Storm Kills 5 In Carolinas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Hurricane Hugo slammed into this 300-year-old city of antebellum mansions with winds of 135 mph today, leveling dozens of buildings and peeling others open "like a can opener." At least five people in the Carolinas were killed.

"There's just destruction everywhere," Charleston Mayor Joseph P. Riley said after a 6:30 a.m. tour of his ravaged city. "We have on our hands a degree of physical destruction that is unprecedented in anyone's living memory."

President Bush this morning declared South Carolina a disaster area, making the state eligible for federal loans for rebuilding and to restore utilities.

After a direct hit on South Carolina, Hugo weakened and was downgraded to a tropical storm at 6 a.m. by the National Weather Service. At 9 a.m., the center of the storm was just north of Hickory, N.C., at latitude 36.2 degrees north and longitude 81.5 degrees west, and winds had diminished to 60 mph.

Further weakening was expected as Hugo moved northward at 25 to 30 mph through North Carolina on a path that would take it into the Virginias, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania. It was expected to hit New Jersey and New York on Saturday.

At least 700,000 people were without power in the Carolinas, officials said, including 200,000 or 85 percent of the customers in Charlotte, N.C., which felt Hugo's wrath even through its 200 miles inland. The blackout canceled today's session of Jim Bakker's fraud and conspiracy trial in Charlotte.

Details were still sketchy about flooding on the barrier islands off the coast, which bore the brunt of Hugo's fury.

In addition to flooding, fires from natural gas leaks erupted in low-lying Charleston, where the first shots of the Civil War were fired in 1861. The National Guard patrolled tree-lined streets, some of which were under several feet of water.

Seventy miles up the coast near Myrtle Beach, the elite vacation retreat community of Garden City Beach was smashed, officials said. It was among the communities under an evacuation order before Hugo hit.

"Garden City for all practical purposes is gone," said M.L. Love, a Horry County administrator who toured the small unincorporated resort town. Love said some larger buildings remained standing on the oceanfront, but otherwise destruction extended "as far as I could see."

As dawn broke, the first reports of deaths in the United States began coming in as rescuers found bodies

Hugo Skips Coast, Slices Path Through Western N. Carolina

North Carolina's coast escaped Hurricane Hugo's wrath, but the still-powerful storm caused one death and blacked out most of Charlotte as it sliced inland with wind gusts to 90 mph.

"The weather here is terrible," said Alleghany County Deputy Sheriff Tim Blevins in the state's northwest corner. "It's raining so hard you can't see your hand in front of you. The main arteries into town are either full of water or full of trees."

"It looks like Charlotte has been hit by far the hardest in the state," said Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner.

Charlotte was struck early today with high winds and torrential rains that knocked out power to 85 percent of the city; downed trees and rendered many streets impassable.

"They're talking about no electricity for two or three days," said Robert Meistermann as he surveyed his home. "I'm just glad I have my generator."

Vicki Murray said she woke up early today to the sound of a tree coming through the roof of her two-story apartment.

"It (the tree) was leaning on the house at first," Ms. Murray said in a telephone interview. "We went all went downstairs. But, boy, for about a half-hour there was all this wind, and the tree's inside my house now. The upstairs is gone."

Gov. Jim Martin prepared for a flight today from the coast and then to Mecklenburg County. Martin urged people to stay away from damaged areas.

The state ordered evacuation of 90 prisoners at Yancey Correctional Center at Burnsville. The move was a precautionary measure because of rapidly rising waters in the Cana River. The inmates were taken to Craggy Prison near Asheville.

Coastal residents — who braced through the night for possible hurricane-force winds — awoke to fewer problems than they expected. But people in the region around Charlotte were hit by high winds, power outages and torrential rains after Hugo was downgraded to a tropical storm.

The center of the storm was located at latitude 36.2 north, longitude 81.5 west at 9 a.m., just north of Hickory, moving northwest at 25 to 30 mph. A turn to the north was expected, the weather service said. The hurricane came ashore at Charleston, S.C.

Maximum sustained winds decreased to 60 mph and tropical storm force winds extended 250 miles east of the center over the Atlantic Ocean. Winds gusting to 73 mph were reported at Hickory.

An infant in Union County was killed when a tree fell on a house, officials said. State emergency management spokesman Jeff Merritt said the six-month old baby died when the tree crashed through the house and fell on the infant's crib.

Duke Power Co. said 200,000 of its 235,000 customers — 85 percent — in Charlotte were without power. The power outages forced cancellations of today's session of Jim Bakker's fraud and conspiracy trial in U.S. District Court. Power outages were reported in Rutherford and McDowell counties.

In Fayetteville, the roof of a Days Inn motel blew onto cars of people from South Carolina who had checked into the motel to escape the storm's wrath. A roof was blown off a warehouse in Whiteville.

The Stokes County Sheriff Department reported flash flooding across NC 89 near a hospital and said ditches were full of water.

"We've got trees down everywhere and some houses damaged," said Sgt. Jay Woods.

"We feel very fortunate," said Mike Waters, director of public services for New Hanover County in Wilmington. "We have had some reports of beach erosion. ... Certainly nothing compared to Charleston."

At Carolina Beach, Earl Jordan said he and his wife stayed in a shelter.

GUC Sends Crews To Help Western N.C. Cities

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville and most of eastern North Carolina escaped the ravages of Hurricane Hugo, but other areas of the state are now calling for help.

At least six crews from Greenville Utilities are on their way to the western half of the state as part of a coordinated effort on the part of utilities companies throughout North Carolina. Malcolm Green, general manager of Greenville Utilities and coordinator for the mutual aid program in the eastern part of the state, said Hugo, which made its way across the state this morning, knocked out power in at least nine western N.C. cities.

Utility crews from Greenville and seven other cities began moving westward in utility trucks this morning to help repair damages. Green called the damage "real bad. The more we hear, the worse it sounds."

He said calls from western cities asking for assistance were still coming in at 11 a.m., and all of the cities calling reported at least some power outages. "Most of them are totally out," Green said.

By 11 a.m., nine cities had called for assistance. Those cities were: Gastonia, High Point, Monroe, Statesville, Albemarle, Newton, Granite Falls, Kings Mountain, Huntersville and Pineville. Green said High Point and Gastonia reported heavy damage, and Monroe reported at least 50 utility poles down.

Green said at least 25 utility crews from eastern North Carolina have been mobilized to the storm sites. Crews from Greenville, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Washington, Farmville, Kinston, Tarboro, Wake Forest, New Bern, Apex, Elizabeth City and Selma have already committed manpower and equipment to the efforts.

The utilities companies and municipalities, through the Electricities compact, provide aid to each other during outages and other crises. Green said western cities sent crews to Greenville earlier this year to help repair damages from an ice storm that knocked out power around the city.

Green said repair work to the damaged municipal systems would take a massive effort. "They really don't even know what they've got yet," Green said. He estimated power to some parts of the state could be out as much as a week.

"We're still trying to match resources with needs," Green said. "This is big. And it's still coming in."

IRA Bomb Kills 11 In England

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DEAL, England — An explosion today flattened a military barracks and tore through nearby homes, killing 11 people and injuring 22, police said. The IRA claimed responsibility for the blast.

One person was still unaccounted for six hours after the explosion at the Royal Marines School of Music, said Chief Inspector Alan Butterfield of Kent police who provided the casualty figures and coordinated the rescue effort.

More than 100 rescue workers frantically dug through the rubble of a three-story building that collapsed at the school near Deal.

British military installations are a frequent bombing target of the Irish Republican Army in its campaign to rid Northern Ireland of British rule, but today's explosion in the coastal town 70 miles southeast of London was the worst IRA attack on the British mainland in more than seven years.

The explosion occurred at 8:26 a.m. in a lounge in the barracks. One of the bands had just stopped playing on the parade ground, said a ministry spokesman, speaking

ECU Board Voids Elections

By Lane Dunn
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The elections review board at East Carolina University threw out Wednesday's student elections in a closed-door meeting Thursday, prompting about 30 candidates to say they will remove their names from the next ballot.

They also called for Dean of Students Ron Speier to step down as Inter-Fraternity Council adviser, saying he could not be partial while representing both fraternity and non-fraternity students.

The second election for student offices is scheduled Oct. 4.

Stephen Sommers, a member of the student group that had banded together to campaign for the elections and a candidate for senior class president, said in a news conference before the board meeting that he and most of the other members of the group would pull out if the first results were voided.

Ami Bannerman, chairman of the elections board, declined to comment on the board's reasoning behind the decision except to say it was based on complaints received by the board.

She also would not comment on why the board voted to nullify all of Wednesday's results. "They have the power to disqualify the election," she said.

Brian Davis, student attorney general, said there were complaints of people campaigning too closely to the polls and campaign literature being left beside ballot boxes. He said some people complained because there were only five polling

Council Members Meet ... Maybe

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In an unusual move, Mayor Ed Carter and four of the six City Council members met Thursday to hear a review of a proposal that will go before the next meeting of the Board of Adjustment.

Although a majority of the council attended the meeting between the city's Development Department and the Pitt County Mental Health Department, the session was not advertised as a matter for City Council.

Council members attending the meeting were: Carter, Lorraine Shinn, Inez Fridley, Mildred Council and Nancy Jenkins.

The proposal, to locate a group home rehabilitation center on Ward Street, could go before the City Council if the Board of Adjustment denies the petition.

City Attorney Mac McCarley warned the council members of possible conflicts with the open meetings law and directed the council to avoid making statements and only ask questions. The city attorney suggested the members leave the meeting to avoid any conflict if it was not understood the meeting was called between the development staff and the Mental Health Department.

"My recommendation to everyone is we go home now," McCarley said. "We don't need to have another problem with the open meetings law."

The council members chose to stay to hear information on the proposal. And the city officials skirted McCarley's suggested gag-order by phrasing their statements in the form of a question, similar to the style of the television game show "Jeopardy!"

The council members who spoke at the meeting asked questions of Roberson and the group from Mental Health, occasionally adding "is that correct" or other generic questions to the end of statements. Ms. Jenkins

In The Area

Survives Shock

A Kinston area man had 7,200 volts of electricity pass through his body Thursday afternoon on Cooper Street in Winterville, but was not critically injured, a co-worker says.

Leon Whaley, a superintendent with E&R Electrical Contractors of Kinston, said electrician Johnnie Hill, 26, was in a bucket installing feeder lines when "he brought two wires together that shouldn't have been."

He said Hill was never unconscious, but was taken by the Winterville Rescue Squad to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He was later transferred to the Burn Center at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. Whaley said Hill had burns on both hands and one spot on the back of his head but was scheduled to be released from the hospital this weekend.

Schools Closed, Airlines Canceled As Hugo Nearing

By Fran Arrington
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Hurricane Hugo, fueled by strong winds and heavy rainfall, threatened damage to much of southeastern North Carolina on Thursday, prompting some area school systems to shut down today and airlines to cancel flights.

John McKnight, deputy superintendent for Pitt County schools, said too many emergency shelters were open Thursday night to expect students to make it to classes this morning.

According to Barry Gaskins, a spokesman for the county schools, 175 people spent the night in the six schools that served as shelter for people fleeing the storm. Gaskins said North Pitt High, Wellcome Middle School, Farmville Central High, E.B. Aycock Junior High and Ayden-Gritton High schools housed people until about 6 a.m. today.

He said school officials decided Thursday night not to hold classes today because "everything looked like it was going to be over on top of us this morning."

Administrative personnel and maintenance crews were out early today visiting schools and checking for possible storm damage, McKnight said.

Also in the area, Pitt County Community College canceled classes for today, and no classes were held at Greene County schools. New Bern-Craven County schools also remained closed.

Although Greene County and Craven County schools were closed officials reported no damage to their facilities and administrative personnel reported to work as usual.

However, students at East Carolina University were on a regular class schedule today as were students attending schools in Martin County. Students at Martin Community College went to classes two hours later than usual.

Meanwhile, James G. Turcotte, manager at Pitt-Greenville Airport, said American Eagle had at 1 p.m. Thursday canceled all flights until further notice.

"It's debatable whether they will operate at all today.

If they get going it'll be late this evening," Turcotte said.

Turcotte said more airline delays could be expected since both American Eagle and USAir had repositioned its aircraft, moving them from airports along the anticipated storm path to safer ground. He said some American Eagle aircraft had been moved from Raleigh and taken to Tennessee. More delays would be caused as both airlines work to get their aircraft back to the normal storage places, Turcotte said. "Everybody did so much preparation that most people canceled their plans for today. I don't expect any corporate activity in here today. I think everybody is going to sit tight for today," he said.

In Washington, City Manager Bruce Radford reported no significant effects from Hugo.

"We got only minimal flooding and then only in the low-lying areas," Radford said. "I anticipate that that will recede by itself today."

ECU Receives Grant For Study Of Rural Health Care

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The National Center for Health Services Research and Health Care Technology Assessment has awarded East Carolina University a grant for $175,846 to support a 16-month study of health care utilization among rural elderly people.

The study will be conducted through ECU's Center on Aging in cooperation with the department of sociology and anthropology. It will involve conducting interviews with around 800 older adults in eastern North Carolina to find out how many health care providers they see and why.

"Many older adults see several health care providers at the same time for different reasons," said Dr. Jim Mitchell, an ECU sociology professor. He and Dr. Holly Mathews, an anthropology professor at ECU, are co-investigators for the research project.

"Problems with drug interaction can arise when they are given multiple prescriptions from different doctors who don't communicate with each other. One doctor issues a prescription for high blood pressure. He doesn't know that another doctor has prescribed medicine for arthritis.

"Older adults can end up with as many as 10 prescription medicines that they're taking all at once.

"To add to the problem, older adults are heavy users of over-the-counter drugs like laxatives, antacids, Tylenol and aspirin unbeknownst to their doctors and nurses," according to Mitchell.

"In this area particularly, we have older adults who go to alternative healers such as religious people, chiropractors and root doctors.

"Once we know who they're seeing and for why and what, and what their limitations are, we'll be in a better position to advise health care providers that this is going on," Mitchell says.

Worrisome

Trouble At The Top

When even your best isn't good enough, it's time to hoist caution flags.

As educators try to pinpoint why North Carolina's high school seniors scored dead last in the nation on the 1989 Scholastic Aptitude Test, some worrisome bits of information have come to light. One of them is evidence that suggests even many of the state's best-prepared students lag behind top students nationally.

According to SAT data sent out by the State Department of Public Instruction, N.C. honors students do better than average students nationally, but not as well as other honors students around the country. Results from the SAT in 1987 and 1985 show that N.C. students in honors courses trailed their national counterparts by 30 points on the verbal test and 50 points in mathematics.

One thing that pulls down the N.C. average, speculates the State Department of Public Instruction, is that students taking the SAT here are less likely than students nationally to have taken such advanced mathematics courses as trigonometry and calculus.

'The state must look carefully at what its best students are (and aren't) learning and how they are being challenged.'

But even when compared to national students who have taken the same math courses, the state's students still lag consistently, often by 30-plus points. There is one exception: the tiny fraction of North Carolina's students with more than one year of calculus outscored their national counterparts by 10 points: 665 to 655.

These numbers are a small but troublesome slice of the statistical pie. It is not acceptable for any of North Carolina's students to lag behind, but when a state's brightest students don't compete well with the brightest around the nation, that sends red flags flying.

The deficiency is vexing to both education experts and lay persons. The one thing that most affects SAT scores is parent education, says the Department of Public Instruction. Yet when that department examines the scores of the state's kids whose parents have graduate degrees, as well as its honors students, they score significantly below similar students across the country. As painful as such a notion might be, that kind of performance indicates instruction.

There's also reinforcement for this notion from outside the SAT. The National Assessment of Educational Progress shows North Carolina's students in vocational and general curriculums match or top the national average while students taking an academic curriculum fall behind once again. Something is wrong at the top.

That something may be curriculum, or instruction, or lenient standards or lack of challenge for bright students. Whatever it is, it is a weakness, and one that should be discussed frankly. The state must look carefully at what its best students are (and aren't) learning and how they are being challenged.

More Questions Than Answers

WASHINGTON — The Tennessee judge who ruled Thursday (Sept. 21) that life begins at conception, and awarded custody of seven frozen embryos to the woman whose estranged husband doesn't want to become a father, may have created more legal dilemmas than he solved.

I don't mean to trivialize the difficulty of the case Circuit Judge W. Dale Young had to decide. Junior and Mary Sue Davis had tried for years, unsuccessfully, to have children. They finally decided to go the in vitro — test-tube — route in which her eggs were mixed with her husband's sperm in a laboratory dish. Nine of the eggs were successfully fertilized and frozen for later implantation in Mary Sue's womb.

Then the couple filed for divorce. Judge Young had no difficulty deciding how to split the payments on the sale of the couple's mobile home and proceeds from the sale of their house. The vexatious problem was what to do about the fertilized eggs.

Mary Sue wanted to have them, in hope that she still might become pregnant. Junior wanted custody, on the ground that he shouldn't be "raped" into becoming a father against his will.

Judge Young's ruling was that embryos are not property but human life. His obligation, he said, was not asset distribution but the best interest of the seven "children." (Originally there were nine fertilized eggs, but two were lost in an unsuccessful attempt at implantation before the couple decided on divorce.)

"The full focus of the court in the case of children is on what's to their best interests, not what mom wants, not what dad wants and not what grandparents want," he said. But having resolved (pending near-certain appeal) the question of whether the embryos are property or human life, he has raised a host of other equally difficult issues.

For instance: If the seven embryos are in fact seven children, is the mother under obligation to attempt to give birth to all seven? Does it not constitute child neglect to do otherwise? How can it be in the "best interest" of the children to keep them in liquid nitrogen at minus 196 degrees Celsius?

If they are children, doesn't the father incur an obligation to provide for them? Even if the mother waives any claim against the father, what's to prevent her from suing later for child support?

Suppose one or more of the embryos is implanted and the development goes badly. Would Judge Young allow an induced abortion, which by his lights, would amount to the killing of children? How does that comport with the Supreme Court dictum in Roe v. Wade?

Suppose Mary Sue changes her mind about wanting to have Junior's child. Would Judge Young insist that she carry through "in the best interest of the children"? Would he also order the Dr. I. Ray King, the Knoxville fertility expert who fertilized and froze the eggs, to go forward with the implantation, even if the doctor (who was a defendant in the suit) decided he wanted no further involvement with this bizarre case? Who would pay for the procedure?

Junior Davis says on the one hand that he doesn't want to become a father right now (though the judge says he already is), and on the other that he would be willing to give the embryos to some childless couple. Would that make him any less a father?

It may be that all these questions will turn out to be moot in the present case. Two of the nine embryos already have failed to thrive. The odds for the successful implantation of the others reach a high of less than 20 percent.

But that's largely a matter of technology, and the technology is certain to improve — no doubt to the point where a human womb will become unnecessary. If the couple supplying the egg and sperm decided not to go through with the artificial pregnancy, would his honor order the embryo transferred to an artificial womb — much as other judges have ordered the use of artificial life-support mechanisms?

No matter whether Judge Young wanted to involve himself in the abortion issue, his ruling speaks to the fundamental question of that debate: When does human life begin?

Some of us will find it hard to accept that these frozen, hardly visible specks of matter are in fact now little humans. Others will ask (with the unshakable conviction that they know the answer): If they might someday become little humans what would they have been on the day before that miraculous transformation?

All of us, I suspect, will wish that Mary Sue, if she so desperately wants to be a mother, might abandon this messy business and give some serious thought to adoption.

When The Scandal Stars The Guy From Your District ...

BOSTON — This is what it must have been like to be in Jim Wright's district, or in Tony Coelho's. The scandal this time is starring Barney Frank, the guy from your own district, the 4th district of Massachusetts.

The story breaks like an accident report, a political sea disaster. Steve Gobie, a hooker at the helm, opens up a leak the size of the hole in the Valdez and pours oil, 100 percent crude, over Barney Frank's reputation.

