Looters Run Wild On St. Croix As Hugo Spreads Devastation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands — Law enforcement collapsed on St. Croix after Hurricane Hugo devastated the island, and hundreds of looters were ransacking stores and loading garbage bags full of food and jewelry, witnesses said today.

Tourists pleaded with reporters landing on this U.S. Virgin Island to take them off, and the U.S. Coast Guard today said gunshots and looting occurred during the night.

"It's very bad, extremely bad," said San Juan reporter Gary Williams.

"When we landed (in a helicopter on St. Croix), we were pounced upon by about 15 tourists. They said, 'Please get food! Please get water! Please help us! They're looting. We've seen police looting. We've seen National Guard looting. There's no law and order here.'

"The women were in panic. Some were crying. They didn't know what to do or how to get out of there," Williams said in a telephone interview.

Ham radio operators reported Hugo's winds on Sunday night and Monday destroyed or damaged 97 percent of the buildings on St. Croix, which has a population of 53,000. Civil defense officials reported no deaths on the island.

In San Juan, Coast Guard Petty Officer John Ware said Coast Guard cutters were steaming offshore St. Croix today, "showing the flag and awaiting instructions (on possible military assistance)."

He said there were "gunshots in the night, lots of looting going on in the night. We have reports of widespread looting and civil unrest."

Williams said his helicopter flew over Sunny Isle shopping center in Christiansted. He said there appeared to be 1,000 people in the parking lot, many walking in and out of shattered shops with garbage bags.

"They were walking to their cars with stuff," he said. "The Grand Union (supermarket) was just crammed with people at the door."

At one jewelry store, "We saw three men and a woman walking out with garbage bags loaded with stuff."

He said one man was wielding an iron bar.

At another nearby jewelry store, where the store window had already been shattered, people were trying to break open the metal bars to get in, Williams said. He said he saw two women carrying large boxes overflowing with toys.

"We did not see one cop in Christiansted, and that's the main town," he said. "We saw a National Guard truck filled to capacity with

Southeast Stocks Up As Hugo Rages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Residents from Florida to North Carolina stocked up on groceries, flashlights and window-reinforcing tape for Hurricane Hugo's expected assault and the Navy sent ships to sea today to wait out the killer storm.

Looting broke out on St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands in the wake of the storm, which has been blamed for at least 25 deaths in the Caribbean.

Forecasters said the chances of the hurricane hitting the East Coast late this week were steadily increasing. Most projected paths had the storm hitting between Cape Canaveral and Cape Hatteras, N.C., by Saturday.

The storm today brushed northeast of the Bahamas with winds of 105 mph and was expected to bring mostly high wind and rain. Workers boarded up government buildings, and Prime Minister Lynden Pindling cut short a visit to Jamaica.

"Although the indications are that it's going to move east of the more populated areas, no one is relaxing their vigil because it can change direction," said Bill Kalis, a spokesman for the Bahamian government.

Looters ransacked stores and law enforcement collapsed on St. Croix, where tourists pleaded with reporters for help in getting out.

"When we landed, we were pounced upon by about 15 tourists," said Gary Williams. "They said, 'Please get food! Please get water! Please help us! They're looting. We've seen police looting. We've seen National Guard looting. There's no law and order here.'

At 9 a.m. EDT, Hugo's center was 395 miles east of Nassau in the Bahamas. Its coordinates were 25.2 north latitude and 71.1 west longitude. The storm was moving northwest at 12 mph. Little change in strength was expected today.

The Navy today began to send ships to sea from a base at Charleston, S.C., to avoid storm damage.

The storm's death toll was incomplete, and officials feared it would grow as rescuers searched collapsed buildings.

Hugo so far has left millions of dollars in damage, more than 50,000 Caribbean residents homeless and hundreds of injuries. It ripped away roofs, flattened houses, flipped planes, damaged cash crops and knocked out power and communications.

Two Coast Guard planes carrying fresh water, food and lumber arrived in Puerto Rico late Tuesday, and several other relief flights were planned today.

Hospital Drive Exceeding Goal

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Hospital Foundation Pride and Challenge Campaign chairman Harry Leslie told Pitt County Hospital Board trustees Tuesday night the campaign has far surpassed its $1,750,000 fund-raising goal.

More than $2.3 million has now been pledged, Leslie said. He predicted that least $2.5 million in pledges to be paid over the next five years will be made in the next month or two. This fund will be used to generate interest to meet equipment needs of the hospital.

Dr. James Hallock, dean of the East Carolina University Medical School and liaison from the medical school to the board, said that he was pleased to discover that, in visiting 18 of 23 hospitals in eastern North Carolina in the past several months, none of the hospitals are in competition with one another and each serves a function distinct from that of the regional referral center that PCMH has become.

Hallock said he believes the eastern N.C. medical community can continue to effect good care in the region based on this situation.

Jack Richardson, former hospital president who accompanied Hallock on many of the visits, pointed out that, on Medicaid rosters, PCMH is the largest rural referral center in the United States.

Board members heard recommendations from representatives of the First Boston firm which is direc-

Bomb Blast May Have Doomed French Airliner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — A bomb probably caused the crash of a French DC-10 jetliner that disappeared shortly after taking off from Chad with 171 people on board, the airline said today.

The French airline UTA also said it received an anonymous call from a man claiming responsibility for the crash on behalf of the Moslem terrorist group Islamic Jihad. The airline said it was not in a position to judge its authenticity and informed the French Foreign Ministry.

The wreckage of the aircraft was found today scattered over a wide area in a desolate region of south-central Niger. There was no word on survivors. The wife of the U.S. ambassador to Chad and a Chadian Cabinet minister were among those reported on board.

Contact was lost with the Paris-bound jet less than an hour after it took off Tuesday from the Chadian capital, N'Djamena, after originating in the Congo.

"It exploded at high altitude, leaving every reason to believe it was a bomb," UTA airline spokesman Michel Friess said on French television. He said it was possible, but less likely, that a technical failure was to blame.

"It appears to have exploded in flight at high altitude," said a Foreign Ministry spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "The pieces are widely scattered, so it didn't crash on impact."

On March 10, 1984, a bomb exploded on a UTA DC-8 flying the same route just before the plane was to take off from N'Djamena, injuring 25 people on board. An otherwise unknown group calling itself "Group Idriss Miskini" claimed responsibility but the Chadian government blamed Libya for the bombing.

Chad fought with Libyan-backed rebels for more than a decade, but the situation has been calm for the past two years, and Chad and Libya recently signed an agreement to settle their border dispute peacefully.

Among the passengers who boarded in N'Djamena was Bonnie Pugh, wife of the U.S. ambassador to Chad, Robert L. Pugh, the U.S. Embassy in Chad said.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse, quoting unidentified sources, said Chadian Planning Minister Mahamat Soumahila was also on the plane, headed for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Washington.

Most passengers appeared to be French, Chadian and Congolese, said the Foreign Ministry spokesman. He said that a more thorough breakdown, if issued at all,

Prosecutors Wrapping Up Case Against Bakker

By Paul Nowell
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Prosecutors prepared to wrap up their case against television evangelist Jim Bakker, a man they have portrayed as a lavish spender of money sent to him by believers who could hardly make ends meet.

Prosecutors spent Tuesday showing a U.S. District Court jury videotapes of broadcasts of Bakker's

"The PTL Club" in which he and his wife pleaded for followers to send money to the ministry. The U.S. Justice Department attorneys planned to rest their case after presenting the last of the videotapes today.

In the six hours of tapes shown Tuesday, Bakker appealed for donations and asked his followers to trust him.

"I'm sincere," Bakker told viewers in 1984. "I would not lie to you about anything."

But over and over, prosecutor Deborah Smith halted the tape to ask FBI agent John Pearson to contrast Bakker's statements to behind-the-scenes testimony about Bakker's television ministry.

Pearson testified that repeatedly, from 1984 through 1986, Bakker misled viewers about how many donors, or "lifetime partners," had taken part in the program which offered three nights' lodging each year for life in return for $1,000.

At first, Pearson's testimony and PTL's tapes showed, Bakker exaggerated the number of partnerships PTL had issued, apparently to project a sense of urgency.

Later, Bakker understated the partnerships tally and didn't acknowledge that he had exceeded his own ceiling and endangered the partners' chances of using their lodging privileges.

Earlier in the trial, prosecutors put on the stand several PTL partners — including a retired coal miner suffering from black lung disease and living on disability pay — who testified they were turned away when they tried to use rooms at PTL's Heritage USA theme park near Fort Mill, S.C.

Bakker is accused of diverting more than $3.7 million in PTL money raised from the partnership sales to pay for personal luxuries. If found guilty of the 24 counts against him, he could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million.

City Board Agrees Livestock Yard Must Go

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission, at the request of the City Council, acted to remove the threat of dead pigs from the city limits.

The commission approved an ordinance prepared by City Attorney Mac McCarley that would allow East Carolina Stockyards three years to close its operation on N.C. 11. Earlier this summer reports of dead and dying hogs at the stockyard move the mayor and the council to ask for an amortization provision to eliminate the stockyard. If approved by the City Council, the ordinance would give the owner of the stockyard until Jan. 1, 1992 to cease operations. The council is scheduled to consider the ordinance at its Oct. 5 meeting.

The Planning and Zoning Commission also delayed the two largest and most potentially controversial items on its agenda during Tuesday's meeting.

Consideration of an agreement between the city, Winterville and Pitt County to extend Greenville's extraterritorial jurisdiction nearly three miles to the south near Winterville drew heated opposition from residents of the area at last month's P&Z meeting. The city manager withdrew the request after last month's public hearing to allow for further negotiations between the governments and Greenville Utilities.

Kinston Native Will Head ESC Operation

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Lebern Rouse has been appointed manager of the Greenville office of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission. He succeeds Jim Hannan.

Rouse, a native of Kinston, comes to Greenville from Raleigh. "I'm delighted to be assigned to the Greenville office. For one thing it's nearer to my Kinston home. For another, I'm glad to be back in the town where I lived when I attended East Carolina University."

Rouse mentioned, too, the challenge of heading the Greenville office, one of the most active in ESC.

"The Greenville office is well known for its outstanding staff of 15 personnel," he said. "The staff includes a specialist in veterans affairs, one for older workers, and another in charge of rural Manpower services, which deals to a great extent with the migrant labor force employed in Pitt County."

"All these functions are in addition to personnel who handle regular employment services and ones who deal with unemployment functions," Rouse added.

Rouse is married to the former Judith Warner. They are the parents of two girls, Heidi, 13 and Pam, 2.

A veteran of 16 years with the Employment Security Commission, Rouse had his first assignment in Morganton and for the past several years has been with the Raleigh office.

He served in the Air Force for four years "with duty in the Pentagon and overseas at an air base in Turkey," he said.

LEBERN ROUSE

His principal leisure interests "are football and fishing, although I don't always have as much time as I'd like to follow these."

Commenting on plans and expectations in his role as ESC manager, Rouse said, "I don't foresee any policy or operational changes anytime soon. What I do want to stress is that we are available to everyone and will be glad to work with employers and with people in any manner. Our top mission always is to put people into jobs."

Hugo's Course Still Undecided

House Panel To Subpoena Former HUD Secretary

On Monday, the hurricane's 125 mph winds smashed directly into Puerto Rico, where officials said 10,000 people were homeless and 25,000 were in shelters. Government and voluntary relief teams from Texas to New York began sending supplies.

The hardest-hit islands were still cut off from normal communication early today. On the tiny British island of Montserrat, officials said nearly every building was destroyed, including the only hospital on the island of 12,000.

"It's as if a bomb has been dropped in the buildings and everything has been blown out. All trees are like stubble. There's not a tree left standing," said Cmdr. Colin Ferbrache of the Royal Navy vessel H.M.S. Alacrity, which was stationed off Montserrat.

National Hurricane Center specialist Bob Case said late Tuesday that the East Coast would feel the storm's fringe effects of rain and some gusty winds at least through Thursday night, if Hugo stayed on its track parallel to the Bahamas.

"It appears there's more and more a likelihood of the hurricane striking the Southeastern coast during the next three to five days," Case said from the center's suburban Coral Gables, Fla. "But it continues on the track it has, so that probability is high."

The season's eighth hurricane, with Tropical Storm Iris trailing behind, could veer into the open Atlantic, but other weather systems probably would draw it toward the United States.

"I think Hugo has certainly got people nervous," said Kathleen Hale at the Dade County Office of Emergency Management, which was flooded with calls to its hurricane preparedness hotline.

A Mount Pleasant, S.C. hardware store manager said residents grabbed supplies such as batteries, masking tape, flashlights and lamp oil.

"I think people are taking it seriously," said Louis Middleton. "There are some old-timers who have memories of Hazel and Gracie," hurricanes that hit South Carolina in the 1950s.

Meanwhile, forecasters also were keeping a close track of Tropical Storm Iris, which at 6 a.m. EDT was about 230 miles northeast of the Leeward Islands and moving northwest at about 14 mph.

WASHINGTON — A House subcommittee today voted unanimously to subpoena former Housing Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. to testify about alleged mismanagement at his department. Pierce's lawyers criticized the panel as taking "vindictive and punitive actions."

Republicans joined Democrats in voting to subpoena Pierce, who did not appear as requested last Friday to testify about reports of fraud, influence-peddling and mismanagement at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"I think the subcommittee had no option," said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the employment and housing subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee. "The subcommittee had an agreement with Mr. Pierce...that agreement was broken unilaterally by Mr. Pierce."

Pierce's attorney, Paul L. Perito, said before the meeting that the former secretary — who appeared voluntarily before the panel in May — was willing to testify but needed another two weeks' time for preparation.

"We believe the subcommittee's vindictive and punitive actions in denying Mr. Pierce adequate time to obtain and review pertinent documents and in insisting on use of subpoenas are taken in retaliation against Mr. Pierce's exercise of his constitutional right," Pierce lawyers said in a letter to Lantos.

"We are deeply saddened that this subcommittee appears to embrace speed over truth," the lawyers wrote.

The committee voted to approve three separate subpoenas, the first calling for Pierce to appear next Tuesday, Sept. 26. Other dates were set for Oct. 27 and Nov. 3.

all kinds of stuff in it."

When the guardsmen saw the reporters, they moved away quickly.

Miami Herald reporter Carlos Harrison today also said he saw a National Guard truck loaded with merchandise.

"They didn't look like they were delivering things," Harrison said.

Ham operators also heard reports that law enforcement had collapsed. One, Stuart Haines of Queens, N.Y., said an undetermined number of inmates had either escaped or been released because of prison damage and also were looting. Officials said St. Croix suffered more damage than St. Thomas or St. John, the other two islands in the U.S. chain southwest of Puerto Rico.

More than 50,000 people across the Caribbean lost homes in the storm.

A Civil Defense spokeswoman in Puerto Rico, Cizanette Rivera, said the storm claimed 25 lives Sunday and Monday as it churned westward through the Leeward Islands and hit Puerto Rico before heading north-west.

Two people were killed in Puerto Rico and other independently confirmed deaths included nine people on the British Island of Montserrat, five on the French territory of Guadeloupe and two on Antigua.

What The Citizens Need To Know

The citizens of Pitt County need some answers — direct answers from their school board about how their public education system is being run.

First, they need to know why the contract of school Superintendent Eddie West was not renewed. No satisfactory explanation has been given for that action, taken Monday at a school board workshop meeting.

Second, they need to know precisely how that decision was reached. Board members voted not to renew West's contract in an open session, but sources close to the board say during a closed meeting Sept. 11 its members decided by a 7-5 margin that West should go. Not one board member has provided an accountable explanation.

Finally, the citizens of Pitt County need to know that the future of the school system they fund will continue on the progressive road it has traveled for the past eight years.

Under West's guidance, Greenville and Pitt schools merged into one system, creating a more balanced, efficient system of public education. Since that merger, the schools have taken steady steps down the path to excellence by addressing serious problems the two school systems could not solve separately.

Those steps included improving racial balance, equalizing instruction at schools and replacing substandard facilities with suitable classroom space. As these deficiencies began to ease, the system — prompted by public expectation — set the highest standards for public education Pitt County has ever had. It then embarked on a journey for excellence.

Here is the vision behind that odyssey: the county's schools should be not just the best in the region, but among the best in the state and the nation. That is an appropriate goal and it is one which is quite attainable. In fact, it is within reach, if the progressive momentum of the past decade continues.

Pitt's citizens have a vested interest in that vision. For four years they paid an additional 10 cents per $100 in property tax to fund it. Over 80 percent of their tax dollars go to pay for public schools. And in a referendum in December, these same citizens will get an opportunity to decide if the county should sell $25.7 million in bonds to finance school construction to prepare for the needs of the 21st century.

That's why the citizens need some direct answers from the school board they elected.

Changing superintendents is a drastic move. Like any change, it produces upheaval in a school system. It should not be done capriciously or without good reason.

No such explanation has been given by the school board for West's dismissal. The citizens need to know why school board members took an action that could disrupt the fragile path to excellence.

The citizens also need to know West will be replaced with a high caliber leader — an educator who will neither scrimp on quality nor compromise the county's vision. They need to know their investment in public education is well tended and that an acknowledged commitment to unsurpassed public education will be honored.

Maybe The Summit Can Work

WASHINGTON — The cynics may be wrong. There's a chance President Bush's "education summit" with the nation's governors may mark a significant step in the struggle to overhaul and improve America's schools.

David Broder

Bush's invitation, tossed out at the end of a speech he gave to the governors less than two months ago, looked initially as gimmicky as his declaration during the 1988 campaign that he wanted to be "the education President."

Slogans or symbolic meetings are no substitute for substance, and little time had been allowed to plan the meeting. The first reports about what the White House wanted were disquieting: A few hours of closed-door conversation between the President and the governors, to be followed by a presidential speech and news conference. Understandably, some of the governors thought they were being used as props for what they saw as a glorified presidential "photo opportunity."

But after last week's final round of preparatory meetings for the Sept. 27-28 session in Charlottesville, Va., it seems possible that something more useful may happen — something closer to what Ernest L. Boyer, the former U.S. Commissioner of Education, had in mind when he suggested the summit a year ago. Boyer is now the president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. His thinking is giving shape and substance to the meeting on the grounds of the University of Virginia.

It is reasonable now to expect two things from the summit: First, a statement committing the nation, and each of the 50 states, to reach by the end of the century a challenging set of measurable performance standards for schools and students. The standards will be high enough to make the United States competitive in the world economy and to sustain a common culture and informed citizenry in this increasingly diverse republic. They will almost certainly include sharp reductions in the dropout and illiteracy rates; improvement in language, mathematics and thinking skills; the assurance that all youngsters start school healthy enough to learn and that all adults have access to the advanced education and retraining they will need in a changing economy.

The specifics will be framed after accelerated consultations with education professionals, business and civic leaders.

Second, an agreement to seek, through legislative and regulatory changes, much greater flexibility for individual schools and school districts to use the federal aid to education funds they receive. Instead of the segregation of targeted beneficiaries required by present laws and regulations, the schools would be freed to use the resources in ways they consider most efficient — but with a reciprocal requirement that the targeted students meet the agreed-upon achievement standards.

At first glance, it may appear contradictory to talk in the same breath about achieving high national performance standards and deregulating the schools. But increasingly there is consensus that "empowering the teachers" is the best way, and perhaps the only way, to improve education performance. That is a key idea Boyer has been promoting.

In the next decade, America will need millions of new teachers, and the only way to get good ones is to improve their pay, their professional opportunities — and their accountability. The cynics will say that none of this is more than talk unless the summit also makes clear who will pay for the improvements. Ultimately, that's true, but most of the governors will go to Charlottesville prepared to tell the President that their experience proves that people will pay for better schools — once they're convinced they will get them.

Indeed, governors like Delaware's Mike Castle and South Carolina's Carroll Campbell, both Republicans, will tell Bush that their own "state summits" have shown incredible grass-roots interest in building on the state-led school-reform efforts of the past half-dozen years.

Already, there is an emerging consensus that the federal contribution to the process should focus on improving health and nutrition programs for pre-schoolers. Youngsters who are hungry or ill simply don't learn. Making the federal Head Start program — which now reaches only one of every four eligible children — available to all of them will probably be one of the goals for the '90s.

Funding those federal programs will have to be addressed by Congress and the President as part of the budget debate. But both the administration and financing of schools will remain largely in state and local hands. There is no disposition to change that.

Charlottesville can only be a start. But a national commitment, enunciated by the President and affirmed by the governors, would be very important. As Boyer told The Business Roundtable last June, "We don't need a federal ministry of education to force all schools into a bureaucratic lockstep. We don't need one more critical report....What we do need is a national agenda for school reform. We need a strategy that sustains state and local leadership, while giving coherence to the effort....Dreams can be fulfilled only when they've been defined."

And that, quite possibly, is what the education summit can achieve.

What About Male Teachers Teaching All-Male Classes?

WASHINGTON — I don't know whether this is a tale of triumph or tragedy, whether the officials involved should be praised for upholding the law or condemned for shortsightedness.

I don't even know whether Spencer Holland, with whom this story begins, should be blessed for his patient perseverance or pitied for pigheadedness.

Let me just tell the story. Holland, an educational psychologist now working for the District of Columbia's public schools, called a couple of years ago to talk to me about an idea of his: assigning kindergarten and primary boys to all-male classes headed by male teachers.

It was Holland's notion that, particularly for children of the inner cities, where both mother-only households and male academic failure are endemic, the arrangement might make a profound difference.

"Let's try it," he urged. "We've got to try something."

Willie Wright, then principal of Miami's Pine Villa Elementary School, saw my column on Holland's idea and thought it made all the sense in the world. He tracked Holland down and asked for additional information and help. And in the fall of 1987, he got permission from the Dade County School Board to institute the program on an experimental basis.

He already had a male first-grade teacher at the 98 percent black, overwhelmingly low-income Pine Villa. He recruited a second male kindergarten teacher, and launched his experiment. (He left it to parents to decide whether their sons would be assigned to the special classes or left in the traditional boy-girl arrangement.)

The result: "It was a total success, academically and socially," said Wright, who has since been transferred across town to the middle-class South Glade School. "There were no fights, no kids sent out for discipline. They not only improved academically, they became their brothers' keepers, something not generally found in low socio-economic schools. Not a single parent complained. In fact, virtually all of the parents of boys wanted their sons in the classes."

Wright's successor at Pine Villa, Clarence Jones, sought leave to continue the experiment. But the Dade County equal employment opportunity officer had misgivings. "I wasn't opposed to the idea," Lucille Montequin told me the other day. "In fact, I thought it was a good idea. There had been no complaint, no formal charge. But it seemed to run contrary to Title IX (of the federal Civil Rights Act), so I contacted the regional office of the (Department of Education's) Office for Civil Rights."

"They said, why don't you put the request in writing as a proposal, with an experimental group and a control group. We did. The word came back that OCR did not accept the proposal."

So three months into its second year, the eminently successful plan was unceremoniously dumped.

In an article he wrote for the just published premier issue of "Teacher" magazine, Holland explained the reasoning behind his idea:

"Most boys do not have male teachers until the later elementary grades or junior high school, and for inner-city boys this is much, much too late. It is well-documented in educational research that many students — especially boys — who fail to complete high school drop out psychologically and emotionally by third or fourth grade. And inner-city black male children drop out or leave at truly alarming rates...."

"Creating all-male kindergarten-through-third-grade classes taught by male teachers would provide young black boys with consistent, positive and literate black role models in the classroom. It also would help overcome many of the negative attitudes toward education that currently hamper black boys' academic achievement."

Male volunteer teaching assistantships are a wonderful idea — one that ought to be copied across this nation, where male elementary teachers are in perpetual short supply.

But where these rare male teachers do exist, wouldn't it make sense to use them for all-male classes? Does anyone really believe that such an arrangement is a denial of rights to girls?

Think about it, OCR.

Robbery Suspect Held In Death Of Alleged Accomplice

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — The decision to charge a Winston-Salem man with a murder officials acknowledge he did not commit presents some interesting legal questions, a district attorney and law experts say.

"This is a law professor's dream come true," Louis D. Bilonis, an assistant professor of criminal law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said Tuesday. "It's an area of law that's been least decided. It's a fairly rare case."

