Senate Bans All Airline Smoking

By Helen Dewar
 LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Thursday to ban smoking on all domestic airline flights after crushing an effort by outnumbered tobacco-state lawmakers to force concessions with delaying tactics and parliamentary roadblocks.

Foes of the total smoking ban bowed to the inevitable and let the proposal pass by voice vote after the Senate unmistakably signalled its intention to approve the measure in two key procedural votes, including a 77 to 21 vote to head off a filibuster.

The approved proposal, which would extend to all domestic flights the current smoking ban on flights of two hours or less, was approved as part of a $11.9 billion transportation appropriations bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. The overall bill is expected to pass shortly and go to conference with the House.

Legislation banning smoking on short flights, approved two years ago, is scheduled to expire next April. The House voted last month to make permanent the current restrictions, which affect four-fifths of all domestic air passengers. The Senate's proposal for a total ban would take effect 95 days after enactment of the legislation.

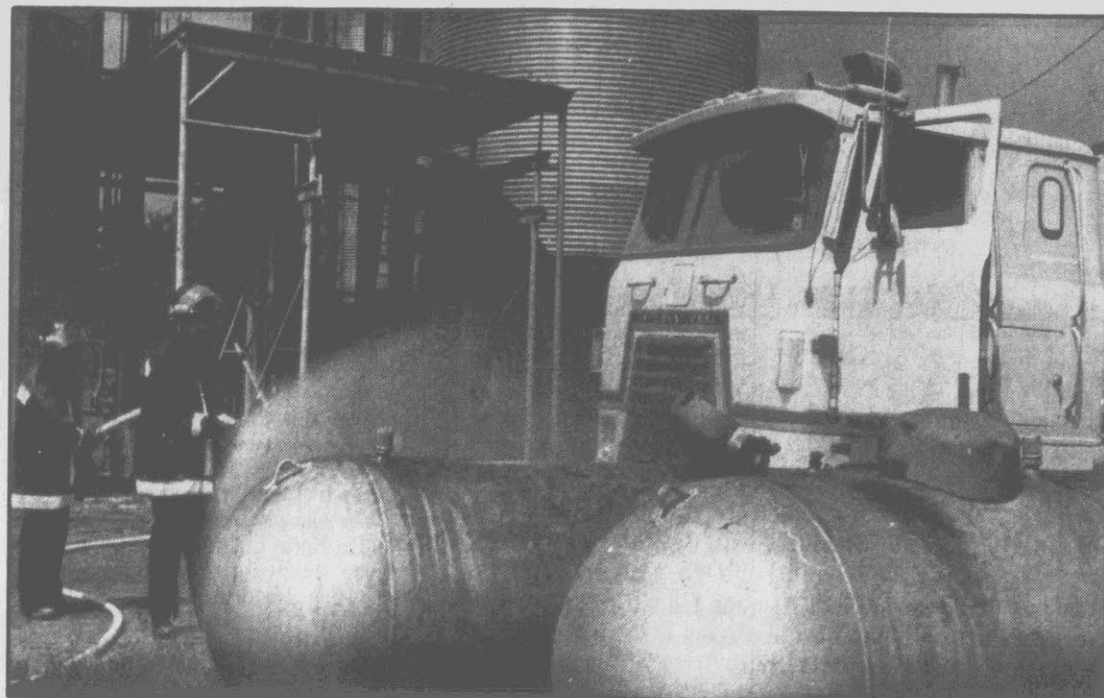

While the Senate vote reflected what lawmakers regard as growing public concern over the health hazards of air-borne nicotine and mounting pressure for smoking curbs, especially in tightly confined spaces, tobacco interests are well-represented among likely House conferees, and the outcome of the issue in conference is unclear.

"The Senate's action greatly strengthens our bargaining position but we still face a tough battle in the House," said Rep. Richard J. Durbin, D-Ill., a leading House advocate of restrictions on airline smoking.

Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., chief sponsor of the Senate proposal, was more optimistic, saying "the issue itself carried the day" in the Senate and predicting it would do so again in the conference.

While conceding they lacked the votes to block Lautenberg's proposal, tobacco-state senators dragged out debate over the measure for most of this week in hopes of winning concessions, such as delaying implementation for further hearings.

But with pressure mounting for passage of appropriations bills by the start of the new fiscal year Oct. 1, Democratic leaders forced a cloture vote, which they won with 17 votes to spare beyond the 60 required.

Ayden firefighters work to contain the last of today's LP gas spill at a grain buying station

Ayden Area Evacuated

AYDEN — Officials say Ayden escaped a potential disaster this morning when a runaway truck struck a pipeline to three liquid petroleum gas tanks and forced the evacuation of a six-block area of the town.

Barry Wood, Ayden fire chief, said a tractor trailer parked at Parker Grain Co. Inc. on North Lee Street rolled unattended from a warehouse at approximately 10:58 a.m., striking a pipeline to the gas tanks on the Parker Grain Co. property. He said the truck narrowly missed striking a utility pole.

Wood said approximately 2,500 gallons of liquid petroleum gas escaped from the three tanks, threatening a massive explosion.

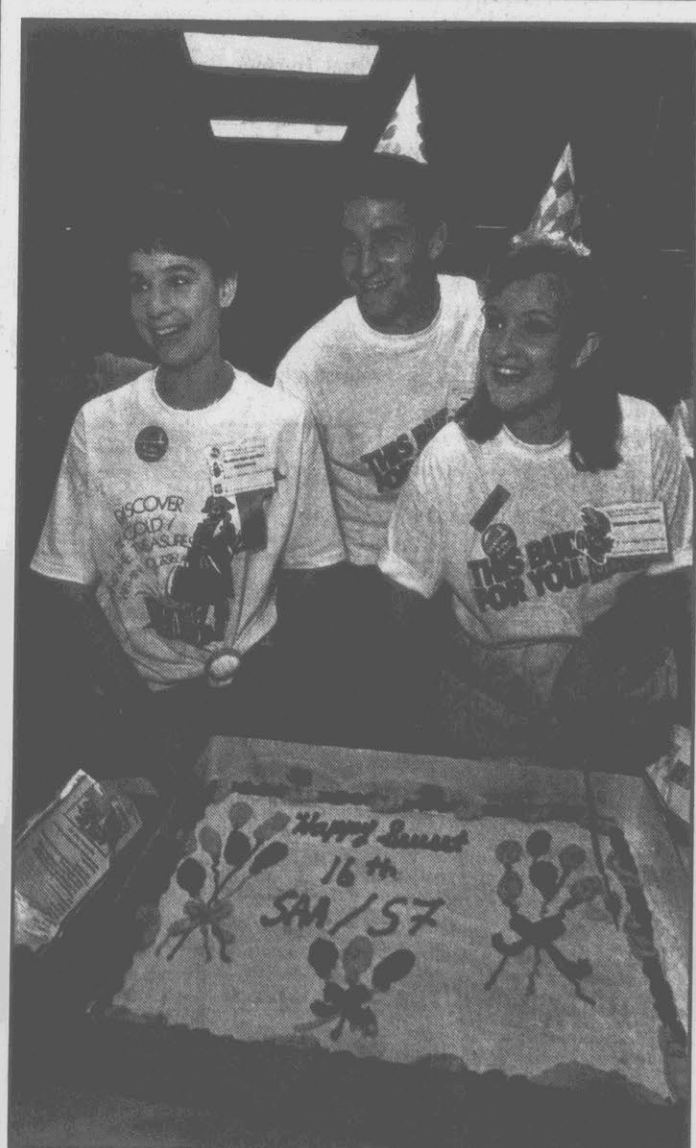

"This could have caused a spot on the map," said Wood.

The fire chief said a cloud of gas hovered around the accident site and could have exploded with a spark. The Ayden Fire department subsequently shut down all power to the storage facility, Wood said. "Right now we are giving it time to dissipate on its own," Wood said around noon.

Wood said Ayden police evacuated a six-block area near the town's downtown section as a precautionary measure but hoped to allow those affected to return to their homes and businesses early this afternoon.

Parker Grain uses the liquid petroleum gas for its drying bins.

"Sweet 16" Event

Tar River Pollution Plan OK'd

By J. Ward est
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

RALEIGH — It took four presentations, three votes and two different plans, but the Environmental Management Commission passed a final decision on a pollution control plan for the Tar River — almost.

In an unusual move Thursday, the commission allowed outside presentations on a state proposal up for final consideration. The state board, which decides on environmental concerns throughout the state, also allowed for changes to its decision by an outside group at a future meeting.

At the final vote, the commission agreed to designate the Tar-Pamlico River basin as "nutrient sensitive waters," and agreed to both cleanup plans presented on the proposal.

The state Division of Environmental Management had proposed the original nutrient sensitive classification and management strategy to reduce nutrient pollution flowing into the river. One week before the final decision, Greenville Utilities proposed a different plan that would include all the municipalities in the 4,498 square miles of the river basin.

The commission agreed to adopt the strategy proposed by DEM, but to allow the municipalities to meet and present a different plan agreed to by the state at its December meeting.

The municipalities now have 90 days to prepare an acceptable management strategy for the river or the original proposal from DEM will take effect.

Land Of The Free, Home Of The Brave, And Country Of Fat

By Paul Recer
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The United States may be land of the free and home of the brave, but it's also the country of the fat.

A researcher on obesity says that 33 million adult Americans, about 20 percent of the adult population, are significantly obese, giving the United States one of the highest populations of fat people in the world.

"It's clear that significant obesity appears to be more prevalent in the United States than elsewhere," Dr. George A. Bray, a professor of medicine at Louisiana State University, said Thursday.

"The greater the excess weight, the greater excess risk" of resulting health problems, he said.

Obesity is a public health concern only in Europe and North America, and the percentage of significantly overweight people is highest by far in the United States, Bray said.

The scientist said researchers don't know why there is a higher percentage of fat adults in America than elsewhere, though he suggests it could be because of the highly mechanized U.S. civilization that makes it easy to avoid walking or climbing stairs.

Bray says statistics suggest Americans are eating a better diet now — avoiding meats and other foods high in animal fats — but the number of significantly obese people "continues to creep up."

The effects of excess weight is showing up in health studies that show the obese are suffering more heart attacks, more high blood pressure, more diabetes and more gall bladder disease.

Being extremely fat, Bray said, is only slightly less of a health risk than smoking two packs of cigarettes a day.

Bray, president-elect of the North American Association for the Study of Obesity, said doctors consider significant obesity to be a weight about 30 percent above what would be ideal for a person's age, stature and gender.

Thus, a man whose ideal weight is 170 to 180 pounds becomes "significantly" obese if his weight balloons to 221 to 234. At that point, he becomes almost twice as likely to develop a life-shortening ailment, Bray said.

But numbers on the weight scale don't tell the full story. "It's not just how fat you are, but where the fat is located, that will determine your risk," said Bray.

Researchers now believe that fat located within the abdominal cavity poses a greater health hazard than does fat located in the extremities or just under the skin.

"The reasons for this are not clear," said Bray. "The most widely accepted explanation is that when you've got more fat in your belly around your organs, it is that fat that is released when you eat fatty acids."

Because of its proximity, such fat is thought to go directly to the liver, where "it sets up risk factors that we associate with heart disease, diabetes, hypertension and gall bladder disease," he said.

Adult men, said Bray, seem most at risk of developing this unhealthy deposit of abdominal fat. Age also plays a factor, he added, because few children or young adults develop this type of fat deposit.

"For women, the visceral fat doesn't seem to increase until there is a lot of total fat," he said. "Women are protected against visceral fat to some degree, for some reason."

Smoking affects visceral, or central, fat, said Bray, and stopping smoking tends to cause this fat to disappear, even though the former smoker may gain fat in other areas. Again, why this is so is not well understood, but he said, "this is another good reason to stop smoking."

Another study elsewhere shows that American youth are becoming more muscular, but also more sedentary — a lifestyle that has made them fatter and triggered an "ominous" loss of cardiovascular health.

Coed Suspended Over Rape Hoax

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University officials say they will react strongly to false reports of sexual assault on campus after Greenville police revealed that an ECU student had falsely reported Tuesday that she had been raped.

Dr. Ronald P. Speier, assistant vice chancellor for student life, told the East Carolinian campus newspaper Thursday that students who falsify reports of sexual assault should expect to be suspended from the university.

"Any student who commits such an act in the future should expect the most severe penalty," Speier said in his statement. "In light of the current situation, this is one of the worst things that could have happened."

A series of rapes and attempted rapes near campus this summer has women in the campus community scared. This fear is heightened by rumors of sexual assaults that turn out to be false, Speier said.

A female ECU student was recently dismissed from the university for falsely telling police she was raped, Speier told the campus paper. The student was suspended indefinitely because she falsely reported that she had been raped early Tuesday morning in the yard of the Baptist Student Union at 10th and Lawrence streets, he said.

University officials declined to release the student's name, citing her right to privacy. But Greenville police identified her as Jessica H. Riggs, 20, of Raleigh.

The student violated provisions in the student code of conduct that prohibits students from furnishing false information to the university with

Crime Stoppers Telethon Set This Weekend

The third annual Crime Stoppers Telethon will be televised live on cable channels 7 and 9 on Saturday and Sunday to raise funds for the local crime-fighting program.

The weekend telethon is a joint effort of the Pitt-Greenville Crime Stoppers Committee and the Community Safety Committee of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said John Minges III of Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. Minges is co-chairing the event with his wife, Sarah.

"The Crime Stoppers Telethon will feature live local entertainment as most telethons do," Minges said. "But the major source of entertainment will be pre-taped music videos featuring local Pitt County community leaders and citizens 'lip-synching' to popular new and old songs.

"The telethon will run like an old radio-request show, with viewers calling in and pledging $25 to have their favorite music videos reshown. For a $50 pledge, contributors can receive a videocassette containing all the music videos," Minges said.

Pitt-Greenville Crime Stoppers was initiated by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce in September of 1983.

"The concept of Crime Stoppers is simple," Minges said. "Citizens can call the special Crime Stoppers telephone number, 758-7777, and provide information on criminal activity in the county.

"Callers are issued code numbers to guarantee anonymity. They do not have to appear in court and they are paid cash awards of up to $1,000 if the information provided leads to an arrest," he said.

Minges said more than 1,000 callers have given information to Crime Stoppers since 1983. To date, Crime Stoppers calls have resulted in over 700 arrests with more than $1,392,608 in narcotics and stolen property being recovered.

"Crime Stoppers works due to the support of law enforcement officials, the media and the community," he added.

Assisting Minges and his wife will be Frances Faust, Doug Jackson, Jerry Jones, Tommy Edwards, Jean Hopper, Kay Gay, Ron Cooper and many other volunteers, along with Jo Heidenreich and Jerry Parker with Parker Communications in Goldsboro.

"It is hoped that the September telethon will not only raise funds for the Crime Stoppers reward program, but also stimulate increased public awareness for the program's growing success," Minges said.

For additional information, visit the cable television station Saturday from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m.

There will be a blood pressure check station and rescue workers will be available to answer questions about emergency medical care.

New Registrars

Simpson Clerk-Officer LaVerle M. Godley and Laverne Williamson, also of Simpson, have been sworn by the Pitt County Board of Elections as voter registrars.

Those in the Simpson area who want to register to vote may visit or call the village of Simpson office at 757-1430.

Drug Arrest

Greenville police arrested two men Thursday on charges of possession of heroin and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said James Lee Atkinson, 58, of 112 Play Meadows and Tony Wilkes, 49, of 1014 Dickinson Ave. were both arrested at the 600 block of Ford Street in an incident reported at 4:45 p.m.

Incidents Reported

Greenville police said several incidents were reported to the department on Thursday.

Officer W.T. McCarter investigated a 9:38 a.m. report of damage to personal property at Toyota East, 109 Trade St. McCarter said someone removed four tires from a vehicle, cut them and left them near the vehicle. The automobile was dented in several places, with damage estimated at $100.

McCarter also said a video cassette recorder, valued at $249, was taken from Lot 10 of Edgewood Trailer Park in an incident reported at 12:53 p.m.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said a man reported he was hit in the face by another man and robbed of $75 as he walked on Dudley Street around 10 p.m.

Day Care Week

Sunday through Sept. 23 has been designated as National Adult Day Care Center Week throughout the nation.

"This week is designated to honor the service that adult day care professionals provide in the lives of disabled adults," said Connie Kuenzi, director of the Creative Living Adult Day Care Center of Greenville.

"This service often enables these people to continue to live at home." She said government studies show that as many as 25 percent of people placed in nursing homes could be cared for in their homes with the support services provided by adult day care centers.

The North Carolina Adult Day Care Association is a sponsor of the week's observance in this state.

Meeting Planned

The Down East Multiple Sclerosis Support Group will conduct a reorganizing meeting Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Western Steer Family Steak House, 3005 E. 10th St.

Tanker Mishap

A 1,400-gallon Pitt County schools gasoline tanker overturned and had its cab charred this morning when its driver, identified as Julius Joyner Jr., 23, of Greenville, hit a culvert at the right of the road, Trooper W.M. Swindell said. Swindell said Joyner swerved to the right to avoid striking a car which stopped to turn left onto the River Road from N.C. 33 west of Greenville at 7:55 a.m. Swindell said Joyner "didn't get a scratch on him" and was able to quickly escape the burning cab. He said the tank portion of the truck did not ignite and no gasoline was spilled. At noon today, a crane was in use holding the tank level while the gasoline was being pumped from it. A mile-long portion of N.C. 33 was blocked by law enforcement officers, with Greenville police prohibiting unauthorized vehicles from entering.

Council Delays Final Vote On Project Near Treetops

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Outcry from residents of a Winterville subdivision over a rezoning request sparked debate between the developer and the residents, and prompted the City Council to delay final action on the request.

The council, meeting Thursday night, also delayed a decision on the revised thoroughfare plan in favor of hearing more public comment on the proposal.

Greenville Properties, the developer of Treetops subdivision located off State Road 1708, proposed rezoning a 100-foot strip of land between an area zoned for shopping center use and a section of the subdivision containing four multifamily units.

Tom Little, the developer, proposed rezoning the land from O&I (office and institutional use) to CS (shopping center) zoning.

But Treetop residents complained of the potential loss of a buffer between their homes and the proposed shopping center.

"The people in Treetops like living there," said Jane Munson, a resident of the area. She said developing a shopping center near the development would destroy the qualities that drew the residents to the area.

"Frankly I can't think that Greenville needs another minor shopping center," Ms. Munson said.

"We're going to build the shopping center whatever you do," Little told the council. But he said adding the land to the existing CS zone would allow him to save the berm already in place.

Mayor Ed Carter suggested continuing the rezoning request until Little and the residents opposing the matter could meet and discuss the proposal. "You could win the battle and lose the war should he decide to exercise his existing rights," Carter told the group.

The Treetops community contains a mix of multifamily and single-family housing.

Proposed changes to the thoroughfare plan, on which the council had earlier delayed making its final decision, also drew comments from the audience during Thursday's meeting.

Two Greenville residents urged the council to seek further input from the citizens before deciding on any changes, and argued that the plan did not receive enough attention before a final vote was scheduled.

During Monday's workshop meeting the council had voted to hold at least two more public hearings on the plan before making a final decision. A date for the hearings has not been set. But the council agreed to hold the meetings in the northern and eastern section of the city, two areas most likely to be affected by proposed road changes.

Richard Duncan presented a list of recommendations to the council regarding the thoroughfare plan. Duncan said the plan needs to go further on helping ease city traffic with overpasses on railroad crossings and widening and extending streets not included in the plan.

"I appreciate the problems you're up against," said Chris Mansfield, an area resident, "but I would argue you consider the university and the neighborhood it's associated with."

The City Council also approved bids for renovation to Guy Smith Stadium totaling $197,174. The final cost of the project, including architectural fees and testing, will total $235,674.

The council upped the ante on parking fines in city-owned lots. Overtime parking will cost one dollar more, increasing the fine from $2 to $3. Illegal parking will increase from $5 to $10. The changes are scheduled to take effect Nov. 1.

The council did not discuss the proposal Thursday night. But during Monday's meeting City Manager Greg Knowles said the increases would bring Greenville in line with other cities of its size.

Task Force Stresses Local Aid Programs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — More money should be targeted for community programs treating the mentally ill and drug abusers, instead of large state institutions, a private study group says.

"The legislature, eventually, will have to pay for anything that is done," said Dr. Sue Estroff, a co-chairman of the Citizens Task Force on Community Services. "It is better to pay for (community programs) than hospitals, which we know don't work."

Developing stronger community programs, she said, also might help the problem of homeless people, some of whom have been turned out of state institutions and sent back to their home communities with few services.

"You can't close hospital doors and not open community doors and then be wondering why there are people out here wandering the streets," she said.

The report also calls for at least 20 percent of the members on area mental health boards to be "consumers" of mental health, mental retardation or substance abuse services.

"There isn't, for the task force, ever too much consumer involvement," Estroff said. "Just because a person has a serious disability does not mean they're incompetent."

The group also calls for expanding Medicaid coverage to people who receive Social Security payments.

"North Carolina is one of only 14 states in which people getting SSI don't get Medicaid," Ms. Estroff said.

Faculty Members Author Articles

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Several East Carolina University faculty members are authors of articles in a new reference work, the "Encyclopedia of Southern Culture," edited by Charles Reagan Wilson and William Ferris and published by the University of North Carolina Press.

The one-volume, 1,634-page "Encyclopedia," which was a 10-year project involving hundreds of scholars and writers, focuses on aspects of the diverse and distinctive lifestyles, history, social and moral values, politics and economy of the American South.

Articles on various historical and contemporary topics appear in 24 thematic sections — "Agriculture" through "Women's Life." ECU contributors have articles in seven of the sections.

Alex Albright of the ECU English faculty is the author of an article on collar greens, which is included in the "Environment" section.

The tobacco industry is discussed by Dr. Ennis L. Chestang of the ECU Department of Geography and Planning. His article appears in the "Industry" section.

Dr. William H. Cobb of the history faculty is author of a history of Commonwealth College, a labor college in Louisiana, which is part of the "Education" section.

Dr. Todd L. Savitt, professor of medical humanities in the ECU School of Medicine, has an article on the health of blacks in the section, "Black Life."

Dr. William N. Still, Jr., co-director of ECU's program in maritime history and underwater research, is author of the essay on the South's maritime tradition which appears in the section, "History and Manners."

Four articles in the "Law" and "Politics" sections are contributed by Dr. Tinsley E. Yarbrough of the political science faculty. Yarbrough's articles deal with the Southern strategy and with significant political figures: Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. of Alabama, the late President Lyndon B. Johnson and U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms.

Also contributing an article to the "Politics" section is former ECU faculty member Karl Rodabaugh who profiled Georgia Gov. Eugene Talmadge. Rodabaugh now heads a continuing education program at the University of West Florida.

The "Encyclopedia of Southern Culture" was developed at the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi.

In their introduction, editors Wilson and Ferris state that a major purpose of the compendium is to identify unique "regional characteristics," to examine the "individuals, places, ideas, rituals, symbols, myths, values and experiences — which have sustained either the reality or the illusion of regional distinctiveness."

In recent weeks the "Encyclopedia" has been widely reviewed throughout the nation. U.S. News & World Report hailed the massive work as "the first attempt ever to describe every aspect of a region's life and thought, the impact of its history and politics, its music and literature, its manners and myths, even the iced tea that washes down its catfish and cornbread."

Alumni Group Presents Awards

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The Durham-Orange chapter of the East Carolina University Alumni Association and Ziegler N. Miller, president of the Wake County chapter, were honored with the association's top awards during the recent Leadership Conference at ECU.

The Durham-Orange unit was named Chapter of the Year and Miller received the Outstanding Volunteer of the Year Award.

The Leadership Conference is a one-day event sponsored annually by the ECU Alumni Association to educate its key leaders on the university's progress and goals for the future. It is attended by association officers and board members as well as professional society and chapter representatives.

This year's participants received an update of ECU's Strategic Planning Program by Sue A. Hodges, director of planning and institutional research. Joanne Kollar, director of university publications, presented ECU's new logo and described how it was selected.

In addition, William Hallberg, an associate professor in the department of English, discussed his novel, "The Rub of the Green"; Dr. Trenton Davis, acting dean of the School of Industry and Technology, showed slides from his recent trip to Russia to view the nuclear accident site at Chernobyl, and Dr. Darryl Davis, chairman of the department of manufacturing, described ECU's robotics program.

Trouble Ahead

Evading A Major Social Concern

Only a year ago the catastrophic-illness protection plan for retirees enacted by Congress was being hailed as the salvation of the elderly.

It did not accomplish what many wanted the most — that is provision for long term care without first exhausting personal finances. Still the new protection was seen as a measure which would keep the elderly out of the poor house — if they could stay out of long term care facilities.

How all that has changed. The bill came due and the more affluent elderly who could pay up to $800 per year for the coverage joined those who have other coverage programs in complaining.

That group was so vocal there is serious consideration in both the House and Senate for repealing the program. And if it is not repealed it is virtually a certainty that some of the benefits will be cut back and the higher premiums eliminated.

Apparently the groups which wanted enactment of the program last year didn't count on the cost of it having to be paid. And Congress, in its knee jerk way, is listening to the most vocal groups and ignoring the millions of elderly who sorely need the coverage, but do not have the energy or the understanding of the problem to speak out.