Frank had hired the prostitute. The prostitute had used Frank's apartment to ply his trade. The story is a sleazy one as it goes out over the wires. But in the district, you really know the guy. So here you put this episode into context, the context of the whole person, his whole life.

The fact is that you liked Barney back when he was a self-described slob. You liked him when his mother starred in his ads. You've always liked his politics, his grit, his one-liners. You like having a smart-mouth congressman. Seven out of ten of you re-elected him. And that was after he'd come out of the closet.

So, at first there is remarkably little said about it. It's as if something embarrassing had happened to a member of the family. In Fall River, you shake your head and say, "Jeez." In Newton, you meet and quote your grandmother, "Smart, smart, but stupid." For the most part you hope the oil slick will evaporate, or get mopped up with sponges.

But the damn thing doesn't go away.

There was the matter of the parking tickets. Big deal, you say. There was a question of taxes for Gobie's time as a driver. Spare me, you say. So he was snookered by the guy? Is it a crime to be naive? None of it sounds like the Barney, the one you know, but the guy made mistakes, and you make allowances. Because in the district you like him.

Barney starts talking about how these things happen. What it's like to be gay and lonely, to try and lead an entirely public life, to fail that. He talks about what it was like to admit his homosexuality, to deal with it. There was, he says, more than one prostitute.

In the district, where you don't really want to know this, you hear it with some sympathy. Maybe you run through the Rolodex of friends who've gone through a different transition, from married to divorced. How many of them would want to see their dumbest or most desperate acts in the news. How much worse is it to come out into a world that calls homosexuals "queers"?

Because you are part of a liberal district, you tell yourself, hey, it was a bad time. He was hurting and stumbling and it's past history. Today he's in what you call a stable relationship and while you might not be comfortable welcoming Barney's companion on the campaign trail, hey, you have to be happy that he's happier. After all, you like the guy. Better we should go after the HUD scandal.

But somehow or other, the same oil slick has started to cover the rocks and accumulate on the beaches and it just doesn't scrub off. In the district, you talk about the scandal more, not less. The arguments you use to defend the guy you like become more complicated, more layered. Harder.

You try to imagine Barney in front of that ethics committee and you want to cringe. Somebody's going to ask him how many hookers he hired, how such a smart guy could have been conned. You imagine him, without trying, as the new poster boy for the right-wing hate mail.

You think about that crude oil sticking to the causes that he cares about, that you care about. You think about how "local issues" in the 4th Congressional District have included Central America and homelessness and civil liberties. Can a guy represent you without representing those?

That leads you to think about the smart mouth. This is — was? — Barney's political tool. The verbal attack at just the right place. A finely tuned ideological wit. You calculate the odds that he can get back to attacking corruption, or get behind a microphone with the Democratic leadership. They're long.

The jokes were once by Barney. Now they are about him. You have no idea how long the clean-up of his reputation will take. Or if it can ever be the same.

Because you like the guy, like his politics, because he's the home team, you'd vote for him again. Probably. But more of you discover that you've gone from being proud to being defensive and not a little embarrassed.

And so now you want to tell him, Barney, it won't wash. Give it up.

Vietnam's Cambodian Pullout Poses New Questions In Asia

Keith Richburg

MANILA, Philippines — When the last Vietnamese infantryman returns home from Cambodia next week, the event may carry long-term implications almost as fateful as America's own retreat from Indochina in 1975.

The cohesion of Southeast Asia's non-communist bloc, the role of China in the region and economic ties between communist and pro-Western states in Asia all are likely to be redefined, if not dramatically altered, once Vietnam completes its promised pullout.

For Vietnam, the military retreat from Cambodia comes after 10 years of trying to prop up a pliant communist regime in Cambodia and losing more than 50,000 Vietnamese lives in a costly guerrilla war. Hanoi has announced that it is unilaterally withdrawing its remaining 50,000 troops over the next week, with the last soldier scheduled to depart on Sept. 26.

Vietnam's decision to withdraw was driven more by the domestic pressures of a sick economy than the activities of the Cambodian resistance, which so far has shown itself deft at diplomacy but relatively ineffective on the battlefield. Because of its Cambodian adventure, Vietnam has suffered from a crippling boycott of Western aid, credit and technology, forcing it to increase its dependence on the Soviet Union and the East bloc. The war also led Vietnam into a brief 1979 war with China, and relations between the two communist neighbors are still frigid. Like the earlier American retreat from Indochina, Hanoi's pullback promises to unleash new diplomatic forces in the region that may not be fully understood for a long time.

First, the withdrawal will remove the single cohesive issue that has maintained unity among the region's non-communist states, linked through the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, or ASEAN. Before the invasion, ASEAN was only "a paper tiger," in the words of Chana Samudhavanija, Thailand's former ambassador to Cambodia. "ASEAN was just a group of VIPs from each country to get together and have discussions, but do nothing much," he said.

With the unifying force of Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia removed, experts predict that new disputes and old rivalries are likely to arise among the six ASEAN nations.

Some of those differences already have surfaced. In an open show of discord that would have been inconceivable over the last decade, Singapore is publicly quarreling with Malaysia and Indonesia over its offer to the United States to host American military facilities. Also, the ASEAN countries appear sharply divided over how best to deal with Vietnam immediately after the withdrawal, with Singapore urging a continued boycott and Thailand anxious to resume normal relations to find new markets for Thai products and new sources of raw materials.

Following the withdrawal, the regional states and the West will have to decide whether to acknowledge Vietnam's pullout and the legitimacy of the Vietnamese-backed government of Prime Minister Hun Sen especially if the government holds off an expected escalation of the insurgency. Western states and Vietnam's neighbors are unlikely to recognize the withdrawal immediately, but academic and diplomatic analysts say that if Hun Sen can last six months on his own, there are likely to be some cracks in ASEAN's anti-Vietnamese front.

Thailand will face the specific dilemma of whether, and for how long, to allow Cambodian resistance groups to continue operations from sanctuaries on Thai soil. By closing the border to the insurgents, Bangkok would risk disrupting its now-friendly ties with Beijing, the main arms supplier for the widely reviled Khmer Rouge communists.

The improved relations between China and ASEAN countries are another consequence of the 1978 invasion. During the 1960s and most of the 1970s, China was the region's pariah state, with Mao Zedong supporting communist insurgencies in Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia. But following Mao's death and the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia, China and the ASEAN countries decided they needed each other to confront the new threat of Vietnamese expansionism.

China officially dropped its support for Thai communists and became the chief arms supplier for the Cambodian resistance with weapons funneled through Thailand. The relationship has developed so much that China is now one of the main arms suppliers to the Thai military.

"The invasion allowed China's relations with Thailand to grow firmer," said Dr. Sukhumbhand Paribatra, a political scientist at Bangkok's Chulalongkorn University and a former government adviser on foreign policy. "We in Southeast Asia now have a less hysterical view of China. This is evidenced by the fact that our reaction to the events at Tiananmen Square has been very muted. Without the invasion of Cambodia, things would have been very different."

For the longer term, the ASEAN states also must decide the best approach to reintegrate Indochina into the region's economy. Hanoi already has asked to join ASEAN as a member state, but most analysts say that is unlikely. More likely is some kind of separate but formal link between the ASEAN bloc and the socialist states of Indochina on commercial and trade matters.

Vietnam's effort to secure economic aid and trade from the ASEAN states is, by itself, another of the dramatic shifts since the invasion. Before 1979, flush from its victory over the United States and maintaining the world's third-largest standing army, Vietnam was considered a military giant in the region. Thailand, by contrast, was perceived as the vulnerable "next domino" before communist expansion in Southeast Asia because of its fragile political and economic institutions.

Now, Vietnam is considered an economic basket case, while the Philippines, have experienced surging economic growth and are poised to become the new wave of industrializing countries.

Indochina began their spiral downward 10 years ago, said Berkeley political scientist Douglas Pike, a longtime Vietnam watcher, while "the ASEAN states began their economic spiral upward." At the time of the invasion in 1978, Pike said, "the ASEAN states were running scared. Vietnam had won (against the Americans), and there was the prospect of this rogue elephant running through Southeast Asia. (But) in the last 10 years, we've seen a complete reversal of this kind of perception. It was not a rogue elephant about to go rampaging through Southeast Asia, but a dinosaur stuck in a tar pit."

The other unresolved issue likely to be revived by the withdrawal is the question of American relations with Vietnam. For eight years, the Reagan administration said a withdrawal was the main prerequisite for normalizing relations and ending the economic embargo.

U.S. government officials have said recently that America's position will need to be re-examined after the Vietnamese pullout. But some suggest the Bush administration may take a tougher line than its predecessor, perhaps adding new conditions even after the troop withdrawal.

In a recent visit to Indonesia, Vice President Quayle said the administration might tie normalization to political and economic changes within Vietnam. Later, visiting Brunei, Secretary of State James A. Baker III told reporters, "I don't see the United States recognizing Vietnam in the near term," and said the issue of missing American servicemen must first be resolved.

The Populist Approach

Blaine Harden

BUDAPEST, Hungary — While other Communist parties in the East Bloc have reacted to the gusting winds of political change with befuddlement or brutality or both, the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party has demonstrated a knack for grand populist gestures, shrewd political infighting and deft damage-control.

The decision last week to part the Iron Curtain and allow more than 16,000 East Germans, so far, to skip off to the West may have infuriated doctrinaire Marxists in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, but it sold very well with the Hungarian public — which is still deeply skeptical of a Communist Party that was imposed on the country by Soviet tanks.

It also bought the government — and the Communist Party that controls it — massive favorable publicity and near-universal praise in the West.

Likewise, a Hungarian government decision in May to scrap a hugely unpopular and environmentally threatening hydroelectric dam project with Czechoslovakia was widely applauded by both the Hungarian public and the country's emerging opposition political parties.

As Hungary moves toward free multi-party elections, which are expected to take place early next year, the Communist Party here seems to be acting less like a Stalinist command center and more like a ward heeler scrambling for votes.

Unlike Communist leaders in Prague, who continue to turn water cannons on political opponents, or even in Warsaw, where the party clumsily tried and failed this summer to install a much-hated interior minister as prime minister, Hungary's Communist leaders appear to have retooled their offensive arsenal to a new kind of East Bloc Realpolitik — one that attempts to respond to public opinion rather than bully it.

"There is a reformist wing to the party that has come forward to show real statesmanlike abilities that were absolutely lacking in earlier governments," said Gyula Kodalyanyi, a poet and founding member of the Democratic Forum, the largest opposition party in the country. "They have earned considerable respect in handling both (the East German and the dam) issues. This is a new style, a kind of Communist politician that we have not known before."

Yet political polls in Hungary continue to show that the party, which for decades ruled in a ham-handed manner that even Hungarian Communists now describe as "dictatorial," remains unpopular and distrusted by the vast majority of Hungarians. "The Communists have to fight against a wind that is blowing against them," said Kodalyanyi.

In four by-elections this year that pitted Communist candidates against opposition parties, the Communists have been soundly defeated.

Predictions among opposition leaders, Western observers and many party members are that the Communists can expect no more than 15 to 30 percent of the vote in upcoming parliamentary elections. A poll this year found that 25 percent of party members would not vote for any candidate who was a Communist.

"It is an unavoidable consequence of all dictatorships that when people have free choice, the dictators will lose. Nothing can stop that," said Miklos Haraszti, a longtime dissident writer and activist in the Free Democrat opposition party.

Conceding this point, Communists have been angling all summer to cut their losses. They have pressed for an election formula that would give them significant influence on a coalition government — even if they fare badly in the election. The party's maneuvering, which opposition leaders here admit has been shrewd, stands in marked contrast to Communist Party bumbling in Poland earlier this year.

There, the party was totally outmaneuvered by Solidarity in negotiations leading to elections. The party agreed to a formula whereby its most important leaders had to receive at least half of the vote to be elected to parliament. Poles gleefully voted against all the big-name Communists, and the election turned into a humiliation for the party.

"Being a Communist is a dirty thing to the voters, and the reformers in the Hungarian party are trying somehow to distance themselves from the burden of the past 40 years," said a Western diplomat here.

In round-table talks with nine opposition parties — talks that will decide the way the elections will work — the party has pressed for a two-stage voting procedure that would allow any candidate who receives 15 percent of the vote in the first round to move into the second round. Although the round-table discussions are not finished, opposition party sources say the Communists will get their way on the voting formula.

The party appears to be trying to avoid at all costs a face-off between a Communist and a non-Communist candidate. It wants at least a three-candidate race for each parliamentary seat, thereby leaving the way open for the opposition to divide itself.

So far, the divide-and-rule strategy — which is being orchestrated by Imre Poszgay, the leading Communist reformer in Hungary — seems to be working: The opposition has split sharply, with the more nationalistic party, the Democratic Forum, leading a coalition willing to support Poszgay's candidacy for a recently proposed Hungarian presidency.

The Free Democrats, who favor immediate and widespread privatization of the socialist state, head a smaller coalition that is staunchly opposed to conceding Poszgay or any Communist a role in a future elected government.

IN THE STATE

Rail Service

RALEIGH (AP) — A state panel has balked at resuming passenger train service between Raleigh and Charlotte until it looks into alternatives to Amtrak.

The Governor's Rail Passenger Task Force had planned to resume service along the Piedmont corridor next spring using Amtrak, but wants to explore the legality of using another rail company.

The group will hear legal opinions next month on whether Amtrak can force the state to use its trains. At least one member indicated Amtrak's service wasn't good enough.

"The public is not going to ride a train that is slow, that has poor service, that uses stations that are not clean," said Donald R. Billings, a Winston-Salem lawyer. "I'm afraid this kind of service (from Amtrak) could jeopardize our long-term chances for success."

Owner Arrested

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The owner of a local Christian summer camp was arrested Wednesday and charged with taking indecent liberties with two boys at the camp last summer, police said Thursday.

Jones Yorke Pharr III, 41, of Bobs Creek Road in Green River Township, was charged in a grand jury indictment with "taking immoral, improper and indecent liberties" with a 10-year-old Maryland boy on June 22 and with an 8-year-old Florida boy on or about July 4.

Body Found

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Rockingham County Sheriff's Department said Thursday the body of Bonita Gayil Hannah, a Greensboro woman missing since Saturday, was found Wednesday in bushes alongside a rural road.

"If we hadn't been looking for her, we would never have seen her," said Rockingham County Sheriff Bobby Vernon. "She was about a foot lower than the road, thrown in a lot of heavy undergrowth. Her head was wrapped in a towel and we couldn't tell what damage was done. The body was decomposed and in bad shape."

The body was found 5 miles east of Madison at 10:25 a.m. by Sgt. Don Curry of the Rockingham County Sheriff's Department.

Hospital

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A decision on upgrading a new hospital at Fort Bragg to an Army medical center should be made with the next six weeks, a spokesman for Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said Wednesday.

The Army's Surgeon General has recommended the Army be allowed to upgrade a planned replacement for Womack Army Community Medical Center to a medical center to replace Letterman Army Medical Center at The Presidio Army post in California. Letterman AMC is scheduled to be closed under the Base Closure Act that went into effect earlier this year.

Banks Offer Home Loans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two North Carolina banks have announced new programs intended to help low-income families buy homes.

Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. of Winston-Salem and NCB Mortgage Corp. of Charlotte Wednesday announced programs that ease the requirements for low-income families who wish to buy single-family homes, townhouses or condominiums.

Wachovia's program is designed to encourage home buying and renovations in targeted neighborhoods in Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Charlotte, Raleigh and Durham.

Loans of $10,000 to $60,000 will be available to families with incomes up to $30,000.

The program will offer 15- and 30-year mortgages at a quarter-point below the most favorable rate on 15-year loans. The minimum down payment will be three percent, discount points will not be charged and other closing costs will be capped at $300.

NCNB has been selected by GE Capital Mortgage Insurance Co. as one of six lenders nationwide to offer eased requirements on how much of a homeowner's income can be devoted to mortgage payments.

The program will allow borrowers to put up to 33 percent of their monthly income into mortgage payments. Lenders usually require the borrower not to spend more than 28 percent of their monthly income.

The program also includes home-buying education, counseling and a pre-purchase inspection.

Martin Says Waste Accord May Shorten Far East Trip

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — An industrial recruiting trip to the Far East might be cut short, Gov. Jim Martin said, so that last-minute details can be worked out on a regional hazardous waste agreement.

Martin is scheduled to leave for Japan Oct. 1 and return Oct. 18, but the state must certify to federal officials by Oct. 17 that they have the capacity to handle hazardous wastes they produce. A regional agreement that would give North Carolina that capacity is not likely to be completed before the end of the month.

"I think whether we come back early or meet after we get back depends on whether the state will suffer severe injury by waiting a day or two," Martin said. "The EPA has indicated that (delaying a couple of days) would be fine as long as I've indicated before Oct. 17 my support for the agreement."

Martin said he would call the legislature back to Raleigh when a final agreement is reached, but did not know if that would be before or after his Far East trip.

"We're trying to sort that out," he said.

School Burns

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — About half of Hoke County's middle school students will be out of school temporarily after a fire ravaged Upchurch Middle School Thursday.

The fire destroyed a breezeway, halls and offices and heavily damaged the school auditorium. Classrooms received heavy smoke damage, but apparently were not burned, said Associate Superintendent Lavetta Horton.

Martin had planned to call the General Assembly into session Thursday to approve the agreement, but negotiators from the eight Southern states involved have so far failed to reach an acceptable compromise.

Under a draft proposal, North Carolina would provide an incinerator capable of handling up to 40,000 tons of hazardous waste a year. Ashes from the incinerator would be sent to South Carolina or Alabama for burial.

Martin said it will be at least Sept. 29 before a regional agreement can be completed.

Kentucky officials have scheduled a statewide public hearing on Sept. 28 to discuss that state's initial proposal for an incinerator and above-ground storage of incinerator waste.

Mississippi also has failed to offer a plan that would be accepted by the other states, Martin said.

"A multi-state agreement would work just as well with four or five states (rather than eight)," Martin said.

"In looking at the numbers, the quantity of waste produced by other states, I don't think it would make a great difference," he said. "Instead of a 40,000-ton (incinerator), it might have to be higher, but not twice as high."

"It would make a difference to the legislature if we're talking about 40,000 tons or 45,000 tons," Martin said. "We want to have the final agreement for them to consider. It would be difficult to work with uncertain numbers and we don't want that."

Waste Plans Inadequate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — While most hospitals follow uniform guidelines in disposing of infectious medical waste, the offices of doctors, dentists and other health care providers form a vast unregulated source of potentially harmful waste, medical researchers say.

The volume of medical waste produced by these other facilities could exceed the 6,000 tons of refuse churned out daily by hospitals, according to a report in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study was led by Dr. William Rutala, administrative director of the Department of Hospital Epidemiology of North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

The researchers said one-fourth of the states don't regulate how clinics dispose of their waste, while in about half the states, doctors' and dentists' offices fall outside the regulations.

There are 278,000 private doctors' and dentists' offices, 16,400 nursing homes, and thousands of walk-in surgery centers, dialysis centers and blood banks across the nation.

Helms' Bid Protested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Art students held a soggy rally on the steps of the Capitol to protest Sen. Jesse A. Helms' proposal to ban government support for offensive art.

A group of about 200 students and artists marched 20 blocks from the Corcoran Gallery of Art to the Capitol on Wednesday, carrying red and white placards with the message "Helms no, freedom yes." A brief cloudburst soaked the crowd but did not dampen its exuberance.

Helms, meanwhile, was staying dry on the Senate floor, defending El Salvador against some proposed restrictions on American aid.

The rally focused on an amendment offered by Helms to the Interior appropriations bill, which would give $171 million to the National Endowment for the Arts. Helms' amendment would prohibit public money from being used to produce, promote or distribute material that is obscene or indecent, that denigrates a religion or non-religion, or that denigrates people on the basis of their race, creed, sex, handicap, age or national origin.

