Washington Was Warned 3 Years Ago About Water City Kept Information From Public

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — City officials were told three years ago that the city's water supply contained dangerously high levels of a cancer-causing chemical, but chose not to notify residents of the problem until last April.

Bragg Dawson Jr., president of Coca-Cola Inc. in Washington, said he told then-City Manager Ralph Clark that the city's water exceeded EPA safe limits of trihalomethane.

Dawson said he learned of the contamination during regular testing of water samples. Coca-Cola requires all its plants to send water samples to its home plant in Atlanta for testing.

Bruce Radford, the current city manager, confirmed that the city has been informed of the trihalomethane problem in 1986.

"That's true. We did know," said Radford, who has been in office just over a year. He said when officials were notified three years ago, they implemented a hydrogeology study to determine if additional wells could be drilled. The public was not notified of the problem at that time, he said.

Radford said he was not told about the trihalomethane pollution when he first took office, but learned about it in January.

Citizens were only made aware of the problem in a note on the back of water bills sent out last April, Radford said. He said the note did not tell residents of the contamination, but gave a phone number that they could call to get results of water testing.

Radford said the city received 20 calls in response to that notification and each individual was mailed the test results.

He said the city was not obligated to tell citizens of the test results in a public announcement. "There is no requirement that the public be notified nor was there a requirement that the testing be done until January of this year," Radford said.

The state Division of Environmental Management is also testing the drinking water source. State officials say the tests have shown no danger to fish from the high level of organics in Tranters Creek, Washington's prime source for water.

"The waters themselves do not present a problem until treated by the city of Washington," said Jess Hawkins, Pamlico district manager of the Division of Marine Fisheries.

The chlorine Washington uses to clean the water taken from Tranters Creek reacts with the naturally occurring organic humic and fulvic acids to create the trihalomethane and carbon tetrachloride.

Hawkins said his division had not been asked to test the waters, and high levels of organic materials are not unusual in drainage creeks to swamplands.

"The chemicals themselves occur naturally and should not cause a problem in fish tissue," Hawkins said.

The environmental community has expressed outrage, not at the water quality in Tranters Creek, but toward Washington officials.

Dave McNaught, director of the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, said the official response has ignored the health concerns and focused on the attention given the water contamination.

"Our greatest concern has been their cavalier attitude in saying you don't need to worry about this," McNaught said.

He said Washington needed to focus on cleaning the water either through better filtration or changing the water supply. "I think above all else we should be concerned with solving the problem," McNaught said.

Bush, Governors Huddle On Schools And Steps Needed To Improve Them

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — President Bush summoned the nation's governors today for summit talks aimed at determining "what it is we're doing wrong" in public education and setting national goals to improve classroom performance without major new federal spending.

"Our problem is not money, our problem is using the money that is there effectively," said White House chief of staff John Sununu, as the governors gathered for the two-day conference.

"We've got to do it smart, we've got to do it right," Sununu said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "If all people will do is focus on the price tag and say 'if we make it expensive it will be better,' we will never improve the classrooms."

Bush was flying by helicopter to the summit on University of Virginia campus in midafternoon today to join the governors in a series of closed-door discussions on revitalizing the teaching profession, improving the learning environment — including keeping drugs out of schools — and deciding who's in charge of the schools.

Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, a former college president, led Bush's entire Cabinet with the exception of Secretary of State James Baker III to the summit. Most of the governors were bringing along their top school superintendents or education advisers.

Former U.S. Education Commissioner Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, said he hoped the summit will proclaim that by the year 2000, "we're going to have a school system unmatched anywhere in the world."

In a separate NBC-TV interview, Boyer urged that Bush and the governors commit American to raising the status of teachers and putting greater stress on the Head Start program of helping needy preschool children.

Bush said Tuesday in Washington that he wanted to "listen and work with the governors, not try to impose an agenda from here." His aim, he said, was "to see us come up with

Drug Fight May Produce Casualties

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Top government officials are bracing the American public and Congress for the prospect of casualties as the United States steps up its military support role against Latin drug traffickers and allied insurgents.

"Is it likely that some American over the course of the next couple of years may die in one of those countries? Yes, because of the nature of the drug trade, because of the nature of the situation in which they go in," William J. Bennett, director of national drug control policy, told a congressional committee Tuesday.

Bennett and other officials have focused mostly on the threat posed to U.S. forces dispatched as part of the administration's Andean anti-drug strategy, but they do not rule out the possibility of reprisals committed inside the United States.

"The risks are there; the risks are real," he said in opening remarks not prompted by questions. "If we're going to pursue this strategy, we should pursue it with our eyes open."

More subdued but similar statements have been made in recent days by Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney and by Colin Powell, chairman-designate of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"I don't see any reason to expect that we'll suffer a significant number of casualties, but I can't say it will be risk-free," Cheney said at a Los Angeles press conference last week.

At his Senate confirmation hearing last week, Powell was asked by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a prisoner of war in Vietnam, whether he agreed that "before we actually commit American advisers to situations where there's a possibility of loss of American lives, that issue should be surfaced before the American people."

"Yes. This will not be without risk, but I think it's a risk worth taking," Powell replied.

Bennett spokesman Don Hamilton said the director expected to be questioned on casualties and decided to confront the issue himself.

He said he did not believe that the three officials' statements were coordinated but that all reflected "the simple and straightforward fact."

"People have learned the lessons of many decades that you can't go around saying something is risk-free and then take a lot of casualties and expect support to continue," Hamilton said.

"The simple fact is, casualties are likely and probable" — not just in anti-trafficker operations, but from reprisals, he said. "These guys (traffickers) are not necessarily fastidious about who they kill."

Bush Hints Arms Treaty Is Near

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today there is "a good likelihood" that the United States and Soviet Union will be ready to sign a treaty cutting strategic nuclear arsenals by the time of a superpower summit in late spring or early summer.

Bush said the scheduling of the summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev "will serve as a catalyst for moving forward" on a treaty but that "it's not a given."

"It's not absolutely certain that that's going to happen but I would have to agree (there is) a good likelihood that might happen," Bush said in an interview with a small group of reporters in the Oval Office.

He also restated U.S. opposition to a ban on nuclear testing, saying it was important that the United States have the capability to test the weapons in its arsenal.

Asked about a report that Colombian drug lords had threatened to kidnap one of his five children unless granted amnesty, Bush said, "I have not heard that and I feel confident I would have if there'd been what I call 'hard' intelligence."

He confirmed that security had been increased around his four sons and one daughter but said it was not in response to what he called "a hard threat."

ECU Will Use Cherry Hospital As Teaching Facility

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University and the state Department of Human Resources have signed a contract making Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro an ECU medical school teaching facility.

According to Dr. Terry Stelle, deputy director of state mental health services, the hospital will be run by the department of psychiatry of the ECU School of Medicine.

As part of the agreement, Stelle said ECU will be asked to review all current Cherry Hospital staff applicants and approve them before the hospital extends a job offer.

Dr. Frank James, director of residency training for the ECU Department of Psychiatry, said, "The announcement was just made yesterday, but we already have four psychiatric residents and two ECU medical students working there this semester. Two of our faculty members are spending time over there seeing patients with the trainees. And we're recruiting for someone who would be full-time psychiatrist there and have a faculty appointment here.

"We see this as a way to provide training opportunities for our residents and students in care of very difficult-to-treat patients. We also see it as an asset in our continuing effort to attract the best psychiatrists to our school and region."

He said that conferences for psychiatric care professionals will be held at Cherry frequently by the medical school and cooperating agencies. "This will be a way to attract really good people," he said. "We think it will be both an excellent opportunity to educate and a great recruiting situation."

"Our accomplishment is part of a larger national movement toward medical school-state psychiatric care affiliation," James said. "The state of Maryland's medical school has done an admirable job of linking closely with state hospitals and community mental health centers."

James said this affiliation has been many years in the making. "We've been talking about it since the medical school began," he said. "But it feels very positive that we've finally actually put it into place."

He said the next step, possibly to be announced before the end of this year, will be similar affiliations with area mental health centers in the eastern region.

"When we get mental health centers involved, we'll have better followup of patients. We feel we can cut down on the return-to-hospital rate, thus keeping the hospital's census down to an appropriate level."

J. Field Montgomery, hospital director, said the hospital's patient census has already been brought down to a level that is in compliance with federal standards. Until recently it has been in violation for having too many patients in ratio to the number of physicians on staff.

"This is one of a number of valuable affiliations of the school of medicine," Dr. James Hallock, medical school dean, said.

"The department of psychiatry looks on this as an important opportunity for medical student and medical resident education. And I see that we also can help the hospital because our faculty can provide the direction they need. It's good for everybody."

"It (the affiliation) has a variety of benefits," Stelle agreed. "It's a good way to recruit quality physicians and provide up-to-date clinical care. It also helps the prestige of any hospital if they are university-affiliated."

Paper Says USAir Crew Had Been In Bar

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Investigators in the crash of a USAir jet that skidded off a runway into the East River last week are looking into reports that the cockpit crew was at a bar hours before takeoff, the New York Post said today.

Detectives were trying to find the hotel bartender who was working Sept. 20 before the Boeing 737-400 crashed at LaGuardia Airport, the newspaper reported, citing sources it did not identify. Two passengers died in the accident.

In another development, a grand jury was assembled Tuesday to hear testimony about the crash.

Prosecutors said Monday that Capt. Michael W. Martin and copilot Constantine Kleissas tested negative for alcohol, but the urine samples were taken 48 hours after the accident. Experts said alcohol consumed two days earlier would probably not show up anyway.

Questions about drinking were raised by Eric Trendal, the husband of a USAir employee, who told authorities he had been out "bouncing" with the captain and the copilot. He said he was with them at a bar in the Marriott Hotel between 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday. The flight, bound for Charlotte, N.C., crashed at 11:29 p.m.

Investigators want to find out what Trendal means by "bouncing." They said they believe it means "drinking" or "bar hopping," the Post said.

A detective close to the investigation told the Post it is believed the crew spent as many as five hours of their six-hour layover in bars near the airport.

Frederick Hafetz, an attorney for the pilots, refused to comment on the grand jury investigation, begun by the Queens district attorney's office.

The National Transportation Safety Board, conducting its own probe, reported Tuesday the investigators found that almost all of the tread on the jet's front tires was gone.

That was consistent with the pilot's statements that he had tried to halt the jet before it hit the water, said NTSB spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz.

Fayetteville Gets Loan Assistance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Fayetteville has been approved for various low-interest loans to help repair $10 million in flood damage to 81 homes and 36 businesses, the Small Business Administration announced Tuesday.

Individuals can borrow up to $20,000 to replace or repair personal property. The limit on loans to repairing residences is $100,000. Interest rates are 4 or 8 percent, depending upon the ability to pay back the loan and the availability of loans from other sources, SBA Administrator Bernard Kulik said in a news release.

Businesses can recover up to $500,000 for uninsured damages to buildings, inventory, machinery and equipment. Also available are Economic Injury Disaster Loans, which provide operating capital to businesses to recover from adverse economic impact.

"Commissioner Kulik's announcement is good news for Fayetteville's flood victims," said Gov. Jim Martin, who requested the aid last week. "This move recognizes their needs and will take them a long way in getting their lives back to normal."

Martin also requested individual assistance programs for the area, which would make grant money available to the victims. State officials are awaiting a decision from the federal government.

State and federal officials are working out details for the application process for victims of the Sept. 15 flooding.

Tuesday Thefts

Investigators said seven thefts, including a car, a bicycle, meat, cash and jewelry, were reported to Greenville police Tuesday.

Officer C.S. Candler said a 1982 car was taken from 106A Stencil Drive in an incident reported at 7:57 p.m., while Officer J.G. Bridges said $400 in cash was taken from 108 Chadwick Lane in a break-in reported at 7:01 a.m.

Officer Alexander Batts said a radio was taken from a car at David's Automotive at 510 N. Greene St. in a break-in reported at 7:38 a.m., while Officer R.L. Smith said $20 in cash and $15 in change was taken from 1400A Fleming St. in a break-in reported at 3:48 p.m.

Officer C.A. Elks said a gold chain, a necklace and a radio were taken from cars parked at A & B Auto Service at 103 W. Ninth St. in an incident reported at 4:27 p.m., while Officer C.A. Curtis said a bicycle was taken from the Methodist Student Center at 501 E. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 4:10 p.m.

According to Officer A.G. Lloyd, $45 worth of meat was taken from 1310 Ward St. in an incident reported at 4:40 p.m.

Theft Arrests

Greenville police arrested three people Tuesday in connection with separate theft cases.

Officer R.L. Smith said Barbara Collier Braddy, 57, of Route 1, Ayden, was arrested on shoplifting charges in connection with the theft of several items from the Winn Dixie store at Carolina East Center on South Memorial Drive that was reported about 12:40 p.m.

Officer C.J. Melvin said Kelvin Perez Roundtree, 22, of Route 1, Hookerton, was charged with possession of stolen property after a 1988 model car, reported stolen in Wilson, was found in his possession on the 100 block of West Fourth Street about 3:23 p.m.

Melvin and Officer A.J. Dennison said Roundtree was also charged with two counts of resisting, obstructing and delaying an officer in connection with the incident.

Officer R.C. Allsbrook said Johnny Lee Lloyd, 36, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was arrested on larceny charges in connection with the theft of $3.09 worth of merchandise from The Pantry at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive about 7:54 p.m.

Allsbrook said Lloyd was also charged with simple assault in connection with the case.

Governor's Award

The Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center in Greenville was a recent recipient of the Governor's Award for Safety and Health.

The Jones ARC met 60 percent of the requirements set by the state's Workplace Requirement Committee and was awarded a letter of citation for the second consecutive year, said Alton Hilliard, director of support services and safety officer at the Jones ARC.

This award is intended to promote safety and health throughout state-owned facilities and institutions. The Occupational Health Safety Health Act makes up a major portion of the states guidelines in addition to the hazard communication requirements, Hilliard said.

RJR Setting Up Offices In N.Y.

ATLANTA (AP) — RJR Nabisco Inc. announced today it is setting up headquarters on the Avenue of the Americas in New York, making the company's move out of Atlanta official.

RJR Nabisco said in April it was planning to move from its suburban Atlanta headquarters to New York, and the company's top executives have been operating out of temporary offices in New York for several months while maintaining an office here.

The tobacco and food giant moved to Atlanta from its longtime home in Winston-Salem, N.C., in 1987. The company was acquired by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. in a record-setting $24.5 billion debt-financed buyout that was finalized earlier this year.

"For the job we have ahead of us, New York is the place to be," said RJR Nabisco Chairman Louis V. Gerstner Jr. "We plan to sink roots here (in New York)."

The company said it had signed a 10-year lease for 86,400 square feet of office space at 1301 Avenue of the Americas. The space is being renovated for occupancy next June.

Umstead Dentist's License Suspended

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The dental license of the former director of dental services at John Umstead Hospital in Butner has been suspended for two years by the State Board of Dental Examiners, which cited negligence and malpractice.

Dr. Glenn E. Woodlief of Henderson has been asked to surrender his state dental license to the board on or before Oct. 1.

During the hearing, Woodlief's attorney, Julian Mann of Raleigh, questioned whether patient care in a mental institution can be judged by the same standards as patient care among the general population.

"General dentists practicing in an institutional setting are required to render professional services to their patients in accordance with the same standard of care applicable to general dentists in a private practice setting," the board said in its written ruling, which was announced Tuesday.

The board decided Woodlief violated the standard of care for general dentists in the state in several incidents, including the use of restraints and sedation on a legally competent patient who refused treatment. The struggling patient caused Woodlief to lose control of an instrument, resulting in injury to tissues in the patient's mouth, according to the board.

The board also cited the use of restraints on a 72-year-old bedridden woman suffering from pulmonary problems, heart disease, osteoporosis and limb contractures.

The board said Woodlief's use of restraint and force on the woman was "inhumane and risked injury, possibly severe, to the patient...."

The board also said Woodlief used forceps to pry open the mouth of a resisting patient, breaking some of the patient's teeth.

Woodlief's license can be provisionally reinstated April 1, 1990, provided that he adheres to certain requirements of the board for 54 months, including psychiatric evaluation and counseling, and continued education in patient management techniques.

Woodlief, a 1975 graduate of the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry, has been employed at John Umstead Hospital for about 10 years. He stepped aside as dental services director in October of 1988. After a leave without pay, he returned in June in an administrative job that does not involve patient care.

Hospital management is reviewing the written decision of the board to determine what action they should take, according to hospital director Gene Barnett.

Shuttle Contract

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's Kennedy Space Center extended for three years Tuesday a contract under which Lockheed Space Operations Co. processes space shuttles for launch.

The extension through Sept. 30, 1992, is valued at $1.6 billion.

The original three-year contract was awarded Sept. 23, 1983, and provided for four three-year options. Total contract value for the original three years plus the first option is $4.37 billion.

ECU Relief Effort

Faculty, staff and students at East Carolina University have been asked to contribute food and other supplies to aid the victims of Hurricane Hugo in Charleston, S.C., according to an ECU News Bureau spokesman.

The department of sociology and anthropology will serve as a collection center. The office is located in 416A of Brewster Building. Contributions of items such as canned goods, especially pop top cans, cereals and other non-perishable items, diapers, blankets and money are requested.

The food items will be taken daily to the Salvation Army and money given to the Red Cross to assist in the relief effort.

Anniversary Planned

The 87th session and 15th anniversary of the Eastern District Ushers' Union of the United Holy Church Southern District will meet at Clemons Grove United Holy Church in Stokes, Wednesday through Saturday at 7:30 p.m. each night.

Paper Says CBS Faked War Reports, Film

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The "CBS Evening News" aired fake combat footage and false news reports of the war in Afghanistan in the mid-1980s, the New York Post reported today. CBS declined immediate comment.

Howard Stringer, a top CBS corporate official who formerly was executive producer of the program, said he would look into the matter.

Most of the questioned footage was shot by Mike Hoover, 45, a freelance cameraman who the Post said staged scenes of guerrilla sabotage and made a Chinese-made Pakistani jet fighter on a training run appear to be a Soviet plane bombing Afghan villages.

"I'm going to have to look into it," said Stringer, now president of the CBS Broadcast Group and the program's executive producer from 1981 until January 1984, before the suspect footage was aired.

Stringer, himself a former documentary maker for CBS News, declined comment on the Post story, saying he hadn't yet read it and that its assertions "are all news to me."

"I don't know who the people involved are or who the accusations are coming from," he said in a telephone interview from Washington.

"We can't respond to the story until we talk to the free-lance cameraman involved," said a CBS News spokesman, Tom Goodman.

CBS anchorman Dan Rather had no immediate comment, a spokeswoman said.

Rather also anchored a 1987 "CBS Reports" documentary, "The Battle For Afghanistan," that used footage shot by Hoover that previously had aired on the "CBS Evening News."

CBS at the time said the program's footage represented 18 trips into Afghanistan by Hoover and his crews over a three-year period. The program included some of the footage whose authenticity was questioned in the Post story.

A woman who identified herself as Beverly Johnson and said she was Hoover's wife said he was working in remote caves in New Zealand and could not be contacted, according to the Post.

In a Los Angeles Times interview in 1987, Hoover explained that he would propose coverage of the fighting in Afghanistan on a story-by-story basis to CBS, which then would either approve or reject each proposal.

CBS never turned him down, he said, crediting Rather as "really the muscle" behind his CBS assignments to cover the war.

In the same interview, Hoover said that he had gone to Vietnam in 1968 on assignment for NBC. He also said he didn't consider himself a news cameraman in the traditional sense. "I'm really kind of a film maker," he said.

During news broadcasts on Nov. 12 and 13, 1984, Rather said Hoover had been on hand for "the largest sabotage operation of the war." Videotape shot by Hoover showed Mujahedeen rebels purportedly blowing up pylons to cut power to the Afghan capital of Kabul.

The actual sabotage, however, took place 12 days before Hoover arrived on the scene, the Post said. Etabari, an Afghan serving as the cameraman's translator, told the newspaper Hoover persuaded guerrilla leaders to order about a dozen rebels to return to the site so he could stage the sabotage.

"He told the Mujahedeen to destroy pylons that were already destroyed. It was completely wrong. It was just for the movie," the Post quoted Etabari as saying.

An Afghan-British journalist, Habib Kawayani, confirmed Hoover arrived in the Pakistani border town of Peshawar too late to shoot the actual sabotage, the Post said.

In a Pakistani military training camp, Hoover staged rebels stalking alleged government guards and blowing up a mine. Etabari also said. Some footage of 4,000 Afghans shown purportedly fleeing their homes near Kabul actually was shot near the Afghan-Pakistani border, Etabari said.

The network won the Du Pont Silver Baton award for the news segments, the Post said.

The newspaper said CBS in 1987 also bought footage stolen from Mohamed Salam, an Afghan journalism student under Boston University dean Joachim Maitre. Rather reported the tape was shot by Hoover and depicted "the biggest one-day defeat of Soviet forces since World War II."

The tape actually showed Afghan government troops under attack, according to the Post. "There were no Soviets there," said Maitre.

Maitre said he sought and received an apology from CBS, according to the newspaper. His office said today he was at conference in Washington and was unavailable for comment.

Public Group Says Doctors Need More Help, Discipline

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The number of physicians hit with serious disciplinary actions is increasing, but it is still too easy for doctors to get away with negligent practices, a public interest health group said today.

There were 1,495 physicians who had their medical licenses revoked or suspended or who were put on probation by their state medical licensing board in 1987, a 17 percent increase over the previous year, said a Public Citizen Health Research Group report.

Public Citizen said that's nearly three serious disciplinary actions for every 1,000 U.S. doctors, but that it's not enough.

"A physician could still operate drunk, commit a gross act of negligence or sexually assault a patient and receive a mere slap on the wrist from his or her state's medical board in most states," the group's report said.

Public Citizen estimates more than 100,000 Americans are injured or killed each year because of physicians' negligence.

"The absence in most states of the maximum effort to discipline these doctors is one of the most serious threats to the health of American patients," the report said.

Public Citizen, a public interest group associated with Ralph Nader, began tabulating the actions of the state medical boards in 1984, when it found 745 serious disciplinary actions — revocation, suspension or probation. In 1985, boards took 1,089 actions, a 46 percent increase from the previous year. That rose by 17 percent to 1,277 in 1986.

The report attributes the increase to "a spate of adverse publicity and state and federal legislation." During 1987 and 1988, 44 state legislatures strengthened state oversight of physicians, the group said.

The group praised the efforts of West Virginia, which had the highest rate of serious disciplinary actions against doctors in 1987. The state's medical board ordered serious disciplinary actions at the rate of eight physicians per 1,000, Public Citizen said.

Kansas had the lowest rate, about one per 2,000, according to the group's analysis.

"Until the rate of doctor discipline in this country significantly increases, there is no realistic possibility of a major decrease in the amount of medical malpractice," said Public Citizen.

The group recommends raising doctors' licensing fees to $500 per year to finance doctor disciplinary actions and reduce the backlogs that plague many state medical boards.

Public Citizen also recommends periodic recertification of physicians, giving state boards broader authority to evaluate doctors and take action against them and requiring insurance companies to rate doctors so those with the best records pay the lowest premiums.

Protesters Win White House Pledge To Help Handicapped

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Handicapped people who occupied a federal building for two days in a bid to get wheelchair lifts installed on public buses ended the protest after winning a pledge of support from the Bush administration.

The group, the American Disabled for Accessible Public Transportation, failed to achieve their main demand Tuesday, a federal order requiring such lifts.

But federal officials promised to urge Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner to meet with them.

"This agreement by no means resolves the problem of access. It just brings us a step closer," said Mark Johnson, one of the protest leaders who met with Steven Diaz, chief counsel for the Urban Mass Transportation Administration.

The protest at the Richard B. Russell Federal Building began Monday with two dozen protesters chaining themselves to the main doors and blocking elevators with wheelchairs. The action coincided with Skinner's appearance at the convention of the American Public Transportation Association.

Authorities tried to eject the protesters Monday night, but President Bush intervened and let about 100 spend the night inside rather than send them out into the rain.

On Tuesday, about 160 chanting, singing activists blocked 12 of 14 elevators. Security officers kept two elevators open by using plant stands to keep wheelchairs away.

Diaz told protest leaders that the Transportation Department "cannot issue a summary order commanding immediate access including wheelchair access for all transit. We would if we could."

Under an agreement between federal officials and the protesters, Skinner will be urged to meet promptly with disabled activists to ensure a "principle of accessibility" until Congress passes a law requiring wheelchair lifts.

In addition, the protesters may continue a "symbolic presence" at the building.

White House spokeswoman Alix Glen said wheelchair lifts on public buses would be required under a bill Bush has endorsed. Government officials have estimated that putting lifts on new buses would cost $90 million a year.

Berlin Funeral

NEW YORK (AP) — Songwriter Irving Berlin, one of the nation's most prolific and popular composers, was buried Tuesday in his family plot in Woodlawn Cemetery after a small graveside service.

Rabbi Daniel Wolk conducted the service, which was attended by Berlin's three daughters and other members of the immediately family and a few longtime members of the composer's staff.

His grave is next to that of his wife, Ellin Mackay Berlin, who died last year. Berlin died at his New York City home on Friday at the age of 101.

Lessons

Greenville Shared With Hugo's Victims

While Hurricane Hugo was a lesson in terror and humility for other communities, the storm was a lesson in luck and common humanity for Greenville.

This community dodged the bullet of destruction Hugo fired at coastal South Carolina and western North Carolina, but it shared in the sorrow and suffering in the areas devastated by last week's storm. Greenville, who has experienced destruction from both hurricanes and deadly tornadoes, has reached out to help the victims Hugo left behind.

Greenville Utilities' work crews went to battered Charlotte to help restore power to some 200,000 residents there. Local Red Cross and Salvation Army efforts are collecting and distributing basic necessities for the victims of Hugo. Fifty-three National Guard military policemen are in Charlotte keeping law and order in the city. Countless private relief efforts have sent ice, food and blankets to hard-hit communities. During the storm, shelters here were opened for coastal residents forced to flee their homes.

'From that sharing, Greenville — untouched by the fury of the worst hurricane in a generation — has felt the emotional pain such a storm inflicts on those in its path.'

From that sharing, Greenville — untouched by the fury of the worst hurricane in a generation — has felt the emotional pain such a storm inflicts on those in its path. Indirectly, this community has experienced the suffering of families without homes and of neighborhoods without food, water and electricity. Through its efforts to help, it has tasted a bit of the sorrow misfortune heaps on its victims. With that insight, the community has been reminded of mankind's common heritage and the responsibility human beings feel for each other.

As each area hit by Hugo assesses its losses and plans to rebuild, there will be conclusions about how damage and death could have been minimized. The storm will have many lessons about policy and preparedness. Greenville can learn from these lessons by adjusting its own emergency procedures.

But no lessons will be more important than the lessons of the heart. Human beings have a commitment to each other and most of them honor it cheerfully. Here, 200 miles away from the devastation, this community feels the strain and pain of tragedy and reaches out in diverse ways to ease it. That is an act that should be considered a celebration, even in the grim moments of hardship.

A Legend

America's Great Musical Mind

Is there anybody who doesn't feel a swell of patriotism with the singing of "God Bless America?"

Kate Smith made it well known, but Irving Berlin wrote it.

Could we ever celebrate Christmas without the greatest modern carol "White Christmas?" Bing Crosby sang it, but, again, Irving Berlin's great musical mind produced it.

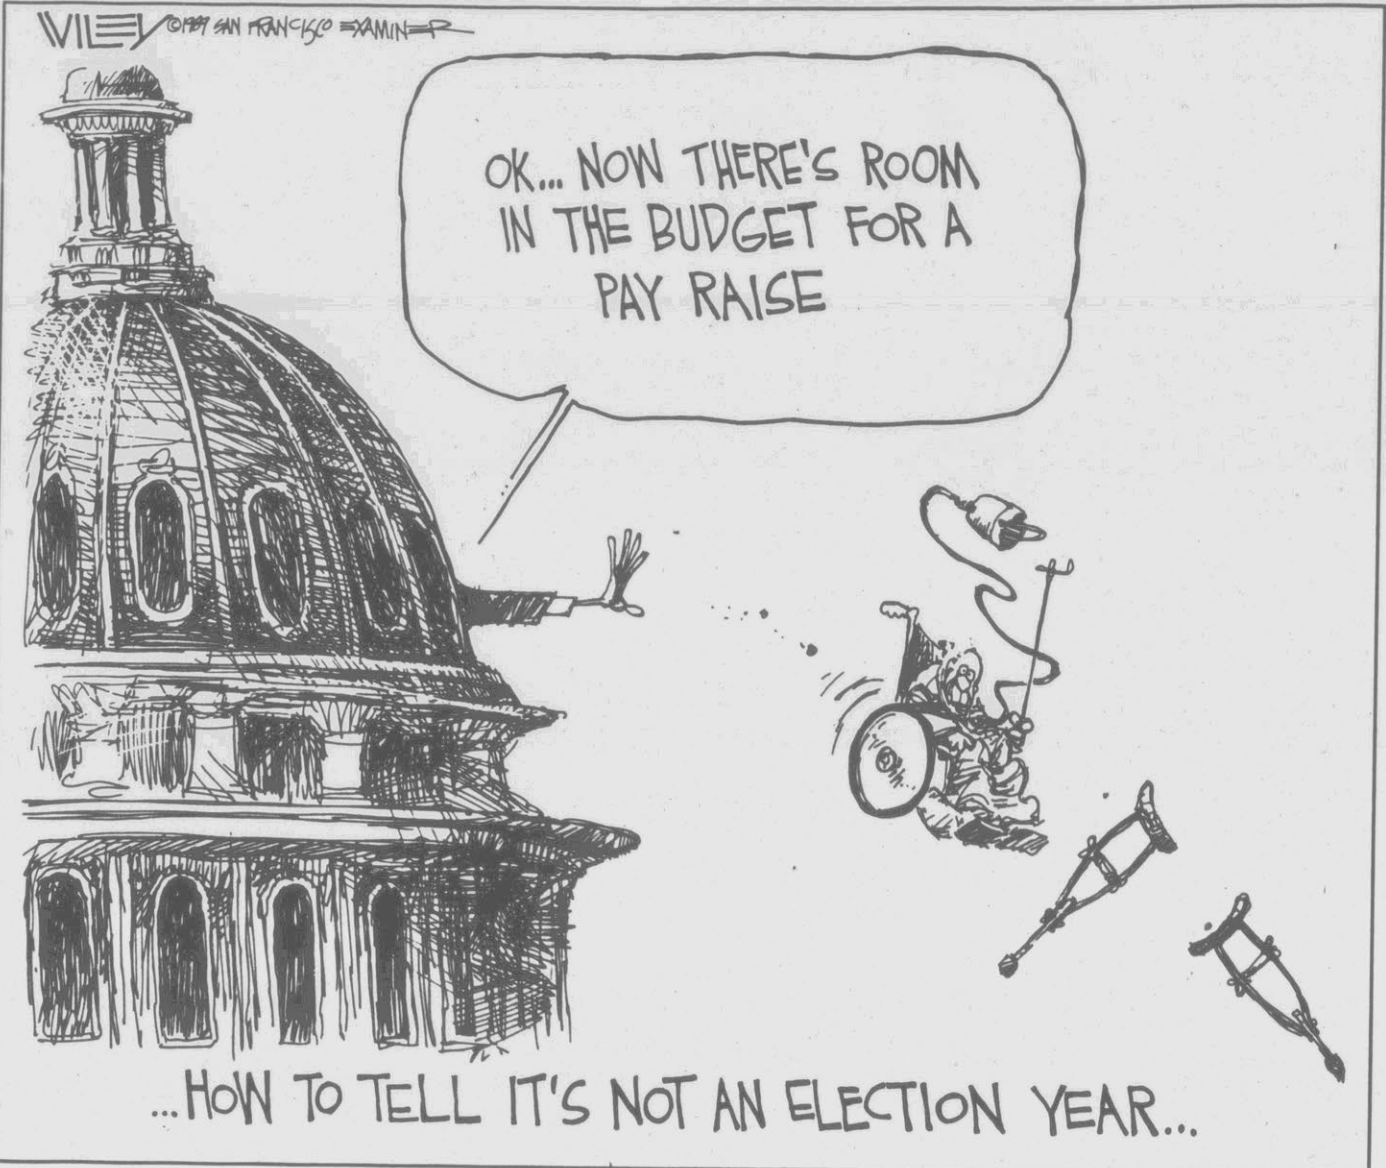

Has there ever been a doughboy, grunt, GI, recruit, draftee or military volunteer who did not adopt as his anthem "Oh How I Hate To Get Up In The Morning?" That one still conjures up visions of rolling out at 4:30 a.m. for a day of military training. Berlin left that one for all past, present and future American soldiers.

There are couples who have been married for decades who feel that "Always" is their song... and there are young couples frantically in love in this modern era who accept that great love song as their pledge to a life together. Berlin gave it to all who have ever, or ever will, fall in love.

Composer and songwriter Irving Berlin died at the age of 101 last week. At that advanced age it had been years since his monumental outpouring of numbers ended.

He was a legend, perhaps the legend, of 20th Century American popular music. Over his fantastic century of living he left something for everyone. There is the patriotic music which must have come from the heart of an immigrant from Russia; there were songs for lovers and there are numbers for our greatest holidays. And there was the salute to his own field, "There's No Business Like Show Business."

Irving Berlin touched us all over his century of living. Perhaps more important he has touched the lives of generations yet unborn, for his music will certainly live forever.

Where To Place The Bets

WASHINGTON — The "education summit" of President Bush and the nation's governors signals an important national commitment to the task of overhauling America's schools. But no one should underestimate the difficulty of the challenge.

