Researchers: AIDS Drug Ineffective Against Virus

By A.J. Hostetler
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — A report that a popular underground drug is ineffective against the AIDS virus proves that the government should move cautiously before allowing people to take such medicine, some researchers said.

In the Oct. 1 issue of the Annals of Internal Medicine, the researchers reported on the use of dextran sulfate in 18 healthy volunteers. After administering the drug orally and intravenously, the researchers found only traces of the drug's activity using three different methods.

"This is a drug people are going to have to take two steps backward and take another look at," said Dr. Robert Yarchoan, an AIDS researcher at the National Cancer Institute. "Just because it works in a laboratory, you can't just go stuffing it in your mouth."

He said the report should remind researchers and policymakers alike to look at "the simple things," such as whether a drug can be absorbed into the bloodstream, before allowing patients to take it.

The study confirms preliminary results announced in February by Dr. Frank E. Young, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration.

On The Threshold Of Nationhood

A South-West Africa People's Organization supporter clenches her fists in excitement at a campaign rally in Windhoek. After 74 years of South African rule, Namibians are caught up in a rare form of African politics: a multiparty election campaign in which the outcome is in doubt. In voting set for Nov. 7-11, Namibia has the opportunity to transform itself from Africa's last colony into one of its most politically diverse and democratic nations.

Hurricane-Wracked South Blasted Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tornadoes and flooding targeted the hurricane-hammered South today after storms destroyed a trailer park, killing a woman and toddler, and chased scores of people from their homes in Georgia and the Carolinas.

A twister tore through Lebanon, S.C., early today, tossing a house trailer that stood through the hurricane onto a road and injuring its two occupants. Neither was hurt seriously, said Doris Browder, a dispatcher at the Berkeley County Emergency Medical Service.

Rain continued to pour throughout the region today, falling on ground already soaked by rain that came with Hurricane Hugo on the night of Sept. 21 and pushing rivers and streams toward flood levels.

Joe Manous, who grows sod next to the Etowah River in Canton, Ga., north of Atlanta, said a flash flood Sunday afternoon sent water 6 feet deep over his field, engulfing two tractors and a brand new one-ton truck.

"We didn't have time to get the tractors out, and it's already up to the windshield on the truck," he said. "It looks like it's been rising a couple of inches every 15 minutes."

E. Germans Make Way To Embassy

By Manfred Hees
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Hundreds of East Germans dodged police patrols and sprinted to the West Germany Embassy today, hoping to join the nearly 7,000 refugees who fled West over the weekend.

In Bonn, the West German government urged East Berlin to again loosen its tight grip on its citizens and allow a second wave of East German refugees in Poland and Czechoslovakia to emigrate to the West.

Despite roadblocks in the area and strict identity checks, between 500 and 600 East Germans have made their way inside the compound here, refugees reported. About 100 refugees were at the embassy in Warsaw.

Czech police patrolled the area with dogs during the night, and some refugees said police had resorted to violence to stem the flow of East Germans. One woman said police had dragged and kicked her family.

A diplomat from the mission hurried out to rescue one man who clung to the embassy fence aspolice tried to drag him away. The diplomat put his arm around the East German, and police allowed him to lead the man inside. Police then freed another refugee, who had been handcuffed to a park bench nearby.

The West German Embassy compound in the Czechoslovak capital had become a crowded, muddy encampment for hundreds of East Germans until East Berlin reluctantly allowed them to leave over the weekend.

No sooner were East Germans told they could leave, however, than hundreds of new arrivals converged on the embassy.

East Germany had harsh words for those who emigrated West during the weekend. "With their behavior they have trampled on moral values and excluded themselves from our society. No one should cry any tears for them," said a government statement issued late Sunday by the state ADN news agency.

Group Withdraws Pitt Schools' Invitation To Take Part In Management Program

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A public school advocacy group has withdrawn its invitation for Pitt County schools to participate in a management-training program because of the Board of Education's recent decision to deny the system's superintendent renewal of his contract.

The Public School Forum of North Carolina withdrew its invitation for Pitt school administrators to participate in the "Managing for Results" program because the board's action placed leadership of the school system in doubt, John N. Dornan, executive director of the forum, said today.

The group announced its decision in a Sept. 27 letter from Dornan to Superintendent Edwin L. West Jr. and school board Chairman George E. Williams.

"As a result of your board's recent decision, it would be counterproductive to attempt to include Pitt County in the project with the question of management leadership now in doubt," the letter said.

Williams was not available for comment today.

Pitt was one of 11 school systems invited to participate in the program, which provides management training for school administrators.

Dornan said West's removal also threatens the proposed School of the Future demonstration site, a cooperative effort with the forum and IBM to try to define how to construct schools with modern computer technology in mind.

"Both of these projects presume consistent leadership and a superintendent that is committed to them," Dornan said. "It's difficult to create a team when the question of leadership is in the air."

The decision is based on the fact that leadership in the school system is going to change and is not a bad reflection on the system's capabilities, Dornan said.

"We don't want to go through a year of training and have some new projects started in a school system, then have a new superintendent come in and decide not to continue them," he said.

The Public School Forum of North Carolina is a private Raleigh firm composed of business leaders, elected officials and educators that supports educational programs.

West declined comment when contacted today at his office.

Institute Says Drugs Found To Aid Colon Cancer Patients

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BETHESDA, Md. — A drug used to deworm farm animals combined with a common cancer drug has been found to save the lives of patients who would have died from an advanced type of colon cancer, the National Cancer Institute announced today.

NCI Director Samuel Broder said that a national study involving about 1,300 patients with a stage 3 type of colon cancer showed increased survival rates for those treated with a drug called levamisole in combination with 5-fluorouracil, a cancer drug now in common use.

The study was directed by Dr. Charles G. Moertel of the Mayo Clinic.

At a news conference today, Moertel said that the study showed 49 percent of stage III colon cancer patients were alive five years after therapy with the drug combination compared to only 37 percent of such patients who received no drugs.

Pitt Area Avoids Flooding

By Jerry Raynor
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The heavy weekend rainfall in Greenville and Pitt County in general has not created any major street or rural road flooding or drainage problems in Greenville.

The main concern at this time is for farmers, according to Al Hight, Associate Pitt County Agriculture Extension Agent. "Just now, farmers are ready to dig peanuts," Hight said. "The weekend's heavy rainfall, however, is hampering harvest. If peanuts stay in wet soil too long, rot develops. So just now, the time is critical, especially if rainfall continues."

Jack Clifton, street superintendent for the Greenville Public Works Department, said "to date, we have no major problems in street draining. But we do ask people to keep a watch on any problems that might develop and to report any to us."

Spokesmen for the N.C. Department of Transportation and for the Pitt County Schools both said they have not received any reports of flooded rural roads and that school bus transportation has not been hampered.

Ben Loftin, Water Plant Superintendent for Greenville Utilities, gave the rainfall measurements as 43 inches on Saturday and 1.67 on Sunday. High and low temperature readings were 73 degrees high, 61 degrees low on Saturday and 71 degree and 60 degrees on Sunday. The Tar River water level was 3.4 feet above sea level on Friday and rose to 4 feet on Sunday. "The river level is relatively low," Loftin said, and there's no indication of a quick high rise in the water level at an early date.

Fair Opening On Wet Note

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Now that all the planning is over and the Pitt County American Legion Agricultural Fair is set to open in Greenville today, fair manager Elvy Forrest, is worried about the rain.

Rain fell through most of the weekend and this morning, soaking fairgrounds and causing some delay in setting up rides, Forrest said.

"It's going to take us a little longer to get the rides up because we couldn't work on them Sunday," he said. "The grounds are wet, but we still plan to open tonight at six."

Forrest said he didn't expect the rain to deter people from coming to the fair this week. "We had rain last year on Monday, but not this much. We still had great attendance though," he said.

If weather forecasts are accurate, Elvy won't have to worry about rain — at least not for the next few days. Forecasters say tonight will be partly cloudy with no rainfall expected and the low will be in the mid-60s. Tuesday should be mostly sunny with the high in the mid-80s.

This year's fair will feature a variety of animal acts, a revamped fairground and several free attractions. It will be located on U.S. 264 and is set to run through October 7.

Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for children. Children who have school passes will be admitted at no charge on Monday

Burroughs Wellcome Employees Schedule Quality Circle Events

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

About 500 employees at Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Greenville will participate in two events this week that focus on identifying and solving work-related problems.

Company officials have organized a Quality Circle Expo and Conference in recognition of National Quality Month which began today, according to Larry Seigler, general site manager at the local facility.

Workers at Burroughs Wellcome have taken part in quality circles since 1981. Seigler said the circles are troubleshooting tools, designed to allow individuals who do similar jobs to get together for an hour each week to discuss problems in their respective areas and to devise ways to work out those problems.

"The circles are conducted by the employees and they work on the different problems that they feel need attention," Seigler said. "We respect the autonomy of the circles and let them work on items they feel are important."

This week's Expo will be held Tuesday and Wednesday in the company's auditorium. It is open only to BW employees and will feature table displays and exhibits from the 60 quality circles currently active at the plant.

Seigler said the Expo will not only serve as a form of communication among members of different circles, but it will allow employees who are not involved in the circles to get a firsthand look at ongoing projects implemented by quality circle participants.

Seigler said he expects nearly 600 people will attend Friday's Quality Circle Conference, which is an annual event held to recognize the accomplishments of the groups. This year's conference, which will be held at the Hilton Inn from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., is the eighth one held by the local plant. All circle members, company officials and about 50 non-circle members have been invited, he said.

"This conference provides a way to cap and highlight the week's events and gives the opportunity for everybody involved to meet together and talk about what's going on with quality circles throughout the company," Seigler said.

Gunshot Kills Boy

MOUNT HOLLY (AP) — A 7-year-old Belmont boy was shot and killed Friday evening when a gun being cleaned by his uncle discharged accidentally, police said.

Joshua Vaughn was pronounced dead at Gaston Memorial Hospital shortly after the 5:30 p.m. incident.

Mount Holly police Sgt. Dewey Hager said Joshua was shot in the head by a .22-caliber handgun being cleaned by his uncle, who Hager said is 12 or 13.

Hager, the first officer on the scene, said the shooting is still under investigation, but "it looks like it's going to be accidental."

The uncle, whose name was not released, told police he was cleaning the gun when the gun discharged. The uncle said he thought the gun was unloaded.

The incident occurred at the home of Joshua's grandmother, Christine Vaughn, who was home at the time.

Joshua was a second-grade student at North Belmont Elementary School.

had a blood-alcohol content of 0.106, which state statutes define as legally intoxicated.

Shawn, whose abdomen was injured, was released Saturday, the spokesman said.

Sighting Day Held

TOPSAIL ISLAND (AP) — Some isolated observers spent Saturday along Topsail Island as part of the state's fourth Dolphin Sighting Day.

Participation was not as great as organizers had hoped. But the 28 observers manned 14 stations and succeeded in enlarging the scope of the project designed to assess the dolphin population in area waters and to observe dolphin behavior.

"It was a small turnout, but we had a very spirited team," said project organizer Guy Stefanski of Cary. "The objectives behind this kind of study are being reached."

"We're getting the data, and more people are becoming involved," Stefanski said. "We'd like to get a lot of people out there."

Saturday's Dolphin Sighting Day covered a larger area than previous efforts earlier this year, which were limited to Bogue Banks, Cape Hatteras and the Cape Fear region. Stefanski hopes to organize such an event for the entire North Carolina coast as early as next year.

Investigation Set

An official with the state agency charged with protecting ground water says he will authorize an investigation to determine the source of the contamination that has threatened the community of Coleridge and a school there.

John Stewart, regional supervisor with the Division of Environmental Management's ground water section, said he will begin tests in the next two weeks.

"We'll be there; we'll be investigating," Stewart said. "We'll work with the health department and the water supply branch in a joint effort, hopefully to find the source of the problem."

The problem in Randolph County is the latest in a series to strike drinking water sources in North Carolina. Several small towns that depend on surface water for drinking could have high levels of cancer-causing chemicals in their water and not know it, according to state officials say.

Easley To Run

RALEIGH (AP) — Brunswick County District Attorney Mike Easley will announce this morning that he will seek the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican Jesse Helms, sources say.

Easley has scheduled a news conference for 10 a.m. today at Democratic Party headquarters in Raleigh to make the announcement.

Easley, 39, has been the district attorney for Bladen, Brunswick and Columbus counties since 1982. His district was the first to use investigative grand juries to seek drug indictments, and he lobbied in the most recent General Assembly session to extend the use of such grand juries.

Easley began his career with the district attorneys office in 1976 before running for election in 1982.

Flooding Problems Swamp State

Torrential rains added to the misery of North Carolina residents already trying to dig out from Hurricane Hugo this weekend, sweeping a car into a creek and forcing people to leave water-logged homes also threatened by flood waters.

Authorities used a helicopter to find the car, which fell into a creek after a bridge washed out. A 17-year-old woman, who was found clinging to branches, said three other people were in the car. However, no one else was found in the vehicle.

Valerie Knox was rescued by boat about 5:45 a.m. and taken to Union County Memorial Hospital, where she was in the emergency room in stable condition, said Larry Bishop, hospital president.

Three boats were being used in the search, and other boats were being called in, authorities said.

The National Weather Service had issued a flood watch for the mountains on Sunday, but by this morning had extended the watch to the northeast Piedmont, sandhills and the coastal plain. Only the Outer Banks and coastal areas aren't affected, said Joe Pelissier, a forecaster at the weather service at the Raleigh-Durham International Airport.