The amendment was prompted by two NEA grants that bothered conservatives in Congress. One, to the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem, helped mount an exhibition that included a photograph of a crucifix submerged in urine. The other, to the University of Pennsylvania's Institute for Contemporary Art in Philadelphia, supported an exhibition of photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe that includes sado-masochistic and pedophilic images.

WHAT TO DO IF THE LIGHTS GO OUT

If a storm hits and your power goes out, Greenville Utilities will activate its Emergency Storm Plan and restore your power as quickly as possible. To prepare for an emergency, GUC suggests the following:

- If the power goes out in your neighborhood, call Greenville Utilities, 752-7166 (business hours), and 752-5627 (evenings and weekends). Please be patient. GUC's emergency phone lines will be answered around the clock, but after a major storm many people try to call at once.
- Don't touch any electric lines, trees or any other obstacles in contact with electric lines. If a wire falls on your car while you're in it, stay in the car until the wire is removed.
- GUC's Emergency Storm Plan is designed to restore electric service to the greatest number of customers in the quickest amount of time. Primary lines are repaired first, followed by secondary lines.
- If tree limbs pull the wiring and meter base from your house, an electrician must make repairs before GUC can restore your power.
- When your power goes out, turn off everything in your home except for one light. If the outage lasts over 60 minutes, turn off your water heater too. In addition, turn off all surface elements on your stove.
- If you keep your refrigerator and freezer closed, the contents should be safe for at least 24 hours (refrigerator) and 36 hours (freezer). Dry ice can be used to keep food frozen.
- When the light you've left on glows, you'll know power has been restored. Over the next 30-60 minutes gradually switch on your appliances.
- Leave a porch light on so that our repair crews will know when your service has been restored.
- Prepare an emergency kit containing a flashlight (and batteries), candles and holders, matches, battery-powered radio, manual can opener, wind-up clock, paper plates and plastic utensils.

To make our storm plan as efficient as possible, GUC sends out Damage Assessment Teams or "Spotters" to determine the type of problem, proper equipment and the type of crew needed to restore service. So don't be alarmed if you're sitting in the dark and a GUC vehicle drives by without stopping. The sight of that vehicle means help is on the way!

Fortunately, Greenville-Pitt County has very few power outages, but when an emergency occurs, be assured that Greenville Utilities will work around the clock to restore your power. If you have any questions, call GUC at 752-7166.

Storm Blackens Charlotte As It Slams Western North Carolina

"We had kids in Charlotte who wanted us to come there. Oh no, now they're getting it," he said.

About 50 feet in the middle of Carolina Beach Fishing Pier was washed away.

Elsewhere on the coast, coastal roadways were flooded and filled with debris, the weather service said. A third of the Youpon Beach fishing pier was destroyed. Two feet of water was standing behind the town hall in Long Beach.

Three houses were undermined on Wrightsville Beach and the town hall was flooded at Carolina Beach. The road at the north end of Topsail Island was flooded and dunes there were eroded.

As the storm moved northwest, the weather service said portions of U.S. 21 and NC 18 were under water in Allegheny County. The center of Hugo was south of Hickory and moving at 35 mph at 8 a.m.

High winds dropped a transmission tower at WSOC in Charlotte, where residents huddled in their homes during the pre-dawn hours as winds and rain pelted the area.

Winds clocked at 75 mph were reported at Charlotte Douglas International Airport. A gust to 90 mph prompted evacuation of the FAA control tower at the airport. The center of the storm reached Charlotte at 5 a.m.

Duke Power spokeswoman Anne Sheffield said "extremely high winds and heavy rains" knocked down power lines in the city. She said there was no way to know immediately what effects were in Duke's service area outside Charlotte.

"We're asking for customer patience today," she said.

The state emergency management office said the projected path of the storm was east of Greensboro before leaving the state between 9 and 10 a.m. Weather forecasters anticipated five to 10 inches of rain for 100 miles on either side of the storm's track.

Windows were blown out of First Union's 42-story downtown office building in Charlotte, said David Keathley at the Mecklenburg County emergency operations center.

Charlotte police Capt. J.D. Price said many city streets were blocked by downed trees and some flood-prone areas were experiencing problems.

A tornado watch was in effect for the southern foothills, northern foothills and sandhills regions of North Carolina until noon. A high wind warning and a flood watch were in effect for nearly all of North Carolina.

Hurricane warnings were discontinued for the state's coast and a flood watch was in effect for the entire state, with emphasis on Avery, Mitchell, Yancy and Watauga counties. Offshore at 6 a.m., winds gusted to 47 mph at Diamond Shoals off Cape Hatteras.

The weather service said the Outer Banks could experience erosion and tidal overwash because of the rough seas.

Wayne Ennis of Carolina Power & Light Co. in Raleigh said the utility had widely scattered power outages in its eastern North Carolina service area. CP&L sustained heavy power problems in South Carolina, Ennis said.

Approximately 175 North Carolina national guard troops were sent to locations around the state to assist local authorities.

Here are examples of what the storm did in the Charlotte area as reported by the National Weather Service:

— The FAA control tower at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport was evacuated at 4:15 a.m.

when winds gusted to 90 mph.

— A 1,000 television tower was blown down near the Iredell-Rowan-Cabarrus County line.

— A 60-foot tree, 16 inches in diameter, was blown down at Fort Mill, S.C., around 4:16 a.m.

Wind gusts of 50 to 60 mph were reported Thursday night at the New Hanover County Airport, which was closed. Teresa Damiano at Raleigh-Durham International Airport said 95 percent of its flights were cancelled. She said travelers should check with airlines for the next 24 hours on flights.

More than 20,000 Tar Heel residents were housed overnight in shelters, the Red Cross said.

Looting Subsides In Islands

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands — Rifle-toting U.S. troops patrolled St. Croix to restore order after Hurricane Hugo brought chaos to the island and officials said it appeared their presence had curbed rampant looting.

In Washington, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "The troops are having an obvious impact in controlling the looting and other lawlessness associated with the destruction. It is impossible to say at this point how long they will have to be there."

However, it appeared that most stores had been cleaned out before the troops began arriving Thursday. One official defended the looters as desperate people left homeless and hungry by Hugo's devastation Sunday.

The storm struck the U.S. mainland late Thursday.

The Marine Radio Band, monitored on nearby St. Thomas, said Thursday that two looters were shot in St. Croix, but there was no word of their condition or independent confirmation. Officials said some looters were local National Guardsmen.

Sixty FBI agents, 50 federal marshals and 150 soldiers of the 18th Airborne Corps from Fort Bragg, N.C., arrived Thursday with orders from President Bush to restore calm to the popular vacation spot.

The rest of the 1,200-person Fort Bragg unit, composed mostly of military police, was due to be in place before day's end today, said Lt. Col. Ned Longworth, the unit's spokesman.

"We are authorized to make arrests only in the total absence of local authorities," Longworth said.

The troops are the first active duty military personnel sent onto the nation's streets in 20 years. Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in Washington they were ordered to shoot if necessary to defend themselves.

A Navy destroyer was anchored off Christiansted, St. Croix's biggest city on the northern coast, and two Coast Guard cutters were off Frederiksted on the southern coast.

U.S. Army C-141 transport planes flew in and out of the airport while Coast Guard helicopters buzzed over the two towns, where most of the island's 55,000 people live.

Hurricane Hugo left at least 26 people dead in the Caribbean. The storm was responsible for at least one death on St. Croix, where it destroyed or severely damaged most homes on the island, about 70 miles east of Puerto Rico.

Bush on Thursday declared the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico federal disaster areas, making them eligible for emergency relief money.

Roads were littered with debris in Christiansted, where hundreds of people lined up Thursday behind water tank trucks with buckets and jugs. Others siphoned gasoline from wrecked service stations. The island still lacked power, water and telephone service.

The looting that followed the storm caused panic and fear among tourists, and many residents armed themselves.

Chief Warrant Officer Layton Timmons of the Virgin Islands National Guard acknowledged that there were isolated cases of looting by Guardsmen that had been videotaped by the Coast Guard.

"When two people start looting, the whole Guard gets the wrap," he said.

Witnesses said much of the sacking of supermarkets was done by desperate families living in a disaster zone.

"We have 90 percent of the island destroyed. This was like an H-bomb hitting St. Croix," said territorial Sen. Holland Redfield. "People just need food. They're panicked. It's a reaction of survival."

Hurricane Cripples Charleston

in the wreckage. Four people died in South Carolina and one in North Carolina, officials said. Earlier, 26 people died as the storm surged across the Caribbean.

One man died in Eastover outside Columbia, S.C., when a tree fell on a car, and a person died when a residence collapsed in Berkeley County near Charleston. A 9-year-old girl died in a house fire near Myrtle Beach that officials said was storm-related, and Riley said an elderly man was found beneath the rubble of a Charleston house.

A 6-month-old baby was killed in Union County, N.C., when a tree fell on a house, officials there said.

The hurricane passed through the city with winds of 135 mph and gusts even higher, the National Hurricane Center reported. Riley called the hurricane a "disaster of extraordinary dimensions." Hundreds of thousands of people were without electrical power.

Thirty major buildings in downtown Charleston were flattened, houses collapsed all over the city, and several people were trapped beneath a collapsed condominium complex, said Elizabeth Tam of the Charleston County Police.

Police were at the scene, but no further details on injuries was available at midmorning.

South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell appealed to the White House for federal emergency aid.

"It is the worst storm, the worst disaster, I've ever seen anywhere," Campbell told ABC's "Good Morning America." "We've got a lot of people missing. We don't know how bad it is."

Linda Lombard, head of the Charleston County Council also asked for aid.

"The storm itself was larger than the state of South Carolina," she told NBC. "We need help. We need copiers. We need planes. We need medical supplies."

The impact happened at the worst time in terms of flooding. Hugo carried with it a tidal surge, or a wall of water, 12 to 17 feet high that coincided with high tide at 2:13 a.m.

At least 20 boats washed ashore, including a 50-foot craft that washed up on a city street, Police Chief Ruben Greenberg said.

In one Charleston neighborhood, oak-lined streets bordered by restored antebellum mansions were under three feet of water, while the open-air market downtown was flooded with two feet of water. A massive wooden church door was tossed on the sidewalk.

Tens of thousands of coastal residents, warned well in advance, spent most of Thursday boarding up homes and businesses, then driving inland to stay in shelters and hotels or with relatives and friends.

Some tornadoes are likely in North Carolina and Virginia today, the Weather Service said. But fears of severe flooding in rain-saturated Eastern states were eased because of the speed Hugo moved up the Appalachians, said Bob Sheets, director of the hurricane center.

The hurricane-force winds first hit the South Carolina coast at 9:15 p.m. Thursday. It was the first major hurricane to strike Charleston since Hurricane Gracie came ashore 70 miles to the south in 1959.

The eye passed over Charleston about midnight. A wall of water gushed into City Hall when the roof on the 188-year-old brick building cracked during the storm. Phone and electric service to the city's command post was knocked out.

Late Thursday, Hugo apparently knocked out power to the entire city, said Lt. K.D. Kennerly, a state police spokesman.

"We've just been flattened," said Jerry Stafford, a spokesman for Santee Cooper Electric Co. "One building just peeled open like a can opener."

"This is, without question, a disaster," said Robin Montgomery, a spokesman for South Carolina Electric & Gas Co. in Columbia. "This is the most devastating experience we've ever had to occur to our system."

Montgomery estimated 300,000 of the company's 430,000 customers were without power and said it would take several days just to assess the damage. "In some cases, you're looking at rebuilding an entire transmission system," he said.

The hurricane blew the roofs off a school in Georgetown and several other shelters in Berkeley County, about 40 miles up the coast from Charleston, said Tom Hudson, spokesman for the Emergency Operations Center in Columbia.

In the midlands, the roof was blown off the Clarendon County Courthouse, 75 miles northeast of Charleston, officials said.

A tornado was reported at Lake Robinson, near Hartsville in Darlington County, and buildings were damaged in the city of Darlington, said Tucker Eskew, spokesman for Gov. Campbell.

Tropical storm-force winds of 40-45 mph were felt as far south as Savannah, Ga. Wind gusts of 60 mph were reported in North Carolina, causing scattered power outages. Winds up to 65 mph were reported in Myrtle Beach, 100 miles north of Charleston.

Uncertain of where Hugo would land, tens of thousands in Georgia and North Carolina evacuated their homes Thursday, leaving virtual ghost towns along the coast.

South Carolina remained under a state of emergency and Gov. Campbell urged coastal and barrier island residents to stay inland until the storm is well passed.

The state Highway Patrol said the storm's 20-foot tidal surge apparently hit the Isle of Palms, one of the lowest-lying areas on South Carolina's coast.

"The only information we have is that it was very severe," said Lt. K.D. Kennerly. "A couple of the other areas also were hit."

Some 1,300 National Guardsmen were called in to assist a mandatory evacuation of coastal barrier islands and shorefront, aid in disaster relief and provide law enforcement.

About 23,000 people had checked into 121 shelters across the state as of Thursday evening, said Bennis Brown, a spokesman for the Emergency Operations Center in Columbia.

American Red Cross relief efforts were buckling under the number of evacuees, said Brian Ruberry, a spokesman in Savannah, who appealed for help.

"Right now the Red Cross is sheltering tens of thousands of people all along the Eastern seaboard. This of course is at the same time that we're sheltering 25,000 people on Puerto Rico and the other Caribbean islands," she said. "Right now Hugo is shaping up to be one of our biggest relief operations of the decade."

The storm has already left at least 26 dead, 50,000 homeless and millions of dollars in property damage in the Caribbean since Sunday. U.S. troops were sent to quell looting and lawlessness in St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Stewart Pleads

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Former major league pitcher Sammy Stewart pleaded guilty Thursday to four counts of misdemeanor larceny in Buncombe County District Court and was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service.

Stewart, 34, was arrested June 30 at Asheville Mall and charged with the theft or more than $350 worth of items from three department stores and a pet shop. He was released on $500 bond later that day.

Stewart has been out of baseball since pitching for the Cleveland Indians in 1987. He also pitched for the Baltimore Orioles and Boston Red Sox.

Stewart is currently on two years' probation in Chelsea, Mass., after a Feb. 9 conviction for carrying a firearm without a license. Also in that case, charges of illegal possession of a Class B substance and conspiracy to violate a controlled substance were continued without a finding until Jan. 9, 1991.

Stewart also was convicted on DUI charges in Baltimore in 1983. He was fined and placed on 18 months probation for that incident.

Headrests Ordered For Trucks, Vans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government, moving to reduce whiplash injuries, will require light trucks, vans and sport-utility vehicles to include headrests on the front seats.

A senator sponsoring auto safety legislation praised the order Thursday by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, but said so many people are driving such vehicles that the safety standards should be almost as tight as they are for passenger cars.

The safety agency, which has required headrests for cars since 1969, said multi-purpose passenger vehicles assembled after September 1991 would have to include the head supports.

The rules cover all trucks and buses with a gross vehicle weight rating of 10,000 pounds or less.

Many manufacturers already include headrests in their vehicles. The order was prompted partly by motorists' widespread use of light trucks and vans as "substitutes for passenger cars," the traffic agency said in a statement.

Whiplash injuries most often occur when a vehicle is struck from behind, throwing the occupants' heads back. Rehabilitation therapy for such injuries often lasts a year or longer, the agency said.

NHTSA estimated the new requirements will reduce the severity of between 510 and 870 injuries each year. It said nearly 18,000 whiplash injuries are reported each year.

"These protections are not luxury options. They are basic protections every family deserves," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo.

He said his legislation would also require that light trucks meet minimum roof and side-impact standards, be equipped with high center-mount brake lights and carry air bags or automatic seat belts.

Danforth said small trucks, minivans and four-wheel drive vehicles now make up about one-third of passenger vehicles sold in the United States.

Nearly 8,300 Americans were killed in light-truck crashes in 1988, he said.

Burials Scheduled For First Of 19 Victims Of Wreck

By Joel Williams
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALTON, Texas — This small South Texas town prepared today to bury the first of 19 victims of a school bus accident as investigators tried to determine why a truck apparently ran a stop sign and rammed the bus into a water-filled pit.

Funeral rites were scheduled this afternoon for at least two of the dead students, said the Rev. Frank Gomez of San Martin de Porres Catholic Church in Alton, about 15 miles from the Mexican border.

"It's a community tragedy. The whole town is crying with the relatives of those who died," Gomez said.

Bus driver Gilberto Pena had picked up the last of his 80 students en route to nearby Mission High School when the bus was hit by a soft-drink truck Thursday morning at an intersection just east of Alton.

Some survivors said the truck driver ran a stop sign and struck the bus, sending it careening off the road about 20 feet and into the gravel pit, which had no fence or railing. The truck remained alongside the road.

Sixty-six people were taken to hospitals; four students and bus driver Gilberto Pena were in critical condition, according to hospital officials.

Truck driver Ruben Perez said his brakes failed, according to Sgt. Israel Pacheco of the state Department of Public Safety. No charges had been filed against Perez late Thursday.

The truck passed a state inspection last week, according to officials at Coca-Cola Co., which owns the truck.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board and the state attorney general's office were at the scene Thursday.

The accident stunned Alton, population 3,000, and the larger neighboring city of Mission, where the junior and senior high school students were headed for school.

"Mi nina!" (my child), cried Gregoria Gonzalez, upon learning her granddaughter, 13-year-old Ruby Lopez, was one of the dead.

More than 50 residents gathered at the edge of the pit until dark Thursday, many still having trouble believing what happened.

"Half the school was crying," said Rosie Gil, 15.

Aurora Hernandez sat with teary eyes in the lobby of Mission Hospital Thursday afternoon, after visiting her 18-year-old daughter, Sara Hernandez, in intensive care. Doctors, she said, were pumping water out of Sara's lungs.

"I thought I was going to die," Alex De Leon, 18, said as he stood in front of Mission Hospital in muddy pants and hospital slippers, with cuts on his face and bruised hands. "It just filled up with water real quick."

"I opened up a window, took out my sister, took out a couple of friends and it was already full of water, and you could smell the diesel," he said.

Four boats, firefighters from six departments and about 10 divers helped in the rescue.

"We had to break the glass of the windows to get in," said Al Nye, a diver who pulled seven bodies from the bus.

The bus, which had 81 people aboard, was designed to carry 83 people, said Herman Light, quality assurance director for the manufacturer, Blue Bird Body Co. of Fort Valley, Ga.

All the dead were 12 to 18 years old, according to police.

Students' families met with counselors and school officials at the city's community center.

Mike Cox, a public safety spokesman in Austin, said it was the worst school bus accident in Texas history. The nation's worst such accident was in 1976, when 28 Yuba City, Calif., high school students and a teacher were killed after their bus plunged off a freeway ramp. In 1959, 27 people were killed when a bus went into a creek in Prestonsburg, Ky.

Mission school Superintendent Ralph Cantu canceled classes today and all extracurricular activities for the weekend "because we've had a tragedy. How can you be cheering at a football game when something like this has happened?"

A community memorial service was scheduled in place of the football game tonight at the school district's Tom Landry Stadium.

Bush Says He Will Veto Democrats' Tax Increase Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush says he'll veto any Democratic attempt to raise taxes for the wealthiest Americans to pay for other tax incentives.

House Democratic leaders outlined on Thursday a tax plan that would raise taxes for the richest 600,000 couples and individuals to pay for new tax deductions for Individual Retirement Accounts. Their plan also includes a scaled-down version of the capital gains tax cut sought by Bush.

The president, interviewed live Thursday night on the ABC-TV program "Prime Time Live," was asked what he would do if Democrats on Capitol Hill succeeded in passing their own tax bill.

"I will veto a rate increase," Bush said. "You heard it for the first time here, but I have sent that signal up to the Hill."

Bush also defended his proposal for a cut in the capital gains rate, saying, "It is not a tax break for the rich." The House Ways and Means Committee approved a version of the president's plan.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said Thursday that Democrats were ready to tackle the tax hike accusations.