Warren Sparrow, the district attorney in Forsyth County, decided this week to ask the sheriff's department to charge Charles Philip Barrett with murder in the death of David Wayne Hemric.

According to the sheriff's department, Barrett and Hemric entered Parrish Grocery Saturday evening and pointed a gun at Hassel Parrish, the store owner's husband. Parrish struggled with Barrett and eventually wrested the gun from him, deputies say.

Virginia Parrish picked up the gun and shot Hemric dead. Barrett was captured seven hours later in nearby woods.

Sparrow reasoned that if a person intends to break the law and knows that someone could be killed in the process, that person should be held responsible for the death. The legal footing that allows a man to be charged with his accomplice's death in such a situation is known as the "felony murder rule."

William G. Simpson, the legal director for the N.C. Civil Liberties Union, said Tuesday that Sparrow is legally correct in his interpretation.

"The basic principle behind the rule is when you participate in an armed robbery, one of the consequences is that a victim of an armed robbery will kill somebody," Simpson said. "Whether it's an innocent bystander or an accomplice ... it's certainly a reasonable possibility."

Bilonis cautions, however, that courts in jurisdictions across the United States have been going in the opposite direction — away from the felony murder rule.

"The trend over the last 100 years in American law has been to move away from felony murder liability and to instead focus on whether this particular defendant is culpable in the killing," he said. "They (juries) are all saying, 'He's guilty of armed robbery, sure.' The question is whether to hold him liable for the death of a co-felon which was done at the hands of somebody other than him. The majority of jurisdictions have drawn the line and said 'no.'"

Sparrow agrees, but he says the facts of the case merit the murder charge.

"We obviously think that the appropriate direction to be going in is to hold them accountable for what they do," he said last night. "Anybody who goes into a place with some confederate armed with a gun should be held accountable for that."

Both Sparrow and Bilonis agree on certain aggravating factors that could be used to successfully prosecute someone under the felony-murder rule. On Monday, Sparrow said that Barrett bought the bullets for the gun and that Barrett and Hemric held target practice before the attempted robbery. Earlier, detectives said that it was Barrett who brought the gun into the store.

Bilonis said that juries have construed acts such as these as signs of premeditation by a defendant.

"If the defendant did stuff with the gun to create the situation that sets off a chain reaction which is foreseeable," Bilonis said, "then they say essentially that the defendant can be held liable. He might have expected somebody to draw a gun and shoot."

Etheridge Says SAT Ranking Will Help Bring Improvement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's last-place ranking in average SAT scores provides the state with an opportunity to dramatically improve the quality of public education, state schools superintendent Bobby Etheridge says.

"I believe the rankings present us with the best opportunity we had had in 30 years to reform our high schools and to get down to the nitty-gritty of what we should be teaching and how and why and when," Etheridge told the state's 134 superintendents at a conference in Raleigh on Tuesday.

The average SAT scores of North Carolina's high school seniors fell to 836 this year, putting the state last in the nation, down from its previous rank of 49th. Last week, Etheridge announced that he would form a task force to find ways to improve secondary education across the state.

The Scholastic Aptitude Test has gained a high profile as a barometer of educational quality over the past several decades.

Etheridge told the group he would not make excuses for the low test scores.

"I could give you a long speech on why that is an unfair ranking ... and blame it on you, but you know good and well that wouldn't have been fair," he said. "I wasn't about to do that. I chose to face the reality that the SAT score is an important indicator of how we're doing in North Carolina, whether we like it or not."

"The general public is convinced that (the SAT) is the one measure, but you and I know that it is only one measure of the educational value of our schools."

"If we had ranked 49th, as we did last year, we probably couldn't have taken the positive steps we have now taken," Etheridge said. "There is something very important about being dead last. That allows us to get the attention of the public, the press and the legislators ... and there is opportunity. If we miss this opportunity we may not get it again."

Etheridge said his task force proposal and six-point plan to improve education is a "high risk" agenda, but said he expects the full support of the state superintendents.

The state superintendent urged the local school leaders to steer their students into more rigorous courses, coach them with a practice version of the SAT, and sign release forms allowing the state to compile SAT scores from individual schools and districts.

"We're not doing this to beat you over the head with it. We simply want to find out who is succeeding and replicate that success as far as we can."

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CITY COUNCIL AND THE CITIZENS OF GREENVILLE

Due to recent publicity surrounding allegations of problems within the Greenville Police Department, we, the undersigned officers and employees feel it necessary to come forward with a statement which is representative of the majority of the department.

The City Of Greenville and the Greenville Police Department have undergone significant growth and change within the past ten or more years. During this time, we have also experienced several management disruptions and changes as City Managers and Police Chiefs have been replaced. As a result, both the City Government and especially the police department have confronted and resolved numerous problems. As we have moved from a rural community to a major city in Eastern North Carolina, the City of Greenville and the Greenville Police Department has adopted and adhered to Affirmative Action Guidelines. We have applied these guidelines as we recruited, hired, promoted or transferred employees and officers. As a result of this practice, the Greenville Police Department is now staffed with many blacks, females and also handicapped persons. This process has not been without conflict of opinions and personalities. We do not suggest that all of our problems have been resolved but we continue our efforts to do so.

The present majority of the Greenville Police Department is comprised of highly trained and skilled individuals, all of whom serve with pride and distinction. We recognize the responsibilities of our job and are dedicated to professionalism and serve all persons equally, without regard for race, religion, color, sex or national origin. We do not dispense our services or administer justice with any consideration for political affiliation or personal impairment, be it physical, mental or socio-economic. We are a competent organization and have the capacity to overcome our problems without threat from any outside person or organization.

We wish to bring to the attention of the public we serve that the current issues that are being advertised to everyone as being major problems are for the most part, due to personality conflicts that have been ongoing for some time and recently brought to light.

The management of the City of Greenville and the Greenville Police Department is restricted by law as to information that it can disseminate to the media in regards to personnel disciplinary or complaint matters. As officers and employees of the City of Greenville who are concerned for our public image, we find it necessary to make this statement in hopes that you will not cast judgement on our agency or its credibility based on a few dissatisfied individual officers. The City of Greenville has a police agency that the citizens can be proud of. The City of Greenville is a business and, as in the private sector, growth and change causes problems. The Greenville Police Department is capable of managing its problems. As the Chief of Police, Jerome Tesmond has brought proactive leadership into our agency. He has demonstrated his abilities as he has addressed the crime and drug problems of our city. We consider ourselves the first line of defense in the war on crime. We take our job seriously and will continue to serve but we cannot be disrupted by outside influences. We must stand and work together as a team if we are to win the war. With the support of the public, Chief Tesmond and the Greenville Police Department can make a difference in the quality of life for our citizens.

State Will Export Wood Chips

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina will begin sending shipments of wood chips from the Morehead City port next month for paper production in Japan, creating a new export industry for the state, officials say.

The former coal yard at the Morehead City port has been converted to ship hardwood chips, with between 300,000 tons and 400,000 tons expected the first year, James P. Scott Jr., executive director of the state's two ports, told the State Ports Authority on Tuesday. Coal shipments through the port ceased in January.

Morehead City Terminals Inc., a subsidiary of Southern Terminals Inc. of Raleigh, has spent $1.8 million refurbishing the coal yard. In Wilson County, construction will begin this month on a $6 million mill to mulch the oaks, gums and similar hardwoods used in making the chips, a company spokesman said.

In Japan, the chips are used to produce a high-quality, glossy paper that requires hardwoods, said Sam A. Holcomb, president of Southern Terminals, in an interview.

"What we've created is a new export industry for the state," Holcomb said.

The chips will also be processed in New Bern, Holcomb said. Weyerhaeuser Co., a pulp company with $7 billion in annual sales, began sending chips to the port this month from its New Bern pulp mill. The chips are being stockpiled for the first freighter, the Cosmos Trader, which is expected to sail about Oct. 25.

Tobacco Outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cigarette production is declining this year and so is the average smoking rate among Americans — for the 16th consecutive year, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

Total output is expected to drop from last year's 695 billion cigarettes because of higher prices, health concerns and smoking restrictions, the department's Economic Research Service said in its report.

Cigarette use may drop about 3.5 percent from last year's average of 3,096 cigarettes, or fewer than 155 packs of 20 each, the report said.

The average is for all Americans 18 years and older, smokers and non-smokers alike. It is a statistical comparison only and does not indicate the actual smoking habits of the population.

Bonds Approved

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Voters approved two bond issues totaling $17.5 million Tuesday by nearly a 2-1 margin for public schools in Columbus County and Southeastern Community College.

Unofficial totals show 64 percent of the 8,800 voters favored a $16.4 million bond issue for the Columbus County and Whiteville city schools; and 63 percent voted for a $1.1 million bond issue for SCC. More than 33 percent of the county's registered voters made it to the polls.

Unofficially, the public school vote was 5,645 in favor and 3,007 against. On the SCC issue, the unofficial vote was 5,556 for 2,682 against.

Murder Charges

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — A Scotland County man was arrested and charged with two counts of murder in the shooting deaths Tuesday of two people in Laurinburg, authorities said.

Robert Thurman Carter, 48, was being held without bail in the Scotland County Jail in Laurinburg, authorities said.

State Faces Decision On Trying Pair For Fifth Time In Murder, Robbery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Court of Appeals struck down a lower court ruling that reinstated breaking and entering charges against two Ohio men, and now authorities must decide whether to try them a fifth time on murder charges or set them free.

The decision Tuesday is another turn in a saga that began in 1978 when security guard Willard Setzer was found shot dead and draped in an American flag in the office of a Waynesville physician.

A three-judge panel of the court struck down a March 1988 decision by Superior Court Judge William Freeman that reinstated 1984 breaking and entering and larceny convictions against Mitchell John Pakulski, 35, and Elliott Clifford Rowe III, 28.

Unless the state appeals the decision means prosecutors will have to either try Pakulski and Rowe again on the charges or allow them to go free.

Russell McLean, a Waynesville attorney representing Rowe, said he hopes the ruling Tuesday will end the matter, but expects that it won't.

"Now I think it's time to put it to rest and let the boys out. Right now (Rowe) and Mitch are in jail and they have no charges against them," McLean said.

Pakulski and Rowe completed their sentences for larceny of an automobile last November and have now served a total of seven or eight years each as a result of the case, McLean said. They were given two consecutive 10-year sentences for the breaking and entering and larceny charges.

Two trials of Pakulski and Rowe ended with hung juries.

The two were then convicted of first-degree murder, armed robbery, larceny of a vehicle, larceny and breaking and entering in 1984, but Superior Court Judge George Fountain without explanation set aside judgment in the larceny and breaking and entering charges following the trial.

The state Supreme Court then set aside the murder conviction, saying the charges against the two were improperly put to the jury.

A fourth trial in 1988 ended with yet another hung jury, but at the end of the trial, Superior Court Judge William Freeman reinstated the convictions Fountain had set aside.

The Court of Appeals panel Tuesday overturned Freeman's action, saying in part that one Superior Court judge does not have the authority to reverse the decision of another.

Fountain's action — a rarely-used procedure called an "arrest of judgment" — is similar to an innocent verdict and can only be overturned by a new trial, the court said.

"The trial court's arrest of judgment merely means the state may commence another prosecution of the original offense," Judge Edward Greene wrote for the majority.

Watters said he and District Attorney Roy Patton — who did not return a reporter's telephone call Tuesday — would decide how to proceed in the case.

"There is a solid legal basis for an appeal," Watters said.

Solons To Push For N.C. Jetties

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — North Carolina's senators say a new atmosphere in the U.S. Capitol and the worsening condition of the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge will make it easier to gain passage of legislation calling for jetties at the Oregon Inlet.

Senators Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Terry Sanford, D-N.C., say they will push for new legislation to fund the project.

Their proposal would force the Interior Department to permit construction on the inlet's north and south shores, which are national parkland and a wildlife refuge. Although the lawmakers conceded environmental lawsuits and tough congressional funding battles lie ahead, they said a new era in the jetty battle is beginning.

"I think it's the most important step that's been taken in 20 years," said Sanford. "The project's alive, it's moving ... we understand now what needs to be done."

Sanford made the comments after meeting with Helms, Gov. Jim Martin and Democratic Rep. Walter Jones to discuss the new strategy.

"The atmosphere, at least in the Senate, is a lot better than it was before," Helms said. "But we may as well face the facts. There's going to be a lawsuit if anything happens on this. So anybody who kids anybody else by saying this is going to be any quick solution is just not leveling, because it's going to be tough."

Jones, Helms and others have long advocated the proposed mile-long twin jetties, which they say would stabilize the churning inlet. The House authorized funding in 1983, but the Senate never has approved the project.

Woman Shot At Day Care

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. — A Mebane woman was shot and killed outside a day-care center, and her estranged husband was charged with first-degree murder, authorities say.

None of the children inside the center were injured during the incident late Tuesday afternoon.

Authorities say Dawn Jolly was shot three times in the abdomen about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday afternoon. The shooting occurred in the parking lot of the Colonial Hills Baptist Church day-care center.

Ms. Jolly reportedly was taken by ambulance to the Duke University Medical Center in Durham after the shooting. She died Tuesday evening, according to Lorie Merryman, a hospital spokeswoman.

Tar Heels Look Ahead As Hurricane Threat Develops

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Although the storm is still hundreds of miles away, emergency planners and residents along the North Carolina coast are preparing for the possible arrival of Hurricane Hugo.

"The phone hasn't stopped ringing since I came in at 8 o'clock," said Brenda Coffee, a secretary in the emergency services office in New Hanover County.

The hurricane was near latitude 25.2 north and longitude 71.1 west at 9 a.m., about 395 miles east of Nassau in the Bahamas, the weather service reported today. The center of the storm has been moving toward the northwest at 12 mph and the weather service said the movement was expected to continue for the next 24 hours. Maximum sustained winds are near 105 mph.

Ms. Coffee said she had received hundreds of calls throughout the day from worried people, many of them newcomers to the Wilmington area. In most cases, they were told to keep an eye on the weather and to listen for advisories.

To the south in Brunswick County, emergency management officials were making sure they had plenty of batteries, non-perishable food, drinking water and other supplies, said secretary Brenda Freeman. Callers were advised to make similar preparations.

No evacuations had been suggested in the coastal areas because meteorologists could not predict exactly where the hurricane might go.

Most projected paths had Hugo hitting between Cape Canaveral and Cape Hatteras, N.C., by Saturday.

Early today, Hugo's center was 435 miles east of Nassau in the Bahamas. Its coordinates were near 24.9 north latitude and 70.9 west longitude. Winds were at 105 mph as the storm moved northwest at 12 mph. Little change in strength expected today.

One National Weather Service forecaster said North Carolina might have a good chance of chance of being hit.

"If you look at the map of the east coast of the United States, quite obviously North Carolina sticks out quite far, and it's on one of the usual tracks that a tropical system will take, especially this time of year," said Dennis Decker, a meteorologist with the service at Raleigh-Durham International Airport. "Historically, North Carolina has a much greater threat than South Carolina."

Hugo isn't the only threat, Decker said. Tropical Storm Iris, trailing 650 miles behind, is heading this way, too.

"Either one certainly could possibly strike," Decker said. "And even if the storms go inland a little farther south... remnants could move over the western part of North Carolina, causing considerable amount of flooding."

The last major storm to make landfall in North Carolina was Hurricane Diana in September 1984. That storm, packing 110-mph winds, came ashore at Carolina Beach, leaving $90 million in damages.

Hurricane Gloria brushed the Outer Banks in September 1985, leaving behind $8.5 million in damage, and Hurricane Charley left $250,000 in damage in August 1986.

In Dare County on the Outer Banks, local residents worried an abandoned Coast Guard Station at Oregon Inlet and the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge over the inlet could be damaged if Hugo hits. State and local officials said the threat could have been minimized if plans to armor the shoreline near the bridge with a small jetty and rock wall had been started last summer, as originally planned.

The state Department of Transportation project is intended to help protect the northern end of Hatteras Island from erosion and thus protect the southern end of the bridge. Environmental groups have objected, saying the structures will accelerate erosion on Outer Banks beaches.

"If we could have started in June, we could have gotten some stones out there," said Bill Jones, a spokesman for the transportation department in Raleigh. "That would have helped."

He said a contractor has moved some equipment to the area, but he could not say when construction could begin.

Fletcher Willey, a member of the Oregon Inlet and Waterways Commission in Dare County, said loss of vulnerable areas on the island just south of the bridge could knock out power to the Outer Banks and disrupt transportation vital to the tourism industry.

If the erosion is not halted, he said, there is a good chance of losing the bridge, which could cost $50 million to $60 million to replace, as well as tourism worth $100 million.

Gwen White, public information officer for Dare County, said county officials were standing by until today, when the path of the hurricane should become more clear.

"We are keeping an eye on the hurricane track as it is given to us by the National Hurricane Center," she said. "But since they don't really know where the track is leading, Dare County is in a watch mode."

The county had opened its emergency operations center with one staff member to keep track of the storm, she said.

Dare County, municipal officials and the superintendent of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore planned to meet today to discuss preparations for the storm.

Planning Is Key To Safety

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Planning ahead is the key to hurricane safety, and with Hurricane Hugo posing a threat to the United States, residents of coastal areas may want to consider how to cope with the danger.

The storm surge, a wall of water pushed ahead of these storms, poses perhaps the greatest threat, although high winds and flooding are also major hazards, weather experts warn.

For low-lying communities, evacuation is the safest measure, and officials have warned that many fast growing communities lack plans and proper roads to get everyone to safety in the face of a fast-approaching storm.

The time needed to evacuate many coastal areas is greater than the available warning time, the American Meteorological Society has said. And many people are complacent or unaware of the danger, with 80 percent of the 40 million people living on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts never having experienced a hurricane.

"It is imperative that coastal residents and visitors alike take the threat seriously and acquaint themselves with hurricane safety rules, and evacuate immediately if advised to do so," says Robert Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

Safety suggestions compiled by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and Federal Emergency Management Agency include:

—Keep track of the developing weather through local radio and television or NOAA Weather Radio, which broadcasts on special frequencies that can be received by inexpensive weather radios.

—Learn local evacuation routes and shelter locations. If in a vulnerable area, be prepared to leave, and do so promptly if authorities recommend it.

—Keep the automobile fully fueled, and make a supply of fresh water, batteries and food is available.

—Tape, board and shutter windows and tie down mobile homes before leaving. Wedge sliding glass doors to prevent them from lifting off their tracks.

—Bring in pets.
—Anchor small boats or move them to a safe shelter if there is time.

—Secure outdoor objects that might be blown away and become dangerous missiles. These include such things as garbage cans, garden tools, signs, porch furniture and so forth.

—Remain at home only if it is sturdy and not in an area subject to flooding. If staying home, keep away from windows. Fill containers and bathtubs with several days supply of water.

—Avoid loose or dangling wires and report them immediately to your power company. Report broken water mains, since low pressure may hamper fire fighting.

After the storm has passed:
—Seek assistance if needed in Red Cross shelters.

—Stay away from disaster areas unless you are qualified to help.

—Be wary of fly-by-night repair services rushing into an area, collecting money for work and then disappearing or doing shoddy repairs. Check references, and wait if necessary.

—Check refrigerated food for spoilage if the power has been off.

Government Report Angers Southern Baptist Leader

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptists should be incensed by a government report calling homosexuality "natural and healthy" and blaming fundamental religion for many suicides among homosexual teens, a church leader says.

Albert Lee Smith, spokesman for the denomination's lobbying effort in Washington, D.C., told top church officials on Tuesday that Southern Baptists should register their dismay with Congress over the task force report by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

"Taxpayer dollars are being used to promote something completely contrary to Baptist convictions," Smith told the Southern Baptist Convention's Executive Committee during its semiannual meeting.

Smith, an Alabama congressman from 1981-82, outlined a plan to contact congressmen and government officials and to organize grassroots campaigns on such "church-state matters."

"The greatest asset we have on legislation is the numbers of Baptists," the Birmingham layman said of the 14.8 million-member denomination.

The report, published in January and written by San Francisco therapist Paul Gibson, explores the high risk of suicide among homosexual youths.

The report noted that homosexual teen-agers were unduly pressured in fundamentalist churches, such as the Southern Baptist church, and traditional faiths, such as Catholicism, to renounce their sexuality as immoral.

"Gay youths ... may feel wicked and condemned to hell and attempt suicide in despair of ever obtaining redemption," Gibson wrote.

Smith said the study contained "anti-religious" sentiment and criticized it for calling homosexuality a "natural and healthy expression of human sexuality."

The executive committee also was advised that the number of Southern Baptist missionaries is at an all-time high. However, officials said the church's goal of 5,000 missionaries by the year 2000 will founder without more money.

Records show 3,827 missionaries are spreading God's message in the United States, its territories and Canada, said Larry L. Lewis, president of the Home Mission Board.

"In no time in the history of our agency since (its creation in) 1845 has God called out so many," Lewis said.

The nation's largest Protestant denomination has set a goal of having 5,000 missionaries and 50,000 churches by the year 2000.

The number of new churches grew by 1,000 to 37,567 in 1988 and the number of chaplains increased to 2,014.

"More new churches were constituted in any year since 1963," Lewis said. "More chaplains have been endorsed now than in any year in our history."

These advances were accomplished despite "stringencies in budget and reductions in staff," Lewis said on a 9.6 percent cut in his board's upcoming budget. As a result, 26 positions have been eliminated at the board's headquarters in Atlanta.

Governors Hold Mini-Education Summit To Prepare For Meeting With President

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON, Del. — Southern governors are ready for radical changes in the nation's public schools, and they're willing to consider tearing down structured formats and let schools decide how best to teach students.

Members of the Southern Governors' Association heard a long list of ills Tuesday concerning public schools in preparation for President Bush's education summit with the nation's governors next week in Charlottesville, Va.

The association, which represents 17 states and Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands, wrapped up its three-day annual meeting Tuesday with a regional education summit.

South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell said he hopes the national summit results in "national goals," which, if they are not attained, school and government officials would be held accountable.

The governors will be "asking for an identification of where this country needs to be" in terms of public education, Campbell said.

Former U.S. Education Secretary Terrel Bell said governors have had the greatest influence on education in America.

"I hope out of the summit there will be a clarity and a call to change the nation's priorities" to education Bell said.

William H. Kolberg, president of the National Alliance for Business, proposed the Bush administration give education equal billing with the war on drugs.

Bush "must describe the crisis in clear and concise terms and put it on the level of the war on drugs," said Kolberg, who added that businesses are willing to make a long-term commitment to help restructure the school systems.

In anticipation of the summit, several states have held mini-summits, and prepared issues they want discussed next week.

A report prepared by Delaware officials calls for setting national standards for teachers and exploring the possibility of a national high school graduation diploma.

The discussions also are expected to include a pilot project under way in several states that allows individual schools to determine how best to teach students, even if it means discarding the traditional classroom structure and curriculum.

The restructuring program was developed by Ted Sizer of the Coalition of Essential Schools in Rhode Island.

"There has to be a fundamental rethinking of the system ... The solutions are going to be ultimately in the classrooms," Sizer said.

"The president has got to understand how the system is flawed," and put federal resources behind "the most ambitious school reform projects," Sizer said.

Former Delaware governor and Republican presidential candidate Pierre S. du Pont IV advocated allowing parents to decide which school their children will attend.

"It would give every student in America a chance at a first-class education," du Pont said.

Bell, meanwhile, called for expanding the national state-by-state education rankings with "district-by-district and school-by-school" evaluations. He said the results should be published, whether good or bad, to let the public know where their schools rank.

School Awards

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A program to recognize and honor outstanding young citizens in North Carolina was announced Tuesday by Wake Forest University President Thomas K. Hearn Jr.

The program will be named in honor of former North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, chairman of the university's Board of Visitors and whose daughter is a Wake Forest senior.

The James B. Hunt Young Citizens Award will be presented annually to a high school sophomore or junior in each of the state's 100 counties. Awards are based on citizenship, academic dedication and evidence of high moral and ethical principles.

A committee of business and community leaders will select recipients. The first Hunt Award winners will be announced in May 1990 and the awards will be presented in September at an awards banquet.

Three students will be selected from the 100 to receive college scholarships. The scholarships will be $5,000, $3,000 and $2,000 and may be used for any post-secondary education.