The flood watch was canceled for all areas at 4 a.m.

Mecklenburg County went into an alert situation Sunday night when officials sounded sirens around Mountain Island Lake in the northwest portion to warn residents to leave about 80 homes because the lake was above flood stage.

Around 10 p.m., county police advised residents to leave 80 homes, and a church was readied for evacuees.

At 11:45 p.m., some residents were enroute to an evacuation center at Sunset Road Baptist Church after water washed over their yards and into some homes. Firefighters with the Pinocha and Cooks volunteer fire departments were assisting the evacuees. Earlier Sunday, the rains forced 80 Gaston County residents to flee a mobile home park near McAdenville as Crowders Creek jumped its banks. In Lincoln County, residents of a house on U.S. 321 south of Lincoln were also forced to leave.

"The water just kept rising," resident Angela Haney said as she left a mobile home park with her husband, Edward, and the couple's three girls, ages 3 months, 1 and 2. "We got flooded. The rescue workers came to get us. It took about 45 minutes. I wasn't scared. ... Well, maybe a little."

From midnight to 11 p.m., 2.1 inches of rain had fallen in the Charlotte area, which received some of the hardest rains. Creeks and rivers were at full bank; some crested. Two to 7 inches have fallen in the southern mountains and the piedmont since Thursday.

In Cabarrus County, officials closed about 15 side roads for flooding. The sheriff's department estimated that roads would reopen early today if flooding had subsided. The Union County Sheriff's Department closed 17 roads, and flooding just outside Albemarle along N.C. 73 was almost waist-deep. Low areas of U.S. 52 were also closed.

Everywhere it rained, vehicles stalled — or gingerly passed through — on flooded roads.

Trees left leaning by Hugo leaned farther or fell because of saturated grounds.

And roofs pierced by Hugo-fallen trees and branches leaked.

One was Reggie and Pala Smith's house in Charlotte. An uprooted oak tore a hole in the roof.

Sunday, their daughter's plastic swimming pool sat in their master bedroom upstairs, catching water that dripped through.

"The tree fell right over my bed. I'm grateful it didn't hit me on the head," said Paula Smith. "The storm caused a major stress, and the rain has added to it. Seeing everything in an uproar takes adjusting to. It's kind of like moving all over again."

The rain added to the troubles of electric workers trying to restore power.

"Rain slows us down," said Dee Smith, a line crew foreman for Dillard Smith Co. of Jefferson City, Tenn., one of several companies Duke Power Co. has subcontracted to help restore Charlotte's power. "We can't get trucks in where we need to."

Farm Losses Continue To Rise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Perry Lowe Jr. watched Hurricane Hugo literally rip apart his apple crop, and he may have joined other farmers in seeing their livelihoods taken away.

"I got in the pickup and got in a low spot where no trees could fall and just watched apples fly through the air," he said. They were Lowe's apples. He owns one of the largest orchards in the Brushy Mountains of southern Wilkes.

Hugo left Lowe's farm in shambles and most of his apples rotting on the ground. He estimated his loss at $1.5 million.

Farm losses from Hugo's destructive path through central North Carolina totaled $165.8 million in preliminary estimates from 31 counties, but agricultural officials say they have not completed damage estimates.

John J. Cooper, state executive director of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said county ANSC and other agricultural agencies are continuing to assess eligibility for disaster relief under federal farm programs.

The preliminary estimates included nearly $37.2 million in crop losses. Corn losses were about $19 million and soybeans were about $7 million. The total tobacco loss was less than $1 million, but estimates in some of the 31 counties were incomplete.

After Hugo left 4,000 Wilkes, Lowe found nearly 4,000 of his 20,000 apple and peach trees broken or pulled out by the roots.

This year's apples — made plump by frequent rain — were the best in 47 years of farming, Lowe said. He had picked about 15 percent of them from the trees before Hugo arrived.

"I'm trying to pick them up now. I don't even know if I can sell them or not. I guess if I sell them it will be for juice."

There's a difference. Eating apples sell for $8 or more a bushel. Juice apples sell for $1.50, he said.

"It gets worse every day. We're seeing trees just fall over that we didn't think were hurt. The ground's wet ..."

"I've accepted it. My wife and I are living. The house is still standing. I'm going to rebuild."

Wilkes County lost most of its corn crop also, officials said. In Alleghany, dairy farmers dumped $150,000 worth of milk for lack of refrigeration. Unmilked cows became sick.

Some farmers in Union County might never recover.

Democrats Exhorted

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Democrats must learn how to speak to voters on such key issues as the environment rather than try to parrot the conservatism of the Republican Party if they are to win back the presidency, a national political consultant told a gathering of Forsyth County Democrats Saturday.

"The answer for the Democratic Party is not to become a Republican Party," said Bob Beckel, who ran the presidential campaign of Walter Mondale in 1984. "That's not what we're meant to be. That's not where our roots are. We just have to be as smart as the Republican Party."

Beckel now runs a political consulting company that specializes in grass-roots campaigns for corporations, trade associations and non-profit organizations. As Mondale's campaign manager, he was given credit for rejuvenating that campaign after early primary defeats to Gary Hart. Beckel tagged Hart with the line, "Where's the beef?"

Two Injured At Fair

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Winston-Salem woman and her son were injured Friday night at the Dixie Classic Fair when they fell out of a spinning ride called the Enterprize, fair officials said Saturday.

But they also said at a news conference that it is unclear exactly what happened and how the two could have fallen out. An initial investigation by the N.C. Department of Labor, which monitors fair equipment for safety, has turned up nothing wrong with the equipment so far.

"We're very sad it happened, but we feel we've taken every precaution that everything at the fairground is operating as it should be operating," said William B. Austin Jr., director of the fairgrounds.

Marilyn E. Kirk, 34, and her son, Shawn D. Kirk, 6, were found injured near the ride about 8:30 p.m. They were taken to Baptist Hospital.

Kirk was in the intensive-care unit last night with a pelvic fracture and an exterior cut near her kidney, injuries that did not require surgery, a spokesman for the hospital said.

The spokesman said Ms. Kirk also

Jet Crashes During Its Approach To Airport, Two Pilots Are Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROXBORO (AP) — A twin-engine Cessna Citation jet crashed on its approach to the Person County Airport late Sunday night, killing two GTE South employees on board, according to the sheriff's department.

Dispatcher Carol Wilson said the department received a message indicating that a plane was missing on its approach to the airport. She also said she had received a call from officials of GTE indicating that the aircraft was missing.

Joe McGraff, 35, of Bahama, N.C., the assistant chief pilot for GTE South, was killed in the crash, along with Rich King, 31, a contract pilot from Burlington. They were returning from Tampa, Fla., where they had taken GTE South President Payton Adams, according to Steve Toler, GTC director of public information.

GTE South headquarters is located in Tampa.

"We are shocked by this accident and offer our condolences to their families and friends," Adams said. "This is the first aircraft accident we've had with GTE South."

Toler said McGraff was one of nine fulltime pilots on staff for GTE, which had used private aircraft for flights since Sept. 1970. He said the aircraft had flown more than 3.7 million passenger miles in the last 12 months.

Toler said it was raining and there was limited visibility at the time of the crash, but he said no cause had been determined.

A fire department dispatcher said the flight had been cleared for landing at the Person County Airport by air traffic controllers at the Raleigh-Durham International Airport, and no trouble was indicated at the time.

The plane crashed in a wooded area about 3 1/2 miles southwest of the airport at about 11:30 p.m., the fire department dispatcher said.

Ms. Wilson said an off-duty dispatcher who lives in the vicinity of the airport heard a loud noise which he thought was thunder, and that his daughter had seen a bright light through her bedroom window.

Marcos' End

A Legacy Of Squandered Opportunity

The death of former Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos can only bring into focus a career of misused power.

Once there was hope that as president, Marcos would lead his country into an era of democracy and economic stability. In the end he is seen as one who misused his position as president and robbed his countrymen to amass a huge personal fortune.

The character weaknesses should have been obvious early on. He claimed to have been a war hero with United States and Philippine forces during World War II when his nation was occupied by the Japanese. Though those claims were later mostly doubted he became successful in Philippine politics. In 1965 he was elected president on an anti-corruption platform and assumed office on Jan. 1, 1966.

By 1969 questions of fraud were being raised and in September 1972, Marcos declared martial law to restore order. In 1983 Benigno S. Aquino, a Marcos opponent, was assassinated at Manila airport. In 1985 Marcos' opponent was Aquino's widow, Corazon. Both claimed victory but Marcos and his wife were forced to flee the country as the fraud charges grew more widespread.

Later the Philippine government would file suits seeking $96 billion in funds believed plundered from the Philippines. The Marcos' were indicted by New York Federal grand jury on racketeering charges concerning the alleged corruption.

Marcos will never answer the charges in court. Ill health prevented his appearance previously and now he is dead at the age of 72.

It can be assumed, however, that Marcos cared far more for his personal wealth and power than he did for the welfare and freedom of his own people.

Certainly he frittered away a great opportunity to build a stable and democratic government in the Philippines after World War II. He could have been remembered as the George Washington of the Philippines. Instead his legacy is one of personal greed, power for selfish purposes and lack of compassion for the people he was supposed to lead.

'He could have been remembered as the George Washington of the Philippines. Instead his legacy is one of personal greed ...'

Hardly Anything Embarrasses Helms

Ernest Ferguson

Some civil rights leaders are upset over Jesse Helms' latest trick. If it weren't so sad, the proper reaction would be to laugh along with Jesse.

What the North Carolina senator did was hire for his staff James Meredith, who in 1962 became the first black to enroll at the University of Mississippi. It is as absurd as if South Africa's prime minister had hired Bishop Tutu.

Helms himself has not been heard on why, after 17 years in the Senate, he decided to bring aboard one of the best-known figures of the civil rights movement. Meredith explains it by saying North Carolina has the nation's seventh biggest black population, and the senator (suddenly) "wants to provide the best possible representation to them as well as the entire black population."

The (suddenly) is my own contribution. Helms has had Senate staffs, committee staffs and campaign staffs for the better part of two decades. If he had wanted his staffs to represent North Carolina's blacks in proportion to their population, he would have had to hire dozens of them.

The last time he ran for re-election, he bragged that he was the only contender who had a black press secretary. It was true. Ending two terms in the Senate, he had hired his first black employee, a young man named Claude Allen.

Now Helms is facing another re-election campaign. North Carolina's blacks, like those in most states, are voting in higher percentages every year. Thus it makes sense for the state's senior senator to have a highly visible black in his entourage, regardless of what the new employee's duties may be.

However, the senator could hire two dozen blacks at this point in his career and still have no realistic hope of getting more than a handful of black votes. Voters in his state know him too well. James Meredith doesn't, apparently.

It is conceivable, of course, that whatever he is being paid may influence Meredith's judgment about Helms. It is more charitable to believe that since he was enrolled at Ole Miss 27 years ago amid tear gas and federal bayonets, he has not read or heard anything about the rest of civil rights history.

If he had, he would know what Jesse Helms' role in that history has been. He could hardly deny that Helms has been hostile to blacks and the civil rights movement.

In fact, Helms' racial attitudes are documented by a stack of evidence that rivals the record of anyone in public life. For seven years in the 1950s, he wrote regular editorials for the Tarheel Banker, published by the North Carolina Bankers Association. For twelve years, 1960 to 1972, he did daily commentaries for WRAL-TV in Raleigh. Those two decades spanned the civil rights revolution, and Helms never missed an opportunity to condemn it, in print or on the air.

About the time Meredith entered the University, Helms was asserting that the civil rights movement was a communist plot. When Meredith was hit by buckshot during a freedom march in 1965, Helms was railing against the Voting Rights Act then under debate. In the Senate, he has opposed every item championed by the civil rights community — not only with his vote, but with rhetoric that often outrages his fellow senators.

Jesse Helms has not changed. James Meredith has. Since he was in the national eye, he has moved from place to place, been in various jobs. Along the way, he has stated sadly that integration was "the biggest con job ever pulled on anybody." Joining the Helms staff, he says, is "the most significant development in my long campaign to make the black race full first-class citizens."

Meredith is not the first person to be used in politics. Few cases are more cynical than this one, but cynicism has never been an embarrassment to Helms.

His hiring Meredith does two things: It gives the senator a token black to whom he can point in next year's campaign as alleged proof that he has nothing against the race. And more important, it brings up race again even before the campaign begins. It reminds the Carolina "Jessecrats" who supported him before because of his racial record that he is still the same old Jesse.

Commentaries like this one serve that purpose precisely. They have done it every time he has run. Wherever he is today, he's laughing.

Amoral, Sickening, Incomprehensible ... Un-American

WASHINGTON — Southeast Asia has given us the almost incomprehensible term, "auto-genocide." Unlike ordinary genocides (the Holocaust, for instance) in which one people (the Germans) attempt to exterminate another people (the Jews), an auto-genocide is one in which a country turns on itself. Only one example comes to mind: Cambodia.

Cambodia was the "killing field" — not only a movie by that name, but a reality. Between 1975 and 1979, one-sixth of the country's population was killed. The group that did the killing is called the Khmer Rouge, headed by Pol Pot. Probably not since Hitler, has the world seen such a pathologically evil regime. It happens to be the one, however, that the United States still supports.