"I like how the lines are drawn," Gephardt said. "The Bush proposal gives a tax break for the rich, paid for by the middle class. Our proposal gives Individual Retirement Accounts to the middle class paid for by the super-wealthy."

The Democratic proposal, which House leadership plans to bring before the full House next week, would:

- Eliminate restrictions passed in 1986 so that all workers, regardless of income, could have a deductible IRA plan. The money could be withdrawn before retirement without paying a penalty if used to finance the down payment on a first home or for college education.

- Pay for the IRAs and reduce the deficit by raising taxes on the nation's wealthiest 600,000 couples and individuals.

Under current law, the tax rate for upper-middle-income Americans is 33 percent, but it drops back to 28 percent for those at the uppermost income levels. The Democrats would raise that top rate to 33 percent.

For example, a single person with $75,000 taxable income now pays a top rate of 33 percent on a $10,000 pay raise or investment windfall. But a $250,000-a-year earner pays only 28 percent tax on a similar increase in income.

- Eliminate the 33 percent rate bracket for capital gains, so it would never climb above 28 percent. That would be a tax break for those upper-middle-income people who now pay 33 percent on capital gains just as they do on earned income.

The Democratic plan would be offered as an alternative to the capital gains tax cut approved by the House Ways and Means Committee with the president's support. That plan would cut the effective capital gains rate to 19.6 percent for the next two years and then protect such income from taxes caused by inflationary increases in the property's value.

Kemp Plans HUD Financial Czar

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — HUD Secretary Jack Kemp plans to create a new job of chief financial officer for the department as part of a response to apparent mismanagement and what Kemp says is a "rip-off of the poor."

Claire E. Freeman, HUD's assistant secretary-designate for administration, told a congressional panel Thursday that plans were being drafted for a job with broad responsibility for monitoring the Department of Housing and Urban Development's spending.

"If any agency needs one, it certainly is HUD," Ms. Freeman said. "That will be a critical position at HUD."

Kemp, who has acknowledged up to $2 billion may have been misspent at the department under the Reagan administration, called the HUD problems "the rip-off of the poor in the housing programs" in an appearance before another Senate committee.

Ms. Freeman spoke at her confirmation hearing by the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs. She has been serving in an acting capacity for several months.

A spokesman for HUD, Jack Flynn, said the new position has not yet been formally announced and may be included in a package of departmental reforms Kemp plans to announce in October.

Bush Administration Limits Protection For Buyers Of Failing Thrift Agencies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is limiting the protection it's willing to give buyers of insolvent savings institutions, a marked shift from a much-criticized government policy in 1988 thrift bailouts.

The overseers of the Resolution Trust Corp., an agency created last month to deal with failed S&Ls, on Thursday barred regulators from guaranteeing S&L buyers against losses for longer than six months.

An attorney who has represented buyers of failed thrifts said the decision will leave the government holding more of the sour loans and real estate from insolvent institutions, but will make it easier to sell the S&Ls.

"There aren't many acquirers that are going to be willing to take asset risks," said Thomas P. Vartanian, a Washington lawyer.

As a result, the government will end up holding the assets and trying to sell them separately from the institutions. That, in turn, could make the "clean" institutions more attractive to buyers.

Christie Sciacca of The Secura Group, a consulting firm advising

S&L buyers, said purchasers, if they accept the bad assets, likely will demand more government assistance in exchange for giving up long-term loss protection.

"It's kind of 'pay me now or pay me later' from the buyer's standpoint," he said.

Previously, the government effectively warehoused the bad loans and real estate within bailed-out institutions by guaranteeing the new owners against loss, sometimes as long as 10 years.

But critics in Congress said the deals left the government and taxpayers open to potentially huge and unknowable losses if bad loans continued to deteriorate or real estate prices fell.

Nevertheless, a three-member oversight board headed by Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady voted at its first public meeting to bar long-term guarantees in future rescues.

The short-term guarantees it envisions would allow the government to complete bailout deals swiftly by giving buyers the right to sell back loans and other assets they had not had a chance to fully evaluate. But, buyers would retain that right no longer than six months and there would be no long-term risk assumed by the government.

The oversight panel, which includes Housing Secretary Jack Kemp and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, also told regulators to avoid taking large ownership positions in bailed-out S&Ls, thus exposing the government to the risk of future losses.

In some past deals, the government has remained as a principal owner of bailed-out banks and thrifts.

YOUR EYEGLOSS PRESCRIPTION
What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions?"

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?
A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?
A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?
A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?
A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?
A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580

Mary Davis, right, talks to her attorneys after court gave her custody of frozen embryos

Ruling That Life Begins At Conception Fans Debate

Abortion Foes Rally Behind Finding By State Judge

By Duncan Mansfield
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARYVILLE, Tenn. — A judge's ruling in a divorce custody battle over seven frozen human embryos that life begins at conception has inflamed the debate on when life starts.

Abortion foes took heart at the Tennessee ruling Thursday that custody of the embryos could be awarded as if they were children.

Regina Smith, executive director of the Pro-Life Council of Connecticut, called the court's decision "a victory for unborn children."

"This ruling reflects what pro-lifers have been saying for years — that life begins at conception and should be protected by the laws of our land," Ms. Smith said.

But those who support a woman's right to have an abortion called the decision wrong-headed and found it at odds with the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade that legalized abortion.

"That may be the personal view of this particular judge, but it has no basis in law," said Kate Miclclman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League in Washington. "It also has dangerous implications for reproductive freedom in America."

Blount County Circuit Judge W. Dale Young awarded temporary custody of the embryos to Mary Sue Davis, who wants them implanted in her so she can bear a child. The judge rejected the arguments of her estranged husband, Junior Lewis Davis, who sued for divorce and sought an order preventing implantation.

Child support, visitation and final custody will be decided if a birth results, the judge wrote.

Davis, 31, vowed to appeal to the Tennessee Court of Appeals.

"They are going to force me to become a father against my wishes," he said.

Mrs. Davis, 29, who now lives near Titusville, Fla., said she would wait to try to get pregnant until appeals were over. She said the earliest she would try would be in January.

JUDGE W. DALE YOUNG

Charles Clifford, the husband's attorney, said he believed this was the first time a judge declared an embryo a human being. He said the ruling conflicts with the Roe vs. Wade decision, which said that a fetus in the early stages of development lacks legal rights.

The Roe decision "contains some explicit language that says that a fetus, which of course is much further along than an embryo, is not a human being for the purposes of the United States Constitution," Clifford said.

The judge said he believed Roe vs. Wade didn't apply to the Davis case because it dealt with the constitutionality of abortion, not conception.

"From fertilization, the cells of a human embryo are differentiated, unique and specialized to the highest degree of distinction," the judge said. Thus, he said, "Human life begins at conception."

Hedy Weinberg, executive director of the Tennessee American Civil Liberties Union, said there is no consensus among doctors and scientists supporting the judge's conclusion.

"There is no question that while some people believe that life begins at conception, that is based on religious belief," Weinberg said.

The case grew out of the decade-old technology of "test-tube babies," or in-vitro fertilization. Eggs extracted surgically from a woman are fertilized in a laboratory dish and then can be implanted back in the woman.

The couple produced nine embryos in December with the help of Dr. I. Ray King at a Knoxville clinic. Two were implanted in Mrs. Davis but failed to develop. The others were put in cold storage. Davis sued for divorce in February.

After declaring the four- to eight-cell embryos to be children rather than property, Young in effect treated the case like a typical custody dispute, in which the overriding concern is the best interest of the child.

The Davises' divorce is not yet final. In his ruling, Young instructed Mrs. Davis' attorney to file final papers that would complete the proceeding. Other issues, like the division of household property, were uncontested.

Military Chief Says Drug War May Curb Freedoms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The war against drugs will require more money and possible curbs on some traditional American freedoms, says Adm. William Crowe Jr., the retiring chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The admiral, in a wide-ranging interview Thursday, said both Congress and the nation's taxpayers will have to face the fact that the battle is a full-fledged war and will be costly.

"If you want to stop the drug war, you are going to have to spend more money. I don't see any way in the world to achieve more and spend less," Crowe said when asked if enough funds have been directed to the drug battle.

President Bush and Congress are embroiled in discussions over the cost of the nation's anti-drug strategy, with the Democratic leadership pressing the president to put more funds into the fight.

Crowe, who is scheduled to retire Oct. 1 after 43 years in the service, said the nation's citizens also must face the fact that some of their most cherished rights might need to be curbed in order to purge the drug menace from society.

Asked which rights could be limited, Crowe said, "Search and seizure. The most simple one is random drug testing. ... That is what has allowed us to bring down the usage so heavily in the military."

Crowe said many people "want drugs to go away, but they don't want the quality of their rights eroded."

Crowe also said the nation "might consider doing unusual things with the military" to win the war against drugs.

"We are now looking at contributing much more heavily, particularly in the land border in the United States," Crowe said, indicating that military personnel could be used in stepped-up reconnaissance duties or aiding the border patrol.

"If we want to fight it, and we want to whip it, we want to prevent it, I would suggest that it does require unusual measures," Crowe said.

The admiral also suggested banning the sale of assault weapons. President Bush has banned imported assault weapons but has allowed sales of U.S.-made versions to continue.

Saying the nation has never "seen the fiber of our society eaten away by an insidious, uncontrollable threat," Crowe suggested that in the anti-drug fight Americans might want to use the military in new ways. "That doesn't appall me," he said.

He suggested the military might be used to help patrol the nation's borders, saying, "We're thinly stretched on the Southern border ... and there are a lot of access routes."

He said he could not outline the Pentagon's role in great detail, noting the military's plans were currently being worked out at the command of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

But he said U.S. forces will not be drawn into anti-drug combat overseas, and that Pentagon officials are not interested in shooting down unidentified aircraft suspected of ferrying illicit narcotics into the country — a possibility suggested by some in Congress.

Papers Report Jet Pilot Was Irrational

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Federal investigators are turning their attention to the flight crew of a USAir jetliner after cockpit recorders failed to show why the pilot aborted takeoff, causing the airliner to slide into the East River, killing two passengers.

The New York Times and the (New York) Daily News today quote unidentified authorities as saying the co-pilot said the pilot was "mumbling" and "acting irrationally" just before takeoff.

Reports said when the pilot left the plane he refused to speak to investigators on the advice of his lawyer. The pilot and co-pilot have the right to decline interviews, but the National Transportation Safety Board can subpoena them, says NTSB spokeswoman Rachel Halterman.

The Times said the co-pilot gave his report to Port Authority police, but Port Authority spokesman John Hughes said he knew of no interviews that agency police had with the crew.

The NTSB said it hoped to interview the crew today.

The crash of Flight 5050 late Wednesday split the fuselage of the plane, which was headed for Charlotte, N.C. The tail of the plane was partly submerged 10 feet from the runway while the nose skidded onto a trestle that held runway lights.

Agents Set Up Drug Buy To Assist Bush

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — It wasn't easy, federal officials are quoted as saying, but they moved a planned undercover buy of crack cocaine to a park near the White House so President Bush could show the drug on television and say that's where it was bought.

"We were going to make that undercover buy anyway. What difference does it make where it happened — whether it was in front of the White House ... or in front of the Supreme Court?" William McMullan, assistant special agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration's Washington field office, was quoted as saying by The Washington Post.

The drug was bought in Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House. The park is not a drug market, though marijuana users sometimes are arrested there.

The suspect, who is still hasn't been arrested, already had sold crack to DEA agents on three occasions elsewhere in Washington, the Post reported today.

Reached at home by The Associated Press, McMullan declined to discuss the matter: "I'm not going to tell you anything until I read the article."

Agency headquarters spokesman Frank Shults told the AP that McMullan was contacted by headquarters about the matter but Shults could not confirm what was said. Generally, he said, locations of drug buys are "highly negotiable between the buyer and seller," adding, "That vicinity was as logical as any other location."

The sale of three ounces of crack to an undercover agent was made at 11:30 a.m. on Sept. 1, four days before Bush held up a plastic bag of the substance and told television viewers, "This is crack cocaine. It was seized a few days ago in a park across the street from the White House."

According to the newspaper, the White House asked the Justice Department if it could provide some cocaine for the president's speech; Justice asked DEA and McMullan was asked if he could move a planned purchase "four or five blocks away" closer to the White House.

A planned arrest of the suspect this week fell through when he failed to show up for a meeting with an agent, and DEA hopes to obtain indictments against him next week, the newspaper said.

Council Session

asked if she could make a statement, but was warned off by council members Fridley and Shinn.

Council members also whispered to each other and members of the Mental Health group during the meeting.

Bobby Roberson, director of development, originally called the meeting to discuss the request from Mental Health which will go before the Board of Adjustments during its Sept. 28 meeting. Roberson told the council members and the three representatives from Mental Health the Development Department would not recommend granting the application.

Because of a city zoning ordinance, family care homes cannot be located within a half-mile radius of each other. Within the required half-mile radius of the proposed site at 1100 Ward St., three group homes are now in operation.

The three existing homes overlap the required spacing, but were in operation before the ordinance was enacted.

Today, McCarley insisted Thursday's meeting was not a meeting of the council, and the members attended for information only.

He said council members' meeting with the development staff or an applicant on an issue that could come before the council was not illegal or improper.

"There is nothing improper about anyone talking to council or staff about an issue with this amount of public concern," McCarley said.

"It is difficult to find a treatment site for substance abusing adolescents, I think that is the story," McCarley added.

The Mental Health Department could appeal a negative decision from the Board of Adjustments to a state or federal court, or could ask the City Council to change the zoning ordinance to allow the home.

A request to locate a flower shop in the medical district of the city required a zoning change by the City Council in 1987. The request first went before the Board of Adjustments and then to the Planning and Zoning Commission before being decided by the council.

Following Thursday's meeting Mayor Carter said he did not know why the council members had been asked to attend the meeting. He also said he was surprised to find a majority of the council at the meeting when he came in.

"If a council meeting was called, I should have been informed of the intent," Carter said. "I knew nothing of the purpose of this meeting today. I was informed like any other council member by memo."

The memorandum from Roberson, dated Sept. 19, gave the time and place of the meeting, and stated: "The meeting has been scheduled to go over the Mental Health Department's application for a group home." And the memo told council members to contact Merrill Flood with the development staff for information.

"I came just to listen and not make comment," Ms. Council said. The proposed location for the group home would be in Ms. Council's city district.

Ms. Fridley said council members were likely informed of the meeting because of the sensitivity of the issue.

"I think they were putting us in a conflict role," Ms. Shinn said. And she asked, "Why were we put in this situation today?"

Elections Voided

stations when election procedure calls for at least 11 and that those stations were not open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. as the rules call for.

"It was a whole multitude of complaints," Davis said. "The problem came from the election committee, the candidates and the poll workers."

Ms. Bannerman said some changes will be made before the next election, mainly dealing with the poll workers. She said the poll workers need to be more aware of the rules and the election procedure. The board will meet next week to determine what changes will be made, Ms. Bannerman said.

Davis said the election committee did not have the manpower to police the polls and prevent any actions that did not conform with election rules. That contributed to the decision to nullify the elections, he said. The board consists of five students plus the committee chairman.

Sommers' group had pooled its resources to try to oust the present power structure in ECU student government, which it said is the Inter-Fraternity Council.

"(The decision) demonstrates how corrupt they (student government) are," Sommers said.

He said he was confident that his group had dominated Wednesday's elections and the results should stand.

"I want power," he said, later adding, "Not power for power's sake."

He said the group could not win in another election.

"We don't have the time, energy or financial resources to run in another election," Sommers said in a prepared statement. He said the fraternities on campus will pull together and win a second election.

The votes were never completely counted and are now being kept at ECU's public safety office. Davis said the results would not be made public.

During the press conference Valeria Lassiter, a former presidential candidate, called for Speier's resignation as IFC adviser because she said his dual role presents a conflict.

"He's supposed to represent all students on campus," he said. "How can he be truly objective? He can't help, by human nature, but be biased."

Ms. Lassiter said she had no problems with Speier, contending her allegations were aimed only at the dual role he was performing. "It's not attacking the person," she said. "It's attacking the office."

Speier declined to comment at the board meeting and could not be reached at his office this morning.

Ms. Lassiter, alleging the IFC is racist in its policies, said the council has no black members. She said the absence of blacks on the IFC was because the black fraternities at ECU still participate in hazing. But she said she considers many things the other fraternities do to be hazing — such as making pledges dress in formal attire on campus.

The SCA gave several thousand dollars to fund Greek Week for the fraternities, she said, adding: "I have to pay tuition to support a group not in favor of integration."

anonymously in keeping with British custom.

Dozens of homes near the school were damaged, including four that were destroyed. Witnesses reported hearing the explosion two miles away.

Firefighters used heavy lifting equipment and thermal cameras to search through the debris, said Kent Fire Brigade spokesman Kevin Simmons.

Ten doctors were giving emergency treatment at the scene and 11 ambulances were taking the injured to two hospitals, the ambulance service said.

"They are suffering from flash burns to their head and arms, fractures, and the sort of injuries you would expect after an explosion," said a spokesman for Buckland Hospital in Dover.

A statement telephoned to Ireland International, a Dublin news agency, said "we have visited the Royal Marines in Kent" in response to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's visit to Northern Ireland nine days ago.

The IRA said Mrs. Thatcher went to the British province "with a message of war," but "we still want peace and we want the British government to leave our country." It was signed P. O'Neill, a nom de guerre the IRA usually uses to claim responsibility for actions outside Northern Ireland.

Butterfield said police could still not confirm the explosion was caused by a bomb. "We have a claim from the IRA, via a Dublin news agency, but until our forensic people's investigation is complete we cannot confirm that it was a bomb," he said.

Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey issued a statement in Dublin condemning the attack, calling it an "outrage."

The last IRA bomb attempt on the British mainland was in February when about 60 soldiers were evacuated from their barracks in Shropshire, western England, just before a bomb exploded. One soldier was killed and nine wounded in an IRA bomb attack on an army barracks in north London in August 1988.

In July 1982, eight soldiers died in IRA bombings near the Household Cavalry barracks at Knightsbridge in central London and at a bandstand in the capital's Regent's Park where an army band was playing. Three people died later and a total of 51 were injured in the bombings.

The music school is the training center for young recruits who want to play in the seven Royal Marines bands. Up to 250 young men, most between 16 and 20, are based at the school, where they receive military and musical training.

Historians Have Mostly Ignored Translator Of King James Bible

By Robert Barr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The salt of the earth. The signs of the times. The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak.

Those well-worn phrases, as William Tyndale intended, have become as familiar to the laborer as to the scholar. Incorporated into the King James Bible, they became part of common English, while the author sank into obscurity.

David Daniell, who has edited Tyndale's 1534 New Testament for modern readers, regards the translator as a neglected giant of English prose.

"I think the Authorized (King James) Version deserves its tremendous reputation ... except that it is a stolen reputation from Tyndale, and that is grossly unfair," Daniell said in an interview.

Tyndale, a 16th century scholar-priest, was the first to translate Scripture from the original Hebrew and Greek into English. For that he was branded a heretic, his books were burned and so, eventually, was he. Only a dozen of the books are said to survive.

Tyndale's translations were as much a threat to "the powers that be" — another of his phrases — as the "samizdat" manuscripts of banned books that were passed from hand to hand in the Soviet Union before the era of glasnost.

Thomas More — scholar, chancellor to Henry VIII and eventual Catholic martyr — condemned Tyndale as "one of the hell-hounds that the devil hath in his kennel."

For the new edition published by Yale University Press, Daniell rendered Tyndale's work in modern spelling but found no need to tamper with the text.

"If you read Tyndale, particularly the New Testament translation, against any other prose of the 1530s, you are astonished by its modern clarity," said Daniell, senior lecturer in English at University College, London.