Hitman Tells Magazine Jimmy Hoffa Murdered, Buried In Giants Stadium

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Teamsters leader Jimmy Hoffa was killed because of union and underworld rivalries, and his mutilated body was buried in concrete near the end zone at Giants Stadium in New Jersey, an ex-convict says.

Donald "Tony the Greek" Frankos, a self-described freelance hitman, told Playboy magazine he was supposed to kill Hoffa but was in prison when the labor leader disappeared on July 30, 1975. So others killed him and described it to him later, Frankos said.

His account, one of many over the years purporting to reveal what happened to Hoffa, appears in November's Playboy.

Frankos said Hoffa was shot in the forehead at a home near Detroit, his body dismembered in the basement, then stored in a freezer until his burial in the football stadium near New York.

The FBI refused to say if it finds the account credible.

An official with the State Commission of Investigations in New Jersey called the story "possible but ... improbable."

And Jim Minish, stadium assistant general manager, said workers dug nearly 4 feet into the concrete while replacing the artificial surface during the past year and found nothing.

Frankos, a federally protected witness in the forthcoming New York trial of reputed Mafia boss John Gotti, says he told the FBI in 1986 that Hoffa was killed by alleged

JIMMY HOFFA

Irish mob boss Jimmy Coonan at a house in Mount Clemens, Mich.

Frankos said that Coonan, armed with a .22-caliber pistol with a silencer, "hit him twice in the forehead with the bullets — exploded his brains."

With the help of John Sullivan, described by Frankos as a mob hitman, Coonan carried the body into the basement.

"They plugged in the bucksaw and they also had a meat cleaver to cut away any tendons," Frankos said.

"On the table was all these black-plastic bags and cut rope. Coonan was cutting and Sullivan was bagging 'em up. Coonan severed Hoffa's head and, with a pocket knife, cut a lock of hair from the side of Hoffa's head and kept it for good luck," Frankos said.

The body was placed in a freezer and several months later was trucked in an oil drum to the East Rutherford, N.J., site where Giants Stadium was under construction, Frankos said.

He said alleged mob affiliate Joe "Mad Dog" Sullivan, no relation to John Sullivan, buried the remains at the stadium, where the New York Giants and Jets play.

Frankos said Hoffa was slain in a dispute over his desire to regain control of the Teamsters upon his release from a federal penitentiary where he was serving time for mail fraud and jury tampering. A second motive, Frankos said, was Hoffa's prison fight with Tony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, a New Jersey Teamster official and reputed mobster.

Coonan and Joe Sullivan are serving lengthy prison terms in unrelated cases, Frankos said. Provenzano is dead, and John Sullivan "is the only one that's out there today who was an actual killer," he said. John Sullivan's whereabouts could not be determined.

FBI spokesman in Chicago, Washington, Detroit and New Jersey said they could not comment on the article because the Hoffa investigation remains active.

"We do believe that we have a much better understanding as to what happened and why it happened and who the participants were," said John Anthony, an FBI spokesman in Detroit. "The one piece to the puzzle that remains unsolved is the disposition of the body ... and of course the conviction" of those involved, he said.

Frankos' story "is possible but it's improbable," said Justip Dintino, chief of organized crime and intelligence with the State Commission of Investigations in New Jersey.

"In my opinion it's somewhat unlikely," he said. "I think the onus here is on the FBI, if they take it serious enough to start digging up the Meadowlands."

ADOLESCENT DRUG USE

Parents today are justly alarmed by the ever-increasing danger that drugs pose in the lives of children. How to handle adolescent drug use, with its concomitant risks, is a constant issue for parents who must confront unusual behaviors and lifestyles.

Teens are always looking for avenues for challenging and asserting their own sense of individuality. In many ways, this is healthy and normal. Problems develop when parents are either too rigid and intolerant of differences or when they are too fearful to express their concerns by raising questions about drug and alcohol abuse.

Parents must provide a safety net for children experimenting with autonomy. By setting limits and boundaries for behavior, they provide safety for their children by pulling in the reins before things get out of hand.

Families are frequently unsure how to proceed in these areas. Consulting an experienced family counselor can often be a valuable tool in re-establishing the dialogue necessary to keep all family members functioning well, individually and together.

YOUR EYEGLASS PRESCRIPTION

What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions"?

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?

A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?

A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?

A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?

A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?

A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580

'Satan Personified' Executed In Texas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — A former lounge singer described as "Satan personified" was put to death early today for one of five slayings he was accused of committing.

James Paster, 44, was declared dead at 12:17 a.m., seven minutes after corrections officials injected drugs into veins in his arms.

Paster, whose lounge act included an impersonation of Elvis Presley, was condemned for the contract killing of Robert Edward Howard, 38, who was gunned down as he left a Houston bar on Oct. 25, 1980. Paster said he received $1,000 and a motorcycle for the slaying, which allegedly was set by Howard's ex-wife.

Paster also was serving a life term for the rape and murder of an 18-year-old woman who had a nail driven up her nose by Paster to ensure that she was dead. Paster's co-defendant in that case, Stephen McCoy, was executed earlier this year.

Paster also pleaded guilty to killing another Houston-area woman and confessed to killing two other women, although he never was tried for those offenses.

"The death penalty was made for people like James Paster," said State District Judge Ted Poe, who presided over Paster's trial.

Clean Air Bill Advances

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is getting its way in the first test vote on clean air legislation, but stiff tests still lie ahead for the pollution-cutting plan.

The Bush forces outmaneuvered environmental groups Tuesday in a 12-10 House subcommittee vote defeating a bid to toughen the administration's anti-smog requirements for cities, less populated areas and small business.

The vote came as President Bush challenged the Democratic-run Congress to quicken its pace on the legislation. He commented at a Spokane, Wash., centennial tree-planting ceremony.

White House lobbyists, who were credited by their chief opponent with making the difference Tuesday, must work even harder to save the most controversial part of the legislation — letting automakers comply with anti-pollution requirements by averaging emissions of engine families.

The administration Tuesday proposed a modification of the averaging language, to make clear that pollution reduction goals must be met. The issue could face a vote in the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee today, with environmental groups making an all-out attempt to halt the emission averaging proposal.

During the next several weeks, the administration must defend against challenges to other portions of the bill.

It will try to preserve language to prevent growth of sulfur dioxide once it is reduced by 10 million tons over the next decade.

Task Forces Proposes Pay Raise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A House ethics task force is proposing a 35 percent congressional pay raise over two years while controversial honoraria payments are phased out during the same period, according to a congressional source.

The proposal would increase pay by about 10 percent next year, another 25 percent in 1991 and tie pay boosts afterward to the cost of living, the source said Tuesday night, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The final recommendation of the 10-member bipartisan task force is expected to be presented to congressional leadership this week. The proposal is subject to change and is expected to go before the full House by the end of October.

House and Senate members currently are paid $89,500 annually, and leaders are paid more. A 35 percent increase would make the salary $120,825.

A key part of the new plan would be a two-year phaseout of honoraria — fees for making speeches, often to organizations lobbying for legislation. House members now may keep honoraria totaling 30 percent of their pay, while the limit for senators is 40 percent.

The proposal also would eliminate a provision in current law allowing House members who were in office by January 1980 to convert excess campaign money to personal use. The task force has not decided when that proposed change should take effect, according to the source.

The plan also would tighten disclosure requirements for receipt of gifts. The task force reportedly is considering several proposals to allow outside earned income other than honoraria, including the possibility of letting members keep 15 percent of their outside earnings.

Former House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, established the task force earlier this year after lawmakers suffered through their latest bitter feud over a pay increase.

Small Cities Getting Service

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Air travelers in smaller cities are benefiting from increased competition brought on by airline deregulation even though a few major airlines tend to dominate the major markets, says an administration official.

Assistant Transportation Secretary Jeffrey N. Shane told a House panel Tuesday that deregulation had brought the smaller cities more alternatives in airlines even as travelers in large cities are finding few choices.

Shane there is an "apparent paradox" between increased concentration of air travel in a few big hubs and more competition when the air travel system is viewed as a whole.

Even though there are fewer carriers now than in 1979 when deregulation took effect, he said, some of those remaining "had phenomenal growth as they expanded the scope of their operations from a regional to a national basis."

Shane told the Public Works and Transportation aviation subcommittee that the use of hub cities gave them a strong incentive to expand "because they can cross-connect passengers at their hubs only if they provide service to the passengers' ultimate destinations."

Magazine Says Apple Computer Sets Pace For Mothers In The Workplace

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

IBM grants new mothers leaves of up to three years with benefits. Media giant Gannett offers $2,500 in adoption aid. SAS Institute, a computer software developer in Cary, N.C., runs a free on-site child-care center, according to a survey of the best companies for working mothers released Tuesday.

But the clean diaper award — if there were such a thing — would go to Apple Computer, the Cupertino, Calif.-based computer manufacturer. The fourth annual survey by Working Mother magazine put Apple Computer at the top of a list of 60 pace-setting companies based on pay, advancement opportunity, benefits and child-care support.

Although the roster includes some extraordinary policies, mommy-friendly companies are still unusual in the American workplace, the magazine's editor said.

"We see these 60 companies as role models," said Judsen Culbreth, editor of Working Mother, a New York-based publication with a circulation of 460,000. "They have caught on to the idea that to be good to working parents is to gain a competitive edge."

Less than 1 percent of U.S. corporations operate or support child-care centers, according to the article in the October issue written by Milton Moskowitz, co-author of the book, "The 100 Best Companies to Work for in America." Some 65 percent of mothers already work outside the home and by the year 2000, 84 percent of U.S. women of child-bearing age will be working, the Department of Labor estimates.

Apple Computer won the top slot because of its superior pay and benefits package, high percentage of female professionals among its nearly 8,000 employees and an on-site child care center that has been "a smash hit with parents." Among other benefits, Apple gives $500 every time a employee brings a future computer whiz home from the hospital.

"This has been a big year for this," Moskowitz said in a telephone interview. "Every big company in America seems to be attuned to this issue because they're being pressured by their employees."

At AT&T, for example, contract negotiations this year focused on family-care benefits, and the recently signed contracts with two unions representing more than half of the company's workers included a $5 million fund for child care and other family-related benefits, he said.

Encyclopedia Will Offer Talking Book

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The publishers of Compton's Encyclopedia are launching a computerized "talking" version, offering the sounds of Mozart and even Richard Nixon saying, "I'm not a crook."

The talking encyclopedia, to be announced today, is intended for schools teaching students in the fourth through eighth grades, although Compton's says other students could learn from it.

Compton's, not sparing the hyperbole, said there has not been such a significant development in publishing "since Gutenberg originated the method of printing from movable type."

Compton's MultiMedia Encyclopedia comes on a compact disc that works in conjunction with a CD player and a personal computer. The student can search through the disk by typing on a computer keyboard or clicking a hand-held device called a mouse.

Besides sounds, the encyclopedia has animated pictures, such as a moving skeleton; 15,000 still pictures, maps and charts; the full text of the 26-volume standard Compton's Encyclopedia; and the 65,000-entry Merriam-Webster Intermediate Dictionary.

A student who types in a single word — say, "castle" — will be given references to all kinds of related topics, including construction techniques and the history of the Middle Ages.

Compton's, a unit of Encyclopedia Britannica Inc., appears to be in the lead in the field of talking encyclopedias. Grolier Inc. has had the text of its Academic American Encyclopedia on disc since 1985, but it does not have any pictures or sound.

Encyclopedia Britannica itself also is available on compact disc, although in text only.

The talking encyclopedia appears well-suited to the channel-flipping TV generation, since it encourages casual browsing. Students who look up "bees" can click on one symbol to see a picture of bees and another symbol to hear them buzzing.

"The sound is no gimmick, but rather an important component of the multimedia approach that makes learning compelling and more rewarding," Stanley Frank, president of Britannica Software, said in a statement.

Students can zoom in on things that interest them.

Democratic-Led Panel Wants Wage Guides To Begin At $4.25 An Hour

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Defying threats of a second presidential veto, the Democratic-controlled House Education and Labor Committee Tuesday agreed to raise the federal minimum wage to $4.25 an hour on Jan. 1, 1991.

The committee also voted to allow employers to pay a lower starting wage of $3.61 an hour for 60 days to newly hired employees with no previous experience in the labor force.

In contrast, President Bush's plan would not raise the current minimum wage of $3.35 an hour until 1992, although he would also raise it to $4.25. Additionally, his plan would allow employers in 1992 to pay newly hired workers $3.40 an hour for six months, whether or not they had previous job experience.

The Democratic-dominated House is expected to pass the bill next month and a similar measure has been prepared for Senate approval before the start of the new fiscal year on Oct. 1.

Bush previously delivered an ultimatum to Congress, vowing to veto any minimum wage bill if the top rate exceeded $4.25 an hour and did not include his conditions for a starting wage. The president made good on his promise June 13, rejecting a bill that raised the floor to $4.55 an hour and contained the 60-day starting wage provision.

Since the average hourly pay for private, non-farm workers was $9.70 an hour last July, the battle over the minimum wage may involve greater political symbolism than economic impact. California, for example, already has a $4.25 minimum pay rate on the books and about a dozen other states have a wage floor higher than the federal level.

But partisan lines were clearly drawn on the issue, with intensive lobbying for the increase by organized labor and heavy opposition from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and other business groups. It was a renewal of the classic confrontation that occurred when a federal minimum wage of 25 cents an hour was first adopted in 1938 during the depths of the Great Depression.

Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, noted that the Bush administration has agreed to negotiate with Congress on clean air standards, drug policy and the federal budget, but not on a minimum wage raise.

"Once again, the president threatens to veto this legislation ... unless it contains precisely what he wants," Hawkins said before the panel approved the measure by a voice vote. "That position is untenable. ... The president's view toward helping the most vulnerable and disadvantaged workers in our society is to stall at every turn — and to promote and perpetuate a stalemate on this issue, thereby achieving victory through inaction."

Unlike President Reagan, who successfully and consistently opposed any increase in the federal minimum wage, Bush said during his 1988 campaign that he would support an unspecified increase.

Subway Gunman Bernard Goetz Is Freed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Subway gunman Bernard Goetz, freed from jail early today after serving 8½ months for shooting four teen-agers in 1984, turned down the city's standard offer of a ride to the nearest subway stop.

Goetz was led out a side door of the Brooklyn Center of Detention, avoiding eight camera crews and about 30 photographers and reporters.

He did not want to face the news media, said Pete Mahon, the jail's deputy chief of operations.

Ruby Ryles, a spokeswoman for the city Correction Department, said a police officer drove Goetz from the jail, but she did not know if he was met by friends as planned.

One privilege offered inmates being discharged is a ride to the closest subway station, Ryles said. Goetz was brought to the receiving room at 11:45 p.m. Tuesday and "he was processed out at 12:01 a.m.," she said.

Goetz, 41, was arrested on Dec. 22,

1984, for the shooting of four teen-agers who he said were trying to rob him when they asked him for $5 on a train near the World Trade Center.

Dubbed the subway vigilante, Goetz became something of a folk hero among those who saw him as an individual taking a stand against crime. He had been a self-employed electronics calibrator before his arrest.

Ryles said Goetz whiled away much of his time playing chess with inmates in an 18-cell protective custody block. Others in the block included convicted child killer Joel Steinberg and Joseph Fama, the alleged triggerman in the Bensonhurst racial attack.

In June 1987, following a two-month trial, Goetz was cleared of attempted murder and assault charges but convicted of illegal possession of the gun he used to shoot the youths.

The trial judge, Justice Stephen Crane, at first sentenced him to six months in jail, a $5,000 fine, 250 hours of community service and ordered him to undergo psychiatric treatment.

Goetz and his lawyers appealed the sentence, calling it illegal. The appeals court agreed, sending the case back for resentencing.

In January, Crane sentenced Goetz to one year. With time off for good behavior, Goetz was to serve eight months. Two weeks were added to his sentence when guards found a plastic safety razor in his cell.

Goetz now faces a multimillion-dollar lawsuit filed by one of his victims, Darrell Cabey, who was left brain-damaged and paralyzed.

Goetz has said he might leave New York City after he gets out of jail.

Chances are that you'll find a price tag attached to just about everything. At most banks, you're probably paying 25 cents for every check you write and at least a $3.00 monthly service charge. We're willing to bet that's money you'd rather have in your pocket.

At Barclays Bank of North Carolina, we offer totally free checking with no strings attached. No monthly service charges, no check fees, no minimum balances.

We'll even give you a BarclayBank24 card that allows you to use any teller machine on the Relay network at no charge.

Vaccine Protects Animals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Two experimental vaccines protected lab animals against a lethal dose of the bacteria that cause Legionnaires' disease, raising hopes for a vaccine to protect humans, a researcher says.

Between 600 and 1,000 cases of Legionnaires' disease are reported to the federal Centers for Disease Control each year. Estimates of the actual number of cases range as high as 100,000 a year, said the vaccine's developer, Dr. Marcus Horwitz of the University of California, Los Angeles.

"It's clearly a major problem in hospitals," Horwitz said Tuesday at a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology. "It's a major cause of death from hospital-acquired pneumonia."

The first vaccine Horwitz developed consisted of a weakened, mutant strain of the bacteria Legionella pneumophila, which causes the deadly disease.

Then Horwitz developed a vaccine consisting of a single chemical from the virus. The single-molecule vaccine protected 21 of 26 guinea pigs from a lethal dose of Legionella bacteria.

None of 26 unvaccinated guinea pigs survived after the same dose, Horwitz said.

Guinea pigs were used because they develop a disease similar to Legionnaires' disease in humans, he said.

Dr. Robert Breiman, a Legionnaires' disease expert at the CDC, said the vaccine, if it ultimately proves successful in humans, could be especially useful for the transplant recipients, cancer patients, the elderly and people taking steroids.

They all have weakened immune systems and are especially susceptible to Legionnaires' disease, he said.

Horwitz said it would be at least two or three years before he was ready for a trial of the vaccine in humans.

Censorship Charges Are Studied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A new military ombudsman is heading to the Far East to investigate allegations of censorship and employee harassment at the Pacific edition of Stars & Stripes, the military newspaper.

"What we have here is harassment of whistle blowers and censorship," said Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif. "It's bad enough to censor the news. Our men and women in uniform deserve the news as all of us get it, as harsh as it is. But they're not getting it."

Civilian employees have contacted her office with allegations of censorship of their stories, Boxer said, creating what she called "an intolerable situation."

The General Accounting Office, assisted by the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, reported last year that it found evidence of censorship and improper management at the government-run daily paper.

The Pentagon-appointed ombudsman for military newspapers, Philip M. Foisie, is heading to the Far East to work on the dispute. A former editor with the Washington Post, Foisie was named to the new position last summer.

Boxer and Earl Hutto, D-Fla., chairman of the House Armed Services readiness subcommittee, wrote to Adm. Huntington Hardisty, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Pacific Command, asking him to investigate problems at the Pacific edition.

However, defense spokesman William Hart said the paper's military editors deny the claims of censorship and contend they have not been given solid evidence to back up the allegations.

Foisie is scheduled to meet with the paper's staff over the weekend.

"We'll let the ombudsman play his role," Hart said. "These newspapers are essential to the military overseas. If there is evidence of censorship, that needs to come out. But if it is only editorial judgment that is being exercised, that needs to come out too."

In her letter, Boxer cited "evidence of harassment of journalists who have expressed their views to senior management and to members of Congress."

Boxer cited the cases of Bill Bartman, who was removed from his position as the Washington bureau chief of the Pacific edition, and Pacific editor Dewey Brackman, who has been temporarily relieved of his duties and assigned work as a supervisory editor.

"The admiral is going to have to take control," she said.

Pressure Builds For Frank To Leave House

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Pressure increased Tuesday on Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., to resign from the House rather than endure the humiliation of an Ethics Committee probe into his recent admission that he paid a male prostitute for sex and then hired him as a personal aide.

Frank suffered his latest setback when House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., declared that the Massachusetts congressman's troubles were becoming "a stain upon the House of Representatives."

Michel asserted that Frank probably would be judged even more harshly by his colleagues if he were not a homosexual. "Quite frankly, if I were to have a woman prostitute in my employ, for my own self-gratification, I'd be run out of town," he said.

The statement was unusual for Michel, who seldom is responsible for partisan attacks on other members, even Democrats, despite his position as Republican leader.

It followed a Boston Globe editorial calling for Frank's resignation, a cover story in Newsweek magazine about Frank's troubles and an appearance on Geraldo Rivera's television show by Steve Gobbie, Frank's former paid lover.

Even Frank's supporters, including Democratic Chairman Ron

Brown acknowledged that his problems were escalating. "The pressure is building to resign," Brown said. "It didn't help to have his hometown paper come out strongly for him to resign."

But, Brown noted, Frank "did what he should have done" by calling for a full investigation by the House Ethics Committee. "Let the process continue and see what the facts are and make a judgment at the end," Brown said.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., likewise referred to the committee investigation when asked if he thought Frank should resign. "I don't think we should try people outside of that process," he said.

Frank, who announced in 1987 that he was a homosexual, acknowledged recently in response to newspaper stories that he hired Gobbie as a male prostitute for $80 four years ago in response to a newspaper advertisement. He then hired Gobbie as a chauffeur and housekeeper, and Gobbie has claimed he operated a prostitution business out of Frank's Capitol Hill apartment when the congressman was away.

Frank, 49, has denied that he knew about Gobbie's continued prostitution activities until shortly before he fired the younger man. He said he had hoped to rehabilitate Gobbie much as Henry Higgins transformed Eliza Doolittle in "My Fair Lady."

The Globe said that Frank, a highly respected liberal, five-term congressman, should quit for "his own good, and for the good of his constituents, his causes and Congress." But Frank declared in response to the editorial that he does not intend to step down, and friends said he was not even contemplating such a move.

Frank sought to carry out his normal congressional duties Tuesday while declining to discuss his case with reporters. He attended a subcommittee meeting in the morning and worked in his office in the afternoon, according to an aide.

Drive

ting the hospital sale of bonds to finance a new building project. They were told that the amortization of the loan being sought should be lengthened so that final maturity would be in 2003 rather than 1995 as was originally planned. This would decrease annual debt service to $972,000 through 1993 and increase it by approximately $713,000 from 1994-2003, they were told. This would raise the hospital's cash position to a double-A-plus level. Some $34,270,000 will be spent on land, buildings and related costs for a 157-bed addition to the hospital.

Charles Fennessey, vice president for human resources, told the board that a community work force analysis will be done to see if the hospital is hiring as many minority population members as are shown to be present and educated for hospital positions in the area. "In other words," he said, "we want to know if recruitment is matching availability and that is what we plan to find out."

Capital equipment purchases of $87,574 were approved. Among these were a $14,821 laser laparoscopy instrument, a $14,758 video camera and monitor, and a $12,500 videomage colonoscope, all for the operating room; a $12,000 expansion to the pharmacy for facilities services; a $19,500 fileserver for pharmacy; an $8,500 carbon dioxide monitor for anesthesia; and a $5,495 deburrator for the hearth catheterization lab.

It was noted that the Service League has provided a $57,550 isokinetic exercise system for physical therapy.

Board

At the request of the owner's attorney, the commission also continued a rezoning request for 192.78 acres from David A. Evans. Evans requested an increased zoning density for the land south of Red Banks Road and west of the proposed Arlington Boulevard extension.

The commission granted a rezoning request to Alyce Hilliard during Tuesday's meeting that could mean the first step to revitalization of one of Greenville's older neighborhoods.

Ms. Hilliard requested a rezoning of her property at the corner of Manhattan Avenue and Myrtle Street to allow her to open an interior design and hair salon in the existing building. Ms. Hilliard said she had the support of three of the surrounding neighbors.

Two P&Z members said the rezoning to O&I classification, office and institutional use, would give new life to the area. "I think this would be an obvious improvement to the neighborhood," said Tony Lewis. The board unanimously approved the request, the City Council will have the final vote at its Oct. 5 meeting.

The commission also approved a request from Raymond Carney, owner of the Unlimited Touch club, to rezone .33 acre behind his club. Carney said he would use the rezoning to allow for higher density development to add more parking for his club.

"I could control the neighborhood easier if I could provide parking and maybe even a guard," Carney told the commission.