Now we reach the point where the pressure groups must recognize that the catastrophic coverage must be paid for ... and Congress must understand that repeal or curtailing the program is only going to lead to huge new social problems in the future.

The elderly will be a rapidly growing segment of our society in the coming decades. It is the group that will have health problems and the cost of handling those problems will increase.

The most affluent and the retired government workers may have catastrophic insurance, but that leaves millions more who simply cannot afford to meet routine medical bills, let alone personally pay for catastrophic insurance. Obviously much of the cost of providing government catastrophic insurance is going to fall on the group which gets the service, but then that is the way that many services are financed in this nation.

Congress may well need to return to the drawing board concerning financing of catastrophic health insurance but consideration of repealing the program is absurd. The alternative is that millions of elderly would then wind up on Medicare and the cost would still be borne by the government.

Congress has held out some hope for the growing elderly group to avoid financial wipeout through an expensive illness. Now there are those who would cruelly snatch it away. Such an action serves only to evade a major social concern of the 21st century.

Discontent

More Home Rule Eases Conflicts

The events that are occurring in the Baltic states of the Soviet Union are exhilarating, chilling and awesome all at the same time.

Each day we read of a new protest and the rise of nationalism in those areas.

In recent weeks, the republic of Moldavia has attempted to restore its language as the official tongue. With an eye on Moscow, a legislative compromise allowed a retention of the Russian language in normal activities.

That brought on a protest that would have been unheard of in Stalinist days. Anything even approaching it would have incurred cruel reprisals.

The republics are encouraged by glasnost, however and their peoples are saying the things that have been on their minds for 50 years.

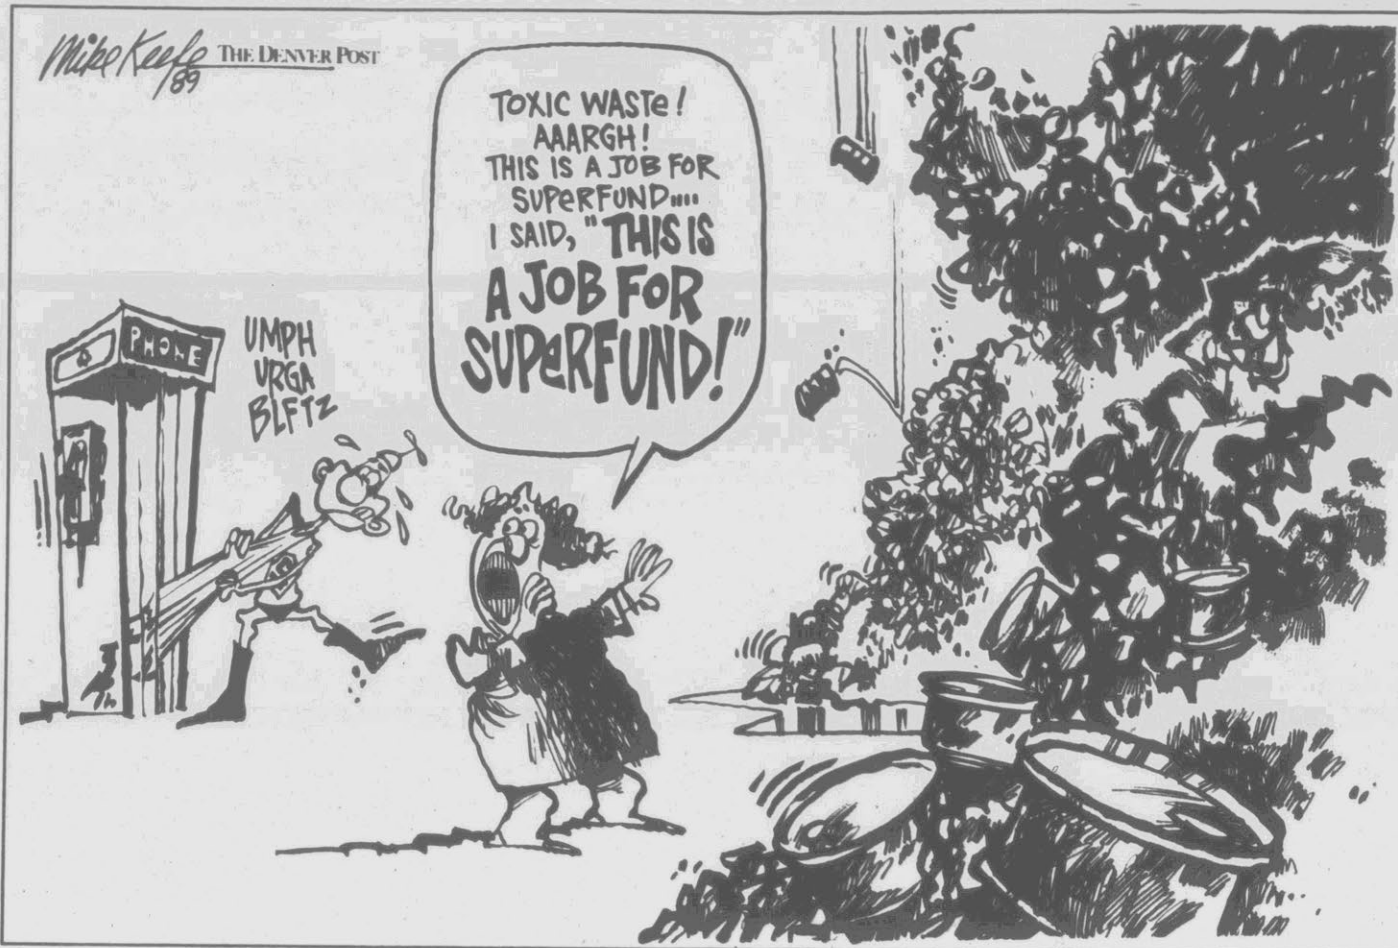

The question is, how far can it proceed? Even President Gorbachev is issuing warnings about the protests going too far. Does that portend a crackdown of the magnitude that the world saw in China?

The best guess is no ... if the Soviet hard liners don't seize control.

As the world gets a better look at today's Soviet Union it is clear it has some of the earmarks of the old empires which the Bolsheviks so roundly denounced. Therefore it is not so surprising that the economically troubled country now has some of the problems that the empires once faced.

And, like the empires of old, the iron fist can only be effective for a limited time. Oppressed people eventually find the small crack which allows them the channels to the freedom they crave.

The Soviet empire may hold together for a time. It is obvious, however, that there is great discontent in many areas. History tells us that have only been alleviated with the permission of more home rule.

To the editor:

During the past few months, the city of Greenville has been connecting sewage and gas lines in the neighborhood of Brook Valley.

The senseless behavior of the hired construction workers is an outrage.

They have disrupted TV cable and electrical service. In the past, the construction activities of the workers made city water unfit to drink in this neighborhood. They parked their cars and placed portable toilets on private property. Past and present, many mail boxes are destroyed by big machines and trucks. No one is apologetic enough to replace them.

On behalf of the residents of Brook Valley, something should be done in the spirit of civic cooperation to end this nightmare.

To the editor:

Regarding the study by the Educational Research Center completed recently. Using their test result as comparison, could we say that grouping our children with thieves and addicts wouldn't cause them to pick up similar habits? Could we conclude that an A student would learn more in a classroom filled with primates from a zoo? Ridiculous isn't it? About as ridiculous as the study, or lack of study, as a closer examination might reveal. Because of The U.S. Justice Department's veiled threat that there might be a racial bias, someone in the center, fearful of his job, bent the statute to protect himself. Only a fool would accept the fact that homogeneous grouping isn't harmful to top and bottom level students.

To the editor:

Regarding the church day care personnel trying to get the ban against corporal punishment put aside, I cannot believe that church people, claiming to represent the "Prince of Peace" are so anxious to inflict violence on children. When exactly will North Carolina step out of the dark ages and understand that violence begets violence?

Instead of setting an example to end the assault on children, the church is trying to sanction just that kind of behavior. There is something sick about that.

To the editor:

I can't say I have ever been more frustrated with the U.S. Congress than I am at this moment. How can congressional leaders possibly take a partisan stand against the President's efforts to solve the drug problem?

Last fall during the presidential election, public sentiment made it clear that whoever won the election, be it George Bush or Mike Dukakis, he would have to deal with the problems caused by illegal substance abuse in our country. The War on Drugs is not a Republican war; it is not a Democrat war. It is an American war.

After the election, Mr. Bush set out to formulate a broad-based strategy to combat the problem. It was not created in a day, but given thorough review and discussion. The President was deliberate in seeking the views of law enforcement, education and rehabilitation officials. He sought out the views of state and local government leaders and members of the private sector. President Bush also consulted with congress, seeking their input into what programs and what actions should be a part of the strategy to rid our nation of drug abuse.

Tuesday night the president presented the Drug Strategy to the nation, seeking the support of all Americans for this vital effort. Now, the Democrats in congress are using the president's proposal to try and black mail him into raising taxes. Thank goodness George Bush is not going to play Congress's little game.

For elected officials to play politics with solving the drug problem is despicable. Why can't they put their petty partisan games aside and support the president's effort to overcome this crisis? Nevertheless, I encourage everyone, Democrats and Republicans alike, to get behind George Bush and do our part to help rid our country of drug abuse and the evils associated with it!

A Problem For Washingtonians

WASHINGTON — The longtime friend and staunch supporter of Mayor Marion S. Barry Jr. was clearly annoyed, even slightly outraged.

There he was, at a social gathering of middle-class black Washingtonians, and all these brothers and sisters were turning on the mayor, discussing the suspicion that his honor has used illegal drugs as though it was a proven fact. Outrageous.

Then came this exchange:

"Are you saying you don't believe the mayor is using drugs, or has used drugs?"

"I'm saying I don't know. I have never seen him use drugs, and the people who are accusing him — including the media — haven't seen him using drugs, either. It just seems to me that it is terribly unfair to keep throwing these charges around without any substantiation."

"Do you know anyone who believes the mayor is NOT using drugs?"

"No."

And that says it all.

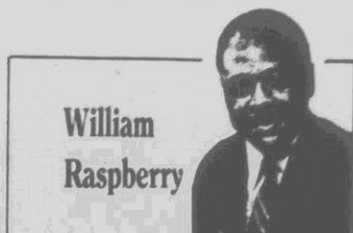

Given the difficulty of producing credible witnesses who will swear that he is a drug abuser, Barry may escape conviction — or even prosecution — for drug abuse. If you didn't supply drugs for him, or use drugs with him, how could you possibly know that he has used drugs? The only people in position to make the charge without jeopardizing themselves are those who stand convicted of drug offenses.

Barry describes them as "low-lives," willing to lie on him in order to moderate their own prison terms.

Karen Johnson, with whom the mayor admitted a "personal relationship," told prosecutors privately in 1987 that she had supplied him cocaine. Charles Lewis, whom the mayor visited repeatedly at the Ramada Inn here, reportedly has told the authorities that he and Barry smoked crack together. And now a former businessman, George H. Van Wagner III, says he delivered cocaine to a friend of Barry while the mayor and his friend sat together in a parked car in downtown Washington.

All three have been convicted of drug offenses.

But if that fact, which goes to their credibility, may make it difficult to convict Barry in a court of law, he is already convicted in the court of public opinion. As the mayor's diehard supporter acknowledges, it's hard to find Washingtonians who doubt that Barry has a drug problem.

William Raspberry

The legal situation is a problem for Barry and the criminal-justice system. The widespread belief that Barry may be an out-of-control drug abuser is a problem for all Washingtonians — particularly black Washingtonians.

On the one hand, this city's black residents — even those who are disgusted with the mayor — are reluctant to go public with their criticism, preferring to leave it to the legal system and the media to solve their problem.

On the other, if Barry can paint himself as the victim of the white establishment — including the prosecutor and the media — he may be able to manipulate blacks into circling the wagons in his defense. In that regard, the recent Washington Post report of a homosexual relation between the Rev. George Stallings, the renegade Catholic priest, and an altar boy — some 11 years ago — helps Barry because it supports his contention that the media are "out to get" strong black leaders.

Fortunately, the way out of the dilemma is clear enough. It is for those blacks who count Barry a racial embarrassment and a threat to local self-government to take the lead in his removal. Lt. Lowell K. Duckett, president of the Black Police Caucus, made a move in that direction last week.

The 6th District police official, announcing that the caucus (which endorsed Barry in 1986) will support at-large councilman John Ray in the next mayoral race, described Barry as an embarrassment to the city. Duckett said he was tired of black politicians acting irresponsibly and then asking blacks to defend them against the white establishment.

Another politically active Washingtonian, who has yet to decide on a candidate, took a tougher — though private — stance.

"What I resent most," he said, "is not that Barry does what he does but that he thinks I'm so stupid that I'm going to fall for this white-folks-are-out-to-get-me bull and come to his defense. It's not just Barry that's involved. I'm considered a dumb black guy because I'm not smart enough to see what he's doing."

This influential Washingtonian, who says he's looking for the proper forum to make his view public, says he fears that an outraged Congress will strip the city of its relatively young franchise.

"We're leasing an apartment from a landlord who is very observant," he said, by way of analogy. "If we keep throwing these loud, boisterous parties, we're going to be facing a 30-day notice. I'm not prepared to give up my rights in defense of Barry, whether he's convicted or not."

"Barry claims that he's concerned about black people. But the fact is he'd rather take the city down than give it up."

Soviets May Resent Hearing Their System Is Wrong

Hal Piper

An Irishman, a trade official, once told me over a pub lunch in Dublin that all Ireland's problems could be solved if it could bring itself to apply for readmission to the United Kingdom.

A true union of the British Isles, he reckoned, would expand the markets served by Irish businessmen, bring regional development funds financed by the British exchequer, broaden the scope and influence of Irish writers and scholars. Young Irish men and women would not have to emigrate to find opportunity. Best of all, the foolish but bloody squabble between the Protestants and Catholics would lose its point.

The Irish are famous for leg-pulling, but the man was serious. "However," he finished up, "it's an idea you could only discuss seriously in a pub with an American."

I thought of the Irishman during Boris Yeltsin's visit to Baltimore this week. The things he and his entourage were saying were the sorts of things you couldn't even discuss in pubs not so long ago, and certainly not with Americans.

Much of what Yeltsin says makes good sense to Americans, because it accepts what Americans already believe. And we assume that, Russians being sensible people, they must respond as we do. But to many in his own country Yeltsin's ideas sound almost unimaginably harsh and radical, because they challenge the whole reason and legitimacy of the Soviet state.

Over breakfast in the Hopkins Club the other morning, Viktor Yaroshenko, an economic specialist and political associate of Yeltsin, was talking about their visit the day before to the New York Stock Exchange.

"We hope to set up a stock market in the Soviet Union," he said. Already there is some experimentation with selling shares in Soviet factories to the workers, but so far the shares rest inert in shoe boxes and dresser drawers. Until they can be traded, they can't rise and fall in value, rewarding economic success and penalizing failure.

"One wanted to jump up and shout, 'But what was the Russian Revolution fought for, if not to break the yoke of Wall Street?'"

The nut of Soviet failure, Yaroshenko went on smoothly, was the abolition of private property. "When property is socially owned," he explained, "nobody is responsible for it. Nobody has an interest in using it to advantage." So, Yaroshenko said, there are plans afoot to solve the agriculture crisis, if not actually by selling off farmland, at least by leasing it for 150 or perhaps 250 years with rights of inheritance.

One wanted to remind him that private ownership of property is exploitative.

Analysis

Within five years, Yaroshenko predicted, the ruble will be at least partially convertible. Until that happens the Soviet economy cannot figure costs accurately and allocate resources productively.

Well, yes, but the brutal efficiency of the market, where textbooks are expensive and vodka cheap, was supposed to be overcome by a Soviet system that accounted for the social value of goods.

Asked about the East Germans fleeing westward through Hungary, Yaroshenko declared in ringing terms: "Everybody has the right to live where he wants. Nobody has the right to stop him."

So Americans believe, but the Soviet state has always taken the Aristotelian view that the individual finds his identity only as a part of the polis that nurtures him, educates him, defends him, encourages his thriving. That's why emigration is tantamount to treason.

The point is not to gloat over

Yaroshenko's conversion to American values. Rather it is to remind Americans how extraordinary his ideas must sound to millions of his countrymen — truly like proposing that Ireland rejoin Britain, or like trying to persuade Americans that monarchy equals good government. A country will not lightly abandon its founding principles.

It's true, but irrelevant, that most Soviet citizens never bought the ideology lock, stock and barrel. Most Americans hedge their ideology, too: Die-hard first-amendment liberals quail before extending free-speech protection to the likes of Louis Farrakhan, and free-enterprising businessmen call for government regulation of competing Japanese imports.

People are not consistent, but most people, Soviet and American, are patriotic, and most of them pick up enough scraps of ideology, explaining what is special about their country, to support a belief that their country deserves their pride and patriotism.

Now come Yaroshenko, his patron Yeltsin, and Mikhail Gorbachev himself to say that what you thought was special about your country is in fact what's wrong with it. Millions of Russians must be feeling the way millions of Americans have felt when their children came home from college to announce that the middle-class lifestyles and stable marriages they worked so hard to put together are in fact bourgeois, odious and exploitative. Amused tolerance may greet these tidings, or outrage, but probably not wholehearted acceptance.

And so, as Yeltsin toured Wall Street the other day, a "worker's coalition" was forming back home to oppose his and Gorbachev's reforms. Perestroika, a sociologist explained, "benefits not workers, but all kinds of shifty characters, rogues and swindlers, and this provokes in people the greatest indignation."

Gorbachev may yet find that his most implacable foe is not the neo-Stalinists or the rambunctious nationalities, but the silent majority.

Signs Of Erosion

William Tuohy & Norman Kempster

PASSAU, West Germany — The rising exodus of East German refugees into West Germany across the newly opened Austro-Hungarian frontier Monday underscored a critical situation developing between East and West Germany, with Hungary caught tightly in the middle.

The tide of emigration, which hard-line Communist authorities in East Berlin strongly oppose, threatens ties between East and West Germany, between Hungary and East Germany within the Communist Bloc, and even raises prematurely the momentous question of German reunification.

American experts said in Washington that the Hungarian government clearly has decided that it has more to gain from friendship with affluent West Germany than from its traditional alliance with East Germany. But these analysts said that the key question — as yet unanswered — is whether the Soviet Union will permit the continued erosion of its once-formidable empire.

"Obviously this is a major complication in Hungary's relations with the GDR (East Germany), and it obviously complicates empire management for the Soviet Union," said Helmut Sonnenfeldt, a former State Department and National Security Council expert on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. "It is another joker in the deck."

Sonnenfeldt, now on the staff of the Brookings Institution in Washington, said that Hungary's motivation was a combination of altruism and selfishness.

"Partly they (Hungarians) are being good guys," Sonnenfeldt said. "You can't really open up the system and gradually remove repression, as the Hungarians hope to do, and then play the game with the East Germans of sending these people back."

"I assume they also have it in mind that the West Germans will repay them in some form," he said. "It is part of the Hungarian effort to convince the outside world ... that they are a different breed of cat from the rest of Eastern Europe. From the Hungarian standpoint, it is probably a worthwhile exchange."

The exodus points up a bitterly unpalatable fact of life for East Germany: Its citizens are reacting adversely to the hard-line regime, and taking their children with them.

The exodus does not threaten the immediate existence of East Germany, but it menaces the future of a Communist regime whose arteries have hardened and which has, so far, flatly turned its back on notions of reform.

Sonnenfeldt said in Washington that he does not expect the Kremlin to interfere with Hungary's liberalization because Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev apparently hopes that an economic revival in Eastern Europe will eventually extend to the Soviet Union. Moreover, he said, it would be more difficult for Moscow to crack down on Budapest today than it was in 1956.

"The Russians are partly encouraging this because they seem to think that these countries will somehow get on their feet and the Soviet Union will benefit," he said. "I think they've got a tiger by the tail. They haven't come up with a formula yet. It could get pretty messy. If it does get messy in terms of bloodshed, repression and so forth, the major victim will be perestroika and any chance for economic advancement in the Soviet Union itself."

However, George Carver, a former deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, predicted that Moscow would ultimately have to crack down on Hungary to prevent further erosion of its authority within the Soviet Union.

"I would love to see the Soviet empire break up," said Carver, who is now on the staff of the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington. "But empires seldom break up without a lot of tension and bloodshed. We may find ourselves faced with Tienanmen Square cubed," he said in a reference to the Chinese massacre last June of pro-democracy students in Beijing.

"Things may be different than 1956 but I don't think we should count on it," Carver said. "We are always hoping that world opinion will force these guys to behave — baloney."

Michael J. Sodaro, a professor of international affairs at George Washington University in Washington, said that Moscow seems to have lost control of events in Budapest but still hopes to push things toward a favorable outcome in East Berlin.

"This is a major crisis for the GDR," Sodaro, author of several books on Eastern Europe and the divided German states. "Moscow's attitude toward events in Eastern Europe is one of permissive befuddlement. The Soviets genuinely don't know what to do."

Meanwhile, the refugee flood threatens the prestige, if not the immediate power, of Erich Honecker, East Germany's 77-year-old leader, who is seriously — some say terminally — ill. But who will come after Honecker?

Analysts say that most of the other top people in his inner circle are as opposed to Gorbachev-style reforms as he is.

"But how long can they hold on?" asked one Bonn-based specialist on East Germany. "They are losing their best young people. They are all going to have to face up to the terrible fact that socialism has just not measured up for most East Germans — when compared to their West German kinfolk."

George Washington University's Sodaro said that Honecker is sure to relinquish power sooner or later, even if he recovers from his present illness. He said that Moscow has made it clear that it wants a new regime in East Berlin that would have far more popular appeal than the present one. He also said that if East Germans obtained even the limited freedoms that Poles and Hungarians have enjoyed for years, many of them would be reluctant to risk flight to the West.

But to date, the East German regime has been incapable of introducing the kind of reforms that that might liberalize its economy and make its politics more popular.

Party ideologist Otto Reinhold put it this way recently: East Germany, with no independent culture or language, exists only because it is a socialist state. Yet today, East German citizens are rejecting East German socialism.

UNC Wants Wraps Put On Streakers

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — For at least a decade, the men in Lewis dormitory at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill have ripped their clothes off before taking a run around the north end of campus.

But this year, university officials are trying to put the wraps on the streaking.

They say they're not against a little college fun. But at the same time, the university is trying harder than ever to educate students about the dangers of sexual assaults, and it also has several new policies aimed at stamping out sexual harassment.

And they worry the streaking might send the wrong message. As a result, the university's dean of students, Fred Schroeder, wrote a Sept. 5 letter on streaking that was presented to Lewis residents at a dorm meeting this week.

"We would hope that persons considering organization of a streak would come to the understanding that what was once considered a harmless 'boys game' is no longer acceptable in this campus community," Schroeder wrote. "As this university actively works to educate and inform the community about important issues related to date and acquaintance rape and sexual harassment, a campus streak seems to undermine this effort."

Those who ignore Schroeder's request could face charges in a student honor court — or criminal court — if someone complained of indecent exposure to police. Still, Schroeder said the university wouldn't be able to stop any streakers who wanted to take their chances.

"We hope," he said, "that they will decide this may not be in keeping with issues that are pretty important, such as sexual harassment."

State Panel Limits Development Of 12 Coastal Bodies Of Water

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Environmental groups praised a state commission's decision to protect 12 coastal bodies of water, but developers said the action might hinder economic growth.

The N.C. Environmental Management Commission approved plans Thursday to restrict development along 12 bays, sounds and rivers in seven counties that border the Atlantic Ocean by declaring them outstanding resource waters.

The move, endorsed by Gov. Jim Martin and a number of environmental groups, sets restrictions on development and runoff in parts of Hyde, Tyrrell, Dare, Carteret, Onslow, Pender and New Hanover counties.

"The leadership that the administration showed is what pulled it off," said Todd Miller, executive director of the N.C. Coastal Federation.

"This sets a very clear goal that the state is obligated to maintain these waters," he said. "Prevention is the only thing that really works. You can restore waters that have been degraded, but it's very tough."

But development interests — including three commission members who argued against the designation of several ORWs — were less than satisfied.

"Although I can't say I'm delighted by what took place, I expected it for some time," said Ken D. Stewart, executive director of the Economic Alliance. "We would have preferred fewer, better-defined areas with a stronger protection package."

Despite the approval of several waters that developers considered unworthy of the special classification, Stewart said his group was pleased that the final regulations were more clearly defined than initially proposed.

"We want predictability and specificity," he said. "The development community has been very afraid over the last three or four years because of the uncertainty."

Robert Griffith and Douglas Boykin, who are developers and commission members, tried unsuccessfully to limit the restrictions on waters near their business markets in Carteret, Pender and New Hanover counties.

Griffith told the commission that his county commissioners "are concerned that taking 80 percent of the developable land in the sounds and bays of Carteret County is quite a blow to them."

But Michael Barnes, a new commission member, responded, "Anybody who was down there over Labor Day could see that business in Carteret County is flourishing just fine."

Boykin argued that the commission was extending protection to some waters that don't warrant the designation.

