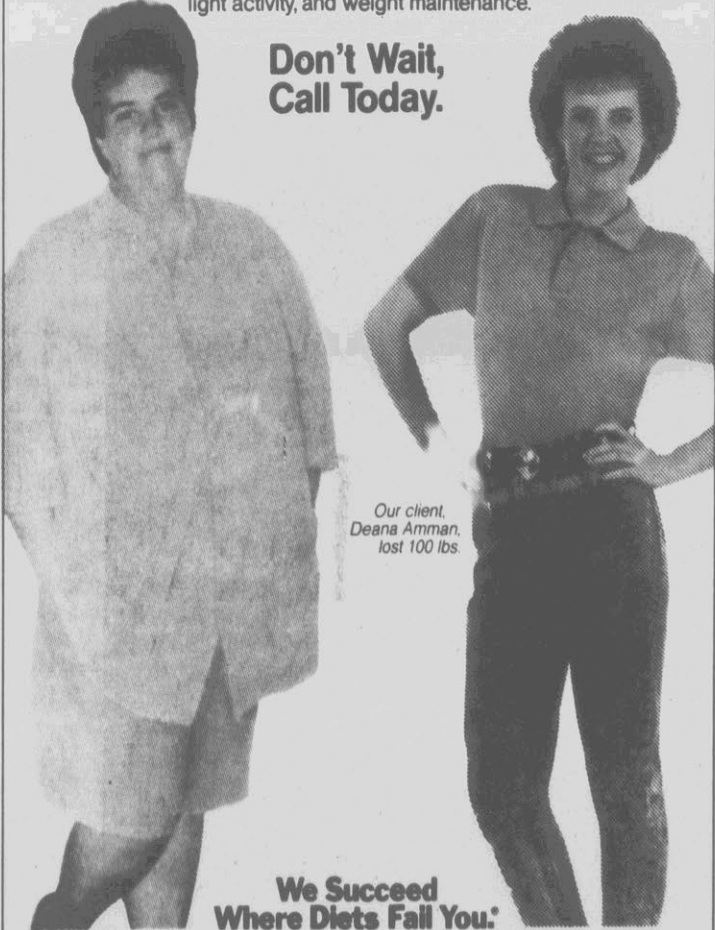

"Nutri/System helped me take off 100 lbs. and put on a pair of tight jeans."

"I can wear anything now: tight jeans, miniskirts, bikinis. I look great in everything. And I didn't have to starve myself. I ate delicious foods like Thick Crust Pizza, Chocolate Pudding and Waffles. The Nutri/System food is low in calories. But it sure didn't taste like that to me."

Almanac Says Coin Is Needed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEWISTON, Maine — The Farmers' Almanac, renewing its crusade to revamp the nation's coinage and currency, is promoting a $1 coin to replace the dollar bill to pinch a few pennies for Uncle Sam and taxpayers.

The almanac's 1990 edition, just off the presses, also calls for the elimination of the penny and 50-cent piece. The new $1 coin could be called the Columbus Dollar, honoring the explorer who discovered the New World, the publication said.

The almanac endorses a bill introduced by Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., to direct the Treasury to mint and circulate the Columbus Dollar and halt production of the $1 bill 18 months after the coin is placed in circulation.

Under the new system, the little-used $2 bill likely would become the most popular piece of currency, says almanac editor Ray Geiger.

"The Farmers' Almanac, 173 years old, has always been a champion of the common man, and we think the common man is entitled to protect his right to a coinage that's sensible and realistic," he said in an interview.

Navy Secrecy Keeps Vow To Secrecy Secret

By Tracy Thompson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Navy has its secrets, which Richard D'Aleo says he understands. What he doesn't understand is why the document he signed six years ago promising never to reveal those secrets is now a secret. So he's sued the Navy to find out.

For its part, the Navy has nothing to say — either about its secrets or D'Aleo's promise not to reveal them. "It's a matter under pending litigation," said a Navy spokesman, Lt. James A. Wood.

But before this gets confusing, here are the basics:

D'Aleo, 46, is a retired Navy commander and computer expert who makes his living these days by writing how-to books. The topics aren't sexy, but they help feed this great data-hungry maw known as Washington. For instance, there was his first book, published in 1986: "FED Find: Your Key to Finding Federal Government Information" — more than 400 pages covering almost everything from how to get the latest caseload data on federal courts to how to locate government patent catalogs.

"I'm a frustrated reference librarian," he said. "I love organizing information." Which brings him to his current project, a book tentatively titled "Keeping Secrets: How to Protect Information."

D'Aleo came up with the idea three years ago. Based on a simple premise — "Everybody has secrets," he said — it is designed as a layman's guide to how to protect those secrets, either from physical intrusion or from the computer prying of employees or co-workers. For the really high profile, the paranoid, or both, he plans a chapter on how to protect information from electronic surveillance.

The whole idea has been nothing but trouble.

In 1983 and 1984, D'Aleo worked on a special project for the Navy, the nature of which he won't describe except to say that it had to do with computers and counterintelligence. Like anyone else in that position, D'Aleo was asked to sign two "non-disclosure agreements" in which he promised never to reveal the classified information he was being given access to.

He signed readily, he said. "I was just doing my patriotic duty."

In 1986, when he started his current project, he said he decided to reread those agreements to make sure he wouldn't violate them. He said he also wanted to see if, as is now common, they gave the Navy the right to censor his manuscript before he took it to a publisher.

But there was a hitch: the Navy wouldn't let him see the agreement.

"It was a typed original," he said. "There wasn't a copy for me." What's more, he doesn't have a detailed recollection of what it said. "I don't have a photographic memory."

So D'Aleo did what any good researcher would do, and filed a Freedom of Information Act request. It was denied. He appealed. That was denied, too. That took from October 1986 to August 1987. The first denial, dated November 1986, routinely told him "documents requested are being withheld in their entirety" because they were classified. In its August 1987 denial, the Navy elaborated somewhat on that position. "By this action, we intend neither to confirm nor to deny the existence of any particular document within that file," the Navy's letter said in part.

D'Aleo was pondering his next move when one afternoon in March 1988 two plainclothes Naval Investigative Service agents knocked at the door of his Annandale home.

"They said they'd heard I'd been speaking publicly about the operation five years ago," D'Aleo said. "They said, 'We'd like you to tell us who you were speaking to and what you said.' I said, 'No, I won't.'"

The truth was, D'Aleo said, he didn't remember. He thinks he mentioned to someone at a party about that time that he had been "involved in an operation" involving naval counterintelligence some years earlier, but he's certain he spilled no secrets.

The agents left after reminding him that he was still bound by the non-disclosure agreements he had signed in 1983 and 1984. D'Aleo said it slipped his mind to mention at the time that it was hard to abide by the terms of an agreement the Navy wouldn't let him see.

"I just tried to get them away as soon as possible," he said. "I was frightened."

Shortly afterward, he contacted the Washington chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, which filed suit on his behalf in U.S. District Court late last month. That lawsuit asserts that the Navy has violated D'Aleo's First Amendment rights by scaring him away from writing his book.

"It's ironic," said D'Aleo's ACLU lawyer, Gary M. Stern. "This book is about how to protect classified information, and he's being chilled from doing that."

The Navy has until late September to reply to the lawsuit, but in the meantime, it's maintaining a Sphinx-like profile on the whole affair.

Navy spokesman Wood did volunteer, however, that he himself has signed a non-disclosure agreement promising not to reveal any of the Navy's classified information, and that the Navy didn't give him a copy either.