Oh, for sure, that support is indirect and roundabout — a foreign-policy maze that includes other countries (China, Thailand, Vietnam) and that is further complicated by a menu of exotic names: Kampuchea, Hun Sen, Norodom Sihanouk and Son Sann.

Richard Cohen

You are forgiven if Cambodia slips from your list of concerns.

But this mess is explicable. In 1979, the Vietnamese invaded Cambodia and sent Pol Pot packing into the jungle. The United States, recently out of Vietnam and bruised by defeat, saw the invasion as yet another example of Hanoi's imperialism and decided, in effect, to continue the Vietnam War in another place and by other means.

Washington's policy was probably best stated by then National Security Director Zbigniew Brzezinski in an interview with my former colleague, Elizabeth Becker: "I encouraged the Chinese to encourage Pol Pot." In effect, U.S. policy has remained ever thus. It continues even though (in case you haven't noticed) the Vietnamese this week pulled out of Cambodia. What the Vietnamese have left behind is a bouillabaisse of a government and the usual contingents of guerrilla armies. One factor is the former prime minister, Sihanouk, who is aligned with — you guessed it — the Khmer Rouge. Sihanouk is our guy.

Now consider this. Can you imagine that following World War II, Hitler and the remnants of the Nazi Party fled to the Black Forest and continued to fight the Russians. Since the Russians were our enemy, too, we decided to support forces in Germany that were aligned with Hitler. This is the kind of amoral alliance that seems to give Washington's war lovers a keen sexual thrill — a delicious deal with the Devil himself. Only a real man has the stomach for that sort of thing.

Well, the real men of Washington have made such a deal with Pol Pot. Permission for such an odious understanding has been granted by an oblivious public and by — let's face it — racism. It is inconceivable that the American people would accept, even at arm's length, any arrangement with a man who had murdered over two million white people. But yellow people, people with odd names who live in a country that most Americans could never find on a map... Well, that's a different story. Those people kill each other all the time, don't they?

If Sihanouk wants to align himself with Pol Pot, that's his business. But it is our business, if not our solemn obligation, to have nothing to do with such an arrangement. Hobbled by Gramm-Rudman, solemnly pledged never to raise taxes and educated by the bruising we got in Vietnam, the United States no longer strides the world like a cop on the beat.

But we can cease our covert and overt support of Sihanouk and, just possibly, help avoid the civil war that seems to be coming in Cambodia. Really, what do we care if a pro-Vietnam government takes over in Cambodia?

Since the end of World War II, the United States has practiced an occasionally mindless realpolitik. We granted amnesty to Nazis and enrolled them in the fight against communism. To turn back a nonexistent Soviet threat in this hemisphere, we got Argentine storm troopers to fight for freedom against the Nicaraguan Sandinistas — and then, unhappy with the results, created the contras. Any port in the anti-Communist storm, it seemed.

But even by those standards, U.S. policy in Cambodia sets a mark for amorality — a cynicism that is as mindless as it is repugnant. In some sense, we continue fighting the Vietnam War. If you want an example of how such a policy has tied us into moral knots, consider this: The United States denied permission for Yasser Arafat to enter the country for a United Nations speech but sits down daily with Pol Pot's representative there. Try explaining that to your kids.

The mass murder of Cambodians by Cambodians is called auto-genocide. But what to call a U.S. policy that overlooks such an atrocity?

Many words come to mind — amoral, sickening, incomprehensible — but only one will really do: un-American.

Presidents Talk Big, But Governors Are Real Education Heroës

Paul Peterson

"It's time to stop debating... and it's time to get one with it," President Bush told the governors. The irony contained in these seemingly innocuous phrases is too delicious to ignore. Even as George Bush is proclaiming himself the education president by holding a "summit conference" in Virginia, the states have been providing, while Washington has been denying, the financial support schools need. While the White House talks, the states have been doing the job.

The rhetorical approach to school reform was discovered almost willy-nilly by Ronald Reagan when a federal commission surprised everyone (including the White House) by its discovery in 1982 that American schools were being washed by "a rising tide of mediocrity." Reagan's conservative advisers had never been enthusiastic about this commission to study education; they feared that the report would only set off demands for more federal dollars. And the report itself ignored school prayer and tuition tax credits — the core of the Republican education agenda.

The Great Communicator nonetheless turned the report to his own rhetorical purposes. The schools need to do better, he said. Students need to study more, parents need to insist that children complete their homework, and teachers should put educational interests ahead of monetary ones; we must not let Japanese schools continue to outperform our own.

Reagan's secretary of education, William J. Bennett, added his own rhetorical flourishes. Teacher unions were too powerful, he huffed. Merit-based pay systems must be introduced, he puffed. Accountability and top-down systems of control must be put into effect, he blew.

Meanwhile, Reagan cut the federal share of aid to education. By the time he left office in search of a multi-million dollar Japanese honorarium for speaking during his retirement years, he had cut by 40 percent the federal share of the cost of public elementary and secondary education.

George Bush has, by comparison, filled his educational sails with less in the way of artificially inflated bags of wind. He has sent William Bennett off in search of drug pushers, a more fitting target for his vehemence than teachers were. Bush's mild-mannered, unobtrusive secretary of education, Lauro F. Cavazos, is nowhere to be seen. (Was he invited to the Virginia summit? Who knows?) Bush even upstaged his own education conference by simultaneously announcing major new foreign policy initiatives, pressing the International Monetary Fund to provide more aid for Poland.

But if the belligerent tone is absent, the Reagan strategy of substituting style for substance remains. "Accountability, flexibility, tougher standards and a results-oriented system — all of these have got to be on the table," Bush told the nation's governors upon his arrival in Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson. (Jefferson, who founded the University of Virginia and designed its campus core, is the one president who can deservedly wear the title of "Mr. Education.")

But while telling the governors to work harder, Bush continues to recommend that it cut sharply — in real dollar terms — the level of federal educational assistance.

Ironically, neither insincere presidential rhetoric nor cuts in federal expenditures have made much difference to America's schoolchildren. As extensive as has been the news media coverage of the Reagan, Bennett and Bush pronouncements, what they have said has had little to do with what is happening in education.

With all of the conservative calls for a more efficient school system, one might have expected teacher salaries to fall, classrooms to become more crowded, and per-pupil expenditures to contract. In fact, the very opposite has occurred. Public schools are in better financial shape than ever before. Expenditures per pupil are up, teacher salaries are climbing, and the size of the average class is as low as ever.

The cost of education has risen with every decade in the post-war era. Between 1970 and 1980 the real cost (in inflation-adjusted 1984 dollars) climbed from $2,600 to $3,300 per pupil. But most this increase paid for the escalating costs of energy, transportation, administration and special education. In real-dollar terms, teacher salaries actually fell from an average of nearly $24,000 in 1970 to less than $22,000 in 1980.

The news for educators in the 1980s has been much better. Not only did expenditures climb another $550 per pupil by 1988, but energy and transportation costs fell. The new money was being spent on teacher salaries, lifting them by more than $4,000 in real (1984) dollars. Teachers by 1988 were earning 22 percent more than the average worker, a position in the labor force they had never achieved before — not even in the heyday of the Great Society. Meanwhile, the average school still had an average of just 16 pupils per teacher.

Teachers learned to like Bill Bennett. The more he attacked them, the more they were paid.

The heroes of the story have been the governors. The cuts in federal aid have been more than made up by increases in state aid. And the states have been willing to levy the additional taxes necessary to keep schools — as well as other state institutions — alive and well.

Nonetheless, George Bush thinks it is his prerogative to go to Monticello and tell the nation's governors, "It's time to stop debating over commissions and studies and set priorities, and it's time to get on with it." Speak to yourself, George. The governors have been hard at work for some time.

Alienation Argument Is Nonsense

Phillip Gay

The new academic year has begun, and countless young Americans are settling into college life far from home with more than the usual trepidation. They are the members of a racial or ethnic minority hoping to succeed in a largely white campus world, and it's fair to say that many of them, especially Latinos from the Southwest, have Jose Luis Razo in mind.

Just weeks ago, the young man from a Los Angeles-area barrio was sentenced to 10 years in prison for the commission of a series of armed robberies during vacation breaks from his undergraduate studies at Harvard University. By the end of his highly publicized trial, Razo's story was being presented as a cautionary tale. As one of his former classmates, himself a Latino, wrote on this page, "Between the two worlds that (Harvard and Razo) represent is, perhaps, a barrier that should not be crossed."

Nonsense, I say. I spent seven years at Harvard (1969-'76), as a graduate student in the Soviet Union Program and Sociology Department; as a resident of both university and off-campus housing; as a friend, neighbor and classmate of students of all races and social-class backgrounds, and as a paid recruiter of "under-represented" students to departments within Harvard's Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

Furthermore, I'm a member of a racial minority group, and my parents weren't rich. From this background, I must strongly disagree with the perhaps well-intentioned attempts to convert the fragmentary accounts of Jose Razo's experience into a generalization. I deplore the message this gives, however subliminally, to aspiring low-income minority students and to those who would limit their admittance to schools like Harvard.

The favorite theory is that Razo was fated to fail, that his drastically different childhood environment was bound to make him feel — in fact, literally be — alienated at Harvard.

The suggestion is that only minority students, particularly those from low-income backgrounds, will experience great difficulty in adjusting to life at Harvard and other similarly ranked schools.

This is based on nothing more than myths and unwarranted assumptions concerning the characteristics — the purported intellectual and psychological limitations — of the "typical" minority student at the "typical" elite university. The suggestion is that only minority students, particularly those from low-income backgrounds, will experience great difficulty in adjusting to life at Harvard and other similarly ranked schools.

Adjusting to student life and finding a comfortable personal niche for oneself is — and probably always was — a great, traumatic experience for practically every student ever enrolled at Harvard. How could it be otherwise? At home, they were clearly among the best and the brightest of their high school peers. At Harvard, most soon have to adjust to being just another undergraduate, unexceptional among a thousand peers, all strangers in a strange land. That's why the Harvard student rumor mills are constantly abuzz with reports (both true and false) of suicides, attempted suicides and all manner of other types of nervous breakdowns, suffered by students from all kinds of racial, ethnic and social classes.

Another popular but unwarranted assumption is that a student can feel psychologically secure and develop his or her potential to its fullest only on a campus where a majority of the other students share his or her racial-ethnic or social-class heritage. That isn't true, either.

Thousands of minority students have matriculated at Harvard feeling no greater sense of alienation from self and others than they felt in high school. If they hadn't somehow been different from others back in their old neighborhood, they probably wouldn't have been admitted to Harvard in the first place.

The alienation argument also seems to imply that universities can best serve their students by doing everything possible to accommodate the personas they brought from home — the experiences, values, beliefs, the ways of thinking about and looking at themselves and the world that they developed in their early school years. I disagree. I think the main responsibility of a university is to provide its undergraduates with an environment conducive to personal and intellectual growth. Why else go to college?

Another assumption without evidentiary support holds that members of low-income minority groups are more likely to flunk or drop out of the top-ranked colleges than they are to flunk or drop out of less highly ranked schools. In fact, on the basis of empirical data that I have seen, quite the opposite is true: The higher the academic standing of the college, the lower the minority student attrition rate. Really. A minority student is less likely to make it through San Diego State than Harvard.

What is true is that black American, Mexican American, Native American and low-income white students are still numerically under-represented at Harvard; the minority undergraduate population is in the neighborhood of 25 percent of the total. But it is not true that the typical Harvard undergraduate is a white member of the indecently moneyed classes who graduated from an exclusive, ultra-expensive suburban prep school. A great many Harvard students come from either working-class or solidly middle-class backgrounds.

So let's congratulate and wish well all those minority, working-class young people who have, on the strength of demonstrated ability, won a place at one of the country's finest institutions of learning, in one of the world's most interesting cities.

A Generous Compromise

Theo Lippman Jr.

A dispute between the House and Senate has emerged over the franking privilege for mass mailings. The House wants to frank and the Senate doesn't.

Now the "franking privilege" is not the same thing as the "franking privilege." I'll get to Barney in a minute. The frank in dispute here is the right of senators and representatives to send mail free to such dear personal friends as "Occupant" and "Resident." This mail is of the sort that begins, usually in bold, headline-size type, with something like:

"Rep. Jones Co-Sponsors Study of Endangered Lousewort, Demands Balanced Budget, Is Hailed by Colleagues."

On Sept. 7 the Senate passed a legislative branch appropriations bill that ended the franking practice. Monday, the House voted to end mass mail franking, too. The bills differed in some respects, so the House and Senate immediately established a conference committee to "work out the differences."

First thing they did, only hours after the House vote, was "compromise" on legislative mailings. You may wonder how you compromise something both sides agreed on to begin with. You obviously don't understand your congresspersons. They compromised by voting to restrict mass mail franking to half the number permitted in the past.

It is thinking like this that has brought the cost of Congress to — are you sitting down? — $2 billion a year! Well, almost. The legislative appropriations bill for fiscal 1990 is $1.95 billion. Next year for sure we'll all be the proud possessors of a $2 billion Congress.

We haven't always had a Congress this costly. We just went over the $1 billion mark in fiscal 1979. In 1970 it only cost $350 million. So the price tag on the Capitol is up about six-fold in 20 years.

But Congress is better, right?