"We've missed the boat," he said. "We've got a patient with a gunshot wound and the staff says let's give it a bulletproof vest."

Chuck Wakild, the assistant director of the N.C. Division of Environmental Management, said that development will still be allowed but will face restrictions on density and runoff.

He said that the protected waters make up less than 10 percent of North Carolina's coast and that, in some cases, the property values in protected areas could increase by 150 to 200 percent.

Outstanding resource waters must have exceptional water quality and other valuable qualities, such as productive fisheries or heavy recreational use.

The areas are: — Alligator River, which is part of a national wildlife refuge that is along the borders of Tyrrell and Dare counties.

— Swanquarter Bay and Jupiter Bay, also a wildlife refuge off the coast of Hyde County.

— Core Sound, including southeastern Pamlico Bay and the Back Sound, which are major shellfish habitats off Carteret County.

— Western Bogue Sound and Bear Island, the state's most prominent commercial grounds for scallops and hard-shell clams, off Carteret and Onslow counties.

— Stump Sound, a productive estuarine area off Onslow County.

— Topsail Sound and Middle Sound, off Pender County, which are prized for scientific research. — Masonboro Sound, forged by the longest unpopulated barrier island in southeastern North Carolina, off New Hanover County.

The commission agreed to extend a smaller degree of protection to Lower Lockwoods Folly River in Brunswick County, which had been nominated as an outstanding resource water but was considered too polluted.

The commission adopted a water-quality management plan for that river that restricts new development, requires additional limitations on discharge permits, and bans dredging or filling in significant ecological areas still found within its waters.

Caldwell Board To Close Plant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUDSON, N.C. — The day after a Caldwell County waste treatment plant fire billowed noxious smoke over two neighborhoods and sent more than 50 people to hospitals, county officials said they intend to close the facility.

"We want to see them gone as quickly and as legally as possible," said Caldwell County Commissioner John Thuss. "It's like a boil that's been festering for years and it's coming to a head and we're ready to lance that thing."

The Wednesday night fire forced the evacuation of more than 250 residents of the Mount Herman area 5 miles south of Lenoir, including 54 who were taken to area hospitals complaining of respiratory problems. Two patients remained in Caldwell Memorial Hospital in Lenoir and listed in good condition this morning, said patient care coordinator Lovie Carroll.

The fire started in a bin of lacquer dust, waste from local furniture manufacturers, officials said.

County commissioners spent Thursday talking to lawyers.

After 12 years of controversy-filled operation in the county, the days of Caldwell Systems Inc.'s continued operation are numbered, they said.

On Thursday night, the county's hazardous-waste inspector was busy writing citations to be delivered to CSI this morning. It will be the third time in just over a month that county officials have cited the company for violations of state and federal waste-handling regulations. The Charlotte Observer reported in today's editions.

CSI's owner and president, Charles Foushee, said Thursday he was not aware of any of the violations and had not received the county's request to close. The request was to be hand-delivered by sheriff's deputies Thursday night.

"Three strikes in 30 days — that's not a particularly good track record," said George House, one of the county's attorneys in the case.

The company was cited Aug. 29 for "failure to control noxious and flammable fumes" from two of the waste-storage tanks at the plant. On Aug. 10, CSI was cited for failing to clean up chemical contamination of soil under a concrete pad at the plant.

From 1977 until May 31, 1988, CSI ran the state's only commercially operated chemical-waste incinerator at the county-owned site.

After years of complaints from nearby residents, who claimed the incinerator's emissions threatened their health and the environment, commissioners sued to evict the company in November 1987.

CSI countersued the county and an out-of-court settlement was reached in March 1988. Under terms of that agreement, CSI was allowed to convert the plant to a treatment and storage business, signing a new five-year lease with the county.

Family Files Suit Over Poison Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH POINT, N.C. — The family of a woman who died from arsenic poisoning in 1988 has filed suit against two hospitals and several doctors, saying they failed to detect the chemical soon enough to prevent the death.

Sandy Coles Coulthard died July 9, 1988 at Duke University Medical Center. An autopsy revealed she had 142 times the arsenic concentration normally found in humans.

Her husband, Rob, pleaded guilty in November 1988 to first-degree murder. He is now serving a life term in Raleigh's Central Prison.

The suit, filed Monday in Durham County Superior Court, seeks damages in excess of $10,000 for her two children, Evelyn Stewart Coulthard, 4, and Robert Adams Coulthard, 2.

The suit says the two hospitals failed to consider arsenic poisoning although test results proved positive for the poison a week before her death.

A Duke physician said last December the hospital did not receive the results until after Mrs. Coulthard died. The doctor, who remained anonymous, said if attending physicians had received the information, they could have stopped Coulthard from administering the fatal dose of arsenic on July 4, 1988, at the Duke hospital five days before his wife's death.

The suit was brought by Walter Coles, Mrs. Coulthard's father and guardian of her children. Listed as defendants are High Point Regional Hospital; Duke University Medical Center; Dr. Chester C. Hayworth of High Point; Quaker Medical and Neurological Group Inc. of High Point, owned by Hayworth and others; Dr. Gordon B. Arnold of High Point; High Point Internal Medicines Inc., owned by Arnold and others; Dr. J. Hatcher To Provide Own Defense

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Eddie Hatcher, accused of kidnapping in the takeover of a Lumberton newspaper last year, said Thursday he will provide his own defense when his case goes to trial.

Hatcher, in an interview with Raleigh radio station WAUG-AM from Central Prison, said he will file a motion next week to defend himself.

Superior Court Judge Robert Farmer disqualified all of Hatcher's attorneys from defending him during an arraignment last week in Robeson County because they failed to take proper defense steps.

Hatcher then refused to accept a court-appointed public defender "out of principle," he said.

When asked if he is capable of defending himself, Hatcher said, "I know the case like the back of my hand and I know what I'm up against and I know a little bit about the law."

Hatcher said he expected his trial to begin next spring.

Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs were charged with 14 counts of second-degree kidnapping stemming from the Feb. 1, 1988, armed takeover of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton.

Jacobs was sentenced to six years in prison in May after pleading guilty to his role in the incident.

Sheriff Dies

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Randolph County Sheriff Robert Mason died early this morning after suffering a heart attack at his home.

The 57-year-old former Asheboro police officer died in the emergency room at Randolph Memorial Hospital in Asheboro.

Mason, a Republican, had been elected to the position in 1980, and was in his third term as sheriff.

Tuition Report

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Student leaders at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill say they should be consulted when the Legislature considers tuition increases for state universities.

In a report to the Student Congress this week, Student Body President Brien Levis called for students to testify before state House and Senate committees and subcommittees on tuition decisions.

Another recommendation asks that future tuition increases take effect on a calendar year after they are approved by the General Assembly.

Since the General Assembly approved a 20 percent increase for in-state students and 15 percent increase for out-of-state students this summer, Lewis has been outspoken on the need to keep tuition low for students. He also criticized the timing of the increase, just a few weeks before students returned from summer break.

No Wrongdoing

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Wayne County grand jury has ruled that no criminal wrongdoing was involved in the death of Cherry Hospital patient in June.

The hearing, which began Monday, called for testimony from 33 witnesses, including members of the Goldsboro Police Department, the state medical examiner and the hospital's medical staff. Twelve of the 17-member jury needed to be in agreement on a verdict.

Albert Hucks, a patient in the high-management unit, reportedly attacked technicians during a psychotic episode on June 25. After being subdued, Hucks was placed in a restraining chair in the unit's seclusion room where he was later found dead. State Medical Examiner Dr. Thomas Clark ruled that Hucks died from neck compression.

Enrollment

GREENSBORO (AP) — Enrollment at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro has reached a high of 11,579 this fall, an increase of 405 students or 3.6 percent over the student body last September, school officials said Thursday.

Richard Moore, vice chancellor for administration and planning, said the school's enrollment growth this fall was focused at the undergraduate level, where the number of students grew by 505 from 8,441 to 8,946.

This marks the sixth straight fall UNC-G's enrollment rate has increased. Last fall, enrollment rose from 10,688 to 11,174.

Food Council

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The National State Department of Agriculture has called for the establishment of a National Council on Food Safety to ensure continued consumer confidence in the nation's food supply.

"I have long advocated that a national council on food safety be set up ...," said North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

"It's one thing to talk about pure, wholesome, nutritious food and another to do something about insuring food quality," Graham said Thursday.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture has been a leader among states in food testing and food safety, Graham said. Graham said the state's food and drug laboratory is one of the best equipped in the nation and is a model for other state departments of agriculture.

Parkway Deaths

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — James Gibbs, the man accused of pushing his wife and her friend off a Blue Ridge Parkway overlook last October, will be granted a court-appointed lawyer for his retrial, a judge ruled Thursday.

The court will name a lawyer for Gibbs sometime before a change-of-venue hearing slated for Nov. 27 in Marion, Superior Court Judge Robert Gaines said.

The state hopes to retry Gibbs early next year.

Ronnie Mitchell, Gibbs' attorney during his first murder trial, told the judge he has not been paid for his services, other than some reimbursement for expenses.

The first proceeding was declared a mistrial June 19 after a jury deadlocked 10-to-2 in favor of conviction.

Political Dates

RALEIGH (AP) — Top Democratic and Republican officials may be in Raleigh this fall as the two parties prepare for the 1990 election year.

National Democratic Party Chairman Ron Brown is scheduled to address the State Democratic Executive Committee on Nov. 11. It will be the first political appearance in the state for Brown.

State Republicans, meanwhile, are trying to get GOP National Chairman Lee Atwater to attend a fundraiser, called the Hall of Fame, in Raleigh on Nov. 3.

Senator Charged

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — A state senator's car ended up on the front steps of City Hall after he pulled into the path of an oncoming car Wednesday night, police said.

Sen. Jim Ezzell, D-Nash, was charged with failure to yield the right of way after he apparently pulled his car away from a stop sign and into the path of another car, said police Officer W.D. White.

Authorities said Ezzell was not injured, while the driver of the other car complained of dizziness but was not taken to a hospital.

Cherokee Bingo

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — The Tribal Council of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians voted Thursday to put the management of its multimillion-dollar bingo game back out for bids.

The move came despite a recommendation from the council's bingo committee that the games remain a tribal enterprise with an employed manager.

Dan McCoy, interim manager of the games, will continue in that post.

The move came after the Bureau of Indian Affairs announced it would not approve McCoy's contract with the tribe to run the bingo games if McCoy is sworn in as a Tribal Council member. McCoy was elected Sept. 7 to the Tribal Council as the high votegetter from Birdtown township.

BIA guidelines say a party to the contract cannot be an elected official of the tribal government.

Youth Corps

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Durham and Winston-Salem are two of 23 cities nationwide that made the first cut in a bid to be part of a $65 million venture to set up urban youth corps.

Sponsors announced Thursday that the Urban Corps Expansion Project has awarded $10,000 grants to the cities to start planning urban youth corps modeled after similar programs from the 1930s.

The five-year project is a collaboration between national foundations, two national non-profit organizations, city and state governments, private groups and community organizations.

Beddingfield Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — Charles A. Beddingfield Jr., for years the state director of veterans affairs, died Thursday after a six-month battle with cancer. He was 71.

After serving in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II, where he achieved the rank of master sergeant, Beddingfield was appointed district service officer for the N.C. Division of Veterans Affairs in 1945.

At the time of his death, Beddingfield was director of the Division of Veterans Affairs and an assistant secretary of the state Department of Administration.

Recently, Beddingfield had received a special award from Gov. Jim Martin for his 49 years of service to the state.

Tough Battle

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina Chancellor Paul Hardin's call for more fiscal autonomy at UNC system campuses faces a tough battle in the General Assembly, House Speaker Joe Mavretic said.

"The debate will be hot and heavy," Mavretic told the Chapel Hill Rotary Club. "I suspect Paul's plan will be frustrated internally because there is such a wide spectrum from flagship university to a Fayetteville State University."

Hardin is urging the General Assembly to permit the 16 UNC campuses to collect and spend their own tuition revenue. Currently all tuition revenue must be turned over to the state's general fund and redistributed at the direction of the General Assembly.

Miss S.C. Is Preliminary Winner

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Miss Illinois, winner of a Miss America swimsuit preliminary, said she trained for the event on foods "fattening, sweet and full of junk."

The 21-year-old Jeri Lynn Zimmermann of Chicago laughed off any suggestion that she had dieted for the pageant, saying that dinner Thursday included "french fries and Boston clam chowder."

Miss Zimmermann, who has light brown hair and blue eyes, stands 5-foot-8 and weighs 115 pounds, wore a teal blue "supersuit" made of a heavy material that enhances prominent features.

A senior at Northwestern University majoring in theater, Miss Zimmermann said she stays in shape by swimming, skiing, jogging, playing volleyball and training with weights.

Miss South Carolina, Kimilee Karyn Bryant of Greenville, S.C., sang a classical vocal titled "Je Suis Titania" to take the talent portion.

Miss Bryant received a music performance degree in 1988 from Converse College and is now in her second year of graduate studies in vocal performance at the Manhattan School of Music.

CP&L Says Layoffs Delaying Rate Hike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Carolina Power & Light Co. probably won't need to seek a general rate increase until at least 1992 because of the layoffs announced two weeks ago, the company's chairman said Thursday.

"We would expect these changes would postpone the need to consider seeking general rate relief for at least two years," said Sherwood Smith Jr., who also serves as president and chief executive officer of the Raleigh-based electric utility.

He said he hoped the company would delay seeking an increase until late 1992 or beyond. The company previously had said only that it hoped to avoid requesting a rate hike until the early 1990s.

On Aug. 28, the company announced that it would lay off 485 employees — 6 percent of its workforce of 9,000 employees — and offered 300 more employees the option of changing their status in the company or being laid off.

The number of laid-off workers has totaled 570.

Smith said company morale was "excellent" in the wake of the layoffs.

He said the CP&L had been forced to eliminate important jobs in the face of financial pressure.

He cited a decision by the state Utilities Commission last year to allow CP&L a $135 million increase to help pay for its $3.8 billion Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant. The company had requested an increase of $203 million.

"You had intense financial pressure placed on the organization by that fact," he said. The company's earnings last year, which fell to $2.04 a share from $3.90 per share in 1987, were $1.89 per share less than they would have been had the commission approved the entire increase, he said.

Only a small portion of the jobs that were eliminated had been directly related to construction of the Harris plant, he said.

Asked if he might forego a pay raise in the wake of the layoffs, he said, "I would not comment on my own (salary). It's set like the rest of the salaries."

The layoffs will not affect the company's normal policy of reviewing salaries for senior management, Smith said. CP&L's top executives last year received increased in their compensation packages ranging from 5.2 percent to 9.1 percent. Smith's package increased 5.2 percent to $411,654.

The judging has been revised this year to diminish the importance of the contestants' figures.

Early Treatment For AIDS Could Cost $5 Billion

By Michael Specter
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Providing effective early treatment to the more than 1 million Americans now infected with the AIDS virus would cost at least $5 billion a year and have profound effects on nearly every aspect of the nation's health-care system, according to a major policy analysis released Thursday.

The recent discovery that AZT can delay illness among people infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which causes AIDS, and that aerosolized pentamidine often prevents the pneumonia responsible for most AIDS deaths has brought new hope to tens of thousands. But for the first time since the AIDS epidemic began, the economic implications of treatment have begun to catch up with medical progress.

Even if a small "fraction" of those who use the drugs, testing and medical supervision recommended by the Public Health Service for early HIV treatment, it would "radically increase demands on the health care system," according to the report, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A national program of early treatment for 1 million or more people infected with HIV could cost $10 billion a year, according to the authors. By comparison, dialysis for the nation's 110,000 patients with end-stage kidney disease costs at least $2 billion a year.

Early treatment of those infected with HIV is costly, complicated and requires enormous medical sophistication. There are important diagnostic tests that infected people need to have regularly to measure the vitality of their immune systems. Drugs are expensive, and so are frequent visits to doctors that most of those with the virus cannot afford.

Many of those infected are indigent and live in inner cities. They are often drug addicts and uninsured. AIDS has disproportionately afflicted racial minorities.

Effective early intervention could alter the course of one of the most devastating epidemics in modern history," said Douglas Shenson, one of the paper's authors, who works in the department of epidemiology and social medicine at the Montefiore Medical Center-Albert Einstein College of Medicine, in the South Bronx, where more than 5 percent of all young men are estimated to be infected with HIV. "But these are not people political leaders care a great deal about."

The authors said any large-scale attempt to treat people before they become ill would have to overcome major economic barriers. Unlike treating AIDS when people are near death, the costs of which are often reimbursed by private insurance or Medicaid, the expense of treating a disease before people get sick is rarely covered by private or public insurance.

In particular, drug payments for AZT and similar drugs that will eventually be available, are only reimbursed for people who are sick. The healthier the patient the less likely insurers are to pay for the drugs that might delay illness.

"The price is high, but if we pay for AZT and pentamidine early in the disease we can forestall the need to pay for expensive hospitalization," said Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health. "Maybe for a few years of additional life and work, maybe long enough for researchers to find a real cure, meaning no hospital costs at all."

The authors submitted the paper before AZT was shown to delay symptoms of AIDS in many of those infected with HIV. To illustrate the magnitude of the costs associated with early treatment, they looked at how much it would cost if infected people were given only pentamidine.

"Were early intervention to have begun in 1988," the authors write, "the costs of treating 50 percent of all seropositive (infected) individuals nationally would have been in the range of $5 billion." The cost of AZT to that would add billions.

Since AZT's broader effectiveness was announced last month, activists have protested bitterly against Burroughs Wellcome Co., which makes the drug in Greenville, N.C. Although the company's potential market expanded from 50,000 to as many as 650,000, it did not cut the $8,000 price for yearly treatment.

Thursday, several members of the AIDS-activist group ACT-UP were arrested at the New York Stock Exchange during a lunchtime demonstration to protest the drug's price.

Activists Protest AZT Cost

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Five activists chained themselves to a banister at the New York Stock Exchange to protest the high cost of AZT, a drug used to treat AIDS.

Three of the five, members of the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, were described as having AIDS or AIDS-related complex.

According to Sharon Gamsin, vice president for media relations at the exchange, the incident occurred at the start of trading Thursday, 9:30 a.m.

The five, dressed as floor traders and wearing fake brokerage firm IDs, chained themselves to a banister of a balcony overlooking the exchange floor.

There, they unfurled a banner that read, "SELL WELLCOME" — a reference to Burroughs Wellcome, manufacturer of AZT — and set off miniature fog horns.

Burroughs Wellcome manufactures AZT at its plant in Greenville, N.C.

Ms. Gamsin said the five were removed by guards and turned over to police. "We will file charges against them," she said.

She noted that Burroughs Wellcome is traded over the counter, not on the New York Stock Exchange.

Federal studies have found that AZT is effective in slowing the course of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but it costs $8,000 to $10,000 a year.

Burroughs Wellcome officials have said the price is necessary to pay for manufacturing and for research.

Missile Destroyed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Military officials are trying to pinpoint the malfunction that forced the destruction of an MX missile making the system's first test as an operational weapon system.

The MX missile was destroyed three minutes into flight Thursday, the third failure in a new generation of U.S. nuclear missiles since March.

"A team of Air Force and Department of Defense contractor engineers is analyzing data from the flight to analyze the cause of the anomaly," said Air Force Tech. Sgt. Ernest Dawson. "After they have complete their tests, the Air Force will determine if any system modifications are necessary to correct or improve the Peacekeeper weapon system."

The $75 million MX was destroyed by a signal sent by Western Test Range safety officers after telemetry indicated a problem aboard the four-stage intercontinental ballistic missile.

The launch was under control of a 44-person task force from F.E. Warren Air Force Base, Wyoming and overseen by Lt. Col. Robert Cook, commander of the 90th Organizational Missile Maintenance Squadron.

Fifty MX missiles are deployed at Warren, located near Cheyenne.

Three MX missiles were scheduled to undergo similar tests next year.

Rifleman Had Given Warning

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A printing plant worker who shot 20 co-workers had pledged to get even after being let go for mental disability last year, but his warnings went unheeded, employees at the plant say.

Joseph T. Wesbecker, armed with several semiautomatic weapons, went from floor to floor shooting former co-workers at the Standard Gravure Corp., killing seven and wounding 13 before taking his own life Thursday morning.

Wesbecker, a 47-year-old pressman, was placed on permanent disability leave last year because of mental illness, police said.

"He carried a big grudge because of that," said George Oswine, a former co-worker. "He said before he left he would get even. I remember that."

Oswine said Wesbecker had begun collecting guns since his leave.

Another former co-worker, pressman Joe White, said Wesbecker's talk centered on guns and Soldier of Fortune magazine. White, whose brother Lloyd was killed in the rampage, said Wesbecker thought of himself as a soldier.

"This guy's been talking about this for a year," White said. "I guess nobody believed him," said Dan Frazier, president of the union local.

Frazier said Wesbecker had become more upset recently because he thought his disability benefits were about to be cut off.

Relatives told police that Wesbecker was a manic depressive who had attempted suicide three times. Wesbecker also had voluntarily spent time in mental institutions, said Lt. Jeff Moody, commander of the police homicide division.

Wesbecker entered the building at 8:30 a.m. EDT and took the elevator to the third floor.

"He just came off the elevator shooting," said Kathy Wilkins, an assistant buyer. "The elevator doors opened and he started firing."

Two receptionists apparently were the first to be hit. Both were wounded; one later died.

Police found four other victims on the third floor, where the executive offices and bindery are located. Wesbecker went from there down to the basement, where five victims were found, then up to the ground floor, where six victims and the gunman were discovered.

Wesbecker was face down in a pool of blood on the floor of a pressroom.

Two other wounded people had been removed by medics before police arrived, and another victim was on the street outside.

Former co-worker John Tingle said he greeted Wesbecker as he saw him coming around a corner in the basement carrying an AK-47 assault rifle.

He quoted Wesbecker as saying, "I told them I'd be back. Get away from me."

Tingle obliged and Wesbecker proceeded up the stairs to the first floor.

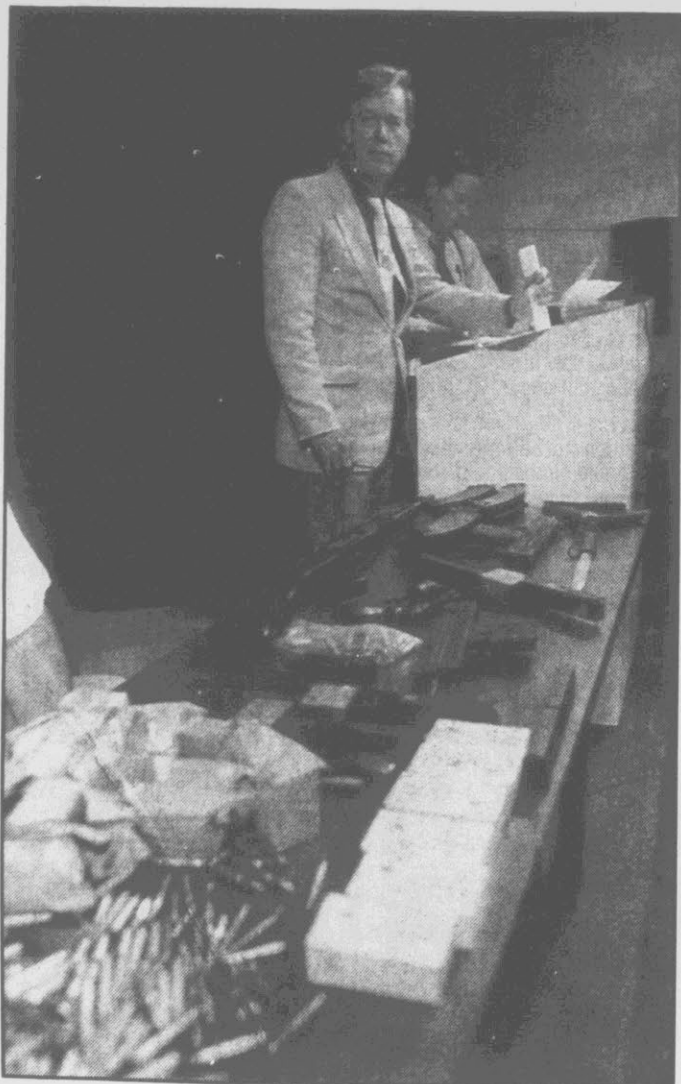

"He didn't fire at me, I guess because he liked me," Tingle said. But "the guys he had shot in the pressroom were friends too."

Police Maj. Ed Mercer said police had not determined how many workers were in the building, but it was "a bunch. They were stampeding over us as we were trying to get in."

Sgt. Frank Portman, one of the first officers on the scene, said he felt helpless.

"Every place we went we were stepping over people and blood," Portman said. "People were wailing, wanting help. And with a shooting victim, there's not much you can do."

Three of the wounded were in critical condition Thursday night with multiple gunshot wounds, said officials at Humana Hospital-University of Louisville, where more than 100 doctors were called in to help treat them.

Wesbecker's weapons included the AK-47, two MAC-11 semiautomatic machine pistols, a .38-caliber handgun, a 9mm automatic pistol and a bayonet, said Police Chief Richard Dotson. He carried a duffel bag full of ammunition.