Does that agreement require him to submit any articles he writes to the Navy for pre-publication review?

"I don't recall," Wood said.

Bush Seeks School Children's Help In Fighting Drugs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is enlisting school children into his war on drugs in a televised appeal aimed at urging young people not to "slam the door" on their futures.

Bush's television address today comes as the administration insists its week-old drug policy does not include a U.S. combat role in Latin America.

There is "no contemplation" of sending U.S. servicemen to fight drug wars in Colombia, Peru or Bolivia, even as escorts to local missions, Bush said on Monday.

The president's midday school address, to be broadcast from the library in the White House living quarters, was to be carried live by all four networks, said presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Additionally, Fitzwater said 70,000 schools with satellite reception capability were asked to make the broadcast available to students.

"The president will urge children to talk to their parents about drugs, to improve communications. He'll discuss their future in terms of saying drugs will slam the door on your future," he said.

"It will be an inspirational discussion," Fitzwater added. "His final message will be they (students) can make a difference."

White House Communications Director David Demarest said that, in preparing the address, "there was a fair amount of consideration of who the message was directed to. It is not heavily laden with particular policy information."

"It is more of an effort to communicate to the kids why drugs or doing drugs is a mistake and why it's important for kids to try and help other kids, for them to intervene in someone else's life," Demarest added.

Bush on Monday sought to dispel new speculation, raised by the weekend disclosure of a secret White House directive, that he was prepared to send U.S. combat forces to the three Andean drug-supply nations of Colombia, Bolivia and Peru.

Speaking at a ceremony honoring the Treasury Department's 200th anniversary, Bush said no U.S. military forces.

Martinez Ordered Held Without Bail

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The reputed money man behind Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel has been denied bail after pleading innocent to money-laundering charges.

Eduardo Martinez Romero, the first of Colombia's "Extraditables" brought to the United States without trial, is accused of helping the cartel launder about $1.2 billion in drug profits through U.S. banks.

The cartel, based in the Colombian city of Medellin, is believed to supply 80 percent of the cocaine in the United States.

During an arraignment Monday, U.S. Magistrate Joel M. Feldman ordered Martinez held without bond after prosecutors contended he was likely to flee the country before a trial.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Wilmer Parker III told Feldman that Martinez could easily afford to lose whatever bond amount was set to ensure his return.

Defense lawyers Ed Garland and Oscar Rodriguez said the 36-year-old Martinez was a highly educated businessman with a loving wife and four children.

The defense attorneys, asking the judge to place Martinez under house arrest pending his trial, said he had never come to the United States to set up money-laundering arrangements. They said he had only been in the country to bring his children to Disney World.

Explosion Hits Chemical Plant

MORRIS, Ill. — An explosion and fire struck a chemical plant early today as workers were repairing damage from a blast three months ago, authorities said. One person was killed and at least 15 were reported injured.

At least six of the injured were in critical condition, said hospital officials.

Witnesses said they could see flames shooting into the air from 10 miles away. Others said they were jolted awake by the explosion at the Quantum Chemical Corp. plant near this town 50 miles southwest of Chicago.

Releasing Feelings Is Healthy

By Jeannie Golden

If you're rejected by someone you love, you may become physically ill, unable to eat, sleep or concentrate. You may even feel that life isn't worth living.

If you need help, counselors and physicians are only a phone call away. But, for the most part, these are normal reactions.

Give yourself permission to cry, to feel the pain. Sometimes, you'll want to be alone, thinking, writing, tending your wounds. At other times, friends are a welcome source of support. Seek out those who listen, care and give comfort.

Feelings of anger can overwhelm you. Fortunately, there are harmless ways, in privacy or with supportive friends, to let your anger out: pound pillows, go into the woods and yell, write a letter to him or her, put it in a box, stomp it, burn it. Anger is a part of grief, and like sadness, releasing it is healthy.

A sense of freedom may surprise you. Possibly you've been unhappy for a long time. Maybe you were in the relationship, not because you chose it, but because you settled for it. You may be relieved it's over.

Two books, "How to Break Your Addiction to a Person," by Howard

Your Mental Health

Halpern, and "Rebuilding," by Bruce Fisher, give excellent suggestions for self-discovery, self-acceptance and starting over.

What you don't need right now is another relationship. While you're running on empty, any relationship you begin is apt to be empty, too. Instead of trying to get someone else to meet your needs, work on meeting your own needs and you'll find loneliness diminishing.

The amount of time needed to process grief differs among individuals. You may get stuck in the blaming-your-partner phase; a friend may feel sadness longer. In the long run, though, you'll need to concentrate on how to avoid similar relationships in the future.

Grieving a loss is necessary and healthy; obsessing over your loss is not. Feeling sadness and anger is grieving. Obsessing involves blaming yourself, feeling like a failure, putting yourself down.

You might think, "If only I had been nicer. I'm no good. Nobody will ever want me."

Stop these obsessive thoughts by concentrating on positive self-talk. Tell yourself, "I'm lovable. I deserve good relationships. I can take care of myself."

Changing patterns in your life now is critical. Because your stress level is already high, don't add other stressors such as changing jobs, dieting or quitting smoking. Instead, do fun and simple things; rearrange furniture, try a new haircut, take an evening class, build a bird house, go bowling.

Experiment with different ways of interacting with other people, too. If normally shy, start a conversation with a stranger. If you've always been serious, crack a few jokes.

But don't expect to feel comfortable. Trying new behavior is like your first jump from a high dive — with eyes shut, knees shaking and teeth clamped. But do it, and each time it gets easier.

Thinking of yourself as your own best friend is a frame of mind that leads toward recovery. Be as good to yourself as you would be to a new love: fix a great dinner, buy a present, take a trip — just for you.

Letting go of the relationship is like learning to walk. You take small steps, slip, fall, rest a moment, pick yourself up and go again.

You gather strength and momentum as you inch along. Soon you'll walk without falling, then run, and dance, even climb mountains.

A helium balloon provides a symbolic way to let go and move on. Write a letter to your lost love, something like, "I'm finished with this relationship. I release it. I'm going on with my life."

Tie the paper to the balloon, find a quiet place — maybe even a place that was special to the relationship. When you're ready, let go the balloon — and the relationship with it. From now on, you can choose how and with whom you'll spend your time.

Although you couldn't recognize it at first, the loss has given you an opportunity to re-evaluate your options, to decide what you want in life.

Taking responsibility is your number one priority.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged higher in early trading today following a sluggish session on Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 stocks was up 1.52 to 2,705.93 in the first half-hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 5 to 4 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 544 up, 402 down and 561 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 20.2 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The outlook for interest rates continued to figure importantly in investors' thinking. The market appeared to be marking time before the release of several government reports on the economy at the end of this week that could signal the direction of interest rates and inflation.

Today, interest rates were up slightly as the bond market gave up some of the small gains achieved on Monday.

Among actively traded blue chips, Union Carbide was up 3/4 at 29 7/8, Dow Chemical was up 3/4 at 102 1/8, General Motors was down 1/4 at 49 and American Telephone and Telegraph was up 1/4 at 40 1/4.

The early volume leader, Data-point, was up 1/8 at 6. A shareholder is trying to oust takeover specialist Asher Edelman as Datapoint's board chairman and install his own slate of directors.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up 0.14 to 193.44. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.01 at 382.44.

On Monday the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 20 points at midsession, closed with a 5.13 loss at 2,704.41.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 533 up, 934 down and 508 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 126.02 million shares, down from 154.09 million in the previous session.