The commission denied a request to reduce the required 100-foot right-of-way on Arlington Boulevard between Stantonsburg and Hooker roads. The city development staff argued that traffic projections in the area predicted the road would need to be widened by 2010 to a seven-lane facility, and the 100-foot right-of-way was needed for the widening.

The P&Z Commission also appointed one of its members, Annie Graham, to serve on a study committee which will look at ways to limit the number of pawn shops in the city to seven, the number presently operating.

The city attorney said the council wanted to find a way to write into the land-use plan restrictions on the number of pawn shops. The City Council earlier this year adopted an ordinance which would allow no more than seven pawn shops in the city.

would have to await notification of the next of kin.

There were 156 passengers and 15-member crew on board, the airline said. A UTA spokeswoman declined to say when or if a complete passenger list would be made public.

The wreckage was found shortly after dawn by a Transall aircraft sent by the French military contingent in N'Djamena, the Chadian capital.

The Defense Ministry said the wreckage was spread over a wide rocky and sandy area in the Termit mountains, north of Lake Chad.

In a statement, UTA said the wreckage was found at 16.54 degrees north latitude and 11.54 degrees east longitude. It gave no passenger list.

French military spokesmen said twin-engine Puma helicopters were being dispatched from N'Djamena with medical crews for immediate aid to survivors, if any are found.

The Transport Ministry said it was sending investigators to probe the crash.

UTA said contact was lost with Flight 772 less than an hour after it took off from N'Djamena after a stopover on a flight that originated in Brazzaville, capital of the Congo.

The airline said the last radio contact between the plane and air traffic controllers indicated everything was normal. It reported no unusual weather.

UTA purchased the aircraft in 1973 and it had logged 60,000 hours in the air. UTA said the plane was in excellent condition.

The plane disappeared just hours after the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration ordered a detailed inspection in the fan disks of all DC-10 engines.

FAA Administrator James B. Busey and National Transportation Safety Board Chairman James Kolstad subsequently declared the DC-10 to be safe.

A Korean Air Lines DC-10 crashed on landing July 27 at Tripoli, Libya, killing 78 passengers and four people on the ground.

Lewis Says Pirates Must Improve Fundamentals

Coach Happy His Team Has Won First Two Games

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Bill Lewis doesn't much talk like a coach whose football team has posted a 2-0 record.

"We're still a fundamentally unsound football team," he told those gathered for his weekly press conference Tuesday. "We continue to be unsound technique-wise. And I'm not satisfied with our overall team conditioning."

What Lewis is looking at, however, is the long road ahead. Unless the Pirates improve in these areas, he pointed out, there are going to be some trouble spots ahead.

Not that he isn't happy with the way things have gone.

"Obviously, I'm pleased with the fact that we've won two football games," the first-year coach said.

Also pleasing to the new coach was the way the Pirates rallied from a 14-5 deficit to pull off a 21-14 win over Cincinnati in their first road game.

"We found a way to work out of it," Lewis said. "We found a way in the fourth quarter after a lot of frustration to stay with the ball game and take it to the wire. The last time the offense touched the football, it scored to put us ahead. And the last time the defense touched it was when they sealed the game for us."

East Carolina, after being twice turned away in the fourth period, scored on a 3-yard run by David Daniels, then saw Ricky Torain come up with a key interception in the shadow of the goal line with just 12 seconds left to play.

But, the fact remains, Lewis says, that there are too many instances of things which could be better.

"We're still missing too many assignments, too many busted assignments on the offense, the defense and in the kicking game. This will eventually catch up with us," he said.

"We're still being penalized too much. We've had too many turnovers, too many interceptions (four of the latter in two games). We're missing too many tackles."

Lewis pointed out that on Cincinnati's 68-yard touchdown run on the third play of the game, ECU missed on three possible tackles at the line of scrimmage.

"If we continue to miss on plays like this, we'll continue to give up big plays," Lewis said.

Lewis said that he, his staff and the players will seek to raise the level of practice this week and in the future.

"We need to practice better on Tuesdays and Wednesdays," he said. "I'm a firm believer in (the old saying) that you play the way you practice. I don't believe in the game-day player."

As to conditioning, Lewis said he still believes there is a hot day coming for the Pirates and they had better be ready for it.

"One of these days, we're going to be going into the stadium and it'll be a steam bath, so we have to work to be sounder fundamentally and in better condition."

The Pirates came out of the game in relatively good shape, although there were some minor injuries.

Cornerback Donald Porch underwent arthroscopic surgery for a possible torn cartilage Monday, but no damage was found. He will be on a day-to-day situation and is questionable for Saturday's game

Ryder Team Determined To Return Cup To U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England — The American Ryder Cup team brings an unparalleled determination to its biennial matches against Europe's best, U.S. captain Ray Floyd said.

"I don't think I've ever seen determination and dedication like this team has," said Floyd, who played on six American teams.

"They've had four years of thinking about the Ryder Cup and about winning," Floyd said after his team's first practice session at the Belfry, where the three-day matches will begin on Friday.

The long-dominant Americans had been unbeaten for 28 years and compiled a 21-3-1 record before the Europeans broke through to win the last two matches, in 1985 and 1987.

"The first time, here at the Belfry four years ago, everybody said it was inevitable, it had to happen some time, the Europeans had a lot of luck — all the things that losers say. They let it roll off their backs," Floyd said.

"It was the excuses that losers use.

"Then, two years ago, we went to Muirfield Village (in Ohio). It was what is called an American course. There was no way the Europeans could win.

"They beat us handily there, and all the excuses were thrown aside.

"Now it's a matter of pride and respect.

"The Americans aren't given the respect they once were. They aren't considered the players to beat now. Now, that role goes to the Europeans. The Europeans are considered the best in the world; our players are at a lower level.

"They don't like that. Pride is at stake. They want to show they can play this game a little, too," Floyd said.

His sentiments were echoed by some of the American players.

"Now we can talk about who's the best, Americans or Europeans," Tom Watson said. "This what we're here for.

"We want to win every match. Of course, that won't happen, but that's what we're here for.

Jaguars Face High-Powered Plymouth Pass Attack

North Pitt's Panthers Travel To Williamston; Ayden-Grifton Visits East Central Power East Duplin

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

High-tech passing games are a rarity in high school football, but Farmville Central will get a good look at one Friday night when Plymouth and quarterback Shawn Walker visit.

Plymouth employs a one-back, four wide-receiver set that utilizes a lot of quick drops and sprint draws with Walker as the trigger man.

So far this year, he has thrown for 874 yards and 15 touchdowns while leading Plymouth to a 3-0 start.

Farmville, ranked third in the latest Associated Press 2-A Poll, is also undefeated at 4-0. Plymouth is ranked ninth on the AP poll.

"Plymouth is a unique team to prepare for," Farmville coach Dixon Sauls said. "They are an exciting offensive team. In our scheme you have to take out a defensive lineman and put in an extra defensive back.

"There are two ways. You can attack them with a rush, but they have an excellent running game, or you can try to defend the pass. They throw a lot of three-step drops which makes it hard to pressure them."

In other games involving Eastern Plains Conference teams Friday night, Ayden-Grifton travels to Beulaville to take on East Duplin, while North Pitt travels to Williamston.

For Farmville, perhaps the biggest keys will be patience and ball control. The best defense against the Vikings is to keep the ball out of their hands.

"We'll have to be real patient," Sauls said. "They'll hit some passes. We need to keep the football. It's not a coaching cliché. The quarters go by quickly when a team has a 70- or 80-yard drive."

Quarterback Morris Foreman keys the Farmville offense. He has rushed for 144 yards and passed for another 286. He also plays safety on defense and has recorded five interceptions. His play in the secondary could be a determining factor.

His eight-yard touchdown pass to wideout Jeff Tyson provided the only touchdown in the Conley game.

"It's similar to the Conley game," Sauls said. "We're playing a quality opponent. We want to be able to handle an unusual offensive system. Our players were emotionally ready to play against Conley. Can we bounce back two weeks in a row? That will be our biggest challenge."

North Pitt

As North Pitt gets set to take on Williamston, Panther coach Stuart Ennis is seeing double.

The Tigers and Panthers both run similar variations of the wishbone offense, which makes for an interesting week of preparation.

"Our practice this week is trying to stop ourselves," Ennis said. "If we're able to stop ourselves, we can stop Williamston.

"I think it does create an interesting situation. Their wishbone is very similar to ours. They use multiple formations. They run some split and wing to the other side. They run a pro formation out of the 'bone.'

One extra variable in that preparation, though, will be keeping Tiger quarterback Jim Bob Bryant in check.

"He throws the ball well," Ennis said. "If given enough time, he can hurt us."

North Pitt got its first win of the season last Friday, topping Roanoke, 36-14, to move its record to 1-3.

"I think we were able to control the line of scrimmage," Ennis said. "It was 15-0 at halftime and we scored three touchdowns in the third quarter. Plus we played some good defense. We got a whole lot better play at inside linebacker and we got improvement on the defensive line."

Ayden-Grifton

Charger coach B.T. Chappell needs his young team to grow up in a hurry, but that task won't be easy with a game against a strong East Duplin team Friday.

The Chargers opened the season with an easy win over Richlands, but since then has struggled in losses to D.H. Conley and Plymouth. Last week, Ayden-Grifton had an off date.

"We're just basically killing ourselves," Chappell said. "There are so many mistakes. We knew this was the situation, but we hoped by this stage that we'd be further along than we are.

"We come back with East Duplin, then we've got Roanoke and then Farmville. Those are three weeks after our open date that we're playing two of the top 2-A teams in the

Farmville Again Ranked Third On AP Prep Poll

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's top-ranked high school football teams have solidified their rankings this week in The Associated Press prep poll.

Two of the state's defending champions — Richmond County in 4-A and Burlington Cummings in 3-A — once again were near unanimous selections to the top spots in their respective classifications as voted upon by a statewide panel of prep sportswriters.

The Raiders, 3-0, picked up 16 of 17 first-place votes for 169 points. Asheville Reynolds, off to an impressive start at 4-0, received the other first-place vote but was 20 points behind Richmond County.

Positions 1-7 remained unchanged in the 4-A poll. Following Richmond County and Asheville Reynolds were Garner, Fayetteville Smith, Greensboro Page, Rocky Mount and Northern Durham — all undefeated teams.

Fayetteville 71st and Fayetteville Byrd each moved up a notch after West Mecklenburg fell out of the poll after a close loss to Charlotte Garner. Northern Nash, 4-0, moved into the poll as a newcomer at No. 10.

Cummings holds an even larger lead over second-ranked Bertie in the 3-A rankings. The Cavaliers, 4-0, received 15 of a possible 16 top votes for 159 points. Bertie, 3-0, received one first-place vote for 133 points.

Statesville, Havelock, Lexington and South Iredell remained in place, while Smoky Mountain, 4-0 and winners over some tough competition, moved up to seventh from ninth a week ago.

Lincolnton, East Rutherford and newcomer Burns rounded out the 3-A poll. Burns, 4-0, has outscored opponents 126-13. Caxton Pisgah fell out of the poll after its first loss of the season, a 17-3 setback at the hands of 4-A Waynesville Tuscola.

Positions 1-5 remained unchanged in the 2-A poll.

Top-ranked Wallace-Rose Hill, 4-0, received 14 first-place votes for 154 points. Second-ranked Clinton, closing in with 146 points, received one first-place vote, while third-ranked Farmville Central got the other.

The rest of the poll included Newton-Conover, defending state champion Thomasville, Clinton, Warsaw Kenan, Forest Hills, Plymouth and Whiteville.

Murphy was once again voted the top 1-A team and has the week off. The Bulldogs, 4-0, may need the rest as a tough schedule awaits. In the next seven weeks, Murphy plays one ranked 3-A team and two ranked 1-A teams.

Farmville, now 6-2 overall and 1-1 in the EPC, entertains Greene Central and East Carteret in a conference tri-match Thursday. North Pitt, now 2-0 and 3-7, travels to Ayden-Grifton to face Pamlico County and the Lady Chargers.

Rocky Mount Tops Rose

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose saw its record dip to 1-4 with a four-set loss at East Conference foe Rocky Mount.

The two teams split the first two sets with the host Lady Gryphons taking the opener 15-9 and Rose winning the second 15-11. However, Rocky Mount sealed the victory by prevailing 15-12 and 15-9 in the next two sets.

Janna Potter led the Rampettes with 17 service points. Kelly Seamster was credited with seven service points while Amy Peterson had six.

Rose travels to Wilson for a conference match with Hunt Thursday.

Lady Chargers Drop Pair

In the second match, against Pamlico, the Lady Hurricanes won, 18-16, 6-3. Naomi Curtis led Pamlico with seven points while Kim Brinson added six. Tillman again led Ayden-Grifton with seven while Kesha Jones added four.

The loss drops Ayden-Grifton to 0-2 in the conference and 1-7 overall. The Lady Chargers will play at home against Pamlico and North Pitt on Thursday.

Montgomery To Test Heels' Inexperience

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Count North Carolina football coach Mack Brown as one of North Carolina State quarterback Shane Montgomery's fans.

"Shane Montgomery has to be the leading candidate for player of the year in the conference," Brown said. "As an old quarterback coach, when you're throwing more touchdown passes than interceptions, you're doing something right."

Montgomery has completed 62 of his 102 attempts (60.8 percent) this year, throwing for five touchdowns and two interceptions.

North Carolina (1-1) plays N.C. State (3-0) Saturday in Raleigh. Brown said Montgomery will test North Carolina's inexperienced secondary more than Virginia Military Institute and Kentucky did in the Tar Heels' first two outings.

"Shane Montgomery is sticking it on them," Brown said Tuesday. "You don't have to reach far. And you'd better catch it, or it'll hit you."

"He's fun to watch. I've enjoyed watching him like (Duke quarterback Anthony) Dilweg last year."

Montgomery completed 24 of 39 passes for 298 yards and two touchdowns in the Wolfpack's 27-17 victory over Wake Forest last Saturday.

"They are the first team we've played that can throw it as well as they can run it," Brown said.

North Carolina, meanwhile, had a far more difficult time throwing the ball in its 13-6 loss to Kentucky last week. Tar Heel quarterback Jonathan Hall was just six of 22 and had two interceptions.

Overall, however, Brown said he was pleased with the Tar Heels' performance against the Wildcats.

"We had some concerns with a young team being intimidated in Lexington, (Ky.), but that didn't happen," he said. "We always ask our team to go into the fourth quarter with a chance to win, and they did that."

Deacons Brace For Army Wishbone

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest head football coach Bill Dooley knows what to expect from Army — he just has to figure out how to stop it.

The Demon Deacons travel to West Point on Saturday to face an experienced Army team that uses a wishbone offense and runs at every opportunity.

"They are content to drive the ball down the field, getting four or five yards at a time," Dooley said at his weekly news conference on Tuesday. "On third and long, they'll run it. On first and 10, they'll run it. Their finesse and deception come off the running game."

"They will however, lull you to sleep and then throw it, but that only happens on rare occasions."

Dooley said Wake Forest must present a good running game of its own on Saturday against a defense that returns 10 starters. The Demon Deacons have averaged 102.5 yards per game on the ground and 265 yards passing.

"We're throwing the ball more and I'm enjoying it less," he said. "I would rather throw it less and enjoy it more."

The air attack has come by necessity since the Demon Deacons have lost running backs at an alarming rate.

Mark Young was lost prior to the start of practice because of academic problems, and Darrell France went down with a knee injury before the season started.

Brian Johnson dislocated his elbow and Tony Rogers injured his knee in the season opener against Appalachian State. Neither played in the loss to North Carolina State last Saturday and both are questionable for this week's game.

That leaves Anthony Williams, who played regularly last season; Dave Herrman, a senior who has seen little action before this year; Bob Niedbala, who shared the fullback spot with Johnson last season; and Corey Donald, who was a wide receiver and on special teams last year.

Home Game, Day Game Pleases Ford

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson coach Danny Ford isn't looking forward to playing Maryland, but he was glad the seventh-ranked Tigers were back home after two straight weeks of night games on the road.

"Thank goodness we finally are coming back home and playing in front of our people, and playing before the sun goes down," Ford said. "That'll be a help. ... Glad to get out of the night-game situation. I don't think it's helped us very much in having those situations. We did survive 'em."

"The last two weeks we've been waking up about 10 o'clock. We'll have to be woke up and gone now with a 12:08 kickoff. Unfortunately when we wake up, there's going to be a big team from Maryland over here."

Last season, Clemson clinched its third consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference championship by beating Maryland. This season, the Tigers begin their quest for an unprecedented fourth ACC title against the Terrapins.

SAN FRANCISCO — Looking for excitement? Want a telephone hook-up to a superstar? Just plain bored? Dial Jose — but be ready to pay.

Thousands of people a day are apparently willing to shell out as much as $10 a call to hear a telephone recording of Jose Canseco chatting about his misadventures with guns and cars, about steroids allegations, and, on occasion, baseball. Canseco's 900 number went into service this week, and an agent for the Oakland Athletics slugger says it's a big hit.

"The phone is ringing off the hook," Jeff Borris of the Beverly Hills Sports Council said Tuesday. "Thousands of people are calling. The response has been very favorable, and we're very pleased with the initial results."

The sports council cooked up the idea this summer, with Canseco's approval.

"How it originally came out was, the media stuff was happening with the speeding and the guns, and people weren't getting the story from the horse's mouth," Canseco said. "I just wanted to tell my side of the story. Every single day it's updated. It will tell you about the game, and also what happened to me that day. Like, at the time of the gun incident, I'd have said I was traveling to the hospital when a policeman stopped me, and I'd talk about all the things that happened that day."

The agent declined to discuss any potential profits, but they are obviously lucrative.

A caller pays $2 for the first minute and $1 for each additional minute. There are 4½ minutes of Canseco's recorded comments about guns, cars and steroids, and it costs $5 for the entire spiel. The outfielder also updates the tape daily with his thoughts about that day's game or events. On Tuesday, his remarks about Monday night's game in Cleveland ran about 4½ minutes. Total tab: $10.

"That's not important," the agent said of the financial details. "There's a whole 900-number craze going on across the country. Tell anyone to call the answering machine before they form an opinion on this idea."

Canseco plugs the telephone service in commercials now appearing on the ESPN, MTV and USA cable networks. In the ads, he's dressed in white and leaning against his white Porsche 930 Cabriolet turbo on the track at the Malibu Grand Prix, an amusement raceway for small stock racing cars located next to the Oakland Coliseum.

"Hi, I'm Jose Canseco," he says cheerfully. "I want to speak to you, so call 1-900-234-JOSE. ... I'll give you the latest scoop on baseball and what's happening in my personal life. If you want to know if I take steroids, how fast I drive, or why I was carrying that gun, call me at 1-900-234-JOSE."

So what does the caller learn about Mr. 40-40?

Jose Canseco

There's nothing substantial that he hasn't said previously on his numerous brushes with the law over the past year. But there is one new item: Jose, who has previously bought Jaguar and Porsche automobiles, has purchased a Lamborghini which he expects to have delivered within the next month.

On driving fast and his arrests for speeding: "I do enjoy music and exotic cars," he says. "Obviously, they're extremely fast. Sometimes they do tend to get away from you. Forty or 50 mph in these cars seems like nothing. Sometimes you're not really watching the speedometer and you accelerate a little bit and boom, you're up to 70 or 80 mph. ..."

"I don't really want any young people to go out there and do that because it's very dangerous. ... Please try not to speed, and try to keep it under 55 if you can."

On his arrest for illegal gun possession: "It was a very scary event. ... I was fingerprinted and asked a whole bunch of questions by an FBI agent. I explained to him that I carried a gun for my own safety and my wife's protection, and in Florida it's totally legal."

On steroids: "The steroid incident started when a gentleman named Thomas Boswell started rumors on national TV that I, Jose Canseco, was taking steroids. With no proper evidence, with no backing, this gentleman said this about me, which was totally untrue. I'm a guy that's 6-3½, 230 pounds and I work extremely hard. I'm the type of player who wants to become the best player in the game. And I'm also trying to wear out the stereotype that big guys cannot run. I've gotten so much into weightlifting that I've built a gym in my house which cost me approximately $150,000. I'm in there probably 2½ hours to three hours a day trying to better myself in the game of baseball and become the best player possible."

"I think the best part of it is the personal stuff," Canseco said before Tuesday's game at Cleveland. "For instance, the other day when we were leaving the park in Boston to go to a party in a van, some fans tried to jump in the van. People who have no idea about what baseball players go through can learn what we go through this way."

A's manager Tony La Russa probably won't be calling Jose.

"I saw the commercial when we were in Boston, and I thought, 'This is ridiculous,'" La Russa said. "It'll be interesting to see where he got the advice to do it. Maybe he took his own advice."

"I once heard him say he was going to be very careful about the types of commercials and endorsements he does. In my opinion, I wouldn't have done this."

Ryder Cup...

"This team is ready to win. We didn't come over here to lose," Watson said.

"There is a feeling on this team I've never seen before," agreed U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange.

"We're here to do a job of work. We have something to prove," Mark McCormack said.

Britain's legal bookies are betting that the Americans will succeed. The United States is listed as an 8-13 favorite.

Floyd also said he would play all 12 American players at least once a day each of the three days of the Matches "unless a man comes to me and says he is injured or does not want to play."

Under the format, a captain can play as few as eight players through the first two days.

Both Friday and Saturday, the morning format is four foursomes, in which two-man teams (eight players from each side) play alternate shots on the same ball.

against Illinois State. Offensive guard Dean Taylor had a wrist sprain, center Chad Martin has a knee sprain and fullback Michael Rhett has a hip bruise, but all three are expected to be ready to play Saturday.

The Pirates also got the news that defensive end George Koonce was to return to practice Tuesday evening, although he will not have any contact work. While questionable for this week, he may be ready for the Louisiana Tech game. Ken Burnette, out since preseason practice, is still on schedule to return for the South Carolina game.

"We came out of the (Cincinnati) game about as good a shape as we could," Lewis said.

Lewis announced several honors for the Cincinnati game, including the game captains for the coming week. They are offensive guard Stewart Southall, free safety Junior Robinson and punter John Jett. Southall, along with David Daniels, was named Top Pirate on offense, while linebacker Robert Jones was picked on defense. Jett won the award for the special teams.

Lewis pointed out that Jett's punting was outstanding in the game. Three times he punted the ball dead inside the 10-yard line. ECU got two safeties out of those three and the third helped swing the momentum to the Pirates.

Lewis also named winners of the scout team awards. Winners of this will dress out for the next home game. They are offensive tackle Nick Wilson and defensive tackle Thomas Coleman from the Bowling Green game, and wide receiver Darren Willis and linebacker Travis Uzzell from the Cincinnati game.

East Carolina returns home on Saturday to face Illinois State at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

state (in East Duplin and Farmville).

"Even if we make a lot of improvement, we're looking at some tough ball games. If we can come by that stretch with decent morale and attitude, if we win three of our last four, we're still looking at a chance for a playoff spot."

"That's what I want our guys to see. There is still hope at the end of the season."

Chappell went back to live contact last week in an effort to shore up weaknesses on both the offensive line and throughout the defense.

Seniors Scott Cannon, Rashid Williams and James Williams are the only somewhat experienced players on the defensive side of the ball, and each of those three also plays offense.

"The rest of the guys have a lot of improving to do," Chappell said. "If we were sitting here with a whole bunch of seniors, it would be depressing, but we're seeing young boys who are getting a chance to play."

"At times they've done a good job. With another year, hopefully we could develop into a decent team. The main thing now is we're trying to develop a winning attitude."

East Duplin, 3-0, plays in the rugged East Central 2-A and advanced to the second round of the playoffs last year, falling to Whiteville. They are ranked 11th in the latest AP poll.

Win Over Bosox Could Be Key For Jays

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If the Toronto Blue Jays wind up winning the American League East, they will say this was the game that sent them on their way.

The Blue Jays, twice trailing in extra innings, rallied in the 13th Tuesday night when Nelson Liriano's two-out, two-run double beat the Boston Red Sox 6-5 before another sellout crowd at the SkyDome.

Toronto, having seen Baltimore defeat Detroit 6-2 earlier in the evening, scored the tying run in the 10th on Ernie Whitt's two-out RBI single.