Wesbecker reportedly had made threats against the company, which prints newspaper inserts and Sunday newspaper supplements, but Standard Gravure President Michael Shea said he did not know of any threats.

"I'm at a loss to speculate on anything," Shea said. "What's going through my mind right now is sympathy and caring for the people who are involved."

A woman who answered the telephone at a house where Wesbecker's mother was staying said the family did not want to comment.

"We're just in shock like everybody else. We had to find out over the television. No one called us," said the woman, who did not identify herself. "I guess he was just a sick person. That's all."

Book Says Dukakis Shaken By '87 Flap

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Michael Dukakis, shaken by the videotape flap that rocked his presidential campaign in September 1987, retreated into a "two-month shell" that had campaign aides concerned about his moodiness, a new book says.

The incident that forced the resignation of campaign manager John Sasso, a close friend and adviser to Dukakis, was described in "All by Myself," a book written by Boston Globe reporters Christine M. Black and Thomas Oliphant.

"He missed Sasso personally and politically, and worried about him," they wrote of the Democratic candidate, and said he became "flat as a pancake out on the hustings."

"Dukakis' glum mood was also reflected in an almost petulant unwillingness to try new material in his speeches," according to the account.

New campaign manager Susan Estrich was quoted as saying the Massachusetts governor would "return from the road convinced that no one liked him." Estrich was described as "bothered by his moody moods," while campaign chairman Paul Brontas said the candidate entered "a two-month shell."

Sasso was forced to resign in September 1987 after it was disclosed that he had secretly distributed a videotape showing that Sen. Joseph Biden Jr. of Delaware, a Dukakis rival for the Democratic nomination, was appropriating as his own campaign speeches made by British Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock.

Sasso had acted without the knowledge of Dukakis, who publicly denied his campaign had any role in leaking the videotape.

The account also described how Dukakis repeatedly rejected appeals from campaign aides to go on the attack against Republican George Bush. The book outlined an advertising effort that at one point produced 1,200 unused scripts for commercials.

Although he once had a double-digit lead over Bush in the polls, Dukakis found himself trailing after the Republican National Convention in August 1988.

Dukakis was described as "cocky and confident" when he went into a dress rehearsal for his first debate with Bush, an encounter considered crucial to his chances of regaining the initiative in the campaign.

But Robert Barnett, a Washington lawyer playing the role of Bush in the debate rehearsal, "peppered Dukakis mercilessly with barbed assaults emphasizing liberal sins and weaknesses," wrote the Globe reporters. "Dukakis tried to fight back, but was gradually reduced to mumbling stock campaign phrases, sometimes barely audible."

House Panel Approves Bush's Tax Plan, Sets Up First Test For Foley

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House taxwriters' narrow approval of a capital gains tax cut sought by President Bush sets the stage for the first major leadership test of new House Speaker Thomas S. Foley Jr. and his top Democratic deputies.

Over vehement objections from Foley and other party leaders, six Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee joined 13 Republicans in a 19-17 vote Thursday to cut the tax.

Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., called his panel's action "a financial disaster" and "ultimate expression of 'feel good' economics" that could unravel the rate-equalizing, loophole-closing tax reforms of 1986.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "We are pleased by the vote and we will be working hard to sustain it on the floor."

The plan approved by the committee would reduce the tax rate of 33 percent to 19.6 percent for the next 27 months. The tax rate then would rise to 28 percent but would be "indexed" to tax only increases exceeding the annual inflation rate.

The net effect to taxpayers is similar to Bush's campaign proposal to reduce the capital gains tax rate to 15 percent without indexing.

The Ways and Means budget bill also lowers the premiums for catastrophic health insurance for the elderly and finances a massive increase in child-care subsidies for low-income families. The 1990 fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

The six Democrats, led by Reps. Ed Jenkins of Florida and J.J. Pickle of Texas, resisted weeks of entreaties from Foley and House Democratic Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri that the proposal is little more than a giveaway to the rich.

"The notion that wealthy Americans need another tax break at the expense of working people is ludicrous," Gephardt said. "Who's going to pay? ... The answer is the ordinary, middle-income working American, that's who."

Because the wealthy own most capital assets — such as stocks, bonds and real estate — they would benefit the most from the tax break. The Joint Committee on Taxation estimated that 80 percent of the $4 billion to $5 billion in benefits will go to taxpayers with incomes above $100,000 a year.

Supporters contend a capital gains tax cut would help the economy by encouraging investment.

Cutting the capital gains rate would bring in more tax money for the next three years, by providing incentives to sell such assets, according to government estimates.

However, after that the reduction would cost the Treasury $2.8 billion to $5 billion a year, according to the Joint Committee on Taxation.

Rostenkowski expressed bitter frustration that one-fourth of his committee's Democrats sided with the 13 Republicans to give them a majority on more than a half-dozen votes aimed at whittling down the capital gains amendment cosponsored by Jenkins and Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas.

"If the evident divisions within the committee are any indication, the House is in for a painful fight," said Rostenkowski.

Democrats voting with Jenkins and Pickle for the tax cut were Reps. Mike Andrews of Texas, Beryl Anthony of Arkansas, Andrew Jacobs of Indiana and Ronnie Flippo of Alabama.

Republicans predicted they would pick up as many as 70 of the House's 255 Democrats when the legislation moves to the House floor late this month.

Other Democrats said it will take a carefully orchestrated campaign for a positive counterproposal to stop the momentum for giving Bush what he wants.

"There has to be a response from our party's perspective other than just being against," said Rep. Brian J. Donnelly, D-Mass. "This will be Foley's first real major decision."

Gephardt said the Democrats were looking at a variety of alternatives, including raising the tax rate on high incomes and a plan advanced by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to partially restore tax deductions on contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts.

The changes in the Medicare catastrophic health insurance plan and new child benefits were informally approved earlier.

Over five years, lower-income families would receive an additional $14 billion in tax credits and $2 billion in state-administered grants aimed at improving child care for working parents.

The major part of the increase would come from liberalizing the earned-income credit, which benefits lower-income working families with children. The credit would be worth more to larger families; it could range up to $1,790 a year for those with three or more children. A new credit of up to $430 a year would help families with children under the age of 6.

Trade Deficit Falls For 2nd Month In A Row

By John D. McClain
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit narrowed for the second straight month in July, to $7.58 billion, the smallest gap in nearly five years, the government said today.

The Commerce Department reported the July deficit represented a 5.3 percent decrease from a revised June deficit of $8.01 billion.

In another report, the government said wholesale prices fell for the third consecutive month in August as a big drop in energy costs pushed inflation down by 0.4 percent.

The decline in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index followed a similar 0.4 percent plunge in July and a 0.1 percent dip in June. It was the first time wholesale prices have fallen for three consecutive months since early 1986.

The narrowing trade gap came from a 2.5 percent decrease in imports to $38.32 billion and a 1.8 percent decrease in exports to $30.74 billion. The trade deficit is the difference between imports and exports.

The overall July deficit of $7.58 billion was the smallest since a $6.79 billion imbalance in December 1984.

Economists had been expecting the deficit to widen as imports fueled by oil purchases rose while the higher dollar cut exports by making them more expensive overseas.

America's foreign oil bill rose 2.9 percent to $4.3 billion in July. The amount of imported oil rose to 8.14 million barrels a day from 7.93 million in June and the price per barrel fell to $17.12 from $17.67 in June.

The decrease in exports included such manufactured goods as automobiles, machinery and materials while shipments of airplanes increased.

In addition to oil, increased imports included clothing and footwear and general industrial machinery. Decreases included automobiles and trucks and electrical and specialized industrial machinery.

Analysts had been looking for an imbalance of between $8.5 billion and $9 billion in July.

But despite the July improvement, economists are predicting that the deficits will begin rising in the second half of the year as American exports suffer from the rising value of the dollar.

Analysts also say oil imports will continue to rise as U.S. consumption increases and domestic production falls, becoming a major factor in producing a widening deficit in coming months.

The American Petroleum Institute, an industry group, reported imported oil in July accounted for more than half of U.S. petroleum needs, the first time that has occurred in 12 years.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for The Boston Co., said "the big surprise so far this year has been how good exports have done in the face of a rising dollar."

He attributed that to "very strong economies overseas ... with a big capital spending boom spilling over and helping U.S. exports."

"But by late in the year, the higher dollar will be denting exports," Sinai added.

A higher dollar makes U.S. goods more expensive in overseas markets.

For the first half of the year, the deficit has been running at an annual rate of $108.6 billion, down 8.4 percent from last year's total merchandise trade deficit of $118.5 billion.

Despite the first-half improvement, many economists predict deficit growth in the last half of the year will make the total imbalance for 1989 about what it was in 1988.

A worsening trade deficit means a double dose of bad news for the Bush administration. The administration based its predictions of healthy economic growth partly on a belief that exports would keep expanding. If this does not occur, the federal budget deficit will be higher because tax revenues will be lower.

Additionally, higher trade deficits increase the pressure for protectionist trade measures to keep out imports, something the administration opposes.

Hugo Heads For Caribbean

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Hurricane Hugo, packing winds estimated at 120 mph, bore down on the Caribbean today and forecasters said residents of the Leeward Islands could feel its fury this weekend.

"The fringe effects of the storm are already being felt," said forecaster Gil Clark of the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables. "The seas are already getting rough off the islands because of swells emanating off the storm."

At 6 a.m. EDT, Hugo's center was located near 14.1 north latitude and 52.8 west longitude, or about 550 miles east of the Lesser Antilles. The storm was moving west at 15 mph, down from a peak of 20 mph Wednesday night.

"The only way it's going to miss those islands is it's going to have to swerve northward," Clark said.

He added that forecasters saw no indications Hugo would turn that way. "We've been lucky this year. We've had two or three storms head toward the islands and then turn north. Maybe we'll get lucky again but it doesn't look like it in this case."

Three of this season's Atlantic hurricanes — Dean, Erin and Gabrielle — turned north into the open Atlantic before reaching the Caribbean, forecaster Hal Gerrish said.

Last year, killer Hurricane Gilbert held the westward course, pounding Jamaica and Mexico.

Hugo developed quickly into a major storm. Its highest sustained winds rose by more than 35 mph Thursday alone and were estimated at 120 mph this morning.

"It really was amazing how fast the eye formed and it almost doubled its winds," Clark said. Conditions favored the hurricane's strengthening today; forecasters expected no change in its motion.

Hugo's winds classify it as a 3 on the Saffir-Simpson scale, a sort of Richter scale for storms.

Yeltsin meets with Reagan Thursday at St. Marys Hospital in Rochester, Minn.

Reagan On Way Back Home

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Former President Reagan will return to his California home a week after undergoing successful surgery to remove fluid from his skull.

"He feels great," Reagan spokesman Mark Weinberg said Thursday. "His stamina's good."

Reagan, 78, and his wife, Nancy, were to fly to Los Angeles this morning and return to their home near the city, Weinberg said.

Reagan has been recuperating since last Friday, when Mayo Clinic doctors drained fluid that had built up on his brain after he was thrown from a horse on July 4.

Reagan met Thursday with Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Soviet parliament member Boris Yeltsin.

"It seemed as if he feels pretty good," Yeltsin said after the 20-minute meeting. "We've never had a personal meeting before."

The 58-year-old Yeltsin was in Minneapolis for a private dinner Wednesday with business leaders. He said he squeezed the Reagan visit into his week-long tour of the United States "simply as a sign of respect for him and an opportunity to wish him a rapid recovery."

Yeltsin brought Reagan a bouquet of red roses and, according to Weinberg, told him: "You gave the start to the very perceptible warming of relations between the two countries. Your contribution to this was enormous. You were very wise, courageous and tactful in the way you went about it. I am very grateful to you for this."

UAL Board OKs Buyout

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — UAL Corp.'s directors have approved a buyout by a group of pilots and top executives that would make the parent of United Airlines the largest employee-owned company in the nation.

UAL announced Thursday night that it had signed a $300-a-share, or $6.75 billion, agreement with the labor-management group.

The plan could end a 6-week takeover battle at the nation's second-largest airline.

California investor Marvin Davis, who started the battle and eventually bid $6.19 billion, or $275 a share, for UAL, declined to comment immediately on the announcement. His spokesman, Jim Fingerth, said Davis would respond later today.

A source close to the UAL takeover battle said Davis may still pursue his bid, despite the agreement with the management-labor group.

"I would not assume that this means it's over," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The agreement was announced after the employee group made a presentation to a special committee of the UAL board and revealed the financing for the bid.

Frederick Dubinsky, a spokesman for United's unit of the Air Line Pilots Association, said he believes the plan will go forward.

"We bring something to the table that no one else can bring," Dubinsky said in a telephone interview early today from New York.

The pilot-management group's proposal includes a seven-year no-strike guarantee by the pilots and cuts in wages and benefits, terms that any outsider would have difficulty matching.

Under the agreement announced Thursday, Chicago-based UAL would merge with Airline Acquisition Corp., the group formed by pilots and management. Employees would own 75 percent of the company, UAL management would hold 10 percent and British Airways PLC would own 15 percent.

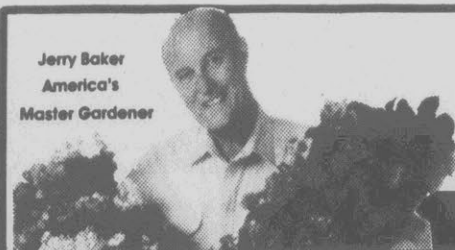

"The merger agreement we have just signed is designed to secure the future of United Airlines and its 68,000 employees, to serve the public with quality air transportation and to provide the best value to UAL's shareholders," said UAL Chairman Stephen Wolf.

The deal still would need the approval of shareholders and the Department of Transportation, which is not expected to raise major objections although in the past it has been concerned about foreign carriers buying into U.S. airlines.

With inclusion of financing costs, the deal would total $7.2 billion. Citibank and the Chase Manhattan Bank have committed $3 billion to finance the buyout and will obtain commitments for an additional $4.2 billion, officials said.

The buyout attempt is led by Wolf and the 6,300 United pilots represented by ALPA. The group had hoped to win support from United's other unions.

The Association of Flight Attendants, representing about 12,700 United workers, met with management Tuesday and "has begun negotiations toward possible participation" in the employee buyout effort, said spokeswoman Carol Holmes.

House Panel Threatens To Subpoena Former HUD Secretary As A Witness

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce did not appear today as scheduled before a House subcommittee investigating scandals at his department, and the panel's chairman said he would seek a subpoena to compel his testimony.

Pierce abruptly canceled plans to testify Thursday evening, saying he had not had time to prepare and had only recently hired an attorney.

But Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., subcommittee chairman, said at the hearing opened: "I can understand not being able to find affordable housing in Washington, but not an attorney."

Lantos said he would ask his House Government Operations housing and employment subcommittee to vote next Wednesday on a subpoena that would require Pierce to testify at several future hearings.

The ranking Republican on the subcommittee also attacked Pierce's decision. "Not only is 'Silent Sam' silent, apparently today he's also invisible," said Rep. Donald "Buz" Lukens, R-Ohio.

In a statement Thursday night, Pierce said he was willing to testify at an appropriate time and accused the subcommittee of unfairly denying his request for an extension.

"I will not voluntarily appear," the former Housing and Urban Development secretary said. "I have fully and completely cooperated with the subcommittee right up until today, but its refusal to allow me an additional two weeks preparation time, when numerous other witnesses have been granted even longer postponements, simply is unfair."

The panel is investigating allegations that prominent Republicans and former HUD officials won favored treatment from the agency during Pierce's eight years as secretary in the Reagan administration and that poor management left HUD unable to account for hundreds of millions of dollars.

Opening the hearing today, Lantos said: "Mr. Pierce has chosen — in a unilateral and arbitrary fashion — to break a firm agreement I made with him and his attorney to appear voluntarily at this hearing."

He then referred to a letter from Pierce's HUD file in which former Interior Secretary James Watt referred to Pierce as "a man of your word."

"Regrettably that statement appears to apply only to mod rehab units," Lantos said, referring to Watt's work as a consultant for developers who sought federal contracts for work under HUD's Moderate Rehabilitation program.

Subcommittee member Barney Frank, D-Mass., referred to a House ethics investigation he faces because of a relationship with a male prostitute in criticizing Pierce for refusing to appear today.

Frank, who requested the ethics review and has made several public statements since word of the relationship surfaced last month, said that when the conduct of public officials is questioned, "the public is entitled to the promptest possible resolution of those issues before the appropriate public body."

Pierce's attorney, Paul Perito, said in an interview, "Mr. Pierce wants to tell his entire story. However, he needs to be adequately prepared to do so."

Tar Plan Approved

forged by the municipalities affected by the pollution restrictions could more efficiently clean the river, and at a savings to the state and the municipalities.

Six municipalities representing more than 50 percent of the municipal discharge into the river have agreed to back Green's plan. Green said he has received at least verbal support from the governments of Greenville, Washington, Rocky Mount, Louisburg, Oxford and Franklin County.

"I think EMC has given us the opportunity to make it work," Green said today.

"I think all the parties want to make it work," he said.

He said the organization would now have to solidify support from the remaining municipalities along the river and begin work on the technical staffs would begin work on further study of the river. "We'll know in 90 days if we can or can't make it work," Green said.

Green's plan would include the state, environmental groups, water quality experts and the municipal treatment plants in forming a management strategy for the river.

Green told the commission the plan could include trading credits on nutrient reduction goals at the individual treatment plants and more effective control of indirect pollution to reduce the overall nutrient content in the river.

"We propose to speed up, not delay nutrient reduction," Green told the commission.

Doug Rader, senior scientist with the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund, said the environmental community would support any plan that could clean the river more effectively and in a shorter time than proposed by the state. Rader, speaking for EDF and the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, also said the coalition of municipalities in the river basin would benefit the state by moving the cost burden to the local level.

"We hope that EMC can take the lead in a very important matter," Rader said. Cleanup of the Tar River offers the state a chance to develop a workable model for other rivers in the state.

After first accepting the proposal without including the management strategy from DEM, the commission reversed its vote and included the state's management strategy as a "safety net" in case the municipalities cannot work an agreement.

the intent to deceive, Speier said. She will be eligible to apply for reinstatement after one year if she seeks treatment for unspecified personal problems, he said.

Speier would not comment on his statements to The Daily Reflector today. He did, however, confirm that they are true.

Ms. Riggs told police she had been raped by a white male wearing a red ski mask who approached her from behind after she parked her car. Greenville police reported Wednesday that Ms. Riggs admitted she had not been raped after investigators began to doubt her story.

Greenville police referred the case to District Attorney Tom Haigwood's office, but recommended that Ms. Riggs not be prosecuted. Haigwood has decided not to prosecute, he said today.

Exxon Closes Out Valdez Operation

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

VALDEZ, Alaska — After spending six months and more than $1 billion trying to clean up the worst oil spill in U.S. history, Exxon was suspending its massive operation here today, leaving Alaska's sullied shores to a winter of uncertainty.

But as the oil giant publicly congratulated itself and cranked up a final public relations blitz to shake off "the black hat," wary state officials complained about work left undone in Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska.

About 10.8 million gallons of North Slope crude oil gushed into the sound when the supertanker Exxon Valdez ran aground March 24. The state maintains that 57 percent of the original spill — some 147,400 barrels — remains unrecovered, either on 1,244 miles of contaminated shoreline or in the water.

Through a misty fog, the remnants of a summer army that totaled nearly 12,000 workers, 1,200 boats and 100 aircraft straggled back into port here Thursday.

"I think they could have worked out here for another six weeks," said Steve Provant, the state's on-scene coordinator for the Department of Environmental Conservation.

"They're all from Louisiana and Texas and they're probably more fearful of winter here than the Alaskans," he added.

Promising to leave 300 emergency crews, scientists and monitors behind to survey oiled areas and collect data over the winter, Exxon insisted that the demobilization amounted to a scale-down rather than a pull-out.

"We are not leaving," declared Otto Harrison, Exxon's general manager of Valdez operations. "We are here and we care."

Terry Koonce, a senior vice president, defended Exxon's clean-up efforts, which often came under fire from the state and environmentalists as too-little-too-late.

"In time, we'll be fully exonerated," he said in an interview.

"We acknowledged our responsibility from the beginning and we apologized to the American people and we promised to do everything we could to make it right," Koonce said. "Normally, when you do all that, you don't have to wear a black hat in our society."

"We've taken a pretty good hammering."

According to biologists, so did the wildlife in Prince William Sound.

To date, the casualty toll numbers 980 sea otters, 138 bald eagles and 33,126 sea birds. Exxon's winter plans do not include wildlife rescue or rehabilitation.

Plane Hits Near Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ONTARIO, Calif. — A small cargo plane crashed in a suburban yard today just after takeoff from Ontario International Airport, killing the pilot and damaging the house but causing no other deaths or injuries, police said.

"Witnesses reported that a propeller and pieces of an engine fell off shortly after takeoff," said Jim Vandever, a police detective who was at the scene.

The Piper 31 Navajo, leased by United Parcel Service, was on a scheduled flight to Santa Barbara, Vandever said.

He said the pilot, who was not immediately identified, was pronounced dead at the scene.

The twin-engine plane crashed in a middle-class residential neighborhood northwest of the runway about 6:50 a.m., scarring a home.

"There were broken windows and fire damage to the front of the house, but it's still standing and it looks like you could still inhabit it," Vandever said.

The National Transportation Safety Board was to investigate at the accident site, in San Bernardino County about 40 miles east of Los Angeles.

Dortch Testifies Bakker Gave TV Viewers False Totals On Donations

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jim Bakker's right-hand man at PTL testified that the evangelist knowingly gave his TV viewers phony fund-raising numbers and knew that $265,000 in church funds went to Jessica Hahn as hush money.

Former PTL Vice President Richard Dortch testified in Bakker's fraud and conspiracy trial on Thursday that the ministry kept two sets of fund-raising figures — a secret one with the actual numbers and a phony one with lower numbers that Bakker read to TV viewers.

"No one understands this plan really but me," Dortch recalled Bakker telling him.

Dortch said only a few insiders — including Bakker — knew the amount of money raised daily at all PTL operations.

Dortch was second-in-command at PTL, responsible for day-to-day operations. He was indicted with Bakker, but last month pleaded guilty to four counts of fraud and conspiracy and was sentenced to eight years in prison and fined $200,000. In the plea arrangement he agreed to testify against Bakker.

Dortch said Bakker considered the partnerships an unlimited "gold mine." Dortch said Bakker told him: "This was the easiest money we could raise, and there would be no limit to what amount could be raised in the days to come."

Dortch, 57, and now living in Safety Harbor, Fla., earlier said Bakker pushed the partnerships because "he needed the money." Prosecutors contend Bakker used more than $3.7 million raised from the sales to fund his lavish lifestyle.

PTL promoted 11 different partnership programs between 1984 and 1987, offering four days and three nights of lodging each year for life at PTL's Heritage USA theme park and religious retreat near Fort Mill, S.C., in exchange for $1,000.

Bakker was willing to oversell the partnerships because he was convinced he could manipulate the comings and goings of partnership owners "by getting partners here (to Heritage USA) when we wanted them to come and by keeping them away ... when we don't want them to come," Dortch testified.

The trial has included testimony from former partners who said they sent Bakker $1,000 for lodging but were turned away when they tried to claim their rooms.

Dortch, a former state superintendent of the Assemblies of God Church, told jurors he first learned about the partnerships in January 1984. He had been at PTL about three weeks.

"Bakker ... told me he had prayed about it," Dortch said. "He felt the Lord had given him an inspiration about the idea."

When the partnership promotions started in 1984, PTL's economic lifeblood was the river of money that flowed in from the monthly donations of followers.

In the less than three years, however, almost all PTL revenues came from lifetime partnerships, Dortch said.

In the course of promoting them, he said, PTL officials said the money would be set aside to cover construction of the hotels and other Heritage USA facilities.

Asked if he knew some would not be able to get their promised hotel rooms, Dortch answered: "Yes sir, I knew that because the numbers were such that it would be impossible."

But Dortch, and others who testified earlier, said the money was desperately needed to cover day-to-day operating costs and a biweekly payroll of nearly $1 million.

During Thursday's testimony, Bakker looked briefly at Dortch, but spent most of his time staring at papers. Dortch avoided eye contact with Bakker except for one brief glance.

If found guilty of the 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million.

Today, prosecutors showed that at the same time Bakker was receiving huge bonuses, PTL was laying off hundreds of workers.

Joanie Ames, a former PTL payroll clerk, said she was laid off in November 1985.

"I had to go to social services and apply for welfare and food stamps," said Ms. Ames, a single parent and mother of two.

She was laid off at the same time as 285 other PTL employees, saving the ministry $3.6 million, said Chris Easley, PTL's personnel director for the past 1½ years.

Less than a year later, on Nov. 3, 1986, the PTL board approved a $500,000 bonus for Bakker. He had received other bonuses during the year, also.

The Rev. Evelyn Spencer of Oakland, Calif., who joined the board in November 1985, testified that the largest bonus she remembered approved was $150,000 plus taxes.

But when asked by prosecutor Deborah Smith if she would have approved a $500,000 bonus for Bakker,

Ms. Spencer said: "If everybody else agreed with it, I would have."