"Tyndale's power is in getting a Greek that is the Greek of the common people into an English that is the English of the common people, with incredible beauty."

Where the King James version differs from Tyndale, it often rejects the Anglo-Saxon word or phrase for what Daniell calls a self-consciously "posh" alternative rooted in Latin.

For instance, Tyndale's "the old things are gone" became "the former things are passed away" in the King James version. If readers prefer the latter, "then Tyndale will be disliked and there is no way to mend it," Daniell writes in the introduction to the book.

He points also to the last verse of the sixth chapter of Matthew: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," says the King James Bible, while Tyndale says, "For the day present hath ever enough of his own trouble."

"One is mandarin. One is saying you have to know the word 'sufficient,' it's a Latin word, you have to be a little bit clever to understand Jesus," Daniell said. "The other is saying, no you don't, because everyone can say each day hath enough of its own trouble."

John Foxe, who compiled the "Book of Martyrs" in 1563, tells of the young Tyndale arguing theology with a scholar, and exclaiming, "If God spare my life, ere many years I will cause a boy that driveth the plow shall know more of the Scripture than thou dost."

There had been earlier Bibles in English, prepared around 1400 by followers of John Wycliffe, but these were translated from the Latin Vulgate version. In reaction, the English bishops in 1408 banned biblical translations.

Tyndale's power is in getting a Greek that is the Greek of the common people into an English that is the English of the common people, with incredible beauty.

Corporation Questions Care Of Some Workers

By John Solomon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KENOSHA, Wis. — After more than three decades as an autoworker and 20 years as a union official, Jim Del Conte was at the pinnacle of his career.

A simple industrial accident, a long series of medical procedures and a doctor's error have left him with the faculties of a child and his peers with questions about adequate medical care.

"I think what has happened to Jim Del Conte is horrible. I love him like a brother and really feel for him and his family," says Rudy Kuzel, a longtime friend and bargaining chairman for United Auto Workers Local 72.

Del Conte's case was often cited by workers and union officials this summer after Chrysler Corp. announced it was challenging the quality of medical care provided dozens of injured workers at its now-closed Kenosha assembly plant.

Chrysler is refusing to pay some 200 workers' compensation claims and is reviewing an additional 300 medical bills. The automaker says it made the decision after an outside consultant determined the care provided to many former Kenosha workers was "inappropriate, unreasonable and excessive."

Del Conte's case is not believed among the claims being challenged.

Because Chrysler has stated it will not hold the workers liable for the bills and will provide them with legal assistance, union officials have given the challenge a favorable response.

"I wish this would have happened five years ago because maybe all that wouldn't have happened to Jimmy," Kuzel says. Kuzel says rumors of bad medical treatment have circulated among workers for more than a decade and he hopes Chrysler's challenge "will give everybody their day in court."

Del Conte, 58, was an executive board member of UAW Local 72 for 20 years. His hard work and friendly demeanor won him widespread popularity among the city's blue- and white-collar ranks.

His wife, Rose Marie, says her husband looked forward to retiring to spend more time with her, his five children and eight grandchildren.

Instead, he spends most of his time sitting at home, dependent on his family for care. His speech is broken, his brain is damaged and his body is partially paralyzed from the waist up.

"Dad is more like a 5-year-old sometimes than a grandfather," says Michelle Scuglik, Del Conte's 37-year-old daughter, who remembers her father as active, strong and consumed with work.

Del Conte's troubles began in February 1983 when he slipped and fell on ice while working at the Kenosha plant, then owned by American Motors Corp. The plant was sold in 1986-87 to Chrysler and closed last December, laying off about 5,000 workers.

Del Conte developed low-back pain and was hospitalized twice for a total of about two weeks immediately after the accident.

According to legal documents and court testimony, Del Conte was referred to Dr. Galo Tan, who has offices in Gurnee, Ill., and is on staff at American International Hospital in Zion, Ill.

Under Tan's care, he was hospitalized several times in 1986 and 1987.

In February 1986 Tan performed a cervical laminectomy in which bone spurs believed to be pinching nerves and causing pain were removed from a vertebra in Del Conte's neck.

The pain continued. Del Conte was hospitalized several more times, exposed to nearly 100 X-rays, and given a variety of treatments, including a series of nerve blocks in which medicine was injected to temporarily stop the pain.

In December 1987, about a year after he retired, Del Conte entered American Hospital for the last time, complaining — as he had in the past — of back and neck pain and headaches.

Tan wrote orders for Dr. Celan T. Ordonez, an anesthesiologist at American, to perform another nerve block, this time in the upper spine near where the laminectomy had been performed.

Ordonez performed the nerve block Dec. 15, 1987, using, among other drugs, Marcaine, a strong, long-lasting anesthetic.

Within minutes Del Conte went into cardiac arrest and then a coma. He was revived but remained in a coma or semicomatose state through February 1988.

Del Conte was moved from American to Froedtert Memorial Hospital in Wauwatosa after the mishap. For more than three months his family traveled 40 miles from Kenosha each day to be with him.

Del Conte was later transferred to Sacred Heart Rehabilitation Hospital in Milwaukee for therapy and then released to the care of his family. He undergoes therapy twice a week.

Del Conte's lawyer, James A. Pitts of Racine, says his client has only partial use of his arms, has difficulty speaking clearly and has an IQ of about 80 because of brain damage.

Pitts filed a lawsuit against Tan and Ordonez on behalf of the Del Contes.

Ordonez' insurance carrier settled before the trial for $920,000. Of that, $75,000 went to reimburse the Del Contes' insurance carrier for medical bills.

A U.S. District Court jury in Illinois acquitted Tan of any wrongdoing in connection with the coma. Pitts had argued Tan should be held responsible because he ordered the treatment that led to the mishap.

But defense witnesses testified that the procedure could be performed safely in the right hands and that only Ordonez could be held responsible.

Pitts says the Del Contes' lawsuit only challenged the procedure that led to the coma and did not raise the question of whether Del Conte's overall care was excessive.

"That was not the issue. But it would have been nice if that stuff came in. ... That may be a separate issue of whether there was over-treatment here," Pitts says.

Vacations Are A Good Deal

Dear Abby: We are an ordinary middle-class family. Our older children are married, and we have one son at home who just turned 15.

We like to take vacations, and our son likes to take a friend with him. For the last four years, the same friend has been going with us. (I'll call him Buddy.) We always pay Buddy's way as though he were a member of the family. I'm talking about food, motel room, which he shares with our son, and whatever it costs to get through the gate at some parks.

We never thought about it until this year, but we resent the fact that Buddy's parents have never offered to pay part of the lodging for their son, gas for our car, meals or anything else. They aren't any worse off financially than we are. They never go on vacations, so they aren't able to invite our son anywhere. They always thank us when we bring Buddy home and tell us he'd never get to go anywhere if it weren't for us.

We're not greedy or cheap, but this kid practically lives at our house during the year. I'm not even sure if it's proper to expect anything. I wish our son could have as nice a free vacation as Buddy gets.

What are your thoughts on this? — Colorado Question

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Question: It would be most thoughtful and considerate if Buddy's parents paid a little something toward their son's vacations, but look at it this way: Your son has a compatible companion on his vacation trips, which makes those vacations more enjoyable for everyone, including you. All things considered, it's a pretty good deal for all parties. Especially Buddy.

Dear Abby: You missed the mark by a country mile when you admonished an affectionate couple to "control themselves" in public lest some onlookers say, "Why don't you two get a room?" (This couple was married, mind you, and spending the weekend at the summer home of his parents.)

Abby, why should they take their cue from his prudish, uptight parents?

Let me quote Henri Matisse: "Nothing is sweeter than love, nothing stronger, nothing loftier, nothing grander, nothing pleasanter, nothing fuller, nothing better in heaven or on earth."

Which is to say, that to observe a couple holding hands in public, or bestowing a gentle kiss one on the other is indeed a joy to behold, and in this world of ever increasing hatefulness, a welcome sign that there may yet be hope for the human condition. — G.G.L. In Los Angeles

Dear G.G.L.: "All the world loves a lover." (Emerson)

"Discretion is the better part of valor." (Shakespeare)

"Moderation in all things is the epitome of wisdom." (Van Buren)

Dear Abby: Concerning the bride's problem of guests "inviting" extra people by filling in the blank on the response card where it has "number of guests":

When my husband and I married 16 years ago, someone suggested that we send out invitations with the blank on the response cards already filled in. This, we were told, would clear up any confusion as to how many guests were expected.

Well, in our case, it didn't work. One couple crossed out the "2" we had filled in and made it "3" because we had "forgotten" their young son. — Can't Win 'Em All

Summer Tourists Find Trendy Vacation Spot

By Nicholas K. Geranios
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STEHEKIN, Wash. — A deer grazes on the lawn of the new, one-room schoolhouse. Nearby, a salesman for a nationally distributed newspaper pitches a vending machine to operators of the only hotel.

It's hard to imagine a more remote corner of the continental United States than this community of 70 people occupying a narrow valley in the majestic Cascade Range. There are no phones and no doctors, and Stehekin can't be reached by car. Nonetheless, people manage to find it.

Some come by floatplane. Others take a four-hour boat ride up Lake Chelan, starting 55 miles south in the resort town of Chelan. There is a third option: a mountain hike on a wilderness trail shared by black bears.

The remoteness of Stehekin — and the adventure of reaching it — have made the town a popular tourist attraction in summer, drawing over 40,000 visitors from "down lake." At the same time, competition for those limited tourist dollars has created a Capra-esque struggle between private citizens and the National Park Service that controls the community, since Stehekin is in the Lake Chelan National Recreation Area adjacent to North Cascades National Park.

Stehekin's location — within the recreation area rather than the park — is important. It means that the 600 acres of private land it contained when it received national recreation area status in 1968 are allowed to remain in private hands.

Still, because of that NRA designation, what might be an obscure civic dispute in another setting is elevated to high drama in Stehekin, where the right to sell cinnamon rolls, rent mountain bikes or operate a tour bus can determine whether a family is banished from the community by economic need.

"It's hard to make a living up here," says Roberta Courtney, a longtime resident who just opened a bakery. "You've got to find employment and make enough in the summer to live through the winter."

Since Stehekin has no farming, no logging and no industry, that means tourism.

But even that isn't easy. The National Park Service has a monopoly on serving tourists, and awards each contract to a lone company. Those contracts require that the concessionaires have a reasonable chance of making a profit.

"This is supposed to be a monopoly," says Steve Gibson, a Chelan resident under contract until 1992 to operate Stehekin's 25-room North Cascades Lodge, as well as a small grocery, restaurant, gas station, boat rentals, tour bus and bike rentals.

The businesses are concentrated at the Stehekin boat landing, where the daily arrival of the Lady of the Lake with hundreds of tourists provides the major activity. Many tourists stay just the hour and a half before the boat returns to Chelan.

"My contract grants security for my investment," says Gibson, who contends he faces heavy expenses for liability insurance and winter services that the government demands even when there aren't any tourists.

The system doesn't sit well with Mrs. Courtney, 27. After launching her bakery two miles from the landing, she was prohibited from selling goods to tourists from a cart. "Is that free enterprise?" she asks.

Also angry are Ron Scutt, the lone schoolteacher, and wife Kim, who rent mountain bikes in defiance of the Park Service. They have been stopped from operating a competing tour bus business, however.

The Scutts contend the current concessionaire is not willing to share the wealth with local residents. "More cooperation would help," Scutt says.

Gibson argues that the private entrepreneurs are free to operate only during the high tourist season and to set their own prices, enabling them to provide cheaper services. That results in unfair competition, he contends.

In one form or another, the conflict has been going on for decades.

There is another side to life in Stehekin: the magical beauty of a mountain valley surrounding a lake situated amid snowcapped peaks and evergreens.

"The first time we came here we never wanted to leave," says Mrs. Scutt, 39. The Scutts' two children are among the 10 students enrolled in the new school. Like all buildings in Stehekin, it's heated with firewood. In winter, students ski to class.

In summer, Stehekin takes on the air of a busy campground.

The landing area for the 350-passenger Lady of the Lake is downright congested as people stream off the boat. Some speak German or Dutch, and many are accompanied by young children.

They're greeted by Park Service rangers in crisp uniforms, or local residents in walking shorts, polo shirts and fashionable sunglasses.

Popular activities include hiking, biking, airplane tours and horseback rides. The lodge has a hot tub. There are evening lectures at the information center on subjects ranging from acid rain to wildlife myths.

Electrical service is provided by a small hydroelectric plant. And the Park Service does have a radio-telephone should emergencies arise.

Still, when the last tourist departs in mid-October, it's hard to view Stehekin as a trendy vacation spot. Four feet of snow falls in winter and the major lifeline to the outside world becomes a monthly supply barge.

"A lot of time is devoted to living," says Philip Campbell, district manager for the Park Service who oversees the 10 full-time rangers in Stehekin. "You move snow and keep the fireplace going."

Residents read, socialize, ski and swap videocassettes, he says. A few have satellite dishes, but most do without broadcast television.

Campbell came to Stehekin — Indian for "the way through" — from Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area in New Jersey, an area with 2 million annual visitors. "I wanted to do this once in my career," he says. "This is probably the largest intact piece of wilderness in the lower 48."

The Scutts, raised near Philadelphia, are typical Stehekin residents. They were dormitory supervisors at Washington State University in Pullman when Scutt decided to return to teaching, choosing to do so in a one-room schoolhouse.

The Scutts have been here 13 years and don't want to leave. But they may be forced to because their oldest son will soon graduate from the eighth grade, and must leave town to attend high school.

Like other Stehekin parents, the Scutts must decide whether to send 13-year-old Huuti to another town alone, split the family with one parent moving with him, or move the entire family.

"We spend a great deal of time over coffee talking about it," says Scutt, who's considering sending Huuti to a Quaker school near Philadelphia.

Tourists arrive in remote Stehekin, Wash., aboard The Lady Of The Lake

The Associated Press

Despite its remoteness, Stehekin has a surprisingly diverse population. One of the 25 Park Service volunteer rangers this summer is Judy Abrams, 21, a student at Harvard University who hails from Atlanta.

Taking tourists on a nature walk along forest trails, Miss Abrams points out edible berries and bear tracks, and identifies trees and plants.

When not leading tour groups, she digs irrigation ditches at Stehekin's only apple orchard, where fruit is picked and eaten by residents, tourists and the occasional bear. She works for lodging and $35 per week.

"I've got to go back to the big city (at summer's end)," she says. "Can you imagine what a change it's going to be?"

Mark Stewart, a year-round resident with three children, spends two weeks each month working on a tugboat on Puget Sound, and the other two weeks living in Stehekin. "I like the isolation," says Stewart, who used to live in a Seattle suburb. "We're out of the mainstream."

The remoteness of Stehekin can be a mixed blessing. While the Park Service can provide some first aid, the closest doctors are in Chelan, and it can take well over an hour to transport an injured person by float plane. At night, the only way to get downlake is by boat. For that reason, pregnant women leave Stehekin at least two weeks before their delivery dates.

"This is not the place to get hurt," says Campbell, who warns tourists about the lack of medical facilities.

After raising two sons in Stehekin, Scutt says the key is just having faith that misfortune will not occur. "You can't live here if you are constantly afraid of what is going to happen to your children."

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: The trend is steady at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 44.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 44.00; Wilson 43.75. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 36.00; Wallace 36.00; Spivey's Corner 36.00; Rowland 37.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 54.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 74 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average of 52.92. The market is lower and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,583,000, compared to 2,287,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market 2 cents higher. Supply light for a good demand. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 18 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 3 cents higher at 2.31-2.50 in East and mostly 2.57-2.67 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 7 cents higher at 5.73-6.08 in East and mostly 6.08-6.17 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.53-3.60; new crop soybeans 5.42-5.78; P.I.K. certificates steady and ranged from 100 to 104 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, stuck in the neutral pattern of the past several sessions. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 1.33 to 2,678.95 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 8 to 7 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 451 up, 393 down and 548 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 21.92 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said nothing had occurred to stir the market out of its recent torpor.

The rally that carried prices to record highs just before the Labor Day weekend crested as it became evident that interest rates had stopped falling.

That left investors in something of a stalemate between those who expect persistent economic growth at a moderate pace and those who still believe a significant slowdown awaits in the not-too-distant future. J.P. Morgan climbed 2 to 41 3/4. Late Thursday the company increased by $2 billion its reserves against problem loans to lesser-developed countries.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .14 to 192.30. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .01 at 380.05.

ECU Hosts Illinois State Pirates Seeking Third Straight Win Under Bill Lewis

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It's been 12 years since East Carolina managed to win three football games in a row, but Saturday, against Illinois State University, the Pirates have that opportunity.

ECU will be hosting the Redbirds in a 7 p.m. contest in Ficklen Stadium.

East Carolina won its first two games in 1985, only to lose the remaining nine games of that season. Seven more were tacked on at the start of the 1986 season, a 15-game losing skid that is the longest in the school's history.

The Pirates will also be going for their fifth straight over the past two years. That would be the best since 1983 when ECU won five in a row. The Pirates opened with a 47-46 loss to Florida State, then beat N.C. State, Murray State, Missouri, Southwestern Louisiana and Temple before bowing, 24-17, to Florida.

The last time the Pirates won three in a row to open the season was in 1977, besting N.C. State, Duke, Toledo and VMI before falling to South Carolina, 19-16.

The 3-0 start is also the best recorded by a first-year Pirate coach. Pat Dye's opening year, 1974, saw the Bucs top Bowling Green, East Tennessee State and Southern Illinois before N.C. State stopped the streak, 24-20.

John Christenbury, whose first team in 1940 beat Kutztown State, Presbyterian and William & Mary, also opened 3-0 before losing to Western Carolina, 25-14. Christenbury, who was killed in World War II, led the 1941 team to a 7-0 record and it has remained the only unbeaten, untied team in ECU history.

This will be the second meeting with Illinois State. The first came in 1982 when the Pirates took a 21-0 win. ISU opened strong, driving to the ECU 31 before a Clint Harris interception ended the drive. After that, ECU drove 58 yards for its opening touchdown as quarterback Greg Stewart took it in from nine yards out. Stewart scored again in the second period and fullback Reggie Branch added the other touchdown in the third period.

Branch rushed 16 times for 109 yards while Stewart completed 11 of 20 passes for 144 yards. ECU held ISU to 54 yards rushing and 111 passing.

This year's ISU team brings in a 1-1 record, having lost a close game to Western Kentucky, 17-12, and beaten Central State (Ohio), 10-9.

"They don't give up long runs and long touchdown passes," Lewis said. "They have 11 guys swarm to the football. They are a tough football team to mount a sustained drive against. They just wait for you to self-destruct with a penalty, a fumble, a missed assignment."

And those sorts of self-destructive problems are just what Lewis is worried about. While he's happy to be 2-0, he would like his Pirates to be more fundamentally sound and in better condition.

But the big condition Lewis may have to worry about this weekend is weather conditions. With Hurricane Hugo having come ashore in the Carolinas this morning, a good deal of rain is expected in the area. For that reason, Lewis has had his players working with a wet football all week to be ready just in case the rains are still around Saturday night.

ISU's second year coach, Jim Heacock, didn't come in and promise immediate miracles last year. Instead, he took a patient approach and started 18 true freshmen at one time or another. Now, he has 36 lettermen and 17 of 22 starters back off last year's team. "They're still young, but they have valuable game experience," Lewis said. "By doing this, he created depth quickly."

After struggling in the first half against Western Kentucky, including four turnovers, ISU rallied from 17-0 to within 17-12 and had the chance to win it. Against Central State, ISU used a strong defense and the kicking game to win. Running back Phil Shields ran a kickoff back 86 yards for his team's only touchdown.

Defensively, ISU hasn't allowed a point in the second half this year.

Lewis is also worried about the fact that ISU is the third team in a row to have an open date prior to playing the Pirates.

That gives ISU two weeks to work out their problems and to prepare for the Pirates, Lewis said.