It is one thing to set "performance goals" for the schools; it's infinitely harder to come up with the strategy for achieving them. Seven weeks before Bush's "summit," a group of education and business leaders met under the auspices of the Institute on Education and the Economy of Teachers College, Columbia University. I was unable to listen in on the discussions, but this past week I received the papers that were prepared for the seminar.

One in particular, by Lorraine M. McDonnell, a senior political scientist with the Rand Corporation, is a strong reminder of the difficulty of carrying out the summit commitment.

In its 67 pages, McDonnell looks at a wealth of evidence bearing on the question whether the kind of "restructuring" now under discussion "really holds the potential for significantly improving American schools, or is...just another educational fad, signifying good intentions, but with little hope of fulfillment?"

David Broder

"These proposals are not new," she says, adding that the slipperiness of the "restructuring" concept "can be used to give the illusion of reform where little may exist."

At the Charlottesville summit, and in other forums, politicians are advocating different and conflicting approaches. They will not add up to a national program for education, she warns, unless policymakers find a way to reconcile them with each other — and with the constraints the political system and budgets impose.

One approach, for example, emphasizes decentralization of decision-making to the individual school. It reflects the new thinking in American industry, appeals to anti-bureaucratic sentiments and offers the promise of attracting better people into teaching by "empowering" them to make more of the decisions that count. Its effect on student performance, however, remains unproven and its up-front training costs would almost inevitably be high.

A second approach, endorsed by Bush, calls for parents to be given greater choice of schools their children attend, on the theory that the simulated market forces will reward good schools with increased patronage while punishing schools which are failing in their mission. But state experiments in this field are just beginning and the effects on students are largely unproven.

A fourth approach calls for tightening the links between schools and other institutions, either to bring new resources into education (as with companies' "adopt a school" programs) or to make schools the centers for delivery of a wide variety of social services — counseling, health clinics, job placement, etc. McDonnell suggests, quite sensibly, that of all the approaches, this one has the greatest practical difficulties and the least assurance of paying off.

But why, people ask, can we not just insist on greater performance accountability from the schools? The answer, McDonnell says, is that schools will in fact strive to meet external standards, so we had better be careful what we ask them to do: "Educators take the reporting of accountability data very seriously and alter their teaching to improve student performance on whatever indicators higher governmental levels stress. The problem is that...only student achievement on standardized tests is typically stressed...The effect in many schools has been a narrowing of the curriculum in ways that are inconsistent with the kind of analytical skills and subject-matter knowledge that students will need for future employment."

Despite these defects, accountability measures are "powerful levers for changing" what happens in the schools. The key question that the new education-reform effort must resolve is who should hold those levers. Teachers and principals in individual schools? Parents, exercising choice among schools? Scholars in each discipline, prescribing tougher curricula? Or businessmen, defining the skills we need in order to compete?

This is the underlying governance question that only political leaders can resolve, after consulting their constituencies. If America tries to pursue all these education-improvement strategies at once, they will almost certainly collide and fail. We have to decide where to place our bets — and then give the people we're betting on the resources to succeed.

To the editor:

As an employee of the city, I have read information concerning the police department's grievances with a great deal of interest. In my opinion, there is only a very minute possibility racism does not exist in the police department. Racism probably exists in every department of the city! If you watch television "specials," emphasis has been placed on (1) drugs and (2) racism. Racism is prevalent in America! Are we naive enough to think racism does not exist in the police department, other departments of the city and our society?

In most cases, most of us are not in a position to see the entire picture. We only see the small segment which deals with us as an individual. In those cases, we cannot always tell how we relate to the total picture.

I have been with the city for almost 17 years. I can see racism at work. There are many forms of racism. Some are more subtle than others.

Sometimes, we must stand up and be counted!

Project 60 Plus is a joint venture by East Carolina University's Aging Center and Regional Development Institute and the Area Agencies on Aging of five regional councils in Eastern North Carolina. Mid-East Commission is the Area Agency on Aging for the counties of Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Martin and Pitt.

The Area Agencies on Aging and the University recognize that older adults are an essential part of the social, cultural and economic growth of North Carolina's 33 eastern counties. In 1988 the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust, a Winston-Salem based charitable trust, provided funds to the University to assist the Area Agencies on Aging to define and analyze the needs of older adults in Eastern North Carolina.

The purpose of Project 60 Plus is to provide a comprehensive, locally sensitive data base to be used as a market indicator of older adults' consumer utilization patterns, housing and health service needs.

Project findings will be used for market feasibility projections, public policy development, funding designs, health and human service planning, community and economic development planning.

The Mid-East Commission Area Agency on Aging and East Carolina University's Center on Aging will be conducting a survey of older adults in Pitt County. Interviewers will be working in the areas of Winterville, Greenville, Simpson, Grimesland, Grifton and Ayden. During the next three months trained interviewers will be going to the homes of older adults to schedule an interview. The information will be kept strictly confidential. To the editor:

Recent letters to the editor accusing certain of our Pitt County School Board members of less than honorable "dealings" regarding the decision of the board not to renew Dr. West's contract have left me wondering if the authors of those letters have regularly attended meetings and workshops of the school board. If they had, they would not be questioning the integrity of said members nor, in my opinion, the decision which was made.

We are fortunate in Pitt County to be able to elect those officials responsible for making decisions regarding our children's education and for hiring our teachers and staff. It is important that the elected board feel confident that its administration is carrying out these decisions. If, for any reason, the majority of Board members are not comfortable about its administration, they have a duty to those citizens who elected them to replace this administration.

Our school board has an attorney, who was present during executive sessions to insure the legality of business undertaken during these sessions. As to "leaking" of information from executive sessions, until one is certain who "the source close to the Board" (as stated in The Daily Reflector) was, let one not assume any particular board or staff member. Giving Dr. West many months advance notice of the decision not to renew his contract is fair and laudable. It also allows for ample time to find a new administrative leader.

I would like to add, for public knowledge, the Board member who has most vehemently attacked this decision of the board, Mark Owens, is the one who has most often been absent from the Board meetings and workshops sessions which I have attended in the past two years. Talk about a commitment to education! Farmville deserves better.

To the editor:

"If" is just about the longest two letter work in the English language. Our successes or failures in life are blamed on this word. "If we had just done so and so." or "If we had not attended such and such." If! If! If!

Adopt-A-Road or Adopt-A-Street is great, and it does make a dent, but it is so short-lived. "If" we (adults and children) did not throw the trash on the city streets, roads and highways there would be no appeal for citizens to pick it up. "If" people would keep their own yards and the street in front of their home clean (which very few do particularly in rental property) it would help solve this problem. The old saying: "Charity begins at home" has been passed down through the generations. Why can we not have a saying for this new generation: "Cleanliness begins at home." Perhaps this might become an old saying. If we try who knows?

Capital Gains Cut: Investor Windfall Or Nightmare?

Analysis

Albert Crenshaw

WASHINGTON — For most investors, the news that Congress may be about to cut the tax rate on capital gains is cause for rejoicing.

But after the initial euphoria wears off, serious long-term investors should take a close look at the bill approved recently by the House Ways and Means Committee. Many may find that it creates not a windfall but a planning nightmare.

For traders, those who frequently buy and sell assets, the measure would plainly be a help. Likewise for anyone who has something that they've been holding and would like to unload.

But for those who already own solid assets that may not be ripe for sale and for those who do sell and want to reinvest their money, the bill would create a dilemma.

To understand why, take a look at what the measure actually would do:

First, it excludes from tax 30 percent of the gain from the sale of a qualified asset. Those are pretty much any investment except collectible items, such as coins and art, and certain intangible assets. It also decrees that the top rate levied on the remaining 70 percent of the gain will be no more than 28 percent — in other words, the 33 percent "bubble" rate that affects upper-middle-income taxpayers would not apply.

The maximum effective tax rate on capital gains, therefore, would be 19.6 percent.

So far, so good. But the exclusion is temporary. Only assets held for a year or more and sold between Sept. 14, 1989, and Dec. 31, 1991, would get the benefit.

After that, the basis would be adjusted for inflation, so that in theory, anyway, only real economic gains will be taxed and not those attributable simply to inflation.

The basis is the amount that the seller subtracts from the sale price of an asset to calculate his or her profit, or capital gain. Often this is simply the price the seller originally paid, as in the case of a share of stock. Under indexation an amount equal to inflation would be added to the basis, increasing it, so the taxable gain would be less.

To illustrate: Under present law, if you buy a share of stock for $100 and sell it for $110, you subtract the basis ($100) from the sale price ($110) to obtain the gain, which is $10. That is what you are taxed on. Under indexation, if you bought the same stock and held it for a year during which inflation was 5 percent, the basis would rise to $105, so that when you sold the share for $110 your taxable gain would be only $5.

The hitch in the indexation plan is that it applies only to those assets acquired after Dec. 31, 1991.

Thus, if you have an asset acquired in the past — or if you acquire one in the next two years or so — and you don't sell that asset before Dec. 31, 1991, this bill does very little for you. You miss the exclusion window and you don't qualify for indexation. All you get is the promise that post-1991 gains will be taxed at a rate of no more than 28 percent; they will be spared the 33 percent "bubble" rate.

This means that to get the full benefit of this bill, you would have to sell all your appreciated assets before Dec. 31, 1991. That gets you the 30 percent exclusion.

Then you would have to reinvest all the proceeds on or after Jan. 1, 1992. That would qualify the new assets for indexation.

To put it bluntly, this is a market-churning bill. Its backers want you to sell, take your gains and pay taxes. Indeed, this was the only way pro-cut forces could create enough revenue to get their plan through the budget process.

Of course, it gets expensive for the government later on, but Congress has never been big on caring about tomorrow.

So where does this leave the ordinary investor? With problems.

Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who opposes the capital gains cut, has argued repeatedly that in the wake of the massive tax overhaul of 1986, what taxpayers really need is stability. What they seem about to get is the opposite.

Under the pending plan, investors must not only outguess the economy and the markets but they must integrate those factors with the timing requirements of this bill. Do I do better by selling and taking the tax benefit or by holding on in the hope that appreciation will more than offset higher taxes later?

And if this bill passes, how long will it be before Congress changes things again?

People who sold real estate in the Washington area in 1986 to catch the last of the previous capital gains benefit should be kicking themselves. Not only have they seen their former property appreciate in the years since but even better tax benefits may be available now than in 1986.

The best plan at this stage seems to be to begin examining your assets carefully and analyzing how much they have already appreciated and how much they might appreciate in the future.

Then look at investment alternatives. If you sell, what will you do with the profit?

Next examine your tax situation. How much would a capital-gain benefit be worth to you? Will you, say, be retiring in the early '90s and possibly shifting to a lower tax bracket? If you now live in a high-tax jurisdiction and plan to move to a place with little or no local income taxes, be sure and factor that in.

Try to work out the tax consequences, but don't let them blind you to economic reality. It's better to make money and pay taxes than not to do so.

And you'll want to keep an eye on the Internal Revenue Service. If the bill becomes law, questions on such complicated issues as like-kind exchanges and other transfers of property will be dealt with in regulations, which, judging by the IRS's past performance, may be a long time coming.

Finally, watch Congress. The Democratic leaders are launching an all-out campaign to defeat this bill, and they may succeed. If that happens, you can forget all you've just read and wait until next year.

Lifting Bolivia From Misery

Alex Hybel

The "pichicateros" live in the suburb of Urubari, in the tropical Bolivian city of Santa Cruz, in large, expensive homes of a singularly gaudy architecture, a mixture of Oriental and Spanish styles. They drive the latest expensive European cars, socialize at their own country club and are rarely seen in public without bodyguards.

Santa Cruz's pichicateros are credited by many Bolivians for lifting the standard of living in the small, land-locked country that until not long ago held the dubious distinction of being one of the hemisphere's poorest.

In the United States, the pichicateros have the opposite reputation: They are accused of having helped undermine the United States' political, economic, social and moral fabrics by organizing and financing the growth and trafficking of Bolivia's most profitable product: coca.

Cocaine consumption in the United States, as President Bush confirmed this month, has reached epidemic levels. As part of a plan to respond to the crisis, the president announced that the U.S. government would allocate $2 billion to help Colombia, Bolivia and Peru to fight the cocaine cartels. He added, "When requested, we will for the first time make available the appropriate resources of America's armed forces."

Will the United States win the cocaine war by increasing its military pressure and by promoting the cultivation of agricultural products for legal export markets? Most likely, no. There are at least two reasons: logistical and economic.

As the war in Vietnam should have taught us, it is not possible to defeat an enemy that has the ability to relocate its base of operation from one area to another on very short notice. Bolivia's processing plants generally produce base cocaine. The production process requires a minimum of equipment and is conducted in small, isolated areas. The producer has the coca leaves spread in ditches that are less than 1 1/4 feet deep, and a little over 2 1/2 feet wide. The length of the ditches varies depending on the amount of coca that needs to be processed, but it is never longer than 20 feet.

With ditches dug, all that the producer needs is a few men to press the leaves with their feet, some type of solvent, generally kerosene, which is spread over the leaves as they are being pressed, acetone, which is used as a catalyst, and sulfuric acid to create the cocaine paste.

To uncover and destroy these processing plants, the United States would need to train and pay for thousands of Bolivian soldiers, develop an extremely sophisticated method of detection, and provide enough helicopters to conduct comprehensive and continuous surveillance over vast mountainous and jungle areas.

It is doubtful that any U.S. government would be ready to augment its involvement to those levels, or that any Bolivian government would be willing to risk the domestic upheaval that the implementation of such strategy would generate. In the eyes of most Bolivians, it would be a sign of surrender of sovereignty to an outside force, namely the Yankees.

The implications of those obstacles are obvious, yet there is another, more critical, factor preventing the implementation of an effective military policy: the effect it would have on the Bolivian economy and the welfare of the Bolivian people.

In its role as the leader of the West, the United States has often preached the virtues of capitalism. For years, Bolivia proved to be a slow learner, but it seems to be catching on. Aware that a tremendous demand for cocaine exists in the United States and other advanced industrialized states, Bolivia has responded to market forces and recognized the benefits of becoming a major supplier.

In 1985, Bolivia's annual rate of inflation reached close to 30,000 percent. Thousands of miners marched through the city of La Paz demanding that the government increase wages. But the rest of the country did not join in the demonstrations.

They were enjoying the fruits of the cocaine economy, which by then was earning an estimated $2 billion annually, a revenue four times greater than what Bolivia was receiving through its legitimate exports.

The importance of coca to Bolivia is evident even to the most untrained observer. On any day, as one travels the principal road that connects the cities of Santa Cruz and Cochabamba, it is easy to spot huts surrounded by small fields planted with coca. In times past, the owners of these huts could not afford even the minimal comforts associated with quality of life in most advanced Western societies. Today, most of the households flaunt tall television antennas and the latest models of small trucks or Jeeps, indispensable for transporting the coca leaves to the processing plants.

But the farmers, along with the coca processors and distributors, are not the only Bolivians benefiting from all of this "illegal" activity. The billions earned by the selling of cocaine abroad have contributed to the revitalization of Bolivia's cities. In Santa Cruz, for example, there are new office buildings; homes and roads are being constructed at an unprecedented rate.

The United States must recognize that if it wants to stop the consumption of cocaine within its own borders, the solution does not lie in other countries. This point is understood even by the Bolivian coca grower with the smallest of plots. As one of them remarked to me, "So long as the Yankees keep using this thing, I'll grow it."

FEARFUL OF COMMITMENT

Many unmarried couples with a long history of togetherness find it difficult to take the next step. One or both has difficulty with the idea of commitment. This is a much written-about subject that is more complicated than it seems.

All too often, couples locked in this struggle are torn, both by conflicting lifestyles and by apprehension stemming from experience (real or distorted) of their parents' marriage. In attempting to defuse the wounded feelings and address the real problem, couples — with the help of a professional counselor — should consider several important areas!

- Commitment is a subjective term; it has an infinite number of definitions and possibilities in real life;
- Rarely is only one partner fearful of commitment; both parties usually have reservations that need to be dealt with;
- Individuals tend to continue the marital issues of their parents and carry them over into their own relationships; once identified, this can be dealt with.

Addressing the couple's struggle and developing new patterns is best done under the guidance of an experienced marital counselor. Alone, couples tend to become locked into a recurring struggle that becomes more and more frustrating as time goes on.

YOUR EYEGLOSS PRESCRIPTION
What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions?"

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?
A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?
A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?
A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?
A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?
A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580

Judge Says Defense List Is 'Ridiculous'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Defense attorneys in Jim Bakker's fraud trial continued their parade of character witnesses, prompting the trial judge to call the number of witnesses "ridiculous" and to ask the attorneys to wrap up their case.

In addition to playing hours of videotapes of Bakker's religious television broadcasts, the PTL founder's attorneys have presented 34 witnesses — most of them faithful contributors or former Bakker employees, or both.

Bakker is accused of defrauding followers by diverting more than $3.7 million in PTL money to fund his lavish living. He faces up to 120 years in prison and more than $5 million in fines if convicted on all 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy.

Defense attorneys on Tuesday presented more witnesses and videotapes as they continued to portray Bakker as a concerned minister.

Prosecutor Deborah Smith asked U.S. District Judge Robert Potter to disallow some defense testimony she called irrelevant.

When defense attorney Harold Bender told the judge he planned to call several more Bakker supporters and show more videotapes of PTL programs, Potter said he thought a tape shown Tuesday morning was the last one. Bender said the defense could show three more.

Potter denied Smith's motion, but told Bender out of the presence of the jury: "We'll go on a little longer, but I'm getting tired of it. I think the jury is, too, but it's up to you."

Bender said the defense could conclude its case Friday.

Charlotte-Area Cities Say More Municipal Cooperation Needed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Representatives from cities in the southern Piedmont say they need to learn to cooperate in order to handle the problems they commonly face.

"We can't afford not to participate," said Peggy Bridges, president of the Cleveland County Chamber at a conference called "A Common Vision." "We all are realizing that what helps the region comes back to all of us down the road," she said. "Whether we like it or not, we're all in this together."

The conference of planners, academics, city managers, chamber representatives and elected officials from 14 counties that comprise the Charlotte metropolitan area was hosted by the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and Winthrop College.

Judging from reactions Tuesday, the concept of regional planning is an idea whose time has come in a region undergoing great transition.

Once the area was a region fueled by small-town mills, with Charlotte as the banking and distribution hub.

But many of the mills died and Charlotte boomed, becoming a hub for jobs — and a magnet for industry. Now the city gets much of its labor force from neighboring counties.

Loosely defined, the region is a 50-mile radius of urban core and diverse smattering of towns and cities.

Closer in at 20 miles, five major highways radiate from Charlotte and end in five distinct and historic "ring" cities: Concord, Gastonia, Monroe, Rock Hill and Davidson-Cornelius.

"It does not look like Atlanta, it does not look like Houston, it does not look like any other city in the country," said UNCC architecture professor Mike Gallis, the conference's keynote speaker. "It is a five-pointed star. ... Each corridor ends at five already-existing growth points.

"If we are to become effective as cities and counties, we will have to understand planning as a regional concept and form a common vision."

The cities, he said, have a rare opportunity to think regionally and keep their sense of place intact.

One of the ring cities, Rock Hill, perhaps understands that better than the others.

For nearly two years, the South Carolina city has undertaken comprehensive planning to position itself in the region at the turn of the century.

"We are in a new type of urban form that is in its embryonic stages," said Rock Hill City Manager Joe Lanford. "We have the opportunity at this point to seize the initiative and shape our own future."

"... Much of our future lies in becoming a successful player in this metropolitan area."

The idea, Lanford said, is not to be a region of competing cities, but of complementary cities. He said the Rock Hill plan may not fit all towns, but that city's process of planning could be used regionally.

In certain areas, a new cooperative process is developing. For instance, Gaston County and York County are talking about a shared water treatment plant. The Carolinas Counties Coalition, a loose collection of area counties, has been talking about ways to solve mutual problems. And 12 area chambers of commerce soon will begin discussing ways to promote regional economic development.

And proximity has produced regional problems. In Stanly County, large green boxes are used to dispose of solid waste. Residents of eastern Cabarrus County, who don't have green boxes, often cross the county line to throw away garbage.

Bakker Is All Smiles As His Defense Dominates The Trial

By Sandy Banisky
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Television evangelist Jim Bakker appears almost jaunty these days, smiling more easily, chatting more freely.

At last, in the fifth week of his fraud trial, his defenders are taking the stand.

Some are telling the federal court jury they believe Bakker was a Christian genius who fell into trouble when he trusted unworthy deputies.

Others are testifying that they gave money freely to Bakker and still believe in him — unswayed by the sex and money scandal that drove him from his ministry 2½ years ago.

The prosecution took nearly four weeks to build a precise case on financial documents, minutes of board meetings, invoices from luxury car dealerships.

They were presented in an effort to show that Bakker took millions of dollars in bonuses and lived the life of a wealthy man while his ministry had trouble paying its bills.

But the defense lawyers are not calling witnesses to testify about documents. Their witnesses tend to talk about a more emotional topic: what Bakker means to them.

Among the Bakker defenders Tuesday was Iva Mae Gravenor of Fruitland, Md.

Disabled by polio, Mrs. Gravenor gilded into the federal courtroom on an electric cart, then struggled on crutches up to the witness chair.

She said she and her husband, Norman, a carpenter, "gave gladly" more than $3,000 plus smaller monthly gifts to Bakker's PTL, or Praise the Lord, ministry.

The Gravenors visited Bakker's Heritage USA Christian theme park and "just fell in love with the place."

"Mr. Bakker didn't promise us anything he didn't give us," Mrs. Gravenor told the court.

Prosecutors charge that Bakker duped his followers by promising free annual stays at his Heritage USA Christian theme park in return for buying a $1,000 "lifetime partnership." The prosecutors say Bakker sold scores of thousands more of those "partnerships" than the hotels there could accommodate.

They allege Bakker skimmed $3.7 million raised by PTL and used it to support a millionaire's lifestyle.

Charged with 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy, Bakker could spend up to 120 years in prison and be fined more than $5 million if he is found guilty.

The former PTL president is expected to testify in his own defense later this week.

Once head of one of the country's biggest television ministries, Bakker had listened solemnly day after day as the prosecution laid out its case against him.

His suits carefully fitted, his hair meticulously styled, Bakker tended to take notes or stare straight ahead as 98 witnesses testified against him.

But now, as the believers take the stand, Bakker seems more relaxed.

He has been bringing his 13-year-old son, Jamie Charles, to court, smiling at the cameras as he arrives and leaves.

Tuesday, during a break in testimony, Bakker watched a courtroom sketch artist work on her drawing, then announced cheerfully, "She's good."

Tuesday, after her appearance in court, Mrs. Gravenor said she was offended by prosecution witnesses who tried to get refunds of their $1,000 when they could not get reservations at Heritage.

"When I give my money to the church on Sunday, I don't ask for it back on Monday," she said outside the courtroom. "I don't want anything back that I gave to God."

As to Bakker's way of life, which included several luxury homes, and fancy cars, Mrs. Gravenor said, "His lifestyle has nothing to do with me."

Tuesday, Paul Wood, who organized a national association of PTL partners, told the jury he was amazed at his first approach to Heritage USA.

"It was as if holy angels themselves got in the car," he said. "It was beautiful. It was like I went into heaven."

JIM BAKKER

Wood then began his own sermon to the jury, proclaiming that Bakker "loves little Christian children" and "loves the little black girl" — a sermon so loud that Judge Robert D. Potter had to pound the desk and ask Wood simply to answer the questions asked.

Wood's testimony was later stricken from the record when he conceded that he had sat through some previous testimony. Potential witnesses are barred from the courtroom.

Legislative Commission Orders 24 Studies Of Issues Before Assembly

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Legislators will begin studying a variety of issues including insanity verdicts in trials, credit regulations and groundwater protection rules, a legislative commission has decided.

The Legislative Research Commission on Tuesday authorized 24 studies funded at $15,000 each. Each of the five House members and five Senate members on the commission will oversee specific studies.

"We tried to keep the studies as related as much as we possibly could," Terrence Sullivan, the General Assembly's director of research, told the commission. "Unfortunately, that first one makes you gulp a little bit."

The first area is agriculture and criminal law, which includes one study panel for agricultural issues and a second group to study the state's insanity verdict and the possibility of a "guilty, but insane" verdict.

Rep. Fred Bowman, D-Alamance, will oversee those two studies.

"We put those two areas together because Rep. Bowman and Rep. (Frank) Rhodes (R-Forsyth) are geographically close to each other," House Speaker Joe Mavretic said after the commission meeting. "Rep. Bowman filed one of the bills under the agriculture area and I intend to name Rep. Rhodes as the co-chairman of the study group on the insanity verdict."

Rhodes asked for a study of the insanity verdict during the General Assembly session this year after a Superior Court jury found Michael Hayes not guilty in the slayings of five people during a 1988 shooting spree in southern Forsyth County.

Defense lawyers admitted that Hayes committed the slayings, but argued successfully that he was insane at the time he committed the crimes. Hayes was committed for psychiatric treatment after being found not guilty.

The decision drew public demands for changing the "not guilty by reason of insanity" verdict, particularly in the Forsyth County area.

Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, will oversee two study panels — one examining the deregulation of revolving credit and authorizing credit card banks; and a second examining consumer protection issues, including those relating to the elderly.

Rep. Jim Crawford, D-Granville, will oversee studies of day care, medical and dental benefits for state employees; and medical, disability, death, retirement and other benefits for firemen.

Rep. Bill Hurley, D-Cumberland, will oversee studies on revenue laws and local revenue sources; and the fee structure for personalized license plates and special plates.

Rep. Joanne Bowie, R-Guilford, will head up studies on the state's long-range transportation needs and alternative forms of transportation; public transportation financing; and the renegotiation of leases for the North Carolina Railroad Co.

Senate President pro tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, named Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, to oversee studies on the state ports; the growth and effect of tourism; and the worker training trust fund.

Sen. R.L. Martin, D-Pitt, will oversee studies on managing solid wastes and infectious wastes; proprietary schools; and the Administrative Procedure Act and the Office of Administrative Hearings.

Sen. Ralph Hunt, D-Durham, will oversee studies of state procurement contracts to minority businesses and small business technical assistance programs; and state capital assets and improvements.

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, will coordinate studies of nursing homes and rest homes; and health care-insurance cost issues.

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, will oversee studies on developing a state strategy for protecting groundwater; and surface water quality and resources issues, including interbasin transfer, coastal water quality, pesticides and other issues.

Each study committee will include seven House members and seven Senate members, with a co-chairman from each chamber. Mavretic and Barnes said they expect to name the members of the committees within the next two weeks.

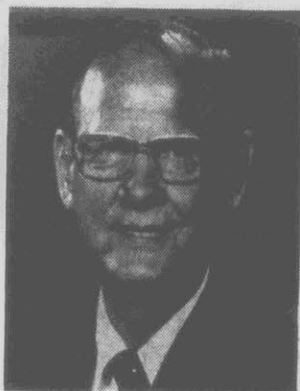

The research commission voted not to study reorganizing the state's travel and tourism office, creating a sports fishing license for coastal waters or fallow deer. Those studies had been authorized by the legislature this year.

Winston-Salem Will See Democratic Runoff In Mayor's Primary

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The most expensive mayoral primary campaign in Winston-Salem's history ended with the promise of three more weeks of campaigning.

Dee Smith edged Martha S. Wood by 87 votes in the Democratic primary for mayor Tuesday but failed to gain a majority. Mrs. Wood then called for a runoff primary on Oct. 17.

"I really consider it a victory to be where we are," Smith said. "I think we've got the momentum, and I think it will carry us forward to victory on the 17th."

In a race among four Republican candidates for mayor, Lenville M. Sale emerged as the leader but also fell short of a majority. Sale will face William T. Skidmore, who also called for a runoff primary.

The Winston-Salem primary races were among those held Tuesday for the November municipal elections. Two primary elections — in Charlotte and Concord — were postponed because of damage from Hurricane Hugo. Charlotte's primary will be held Oct. 10, while Concord's will be held Oct. 3.

Smith received 196 votes less than he needed to receive a majority, getting 7,974 votes, or 48.8 percent of the votes cast. Mrs. Wood had 7,887 votes, or 48.3 percent. Gerald M. Thornton received 477 votes for 2.9 percent.

Among Republicans, Sale received 920 votes for 35.6 percent, Skidmore received 806 votes for 31.1 percent, Christopher D. Durr had 615 votes for 23.8 percent and Charles S. Smith got 246 votes for 9.5 percent.

To avoid a runoff, a candidate had to receive more than 50 percent of the vote.

Either Smith or Wood will be the heavy favorite to defeat the Republican challenger in the Nov. 7 general election. Two-thirds of the city's 74,000 registered voters are Democrats, and the city has never elected a Republican mayor.

Smith, a former executive at R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and former chairman of the Greater Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce, raised more than $80,000 for the race. Wood raised more than $54,000, including a $20,000 loan from her mother.

The primary winners will face off to succeed Wayne A. Corpening, a Democrat who has been mayor for 12 years and is not seeking re-election.

In Asheville, Vice Mayor Ken Michalove was elected mayor by a comfortable margin over Lynwood Leverette, a minister and deputy sheriff who waged a vocal and often biting campaign for more responsive government.

Michalove, 51, won with 59 percent of the vote, receiving 3,316 votes to Leverette's 2,301, according to unofficial returns from the Buncombe County Board of Elections.

Although Tuesday's election was a Democratic primary leading up to the Nov. 7 election, the mayor's race was settled by the primary vote because there was no Republican opposition.

Asheville Democrats also narrowed the field of 14 City Council hopefuls to six nominees who will face two Republican candidates in the Nov. 7 general election for the six council seats.

In Henderson County, voters in Hendersonville and Fletcher cast their ballots Tuesday in primary elections.

Incumbent Hendersonville Mayor Don Michalove will lead the city four more years and Barbara Volk will be the city's first councilwoman. With all precincts reporting, Michalove received 555 votes to Fred Niehoff's 535.

In Fletcher, voters chose volunteer firefighter Robert Parrish and interim Mayor Sara Waechter to face off in Fletcher's first election this November, ending the campaign of former Fletcher Improvement Committee Chairman Pat Richie.

Parrish received a total of 357 votes in Tuesday's non-partisan primary, followed by Waechter with 273 and Ritchie with 204. A total of 636 voters — 48 percent of those registered — went to the polls. But many voted for two candidates, giving little indication of how the finalists might fare in the general election.

Eight candidates are vying for the four council seats in November. In the Rowan County town of Spencer, incumbent mayor C.E. Spear was challenged by Robert L. Mauldin in the Democratic primary.

Spear, who served as an alderman from 1965-1977, is seeking his seventh term as mayor. Mauldin served as an alderman from 1963 to 1973 and was a county commissioner from 1974 to 1978.

In Cherokee County, Democratic voters in the towns of Andrews and Murphy also headed to the polls.

Andrews Mayor Ed Seagle was defeated by challenger Joe Morrow. Seagle got 231 votes to Morrow's 302.

Morrow will face Republican Cecil Williams for the mayor's seat in the November general election. The aldermen seats were filled in the primary; there is no Republican opposition.

In Murphy, voters returned all the incumbent aldermen for four-year terms. Mayor Cloe Moore was unopposed and there is no Republican opposition in November.

In Mount Airy, W. Maynard Beamer, who has been the mayor for 20 years, won the Democratic nomination for mayor by nearly a 4-to-1 margin.

Reagan Canceled Funds For Durham Project To Help N.J. Congresswoman

By John King
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Millicent Fenwick recalls a conversation with President Ronald Reagan during a flight from Washington to New Jersey when she promoted a proposal to develop an elderly housing complex in a town called Ewing.

On the ground later, Reagan told a rally for Fenwick's 1982 Senate campaign that the Department of Housing and Urban Development would fund the project, the former GOP congresswoman said Tuesday.

"I was absolutely stunned when he said that," she said in a telephone interview. "Given the events we're hearing about today it makes me feel badly, but at the time it seemed so innocent."

Reagan's decision to award subsidies to the New Jersey project forced HUD to withdraw a commitment to fund a North Carolina project, a Democratic lawmaker said in contending Reagan used the agency to boost Mrs. Fenwick's unsuccessful campaign.

"I can't see how it could be any more political," said Rep. Thomas Lantos, D-Calif., contending the example showed HUD how political favoritism permeated HUD during the Reagan administration.

Lantos made the charge at a hearing at which former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination to refuse to answer questions about his eight-year tenure.

The project that lost its funding to the New Jersey facility now figures prominently in questions about Pierce's conduct at HUD. The converted hosiery mill in Durham, N.C., was funded five years later over the objections of agency experts.

Reagan announced the New Jersey award at a Sept. 17, 1982, campaign appearance for Fenwick, who said she had failed in 1981 to convince HUD officials to support the Ewing development.

The same day Reagan made the announcement, a deputy wrote a memo to Pierce saying HUD had received a call from the White House.

"The president, who is en route to New Jersey, has agreed to fund, with Section 8 new construction funds," the 125-unit housing project in Ewing, near Trenton, the memo said.

On the bottom of the memo, the word "noted" is scribbled alongside Pierce's initials.

The memo, taken from Pierce's files, was released by the subcommittee.

Stuart Weisberg, the subcommittee staff director and chief counsel, said other HUD documents obtained by the panel indicate HUD, because of Reagan's promise in New Jersey, withdrew a commitment to provide subsidies to the Durham Hosiery Mill.

The Durham project was ultimately given more than $11 million in HUD financing in 1987, despite the objections of agency officials.

A former Pierce deputy, Shirley Wiseman, told Congress she refused to sign the funding papers even after Pierce ordered her to do so. Pierce in a recent interview with Time magazine, said he had overruled senior staff to fund the Durham project.

Reagan spokesman Mark Weinberg said he was not familiar with the project cited by Lantos. "We wouldn't comment on a pending congressional investigation any way," said Weinberg.