She said she trusted Bakker to keep board members informed of the ministry's financial condition. "I just trusted him, period," she said.

She said she was never informed about other problems, including the extent of an IRS investigation and Hahn's threat of a civil lawsuit.

"The only time I heard about that (Hahn's threatened suit) was when we were asked to resign in March (1987 when Bakker resigned)," she said.

She also was among those who bought a partnership the Tower Hotel, but never got to use it.

Former PTL controller Dana Caldwell testified that PTL had a poor debt-to-asset ratio during Bakker's tenure, at one time at 1:3. PTL was nearly $37 million in debt when Bakker resigned in March 1987, with assets of about $9 million.

Dortch, who joined the PTL ministry in 1983, also testified on Thursday that Bakker personally approved paying Hahn money to keep her quiet about their 1980 sexual encounter in a Florida hotel room. Bakker resigned from PTL in March 1987 as the encounter was about to be made public.

Queries Brew Over Scripture's Titles

By George M. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The "Old Testament" may be that to most Christians, but it is certainly not that to Jews whose forebears produced it. The secondary rating implied in the Christian designation is one of the inter-religious scars handed down through the centuries, but it and other linguistic sore spots are being examined for the possibility of better names.

"It's a much discussed subject," said Phyllis Trible, a Bible scholar at New York's Union Theological Seminary. "When Christians say Old Testament, that implies it's out-of-date, inferior. That offends Jews. 'The church is searching for some alternative.'"

Several are being explored, and some increasingly are being used. For example, "Hebrew Bible" is becoming popular in academic circles, though that is not what Jews call it. Early in Christian history, the church gave the designation Old Testament to the Scriptures preceding Jesus, a Jew. Writings about him, also by Jews, were called the New Testament.

Christians accept both compilations as inspired by God. Jews accept only the older Scriptures, what they themselves call the "Tanek," an acronym for the Torah (Law), Nebim (Prophets) and Kethubim (Writings).

Finding "proper language" for Christians to use in referring to Judaism generally is an age-old problem, the Catholic Messenger, diocesan weekly of Davenport, Iowa, said in an editorial.

"The traditional 'old' and 'new' testament usage implies that the Jewish scriptures are not only old in terms of time but outmoded; no longer relevant except as a 'precursor' of the revelation of Jesus Christ," the paper said.

Rabbi Burton Visotzky of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, said the use of Old Testament is "not going to blow us out of the water," but it is "bad etiquette, inappropriate." "We don't like it," he added. "We don't think it's the Old Testament. We think it's our Bible. But things are changing, little by little. A very large number of Christians now call it the Hebrew Bible."

In interviews, he and Ms. Trible said that the change so far is largely in the academic environment, but that it also is spreading to congregations and modifying their usage.

"It's moving out among the people," Ms. Trible said, attributing the reassessment to closer Jewish-Christian relationships and understanding resulting from dialogues.

Could you be comfortable in a church like this?
Being a Unitarian Universalist means taking personal responsibility for your own religious life. No one will try to make you religiously. We won't offer you "final and absolute truths" or rigid dogma. Instead, we try to provide a stimulating and congenial atmosphere in which you may seek answers, in which you may ask new questions, in which you are free to discover the best that is in you. We reject the idea that a book or institution is superior to the conscience and intellect of a morally responsible human being. We affirm that your spiritual well-being is yours to determine. No one else can live your own life for you.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When Amelia Davis went to Japan this summer she said she had the best view of the country — from the inside.

The 16-year-old junior at J.H. Rose spent five and a half weeks of her summer taking part in the Lions Club Student Exchange Program. She was sponsored by the Greenville Host Lions Club.

"I saw so much more as an exchange student than I would have as a tourist," she said.

Miss Davis spent her time in Japan living with two families. One in Kyoto, a city with a population well over 1 million, and other in Takehara, a city of 34,000 about 30 minutes outside of Hiroshima.

Miss Davis got her first taste of Japan when she got off of the plane in Osaka. She said she was somewhat frightened when she saw everyone scurrying about in a big hurry.

"It was kind of confusing," she said. "For the first time I really felt like a foreigner."

And she said the United States' culture and Japan's culture are so different they can't even be compared.

She got a good taste of Japan's culinary culture. She tasted squid, snake and fish head — but she passed on the octopus. "It still had the little sucker things on it," she explained.

"The Japanese slurp their food as a sign of politeness," she said "It almost drove me crazy."

Her hosts helped her understand Japan's idiosyncracies.

"I loved my families," she said. "They helped me so much learning the language and customs. They introduced me to a whole new lifestyle."

She also experienced the traditional Japan when she learned the nuances of the Japanese tea ceremony, a ritual reserved for weddings and other formal events.

Miss Davis was in Hiroshima for the anniversary of the atomic bomb explosion, and she watched as the Japanese made "peace cranes" by origami, the Japanese art of folding paper. Thousands of the figures were ritually placed around monuments at the Peace Park in Hiroshima.

The Japanese people are "very scheduled," Miss Davis said, but not uptight or stiff.

"They have everything planned so there is no need to worry," she said.

The Japanese show some signs of western influence. The children were anxious to speak to her in English, she said, and show off their knowledge of the language.

And they listen to American music and screen American movies dubbed in Japanese. Europe, however, influences the clothing styles.

Miss Davis said Japan is a friendly country, adding that the Japanese have not taken up some of the bad habits of Americans — especially in the area of public transportation.

The subways are very clean and the people aren't afraid to use them.

"They aren't like American subways at all," she said.

But the subways are overcrowded, as is the rest of the country, she said.

"They have these men who wear white gloves and their job is to pack people onto the subways," she said.

During rush hour, the shopping and business districts are also too crowded.

Still, she is hoping to return to Japan.

"I plan to go back," she said. "I'll be able to take someone with me and show them the things that I saw."

American Shopkeepers Bring Italian Tradition To Suburban Northeast

By Elizabeth Lightfoot
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHESTER, Conn. — Tucked away in this sleepy town is a store that is carrying on a tradition begun in 15th-century Italy.

In a shop they call Ceramica, Carol LeWitt and Carol Huebner sell Italian majolica, brightly colored, ornately painted earthenware made in Deruta, Italy.

LeWitt, 34, and Huebner, 41, own a second shop in New York City's Little Italy and plan to open another in West Hartford, Conn., soon to accommodate a rapidly expanding business that grew, appropriately, out of a need for a new dinner set.

In 1979, LeWitt and her husband, contemporary artist Sol LeWitt, moved to Spoleto, Italy, and were looking for dishes for their home.

Huebner and her husband, painter Michael Venezia, were visiting at the time, and the four decided to drive the 40 minutes from Spoleto to Deruta to see the pottery that, for centuries, has formed the livelihood of local artisans.

Sol LeWitt, watching the craftsmen, had an idea.

"The first thing he said was, 'If I bring in a drawing, could you make it for me?'" his wife said, adding that the question started her thinking.

"I thought, I spent all those years at art school, I could do that, too," she said.

LeWitt and Huebner, a professional photographer who majored in ceramics in college, began researching the history of majolica, learning traditional patterns and color schemes and visiting with the craftsmen.

They discovered that the artisans had cabinets full of pottery shards that had been collected for generations. As LeWitt and Huebner discussed design, the craftsmen would rattle through the shards and pull out a classic pattern that hadn't been used for some time.

"We got so we could sit down with a potter and say, 'Look, it has to be this way,' and then sit down with the painter and say, 'Do you remember ...'" said LeWitt, whose fluency in Italian helped convey their expectations. "Because they were craftsmen and not artists, they listened."

LeWitt said the artisans at first were skeptical.

"They thought we were dilettantes, that we were just doing this for the fun of it," she said. "They never thought there would be a business in it."

Then, in the mid-1980s, the Museum of Modern Art in New York bought a dinner set designed by Sol LeWitt, whose art has been internationally exhibited.

"That was the first time the artisans had a serious validation that what they could do could be considered art," his wife said.

The business from LeWitt and Huebner couldn't have come at a better time for the craftsmen because after centuries of a thriving pottery tradition, it had started to dry up.

"It used to be in Italy that every town had its own style," said Huebner. "There are towns that have lost the tradition ... but we think we've rejuvenated the business a bit."

Although they both live in the United States now — Huebner in New York, LeWitt in Chester — they have an assistant in Italy and travel about four times a year to the factories to oversee production.

Although other stores sell majolica, they say they are able to sell it for less because they import it themselves.

"There's no middle man," Huebner said. "We also know who does the best pottery."

Prices for most pieces range from $2.75 to a few hundred dollars, with most in the $20 range. A five-piece dinner set sells for about $100.

Often, Best Answer Is, 'Look It Up'

Dear Abby: I live in Norfolk, Va., where our school systems are embroiled in a huge battle over changes in public school sex education.

I hope every opponent of the Family Life Education curriculum read the letter from the 14-year-old girl who wanted to know if she could get pregnant the "first time." It is obvious that the sex education program at this girl's school has failed to meet her needs.

And while I have your ear, Abby, I'd like to address another way schools are failing their students. Abby, you get many letters from school-age children, all spending 25 cents to ask you questions they could have answered free. All our 14-year-old friend need have done is walk to the nearest library. There she would have easy access to free information on every subject on earth.

Don't schools teach students how to use a library anymore? And Abby, why don't you ever plug our library system? It would make my day to see you answer someone's letter with, "Look it up." It might put

Dear Abby

you out of business, but if you could teach one young person how valuable our libraries are, you could certainly consider your job of educating the nation well done. — A Friend Of The Library

Dear Friend: You must be a new reader. I have plugged our public libraries numerous times. But for those who might have missed it, here's what I've said:

If I could give young people one piece of advice it would be, read, read, read! In reading, you will open up new worlds, real and imagined. Read for information, read for pleasure. Our libraries are filled with knowledge and joy, and it's all there — free for the taking. The person who does not read is no better off than the person who cannot read.

Dear Abby: About 12 years ago, my father died and left my sister and me a modest sum of money. As part of his will, he also set up trust funds to provide college educations for my two children, who were his only grandchildren at the time.

Shortly after Dad's death, my younger sister married, and now she has two children. Here's the problem: My sister constantly tries to make me feel guilty because my children — now teen-agers — "have it made" for their college educations, while she and her husband will have to beg, borrow or scrape together the money to send their kids to college.

She says Dad should have made some arrangements for his future grandchildren. Is this ever done? — Guilt-Tripped By Sis

Dear Guilt-Tripped: Yes. An attorney (or estate planner) could and should have suggested that provisions be made for all grandchildren who may arrive.

Your sister may have good reason to resent the fact that her children were shortchanged, but she shouldn't take it out on you. Your father and his estate planners were responsible for either the unfortunate oversight or the deliberate

Poet Laureate Robert Penn Warren Dies Of Cancer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 STRATTON, Vt. (AP) — Robert Penn Warren, winner of three Pulitzer Prizes for fiction and poetry rooted in his native South and the nation's first poet laureate, died early today at his summer home. He was 84.

 His wife, the author Eleanor Clark, told a family friend that Warren died in the middle of the night. A local doctor was with him, as well as Mrs. Clark and their daughter, Rosanna.

The family friend, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Warren had been suffering from cancer for three years.
 Born in Guthrie, Ky., on April 24, 1905, Warren grew up hearing tales of the Civil War from his two grandfathers who had been Confederate soldiers, but he lived the last three decades of his life in New England.

 Before his second marriage, to Ms. Clark, she had suggested that they return to the South so that their children would know his world.
 "But I discovered it wasn't the same world," Warren once said. "I had been carrying a dream around in my head."

 In the same way, he said that "All the King's Men" was not about Huey Long, but about the myth of the swaggering populist governor of Louisiana.
 The novel, his greatest success in fiction, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1947 and became an Academy Award-winning motion picture.

 Warren was the first winner of Pulitzer Prizes in both poetry and fiction.
 Funeral arrangements were pending.

The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to good demand. Average weights mostly desirable. NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in an uninspired response to favorable economic news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.71 to 2,666.60 by noon on Wall Street.

But losers outnumbered gainers by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 470 up, 872 down and 522 unchanged.

Activity was swollen by the quarterly "triple witching hour," involving the last trading in a group of expiring options and futures on stock indexes.

There had been concern that professional traders engaged in multiple strategies involving those contracts would depress the market with a barrage of sell orders for stocks.

At the opening the market absorbed whatever pressure resulted from the witching hour, with a big assist from the latest data on the state of the economy.

The Labor Department reported that the producer price index of finished goods dropped 0.4 percent in August for its third consecutive monthly decline.

And the Commerce Department said the nation's trade deficit narrowed to $7.58 billion in July from a downward-revised $8.01 billion in June.

But after a gain of about 15 points in the Dow at the outset, the market settled back.

Among actively traded blue chips, Merck rose 1/4 to 70 3/4; American Express gained 1/4 to 36 1/8; American Telephone & Telegraph dropped 1/8 to 40 1/2, and International Business Machines was down 3/8 at 115 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 47 to 190.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.21 at 379.73.

Volume on the Big Board came to 137.25 million shares at noon, up from 75.53 million at the same point Thursday.

• THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A revival at the University of Cincinnati makes it questionable as to whether East Carolina University's Pirates can continue to dominate the Bearcats as they did in last year's 49-14 win.

That was the final road game of 1988 for the Pirates, who open their 1989 road schedule at 7 p.m. in Nippert Stadium Saturday.

The last game was Art Baker's swan song with the Pirates while this game is new coach Bill Lewis' baptism on the road.

"I think we've got a totally different Cincinnati program than our players who have been there have seen," Lewis said.

The reason? Cincinnati, too, has a new coach in Tim Murphy, who comes to the Bearcats after a successful tenure at the University of Maine.

"Tim Murphy is a very young, very enthusiastic, energetic football coach and a tremendous disciplinarian," Lewis said. "(Cincinnati has) been blessed with some fine talented players, but one of the ingredients missing has been discipline, doing what is demanded of them."

Under Murphy, the Bearcats now have this, Lewis avers. And their first game under Murphy seemed to show that. Down by 14 points to favored Rutgers, the Bearcats fought back in the final 10 minutes to salvage a 17-17 tie.

"They came off the field with a tremendous amount of excitement, a tremendous amount of enthusiasm because they played as a 14-point underdog (and came back)," Lewis pointed out. "Because of that sense built into them of being tough, staying after it, they dominated and clearly won the fourth quarter."

Three times the Bearcat defense shut Rutgers down and forced punts, then, the offense drove 75 and 79 yards for the tying touchdowns.

Lewis said Cincinnati's having been through a tough fourth quarter where they were behind bothers him. It's an advantage the Pirates haven't had yet, having romped to a 41-6 win over Bowling Green in its opener.

"I can't tell how our football team will react," Lewis said.

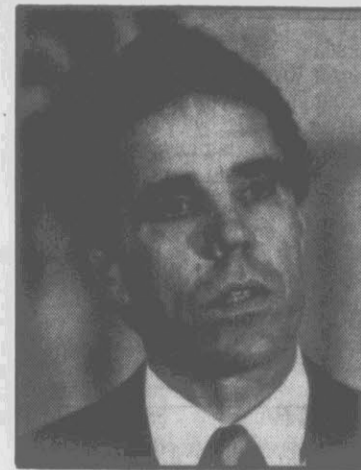

Another advantage is that the Bearcats had an open date this past weekend, giving them plenty of time to work on mistakes and to prepare for the Pirates.

The Pirates, however, were awesome in their debut under Lewis, rolling up 512 yards in total offense, including 401 on the ground. Tailback Willie Lewis led the way for the Pirates with 90 yards on 11 carries while fullback Michael Rhett added 57 yards on eight carries. Quarterback Travis Hunter added 56 yards on just three lugs.

Hunter connected on eight of 15 pass attempts for 90 yards and one touchdown. He came out firing last week, hitting three passes on a four-play 56-yard drive to the end zone on the first ECU series. Ironically, of the nine passes completed by the Pirates in the game, only two went to the same receiver, fullback David Daniels. He had 21 yards on the two catches. Walter Wilson caught the lone touchdown pass, a 17-yarder, while six other players caught one pass.

Hunter continues his move up the career ladder in total offense, passing yardage and pass completions. In

Lou Holtz Getting Irish Ready

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Lou Holtz, that master player of mind games, has been in top form while preparing for Notre Dame's clash with Michigan.

The Fighting Irish, after an impressive 36-13 victory over Virginia in the Kickoff Classic two weeks ago, are ranked No. 1, a position Michigan held in the preseason poll. The Wolverines, who have yet to play, now are No. 2.

Of course, the Irish also are defending national champs and riding a 13-game winning streak, but that's just incidental to Holtz.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler never has won the mythical national football championship. It's the lone void in an otherwise brilliant career.

Schembechler, naturally, tries to downplay the fact, but Holtz won't let him — not until after the game Saturday, anyway.

"We didn't even mention Michigan until after our Kickoff Classic game with Virginia," Holtz said. "Bo has been talking to his players about Notre Dame since the '88 season ended."

Schembechler doesn't argue with that.

"It's the biggest opener we've ever had in Michigan Stadium, and I hope we can avoid first-game mistakes," he said. "Notre Dame has had a game and then two weeks to prepare. But we're going in figuring we've got a chance to win it."

In Schembechler's opinion, winning the national championship is an almost impossible task for Michigan or any other Big Ten team.

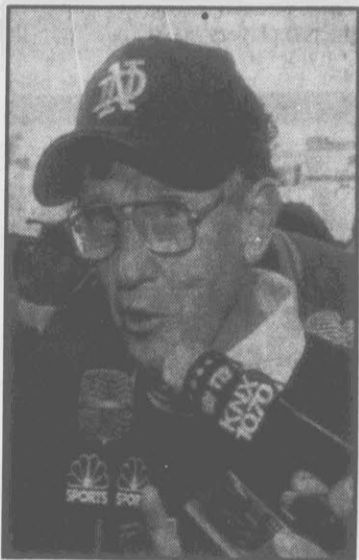

"Oh, it would be exciting," he said. "But it's farfetched for us if you look at what we'd have to do. We'd have to win all 12 games — that's beat Notre Dame here, UCLA out there, Maryland here, then win all out Big Ten games — and we play everybody except Northwestern."

"We have Michigan State, Illinois and Iowa on the road, then we'd have to go to the Rose Bowl and win that. That's asking an awful lot of this team, and I don't know if we can."

Notre Dame and the Wolverines, on paper at least, match up very well. Both are big and fast, both have versatile quarterbacks and both have a stable of fleet receivers and solid running backs.

And both teams were built with solid defense.

The key for Michigan is to contain Irish quarterback Tony Rice. He ran for 70 yards, including a 3-yard touchdown sprint, and passed for 147 yards against Virginia.

"Tony Rice is a great quarterback," Michigan defensive tackle Brent White said. "Coach is talking about him like he's life and death. He runs like the dickens, but I do not see him getting a TD on me."

The key for Notre Dame is to contain Michigan's running game. Last year, in a 19-17 victory at South Bend, Ind., the Irish showed little respect for the passing of quarterback Michael Taylor. They frequently jammed seven men on the line of scrimmage, daring the Wolverines to pass.

Notre Dame cornerback Todd Lyght indicated the Irish will do the same thing Saturday, especially in light of the success Notre Dame had in holding Virginia to just 95 yards passing with three interceptions.

"It's the same as a year ago," Lyght said. "Going into the season, we thought we (in the secondary) might have to be a little stronger on run support. But playing Virginia, there was no indication of that."

Holtz, however, continued to talk down his team.

"We're not a very good football team right now," Holtz said. "What I worry about is their running game. They have probably the best group of running backs in the country. They all run hard."

Michigan will start Leroy Hoard, the MVP of the Rose Bowl, at tailback with Jarrod Bunch at fullback. That means that tailback Tony Boles, who led the Wolverines with 1,408 yards last year, will be coming off the bench.

Schembechler said all three of his running backs would get plenty of action.

Mark Spitz is planning on a swimming comeback

Spitz Is Prepared To Make A Return

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — They may get gray, but they won't go away. And that's the rhyme of this Ancient Mariner.

Like so many athletes of the Baby Boomer age, Mark Spitz is out to prove that age is no factor.

Perhaps the best competitive swimmer ever to dip a pinky, Spitz plans to win his 10th Olympic gold medal in the 1992 Barcelona Games, ending 20 years of retirement. He will be 42, 20 years older than when he won seven gold medals in the 1972 Munich Olympics.

"If what I'm attempting can spread the word that there's still some life, some energy, in somebody who's 40 years old, then I think that would be doing more for the sport than the seven gold medals in Munich," Spitz said in an interview with Parade Magazine.

And why not? George Foreman, the former world heavyweight champion, is 19-0 in his boxing comeback, and Hall of Famer Guy Lafleur has found a second hockey life as a Quebec Nordique.

Guys like Nolan Ryan, Phil Niekro and Tommy John have pitched in the major leagues well into their 40s. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was 42 when he retired from basketball after last season. And Gordie Howe played hockey until he was somewhere between 40 and 140.

The PGA Seniors golf tour has revitalized the careers of players like Chi Chi Rodriguez and Orville Moody. And now former baseball players are dusting off those old, three-fingered mitts to join a new seniors league.

Old is in. But this is swimming, in which competitors normally begin to burn out at 16, and by 20 are wearing lifejackets.

A Bad Break?

Elliott Overcoming Wrist Injury

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Bill Elliott and Danny Sullivan began the season as champions, each broke a limb before their biggest race, and each has come back from injury.

But Elliott, the defending NASCAR champion, advises against too many comparisons with Sullivan, his Indy-car counterpart.

Entering Sunday's Peak Performance 500 at Dover, Del., Elliott is trying to get out of a slump that resembles the season-opening troubles that began with a broken left wrist in practice for the Daytona 500.

Sullivan broke his right forearm in practice for the Indianapolis 500, but has responded nicely by winning two of his last three races.

The way Elliott sees it, a schedule comprising 29 Winston Cup races and two non-points events makes his the tougher road back.

"I know what he went through and vice-versa," Elliott said Thursday. "The Indy-car drivers, not to be critical of them, they run 16 races. We run 31 races. That's what separates us."

"You got to take all these factors into consideration. We do run more miles. We do run more races."

Qualifying today sets the first 20 of 40 spots for Sunday's race at Dover Downs International Speedway, where Elliott has three victories, including both races last year on the high-banked, one-mile oval.

The pole winner will have a shot Sunday at a $159,600 bonus for winning both the pole and the race.

With seven races remaining, Elliott is far back in the point standings, but he hopes to return this weekend to the mid-season form that brought his only two victories of 1989, at Pocono and Michigan.

Elliott finished eighth at Dover June 4 in the Budweiser 500, the second event in a seven-race stretch that gave him two wins and four other top-10 finishes.

Dale Earnhardt won the June race, dominating the event after starting second. Since his July 23 Pocono victory brought him within 161 points of the points lead, Elliott has finished in the top 10 only once in six races, a seventh-place showing in the Southern 500 two weeks ago at Darlington, S.C.

The broken wrist spoiled the start of Elliott's title defense. He needed relief from Jody Ridley in his first two races and went nine races with only one top-10 finish under a points system that rewards consistently high finishes.

Bill Elliott

"I think Daytona put us back further than anybody expected," Elliott said.

As much as he liked winning his first season title last year — by only 24 points over Rusty Wallace — the Dawsonville, Ga., driver also has a hunch it hindered preparation for this season.

"There's a price you've got to pay when you win the championship," Elliott said. "All the stuff we had to do over the winter took away from the racing."

For someone who'd rather be under a car with a wrench than speaking into a microphone, Elliott does see a bright side to spending December as a former champion.

"With a little less attention, we can concentrate on getting everything just right for Daytona," he said.

Elliott's 2,796 points have him tied with Davey Allison for fifth place, 416 points behind Earnhardt, the leader. Wallace trails Earnhardt by 63, with Mark Martin 196 back and Daytona 500 winner Darrell Waltrip 249 behind.

A driver can get as many as 185 points in one race or as few as 43 in a 40-car field.

Although he's not mathematically out of it, Elliott sees the season race as down to Earnhardt and Wallace. And he can't pick a winner.

"I can't give one more than the other, all the places we go to," Elliott said.

New Book Takes Different Look At Hornets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A new book about the Charlotte Hornets says team officials almost botched their effort to land a franchise and that players suffered from burnout midway through their inaugural season.

The book, "In the Hornets' Nest," by Atlanta Constitution reporter Joe Drape is scheduled for release on Sept. 24. Excerpts of the book are published in the September-October issue of "Charlotte" magazine.

A meeting between top NBA executives and officials of NCNB almost ended George Shinn's dream of buying a team franchise, the book says.

The book says there was a misunderstanding during a luncheon meeting at the NCNB Building in Charlotte between officers of the bank and general manager Norm Sonju of Dallas and Charlie Thomas, chairman of the board of the Houston Rockets.

"They were expecting to hear about the bank's commitment to Shinn and a Charlotte franchise. They met with several bank officers. The two men had expected (NCNB chairman Hugh) McColl to be at the meeting."

"Norm Sonju was fielding the questions the bankers were firing about the league. But Thomas was having a hard time getting to the heart of what he had come to learn," the book said.