Ironically, Louisiana Tech, next week's foe, is also open this week.

ISU runs out of the I formation and Lewis says that the Redbirds have two outstanding tailbacks in Vic Northern, the Gateway Conference Offensive Player of the Year last season, and Shields, a freshman.

Brian Chaney, a transfer from South Carolina, has taken over at quarterback after being out last year's starter, Adrian Wilson.

"They have a strong option game with him," Lewis said. "They run the down option or the wishbone option from the I-formation. The object is to take out the man assigned to the quarterback and leave one man out there to cover the pitch. They have been very effective with it."

The Redbirds also use a spread formation that goes from sideline to sideline.

The offensive line is led by center Dan Hackman (6-4, 260, Sr.) and tackle Dave Schurer (6-3, 295, Sr.), both three-year starters.

Heacock comes from a defensive background, learning much of his trade while an assistant on the University of Washington staff. And he calls defensive tackle Scott Underwood (6-5, 240, Sr.) as good as anyone he's been around. Nose guard Todd Gill (6-0, 230, So.) is also a strong player up front.

Inside linebackers Tony Jones (6-1, 225, So.) and Wilbert Brown (5-11, 215, So.) are the leading tacklers on the team.

Corner David Calhoun is a leader in the secondary, but Lewis says he's been impressed by the other corner, Bryan Goode. Free safety Larry Dickinson, a transfer from Navy, is also an outstanding player according to Lewis.

"We're going to have to play a 60-minute game," Lewis said. "This is a special game for them, a double-A team against a single-A team. And you only have to look at the sports pages to see what can happen — Appalachian State-Wake Forest, Northern Iowa-Kansas State; Arkansas State-Memphis State."

"We can't get out like we did Saturday and get knocked back on our heels," Lewis added.

The Pirates go into the game averaging 325.5 yards a game rushing and 114.0 through the air, a total of 439.5 yards a game. They've allowed 109 rushing, 145.5 passing and a total of 254.5. ISU, meanwhile, has rushed for 129.5 a game, passed for 54, or a total of 183.5 a game. They've allowed 168 on the ground and 148.5 passing, a total of 316.5 a game.

Earnhardt Can't Get Protective

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Dale Earnhardt knows from past experience that this is no time to get protective with his lead in the Winston Cup driver standings.

"We've got to take it to 'em — keep working hard and racing hard," said Earnhardt, who has a 102-point edge in this season's title chase going into Sunday's Goody's 500 at Martinsville Speedway.

Earnhardt is trying for his fourth driving title on stock car racing's premier circuit, an accomplishment that would leave him behind only Richard Petty, a seven-time Winston Cup champion. Earnhardt could pick up No. 4 if he could hold off Rusty Wallace, Mark Martin and Darrell Waltrip over the final six events of the season.

Earnhardt has won two of the last three races leading up to the 500-lap event at Martinsville's .526-mile, low-banked oval.

With his victory last week in the Peak Performance 500 at Dover, Del., Earnhardt has 3,397 points. Wallace has 3,295, 104 ahead of Martin.

Earnhardt has earned a reputation as being tough to beat on the Winston Cup trail's short tracks, and the next two races are on layouts of less than one mile in length. If he lives up to past performances at Martinsville — he has won here four times — it would be difficult for Wallace and Martin to catch him.

"I feel good about the races we've got left," Earnhardt said. Waltrip has won the past two Goody's 500s and three of the last four events at the track.

Waltrip also is a three-time Winston Cup champion, but he seriously damaged his chances for a fourth title with an 18th-place finish at Dover. That left him with 3,072 points, 325 out of the lead.

"It's going to be very, very difficult," Waltrip said. "We're going to make every effort, but Dale would have to just about fold up and blow away, and that's not very realistic."

Hugo Not Likely To Cause Any Changes In Schedule

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Appalachian State athletic director Jim Garner has made his own weather forecast for the weekend, with or without Hurricane Hugo and its complications.

"I've declared blue skies and 72-degree weather for Saturday," Garner said. "Anybody who'll believe me, I've got some swamp land for 'em, too."

Most North Carolina college football teams indicate that they are planning to play their games on Saturday, at which time it's expected that Hugo will have long ago passed through the state after dumping its heavy rains. High school games, which traditionally fall prey to rainfall, are expected to suffer the most from the hurricane.

The state's schedule starts with the rivalry between North Carolina and North Carolina State in Raleigh's Carter-Finley Stadium. East Carolina hosts a night game against Illinois State. Appalachian State is facing James Madison in an afternoon game.

Small-college games feature Presbyterian at Lenoir-Rhyne, Kentucky State at North Carolina Central, Winston-Salem State at Livingstone, Wingate at Mars Hill and District of Columbia at Johnson C. Smith.

Although officials at either school could not be reached for immediate comment, but a spokesman in the sports information office at N.C. State said the Wolfpack-Tar Heel game was on as planned for the weekend.

Officials at Wingate and Mars Hill said they had no intentions of cancelling their game, scheduled for a 7 p.m. kickoff.

"As of right now, we're going to cry. Right now, the sun's still shining up here," Mars Hill athletic director Nicky Zuber said in a telephone interview. "I don't think there's any way we would call it off right now. It would take something dramatic Saturday for us to change our minds."

The Presbyterian-Lenoir-Rhyne game is also scheduled for a 7 p.m.

Heels' Defense Getting Better

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Heavy rains will likely make a mess of Saturday's rivalry between North Carolina and 18th-ranked North Carolina State, but one place Tar Heels defenders won't feel wet is behind the ears.

Despite a 13-6 loss to Kentucky last weekend, North Carolina yielded ground grudgingly to the Wildcats. After the Tar Heels gave up a touchdown on the opening drive, it made the Wildcats work for two more field goals, an impressive achievement given the fact that the defense is laden with freshmen and sophomores.

Defensive tackle Cecil Gray, an elder statesman as a senior, says it's just part of the process of growing up from last year's 1-10 disaster.

"That pretty much told us everything because last year, if they would have had some success on the first drive, things probably would have (gone) like that all day," Gray says. "After that first drive, it was just a matter of getting ourselves together and playing. It's all right to bend, but we didn't break."

North Carolina coach Mack Brown says a breakdown in fundamentals led to the Kentucky touchdown.

"We did not tackle very well on that first drive," Brown says. "After that time, we came back and played good defense."

"This is the first football team that was a big, strong football team that we held to one touchdown and then three points in the second half. That doesn't mean we're a dominant football team," Brown says. "It simply means we've made some improvements."

Just how improved will become apparent when N.C. State quarterback Shane Montgomery tries to guide the Wolfpack to its fourth straight victory to start the year. All those victories have come against Atlantic Coast Conference opponents, and defeating the Tar Heels would get the Wolfpack halfway toward its first league title in 10 years.

"Their passing game is ball control, very much like a running game because they can continue to complete passes off (Montgomery's) accuracy," Brown said. "If they throw it three times, they've got a pretty good chance of making a first down."

Brown's defense has definitely caught the attention of N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan. The defensive performance against Kentucky was especially noted.

"Kentucky's offense had little success with Carolina's defensive front," Sheridan said. "Kentucky got good yardage only because their tailbacks broke a lot of tackles."

Sheridan is concerned about his own team's performance, on both offense and defense. To hear him, the undefeated mark is deceiving.

"We knew we didn't have an overwhelming team. We're not going to dominate anybody on the offensive or defensive lines where we can control games," he said. "We have to scratch and claw in every conference game, and the game Saturday won't be any different."

The game could hinge on the condition of the field itself. Last weekend, N.C. State's Carter-Finley Stadium hosted a Rolling Stones concert.

Area Games Are Still On

Only one area high school football game scheduled for tonight had been postponed as of mid-morning.

Farmville Central, which was to host Plymouth in a battle of unbeaten, postponed the game until next Friday, since both teams had an open date then. The game will be played Sept. 30 at 8 p.m. at Farmville.

In some cases, schools were to decide later in the day whether to continue their plans to play tonight, but most expressed the hope that they would be able to play as scheduled.

Conley's Terry Turnage scored three touchdowns and had one two-point conversion to lead the Vikings.

Turnage scored on runs of 45, 4 and 13 yards.

The other score came on a 47-yard run Jesse Corey while Brian Smith passed to Derrick Cox for the two-point conversion.

Corey had 110 yards rushing on 10 carries, while Turnage had 84 yards on 11 carries.

Conley moves to 5-0 and returns to action Thursday at Havelock.

Rose 12, Northern Nash 6

Rose broke a 6-6 tie in the third quarter when quarterback Dante Mayo scored on a one-yard sneak to make it 12-6.

Rose led early when Jermaine Williams scored on a 55-yard interception return. North Nash scored later that period to tie the score.

Williams led the Rose offense, rushing for 119 yards on 19 carries.

Dwight Sheppard and Matt Aldridge each had nine tackles to lead the Rose defense.

Rose moves to 4-1 overall and 1-0 in the Big East, with the next game coming Thursday at home against Kinston.

Chucky Brown Signs With Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Cavaliers have signed their second-round draft choice, Chucky Brown, a 6-foot-8 forward out of North Carolina State, the team announced Thursday.

Brown averaged 16.4 points and 8.8 rebounds a game for N.C. State and was an all-Atlantic Coast Conference selection in his senior year. Brown ranks second on the school's all-time field goal shooting percentage list at 55.7 percent.

Terms and duration of the contract were not disclosed.

The Cavaliers earlier had signed their first-round pick, John Morton, a guard out of Seton Hall.

Angels Work Hard, Get Nothing

After Rally In Ninth To Tie, California Bows In 17th To Indians, 5-4

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The California Angels worked hard just to get into extra innings, then had nothing to show for their diligence.

The Angels, down to their last out in the ninth inning, came up with three runs to tie the Cleveland Indians Thursday night. California got nothing but zeros the rest of the way, though, and had its American League West title chances damaged with a 5-4, 17-inning loss at Cleveland.

The 5-hour, 26-minute game was the longest in the AL this season in both innings and time. It probably felt twice as long to the Angels, who slipped three games behind division-leading Oakland, which beat Minnesota 2-1. California has nine games left, Oakland 10.

"We still have the goal set of winning this thing," Angels catcher Lance Parrish. "It's not impossible. This game didn't make it easier. We've just got to keep our hopes alive and keep playing hard."

Their hopes were dimmed somewhat when Cleveland ended a six-game losing streak on Brook Jacoby's sacrifice fly. Pete O'Brien led off the 17th with a triple off Rich Monteleone, 2-2, California's sixth pitcher.

"We played for 17 innings and a lot of hours," California manager Doug Rader said. "And we came up on the short end of the stick. It's unfortunate. After busting our behinds for as long as we did, I don't think I'm quite prepared for it."

Elsewhere, it was Seattle 8, Texas 3, and, in a doubleheader split at New York, Milwaukee beat the Yankees 14-1 and New York won 5-4 in 10 innings.

O'Brien led off the 17th with a line drive triple into the right-field corner. Right fielder Claudell Washington fell chasing the ball.

Tommy Hinzo ran for O'Brien and Jacoby followed with a fly ball to medium right field. Hinzo beat Washington's throw, which was slightly up the third-base line.

"The whole key was Pete getting the triple," Jacoby said. "Then it gave us two shots to win the game with a fly ball."

The Angels scored three runs with two outs in the top of the ninth to tie the game 4-4. Wally Joyner and Chili Davis led off with singles before reliever Doug Jones retired the next two batters.

Jack Howell singled home Joyner to make it 4-2. Pinch hitter Jim Eppard rolled an easy grounder to second baseman Jerry Browne, who bobbled the ball before throwing late to first, allowing the Angels to load the bases. Brian Downing followed with a two-run single.

Athletics 2, Twins 1

Oakland edged closer to its second straight AL West crown as Mark McGwire finally figured out how to hit in the Metrodome. It was the only American League park in which McGwire hadn't homered — until Thursday.

"The Metrodome hasn't been the greatest of places for me," said McGwire, who entered the game with a .130 average in 46 Metrodome at-bats. "But last time we were in here, I noticed the lights were changed, and I started to hit the ball hard. I was optimistic coming in this time."

He turned that optimism into a double and a 453-foot homer. That turned Bob Welch into Oakland's fourth 17-game winner.

The 1971 Baltimore Orioles were the last team to accomplish that feat and had four 20-game winners: Oakland's other 17-game winners are Dave Stewart, Mike Moore and Storm Davis.

"They certainly have four high-class pitchers, and that's why they are in the position they're in," Twins manager Tom Kelly said.

Kirby Puckett had two infield hits in four at-bats, moving his average to an AL-high .343. Oakland's Carney Lansford was 3-for-4 and is up to .338.

Brewers 14, Yankees 1

Don Mattingly homered in each game, but only his second one meant much. Mattingly's 22nd home run of the season was a two-run job in the bottom of the 10th inning to win the nightcap. Rob Deer had homered for Milwaukee in the top of the inning.

In the first game, Joey Meyer hit a homer and a three-run double and Mark Knudson won his fifth start in six opportunities this season. The game also featured a sixth-inning brawl that cleared both benches.

With two outs and none on, Luis Polonia bunted an 0-1 pitch foul and then was hit on the right shoulder by a Knudson pitch. Polonia raced to the mound and wrestled Knudson to the ground.

Both players were ejected, and the umpiring crew thumbed New York's Mel Hall for keeping the fracas going. Later, Yankees pitcher Kevin Mmahat was ejected after hitting Charlie O'Brien with a pitch.

"Everybody was a little bit edgy with the team playing so badly," Yankees manager Bucky Dent said. "And when Luis got hit, well, he just snapped. He lost it."

Mariners 8, Rangers 3

Randy Johnson, the 6-foot-10 left-hander acquired from Montreal in the deal for Mark Langston, pitched a seven-hitter, struck out 10 and walked two in eight innings. Johnson was 1-4 with a 4.91 ERA in his previous five starts, but he is 2-1 with a 1.57 ERA and 22 strikeouts in 23 innings against Texas.

"For whatever reason, he pitches well against the Rangers," Mariners manager Jim Lefebvre said. "But with the stuff he had tonight, he could have beaten anybody."

"He had his best stuff of the season. He can overpower people with his regular stuff. He doesn't have to try and overthrow because he has such a good arm."

Mike Schooler pitched the ninth.

Pirates...

Tailback Willie Lewis is the leading rusher, with a 79.0 average while backup Denell Harper has a 52.0 average. Fullback David Daniels is next at 47.0 while starter Michael Rhett has a 44.5 mark. Quarterback Travis Hunter is at 42.5 yards per game.

Hunter has connected on 14 of 27 pass attempts for 103.5 yards a game. He has two touchdown passes, but has had three picked off, a subject that upsets Lewis. "I think he's tried to do too much. At times he has to know when to throw an incomplection or take a sack. But he's tried to make too much happen and it's resulted in a big play against us," the coach said.

Top targets have been Daniels, with three catches for 24 yards, tight end Luke Fisher with three for 61 yards, wide receiver Charlie Tyson with two for 52 yards and wide receiver Walter Wilson with two for 25.

One of the most pleasing aspects of the Pirate game has been the punting of John Jett. Jett is averaging 40.9 yards a kick for 10 kicks, and seven of those kicks have been downed inside the opponents' 20.

Not pleasing, however, has been the placekicking game. Robb Imperato has booted five of six PAT, but is just three of five in field goals. "Saturday is show time," Lewis said. "It's time to produce. I'm concerned over missing two field goals. We need to be making those makeable field goals. We know what the range is now."

The Pirates, following the ISU game, will prepare for their next home outing and their first day game of the year, on Sept. 30 against Louisiana Tech, also in Ficklen Stadium.

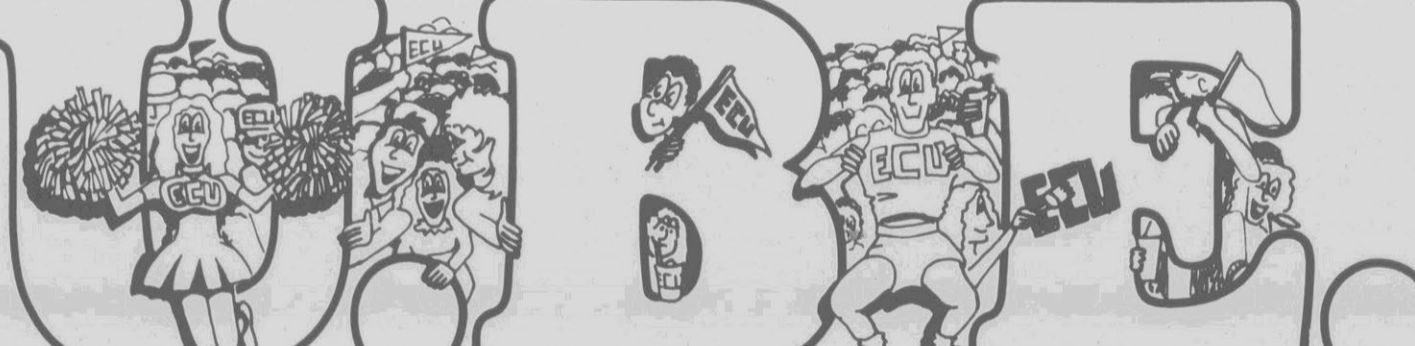

The ECU Athletic Ticket Office will open at 9 a.m. on Saturday for the convenience of fans wishing to purchase tickets.

Michigan Gets Test At UCLA

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's not Ann Arbor, but the Michigan Wolverines should feel right at home when they play UCLA in the Rose Bowl on Saturday. It will be their 13th appearance there. The other 12, of course, came in post-season appearances representing the Big Ten Conference. This time, it is only a regular-season game, but it is a big one as Coach Bo Schemblechler is concerned. His fifth-ranked Wolverines lost their opener to top-ranked Notre Dame last week and are still trying to find their identity this season.

should be interesting," Schemblechler said, referring to 24th-ranked UCLA, which has a 1-1 record to show for its season so far.

The contest will be one of two college football games in the state of California featuring continued rivalries between the Big Ten and Pac-10 Conferences. In the other, No. 25 Ohio State visits No. 12 Southern Cal.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, Michigan State is at No. 1 Notre Dame, No. 2 Miami is at Missouri, No. 3 Nebraska is at Minnesota, Maryland is at No. 7 Clemson, No. 8 Arkansas plays Mississippi at Jackson, Miss., No. 9 West Virginia is at Louisville and

No. 10 Syracuse is at No. 13 Pittsburgh.

Also, No. 11 Washington is at No. 23 Arizona, Kentucky is at No. 15 Alabama, No. 17 Houston is at Arizona State, North Carolina is at No. 18 North Carolina State, No. 19 Washington State is at Wyoming, Utah State is at No. 20 Illinois and No. 22 Oregon is at Stanford.

Michigan and UCLA haven't met since the Bruins won a 24-14 Rose Bowl decision in 1983, and the Trojans will play the Buckeyes for the first time since Southern Cal won the 1985 Rose Bowl 20-17.

UCLA and Southern Cal are perennial contenders in the Pacific-10 Conference.

After their 24-19 loss to top-ranked Notre Dame, the Wolverines will try to regroup in a setting almost as familiar as home. Michigan defeated Southern Cal 22-14 last January and only Southern Cal has appeared in more Rose Bowl games.

A crowd of more than 70,000 is expected for what the Wolverines and Bruins hope is the first of two games between the teams at the Rose Bowl this season. Michigan holds a 5-2 advantage in the series with UCLA.

Southern Cal's Rose Bowl rivalry with the Buckeyes goes back three decades with the Trojans holding a 4-2 edge. But USC coach Larry Smith is looking for his first victory against a Big Ten team in four outings, including losses to Michigan State and Michigan in the last two Rose Bowls.

Southern Cal is 1-1 after a 66-10 thrashing of Utah State last weekend, while the Buckeyes beat Oklahoma State 37-13 in their first game of the year.