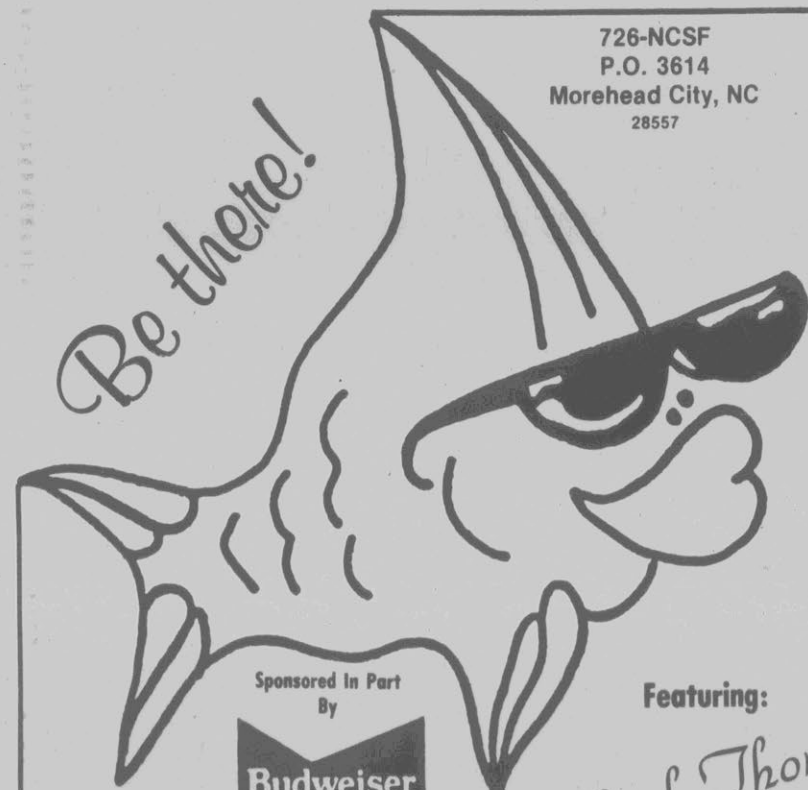

Not by at least one measurement. That measurement is when it passes these appropriations bills. There are 13 overall. Congress is required to enact all 13 by the beginning of the fiscal year. That's next Sunday. It has only passed one. Government can't operate without appropriated funds. So the House has voted to appropriate a lump sum for running the whole government — the military, Congress, courts, chicken inspectors, everything — until Oct. 25. It hopes it can pass the regular appropriations bills by then. Don't hold your breath.

Members may be less competent today, but they are more sensitive, ethically speaking. For instance, when it was revealed that Rep. Barney Frank had had a male call boy living with him, operating a prostitution ring from Frank's apartment, the congressman almost immediately asked the House Ethics Committee to determine if this was improper.

My guess is the committee, after weeks of study, thought and debate, will find no technical violations of House ethics rules. Frank will then announce this to everyone in his district with letters beginning "Committee Endorses Frank's Commitment to Private Enterprise."

Doctors Hope To Remove Tumor From 6-Foot Child

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, Minn. — At 7, Igor Ladan is already about 6 feet tall and weighs 200 pounds. He's come thousands of miles from his native Soviet Union in hopes doctors can remove a dangerous tumor from his skull and stop his abnormal growth.

Mayo Clinic surgeons plan to remove a rare pituitary gland tumor from the boy doctors call a "pituitary giant."

Igor and his mother, Svitlana Ladan, arrived here three weeks ago after she waged a worldwide letter-writing campaign from her native city of Kiev to find treatment for her son. The costs of the boy's care are being donated.

"I was so happy, I nearly died," Ladan said last week through a translator.

"People think 6 feet, not 6 years," said Nina Sahulenko, a relative from Phoenix who is translating for the Ladans. "But he's still a child. He likes to play. When there are children around, he will find those his own age."

Like other kids, Igor loves apple juice and gum and bananas and ice cream, she said. And like other kids, he reveled in the surprise birthday party his new friends in Rochester had when he turned 7 recently.

Igor is taking drugs to shrink the tumor from its tennis-ball dimensions to a size that doctors hope will allow surgical removal in about three months.

The benign but still dangerous tumor at the base of his brain, as well as his unusual size, are caused by an overproduction of growth hormone by the pituitary gland.

Igor seemed normal at birth, according to the family, but by six months, he was the size of a 1-year-old. At one year, he was equivalent to a 3-year-old.

When doctors in Kiev and Moscow had no treatment, Igor's mother wrote to the Red Cross in

The Associated Press

Igor Ladan, 7, with his mother, Svitlana, is already 6 feet tall

Switzerland, which advised her to write to doctors and hospitals in countries such as England and the United States.

"There were times she thought it was the end of the world," said Sahulenko, who is staying with the Ladans in special housing for children undergoing treatment at the clinic.

But letter followed letter, inquiry after inquiry.

"She is a mother," said Sahulenko. "What else could she do?"

The glasnost-era easing of travel and other restrictions on Soviet citizens also helped, she said. "Otherwise he'd never be here."

The family eventually was referred to the Mayo Clinic and Dr. Donald Zimmerman, a pediatric endocrinologist they now call "the miracle doctor."

Because the family lacks money and insurance, Zimmerman asked the clinic to absorb the costs of Igor's care, and a pharmaceutical house agreed to donate medicine.

After the operation, radiation and follow-up drug therapy should complete the removal of the tumor and stop the excess production of growth hormone, a Mayo Clinic spokeswoman said Sunday.

New Exhibit At Smithsonian Asks: Who Wears The Pants?

By Robert M. Andrews
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Bulletin from the sexual war front: Washington businessmen, borrowing an idea from their female colleagues, have begun wearing white running shoes beneath their pin-stripe suits for the rush-hour dash to the subways.

"First it was the women who broke out of high heels, and now the men are wearing running shoes," says Claudia Kidwell, costume curator of a new Smithsonian Institution exhibit titled "Men and Women: A History of Costume, Gender and Power."

Kidwell, a specialist in costumes for the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, is encouraged by this casual abandonment of sexual stereotypes in footwear — high heels for women, stiff wingtips for men — in favor of mutual comfort.

"Those concrete pavements are hard on anyone's feet. Why not wear shoes that take care of them?" she says.

The new exhibit examines the power struggle between American men and women as reflected in the clothing styles they have worn for the past 200 years, from bustles and bloomers to zoot suits and dashikis.

Museum director Roger G. Kennedy says the show is "about the packaging of humans in America, the packaging of careers and the packaging of sexuality in pursuit of those careers."

More succinctly, the exhibit asks visitors the question, "Who wears the pants?"

The answer, in this era of unisex jeans, T-shirts and designer sweats, is less easy to discern than when Henry R. Slocum Jr. wrote of women tennis players in 1889:

"We of the other sex ... admire the woman who ... bravely struggles against the awful handicap imposed upon her, viz., much dress and little strength."

Men still wear pants and women prefer skirts, but Ms. Kidwell and chief curator Barbara Clark Smith encourage visitors to look beyond items of clothing and question the validity of the social "rules" that govern their use.

"Nothing is inherently masculine or feminine about our clothing," Ms. Kidwell said in an interview. "It's just fabric. We give our clothing its meaning." Then it becomes a costume, often a potent symbol of power.

"Any man who doubts the power of those rules can test them by seeing what happens when he wears a skirt," said Ms. Smith. "The reality is that people who break the rules face embarrassment, humiliation and often social ostracism."

The trouble, they said, is that men and women become trapped in the symbols of their differences.

"Pieces of costume represent the assumption that equality is impossible, that one or the other of the sexes is running the show," Ms. Smith said.

"People still feel the need to discriminate visually, to tell the difference between men and women," she said. "They also need to discriminate by treating one sex better than the other. Both kinds of discrimination seem to be very closely connected."

The exhibition uses more than 700 objects and 500 graphics to show the evolution of society's rules and costumes since the 18th century, when wealthy American males wore powdered wigs, silk stockings, lace-embroidered fabrics and silver shoe buckles without fear of being laughed out of town.

Among the items on display are a rare woman's exercise bloomer, corsets, mustache curlers, bustle hoops, Teddy Roosevelt's cowboy chaps and boxer John L. Sullivan's bejeweled championship belt — all erstwhile trappings of masculinity and female beauty.

Ms. Kidwell believes the exhibition will be a success if viewers realize that they can make their own choices, regardless of the gender roles dictated by tradition.

Newsweek Says Comedian Slurred Candidate Earlier

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Jackie Mason, who apologized last week for racial remarks about mayoral candidate David Dinkins, previously used a slur against the black Democrat in talking to Newsweek writers, the magazine says.

Mason called Dinkins "a fancy shvartze with a mustache," Newsweek reported in this week's edition.

Shvartze is a Yiddish word for a black person. It is often considered derogatory.

The Newsweek report followed Mason's resignation last week from Republican mayoral candidate Rudolph Giuliani's campaign amid an uproar over remarks Mason made about blacks in an interview in the weekly newspaper Village Voice.

The Voice quoted Mason, an ordained rabbi, as saying Jewish support for Dinkins was based on guilt because Jews were "sick with complexes."

The Newsweek remark was made almost a month before the Voice article appeared.

Newsweek said that after Mason made his remark about Dinkins to the writers at a luncheon, Giuliani joined in the laughter and didn't rebuke Mason.

Last week, in reacting to Mason's comments published in the Voice, Giuliani said he had never heard Mason speak that way before.

On Sunday, Giuliani denied hearing the remark and questioned the Newsweek article.

"As I recall there were four reporters there. I emphasize that the four reporters did not report it, which means they didn't hear it or they didn't attach any significance to it at the time," Giuliani said.

Charles Perkins, a Giuliani spokesman, said he heard the remark and mentioned it to Giuliani, who told Mason's manager "he thought it was inappropriate and Jackie should be more careful with his language."

IICUC CERTIFIED MASTER CLEANER

A TRIAL SEPARATION?...

Relax! No marriage counseling today...The subject is delamination or the separation of backings on relatively new carpet. Here's the scene—Your carpet seems limp and starts curling up at the edges of seams; or you notice tell-tale ripples in traffic areas; or your cleaner begins cleaning the carpet and it starts to separate at seams, although the secondary backing is still holding together (a tough situation for the cleaner to explain since, "It wasn't like that until you started cleaning!").

So what happened?...

Carpet backings are held together with a combination of expensive adhesives. These backings used to be made of jute, but today are more often made of non-absorbent, synthetic fibers. First problem for the manufacturer is to get the adhesive to bond to the synthetic backing, and then to get the two backings to stick to each other. The second problem involves the manufacturer's efforts to limit the cost of his product; you know—so he can offer quality at a bargain-basement price! Right?...Seems I recall P.T. Bamum having to say something about people who believe they can get top quality for practically nothing...Nevertheless, when "bargain" carpet is manufactured, costs have to be cut, often in areas where they won't be noticed. So the expensive latex is extended with fillers to make a little go a long way. Unfortunately, these diluted formulations break down in a few years, considerably changing the status of the "bargain" you got.

The Solution?...

Enough "doom 'n' gloom"! What's to be done to avoid delamination in the first place? Hate to be the one who breaks the news, but, "there's no such thing as a free lunch; you pay for what you get; price and quality must be combined to equal value, etc., etc." What am I saying?...When selecting carpet, stick with quality retailers who have a reputation for standing behind their products. Big news, huh? Even then, if you notice the signs of early delamination, contact the carpet retailer immediately for an evaluation. Usually, it's easy to pinpoint, and if caught within the first two years, corrective action can be taken under the manufacturer's warranty.

Report Says Gunman Told Worker His Intentions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A retired pressman's murderous schemes were common knowledge at the plant where he returned last month and shot to death eight people before killing himself, according to a report.

Joseph Wesbecker revealed his plans on several occasions to former co-worker James R. Lucas, but the warnings were ignored by other co-workers and supervisors and they were never taken up with management, The Courier-Journal reported Sunday.

Wesbecker, 47, shot 20 of his former co-workers, killing eight of them before taking his own life Sept. 14.

Lucas said the first warning came in late 1987 or early 1988, inside the Standard Gravure Corp. plant, where Wesbecker opened a brown paper sack and showed Lucas a .38-caliber snub-nosed revolver.

Lucas recalls that Wesbecker said he was angry at supervisors: "That if any one of them came up to him and said anything other than what pertained to work-related conversation, that he was going to blow their brains out."

Another warning came just a few weeks ago, Lucas said, when Wesbecker confided the names of six people he intended to kill during a conversation at the kitchen table at Lucas' house.

All had been pressroom supervisors or were managers of the plant. Only one, employee relations manager Paula Warman, was injured in the attack.

Wesbecker, who was placed on long-term disability early in the year because of psychiatric problems, also described putting plastic explosives into a remote-controlled airplane, Lucas said.

Lucas said he believed his tormented friend was serious, and began warning others.

But for a variety of reasons — the airplane scheme's improbability, the frequency of bitterness among Standard Gravure workers, and others' affection for Wesbecker — Lucas said his fears weren't shared by others.

The schemes became common knowledge among pressroom workers and supervisors, but upper management was never informed of it, the Courier-Journal reported.

Prostitution Charges

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — An affluent New York doctor and his wife are facing prostitution-related charges for allegedly conducting a phony research project that included a sex tour of West Coast college campuses.

Rodney Thorp Wood, 60, faces a charge of promoting prostitution while his wife, Nancy Steffen Wood, 44, faces a prostitution charge, Eugene police Sgt. Rick Gilliam said last week.

The couple were to be arraigned later today. If convicted, he faces up to five years in prison and a $100,000 fine, she up to a year and a $2,500 fine.

A 19-year-old University of Oregon student who allegedly participated in a "research" session with the Woods is charged with prostitution.