Deficit Edges Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The deficit in the broadest measure of U.S. trade edged up to $30.99 billion from April through June as the country recorded its first deficit in services trade in more than three decades, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the deficit in the current account was up 2 percent from a $30.39 billion deficit in the first three months of the year.

The current account, also known as the country's balance of payments, is the most important trade statistic because it measures not only trade in merchandise but also trade in services. The services category primarily reflects investment flows between countries.

The services portion of the current account fell from a surplus of $1.5 billion in the first quarter to a deficit of $176 million in the April-June quarter. It was the first quarterly deficit in the services category since 1958.

East Germans Flock To Hungary

East Germans have used Hungary's looser borders to flee to the West for years. That stream turned into a steady flood in May, when Hungary removed many border fortifications with Western neighbor Austria, and turned into deluge on Sunday when thousands of East Germans vacationing in Hungary were allowed to emigrate en masse.

The refugees, who came through three separate crossings, had completely filled five temporary camps near the Austrian border in Bavaria and officials were seeking more shelter in military barracks.

Chief federal government spokesman Hans Klein criticized East Germany for its public condemnation of the unprecedented exodus.

"It's not Ice Age verbiage, but rather Stone Age verbiage that they have reacted with," Klein told a news conference in Passau late this morning.

Soviet Politburo hard-liner Igor Ligachev arrived today in East Berlin, Soviet and East German reports said. It was expected he would discuss the refugee situation with officials.

Poles Seat Cabinet

ment: "We are prepared to cooperate with that government and develop our relations with Poland."

After the vote on the Cabinet, Communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski's nominee to head the National Bank, Communist Politburo member Wladyslaw Baka, was approved by a 230-43 vote, with 83 abstentions.

The Communists retain four posts in the 23-member Cabinet, including the strategic ministries of defense and internal affairs. They also will run the transportation and foreign trade departments.

Mazowiecki, a Solidarity editor who last month became the East bloc's first non-Communist prime minister in more than four decades, promised in a speech before the vote that his government would overhaul all institutions previously controlled by the Communists.

He said the country's economic crisis was swelling the ranks of the poor and called for immediate action against the triple-digit inflation, including Western tax reform, making the zloty convertible and creating a stock exchange.

"The new government will act under the pressure that at any moment the construction of democracy that only just started can collapse under the economic crisis," he said.

Marian Orzechowski, the Politburo member who heads the Communist parliament delegation, rose to support Mazowiecki.

Giants Kick Redskins Allegre's Field Goal Seals 27-24 Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — If it were a painting, Giants coach Bill Parcells might have stuck New York's 27-24 victory over the Washington Redskins in a closet.

"It wasn't a Rembrandt, I'll tell you that. We were struggling," Parcells said after watching the Giants and Redskins combine for three interceptions and four fumbles Monday night.

After blowing a 14-0 lead, the Giants battled back from a 24-21 deficit in the closing minutes to beat their NFC East rivals on Raul Allegre's 52-yard field goal as time expired.

Despite the turnovers, the teams combined to put on quite an offensive show. Washington quarterback Mark Rypien threw for 349 yards and two touchdowns and, not to be outdone, Phil Simms completed 11 of 19 throws from 255 yards and a pair of scores.

All told, Washington had 457 total net yards and the Giants accumulated 390.

"We were having trouble stopping them, that's quite obvious, and they had trouble stopping us," Parcells said. "It was a typical Giants-Redskins game."

Typical in the result, too. New York has now beaten Washington in six of the last seven non-strike games.

"We just had so many plays in there where we turned the ball over or had the ball in our hands and couldn't get it done," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said. "It was a bitter loss."

Former Atlanta Falcon Gerald Riggs, in his first regular season game with the Redskins, gained 111 yards but fumbled twice, each time as Washington was driving for an apparent score.

Also, Earnest Byner, acquired from Cleveland during the offseason, dropped a sure touchdown pass on the goal line that forced Washington to settle for a field goal.

Still, the Redskins could derive some satisfaction from their rally from a 21-10 fourth-quarter deficit to take the lead. A 6-yard scoring pass from Rypien to Art Monk made it 21-17, and 54 seconds later Monte Coleman took an interception into the end zone from 24 yards out.

In a game in which the offenses did a better job of stopping themselves than the opposing defenses did, the Giants won the game with two flawless fourth-quarter drives.

Down 24-21, New York got the tying field goal on a 54-yard march that was highlighted by a 44-yard pass from Simms to Odessa Turner.

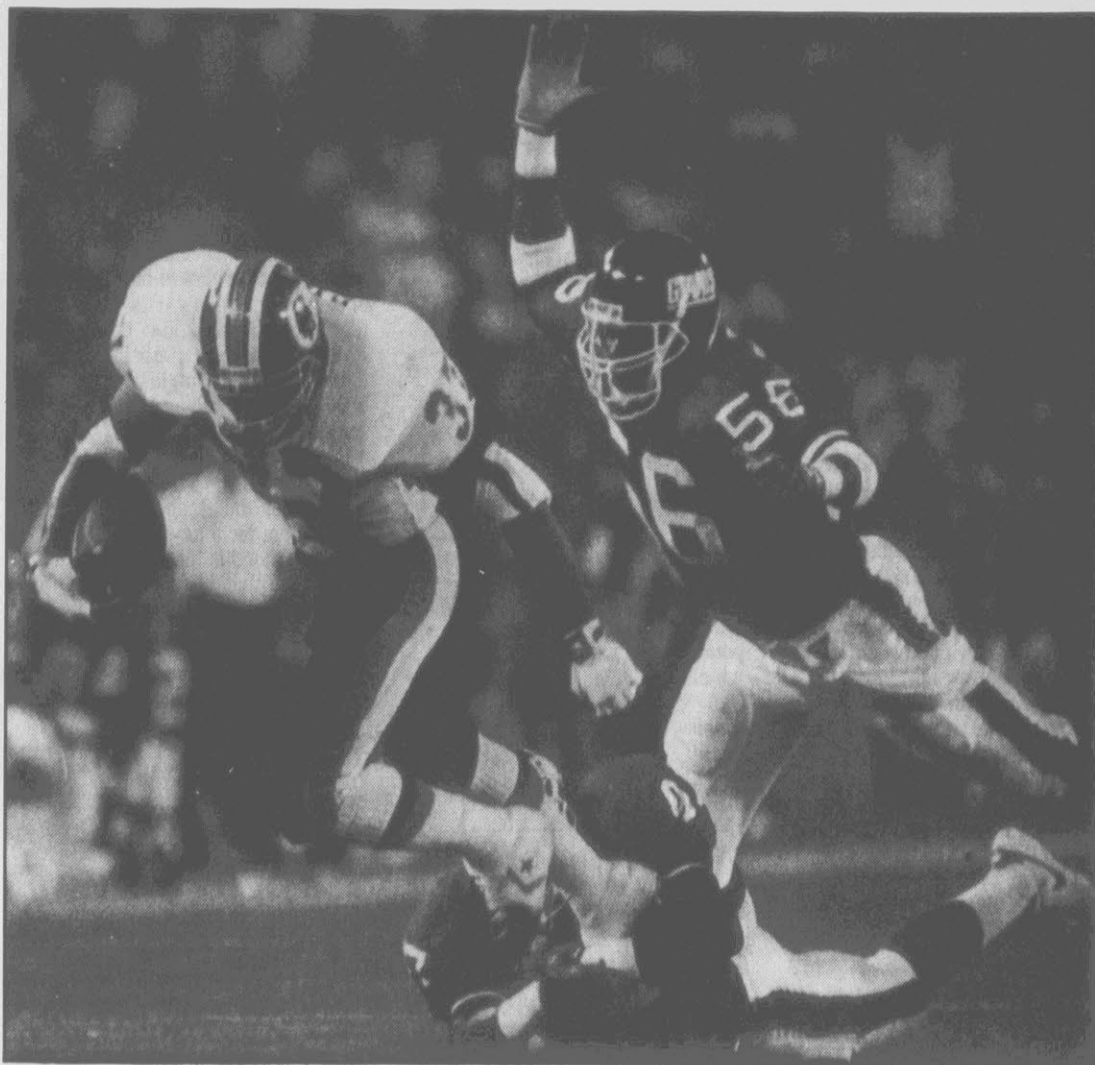

Then, after forcing Washington to punt, Simms directed the Giants on a beat-the-clock possession that covered 36 yards in 44 seconds. With six seconds left, New York turned to Allegre, who ended it with a kick that just crept over the crossbar.