Both NBA representatives felt they were being treated "as if they were there to borrow money," the book says.

"Hey, wait a minute. You've got it all wrong. We're here to ask you the questions," Thomas said.

"The book describes the meeting as 'a disaster.' It said Shinn knew that Thomas was upset, and that Sonju was under the impression that the bank's commitment was 'a tad stronger" than it appeared after the meeting.

According to the book, on March 13, 1987, Thomas called Sonju and told him that he wasn't going to recommend Charlotte for an expansion franchise. Thomas said he was concerned about the financial backing for the Shinn group.

The book said Shinn phoned McColl and asked him to talk to Thomas to reassure him that NCNB was behind the plans and help Shinn come up with the financing.

The book also tells how halfway through the inaugural Hornets season, team members suffered from burnout as they tried to balance a mix of court play with public appearances and community service.

The book also details how protective Shinn was of the Hornets' image. According to the book, when his top men refused his request to ask shooting guard Rex Chapman to shave off his beard, Shinn, worried about the player's "All-American" image, stepped in.

Drape's book also focuses on the team's popularity in the Carolinas and the franchise's success both on

Bizzaro Paces Rose To 5-1 Win

KINSTON — Jason Bizzaro scored three goals and added an assist as the Rose High School boys' soccer team romped to a 5-1 victory over host Kinston in a Big East Conference matchup Thursday.

The Rampants got off to a slow start, but Roger Kramer finally broke the ice with a goal at the 16:32 mark. Edwin Manning picked up an assist on the play and added the game's second goal minutes later, assisted by Bizzaro.

In the second half, Bizzaro turned in his hat trick, scoring at 44:18, 59:24 and 77:48. Bert Powell, Manning and Jon Dodge each turned in an assist on the goals.

"In the second half, we played with intensity," Coach Charlie Harvey said. "During the first half, we came out passing, but with no direction. But during the second half, we played like we wanted to win."

Rose moves to 2-0 in the Big East, and 6-2-1 overall. Rose will play host to Wilson Hunt on Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

Roanoke and Aycock were unable to complete the doubles, because of rain.

Rose, Conley Post Junior Varsity Wins

Rose High School's junior varsity football team held off Bertie, 18-14, Thursday night.

Donte Mayo scored on an 11-yard run for the Rampant Cubs in the first quarter, giving Rose a 6-0 lead. Jermaine Williams added a 40-yard scoring run in the second period, upping the lead to 12-0.

Dwight Shepard scored from 42 yards out in the third quarter, running the lead to 18-0. Bertie then came back with runs of two and nine yards in the final period to cut the margin to the final score.

Shepard led Rose's offense with 124 yards rushing.

North Pitt 0, Roanoke 0

BETHEL — North Pitt and Roanoke battled to a 0-0 tie in a junior varsity football game Thursday night.

Both teams had trouble moving the ball in a hard rain, which also caused a number of fumbles. North Pitt fumbled nine times and lost four while Roanoke misplayed the ball seven times and lost three.

D.H. Conley 54, Farmville Central 8

FARMVILLE — Kevin Anderson scored two touchdowns as D.H. Conley's junior varsity rolled up a 54-8 win over Farmville Central Thursday night.

Anderson scored on a two-run in the first quarter and a 10-yard run in the second. Terry Turnage added a 22-yard run in the first period while Ronnie Barnhill ran over both PAT for a 16-0 lead after one period.

Brian Smith added a 34-yard run in the second quarter to up the lead to 28-0 at the half.

Anthony Edwards scored on a 23-yard run and Daryl Tyson on a four-yard run in the third period. Jesse Corey ran over both PAT. Conley also got a safety in the period as Barry Cox tackled the Farmville quarterback in the end zone.

Barnhill scored on a three-yard run and Shontiel Ruffin ran over the PAT in the fourth period for Conley.

Farmville's only score came in the third period.

Rocky Mount Tops Poll Again

Reflector Top 12

For the third consecutive week, Big East Conference preseason favorite Rocky Mount is perched atop the Daily Reflector Top 12 prep football poll.

After slipping by Tarboro 16-6 two weeks ago, the Gryphons came back with a vengeance last week to bury Southern Nash 57-16 and now stand 3-0.

Rose remains second, followed by Havelock and Bertie. Rose and Bertie clash tonight.

Rounding out the poll, which rates teams from the Big East, Coastal, Colonial, Eastern Plains, Northeastern and Tobacco Belt conferences, are Farmville Central, Plymouth, West Craven, Northern Nash, Northampton East, Columbia, East Carteret and Wilson Hunt.

East Carteret, which fell to West Carteret in the annual Mullet Bucket game last week, is the only Top 12 team with a loss.

The Top 12

• Rocky Mount: Quarterback Jeff Thomas connected on 11 of 22 passes for 230 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Gryphons. They host 1-1 Beddingfield tonight.

• Rose: Maurice Hines scored three touchdowns and the Rampant defense held Eastern Wayne to zero total yards in a 39-0 rout. The Rampants travel to Bertie tonight.

• Havelock: The Rams continued to slip past 4-A competition with a 12-7 win over Kinston. They host 1-2 Pamlico County tonight.

• Bertie: The Falcons were open last week after a pair of impressive opening-season wins. They host Rose tonight.

• Farmville Central: The Jaguars rallied last week at Louisburg to keep their unbeaten record intact. They visit cross-county rival D.H. Conley tonight.

• Plymouth: Quarterback Shawn Walker threw three more touchdown passes, raising his season total to 12, as the Vikings blanked Ayden-Grifton. They visit 2-1 Washington tonight.

• West Craven: Lee Becton cracked the 100-yard barrier for the third straight week with 139 yards as the Eagles nipped New Bern 16-13. They host East Carteret tonight.

• Northern Nash: Chris Peacock kicked three field goals, raising his season total to six, to help the Knights defeat Tarboro 13-6. They travel to county rival Southern Nash tonight.

• Northampton East: David Perry rushed for 198 yards and scored three touchdowns as the Rams rolled past Gates County 25-0. They host Northwest Halifax tonight.

• Columbia: Brian Bailey rushed for two touchdowns and threw for another as the Wildcats whipped Creswell 26-6. They host Manteo tonight.

• East Carteret: The Mariners dropped a 19-14 decision to rival West Carteret to fall to 2-1. They visit Havelock tonight.

• Wilson Hunt: The Warriors have not allowed a touchdown in eight quarters after whitewashing Beddingfield 21-0. They host 0-3 SouthWest Edgecombe tonight.

No Break For Downtrodden Steelers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

So you think things can't much worse for the Pittsburgh Steelers. Look again.

The Steelers were handed their most embarrassing loss ever on opening day, a 51-0 rout at home against Cleveland. Now Pittsburgh gets to go on the road, to Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati, dubbed "The Jungle," where the visitor-eating Bengals await.

Pittsburgh is just 2-7 at Riverfront since 1979 and lost there 42-7 last Nov. 6.

"I'll tell you, it's going to be a big crisis if we don't snap out of what we're doing and get it done," Coach Chuck Noll said. "It's not as though we haven't got the ability to do it. We have that. We've got to go out and do it, though."

The Bengals, who won all 10 of their home games last year on the way to the AFC championship, are not happy after an opening 17-14 loss at Chicago — a game they felt they should have won.

"It boiled down to everybody having a play or two they can improve on," Coach Sam Wyche said. "We've got to have more big plays in order to be a championship team, and we've got to eliminate those mental mistakes that are happening to everybody."

"Our team played well, don't misunderstand me. I think we played a tremendous game. But we were playing a tremendous football team."

They're not playing one this week, though. The Steelers are a far cry from the team that dominated football in the 1970s. They have rookies, three of them starters, and 12 first-year starters.

NFL Notes

"When you get beat 51-0, it's hard to find anything good to come out of it," defensive back Dwayne Woodruff said. "The good thing is we can come back and play good against Cincinnati."

"This was just our first game and we have 15 games to go, so I don't think this is going to hurt our confidence. We're a confident team."

So, obviously, is Cleveland, which faces the New York Jets on Sunday. Browns coach Bud Carson was the Jets' defensive coordinator before landing his first NFL head coaching job at the age of 58.

"It's a game, without going into details, that is my Super Bowl," Carson said. "These are people who are much more recent friends."

"It will be an emotional game. But they all count one, no matter who they are. You can't afford to make any game too big."

Carson even dismisses last week's romp, although the mention of the 21 points produced by his defense makes him smile.

"It was a feeling of disbelief and I was afraid it would all fall apart," he said. "We had a lot of fantastic luck. It was the type of thing that happens once in a lifetime."

The Jets better hope so. Their offense is undermanned at receiver and their unproven line must cope with the blitzing and stunting that marks Carson's defensive plans.

"Bud will have plenty for us to think about," quarterback Ken O'Brien said. "We'll have to be ready for just about anything."

Elsewhere Sunday, it is indianapolis at the Los Angeles Rams, Dallas at Atlanta, the Los Angeles Raiders at Kansas City, Miami at New England, New Orleans at Green Bay, Philadelphia at Washington, San Francisco at Tampa Bay, Detroit at the New York Giants, Minnesota at Chicago, Phoenix at Seattle and Houston at San Diego.

The Monday night game has Denver at Buffalo.

Eric Dickerson returns to the scene of so many of his big games as the Colts play at Anaheim Stadium. The Rams traded Dickerson just after the 1987 players' strike.

New Pact For Herschel?

The agent for Dallas Cowboys running back Herschel Walker says he has no plans to accept owner Jerry Jones' offer to extend Walker's contract, citing the player's uncertain role in the team's offense.

Agent Peter Johnson hinted Wednesday that 1990 could be Walker's last year as a Cowboy. Walker will be 28 when his five-year, $5 million contract expires after next season.

"We don't know what free agency will be like in two years, but it will certainly be different from what it is today," said Johnson.

and off the court. The Hornets were the first NBA franchise to hold the attendance record in their first season and the top team in winning games by two points or less.

"This is the whole story, warts and all," Jim Fitzgerald, executive editor of the New York publishing company, told The Gaston Gazette. "But the bottom line is it's a congratulatory book. It's a valentine."

General Manager Carl Scheer has said in a memo that the Hornets did not authorize the book.

"Neither the author nor St. Martin's press were solicited to write and produce the book," Scheer wrote. "Its contents are not endorsed by the Charlotte Hornets."

Shinn has also disputed some portions of the book and stressed that it had not been approved by the his organization.

The distance the Hornets have put between themselves and the book has surprised Drape, who covered the team's first season.

"I went on the road and lived with them and got as close to them as I could," he said. "They knew who I was and what I was doing."

Drape agreed with Scheer's characterization of the book as being "unauthorized." His goal, he said, was to write an independent account of team's first year.

"Their image is very sacred to them and they work very hard at protecting it," he said. "This (book) isn't something they've managed."

The Hornets management was given advance copies of the book and met with St. Martin's Press officials to discuss its contents, Fitzgerald said.

"They were very cold and put-offish," he said. "They're scared of it and we don't know why because it's the truth."

Grizzard Adds To His Lead In DR Poll

Woody Peele

Mike Grizzard continues to lead the way and last year's wimmer Vickie Spivey continues to trail as we go into the third week of our picks for 1989.

Grizzard has upped his record to 17-7 on the season while Tom Baines and I are tied for second place with 16-8 records.

Greg Laudick, who along with Baines had the best records, 9-3, last week, has moved into fourth place all alone at 15-9. Then, Tom Morris and Spivey are tied for fifth with 14-10 records.

Spivey continues to say that it's early and she'll be climbing back past us in future weeks, but Grizzard is hoping that "beginner's luck" will hold for him the rest of the year.

Taking a look at the high school games for this weekend, there are a couple of big games, Farmville Central at D.H. Conley and Rose at Bertie. The panel will be looking at the former.

Rose's Chip Williams will be going back to where it all began for him as a head coach. Williams came to Rose after several successful years as the head coach at Bertie. But he's hopeful that his former team won't be successful tonight. The Falcons are off to a strong 2-0 start, having crushed two opponents. Rose is 3-0 with a couple of lopsided wins to its credit.

The Falcons are a versatile team that can run and throw while Rose primarily is a running team. Both have good defenses, so it may come down to which gets the breaks. I'm going to stick with the Rampants in this one, but it could be close, say 19-15.

In the other only game involving a Pitt County team, North Pitt visits Roanoke. Both teams are still looking for their first win. Roanoke is 0-2 and North Pitt, 0-3. The Panthers looked anything but good in the first half against Conley last week, but bounced back and nearly made a game of it in the second half. If they continue that caliber of play, the Panthers should do well against teams on their level. This is win number one for...North Pitt, 28-14.

In other area games, Camden will top Chocowinity; Southwest Onslow will beat Jamesville; Greene Central will down Williamston and Washington will stop Plymouth's win streak.

Last week's prep record: 5-2. Season record: 17-6.

Turning to the panel's choices, Farmville Central will visit D.H. Conley for the "Pitt County Championship." Conley has already cast aside Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt, but the Jaguars are a different breed of animal. Conley has gained a lot of confidence following an opening season loss to Clayton. Farmville, meanwhile, learned a big lesson against Louisburg last week when the Jags had to come from behind to win.

This should be a classic game. Conley has won the last three times — but the panel is going with Farmville in this one. My choice, too, is Farmville, 19-17.

East Carolina takes to the road for the first time this year under new coach Bill Lewis. Last year, the Pirates won big in their opener and went on the road against Virginia Tech. The result was a stunning loss and the start of an eight-game tailspin. This year, the Pirates play at Cincinnati, and the prospect of an upset is there, too. ECU must be ready to go and must play its best. It must also eliminate the type mistakes it made last week against a lesser opponent. The panel is solidly behind the Pirates, however, with a 6-0 vote, and I look for the Bucs to pull out a 38-20 victory.

In other games, the panel looks for Tennessee over Duke; Maryland over Western Michigan; Notre Dame over Michigan; Kentucky over North Carolina; Colorado over Illinois; Clemson over Virginia Tech; Virginia over Georgia Tech; N.C. State over Wake Forest; Florida over Louisiana Tech and Ohio State over Oklahoma State.

LSU-FSU Game Looms Big For Both Squads' Aspirations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arkansas opens its season at home against Tulsa. Also, it is No. 11 Syracuse against Army, 12th-ranked West Virginia playing host to South Carolina, No. 13 Southern California at home to Utah State, Purdue at No. 15 Washington, Memphis State at No. 16 Alabama, Duke at No. 17 Tennessee, 19th-ranked North Carolina State at Wake Forest, No. 20 UCLA at San Diego State, 22nd-rated Texas A&M at Texas Christian, Oregon State at No. 23 Washington State and No. 24 Iowa playing host to Oregon.

Illinois won't be intimidated facing a highly ranked team — the Illini won at Southern Cal in their opener. Nor will Colorado be in awe after routing Texas and beating Colorado State.

Illini coach John Mackovic says his team "played pretty well" against USC, but "if we play the same game against Colorado, I don't think we can win. We'll have to play better."

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne thinks his team will be facing one of the better passers of the decade in Utah's Scott Mitchell. Utah has averaged 476 yards in total offense in going 1-1.

"(Troy) Aikman a year ago was very good and I think (Steve) Walsh a year ago was very good. But this guy... he's a great player," Osborne said. "He's got great velocity on the ball. It just doesn't take very long to get there. He throws a lot of 25- to 30-yard patterns. ... When that guy bends (on a pass pattern) the ball is there. It gets there in a hurry and he's very accurate. He can throw the ball into cracks your normal quarterback can't throw it into."

But will Mitchell find those cracks against Nebraska? Utah's previous two opponents were Fresno State and Utah State, not exactly in the Cornhuskers' class.

Utah coach Jim Fassel said Nebraska isn't likely to be a pushover when it comes to moving the ball up and down the field.

"Nebraska is obviously a big challenge," Utes coach Jim Fassel said. "They execute very well and in most instances, just wear you down."

In Bill Curry's first year as the Alabama football coach, his team was moving along with a 4-1 record; when it traveled to Memphis State for another expected victory.

Instead, victory belonged to the Tigers, a team that had lost to Alabama in five previous meetings. The 13-10 Alabama loss set up renewed howls from some Crimson Tide fans who already were upset that the school had hired Curry, a Georgia Tech man with a losing record.

The schools meet Saturday for the first time since then, with 16th-ranked Alabama favored by three touchdowns in its opening game of the season. State has played two games, losing 20-13 to Mississippi and 17-13 to Arkansas State.

State fullback Wayne Pryor gained 112 yards in the upset of Alabama, and said he is ready for the rematch.

"It makes it easier to get up for a game when you play Alabama," he said. "You get fired up. No one expects you to win. There is no pressure. You can just relax and play. I think that's what happened that day."

Pryor said it could happen again. "We're not through here," he said. "This season is still young."

Alabama finished the 1987 season 7-5, and improved last year to 9-3 while in 1988 Memphis State, 6-5, had its first winning season since 1983.

Curry, recalling the game two years ago, said that revenge is not the best approach but that both teams have players who took part in that game and remember it.

Memphis State has a new coach, Chuck Stobart, a former Southern Cal offensive coordinator who took over after Charlie Bailey resigned in May during an NCAA probe.

Curry said Stobart has done a good job and that the Tigers have been competitive in both their losses.

Furlong Remembers The Final 3 Holes

KENT, Wash. — Shirley Furlong was rehearsing her lines when she remembered that the last act hadn't been played.

Furlong, who had shaved five strokes off par, allowed her mind to wander late in Thursday's opening round of the LPGA Safeco Classic.

"After 15 holes, I got to thinking what I'm going to say in the press room," Furlong said. "Then I remembered, let's get back to these last three holes."

She came back nicely, getting a birdie on her 17th hole on the way to a 6-under-par 66 and a share of the first-round lead with Chris Johnson.

"It was probably one of the most solid rounds of golf I've played," Furlong said. "It was an easy day. It was kind of a fun day," she said.

Johnson, who had a chance at the outright lead until a bogey on No. 18, had been battling a mouth infection recently. She took an antibiotic after playing the front nine of the 6,222-yard Meridian Valley Country Club course.

"Today is the first day I've really felt good," Johnson said. "I was kind of feeling sorry for myself. I ended up working my way out of my pity party and came out and played well."

Furlong, who has one tournament title in five years on the LPGA tour, built her round with birdies on each of the par-5 holes. Furlong, who began her round on the 10th hole, sank a 25-foot putt on the 13th, a 12-footer on the 18th and a 10-footer on the 19th.

Her other birdies came on the 16th, with a 10-foot putt, on No. 3 with an 18-footer, and on No. 7 with an 8-footer.

Johnson, a 10-year LPGA veteran with four tournament titles, had her last good round, a 67, on Labor Day in the final round of the Rail Charity Classic at Springfield, Ill. Since then, she has battled the effects of the infection.

She rallied on the back side to make a run at Furlong. Johnson birdied the 12th with a 12-foot putt and 13th with a 15-footer, then hit a 6-iron tee shot to within four feet on the 3-par 15th to take a share of the lead.

When she put a 7-iron second shot to within three feet on the 16th and sank the putt, she had the lead alone. But her approach to No. 18 found a bunker and she bogied the final hole to fall back into a tie at 66.

Danielle Ammaccapane, a 23-year-old from Phoenix with just 23 months on the LPGA tour, had a 67 on Thursday. Defending champion Juli Inkster was at 68 along with Barb Thomas, Sue Ertl and Cindy Rarick town would uproot at least nine businesses, from one of the city's largest industrial equipment suppliers to a small, family-owned manufacturer. It also would delete one of the last remnants of a once-flourishing black neighborhood that in the last decades has been replaced by warehouses and parking lots.

Charlotte Business Owners Welcome A New Stadium

The old Good Samaritan Hospital, North Carolina's first privately funded independent hospital built exclusively for blacks, would have to go.

The original hospital, opened by Episcopal church officials in 1891 at Mint and Hill streets, is now part of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Hospital Authority's 200-bed rest home, The Magnolias. It also is a designated local historic site.

The hospital authority hasn't yet agreed to sell its property. But spokesman Alan Taylor said: "We are obviously supportive of the idea of an NFL team in the Carolinas, and we understand the economic and social importance of that. ... We'll certainly be receptive."

CHARLOTTE - Charlotte's proposed downtown site for a football stadium comes long before the NFL has decided whether the city will have a team, but the decision apparently arrives at a good time for Fred Younce.

Younce owns a gas station at the corner of Morehead and Graham streets, the same place where his father opened a truck stop in 1937. If the stadium goes up, the gas station will come down, but Younce doesn't see that as so bad.

"I've worked hard all my life. It's hard to think about anything else," said Younce. "But I haven't had a vacation in 10 years. I think I could stand one."

The area is bordered by interstate highways, and it's changed Younce's business hours by leading him to close nights and weekends. Also, Younce has given an option on his 1.26-acre corner to those looking at the stadium site, and he's thinking about closing shop for good.

NCAA Rep Made Stop At Clemson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An NCAA representative was at Clemson this week as part of the organization's preliminary inquiry into possible rule violations within the school's athletic department, Athletic Director Bobby Robinson said Thursday.

Robinson said he would not make public details of the visit by the NCAA official until the inquiry is completed. But Robinson said he decided to announce the visit because the investigation has sparked a high level of interest by the public.

"It's not my intention to make a statement about every development along the way, but I did feel it was appropriate to let the public know that the inquiry is progressing," Robinson said in a statement.

Robinson would not speculate when the inquiry might be completed, but he did repeat his earlier pledge that the findings will be made public when the NCAA makes its report to the university. "As I've stated before, the university will cooperate fully with the NCAA throughout this inquiry and stand ready to take whatever actions are necessary to protect the integrity of the university," Robinson said.

Clemson announced Aug. 23 the National Collegiate Athletic Association was conducting a preliminary inquiry into possible rule violations within the athletic department.

The NCAA, as is its policy, has declined to comment on the probe, which apparently focuses on the football program. One year after winning its only national title in 1981, Clemson was placed on two years' probation for football recruiting violations.

If the NCAA determines there is any validity to the allegations it is now investigating, the organization would then conduct what it calls an "official inquiry."

Kentucky Ready For Heels
North Carolina has already blown its cover if it wanted to sneak up on Kentucky this weekend.

College Football

The Tar Heels, after struggling to a 1-10 record a year ago, opened their season last Saturday by scoring an impressive 49-7 victory over Virginia Military.

"I don't think we'll underestimate North Carolina," Kentucky linebacker Craig Benzinger said of Saturday's game at Commonwealth Stadium. "I just know they beat a team 49-7. If they beat a team 49-7, they must be pretty good."

Kentucky has also played one game, defeating Indiana 17-14 last weekend before home fans.

"VMI is not nearly the challenge we'll have in Lexington," said North Carolina coach Mack Brown.

North Carolina played a near-flawless game on offense, amassing 533 total yards. Quarterback Jonathan Hall completed 13 of 24 passes for 167 yards and two touchdowns while tailback Eric Blount rushed for 102 yards and two TDs and runningmate Randy Jordan tallied 98 yards and one touchdown.

"We played very well against VMI and we had better players than VMI," Brown said. "We feel like we're stronger than last year. We had a good recruiting year but we're very young. We played with a lot of enthusiasm."

It was enough to impress Kentucky coach Jerry Claiborne.

"They have good runners and good speed," he said, noting that passes were completed to 10 receivers. "They have better team speed than Indiana."

And he doesn't believe his players will be looking past the Tar Heels.

"They'll just have to look at the film on VMI," Claiborne said. "They just annihilated VMI."

Brown said that while his team has an inexperienced offensive line, they try to make up for it with finesse by throwing the ball and using different sets.

North Carolina also uses a variety of defensive fronts to confuse teams. "They show you every front in America," Claiborne said. "We'll try to meet strength with strength and scatter them out a little."

Kentucky tailback Alfred Rawls had a standout performance against Indiana, rushing 18 times for 107 and one touchdown and catching two passes for 52 yards and another TD.

Although Kentucky is the favorite, Brown is looking forward to the matchup.

"I feel we have a chance to win," he said. "If I didn't feel that way, the team wouldn't feel it had a chance to win. It's an exciting game for us because Kentucky is one of the best teams in the Southeastern Conference."

Benzinger expects a battle from the Tar Heels.

"When the teams get out there, it will be emotional," he said. "It doesn't matter who you play. This could be one of the best games you see in your life."

Vols Know Duke Now

Johnny Majors tried to warn Tennessee players a year ago to pay attention to the Duke Blue Devils. There was little evidence they listened.

Majors spent this week trying to make sure his players are at least tethered to the ground, if not actually standing on it, after last week's 24-6 upset of UCLA.

And once again, he's telling them to pay attention to the Duke Blue Devils.

Duke leads the overall series 13-11-2, including last year's 31-26 victory. Duke led 31-7 before Tennessee managed to make the score respectable.

"Duke is an explosive, exciting football team," said Majors, whose team gained a No. 17 ranking by beating UCLA to improve to 2-0. "We need to be much improved this week."

Duke is 1-1, coming off a 41-31 victory over Northwestern. The Blue Devils lost their season opener 27-21 to South Carolina.

Tennessee played a virtually flawless game against UCLA, with no penalties and no turnovers. That sort of performance takes concentration and Majors said he's working on it.