The Southampton, N.Y., couple visited the Oregon campus two weeks ago, telling male students they were "evaluating the sexual potential of the mature female" for an Oxford University project and would pay participants at least $10 for the encounter, Gilliam said.

Inquiry Shifts To Grudge Angle In Bombing Of Van

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — Federal investigators now believe someone with a grudge against the USS Vincennes' former skipper, not revenge-minded terrorists, may have bombed the van his wife drove, according to published reports.

The FBI probe has shifted its focus to the possibility that the March 10 bombing was carried out by a U.S. citizen, unconnected with the military, who has a personal vendetta against Capt. Will C. Rogers III, The San Diego Union reported today. The paper quoted a Navy official who asked to remain anonymous.

Federal agents have identified such an individual and are checking his alibis, but no further identification or elaboration was available, a Justice Department official said.

The Los Angeles Times quoted four unidentified sources Sunday who also said the FBI probe is focusing on the personal vendetta theory. Two of those sources said the individual being investigated was a U.S. citizen.

The pipe bomb explosion drew national attention because investigators initially interpreted it as terrorist retribution for the mistaken downing eight months earlier of an Iranian commercial jetliner by the Vincennes, an Aegis-class guided missile cruiser commanded by Rogers.

All 290 people aboard the plane died.

Rogers' wife, Sharon, was alone in the van but got out uninjured moments before it was destroyed by fire at an intersection near the couple's home in San Diego, where the Vincennes is based.

Tom Hughes, FBI special agent in charge in San Diego, refused to discuss any aspect of the six-month probe. "We will have the same position we have in any ongoing investigation," he said, "and that is 'no comment.'"

Rogers expressed surprise at the possibility of a personal motive in the attack, saying, "I have not the remotest idea of anyone who would take a personal vendetta against me or my family."

Tip Leads To Arrest Of Man On FBI List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISBURG, Pa. — A man on the FBI's most wanted list for three drug-related slayings was arrested after a viewer of the television program "America's Most Wanted" tipped authorities, the agency said.

Pedro Luis Estrada, 25, was arrested Sunday afternoon as he stepped from his house for his daily bicycle ride, said Wayne R. Gilbert, special agent in charge of the Philadelphia FBI office.

Estrada was ordered held without bail pending an arraignment in Harrisburg today.

Authorities said Estrada was a drug gang enforcer and that the June 15, 1986, slayings were revenge shootings. Two victims were bound by the hands and shot execution style in the throat, said Gilbert.

A fourth intended victim survived the Bronx attack and identified Estrada as one of her assailants, authorities said.

Estrada also was involved in the Aug. 16, 1986, slayings of a suspected drug dealer and a 17-year-old bystander, authorities said.

He was placed on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted fugitives after dropping from sight on Nov. 21, 1986.

Before he got involved with drugs, Estrada was a licensed boxer in New York, the FBI said. His last professional fight was in 1984.

Gilbert said the FBI received several tips about Estrada's whereabouts after "America's Most Wanted" broadcast a segment on the fugitive in February 1988. A tip received Thursday led to the arrest, Gilbert said.

"That verified that we were on the right track," said David J. Malarney, senior resident agent for the FBI's Harrisburg office.

Beached Whales Freed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COVEHEAD, Newfoundland — Rescue crews freed six sperm whales that beached on Prince Edward Island's north-shore national park, but one of the huge sea mammals died.

As a crowd of hundreds watched Sunday, federal fisheries officers sent divers to tie slings, one at a time, around the tails of the creatures, which ranged in length from about 40 to 65 feet.

A jet-ski took the line to a waiting Parks Canada boat, which then towed each whale out about 300 feet then tried to keep it from returning to the beach by circling it.

The shoreside crowd let out a rousing cheer as the first surviving whale blew a high spout of water upon reaching the open ocean.

Fisheries officers said they believed the dead whale drowned.

It was not known what caused the whales to become trapped between two sandbars.

Four Missing Boaters Found Safe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLENHEIM, New Zealand — A 42-foot sailboat missing for almost four months with four men aboard, including an American, washed ashore with all crew members safe, a relative said today.

The three-hulled sailboat overturned in heavy seas in early June and the four survived by collecting rainwater and eating fish, seaweed and apples, said Malcolm Tomes, brother-in-law of the boat's skipper.

The missing boat, the Rose Noelle, washed ashore on Great Barrier Island about 60 miles northeast of Auckland late Saturday, Tomes said.

The boat left Picton, on the northern coast of New Zealand's South Island, on June 1. The crew planned a three-week Pacific Islands cruise that was to take them as far as Tonga.

On board was the boat's owner and skipper, New Zealander John Glennie, an experienced sailor who designed the boat for long-distance cruising; Phillip Hoffman and Rick Hellriegel of New Zealand; and Jim Nalepka, 38, of Minneapolis, Minn., who was in the second of two years as caterer for the Outward Bound program in New Zealand.

Nalepka's sister, Kathy Moynihan of New Brighton, Minn., said her family was overjoyed.

"We never gave up hope. He kept hoping he was safe. ...This is wonderful," she said.

Glennie said today that late on June 3, a strong southerly wind grew to a 60-knot gale.

"About six o'clock in the morning there was a huge wave, and it just flipped the boat upside down," Glennie said.

The Rose-Noelle floated on its crossbeams, with the cabin top about two feet below water, he said. The craft was stable and would not sink unless it had broken apart, Glennie said.

The boat was reported missing on June 24, after it failed to arrive in Tonga. The last radio contact with the crew came on June 9 from near the Kermadec Islands, about 620 miles northeast of New Zealand.

The four survivors, who are all in good health, on Saturday spent their first night on land in 120 days. On Sunday, they broke into an empty cabin, where they found warm clothes.

John Dalmeida, head of the Outward Bound school in Anakiwa, New Zealand, told the Star Tribune of Minneapolis that the four planned to go to Auckland to a hospital for tests.

"I received a collect call from someone named Jim," Dalmeida said. "We weren't going to accept it at first. We don't have a Jim working here anymore...but it turned out to be him. None of us could believe it. He said, 'We're alive.'"

Family Papers Give A Vivid Account Of Hurricane In 1822

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The drawspan on the bridge to Sullivan's Island "spun like a top" when Hurricane Hugo hit Charleston, S.C., the Washington Post reported eight days ago. The story sent Alice Skelley of Annandale, Va., digging through a mass of old family papers for an account she recalled having read of an earlier hurricane on that island. Mixed in with memoirs that reach back some 300 years, these few paragraphs describe a tragedy that took place in 1822 that left more than 300 persons dead. The writer was Charles Manigault (1795-1874). His grandfather was her great, great, great grandfather. He wrote:

Thus in My Desire To Rescue from Oblivion Such things Even Those so painful to us all ... without a Moments Warning, We experienced an over-whelming Affliction! Disclosing to us the Disastrous Death of My eldest Sister "Elizabeth" ... who married & lived in her Native climate South Carolina — Where She was Always healthy cheerful, & contented & the charm of her numerous family & friends. They had on several occasions passed a few summer Months with her Mother at our Country Residence near Philadelphia. But they generally resided in Summer on Sullivan's Island as they unfortunately Did in 1822. During which year the Equenoxial Gale of September proved most disastrous & destructive all long our Coast far & wide, crushing Dwellings, killing their inmates and Drowning those who attempted to escape....

And I now give here Some of The Scenes & Events of That Calamity, amidst which ... (Elizabeth) with 6 of Their Children participated while Passing the Summer of 1822 on Sullivan's Island Where Everything had gone on agreeably then & promising for the future until Towards the close of their intended Summer Visit to the Island When, The atmosphere in early autumn of that year (with No previous hint) became Suddenly Dark, Threatening, & increasing in intensity as The day & night advanced, into a Furious Equinoctial gale Filling The Houses with Rain & prostrating several of Them killing or wounding some of Their occupants. While The Storm was Then at its hight With no indication of its soon Subsiding. For, The Large Wooden Dwelling occupied By Our Family became then overflowed, Shaking fearfully & Threatening To fall to pieces. When Their confidential Family Servant "Rodger" Rushed among them exclaiming in agony That The House Was Then falling to pieces & urged Them to leave it instantly or They all be crushed to Death by The Then Falling Building Which They (all clustered together) Dripping Wet- & shivering with fright & anxiety, which prevailed amongst them all. For The Building was then falling to pieces rapidly around Them. For the Violent Gale which long Continued kept Them Prisoners with faint hopes within But certain Drowning without. And in the midst of Their consternation & Despair, a Large Beam became Disengaged from The upper part of The Building & falling on Those Below which crushed my sister Elizabeth to death In the most horrible manner....

For, at The Slaughter of My Sister Her 6 Children were all near her when her Eldest Son Lewis... 10 years of age was all the time close by the side of his Mother as if to Encourage and protect Her. When Both of Them were killed at the Same Moment By the same falling Beam. The 5 remaining Children Ralph, Harry, Richard, Charles and Little Infant Charlotte... escaped in Safety. (Her Husband) Had Long remained near Her & their Children But afterwards He was covered by the Constantly Falling Ruins & Not Exhumed from The Rubbish until The Following morning which covered Him loosely all Night (so That He could Not move) And He was Taken home bruised & exhausted But No Bones broken And He Recovered Slowly after long Suffering in Mind & Body.

But, These Afflictions Which we hitherto experienced Were Not confined to our own immediate Family. For They extend with fatal Severity To Others of our Kindred For instance —

Our Cousins ... (My Fathers Nephew) And his Wife ... (My Mothers Niece) had sought safety in this House, then occupied by My Sister & her little family. But as Night then spread its dark Mantle o'er this scene of Destruction & Dismay, while the roaring tempest increased and the House now shaking & cracking ... (he) then took his Wife out of it — but seemed not to know Where they could find safety, & now, in the dark, the raging tempest soon tore him & his wife asunder and his Wife was Drowned! in the roaring Waters, which nearly covered the Island. And now, this House was crushed to pieces....

I cannot close This sad Memorial respecting Some of our family without My adding here a few more lines. In Memory of The Little Infant Charlotte. And Her Subsequent Career Thro' life as She Played from Infancy a principal Part in The Tragedy of Events which of Late Years, in various Afflictions have Tried The Energy of Old & Young at our Ever Cherished Southern Homes. The First act & adventure in which This Little Infant unconsciously participated was when in Her Coloured Nurse's arm's Who preserved her safely as long as possible amidst The Dangers & anxieties of The Violent Gale on Sullivan's Island in 1822 While in addition To These horrors The House was Falling all around Them. Her Devoted Nurse however still held The Little Infant in her arms until The Nurse (Herself) was crushed down by one of The heavy falling Beams which Broke Both Her Legs. And though She was attended (as soon as practicable) By an Experienced Physician her Wounds proved so serious, That The Unfortunate Nurse Died soon after. But other Anxieties then engrossed us painfully. Respecting What had Become of The Little Infant? For It was feared She was also kill'd by The falling Beam which killed her Nurse as They Both were seen to fall together while The Infant was still clinging to Her Ever Faithful Guardian & Though Prostrate with Her wounded Nurse. The Infant fortunately fell uninjured. And Now, That Little Infant having attained the 50th year of Her age. She has seen and Done much of late years of interest to herself and others... after Their long Residence on Sullivan's Isld where Death's & all other horrors had so long persecuted them There.

"But, We were living then, in Eventful Times and could Not anticipate what would or would not come next to afflict us...."

Louisiana's $81 Million Bridge Over Mississippi Makes No Connections

By Guy Coates
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAMERCY, La. — Louisiana's monument to the 1982 oil price collapse is an $81 million bridge that is nothing more than an island to be dodged by barges on the Mississippi River.

"I have nightmares of seeing a picture of that bridge in a New York newspaper," complained Gov. Buddy Roemer.

The superstructure of the four-lane bridge had been completed for more than a year when Roemer took office in March 1988. But there were no approaches to the bridge, no way to get on or off.

Construction will resume by the end of this year and by the time the bridge is completed in about four years the state will have spent more than $115 million.

When all is said and done, Interstate 10 on the east bank of the Mississippi River will be connected to a farm-to-market road on the west bank that leads to the town of Thibodaux.

"I would not have proposed spending the taxpayer money to build that bridge," Roemer said in a recent interview. "But we inherited a bridge that was 60 percent complete. I thought it was a symbol of Louisiana — stuck out in the river with no access or egress. It was an embarrassment, a symbol of bad planning. But, we've got to finish that bridge."

Construction was started in 1981 during the administration of Gov. Dave Treen. That was the last year of a decade referred to as Louisiana's embarrassment of riches.

The state became wealthy from the oil boom and even wealthier during the Arab oil embargo of 1973 that sent prices soaring.

With plenty to spend, Louisiana embarked on a frenzy of construction projects.

In 1982 came the oil price collapse. Bonds had already been sold to complete the Gramercy bridge, but there was no money for the approaches.

One of Roemer's first priorities was to find money to finish the bridge even though he did it with clenched teeth.

He shouldn't be worried because the project is needed, said his transportation secretary, Neal Wagoner.

Wagoner also served in the same capacity in the Treen administration and played a key role in getting the bridge built.

Wagoner said the traffic doesn't warrant the need now, but within two decades "people will wonder how we got along without it."

It is the fourth span across the Mississippi between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, and it is not the first to catch criticism.

"Remember the Sunshine Bridge?" Wagoner asked, referring to the Donaldsonville span built by Gov. Jimmie Davis and named for the song he made famous, "You Are My Sunshine."