Liriano hit an 0-2 pitch in the 13th to keep the Blue Jays two games ahead of the Orioles.

"This team just won't quit," winning pitcher Tom Henke said. "It's a little difficult when you see the Orioles final up on the board. But we can't be worrying about what the other guys are doing. If we go out and win our games, it's not going to matter either way what they do."

Not since Aug. 20 has Toronto lost on a day that Baltimore has won. And it didn't happen this time, either.

The standings on top of the AL West stayed the same, too. Oakland beat Cleveland 5-1 and remained 2½ games ahead of California, which defeated Minnesota 7-3. Kansas City kept within 3½ games by beating Chicago 5-3.

Texas stopped Seattle 5-3 and the Milwaukee-at-New York game was rained out.

Boston had its four-game winning streak stopped and fell 9½ games behind. Toronto's good fortune left the Red Sox in a bad mood.

"How could they possibly win that game as inept as they were?" Boston manager Joe Morgan said.

Orioles 6, Tigers 2
Craig Worthington and Tim Hulett hit home runs and Bob Milacki won for the third time in four starts as Baltimore beat Detroit.

The Orioles have won three of four. The Tigers, whose 20-57 road record is the worst in baseball, have lost three of four.

Hulett broke out of a 1-for-14 slump with an RBI single in the second and a solo home run in the fifth. Worthington, in a 2-for-16 skid, homered in the fourth. Jamie Quirk drove in two runs with a double and sacrifice fly.

Jack Morris, 6-12, failed to become the first Tigers pitcher to win four straight starts this season.

Athletics 5, Indians 1
For the 11th time in 33 starts, Mike Moore did not allow an earned run as Oakland won in Cleveland and maintained its 2½-game lead in the AL West.

Moore, 18-10, matched his career high for victories. He gave up four hits in eight innings.

The Indians have lost five straight games. They are 2-6 under interim manager John Hart and have scored just 14 runs since he replaced the fired Doc Edwards.

Rod Nichols, 4-5, retired the first 10 batters before Carney Lansford singled. Jose Canseco and Dave Parker followed with RBI doubles and Dave Henderson singled for a 3-0 lead.

Angels 7, Twins 3
Chuck Finley gave up three hits in six innings and California won in Minnesota to stay 2½ games behind in the AL West.

Finley, 16-8, won for the ninth time in 11 starts. Bryan Harvey got his 24th save.

Claudell Washington hit a solo home run and RBI single for the Angels. Chili Davis singled home a run in the third for a 4-1 lead.

Kevin Tapani, 2-1, allowed 10 hits in 3 2-3 innings. Kirby Puckett hit a two-run homer for the Twins, his first home run in 52 games. He leads the league with a .341 average and has 501 career RBIs, but has hit just eight home runs this season after averaging 28 the last three years.

Royals 5, White Sox 3
Danny Tartabull and Willie Wilson each drove in two runs and Kansas City took advantage of four errors to beat Chicago and remain 3½ games back in the AL West.

The Royals scored five times in the second inning against Richard Dotson, 4-11. Third baseman Carlos Martinez made the first of his three errors, center fielder Sammy Sosa made a miscue, Tartabull doubled and Wilson tripled.

Larry McWilliams, 2-0, allowed three runs on six hits in seven innings. Steve Farr got his 18th save, his first since Aug. 7.

Rangers 5, Mariners 3
Ruben Sierra hit his 27th home run and tripled as Texas defeated Seattle.

Sierra leads the league with 112 RBIs and 14 triples, and is batting .308. His 318 total bases broke the team record of 315 set by Al Oliver in 1980.

Despite the victory, the Rangers were mathematically eliminated in the AL West.

Brad Arnsberg, 2-0, pitched two-hit relief for 5 2-3 innings. Charlie Hough matched the shortest start in his 20-year career, getting only two outs. He argued with Manager Bobby Valentine on the mound and flipped the ball to Arnsberg 15 feet away.

Pete Incaviglia hit his 19th home run, a solo shot, for a 4-3 lead in the sixth against Jerry Reed, 6-7. Sierra homered in the eighth.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants 3, Dodgers 2
Orel Hershiser usually has a right to complain about the lack of hitting by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

This time, the Dodgers fooled the 1988 Cy Young Award winner by banging out 15 hits.

Now all Hershiser can complain is the lack of runs. The Dodgers scored only two for him Tuesday night in a 3-2 loss to the San Francisco Giants, who moved closer to winning the National League West.

The Dodgers stranded 10 baserunners — it could have been 14 but four were thrown out — to bring their league-leading total for the season to 1,119.

Hershiser, 14-14, lost a career-high sixth straight decision and his first in five starts against the Giants, against whom he is 15-5 lifetime. The Dodgers have scored a total of 17 runs in his losses. The two runs were the most scored in his last seven starts.

"I wouldn't want to go through something like this in a pennant race," Hershiser said.

A bases-loaded double by pinch-hitter Mike Lega in his first career at-bat against Hershiser accounted for the San Francisco runs with two out in the fifth inning.

The 28-year-old Lega, who spent most of the season in the minors, is 4-for-9, and all four hits have driven in runs.

"My role, pure and simple, is to pinch hit and drive in runs," Lega said.

Hershiser said the Giants have the look of a champion.

"You get the efforts out of people you don't expect," said Hershiser, who pitched the Dodgers to a World Series title last season. "It's what happened to us last year."

The runs pushed his earned-run average to 2.41, third-best in the league. In going 23-8 last season with a major league-record 59 consecutive scoreless innings, his ERA was 2.26.

Mike LaCoss, 8-10, allowed 11 hits in five innings. Steve Bedrosian got his 22nd save.

The victory left San Francisco five games ahead of surging San Diego. The Padres broke a second-place tie with Houston by beating Cincinnati 5-1 while the Astros fell to Atlanta 3-0.

The Giants' magic number is seven, meaning any combination of San Francisco victories and San Diego defeats totalling seven would give the Giants the division title.

The race tightened in the East when New York beat Chicago 5-2 and St. Louis blanked Montreal 5-0. Chicago's lead over St. Louis was reduced to four games. The Cubs' magic number is eight.

The Mets trail the Cubs by 5½ games with the Expos seven back.

Padres 5, Reds 1

Rookie Andy Benes, from nearby Evansville, Ind., was afraid he would flop after leaving 65 Riverfront Stadium passes for friends and relatives.

"I was so nervous out there, I was just hoping I could throw strikes in the first inning," he said.

Not to worry. Benes won his fifth straight decision, had two hits and scored a run.

Tony Gwynn drove in three runs and Benito Santiago hit a two-run homer for San Diego, which beat Scott Scudder, 4-7, to win for the 20th time in 25 games while handing Cincinnati its eighth straight loss.

Gwynn

Benes, 5-2, allowed five hits in 6 2-3 innings, struck out nine to match a career high and walked none. Mark Davis got his 40th save, tops in the majors.

The Reds, 9-15 under interim manager Tommy Helms, ended a streak of 26 consecutive scoreless innings when Jeff Reed hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Braves 3, Astros 0
Gary Eave was one of those rookies Atlanta wasn't supposed to be starting in games affecting the pennant race. But Eave, making his first major-league start, outpitched 20-game winner Mike Scott to end Houston's five-game winning streak and Scott's six-game run against Atlanta.

Braves manager Russ Nixon said NL president Bill White "said he had received a complaint ... it was my lineup. I said I thought it was a good one."

Ron Gant and rookie Dave Justice, recalled last week from AAA Richmond, hit solo homers against Scott.

Eave, 1-0, was 13-3 at Richmond before being called up last week. He allowed two hits in 7 2-3 innings, walked six and struck out four.

Eave was relieved by rookie Dwayne Henry, who struck out Glenn Davis with the bases loaded to end the eighth. Mike Stanton, the third Atlanta pitcher, worked the ninth for his fifth save.

Mets 5, Cubs 2
Gary Carter's first home run in five months and Dwight Gooden's first major-league save enabled New York to keep its slim hopes alive.

Carter hit a three-run homer, the 304th of his career, off Steve Wilson, 5-4, in the second inning.

Gooden, who came off the disabled list two weeks ago, bailed Bob Ojeda out of a jam in the sixth as the Mets broke a three-game losing streak.

Ojeda, 13-10, allowed only two hits until Domingo Ramos and Shawn Dunston singled to start the inning. Gooden came on, got Ryne Sandberg out four and walked two in pitching the third complete game of his career.

The Cardinals have 11 games left, including three with the Cubs in St. Louis to finish the season.

Pedro Guerrero gave the Cardinals a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning when he hit his 17th homer off rookie Mark Gardner, 0-2. Tom Brunansky and Todd Zeile added RBI singles to make it 3-0.

Tewksbury had an RBI single to make it 4-0 in the sixth. Brunansky hit his 20th homer in the eighth, making it eight straight seasons he has reached that figure.

Pirates 4, Phillies 2
Pittsburgh won for the ninth time in 10 games as Jose Lind and Gary Redus led the way with three hits each.

Lind had two RBIs and Redus scored two runs in support of Jeff Robinson, 7-11. Bill Landrum, the fourth Pittsburgh pitcher, got his 24th save.

Jeff King doubled to tie the game at 2-2 in the third against Bruce Ruffin, 5-10, who lost for the seventh time in nine decisions. Redus hit an RBI single later in the inning to put the Pirates ahead.

Lind drove in runs in the second and seventh.

Len Dykstra drove in two runs in the second for the Phillies.

Court Returns Cup; Fight Not Over

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — An appeals court sunk New Zealander Michael Fay's claim on the America's Cup and returned it to the San Diego Yacht Club. But another courtroom skirmish may surface before an end to the legal wrangling over sailing's biggest prize.

Fay said he intends to appeal Tuesday's 4-1 decision by the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court, which overturned a lower-court ruling. The original court case had led to the disqualification of the San Diego Yacht Club and the forfeiture of the Cup to Fay and the Mercury Bay Boating Club.

"The majority decision from this court is a disgrace," Fay said of Tuesday's reversal. "The idea that a competitor can fix a contest to win makes nonsense of any sport. It is wrong, plain and simple."

San Diego resorted to an unprecedented catamaran defense on Sept. 7 and Sept. 9, 1988, to dispose of Fay's majestic but lumbering monohulled yacht in successive races during a best-of-three series off San Diego.

Fay, who had sued to force the September series, went back to court after being defeated on the water in what has become known as the "Coma off Point Loma."

He claimed the SDYC failed to meet his challenge in a like and similar boat and that Stars & Stripes, the dual-hulled, 60-foot catamaran skippered by three-time Cup winner Dennis Conner, had an unfair speed advantage over New Zealand's 133-foot sloop.

Last March, Fay became the first person to win the Cup in court when New York State Supreme Court Judge Carmen Ciparick ruled the SDYC violated the spirit of the Deed of Gift, the 102-year document governing America's Cup competition.

Ciparick said the catamaran versus the monohull created a "gross mismatch" and she stripped the Cup from San Diego, saying the yacht club should have met Fay in a vessel "somewhat evenly matched."

The appellate court disagreed, saying Ciparick acted too harshly in ordering the first forfeiture in 138 years of Cup racing and that she misinterpreted the deed.

"This decision makes it clear that everything San Diego Yacht Club did was in accordance with the rules," said Tom Ehman, executive vice president of the America's Cup Organizing Committee. "In short, it was fair."

Ehman said the committee and SDYC were moving ahead with plans for the next America's Cup regatta in May 1992 off San Diego, an event, he said, that has already attracted 24 challengers from 11 countries.

There will be defender and challenger elimination trials in the next event, and challengers and defenders have agreed to use a new 75-foot America's Cup Class boat to avoid the type of mismatch seen last September.

"There's no question that this controversy has tarnished the Cup in the eyes of the general public, the sailing public, in the eyes of our community," Ehman said. "But it's also a perfect opportunity."

"It may be the best thing that's happened to us. The controversy, and I hate to say this, has brought the America's Cup to the minds of more people in the world than ever."

Fay has 30 days to petition New York's highest court, the Court of Appeals, for permission to appeal.

Acceptance of the petition, however, is a longshot because the Court of Appeals agrees to hear only about 5 percent of the cases appealed to it.

"I personally think Mercury Bay's chances of getting permission to appeal, let alone prevailing upon appeal, are probably two — slim and none," Ehman said.

George Tompkins Jr., New Zealand's lead lawyer in the United States, said "the ballgame's over" if the petition is turned down.

Fay, however, remains optimistic he will get a final hearing.

"We're quite confident we'll win the last round," he said. In reversing Ciparick's decision, the appellate panel said San Diego should not be penalized for using its imagination to come up with a better and faster vessel than the New Zealanders.

"San Diego Yacht Club should not be deprived of its victory simply because the design of its vessel was more innovative and more successful in achieving its purpose than that of the challenger," Justice Israel Rubin wrote.

Rubin also put in a word for an end to the legal squabble, saying "between true yachtsmen, victory is pursued on the water and not in the courtroom."

Justice Bently Kassal, the lone dissenter on the appellate panel, supported Ciparick's position. "I cannot accept that such a gross mismatch was permissible under the Deed of Gift."

Fay acknowledged that the litigation had "confused even the most avid follower of the America's Cup, what with the backwards and forwards between San Diego and Mercury Bay." But, he added, "I don't think our resolve has changed."

Ciparick had found competing vessels must be "somewhat evenly matched." San Diego's use of a lighter, faster catamaran "violated the spirit" of the international competition, she ruled.

But the appeals court said Ciparick failed to base her decision strictly on the document that governs the race.

"The Deed of Gift is silent as to the type boat to be used by the defender," the majority opinion stated. "Although both monohulls and multihulls were in existence at the time of its final revision in 1887, the Deed of Gift does not explicitly bar the use of a multihulled vessel or require the trustee to defend in a vessel having the same number of hulls as the challenger."

The squabbling began in July 1987 when Fay and Mercury Bay ignored modern America's Cup tradition by challenging the San Diego club. After Conner beat Iain Murray's Kookaburra III to recapture the Cup in 1987, San Diego made the technical oversight of failing to say how it would meet challenges.

Fay wanted the race held within one year rather than the usual three to four years. He wanted a one-on-one race with others excluded, instead of the usual elimination matches. And he wanted to compete in a 90-foot waterline boat instead of the 12-meter yachts which had been used since 1958.

San Diego rejected the challenge and Fay sued. Ciparick ruled on Nov. 25, 1987 that Fay's challenge, though unorthodox, was valid.

The SDYC responded with a catamaran, a vessel with two hulls and no keel. It tends to move across the top of the water, creating less drag than a monohull, which has an underwater keel.

Stars & Stripes swept the best-of-three race series, winning by 18 minutes, 15 seconds and by 21:10, huge margins for championship yachts.

Currently, the Cup is in a New York bank vault under the custody of the New York Yacht Club. SDYC officials said they hope to have the Cup returned to San Diego, perhaps later this week.

Paterno Suspends QB Bill For Violation Of Team Policy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Penn State starting quarterback Tom Bill has been temporarily suspended for violation of team policy, Coach Joe Paterno announced today.

Paterno said sophomore Tony Sacca will replace Bill in the starting lineup Saturday against Boston College. Sacca's backup will be sophomore Matt Nardolillo.

Paterno said the suspension was for an indefinite term and would be reviewed "when reasonable and proper to do so."

While Paterno refused to discuss the specifics, Bill was cited early Monday on campus for public drunkenness, according to court records. According to the citation, campus police found Bill at 2 a.m. sitting on a sidewalk "in an intoxicated state."

"I'm disappointed to take such measures, but the interests of the squad is best served by putting Tom Bill on temporary suspension," Paterno said during his weekly news conference.

"The specifics of the infraction will remain between Tom, the coaching staff and the squad," he said. "We don't feel any useful purpose will be served by a prolonged public discussion of the matter."

Paterno said he informed Bill of the suspension Monday and told the team later.

"We are completely satisfied that he has achieved an acceptable resolution of the issue," the coach said.

The suspension of Bill was an ironic resolution to Paterno's quarterback controversy this season. The coach, while he gave Bill the starting nod, has said the competition is so close that he intended to use both Bill and Sacca as much as possible.

Bill, who missed the final eight games of last season with a knee injury, won his job back in preseason practice. Last week, in his 42-3 victory over Temple, Bill completed 6 of 10 passes for 192 yards and two touchdowns. Sacca was sent in during the fourth quarter.

In the first game, an upset loss to Virginia, Paterno alternated the two quarterbacks in the first half. But Bill played the entire second half.

Sacca came to Penn State as one of the most highly recruited quarterbacks in the nation, and as recently as last week expressed his disappointment in not being the starting quarterback.

Sacca said he might transfer if nothing changes by the end of the season.

Paterno discussed the impact of the Bill suspension.

"Any time you get something like that it's going to hurt you somewhat. It depends on how the squad reacts to it. I discussed it with them yesterday."

Paterno said of Sacca, "I think Tony Sacca is ready to play physically, but he has to get more into the game, which I think he will."

The coach said there was no question about Sacca's physical ability.

"I think he can become the leader of this football team very quickly. We're hoping that's what will happen. The squad will look to him and help him. We'll get on with it."

De Klerk Pledges End To White Domination

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRETORIA, South Africa — F.W. de Klerk was sworn in as president today and appealed to South Africans of all races to help build a nation "free of domination and oppression."

He took the oath of office at a Pretoria church as reports spread that his government would free jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela next year. Newspapers quoted officials as saying the release would be part of several moves aimed at drawing blacks into negotiations on a new constitution.

"Our goal is a new South Africa, a totally changed South Africa, a South Africa which has rid itself of the antagonisms of the past, a South Africa free of domination or oppression in whatever form," de Klerk, 53, said during the swearing-in ceremony.

A leading anti-apartheid activist, the Rev. Allan Boesak, said he would give de Klerk six months to prove that blacks' skepticism toward him is unfounded.

"If he does not move by then, our fears will be tragically fulfilled," said Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. "If he does move, then I think we might find ourselves in a situation where one may begin to be hopeful."

De Klerk said his government would move to eliminate discriminatory laws, give "urgent attention" to adopting a bill of rights and release prisoners such as Mandela if that would promote peaceful solutions.

He said he hoped to "gradually move away" from the 3-year-old state of emergency, which has severed restricted militant anti-apartheid activity.

"Protest regarding past injustice, or alleged injustice, does not bring us closer to a solution. Nor does unrest or violence," he said. "There is but one way to peace, to justice for all: that is the way of reconciliation."

He reiterated his vision of a new political system in which the now-voteless black majority would be able to participate without dominating the white minority, and he cautioned against unreasonable expectations for his program.

De Klerk's eyes watered when a minister preaching at the swearing-in ceremony urged him to press forward without fear. Chief Justice Michael Corbett administered the oath of office before about 1,500 people in a Dutch Reformed Church near the University of Pretoria.

In an indication of South Africa's international isolation, no foreign heads of state were present.

As the ceremony began, a group of human rights lawyers in Pretoria announced that de Klerk had commuted the death sentences of seven prisoners on Death Row.

It was the second time in five weeks that de Klerk took the oath. He became acting president on Aug. 15, a day after the Cabinet forced President P.W. Botha to resign after his 11 years in power.

De Klerk did not mention Mandela by name in his speech, but said security prisoners would be released if public order was not threatened and prospects for peace could be enhanced.

Mandela has been jailed since 1962 and is serving a life sentence along with other leaders of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement for plotting anti-government sabotage.

Since succeeding Botha, de Klerk has repeatedly stressed the need for speedy reform and has called white domination of the black majority unfair.

His National Party lost seats to both the left and right in elections Sept. 6, but retained its parliamentary majority on a platform calling for a vote for blacks on the national level by 1994.

Although he has spoken out against discrimination, De Klerk opposes outright black majority rule, and favors segregated neighborhoods and schools for whites who want them. His personal style, conciliatory and affable, translated into immediate political gain when he declared that police would no longer interfere with peaceful anti-government protests.

Last week, tens of thousands of people of all races participated in two of the largest marches in South African history.

Some of his staunchest black opponents praised de Klerk's decision, seen as an attempt to defuse bitterness and encourage black leaders to negotiate with the government.

But under the state of emergency, which grants police almost unlimited powers to limit freedom of speech, press and assembly, police continued to detain black leaders without charge while the marches went on.

Throughout his 17 years in politics, including 10 years in the Cabinet, de Klerk has been a low-key, loyal supporter of the National Party and a policy of gradual, limited reforms.

De Klerk practiced law before entering Parliament in 1973. From 1978, he held a series of Cabinet posts and in 1982 took on the powerful job of National Party leader in Transvaal, South Africa's most populous and wealthy province.

De Klerk and his, Marike, wife have three children.

Communist Hard-Liners Back Ethnic Crackdown

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Communist hard-liners supported President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's warning about anarchy and ethnic separatism by calling for a crackdown on groups seeking more freedom from Moscow, reports said today.

Absamat Masaliev, Communist Party chief of the Central Asian republic of Kirghizia, told a meeting of the party's policy-making Central Committee that the "time has come ... to bring to order those who openly speak out against our structure, our unity, sabotage perestroika and abuse democracy."

Masaliev said that calls to turn the party into a union of independent groups, or to introduce a multiparty system, were "an extremely dangerous and destructive tendency."

His comments and those of other party leaders were made Tuesday and distributed today by Tass, the official Soviet news agency. The Central Committee continued its work today, and Tass said it debated a blueprint for ethnic relations offered by Gorbachev as part of his reform drive.

The president opened the meeting Tuesday by offering the 15 Soviet republics more power to decide economic issues. But he said the Kremlin would not tolerate anarchy or what he called separatist demagogues. Ethnic disputes have become one of the most complex and serious problems in this land of more than 100 nationalities during the period of Gorbachev's reforms.

They have resulted in more than 200 deaths in the past 18 months, the virtual blockade of one republic and calls for independence from Moscow.

Gorbachev urged Soviets "not give in to demagogues" with slogans "served under the pleasant sauce of independence, secession, etc."

He recounted how the Kremlin has tried to bring peace to the Caucasus Mountain republics of Armenia and Azerbaijan, where Soviet officials say the current situation is more tense than at any time during an 18-month standoff over control of the Nagorno-Karabakh region.

The Kremlin has imposed direct rule on the region to no avail, and Gorbachev said the party was contemplating "resolute measures" to quell the violence. "We cannot allow anarchy, let alone bloodshed," he said.

Even as he spoke, Tass reported that two Soviet policemen had been killed by a mob in an Azerbaijani village located on a blocked road to Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly Armenian enclave in Azerbaijan.

Addressing demands in Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia to recognize that they were forcibly absorbed by dictator Josef Stalin as World War II broke out, Gorbachev said Stalin's policy was wrong but that the Baltic republics joined the Soviet Union voluntarily rather than face Adolf Hitler's Nazi forces alone.

Yuri Yelchenko, a secretary of the Ukrainian Communist Party, said a "series of independent formations have basic anti-socialist platforms, the basis of which often lies in bourgeois nationalism."

He said such groups were especially active in the western Ukraine, and he accused the Narodni Rukh grass-roots political movement of seeking to seize power from the Communists.

Yelchenko said legislation must be passed to disperse what he called "nationalistic or chauvinistic organizations and groups."

Local party leaders said they support plans to give them more control over their economies. They complained that since many of the factories and offices in their republics now are under the control of national ministries in Moscow, they pay little in the way of local taxes.

In its first decision Tuesday, the Central Committee backed Gorbachev's proposal to hold the next party congress ahead of schedule, in October 1990. The sessions are held every five years and the last one opened on Feb. 24, 1986.

A congress gives Gorbachev the broadest possible opportunity to remake the party leadership. It is theoretically the most powerful party body, responsible for broad policy outlines as well as electing the Central Committee. Since the 1986 congress, Gorbachev has been able to demote committee members or promote others, and only such a session can give him an entirely new Central Committee.

Gorbachev said many Communist Party members cannot keep up with the rapid pace of change in Soviet society engendered by his reform program. Renewal is necessary all the way up to the Central Committee level, he said.

Moscow Paper Says Pravda Used Poor Taste In Printing Yeltsin Tale

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Moscow News today said that an article in the Communist Party daily that accused political maverick Boris N. Yeltsin of boorish behavior on a U.S. tour was "a joke in poor taste."