"It felt good as soon as I hit it," said Allegre, who earlier missed a 42-yarder. "It looked like it was going straight and I felt it had the distance."

Although Rypien had the better numbers, Simms got the victory. Fighting against a defense that sacked him four times, the 11-year veteran did everything he had to do to get the Giants their second straight opening day triumph over the Redskins.

"Simms is a Pro Bowl quarterback," Coleman said. "He has the ability to bring his team back when they're behind. As usual, he did what he had to do."

Simms staked the Giants to a two-touchdown lead in the first half by throwing scoring passes of 30 yards to Turner and 62 yards to rookie Dave Meggett.

Vincent To Be New Baseball Commissioner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Fay Vincent, the former movie studio head who came to baseball last year as A. Bartlett Giamatti's deputy, will be elected commissioner on Thursday, The Associated Press has learned.

Vincent most probably will be elected to a 4½-year term, until April 1, 1994, said a source familiar with the owners' plans, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

Vincent

"It will be smooth, simple. No opposition," the source said on Monday.

A quarterly joint meeting of American League and National League owners is scheduled for Thursday at Milwaukee. Baseball's nine-man executive committee, which has been running the sport since Giamatti's death on Sept. 1, is scheduled to meet today at Milwaukee and the owners from each league will meet separately on Wednesday.

A commissioner can be elected only during a joint meeting of the leagues and must receive three-quarters of the votes, including at least five from each league.

Vincent, 51, is the former chairman and chief executive officer of Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. He joined Columbia in 1978 after David Begelman, the former chairman, was found to have forged checks.

Los Angeles Dodgers president Peter O'Malley and New York Mets president Fred Wilpon both praised Vincent on Monday but declined to predict what the owners would do.

"Although a lot of us have known him only nine months, he has impressed us more and more as we've gotten to know him," said O'Malley, who is on the executive council. "He's a very able, proven executive. He seems to be very frank, very honest, very open."

Wilpon, who owns 50 percent of the Mets, said he first was introduced to Vincent by Giamatti several years ago at a Mets game.

"I'm certainly very much in support of Fay Vincent as a person and as one who had the qualifications and qualities a commissioner should have," Wilpon said. "He's a very impressive guy and has an impressive background. He's intuitive, has very high integrity. He's thoughtful and very bright. He's a nice person. Sometime it's very hard to find a person who's both good and nice."

Vincent, who lives in Greenwich, Conn., managed to keep a low profile in movie industry, concentrating on the financial end of the business. Unlike Giamatti, a former president of Yale University, and Peter Ueberroth, head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, Vincent has never been in the public spotlight.

That doesn't bother Wilpon.

"The job itself will make him a much more public person because of the nature of job," the Mets owner said.

The executive council, meeting by conference call the day after Giamatti's death, named Vincent acting commissioner, an informal title that doesn't exist under the Major League Agreement. The executive council consists of four owners from each league and the league presidents. One AL spot is vacant following the resignation of Seattle Mariners owner George Argyros.

Argyros has agreed to sell the Mariners to a group headed by Indianapolis businessmen Jeff Smulyan and Michael Browning, who say they will keep the team in Seattle. The sale is expected to be approved in Milwaukee.

Also on the owners' agenda is a report from Vincent on the proposed international broadcasting contracts.

Tettleton, Bradley Keep O's In Chase

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Two ingredients — in addition to Cal Ripken — that the Baltimore Orioles must have contributing if they hope to challenge Toronto to the end finally came to life — Mickey Tettleton and Phil Bradley.

Tettleton hit a home run and Bradley had four hits to support Ripken's home run and three RBIs Monday night as the Orioles defeated the Chicago White Sox 6-3.

The victory, the Orioles' sixth in nine games, pulled Baltimore within two games of the Blue Jays in the American League East, and made Jeff Ballard the first AL pitcher to defeat every other team.

In the other games played in the AL on Monday, Seattle beat Boston 2-1 and Kansas City defeated Minnesota 6-1.

"This was crucial," Orioles manager Frank Robinson said. "To have lost would have been disastrous. If we fell behind four games in the loss column, it would have hurt a lot at this late date."

Just as crucial to the Orioles was the return of Tettleton, who hit his first homer since Aug. 2. This was his first starting assignment since Aug. 4.

"That sure was a shot in the arm, that home run and single," Robinson said of Tettleton. "Hopefully, he can give us a spark and some production out of that position."

Tettleton spent four weeks on the disabled list with a knee injury and had one hit in four at-bats since being reactivated Sept. 2.

"There wasn't any pressure to go out there and try and do something spectacular," Tettleton said. "I was just trying to get something out of every at-bat. I wasn't expecting any miracles."

For Bradley, who had been hitting .206 since the All-Star break, this was the second multi-hit game in 20 games. Prior to this season, Bradley had a .306 career average after the All-Star break.

"I don't want to downplay a 4-for-4 night, but it wasn't my best game swinging the bat," Bradley said. "I try to create a scoring opportunity every time I'm up. It seems like when we sit back and wait for the big hit we don't get it."

The Orioles got it from Ripken, whose two-run home run was just the latest feat in a recent attempt to carry the Orioles with his bat. Ripken, who also drove in Baltimore's first run with a sacrifice fly, has three doubles, three home runs and 10 RBIs, and is hitting .300 over his last nine games.

This was the first time since June 19 that the Orioles got home runs from their third and fourth hitters — Ripken and Tettleton.

The Orioles did get some help from the White Sox, who committed two errors and a wild pitch in losing for the third time in four games.

"We didn't execute. We didn't do the job," Chicago manager Jeff Torborg said. "They beat us the way they've been winning all year."

Torborg had to lift starter Steve Rosenberg, 4-12, after 11-3 innings.

"They were teasing off on him," Torborg said. "I had a gut feeling he wouldn't get any more outs tonight."

Each of the nine Chicago starters got one hit off Ballard, the league's winningest left-handed pitcher who improved his record to 17-7 with his sixth victory in his last seven decisions.

Robinson pulled Ballard with one out and nobody on in the seventh inning. Mark Williamson pitched 1½ shutout innings and then Greg Olson pitched the ninth for his 25th save, adding to his record total for American League rookies.

"I'm tired," Ballard said. "The last couple of games, around the sixth, seventh innings, my arm started getting tired. I had a couple of long innings there, the fourth and fifth innings, when we scored all those runs."

Royals 6, Twins 1

Larry McWilliams, making his first AL start, allowed three hits in six innings and broke a nine-game losing streak as Kansas City beat Minnesota at Royals Stadium.

The Associated Press

Kansas City pulled to within four games of idle first-place Oakland in the AL West.