Mizell Will Head Fitness Council

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Wilmer D. "Vinegar Bend" Mizell, a one-time local baseball hero who went on to represent the Winston-Salem area in Congress, took office Monday as the executive director of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

Mizell, who has held a variety of federal offices since losing his congressional seat in 1974, was jointly appointed to his latest post by President Bush and Louis W. Sullivan, the secretary of health and human services.

The council, which is controlled by a 16-member board, oversees voluntary programs promoting fitness, physical education, sports medicine and amateur sports. Its staff of 15, with an annual budget of $1.5 million, works mostly through schools and athletic organizations.

Mizell said his chief goal will be to promote physical fitness among young people. Several recent studies have shown that American children tend to be less fit and more overweight, on the average, than children in other developed countries.

"We want to develop good physical fitness habits that will last a lifetime, but there is an ongoing concern about the fitness of our young people," Mizell said. "Many kids who come along do participate in sports. The others, you need to continue to motivate them through the educational process and by building self-esteem."

Hugo Cost Tar Heels $237 Million

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Following is an update on the aftermath of Hurricane Hugo:

DAMAGE ESTIMATES
Preliminary damage estimates for North Carolina now stand at more than $237 million, state Emergency Management officials said Tuesday. Union County is reporting the highest damage figure at $81.78 million. Statewide damage totals should be at least $400 million to $500 million, officials said, adding that emergency officials are continuing to find damage.

DISASTER AID
President Bush declared on Monday Mecklenburg, Union, Gaston and Lincoln counties eligible for federal disaster aid. Mecklenburg County authorities on Tuesday prepared for the arrival of federal emergency response workers who will process disaster aid requests. State Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety Joe Dean said disaster assistance centers for people affected by Hugo should be operating by Saturday. Dean said the centers will be set up in the four counties.

POWER OUTAGES
Duke Power Co. said it had restored power to more than 258,000 customers in North Carolina and South Carolina. Some 500,000 were out after the storm hit Friday.

Spokeswoman Mary Kathryn Scarborough said crews had restored power to about a third of the Charlotte customers. She said the estimate of the number of people without power was wrong originally and that there were 230,000 out of 235,000 customers without power — virtually the entire city — just after the storm came through.

Duke had restored power to about 75,000 customers by Tuesday and still estimated it would be up to two weeks before everyone had power.

BANKS-LOANS
Several Carolinas banks are offering low-interest loans to help with storm repairs. The loans are aimed at supplementing federal disaster help.

WATER SHORTAGES
Rose Cummings, Mecklenburg County spokeswoman, said an estimated 5,000 residents on the community water systems — not connected to the main city and county system — were without water Tuesday.

AIRPORT OPERATING
Charlotte-Douglas International Airport returned to near normal operations Tuesday with damages of at least $3 million.

Farmer Jailed

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe (AP) — A court has sentenced a farmer to one month in jail for taking advantage of the confusion created by Hurricane Hugo to kill his neighbor's pigs as part of a running dispute.

The court found Monday that Mondelice Croix, 61, shot the four pigs belonging to Annoncia Clock, a restaurateur, while this island was in the eye of Hurricane Hugo on Sept. 17.

Charlotte Cleanup Claims One Life

By Susan Price Wilson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The buzz of chain saws fills the air as this city clears away the damage caused Friday by Tropical Storm Hugo, but the cleanup effort has left one volunteer dead.

Mark Cordova, 29, died Tuesday while clearing trees as a United Way volunteer. Witnesses said he fell from a tree when it shifted and was crushed when it fell on top of him.

The effort to clear trees is being aided by 1,750 Duke Power Co. and other utility company workers cutting through trees to reach downed lines.

"Work on Charlotte's main trunk lines is 98 percent complete and crews will begin concentrating on Charlotte neighborhoods," Duke Power Co. spokesman Paul Viggiano said today.

He said that as of this morning, 40 percent of the Charlotte residents who lost power in the storm have had it restored. But he added that it could be more than a week before everyone has electricity again.

Still more deaths and injuries have been blamed on power outages caused by the storm.

In Caldwell County, a 72-year-old Lenoir woman was killed Monday afternoon at an intersection where the traffic lights weren't working.

Hospital officials also reported a rash of chain saw injuries.

In Burke County, a Hildebran family suffered carbon monoxide poisoning Tuesday from a portable generator in their home.

Ruth Hicks, 36, Lero Hicks, 44, and their daughters, Shanna, 12, and Christine, age unavailable, were taken to Valdese General Hospital about 4 a.m. Tuesday where they were later released.

In Catawba County, the operator of a Catawba County general store set his store on fire and burned his legs, arms and face Monday night while trying to fill a generator with gasoline. He tried to fill the generator with gasoline while it was still running.

Bob Freedman, Southern Bell's Charlotte operations manager, said electrical hazards are actually increasing as some downed lines inadvertently become energized. He said telephone workers have found dangerous voltages on a chain-link fence, on a wire in a yard where two children were playing and even on telephone boxes.

"If there is a wire on the ground, you have to assume it's energized," Freedman said, "even if it wasn't yesterday. ... Don't touch anything metallic that has anything to do with utilities."

Meanwhile, residents continued their cleanup efforts.

Architect Ron Smith watched Tuesday as crews lifted a huge oak off his home, where he and his wife were nearly crushed when Hugo roared through the state's largest city.

"We lost several rooms of furniture and several generations of stuff in the attic," said Smith, who recorded the scene on his videocamera. "But we're going to rebuild."

The tree crashed through the attic into the master bedroom, narrowly missing Smith and his wife, Patty.

"A chandelier dropped over the bed and a second later the ceiling ... started dropping and we pressed up against the wall," Smith said. "Then we yelled for each other, 'Are you there?'"

Smith stopped talking for a moment and tears formed in his eyes.

"This was the first time I've been emotional," he said.

Smith's daughter, Trish, was in the house with her parents when the storm hit. She is a student at the College of Charleston, S.C., and had fled the city before Hurricane Hugo struck there.

Relief Supplies Ready For S.C. Victims

By Bruce Smith

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Tons of supplies, including food, tents, shoes and even diapers and dog food, are pouring into hurricane-ravaged South Carolina, where tens of thousands remained homeless for a sixth day today.

Authorities planned to distribute food and clothing throughout the city today. Officials in outlying areas also devastated by Hurricane Hugo, meanwhile, pleaded for help.

About 300,000 residences or buildings remained without power across South Carolina. An estimated 50,000 of Charleston's 65,000 residents were still out of their homes, said Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr.

But officials were heartened by the relief effort across the nation.

"The interest and concern and compassion and generosity of the citizens of our country is extraordinary," said Riley.

In Cincinnati, the Procter & Gamble Co. said it was sending 1.5 million disposable plastic diapers to South Carolina and Puerto Rico through the American Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

College football fans at six southern universities are being asked to bring canned goods to games Saturday to help storm victims.

"It is my hope that we can combine two of the South's finest traditions — college football and a desire to help our fellow man," said Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

While most of the national attention centered on this historic port city, which took a direct hit from the storm Thursday, officials in outlying areas expressed concern relief supplies were not flowing to their communities.

"People are hungry. We are in desperate need of a whole lot of help," said the Rev. Frank Maddox of Sumter.

The Red Cross planned to open disaster centers in Williamsburg, Horry, Georgetown, Florence and Sumter counties today to provide for immediate needs such as food, clothing, temporary housing and medical supplies.

More assistance is needed.

"We need money and we need people," said David Giroux, public affairs specialist for the Red Cross. "This is a Level 5 disaster — they don't get any bigger than this."

In North Carolina, preliminary damage estimates Tuesday stood at $237 million for 23 counties, but state officials expected the final total to be close to $500 million. In Charlotte, 155,000 customers were without power.

Hugo, which smashed into South Carolina with 135 mph winds, killed at least 33 people in the Caribbean and 28 on the U.S. mainland.

Residents of the barrier islands northeast of Charleston continued to return to their homes by boat Tuesday, while the Army Corps of Engineers began work on a temporary pontoon bridge to link devastated Isle of Palms and Sullivan's Island to the mainland again. The coastal resort of Garden City remained closed and guarded by troops against looters.

Power was extended to additional areas of the Charleston historic district and traffic lights winked to life.

However, schools remain closed indefinitely, a nighttime curfew remained in effect and National Guardsmen continue to patrol the streets.

Charleston Harbor reopened to limited ship traffic Tuesday and Navy ships, which rode out the storm off the coast, returned to harbor.

About 650 Department of Defense personnel were being sent to assist in the relief effort, while the Mormon Church shipped water, food, cooking stoves, power generators, propane fuel and tools.

Ralston Purina Co. said it's sending 3 tons of dog food and 1 ton of cat food from its Atlanta distribution center to Charleston to replenish the Humane Society's lost supply.

President Bush on Tuesday expanded a disaster declaration to include five more South Carolina counties, bringing to 12 the number eligible for federal money in the state.

Estimates of crop losses increased to $90 million, and were expected to climb as more of the state's 5.3 million acres of cropland is surveyed. Damage to South Carolina's forests was placed at $1 billion, state officials said.

The storm also has taken a toll on the $30 million a year shrimping industry along the coast.

Hugo struck in the middle of the May-to-November shrimping season, wiping out shrimp beds and damaging related businesses.

"The biggest thing is people who buy the shrimp — the packing houses — they're all wiped out. They're destroyed," said Jimmy Scott, 45, a shrimper for the past 21 years. "By the time they get it built back, the season is over."

And more trouble may be coming.

High tides that come every 10 years when the moon reaches one of its closest points to the Earth threaten more damage to the coast in mid-October and mid-November.

"It's especially dangerous because an awful lot of habitable structures are just barely sound. With a 7-foot tide, we could have further beach erosion, further damage to structures," said Gered Lennon, a geologist for the South Carolina Coastal Council.

Senate Rejects Funding Boost For Star Wars

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congressional negotiators will take on the defense budget with a strong vote from the Senate to keep next year's spending for Star Wars at about the same level as this year.

With two votes Tuesday night, senators rejected an attempt to restore $300 million to the Strategic Defense Initiative and accepted a plan to spend about $4.1 billion on the space-based defense program.

That would leave spending on Star Wars — $3.7 billion for the Pentagon's program and $355 million in Energy Department and military construction money — about $900 million short of what President Bush budgeted for the program in the 1990 fiscal year.

Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who are negotiating with House members on a final defense authorization bill, said the chamber's votes undermine chances that Star Wars spending will be higher than the $4.1 billion spent in fiscal 1989.

The House this year approved a defense blueprint that earmarks $3.1 billion for Star Wars.

"There isn't any question that SDI is extremely weak. It looks to me now that it will be under last year's level when we get out of conference," Sen. James Exon, D-Nebr., said shortly after the Senate action Tuesday night on the $288 billion military spending bill.

By 66-34, the Senate rejected an amendment that would have restored money to the Star Wars program to a level closer to the $4.5 billion approved by the chamber in its authorization bill passed in August.

Then, by voice vote, the Senate adopted a spending total of about $4.1 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

"It's continuing the downward pressure," said Sen. Tim Wirth, D-Colo. "There's an increase in the effort to make it a research program, where it belongs."

Lawmakers said the Soviet Union's announcement this weekend that it would separate Star Wars from negotiations on a treaty to reduce strategic arms may have taken steam out of the drive to increase SDI spending.

"SDI has now been cut loose," Sen. John Warner of Virginia, ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee.

But some members said that since Star Wars was also one of several items in an $8.5 billion amendment to the spending bill, the Senate vote was not a clearcut referendum on the program.

"This was not pro-SDI or anti-SDI," said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, a member of the Armed Services panel. "They put in Apache helicopters, the space program, sealfit."

The amendment with the increased Star Wars spending, introduced by Warner and Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., would have also restored $910 million for the submarine-based, long-range Trident 2 nuclear missile and reduced funds for the Apache helicopter.

In other action, the Senate:

—Rejected, 71-29, an amendment that would have cut $2.7 billion from Bush's request for $4.7 billion next year to buy and test the first 13 models of the B-2 stealth bomber.

—Overwhelmingly endorsed a cost-saving plan to shut down 86 military bases and scale back five more. The vote was 86-14.

—Approved, 65-34, a non-binding resolution calling on Bush to report to Congress before April 1, 1990 on the U.S. military's presence in South Korea. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., had proposed a reduction of 3,000 in the 43,800 U.S. troops stationed in the Asian nation, but the sense of Congress measure prevailed.

—Approved the transfer of $135 million from the Defense Department to the Energy Department for the restart of the three tritium reactors at the Savannah River nuclear plant.

—Provided $20 million in military assistance for Jordan. This amendment was introduced at the request of Bush and approved by voice vote.

—Approved aid to repair and rebuild military facilities in the Caribbean and United States damaged last week by Hurricane Hugo. The total cost of the aid plan was not immediately available but Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., the plan's sponsor, said $50 million was for a Navy shipyard in Charleston and $25 million was for Shaw Air Force Base.

Congress Speeds Pace On Spending Bills

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congress is again churning out spending bills for the new fiscal year beginning Sunday, after breaking a two-week impasse caused by a partisan fight over anti-drug initiatives.

Its eye on the calendar, the Senate passed two spending measures for fiscal 1990 late Tuesday: a $14.4 billion foreign aid package and a $157.4 billion measure for labor, health and education programs.

But with congressional leaders convinced lawmakers will never finish all 13 annual appropriations bills by the Oct. 1 start of the new federal budget year, the House adopted legislation keeping government agencies operating through Oct. 25.

"We have no alternative," complained the ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, Rep. Silvio Conte of Massachusetts.

The Senate action came after Republicans lifted the roadblock they threw two weeks ago in front of spending measures while they and Democrats searched for a compromise on a broad package of anti-drug programs.

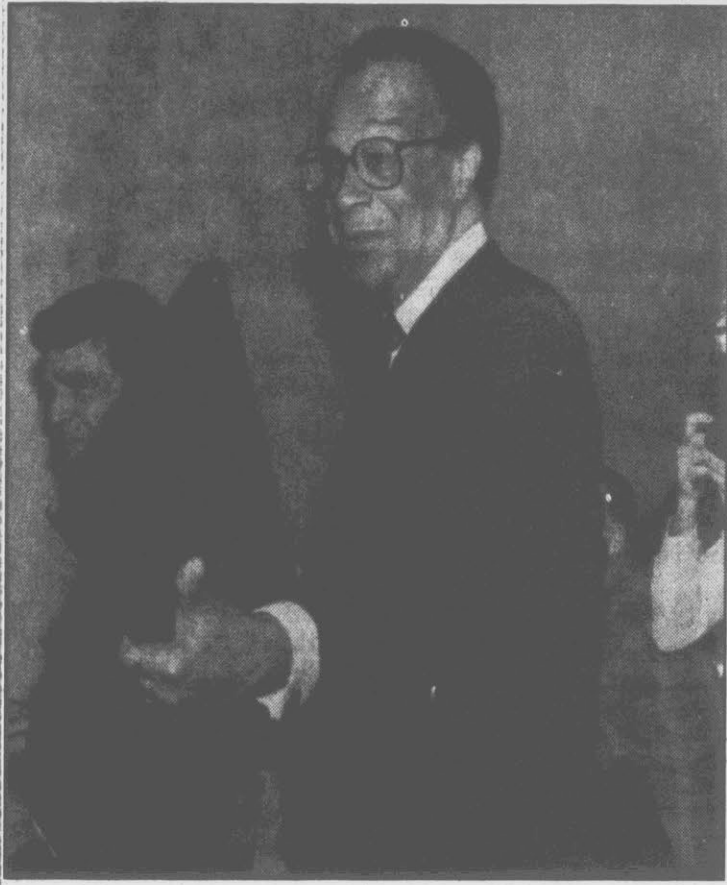

When a deal among Democrats, Republicans and the White House for a beefed-up drug plan was announced, the Senate's legislative logjam dissolved and things moved quickly.

Senators voted 89-11 to adopt the foreign aid bill, boosting assistance to the new non-communist government of Poland to $45 million.

President Bush has sought $35 million less.

The measure also brings U.S. military aid to El Salvador to $90 million, a $5 million addition to this year's total.

Lawmakers also adopted, by 81-19, a $157.4 billion measure for labor, health and education programs that includes slightly relaxed abortion restrictions.

Pierce arrives at Capitol Hill hearing on HUD Tuesday

Pierce Aide Also Balks At Testimony

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators, frustrated in their effort to question former Housing Secretary Sam Pierce about the scandals at HUD, are facing another refusal to testify from one of Pierce's former top assistants.

Lance Wilson, once Pierce's executive assistant, was to appear under subpoena today but planned to invoke his Fifth Amendment constitutional right not to testify, his attorney Raymond Banoun said Monday.

That would mean that Pierce and his two closest aides at HUD — Wilson and his successor as executive assistant, Deborah Gore Dean — have all refused to respond to questions by the House subcommittee probing allegations of influence-peddling, fraud and mismanagement at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"The committee has prejudged the issue and has formed opinions already that he (Wilson) somehow ought to be criminally investigated, a position we feel is unfair and really improper," Banoun charged.

The panel also planned today to question Donald Marron, chief executive officer of Paine Webber, about the company's dealings with HUD.

Pierce, in a dramatic session

Tuesday, appeared under order of subpoena before the House Government Operations subcommittee on employment and housing.

Despite congressional protests that he was throwing up roadblocks in their investigation, Pierce read a brief statement saying he had not had time to prepare, did not have the HUD documents he needed and would invoke his constitutional right not to testify.

"The subcommittee's desire to rush me through this process, together with various statements made by members ... leads me to the painful conclusion that I have been prejudged by this body," Pierce said.

"Under these circumstances, my counsel has advised me and I have agreed to assert my constitutional rights under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments by refusing to answer questions before this subcommittee," he said. "I trust this subcommittee will remember that these rights are intended as shields for the innocent and that they do not create any inference or presumption of wrongdoing."

Paul L. Perito, his attorney, said Pierce might be ready to testify on Oct. 27, the next date he has been ordered before the panel. But outside the committee room, Perito told reporters the subcommittee wouldn't give Pierce a fair hearing.

DOT Says Staff Mostly Drug-Free

WASHINGTON — The Transportation Department says it's employees responsible for public safety and security are almost 100 percent drug-free.

Random drug tests on 15,352 department workers — most of them in sensitive jobs at the Federal Aviation Administration — turned up illegal drug use in 99, the Transportation Department said Monday.

The 99 positive results were 0.6 percent of the total tests conducted between Jan. 1, 1988 and April 30, 1989, according to the department's "Drug-Free Workplace Program Evaluation Report" for September 1989.

"Marijuana use accounted for approximately two-thirds of positives with cocaine for all but a small percentage of the rest," the report says.

The department said it spent $4 million on its anti-drug program in the 1988 fiscal year, which ended last Sept. 30, covering collection, laboratory testing, staff support and informational services, according to the report.

Federal Aviation Administration employees accounted for 95 percent of those tested under the random testing program, which focuses on safety and security workers who have a direct impact on public safety, the protection of life and property, law enforcement or national security.

Of these employees, 65 percent were air traffic controllers, 16 percent electronic technicians, 4 percent air traffic assistants, 3 percent aviation safety inspectors and 12 percent held other jobs.

Along with the random testing, the Transportation Department did drug tests for what it called reasonable suspicion, post-accident tests and follow-up tests.

The 26 drug tests taken after accidents in the FAA and two in the U.S. Coast Guard all turned up negative, the report said.

Of the 17 reasonable suspicion tests during the 16-month period cited in the report, nine showed negative results.

Sister's Death Brings Brothers Out Into Open

By Arlene Levinson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — John Ring and his sister, Marie, were mostly homebodies but they kept up appearances by dressing well, going to church every Sunday and sending bouquets of flowers to neighbors every Christmas and Easter.

Only when Marie Ring died Friday of hardening of the arteries at age 58 did their hermit-like existence become known.

Inside their three-story row house, the reclusive siblings lived in what had become a kind of urban cave, with two dozen cats. They had no running water, electricity or heat.

They also had a third sibling, 62-year-old Vincent, who apparently never went outside.

Police said they found Marie dead, and 59-year-old John and Vincent in poor mental condition. The brothers refused to leave the house, but were sent to Boston City Hospital for evaluation. A hospital spokeswoman would only say that they were in stable condition and that doctors had forbidden interviews.

In an interview with The Boston Globe in Tuesday's editions, John Ring said, "The cats took all our money. ... Cost us $60 a week worth of cat food. That's why we couldn't fix the place up. But we're gonna now."

The city, though, has boarded up and condemned the house.

The Animal Rescue League has taken the cats.

Ferri Abban, the cashier at Bell's Market near the house, said the Rings would not let anyone into their home. She asked city counselors and priests to help them, but they told her the family had a right to privacy.

Ms. Abban said she and her bosses, Matthew Cohen and his son, Alan, were able to provide some assistance.

"I sold them charcoal in the winter so they could heat the house," Ms. Abban said. "I sold them rubbing alcohol, five bottles at a time, so they could cook. I sold them bottle after bottle of Anacin because they'd get wicked headaches from the smell in the house. Paper plates, paper cups, bottled water. It was unbelievable."

Their toilets didn't flush. They used candles and flashlights. And they cooked meals in a pan on an alcohol burner.

"I couldn't believe it," said Matthew Ryan, a 72-year-old retired union leader who has lived next door to the Rings for about 30 years. "Who could get by today without electricity and gas and water? ... I would have helped them, but they weren't people who wanted you to get involved."

John Ring told the Globe that Vincent was wounded in World War II and hadn't worked since 1953; Marie quit working in 1957 and John hasn't had a job since 1961. They had lived in the house with their parents, who died more than 10 years ago.

Ryan said he thought Vincent had died until a fire broke out in two nearby houses 15 years ago.

He saw a man with a beard down to his belt and a blanket over his head. "I said, 'Who is that?' And someone said, 'That's Vincent.' I never believed there was a third person in there."

Matthew Cohen, proprietor of Bell's since 1956, said the Rings paid with personal checks that occasionally bounced. Cohen, who gave them discounts, said the brothers received "disability checks or veterans checks or something."

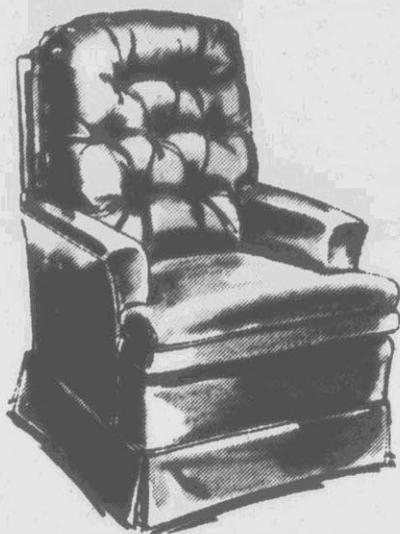

He tried to send an electrician and a plumber to their house, but the Rings wouldn't let them in. He knew John Ring was on medication, and when he was off it.

Drug Cartels Reportedly Warn They Will Kidnap Bush Child

By Richard Esposito
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The Colombian drug cartels have threatened to kidnap one of President Bush's five children or another high-profile American to help gain amnesty from the United States and Colombian governments, Washington intelligence sources said Tuesday.

The kidnapping scheme is the latest in a series of threats lodged by the cocaine barons against U.S. politicians, prosecutors and federal agents since early 1988.

Though increased secret service protection of the Bush family members had previously been reported, details of the kidnap threat had not been previously known. Initially, in fact, the Bush children, who live in Maine, Texas, Florida and Washington, had resisted the extra protection, but in recent days all family members have agreed to the secret service help.

The sources said the kidnapping threat — also aimed at top U.S. government officials involved in the anti-drug campaign — surfaced about two weeks after Bush's Sept. 5 anti-drug address, which occurred almost simultaneously with a crackdown on the drug cartels by Colombian authorities.

The sources, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said they believe the cartel members want to influence Colombia's 1990 elections by backing candidates more receptive to their demands for amnesty for past crimes and to prevent their own extradition to the United States. A terrorist kidnaping, these sources said, would further enhance the cartels' bargaining power with a new Colombian government.

The sources noted that the cartels — operating out of the city of Medellin and the region of Cali in Colombia — have failed to carry out previous threats made when U.S. government pressure on their business escalated.

Secret Service officials declined to comment Tuesday on specific threats. But they said there is generally a flurry of such activity when the U.S. government cracks down on terrorists.

Sources said that the president's daughter, Dorothy LeBlond, a Portland, Maine, businesswoman, appeared the most vulnerable. They declined to elaborate. Bush and his wife, Barbara, have four other children: George W. Bush, John, Neil and Marvin.

In Texas last week, the president's son, George W. Bush, said he was not worried by the reported threats.

Quayle Says Americans' Murder Won't Cause Split For U.S., Manila

By Robert H. Reid
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — Vice President Dan Quayle called today for talks on U.S. military bases, which many Filipinos want removed, and said the murder of two Americans would not "drive a wedge" between Washington and Manila.

Later, police fired tear gas to disperse about 700 leftists near the presidential palace who refused to end an anti-bases rally. Officials said at least 10 police were injured as protesters hurled stones and homemade bombs.

At least 157 people were arrested today for joining anti Quayle rallies.

On Tuesday, suspected Communist guerrillas ambushed and killed two American civilians who were working near a U.S. base north of the capital. In response, U.S. officials banned non-essential travel between bases by the 40,000 American troops, civilian employees and military dependents in the Philippines.

Quayle called the killings "cowardly murders" that would "only serve to strengthen" U.S. support for President Corason Aquino.

Later, he told U.S. troops and their families that he was convinced "a majority of the people in the Philippines want us to stay. Let me be direct: terrorists will not drive Americans from the Philippines."

The attack occurred shortly before Quayle arrived to discuss extending the leases of the six U.S. military installations, among the largest such bases outside the continental United States.

After a one-hour meeting with Mrs. Aquino early today, he said he delivered a letter from President Bush suggesting talks begin in December on the future of Clark Air Base, the Subic Bay naval base and four smaller installations.

The lease on the bases expires in September 1991, and opposition to them is mounting in the Philippines. Mrs. Aquino, who is to visit Washington in November, has offered new talks on the issue but refuses to say whether she will support an extension.

"I hope that the people of the Philippines understand and appreciate not only the special relationship, the sense of stability that the facilities offer, stability in the political sense, stability in the economic sense, stability in the sense of hopefully seeing expanded economic opportunities and development to the people of the Philippines," Quayle told reporters.

After meetings with Mrs. Aquino and other officials, Quayle flew to Subic 50 miles northwest of Manila and to Clark, 50 miles north of the capital, before returning for a state banquet.

At Clark, he met briefly with the widow of one of the slain Americans, William H. Thompson, 45. Officials said the widow of the other American, Donald G. Buchner, 44, was eight months pregnant and too distraught to attend. The two worked at Camp O'Donnell, an Air Force station near Clark.

Outside Clark, police prevented about 500 leftists from marching to the main gate. They held a rally about a half mile from the gate, where speakers called for the bases to be closed.

Any new agreement must be ratified by two-thirds of the 23-member Philippine Senate, where opposition to the installations is strong.

During a courtesy call on Senate President Jovito Salonga, Quayle urged senators to "remove the emotionalism" from discussions about the bases. Salonga said Quayle asked that the Philippines consider the security and economic implications of the bases during the talks.

The bases provide jobs to about 70,000 Filipinos, paying more than $96 million annually in civilian salaries.

Quayle told reporters he and Mrs. Aquino had spoken of the killings.

"President Aquino and I agreed that these killings were unfortunately timed for my visit," he said. "But we also agreed that this would not drive a wedge between our two countries, that our countries will have a special relationship."

Philippine spokesman Noel Tolentino said later that the killings "will not alter the friendly relations between the two countries."

The ambush victims were employees of Ford Aerospace Corp., which contracts to maintain an electronic warfare training range at Camp O'Donnell.

Police said the Americans had slowed their car as they approached a dump truck and a jeep blocking a highway near Capas, 60 miles north of Manila, police said. Six men jumped from the jeep and sprayed them with gunfire, according to police Lt. Pepito Pimentel.

The assassins were believed to belong to the New Peoples Army, which has waged a 20-year-old insurgency to establish a communist state, but there was no claim of responsibility.

In a statement released today, the New Peoples Army called Quayle's visit "part of the intensifying pressure by the United States on the Aquino regime" to extend the lease on the bases.

"This pressure covers all aspects, economic, political and military," the rebels said. "The United States is overextending legal means and is using dirty and underhanded tactics to achieve its ends."

Guards Kill Inmate During Prison Melee

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHESTER, Ill. — A gang-related melee with racial overtones erupted among more than 300 prisoners at an overcrowded, maximum-security prison, officials said. Guards apparently shot to death one inmate and wounded four.

Guards fired as many as 50 shots Tuesday in an effort to quell the disturbance, which involved up to 325 of the 700 inmates who were out of their cells at the Menard Correctional Center, said Corrections Director Michael Lane.

Slain was James Bailey, 34, who was serving time for attempted murder. In all, 21 people were injured, including two guards, said prison spokesman Nic Howell.

"The disturbance certainly was gang-related, and considering the nature of the gang here, it had definite racial overtones," Lane said.

He said fighting appeared to have started — possibly simultaneously — in the West Cellhouse and the dining room.

Lane said most of the shots were warning shots in the air.

Asked if the gunshots came from the guards, Howell said, "We don't know that for a fact. We would presume." He said prison officials had not recovered any guns "that were not to be there."

One guard had a possible broken jaw and one received minor gunshot injuries, he said.

Nine inmates were taken to Chester Memorial hospital, four with gunshot wounds, four with stab wounds and one with contusions to the eye and back, a hospital spokesman said.

Howell said the inmate population at Menard, the state's second-oldest prison, was 2,539 at the end of last week.

"That's 74 percent more than the prison was designed to hold," he said.

Lane said about 30 percent of the Menard inmates are white, 64 percent are black and 6 percent are Hispanic.

Pacemaker

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos was fitted with an external pacemaker after suffering an erratic heartbeat, a hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

Marcos' heartbeat returned to normal after the device was attached Monday night, said Eugene Tiwanak, assistant administrator of St. Francis Medical Center, where Marcos has been hospitalized since Jan. 15.

Doctors had not decided by Tuesday afternoon whether to implant an internal pacemaker, Tiwanak said.

The 72-year-old Marcos has suffered near-total organ failure since being admitted to the hospital nearly nine months ago. He is attached to life-support equipment and remained in critical condition Tuesday.

Marcos and his wife, Imelda, have lived in exile in Hawaii since February 1986, when he was ousted in a popular revolt.

TV Viewer's Tip Solves Mystery

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — A man who disappeared for four years after embezzling more than $1.1 million from a bank where he worked has pleaded guilty to embezzlement, a prosecutor said Tuesday.

Ronald E. Denslow entered the plea this week after the government agreed to recommend a sentence of no more than three years in prison, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Janet Parker. He could have faced up to 65 years.

A tip from a viewer of the "Unsolved Mysteries" television show led to Denslow's arrest Aug. 8 at Gardnerville, Nev., where he was living under an assumed name. He had disappeared in November 1985.

Denslow was accused of embezzling $100,900 from the Mount Pleasant branch of the Bank of Alma, where he worked, as well as depositing two $500,000 cashier's checks drawn on phony accounts he set up at the bank.

The bank got wise to the embezzlement and stopped Denslow from getting his hands on most of the money, Parker said.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how air members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Sept. 22.

HOUSE

AIR TRAVEL SECURITY BILL — By a vote of 392 for and 31 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR 1659) requiring U.S. airlines and high-risk domestic and international airports to upgrade their defenses against terrorism. In a policy shift the U.S. Treasury rather than the private sector would pay for stiffer airport and flight security. This change made the bill controversial.

The bill requires airlines to install state-of-the-art explosives detectors at airports rated as likely terrorists' targets. Commuter flights feeding major airlines would have to greatly tighten security, and airports would be required to begin computerized personnel screening to keep saboteurs out of sensitive areas such as baggage facilities.

The bill's cost of nearly $240 million the next two years would come mostly from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund rather than new appropriations. Built by ticket taxes, the fund has a surplus of $5.8 billion that now serves mainly to reduce the deficit. President Bush opposed the bill on grounds the cost should be met by airlines and airports and, where federal funds are necessary, through the discipline of the appropriations process.

Supporter Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., said the government should pay the cost because "the barbarous activities of terrorists are directed at...the U.S. government, not at the commercial carriers."

Opponent Tom DeLay, R-Tex., said "those who fly on international flights should pay for their own security through a surcharge of just $2 a ticket."

Members voting yes supported the bill.

North Carolina members voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Howard Coble, R-6, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Not voting: None.

ARMS CONTROL DISPUTE — The House rejected a bill (HR 1495) to reauthorize the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) through fiscal 1991 at a cost of about $73 million. The vote of 247 for and 140 against fell short of the two-thirds majority needed to pass the bill under a shortcut parliamentary procedure.

The ACDA puts into effect arms control policies set by the president and top Administration officials. Congress also has influence over it.

Mainly at issue on this vote was House committee control of the ACDA's On-Site Inspection Agency, which monitors Soviet compliance with the INF treaty's requirement that the superpowers destroy their intermediate-range missiles. The bill gave the Foreign Affairs Committee more jurisdiction over the agency than the Armed Services Committee.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

Voting yes: Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, Clarke.

Voting no: Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger.

SENATE

TO EXPAND FHA INSURANCE — By a vote of 50 for and 49 against, the Senate opted for the more generous of two plans for raising the dollar value of mortgages eligible for Federal Housing Administration insurance. The vote occurred during debate on a fiscal 1990 Department of Housing and Urban Development appropriations bill (HR 2916).