"It was called a boondoggle in the 1960s, stuck out in a cornfield leading to nowhere," Wagoner said. "That bridge spurred industrial development on the west bank of the river. Can you imagine getting along without it now?"

Birth Of Son With Down Syndrome Gives Them A New Set Of Dreams

Dear Abby: Six months ago, our 22-year-old daughter gave birth to her second son. Within hours of the baby's birth, our lives were changed forever. Our beautiful and apparently healthy grandchild has a condition known as Down syndrome. Our grief was almost indescribable for those first weeks following his birth — and was often compounded by thoughtless but well-intentioned comments from friends and relatives.

We were told: "Cheer up, it could have been worse." "Sue the doctor!" "Look at the bright side; maybe the baby won't live."

We were asked, "Which side of the family is to blame?" And the most ignorant question of all: "Are you going to keep him?"

Many friends tried to comfort us by saying, "God sends such babies only to special parents."

Abby, this baby is special, but not because he is handicapped. We would have loved him just as much had he been born without Down syndrome. Time has eased our grief and enabled us to let go of the dreams and plans we had for this child. New dreams and different plans have taken their place.

Dear Abby

The birth of a handicapped baby is traumatic to the family. Friends and relatives can be a source of comfort and strength. They should acknowledge the baby's birth with appropriate gifts, cards, letters, etc., as they would for any other newborn.

If one is in doubt as to what to say, it is best to remain silent. A gentle squeeze of the hand or a warm hug can speak volumes.

It is my sincere hope that this letter will be of some help to those who may find themselves in this frightening and unpredictable situation. — Been There In Bridge City, Texas

Dear Abby: Thank you for an enlightening letter.

Dear Abby: Congress passed a bill naming October as National Down Syndrome Awareness Month. As the parent of a 2-year-old daughter with Down syndrome, I'm excited about the opportunity that awaits us to better educate people about children and adults with this condition.

The most common clinical cause of mental retardation, Down syndrome occurs in approximately one in 800 births. It is the "fault" of neither parent. It is caused by the presence of an extra chromosome ("normal" people have 46; Down people have 47) at the moment of conception.

There is so much confusion about this, Abby. Many people have asked me if I had taken drugs or alcohol during my pregnancy. Neither of them plays a part in Down syndrome. Also, I am frequently asked if I am over 40 (I was only 26 when I became pregnant).

As we educate, perhaps we can dispel many myths and misconceptions of not only Down, but many other disabilities as well. We want everyone to know that most of our children grow up to be happy, productive adults with very rewarding lives.

There is plenty of concern, understanding and education for families of developmentally disabled children and adults. I joined a local support group when our little one was only 4 weeks old. Some parents connect even earlier. If any of your readers would like information about support groups, early intervention and education, medical aspects and financial help with Down syndrome, they should contact the National Down Syndrome Congress, 1800 Dempster St., Park Ridge, Ill. 60068-1146. The toll-free telephone is (800) 232-6372. — Peggy Keller, Co-Chairperson, Down Syndrome Parent Group Of Burlingame, Calif.

HOGS: The trend is 25 to 75 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 45.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 45.25; Wilson 45.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 37.00; Wallace 38.00; Spivey's Corner 38.00; Rowland 38.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 48.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 97 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 46.43. The market is lower and the live supply is fully adequate to ample for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina on Monday was 2,027,000, compared to 2,193,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 4 cents lower, mostly 2.38-2.58 in East and mostly 2.53-2.68 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 2 to 19 1/2 cents lower at 5.78-5.93 in East; wheat mostly 3.64-3.69; new crop soybeans 5.38-6.63; P.I.K. certificates steady and ranged from 100 to 104 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, getting off to a sluggish start on the last quarter of 1989.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.89 to 2,698.71 by 11 a.m. on Wall Street.

Losers slightly outnumbered gainers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 555 up, 598 down and 535 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 40.59 million shares at midmorning.

Analysts said prices backtracked a bit in the absence of the end-of-quarter buying by investing institutions that helped support the market last week.

They said the atmosphere was characterized more by an absence of demand than by any pickup in selling pressure.

Refugees Converge

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "We are pleased that these refugees are being allowed access to the West. It looks like the officials there are taking a responsible approach in trying to help these people get to the West."

In mid-September, East German's Communist leaders registered fierce protests when Hungary's liberal leaders opened their border to the West and thousands of East Germans fled.

The exodus through Hungary continued overnight. Border authorities in Bavaria reported 1,051 new arrivals by early today. In all, about 2,000 refugees fled through Hungary during the weekend, officials said.

West German government spokesmen disclosed that Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze played an important role in winning the refugees' release from Prague and Warsaw during the weekend, and said Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has been in touch with Bonn by telephone throughout the continuing refugee saga.

Gorbachev is expected in East Berlin to help commemorate 40 years of Communist rule in a country that has already lost more than 100,000 people to the westward exodus this year.

The Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda today devoted almost all of its fifth page to feting the East German anniversary and said not a word about the refugee exodus.

In Bonn, Chancellor Helmut Kohl's chief of staff, Rudolf Seiters, issued a new appeal today to East Berlin to agree to the release of refugees at embassies in Prague and Warsaw.

Fair Set To Open

through Friday. Passes must be used by 6 p.m. and are only permitted on the designated days.

Fair officials, confident that patrons will approve of the changes made to the exposition, say they are expecting record attendance this week.

The Winchester Stock Barn, which was named posthumously for longtime fair manager Sam Winchester, will be a new attraction. It will house horses and cattle.

The Main Exhibit Building will house exhibits from Pitt County and across northeastern North Carolina that pertain to agriculture, homemaking, education and science and industry. Area businesses will also provide exhibits.

Free attractions, including The Great Bear Show from The Ringling-Barnum Circus, will be scattered all over the fairgrounds. Fair officials say the bear act has not appeared at any other fair in the state and features 10 bears including polar bears, Syrian brown bears and European bears.

Other free attractions include Jack Kitchman's Hollywood Stunt World along with the Monster Crusher presented on Wednesday and Thursday at 7 p.m.

On the midway, Amusements of America will have over 35 rides and shows on the fairgrounds. Also, over 65 food and game concessions will be scattered throughout the fairgrounds.

Former Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger Dies

ROSS PERSINGER

AYDEN — Former Ayden Mayor Ross Slader Persinger, 71, died this morning in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

His funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Ayden Christian Church by Dr. James Daily. Burial will be in the Ayden Cemetery.

A native of Richland, W. Va., he had lived in Ayden since 1953. He was a retired employee of E.I. DuPont Co. and part-owner of Happy's Antiques of Ayden. A World War II veteran, he was a member of the Ayden Christian Church.

Persinger served as mayor of Ayden from 1964 to 1972 and from 1973 to 1985. He served as an Ayden commissioner from 1958 to 1960. During and following his 20-year tenure as mayor, Persinger served as president of the MidEast Commission; president of the Pitt County Mayors group; Ayden's representative on the North Carolina Eastern Power Agency Board, vice chairman and a member of the board of directors of the National League of Cities Energy and Environmental Commission and a member of the board of directors of the N.C. League of Municipalities.

Surviving are his wife, Happy Persinger; two sons, Jim Persinger of Ayden and David Persinger of Long Island, N.Y.; a sister, Ruth Ab-salom of Virginia Beach, Va.; seven grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Farmer Funeral Home in Ayden.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Ayden Rescue Squad.

A tornado touched down in a mobile home park near Moultrie, Ga., on Sunday, killing trailer park residents Joyce Carter, 45, and 2-year-old Brittany Thomas, injuring 12 and destroying a church and social hall.

At least nine mobile homes were destroyed by the tornado, which cut a 10-mile path through the south Georgia countryside, said Colquitt County Sheriff Billy Howell.

After demolishing the mobile home park, the twister tore up a stand of timber and then flattened the Bethlehem Schley Baptist Church and the church's social hall.

Strong winds that may have been a tornado chased residents from their homes Sunday night in Fairview and Swan Lake southeast of Atlanta, authorities said. A count of the evacuees was unavailable.

About 80 families were evacuated from homes around Mountain Island Lake near Charlotte, N.C., by rising waters Sunday night. Water washed into yards and into some homes, authorities said.

tion, that the drug is poorly absorbed into the bloodstream and shows little promise of fighting the AIDS virus.

Researchers in 1987 discovered that dextran sulfate prevented the human immunodeficiency virus, HIV, from invading the T-cell lymphocytes, a type of immunity cell that the AIDS virus normally attacks.

Following those reports, AIDS patients clamored for the FDA to allow them to import the drug from Japan, where it was used as an anti-clotting agent. Dextran sulfate's use has not been approved by the FDA.

The drug has been imported from Mexico and Japan during the past two years by "buyers' clubs" organized by people infected with the virus. Last May, the FDA approved the drug for use in limited clinical trials.

Major League's Second Season Ready To Begin Oakland Expects Struggle Against Toronto In ALCS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Despite winning a major league-high 99 games and the American League West, the Oakland Athletics found the 1989 season to be a struggle.

They don't expect the playoffs against Toronto to be any different.

The A's took over first place last season on April 20 and never looked back on the way to a 13-game lead and a four-game sweep of Boston for the pennant.

This season, Jose Canseco, Dennis Eckersley, Walt Weiss, Mark McGwire, Storm Davis and Bob Welch all spent time on the disabled list and the A's spent most of the season in a dogfight with Kansas City and California.

"It was definitely different," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "I think winning this year had a deeper satisfaction."

The A's never won more than seven games in a row, and until the Angels and Royals slumped a bit the last two weeks of the season, Oakland never led by more than 4½ games.

"Everybody did their job and some of the guys who didn't play much last year came through," designated hitter Dave Parker said.

In the end, the Royals and Angels could not match the A's pitching.

Dave Stewart won 21 games, Mike Moore and Davis each had 19 victories and Welch added 17.

The Blue Jays' top winner was Dave Stieb (17-8) followed by Jimmy Key (13-14).

"It starts with the pitching and defense," La Russa said. "You've got to stop the other club first. That's the golden rule of sports."

The A's like their pitching matchups with the Blue Jays and nobody can match Oakland's power punch.

Canseco and McGwire are the only players in baseball history to hit 30 or more home runs in each of their first three seasons.

But the A's are worried about speedy Mookie Wilson.

"He's been the main difference for Toronto," Parker said. "Mookie's a little like Rickey Henderson. He's an exceptional base runner. You've got to try and keep him off base. He can score on anything."

Wilson, 33, was the player to be named later from the New York Mets for pitcher Jeff Musselman, and his presence has made the Blue Jays a more aggressive team.

"Mookie has been in this situation before and he brought an enthusiastic, winning attitude with him," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said.

"It's going to be a hell of a series, because they're a lot like us," La Russa said. "You don't look forward to their starters, and you don't want to get into their bullpen. Offensively, they're not one-dimensional."

The A's won seven of 12 games against the Blue Jays, but the teams haven't played since July 16 when Wilson was still with the Mets.

"Wilson is really the only different guy," La Russa said. "I don't think they're any different. It's the Blue Jays we've seen the last couple of years."

"They have a lot of ways to beat you. I'm not woofing, playing Lou Holtz. They're a good club."

Holtz, the coach of Notre Dame's top-ranked football team, is renowned for downplaying his team's abilities, even after a 40-point victory.

The A's start finding out just how good they are in Game 1 at Oakland Tuesday night, when Stewart is scheduled to start against Stieb.

"I've got a good idea about Toronto," Stewart said. "They do a good job of putting the little guys in front of the big guys."

The Blue Jays' "big guys" are George Bell and Fred McGriff. But McGriff, who seemed certain for a 40-homer season, slumped badly the last month of the season.

"It would help a lot for Fred to get going again," Gaston said. "But unexpected things happen in short series. It's not always the guys you expect."

Former Reliever To Start Opener For San Francisco

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — While everyone is still trying to figure out how Kevin Mitchell became so good, maybe someone should study teammate Scott Garrelts, too.

Garrelts, for those who haven't seen the stat sheets, led the National League in earned-run average this year. Not Orel Hershiser or Mike Scott or any of those New York Mets.

This is the same Garrelts — sort of — who led the San Francisco Giants in saves for four straight seasons. He's gone from stopper to starter and, for those who didn't notice, he's pretty good at it.

"Leaving spring training, if somebody said Scott Garrelts was starting the first game of the playoffs, everybody would've started laughing," Garrelts, including himself in that bunch, said Sunday.

Well, it's no joke. Garrelts will pitch Wednesday night against the equally surprising Chicago Cubs and 19-game winner Greg Maddux at Wrigley Field.

Exactly how Garrelts went from 5-9 with a 3.58 ERA last year to 14-5 with a 2.28 ERA this season is uncertain. But opponents batted just .212 against him, so he's doing something right.

Mitchell, though, is drawing more attention. He had hit 53 home runs in three full seasons before leading the majors with 47 this year, along with 125 runs batted in.

Mitchell and Garrelts each say increased confidence helped bring improved consistency. And, as is often said, success tends to bring more success.

"These guys around here, they can taste it," Mitchell said. "We've got the team to do it. We've got the chemistry."

Mitchell, Garrelts and the Giants thought the same thing in 1987. They led St. Louis three games to two in the playoffs, only to lose the last two games.

Neither Mitchell nor Garrelts was particularly effective in that series. Mitchell batted .267 with one home run in 30 at-bats. Garrelts pitched 2 2-3 innings in relief, allowing two runs on two hits and four walks.