The significance of the game, which like Michigan-UCLA could be a bowl preview, isn't lost on Smith.

"It seems like it's always an important game whenever USC and Ohio State play," Smith said. "This week is no different. It'll be a very emotional game with a big-game atmosphere around it."

The atmosphere will be the same in the Syracuse-Pitt game matching two of the powers in the East. Both are 2-0.

While Pitt appears solid defensively again this year, it is Syracuse that has proven to be the stingiest team in the East this season.

In a 10-7 victory over Army, the Orangemen held Army's prolific wishbone offense to 212 rushing yards and permitted it just two second-half first downs. In addition, the Cadets didn't complete a pass against the Orangemen in four attempts.

"We just got through playing against a wishbone team," said safety Rob Thomson, who has helped extend to 50 the string of quarters Syracuse's starting secondary has gone without giving up a touchdown pass. "We've got some big games coming up, and this (Pitt) game is huge."

Week Won't Get Easier For Buffalo At Houston

By Barry Wilner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It has been a tough week for the Buffalo Bills. It doesn't figure to get any less painful in the House of Pain on Sunday.

The Bills, runaway winners of the AFC East last year, lost their first home game since 1987 earlier this week, to Denver on Monday night.

They also lost their Pro Bowl linebacker, Shane Conlan, for six weeks with knee ligament damage.

On Thursday, they cut receiver Chris Burkett, who had bitterly complained about being demoted from the starting team, then walked out of the locker room Wednesday.

Add to that the prospect of facing the Oilers in their home opener in the Houston Astrodome.

"Players come and players go," Bills coach Marv Levy said. "They realize players are going to be brought on every night. Right now our only concern is getting ready to play Houston."

Flip Johnson was promoted ahead of Burkett.

"Here's a guy who came in as a total free agent (in 1987), spent a year and a half on injured reserve," Levy said of Johnson. "He has worked hard, and we've seen him get better and better. ... And we feel the time has come to put him in there and really find out and give him a chance, not just a one-game shot."

The Oilers, 1-1, might be without 1,000-yard rusher Mike Rozier, who is questionable with a sprained knee. Rozier missed the exhibition season as a holdout and was hurt last week against San Diego. Allen Pinkett will start.

"On this team, 'starter' is a weird title because all it means is that you get introduced at the beginning of the game," Pinkett said. "In this backfield, there have been times when I wasn't the starter and I ended up getting the most carries."

Houston has played nine consecutive road games since beating Cincinnati 41-6 in the Astrodome on Dec. 11. The Oilers played all four exhibition games on the road, as well as the first two regular-season games while the Astrodome's seating capacity was expanded to 60,000.

Elsewhere Sunday, unbeaten teams meet when San Francisco plays at Philadelphia and Phoenix is at the New York Giants. In a matchup of winless teams, Washington is at Dallas.

Also, the New York Jets are at Miami, Atlanta is at Indianapolis, Minnesota is at Pittsburgh, Kansas City is at San Diego.

Goody's 500...

First-round qualifying was to be held this afternoon to determine the top 20 starting positions, with the remainder of Sunday's 34-car starting grid to be set in time trials Saturday.

Sunday's winner will get about $55,000 from the posted awards of $424,777, but that is not the only financial incentive at stake this weekend. If the pole-sitter wins, he also will get the Unocal Challenge bonus of $167,200.

Unocal offers a $7,600 bonus each race if a driver can win from the pole, but the purse has grown each week since Rusty Wallace won the second event of the season.

Neil Bonnett, who sustained a broken sternum in a late-race crash at Dover, will not drive at Martinsville and will also miss next weekend's event at North Wilkesboro.

Bonnett will be replaced by Tommy Ellis, the defending Busch Grand National champion and leader in that series this year. Ellis, of Richmond, Va., has won three Grand National events at Martinsville.

"With two short track races coming up, you would have to search long and hard to find a more ideal substitute driver than Tommy Ellis," Glen Wood, Bonnett's car owner, said. "We'll take another look at our situation and Neil's condition after these two races, and decide where to go from there."

Sunday's race is to begin at 12:40 p.m. EDT and be televised live by ESPN.

kickoff. Coach John Perry said it's rained before and he's not worried about it now.

"Looking at it out here today, the sun's shining and there are not many clouds in the sky," Perry said. "We haven't talked about not playing, and we've played in some pretty bad conditions."

East Carolina will be trying for its third straight victory on Saturday night. First-year coach Bill Lewis has already worked his team in the rain in preparation for the swampy evening.

"All of the extended forecasts call for the possibility of wet weather over the weekend," Lewis said. "If the rain comes in like it's predicted, we could have a situation where it is impossible to keep the balls dry."

Rick Strunk, spokesman for the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, said the decision on whether to play or not on Friday night rests with the high school. Strunk said in a telephone interview that some schools would play tonight, while others would take a wait-and-see attitude.

Strunk said some teams might play on either Saturday or Sunday.

Garner said the impact of heavy rains would be to keep people away from the school's annual Family Day.

"I got to worrying about the gate, and then I was thinking that we're not talking about losing property or loss of life or anything like that," he said.

Giants' Putting In Long Hours

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The San Francisco Giants are putting on their own version of the late, late show these days and the Los Angeles Dodgers are paying for it.

Making yet another comeback against the beleaguered Dodgers, the Giants staged a three-run rally in the seventh inning for a 4-3 victory Thursday night that moved them a step closer to the National League West title.

With the victory, the Giants maintained a five-game lead over second-place San Diego and reduced their magic number for clinching the West championship to five.

"If we're going to have a lead and lose it, I'd just as soon be behind the whole game and win it in the ninth," said Brett Butler, who hit a tie-breaking, two-run double in the rally. "Whatever it takes to win."

Butler delivered the game-winning hit Wednesday night, as the Giants scored five times in the ninth to win 8-7. The Giants also rallied to win the first game of the series on Tuesday.

The Padres, meanwhile, kept alive their title chances by beating the Cincinnati Reds 11-7 for their 24th victory in the last 30 games.

In the National League East, the Chicago Cubs beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-1. Coupled with St. Louis' 6-1 loss to the New York Mets, the Cubs moved four games ahead of the Cardinals and reduced their magic number to six.

In other action, Atlanta beat Houston 3-0 and Montreal stopped Pittsburgh 6-5.

Trailing 2-1 in the seventh, the Giants rallied to take a 4-2 lead off Dodger starter Ramon Martinez, 5-4, with Butler's hit the big blow. That was enough to withstand Mike Scioscia's home run in the ninth for the Dodgers.

Steve Bedrosian pitched the last two innings for his 23rd save in relief of starter Kelly Downs, 4-6, who won his first game since Aug. 30.

"We had a lead in every ballgame and lost," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said of San Francisco's three-game sweep, the first by the Giants over Los Angeles in Candlestick Park since 1986. "We played good ball in this series. Everybody's trying. It's not for lack of effort."

During the course of the action, the Giants lost first baseman Will Clark to injury. Clark left the game following a first-inning home plate collision with Scioscia, the Dodger catcher. X-rays were negative and the injury was diagnosed as a bone bruise. Clark's status is listed as "day-to-day."

Padres 11, Reds 7
Jerald Clark and Bip Roberts singled in runs off John Franco, 4-8, in a four-run ninth inning to help the Padres beat the Reds.

The Padres scored six runs in the first, three on a Jack Clark home run, but the Reds scored five times in the bottom of the inning to make things interesting.

"You think you've got a laugh on your hands and before you know it, they're right back in the thing," Padres manager Jack McKeon said. "The way it started, you figure you might get 15 or 16 runs. But they got back in it, and it settled down to a pretty decent game."

Pat Clements, 4-1, pitched one perfect inning and Mark Davis pitched a perfect ninth.

Cincinnati lost its 10th straight, its second 10-game losing streak this season.

Cubs 9, Phillies 1
Andre Dawson, who entered the game in an 11-for-58 slump, hit a three-run homer to lead the Cubs' 17-hit attack.
Greg Maddux, 18-12, pitched a six-hitter to equal his victory total of last season. Maddux, pounded for seven runs and 12 hits in 4 1-3 innings against the Phillies on Sept. 6, struck out six and walked two in his seventh complete game.

Eight Cubs starters had two hits. Philadelphia, which won 9-8 on Wednesday, has allowed 35 hits in two games. Terry Mulholland, 4-7, gave up six runs and eight hits in four innings.

"We have to continue to root for spoilers to beat the Cards and we have to continue to win," said first baseman Mark Grace, who had two hits and drove in two runs for the Cubs.

Mets 6, Cardinals 1

Sid Fernandez pitched a two-hitter and contributed to the offense with his first career home run and two singles as the Mets defeated the Cardinals.

The third-place Mets, winning for the second time in six games, remained 5 1/2 games behind the first-place Cubs.

The Cardinals and Cubs have nine games remaining, and the Mets have 10 games left.

Fernandez, 12-5, struck out 13 and walked none to win for the eighth time in 11 decisions. He stopped the Cardinals' four-game winning streak.

Braves 3, Astros 0

Rookie Tommy Greene held Houston to three hits and Lonnie Smith drove in all three runs with a homer and a single, leading Atlanta over the Astros.

Although the loss was only the Astros' second in eight games, it was their second in three days at Atlanta. They began this series needing a sweep to have much of a chance of overtaking San Francisco in the NL West race.

Greene, 1-1, struck out seven and walked two in his third major-league start. Smith hit his home run off Jim Deshaies, 13-10, in the fourth inning. His run-scoring single chased by Bob Forsch in the sixth.

Expos 6, Pirates 5

Mike Fitzgerald hit a grand slam and Hubie Brooks added a two-run homer to pace Montreal over Pittsburgh.

The Expos, who won for only the third time in 14 games, remained seven games behind the Cubs.

Dennis Martinez, 16-6, succeeded in his fourth attempt to match his career high for victories and ended Pittsburgh's five-game winning streak. Martinez won 16 games in 1978 and again in 1982 with Baltimore.

Tim Burke pitched out of a ninth-inning jam after the Pirates put men on first and third to record his 27th save.

John Smiley, 12-8, had a personal three-game winning streak end. He lasted 4 2-3 innings, his shortest outing of the season.

 With Trump Coup Tommy's help on two key hands, the club had won its first match in the Metropolitan League. So it was with only minor misgivings that the captain once more invited Tommy to step into the breach and display his peculiar talent—neutralizing a terrible trump break

It was not long before Tommy got the opportunity to practice his unusual craft. A well-judged preempt by East nudged North-South into a precarious slam. Six diamonds, which might have been reached had there been no interference, needs only reasonable care as the cards lie. West's double of six spades, suggesting trumps were stacked, was manna for TCT.

Declarer ruffed the opening heart lead and led a trump, inserting dummy's eight when West followed low. East's heart discard did not come as a surprise to anyone. But now declarer needed to find a very precise distribution to get home.

A gleam of light appeared when East showed out on the second diamond. Tommy took four rounds of that suit. Next came three rounds of clubs, and when West had to follow to all of them, declarer was in a position to claim his contract.

West and South were down to nothing but four trumps each. Tommy cashed the ace of spades, then ruffed a heart with the nine. West overruffed with the ten, but was caught in an endplay—forced to lead a trump away from the queen into declarer's king-jack tenace. An amazed West found that three possible trump tricks had been whittled down to a mere one!

Movie About Police Anti-Drug Unit Could Become TV Series

By Robert Macy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — The Nasty Boys, a tough anti-drug police unit with a penchant for breaking down doors and manhandling drug dealers, touts the motto "We Make House Calls." That's the plan tonight when the TV version of the drug busters visits homes across America (NBC, 9-11 p.m. EDT). Television crews spent several weeks here last spring putting together a two-hour movie they hoped might evolve into a new series this fall. The show failed to make NBC's series schedule, but producer Dick Wolf hopes "The Nasty Boys" may still achieve that status, if the public reacts well to the movie.

The show, with Hollywood's usual poetic license, is based on the activities of a crack anti-drug unit formed by the North Las Vegas Police Department last year to fight the city's growing drug problem.

The Nasty Boys, an elite band of undercover cops, wage a high profile battle against the city's drug dealers — breaking into crack houses while wearing black Ninja-type outfits and masks to hide their identity.

City officials say the no-nonsense approach, using tactics befitting the group's name, is paying off by making a dent in the drug problem.

Wolf, whose credits include co-producer of "Miami Vice" and executive consultant on "Hill Street Blues," sees "Nasty Boys" as the first of the '90s-genre cop shows.

"We want to tell the story that there is literally a war going on against drugs," Wolf said. "This is unapologetically pro-police. This is pro-attitude that this drug problem has got to stop."

Shooting locales ranged from a cemetery to crack houses to $4 million mansions. There were helicopter shots along the Las Vegas Strip and shooting in and around the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel and Casino.

The idea was brought to Wolf after a segment on the anti-drug unit was featured on "The Reporters" TV show. The Nasty Boys had allowed a "Reporters" camera crew to follow them around on some drug raids. "They showed me this picture of the Nasty Boys, with their masks, Ninja outfits and exotic weapons, posed against a brick wall covered with graffiti," Wolf recalled. "I told them, 'This is a hit show.'"

Wolf said he took the idea to Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC entertainment, in mid-January and received the green light.

Network executives did not see the finished version before setting the fall schedule, Wolf said.

"There'll be some touching stuff, some stuff with families," Wolf said. "It will show how five guys with diverse backgrounds are molded into this very special team."

"It is exploitative in a most positive way. These cops are heroes. We've stayed away from gory violence. There are no gratuitous killings."

"These guys are waging a war, but they're not vigilantes. They're good cops. They use weapons most people wouldn't use, but they're facing guys who do the same. They're not up against guys who play by the rules."

Wolf admits to use of poetic license in developing a "Nasty Boys" story line. In the movie, six members of a police tactical team are killed by drug dealers and the city's mayor orders formation of a group to handle the drug problem by using some of the enemy's tactics.

NAB Eyes New Codes For Decency

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Responding to growing concern over raunchy radio and TV, the nation's major broadcasting group is considering restoring program codes that were dropped under government pressure in the 1970s.

The National Association of Broadcasters will canvass its members and study whether to restore the codes because new Federal Communications Commission Chairman Alfred Sikes urged radio executives to shut down "shock radio," NAB spokesman Walt Wurfel said Thursday.

Sikes urged broadcasters at a convention in New Orleans last week to shun programs that use sexually and racially offensive humor to attract audiences.

Sikes said broadcasters should revive the codes that were abandoned in the mid-1970s after the Justice Department initiated an antitrust lawsuit against provisions of the codes involving advertising. New codes should be drawn up by the industry, without government pressure, said Sikes, the chief regulator of the radio and television industry.

Wurfel said the NAB's executive committee, in response to Sikes' comments, told staff members "to conduct an assessment of the feasibility, effectiveness, legal and legislative elements of — and member support for — devising a statement of standards or guidelines concerning programming in the public interest."

Sikes, a former radio station owner who came to the FCC six weeks ago, told the broadcasters' convention they were not "simply recorders, transmitters and antennas. We are what we broadcast."

He noted that on Aug. 24 the FCC announced it was considering action against three radio stations in Chicago; San Jose, Calif.; and Indianapolis for possibly broadcasting indecent programming during daytime hours.

That action was widely viewed as a warning shot across the bow of broadcasters from a new, non-sense FCC. Sikes and new commissioners Andrew Barrett and Sherrie Marshall faced tough questioning during their Senate confirmation hearings in July on what they proposed to do about indecency on the airwaves.

Wurfel said the NAB, which represents more than 6,000 radio and TV stations and the major radio and TV networks, was hesitant about new codes in light of the Justice Department attack on the old codes.

"We don't desire to get into any further antitrust action," Wurfel said, adding that NAB also has to weigh First Amendment concerns and community concerns.

The House earlier this year passed a bill that would give the television industry a three-year antitrust exemption so it can try to adopt voluntary guidelines on violence.

The Senate passed a similar measure that added antitrust exemption for guidelines on portrayals of drug use and sex, and differences in the two bills are now being worked out in a House-Senate conference committee.

Child Support

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has ordered Randy Jackson, the brother of pop superstar Michael Jackson, to pay $3,000 a month in child support to a woman who claims she is pregnant with his child.

Neither Jackson nor his attorney appeared in the case, and the default ruling was issued Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Frances Rothschild for Alejandria Loaiza, 20, according to celebrity divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson.

The order was based on the uncontested testimony of Ms. Loaiza, a native of Colombia, who said she had been living with the 26-year-old Jackson for about 2½ years.

Connie Chung Defends Use Of Re-Creations For News

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — On Saturday night, James Earl Jones, a Tony award-winner, will portray Rev. Vernon Johns, an early civil rights activist in Alabama. A docudrama? Sort of. But it's from CBS News, not the network's entertainment division.

The dramatization appears on "Saturday Night With Connie Chung," a new series whose executive producer, Andy Lack, ran the "West 57th" series that Ms. Chung's series succeeds.

He calls it a new effort a "contemporary 'You Are There.'" That's the CBS News series of the 1950s that, with Walter Cronkite anchoring, re-created such historical events as Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

But there's a difference. Ms. Chung says the technique her show uses is that of the Warren Beatty film, "Reds," which in telling the story of John Reed, an American radical, interspersed interviews of people who knew him.

The first half of Saturday's show will use that technique, she says. CBS wouldn't provide a tape of the show for advanced screening, but the balance is apparently devoted to interviews concerning the modern relevance of Johns' urging his middle-class black congregation to fight their complacency and stand up for their rights. Johns died 24 years ago.

Lack's new venture comes at a time old network strictures against re-creations in news programs are easing, at least in NBC's "Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow."

But Saturday's show is not Lack's first re-creation for a news program. He did it in 1983 with "The Plane That Fell From the Sky," a CBS Reports special about a jetliner that plummeted 33,000 feet before its pilots regained control.

In that re-enactment, he used the plane's real crew and 39 passengers from the near-fatal flight. But his use of an actor, however distinguished, in a news series has raised eyebrows among news traditionalists.

Some, like ABC's Sam Donaldson, oppose re-creations in general, saying that no matter how responsibly and honestly done, they cause questions in the minds of viewers about what is real and what isn't.

Lack says there won't always be re-creations on Ms. Chung's show "but we're certainly not shy about them and we'll do them often."

Asked how he would respond to critics of re-creations in a news program, he responded: "This program speaks for itself. It needs no defense or explanation."

For that matter, he says, he finds debate over re-creations "academic, pointless, foolish. I think it's just dumb."

Ms. Chung says she doesn't feel uncomfortable about dramatizations, at least the kind that will be in her show. "Not one bit," she says. "You'll see very clearly how it works. ... I think it works beautifully."

Good Reason

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Bob Edwards, host of National Public Radio's "Morning Edition," has a simple reason for his choice of career.

"I can't begin to describe how much fun radio can be," he said Wednesday at Centenary College's annual media luncheon.

Colombian Minister Resigns As More Bombs Go Off

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — The nation's justice minister reportedly resigned after three months of death threats by drug lords, and security was tightened in Bogota after 12 bombs shook the capital.

Radio Caracol, a usually reliable private radio network, reported Thursday night that President Virgilio Barco accepted Monica de Greiff's resignation.

The report could not be confirmed. The presidential palace said official confirmation had to come from Barco, who met with Ms. de Greiff late into the night.

The 32-year-old lawyer won praise worldwide after she traveled to the United States in August to ask for help protecting hundreds of judges facing death threats by cocaine traffickers.

The traffickers have repeatedly threatened Ms. de Greiff, her 3-year-old son and husband since she took office July 16.

They stepped up the threats when the government began cracking down on the cocaine cartels after Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, the country's leading presidential candidate, was assassinated Aug. 18.

Six people have served as justice minister in the past three years and nearly all were threatened with death.

One of Ms. de Greiff's predecessors was killed by drug lords in 1984 and another was wounded on a Budapest street in 1987 after becoming the ambassador to Hungary.