Currently FHA insurance is available for loans of up to $101,250 where housing is costliest and for smaller loans in other regions. The vote shelved an amendment raising the cap to $118,000. It cleared the way for approval of language that, in part, would allow the FHA to insure mortgages of well above $118,000 in upscale housing markets.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., voted yes, supporting the more generous of two plans for raising the ceiling on FHA mortgages. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. voted no.

POPULATION CONTROL — The Senate voted 52 for and 48 against to resume American financial support of a United Nations program to advance population control around the globe. The vote during the debate on a fiscal 1990 foreign Population Fund. Critics say the fund helps China implement measures such as forced sterilization and abortion. The Reagan Administration had withheld American support of the fund because of its involvement with China.

Senators voting yes wanted America to contribute to the United Nations Population Fund.

Sanford voted yes, wanting America to contribute to the United Nations Population Fund. Helms voted no.

AID TO EL SALVADOR — The Senate voted 82 for and 18 against to increase fiscal 1990 military aid to El Salvador from a committee-approved level of $85 million to $90 million. This occurred as the Senate debated a 1990 foreign aid bill (HR 2939).

The Senate coupled the $90 million with an endorsement of new negotiations by warring factions that could end El Salvador's lengthy civil war. But it repudiated senators seeking to link military aid to evidence that new Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani is doing all he can to restrain right-wing death squads.

Sanford and Helms both voted yes to support $90 million in military aid to El Salvador.

POLAND AND HUNGARY — By a vote of 74 for and 24 against, the Senate allowed a pending foreign aid bill (HR 2939) to be used to insure American investments in Communist-affiliated Polish and Hungarian enterprises. This killed an amendment by Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to keep the Overseas Privat Investment Corp. from underwriting such investments. OPIC provides political risk insurance for American investments abroad.

Supporter Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., complained the Helms amendment would "once again slam down the Iron Curtain on the people of Poland" by thwarting the spread of private enterprise there.

Helms said investment that benefits Communist Party members "defeats the entire purpose of what has been going on in Poland to promote freedom."

Sanford voted yes, opposing the Helms amendment. Helms voted no.

FLIGHT SMOKING BAN — By a vote of 77 for and 21 against, the Senate ended a filibuster aimed at blocking a proposed ban on smoking on all domestic flights. Senators voting yes wanted to move toward approval of expanded flight smoking ban.

Sanford and Helms voted no against moving toward approval of expanded flight smoking ban.

Gold Seized

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian security forces seized 10 tons of gold worth $115 million Tuesday near the southeastern border with Pakistan, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said several members of a smuggling ring who planned to drive the gold into Pakistan were arrested.

IRNA said the gold was hidden under piles of scrap iron.

Pentagon Says Soviets Haven't Begun Implementing Promised Military Cuts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union is modernizing its armed forces and still poses "a major threat" to Western security despite President Mikhail Gorbachev's promised cutbacks and pledges of reform, says Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney.

Cheney, releasing the Pentagon's eighth annual assessment of Soviet military strength today, sounded a note of caution amid the sweeping changes in the U.S.-Soviet relationship.

"While the United States encourages the evolution of... a Soviet Union dedicated to democratic principles, we cannot react unilaterally to Soviet initiatives that are not yet implemented or to proposals which, if implemented, can easily be reversed," Cheney said in the study, "Soviet Military Power."

"It is... clear that despite the dramatic changes occurring in the Soviet Union and the Soviet leadership's declaration of benign intentions toward Western democracies, Soviet military capabilities continue to constitute a major threat to our security," Cheney said in an introduction to the report.

The Soviet Union, the secretary asserted, "continues to upgrade its forces and improve its capabilities."

"Indeed, while some Soviet military units and equipment have been withdrawn from Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union will remain the world's largest military power, even if the General Secretary's promised unilateral reductions take place," Cheney said.

The annual study, which in its early editions under the Reagan administration was derided on Capitol Hill and outside government as a propaganda effort, has evolved into a more comparative summary of the U.S.-Soviet military balance. It even acknowledges that the West leads its arch rival in areas such as naval power.

But with a 159-page array of high-gloss text, pictures and graphs, the study portrays the Soviets as an extremely formidable foe facing a United States that "grapples" with such things as the selection of a mobile missile force.

Cheney has repeatedly hit the theme of the continued Soviet threat in speeches around the country as he has attempted to counter Congress' efforts to rearrange his Pentagon budget.

Saying the likelihood for conflict between the superpowers "is as low as it has been at any time in the postwar era," the book discusses such developments as Gorbachev's announcement of significant cuts in conventional forces, reductions in the Soviet defense budget and weapons procurement, and the U.S.-Soviet arms control agreement on banning intermediate range missiles in Europe.

However, it also warns that Gorbachev's changes, if enacted, "may also prove hazardous to Western security."

If the Soviet leader's economic reforms are enacted without corresponding democratic growth, "the West could face a far more formidable Soviet threat than it does today," the study states.

The defense secretary said that while the United States should encourage Moscow to promote pluralism at home and international stability abroad, he advises that it is "even more important" to maintain "a strong military deterrent, until the Soviets reduce their armed forces to significantly lower levels."

Cheney pointed to the following items — some of them cited in last year's report — as evidence of the continued Soviet strength:

—Despite Gorbachev's announced 14.2 percent reduction in Soviet defense spending, spending since 1985 has increased by an average of 3 percent a year in real terms, while U.S. spending has declined in real terms by more than 11 percent in the same period.

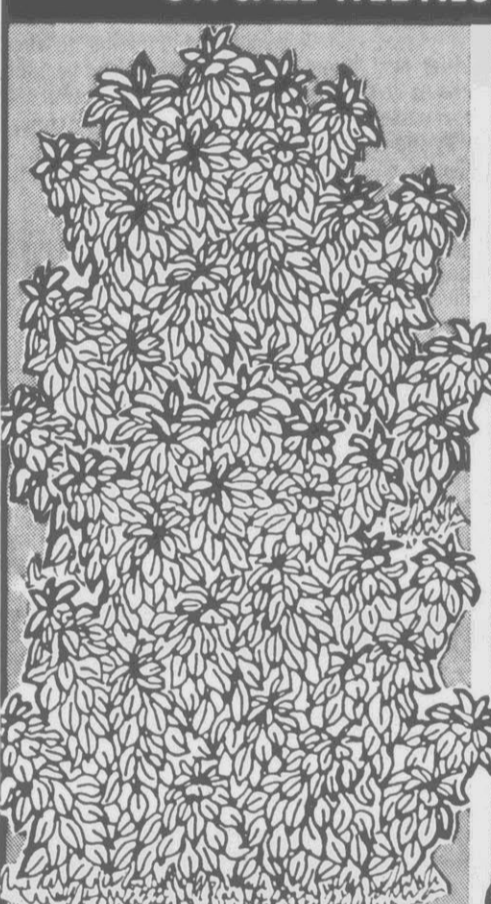

—The Soviets are modernizing offensive strategic nuclear forces at an "extraordinary momentum."

—The Soviets field 170 SS-25 road-mobile missiles and 18 rail-mobile SS-18s while the United States "grapples with the selection of a mobile missile force."

Bush Tells IMF World Must 'Do More' For Poland

By Tom Raum
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush told the 152-nation International Monetary Fund today "we must do more" to help the new non-communist-led government of Poland, citing "our self-evident stake in its success."

The president urged the international lending organization, and its sister agency the World Bank, "to work rapidly with Poland" to help the nation restructure its economy.

He also vowed that the United States would work with the IMF to help develop a compromise by the end of this year to help increase the organization's funds.

In his maiden speech to two multinational financial organizations, Bush also called on commercial banks to carry more of a burden in easing the troubled economies of Latin America and other developing nations.

"We encourage these steps not as self-sacrifice, but as self-interest," Bush said in prepared remarks. "Success not only will help the debtor nations. But it will also strengthen the banks, by putting their portfolios on a sounder footing."

Bush's comments to the annual IMF-World Bank meeting were a toned-down rendition of an appeal he made to a group international bankers and financial officials Tuesday night at the White House.

At that session, Bush lobbied hard for the Third World debt relief proposal crafted by Treasury Secretary

Nicholas Brady, saying bankers must accept some losses on Third World loans as part of a "new realism."

The so-called Brady plan, unveiled last March, endorses voluntary efforts on the part of commercial banks to forgive part of the $400 billion they are owed by the largest debtor countries, many of them in Latin America.

However, banks have been reluctant to endorse the plan because it requires them to partially forgive old loans, then turn around and make new ones.

In today's speech to the gathering of most of the world's finance ministers, Bush said: "There may be no greater opportunity before us all today than the challenges of Poland and, more broadly, Eastern Europe."

Bush urged the lending organizations to give special attention to funneling Western financial aid to Poland, noting the United States and some other Western nations had individually already come up with aid packages.

The Bush administration is supporting a $119 million package of U.S. economic aid to Poland and another $100 million in food aid.

"In light of clearly growing needs, the recent accession of a Solidarity-led government, and our self-evident stake in its success, we must do more," Bush said.

"For its part, the United States intends to be out in front of this effort, to take advantage of this historic development and to ensure its success," Bush said.

He called recent movement toward new freedoms and toward open-market economies both in Eastern Europe and in the Soviet Union "stunning."

"The jury is no longer out. Look at the two economic systems and see who has prospered and who has struggled. Let's put an end to the economic experiment. Because history has decided," he said.

Bush told the financial officials: "A more open and humane Soviet Union can only be in the interest of the West."

"And, as we see the evidence of that reform, we can match it with steps of our own," he added.

Shortly before Bush spoke, Japanese Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto said his government is offering Poland lower tariffs on its exports to Japan in an effort to help the reform of Poland's economy. "We see reform in Poland as a major historical challenge for all of us," he told reporters.

The president also appealed to the financial officials, representing rich and poor nations alike, to join forces in the war on drugs, calling it "a worldwide problem" that can only be solved by joint international action.

"To conceal their obscene profits, drug barons must wash their money by cycling it through financial institutions and illegitimate shell corporations," Bush said.

"We need tough measures to track down and confiscate the profits of drug-related crime," Bush said. He reiterated the U.S. call for all countries to ratify the United Nations Vienna Convention, which makes money laundering a criminal and extraditable offense.

Bush also applauded what he said was an increased attention being given by the World Bank to the environmental consequences of some of its projects in developing nations. "But there is more to be done," he said.

Bush said the nations of the world should work "more cooperatively" to deal with the problems of global warming.

In advance of the speech, Bush gave a group of international bankers a hard sell in behalf of his administration's debt-reduction plan, the so-called Brady plan.

At a White House reception Tuesday night, Bush told the bankers and officials of the IMF and the World Bank they all had "key roles to play" in helping to ease the Third World's staggering debt.

Bush praised debt-relief packages worked out so far under the plan for Mexico and the Philippines, saying: "I realize these negotiations were difficult. It is not easy for banks to recognize losses."

"The results, however, reflect a new realism on the part of the commercial banking community in approaching the debt problem," he said.

"This is an international problem, which requires collaboration and innovation to make lasting progress," Bush told his White House audience of 73 bankers, officials of the World Bank and IMF and other key participants at this week's annual IMF-World Bank meetings.

In today's speech, Bush said that "one of the lessons" of the 1980s, especially the debt crisis, is that "we're all in this together. And when we cooperate, we all come out winners."

EEC Nations Propose $648 Million In Aid To Poland, Hungary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The European Economic Community's leadership is proposing $648 million in new aid for Poland and Hungary, money it says is urgently needed so that economic instability does not threaten the countries' reforms.

Wrapping up a daylong meeting of 24 major non-communist donor nations on ways to encourage democratic reform in Eastern Europe, senior EEC officials also urged that Poland and Hungary work out agreements with the International Monetary Fund to reschedule their foreign debts.

Hungary's debt is the highest per capita in the East bloc at $18 billion and Poland owes a debilitating $39 billion.

Tuesday marked the second time the 24 nations have met to discuss aid to Eastern Europe and they are scheduled to meet again in November. The first meeting was held Aug. 1.

A communique issued at the end of the meeting noted that non-communist nations have already pledged $271 million in food aid to Poland and Hungary.

Of the $648 million in aid for next year, half would be financed by the 12 European Community member nations and the remainder by the 12 other donor nations. All donor nations and the European Parliament must approve the proposals.

The U.S. delegation did not pledge more aid than the $169 million already promised but indicated it could find additional funds. It also said the $648 million should be seen as a minimum amount, not a ceiling.

Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland and Austria promised development projects and credits totaling about $133 million.

Jacques Delors, president of the European Community's executive commission and Frans Andriessen, the Community's external relations commissioner, said the economic and political reforms in Poland and Hungary were "still very fragile."

In a statement, they said Poles and Hungarians "could well find their new freedoms threatened by economic disorders."

"It would be unthinkable to allow such disorders, which could be alleviated through rapid action, to undermine the prospects for change in Eastern Europe," they said.

The program proposed by the commission included:

- Supplying pesticides, farm machinery and food to the Polish government.
- Improving market access for Polish and Hungarian goods.

— Granting both countries new loans.

— Providing training to prepare both nations for market-oriented economies.

— Aiding the clean up of industrialized areas and preservation of historical and cultural sites.

The non-EC donor nations are the six members of the European Free Trade Association — Austria, Finland, Iceland, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland — Japan, the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Turkey.

European Community foreign ministers may approve the plan as early as next week at a regularly-scheduled EC meeting in Luxembourg.

Johannesburg Ends Public Segregation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Johannesburg formally opened all public facilities to blacks today after the city council voted to desegregate buses, swimming pools and recreation centers.

The move was approved at a city council meeting Tuesday night despite strong opposition from members of the far-right Conservative Party who favor strict segregation.

"We are taking a large step in South African terms," said council member Harold Rudolph, who voted in favor of integration. "I am so glad we are putting right that which was wrong."

Most public facilities in major cities have been desegregated in recent years, either informally or by the repeal of apartheid legislation.

However, the council's decision marked the first formal declaration to integrate all public facilities controlled by the city. Cape Town already has taken similar steps.

The council's decision does not affect schools, neighborhoods or hospitals, which are segregated by national and provincial laws. Also, private facilities may be segregated under the Separate Amenities Act.

Earlier this year, the Johannesburg city council polled white voters on the question of integration. Most said they approved of desegregated buses and recreation centers, but almost 60 percent were opposed to opening swimming pools to blacks.

"We know (integration) is going create problems but these are manageable problems and we will rise to the challenge," said council member Ian Davidson.

The Five Freedoms Forum, an anti-apartheid group, said it welcomed the council's decision.

"If facilities controlled by the council can be opened, so then can the facilities such as hospitals and schools that are controlled by the central and provincial governments," the group said.

Anti-apartheid groups launched a nationwide defiance campaign on Aug. 2 that has targeted segregated schools, neighborhoods, beaches, buses and other facilities.

A major demonstration is planned Saturday at beaches near Cape Town, where last month police used batons, whips and tear gas to disperse blacks who attempted to march on "whites-only" beaches. The beaches fall under the jurisdiction of provincial authorities, not the city council.

Johannesburg, along with Durban and Cape Town, are considered the most liberal cities in the country. Towns just outside Johannesburg, such as Boksburg, have been re-imposing rigid apartheid since the Conservative Party won control of some local councils in municipal elections a year ago.

In Boksburg and elsewhere, blacks have been barred from public parks and other facilities that had been integrated for several years.

The Johannesburg city council is controlled by the National Party, which has governed South Africa for 41 years and codified apartheid laws in the early 1950s.

President F.W. de Klerk, who was sworn into office last week, said his government seeks to end discrimination but he has not specified any apartheid laws that he will repeal.

He also has said he favors segregated schools and neighborhoods for whites who want them.

Tens of thousands of blacks have moved illegally into whites-only neighborhoods in inner cities. The government has virtually stopped prosecutions under the law that segregates residential areas and says it is considering opening some neighborhoods to all races.

Takeover Bid Forces BAT To Sell Interests

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

London's BAT Industries, moving to thwart a $22 billion hostile takeover bid by British financier Sir James Goldsmith, said Tuesday that it will sell Saks Fifth Avenue, Marshall Field's, Breuners and other retail interests to enhance dividends and boost share value.

In addition, BAT said it will buy back 10 percent of its shares and "significantly increase" its 1989 dividend. It also will spin off its British retailer and its international paper businesses into two new companies to be owned by present shareholders.

If approved by shareholders Oct. 19, the sweeping restructuring will prune one of the world's largest conglomerates back to its original tobacco businesses and newer financial services interests, including Farmers Group, the Los Angeles-based insurer.

The deal also could begin a bidding war for Saks and Chicago-based Marshall Field's — two of the most venerable names in retailing — at a time of upheaval in retailing. Canada's Campeau Corp., for example, is selling Bloomingdale's to raise needed cash in the face of intense competition and slack consumer demand.

Goldsmith has said that if the takeover by his Hoylake Investments group succeeds, he would sell everything except the tobacco holdings that make BAT the world's largest company in that industry. Hoylake and other BAT critics have complained that the company's diversified interests leads investors to undervalue its stock.

Goldsmith on Tuesday hailed the restructuring as "a first step" toward the unbundling of the conglomerate's enterprises that he also would undertake. Hoylake, he added, will support the plan while continuing to press its takeover bid.

Besides Saks and Marshall Field's, BAT also will sell Breuners, which has 57 stores in California, Arizona and Nevada and employs about 1,200 people. Also on the auction block is Ivey's, a department-store chain headquartered in Charlotte, N.C., with 24 stores in North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida.

But BAT would keep and build on Farmers, expanding financial services through cash flow generated by its tobacco businesses. They include Brown & Williamson Tobacco in Louisville, Ky., the nation's third-largest tobacco company. Its brands include Kool, Viceroy and Barclay.

If Hoylake succeeded in what would be history's second-largest takeover after the $25 billion leveraged buyout of RJR Nabisco, it would immediately sell Farmers to a French partner, Axa Midi Assurances.

Detainee Released

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Authorities have released a prominent anti-apartheid activist who went on a hunger strike after being detained without charge last month, his attorney said.

Trevor Manuel, who was freed Tuesday, is one of the top-ranking leaders in Cape Town of the banned United Democratic Front, the country's largest anti-apartheid coalition.

Manuel, who has been detained previously, was held in the central city of Bloemfontein and refused to eat for two weeks of his 30-day confinement, attorney Essa Moosa said.

Before his most recent detention, Manuel was under police restrictions that limited his movements. Moosa said he did not know if any new restrictions had been placed on his client.

Many activists have ignored the police orders as part of a nationwide defiance campaign that began in August.

The detainees released Tuesday, after they launched a hunger strike, and only a few dozen were being held without charge in June and July.

However, an human rights groups estimate that the number has risen to about 250. More than 30,000 people have been detained without charge for varying lengths of time under the three-year-old state of emergency.

In other developments Tuesday, the Appeal Court in Bloemfontein ruled that employees may not be forced to work overtime.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions, the country's largest black labor federation, has called on members not to work overtime to protest a controversial labor law that limits the ability of unions to strike.

South African Breweries contested the union's decision, but the Appeal Court said no worker could be "compelled to perform work he is not contractually obliged to do."

Leftists Urge Colombia To End Drug Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — The leftist M-19 guerrilla movement is urging the government to end its war against the cocaine cartels, pardon drug traffickers and refuse to extradite them to the United States.

The statement by M-19 was published in a full page advertisement Tuesday in El Tiempo, Colombia's largest newspaper. It also urged immediate negotiations between the government and drug barons.

There was no comment from authorities.

The government and army claim the drug traffickers and an estimated 10,000 combatants in six leftist guerrilla groups work together, with the cocaine cartels providing money to the insurgents in exchange for armed protection.

The M-19 proposal was not linked in the advertisement to negotiations between the guerrillas and President Virgilio Barco's government on a possible peace pact.

Such an agreement would pardon the M-19 rebels and allow them to set up a political party. Talks have been delayed this week as negotiators for both sides were said to be working out details.

M-19 is the only guerrilla group negotiating with the government.

M-19, or May 19, was formed in 1970 by dissidents who claimed a presidential election that year was fraudulent.

The group has waged a campaign of assassinations, kidnappings, bombings and armed raids but its actions in recent months have been overshadowed by the battle between the government and drug barons.

In 1985, M-19 guerrillas seized the Palace of Justice in Bogota and 95 people were killed during the army assault to recapture the building.

There were these other developments:

A judge dropped charges against two leaders of the Medellin drug cartel, saying there was a lack of evidence.

Hundreds of tourists fled the city of Catagena aboard planes, buses and taxis after a bomb exploded Monday at the Hilton Hotel, killing two people.

On Tuesday, a bomb exploded in a supermarket in a Bogota suburb, wounding five people.

In the five weeks since drug lords declared war on the government for trying to break their trade there have been 111 bombings, mainly in Bogota, Medellin and Cali.

Police say the bombs have killed eight people and wounded 137. El Tiempo said a Medellin judge on Monday removed charges against Pablo Emilio Escobar Gaviria and Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, reputed kingpins of the Medellin-based operation that supplies most of the cocaine in the United States.

Both are on the Justice Department's list of 12 drug figures wanted for prosecution in the United States. The judge's action would prevent their extraditions. The government made no comment on the decision by federal Judge Francisco Cadenas. The prosecutor said he would appeal the action.

Both Escobar and Rodriguez have offered to negotiate with the government to end the drug war.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened lower today, after posting modest gains in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which gained 4.75 points on Tuesday, was down 4.18 points at 2,659.76 at 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Declining issues outpaced gainers by more than 2 to 1 among those listed on the New York Stock Exchange, with 272 issues up, 647 down and 464 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 30.50 million shares, up from 18.24 million shares at the same point in Tuesday's session.

The NYSE's composite index of all listed common stocks was off 0.20 at 191.27.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.04 at 382.23.

The market appeared to be weighed down by International Business Machines Corp.'s announcement this morning that it expects earnings for the current quarter to come in below the current range of security analysts' estimates.

IBM's announcement came before the market opened, and its stock fell 5 1/2 to 111 1/2 in the early going.

Among other early active issues, American Telephone & Telegraph was down 1/4 at 42 3/4, General Electric was down 1/8 at 55 3/4 and Eastman Kodak was down 1/4 at 46 1/8.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 4.75 points to finish at 2,663.94, after climbing more than 21 points during the session.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a margin of about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 740 issues up, 634 down and 556 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 158.35 million shares, up from 121.13 million in Monday's session.

Sony Says Columbia Pictures' Directors Approve Takeover

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Sony Corp. said today it has agreed to acquire Columbia Pictures Entertainment Inc., the huge movie and TV production company, for $27 a share, or about $3 billion.

Sony's U.S. subsidiary, Sony USA Inc., said the tender offer had been approved by Columbia's board subject to certain conditions, but that it expected to complete the acquisition by early November.

It said the proposal also had the support of the management of Coca-Cola Co., Columbia's largest shareholder at 49 percent.

The deal had been widely rumored since Monday, when Columbia disclosed it was in buyout talks with a third party that it refused to identify. Sony earlier today confirmed from Tokyo that it had made an offer.

It is the latest chapter in a wave of consolidation that has swept through the entertainment industry.

There was no immediate confirmation of the deal from Columbia, whose board was scheduled to meet today.

But Sony USA said in its statement that the tender offer was approved by the Columbia board and an option agreement had been signed with Coca-Cola for its 49 percent stake, subject to ratification by the Coca-Cola board.

Coca-Cola management issued a statement saying it was recommending that its board approve the option agreement at a meeting next Monday.

"The acquisition of a major film studio extends Sony's long-term strategy of building a total entertainment business around the synergy of audio and video hardware and software," said Michael Schulhof, vice chairman of Sony Corp. of America.

Columbia owns two major film studios, Columbia Pictures and TriStar Pictures, but its box-office results have been disappointing in recent years. Among its most recent releases are "Ghostbusters II," "The Karate Kid Part III" and "Casualties of War."

It has been a more impressive force on television, where it has produced or distributed 11 prime-time series, including five new shows. Among its productions are "Who's the Boss" and "Designing Women."

Columbia also about 820 movie screens in 220 locations and a library of more than 2,700 films and 23,000 TV episodes.

OPEC Agrees To Increase Oil Production, Keep Prices Steady

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA — OPEC ministers today reached an agreement designed to increase the cartel's current oil production quota but keep prices firm in the coming months, an official said.

Members of the 13-nation cartel agreed to lift the production ceiling of 19.5 million barrels a day in the final three months of the year, Iraqi Oil Minister Issam al-Chalabi said. He would not say what the new ceiling would be.

Ministerial sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said shortly before the meeting started that the ministers were moving toward adopting a production ceiling of 20.5 million barrels a day with the increase divided proportionately among OPEC members.

Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and other nations have demanded a larger share of oil production. OPEC now is producing 22 million barrels a day because of overproduction by Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

If the quota is raised but the cartel still manages to reduce the amount of oil being produced, prices could remain firm.

Chalabi, emerging from meetings with ministers from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, refused to say whether they worked out a formula for meeting some countries' demands for a higher share of production.

"We solved a good deal," he said. "Maybe we'll leave something for November."

The ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were scheduled to meet in late November to plan their production strategy for 1990.

OPEC Secretary-General Subroto said the ministers rescheduled their final round of talks from early evening to mid-afternoon. He declined to elaborate.

The officials were studying a surprise Iranian proposal to see if it could form the basis of a compromise.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh said a ceiling of 21.5 million barrels a day "would satisfy everybody."

The Iranian plan also would revise most members' shares in the production pie. Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, which have been overproducing to press their demands for bigger output slices, would get more. Other countries' shares would be cut.

Each country is assigned an individual output quota, based on its percentage share of the total. For example, Saudi Arabia, the cartel's No. 1 producer, has nearly a 25 percent share of the total supply.

Libyan oil minister, Fawzi Shakshuki, called the Iranian plan unacceptable in its present form. Libya wants to get any increase Kuwait does.

The ministers have been meeting since Saturday to find a way to raise their output ceiling in the last quarter, without sending prices tumbling. Since July, the cap has been 19.5 million barrels a day.

Crude prices have held fairly steady in recent months. But the average price of a basket of seven crudes monitored by OPEC has been about a dollar under the cartel's benchmark of $18 a barrel.

Mitchell Wants Bans Lifted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell accused President Bush today of being "overly timid" and urged him to suspend trade restrictions with the Soviet Union as a reward for permitting freer emigration.

Mitchell called for the temporary waiver of the Jackson-Vanik amendment which links non-discriminatory trade treatment by the United States with the freedom of Soviet citizens to leave their country at will.

The Democratic leader noted that more than 100,000 people have been permitted to leave the Soviet Union since the beginning of the year and that as many as 50,000 more have received permission to depart.

"This indisputable rise in Soviet emigration is a step that deserves an American response," Mitchell told the Senate. "The response quite clearly should be the conditional lifting of impediments to trade imposed by the Jackson-Vanik amendment."

The Jackson-Vanik amendment was adopted by Congress in 1974 at the height of the Cold War. Named for its principal sponsors, the late Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and former Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, the amendment bars the extension of trade credits and the granting of most-favored nation trade status to communist nations which deny citizens the freedom to emigrate.

Mitchell noted that the law permits the president to waive the amendment if he determines Soviet citizens are no longer denied the right to leave or if such a waiver will promote freedom of emigration.

He said lifting the amendment would not automatically confer dramatic trade benefits, that a U.S.-Soviet commercial agreement would be needed to do that, and that trade would continue to be limited by a lack of demand for Soviet products.

"But Jackson-Vanik is of tremendous symbolic importance," Mitchell said, noting that Soviet leaders have long cited it as an obstacle to closer relations.

Bush has said he will consider waiving the amendment only when the Soviets formally change their emigration laws and when the results of that change are seen to be both visible and permanent.

Ministers Rebuked For Failures

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Communist Party has rebuked two government ministers for failing to produce and deliver basic consumer goods, including soap, clothing and shoes, the newspaper Pravda said today.

The report said that 88 percent of basic consumer goods were generally not available, mainly because of ministerial mismanagement.

"Out of 276 basic consumer goods, 243 cannot be found in shops, including soap, toothpaste, razor blades, notebooks, pencils, clothing and shoes," Pravda said.

"Checks show that a number of ministers are still using old approaches to planning and financing production of consumer goods," it said.

The chronic shortage of consumer goods, which has worsened over the past several years despite the economic restructuring initiated by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, has top billing during the current session of the Supreme Soviet legislature.

In an effort to stem the shortages, the Central Committee ordered the Party Control Committee to find out which party members in the Council of Ministers were responsible, Pravda said.

"The committee considered the issue of the issue of party responsibility of a number of Communists, heads of standing committees of the Council of Ministers, ministries and departments, who are guilty of frustrating the production of consumer goods and unsatisfactory supplies of these goods to the population," Pravda said.

Reprimanded as a result of the investigation were Vladimir Gusev, the minister responsible for chemical and timber industries, and V. Lakhin, who is in charge of social development, Pravda said.

Cubs' manager Don Zimmer is doused with beer after his team clinched NL East title

Cubs Win! Cubs Win!

While The Others Had More Of That Important Stuff, Chicago Had What Counted — More Wins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — At the start, the New York Mets had more talent. St. Louis and Philadelphia had more stars and Montreal and Pittsburgh had more potential.

At the end, the Chicago Cubs will be the only more that matters — victories.

The Cubs clinched the National League East championship Tuesday night, beating Montreal 3-2 about an hour after second-place St. Louis lost 4-1 at Pittsburgh.

The Cubs became the first team to earn a playoff spot, and did it the same way they've been winning all year — aggressive offense and good pitching.

Ryne Sandberg, the only everyday starter left from Chicago's last title team in 1984, dashed home from first base on an error in the eighth inning and Greg Maddux and Mitch Williams made it stand up.

"After we got that close, I wasn't going to blow it," Williams said after striking out pinch hitter Mike Fitzgerald with the tying run on third base to end the game.

That made Don Zimmer a champion for the first time as a manager in 11 seasons and made meaningless this weekend's three-game series at St. Louis. The next big game for the Cubs will be Wednesday night at Wrigley Field, almost certainly against San Francisco, as Chicago tries to reach its first World Series since 1945.

"I don't care who we play," Zimmer said. "I just want to enjoy this for a day."

The Cubs and Giants split 12 games this season. Each team went 3-3 at its home park, although San Francisco's big hitters will come East trying to cause problems.

But getting out of trouble has been the Cubs' strength all year. After a 77-85 finish last season, prospects did not look good after they went 9-23 in spring training.

"I thought we had a lot of holes to fill," Andre Dawson admitted. "I thought we had a lot of things to put behind us."

And they did. A seven-game winning streak early in the season put them in first place, and the Cubs' confidence grew.

In early May, the starting outfield of Dawson, Jerome Walton and Mitch Webster went on the disabled list in a span of five days.

"We knew that was going to be a tough time," Dawson said. "But we hung through it. We played as a team, not as individuals."

The Cubs neither led nor trailed by more than 3½ games 3½ all summer. On Aug. 7, Chicago took first place for good, beating co-leader Montreal 5-2 on a seven-hitter by Maddux and a home run by Sandberg.

Earlier this month, St. Louis made a charge at the Cubs. The Cardinals were within three outs of taking over first place on Sept. 8, but Chicago rallied to win that game in 10 innings.

"It seems like every time we needed to win bad, we would win two or three," Maddux said. "When were about to fold, we'd win."

Concept Could Eliminate Concerns Of Transfers

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

AHOSKIE — The impact of transfers and foreign exchange students are growing concerns for the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

But on the horizon is a concept that would eliminate those concerns while formulating an entirely new set of problems.

Charlie Adams, Executive Director of the NCHSAA, predicts that within two years North Carolina will adopt "school of choice" or "open enrollment."

Under this system, parents can determine where their child will attend school — not just in the county they reside but anywhere in the state.

Adams is wholeheartedly against the idea, but says its supporters include the U.S. Department of Education, President George Bush and North Carolina Governor Jim Martin.

Their argument is on the academic side, stressing improvement in student performance, a reduction in dropout rates, an increase in teacher satisfaction and increasing parental involvement in the education process.

Of course, the danger is wholesale movement of athletes to prosperous programs.

In a sense, it legalizes recruiting at the high school level.

The concept is in place in other states and Adams says the results have been nothing short of chaos.

"We have followed this very closely in Minnesota and Arkansas and it's somewhat of a disaster from an athletic standpoint," Adams said during Tuesday's annual Region I meeting in Ahoskie. "What has happened in states that have gone to open enrollment or school of choice is we have in some ways moved back to the days of segregation."

"We're seeing the inner schools in these states becoming blacker, the suburbs becoming whiter; we're seeing the case of legalized recruiting by coaches; we're seeing the rich schools athletically becoming richer, the poor schools athletically becoming poorer."

But until this concept sweeps into North Carolina, the NCHSAA is busy trying to establish guidelines to define residency and eligibility for athletes who consider a transfer.

A new and simplified package was presented Tuesday and is likely to be approved, Adams said.

The new proposal states:

- Any student is eligible at the school to which the local board of education assigns him within the unit of residence of his parent, his legal guardian or his legal guardian.

- When two boards of education, by mutual agreement, assign a student to a different school he becomes immediately eligible for athletic participation.

- A bona fide change of residence for the parent, the legal guardian or the legal guardian would be required for a student to participate in the same sport of the same sport season during the same school year at a second school.
- A student is eligible at his assigned school if he has attended school within that administrative unit the previous two semesters.

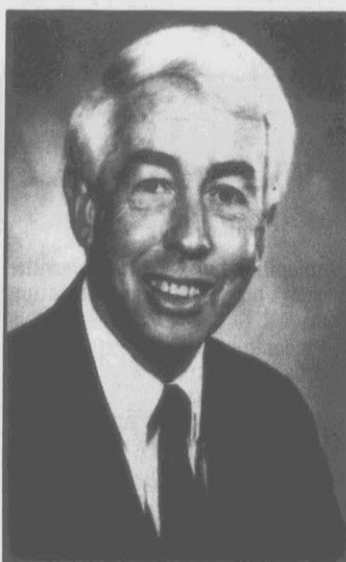

In the area of foreign exchange students, the NCHSAA recently adopted a policy limiting them to one year of participation. Only recently has this become a concern when it appeared foreign exchange students were being recruited and placed solely for their athletic abilities.