McWilliams was acquired in a trade on Sept. 2 from Philadelphia, where he was 2-11 and had not won since May 13. The 35-year-old left-hander, 1-0 with Kansas City, walked none and struck out four.

McWilliams, who spent parts of 12 National League seasons with four teams, gave up his only run in the fifth when Kent Hrbek hit his 21st homer. Steve Crawford pitched two innings and Luis Aquino got the last three outs.

George Brett drove in two runs for the Royals and Jim Eisenreich hit a two-run triple.

Mariners 2, Red Sox 1
Seattle ended an 11-game home losing streak, beating Boston on six strong innings by Brian Holman and Mike Schooler's team-record 27th save.

The Mariners stopped a six-game losing string and sent Boston to its sixth straight defeat. The Red Sox fell 10 games behind idle Toronto in the AL East.

Holman, 6-9, won for the first time in nine starts. He gave up one run on five hits and Mike Jackson and Schooler finished with shutout relief. Schooler surpassed the Mariners' save record that Bill Caudill set in 1982 and matched in 1983.

Pirates Playing The Spoiler Role Cubs' Lead Grows To 3½

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Injuries spoiled the Pittsburgh Pirates early in the year. Now, they're spoiling the season for other teams in the National League East.

"We're not saying, 'Hey, let's try to ruin this for everybody,'" Manager Jim Leyland said Monday night after Pittsburgh won in St. Louis 3-1 for its third straight victory.

The Pirates won two straight games in New York before sending the Cardinals to their third consecutive loss. Second-place St. Louis dropped 3½ games behind Chicago, giving the Cubs their largest lead since Aug. 18.

"We're very disappointed we're not in it, and we're trying to win as many games as we can," said Leyland, whose team is 16½ games behind. "I'm probably jealous that we're not there."

In other games Monday, the Cubs beat Montreal 4-3, New York defeated Philadelphia 5-2, San Francisco stopped Atlanta 3-2, San Diego downed Houston 7-3 and Los Angeles beat Cincinnati 8-2.

Neal Heaton, 4-7, gave up one run on two hits in six innings. He had been 1-7 with a 4.32 earned-run average as a starter but went 2-0 with a 1.96 ERA as a reliever.

"We're finally healthy and we're trying to get something going for next year," Heaton said. "We've got no pressure. Just having fun."

Rookie Stan Belinda allowed one hit in two innings and 41-year-old Doug Bair finished for his first major-league save since Aug. 8, 1986, when he was with Minnesota.

The Cardinals have scored just four runs in their three losses.

"We give up 10 runs in three games and go from a half-game back to 3½ back," Manager Whitey Herzog said. "You can't expect shutouts every time. You have to score."

Cubs 4, Expos 3
At Wrigley Field, Jerome Walton

singled home the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning and Mitch Williams ended the game with a pickoff play.

Chicago sent Montreal to its seventh loss in 11 tries and dropped the Expos five games behind.

Greg Maddux, 17-11, gave up three runs in 6 1-3 innings. Mark Langston, 11-7, lost for the fourth time in five starts.

Rick Wrona led off the seventh with a double and moved up when second baseman Damaso Garcia made an error on Langston's pickoff throw. One out later, Walton singled to left.

Garcia and Mike Fitzgerald singled with two outs in the ninth against Les Lancaster. Williams relieved and, on a set play, bounced the ball to first baseman Lloyd McClendon, who snuck in behind pinch runner Jeff Huston and tagged him.

Montreal manager Buck Rodgers protested the final play, saying McClendon tried to deceive the runner.

Mets 5, Phillies 2

Kevin McReynolds hit a three-run homer in the first inning and an RBI single in the seventh as New York began a 10-game road trip by beating Philadelphia. The Mets, trailing Chicago by 4½ games, are 28-40 on the road this season.

Ron Darling, 13-12, gave up two runs on five hits in 6 1-3 innings. Randy Myers pitched 1 2-3 innings for his 23rd save.

Bruce Ruffin, 5-9, allowed McReynolds' 20th home run after an error by shortstop Dickie Thon and a single by Howard Johnson.

Giants 3, Braves 2

Will Clark's 105th RBI, a run-scoring single in the bottom of the eighth inning, sent San Francisco over Atlanta. The Giants stayed six games ahead of San Diego, while Houston fell seven games back in the NL West.

Grissom Wins Opening Contest

Glenn Grissom of 206 Ash St., Apt. 7, Greenville, is the winner of the first weekly Daily Reflector Football Contest. Grissom correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 32 games listed in last week's contest pages. Second place went to Melinda Thomas of Rt. 4, Box 333, Wilson. Thomas picked the winners in 25 of the 32 games. Her victory came on the basis of her point total guess. Her guess of 75 was just two off the actual total of 73, scored in Hawaii's 63-10 victory over Long Beach State. The tie between South Carolina and Virginia Tech was counted as incorrect if one of the teams was picked since the rules allow for the picking of a tie. The second of the 10 weekly contests appears in today's edition of the newspaper.

If successful, Evans will become the fifth world champion to have trained through the Bill McDonald Karate School. The fight is sanctioned by the top kickboxing organization, KICK (Karate International, Council of Kickboxing).

WASHINGTON — D.H. Conley's boys ran away from the field in a cross country meet held at Washington Monday.

The Vikings finished the afternoon with the low score of 30 points while Currituck was second with 49. Eastern Wayne finished third with 66, followed by the hosting Pam Pack with 79. West Carteret brought up the rear with 140 points.

Washington's Jeremy Hill took the individual championship with a time of 17:46, but he was the only Pack runner in the top 10.

ECU Picks Top Volleyballers

East Carolina Lady Pirate volleyball coach Judy Kirkpatrick has picked a freshman and a senior as her first offensive and defensive players of the week for the 1989 season.

Freshman Windy Mizlo took the offensive honor for her play in the All-Carolina Classic over the weekend at Chapel Hill. She sparked the Pirates to victory in the fifth game of their match with Appalachian State, scoring five services aces in six attempts in the deciding game of the match. ECU defeated ASU, 15-11, 15-10, 15-17, 5-15 and 15-1. They also topped UNC-Asheville, 15-3, 15-7 and 15-8, while falling to UNC-Chapel Hill, 15-1, 15-5, 15-2.

Michelle McIntosh was named the top defensive player.

ECU is now 2-2 on the year and will open its home season this weekend with the ECU Volleyball Invitational. Matches will be held in Memorial Auditorium on Friday and Saturday. The round-robin tournament will include ECU, Davidson, Baptist and Greensboro. Matches will be held at 3, 5 and 7 p.m. on Friday and at 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Hornets Send Kempton To Nuggets

DENVER — The Denver Nuggets acquired center Tim Kempton from the Charlotte Hornets for a second round pick in 1991.

Kempton (6-10, 245) has played two years in the NBA and one in Europe after graduating from Notre Dame.

Last season, Kempton averaged 6.1 points and 4.3 rebounds for the Nuggets.

"Tim is a solid player who we think can fill our needs for a backup center," Nuggets General Manager Pete Babcock said.

Moorman Allowed To Play At Marshall

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — The director of a Marshall women's services group says she's concerned about a football star's background but that it's hard to say whether the player should be denied a second chance.

Percy Moorman, 23, of Danville, Va., enrolled at Marshall two weeks ago and after clearing eligibility hurdles played in the Thundering Herd's 30-7 victory over Morehead State on Saturday.

Marshall coach George Champ was mum about Moorman's past until The Associated Press reported Saturday night that the player was ordered to a sexual offender program after being convicted of harassing an Oregon State coed over the telephone for several months.