The Giants and Cubs split 12 games this season and each is intent on making up for some dismal postseason failures.

The Giants have not been in the World Series since 1962 and haven't won it since 1954. The Cubs have not been in the World Series since 1945 and haven't won one since 1908.

Chicago was one victory away from the Series in the 1984 playoffs before losing three straight to San Diego. Ryne Sandberg, the only everyday starter left from that Cubs team, thinks this one might be better prepared.

"In every situation I've seen us get into this year, we've managed to win," Sandberg said. "All season long, we've been able to do it. That should help us."

Sandberg hit .368 in that playoff loss and was later named the league's Most Valuable Player. This year, he batted .362 against the Giants, although none of his career-high 30 home runs came against San Francisco pitching.

Mitchell homered twice against the Cubs and drove in seven runs, but hit just .189. In a real surprise, he hates to hit at Wrigley Field.

"I just don't like to play there," he said. "I don't feel comfortable at that place."

Brister, Steelers Spoil Peete's Debut

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rodney Peete's NFL debut was the things dreams are made of — for Bubby Brister, that is.

Brister completed a team-record 15 consecutive passes and hit 21 of 27 for 267 yards, including a 49-yard touchdown strike to Louis Lipps, as the Steelers defeated the Detroit Lions 23-3 Sunday, ruining the debut of Peete.

The 15 straight completions topped the Steelers record of 13 by Bill Nelson set in the 1966-67 seasons. The team's previous one-game record was 11 by Mark Malone in 1984 against San Diego.

"I didn't know how many I had," Brister said. "I didn't care because it didn't matter I just wanted to win."

A sixth-round draft pick out of Southern Cal, Peete had been sidelined with a knee injury sustained in exhibition play. Against the Steelers, last year's runner-up in the Heisman Trophy balloting completed 15 of 30 passes for 160 yards with one interception before being replaced late in the third quarter.

"Rodney was rusty," Detroit coach Wayne Fontes said. "His knee was sore and we didn't think he was as sharp as we wanted, so we decided to sit him down before he lost confidence."

In other NFL games Sunday, it was Green Bay 23, Atlanta 21; Cincinnati 21, Kansas City 17; Cleveland 16, Denver 13; Indianapolis 17, the New York Jets 10; Houston 39, Miami 7; Buffalo 31, New England 10; Washington 16, New Orleans 14; Minnesota 17, Tampa Bay 3; San Diego 24, Phoenix 13; Seattle 24, the Los Angeles Raiders 20; the New York Giants 30, Dallas 13, and the Los Angeles Rams 13, San Francisco 12.

Tonight, Philadelphia is at Chicago.

Steelers 23, Lions 3
Pittsburgh's defense came up with three sacks, two interceptions and recovered two Detroit fumbles. The Lions gained only 18 of their 240 total yards on the ground.

All four Pittsburgh scores came off Detroit turnovers. The Steelers improved to 2-2 while the Lions, who have yet to win either an exhibition or a regular-season game with their new run-and-shoot offense, are 0-4.

Detroit rookie running back Barry Sanders, slowed by a hip pointer sustained a week ago, gained only one yard on five carries and lost a fumble. He sat out the second half.

"It's tough any time you lose a football game, and we haven't won a game yet this season," Peete said. "But you can't throw in the towel. We have to believe we're going to turn it around and go up to Minnesota next week and beat the Vikings. We're not going to quit."

Browns 16, Broncos 13
Matt Bahr's 48-yard field goal on the final play of the game gave Cleveland (3-1) its first victory over Denver since 1974. In that stretch, the Browns had lost 10 straight games to the Broncos (3-1), including AFC Championship games after the 1986 and 1987 seasons.

Bahr kicked with the wind after the two teams were asked to change ends of the field early in the fourth quarter. The referee made the switch after the Broncos, pinned at their own 4, were pelted with debris thrown by Cleveland fans.

This was Denver's first trip to Cleveland since John Elway's famous 98-yard drive that tied the 1986 AFC championship game and helped the Broncos to a 23-20 overtime victory. On Sunday, Elway completed just six passes, the fewest since his rookie year in 1983.

Rams 13, 49ers 12
A 26-yard field goal with two seconds to play by Mike Lansford tied the Los Angeles Rams past San Francisco and foiled another 49er fourth-quarter comeback. The Rams remained unbeaten at 4-0.

The 49ers (3-1) had taken a 12-10 lead on Mike Cofer's fourth field goal, a 17-yarder with 8:53 remaining. San Francisco was driving toward an apparent insurance score when Kevin Greene recovered Tom Rathman's fumble at the Los Angeles 19 with 2:59 remaining in the game.

Jim Everett then marched the Rams 72 yards in nine plays to the San Francisco 9, where Lansford connected on his second field goal of the game.

Redskins 16, Saints 14
Chip Lohmiller kicked three field goals and Gerald Riggs ran nine yards for a touchdown as Washington (2-2) beat New Orleans (1-3).

Morten Andersen, the most accurate kicker in NFL history, missed two field goals for New Orleans, including a 36-yarder with 2:34 to play. He also missed a 52-yarder.

The Saints led 14-0 before Riggs' third-quarter touchdown and the first of Lohmiller's field goals.

Giants 30, Cowboys 13
Phil Simms overcame three interceptions with two touchdown passes, and the Giants ran their record to 4-0, their best start in 21 years. The winless Cowboys are off to their worst start since 1963.

The Cowboys also lost rookie quarterback Troy Aikman with a fractured left index finger on an 8-yard scramble in the first quarter. Steve Walsh finished for Dallas.

Colts 17, Jets 10
Clarence Verdin returned a punt 49 yards for the winning touchdown as the Indianapolis Colts (2-2) overcame a 10-point New York lead. New York is 1-3.

Verdin's touchdown came a little more than a minute after Dean Biasucci's 39-yard field goal tied the score.

Jack Trudeau, subbing for the injured Chris Chandler, threw a 55-yard third-quarter touchdown pass to Billy Brooks, cutting New York's lead to 10-7.

Bengals 21, Chiefs 17
Linebacker Leon White picked up a fumble and ran 22 yards untouched and almost unnoticed to score a fourth-quarter touchdown and boost Cincinnati (3-1) over Kansas City.

The Chiefs (1-3) led 17-14 when Christian Okoye ran around right end and was tackled. Players on both sides thought the play was dead.

But, all of a sudden, there was White standing in the end zone with the ball. Officials said White stripped Okoye of the ball before the play ended.

Fate's Hand Delivered Pirates To A Tie With Tech

Monday Quarterback:

Fate, that fickle entity, played a large role in Saturday afternoon's 29-29 tie between East Carolina and Louisiana Tech.

And while no one likes a tie, the Pirates, after trailing 26-14, probably should consider themselves lucky to have come away with the deadlock.

They had their chance to win, after rebounding for a late 29-26 lead, but with 1:44 left in the game, they had scored too soon. Tech had the opportunity to move the ball back down the field.

Finally, facing a fourth and one at the ECU 22, the Bulldogs elected to go for the tie and kicked a field goal. ECU's desperation pass on the final play of the game was intercepted in the end zone.

There are positives that came out of the game, however. The Pirates, who were completely handcuffed for two quarters in the game by Louisiana Tech's defense, finally broke the chain and moved the ball enough to score in the final quarter. But Tech's blitzes and pressure defense throttled them throughout the second and third periods, limiting the Pirates to minus yardage on the ground and not much more through the air.

East Carolina completed the first period with a total of 147 yard in total offense. The Pirates went into the final quarter with a total of 167, just 20 more. They had thrown for 32 yards in that span, losing 12 on the ground.

It's hard to remember when a Pirate team has ever been held that firmly in check.

Nevertheless, the Pirates kept their heads up and fought on and finally got the break they needed, the blocked punt that swung momentum back their way and nearly pulled it out.

Too many times in recent years, a Pirate team that has been under the same kind of adversity would have folded its tents, crept back into the locker room and been content with the defeat.

But Bill Lewis seems to have instilled a different approach in this team. They don't like to lose and don't want to lose. Apparently, they will fight to the final second to try and pull out a victory.

And, as I said earlier, fate definitely had a hand in the outcome, with several key decisions that led to the final score.

First, after Louisiana Tech scored to take a 19-14 lead with 7:25 left in the third period, Bulldog coach Joe Raymond Peace elected to go for two points. That would have forced ECU to go for two on its conversion, had it scored to close the gap, in order to win. But the Pirate defense pulled quarterback Gene Johnson down as he attempted to find a receiver for the two-point conversion. Obviously, in retrospect, it was a key play in the game.

Secondly, when a punt is blocked in the end zone, it usually sails backwards out of the field, a safety. But when Donald Porch, who had come so close on several other kicks, finally blocked one, it went downward into the turf and bounced back up. Robert Jones was able to run under it and grab it when it came down for the touchdown. That closed it to 26-21.

Had a safety resulted instead, the Pirates would have trailed 26-16 — and victory would have, with 9:22 left in the game, been near impossible.

Thirdly, the Pirates, after scoring with 1:44 left, elected to go for two of their own — to force Tech in the time remaining to go for the touchdown to earn a victory. Sophomore quarterback Jeff Blake, who had replaced Travis Hunter and led the team back, lofted a high-arching pass to Charlie Tyson, who made the grab for the conversion.

Then, it was up to Peace once again to make the decision and he felt that his team had played too well to take a chance on not winning. The field goal tied it up and that was that.

Three decisions and one lucky bounce of the ball brought the game to its fateful finish. Had any one of these been altered in the slightest, it would have been a different game.

Lewis had warned before the game that Tech would be the toughest opponent this far, well above those teams the Pirates had already faced. He was also worried about Tech's four-man front — and it proved to be a headache for the Pirates.

But now, the Pirates will face an even tougher task. They travel to the University of South Carolina, fresh off a 24-20 upset of the University of Georgia Saturday. And that came between the hedges, not in more friendly Brice-Williams Stadium.

Formidable, to say the least. The Pirates must remember how close they came a year ago and how far they've come. Certainly, they will be decided underdogs Saturday — but favorites don't always win.

Ryan Will Pitch Another Season

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Nolan Ryan says, barring an injury or a strike, he will pitch another season for the Texas Rangers.

"For me to come back is not just to get another year in, but to maintain my stuff and have another productive year," Ryan, 42, is quoted as saying in today's Dallas Times Herald.

"I don't think it comes as a surprise that I'm coming back," Ryan told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "The longer I go, the more convinced I am that as long as I keep myself in good shape, I should be able to perform."

Ryan will be guaranteed $1.4 million for 1990 under terms of the option clause included in the contract he signed with Texas in December. Ryan said Sunday he would formally announce his plans during a news conference today at Arlington Stadium.

General Manager Tom Grieve has said it is "a foregone conclusion" that the Rangers want Ryan back next season.

Ryan said he didn't seriously consider another season until mid-August — about the time he reached his record 5,000th strikeout.

"I really thought until the last six weeks this probably would be my last year," Ryan told the Times Herald. "I had prepared myself going into spring training and during the season for it to be (the final season)."

He said the decision to play another season was based on two factors.

"It came down to the kids," said Ryan, who with his wife has two sons and a daughter living in his hometown of Alvin. "They were the ones who were pushing, who wanted me to come back."

"I had been in Houston for nine years, and this year I was away, disrupting their lives. That's why I was concerned about it. But they enjoyed it so much they wanted me to come back."

"My other question was how would I hold up physically, and I haven't had any problems."

Ryan retired the first 22 California hitters Saturday in a three-hit, 2-0 victory to close out his season. The right-hander needs only 11 victories to become the 20th pitcher to win 300 games.

This season, Ryan:

- Won 16 games, equaling his best total since 1977. He took no-hitters into the eighth inning five times and held the opponents to a .187-batting average, the lowest in the major leagues.

- Passed the 5,000-strikeout mark, finishing with a major-league leading 301, a figure that has been reached only 22 times, six of those by Ryan.

- Set a club record with 301 strikeouts, averaging 9.4 per start and 11.3 per nine innings, the third-best ratio ever.

Yankees' Polonia In Court Today

MILWAUKEE (AP) — New York outfielder Luis Polonia, who pleaded no contest six weeks ago to a charge of having sex with a 15-year-old girl in a Milwaukee hotel, faced sentencing after the Yankees completed their season.

Polonia, 24, due in court today, could receive a maximum penalty of nine months in jail and $10,000 in fines on the misdemeanor charge.

Milwaukee County Circuit Judge Thomas Doherty postponed sentencing Aug. 22 so that he would have more time to study a pre-sentence report.

Polonia has been free on $5,000 bond.

Under Wisconsin law, an adult may not have intercourse with a child under the age of 16, even if the child consents.

Polonia, in Milwaukee for a series between the Yankees and Milwaukee Brewers, was arrested Aug. 16 at the Pfister Hotel by police investigating a report that the girl was missing.

The complaint said the girl accompanied Polonia back to the hotel after the game. According to the complaint, the girl told authorities she and Polonia had intercourse twice, once before the girl's mother called the hotel and talked to the player and again after the phone call.

The complaint said the girl told authorities that, after Polonia answered the call, he asked her if she was a minor and "she indicated that she was and she believes that she may have told him that she was 16 years old."

Polonia said in the complaint that he was told by one of the girl's friends that she was 19.

Assistant district attorney John DiMotto said the charge against Polonia was issued because Polonia had sex with the girl after being informed she might be a minor.

He said the misdemeanor charge was issued because the girl's family said she did not want to testify in court.