"I don't want to dampen any enthusiasm, but we've got to hit it and keep moving," he said. "Past is past."

Duke coach Steve Spurrier's team has scored 62 points in its two games and the offense looks solid. The defense, however, is another story.

"We held Northwestern to 501 yards total offense and they made 30 first downs," Spurrier said. "We were lucky to hold them to 31 points."

The Blue Devils are led on offense by tailback Roger Boone, wide receiver Clarkston Hines, quarterback Billy Ray and a big, experienced offensive line.

"We don't have anything to lose, so we'll go into Neyland Stadium and throw it all over the place and hope some of it hits our guys," Spurrier said.

But he also said Duke "has got to stay on the field offensively. We can't go out there and throw three times and come off. We're just not as big and strong as we'd like to be on defense."

In fact Duke, a renowned passing

Boone gained 201 yards rushing against Northwestern and has led the Atlantic Coast Conference in receiving the past two years.

"They've got that Boone guy who just squirts through and finds daylight wherever it is," Majors said. Boone, at 5-feet, 8-inches tall, "gets behind that big line and it's hard to find him in there sometimes."

Hines is the only receiver in ACC history to catch more than 1,000 yards worth of passes in each of two seasons, and he has 151 yards and three touchdowns so far this year. He caught eight passes for 145 yards and three touchdowns last year against the Vols.

Ray began his college career at Alabama and transferred to Duke to play in Spurrier's pass-oriented offense. In his first two games as a starter Ray is 46 of 66 for 636 yards and six touchdowns.

Tennessee has had most of its success this season on the ground, with Reggie Cobb and Chuck Webb alternating at tailback. Quarterback Sterling Henton has not thrown very much, but has been effective when he has.

Brewster Keyed Tigers

Doug Brewster had 12 tackles against Florida State, but is the Clemson inside linebacker impressed with himself?

Not hardly. The 6-foot-1, 197-pound junior also is tied for the lead in tackles at 16 for the seventh-ranked Tigers. His attitude: So what?

"I think I've played average," Brewster said. "I have not played to my potential. I made a lot of mental mistakes in the game Saturday."

Coach Danny Ford agreed that Brewster wasn't perfect in the Tigers' 34-23 victory over the Seminoles. But he wasn't bad.

"He did a couple things wrong in the game," he said. "He also had (12) total tackles. So he's got to be doing something right."

Brewster and the Tigers showed just how good they could be by handing the Seminoles their second loss in as many games this year. But now Clemson, 2-0, is trying to forget the fun they had in the Florida sun and turn its focus to Virginia Tech, 1-0-1.

"At the dorm, it has quieted down a little bit," Brewster said during a telephone interview with reporters Tuesday. "We put Florida State to rest last night. We haven't thought about it anymore."

"We enjoyed the victory, but we can't misjudge a team like Virginia Tech because they can come out and beat you," Brewster said. "I never went into a game not taking anybody seriously. They can come out and upset us just like that."

total offense, he now has 3,466 yards, leaving him only 153 yards behind number three Leander Green, who had 3,609. He is 417 behind all-time leader Bill Cline who had 3,883.

Hunter moved past John Casazza in passing yardage last week, and now stands second with 2,540. He trails number one Carl Summerell by 319. Summerell passed for 2,859 yards. In completions, Hunter is third with 178, just 16 behind number two Casazza and 20 behind the leader, Summerell.

East Carolina held Bowling Green to just 57 yards on the ground and 172 through the air. The Falcons completed only 20 of 46 attempts through the air.

Last year, the Pirates held Cincinnati to 147 yards rushing and 2065 passing while rolling up 351 on the ground and adding 104 through the air. The Pirates led 21-0 at halftime and were up 28-0 before Cincinnati scored its first touchdown of the game. ECU added two more scores for a 41-7 lead before Cincinnati added its second touchdown.

Lewis said he has been impressed with this Cincinnati team because of its toughness on defense. They also have outstanding speed on defense. "They try to out-physical their opponent. They try to hit everything that moves."

Linebacker Jack Brusciannelli, the Independence Bowl Association Defensive Player of the Year last season, had 15 tackles against Rutgers, while sidekick, Vince Munlin added 13 and outside linebacker Ron Traut added 10. Lewis rates interior lineman Jack Thornton as the best up front.

"They line up in very few defensive fronts, do very little stunting and blitzing. They basically played three coverages. When you do that, you have confidence that you are big and strong and can sit in there, be patient with the confidence that you can take charge of the game," Lewis said. "You don't have to worry about different coverages, you just play and execute. They make very few mistakes."

He also believes Cincinnati has an outstanding secondary, led by safety Kelly Sims. "Marvin Bowman (free safety) is the best all around, and Ron Shannon (corner) impressed me," Lewis said.

"They all remind you of guys you might meet out on the street corner and say, 'Let's have us a good old-fashioned fight. They were still getting after it in the fourth quarter and that was one of the real forces in the game, their toughness.'"

Offensively, Cincinnati and East Carolina both use two or more tailbacks, and for the Bearcats, both can be dangerous. "They try to get the ball into the hands of their tailbacks as much as possible," Lewis said. Terry Strong, the starter, carried 10 times for 37 yards last week and caught one pass for seven yards. The other man, Joe Abrams, ran eight times for 52 yards, scored a touchdown and caught three passes for 54 yards.

"They combine a multiple formation, drop-back pro attack, with a trap and trap-option that's very difficult to defend," Lewis said. They also have the advantage of having former ECU assistant Ken Matous on the Bearcat staff. His familiarity with the trap and trap-option has helped Cincinnati in its game plan.

"We're going to see a football team that is totally different from the last couple of times," Lewis said. "They had the kind of pride and character that will be ready to play based on what's happened the last three times (the two teams played). It's going to be a tremendous test for us."

Last year, East Carolina went into its first road game after a solid victory over Tennessee Tech. Virginia Tech, their foe in that one, easily handed the Pirates, who were obviously not ready to play.

But Lewis is not looking for any overconfidence this year in game two. "We're not the kind of football team that should have a sense of overconfidence. But that's something that we will address this week. Our players must understand what's happening with Cincinnati. They have become believers. We must prepare for Cincinnati to be its best with something in its craw waiting for us to come to town."

The Pirates may be missing offensive guard Chad Martin, who suffered a knee sprain on Wednesday during practice. He is listed as questionable for the game.

Following the Cincinnati game, the Pirates will return to Greenville for the next two games, hosting Illinois State on Sept. 22 and Louisiana Tech on Sept. 29.

Mahaffey Makes Returns

6-Under-Par 65 Is Enough For Share Of The Lead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SUTTON, Mass. — In 1978, John Mahaffey received an exemption to play in a PGA tournament at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Mahaffey didn't need the courtesy extended by late club president Cuz Mingolla. He earned his entry by winning the PGA Championship.

Then, as if to thank Mingolla, Mahaffey won the Pleasant Valley tournament for two big payoffs within one week.

Ted Mingolla took over as tournament chairman after his father died, and Mahaffey, now 40, still comes back each year.

"I've always been treated well here and it's just a nice play to come back to," Mahaffey said Thursday after shooting a 6-under-par 65 for a share of the first-round lead in the Bank of Boston Classic.

"Ever since my rookie year (1972), this course has been very good to me," Mahaffey said. "I'm comfortable here. I don't think I'll ever miss coming here unless something unforeseen happens."

Mahaffey, who broke a three-year drought by winning at Memphis last month for his 10th PGA Tour victory, shot nines of 33 and 32 as an early starter in a field of 156 on the 25th anniversary of the PGA's first central Massachusetts stop in 1965.

With six birdies in a bogey-free round on Pleasant Valley's par-71, 7,110-yard course, Mahaffey let the field try to catch him.

J.C. Snead, 49, Jim Thorpe, 40, and Steve Pate, 28, did just that, earning a share of the lead heading into today's second round.

Snead, who had a 65 to tie Mahaffey for the first-round lead in 1983, finished with a 65 on Thursday thanks to a 52-foot putt for an eagle-3 on the 547-yard fourth hole.

Thorpe, who started his round on the 10th tee, birdied five of his last six holes to finish at 6-under. Pate took the opposite tact, getting six birdies on his first 10 holes.

"I did all my damage early," Pate said after his late afternoon finish. "I knew where I stood on the leader board. I was hoping, obviously, but the putts didn't fall after that 25-30 footer on the 10th hole."

"It looks like it's going to be a shootout," said Thorpe, who has won nearly $100,000 this year after missing almost the entire 1988 season because of hand surgery.

"Scores are low everywhere, not just here," Thorpe said. "It's shocking. It's very seldom now when the 36-hole cut is even par or one over. Par just isn't good enough to win."

Thorpe said that not too long ago "you could pick 15 guys or so and come up with the winner."

"Today just about everybody who tees it up, 150 guys, can win. No one is going to run away with this. It's going to be tight to the wire."

The four leaders share a one-shot lead over local favorite Brad Faxon and Don Pooley, who had 66s.

Defending champion Mark Calcavecchia, the British Open champion who is using this tournament to tune up for the Ryder Cup matches in England next week, was at 67, joined by nine other players.

Three former Pleasant Valley winners, Wayne Levi, Mark Lye and Sam Randolph, were locked in 15-way traffic jam at 68.

Fourteen players were at 69 and another 21 were at 70, for a total of 66 players under par. There were 21 deadlocked at par 71, with 17 more at 1-over 72.

Jeffcoat, Rangers Top KC As Gordon Struggles Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mike Jeffcoat seems to be pitching himself into the Texas Rangers' future while Tom Gordon pitches himself right out of rookie of the year contention.

Jeffcoat, a journeyman left-hander who was called up from Class AAA Oklahoma City at the end of May, went eight strong innings against Kansas City Thursday night as the Texas Rangers dented the Royals' division title hopes with a 10-3 rout.

The 30-year-old Jeffcoat, 8-5, has established himself as an integral part of the Rangers' rotation.

Gordon, meanwhile, is wondering where his sharp curveball went. A month ago, he was 16-4 with a breaking pitch people were comparing to Bert Blyleven's. But the 21-year-old right-hander took his fourth consecutive loss, dropping his record to 16-8 and his level of confidence is way below .500.

The loss was only the second in 10 games for the Royals, but it dropped them 3 1/2 games behind idle Oakland in the American League West. In other games, Minnesota beat Toronto 2-0 and Cleveland defeated Detroit 4-0.

In what has become a familiar pattern of late for Gordon, the Rangers got to him early, scoring three runs in the first and then knocking him out in a four-run third.

"I would have to say I'm very pleased," Jeffcoat said. "Hopefully, I'll finish on a strong note. I'd like to win at least two of my last three starts, and then go into spring training next year and battle for the third or fourth spot in the rotation.

"Getting all those runs early really helped settle me down," he said. "I sort of figured the Royals would be the kind of team that would give me trouble because they have so many good right-handed hitters."

Gordon's breaking pitch, the talk of the league at mid-season, seems to have flattened out. With four losses and a no-decision in his last five starts, he has been rendered ineffective at the worst possible time for the Royals. Meanwhile, Baltimore reliever Greg Olson, with 25 saves, has jumped into the thick of the race for rookie honors.

"We've analyzed him on film, and can't see anything different," Royals manager John Wathan said of Gordon. "He's not locating his curveball or the fastball very well."

"I pitched good for five months," Gordon said. "Tonight I felt real good. I'm trying to figure out what's the problem with my curve. It's not breaking as sharp as usual."

"It's getting to me. But it's going to happen. It happens to everybody."

"He just doesn't have the crispness on his breaking ball, or the control of his fastball," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "But he's still a great young pitcher. Sometimes guys just go through spells."

Fred Manrique, Rafael Palmiero, Julio Franco, Pete Incauiglia, Mike Stanley and Juan Gonzalez each had two hits for the Rangers, who tagged six Kansas City pitchers for 16 hits.

Gordon got his first 10 victories in relief, benefitting a few times when the Royals rallied to win games after he had surrendered a lead he was trying to protect for another pitcher.

"He hasn't pitched like he did early in the year," Wathan said. "He's got to get ahead of the hitters. And he's got to get a good first inning, to get some confidence. He probably doesn't have any right now."

"He's had a heck of a year, regardless of how he finishes," Wathan added. "We might not be in this position right now if not for Tommy Gordon. We forget he's 21 and trying to go through his first pennant race. Maybe he's trying to do too much."

Twins 2, Blue Jays 0

Mark Guthrie pitched five-hit ball for 7 1-3 innings as Minnesota completed a three-game sweep of Toronto at the Metrodome.

The Blue Jays' lead in the AL East slipped to 1 1/2 games over Baltimore. Toronto lost three straight for the first time since June 30-July 2.

The Twins won all three with rookie starting pitchers. Guthrie, 2-1, got help from Jeff Reardon, who got his 30th save, making him the first reliever with five straight 30-save seasons.

Mike Flanagan, 8-10, gave up one run on seven hits in six innings.

The afternoon game drew 14,262, the Twins' smallest crowd of the season.

Indians 4, Tigers 0

Rod Nichols struck out 10 in 7 2-3 innings and Joe Carter hit his 32nd home run as Cleveland beat visiting Detroit.

The Indians and Tigers, the two lowest-scoring teams in the league, scored a combined nine runs in the three-game series.

Nichols, 4-4, gave up five hits and Jesse Orosco finished for his third save. Kevin Ritz, 4-4, was the loser.

The Indians won for just the fourth time in 13 games. The Tigers lost for the third time in 12 tries.

An error by third baseman Doug Strange led to two runs in the first inning. Carter tied his career high for homers with a two-run shot in the eighth.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Braves 13, Padres 4

Twenty-four hours earlier, the San Diego Padres were probably thinking of putting some worry into the San Francisco Giants.

But all that has changed.

The Padres, who beat Atlanta 3-2 Wednesday night, got late word that Cincinnati held a 7-5 lead over San Francisco. The streaking Padres were looking at only a four-game deficit in the National League West race, and with the same teams playing again Thursday, why, it wasn't inconceivable that the margin would be down to three a day later. And then San Diego and San Francisco would play a crucial series at Candlestick Park.

Well, the series does open tonight, and it is critical — but only for the Padres.

The Giants, you see, came back to win that Wednesday night game 8-7 by scoring three times in the bottom of the 13th. On Thursday, the Giants went 12 innings in beating the Reds 4-3 while last-place Atlanta battered the Padres 13-4.

Instead of trailing by four games, or even three, the Padres head to San Francisco six back and probably in need of a sweep to keep alive hopes of catching the Giants.

"It's been an uphill battle for a month. We've gone from 12 games back to five games back," San Diego manager Jack McKeon said. "You've got to give those guys out there credit for battling back."

But with only 15 games remaining, San Diego will soon face the "magic number" countdown unless the Padres can cut into the San Francisco lead this weekend.

"I don't believe we have to sweep," McKeon said. "We're just thinking about tomorrow night. You have to win the first two before you can think about the sweep."

"We knew we had to win, and we just didn't get the job done," Padres outfielder Tony Gwynn said. "It's burst our bubble. It seems like every time we lose, they win and stretch their lead out."

Tom Glavine, 14-8, pitched six innings in beating San Diego for the fourth time this season. Jeff Blauser and Oddibe McDowell had four hits apiece to pace a 15-hit Atlanta attack. Dale Murphy hit his 20th home run, Blauser his 10th and Mark Lemke his first as a major leaguer.

"We're usually the ones on the other end of (the score)," Braves manager Russ Nixon said. "There was a lot of hitting tonight for a change."

The Braves jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first off Padres starter Ed Whitson, 16-11, who lasted only 2 1-3 innings before departing with a sore right shoulder.

Roberto Alomar had a two-run single in the third for San Diego and Mark Parent hit a solo homer in the ninth.

Mike Scott releases a pitch en route to 20th win

Giants 4, Reds 3

Will Clark, who had three hits, scored the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning on Bob Brenly's single as San Francisco beat Cincinnati.

Clark, who tripled, doubled and singled, reached base on third baseman Luis Quinones' error to start the 12th. He stole second as Kevin Mitchell struck out and, after an intentional walk, scored on Brenly's looper to right.

Clark drove in two runs and raised his league-leading batting average to .341. Brett Butler also got three hits for San Francisco.

Ernie Camacho, 3-0, went one inning as the Giants' fifth pitcher. Norm Charlton, 6-2, took the loss despite striking out 10 in 4 1-3 innings.

Eric Davis had three hits and drove in a run for the Reds. He went 7-for-10 with five RBIs in the two-game series.

Astros 11, Dodgers 3

Mike Scott became baseball's first 20-game winner and Craig Biggio drove in six runs with two homers, including a grand slam, as Houston won in Los Angeles.

The World Series champion Dodgers were mathematically eliminated from NL West contention. No team has repeated as World Series champions since the New York Yankees in 1978.

Scott, 20-8, gave up two runs on five hits in seven innings to reach the 20-win mark for the first time in his 11-year career. He joined Larry Dierker, J.R. Richard and Joe Niekro as Astros pitchers to win 20.

John Wetteland, 4-8, lost his fifth straight decision.

Biggio hit his first major-league slam during a six-run second inning. The Astros got 17 hits in front of only 13,026 fans, the smallest crowd of the season at Dodger Stadium.

Pirates 4, Cardinals 3

The smallest crowd in Busch Stadium history saw Pittsburgh complete a three-game sweep that sent St. Louis to its fifth straight loss and dropped the Cardinals 5 1/2 games behind Chicago in the NL East.

Only 1,519 fans attended the afternoon game. It was a makeup of Wednesday night's rainout, and the rescheduling was not announced until after midnight. The previous low crowd in St. Louis was 3,380 on Sept. 27, 1972.

Albert Hall, Jay Bell and Andy Van Slyke hit consecutive RBI doubles in the seventh inning to rally the Pirates to their fifth consecutive victory. Bob Patterson, 2-2, got the win and Ken Dayley, 3-4, the loss.

Mariners Will Stay

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — The new owners of the Seattle Mariners have big plans for the team that has never had a winning season. The big plans envisioned by Indianapolis businessmen Jeff Smulyan and Michael Browning do not include a change of locale.

"We would like to build an organization that we think will be as strong as any in baseball," Smulyan, a broadcasting magnate, said Wednesday after baseball's owners unanimously approved their purchase of the Mariners from George Argyros.

"We think there is a good foundation now and we want to build on it."

The Mariners, headed for their 13th straight losing season, are the only franchise in major league history never to have a winning season.

"The team, while it has not won as many games as it might, people see it's a team on the verge," Smulyan said.

Smulyan and Browning say they don't intend to replace Manager Jim Lefebvre or General Manager Woody Woodward, but do intend to stretch the market appeal of the Mariners.

"They're very upbeat about the whole area of the Northwest," American League president Bobby Brown said. "They feel, and I think too, that the Mariners ought to be a Northwest team, not just a Seattle team."

The AL chief said Browning and Smulyan told the owners that there are 6 million potential fans within a 200-mile radius of Seattle.

"The idea that the market is tiny is perhaps a little misconception," Brown said. "They hope to be able to exploit that sort of data."

Brown said Mariners' fans should not worry about the team being moved.

"If there is a misperception (about the team moving) it's because the fans that have that misperception have to be deaf, dumb and blind," Brown said.

"Everybody from day one has given the opinion that the team is not going to move and won't be allowed to move. It's going to stay there and these owners are committed to that."

Smulyan and Browning purchased the Mariners from Argyros for a reported $76 million. Argyros, head of a Southern California real estate empire, bought the team in 1981 for $13.1 million.

"There is no question these two fellows love baseball and they made the commitment to me they will do everything in their considerable power to make Seattle a more successful franchise," newly elected baseball commissioner Fay Vincent said.

Vincent said baseball had the assurances of Smulyan and Browning that they would not move the Mariners out of Seattle, which already has lost one baseball team. The former Seattle Pilots played the 1969 season in Seattle before moving to Milwaukee and becoming the Brewers.

"There is absolutely no commitment on the part of baseball, implied or otherwise, to permit that transfer," Vincent said. "That is not something expected, contemplated or part of the arrangement."

"Those fellows have committed to us and me personally that they will do everything within their power to continue to maintain that franchise at an even stronger position. I have told them in no uncertain terms that that covenant, that commitment will be adhered to on their part."

Vincent To Look At TV Deal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fay Vincent is unhappy that there will be only 12 baseball games on network television next season but he's not sure he can do anything to change that.

CBS begins its four-year, $1.06 billion contract in 1990 but there will be no more Game of the Week. Vincent said he and A. Bartlett Giamatti, his late predecessor as baseball commissioner, had talked about trying to change the deal.

"There have been thoughts given to that," Vincent said, adding that baseball probably didn't have the power to alter the agreement.

Meanwhile, NBC and baseball won't be breaking up completely after this season. Owners approved Thursday the formation of a joint partnership between baseball, NBC and Pascoe Nally Inc. of Britain that will have all non-North American broadcast and promotional rights.

Baseball will own 50 percent, NBC 35 percent and Pascoe Nally 15 percent.

"It allows us to continue our strong relationship with baseball over the next several years," NBC president Robert C. Wright said in a statement. "And it moves us substantially ahead in our international development efforts."

CBS and Capital Cities Inc., through ESPN, were among 17 companies that made presentations, according to Bryan Burns, baseball's senior vice president for broadcasting.

"Hiring a staff is the first thing," Burns said. "We have a meeting on that Tuesday. Then it's starting to do our country-by-country survey."

Giamatti will be honored by baseball on Oct. 31 at a memorial in New York's Carnegie Hall, and the World Series will be played in his memory.

Giamatti, who died of a heart attack Sept. 1 after five months as commissioner, had a private funeral at the request of his family.

Vincent said the service in the 2,800-seat hall would be by invitation only. He also spoke of his predecessor Thursday during the major league owners' quarterly meeting.

"I started the meeting, obviously, with a tribute to Bart," Vincent said. "I had written an essay about him and read the essay. I reminded the ownership that it was our judgment that the World Series should be dedicated to Bart. We obviously will be using the ball that has his signature. The players will be wearing black armbands. The umpires will wear suitable patches. The flags will fly at half staff. The World Series program will be dedicated to Bart and we will reprint in there that wonderful essay 'Green Fields of the Mind.'"

Vincent's election may have been easy but it was not simple. Originally, the issue of the commissionership was to be decided Thursday during the scheduled quarterly joint meeting of the National and American leagues. But on Tuesday, the executive council decided to move it up a day.

Normally, the secretary would open the meeting and call the roll. But Ed Durso, the secretary, quit last month to become general counsel of ESPN.

Baseball Notes

So Tom Ostertag, the director of legal affairs for the commissioner's office, called the role as acting secretary.

Next, Ostertag had the clubs waive notice of the meeting, which they did. Normally, a meeting cannot be held without at least 10 days' notice.

Clubs then waived the right to a written ballot on the presiding officer in the absence of a commissioner.

NL president Bill White and AL president Bobby Brown were elected joint presiding officers. They had the clubs waive not having an agenda for the meeting and a written vote for commissioner.

The sale of the Seattle Mariners from George Argyros to a group headed by Indianapolis businessmen Michael G. Browning and Jeffrey H. Smulyan was approved Thursday.

American League president Bobby Brown said the team would stay in Seattle and that rumors to the contrary are wrong.

"If there is a misperception, the fans that have that misperception have to be deaf, dumb and blind," Brown said. "Everybody from day one has given the opinion that the team is not going to be, that they will not be allowed to (move). It's going to stay there."

Smulyan said he will not make any changes in the baseball operations part of the franchise.

The 1992 All-Star Game will be held in San Diego. The executive council recommended Jack Murphy Stadium on Tuesday and the ownership approved the selection Thursday.

The 1990 game will be at Chicago's Wrigley Field and the 1991 game will be in Toronto's new SkyDome.

This will be the second All-Star Game in San Diego. In 1978, the National League beat the AL 7-3.

Former pitcher Joe Black on Thursday was appointed special consultant to the commissioner for player personal development. Black will work on helping players adjust to retirement, among other things.

"It's important to make players aware that baseball is only one phase of their lives," Black said. "I hope I can make a difference by helping players prepare for long, productive and decent lives once their playing careers are concluded."

Black, the 1952 NL rookie of the year, recently returned as senior vice president for urban affairs of Greyhound Corp. and is president of JayBee & Associates in Phoenix.

Milwaukee owner Bud Selig was presented the August A. Busch Jr. Award for long and meritorious service to baseball. The award has been presented previously to Walter O'Malley of the Dodgers, John Galbreath of the Pirates, John Fetzer of the Tigers, Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National League.

Garrelts Likes Role Soft-spoken Scott Garrelts never cut it as a bullpen closer who is supposed to throw bullets first and ask questions later.

As a thinking man's pitcher, however, the right-hander has blossomed into a regular intellectual in the San Francisco Giants' starting rotation.

Garrelts, who was performing so poorly in the spring that he refused to talk about his pitching, has spoken volumes through his performances this season.

Reburial Rites Set For Victims Of Stalin Era

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Near the Ural Mountains city of Chelyabinsk, skulls pierced by bullet holes were found where gold once was mined.

In Kolpashova, a Siberian village on the Ob River, excavations released a stream of mummified corpses to float down the river.