Other issues discussed Tuesday included border-state games, playoff formats and sites, the possibility of spring football practice and a new baseball pitching rule.

Dick Knox, Associate Executive Director of the NCHSAA, announced the format for upcoming tournaments involving teams from North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee that will begin during the 1990-91 school year.

Tournaments will be staged in women's basketball (to be hosted in Tennessee) and men's basketball, baseball, soccer and wrestling (all to be hosted in North Carolina).

Two teams from each state will participate in each eight-team tournament and each team will be guaranteed three games. The NCHSAA will select the teams to represent North Carolina. Adams said a team selected one year is unlikely to be selected again.

With basketball enjoying such tremendous success holding its championships in neutral arenas on the University of North Carolina campus, the NCHSAA is pursuing the same for its football championships.

The first step came last year when the 4-A title game was held in Groves Stadium in Winston-Salem. Chapel Hill's Kenan Stadium has been designated for this year's 3-A and 4-A championships while Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh is targeted for the 1-A and 2-A championships if enough corporate support can be generated to underwrite the cost.

East Carolina Aims At 4-0 Start

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Against Louisiana Tech, East Carolina's Pirates will be seeking to win their fourth straight game to open the season, something they have not done since 1977 when they also opened 4-0 before losing. ECU will entertain Louisiana Tech, a team Coach Bill Lewis calls the toughest the Pirates have faced thus far.

Game time Saturday is 1:30 p.m.

The Pirates also have a five-game winning streak over the past two years, equaling a string in 1983. The last time the Pirates won six in a row was over the end of the 1978 season and the start of the 1979 campaign.

Lewis, with a victory, could establish a new mark for a first-year Pirate head coach. With his three thus far, he has equaled the start of Pat Dye in 1974 and John Christenbury in 1940.

Being 3-0, Lewis says, it great. "We've made a tremendous emphasis to the team to take pride in what it has accomplished," he said at his weekly press conference Tuesday.

"But, we also told them to put it in its proper place — ancient history."

Lewis expects both his Pirates and the Tech Bulldogs to be in good health come Saturday when the two meet in Ficklen Stadium.

Not that the Pirates didn't have some injuries in Saturday's 56-10 victory over Illinois State. Fullback Michael Rhett, who scored the first two touchdowns for the Pirates in the game, suffered a bruised shoulder and was held out of practice Monday night.

Lewis, at his weekly press conference Tuesday, said he hoped that Rhett would return to full practice by Wednesday and would be ready to play on Saturday.

Mike Applewhite, a defensive lineman, was nursing a bruised tailbone, but also was expected to be ready to play Saturday.

Defensive end George Koonce, who returned to non-contact work last week, was given the full go-ahead this week and will be ready for duty on Saturday night, and possibly could regain his starting spot from Brian McPhatter.

Ken Burnette, a linebacker who was injured in pre-season workouts, has been cleared to return to drills.

"He's in the same situation Koonce was last week," Lewis said. "We will hold him out of contact work this week and while he might be able to play Saturday, we expect him to be ready for the next game."

Cornerback Donald Porch, who underwent arthroscopic surgery last week, has also been cleared for practice, while linebacker Adrian Barnhill is nursing a slight hamstring pull, and also should be ready to go full speed by the weekend.

"From looking at their injury reports," Lewis said of Louisiana

Jags, Vikes Try 'Passing' Each Other

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Most high school teams subscribe to the old Woody Hayes philosophy that when you throw a pass three things can happen and two of them are bad.

But Friday night in Farmville, 3-0-1 Plymouth and a high-powered passing offense led by quarterback Shawn Walker came calling on the Jaguars in a game that features two of the top prep teams in the Eastern 2-A ranks.

Farmville, 4-0, uses an offensive attack built around the all-around talents of quarterback Morris Foreman. The Jaguars can move it on the ground with runners like tailback Rasel Daniels, or through the air via Foreman's arm.

Plymouth uses a unique one-back offense that features short drops by Walker with quick strikes to receivers like Kip Hicks.

This game was supposed to be played last week, but with Hurricane Hugo threatening, both schools decided to postpone the matchup a week since both had open dates this Friday.

With each team ranked in the Associated Press' top 10 for 2-A teams (Farmville 3rd, Plymouth 7th), school officials figured waiting a week would allow the field to dry and guarantee a bigger game.

It also gives the Jaguars more practice time to get ready for an offense unlike any other they might face this year.

In the only other game involving an area Eastern Plains Conference team Friday night, Ayden-Grifton is home against Roanoke. North Pitt has the week off.

Morris Foreman

Michael Moore

James Edwards

Against Plymouth, Farmville will add an extra defensive back in place of a defensive lineman with a secondary of Daniels, Jeff Tyson, Foreman and Lamont Parker being responsible for pressure on the Plymouth receivers.

Because Walker, who has 874 yards passing with 15 touchdowns this year, throws so quick, it's tough to get pressure on him.

"It's very difficult because of the one- and three-step drops," Farmville coach Dixon Sauls said. "The pressure has to come on the receivers. We stated at the first of the year that we're an attacking team."

"This time, the attack has to come from the secondary. At the same time, we'll have to play intelligent and not get beat on the long pass."

Within the deep secondary scheme, Farmville's linebackers will also join in, with their short drops being responsible for the flats.

While Plymouth uses a unique offensive alignment, the Vikings are traditional on defense, utilizing a variation of the wide-tackle six.

"Our passing game will be an important factor," Sauls said. "We have to throw the ball against their eight-man front."

"Our passing game, just like their running game, people overlook that. We've improved a great deal in the last two weeks."

Farmville's best defense may be a ground-control offense. If the Jaguars can control the clock, they can keep the ball out of the hands of Walker and Co.

"We would like to have a sound running game so that we limit their time of possession," Sauls said. "We need to have the ball. We need to exercise ball control."

North Pitt

After opening the season with three losses, North Pitt now finds itself on a two-game winning streak.

The Panthers have an open date this Friday before beginning Eastern Plains 2-A conference play the following week against Pamlico County.

"I think we're about where we need to be," said North Pitt coach Stuart Ennis, whose team took a 22-13 win over Williamston last week.

"This week I hope we can get a little more offense in. We're not nearly along as we have been in the past offensively. Hopefully this week and next week we can get most of our offense in. We still have several formations we want to get into our offense."

"Other than that, we're about where we want to be. We're beginning to play pretty good defense. I'm pleased with the way this team has come around."

The Panthers' offense has relied on the running talents of halfback Reggie Daniel (91-538 yards, 6 touchdowns) and fullback Malcolm Wiggins (55-400 yards, 3 touchdowns).

Now the Panthers get a week off and a time to heal up any hurts before the conference season begins.

"We've got to the place we're so small in numbers we've acquired a lot of nagging injuries," Ennis said.

UNCW Spikers Top Lady Pirates

UNCW-Wilmington rolled to win three straight games over East Carolina and captured a non-conference volleyball match between the two Colonial Athletic Association members Tuesday night in Minges Coliseum. UNCW took the first game 15-2, and followed that with a 15-8 and a 15-9 win to gain the sweep of the best-of-five event. "We didn't execute well tonight. The first game, it appeared we got psyched out and we did not pass as well as we had in our last eight matches. I feel we're as good as Wilmington and we've got another month before we play them again," East Carolina coach Judy Kirkpatrick said. ECU is now 5-4 overall while UNCW goes to 5-2. The Lady Pirates return to action on Tuesday at Campbell.

Conley, North Pitt Capture Wins

HAVELOCK — D.H. Conley got a measure of revenge Tuesday, taking a pair of lopsided wins over defending 3-A state champion West Carteret in a Coastal Conference volleyball match. Conley also defeated host Havelock in the tri-match. Against the Lady Rams, Conley swept through with a 15-5, 15-7 decision. The Valkyries then came back with a 15-7, 15-0 victory over West Carteret. "We executed okay, but it was not one of our better days," Conley coach Martha McCaskill said. "But it was two big conference wins for us. West Carteret beat us three times last year, so it was good to beat them." McCaskill cited Virginia Hall for her 13 effective hits and three kills; Tracy Sumrell for her seven effective hits and two kills, Tracy Stancil for her passing, and Nikki Adams for her 25 assists. Conley improves its Coastal record to 6-0 and its overall mark to 18-1. The Valkyries return to action on Thursday, hosting West Craven.

North Pitt-Pamlico-Farmville Central
BAYBORO — North Pitt swept a pair of Eastern Plains Conference volleyball matches Tuesday at Pamlico County. The Pant-HERS defeated Pamlico in the opening match, 5-15, 15-4, 15-6. Niccy Sherrad led North Pitt in the first game with three service points, while Keisha Highsmith had eight points in the second and Tasha Council had seven in the third. North Pitt then defeated Farmville Central, 15-9, 16-14, in the second match. Council had nine service points in the first game and Sherrad had eight in the second. Pamlico then defeated Farmville in two straight games, 15-8 and 15-12. Francis Boone had seven service points for Farmville in the second match. Farmville drops to 6-4 overall and 1-3 in the conference. The Lady Jaguars return to action Thursday with a tri-match against Pamlico and East Carteret in Bayboro.

Wilson Christian Academy rolled past Greenville Christian in a volleyball match Tuesday, winning the best-of-five match in three straight. Wilson won the opening game, 15-11, and recorded the second win by the same score. Wilson then clinched the match with a 15-12 win in the final game. Robin Weathersby led GCA in sets, while Melanie May led in service, April Harris in bumps and Maria Stokes in spikes. GCA falls to 1-4 overall and to 1-1 in conference play. The Lady Knights return to action on Thursday, traveling to Raleigh Friendship.

BEAUFORT — Ayden-Grifton remained winless in Eastern Plains Conference play after a pair of losses Tuesday in a tri-match at East Carteret. The Lady Chargers, 0-4 in the EPC and 1-8 overall, dropped their opening match to East Carteret 15-7, 15-13 then fell 15-11, 15-13 to Greene Central. The host Lady Mariners were led by Felicia Johnson with 11 service points. Georgia Jones collected seven and Erica Bendern had six. Tina Tillman had eight service points while Yolanda Kelley had six to lead Ayden-Grifton against East Carteret. Shawner Kinsey had eight service points and Kelley had seven vs. Greene Central. The Lady Rams got eight points from Tasha Grant and five from Tomeka Blackmon. Ayden-Grifton travels to North Pitt Thursday for a tri-match with the Pant-HERS and Greene Central.

Edenton Hands Williamston 1st Loss

EDENTON — Edenton High School handed Williamston its first loss in tennis this season, taking a 7-2 victory Tuesday. Williamston's only wins came at number six singles and at number one doubles. The Lady Tigers are now 6-1 overall and 1-1 in Northeastern Conference play. They travel to Northampton East today. Singles: Gabrielle Webster (E) d. Dawn Bundy, 6-1, 6-4; Holly Goins (E) d. Hope Robinson, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3; Gina Swanner (E) d. Carrie Bussell, 6-3, 7-6 (7-2); Pam Miller (E) d. Deedee Mills, 6-4, 6-2; Sarah Boyce (E) d. Beverly Bullock, 6-3, 6-3; Nancy Bullock (E) d. ## Rose Runners Second In Meet

NEW HOPE — The Rose High boys' and girls' cross country teams each came away with second-place finishes in a non-conference tri-meet at Eastern Wayne Tuesday afternoon. In the boys' meet, the host Warriors prevailed with 29 points, followed by Rose with 37 and Washington with 66. Washington managed easily the girls' meet with 21 points. Rose was second with 45, followed by Eastern Wayne with 60. Setting the pace in the boys' race was Eastern Wayne's Keith Hines with a time of 18 minutes, 17 seconds. Mike Jolley and Dave Jolley led Rose, now 8-2 overall, with identical times of 19:14. Other Rampant finishers were Greg Parker (7th, 20:00), Jeff Jones (9th, 20:40), Joel Metzger (12th, 21:11), Richard Gowan (13th, 21:13), Mike Bode (14th, 21:20), Brian Poust (19th, 22:26), Peter Brinson (22nd, 23:52), Ken Wu (23rd, 24:27), Jeff Li (24th, 24:30), Jim Green (27th, 25:39) and Aaron Thomas (28th, 29:11). Washington's Denise Wehrenburg took first in the girls' race with a time of 22:09. Tyler Hill paced Rose, now 5-5 overall, with a third-place time of 23:32. Other Rose finishers were Christy Manuel (8th, 25:54), Andrea Coble (9th, 27:41), Alicia Pascasio (10th, 28:18) and Jill Wooten (15th, 31:15). Rose returns home Thursday to host Washington and Wilson Hunt.

Brown: Heels' Passing Must Improve

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina football coach Mack Brown says his quarterbacks need to improve their passing after a contest against N.C. State in which the Tar Heels completed just three of 17 attempts. North Carolina hosts Navy on Saturday at Kenan Stadium. "We have to complete passes down field," he said. "That's our No. 1 priority at that position. ... We're not the dominant running team we were last year." Last week against N.C. State, Tar Heel quarterbacks Jonathan Hall and Chuckie Burnette combined to complete just three of 17 attempts for 22 yards, three interceptions and no touchdowns. Brown said he has not decided which quarterback will start against Navy and that they are competing for the slot in practice. Brown said growing pains and inconsistency are just part of coaching a young team. The Tar Heels suffered from some of those pains, and it showed in the skilled positions during the contest with the Wolfpack, he said. "The difference was the experienced speciality players of N.C. State played better than our inexperienced speciality players," Brown said. The difference was mostly seen in the passing game. Wolfpack quarterback Shane Montgomery riddled the Tar Heels' secondary for 222 yards and three touchdowns. As for the Midshipmen, Brown said he doesn't expect them to change their game plan to just try to take advantage of North Carolina's secondary problems. "I think you'll see Navy come in and do what Navy does best — run the option attack and throw play-action passes," Brown said. Brown said he does expect Navy to concentrate on stopping North Carolina's running game in hopes of forcing North Carolina to use its weak passing attack. "It'll look like the whole fleet of the Navy on the line of scrimmage," he said. Brown said that after his team has experienced both ends of blowouts, his team is now somewhere in the middle.

UNCW Under NCAA Eye

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON — North Carolina-Wilmington is being investigated by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for possible recruiting violations in its mens basketball program involving junior transfer Ken Aldrich, school officials said Tuesday.

Aldrich, a 6-foot-8, 215-pound forward who transferred from Jacksonville University, signed with UNCW in the fall but must sit out a year under NCAA rules.

"The NCAA is investigating us," UNCW Athletic Director Bill Brooks confirmed. "Some allegations were made and we checked into them. We had Tom Yeager look into the matter. Some of it is still being looked into by the NCAA."

Yeager, the Colonial Athletic Association Commissioner, was away on business Tuesday and unavailable for comment. Other CAA officials contacted declined comment.

Brooks expects to receive a ruling from the NCAA within the next 10 days.

"When this is resolved, I'll be glad to discuss the matter, but not until that time," he said.

This is the second time the Seahawks have been under investigation in the last six months.

On Aug. 9, the NCAA cleared UNCW of any wrongdoing during an on-campus visit by two recruits in the spring. One of the recruits, Wayne Morris, later signed a letter-of-intent, but failed to meet UNCW's entrance requirements, while the other recruit signed elsewhere. Morris later signed with North Carolina A&T.

"The NCAA determined that there was no intent to gain an unfair advantage," Brooks said. "What happened was that two recruits were out on one of the outdoor courts playing a pickup game with their host player that weekend. That's a secondary infraction as far as the NCAA is considered."

Neither Brooks, UNCW coach Robert McPherson, Jacksonville University Athletic Director Don Jacobs or JU Assistant Athletic Director Gary Izzo would comment on the latest allegations.

Holtz Looks For Backfield Depth

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Notre Dame freshman Reggie Brooks will come under the scrutiny of Coach Lou Holtz on Saturday as the Fighting Irish look to beat Purdue and gain some backfield depth in the process.

Holtz sends his top-ranked and undefeated team against Purdue in a nationally televised game on Saturday with the intention of taking a look at some underclassmen.

"Brooks is ready to play if he can protect the football," Holtz said during his weekly teleconference Tuesday.

Brooks has carried the ball only twice for four yards in the first three games, but Holtz wants to use him to provide relief for Ricky Watters at tailback.

"We will find out a lot about Reggie Brooks on Saturday," Holtz said.

The Irish are 3-0 in defense of their national championship with victories over Virginia, Michigan and Michigan State. They bring a 15-game winning streak, longest in Division I, to Ross-Ade Stadium in search of their 10th consecutive victory over Big Ten opposition. Included in that run is last year's 52-7 romp over Purdue.

Holtz has consistently maintained that, evidence to the contrary, Notre Dame is not the nation's top team.

"What concerns me is, most of our yardage is gained on the perimeter. I think we would be a much better football team if we played in Canada, where the field was wider," he said. "We have not been productive inside. We have got to develop some things on offense."

The Irish have averaged 256 yards rushing and only 91 yards passing.

"We have some severe problems and we're not being very productive in that area. That is one thing that does have me greatly concerned and we're not throwing the ball very well in practice," Holtz said. "The passing game would probably be the biggest concern I have on the football team."

Purdue coach Fred Akers, an old rival of Holtz from the days when Akers coached at Texas and Holtz at Arkansas, has had two weeks to prepare for Notre Dame. The Boilermakers were idle last week while Notre Dame was beating Michigan State 21-13.

"Fred has always liked the option, a variety of running plays," Holtz said. "I'm sure he used the time to put in some things he didn't show in those first two games. We've tried to prepare for them."

"It's possible we've added a few things, but just possible," Akers said with a smile during his Tuesday teleconference.

"You have mixed emotions about playing a team as good as Notre Dame," said Akers, now in his third year of trying to turn around a floundering Purdue program.

"I can't imagine anyone not liking the opportunity to play the No. 1 team. The fact that it will be televised by ABC also adds a lot of color to this thing for the players. ... The downside of it all is you hate to play a team that good.

"They are good. I know you can't tell it when Lou tells it, but he does have a football team. ... That's how they win games. One week they may do it with the kicking game, the next week they might do it with offense ... whatever it takes. That's the mark of a good football team, one that is multi-talented and deep."

The Boilermakers are a big underdog in the 61st meeting of the schools, but Akers reminded listeners that Purdue has a history of producing big upsets over the Irish, including four victories when the Irish were undefeated the previous year.

"Hopefully, we'll be able to go out there and play up to our potential, which I don't think we've done," Akers said. "That's what we're trying to do, hopefully to go out and play our best ball game. We can't do much about the way they play."

The Boilermakers lost to Washington 38-9 before their open date.

"I think it was good for us," Akers said of the two-week break. "I think we got a chance to correct some mistakes, to evaluate and reevaluate some things and some people and we were able to get over some bruises and strains, injuries that I don't think would have been ready if we played last week."

communities who would prefer the current home-and-home rotation from east to west, but few schools can accommodate large crowds with adequate parking, seating and restroom facilities.

Also, a proposal to subdivide the 4-A classification once the playoffs begin has met with much opposition. A difference in enrollment of some 1,100 students in the 4-A classification prompted talks of division much like the playoff structure in South Carolina.

Lower classifications voiced a concern that they should receive the same consideration. Such a playoff structure would require a power rating system which could lead to teams attempting to run up the score to accumulate more power points.

Most administrators and coaches are also opposed to spring football practice. Only 13 states in the U.S. currently allow spring football practice and seven of those are in the Southeast. Georgia recently banned spring practice but is reconsidering.

Knox said the proposal was for spring practice to begin May 15 with five days of conditioning and 10 days of contact work. No athlete participating in another spring sport would be eligible until his season had concluded.

Williamston football coach and athletic director Harold Robinson was one of the few supporters for spring practice, noting it would be beneficial for underclassmen to get the jump on the upcoming season.

A new baseball pitching rule — the same as is used in American Legion — has been established for North Carolina high schools, stating that no pitcher may pitch more than 12 innings in three consecutive days. The network of coaches will be responsible for policing the new rule.

The use of a pitcher in excess of 12 innings will constitute the use of an ineligible player and forfeiture of the game.

An experimental dual team state wrestling tournament has been established in addition to individual regional and individual state tournaments that have been held in the past.

The two-year experiment will be held in the Greensboro Coliseum with 32 teams competing.

Discussions for revamping the tennis championships to a team format are still ongoing.

O's, Jays Set For Showdown

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore and Toronto are heading to their division showdown in the inimitable style of the American League East: both blew big games.

The first-place Blue Jays failed to hold a two-run, ninth-inning lead Tuesday night, losing to Detroit 4-3. But Toronto maintained its one-game lead in the American League East as Baltimore lost to Milwaukee 7-3.

"No loss is easy, but this is real tough," said Kelly Gruber, who figured in all three Toronto runs. "I've said before, we've got to have pitching if we're going to win this thing. Nobody is going to get them out 1-2-3 every time, but when you've got them like that, you've got to put them away."

Gary Pettis tied the game with a two-run single off Tom Henke, 4-10, and Alan Trammell followed with a game-winning single that ended visiting Toronto's nine-game winning streak against Detroit. "We just have to come back and win tomorrow," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "We come to the ballpark every day thinking we can win, but things like this happen. That's what makes this such a wonderful game."

Mike Henneman, 11-4, pitched two innings of two-hit relief as Detroit stopped a six-game losing streak.

Jaime Navarro, 7-7, prevented Baltimore from moving into a first-place tie by beating the Orioles at Milwaukee with a seven-hitter for his first big-league complete game.

Mike Felder hit a leadoff inside-the-park home run in the first and Gary Sheffield hit a solo home run in the second. The Brewers chased starter Dave Johnson, 4-7, with a two-run third capped by Billy Spiers' triple.

"It was fortunate for us that we're not any worse off than before the game," Orioles manager Frank Robinson said. "That's the nice thing about that."

Paul Molitor extended his hitting streak to 16 games with his 11th homer in the seventh off reliever Dave Schmidt.

In other games, Oakland beat Texas 4-3 to clinch a tie for first in the AL West, Kansas City eliminated California 4-0, Boston beat New York 9-5, Minnesota beat Chicago 7-1 and Seattle beat Cleveland 3-2.

Robinson wouldn't speculate on whether Toronto's loss would be especially damaging to the Blue Jays. The Orioles finish the season with a three-game series at Toronto.

"A loss is a loss right now," he said. "It's probably a tough loss and they'll think about that for a while because I'm sure they can think of ways they should have won that ballgame. Out here today, we just didn't do what we had to do to win the game."

Athletics 4, Rangers 3

Oakland clinched a tie for its second straight American League West title behind Dave Henderson's tiebreaking two-run homer in the eighth. The Athletics lead Kansas City by five games with five games remaining.

With the score tied 2-2, Walt Weiss singled off Mike Jeffcoat, 9-6, and Henderson hit his 15th home run of the season off Gary Mielke.

"We have a lot of guys who like to hit in that situation," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "Nobody does it as good as Dave Henderson."

Dennis Eckersley, 4-0, who allowed the visiting Rangers to tie the game in the eighth, pitched the final 12-3 innings.

"Every time I blow a save, he pulls me out," Eckersley said of Henderson.

Royals 4, Angels 0

Bret Saberhagen pitched a six-hitter to win for the 19th time in 21 decisions and eliminate California. Bo Jackson singled in two runs for the visiting Royals, giving him a career-best 101 RBIs.

Saberhagen, 22-6, pitched his fourth shutout and extended his scoreless streak to 27 innings with

Red Sox 9, Yankees 5

Wade Boggs singled twice in an eight-run first inning rally at Fenway Park and raised his average to .332. He trails Minnesota's Kirby Puckett by 11 points and Oakland's Carney Lansford by five in a bid for his fifth consecutive AL batting title.

Andy Hawkins, 14-15, got just one batter out, allowing five hits and eight runs and walking three. Eric Hetzel, 2-3, won for the first time in 10 starts since his major-league debut on July 1.

Twins 7, White Sox 1

Rick Aguilera, 3-5, matched his career best with a three-hitter and Gene Larkin and Kirby Puckett hit two-run homers at Comiskey Park. Puckett had two hits, raising his league-leading average to .343. Melido Perez, 11-14, allowed six runs and seven hits in four innings.

Mariners 3, Indians 2

Scott Bradley tied the score with a pinch double off Doug Jones, 7-10, and Henry Cotto drove in the go-ahead run with a two-out single as Seattle rallied in the eighth inning at the Kingdome. Erik Hanson, 8-5, pitched eight innings and allowed six hits. Mike Schooler finished for his 32nd save in 39 opportunities.

Giants Miss Chance To Clinch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While the Chicago Cubs are waiting for yet another shot at the World Series, the San Francisco Giants just can't wait for their title clincher.

Chicago clinched its second National League East championship in six seasons, beating Montreal 3-2 at Olympic Stadium Tuesday night after second-place St. Louis lost to Pittsburgh.

"This is my 41st year in baseball and a lot of good things and a lot of bad things have happened to me," Manager Don Zimmer said in the Cubs' champagne-soaked locker room. "But this tops everything that I've ever done in the game."

The Cubs took advantage of the Cardinals' 4-1 defeat in Pittsburgh and became the first team to guarantee a spot in the playoffs.

Ryne Sandberg's dash home in the eighth inning made Zimmer a champion for the first time in 11 years of managing, and also made meaningless a season-ending, three-game series in St. Louis.

"You can't beat this. Nothing is better than the present," Sandberg said.

The Cubs, who won the NL East in 1984, have not won a World Series title since 1908 and have failed to win the NL pennant since 1945.

Chicago will open the playoffs next Wednesday night at Wrigley Field, all but certainly against San Francisco. The Cubs and Giants split 12 games this year.

Meanwhile, the Giants missed a chance to clinch the NL West for the second straight day, losing 2-1 to Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium.

Dodgers rookie Ramon Martinez, 6-4, allowed four hits in 8 2-3 innings and Jay Howell got the last out for his 27th save.

The Giants' magic number for clinching their second division title in three years remained at one as second-place San Diego beat Cincinnati 3-1 earlier in the night to move within four games of San Francisco. The Giants and Padres each have four games remaining, including a three-game series against each other in San Diego this weekend.

San Francisco has another chance to clinch the title tonight if it can beat the Dodgers or if San Diego falls to Cincinnati.

"It's going to get done," said Giants infielder Matt Williams, who grounded into a forceout to end Tuesday night's game. "It might not have been last night or tonight, but it's going to get done."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was New York 3, Philadelphia 0 and Houston 3, Atlanta 2.

Cubs 3, Expos 2

Ryne Sandberg, the only everyday starter remaining from the Cubs' last title team in 1984, scored the go-ahead run in the eighth inning with the kind of aggressive play that transformed Chicago from an 77-85 club last year into a winner this season.

Sandberg singled with two outs off Dennis Martinez, 16-7, and was running when Dwight Smith followed with a single to right field. When Hubie Brooks bobbled the ball for a split second, Sandberg kept going and beat second baseman Tom Foley's relay to the plate.

Greg Maddux, 19-12, allowed seven hits in 8 1-3 innings and Mitch Williams got two outs for his 36th save.

After Mike Fitzgerald made the final out of the game, the Cubs darted out of the dugout and met in celebration at the mound.

Dodgers 2, Giants 1

The Dodgers scored the winning run off starter Kelly Downs, 4-7, in the sixth inning when Willie Randolph scored from third base on Eddie Murray's double-play grounder.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the first on a home run by Will Clark, his 23rd.

The Dodgers tied it in the fifth on a two-out double by Jose Gonzalez and an infield hit by Ramon Martinez, who legged out a single to deep short. Gonzalez, who was running all the way, scored on the play when catcher Terry Kennedy couldn't handle the hurried throw by Clark from first base. No error was charged.

Padres 3, Reds 1

San Diego avoided elimination from the NL West race by beating Cincinnati at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Jack Clark and Benito Santiago each hit solo home runs off Jack Armstrong, 2-3. It was Santiago's 16th homer run and his seventh in September.

Tony Gwynn went 1-for-4 for the Padres, an RBI double in the eighth, and his batting average slipped to .332. Will Clark leads the NL with a .336 average.

Dennis Rasmussen, 10-10, allowed

Cubs Win East...

To win the division Tuesday night, the Cubs needed to cut their magic number from two. The Cardinals took care of the first part by losing to Pittsburgh. At the time that game ended, the Cubs were giving up two runs in the sixth inning that let the Expos tie it 2-2.

"We knew we had to dig in right then," Sandberg said. "We knew this was a chance to win it."

With two outs in the eighth, Sandberg singled off Dennis Martinez, 16-7. Dwight Smith followed with a single to right field and, when Hubie Brooks bobbled the ball, Sandberg kept running and scored ahead of the relay home.

That was enough. Maddux, 19-12, gave up seven hits in 8 1-3 innings and Williams finished for his 36th save in 46 chances as the Cubs won for the fifth time in six games and improved to 90-68.

Maybe it's fitting that Sandberg scored the winning run — he also doubled and scored in the sixth — although Williams and Smith are as unlikely as the Cubs themselves.

Williams is the only major player the Cubs traded from in the off-season. A true "Wild Thing" because of his one-walk-per-inning lifetime ratio, he didn't expect so much success so soon.

Neither did Smith. Like Walton, he had never played a game in the major leagues before this season. Yet both rookies hit .300.

Ernie Banks and Billy Williams did that, too, for a long time with the Cubs and never won anything. That's part of the frustration attached with wearing a teddy bear on the shoulder.

Mid-South Lands Four On Poll

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The competitive Mid-South Conference in Fayetteville has placed four of its members in this week's Associated Press 4-A high school football poll.

Douglas Byrd, 71st, Terry Sanford and E.E. Smith were ranked in the top classification by a statewide panel of prep sportswriters. Eighth-ranked Sanford, 4-0, entered the poll for the first time this season after knocking off previously unbeaten Smith 13-12 last Friday night.

Top-ranked and defending state champion Richmond County, 4-0, continued to roll and received 13 of a possible 14 first-place votes after a 57-7 victory over Lee County. Second-ranked Asheville Reynolds, 5-0, got the other first-place vote.

Undeclared Garner remained in the third slot, while Greensboro Page and Northern Durham each moved up one spot after losses by Smith and Rocky Mount.

The Fayetteville schools were ranked in positions 6-9, while Rocky Mount fell to 10th. Northern Nash fell out of the poll after its first loss of the season.

In the other classifications, Burlington Cummings, Wallace-Rose Hill and Murphy remained on top.

Cummings received 10 of 14 first-place votes as the 3-A poll remained virtually unchanged.

All 3-A teams ranked were undefeated.

Statesville (one first-place vote), Bertie (three first-place votes), Havelock, Lexington, South Iredell, Smoky Mountain, Lincolnton, East Rutherford and Burns rounded out the 3-A rankings.

A game that could have affected the 3-A rankings won't be played. Lexington was slated to travel to Statesville last week, but weather conditions from Hurricane Hugo washed the contest out Friday night. The teams tried again Monday, but were unable to play because of rain and the game was cancelled.

Positions 1-6 remained unchanged in the 2-A poll.

Wallace-Rose Hill, 5-0, got 12 of 13 first-place votes to remain top ranked.

Losses by five ranked teams in the 1-A poll last week shook things up this week.

Sixth-ranked Columbia, 5-0, and ninth-ranked Union, 4-0, appeared in the rankings for the first time this season. Union has outscored its opponents 145-26.

Murphy took the top 1-A spot with 11 first-place votes, followed by a tie for second between Cherokee and Currituck. Murphy and Cherokee meet head-to-head in three weeks.

Midway, which was ranked second last week, fell to fifth after a 21-19 loss to Hobpton.

Swain County is one of only two teams ranked in the four classifications with two losses.

Prep Games..

"Hopefully, the open date will help us get over those injuries. "Williamston was very, very scrappy. I was very disappointed in our first-quarter performance. We had several opportunities to score (and didn't). I thought we should have gone in at halftime with a little bit more of a lead than we did (15-6). "I thought with just a 10-minute halftime, with that short amount of rest we played very well."

Ayden-Grifton After two highly successful seasons, Charger coach B.T. Chappell is trying to rebuild with a young team that has lost three games in a row since a season-opening win over Richlands.

Ayden-Grifton is handicapped by a lack of experience and a rash of recent injuries that have the Charger coaching staff scrambling.

Running back Rashid Williams, quarterback Jay Tripp and lineman Terrance Kennedy are all out with injuries for this Friday's game against 1-A Roanoke.

Fullback/linebacker Scott Cannon and lineman Fernando Hicks are also hurt and may miss the game against the Redskins.

The Chargers will start freshman quarterback Carl Artis this week in place of Tripp.

"When you got 22 players and a third are hurt, you're sitting here with a bad situation," Chappell said. "It's tough luck. During our two weeks we were off, we went out there and said we're going to throw blocking sleds down and scrimmage and that first day we had four people hurt."

"We're not good enough to lay back. We don't go out there and try to hurt each other. We try to control the drills, but we hope to make them as realistic as possible. Unless you actually go through it in scrimmage situations, it's hard for them to develop."

Ayden-Grifton has been overmatched in recent losses against the likes of Plymouth (27-0) and East Duplin (33-0), but things figure to be a little more even against the 1-3 Redskins.

"They are much like we are," Chappell said. "They don't have a whole lot of size, but I believe they are a little better than we are in the line of scrimmage."

With a young and inexperienced team this year, Chappell and the remainder of the Charger coaches find themselves putting in a lot more teaching time.

"We're working twice as hard this year as any time in the past," Chappell said. "You go over something over and over and go on the field and they mess it up."