The feisty weekly, in an unusual slap at Pravda, dismissed Yeltsin's alleged drinking and shopping spree as irrelevant and criticized the Soviet press for ignoring most of what Yeltsin said on his U.S. lecture tour.

On the morning of his return to Moscow Monday, Pravda reprinted a scathing article that appeared in the Italian daily La Repubblica depicting Yeltsin as leaving behind "a wake of catastrophic prophecies, insane expenses, interviews and above all the perfume of Jack Daniels Black Label" whiskey.

Yeltsin called the article "garbage" and accused Pravda of seeking "revenge for the fact that Americans received us with admiration."

Organizers of Yeltsin's tour and reporters who covered it said the 58-year-old opposition legislator, who became a hero to many Soviets by criticizing special privileges for party and government officials, did not appear drunk during his speeches and interviews.

In its editorial, written by deputy chief editor Vitaly Tretyakov, Moscow News did not challenge the accuracy of the La Repubblica account but said Pravda failed to tell its readers whether the report was reliable.

Moscow News, which is published in English and has a limited circulation, has been at the forefront of newspapers that are promoting perestroika, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's economic reform program.

"It's difficult to take the article from La Repubblica as anything but a joke in poor taste," Moscow News said.

As it appeared in Pravda, the article described the tour as "a holiday, a stage, a bar 5,000 kilometers long" and said Yeltsin was downing two bottles of vodka and four bottles of scotch daily.

"Yeltsin was delivering lectures, gave seven interviews every day and talked with the U.S. president for 15 minutes. But in the Soviet press, only a few short articles appeared," Moscow News said.

Noting that the Soviet press practically never tells readers which of their leaders drink or about their shopping habits abroad, the editorial said:

"About Yeltsin, we now know. Pity that such a leap forward in the sphere of glasnost was made by the Soviet press not on its own, but with the help of Italian newspapers."

Moscow News said Yeltsin should be seen as a political leader and what he may have drunk or bought in the United States was not important.

During his nine-city tour, Yeltsin said Gorbachev could face a revolution if he fails to improve living conditions soon.

Yeltsin, the former Communist Party chief of Moscow, was stripped of the job almost two years ago by Gorbachev, who criticized him as politically immature and overly ambitious.

But, in a remarkable political comeback, the populist won 89 percent of the vote when he ran against an establishment candidate to represent Moscow in the Congress of People's Deputies.

A month and a half ago, he was elected along with Nobel Peace Prize laureate Andrei D. Sakahrov and a handful of other reformers to the steering committee of the first organized opposition in the Soviet parliament in almost 70 years.

Colombian Defense Minister Denies He Failed To Check On Mercenaries

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Appearing before lawmakers, the defense minister denied charges that he did not act on information that mercenaries trained paramilitary death squads for Colombia's drug bosses.

During a heated debate in the Senate on Tuesday, Gen. Oscar Botero Restrepo said he was aware of rumors that Israeli and British mercenaries were training paramilitary forces but was unable to verify the information.

The British ambassador said the Colombian government knew about British mercenaries as early as March, but did not mention Botero.

The special Senate session came after arrest warrants were issued Monday for two Israelis, former army Col. Yair Klein and civilian Arik Acek, accused of training hit squads for drug lords.

Israel has concluded an investigation into the case and the Supreme Court there has to decide what, if any, action to take. Israel and Colombia do not have an extradition treaty.

Klein and Acek are accused in Colombia of helping train civilians to carry out paramilitary operations, mostly in the Magdalena Media region of central Colombia where drug-backed death squads are said to operate.

They reportedly arrived in Colombia in August 1988 and are said to have returned to Israel sometime after the Colombian media reported on April 10 that foreign mercenaries were training Colombians.

Klein, now home in Tel Aviv, has said he trained Colombian farmers to protect themselves against leftist guerrillas and knew nothing about any links to drugs traffickers.

"I want to tell you honorable senators that since late last year, our intelligence services had knowledge of rumors circulating in the country that this type of activity was going on," Botero said. "But we were not able to verify the information." On Tuesday night, British Ambassador Richard Neilson told Colombian television: "The government of Colombia had information about British mercenaries in Colombia in March and we were in a position to help them (the government)."

Neilson said he would work to extradite to Colombia the British citizens allegedly involved.

Sen. Alberto Rojas Puyo of the opposition leftist Patriotic Union party is leading the attack on Botero.

The party alleged on April 24 that Botero was involved with Atlas Security, a Colombian company, and claimed Klein was employed by it.

Botero, who commands the country's 250,000-man army, has denied the allegation.

Rojas told the Senate, "The history of Colombia will change because the conscience of Colombians now dictates we re-evaluate the conduct of our institutions."

He said the turning point came Aug. 16, when Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, the nation's leading presidential candidate and outspoken drug foe, was assassinated. Drug-backed terrorists have been blamed for the killing.

"We Colombians were all to blame for his death because we turned our backs to reality and allowed the country to fall under the tragedy of corruption," Rojas said.

Baker Tells Soviets To Avoid Regional Wars, Save Money

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — On the eve of new high-level talks, Secretary of State James A. Baker III is advising Moscow to pull out of regional wars around the world and put the billions of dollars saved into the ailing Soviet economy.

The former treasury secretary, at a news conference Tuesday, also fired back at Democratic critics of the Bush administration's cautious foreign policy and sought to lower expectations that a date was about to be set for a superpower summit meeting.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze is due to see President Bush at the White House on Thursday. Then Baker and Shevardnadze fly to Jackson Hole, Wyo., for talks through Sunday morning.

At their last meeting in Paris in late July, Shevardnadze said, "If we prepare well and carefully, then of course the summit will take place rather soon." Baker, more cautious, said at the time that "obviously yes, at some point" a summit would take place.

At the news conference Tuesday, his first since taking over as secretary of state eight months ago, Baker was asked about a summit between Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"What I will say for you," he replied, "is that it is anticipated and intended that we have a full discussion about the possibility of a summit."

Bush said on Monday, "I feel under no rush on that subject."

The stance struck by the president and his secretary of state reinforced the cautious character of U.S. foreign policy, particularly in dealing with the Soviets and Eastern Europe.

Turning to the sagging Soviet economy, Baker said, "there are no simple or quick fixes." But he suggested the Soviets withdraw from conflicts in Central America, Cambodia, Afghanistan, Cuba, Ethiopia and elsewhere.

tributing to international stability, Baker said, "It could also save the Soviets billions of dollars that we still see spent in a disappointing pattern of support for those who fuel conflict..."

He was especially harsh about Soviet support for the Marxist government of Nicaragua.

While Gorbachev promised to end direct Soviet military aid to the Sandinistas, Baker said weapons and other supplies were being channeled to them indirectly. He apparently referred to Cuba and some East European countries.

"We think they (the Soviets) could have a significant influence on reducing (Sandinista forces) if they so chose," Baker said.

"They are spending billions of dollars in regional conflict situations that we think could be put to better use to assist the process of perestroika," he said, using the Russian word for reconstruction.

Baker rejected Democratic criticism that the Bush administration was overly cautious on arms control.

Vietnam Acknowledges Resistance Continues In Cambodia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam — Vietnam is predicting that factional fighting will continue in Cambodia after its army withdraws from the neighboring country it invaded nearly 11 years ago.

The last Vietnamese soldier is supposed to leave Cambodia within a week.

Maj. Gen. Nguyen Van Thai, chief spokesman for the Ministry of National Defense, made the tacit acknowledgment Tuesday that Vietnam had failed in its goal to wipe out Cambodian resistance.

He also claimed that Vietnam's major achievement during the war was not strategic but involved saving the Cambodian people from genocide at the hands of the Khmer Rouge.

The officer spoke at a news conference to announce the start of the last stage of Vietnam's withdrawal, begun in July 1988.

The movement will mark the end of one phase of conflict and the beginning of another in Indochina, which has not seen peace since before World War II.

Between Thursday and Tuesday, 26,000 Vietnamese soldiers are supposed to return to Vietnam, leaving behind a Cambodian government army of an estimated 50,000 regulars and 60,000 to 80,000 poorly trained militia.

Facing them will be a resistance coalition of roughly 45,000 men.

Recent reports from the Thai border indicate the fighting has heated up, especially around the gem-rich area of Pailin and in Siem Reap province. Thai corroborated the reports and claimed resistance forces recently had received "a massive shipment of weapons."

"There might be trouble and fighting might continue without an end in Cambodia," Thai said.

The first in a series of farewell parades, orchestrated by the Cambodian government, is to kick off in Siem Reap Thursday morning.

More than 500 journalists from all over the world will be in Cambodia to witness the troop movement, an action Vietnam hopes will better its international reputation. The country, one of the poorest in the world, is badly in need of Western aid, which was mostly cut off after it invaded Cambodia.

Thai denied allegations by Cambodian resistance factions that the withdrawal was a sham and Vietnamese soldiers were being disguised among the ranks of the Cambodian army.

The Rolling Stones

Even Now, They Can Start It Up

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

RALEIGH — Time stood still Saturday as the Rolling Stones gathered together more than 55,000 screaming fans.

Now pushing 50 years-old or more, the boys in the band played for nearly two and a half hours, exhausting material that spanned three decades. And they proved for any doubters the Rolling Stones still rock and roll.

For the audience it was time, maybe the last time, to see a living legend.

The times have changed, the faces aged, but the Rolling Stones still draw out the best and most colorful in crowds.

Traffic, as well as time, stood still for the Stones' show.

Two hours before the opening band, Living Colour, took the stage, the line of cars stretched more than two miles east of the stadium. Naturally, the party started in the street. Just as naturally, the beefed-up security covering the area stopped the party.

"They made us pour out nearly two cases," said one concert-goer, leaning out of the back of an over-filled truck. "But we've got more hidden."

Although parking for the show wasn't hidden, it must have been a secret.

The policeman kept the traffic moving — not to any one particular place, but they kept it moving. The correct response to "Are you here for the horse show?" was "Yes." Missing that question meant more driving and possibly a parking space more than two miles from the stadium.

The party eventually moved into the stadium compound.

Except for the ever-present concert t-shirts — most from bands other than the Rolling Stones — the crowd could have been waiting to see Wolfpack football.

Smoking barbecues dotted the parking lot, people stood in groups or milled around eating chicken and drinking beer. Instead of flags and penants supporting N.C. State football, the fans carried banners claiming allegiance to Mick Jagger and the world's greatest rock 'n roll band.

Yuppies in Volvos "did lunch" and talked on cellular phones next to teen-agers drinking beer in the back of a Pinto. Each had the Stones for their generation.

As following as intense as the Stones' produces some stark contrasts. Years ago, the yuppies were first turned on to the Stones and probably saw their first Stones show packed into the family wagon.

Now almost two generations later, they've become what their parents were and here they were parked next to a carload of young fans who weren't even born when the band released its first album in 1964.

And the sounds set this show apart from any football game.

Car stereos blasted just one band. Each stereo played a different tune, but all from 25 years of the greatest rock 'n roll band in the world — "Satisfaction" through "Miss You" and to the present with "Mixed Emotions."

A preacher even brought his cross to bear — "Repent now," and something about "rock 'n roll headonism."

The Stones faithful would have none of that. Few paid attention to the preacher's cries and made their way into the stadium without looking back.

At $30.50 per ticket — not the scalpers' price — and $3 for parking, fans already made a heavy investment in the show before Keith Richards struck the first cord on his guitar. And there was more to gather together of the Stones. T-shirts ranged in price from $20 to $35; programs cost $13; buttons and bandanas no less than $5. The crowd to get at the merchandise matched that moving through the gates.

Carter-Finley raked in its share of the profits, too. The 12-ounce cokes that sell for $1 at football games cost twice as much for the show. The pizza and nachos looked too dangerous to even ask about.

By the time Living Colour took to the massive stage, most of the 55,000 in attendance had pushed their way to a seat. But any band opening for the Rolling Stones would suffer just by proximity. The intensity of the New York rockers held as much of the audience as possible for nearly an hour.

Then it was time to wait again, but this time for the Stones.

The Stones assaulted the record-breaking stage, using every foot of it from the top of the 30-foot tower to the side stages that extended into the stands. The three video screens, hundreds of lights and smoke effects added to an already incredible musical show. Only the inflatable women towering over the stage during "Honky Tonk Woman" distracted from the band itself.

And the band played on past its new material from "Steel Wheels" and through what seemed like at least one song from every one of their 39 albums.

"Just when I thought the played every song I knew, they played another one, and I'd go: why didn't I think of that?" said one woman after the show.

And it seemed that everyone knew their Stones' lyrics. The two and a half hour show became a sing-along during the most popular tunes.

After "Satisfaction" and "Jumping Jack Flash," a fireworks display signalled the end of the show. A middle-aged man dressed in a sweater and dock shoes left the show with a smile that couldn't be pried from his face.

Then it was time to cast away the Stones.

The day after the Rolling Stones concert a delivery man moving subs in Raleigh told his own story even if he had to work the night before. A call from Carter-Finley Stadium sent 20 subs out to the stadium crew. He got a t-shirt for his tip.

Time has not yet passed the Rolling Stones by.

...And another kind of message

Picture Proclaims Greetings

Proclaim your Christmas greetings in a most unique, heart-warming way — with a handcrafted, counted cross-stitch picture. A handsome holly border surrounds a beautifully decorated "Noel" that is complete with a wreath, Christmas tree, a jolly Santa and a winsome bear.

Aida cloth and cotton floss are the materials used with an added touch of sparkling metallic thread. Finished size is 8 by 20 inches, perfectly suited for framing and warming the hearts and homes of those you love.

The popularity of counted cross-stitch seems to grow and grow. Cross-stitchers are finding endless ways to express their creativity in this beautiful and rewarding needlecraft.

The most commonly used cloth for cross-stitch projects is off-white Aida cloth. Aida cloth is an even weave cotton fabric that comes in 11-, 14- and 18-count.

Cross-stitch fabrics are usually described by their "count." Count indicates the number of stitching blocks in an inch. Even weave indicates that the cloth has the same number of squares, or count, across as up and down.

There are many other fabrics that are used beautifully for cross-stitch. Hardanger cloth in 22-count has a flat, basket weave appearance and is excellent when detail and shading are called for. Linen, Fiddler's Cloth, which gives a homespun look, and even checked gingham are all suitable for this lovely craft. No longer is ecru the sole color choice. The array of lovely pastels, brights and shades of natural is endless.

Let your imagination be your guide, keeping in mind that the cloth count determines the number of floss strands to be used. A general rule of thumb is: Cloth count of 22, 1 strand floss. Cloth count 18, 2 strand floss. Cloth count 14, 2 or 3 strands floss. Cloth count 11, 3 strands floss. Experiment and let your creativity be your guide.

Chicken Pox, Whooping Cough Vaccines Could Be Used Soon

By Malcolm Ritter
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A vaccine that would be the nation's first for chicken pox has been submitted for federal approval, and a new whooping cough vaccine with less risk of side effects may follow soon.

Chicken pox strikes more than 3 million Americans a year, mostly children. While it is generally just bothersome, a small fraction of patients suffer harm to the central nervous system or other complications such as pneumonia or bacterial infections. About 175 Americans a year die from such problems.

Some calculations suggest that given the medical costs of complications, a chicken pox vaccine can make economic sense for society as a whole.

Merck Sharpe & Dohme of West Point, Pa., in August asked the Food and Drug Administration to approve its vaccine, which Stanley Plotkin, chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics said is already used in Japan and Europe.

One question is whether a childhood inoculation will lose its effectiveness in adulthood, a particular concern because chicken pox is generally more serious when it strikes adults.

"We would all like more data" on the duration of immunity, Plotkin said. Studies have shown no problem up to 10 years after inoculation, and vaccinated people who do get chicken pox later appear to get milder cases, he said.

The vaccine contains a weakened version of the chicken pox virus, which in its natural form causes a lifelong nerve infection that can erupt into herpes zoster, commonly called shingles. Studies suggest that vaccinated people run a lower risk of later shingles than do people who had chicken pox, Plotkin said.

The standard vaccine for whooping cough, called pertussis, is given in early childhood as part of the diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis, or DTP, vaccine.

About half of children who get the DTP vaccine run a fever, with swelling or soreness at the injection site in 40 percent to 50 percent, chiefly due to the pertussis portion of the vaccine, according to one large study.

The fever can cause convulsions, usually not a serious problem but still upsetting for parents.

In contrast, recent research found that fever appeared in only about 5 percent of children vaccinated with a new "acellular" pertussis vaccine, and localized reactions were minimal, said James Cherry of the University of California, Los Angeles, School of Medicine.

Lederle Laboratories of Wayne, N.J., may be ready by early next year to ask the FDA to approve the new vaccine, a spokesman said. The immunization, which eventually would become part of the DTP, is already used in Japan, he said.

The infectious disease committee of the pediatrics academy recently urged the FDA to approve the vaccine.

Squatters Homestead In The City

By Raul Reyes
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In the world of New York real estate, Anne Edris has the deal of a lifetime: a brick-walled studio apartment that costs $50 a month.

There are, however, two main drawbacks:

1. She must share a bathroom with 14 other residents of the building.
2. The city could come by any time and tear down the building.

Edris and her neighbors are squatters in a ramshackle structure on Manhattan's Lower East Side. Before they moved in, it was a vacant shell that had reverted to city ownership.

Now, this building and dozens like it have sprung to life once again. Much as the homesteaders populated the West, urban squatters have inhabited some of the crumbling hollows of the nation's largest city, legally or illegally.

They rehabilitate the buildings, decorate their apartments, hook up to utilities, sometimes illegally, and live communally.

Edris is an aspiring artist who works in the photography department of an architectural firm. "I've always liked the idea of reclaiming abandoned buildings and I really believe in what we're doing here," she says.

The "rent" Edris pays goes into a building fund used to refurbish the building. She won the right to live in the building only after its tenants association voted her into the building, much as a co-op board would do. All tenants are required to perform structural and esthetic work on the building. Any improvements she makes on her space are up to her.

Not everyone shares Edie's enthusiasm. Mayor Edward I. Koch and other city officials are hostile. "Our basic position is that people shouldn't live in unsafe buildings," says mayoral spokesman Lee Jones. "If a building is demonstrably unsafe, it is incumbent on the city to remove the threat of danger."

The squatters, though, defend their homes tenaciously.

In May, when the city moved to demolish a building that had been occupied by squatters for nearly five years, residents attacked police guarding the demolition crew. A police car window was smashed. A woman jumped on the back of a police supervisor and began beating him. Police retreated.

The growing crowd marched to a nearby condominium building. They threw bricks and rocks through the building's window before police broke up the demonstration and made some arrests.

A court order temporarily blocking the demolition was overturned. In the middle of the night, the city's Housing Preservation and Development crew tore down the building as hundreds of police officers in riot gear stood guard.

If the wrecking ball arrives at Edris' building, she says. "We've already decided that we're going to handcuff ourselves to the fire escape rather than let them tear our house down."

To enter Edris' building, one must navigate a narrow hallway cluttered with construction debris, assorted junk, lumber, painting and cleaning supplies.

Dust and dirt filter through holes and cracks in the building's floors and ceiling, and climbing the stairs requires a keen eye for loose and missing boards.

In most apartments, much work remains to be done. But there are signs everywhere that, modest as they are, these are people's homes. And in five, maybe seven years, residents say, this building will be a source of pride.

By that time, they hope the city will allow them to legally remain in the building or allow them to earn credit for refurbishing the building and buy it at a bargain price. It's a wish Edris realizes may never come true.

Many people who squat, however, are just pleased to have a roof over their heads; ownership of the building is not a pressing concern.

Some apartments in Edris' building are clean, although there are holes in the walls and no windows. Others are filthy. They vary in size, with "tenants" in the larger apartments paying $100 a month.

Edris has removed layers of plaster to expose the brick walls of her neatly arranged, third-floor apartment. Plastic covers the ceiling to catch dirt from upstairs; the wooden floor is faded but clean.

A portable stereo is set to a jazz station as Edris shows where she will erect a wall to divide her apartment and create a studio work space.

The apartment is twice the size of her old one, and comes at one-tenth the cost. Still, she is concerned about her parents' reaction when they come to visit from Bluffton, Ind. "They'll probably be shocked at first and be glad they don't live here, but they'll still support me," she says.

Next door, Rico Martinez and Noel Faulkner are installing support beams in a large open room.

"Where the rats were living is where we live," says Martinez, a trade school student in his 30s. "The city tells us to go to the homeless shelters. Hell, let them stay there, I've been there. We're safer here. We take care of each other here."

Why is Faulkner working so hard on this building? "You have to give back. You can't just walk around saying the city stinks, crime stinks. You have to put something in," says Faulkner, an actor.

"Or you can call it working-it-off karma," he says, laughing. "It makes up for all the pot we smoked in the '60s."

A visitor asks if the building has running water and electricity.

"Yeah, but it's not legal yet," Edris says. "We have running water. We have a bathroom and a shower and we're putting in others so that we can have a bathroom on every floor."

At the moment, the only bathroom is on the bottom floor and is shared by the 15 people living in the building.

Residents and their friends inevitably include carpenters, electricians, plumbers and construction workers who can make water hook-ups and power connections — with or without permission from utility firms or the city.

A notice in one "squat" tells residents what jobs they must do and reminds them to take their trash to a public garbage can on the corner.

At another, a bulletin board notice warns, "Do you want to live in the dark?" and tells each resident to ante up or the power company, Consolidated Edison, will shut off the electricity.

To some, Con Ed's willingness to service an abandoned building might be surprising. "We're customers. We pay," says one squatter, who declined to give his name. "Everyone's entitled to have electricity."

He's right. Under the state's Home Energy Fair Practices Act, Con Ed extends service when requested and certain criteria are met, says Martha Liipfert, a spokeswoman for the utility.

"If there's a meter there, we can't really turn down service as long as there are no safety problems," Liipfert says.

The company will even provide service on a communal basis, billing the building and allowing the residents to split the cost, Liipfert says.

Others do not pay for power, choosing instead to hook up to a nearby street lamp. In the often anarchic world of the squats, all is fair.

The Lower East Side, which has seen wave upon wave of immigrants move in and out, is now a home to blacks, Hispanics, Eastern Europeans, drug dealers and addicts, and a mix of punks, motorcycle gangs, artists and other fringe elements.

But a new influx of well-heeled residents has heightened tensions. Residents claim the city wants to bring down old buildings so restaurants and co-ops acceptable to yuppies can be built in their place.

When police tried to enforce a curfew at nearby Tompkins Square Park last summer, a riot ensued. Residents claimed the curfew was part of an effort to sanitize the neighborhood so it is acceptable to the affluent.

Buildings near Tompkins Square still bear spray-painted messages: "Die Yuppie Scum," "Need a home? Take One. Squat," and "Yuppies Go Home."

In July, police and park police evicted homeless people living in Tompkins Square Park and tore down tents and lean-tos. They were enforcing a new city law forbidding structures to be built in parks.

Angry residents retaliated by burning police barricades; police in riot gear arrested 31 people. Several days later, protesters marched into the park and defiantly pitched a tent. More people were arrested.

The city denies it is engaged in social engineering. Vahe Teryakian, spokesman for the city Department of Buildings, says evictions and demolitions don't occur unless the city has received a specific complaint and an inspection determines a building is unsafe.

Squatters, however, say their buildings are safe, having been inspected by friends who are architects and engineers.

George Marco, 31, will dispute any contention that the work he and his friends have done on their building near Tompkins Square is substandard.

"We put in all new stairways, did the structural work and did most of the plumbing in the building," says Marco, an electrical worker. "We did all the electric. Everything in the building has been brought up to code. Nothing has been scrimped on."

"It was a city-owned building that had been abandoned by private owners about 15 years ago. It sat there empty and deteriorated. We salvaged that building and created homes."

Marco's fourth-floor apartment is no exemplar of good housekeeping. It is a haphazard aggregation of unfinished plumbing and carpentry projects.

The pride on his face can't be suppressed, however, when he shows his visitors the bathroom, complete with tub, shower, sink and commode, that he installed. "Got hot and cold water," he beams.

The homeless and urban pioneers are not the only squatters. "The biggest squatting efforts are by the drug users, especially in the Lower East Side," says Peter Smith, head of the Partnership for the Homeless.