Perkins: Testaverde Was Good

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — Ray Perkins didn't have to look at the films. Vinny Testaverde's poise and the scoreboard told him everything he needed to know about his quarterback's performance on opening day. "I've never graded quarterbacks," the Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach said Monday. "They either play good or bad. He played very good."

Testaverde, the first pick in the 1987 NFL draft, completed a career-high 81 percent of his passes (22 of 27) for 205 yards and one touchdown against the Green Bay Packers. More importantly, he didn't throw a single interception after leading the league with 35 last season.

Sunday's final score, 23-21, didn't reflect the Bucs' domination of the game. Nor did it show Testaverde scrambling for a key second-quarter first down or his leadership on a 13-play drive that burned the final 5 1/2 minutes off the clock.

Perkins spoke of the third-year quarterback's discipline, while Testaverde talked of playing smart. He's had more productive days passing as a pro, but none in which he did more things right.

"I don't need to do as much as I thought I had to," said Testaverde, whose longest completion was an 18-yarder to Mark Carrier. "The temptation is still there to go long, but I need to use good judgment."

Perkins found little fault in the decisions the 1986 Heisman Trophy winner made against the Packers. The Bucs blended 142 yards rushing with an effective short passing game to control the ball for nearly 38 minutes.

Testaverde led touchdown drives of 80, 45 and 78 yards in the first half. The Bucs' last possession didn't produce points but covered 51 yards after Mark Robinson's interception stopped the Packers' last threat at the Tampa Bay 8-yard line. The quarterback completed all four of his passes and the offense converted three third-down plays and one on fourth down.

"When I went to the huddle, I told the guys 'This is our Super Bowl today.' Championship teams hang on to the ball and run out the clock," Testaverde said.

"That's a different team than who we played a year ago," Green Bay linebacker Tim Harris said. "Last year, we were able to penetrate and put pressure on Testaverde and get him to make mistakes. This time, we were the ones getting frustrated."

"This was the best Vinny has played, by far," Perkins said. "The reason was discipline. He made a lot of smart decisions."

Testaverde admitted he probably made some plays Sunday that "I wouldn't have dreamed of" in 1988 when the Bucs were 5-11, when he led the NFL in interceptions and his marriage of less than a year failed.

He was divorced in the off-season, took up painting as a hobby and reported to training camp this summer determined to bury the past. To help the quarterback counteract colorblindness that may have contributed to the interception count, Perkins switched the Bucs' home jerseys from orange to white.

Lindy Infante took notice and, for the first time in more than three decades, the Packers wore white jerseys in Green Bay. It didn't matter.

"That colorblind thing has been blown out of proportion," Testaverde said. "I didn't have any trouble."

With eight of the next 10 games against opponents that won 10 or more games last season, Testaverde's new "don't force it, take what's there" attitude will be tested. Beating the Packers doesn't make the Bucs playoff contenders but a victory was vital with San Francisco next on the schedule followed by New Orleans, Minnesota and Chicago.

"It's only one-sixteenth of a season," Testaverde said Sunday, "but beating Green Bay is big. Now we'll go against the 49ers with some momentum, and increasing confidence."

Sheridan Says Pack Needs Improvement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina State coach Dick Sheridan has trouble dealing with expectations that place his football team in the upper echelon of the Atlantic Coast Conference despite two straight league victories.

"Our technique, the way we're playing leaves a lot to be desired," Sheridan said Monday at his weekly news conference. "We have a tremendous amount of improvement that's going to have to take place if we going to be able to win consistently."

Sheridan's comments come on the heels of a 38-28 win over Georgia Tech. Last year, the Wolfpack defense only gave up that many points in any one game twice. The 2-0 Wolfpack has also beaten Maryland.

"When you take (graduated starters) Fred Stone, Scott Auer, Michael Brooks and John Adleta — they were very consistent performers and gave a lot of maturity and leadership to the group," Sheridan said. "They were three all-conference performers out of the four."

"And then you take the two people who we were normally counting on to be starting linebackers for us — Clayton Henry and Ray Frost — out, you don't have the same group that we had a year ago," Sheridan said.

He's also worried about the injury bug. Offensive linemen Scott Adell and Clyde Hawley were hurt on the same play last week against Georgia Tech, the 95-yard Ken Swilling interception return.

Hawley has a severe bruise on his collarbone but will try to play against Wake Forest this Saturday.

Dick Sheridan

Adell separated his shoulder but will also try to play.

Henry injured his knee last week and has a "knee strain." He will not practice this week, but will dress for Saturday's game.

Tailback Anthony Barbour suffered a thigh bruise and a tight hamstring, but is expected to start Saturday.

The Demon Deacons were also on Sheridan's mind, especially quarterback Phillip Barhill.

"Just looking at Barnhill on film, I was impressed with him," Sheridan said of the junior who has the difficult task of replacing All-ACC quarterback Mike Elkins. "He's got a real strong arm and he's very mobile. It seems to me he has all the tools."

The Deacons' loss to Appalachian State worries Sheridan.

"It didn't help us for Appalachian to beat them," he said. "They'll be sharper, they'll be in a nastier frame of mind, they'll be better prepared than if they had beaten Appalachian."

"Defensively they're the same. They play the same 'eagle' package defense that they've played for years. It's sound, it's solid."

Smith, Dolphins Agree To Terms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Miami Dolphins rookie running back Sammie Smith, hoping to play in Sunday's game at New England, today began catching up on eight weeks of work he missed during a contract holdout.

Smith became the last NFL first-round draft choice to sign when he accepted a four-year deal worth an estimated $2.5 million on Monday.

The 230-pound Smith said he's about four pounds overweight but eager to play.

"I feel I'm in pretty good shape," the former Florida State star said at a news conference. "I've hit the weights the past six weeks as hard as I've ever hit 'em."

Two first-round picks, running back Barry Sanders of Detroit and cornerback Deion Sanders of Atlanta, signed contracts last week and played in their team's season-opener Sunday. Miami coach Don Shula declined to predict when Smith will be activated.

"We have to find out how much work he has to do to get into a position so he can help us," Shula said. "His big adjustments will be learning the passing game and blitz pickups."

Smith, the ninth player taken in the draft, said he didn't regret holding out but admitted his patience wore thin. At one point he talked about taking an office job with the NBA expansion Orlando Magic.

"It just got to be kind of tiresome, wondering whether I'd ever be a Miami Dolphin or not," Smith said.

Duke's Spurrier Plans Changes On Defense

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Duke head football coach Steve Spurrier is planning some changes for his defensive squad after it gave up 501 yards to Northwestern in last week's 41-31 victory.

The Bleu Devils, 1-1, are preparing for No. 17 Tennessee which it faces Saturday.

"Obviously we've got to do something different. We can't line up and play the way we did the other night or we don't have a chance," he said. "Defensively we definitely went backwards from the second half of the South Carolina game. We've got to do a much better job of coaching them. I still think we can play better than we're doing."

Spurrier went so far as to have his team practice Sunday, the first Sunday practice he has called in his three years at Duke.

"We need to take every minute, every hour we can with our players," he said. "We're a long way off from being a good team right now."

Duke defensive lineman John McDonald, who had two sacks against Northwestern, said the defense was relying on the offense too much.

"Against South Carolina, when the offense wasn't scoring, we played better defense," McDonald said. "When the offense was scoring, we didn't play as well. I think we pay more attention to the scoreboard than the opponents."