"You have to go right back and go over it. With this team you have to work harder to get them to do something right than you would with a better team."

"Time is not on our side right now. But we're going to try to be patient and try to keep a good attitude."

Money Problems Can Affect Field Play

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

To paraphrase the Beatles, money may not be able to buy you love. In the NFL, however, it can buy the closest thing — victories. Just ask the Minnesota Vikings on the one hand, the Cleveland Browns, Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants on the other.

The Vikings showed up at training camp July 31 as the consensus favorite to win the Super Bowl. They also showed up minus eight holdouts — at least in part because of their deserved reputation as one of the league's most penurious teams. So three weeks into the season, the Vikings are 1-2, including Sunday's 27-14 loss at the hands of the Pittsburgh Steelers, who entered the game having scored 10 points and allowed 92.

Worse, both Vikings and ex-Vikings talk openly of their discontent with management, providing a reason, perhaps, why they tend to lose games they should win against teams like Pittsburgh and Green Bay. They lose enough such games to keep them from taking the NFC Central title away from the Chicago Bears.

This year, for example, wide receiver Anthony Carter and strong safety Joey Browner are playing at less than their potential and tight end Steve Jordan was hurt. All are Pro Bowl players, all missed long stretches of training camp as holdouts.

"There's a heck of a long way between having great players and a great team," Coach Jerry Burns said after Sunday's game. "We certainly are no great team. I don't know who we can beat at this point."

Mike Mullarkey, a former Viking (discontented version) said after catching a 15-yard touchdown pass for Pittsburgh Sunday: "Once I caught it I wanted to spike it right at the Vikings. I just wanted to stick it right in their face."

The Eagles, Browns and Giants do things the other way. Philadelphia, of course, handed Randall Cunningham a six-year, $18 million contract extension a week ago. That ensured he will be the quarterback of the '90s with the Eagles rather than anyone else should, as expected, some form of free agency comes to the NFL in the next few years.

Cleveland did the same with Bernie Kosar, tying him up for the next five years, and the Rams are renegotiating with Jim Everett for a contract that will put him in their class.

All three teams are operating on the expectation of new rules for NFL contracts.

One is that there will be some form of free agency for all players when a collective bargaining agreement is reached with the players union. That agreement is in limbo while both sides wait for the courts to decide on the antitrust suit filed by the NFLPA after the players' strike two years ago.

The other is that there will be more bidding for free agents under the current system. Cunningham or Kosar are worth far more than the Eagles and Browns would get as compensation, particularly since most No. 1 draft picks hold out for most of training camp and are being paid more than long-time All-Pro.

After a decade with no free agent offers, Wilber Marshall went to the Washington Redskins from the Bears in 1988. Ray Childress of the Houston Oilers and Bruce Smith of the Buffalo Bills got offer sheets this year that were matched by their old teams.

"It's a two-tier system," agent Leigh Steinberg, who represents a flock of quarterbacks, said. "If you have a star quality player, you want to get him tied up before someone else grabs him."

But it's not only stars. The Giants took that philosophy one more step by re-signing some of developing young talent — tackle Doug Riesenber and wide receivers Odessa Turner and Stephen Baker.

Rainouts Could Have Big Effect

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Postponements due to recent rains, including those associated with the remnants of Hurricane Hugo, will force some high school football teams to play two games a week in the near future, a prep official says.

About 90 games were put on hold last Friday night because of the storm. About half that number were made up Saturday night or Monday night, but some teams may not be playing for a week or longer.

"Even though football is important we understand on the grand scope of things it's down on the list," said Rick Strunk, a spokesman for the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. "We're going to work with the schools any way we can to get them back on their feet."

The hardest hit part of the state was Charlotte. Strunk said Tuesday he has gotten reports of scoreboards and light poles strewn on fields in the Queen City.

"We're talking about major, major problems," Strunk said. "The safety of the kids is obviously of paramount importance."

Field conditions haven't been the only problem. Some teams could have played Saturday or Monday, but players are still in shelters, power and telephone service is out and travel is dangerous.

Mecklenburg County has called off all prep football practices and games through Friday, but Strunk admitted other games may also have to be postponed and squeezed into the schedule.

"It's a problem unlike anything I've dealt with," Strunk said. "Monday, I had 60 phone calls with schools asking what to do. Everyone is a little different. They have unique problems."

Approaching the midway point of the season, some schools still have an open date in which postponements can be played. However, schools that don't have an open date will have to play two games a week, Strunk said.

"All teams will get a chance to play 10 games," he said.

Teams in the National Football League that play on Monday night often complain they are not physically ready to perform and often lose when they play on Sunday of the same week.

Once games are rescheduled, Strunk said officials will be watching those teams for health-related problems.

"It's not the most ideal conditions by any means," Strunk said. "But we have often had to play on Monday and Friday due to rain. We've never been concerned about the safety of the athletes.... Most athletes would rather play than practice anyway."

The way the state's playoff system is set up, prolonging the season is not an option, Strunk said.

"It's challenging to everybody to deal with what's going on," he said.

Pirates Seek To Up Record To 4-0...

Tech, "both teams should be as healthy as they could ask for Saturday's game."

It will be Hall of Fame weekend for the Pirates, as new honorees in the East Carolina Athletic Hall of Fame are inducted in ceremonies Friday night and Saturday afternoon during halftime activities.

The "Top Pirates" from the Illinois State game included Walter Wilson and Junior Robinson from the specialty teams, linebacker Robert Jones and end Anthony Thompson from the defensive unit and Wilson and Travis Hunter from the offense.

Wilson, a newcomer to the punt-block team, got a hand on two Illinois State kicks, significantly altering the length of the kicks. Robinson returned a punt 56 yards for a touchdown in the game.

"I also want to mention R.L. Beemon," Lewis said. "It was an extremely big play when Beemon stripped the ball from their ball carrier on the kickoff after we had just scored our second touchdown. He recovered it and on the next play we scored."

"That was two touchdowns in a 13-second span and took us from a 7-0 to a 21-0 lead. We thought that this was the turning point of the game."

Jones, named for the second straight week on defense, had seven primary tackles, four assists, a quarterback sack and broke up a pass.

"He graded out at a winning percentage in both technique and effort," Lewis said.

Thompson, who shared the award this week on defense, was also praised by Lewis after turning in five primary and three assists against ISU.

"He graded out at an 85-percent effort. I wish we got the same intensity from everyone," Lewis said.

Wilson, in addition to his specialty team efforts, caught six passes for 144 yards and one touchdown. He now stands seventh on the career ECU list in passes caught and is fifth in yardage with 56 and 1,068 yards, respectively.

Hunter, who got off to a slow start in the game thanks to some unexpected defensive alignments by Illinois State, came through overall, completing 12 of 19 passes for 231 yards and one touchdown. Hunter's output pushed him to 2,888 yards passing, giving him the ECU career record. He surpassed Carl Summerell's 1971-73 total of 2,859 with the game. He also stands second in passes completed with 196, just two shy of Summerell's record of 198.

And in total offense, he's climbed to 3,873, leaving him just 10 yards behind Bill Cline's 1962-64 mark of 3,883. Hunter thus should easily become the first Pirate to complete 200 passes, throw for 3,000 yards and have 4,000 yards in total offense. It is possible, too, that he could reach 4,000 yards passing and 5,000 in total offense before he completes this, his senior season.

Lewis also announced honors which came out of last week's work. Top scout team players, who will dress out for the Tech game, were tight end Kurt Seekford and linebacker Travis Uzzell. It was the second straight honor for Uzzell.

Game captains for Saturday's contest will be Wilson, on specialty teams, Thompson on defense, and tailback Willie Lewis on offense.

"Willie has had three solid performances and has proven to be a day-to-day leader for us," Coach Lewis said.

Genetic Abnormality May Help Diagnosis Of Cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — A genetic abnormality that appears to play a role in many common cancers has been solidly linked to lung cancer, raising hopes of improved diagnosis and treatment, scientists say.

Researchers examining lung cancer tumors discovered a series of abnormalities in the so-called p53 anti-cancer gene, according to a report Tuesday by Dr. John Minna of the National Cancer Institute-Navy Medical Oncology Branch in Bethesda, Md.

Defects in the gene also have been linked to colon cancer, to an uncommon bone cancer called osteogenic sarcoma and to chronic myelogenous leukemia, Minna said.

"Obviously, everybody is going to be looking for it in everything else," Minna said.

Bert Vogelstein of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, who identified p53 abnormalities in colon cancer, said: "From what I've heard of Dr. Minna's work, it seems quite clear that the p53 gene will play an important role in lung tumors."

"Current evidence suggests that p53 is likely to play a role in many common cancers," including breast cancer, ovarian cancer and bladder cancer, he said.

During the past few years, researchers have found indirect evidence that defects in at least six genes can contribute to lung cancer, which afflicts an estimated 150,000 Americans a year.

The new study has pinpointed chemical changes in one of those genes. That should be useful for identifying people at high risk of getting lung cancer, or for predicting how deadly a particular case of lung cancer will be, Minna said.

"One thing you could do would be to take people's tumors, see how many (genetic) lesions they have, and determine how virulent they are," Minna said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Toronto, where he presented his findings at the Bristol-Myers Cancer Research Symposium.

Vogelstein has found that the more genetic abnormalities a colon cancer tumor has, the more virulent it is, Minna said.

Minna said he is beginning studies to determine if the same thing is true in lung cancer.

Determination of a tumor's virulence could lead to better decisions on treatment, he said.

Minna also said screening for genetic abnormalities in people who don't have lung cancer could reveal those who are about to get cancer — that is, people who have some, but not all, of the genetic changes needed to produce a tumor. Such people could be followed closely for the appearance of tumors, he said.

The protein made by the p53 gene, located on chromosome 17, normally protects the body against cancer. If the protein is defective, the protective effect is lost and one step has been taken toward the formation of a tumor, Minna explained. The gene is called an anti-cancer gene because it normally protects against cancer.

Fight Over Evolution Resumes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A renewed fight over the teaching of evolution and creationism in California will have a crucial test this week in a battle that has national implications.

The focal point is the upcoming adoption of a new science curriculum framework, a detailed statement of what should be taught in California and how it should be taught.

The framework doesn't mandate course content, which is determined by the state's 1,030 local school boards, but it sets standards and goals that historically have been nearly as effective as mandates.

In 1985, California education authorities drew national attention by successfully demanding that publishers devote more space to evolution. The revised textbooks are now being used in schools across the nation.

The new proposal would strengthen the teaching of evolution.

If adopted, it would be a "national victory for science over dogma," said Michael Hudson, western states director for the Washington-based People for the American Way, a 270,000-member advocacy group for civil and constitutional liberty issues.

The teaching of evolution is so entrenched in California that fundamentalist Christians who support creationist theory aren't trying to exclude it. They hope to persuade the state to recommend that students hear differing views on evolution.

"Material should be included in the textbooks by various scientists who say that evolution ... cannot be substantiated. If credible competing views are not discussed, and evolution is spoken of as a theory with no critical information provided, the textbooks will present evolution dogmatically," said the Rev. Louis Sheldon, chairman of the Traditional Values Coalition, a coalition of 6,000 California churches.

"I am really optimistic about this," said Dr. Leonore Herzenberg, a professor of genetics at Stanford, who worked on the research with husband, geneticist Dr. Leonard Herzenberg.

Non-Toxic Drug Blocks AIDS In Lab

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STANFORD, Calif. — An inexpensive drug used to treat bronchitis appeared to block production of the AIDS virus in test-tube experiments, researchers said.

The researchers cautioned against human use of the drug until the outcome of further study.

The drug is not a cure for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, scientists at Stanford University said Tuesday in announcing results of lab tests.

But they said it could slow down the virus' assault on the immune system, as well as prolong and improve the patient's quality of life when used with AZT or other drugs approved for treating AIDS.

toxic protein distilled from a Chinese cucumber root, dextran sulfate from Japan or high-priced AZT, the drug under study at Stanford is readily available and relatively cheap and safe.

Schwarzenegger: From Muscle Man To Superstar

By Jack Mathews
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MEXICO CITY — In the portable gym that he had set up in an empty office here on the Churubusco Studios lot, the star goes through his daily regimen of bench presses, squats, curls and sit-ups with a sort of ritualistic joy. His muscles bulge, his veins expand like small hoses under his skin, his face goes taut as he strains against the weights.

Moments later, at the mobile home that serves as his office and daytime living quarters on the lot, he grips a fork in one hand and a knife in the other — European style — and attacks a purplish log that his cook identifies as rouladen, a baked

German dish made by wrapping a minute steak around meat loaf that has a dill pickle buried inside and lathering the whole thing with cabbage sauce.

There are cracks of thunder, and raindrops begin to slap noisily against the surface of the adjacent swimming pool where the star does laps each day after 40 minutes on his Lifecycle exercise bike. In the high altitude, the August air is suddenly cool, and he pulls a heavy, loose-fitting beige sweater over his head and drops it, like a canvas bag, over the bulk assets of Oak Productions. (The company's name comes "from when they called me the Austrian Oak," he says. "I throw in a lot of names from early in my career.")

A telephone rings inside the trailer, and a fax machine begins to purr out the information he's been talking about — Daily Variety's box-office chart for the weekend of Aug. 4-6. He begins reading it carefully, commenting as he goes.

"You were right, 'Lethal Weapon' is over $100 million," he says. "It will do $125 million, maybe $130 million. ... Sly's movie didn't open. It will do $25 million max. ..."

The interviewee is now asking the questions. Why did Stallone's film, "Lock Up," open so weakly? Did the studio not promote it because they knew it would bomb, or did it bomb because it wasn't promoted? Is it true that audiences had booed the trailer? What's going on with "The Abyss"?

"The thing I like about doing publicity during long productions like this is that I can catch up on gossip with journalists," the star says, flashing a gap-toothed smile that could light some of the shadowy sets of "Total Recall," the film he is here to do.

Arnold Schwarzenegger has reason to smile, and it figures that he would have one of the biggest, brightest smiles on the planet. The boy who said he wanted to become a world bodybuilding champion grew into a man who wanted to become one of the world's biggest movie stars, and he got it all. At 20, he was Mr. Universe. At 42, he is Mr. Hollywood, which is even bigger.

To call him "muscleman Schwarzenegger" is redundant. The name, an exercise in itself, has become synonymous with physical strength and power. He is the modern Charles Atlas, Hercules with a cigar, and if you look right above his head you'll see that he has the world on his shoulders.

His muscles, marketed by his equally well-exercised brain, have made a multimillionaire of him and low foreheads (his term for fools) of his detractors. When Schwarzenegger, speaking in an accent thick enough to trap flies, first appeared on the screen, his family could hear the laughter all the way back in Graz, Austria. But nobody's laughing now.

Schwarzenegger has become his own multifaceted industry with assets estimated by his associates at between $40 million and $50 million.

He owns several companies, has real estate investments in California and Colorado and numerous fitness-related programs, and, if the deal can be worked out, he will soon be setting up a chain of Arnold Schwarzenegger gyms in the Soviet Union. In the spirit of glasnost and good health, the Soviets came to him.

As a movie star, his appeal is international. His two "Conan" films were worldwide hits in the early '80s and helped launch a flurry of lesser sword-and-sorcery movies. Since then, he has scored big with such action pictures as "Commando," "The Terminator" and "Predator," and last Christmas he kept up laugh for

Cancer Society Benefit Planned

By Rosalie Trotman
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Horizon Traveling Fashion Production returns to Greenville next week for an evening of entertainment benefiting the American Cancer Society, and as veterans of these shows know, the models won't just be walking the runway.

"It's like a Broadway show," said Harvey Wooten, president of the Pitt County Chapter of the American Cancer Society and chairman of the event.

"It appeals to men as much as women."

This production features choreography, music and multimedia presentations, all set on the theme of "The Great American Classics."

The Cancer Society, along with Belk of Greenville, is presenting its third annual show at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Wright Auditorium on the campus of East Carolina University. But no models will take to the stage before an elegant reception is finished in the Great Room in Mendenhall Center.

There, starting at 6:30 p.m., patrons will dine on food catered by David Whitley of The Colonial Inn in Farmville. Whitley will provide wine and heavy hors d'oeuvres, such as scallops and shrimp, tacos, stuffed mushrooms, chutney cheese and brie with an apricot glaze, among others.

By 7:30 p.m. the reception will wind down, and Cancer Society supporters will move over to the auditorium, where they will get a close look at this year's fashions.

The clothes, says Greenville Banks of Belk, reflect a traditional look.

"This season's shapes are modern renditions of original designs influenced by classic people, places and eras," he said. "The clothes are fluid, not cumbersome, and scarves are used for accent and color.

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

"The preppy looks of the past are returning."

The fashion show is divided into segments, each reflecting a part of American Life.

"Evening wear goes into center ring in both Under the Big Top and American Portrait segments of the show," Banks said. "Denim will be highlighted in the Great American West, while collegiate sportswear headlines Varsity Club."

"Cold weather is the theme of New Wilderness, and fashions for the '90s will mark the Establishment."

"Fall foliage colors are coordinated for Autumn Harvest," Banks said.

After the show, all ticket holders are invited backstage to enjoy refreshments and meet the models.

In Greenville, the Fall Horizon '89 Committee has coordinated each aspect of the show including the reception, souvenir programs, publicity and ticket sales. Ms. Wooten is overall chairman, while Chancellor and Mrs. Richard Eakin are honorary show chairmen.

"We have been exposing this special event to the public," said Rose Richards, Pitt County Cancer Society unit executive director. "The fashion show now and daffodil days in the spring are the two major projects locally."

"All contributions remain in Pitt County," she said.

Two kinds of tickets are available. Tickets including the reception and the show are available through Thursday for $30 each, while tickets for the show only are $15 apiece and available at the door.

To buy tickets ahead of time, call Mrs. Richards at 752-2574, Ms. Wooten at 756-6226, or check with any board member.

Bergman Pens Revealing Play About Parents

By Arthur Max
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — As a child, Ingmar Bergman's parents locked him in a dark closet when he disobeyed. To amuse himself, he beamed a flashlight with a colored light onto the wall and pretended he was at the movies.

Now 71, the famed director has written a screenplay about his father, Erik Bergman, an insecure and depression-prone pastor, and his mother, Karin, a woman of iron self-discipline who cringed at any show of love.

In "Good Intentions," Bergman casts back his memory and his imagination to the first 10 years of his parent's turbulent relationship and marriage.

The play is a six-hour chronicle in four acts, to be shown as a four-part television series and a two-part movie. Production begins late next year, and the scheduled premiere will be on Swedish television Channel One in 1992.

"I feel a great need to tell the story of these two people who are in my blood, my nerves and my genes," Bergman said.

Bergman gave up film direction after his 1982 "Fanny and Alexander," which won four Academy Awards. Since then, he has been busy producing stage plays at the Royal Dramatic Theater in Stockholm, which once rejected him for a job when he was an aspiring 21-year-old production assistant.

For "Good Intentions," Bergman vacated the director's chair to Danish filmmaker Bille August, whose "Pelle the Conqueror" won the 1989 Academy Award for best foreign film. Bergman said that after he saw "Pelle" six times, the choice of the 40-year-old Dane was obvious.

August called the screenplay "one of the best love stories I have ever read. It is a great drama and an honor to take part in delivering."

As evidenced in his confession-like autobiography, "The Magic Lantern," Bergman has been grappling with confusion for many years over his feelings for his parents.

They have appeared on screen before, in some of the best of Bergman's 50 films. In "Fanny and Alexander," a soft-spoken clergyman slowly exposes himself as consumed with fanaticism and hatred.

The 1973 film "Cries and Whispers" is about three sisters and a servant girl. Bergman has said they represent four aspects of his mother, whom he was seeking to understand through his characters.

He nurtured the idea for "Good Intentions" ever since completing "Fanny and Alexander." In his memoirs, he wrote about his parents from his childhood perspective, which was often brutal and angry.

It left him unsatisfied. "I started writing about all the dreams and memories of my parents. Finally, I had a script," he said. It took him five months last year to write it.

The new film promises a sympathetic look at a young couple, a theology student and a somewhat spoiled young woman from an affluent home. The characters have fictional names, which allows Bergman to play with facts.

The movie covers the time of the couple's meeting in 1909 to the year of Bergman's birth in 1918.

In his memoirs, Bergman wrote about his failure to reach his parents and his own attempts to hide despair by burying any display of feeling. His emotions, he said, "inhabited a closed room and were produced on command, but never rashly."

He was raised according to "the concepts of sin, confession, punishment, forgiveness and grace — concrete factors in relationships between children, parents and God."

He described his father, a Lutheran minister, as "nervous, irritable and depressive. ... He was always fretting and given to violent outbursts of temper."

Multicultural Marriages Test Church's Sensitivity

Ruth and Steve White work with interracial couples in their ministry

By Itabari Njeri
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

It was a Sunday. Through the crowd of departing parishioners, the pastor eluded her through one door; she chased after him through another. Her voice was quiet, firm and full of fury.

"I demand to be counseled," Ruth Bryant White told the Rev. Tom Wolf, pastor of The Church on Brady in East Los Angeles, one of the city's most ethnically diverse Baptist churches.

The preacher already had spoken to her future husband, Steve White. She said: "I want to know why you decided to do premarital counseling to Steve and did not ask me to come."

By that time, recalls White, a lean, 34-year-old woman with granitelike, high cheekbones, "I really didn't want to be counseled by him. I just wanted to make a point: Because I'm black and have had three children doesn't mean I'm dumb. ... I know 'The Word,'" White says. "And there's nothing scriptural to justify a prohibition against interracial marriage."

But the pastor never claimed there was, says Steve White, 40, an elementary school teacher. Instead, "he said he was against the marriage because Ruthie had been with two other men (the father of her three children born out of wedlock) and it was as if she was married to them before she met me. Since that was the case, she should make an effort to get back with them. ... Irrespective of the fact that they were never married and these guys are not Christians. ..."

Says Ruth White: "We know Brother Tom — he is still our brother — has interracial couples in his church but they usually are not black and white couples. The problem mostly comes ... when blacks and whites want to marry because of society's long-standing prejudice against blacks."

When the pastor failed to persuade Steve White not to proceed with the wedding, other members of the congregation "started to work on him," says his wife.

"One handed me a list of 15 reasons why I shouldn't marry Ruth" and did everything short of pounding the list to the door like Martin Luther, says Steve. Nonetheless, the couple were married by a minister in 1980.

But they believe that things have not improved much since then for other evangelical Christians who are considering, or already are in, an interracial marriage and want counseling based on the tenets of their faith.

As a result, the couple in 1984 formed "A Place for Us," a Christian ministry based in Gardena, Calif. The Whites both are certified Christian counselors and were orained in 1984 as non-denominational Christian ministers by Living Waters Inc. of Garden Grove, Calif. They also are the authors of "Free Indeed, the Autobiography of an Interracial Couple," and have appeared on locally and nationally televised talk shows.

Wolf, 44, and the pastor of The Church on Brady for 20 years, is pained by the Whites' "misinterpretation" of events in 1980. He does not remember ever counseling either of them. Further, if he had, it would be inappropriate to disclose what went on in a pastoral counseling session with them or any other church member, he says.

But in principle, he adds: "We try to take seriously the Judeo-Christian world view, the deep affirmative

Wear Sweater For All Seasons

What a truly joyous way to welcome the holiday season!

This exquisite, hand-knit Christmas sweater is such a knockout, you'll love the compliments that come your way each time you wear it, year after year.

Surprisingly uncomplicated to knit, the cardigan has roomy, full-length sleeves and drop shoulders for comfort. You'll find this classic so comfortable, you may want to use the same basic pattern without the holiday design.

Directions and detail charts to knit the trees and "Joy" are given. However, if you prefer, you could work the design in duplicate stitch after completing the sweater.

The gauge is 4 stitches to the inch. Easy-to-follow directions are written for small, medium, large and extra-large sizes with finished bust measurements of 35, 38, 41, 44 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Joy Sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-092489 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-092489 by sending check or money order to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and off-white, green and red yarn.

When you find a sweater pattern that fits you well and is easy and comfortable to wear, why not use that same pattern over and over, making each one different. Use leftover yarns to make one in zingy stripes. You may want to purchase three or four skeins of yarn for the background and then have fun plotting the color sequence and spacing of the stripes.

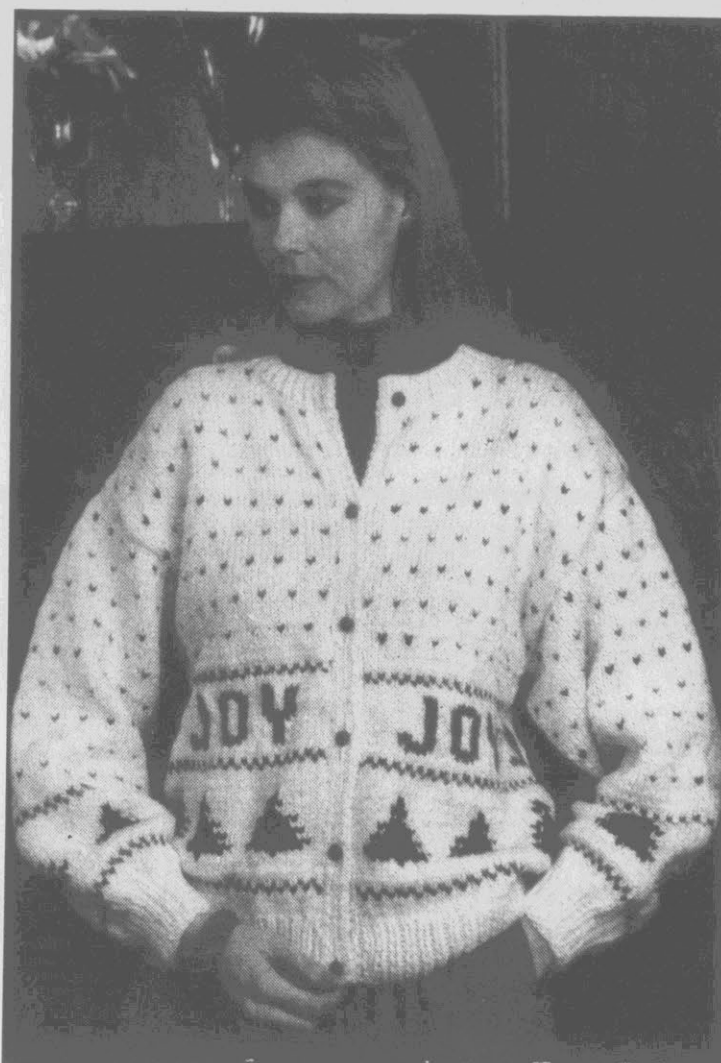

Here are a few pointers to make things easier if you have never altered a pattern design before. First and foremost, be sure that you are achieving the same stitch gauge as the original. Second, when combining different yarns in a single garment, they must have the same washing and drying qualities. You would not want to combine wool yarns and acrylic yarns because of the different methods of caring for each.

There is more than one way to plan your striping pattern. I like to experiment with my color combinations and sequences by placing balls of each color yarn on a table and moving them around until I find the most pleasing setup.

If your sweater wardrobe generally has predominant color, you may find that your leftovers are in a several subtle shades of that color, and a combination of these can be quite elegant. Or if you are a "multicolor" type of person, feel free to mix and mingle those colors in any way that suits you. Either way, you will want the stripes on the front to match those on the back. The two sleeves should match.

You can plot this in advance on paper if you like. You might write out something similar to this "12 rows A, 4 rows B, 2 rows A, 6 rows C, 8 rows A, 4 rows D." You could then repeat these 36 rows over and over, finishing up with the last few rows in Color A, which is, in this example, the predominant or main color. When your front and neck bands and the lower ribbings are worked in the same color, it unifies the design and gives a professional look.

If you are adventurous and have a natural color sense, just start knitting and change colors at will. Keep a note pad handy, though, and jot down the number of rows of each color as you go so you can match the various sections.

As an alternative, use circular needles — which will hold a greater number of stitches than the straight ones — and work your front and back sections simultaneously. Do the same for the two sleeves.

You also can alternate stripes of one or more pattern stitches with stockinette stitch using a single color for the entire sweater. Just be sure that your pattern stitch gauge matches your stockinette stitch gauge. Or try alternate stripes of smooth and textured yarns, again carefully keeping to the same gauge.

Another choice would be an overall pattern stitch that can be knitted to the same gauge as the original. As you can see from these few suggestions, the possibilities are almost endless and will keep your interest high even when using the same basic pattern many times.

People Need To Be Self-Sufficient

Dear Abby: One of the tragedies of our society is the near total incapacity of widows to perform the simplest home repairs. Many single women are on very limited incomes, but must shell out precious dollars to hire someone to adjust a doorknob, tighten an electric wire, put a new ball in the toilet tank or repair a fence.

The parallel for males is also true. They know very little about cooking, housekeeping and child care. I know a man who just gave up and died because his wife passed away. I am sure it was largely because he knew nothing about cooking or housework and couldn't bring himself to learn.

When I was a child, my dad taught me the "masculine" skills, like carpentry, plumbing, electrical repair, etc., but my mother also taught me to cook, clean house, do the laundry, darn socks, and even to knit and crochet before I was out of grade school. To this day I bless my parents for teaching me so many things. No, I have never needed to crochet, but at least I understand what women are saying when they talk about it! How can we place too high a value on the usefulness and freedom one feels when he can take care of himself, as well as be helpful to others?

Parents should teach their children to be self-sufficient. No one knows if or when they may need to look after themselves. — Useful And Free

Dear Useful And Free: Blessed are both men and women who learn these useful skills at their mothers' knee. But for those who don't, there are adult education classes for men who want to learn domestic skills and women who want to learn plumbing, carpentry, mechanical skills, etc.

With few exceptions, women can do everything men can do and vice versa.

Dear Abby: Recently I have attended baby showers and bridal showers given by office personnel for co-workers. At many of these parties, fellow workers have brought their children. These "children" range from infants to age 15. They stay with the main group of guests.

At a recent baby shower, a 5-year-old took over opening the honoree's gifts. Since the mother did not correct her, the rest of us sat in silent shock. At another party, siblings fought and demanded attention, which I felt was due the honoree.

Am I old-fashioned? Showers used to be considered adult parties and children were not included.

I feel as if I were robbed. I arranged for sitters for my children, then had to "watch" other people's children. I'm told that these mothers are training their daughters, and feel that this is a part of their maternal responsibility. My mother never took me to any showers, and I managed just fine.

What is your opinion, and that of your readers? I'm open-minded. If this is acceptable by the majority, I'll adapt, but I still feel... Robbed

Dear Robbed: You're not "old-fashioned." You and I went to the same school of propriety. When mothers are invited to showers, they should leave their children at home.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Amanda Cross Provided Cover For Professor

By Paula Span
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Kate Fansler, erudite detective, does not actually exist. Wealthy, brainy, witty, willowy, prone to putting aside her duties as a tenured professor of literature at a very Columbia-like university just long enough to solve the occasional murder — how could she be real? She lives and offers her sardonic observations on the world only in the pages of mysteries by Amanda Cross.

Who does not actually exist either. Cross, elegant mystery author, sells quite respectably for the genre, has won the Nero Wolfe award and been nominated for the prestigious Edgar, and recently published the ninth novel in the Fansler series, "A Trap for Fools." For years, readers wondered who she was, unaware that there is no Amanda Cross except on book jackets.

On the other hand, Carolyn Heilbrun, a distinguished professor of literature at Columbia and an influential feminist critic, is entirely real. Being real, she found herself, in 1963 at age 37, pressed on every side: teaching a full course load, seeking tenure, sharing her university office with colleagues and her Riverside Drive apartment with a husband, three children under the age of 8 and a dog. "You're just never alone," she recalls, in the now-familiar lament of what was then a rarer species, the hyphenated woman. "I felt I had very little time of my own."

Worse luck, she was running out of the English mysteries she'd taken refuge in for years. That was when Heilbrun invented Kate Fansler and, fearing possible retaliation by the tenure-granters at Columbia, the pseudonym Amanda Cross. "This is all hindsight," Heilbrun says, "but looking back, this was a space of my own." As she wrote years later, "I sought to create an individual whose destiny offered more possibility than I could comfortably imagine for myself."

It is a fitting time for hindsight, this 25th anniversary of her first Fansler tale. Women have long been mystery writers (consider Agatha Christie, Ngaio Marsh, Ruth Rendell, P.D. James) but when "In the Last Analysis" was published in 1964 there'd been a historic dearth of female protagonists. "With the great male writers — Dashiell Hammett, Raymond Chandler, Ross Macdonald — the women were either bitches or the women they loved," Heilbrun says. "One of the things that make me feel very good is the number of women detectives there are now. Women police detectives. Lesbian detectives."

Indeed, the great influx of women writers and characters is one of the unmistakable trends in contemporary mysteries. Roughly 40 percent of the membership of the Mystery Writers of America is female. A group called Sisters in Crime, formed three years ago to promote women practitioners of the art, has grown from 30 members (including Amanda Cross) to more than 500. Its current president, novelist Nancy Pickard, is among those who call Cross "something of a mentor, literally or figuratively, for a lot of women mystery writers. ... When my turn came, there had been this person there first."

Heilbrun says she "had no noble ends in mind" in 1963, however. Begetting Professor Fansler was a hoot. "All detectives are fantasy figures in a sense," says Heilbrun. This fantasy figure was roughly Heilbrun's age and shared her profession, her astringent humor, her interest in social issues. She had an Upper West Side apartment that probably didn't look terribly different from Heilbrun's — stuffed furniture in dignified colors, Oriental rugs, paintings and the inevitable wall of books, an academic's home. Fansler even shares her inventor's willingness to wander onto interesting but tangential conversational paths. "I used to be quite thin myself," Heilbrun muses, gray-haired and grandmotherly, though not a grandmother, at 63. "But the only way to stay thin when you're old is to live on a lettuce leaf, like Jackie Kennedy."