But Marco defends his friends and neighbors and the hundreds of others who are fixing walls, stringing wire, rebuilding stairways and joining pipes at dilapidated buildings all across the Lower East Side.

"Sure we've had problems with drugs, but this has been going on all over the country, all over the place," Marco says. "But to single out people who are homesteading buildings and classifying them as being drug addicts is totally biased and totally wrong."

Restoration Of WWII Bomber Prompts Student Pilot To Set The Record Straight

By G.G. Riggsby
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Daniel Rossman says he and four other crewmen aboard a B-25 bomber that crashed into Lake Greenwood 45 years ago weren't buzzing a bevy of bathing beauties.

"Do you think that the young ladies of 1944 were standing around on that west bank waving their bathing suits?" Rossman asked. "It wasn't done in that day."

Still, the bathing-beauties story circulated for years as aviation enthusiasts worked to salvage the bomber from the lake.

The bomber nicknamed "Skunkie" finally was pulled from the lake Aug. 5, 1983, and after six years of work, has been restored. The restoration prompted Rossman to set the record straight.

According to Rossman, the plane left the Greenville Army Air Force Base June 6, 1944, or D-Day — the day the Allied forces invaded Normandy, France. An instructor who was aboard was showing Rossman, a student pilot, how to handle the plane with one engine out.

The instructor "decided he had enough of that," and restarted the engine, Rossman recalled in a recent telephone interview from his

Atlanta home. "We took a slight tour of the countryside and wound up coming down the lake at a fairly low level."

The instructor was flying the plane over the lake. Rossman said he did not realize how low they were until he noticed someone standing in a rowboat, fishing. "It struck me we were eye-to-eye," he said.

Just then, "Bang, it happened." The propellers hit the water and curled back.

The plane landed in the water, floated a few minutes, then turned over and sank. Two crewmen swam to shore and the others were rescued by someone in a boat.

The instructor was court-martialed. The military said Rossman, a second lieutenant, should have been able to stop the instructor from crashing the plane and found him guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer. He also was fined and a permanent notation made in his record.

The official report of the crash makes no mention of the sunbathers.

Women "had nothing to do with it," Rossman said.

Rossman said he thinks he would be more severely punished if he had already served in Europe, as the instructor had. But as a student pilot, he was still a valuable commodity. He went on to serve about a year in Europe as a B-25 pilot.

After the plane was pulled from the lake it sat outside the Greenwood Airport and deteriorated until it was transported to an old hangar at Columbia Owens Downtown Airport Sept. 19, 1984.

Volunteers and workers at Midlands Aviation worked to restore the aircraft, which Rossman estimated was worth $500,000 — not to flying condition, but as a display. The restoration, which cost about $20,000, was finished in early August and a home is now being sought for the plane.

Rossman read accounts of efforts by a Navy salvage team to pull the bomber from Lake Greenwood and contacted the coordinators guiding the recovery. They invited him to South Carolina to see the plane. He made two trips.

He said he was given a hero's welcome on both visits.

"They've convinced me I'm a hero, instead of a kind of minor war criminal, which is the Air Force's view of the thing," Rossman said.

Group Strives To Help Bereaved Pet Owners

By Michael Wilson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — Because saying farewell to a cherished pet may be tougher than some people think, a group has been started for bereaved pet owners.

Although some people may consider a pet's death a trivial matter, many pet owners have found that it is not much easier to lose a long-cherished dog or cat than a close friend or relative, says Judy Campbell, who started the support group.

Ms. Campbell, who runs Pet Services in nearby Cockeysville, a non-veterinary business that provides such services as breed consultations, pet photography and obedience classes, is charging no fee for the weekly support group.

Groups like Campbell's are springing up in increasing numbers across the United States. There are believed to be about a dozen pet bereavement organizations, many of which are operated by university veterinary schools.

"Our society doesn't legitimize grieving for your pets," Ms. Campbell says in explaining her motivation for forming the group. "Our culture supports the grief that you go through when a relative or friend dies. But when your pet dies ... a lot of people run into 'Oh, you'll get over it. It's just a dog. Why don't you go buy another one?'"

Dr. Allan Frank, a Baltimore veterinarian, says that he keeps Pet Services' support group brochures in his office and often mentions the existence of the service "to practically

Some Scripture Are Critical Of Drinking Alcohol

Dear Abby: I am very disappointed in your response to "Can't Believe It" in which you say the Bible approves of people drowning their sorrows in alcohol. The biggest problem with interpretation of Scripture is in taking verses out of context.

The section referred to was for those "ready to perish." Abby, back in biblical times, they did not have Demerol or morphine to alleviate extreme pain.

You should have cited some of the many passages in Scripture that are critical of drinking. — Daughter Of An Alcoholic

Dear Daughter: You are right. I should have. And now I will, with apologies for my tardiness:

Proverbs 20:1 — Wine is a mocker and beer a brawler; whoever is led by them is not wise.

Proverbs 23:20 — Do not join those who drink too much wine.

Proverbs 23:29-35 — Who has woe? Who has sorrow? Who has strife? Who has needless bruises? Who has bloodshot eyes? Those who linger over wine, who go to sample bowls of mixed wine. Do not gaze at wine when it is red, when it sparkles in the cup, when it goes down smoothly! In the end it bites like a snake and poisons like a viper. Your eyes will see strange sights and your mind imagine confusing things. You will be like one sleeping on the high seas, lying on top of the rigging. "They hit me," you will say, "but I'm not hurt! They beat me, but I don't feel it! When will I wake up so I can find another drink?"

Ephesians 5:18 — Do not get drunk on wine, which leads to debauchery. Instead, be filled with the Spirit.

Dear Abby: Here's how my husband and I solved the problem of writing thank-you notes for our wedding gifts.

We sat down together and wrote a thank-you note after we opened each gift. The rule was, we couldn't open a gift until we had written the thank-you note for the gift we have just opened. We also addressed and stamped the envelope.

We got the job done together, and it was a lot of fun. — Julie Rose, Sterling Heights, Mich.

Dear Julie: An ideal solution.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Aren't you glad you aren't married to this newlywed in Seattle? Read on:

Dear Abby: I must take issue with your suggestion that husbands should share in writing the thank-you notes for wedding gifts.

I understand that all department stores have a "bridal registry." This is a long list of everything the bride has already selected: china, glassware, silver, household appliances — the works.

I personally would be content to use the discount store dishes and silverware (stainless) I used before I was married.

Where is the "groom's registry"? I would have been thrilled to go to my local hardware store and pick out a power tool, a set of screwdrivers or a garden rake as a wedding present.

I would be more than willing to write thank-you notes for our wedding gifts had there been anything for me. As it happens, my wife received most of the things she selected. I say, let her write the thank-you notes! — Newlywed In Seattle

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Universal Sweeps Box Office

By John Horn
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — "Sea of Love," "Uncle Buck" and "Parenthood" gave Universal Studios a sweep of the top three spots at the nation's box offices last weekend.

The last time a studio did that was in January 1987, when Paramount grabbed the top spots with "Critical Condition," "Star Trek IV" and "The Golden Child."

The fall movie season is off to a strong start, with the top 16 titles collecting $37.2 million, $10 million more than the top 18 movies a year ago.

Led by the Al Pacino-Ellen Barkin romantic thriller "Sea of Love," with a record fall opening of $10 million, Universal's films accounted for nearly 50 percent of the over-all domestic theater gate, the studio said. Universal has held the No. 1 box-office spot for seven-straight weeks.

Finishing in second last weekend with $4.1 million in ticket sales was "Uncle Buck," a comedy starring John Candy as a maladroit babysitter. In third was the family comedy "Parenthood," with Steve Martin and Jason Robards, on grosses of $3.7 million.

"When Harry Met Sally..." the story of best friends who become lovers, landed in fourth with $2.7 million. In fifth was the martial-arts adventure "Kickboxer," which netted $2.6 million.

The action sequel "Lethal Weapon 2" was next, with $2.206 million. In seventh, with $2.15 million, was the underwater suspense tale "The Abyss."

Rounding out the top 10 were "sex, lies and videotape" with $1.75 million, "Turner and Hooch" on $1.66 million, and "Batman" with $1.5 million.

"Batman" has now grossed more than $243 million, passing "Raiders of the Lost Ark" to become the fifth biggest smash in Hollywood history.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Co.:

1. "Sea of Love," Universal, $10 million weekend gross, 1,246 screens, $8,040 per screen, $10 million total gross, one week in release.
2. "Uncle Buck," Universal, $4.1 million, 1,817 screens, $2,270 per screen, $45.88 million, five weeks.
3. "Parenthood," Universal, $3.7 million, 1,392 screens, $2,680 per screen, $74.5 million, seven weeks.
4. "When Harry Met Sally..." Columbia, $2.65 million, 1,171 screens, $2,260 per screen, $75.3 million, 10 weeks.
5. "Kickboxer," Cannon, $2.6 million, 973 screens, $2,677 per screen, $7.9 million, two weeks.
6. "Lethal Weapon 2," Warner Bros., $2.206 million, 1,393 screens, $1,583 per screen, $137.9 million, 11 weeks.

7. "The Abyss," 20th Century Fox, $2.15 million, 1,361 screens, $1,580 per screen, $47.6 million, six weeks.
8. "sex, lies and videotape," Miramax, $1.75 million, 397 screens, $4,411 per screen, $13.2 million, seven weeks.
9. "Turner & Hooch," Disney, $1.66 million, 1,371 screens, $1,214 per screen, $62 million, eight weeks.
10. "Batman," Warner Bros., $1.5 million, 1,080 screens, $1,363 per screen, $243.1 million, 13 weeks.

Raffi Builds His Career On Treating Children And Adults With Respect

By Sull Sussman
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — In an obscure suburban rehearsal hall, Raffi prepared to return to his pre-school audience after a one-year sabbatical took the children's entertainer away from the grind of concert tours.

He and his four-piece band ran through every chord and gesture certain to delight a young crowd, from "Shake My Sillies Out" to the nonsense words that turn "apples and bananas" into "oopies and banoonos."

Raffi has sold more than 4 million records and created a one-man cottage industry of children's books and videos based on the principle that little kids — and their parents — can be treated with respect.

He is slowly returning to work. Instead of the usual string of concerts, he has scheduled only six shows in September, four of them in Canada and two at New York's Carnegie Hall.

Then Raffi, who uses just his first name, plans to spend the fall recording his first album that won't be aimed exclusively to an audience five years old or younger.

The attempt to broaden his audience allows greater vocabulary and more difficult concepts than in his previous work, but doesn't mean he's not happy with his role as a children's entertainer.

The sabbatical, he explained en route to his office after the rehearsal finished for the day, was spent mostly at home in Toronto and consisted of "no concerts, no interviews, and no thinking about a next record."

"It took me out of the treadmill, out of the career demands," the 41-year-old folksinger said. "It allowed me to listen to my own inner voice again."

His trademark beard still intact and dressed in T-shirt and casual pants for the practice session, Raffi said he wanted to take the time to examine what he'd done recently and take stock of where he was.

"For me, I just had to really examine all this touring and the tremendous amount of travel it took," he said. In 1987 and 1988, he chalked up 200 sold-out concerts in 70 cities across the United States and Canada.

He sorted through fan mail, some of it with words and some solely of scrawls and pictures, as he settled into his comfortable office. Little of this could have been anticipated when he turned to children's entertaining in 1974, just six years after his family emigrated to Canada from Egypt.

"I couldn't conceive where this would go whatsoever," he recalled of his start. "It was literally not knowing what you were doing."

He recorded his first album of children's songs, "Singable Songs for the Very Young," in 1976, but didn't stop thinking of himself as a folksinger who happened to do some children's music on the side until two years later.

"It took me that long to discover the true value of the career that opened," he said.

Now, with eight albums, half a million Raffi books in print and two concert videos out, Raffi has discovered what larger corporations in children's entertainment have long known, that a completely new pre-school audience is ready every few years.

That means all his merchandise can perpetually stay in book and record stores.

Movie Spoofs Film Industry Deal Making

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The Hollywood impresarios in "The Big Picture" crochet in the office to unwind, and think of a telephone busy signal as a movie deal gone bad.

Yet as wacky as their world may be, it mirrors the frenzied deal-making industry the movie attempts to spoof.

"Everything that happens in this movie has a basis in reality," said director Christopher Guest, who also co-wrote the story with producer Michael Varhol. Guest, Varhol and Michael McKean wrote the screenplay.

But bringing "The Big Picture" to the big screen was no small task. It took six years for Guest, an alumnus of TV's "Saturday Night Live" and the co-star and co-writer of the spoof rock documentary "This Is Spinal Tap," to get the movie released. It also was his debut as a director.

Originally developed for Paramount Pictures, the film's script was bought by David Puttnam before he resigned as chairman and chief executive officer of Columbia Pictures. Although his successor at Columbia, Dawn Steel, abandoned a number of films she inherited, "The Big Picture" was not one of them.

"When I was first working on the script in 1983, and started pitching this to studios to get a script deal, they were invariably queasy about the idea, about whether people would be interested in the subject," Guest said.

A Disappointing Western Previews Tonight On ABC

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Gather round the electronic campfire, buckaroos, and ABC will show you a preview tonight of its new Old West series about the gallant lads of the Pony Express, "The Young Riders."

On second thought, read a good western instead, maybe something like "He Rode Tall in the Saddle Until His Blisters Broke."

For tonight's "The Young Riders" — the series starts its regular Thursday night run tomorrow — is so mundane and cliché-ridden that teen-agers who see it may say, "So this is how the West was wan."

Occasionally exhibiting beautiful sunrises and sunsets, it purports to tell how the Pony Express dashed the mail by horseback from St.

Joseph, Mo., to Sacramento, Calif. This was back in the halcyon days before fax machines ruined everything.

Our young riders — only orphans need apply as riders — risk hostile Indians, brigands, the elements and Nielsen families to get the mail through. They are five in number, and the show centers on "The Kid," a decent, rugged sort essayed by Ty Miller.

The others are a varied lot. One swaggers, is tough and eager to use his pistol. Another is a halfbreed; he wears an earring. Another can hear but can't speak due to a childhood disease that left him bald.

Here, he is so cocky that Teaspoon, the grizzled old plainsman who is teaching survival skills to the new riders, is moved to ask, "You think you're pretty hot stuff, don't you?" "Yup," young Cody says.

Teaspoon fixes him with a steady gaze. "Cowpies," he sneers.

Well, even though the fine actor Anthony Zerbe plays Teaspoon, this retort indicates a minor flaw in the show, such as an awful script. An awful script sometimes means there will be more of the same, which does not bode well for the future of this series.

True, there is a tiny surprise in tonight's premiere. Lou, the fifth young rider, proves in one regard to be in violation of Pony Express rules, which prompts The Kid to warn: "You won't fool people forever."

Opening lead: Five of ♦
 Once in a while we decide to play in a duplicate pair event. And many is the time we swear we will never do it again. This hand will help explain why.

Like almost every other pair in the event, we reached a contract of four spades. Unlike many of the other pairs, we received an unhelpful diamond lead. As you can see from the diagram, a heart lead would allow dummy's queen to win, providing another entry and, as the cards lie, 12 tricks are easy after the trump finesse wins, but the hook in clubs loses.

The diamond lead, however, means declarer has only one entry to the table. We won in hand, crossed to the ace of diamonds and ran the jack of spades. When that won, we would have had no problem at rubber bridge. Repeat the spade finesse as often as necessary, draw the trumps and concede a club trick—making five-odd if the spade finesse really is a winner.

At duplicate, especially in a good field, you have a problem. West could be holding up the king of spades, and it could be the club king that is onside, not the spade monarch. We thought we could cater to that by leading the jack of clubs next, dropping the ten from hand. If that lost, we could still get back to the nine of clubs to repeat the spade finesse.

Not only did the finesse lose, but the roof fell in. West returned a club for East to ruff, and back came a heart. We had already lost two tricks, and as the cards lay there was no way we could avoid losing a trump trick and a heart. Needless to say, we were the only pair with a minus score on the board!

Ode To Tonsils

By Valerie Vincent

For those of you with your tonsils in.
You'll know that this is true.
They sometimes hurt you really bad
And make you feel down and blue.

When you eat things
You feel like the path's all clogged up,
You can't swallow food
And can hardly drink what's in your cup.

When they act up real bad,
I just lay around and pout.
I think of what it would be like
If I had them taken out.

They get really swollen
And then get kind of red.
Your glands start to pulse
And so does your head.

Then the swelling goes down
And you're cleared in your head.
You can eat what you want
And get out of your bed.

Valerie Vincent, 14, a student at J.H. Rose High School wins this week's writing contest.

Birds Of All Kinds

By Mary Kathryn Swope

There are many kinds of birds. They can be blue, red and yellow. Some birds we know have names like cardinal, blue jay and robin. Some birds can fly. All birds have wings. Almost all birds can sing.

Birds that sing are called songbirds. Songbirds sing very pretty songs.

The owl eats mice and other small animals. The owl is nocturnal. That means the owl sleeps in the day and looks for food at night.

There is also a bird called the woodpecker. The woodpecker has a different way to find food. He looks for something made of wood. Then he pecks a hole in it. He tries to find an insect to eat.

Birds are very nice.

Mary Kathryn Swope, 8, a student at Eastern School receives special mention.

Cat Care

By Amy Mozingo

My cats' names are Missy and Fluffy. They have a good master. Your cats need water and food. Be sure your cat has plenty of fresh, clean water to drink.

Take your cat to the veterinarian for check-ups. Fix your cat a nice place to sleep. Take your cat outside for a walk. He needs fresh air to be healthy. Most of all, your cat needs lots of love. He will be happy if you do all of these things.

Amy Mozingo, 7, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter

By Aaron Brinn

Jim grew up in Hertford, N.C. on a small farm in the same neighborhood as my dad. For my birthday, I got a baseball with his autograph on it. He gave us one of his gloves personally.

When he was in high school, he went to Perquimans County High School.

My dad and "Catfish" went to the same high school together. My dad is older than "Catfish". My dad played on the Perquimans baseball team and so did "Catfish". One day while "Catfish" was playing, a scout was watching him from the stands. He asked "Catfish" to sign a contract. He played for the A's and got a lot of money. Then he started playing for the N.Y. Yankees.

"Catfish" and my dad loved to fish. My dad and "Catfish" farmed, too.

"Catfish" won the Cy Young award. He was the highest paid player in baseball's history. "Catfish" is my favorite baseball player and he always will be.

Aaron Brinn, 10, a student at Elmhurst School receives special mention.

My Dad

By Svati Singla

My dad is special to me. I am going to tell you what he does to be special. He teaches me the five important things of life: don't steal, don't lie, don't take drugs, respect elders and work hard in life.

Everyday he packs my lunch with lots of love. He helps me with my homework in a very sweet way. He doesn't let me go off the path in education. He reminds me the value of education. He encourages me to be a good student.

He guides me toward what path to follow in the future. He teaches me right things so I won't be behind in school. He puts me in special classes so I can learn more.

He spends time with me with laughter and love. He watches TV with me so we can laugh together. When I feel blue, he cheers me up in a unique way. When I go on a trip without my dad, I don't have any fun. My dad is the most special person to me. I love him very much. My dad will always be my guide and teacher to tell me between right and wrong.

Svati Singla, 8, a student at South Greenville School receives special mention.

Pitt County

Pitt County is located in the coastal plains section of eastern North Carolina. It is in a diamond-like shape approximately 30 miles long at its longest point and 36 miles wide at its widest point. Pitt County covers 650 square miles and has an elevation from near sea level in the eastern part of the county to 124 feet above sea level in the western part.

The climate is fairly mild with an average yearly temperature of 60 degrees. Winters often include light snows and summers are usually warm and damp. Pitt County's climate makes it a generally good place for growing farm crops. The county's land is rolling with few hills but generally the land drains well, usually toward the Tar River.

The Tar River flows from a westerly direction toward the Pamlico Sound to the east. The river almost cuts Pitt County in half.

Lyndi Morreale, 9, a student at Wintergreen School receives special mention.

The Lowly Fig Battles For Respect

By Carole Sugarman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

FRESNO, Calif. — Gary Jue's biggest competition is prunes. Even this is a tough contest to win if you sell figs.

As vice president of industrial sales and technical services for Valley Fig Growers, the country's largest processor of figs, Jue knows how hard it is to glamorize the homely dried fruit.

"Fig consumption has been flat for the past 10 years," he laments.

Figs may not have been around when looks were handed out; neither will this city receive honors for urban beauty. It is fitting, then, that virtually all of the dried figs in this country are processed within a 10-mile radius of here.

All of those dried figs are also grown here in the San Joaquin Valley, whose fertile floor is blanketed with fallen fruit.

The figs, already losing moisture, will be further dried on trays in the sun or in dehydrators. Since all figs do not ripen, dry and fall simultaneously, fresh figs — plucked ripe from the trees — are also being harvested now.

Most of the dried figs will find their way to Valley Fig Growers' processing plant, a co-operative of 55 growers that packages dried figs under the Blue Ribbon and Old Orchard labels and for Sun-Maid, its sister co-operative. Valley is also where a host of processed fig products is made, including the fig paste for the famous Fig Newton cookie.

In the company's conference room, Jue shows a promotional film entitled "The Dried Fig: The Nearly Perfect Fruit" and then conducts a fig-and-tell show.

The three major varieties of figs, Jue explains, are the black mission (small and jet black), calimyrna (larger, nutlike and a descendant of the Turkish Smyrna) and the Adriatic (less distinctive and primarily used for manufacturing into fig paste). Figlets, the firm's largest-selling item, are miniature missions.

Calimyrnas are the only fig trees that require pollination. Several years ago a National Geographic Magazine cover story, "The Wasp that Plays Cupid to a Fig," began: "I have a cure for that sometime feeling that you're getting nowhere. Spend in a day in California's San Joaquin Valley with a lady wasp, whose frustrations will make yours look pale by comparison."

The female wasp's frustrations, it turns out, are primarily man-made: Living inside male (caprifig) trees, female wasps lay their eggs in his seeds. In the spring, however, the pregnant females are drafted into service by fig growers who transport them to female (calimyrna) fig trees, where they are hung in baskets.

Homely Dried Fruit Wasn't Around When Good Looks Were Handed Out

There, the wasps fly around searching for a place to lay their broods. Because of nature's differences, however, females can't lay eggs in female seeds. Exhausted from their unsuccessful trek, they die. In the process, however, pollen they have been carrying on their bodies and wings scatters on the small green calimyrna and fertilizes it, causing the fig to grow.

Once harvested and dried, figs reach Valley Fig Growers' plant, where they are washed and steamed to add moisture and palatability. "You'd have to have really tough teeth" to eat them as — is, explains Jue. At this point, the calimyrnas may be gassed with sulfur dioxide, which postpones darkening and extends their shelf life by 50 percent.

Then they travel in armies down conveyor belts, where they are sorted by staffers trained to recognize scars, shrivels, discoloration or hard caps-sunburnt figs with tough skins. The imperfect fruit will be used for manufacturing; the prettiest figs are reserved for whole consumption.

Good sorters, said Jue, are fast at detecting defects. "We monitor their reject stream," he says, as two women in hairnets and aqua-colored rubber gloves pluck figs from a conveyor belt and toss them into defect bins.

In fact, the Dried Fruit and Tree Nut Association of California runs a fig school to train employees in the fine points of fig sorting.

In what could be dubbed the "Newton" room, modified meat grinders churn the dried fruit into a thick paste. Fig bar manufacturers buy the raw paste, then add corn sweeteners and other ingredients before they bake them into fig bars. The major fig bar manufacturers request custom-blended pastes, consisting of varying percentages of the three types of figs, explains Jue. A few use just straight mission figs, he added.

Aside from making the paste that ends up in Nabisco's Fig Newtons, Valley Fig Growers manufactures the fig paste base for spin-off bars made by Lance, Sunshine, Keebler, Little Debbie and a handful of other cookie manufacturers.

Valley Fig Growers also makes fig concentrate in a steamy room filled with huge steel tanks and the intense aroma of figs. If there were such a thing as fig perfume, it would be bottled here. Mission figs are cooked in the tanks with hot, bubbling water, then strained into a silken syrup and evaporated into a concentrate.