Tennessee, who upset UCLA 24-6 last week, are 2-0 and on a seven-game win streak, and Spurrier said Tennessee hasn't forgotten last year's 31-26 loss to Duke.

"Since we beat them last year, I'm sure they respect us or look forward to beating us," he said. "I'm sure their coaches were embarrassed by losing to Duke."

Offensively, Spurrier said he was pleased with junior quarterback Billy Ray, who completed 18 of 27 passes for 295 yards and four touchdowns against Northwestern, and senior tailback Roger Boone, who rushed for a career-high 201 yards.

"There was improvement in certain areas," Spurrier said. "Our running game was one of the best we've had since I've been here."

"Billy threw into coverage three or four times Saturday. We've got to get him to come to the short guy. He's (looking) downfield too long."

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

ARIES (March 20 to April 19): You will need the assistance of a cooperative fellow worker to be efficient at activities. You are about to make some new contacts with persons who are very practical.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 19): Don't press trying to make a friend of that individual who is reticent. You need more assistance in successfully putting across that business interest.

GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Take your family out to some charming places of entertainment. Don't be bitter because you are not getting as many benefits from the work that you do.

MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Conditions at home are best for entertaining your social group. A family member has some excellent big ideas for more assets.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You can accumulate experiences to make your work more productive. Some condition or repair at your residence requires more cash than you can conveniently pay.

Sometimes declarer must combine more than one line to achieve an optimum result. Both themes in this hand were discussed individually in recent columns. Can you spot them?
 There is nothing to the auction.

Once North could do no more than raise to two hearts, declarer had no interest beyond game.

West's jack of clubs opening lead was won in the closed hand. Declarer drew trumps and tried the diamond finesse. East exited with a club. Eventually declarer had to tackle spades, and it took only reasonable care by the defenders to assure themselves of three tricks in that suit and a one-trick set.

Going in, declarer had nine fast tricks. As long as the opponents could be compelled to broach spades, declarer would have to come to one trick in that suit by force. How could that be accomplished?

The only way is to make any other return fatal. After winning the opening lead and drawing trumps, declarer should cash the remaining clubs, discarding a diamond from dummy. Now the scene is set for an endplay.

Declarer must ignore the diamond finesse in favor of playing ace and queen of diamonds. It makes no difference which defender wins the trick—either must present declarer with the contract. A minor-suit return allows declarer to discard a spade from hand while ruffing in dummy. And opening up the spade suit gives declarer his 10th trick by force.

Sarah Is Expecting 2nd Child

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The Duchess of York, daughter-in-law of Queen Elizabeth II, is expecting another baby in March, Buckingham Palace announced today.

The former Sarah Ferguson and her husband, Prince Andrew, were "very pleased" to make the announcement, said a palace statement.

Andrew is the second son of Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, and the baby will be the monarch's sixth grandchild.

For the royal family, it provided a happy contrast to the announcement Aug. 30 that Andrew's older sister, Princess Anne, is separating from her husband of nearly 16 years, Mark Phillips.

If the new baby is a boy, he will supersede his sister, 13-month-old Princess Beatrice, to become fifth in line to the throne. A girl would follow Beatrice as sixth in line.

The palace said the duchess was "in excellent health," and was expected to fulfill her existing program of engagements, while scaling down her activities toward the end of the year.

Andrew, 29, a navy lieutenant, was attending a refresher helicopter course at Portland navy base in southern England when the announcement was made.

The red-haired duchess, who will be age 30 in October, was attending a literary luncheon, having recently written and published two children's books about a helicopter named Budgie.

"Budgie at Bendick's Point" and "Budgie the Little Helicopter" are dedicated to Andrew and Beatrice respectively.

Sarah and Andrew are both licensed helicopter pilots.

Kohl Outcasts Party Fight, Will Seek Re-Election

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BREMEN, West Germany — Chancellor Helmut Kohl has weathered a storm inside his party and won another term as Christian Democratic Union leader, but with the smallest majority of votes in his 16 years as party chairman.

Kohl was elected to the new term late Monday and will be the party's candidate for chancellor again during next year's tough election battle.

But the 59-year-old Kohl, who will be angling for a third term as head of the Bonn government, managed just 77 percent support from his own party faithful despite having no opponent in the vote for the chairmanship.

The sizeable no-vote expressed the discord within the Kohl's party after numerous local election losses over the past two years.

As the West German electorate has moved to the left, the traditionally conservative Christian Democrats have drifted toward the center, angering their most right-wing members while doing little to win votes from the left.

Kohl last month fired the party's long-time manager, Heiner Geissler, triggering another intraparty dispute that reared its head Monday on the national party convention's opening day.

Geissler, architect of the party's comeback at the beginning of the 1980s, initially disputed his firing by claiming it signaled a move by the Christian Democrats "in the wrong political direction."

In an effort to put a unified face on party affairs heading into the national election campaign, Kohl offered Geissler a job as deputy chairman of the party — one of eight — and Geissler was voted into that seat Monday night.

But some notes of discontent were voiced by moderates among the 750 party delegates at the convention.

China Executes 2 Men, But Frees 4 Who 'Confessed'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — China executed two men accused of corruption and released four who turned themselves in and admitted their guilt, news reports said today.

Two other men who refused to admit their guilt were given life sentences in a group trial in a city gymnasium that was aired on national television and reported in detail in the Beijing Daily.

More than 2,400 people, including Beijing's Communist Party chief and Politburo member Li Ximing, attended the sentencing.

Last week, in a similar trial, seven people who allegedly stole weapons from troops during the June 3-4 military attack on pro-democracy demonstrators were given jail terms of up to 13 years. Another seven who turned themselves in were let go.

The government has promised leniency to all student activists wanted by police for their activities during the pro-democracy movement. It has issued a similar promise during its current campaign against corruption, a major issue raised by students during the protest movement.

Those who refuse to admit their crimes or give themselves up are being threatened with harsh punishment.

In the corruption cases, Wu Keqiang, vice director of a leather factory, was accused of illegally trading in steel, other metals and imitation leather in deals worth $92,700 between 1981 and 1987.

He was also charged with bribing factory managers with television sets, refrigerators, tape recorders, cameras, electric fans, watches, washing machines, motorcycles and bicycles worth $9,000 to set up his black market transactions.

He was sentenced to death and executed immediately after the meeting, the report said.

Also sentenced to die was Shen Xiaoping, 31, a purchasing agent for an electronics company, who was charged with stealing $105,000 by using fake receipts. The report did not say if the sentence was carried out.

Wang Huaiyin, manager of a construction materials plant, should have been sentenced to death for embezzlement and accepting bribes, the Beijing Daily said. But because he gave himself up to police last February, he was allowed to go free.

The court also set free three others said to have voluntarily confessed their crimes.

In a separate report, the Beijing daily said citizens have turned in six submachine guns, three pistols and 644 bullets in the past 10 days. That followed a call by security forces for citizens to give up weapons seized during the June military drive to recapture Tiananmen Square from pro-democracy demonstrators.

In another development, the Chinese government is erecting its own statue on approximately the same spot on Tiananmen Square where student demonstrators raised the "Goddess of Democracy" that was to become a symbol of their movement.

The 26-foot-high statue of a worker, peasant, soldier and intellectual will be completed before Oct. 1 National Day celebrations, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

The report said the statue will be located about 105 feet south of the national flag pole at the northern end of the square.

Judge Issues Gag Order As Zsa Zsa's Trial Opens

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Zsa Zsa Gabor transformed her encounter with a Beverly Hills cop into street theater, with hairdresser, aristocratic eighth husband and the world press watching the selection of her jury.