Radio Caracol said Barco accepted Ms. de Greiff's resignation and offered her the ambassadorial post in Portugal but that she declined.

The news program TV Hoy reported Arturo Ferrer Carrasco, a 44-year-old economist with the Finance Ministry, would replace Ms. de Greiff.

Colombia's cocaine traffickers have responded to the government's crackdown with bombings and arson, and a new wave of explosions rattled Bogota Thursday.

The blasts damaged nine offices of Colombia's two main political parties and a 10th bomb damaged a bank earlier in the day. Two people were reported injured.

Thursday night, blasts could be heard throughout Bogota. Police said at least two bombs damaged a clinic, a bank, a police station and a street. Another bomb went off near the military hospital, injuring a young boy, police said.

The damage was believed to be in the millions of dollars. Hundreds of army troops, police and private security guarded buildings across the city of 6 million people.

The bombings came as the Colombian Senate debates allegations that government officials and others have conspired with drug traffickers.

This week, the lawmakers asked the government to make public a list that allegedly contains the names of government officials, politicians, journalists and officials in the army and police believed to be on the payroll of cartels.

Barco said no such list exists.

On Thursday, newspapers published the names of 25 lawmakers and politicians recently denied visas to the United States, allegedly because they had drug connections.

Hussein's Jordan Tip-Toes Toward Wider Democracy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein is pushing Jordan toward its first nationwide elections in 22 years, an event that could transform a country crucial to the Middle East's balance of power.

More than 1,000 candidates are testing their chances for the 80 Parliament seats at stake Nov. 8 as a push toward greater democracy and looser government control sweeps across the kingdom. Martial law has been in place since the 1967 war with Israel.

"People are hungry for elections, for participation, after a long absence," said Taher Masri, who resigned as deputy prime minister in August in order to seek a seat from Amman. Active Cabinet ministers are not allowed to run.

The new Parliament will replace one originally elected in April 1967, two months before the Six Day War with Israel, and then became largely ineffective. The body was suspended by Hussein in times of difficulty and then lost about half its membership when the king renounced Jordan's claim to the West Bank last year. No West Bankers will be allowed to run for the new Parliament and candidates who do run cannot do so under the banners of political parties, which have been banned since an attempted coup in 1957.

The election, however, accompanies a basic change in the nature of the Jordan itself.

Hussein's renunciation to claims to the West Bank, seized by Israel in 1967, ended Jordan's main rivalry with the Palestine Liberation Organization and helped accelerate a thrust toward settlement of the 40-year-old Arab-Israeli conflict.

Hussein's Hashemite kingdom of about 3 million people — roughly half of them Palestinians — has now turned inward in a struggle to reform an economy saddled with $8.3 billion in debts, a battle dramatized by widespread rioting in April against economic hardship and government repressiveness.

"This is a turning point in our life," candidate Masri said. "The past era is gone and gone probably forever."

Liberals like Masri say the elections should lay the groundwork for a stable, constitutional monarchy with a working Parliament to thresh out grievances.

The outgoing 60-member Parliament was suspended in 1974, then revived in 1984, with a handful of local elections to replace members who had died.

Hussein scrapped the Parliament altogether last year as part of his renunciation of claims to the West Bank. The economic riots prodded the government to advance the date for the elections.

Most previous Parliaments were little more than government-dominated talking shops. But Masri and other officials resigned from powerful posts to run in the elections, indicating their faith that the new body will have a significant role.

Skeptics fear, however, the voting could once again unleash radical emotions among frustrated Palestinian refugees and unemployed youngsters like those who threatened to rip the kingdom apart in the late 1950s and again in 1970.

Jordan's ability to cope with change is vital to any Arab peace with Israel, whose longest border is with Jordan. Many in the kingdom still have family and economic ties with the occupied West Bank and with the Gaza Strip, which was administered by Egypt until Israel seized it in the 1967 war.

Jordan is also a vital buffer between four strategic countries: Israel, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Iraq. It separates the powderkeg of the Arab-Israeli conflict from the world's main sources of oil.

The Palestinian guerrillas who tried to topple Hussein in 1970 are today more allies than rivals and are taking a hands-off approach to the elections. While roughly half of Jordanians are from Palestinian families, many over the past 40 years have come to identify with Jordan, the only Arab country to give them passports.

The royal family's descent from Islam's prophet, Mohammed, has always helped blunt radical Islamic dissent.

Americans and Israelis want Jordan as a watchdog over the 1.7 million Palestinians on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip to help prevent an independent Palestinian state.

The PLO proposes an eventual confederation of equals between Jordan and that state. Israeli hardliners led by former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon want to make Jordan itself a Palestinian state, an idea bitterly opposed by most Jordanians and Palestinians.

Hussein's nightmare is the call by some Israeli radicals to push West Bank Palestinians into his kingdom, swamping it with refugees for a third time to threaten the Hashemite throne.

Bush Seeks Election Aid For Nicaragua

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, declaring "we are at a watershed in Nicaragua," asked Congress Thursday to provide $9 million to help guarantee that presidential elections scheduled there next February are conducted fairly.

The request came as President Bush met with former President Carter, who, in contrast to the administration's skepticism, said that he was confident the balloting would be free and fair.

The administration's funding request was made by Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who called the election "a rare chance for us to support democratization in a totalitarian society."

The White House has built its hopes around the presidential candidacy of Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, the leading opponent of President Daniel Ortega. Baker said that she had a chance of victory against the incumbent.

But, he said, "We shouldn't be under any illusions about the battle they face."

With Nicaragua's one-month voter registration season approaching in October, the administration is hoping for quick action by Congress to make the money available for immediate use.

Under the administration's proposal, $5 million would be given to the National Endowment for Democracy, to pay for such activities as election monitoring, voter registration, and party-building. The endowment is a private foundation created by Congress in 1982 to support democratic elections.

The administration said an additional $4 million could help pay the expenses of monitoring the elections by outside groups and for registration of Nicaraguan expatriates. And some of the funds would be set aside to comply with a Nicaraguan law requiring that any foreign money entering the country in connection with the election be matched with equal funds given to the government's Supreme Electoral Council.

Carter, chairman of an international group planning to monitor the elections, said that the money is needed to make sure that the opposition parties have adequate funds to make the playing field level, and to monitor the elections between the opposition and the governing Sandinista regime.

Polish Court Legalizes Pro-Labor Student Corps

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — The Supreme Court today legalized the pro-Solidarity Independent Students Association, which was declared illegal after the 1981 martial law crackdown.

The students won the right to include a strike provision in their charter, a clause that had blocked legalization of the association even after the Solidarity movement was legalized in April.

The announcement in a courtroom packed with more than 100 spectators was greeted with chants of "NZZ, NZZ" — the Polish initials for the group that since 1980 has been an alternative to the Communist-sanctioned Polish Students Association. "It should have happened a long time ago," one student said.

NZZ is Poland's largest student union with a strong and vocal following at universities and high schools. It is the last of the Solidarity movements to be legalized following the ban on associations independent of the Communist government that was imposed after the December 1981 martial law crackdown.

NZZ was denied registration on May 23 even though Solidarity and the independent farmers union Rural Solidarity were legalized after April accords reached in "round-table" talks with Communist authorities.

The court said in May that the labor law did not apply to students and that they therefore could not claim the right to strike.

Registration was delayed again Sept. 9, even though Solidarity's Tadeusz Mazowiecki had been installed as the East bloc's first non-Communist prime minister and the government prosecutor told the court it had no objection to the group's registration.

Even though it was banned, NZZ has since 1987 been well represented at Solidarity demonstrations and has staged its own protests to draw attention to problems at schools, including low stipends, outdated equipment, the lack of research and library materials and other shortages.

The pressure to legalize NZZ grew as the Oct. 2 start of the new academic year approached. There was concern that failure to register the association would be met by student protests that could create instability as the new government tries to reverse Poland's economic crisis.

Students, joined by professors and members of parliament, celebrated the decision in the hallways of the Warsaw courthouse.

"We've been functioning anyway but it is nice to be legal again," another said.

Education Minister Henryk Samsonowicz, a Solidarity supporter who was Warsaw University rector until he was removed under martial law, met Wednesday with the national coordinating committee of NZZ to discuss the way the union would function after it was legalized.

Arafat Urges Israelis To Talk Peace

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAIRO, Egypt — PLO leader Yasser Arafat appealed to Israel to join him in peace talks and said his group had not taken a position on an Egyptian proposal.

In freewheeling banter with local and foreign reporters at a Cairo news conference Thursday, Arafat called the Israelis his "cousins" and said Israel's crackdown on the Palestinian uprising violates Jewish religious teaching.

Arafat asked the Israeli press to convey to their leaders and people his "invitation" to withdraw from the occupied territories, then join him in a dialogue and a peace treaty.

"I want you to carry this invitation to all Israeli people and to all Israeli officials, and I want to have an answer and a response to what I said," he told the journalists.

The Israelis refuse to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which they denounce as a terrorist group.

Arafat arrived in Egypt earlier Thursday to meet with President Hosni Mubarak on the Egyptian leader's 10 suggested changes in an Israeli plan.

The Israeli plan calls for Palestinian elections leading to negotiations between Israel and representatives of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip on limited autonomy.

In an effort to overcome Arab objections, Mubarak has proposed basing negotiations on the land-for-peace principle and letting the 140,000 Arabs in Israeli-annexed east Jerusalem vote in the Palestinian elections.

However, he has not demanded an explicit PLO role in representing the territories and has not called for the creation of a Palestinian state.

Arafat said the PLO had not taken a position on Mubarak's suggestions. "All these subjects are still under discussion, and there is an effort by Mubarak and other friends to reach an overall solution to all these questions," Arafat said.

In recent days, Mubarak has been trying to sell Israelis on his proposals through a media blitz. In radio and newspaper interviews, he has appealed to Israeli citizens to challenge their government's refusal to negotiate with the PLO.

In Israel, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the right-wing Likud bloc told high school students in Tel Aviv he thought the Egyptian leader was "only kidding around" by his appeals.

"I think that our people rely on the government," Shamir said. "We are a democratic country. If the people didn't rely on the government, it wouldn't stand. It's not like in Egypt."

However, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin of the left-of-center Labor Party praised Mubarak's efforts and rejected right-wing criticism of Mubarak's appeals.

Glomp Agrees Convent Should Be Moved

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — British Jewish officials today welcomed a letter from Cardinal Jozef Glomp, the primate of Poland, in which he changed his position on a disputed convent at Auschwitz and said it should be moved.

The letter appeared to reflect a radical change of heart on Glomp's part.

He wrote that he now realized that "the shrill voices" and "aggression" in the campaign against the convent at the Nazi death camp in southern Poland did not represent world Jewry.

"Auschwitz should never be a place of controversy," Glomp's letter said.

On Tuesday, the Vatican issued a statement saying the convent should be moved.

The primate had opposed moving the convent despite an agreement between Catholic cardinals and Jewish leaders that the Carmelite nuns would be moved to an interfaith cultural center to be built further away from the site of the camp.

The letter was made public by Sir

Sigmund Sternberg, a philanthropist who heads the International Council of Christians and Jews. Glomp handed the letter to Sternberg at a dinner at the Polish Embassy in London on Tuesday.

It said: "It is essential not only to move the convent outside the perimeter of the site, but also to set up the new cultural center."

Asked if this meant an end to the controversy, Hayim Pinner, secretary general of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, said: "It doesn't put an end to it. The controversy will be at end when the convent is moved as promised by the agreement," signed in Geneva in 1987.

But Pinner told The Associated Press the letter "shows a better understanding on the part of those who so far have not been ready to implement the agreement. It's progress, and we hope that it will now be implemented."

Shimon Cohen, a spokesman for the chief rabbi of Britain, Lord Immanuel Jakobovits, said the letter "will undoubtedly be a substantial contribution to restoring Catholic-Jewish harmony."

Saudis Behead Terrorists

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi judicial authorities Thursday publicly beheaded 16 Kuwaiti nationals in the Moslem holy city of Mecca, where they were accused of setting off bombs July 10 as more than 1 million pilgrims were performing Islamic rites in and around the Grand Mosque.

On the eve of the executions, one of the largest public ones in recent years, a senior Saudi government official said in an interview here that Iran was behind the "terrorism" committed by the Kuwaitis. Thursday's official announcement did not mention Iran, but Thursday night Saudi television aired a portion of the video-taped confession of one of the men beheaded.

The Kuwaiti, identified as Mansour Mehmeid, 32, said he and some of his accomplices "collected the explosives from the back door of the Iranian Embassy in Kuwait." Mehmeid, an elementary school teacher before his arrest, was described as one of the leaders of a radical Moslem Shiite cell in Kuwait.

Kuwait did not immediately react to the executions. The sheikhdom's ruler, Emir Jaber Sabah, was in Baghdad on a state visit. There have been persistent reports in recent weeks that Kuwait's large Shiite community was distressed over the detention of the Kuwaitis and their trial under Saudi religious law, where the death penalty is frequently imposed.

On Aug. 6, the Kuwaiti ruler sent his foreign minister to Saudi Arabia to meet with King Fahd and express Jaber's "personal interest in the detention by Saudi authorities of Kuwaiti pilgrims still under interrogation for suspected involvement" in the bombings, according to Kuwait's official news agency.

Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, expressed concerns earlier this month about the detention of the Kuwaiti Shiites and reports that some of them had been subjected to torture.

The Saudi Interior Ministry, headed by Prince Nayef, the brother of King Fahd, announced the executions on state-run Riyadh radio after they occurred in conjunction with Thursday prayer services in Mecca, which is closed to all but Moslems.

Come Grow With Us!

Looking for a JOB...OR A CAREER?!

Mike Leith and Associates operate over 20 dealerships in Carolina, Virginia, and Tennessee. All are operated by men and women who began their career a relatively short time ago in our Raleigh dealerships.

We are like the Marines—we want a few good people who are looking for rapid advancement in a most exciting field. It makes no difference whether you have automotive experience or not! We're looking for individuals who understand how vital a total commitment to each customer really is—people who want to make a career of the automobile business.

College education is fine—but not a requirement. Being "street smart," being honest, and having great determination to succeed are the key characteristics we are searching for. By the way, when we say we're an equal opportunity employer, we mean it (It isn't just lip service). Several of our dealerships' chief executives are Black and we also have several chief executives who are women.

For the right people—honest, dedicated, and determined—we think our company offers the greatest opportunity for personal growth and enrichment. Please call LaVare Wilson, Mike Inabinett or Ron Williams and let us know when it would be convenient for you to interview with us. Thank you for your time in reading this.

USDA Study Says Farmers Will Keep Up Over-Production

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The problem of over-production in U.S. agriculture will be around for at least another 40 years, says a new study by the Agriculture Department.

Rising crop yields are expected to increase more than enough to offset U.S. population growth and export demands. That will result in 40 percent less farmland needed for such major crops as wheat, corn and soybeans.

The new projections were included Thursday in a 280-page appraisal of the nation's soil and water resources ordered by Congress in the Resource Conservation Act of 1977.

In its first RCA appraisal published in 1981 and using information from the 1970s, USDA analysts said almost 390 million acres would be required by 2030. By comparison, slightly more than 380 million acres were used for crops in 1982, the base year for the new projections.

Under "intermediate" conditions assumed in the latest study, cropland acreage in 2030 is projected to be slightly less than 220 million acres.

"The differences in the two projections of acreages needed do not result primarily from differences in projected demand (for commodities)," the report said.

"In fact," it continued, "for the major crops — corn, sorghum, soybeans and wheat — projections of quantities needed are higher in the second appraisal than in the first, largely because projected export demands are higher."

The report said domestic use of some grains in 2030 may be lower than previously anticipated because of improvements in livestock feeding efficiency and much greater use of pasture and forage. Also, per capita projections of red meat consumption are lower in the new appraisal.

But the main reason for the differences in the amount of cropland that will be required in 2030 stems from the projected rates of crop yields.

For example, in the first appraisal, average U.S. corn yields in 2030 were projected at 144 bushels per acre. The 1989 harvest is currently estimated at 112.4 bushels per acre.

The new appraisal puts 2030 corn yields at 198 bushels per acre. Sorghum would go to 127 bushels per acre, compared with 67 projected in the first appraisal and this year's average of 62.6 bushels.

Wheat would go to 70 bushels per acre from 42 projected earlier and this year's average of 32.9. Soybean yields were projected at 69 bushels per acre, compared with 45 earlier and 32 this year.

"The assumptions about yield increases mirror the vastly changed view of the future that has developed during the past decade," the report said. "In the early 1970s, many studies indicated productivity was increasing more slowly than in preceding decades."

At that time it appeared to researchers that "without significant technological breakthroughs and increased investment in research and extension programs, the rate of growth in productivity will probably continue to decline."

But later research "provided a basis for greater optimism," the report said. In scientific meetings in 1982 and in 1986, a view developed favorable to continued technological progress in crop and livestock production as well as in conservation of the nation's resources.

As in the first RCA appraisal, the second found major problems confronting U.S. soil and water resources: erosion, salinization, range deterioration, pollution, destruction of wetlands and wildlife habitat and acid rain.

Further, about 1.5 million acres of agricultural land are being "irreversibly removed" from production and converted to non-agricultural uses each year, the report said.

If the loss rate continues, the nation's cropland base would be reduced by nearly 48 million acres, or 12 percent, between 1982 and 2030, the period covered by the new appraisal.

East Bloc Farm Prices Protested

By Viorel Urma
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — From underfertilized fields in Romania to the tiny, private plots in Poland and Yugoslavia, the East bloc's farmers are angry and clamoring for higher prices and more land.

Even in Hungary, a traditionally rich agrarian nation that exports thousands of tons of farm products each year, the farming success story is turning sour. For decades in Eastern Europe, breakneck industrialization overshadowed agriculture, which was kept starved of machinery and fertilizers by state bureaucracies and left to subsist on low farm prices.

Now, East bloc farmers are serving notice they cannot survive much longer and are demanding more from Communist governments that need to keep food prices down for low-paid factory workers. In Poland, with city dwellers complaining about the high price and scarcity of food, the subject of farm production has become one of the most sensitive issues facing the East bloc's first non-Communist prime minister.

Polish farmers, displeased with the prices they were getting, withheld their livestock and grain from the market in July, resulting in severe shortages in the stores.

Although a "free market" for food was introduced Aug. 1 in Poland, and farmers were offered more for their produce, many were reported holding back in hope of still higher prices.

In Gdansk and elsewhere, Poland's farmers blocked roads with wagons and tractors in protest. Eighty percent of Poland's farmland is still in private hands.

In addition to low prices, Poland's farmers, like farmers in Hungary and Yugoslavia, complain about de facto state monopolies for their purchases of supplies and sales of their produce.

Polish officials are so worried about possible unrest that they are spending some of the country's badly needed hard currency to buy frozen meat from Western Europe.

They hope, however, to ease tensions with deliveries of $120 million in food aid promised in early August by the European Economic Community after President Bush's visit to Poland.

In Yugoslavia, about 5,000 farmers wheeled their tractors to the federal Parliament building in Belgrade on Aug. 28 in an unprecedented protest of government attempts to curb inflation by forcing food prices down.

"It is cows that should be milked, not peasants," said one slogan.

Faced with a 750 percent inflation rate, the Yugoslav government recently flooded the market with cheap flour, wheat, sugar and other foods from federal stockpiles to try to halt price increases.

One of the chief problems facing Yugoslav farmers is that they are allowed only 1/2 acre no more than 75 acres of land. Until last year, that limit was just 25 acres. They call these limits artificial and say they curb efficient farming and higher yields.

"We can't wait any longer," said Sava Govoric, a member of a newly formed Farmers' Initiative. "None of our demands have yet been met."

In Hungary, where private household plots on only 5.5 percent of arable land accounted for 36 percent of all agricultural production in 1988, the farm work force is aging and declining. Produce prices are not keeping pace with increases in the cost of fertilizers and other farm needs.