Anyway, Where Fansler differed dramatically was that Heilbrun made her single, childless, unencumbered. She gave her beauty, because "I wanted to give her everything and see what she would do with it." Heilbrun even granted her sleuth a trust fund; "you can't have a detective who can't hop on a plane." Although, she says thoughtfully, "this question about rich women. ... They are the most conservative, the most backward, the least adventurous." Heilbrun belongs to the Cosmopolitan Club, where nearly every woman has money and her husband's surname, "which I find simply appalling in this day and age."

Anyway, Heilbrun was sure her department would take a dim view of this sideline when she was reviewed for tenure. "It was dangerous as it was; I was suspected even then of being a feminist," she says. The name Amanda Cross, combining a surname from a Nova Scotia road sign with an Anglophiliac first name and having no other significance, sheltered Heilbrun for half a dozen years. Being anonymous "was great fun, I now realize," she says. "Secrecy is always a kind of power. ... A sense of power was the last thing a woman was supposed to have."

She had one unerving experience: Her first Fansler mystery was nominated for the Mystery Writers of America's Edgar award (after Poe, of course) and Heilbrun feared she might win. "It would have just been awful, simply awful," she says. "There would've been some attempt to find out who (Cross) was." But Cross was spared, and Heilbrun went on writing scholarly works under one name and mysteries under the other, on one occasion corresponding with a fellow professor-critic under both identities.

Cross had fans from the beginning, not so much for her plots ("not my strongest point," she acknowledges) as for her gutsy heroine. "The women that I knew, and I myself, were just entranced," says Jane Bakerman, professor of English at Indiana State and a scholarly writer on mysteries. "Kate was smart. She held down a major job in a major place. She was strong. She was a single woman who regarded marriage as a choice, not a destiny. She was vocalizing some of the things a number of us had felt or wished for." Bakerman wrote a paper on Cross without knowing who she was.

It was the publication of "Poetic Justice" in 1970 that blew Heilbrun's cover. The Fansler novels constitute sociocultural history as well as literature entertainment; this time Professor Fansler's university, reeling from the conflicts and questions unleashed by a student takeover, was recognizably Columbia. Furthermore, a revered but increasingly anachronistic senior faculty member, whose graduate student Fansler had been, bore a marked resemblance to Columbia's Lionel Trilling, whose graduate student Heilbrun had been. Heilbrun the emergent feminist never confronted Trilling, but Kate Fansler politely told her elder colleague that "I have never found youthful male arrogance ... especially appealing, while you, of course, have." ("There is a certain amount of wish fulfillment in all writing," Heilbrun observes, mum on the Trillingness of her fictional professor.)

"Poetic Justice" started people poking around. Her associates and friends began to guess. One colleague even looked up the pseudonym at the copyright bureau. Her children were getting older; "I don't believe in keeping a lot of secrets from one's children," she says. And she was, by then, a tenured professor. So, "gradually, it leaked out; I let it leak out." Now, she rather likes being known as Cross, whose mysteries far outsell Heilbrun's "Reinventing Womanhood" and "Writing a Woman's Life," among other books. The only troubling part of the unmasking is the flackery involved in book promotion. "It does worry me how publicity begins, how it snowballs," she reflects, then veers back from the detour. "That's just grumbling about how awful life is, which you tend to do after 60."

Kate Fansler, over the course of nine novels, has grown older and pricklier as well, though Heilbrun notes that "she's not aging at the same rate as normal human beings."

Fansler wed, though did not adopt the surname of a wry attorney from the DA's office. "I did not want her to get married, but she got into this relationship and relationships have momentum," Heilbrun explains. "But she'll never have children, I promise you that." Over the years, too, "the importance of other women in her life, women's bonds, women's friendships, has grown."

In this she resembles her creator, who believes that "if we have individuals who climb up and pull the ladder after them, this feminist wave will end like the others." Heilbrun, "a feminist of a generation that produced very few of them," was the token woman in virtually every arena she entered for years. But this has changed: "The wealth of wonderful women I now know — all of them younger, of course — it's one of the miracles of life." She points out that, by the by, when women writers envision utopias, they are frequently all-female. "Men don't invent all-male utopias, and the reason, of course, is that they have utopia here." But she digresses.

Speaking of miracles, Heilbrun has been married to her economist husband since she was a 19-year-old Wellesley student, another "enormous secret" for years lest other young women consider similarly premature commitment. It was the Second World War, she tries to explain. "You didn't go to bed with people the way people do today." Pause. "Today is much better." Fansler, known to have lovers here and there, would no doubt agree.

Occasionally, Heilbrun thinks she ought to write something different, fiction without Fansler. She's even given it a halfhearted try. "Doesn't work," she's found; she's stuck with, as Fansler's husband once fondly called her, "a sort of overage Nancy Drew."

"She haunts me. She's there," Heilbrun says with a confessional shrug. "I like her."

Consumers Want More Comfort

By Michelle Singletary
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

I never realized I had so many "sole" sisters out there. Many of you took the time to join in my S.O.S. (Save Our Soles) campaign, responding with both humorous and heart warming letters about feet gone bad.

Dolores Silwinski wrote " ... if it weren't for athletic shoes, I would be suffering all the time."

Helen J. Davis said her "feet were made for walking and I'd give my 'sole' for a good pair of shoes."

While designers are deciding that this is a suede year or it is the season women should have shoes that look like a leopard's paw, it was clear readers want comfort — and more comfort.

Forget the time spent on animal prints, Gladys Holt wants designers and shoe manufacturers to " ... do us a favor. Go back to round toe, lower your heels and raise our morale. Every woman can look sexy in well-fitting, well-made shoes. It will show in our smiles, and you, the businessman can smile all the way to the bank."

Not once did I receive a letter complaining about the lack of style.

Instead, Jean Trionfo and Helen B. Whalen want the end to plastic heels that can become dangerous. Whalen says she was unaware of her heels had worn down to the metal shaft and she slipped once in a department store. "It was painful, embarrassing and dangerous. What recourse do we have?" she asked.

Some readers came up with suggestions and even shoe manufacturers that cater to women with hard to fit feet.

June Sibley wrote a touching letter about her problems finding shoes to fit a size 1 or 1 1/2. "I wore many pairs of orthopedic nightmares."

Sibley said she has found a catalog company that specializes in small sizes. The catalog is free and customers can trace an outline of their feet for assistance in size selection. The company carries sizes 1 1/2 to 5, narrow, medium and wide. Write to Cinderella of Boston, Inc., 8607 Canoga Ave., P.O. Box 7110, Canoga Park, CA, 91304-7110 or call (818) 709-1133.

Dorothy M. Sullivan also found a mail order company that carries small and large sizes. She suggested Hill Brothers Shoe Co., which is located at 99 Ninth St., Lynchburg, Va., 24504 or you may call at (804) 528-1000. There is no charge for the catalog. Hill Brothers specializes in hard to fit sizes and carries them in 4 to 13 and widths that range from AAAA to extra wide. The company is not a manufacturer but orders from different vendors, which include some brand name firms. The prices range from $17 to $99.

Film Massacres Indians' Image

Speaker Presents Workshops

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — "The only good Indian is a dead Indian." Such dialogue, so odious by today's standards, was common in Western movies a few decades ago. It stemmed from a remark attributed to Gen. Philip H. Sheridan when he was introduced to a Comanche chief in 1869.

"Me Tochoway," said the chief. "Me good Indian."

"The only good Indians I ever saw were dead," snapped Sheridan.

The attitude of the Indian fighter was illustrated in countless movies from 1920 to 1960. With rare exceptions, Indians were portrayed as bloodthirsty savages who were a menace to white maidens and America's manifest destiny.

In the book "The Western," George N. Fenin and William K. Everson observe that film audiences seldom saw depictions of "the tragedy of the Indian tribes, pushed backwards and backwards again in violation of treaties and agreements, their confinement to reservations where unscrupulous Indian agents exploited them shamelessly, the disintegration of their fighting spirit and their traditional desire to live in peace with the white man."

"Twas not always so. Earlier in the century, movies often focused on the "noble savage" with depictions of James Fenimore Cooper's stories, the legends of Hiawatha, Pocahontas, Ramona.

As Westerns grew more epic in scope during the 1920s, Indians became ideal villains to maraud wagon trains, battle the cavalry and menace the heroine with "a fate worse than death." Such portrayals continued from silent films into the talkies.

John Ford, the greatest of Western directors, made consistent use of the Indian menace. In his 1924 classic, "The Iron Horse," railroad builders were attacked by hordes of Sioux, Pawnees and Cheyennes. The most memorable scene of the 1939 "Stagecoach" was the pursuit of the travelers by the swift-racing Indians.

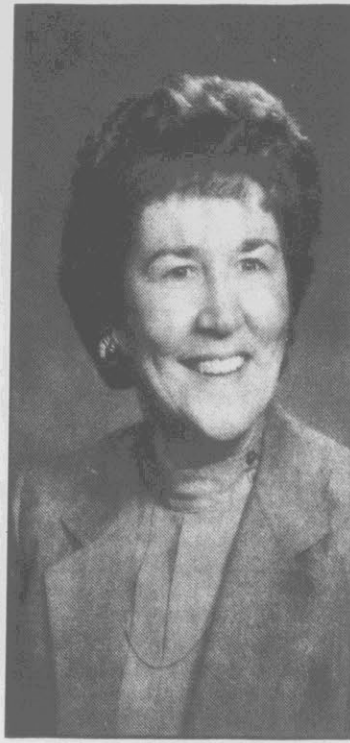

Ford's depiction of "redskin savages" continued in "Fort Apache" (1948), "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" (1949) and "Rio Grande" (1950).

In "The Searchers" (1956), Natalie Wood was a white captive who witnessed Indian atrocities and was the wife of a Comanche chief until rescued by John Wayne.

In his last Western, "Cheyenne Autumn" (1964), Ford seemed to seek expiation for his treatment of Indians. The film traced the bitter trek of Cheyennes from a bleak reservation in Oklahoma to their native land in the Northwest. Critics called "Cheyenne Autumn" mawkish and deplored the "Indian" cast of Gilbert Roland, Dolores Del Rio, Ricardo Montalban, Victor Jory and Sal Mineo.

Such non-ethnic castings were common throughout Hollywood history. Among the whites who portrayed Indians are: Anthony Quinn ("The Plainsman," "They Died With Their Boots On"); Rock Hudson ("Taza, Son of Cochise"); Howard Keel ("The War Wagon"); Chuck Connors ("Geronimo"); Linda Darnell ("Buffalo Bill"); Tony Curtis ("The Outsider"); Julie Newmar ("McKenna's Gold").

The Crystal Capital Of The World Is 'New Age' Nirvana In Arkansas

By J. Michael Kennedy
LAT WP NEWS SERVICE

MOUNT IDA, Ark. — This is crystal country, "new age" nirvana. They measure their crystals here by the ton.

Mount Ida, in the heart of the Ouachita Mountains, is the self-proclaimed "Crystal Capital of the World," home of the annual Quartz Crystal Festival, not to mention the World's Championship Quartz Crystal Dig.

Some folks hereabouts have been mining quartz crystals for generations. But most of them barely eked out a living, selling what they had dug from the red clay to gem and mineral enthusiasts.

Then along came the new agers, a loose network of spiritualists with beliefs in reincarnation, miracles, astrology and communicating with the afterlife.

They also believe that crystals have healing and energy-channeling powers. Actress Shirley MacLaine is perhaps the most famous of the crystal proponents. Actress Jill Ireland also has been known to use them, as has country singer Crystal Gayle.

Other users think putting a crystal cluster on top of the air conditioner will cut down on the electricity bill, that they increase gas mileage and that crystal technology was used on the fabled lost continent of Atlantis, and therefore the minerals carry ancient knowledge.

Whatever the case, belief in the power of crystals quickly translated into a multimillion-dollar industry for Arkansas, where 99 percent of the quartz in this country is mined.

One estimate in 1987 put the amount of crystals bought in the United States at $100 million.

The place that felt most of the effect of the crystal craze was right here in Montgomery County, one of the poorest regions in the state, with perhaps the richest lode of crystals anywhere. It began a veritable Crystal Rush of the '80s.

"We're sitting on the largest deposit of pure quartz crystal in the world," said Paul Griffith, the coordinator of the Mount Ida Chamber of Commerce.

Many crystals — pieces of clear, transparent quartz — are strikingly beautiful. Some of the larger crystal clusters, which sell for as much as $200 a pound, have clear points that shoot out in all directions, giving them the look of a huge, glittering jewel.

Back before the new agers, quartz mining was the domain of three or four major producers who dug in huge, open pits. But when the prices started to climb in the mid-'80s, crystal seekers started showing up by the busload. By last year, more than 10,000 claims to mine quartz in the Ouachita National Forest had been filed.

"There are people who just go out in the forest and start digging," said Gary Monk, a deputy sheriff charged with law enforcement in the national forest. "We've found holes that are 4 or 5 feet deep and 10 feet in diameter. The rangers are concerned about the people tearing up the land and not replacing it."

At other times, thieves would hear about a good new vein of crystals that had been discovered and would dig it up at night, pulling out thousands of dollars of quartz in a few hours. Now, said Griffith, mine owners will post guards if they find a rich vein.

With the huge increase of people mining for crystals, the market has become saturated and prices have fallen. Much of the business of dealing with crystals has returned to those who are in it for the long haul.

One of those is Sonny Stanley, whose grandfather began digging for crystals in the 1800s. He figures he has 200 tons of crystals sitting on tables in his back yard, give or take a ton, and that the family's private crystal collection would be worth $500,000, if any of it was for sale. He has watched the crystal craze with some amusement.

"Some people thought they could come in here and make a bunch of money," he said. "There's a lot going to be out of this business pretty quick."

But at least Mount Ida will have the crystal festival to show for the craze, and Griffith takes much of the credit for it.

"Nothing would make me happier than to have it inscribed on my headstone that I was the founder of the Crystal Festival," he said.

Multicultural Marriages Are Testing Sensitivity Of The Church

world view of the unity of the human race." Any kind of mixed marriage, he insists, has problems built into it. "A man 42 marrying a woman 22 is a mixed marriage" and will have its problems, too. People from different socioeconomic backgrounds are a mixed couple. "But the only situation that is passed onto children is the interethnic one. . . . When you get on to larger ethnic diversions and gene isolation and then pass it on to children you have to work with" what perceived physical differences mean in society. "Many times bicultural children, based on ethnic and racial appearance, feel they don't fit in either world," he says, adding that he raises these issues for examination, not to condemn interracial marriage. While most Christian ministers preach against prejudice from the point, "benign neglect" typifies the attitude of most pastors toward the issue of interracial marriage, Steve White claims. "The racism is often subtle." Christian counselors and clergy "are often in denial about the challenges interracial couples face in a racist society," says Ruth White. "Christian individuals and couples dealing with interracial issues obviously don't benefit from either denial or neglect. They need positive guidance, something concrete to give them spiritual strength." "This is a city, this is a country becoming more diverse every day. . . . look at all the blacks and Hispanics and Asians who are drawn to the evangelical movement, who are born again. We don't push interracial marriage, but it's inevitable that there will be more and more in this kind of social environment." The National Association of Evangelicals, based in Wheaton, Ill., estimates that 20 percent to 25 percent of Americans describe themselves as "born-again" Christians. How many of those are black, Latino, Asian or other ethnic minorities is unknown. "A lot of people believe in God," says Ruth White. "They want to go to church, they want to bring their children up right . . . but the very thing they believe in is turning them away in many instances." Many Christian ministers might counter that interracial marriage is still relatively rare in the United States and there is little social motivation to preach about it. But the increases in these marriages have been "statistically significant," says Steve Rawlings, a U.S. Census Bureau family demographer. In 1988, there were 218,000 marriages between blacks and whites, compared to 181,000 in 1970, three years after the U.S. Supreme Court struck down anti-miscegenation laws. In 1970, there were 310,000 interracial marriages beyond those involving blacks and whites. In 1986, the last year for which figures are available, these marriages had more than doubled to 827,000. The Rev. Jack Hayford — pastor of First Four-Square Church of Van Nuys, a Los Angeles suburb, and an internationally known and respected Pentecostal clergyman — explains that "I wouldn't say anything any differently to (an interracial couple) than I would to any other couple." At his 7,000-member church, also known as the Church on the Way, "we have a very involved prewedding counseling program" that lasts eight weeks. Couples also have three sessions in private with a member of the pastoral staff. "In these encounters, at the private level and the group level, one of the great challenges any couple has is to appreciate the social, economic and spiritual values and family traditions" that may differ between families. While these differences might exist because they are from "different ethnic groups or racial cultures . . . it would not be discussed from the standpoint of a racial or ethnic matter, but simply as a human matter." Some Christian leaders, however, "actually preach against interracial marriage," asserts Steve White, who claims Dr. James Dobson's ministry is one. Dobson, whose $12.2 million ministry headquarters is in Pomona, Calif., is not an ordained minister but a broadcaster and Christian psychologist to the nation's evangelical families. He is considered one of the most influential voices in conservative Protestant America. His "Focus on the Family" radio shows are heard on 1,300 radio stations. And while his lay ministry — he is a layman in the Church of the Nazarene — addresses primarily family issues, he has become a political figure, too. Earlier this year, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority, called Dobson the Religious Right's "rising star." An ardent foe of abortion and pornography, Dobson served on the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography in 1985-86, one of several Reagan administration appointments. Last year, he was among those conservatives who urged Congress not to override former President Reagan's veto of the Civil Rights Restoration Act.

Muscleman A Star

laugh with Liliputian funnyman Danny DeVito in the hugely successful comedy "Twins." These days, Schwarzenegger commands as much contractual power as Sylvester Stallone or Eddie Murphy. He is reportedly being paid $10 million plus a percentage of profits for "Total Recall," and was given approval over the director, the script, the cast and much of the marketing. The film, an interplanetary thriller set 100 years in the future, went into production in Mexico City in March. In June, top executives from Tri-Star and Columbia, the merging studios that will release "Total Recall" next summer, were summoned to Churubusco by Schwarzenegger and briefed on both the production and the star's plans for selling it. "I insisted on it," he says. "I want them to think they're part of the project. If they feel they're part of it, they'll go all out for the movie." As for his involvement in marketing, "I want to be part of it. I know enough about it, and they know I know enough about it." Schwarzenegger's marriage three years ago to NBC news personality Maria Shriver, following an eight-year courtship, answered the Neiman-Marcus question, "What do you get for the man who has everything?" The marriage made Arnold an in-law of the Kennedy clan and ended one of Hollywood's most prolific bachelorhoods. The couple have an 8,000-square-foot home in Malibu, Calif., where their bicoastal schedules have allowed them to get together at least often enough to do some family planning. Their first child — the "Schwarzen-shriver," Arnold calls it — is due to be released in December. But is he happy? Does a shark like seafood?

"If I wasn't happy, I would be an idiot," he says. "Look at the life I live." Follow Arnold Schwarzenegger around for a couple of days and you'll observe someone who knows exactly how much space he's taking up — both physically and as a star. He is 6 feet, 2 inches tall and weighs 210, down 40 pounds of high-maintenance muscle from the days when he was winning the Mr. Universe title five times and Mr. Olympia seven. But he looks bigger, certainly wider, than other men of his height and weight. He has the thick neck and sloping simian shoulders that, even beneath the baggy sweater, give away those thousands of hours of weight training. On the set, Schwarzenegger jokes almost constantly and teases everyone from his co-stars to the Mexican extras and stage hands. The teasing is blunt, sometimes vulgar and often awkward (a Mexican stunt woman blushes, then laughs with everyone else when Schwarzenegger makes a pointed reference to the alignment of her breasts), but you can't find anyone on this set who doesn't profess liking him. "He teases everybody, and the more vulnerable they get, the more he goes for it," says Rachel Ticotin, who plays Arnold's Mars-based girlfriend in "Total Recall." "He has so much warmth, nobody really takes it personally. No matter what he says, or what he's attacking, it's OK. He's harmless." Screenwriter and co-producer Ronald Shusett, who was awakened from an afternoon nap on the set one day by ice water poured on his crotch by the star, says Schwarzenegger's locker-room humor has kept nerves from getting frayed on a grueling, 20-week location shoot: "This is the sort of project where everybody can be on each other's nerves, and Arnold seems to know just when to crack a joke to keep things loose." Veteran production manager Elliot Schick, who began his career near the end of the Hollywood studio system, calls Arnold "the nicest star I've worked with since Barbara Stanwyck." Occasionally, the star can also act the part of a bully. When a production assistant circulated a flyer announcing the time and place of the obligatory wrap party, Arnold had a few choice words for the producer who had made the arrangements at an inexpensive restaurant 40 minutes from the center of town ("Getting the cheapest deal is in keeping with the way he's operated all along," he said), then vowed to throw a wrap party of his own and "see which one draws the biggest crowd." (The producer's party was eventually canceled, and Arnold named the place.)

Because of his size and accent, characters have had to be carefully tailored for Schwarzenegger. Fittingly, for a guy whose idol was English bodybuilder-actor Reg Park, Arnold's first role came in a TV movie called "Hercules Goes Bananas." It was a spoof on the Reg Park-Steve Reeves Hercules movies, with the Olympian god set loose in modern New York City. The producers had called Joe Wieder, who ran a Southern California-based bodybuilding publishing and nutritional empire, and asked if he knew of "a muscleman who could act a little." "Joe said, 'I got the perfect guy, he's done Shakespearean plays in Germany, he's a great actor, but his English isn't too good.' It was all bull, I didn't speak much English at all. We went to meet these guys and Joe said, 'Don't say anything, I'll do the talking.'" The $1,000-a-week job, which Schwarzenegger performed under the shorthand name of Arnold Strong, was more important in the arc of his business career than as a launching pad to stardom. He says his ambition when he got to America was to get into the food supplement business and to start a chain of fitness centers. By the time he appeared in "Pumping Iron," the film that introduced his outsized personality and helped erase the image of bodybuilders as gay narcissists, he was a well-heeled sports hero with enough business savvy to know that his next career goal — to be an actor whose name would be mentioned in the same breath with Charles Bronson and Clint Eastwood — wouldn't be achieved overnight.

'Black Rain' Tops Receipts

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — "Black Rain," the thriller starring Michael Douglas as a cop who tracks a killer through the streets of Japan, captured first place in box office revenues last weekend.

The Paramount movie grossed $9.7 million in its first three days of release.

Universal's "Sea of Love," the romantic suspense tale featuring Al Pacino in his first film since the 1985 bomb "Revolution," collected $7.8 million to land in second place.

Universal also claimed the Nos. 3 and 4 spots. "Uncle Buck," the comedy starring John Candy as an overbearing relative on a family baby-sitting assignment, finished in third on receipts of $3.2 million. Director Ron Howard's "Parent-hood," with Steve Martin heading an ensemble comedy cast, was fourth with sales of $3 million.

In fifth place was "When Harry Met Sally ...," the comic chronicle of a relationship between Billy Crystal and Meg Ryan, which grossed $2 million. It was followed by "sex, lies and videotape," with $1.8 million.

"Lethal Weapon 2," the action-adventure sequel with Mel Gibson and Danny Glover, finished in seventh with $1.6 million. In eighth was the underwater thriller "The Abyss," which collected $1.5 million.

Rounding out the top 10 were "Kickboxer" in ninth with $1.432 million and "Turner and Hooch" in 10th with $1.426 million.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Co.

1. "Black Rain," Paramount, $9.7 million weekend gross, 1,610 screens, $6,010 per screen, $9.7 million total gross, one week in release.

2. "Sea of Love," Universal, $7.8 million, 1,313 screens, $5,925 per screen, $21.4 million, two weeks.

3. "Uncle Buck," Universal, $3.2 million, 1,784 screens, $1,795 per screen, $49.8 million, six weeks.

4. "Parent-hood," Universal, $3 million, 1,399 screens, $2,150 per screen, $78.4 million, eight weeks.

5. "When Harry Met Sally ...," Columbia, $2 million, 1,170 screens, $1,746 per screen, $78.1 million, 11 weeks.

6. "sex, lies and videotape," Miramax, $1.8 million, 521 screens, $3,458 per screen, $15.7 million, eight weeks.

7. "Lethal Weapon 2," Warner Bros., $1.6 million, 1,356 screens, $1,185 per screen, $140.1 million, 12 weeks.

8. "The Abyss," 20th Century Fox, $1.5 million, 1,176 screens, $1,286 per screen, $49.7 million, seven weeks.

9. "Kickboxer," Cannon, $1.432 million, 963 screens, $1,486 per screen, $10 million, three weeks.

10. "Turner & Hooch," Disney, $1.426 million, 1,208 screens, $1,180 per screen, $63.8 million, nine weeks.

LaToya Jackson Carves A Niche Of Her Own

By Roger Catlin
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Having a brother like Michael Jackson — whose albums have sold more than any in history — is no boast to LaToya Jackson.

In fact, she says, "If I were any other person, I'd be much further in my career — I know I would be."

Instead, LaToya is still fighting for recognition, ready to release a third album and preparing a biography that has already kicked up a fuss.

"I have to work twice as hard to get out from under that shadow," she says of her famous brother during a telephone interview from New York.

"The public in a sense don't realize they're always comparing you with your brother. Naturally, when they think of the name Jackson, they might think of Michael. But they have to realize I am different. I am LaToya, I'm not Michael."

Perhaps to help differentiate, she has appeared nude in Playboy magazine and is writing her life's story, which has already drawn a reported

$5 million offer from brother Michael to stop publication. He has written his own biography, the best-selling "Moonwalker."

"It was an interesting book," LaToya says. "But he left a lot out of 'Moonwalker.' There was more to be said. That's what encouraged me to write a book."

Of the reported offer from Michael, "I really can't say anything. It's really a delicate situation."

Publication was originally going to be this January, she says, but "we've had a few complications."

It is disheartening to her that they have come from within her own family. "Sometimes I feel like throwing the book out the window."

"When you have your family against you, you wonder whether it's worth it at all," she says. "What have I done so bad for them to treat me this way?"

It could have been that Playboy layout.

"It did cause a lot of problems with family. It still does. But it's something they have to get over."

It is not as if she is ready to bare all again.

"When I did it, I wanted to do something totally out of my character. But, having done it, I don't want to do it again."

"I have been approached to do it again," she says. "But it's something I don't want to think about."

Nevertheless, some may accuse her of milking the controversy a bit more in her forthcoming album, which includes a song titled "Playboy."

The lyrics, she says, have nothing to do with publishing. Instead, they're along the lines of "won't you be my playboy — Won't you be my playboy."

She has managed to emerge, as did her sister Janet Jackson, from a family described as completely male-dominated. She did it by breaking away altogether.

Joseph Jackson, her father, was determined to launch the boys in show business.

"Definitely, the girls were an afterthought," LaToya says. "I guess we were considered ladies — we belong in (the) house."

Not that show business was even her idea at first.

"The guys needed a different show in Las Vegas. They wanted to reach a different audience, 50 to 60 years old. So I started tap dancing and singing in the show. I was 16."

"I didn't want to do it. I never wanted to be in this business. My father, being a persistent person and very strong-willed, said: 'You're going to be in the show.' All right."

Now, she says, "I'm very happy I did it." But it has seemed to cause problems within the family, to put it mildly.

"It's still a problem. It's a major problem. It's a problem that the public doesn't know about. It was harder for me because I was the last one, and they wanted to hold on."

Yet she doesn't hope to sell as many million albums as her brother.

"Musically, I would like to have platinum albums. But as far as an entertainer, I don't want to be that big."

Of Michael, she says: "Deep down inside, he has no life. It's sad."

Because of his mega-celebrity, "he can't do anything. He has to stay within the compound. It's sad. It's almost as if you're being suffocated, being punished for doing good for people."

Despite the acrimony, she recoils at the hype over Michael, his quest to acquire the Elephant Man's bones, the possibility of his lightening his skin or living in a bubble.

"As far as the Elephant Man, I can't speak on that," she says.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Sept. 28

ARIES (March 20 to April 19): You would be wise to think more how you can put your work across while you are doing your job. You will have good ideas today about how to invest your money.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 19): By injecting charm into your approach to your duties, you will be able to do a much better job. Avoid pleasures today in which you will have to spend considerable money.

GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Your talents at your work are sure to be at a new high now so be outgoing. A man of business experience will help you with your financial affairs right now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): You will have some wrong ideas about your work today. Your ideas about putting a deal across will be able to make you more money.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You will do well at your work today if you avoid angering a highly placed individual. You will need to get a better well-rounded understanding of a condition before you will be able to get the money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): A new method or invention will make it much easier for you to go along with your work. Two persons from a distance will come to you for a very worthwhile proposition.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): The information you require to do a better job at your work is not quite ready so be patient. A most ingenious business plan can now come to you which will bring an abundance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You will be wise not to be so hasty and impulsive at the work that you now do. A change in the way that you put your ideas across will bring in more money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): There will be so much activity at your work today that you will do well to be in the stream of it. A matter from a distance which you had thought dormant now comes to life to bring you gain.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Your good work today will depend upon the astute judgment that you yourself display. Using your finest talents and abilities will add to your financial security today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): You will do a better job at your work today if you will listen to the suggestions of two highly placed persons. Don't hold back longer with that business proposition.

PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Delays are now over and you will be able to do a solid job at your work. Much conversation with experts will show you the way to make considerable money or other assets.

There is a disease that strikes most bridge players at regular intervals. It is an affliction of flying fingers. Instead of thinking about a play, reflex takes over and a card hits the table in no time flat. This malady is usually followed by a severe case of contrition.

Although North-South were using a 16-18 point no trump range, South judged the hand to be stronger than its count because of the plethora of aces and kings, so he opened one club and then jumped to two no trump. North did not think the hand would stretch to slam, and settled for the no-trump game. Little did he realize even that might be too high!

Declarer covered West's lead of the nine of spades with the jack, and East started a fine defense by withholding the king. After crossing to the king of clubs, declarer ran the nine of diamonds. East continued the good work by holding up the king of diamonds. When declarer repeated the finesse, East won and reverted to a club. Declarer found he had no way to reach all those good diamonds in dummy, and ended up down two tricks.

The contract was lost by hasty play to the first trick. Observe the difference if declarer simply plays low from dummy and wins in hand with the ace. Now, holding up the king of diamonds won't help. Declarer can force an entry to dummy by leading to the table's queen-jack of spades. As a result, the defenders collect only one spade and one diamond, and declarer romps home with two overtricks. Making the right play at trick one swings four tricks!

Today's Cryptoquip clue: O equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

There once was a frog named Andrew. And all he ever did was sit. He wouldn't even get up for a fly. One day he saw some colors in the air. They looked very interesting. Mr. Frog wanted to know what it was. So for once in a lifetime, he got up. So he hopped over, and he saw a boy. He said, "Look at the balloons". And so Mr. Frog hopped over to the balloons. The boy had a balloon in his hand. It was red. Mr. Frog said, "May I please have that red balloon?" "Yes, you may," said the boy. Andrew took it back to his pond. Now he hops up because now he knows things are exciting.

Population

Greenville & Pitt County Population, 1850-1980

Above is a bar graph which shows the population growth of both Pitt County and the city of Greenville. The striped bar represents the growth of Pitt County and the solid colored bar shows the growth of Greenville.

First, follow the population increase of Pitt County. Has the population of one census ever been less than the census before? The growth of Pitt County has continued to increase steadily each 10 years.

Look at the growth of Greenville. Has one census ever been smaller than the census before? If you look at the population of 1850, you will see that it is more than the population in 1860. What does that mean? Why do you think the number of people became smaller?

With both Pitt County and Greenville, locate the biggest periods of growth. Also locate years in which the population of Greenville is about one-half of the population of Pitt County.

The next census will be made in April of 1990. At that time, it is predicted that Pitt County's population will be over 100,000 and Greenville's population will be at 50,000. Look for the 1990 census count and then you can draw your own bars to add to this graph to represent the new census totals.

Send In Your Entries To Expressions

The Daily Reflector is looking for elementary, middle, and high school students to draw pictures, write stories, essays and poems. Each week we will publish the best writing and drawing. The winner of each will receive $2. We will publish stories and art work we feel should receive special mention.

Entries must be original. Drawings must be in ink, crayon, markers or paint on thick colored paper. Please no pencil. Entries will be held for a period of ninety days and will be considered for that period of time. Entries will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is included.

Parents or teachers who sign the entry form should monitor for good taste and plagiarism.

Fill out the form and attach it to your entry.

The Energetic Apple

Enjoyment To The Core As A Meal Or A Snack

By Rosalie Trotman
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

For many years people have said "an apple a day..." — and it's more than just an adage. Apples, like all fruits and vegetables, are major contributors to sound nutrition, good health and eating enjoyment.

"Apples are a natural complex carbohydrate providing energy for the active body," said Brenda Little, Pitt County schools vocational home economics teacher. "They may be served at any meal or as a snack. Fruits are a natural laxative and make a good appetizer, salad, garnish or dessert."

Some local growers raise apples, but it's not a major crop in this area.

"In Pitt County, we can have decent success in small commercial apple-growing operations with Red Delicious, Yellow Delicious and a few other varieties that are adapted to our heat," said Sam Uzzell, Pitt County agricultural extension agent.

"But because we have high nighttime temperatures, we are in many seasons unable to have a good, deep red color to set on some of our red varieties," Uzzell said. "Climate affects the outward appearance.

"In the mountains, for instance, cooler temperatures in the fall makes for a much nicer looking apple," he said. "Most the apples grown here in the East are grown by hobbyists and most need to pay particular attention to thinning the young developing fruit through better pruning practices and fairly regular pest control strategies."

Evelyn Hill of Edneyville is recording secretary of the North Carolina Apple Growers Association, Inc. She said there are about 600 commercial growers in 25 North Carolina counties, most in the west.