In the Ukrainian city of Poltava, diggers at a sand quarry uncovered a series of trenches full of bones — the remains of an estimated 5,000 people.

"This is a country built on bones," says Oleg Golovanov, a member of a group called Memorial that is dedicated to the memory of Josef Stalin's victims.

The bones lay undisturbed for decades while the Soviet government refused to acknowledge the estimated 20 million victims of Stalin's bloody years of terror.

Now they are coming back to haunt the country. About once a month for the past year, the official press has reported the unearthing of another mass grave as the Soviet Union reveals the horror of its past.

On Tuesday, Soviet television carried another report, this one about the reburial of 350 skeletons found on a mountain near Chelyabinsk. A correspondent said innocent "men, women, old people and even children" — possibly as many as 300,000 — were loaded onto trucks and shot at night.

The Memorial group found the remains buried in a former gold mine where authorities wanted to build houses. Now officials plan to turn the area into a memorial, the correspondent said.

A reburial ceremony is also planned Saturday for the remains of 540 of Stalin's victims found at a garbage dump in the Ukrainian coal center of Donetsk.

Golovanov coordinates efforts to track down the mass graves for Memorial, the national group lobbying to clear the names of Stalin's "enemies of the people," as well as help their families and those who survived years in labor camps.

He believes there could be as many as 100,000 unmarked mass graves left as a legacy from the purges, repressions and labor camps Stalin oversaw from the late 1920s until his death in 1953.

Press coverage of the graves began last year when a killing field was found in the Kuropaty forest of Byelorussia. It escalated with a similar discovery in Bykovnya in the Ukraine.

Memorial receives a steady stream of letters with information about newly revealed sites, and Golovanov said he sometimes wonders, "What is your goal in digging them up?"

He answers: to make sure people know all the evil of the Stalin years. He believes there is a need to restore respect to the dead.

"You're walking, and they're lying there under you, and not a single person knows about their fate," he said.

The Associated Press

Archeologists work at a mass grave unearthed recently

Golovanov believes the caches of bones also make a forceful statement about the country's Communist rulers.

"The people in the government are the same now as they were then," he said. "People can't help but see that."

The party's policy-making Central Committee last month ordered local governments to do all they could to redress Stalin-era wrongs, including cooperating with groups like Memorial. "Mass burial places should be recognized as official cemeteries," the decree said, and "organs of the police and the KGB should be more involved in this work."

But Golovanov said revealing and marking the old graves remains fraught with conflicts.

The KGB, whose predecessor, the NKVD, carried out much of the killing, often does not open its files to help find graves and identify victims. KGB officials say their archives are in such terrible shape they aren't worth examining.

Even after the grave sites are identified, some local authorities insist on using the land for new housing, garages or other projects.

In Donetsk, the local government had turned the killing field over to developers and was reluctant to change its plans, the youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda reported Wednesday. Eventually, authorities agreed to turn most of the land into a memorial park.

In Poltava, the grave site is now a dump.

An unsigned letter to Memorial from Poltava described how a man unearthed the trenches of corpses at a sand quarry in 1968 and was ordered by authorities to cover them.

"Once a year, since then, I've visited that area, since I supposed that my father was resting there too," he wrote. "He was rehabilitated in 1959," posthumously.

Mother Teresa Carrying Fever

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Mother Teresa had a restful sleep but heavy doses of antibiotics failed to bring down a recurring fever that could complicate her heart problems, a hospital official said today.

The 79-year-old Roman Catholic nun, who won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her charity work, suffered a serious setback Thursday just as doctors thought she was progressing well after a heart attack last week.

But a statement issued today by Woodlands Nursing Home, the hospital where she is being treated, indicated Mother Teresa's condition improved slightly.

"The mother is still running a temperature and the cause of the infection is being investigated. There was no chest pain last night. She has taken normal food this morning and now resting peacefully," the statement said.

A senior physician, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Mother Teresa's condition could have worsened Thursday because too many doctors want to treat her and too many people want to see her.

"Everyone is so concerned with giving their attendance at the hospital. They aren't really concerned how much each visit sets her back," he said.

Earlier this week, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi visited her. The prime minister's security staff was present and a television crew was permitted to film the 10-minute chat.

"What can the hospital management do if the prime minister, the chief minister (of West Bengal state), the health minister and other dignitaries keep coming to visit?" said the doctor.

He said the case had become so high profile, with so many doctors attending Mother Teresa, that coordination of treatment had become a problem.

dination of treatment had become a problem.

Doctors said she had sharp chest pains early Thursday and then again in the afternoon.

"Mother Teresa has had a setback," Dr. K.K. Sinha, a cardiologist and one of her five doctors, said Thursday night. "There is a heaviness in the chest. This is very serious."

Sinha described the problem as a "free infarction," which appeared to mean a form of heart attack. An infarction refers to an area of dying or dead tissue resulting from the obstruction of blood vessels. A myocardial infarction, which is death of a section of heart muscle, is a heart attack.

"Very aggressive treatment is needed," he said. "All medication has been given but she is allergic to some medicine."

Dozens of people of all faiths waited outside the hospital, some kneeling at the gate to offer prayers. Bouquets of flowers sent from well-wishers around the world were delivered to the home.

Mother Teresa suffered a heart attack Sept. 8, three days after she was admitted to the intensive care unit with an irregular heartbeat, a blocked artery and high fever.

Doctors said her condition progressively improved after they attached a temporary pacemaker and changed her medication. They had hoped to remove the pacemaker by the end of the week, but her condition deteriorated early Thursday.

Born in Yugoslavia, Mother Teresa gave up a comfortable life as a convent teacher to live and work among the destitute and dying in Calcutta's squalid slums.

She founded the Missionaries of Charity in October 1950 in an abandoned run-down hostel donated by the city.

Gorbachev Holds Talks On Unrest

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev has met with the leaders of the Soviet Union's restless Baltic republics to seek a compromise that will avert growing demands for secession, Soviet officials said Thursday.

The Communist Party leader in Estonia, Vaino Valjas, said in a television interview that Gorbachev had expressed concern that his perestroika reform program was threatened by conservatives. The Soviet leader reportedly said that it was necessary for reformers, both in Moscow and the Baltic republics, to unite in the face of these threats.

The previously undisclosed meeting took place Wednesday in Moscow and was attended by Communist Party first secretaries, prime ministers and presidents from all three Baltic republics. A crucial meeting of the Communist party's policy-making Central Committee is scheduled to discuss the nationalities crisis next Tuesday.

A reporter for Estonian television, Andres Raid, quoted Valjas as saying in the interview that he believed Gorbachev understood the problems of the Baltic republics and was "on our side." The Soviet leader reportedly offered limited sovereignty and economic independence on the understanding that the three republics would not attempt to leave the Soviet Union.

Over the past few months, demands have been growing in Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia for the restoration of independence. The three republics were incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940 following a secret pact between Joseph Stalin and Adolf Hitler dividing Eastern Europe into Soviet and German spheres of influence.

Last month, the Central committee issued an exceptionally tough statement, warning of potential "disaster" unless the secessionist demands were dropped. Soviet newspapers have maintained a steady barrage of criticism of mass political movements known as the Popular Fronts that have embraced the idea of independence in the three republics.

Local elections in Estonia and Latvia have now been scheduled for Dec. 10, raising the prospect of secessionist majorities being elected in the parliaments of the two republics.

Bombs Go Off As Colombia Prepares For More Extraditions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Four bombs exploded at banks in Bogota early today as Colombia prepared to extradite two cocaine traffickers to the United States to face drug charges, police said.

No one was injured in the blasts, which occurred about 12:30 a.m., a Bogota police spokesman said. All four banks were damaged, said the spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous.

No one claimed responsibility for the explosions, but suspicion fell on the nation's cocaine traffickers, who have relied on bombings to try to persuade the government not to extradite drug lords to the United States to stand trial.

Until now, the traffickers had concentrated their attacks on Medellin, a city 150 miles northwest of Bogota that is the headquarters for Colombia's biggest cocaine cartel.

The government announced Thursday that it had arrested two members of the Medellin cartel wanted in the United States and said they were being held in a maximum security prison pending extradition.

It also decreed a state of emergency in the cities of Puerto Boyaca and Pacha in midwestern Colombia just east of Medellin.

The region is considered a stronghold for drug-linked death squads and processing labs, and the decree allows President Virgilio Barco to put army troops on alert and send military advisers to "help" the mayors of the two cities.

Last week, Barco used special emergency powers to replace the mayors of those cities with military officers, but he suspended the order after widespread criticism that it was unconstitutional.

The government identified the men to be extradited to the United States as Bernardo Pelaez Roldan and Guillermo Bueno Delgado.

The two were paraded before reporters at the National Security Department, Colombia's version of the FBI, on Thursday. Pelaez, bearded and wearing a leather jacket, cursed at the journalists and threatened photographers with a cane. He had a cut on his head.

A communique from the department said Pelaez, arrested Wednesday outside the capital of Bogota, was wanted in Detroit for "conspiracy and distribution of cocaine." The Justice Department in Washington said he was convicted of drug-trafficking charges in Detroit five years ago and faces 15 years in prison.

The Justice Department said

Bueno Delgado was wanted on drug trafficking charges in Tallahassee, Fla., and San Francisco and was accused of "introducing 5,740 kilos (12,628 pounds) of cocaine and money laundering."

The two are not among the so-called "Dirty Dozen" list prepared by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration of the most wanted Colombian drug barons.

But the Justice Department also has another list, not made public, of 82 lesser Colombian drug figures. It was unknown whether Pelaez and Bueno Delgado were on that list.

Gen. Miguel Maza Marques, who heads Colombia's anti-drug war and the Security Department, described Pelaez as "much bigger" than Eduardo Martinez Romero, the alleged financier for the Medellin cartel who was extradited to Atlanta Sept. 6.

He has been the only person extradited so far under a special decree by Barco to bypass the courts and eliminate the possibility of bribes and intimidation by drug lords.

Colombia launched the drug crackdown after the Aug. 18 assassination of leading presidential candidate and anti-drug crusader Sen. Luis Carlos Galvan on Aug. 18.

The army has said it will continue the crackdown "to the last sacrifice." But despite a $250,000 reward for top drug barons Pablo Escobar and Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, the two and other cartel leaders remain at large.

On Thursday, Defense Minister Gen. Oscar Botero Restrepo held a news conference to deny rumors that American troops were helping Colombia in its drug war.

Botero said 17 U.S. "technicians" were training Colombians to use military equipment, including weapons, planes and helicopters, which the Bush administration sent as part of a $65 million aid package.

Newspapers published an open letter by former presidents Belisario Betancourt and Misael Pastana Bortero asking Barco for "clarification" of reports involving U.S. troops.

Barco rejected an offer by the Bush administration to send troops to help the anti-drug effort. However, the Pentagon has said up to 200 military advisers could be sent to Colombia to help in training and maintenance of the donated military equipment.

This has sparked fears and nationalistic fervor.

Sen. Ernesto Lucena accused the Barco administration Thursday of letting in equipment "more fitting for an invasion of Panama than helping root out a Colombian drug mafia."

Refugees Straining Housing Facilities

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Officials across Germany struggling to house a crush of refugees have set up camping trailers, commandeered school gymnasiums and even tried to persuade new arrivals to go elsewhere.

The East Germans are only the latest wave of refugees, who have strained West Germany's social services and housing stock.

More than 400,000 ethnic Germans from Eastern Europe are expected this year alone; the number of East Germans will easily top previous predictions of 100,000. In addition, tens of thousands of asylum seekers from various countries arrive each year in West Germany, already one of Europe's most densely populated countries.

Social services and school and local budgets in many communities already are stretched to the limit, and affordable housing is increasingly rare in this country of 62 million people.

The East Germans began arriving Monday when Hungary defied its Warsaw Pact ally East Germany and allowed them to cross into Austria en route to West Germany.

By Thursday, at least 13,000 East

Germans had arrived.

"I have full understanding for why they would especially like to live in West Berlin, where they are closest to their homeland," the city's mayor, Walter Momper, said Thursday.

But he urged the new arrivals not to flood his city, saying it already has cared for a disproportionately high number of other refugees.

"People have more trouble finding housing and work here," Momper said in an address to the local parliament.

He called on the federal government to solve the housing problem as soon as possible for the East German refugees.

"Words about life in freedom don't fill up the stomach or put a roof over anyone's head," he said.

Most of the East German refugees are staying with friends and relatives. Still, many have needed temporary shelter provided by various West German states.

Many of the newcomers are young people in their 20s and 30s, and many are families with young children.

In Bonn, government spokesman Hans Klein said federal officials will meet soon to map a housing strategy.

S. African Marchers Protest Police Acts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — About 10,000 protesters, jogging, chanting and waving banners, marched today through the heart of Johannesburg to a police headquarters where many activists have been detained and interrogated.

Another anti-government protest, involving nearly 2,000 people, took place at the central square in Pretoria, the capital. Some demonstrators climbed onto a statue of Paul Kruger, one of the political patriarchs of the Afrikaners who now control the government.

Both protests were among the largest ever staged in the two cities, and dramatized the impact of President-elect F.W. de Klerk's declaration this week that his white-led government would not block peaceful protests.

On Wednesday, a day after de Klerk's statement, more than 20,000 people joined a protest march in Cape Town against police brutality, the largest such demonstration ever authorized by the government.

 While the chances of any finesse succeeding are even money, that does not mean that all finesses are equal. Consider South's dilemma at six clubs after the lead of the ace of spades. Which is the right red suit to finesse?

Once North could bid freely at the two-level, South decided, somewhat impulsively, to commit the hand to slam. He wisely chose to play in clubs rather than hearts to protect his diamond tenace from attack on opening lead.

West led the ace of spades and made the obvious shift to a trump. Declarer came to hand with the king of hearts and drew the outstanding trumps in two rounds. Which red suit should he tackle, and when?

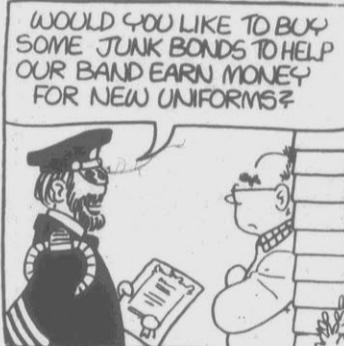

Since West is likely to have the king of diamonds for her overcall, declarer should forget about that finesse. And there's no hurry to take the heart hook. First, South should play off the ♠ more rounds of trumps to see what the defenders discard. On the first two, West has no problem—two spades can be spared. The third discard is another matter. West can't let go of a spade without setting up two additional spade tricks in dummy, and a heart makes it easy for declarer to guess the heart position. Therefore, West should, without visibly suffering an anxiety attack, sluff a diamond, holding onto her two remaining hearts. Meanwhile, dummy has come down to three hearts and the king-jack of spades.

A careless declarer might now have tried the heart finesse and gone down. But having done so well to this point, declarer was not going to falter at the final hurdle. South first cashed the ace of diamonds and, when the king came tumbling down, he claimed the rest of the tricks.

Troopers Say They'll Be Ready For Stones Concert

By L.L. Grimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — When the Rolling Stones roll out of Raleigh after their Saturday night show they will have left in their wake an estimated $2.4 million in economic activity — with half of the money in their hands.

The band has sold out Carter-Finley Stadium and officials are preparing for a large and possibly rowdy crowd when the 57,000 ticket holders — and others hoping to get into the show — arrive at the state fairgrounds.

"I think we're going to have a larger crowd for this one," said N.C. Highway Patrol Troop C commander Capt. Tony Spainhour. "So consequently, there's going to be more alcohol and drug use."

"We're going to be ready this time," he said.

Before, during and after the performance, about 95 troopers will patrol the area, trying to ease traffic flow and keeping an eye out for impaired drivers.

The increased number of patrolmen is a lesson well-learned by Spainhour.

"During the Who concert, we had a large number of people who were driving while impaired," Spainhour said. "We simply didn't have enough personnel to handle all the impaired drivers."

After spending a month studying ways to best control the mobs of cars and drivers, Spainhour said the solution was simple: Increase the number of troopers from the normal 45 who patrol events like football games at the N.C. State University facility.

Not that there were any real problems during the Who concert, at which the Highway Patrol arrested 36 people on drunken driving charges.

"You can only do so much with X number of troopers," Spainhour said.

The additional patrolmen will be coming from nearby parts of the state along with troopers from the Raleigh division.

"We're going to have to work some long hours," he said. "And we're dealing with some different types of individuals. There will be some people here that we normally wouldn't encounter at a football game.

Spainhour said the highway patrol will be trying another tactic to control traffic and inebriated drivers — coordinating efforts with local law enforcement agencies.

Spainhour said they are expecting as many as 100,000 Rolling Stones fans to flood the area.

"The problem you've got to watch out for is people in the general vicinity of the stadium, trying to listen to the band," he said.

"There's a possibility of a very large crowd."

Officer Says Star Slapped His Face

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — A motorcycle policeman who stopped entertainer Zsa Zsa Gabor for a traffic violation says the actress cursed and spit, and slapped his face.

Officer Paul Kramer testified in Municipal Court Thursday that the celebrity aristocrat screamed at him, "Do you know who I am?"

"She closed the door and she spun around and slapped me on the side of the face. I was very surprised," Kramer testified.

Miss Gabor is charged with misdemeanor battery on a police officer, disobeying an officer's orders, driving with an expired license, and having an open container of alcohol in her car and an expired car registration. A conviction carries a maximum two years in jail and $4,000 fine.

Kramer pulled her over on June 14 for having expired registration tags on her $215,000 Rolls-Royce Corniche convertible. As he checked for violations, Miss Gabor allegedly drove off, was stopped again and slapped Kramer's face.

Kramer, under cross-examination, was asked to stand alongside Miss Gabor, as he wore his helmet and sunglasses.

"I'm afraid of him," said the 5-foot-3 actress as she stood next to the 6-foot-4 officer within inches of the jury box on Thursday. Smiling, she demonstrated a strike to Officer Paul Kramer's left cheek, showing it was a considerable reach.

"I didn't realize he was so tall. He is very gorgeous," Miss Gabor said of Kramer during a break in testimony.

Jurors also heard a recorded police radio transmission of Miss Gabor's traffic stop and Kramer's inquiry for a computer check on a date of birth for the actress. The answer came back as June 6, 1923.

An enlarged copy of Miss Gabor's drivers license was displayed to jurors and it showed the birthdate had been altered. Asked why he didn't issue a misdemeanor citation for an altered license, Kramer said, "It was an amateur job of alteration."

Deputy District Attorney Elden Fox said witnesses will prove the officer's actions were professional throughout the 15-minute episode.

At one point, Kramer testified, he pulled alongside Miss Gabor's car and yelled for her to stop. "She swerved the car at me" and screamed an obscenity, he said.

Miss Gabor was delivered to court in what she called the "jailhouse Rolls-Royce." Wearing a cream-colored suit, Miss Gabor told reporters she was anxious to begin her trial but didn't want to go to jail.

"I don't want to go to prison. I have claustrophobia," she said. The day before she told courthouse reporters she feared lesbians in jail.

She deflected questions about her age, which ranges from 62 to 70, depending on the source.

"The only good thing that comes out of this is my face cream sells like hot cakes," the former Miss Hungary and cosmetics entrepreneur concluded.

TV Guide's Editor Submits Resignation

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON David Sendler, for many years the editor most responsible for the journalistic content of TV Guide, resigned Thursday after what insiders described as a dramatic change in the direction of the magazine since it was acquired last year by Rupert Murdoch.

Publicly, Murdoch had made assurances that he would not change TV Guide when he bought it and parent Triangle Publications last November for $3 billion.

But on the day he took over, according to insiders, Murdoch privately told management that he thought TV Guide was "too cerebral" and set out to change that.

He installed a shadow editor above Sendler, Roger Wood, the former editor of the sensational New York Post under Murdoch. Wood's name does not appear in the magazine's staff masthead.

Since then, Murdoch and Wood have added an astrology column, a soap opera column, food features and more celebrity covers — including a controversial cover recently that put Oprah Winfrey's head on Ann Margret's body.

"It was not David Sendler's idea that TV Guide needed an astrologer," said John Weisman, the magazine's former Washington bureau chief, who resigned in July.

"It just became obvious to both Roger Wood and Dave that they were on such different paths that it didn't make sense to continue," said Bob Smith, the former managing editor of the magazine, who resigned in May.

Congressman Says New Destroyer Is 'Nightmare'

By George C. Wilson
LAT WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Navy's first billion-dollar destroyer, the USS Arleigh Burke, has sailed into a new political controversy on the eve of its launching Saturday in Bath, Maine. Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., of the House Energy and Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee charged Thursday that the ship has turned out to be a "procurement nightmare."

The Navy and the shipbuilder, Bath Iron Works, disagree, contending that the destroyer, designated the DDG-51, has produced only the normal birth pangs of the first ship in a new class of warship that will give the nation a big new naval punch. However, Dingell and Bath, but not the Navy, agree that the first Burke-class destroyer will cost at least 60 percent more than anticipated. All three parties acknowledge the destroyer will be delivered more than a year late.

If a current General Accounting Office investigation sustains Dingell's charges, a Congress looking for more places to cut the Pentagon budget may target the DDG-51 next year.

The Arleigh Burke is 466 feet long, displaces 8,300 tons and will be armed with the Aegis anti-aircraft system; 90 missiles, including the Tomahawk cruise missile, and a five-inch rapid-fire gun. Bath and Ingalls Shipbuilding division of Litton Industries in Pascagoula, Miss., are the builders. The Navy is seeking money for 32 ships, with the lead DDG-51, to cost about $1.2 billion and subsequent ships about $720 million apiece.

The ship was born in controversy. In 1983 then-Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Thayer, a former Navy pilot, tried to persuade Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger that spending $1 billion on a destroyer to protect aircraft carriers amounted to overkill, especially in light of the Army's critical need for more money.

Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. at the time countered in fierce arguments at Defense Resources Board meetings that the DDG-51's high-technology weapons for hitting shore targets and downing enemy planes were vitally needed. Lehman won that fight and promised the ship would be a model of defense procurement. He vowed that there would not be the usual flood of design changes which have pushed up construction costs in past weapons programs.

"There had been over 760 change orders as of March 1989 despite those assurances by Secretary Lehman," Dingell complained in a letter to Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III. But William E. Haggett, chief executive officer and board chairman of Bath Iron Works, in an interview said there have been "fewer than 300 changes" and said they cannot be blamed for driving design and construction costs up from the projected $321 million to between $500 million and $525 million, an overrun as high as 63 percent. The Aegis anti-aircraft system and other armament added by the Navy lift the destroyer's cost over the $1 billion mark.

"We were overly optimistic," Haggett said of the shipbuilder's estimate of how much time and money it would take to design the destroyer. A labor strike at the yard from July to September 1985 added to costs and delays, he said. The first destroyer was to be delivered next month, but the new delivery date is February 1991.

The staff of Dingell's subcommittee predicts Bath and the Navy will soon be in a dispute over who owes whom for the extra costs in the lead DDG-51.

Retired Admiral Still Feels The Tug Of The Sea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAIRFAX, Va. — Arleigh Burke has slowed his pace from the boiler-busting speeds that got him the nickname "31-Knot Burke" in World War II, but the retired admiral still feels a sailor's tug toward the sea at age 87.

The first ship in an advanced class of guided missile destroyers will be christened with Burke's name next Saturday at a Maine shipyard, and the former chief of naval operations under President Eisenhower is eager for a sea trial.

"They've already promised me that I can take her to sea someday," Burke said in an interview. "It isn't that I want to make sure the ship is up to snuff; I want to see if I'm still up to snuff."

The Arleigh Burke is one of only three Navy vessels to be named for a living individual. Also honored before their deaths were former Rep. Carl Vinson, D-Ga., and Adm. Hyman G. Rickover.

Burke shrugs off his wartime exploits as commander of the "Little Beavers" destroyer squadron, which fought 22 combat engagements in the Pacific in a four-month period, and his present actions as chief of naval operations for an unprecedented six years, 1955-1961.

"The nicest thing about the Navy is that people give credit for things that were done by a lot of other people," said Burke. "You suddenly realize, when you get to be an old man, that what you're getting credit for is what other people did."

It was in the Battle of Cape St. George in the Solomon Islands that Burke gained the "31-knot" nickname as he pushed his squadron forward on Thanksgiving Day 1943 to keep the Japanese from evacuating Buka Island. Burke's message to U.S. transports lying ahead: "Stand aside, I'm coming through at 31 knots."

When the battle was over, the squadron had sunk three Japanese destroyers in what the Naval War College later called "an almost perfect action."

In his post-battle report, Burke attributed the success of the operation in part to the luck of good timing and said the battle "should clearly demonstrate that the fortune of war is a fickle wench and that results hang by a narrow thread."

The Little Beavers, so named because Burke trimmed each ship with an insignia representing a Red Ryder comic strip character by that name, were credited with destroying one Japanese cruiser, nine destroyers, one submarine, several smaller vessels and about 30 enemy aircraft from November 1943 to February 1944.

One young ensign who went on to become a vice admiral, Raymond E. Peet, recalled of Burke: "The squadron would have gone any place with that man. If he were going to take us to Japan, we were all ready to go. He was that type of leader."