The resulting concoction is sold to cereal companies such as Kellogg's, which uses it as an ingredient in All-Bran, or to bakeries for use as a sweetener in breads and muffins. Tobacco companies buy it as a flavoring for chewing tobacco.

Then there are fig nuggets, an extrusion of fig paste and binders, which are used to dot baked goods, or cold cereals, such as Kellogg's Mueslix. The nuggets are also available coated with strawberry, raspberry or blueberry flavorings.

Last but not least, Valley Fig Growers manufactures fig powder, a high-fiber ingredient used in drink mixes and tablets made by the health food industry.

This product diversification is obviously an attempt to increase the use of figs, whose consumption has steadily decreased over the years. A trend attributed largely to a reduction in acreage, fig consumption dropped from a measly third of a pound per capita in 1953 to a fifth of a pound in 1987.

And ironically, when the powerful beef and egg industries are spending millions of dollars to convince Americans that their commodities really aren't so unhealthy after all, figs — naturally rich in fiber, potassium and calcium — have a yearly ad budget of only $400,000. Even the prune industry spends more than $4 million a year promoting its product.

"We can't go into four-color ads. We can't go on nationwide TV. We can't have dancing figs. It's a hard battle," says Ron Klamm, manager of the California Fig Advisory Board.

Klamm, who describes consumers' feelings about figs as a "love-hate relationship," says that the board has been promoting its product by distributing free fig "goodie bags" at professional conventions such as the Submarine Society, giving away Super Bowl tickets to the retailer with the best fig display, and sending brochures lauding the dietary attributes of figs to physicians.

In addition, figs are sold to the Agriculture Department for use in the school lunch program. At first, the school food-service directors said "what do I do with these blankety-blank things?" "said Klamm. This year, however, they wanted to know if they would be getting more.

In what may be a new twist to mystery meat, a food service director from Florida puts chopped figs in meat loaf, according to Klamm. Another has been very successful at getting kids to eat them. Klamm reports. "But that was only after she called them 'Texas raisins.'"

Here then, are some recipes using Texas raisins.

GRILLED FRESH FIGS AND PANCETTA SALAD

This recipe is adapted from an appetizer served at Tra Vigne, a restaurant in a vineyard in the Napa Valley. Since the grilling time is so short, it makes sense to prepare it when other grilled foods are being cooked. The mascarpone sauce is a nice touch, but is not crucial.

Fresh figs can be difficult to find — unless you have your own fig tree — but the California crop should be available periodically now at specialty stores.

For The Vinaigrette:

- ½ bunch basil
- ¼ cup olive oil
- 1 cup lemon juice
- 1 tsp. balsamic vinegar
- 2 shallots, minced
- Freshly cracked black pepper and coarse salt to taste

For The Mascarpone Sauce:

- ¼ cup mascarpone
- 3 tbsps. milk
- 2 tbsps. finely chopped basil
- 1½ tbsps. lemon juice
- Pinch salt and pepper

For The Salad:

- 8 fresh black mission figs
- 8 thin slices pancetta
- Mixture of greens such as arugula, chicory and radicchio

To make basil oil, add basil and red pepper flakes to oil and infuse for at least 1 hour, preferably longer (up to a day is best). Drain basil and pepper from oil and combine with lemon juice, vinegar, shallots, pepper and salt.

To make mascarpone sauce, whip mascarpone on a slow speed with an electric mixer and add milk, basil and lemon juice until sauce coats the back of a spoon. Season with salt and pepper.

Wrap each piece of pancetta around a fig and skewer. Grill over a hot fire for 20 to 25 seconds on a side, just long enough to render out some of the fat from the pancetta. The figs should still be cool on the inside.

Toss greens lightly with vinaigrette, set grilled figs

(See FIGS, D2)

Try Carob To Avoid Caffeine-Laden Chocolate

Dear Readers: There have been several caffeine-related questions recently. I've tried to answer the questions and them summarize a few points about caffeine.

Q. What is the calorie content of carob? I've been trying to avoid chocolate because of its caffeine and fat. — J.K., Greenville

A. Carob, which is an alternative to chocolate, tastes a little like chocolate. It comes from an evergreen tree grown in the Mediterranean. It is basically a flavoring agent, so you don't eat it as a single ingredient.

Carob is naturally sweet so recipes generally don't call for too much added sugar or sweetener.

Carob is a carbohydrate, so it does give calories, however. The calorie and fat content of the candies or cookies or breads is what's important. For example, a ½-cup serving of Haagen-dazs carob ice cream has 260 calories, but 153 of these calories come from the 17 grams of fat used to make the ice cream.

At the other end of the calorie list is a carob-coated fruit and nut stick which has 25 calories and only one gram of fat. That fat comes from several of the ingredients in the stick, like cashews, peanuts, palm kernel oil, sesame seeds and sunflower seeds.

Folks who want to avoid the caffeine in chocolate may choose carob-flavored foods. It is generally thought that carob has no caffeine. Studies done at Lorrna Linda University in 1984 documented small amounts of caffeine and theobromine in some products like carob-coated peanuts, carob-coated raisins, carob malt balls and carob chips.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

The amounts were far less than similar chocolate products. But they were not 100 percent caffeine free.

As with all foods, each ingredient has its own identity that is changed by the other ingredients it works with to make a food product.

Q. Is there caffeine in white chocolate? — P.E., Greenville

A. It's tough finding good information about the growing popular white chocolate. White chocolate is a confection made from sugar, cocoa, butter, milk and vanillin.

The white chocolate has had the cocoa mass removed which gives the brown color to chocolate. While it appears that there is negligible caffeine in white chocolate, there still is theobromine.

Theobromine is a xanthine-like stimulant similar to caffeine. Some people who experience jitters, restlessness or other effects from caffeine also experience these effects with theobromine.

But be aware! There are five grams of fat in a ½-ounce serving of baking white chocolate. If you are watching your weight and/or fat intake, see how much white chocolate is in the product before you merrily gorge away.

Dear Readers: You continue to read conflicting information about the role of caffeine from food and your health. Caffeine is a mild stimulant. The amount of caffeine in a single serving of beverage or food varies greatly.

Caffeine-containing food and drinks have been linked to ulcers and heartburn, heart disease, cancer, fibrocystic breast disease, growth stunting and other central nervous system effects.

The best general advice is to consume in moderation. Ask your family doctor if you have a special condition or needs.

Contact Dr. Kolasa at the Department of Family Medicine, East Carolina University, or in care of The Daily Reflector.

atop greens and drizzle with mascarpone sauce. Remaining dressing can be stored in the refrigerator for up to three days. Makes 4 servings.

PORK CHOP AND FRESH FIG SAUTE

- 4 lean pork loin chops, trimmed
- 1 tbsp. each butter and oil
- 2 shallots, chopped
- 1/2 cup sweet red vermouth

Pour in vermouth and rosemary, scraping up brown bits. Raise heat and cook until vermouth begins to boil. Add fig quarters and cook for about 30 seconds, just until heated through. Pour sauce over chops and serve. Makes 4 servings.

MAPLE FIG JAM MUFFINS

- For The Jam:
- 1 cup dried calimyrna or mission figs
  - 2 cups water
  - 1/4 cup plus 2 tbsps. pure maple syrup
- For The Muffins:
- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
  - 1/2 cup whole-wheat flour
  - 1/4 tsp. salt
  - 1/4 cup sugar
  - 2 tps. baking powder
  - 3/4 tsp. cinnamon
  - 1/2 tsp. allspice
  - 1/4 tsp. each ginger and nutmeg
  - 2 eggs
  - 1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
  - 3/4 cup skim or low-fat milk
  - 1/2 cup chopped pecans

Clip stems from figs and grind in a food processor or chop finely. Place figs and water in a saucepan and boil until water is absorbed, about 20 minutes. Add maple syrup and cook another 10 minutes, or until mixture is thick.

In a bowl, sift together flours, salt, sugar, baking powder and spices. In another bowl, beat eggs well and combine with margarine or butter and milk. Pour liquid mixture into dry ingredients and stir only enough to incorporate. Do not overbeat.

Spoon batter into well-greased or paper-lined muffin tins, filling tins just slightly less than halfway. Spoon a generous tablespoon of fig jam over batter and cover each with remaining batter. Sprinkle tops of muffins with pecans. Bake in a pre-heated 400° oven for 15 to 18 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted in the center of a muffin comes out clean. Serve hot and spread with remaining fig jam, if desired. Leftover fig jam can be spread on cinnamon raisin toast, waffles or pancakes or stuffed into baked apples or sweet potatoes. Makes 12.

CHICKEN WITH BULGUR, GINGER AND FIGS

3/4 lb. boneless, skinless chicken breasts

- 2 tbsps. vegetable oil
- 2 scallions, chopped
- 1 tsp. grated fresh ginger root
- 1 tsp. minced garlic
- 6 dried calimyrna figs, quartered, or black mission figs, halved
- 1/2 cup bulgur
- 1 1/2 cups orange juice
- Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Cut chicken breasts into a large dice. Saute in 1 table-spoon hot oil until golden on both sides. When chicken is browned, remove and set aside. Add remaining tablespoon of oil to the pan and saute scallions, ginger and garlic for 1 minute.

Add figs, bulgur and orange juice to pan. Cover and cook over medium heat about 10 minutes.

Over chicken, season with pepper and finish cooking for another 3 to 4 minutes. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

Make Changes Now To Avoid Cholesterol Problems In Future

By Linda Roach Monroe
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

So the surgeon general says that fried foods are bad for you. But they taste so good. And a flaky croissant every morning — well, who could resist? Anyway, you're young, active and lean. There's time enough when you're middle-aged, sedentary and plump to worry about whether cholesterol is setting up house in your arteries.

But making a few small changes in your diet now could keep you out of cholesterol trouble for years beyond the norm, according to a ground-breaking analysis by scientists at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

By charting information from two national studies, Dr. Gerald Cooper and statisticians Samuel Caudill and S. Jay Smith found that an American's blood cholesterol level increases consistently with age. For men, the annual increase is about 2 milligrams per deciliter of blood between ages 20 and 30, and 1 milligram a year from ages 30 to 60. For women, the higher increases come later in life: 1.5 milligrams a year between ages 20 and 40, and 2 milligrams a year between 40 and 60.

The resulting graphs allow people to see the age when their cholesterol levels can be expected to reach what doctors call the "borderline high-risk" level of 200 milligrams of cholesterol per deciliter of blood and the level considered at high risk of developing heart disease, 240 milligrams or above.

This kind of concrete information demonstrates for the first time how foregoing those french fries today can keep a person in the safety zone for several years beyond what would otherwise be the case.

For example, a 30-year-old man with a cholesterol level of 185 who continued to eat a standard American diet containing 36.5 percent fat could expect his cholesterol level to reach 200 milligrams at age 38, according to the Centers for Disease Control charts. However, by lowering his cholesterol level by 10 points now — by cutting his fat intake to 30 percent — his time below 200 could be extended to at least age 51.

For a 30-year-old woman at the same 185 level, dropping by 10 points would be even more immediately beneficial. She could expect to reach 200 milligrams at age 36 if she made no dietary changes. With a leaner diet, her time below 200 would extend at least until age 42.

Furthermore, an individual's actions today could change the shape of his age-related cholesterol curve altogether, said Dr. James I. Cleeman, coordinator of the federal government's National Cholesterol Education Program.

"It is possible that not only are you dropping the starting point of the curve but that you're affecting its shape as well," he said. "That is, it may not rise as this set of curves rises if you take action — the curve should be flatter. So the news could be even better than this chart shows."

The chart "can be helpful in motivating people at any age, but certainly in young people who are not yet at high (cholesterol) levels," he said. "It is much easier to get somebody's attention when they are ill or facing some kind of life crisis," said Dr. Edward N. Brandt, executive dean of the University of Oklahoma College of Medicine and a nationally recognized cardiovascular disease expert. "The question is, how can you get people's attention if they're pretty healthy and everything is OK? This may be one way to do that."

The figures are based on tests conducted on more than 11,000 Americans for the 1976-'80 National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey. The graphs then were checked against actual results of long-term cholesterol monitoring on individuals in the Framingham heart study, which has been running since 1948.

Heart Disease Involves More Than Diet

By Carol Deegan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — "Balanced Nutrition: Beyond the Cholesterol Scare" by Frederick Stare, Robert Olson and Elizabeth Whelan says that although the emphasis today is on diet — heredity, age, smoking, high blood pressure and obesity play a predominate role in the likelihood of developing coronary heart disease.

"Balanced Nutrition" discusses "good" foods and "bad" foods, health foods, food safety issues (including Alar-treated apples, additives, preservatives) — and more. The chapters on cholesterol include definitions of dietary cholesterol, serum cholesterol and fats.

Fats and Dietary Cholesterol

There is wide interest today in fats: what foods contain fats, the amounts of fats that Americans eat, the fats that can raise or lower blood cholesterol levels.

The most familiar fats are probably the most visible ones: the fats in salad and cooking oils, butter, margarine, mayonnaise, bacon grease and the external fat on meat. But, according to the authors, the "hidden" fats found in nuts, potato chips, candy and pastries make up about half of Americans' usual fat intake.

Americans consume an average of 37 percent of their total calories from fat: 15 percent from saturated fat, 15 percent from monounsaturated fat and the rest from polyunsaturated fat. Saturated fat raises blood cholesterol, according to experts, who generally recommend that for more healthful eating, Americans eat less saturated fat and a mixture of polyunsaturated and monounsaturated fats.

Serum Cholesterol

The established factors that play a predominate role in the likelihood of developing coronary heart disease, according to the authors, are family history and related genetic factors, age, cigarette smoking, high blood pressure, high serum cholesterol levels, obesity, physical inactivity and diabetes.

"While high levels of serum cholesterol are risk factors, simply having a high blood cholesterol reading is not as significant as was once thought," the authors say. "The reason for this has to do with high- and low-density lipoproteins, the so-called 'good' and 'bad' types of cholesterol."

The authors discuss lipoproteins — and also answer the following questions:

- Can the body adjust to varying levels of cholesterol intake?
- Is dietary cholesterol a risk factor for chronic heart disease?
- How important is diet in regulating serum cholesterol?
- How do short-term and long-term effects of dietary cholesterol differ?
- How important are the body's long-term adjustments to dietary cholesterol intake?

Most Americans do not have significantly elevated serum cholesterol levels, according to the authors, but, they say, it is important for everyone over the age of 20 "to learn your own serum cholesterol level and discuss your other possible risk factors with your physician."

Guide Shows How To Throw Parties, Vegetarian Style

By Barbara Hansen
LAT-WF NEWS SERVICE

"Very Innovative Parties" is an exhaustive guide that takes the work out of party planning and fills a special niche: the menus and recipes are vegetarian and non-alcoholic.

Compiled by the Loma Linda (Calif.) University Dental Auxiliary, the book presents 61 party themes, each accompanied by ideas for invitation design, decorations, table setting, entertainment and food.

There are milestone parties — birthdays, weddings, anniversaries, even a celebration for a teen-ager who has just acquired a driver's license — as well as holiday parties, sports-oriented events, ethnic-themed parties and more.

The book is divided into two parts: first, the party outlines, which include suggested menus, and then the recipes. Many of the dishes are in quantity sizes and can be prepared in advance, even the day before. Some of the recipes employ commercial meat substitutes made from vegetable proteins, such as canned vegetarian burger and canned "soyameat" chicken, but others require only eggs, cheese and other supermarket products.

The preparation and cooking times are listed at the end of each recipe. These are further broken down into tanning, eating, chilling and freezing times, when applicable. Advance preparation requirements and yields are also noted, making it possible to assess a recipe at a glance.

A large, spiral bound book with a red Leatherette cover, "Very Innovative Parties" can be ordered by mail. The price is $19.95 plus $2.50 postage and handling. Make checks payable to Loma Linda University Dental Auxiliary and send to Very Innovative Parties, P.O. Box 382, Loma Linda, Calif. 92354.

The following recipes from the book are examples of quantity dishes that can be prepared the day before serving.

CORN STRADA
12 to 16 slices French bread, crusts removed Butter
1 (16-oz.) can cream style corn
1 (16-oz.) can whole kernel corn, drained
1 (7-oz.) can diced green chiles
2 cups shredded Jack cheese
6 eggs, beaten
2 cups milk
1 tsp. salt

Spread both sides of bread with butter. Line bottom of 13- by 9-inch baking dish with half of buttered bread slices. Combine creamed corn and whole kernel corn. Spread half of corn mixture evenly over bread. Top with layer of half of green chiles and then 1 cup cheese. Repeat layers. Beat eggs with milk and salt. Pour over layers. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Bake at 350° 1 hour. Makes 12 to 15 servings.

ELEVEN-LAYER SALAD
4 cups chopped iceberg lettuce
2 to 3 cups chopped parsley
8 hard-cooked eggs, diced
2 green or sweet red peppers, sliced
1 (10-oz.) package frozen green peas
2 cups shredded carrots
1 (6-oz.) can colossal pitted olives, drained and sliced
2 cups sliced radishes
2 cups shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
1 cup diced red onion

3 cups Green Salad Dressing
In deep salad bowl, make layer of lettuce. Set aside 2 tablespoons parsley for garnish, then layer remaining parsley over lettuce. Add layers of eggs, peppers, peas, carrots, olives, radishes, cheese and onion. Spoon Green Salad Dressing over top. Sprinkle with reserved parsley. Cover and refrigerate at least 6 hours or overnight. Makes 15 servings.

Green Salad Dressing
2 cups mayonnaise
1/2 cup minced parsley
1 tsp. dried basil
1 tsp. dried dill weed
1 tbsp. sugar

1/2 cup sour cream
Combine mayonnaise, parsley, basil, dill weed, sugar and sour cream and mix until smooth. Makes 2 1/2 cups.

FROZEN STRAWBERRY DESSERT
2 (10-oz.) packages frozen strawberries, partially thawed
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2 egg whites
1 cup sugar
2 cups whipping cream
1 tsp. vanilla
Butter Crunch Crust

In large mixing bowl, beat strawberries, lemon juice, egg

Black-Eyed Peas Provide The Protein Without Fat

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Eat black-eyed peas on New Year's Eve for good luck, says an old Southern tradition. Eat black-eyed peas and other dried beans often for good nutrition, we say. Beans are a good low-fat source of protein, iron and B vitamins and provide lots of soluble fiber, the kind that helps lower blood cholesterol.

PORK AND BLACK-EYED PEA SALAD

One 10-oz. package frozen black-eyed peas or one 15-oz. can black-eyed peas, drained
1/2 cup reduced-calorie Italian salad dressing
1/4 cup sliced green onion
1/4 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1/4 cup sliced celery
2 tbsps. chopped pimiento
2 tbsps. sliced pitted ripe olives
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 lb. pork tenderloin, cut into thin strips
Spinach leaves (optional)

If using frozen peas, cook according to package directions; drain. In a medium mixing bowl combine drained peas, salad dressing, green onion, mushrooms, celery, pimiento and olives; set aside.

Spray a large skillet with non-stick spray coating. Heat over medium-high heat. Stir-fry garlic for 30 seconds. Add pork; stir-fry for 2 to 3 minutes or until no pink remains. Remove from heat. Add vegetable mixture to pork in skillet; mix well. Serve immediately on spinach-lined plates. Makes 3 main-dish servings.

Approaching Fall Sparks Bold Ideas In Salads

By Linda Lowe Morris
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Creation can begin with a walk into the garden: gathering tomatoes still warm from the sun, branches of basil and other herbs in full flower, a few lingering onions fat and pungent, a scattering of green beans, green peppers turning to red, tiny summer squashes on yellowing vines.

Back inside, as the chopping and slicing of vegetables proceeds, we reach for oils and vinegars, seasonings, savory olives and capers, then perhaps pastas or shell beans or cold meats that fill and satisfy.

The salads we make in September are deeper, richer than the salads we throw together earlier in the heat of summer.

Perhaps at no other time of year does salad-making have such potential: While the gardens and farms and produce markets still overflow with the harvest, the cooler weather of the evenings renews our appetites and draws us back to the kitchen for experimentation.

Salads are no longer restricted to the salad course, to the bland pile of lettuce served before the real meal begins. Now they are appetizer or side dish, entree or dessert — sometimes even the entire meal itself.

Salads — and our ideas about what a salad is — have changed tremendously in recent years, says Christopher Idone, food writer, founder of the well-known New York catering company, Glorious Food, author of "Glorious Food", "Glorious American Food" and now of a new book, "Salad Days" (Random House; hardcover, $22.50).

"Today, they are full of invention and apt to include whatever we may plant in our own gardens or find fresh at the market," Idone says. "The salad is considered the new meal."

The way that people are eating now, he says, "is lighter, easier fare. People aren't cooking as much. Our tastes have changed and I think we're really basically after lighter foods, healthier foods."

Idone's way with a salad is intensely creative, highly visual. Combinations of ingredients tend to be surprising. Shrimp with a yogurt and dill dressing is combined with the unexpected — slices of bright yellow mango. Even an old standby, a mixed seafood salad, is topped with salmon roe caviar.

As was his trademark at the catering company, Glorious Food, the food becomes a work of art. A salad of wild rice, walnuts, scallops and smoked chicken is sparked with bright red cranberries. Another plate of chicken breast and green beans is turned into a rainbow with slices of red peppers and slices of mango, then punctuated with blackberries.

"What I was trying to do in the book was loosen people up so that they would just think," Idone says. "You know, you're not dealing with something very sacred here. There are all ways of doing this thing. I've always said a recipe is a map. If you can't get Swiss chard you can use something else."

So many people these days, especially those who are single working people, are putting together their evening meals at salad bars, he says. And one of his goals in the book was to show them that they could make their own salads with a lot more appeal.

"And I think that it's much more nourishing in the end if you do it yourself."

Salad-making should follow the seasons and each season has something unique.

Just about everything nature gives us has a moment when it is perfection, Idone explains. "And that is what you seek and should remember when making a salad."

He recommends people buy what is fresh and seasonal, selecting ingredients that are at their peak, not wilted or over-ripe.

Another crucial element in being an inventive salad maker, he says, is keeping the cupboards stocked. Bottles of olives and capers, tins of anchovies and tuna, heads of garlic — all of these can be kept in the pantry ready to mix into a salad. There are also many different types and flavors of mustards available at the markets.

Have some interesting oils on hand. A fruity olive oil is a basic. But Idone also recommends peanut oil, dark toasted sesame oil, nut oils such as walnut and hazelnut.

GRILLED VEGETABLE SALAD

- 12 ripe red plum tomatoes
- 8 baby yellow squash
- 8 baby zucchini
- 4 Oriental or Italian baby purple eggplants
- 4 baby white eggplants
- ¼ cup olive oil (approximate)
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly milled black pepper
- Vegetable oil, to brush the grill
- ¼ cup balsamic vinegar

Turn the vegetables, except the tomatoes, into "fans." To do this, hold the vegetable at the stem end and slice lengthwise up to, but not through, the stem. Make the slices about ¼ inch wide. (Sprinkle the eggplants with salt and set aside to "sweat" for 15 to 20 minutes. Dry well with paper towels, squeezing out the excess moisture.) Brush the vegetables with the olive oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

and glowing, brush the grill with vegetable oil and arrange the vegetables on the hot grill.

As the vegetables soften, fan out the slices and cook until browned and wilted on one side. Turn over with tongs and cook for about 5 minutes more.

tional olive oil, if you wish. Serve hot. Serves four.

PENNE WITH FRESH TOMATO SAUCE

- 4 large ripe red tomatoes, cored and quartered
- Large bunch fresh basil
- 4 garlic cloves, crushed

- ¾ cup extra-virgin olive oil
- ¼ cup balsamic vinegar
- Salt and freshly milled black pepper, to taste
- 1 lb. penne
- 1 tbsp. extra-virgin olive oil

In a food processor, combine all of the sauce ingredients and process, pulsing on and off, until very roughly chopped. Pour into a bowl, cover and refrigerate until well chilled.

Cook the pasta in salted boiling water until tender. Drain well.

While the pasta is still hot, toss with the oil. Turn into a serving dish. Spoon the chilled tomato sauce over the pasta and serve.

Serves four.