"Henderson is the largest apple-producing county, followed by Cleveland, Lincoln, Wilkes, Alexander and Haywood," she said. "There is one grower near Elizabeth City.

"About 50 percent are for the fresh market and the other 50 percent are processing apples," she said. "There are pick-your-own apples and roadside stands in practically all of the apple-producing areas. These stands also sell apple cider.

Whether you pick your apples from a North Carolina orchard or the produce section of a local grocery store, there are lots of ways to enjoy them. Among the following recipes that for Candy Apples, which Mrs. Little's daughter Mario had published in a 1984 issue of Southern Living magazine.

CANDY APPLES

- 6 medium-size Red Delicious apples
- 6 wooden skewers
- 3 cups sugar
- $\frac{2}{3}$  cup light corn syrup
- $\frac{2}{3}$  cup water
- 1 tsp. vinegar
- 6 to 8 drops red food coloring

Wash and dry apples; remove stems. Insert wooden skewers into stem end of each apple; set aside. Combine next 4 ingredients in a heavy saucepan; mix well. Cook over medium heat until mixture reaches 295°, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat; stir in food coloring. Quickly dip apples into mixture; allow excess to drip off. Place apples on a buttered baking sheet to cool. Yield: six servings.

Linda Clark, who lives outside Greenville said her children's love of applesauce prompted her to grow apple trees.

"Our Golden Delicious has produced an abundance of fruit," she said. "When there are too many apples to fully mature, I start picking them about 10 weeks early. Rather than discarding these tart apples, I start making desserts, and when they are truly mature we use them for eating and applesauce."

"My recipe for applesauce is very simple," she said. "Pare and quarter each apple. Cook until tender and add sugar according to taste."

Here is another one of her favorites:

DANISH APPLE BARS

- 3 cups sifted flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 cup shortening
- $\frac{1}{3}$  cup milk
- 1 egg yolk, beaten
- 1 cup crushed corn flakes
- 8 large apples, peeled and sliced
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 tsp. cinnamon
- 1 egg white, beaten until stiff
- 1 cup powdered sugar
- 3 tbsps. water
- 3 tps. vanilla

Sift together flour and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse cornmeal. Combine milk and egg yolk and stir into above mixture until evenly moistened. Divide dough almost in half. Roll out other half of dough to fit top, cut vents in top and seal edges of dough by moistening with water. Spread beaten egg white over the top crust. Bake at 375° for one hour or until golden brown. Combine powdered sugar, water and vanilla and drizzle over top while still warm. When cool, cut into bars. Makes 28 bars.

Penny Cox of Allendale Drive uses a lot of her mother's recipes that date back many, many years. Her mother, Jewel Palmer Bennett, was reared on Magnolia Plantation in Chatham County and her numerous recipes were collected from freed slaves living on the plantation.

APPLE PRESERVES

Use 1 pound of sugar for every pound of apples. Peel, cut and core apples. Cook with a cup of water and two tablespoons of lemon juice for every pound of apples.

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Sweet apples provide nutrition and eating enjoyment in one brilliant package

Cook apples until clear, tender and thick. (Spices may be added if desired.) Cook mixture and put into jars or glasses. Cover with melted paraffin seal.

The Women's Christian Fellowship of Red Oak Christian Church uses cubed apples in a cranberry salad, which they serve at their yearly bazaar and luncheon. The recipe was provided by J.T. and Rena Manning, who were spending some time in Washington, D.C.

CRANBERRY SALAD

- 1 3-oz. package raspberry Jell-O
- 1 3-oz. package orange Jell-O

- 1 can cranberry sauce, with whole cranberries
- 1 small can crushed pineapple, drained
- 2 medium apples, diced fine with peeling left on
- 1 cup nuts, chopped
- 2 cup boiling water

Mix the two packages of Jell-O with 1 cup boiling water. Dissolve cranberry sauce in the other cup of boiling water. Mix. Add the other ingredients, mixing well. Refrigerate until jelled. Yield: 12 servings.

Jean Weaver, of Route 1, Farmville, is given home-grown apples by her sister in Durham. She also buys apples grown in the mountains of Virginia. She then cores the apples, adds raisins, sprinkles the tops with cinnamon and bakes. Often, she will core the apples, cuts them into quarters and freeze them. Later she uses them for stewed apples seasoned with cinnamon, sugar and margarine.

Ms. Hill provided a recipe for apple pie.

APPLE CIDER PIE

- Pastry for 2-crust pie
- 2 tbsps. arrowroot, or corn starch
- $\frac{3}{4}$  cup apple juice or apple cider

- 1 tsp. ground cinnamon
- $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. lemon juice
- $\frac{1}{2}$  cup honey
- 5 cups apples, peeled and sliced
- $\frac{1}{2}$  cup raisins

Preheat oven to 350° and prepare pastry and press evenly in 9-inch pie plate. Blend the arrowroot with the apple juice in a large saucepan. Add spices, lemon juice and honey. Bring to a boil and cook, stirring occasionally, until fairly thick. Add apples and raisins and cook until thick. Cool slightly. Pour the filling into pie shell and add top crust. Bake about 40 minutes, or until crust is browned and apples are tender.

Some Of This And That

Dear Readers: Here's a little of this and that...

I guess I shouldn't be surprised by the interest you show in convenience foods and quick food tips. A recent survey showed that more than half of all the food eaten at home required no heating appliance. That means folks are picking up lots of food and bringing it home to eat!

The most rapidly declining type of food in the U.S. is homemade. Nutritionally that could be good or bad. It just depends on the choices you make!

I listened to some mini research reports lately and heard the work of several North Carolina A&T students. They wanted to find out if the nutritional values of spinach, cauliflower and green beans were the same if they were cooked on the stove or cooked in the microwave.

They found more thiamin and ascorbic acid in the microwaved vegetables. I have always thought that one of the best things a microwave did was cook vegetables. It doesn't take much less time, but I have always felt the flavors were not cooked out.

Some scientist at Mississippi State studied how skipping a meal affects the nutrients that you might get. They found that almost half the women skip breakfast and more than half (53 percent) skip lunch sometimes. If they skip a meal, women often do not get the milk, vegetables, fruits and grains they need. Lots of other studies have shown that skipping meals is not a good way to diet.

Most people just eat more at the next meal. It is better to eat regularly, but eat lower fat foods and smaller portions.

The Monell Chemical Sense Center in Philadelphia does fascinating research on our tastes. We don't actually know very much about taste except that we all like to eat good-tasting foods. The Monell scientist studied people's preference for sweet and salty tasting foods. It seems that if you are full, your appetite for salty foods is less.

The message is getting through! The Food Marketing Institute says more than half of Americans have started using less fried food, less fat and less salt.

Lemon's Sassy Citrus Flavor Adds Zest To Low-Fat Shrimp

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Seafood and lemon go together like salt and pepper. Pair low-fat shrimp with sassy citrus flavor to make this satisfying stir-fry. Stir-frying takes far less fat than pan-frying. To trim fat even more, spray the cold wok or skillet with non-stick spray coating before cooking the vegetables. Then you'll need only 1 tablespoon for cooking the shrimp. Never use non-stick spray coating on a hot pan.

LEMON SHRIMP ORIENTAL

- 1 $\frac{1}{4}$  lbs. fresh or frozen shrimp in shells
- 1 cup water
- 2 tbsps. cornstarch
- 2 tbsps. soy sauce
- 1 tsp. sugar

- 1 tsp. instant chicken bouillon granules
- $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. finely shredded lemon peel
- 3 to 4 tbsps. lemon juice
- $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. pepper
- Non-stick spray coating
- 2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
- 3 stalks celery, bias sliced
- 1 medium green pepper cut into strips
- $\frac{1}{4}$  cup sliced green onions
- 1 tbsp. cooking oil
- One 6-oz. package frozen pea pods, thawed
- 3 cups hot cooked rice

Thaw shrimp, if frozen, and drain well. Peel and devein shrimp. For sauce, stir together water, cornstarch, soy sauce, sugar, bouillon granules, lemon peel, lemon juice and pepper. Set aside.

Spray a cold wok or large skillet with non-stick spray coating. Preheat over high heat. Add mushrooms, celery and green pepper; stir-fry 3 minutes. Add green onion and stir-fry 1 minute more. Remove vegetables from wok.

Add oil. Add half the shrimp to hot wok. Stir-fry 2 to 3 minutes or until shrimp turn pink. Remove shrimp. Stir-fry remaining shrimp. Return shrimp to wok. Push from center. Stir sauce; add to center of wok. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Add vegetables and pea pods. Stir to coat mixture with sauce. Cook and stir 1 minute. Serve over hot cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

Make The Best Shortened Cake

By Joan Drake
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

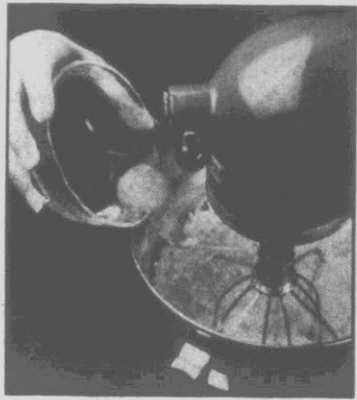

There are various ways of combining the ingredients for shortened cakes, but all are based on what is called the conventional method. Properly executed, it produces a tender cake with a light, delicate texture.

The ingredients for the recipe should be measured ahead of time and brought to room temperature, particularly the fat and eggs. If the eggs need to be separated, however, it is easier to do so as soon as they are removed from the refrigerator.

Hydrogenated vegetable shortening, butter, margarine or a combination of these solid fats may be used in cake baking. Shortening produces cakes with a fine texture;

Step 1: When making a shortened cake, add sugar gradually to the fat. Beat well until the mixture is light and fluffy.

Step 2: Add the eggs one at a time, beating the mixture well after each addition.

Step 3: Sift the dry ingredients, then add one-third at a time to the blend.

Step 4: Mix the two additions of liquid alternately with all of the dry ingredients.

butter or margarine contributes flavor and color. Begin by beating the fat with an electric mixer at medium speed until it is smooth and creamy.

The sugar should be added gradually (Step 1), beating well until the mixture is light and fluffy, eight to 10 minutes. Halt the creaming process, however, if the fat begins to melt from too much physical action.

Scrape down the sides of the bowl with a rubber spatula throughout the batter-making process to ensure even mixing. Continue using medium mixing speed — high speed will warm the ingredients too quickly.

Eggs (or egg yolks) are added next (Step 2), one at a time, beating well after each addition. Any flavorings, such as vanilla, are also added at this point. Again, the beating should be halted before the fat becomes extremely soft and the mixture appears curdled.

Sifted dry ingredients are added one-third at a time (Step 3), alternately with two additions of liquid (Step 4), so you begin and end with the dry ingredients. By adding the flour in smaller amounts, it is incorporated quickly and prevents the batter from being overbeaten.

Non-Alcoholic Beverages Can Ensure Safe Parties

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Non-alcoholic party beverages and a super party punch can help make sure your guests arrive home safely from your party.

If you do serve alcoholic beverages, follow these suggestions from 4C Foods, makers of 4C Red-Flavored Bread Crumbs and other food products:

- Ask one or more of your driving guests to abstain from alcohol, assuring a safe trip home for all.
- Serve a variety of snacks or hors d'oeuvres before the main course to prevent guests from drinking on an empty stomach.
- Avoid salty foods that stimulate thirst. Offer high protein and moist foods instead.
- When serving mixed drinks, use a shot glass for measuring. All drinks, including beer and wine, should be served to guests one glass at a time. Guests may tend to overdo, when tempted by a keg, pitcher or punch bowl that lets them refill freely.

An hour or so before the party is scheduled to end, stop serving alcohol, and bring out desserts or light finger foods.

PARTY FRUITPUNCH

In a punch bowl, dissolve the contents of three iced tea mix envelopes in 6 cups of water. Stir well. Add 3 cups of apple-cranberry juice and one 10-ounce package of defrosted mixed fresh fruit. Just before serving, add a tray of ice cubes. Makes 9 cups.

MUSTARD CHICKEN NUGGETS

This chicken nugget dish can be served hot, at room temperature or cold, from the refrigerator. If made the day before the party, the flavors will develop and the chicken can be reheated. It's perfect for parties and picnics.

3 lbs. boneless chicken breasts, cut into 2-inch cubes

- 1/4 cup mustard
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 2 1/2 cups bread crumbs
- 3 tbsps. butter
- 3 tbsps. olive oil
- 1/4 cup fresh lemon juice

In a large bowl, toss the chicken cubes with the mustard to coat. Cover and marinate at room temperature, tossing occasionally, for 30 minutes. Preheat the oven to 375°.

Place the eggs in a shallow bowl. Place the bread crumbs on a plate. Dip the mustard-coated chicken cubes into the eggs and then roll in the crumb mixture to coat evenly. Place in a shallow baking dish large enough to hold the chicken cubes in a single layer.

In a small saucepan, melt the 3 tablespoons butter in the 3 tablespoons olive oil over low heat. Remove from the heat and stir in lemon juice. Spoon half the lemon butter over the chicken. Bake 30 minutes. Spoon the remaining lemon butter over the chicken and bake 30 minutes more, until chicken is cooked through and juices run clear. Let stand 15 minutes before serving.

STUFFED ARTICHOKE

- 8 medium artichokes
- Salt
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup diced cooked ham
- 1/2 cup diced onion
- 3 cups bread crumbs
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Remove stems of artichokes and trim pointed ends of leaves with scissors. Cook in boiling salted water (1 teaspoon salt for each quart) for 20 minutes. Drain artichokes and remove chokes (fuzzy centers) with a spoon.

Melt butter in skillet. Add ham and onion and saute for 5 minutes. Add bread crumbs and lemon juice, stirring until crumbs are moistened.

Stuff artichokes with crumb mixture, filling center and in between outer leaves. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon Parmesan cheese over each artichoke and stand them upright in large saucepan. Add water to depth of 1/2 inch. Cover and cook over low heat for 20 minutes, adding more water if necessary. Serve hot or cold. Makes 8.

STUFFED CLAMS

- 2 tbsps. butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup bread crumbs
- 24 small clams
- Lemon juice
- 3 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled

Melt butter in a small pan. Add bread crumbs. Stir over medium heat until crumbs are golden.

Open clams with a clam knife, or steam them in a saucepan just until open. Discard top shell and loosen clam from bottom shell. Sprinkle each with a little lemon juice. Cover with bread crumbs and top with bacon. Place shells on pan and bake in preheated 425° oven for 15 minutes. Makes 24.

3 Ounces Is Ideal Serving Of Meat

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Those Henry VIII-size cuts of beef served in restaurants are often double or triple the amount of meat you really need. For plenty of protein without too much fat and cholesterol, aim for a 3-ounce portion. You can make that smaller serving look more generous by slicing the meat, then fanning on the plate.

Ten beef cuts, each containing less than 200 calories for a 3-ounce serving, star in our beef-cut honor roll. Starting with the lowest in fat, they are: eye of round, round steak, top round, flank steak, tip, top loin, tenderloin, sirloin, porterhouse steak and T-bone steak. Because they're less marbled, these leaner cuts should be cooked to medium doneness or less; overcooking toughens the meat.

BURGUNDY BEEF

- 1 lb. boneless beef top round steak, cut 1/2-inch thick
- Non-stick spray coating
- 1 cup coarsely shredded carrot
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup burgundy
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tsp. cold water
- 1 1/2 tps. cornstarch

Trim separable fat from steak. Cut meat into 4 pieces. Pound with a meat mallet until meat is about 1/4-inch thick. Sprinkle meat with salt and pepper. Spray a 10-inch skillet with non-stick coating. Heat the skillet. Cook meat quickly in skillet on both sides until meat is brown. Drain off fat.

Add carrot, onion, burgundy, 1/2 cup water and garlic. Bring mixture to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 45 minutes or until meat is tender. Transfer meat to a serving platter; cover with foil to keep warm.

In a small bowl combine cold water and corn starch. Stir mixture into cooking liquid. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly; cook and stir 2 minutes more. Serve over meat. Makes 4 servings.

Warming Soup Features Jewels From A Garden

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — One of the best ways to feature jewels from your backyard garden is in a warming soup.

This recipe for Backyard Garden Vegetable Soup, provided by the Campbell Soup Co., blends the flavors of zucchini, cauliflower, red or green pepper and corn in a base of condensed chicken broth and sliced onion.

If you don't have a garden, you can use produce from the local market. Make extra batches of this warming soup to share with friends and neighbors.

BACKYARD GARDEN VEGETABLE SOUP

- 2 medium onions, thinly sliced (2 cups)
- 2 tbsps. butter or margarine

- 2 tps. all-purpose flour
- One 10 3/4-oz. can condensed chicken broth
- 1 soup can of water
- 1 cup sliced cauliflower broken into flowerets
- 1/2 cup whole kernel corn
- 1/2 cup chopped sweet red or green pepper
- 1/2 cup zucchini, cut in thin strips
- Dash ground red pepper

In a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat cook onion in hot butter until golden and tender, about 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Stir in flour. Cook 1 minute, stirring constantly.

Gradually stir in chicken broth and water. Add remaining ingredients. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low. Simmer 10 minutes. Makes about 4 cups or 3 servings.

Creamy Pie A Breeze To Make

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

So delectable and so easy! Just whip the ingredients for this creamy pie together and spoon into a prepared crumb crust. Chill in the freezer about 15 minutes or until the filling is firm but not frozen. Pass chocolate-flavored syrup to spoon over each serving, if you like.

PEANUT BUTTER CREAM CHEESE PIE

One 8-oz. package cream cheese, cut up

- 1/2 cup peanut butter
- 1 cup sifted powdered sugar
- 2 tbsps. milk
- One 4-oz. container frozen whipped dessert topping, thawed
- 1 chocolate-flavored crumb pie shell or graham cracker crumb pie shell
- 2 tbsps. coarsely chopped peanuts
- Chocolate-flavored syrup (optional)

In a large mixer bowl combine cream cheese and peanut butter; beat with an electric mixer until combined. Add powdered sugar and milk; beat until combined. Fold in whipped topping. Spoon into the pie shell. Sprinkle with peanuts. Cover and chill in the freezer for 15 minutes. Cut into wedges; top with chocolate-flavored syrup, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 507 cal., 9 g pro., 45 g carb., 34 g fat, 31 mg chol., 403 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 30 percent vit. A, 11 percent riboflavin, 26 percent niacin.

Eggrolls Are Easy But Elegant First Course

By Lan Nguyen
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

I roll, you roll, we all roll eggrolls — especially now that the secret is out: eggrolls are easy to make.

With a little practice, just about anyone can turn out crispy-fresh eggrolls — fast and hassle-free.

At Tony Cheng's Restaurant in Baltimore, two chefs whip out about 150 springrolls — eggrolls in a lighter, crisper shell — in less than an hour.

Jason Chu, manager at Tony Cheng's, said the secret to making delicious eggrolls or springrolls is the right wrapper. "The ones I see in grocery stores are not very good," said Chu, who advises people to go to Asian grocery stores to buy authentic wrappers.

He offers these tips for tasty eggrolls or springrolls:

Make sure all ingredients for the filling are ready before you begin rolling the eggrolls.

Nothing is worse than a soggy eggroll. To keep eggrolls from getting mushy keep the filling as dry as possible. All excess moisture should be lightly squeezed-out or drain the ingredients on a paper towel.

Seal the eggroll shut with a little "glue" made from flour and water.

Eggrolls should be deep fried at low heat within a half hour of making them and eaten immediately.

Eggrolls tend to stick to each other at the beginning of frying, so fry only a few at a time.

Eggrolls can vary in size, taste and ingredients. Most Americans are familiar with the Cantonese-style eggroll, stuffed with generous portions of cabbage and celery and wrapped in thick shells for carry-out restaurants.

But there are many others. For example, Mandarin- and Shanghai-style springrolls, served in some Chinese restaurants, have similar ingredients as the Cantonese style, yet are smaller and are wrapped in thinner shells. And Vietnamese and Thai springrolls have more meat and vegetables, like carrots, dried Chinese mushrooms and onions.

Recipes for anything but standard Cantonese eggrolls were hard to find until recently. But, as foods from Thailand, Korea and particularly Vietnam become increasingly popular, so have recipes for making these foods.

TONY CHENG'S CHINESE SPRINGROLLS

- 8 oz. shredded cabbage
- 8 oz. thinly sliced celery
- 8 oz. thinly sliced pork
- 8 oz. shrimp
- 1/2 tsp. pepper
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 sugar
- 1 tsp. sesame oil
- 1 package of eggroll wrappers
- Oil for deep frying

Lightly oil a hot frying pan and saute all the ingredients in the sesame oil until the pork is cooked. Drain the mixture. Put about a tablespoon of the mixture on a springroll wrapper and roll. Seal the springroll with a mixture of flour and water. Deep fry for about 3 minutes or until the skin is golden brown. Drain springrolls on a paper towel.

VIETNAMESE EGGROLLS

- 1/2 cup soaked cellophane noodles
- 1 small onion, finely chopped
- 6 spring onions, finely chopped
- 8 oz. minced pork
- 6 oz. crab meat, fresh or frozen
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 tbsp. fish sauce
- 1/4 tsp. ground black pepper
- 1 package of rice wrappers
- Oil for deep frying
- Lettuce leaves
- Fresh mint or parsley or fresh coriander leaves
- Strips of cucumber

Soak a small amount of cellophane noodles in hot water for 10 minutes, then measure 1/2 cup. Cut into 1-inch lengths with a sharp knife or scissors. Put into a bowl with the onion, spring onion, pork, flaked crab meat, salt, fish sauce and pepper. Mix well.

The rice paper is dry and must be gently soaked before it is used. The procedure is to wet the rice paper by dipping it one sheet at a time in a large bowl filled with warm water. After about a minute, the softened sheets are stacked between damp towels — stacked carefully, because the sheets tear easily.

Cut each rice wrapper in half and roll up with some of the eggroll mixture inside. Deep fry at low heat until the skin is golden brown. Drain in absorbent towels.

To serve, wrap each roll in a lettuce leaf including a small sprig of mint, coriander or parsley and a strip of cucumber. Dip in spicy peanut sauce and eat.

VIETNAMESE VEGETARIAN EGGROLLS

- 2 oz. bean thread (cellophane) noodles
- 1/4 cup carrots, finely shredded
- 1/2 cup snow peas, finely shredded
- 3 tbsps. scallions, finely chopped
- 1 tsp. sesame oil
- 2 tbsps. light soy sauce
- 1 tsp. Chinese rice wine or dry sherry
- 1 package rice paper wrappers
- 2 cups peanut oil for deep frying
- Dipping Sauce

Soak noodles in a large bowl of hot water for 10 minutes. Drain soft noodles and cut noodles into 3-inch lengths. In large bowl, mix noodles with carrots, snow peas, scallions, sesame oil, light soy sauce and rice wine.

Wet the rice paper and let stand about one minute or until soft. Put about 2 tablespoons of filling on each rice paper wrapper. Roll about 3 inches long. Deep fry at low heat until wrapping is golden brown.

Drain eggrolls on paper towel. Roll eggroll around lettuce and serve with dipping sauce.

- Dipping Sauce
- 2 tbsps. dried red chilies, chopped
  - 1 tsp. unroasted Sichuan peppercorns, whole

- 2 tbsps. black beans, whole
- 2/3 cup peanut oil

Heat a frying-pan or wok over high heat and add the oil and the rest of the ingredients. Continue to cook over a low heat for about 10 minutes. Allow the mixture to cool and then pour into a jar. Let mixture stand for two days, and then strain the oil.

CHINESE CHICKEN AND HAM ROLLS

- 4 boneless chicken breasts
- 1 slice ham, about 1/2-inch thick
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. pepper

- 1/4 tsp. five powder spices
- 1 small clove garlic, crushed
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 2 tbsps. plain flour
- 4 spring roll wrappers
- Oil for deep frying

Put chicken breast between two sheets of plastic or wax paper. Using a meat mallet, pound until thin, being careful not to tear it. Cut ham into 1/2-inch strips and into length of the chicken.

Combine pepper, salt and five spice. Mix garlic clove with 1/4 teaspoon salt and spice mixture, then spread mixture thinly on chicken. Put stick of ham on chicken and roll up, covering ham completely and moulding the chicken flesh to seal.

Dip in beaten egg seasoned with 1/2 teaspoon salt and spice mixture, then in plain flour. Put diagonally on spring roll wrapper and roll. Seal using paste of beaten egg and flour.

Heat oil in wok until it starts to form a haze, but not too hot. Fry rolls over medium heat for 3 1/2 minutes, turning them so they brown evenly. Drain on absorbent paper. Serves 4 to 8.

Sauce

- 1/2 cup liquid from Chinese mixed pickles
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 tsp. tomato sauce
- 2 tbsps. sugar

- 1 to 2 tbsps. white vinegar
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 2 tsp. arrowroot
- 1/4 cup chopped Chinese mixed pickles
- 1 tsp. cold water

Combine first six ingredients in a small saucepan, bring to boil, stirring to dissolve sugar. Mix arrowroot with cold water and add pickles. Cook, stirring until sauce boils, clears and thickens. Serve in a bowl.

Note: pickles can be omitted and the sauce based on pineapple- or orange juice. In this case, increase vinegar and salt to taste.

A Lighter Side To Seasonal Fare For Tailgate Picnics

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Shortened daylight hours and the return of cooler evenings might seem like two good reasons to give up summer out-of-doors activities. But for some, the beloved picnic is an outing too relaxing to abandon. That's how fall tailgate parties came into favor.

The activity has typically accompanied a seasonal sporting event such as football or an early evening at the races. But whether the trek leads to a favorite scenic spot or the stadium parking lot, now is the time for a tailgate picnic.

Although standard picnic fare such as cold fried chicken and mayonnaise-laden salads can be fairly high in fat and calories, it is possible to picnic and have all the fun and good taste of a celebration even when reducing the fat content of your menu. These tips, from the Human Nutrition Information Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, will help picnic-packers assemble more healthful baskets — ones that are in line with the U.S. Dietary Guidelines and emphasize foods that are low in sodium, sugars, fat and calories.

—Grill chicken, hamburgers and lean steaks so the fat runs off during cooking. Remove the skin from poultry, particularly if the fried variety will be served, and trim visible fat from steaks.

—Use salt, butter and margarine sparingly, if at all, on corn-on-the-cob.

—Load up on mixed green salad or vegetable relishes, featuring cherry tomatoes, radishes, cucumbers, carrots, celery, green peppers, broccoli and cauliflower. Have smaller helpings of coleslaw, potato and macaroni salad.

—Liven up the flavor of burgers with lettuce, tomatoes, onions or other vegetables instead of barbecue sauce, catsup, mustard, relish and pickles.

—Enjoy bananas, grapes, pears, apples, figs and other fall season fruits.

—Pack small cans or cartons of fruit juice or unsweetened ice tea rather than soft drinks.

—Take along small boxes or bags of raisins or dried fruit mix, or prepare a snack mix with plain popcorn, unsweetened cereals, bite-size pretzels and seasonings such as paprika, hot pepper sauce and onion or garlic powder. These items can replace cakes, cookies, potato chips and other snacks.

The following recipes for homemade breads, soups, and sandwiches will give the excursion a healthful and tasty flair.

OLD-FASHIONED HARVEST BREAD

- 1 1/2 cups plus 1 tbsp. oats
- 3/4 cup evaporated skimmed milk
- 1/4 cup water
- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. soda
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1-3 cup brown sugar, packed
- 1 tsp. pumpkin pie spice
- 1 egg, beaten

- 1/4 cup molasses
- 3 tbsps. oil
- 1 cup chopped green cooking apples
- 1/4 cup plus 1 tbsp. chopped walnuts

Soak 1 1/2 cups oats in milk and water in medium bowl 10 minutes. In separate bowl, combine flour, baking powder, soda, salt, sugar and spice. Combine egg, molasses, oil and oats mixture and stir into dry ingredients. Mix well. Stir in apples and 1/4 cup nuts. Pour into 9- by 5-inch loaf pan sprayed with non-stick vegetable spray. Sprinkle with remaining combined 1 tablespoon oats and walnuts.

Bake at 350° 40 to 45 minutes or until wood pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 15 minutes in pan. Remove from pan and cool completely on wire rack. Makes 1 loaf.

SALMON SOUP NICOISE

- 1 (7 1/4-oz.) can salmon
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tbsps. olive oil
- 1 (10 1/2-oz.) can low-sodium condensed chicken broth
- 1/4 tsp. dried basil, crumbled
- 2 small new potatoes, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 1 (8-oz.) can cut green beans, drained
- Hard-cooked eggs
- Cherry tomatoes

Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Break into large chunks and set aside.

Saute onion and garlic in oil. Stir in reserved salmon liquid, broth, 1 soup can water and basil. Bring to boil, add potatoes and simmer, covered, 10 minutes or until tender. Stir in green beans and salmon chunks and heat through. Serve with hard-cooked eggs and cherry tomatoes. Makes about 4 servings.

CHEESE-STUFFED CHICKEN GRILL

10 oz. low-fat Jack cheese
6 chicken thighs or half breasts, boned and skinned Chopped rosemary leaves
Chopped tarragon leaves
Chopped thyme leaves
3 green onions, sliced
Salt, pepper
1/4 cup white wine
1/4 cup melted reduced-calorie margarine

Cut cheese into 8 equal sticks. Flatten chicken thighs to 1/4-inch thickness. Sprinkle with combined 1 tablespoon rosemary, 1 tablespoon tarragon and 1 tablespoon thyme. Season to taste with salt and pepper and roll each chicken piece around cheese stick. Secure with woodpicks. Combine wine, margarine and 1 teaspoon rosemary, 1 teaspoon thyme and 1 teaspoon tarragon. Grill chicken rolls over medium-hot coals 10 to 15 minutes per side or until done, basting with wine mixture. Remove picks before serving. Makes 8 servings.

CHEESE-SAUSAGE BREAD

1 package dry yeast
1/4 cup warm water (105°-115°)
1 tbsps. honey
1/2 tsp. salt
2 1/4 cups flour
2 eggs
1/4 cup softened butter or margarine
1/4 cup chopped fresh herbs (dill, rosemary, basil or thyme)
1 1/2 cups shredded low-fat Cheddar cheese
1 lb. turkey smol sausage, casing removed
1 tbsps. sesame seeds

Sprinkle yeast over warm water in large bowl of electric mixer. Stir in honey and salt. Let stand 5 minutes. Beat in 1/2 cup flour until elastic, about 3 minutes. Beat in eggs, 1 at a time, then gradually beat in remaining flour to make soft dough. Beat in butter and herbs. Knead in cheese. Let dough rise in lightly greased covered bowl until doubled, about 1 hour. Punch dough down and pat on floured surface to approximately 12x9-inch rectangle. Place sausage on narrow side of dough. Roll up dough, pinching to seal ends. Place with sealed edge down in lightly greased 9- by 5-inch loaf pan. Let rise about 30 minutes until puffy. Brush with lightly beaten egg and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Bake at 350° 45 to 50 minutes, until well-browned. Let stand 10 minutes. Slice and serve with desired mustards. Makes 8 servings.

*Credit-Terms Details
A minimum purchase of $100 is required to qualify for 90-day deferred credit. Finance charges will be assessed during the deferral period. The deferral period begins with delivery of merchandise. If you have an existing Wickes Lumber Charge Account balance, addition of any new purchase may or may not change your current monthly payment, depending on the highest balance of your account. Delivery charges (if any) and state sales tax may cause quoted minimum monthly payments to be higher.

Reincheck Policy
Should we be out of stock on any advertised sale item, our manager will be happy to order this item for you at the same advertised sale price. If the same item is not available for reorder, the manager will make available to you a comparable item of the same value at the advertised price. It is our intention to maintain the prices in this circular until Oct. 7, 1989. However, special circumstances beyond our control may make it necessary to increase or reduce the prices before that date. For example, unusual market conditions in many commodities may result in price fluctuations after this circular is issued. In such cases we reserve the right to revise our prices. You will be notified of the changes at our store prior to processing your purchase.

PRICING and MERCHANDISING POLICY

Some items in this circular may require assembly, which is available at an additional cost at some Southern States stores. Ask your dealer for details.

Advertised items were selected many months in advance. Prices and merchandise availability are therefore subject to delivery by our suppliers as scheduled.

Some of our dealers may not stock every advertised item. However, every item can be ordered for you at the advertised price unless specifically noted otherwise. Should any dealer sell out of an advertised item, or not otherwise have an item in stock, you will be issued a "RAIN CHECK" on request.

This rain check will enable you to purchase that item, whenever available, at the advertised price within 30 days.

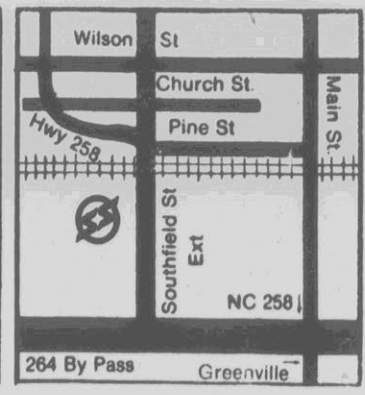

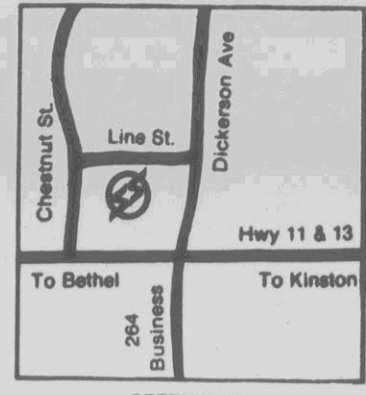

We reserve the right to limit quantities and to correct printing errors. Large appliances are available at appliance handling stores only.

Use these cards where accepted.