On Monday, the actress who appeared in "Moulin Rouge" and "Picture Mommy Dead," was mobbed by about 100 reporters at the courthouse as jury selection began. Only six reporters were allowed inside.

Miss Gabor wore a black Donna Karan dress, a string of pearls, and a flashcube-sized diamond wedding ring as she breezed into court with a trademark "Hello Dahlinks."

She was accompanied by her hairdresser, daughter and eighth husband, Prince Frederick von Anhalt, Germany's Duke of Saxony.

Defense attorney William Graysen estimated a five- to seven-day trial, with jury selection ending today.

Municipal Judge Charles G. Rubin immediately imposed a gag order on the case, attempting to silence the outspoken Miss Gabor and her supporters.

"This is the case of the people versus Zsa Zsa Gabor," Rubin told the first 18 prospective panelists, who included an accountant, a lawyer, a computer programmer and a housekeeper-cook.

Graysen's first question to the prospective panelists focused on their familiarity with an obscene directive Miss Gabor claims the officer told her and which she allegedly took as an order to leave.

Miss Gabor was mobbed again by a crush of reporters and camera crews as she left for lunch recess.

"I think it's exciting," she said of the proceedings, before leaving for a lunch of black bean soup at the Polo Lounge.

On July 12, Miss Gabor pleaded innocent to charges of misdemeanor battery on a police officer, disobeying a police officer's orders, driving with an expired license, having an open bottle of whiskey in her car and having an expired car registration.

If convicted, she faces a maximum jail term of two years and a $4,000 fine.

She was arrested June 14 after her $215,000 Rolls-Royce Corniche convertible was pulled over for the registration violation, but drove off as the officer was checking for other infractions and then allegedly slapped him when he stopped her again two blocks later.

Miss Gabor maintains she was verbally and physically abused by an officer she contends has a history of harassing celebrities.

Despite the gag order, on Monday she opined that the confrontation with the officer "wasn't bad luck. It was idiotic. Stupid."

It wasn't Miss Gabor's first run-in with law enforcement.

In January, authorities said, she spat profanities when she was taken off an airliner in Atlanta because her two dogs were loose in the plane. A similar incident occurred in 1968 when she illegally took a dog with her to Spain.

The Hungarian-born actress, who is secretive about her age, is reported to be between 62 and 70. Court documents indicated she was born June 6, 1923, making her 66.

MS-Stricken Actress Says Handicap Doesn't Slow Her

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Actress Madlyn Rhue: "I'm always on time, I'm in makeup on time, I know my lines, I'm funny on the set and I bring a professionalism to the show I'm on."

"I think I've made a difference for handicapped people," added Miss Rhue, who is confined to a wheelchair because of multiple sclerosis.

This season she stars in an episode of CBS' "Murder, She Wrote" and has a recurring role as the judge in the new syndicated series "Trial by Jury," which stars Raymond Burr. She's also in discussions for another series role.

"The part on 'Murder, She Wrote' was written for a woman in a wheelchair," she said. "I'm so happy they cast an actress in a wheelchair for the role."

"On 'Trial by Jury' I'm on the bench so no one will know that I'm in a wheelchair. I won't be making a statement. Yet it does make a statement because a handicapped actress is doing the part. I love to do parts for people not in a wheelchair. Just get them because I read better than anyone else."

In addition, Miss Rhue has made a television public-service announcement for the Multiple Sclerosis Society. The campaign, called "Profiles in Courage," encourages all people to lead fuller lives whether they are disabled or not.

"When I was first in the wheelchair, I had to stay on the set when I was working," she said.

"Now I have a driver. He gets me everywhere on time. I don't cost the show anything. He also takes me to therapy three times a week."

Multiple sclerosis is a progressive neurological disease, she explained. "The three worst things are heat, fatigue and stress. What you should do is exercise in water so you stay cool."

"I first knew I had MS in 1973 or '74. I didn't tell anyone because all I had was a little dropped foot. Then I had to walk with a cane. Then I had to walk with two canes. I've been in the wheelchair since 1981, but I wasn't wheelchair-bound at first. I could get up, drive, dress myself. I've been confined to the wheelchair for two years."

While she was interviewed in her Beverly Hills apartment, a huge flower arrangement from the producers of "Trial by Jury" was delivered. The apartment walls were decorated with several of her oil paintings and sketches. She is a talented artist whose works has been exhibited in galleries around the country and are in the private collections of many celebrities.

Miss Rhue has been an actress since the 1950s, appearing in more than 15 feature and television movies. She's also done numerous guest roles on television and been a regular in "Bracken's World," "Executive Suite," and "Houston Knights." She had recurring roles in "Fame" and "Days of Our Lives."

Government Drops Plan To Back HDTV

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, facing White House disapproval, is dropping his proposal for a major government role in developing a U.S. high-definition television industry, officials said.

Mosbacher has said for months he would recommend loosened tax and antitrust laws to help private American industry compete with Europe and Japan in the race to build the next generation of television.

Commerce officials first promised Congress they would unveil such a plan by midsummer and, later, by the end of this year.

Now, a Bush administration official said Monday, Commerce is looking at HDTV only as part of a broad-based effort to boost U.S. technological competitiveness.

"There isn't necessarily going to be a single HDTV report as was once envisioned," the administration official said.

"We, throughout the last several months, have concluded that the issues that surround HDTV have to be viewed in a much broader context — full marketplace competitiveness — so we're not going to have a Commerce Department, per se, or a specific initiative that targets HDTV applications at this time," the official added.

"We're going to study it further and probably weave it into a more extensive high-tech competitiveness package. There's no date-certain of when that will be ready," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A congressional source said the White House reined in Mosbacher for talking in terms reminiscent of the "industrial policy" program that Democratic presidential candidate

Michael Dukakis advocated in the 1988 campaign.

"Mosbacher in their eyes is a renegade promoting industrial policy and they thought it was absolutely necessary to reprimand him," said the source, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Wall Street Journal last month quoted sources who said Mosbacher's HDTV initiative was soundly criticized by other government agencies and was nearly dead.

The Journal said Wayne Berman, a counselor to Mosbacher who chairs an interagency study group on HDTV, planned to circulate a substantially revised proposal that would advocate policies aimed at a variety of technologies, including HDTV.

Actress Says Roles Cornered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Isabelle Adjani thinks one actress has cornered the market on English-speaking roles that require foreign accents.

"Meryl Streep is the most effective customs and immigrations officer," the French actress says in Vanity Fair's October issue. "She stands there and says, 'You can't come in — I'll do the accent.'"

Adjani's latest film, "Camille Claudel," was the biggest film in France last year and opens in this country in December.

The 31-year-old actress won a Cesar, the French equivalent of the Oscar, for portraying Claudel, the mistress, muse and competitor of French sculptor Rodin.

Pacino Changes His Image In New Film

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — After six years of what he calls "the clandestine thing," Al Pacino is returning to public view.

The star of the two "Godfather" films and "Dog Day Afternoon" says in Vanity Fair magazine's October issue that he spent much of the past six years in dark glasses, false moustaches and disguised stage roles.

Out of sight since filming "Scarface" in 1983, Pacino stars in the upcoming romantic thriller, "Sea of Love," with Ellen Barkin, and plays a surprisingly lighthearted cameo as the bad guy in Warren Beatty's "Dick Tracy."

He also has agreed to play the Michael Corleone for the third time after director Francis Ford Coppola told Pacino he'd come up with a new concept for the third "Godfather" film. Diane Keaton, with whom Pacino has had a relationship for several years, again will play Corleone's estranged wife.