The girl is now 16.

Baseball Sets Attendance Record

NEW YORK (AP) — Major League Baseball set an attendance record for the fifth consecutive year in 1989, drawing 55,173,750 fans for an increase of almost 2.2 million.

The American League drew a record 29,848,782 fans, up from the previous record of 28,499,636 set last year. The National League drew a 25,324,963, up from 24,499,268 of 1988 and topping the previous record of 24,734,155 that was set in 1987.

The previous record attendance for the majors was 52,998,900 last year. This year's total was 4.1 percent higher.

Holly Farms 400 Postponed Until Oct. 15

NORTH WILKESBORO (AP) — Steady weekend rain forced postponement Sunday of the Holly Farms 400 NASCAR stock car race to Oct. 15.

NASCAR and North Wilkesboro Speedway officials made the decision early Sunday as rain continued, turning the parking lots surrounding the five-eighths-mile track to mud.

Qualifying also was rained out on Friday and Saturday, but the 32 starters will line up for the 400-lap, 250-mile race on the basis of this week's car-owner points. Therefore, Dale Earnhardt and Rusty Wallace, locked in a battle for the Winston Cup championship with five races remaining, will start the race from the front row.

NASCAR said there will be practice Oct. 14, with the race scheduled at 1 p.m. the following day.

The Winston Cup series is scheduled to run next weekend at Charlotte Motor Speedway, about 90 miles away.

U.S. Defeats Japan In Dunhill Cup

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Mark Calcavecchia had an 11-under-par performance for the final 36 holes as the three-man United States team defeated Japan 3½-2½ in the 16-nation Dunhill Cup on Sunday.

After Tom Kite split his morning match with Joe Ozaki, the Americans needed only one win in the three afternoon matches. Calcavecchia provided that with a seven-stroke victory over Hajime Meshiai. Calcavecchia had topped Meshiai by a stroke in their morning match.

Curtis Strange defeated Koichi Suzuki in the morning and lost to Naomichi Ozaki in the afternoon. Suzuki edged Kite in the afternoon.

England beat Ireland 2-1 for third place.

Britton Captures First PGA Victory

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Bill Britton won his first PGA tournament without having to lift a club when the final round of the $750,000 Centel Classic was rained out on Sunday.

Britton took a 4-stroke lead with a 9-under-par 63 on Saturday and finished 54 holes with a 16-under 200.

Ronnie Black finished second at 204 and Gary Hallberg was third at 205.

Daniel Wins San Jose Classic

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Beth Daniel shot a one-over-par 73 for a one-stroke victory over Pat Bradley in the $350,000 LPGA San Jose Classic on Sunday.

Vicki Ferguson finished third at 209 and Cindy Mackey fourth at 210.

Charles Eases To Space Coast Seniors Title

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — Bob Charles shot a 67 for a 203 total and a six-stroke victory in the $300,000 Space Coast Seniors Classic on Sunday.

Butch Baird finished second at 209. Larry Mowry and Harold Henning tied for third at 210.

Lendl Powers Past Sanchez

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — Ivan Lendl powered his way to his 81st Grand Prix victory, beating Emilio Sanchez of Spain 6-2, 6-2 in the Passing Shot tournament on Sunday.

Puckett, Gwynn Win Batting Titles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kirby Puckett became the first right-handed batter ever to lead the majors leagues in hits in consecutive years.

The Minnesota Twins outfielder went 2-for-5 Sunday and beat out Oakland's Carney Lansford to win his first American League batting title, 339 to 336. "Last year, I thought really had a shot when I hit .356, but I ended up losing by 10 points," said Puckett, who this year ended Wade Boggs' streak of four consecutive AL titles. "I feel good about doing it this year. A lot of people don't have any batting championships and now I can say 'I got mine.'"

Puckett finished with a major league-leading 215 hits. He is only the eighth player to lead in hits in consecutive years, and the first right-hander.

"A lot of people said I was having a bad year because I didn't hit as many home runs," said Puckett, whose home runs dropped from 24 to nine. "But every year you are not going to be able to do the same things. This is a tough game and even the best players can't repeat their performances every season."

Lansford was the last right-hander to win the AL batting title, doing it in the strike-shortened 1981 season. The last right-hander to win it in a full season was California's Alex Johnson in 1970.

"He probably deserves it more than I do," Lansford said of Puckett. "He puts those numbers up, 200 hits, every year. He plays on turf, and even if you get tons more hits on the turf, physically, I couldn't play every day on the turf like he does."

In the National League, San Diego's Tony Gwynn overtook Will Clark and became the first player since Stan Musial to win three consecutive NL batting titles.

Gwynn went 3-for-4 and finished with a .336 average as the San Diego Padres beat NL West champion San Francisco 3-0. Clark, trying to become the first Giant to win a batting title since Willie Mays in 1954, went 1-for-4 and finished at .333.

"I ended up winning it but that doesn't take anything away from Will's year," Gwynn said. "And he's going where I want to go: the playoffs. I'd gladly trade this to go where he's going."

Musial, a seven-time batting champion for the St. Louis Cardinals, won consecutive titles from 1950-52. The only other NL players to win three straight batting crowns

The Associated Press

Tony Gwynn (left) and Kirby Puckett emerged batting champions for the 1989 season are Honus Wagner (1906-09) and Rogers Hornsby (1920-25).

"I lost to the best," Clark said. "There's no ill feelings at all. He got 'em to fall and I didn't. That's the bottom line. You've got to tip your cap to him."

Boggs, who did not play Sunday and finished third in the AL batting race at .330, led the majors in doubles for a second straight season, hitting 51. The Boston third baseman also became the first player ever to get 200 hits and 100 walks in four consecutive seasons.

Kevin Mitchell of San Francisco won his first home run crown, finishing with 47. Fred McGriff of Toronto won the AL title with 36, one more than Cleveland's Joe Carter. McGriff did not homer in his final 24 games after Sept. 4.

"It's been fun. It's something I can look back on," Mitchell said. "Every day I go out there and I try to do better than before. It's seem like I haven't done nothing. I want to go out and do more. Winning is more important than any kind of stats."

Home runs decreased for a second straight season in 1989, falling 9.7 percent to 3,083. It's a dropoff of 30.8 percent from the record total of 4,458 hit in 1987.

There were 1,365 home runs hit in the NL this year, a 67 percent increase from last year but 25.2 percent less the record 1,824 hit in 1987. There were 1,718 home runs in the AL, a 9.6 percent decrease from last year and a 34.8 percent dropoff from the record 2,634 of 1987.

The batting average in the AL this season increased two points to .261 while the NL decreased two points to .246.

In addition to the home run title, Mitchell also won his first RBI crown, leading the majors with 125. Ruben Sierra of Texas won the AL RBI title with 119.

Rickey Henderson of Oakland led the AL in steals for the ninth time in 10 seasons, finishing with 7. The Cardinals' Vince Coleman stole 65 bases and became the first NL player to win five consecutive crowns since Maury Wills of the Los Angeles Dodgers won six in a row from 1960 through 1965.

Bret Saberhagen of Kansas City led the majors in victories with a 23-6 record and earned-run average at 2.16. Houston's Mike Scott led the NL with a 20-10 record and Scott Garrelts of San Francisco led the NL in ERA at 2.28. Orel Hershiser of the Dodgers was second at 2.31, allowing one run in 11 innings Sunday against Atlanta.

Nolan Ryan of Texas, at age 42, led the majors in strikeouts with 301, becoming the oldest strikeout champion. It was Ryan's seventh AL strikeout crown and his first since 1974.

Green Bay Rallies Again...

Vikings 17, Buccaneers 3

Tommy Kramer came on for the injured Wade Wilson and threw two touchdown passes, and Minnesota's defense held Tampa Bay's Vinny Testaverde to 82 passing yards. Leo Lewis caught a 28-yard touchdown pass and returned a punt 65 yards to set up a field goal for the Vikings (2-2). Tampa Bay also is 2-2.

Kramer, Minnesota's starter from the time Fran Tarkenton retired after the 1978 season until the 1987 season, passed for 190 yards. Wilson broke a finger on his left hand in the first quarter.

Oilers 39, Dolphins 7

Houston's defense held Miami's Dan Marino to a career-low 103 passing yards and intercepted him twice. Marino left the game with 11:29 to play, having completed just 11 of 29 passes.

Warren Moon completed 19 of 23 passes for 254 yards and two touchdowns in the victory. Moon's passing helped set up four Oilers scores, including field goals of 32, 40 and 32 yards by Tony Zendejas.

Miami is 1-3.

Seahawks 24, Raiders 20

Dave Krieg's 19-yard touchdown pass to Brian Blades with 9:58 to play gave Seattle the lead for good. Krieg, hitting 22 of 31 passes for 227 yards, had two touchdown passes.

Blades caught seven passes for 113 yards.

The touchdown was the second for Seattle in the fourth quarter. Curt Warner scored on a 6-yard run with 14:02 left, capping an 80-yard, 10-play drive.

Packers 23, Falcons 21

Rookie Chris Jacke's 22-yard field goal with 1:42 left capped a 17-point fourth-quarter for Green Bay (2-2). The Falcons (1-3) led 14-6 at the half and 21-6 after three quarters.

Jacke's winning kick was his third field goal of the game.

Chargers 24, Cardinals 13

Rookie Marion Butts' 2-yard touchdown run with 13:53 to play put San Diego ahead for good. Linebacker Billy Ray Smith returned a fumble 15 yards for another score one minute later as the Chargers rallied past error-prone Phoenix.

The victory was the second straight for the Chargers (2-2), while Phoenix (22) lost its second consecutive game.

Bills 31, Patriots 10

Thurman Thomas scored two touchdowns and had 204 yards in total offense for Buffalo (3-1). Jim Kelly threw for three touchdowns in the first half.

Thomas scored on a 4-yard touchdown run and on a 74-yard touchdown pass. He had 105 yards rushing and 99 in receptions.

Doug Flutie, who replaced Tony Eason as New England's quarterback, finished with 15 completions in 41 attempts for 176 yards and one interception as the Patriots dropped to 1-3.

Player Of The Week

Farmville Central faced one of its biggest challenges of the season Friday when the Jaguars entertained Plymouth in a matchup of two undefeated 2-1 teams. But junior quarterback and safety Morris Foreman was more than up to the challenge in keying a 22-6 non-conference victory and for his efforts he is The Daily Reflector Player of the Week.

Foreman, a safety, was part of a Jaguar defense that had the unenviable task of trying to contain the passing of Viking quarterback Shawn Walker, who had thrown for 15 touchdowns and 874 yards coming into the game.

Walker threw for 192 yards against Farmville, but only got in the end zone once.

On the other side of the ball, Foreman guided the Farmville offense to 22 points by passing for 123 yards and rushing for another 60. He scored the first touchdown of the game on a two-yard run.

Foreman also set up the Jaguars second score by returning a punt 50 yards to set up an eight-yard scoring run by Rassel Daniels.

Prep Honor Roll

•Roanoke's Levy Jones: Jones, a junior tailback, piled up big numbers for the second week in a row by rushing for 229 yards in a 26-8 win over Ayden-Grifton. Last week, Jones rushed for 310 yards against Chocowinity.

•Greene Central's John Dixon: Dixon, a senior fullback, ran for 142 yards on 16 carries while totaling three touchdowns as the Rams rolled over South Lenoir, 26-6.

•Washington's Brian Jones: Jones, a senior quarterback, passed for 187 yards and one touchdown as the Pam Pack rolled over Southeast Halifax, 34-0.

•Washington's David Williams and Damien Moore: Williams, a fullback, had 111 yards rushing while Moore, a tailback, totaled 106 in Washington's 34-0 win over Southeast Halifax.

•Chocowinity's Mike Laws: Laws, a senior fullback, was the lone bright spot for the Tribe in a 40-12 loss to North Edgecombe thanks to a 122-yard rushing performance.

•D.H. Conley's Tim Carman: Carman, a senior defensive lineman, helped the Vikings preserve a 7-6 win over Havelock by recovering a fumble to set up his team's only touchdown of the night. He also had a 21-yard sack of quarterback Vincent Norris on a third-and-nine play at the Conley 13 that ended a drive for the Rams.

•Rose's Anthony Love: Love, a junior fullback, ran for 115 yards and one touchdown in the Ramblers' 27-6 win over Kinston.

•Rose's Columbus Grice: Grice, a junior quarterback, passed for 83 yards and two touchdowns in Rose's 27-6 win over Kinston.

It's Buddy Vs. Mike, Part IV, Tonight In Bears-Eagles Clash

CHICAGO — On the field tonight, the battle will be between the Philadelphia Eagles and the Chicago Bears. Along the sidelines, it will feature coaches Buddy Ryan and Mike Ditka.

Under Ryan, who left the Bears as defensive coordinator after Chicago won the Super Bowl in 1986 to become head coach in Philadelphia, the Eagles have yet to defeat Ditka's Bears.

The Bears have whipped Ryan's Eagles three times, once in regular season play, once during the strike and 20-12 last year in the "Fog Bowl" playoff game.

That the two coaches dislike each other is no secret. But Ditka, who said he was "elated" when Ryan left, has kept quiet about the feud.

As for his players, Ditka said, "Most of these guys don't know him personally. They only know him as head coach of the Eagles."

And of the older players who were on the team when Ryan was an assistant, Ditka said they are "too mature" to be concerned about such matters.

Ryan, however, was angered this past week when he received a T-shirt inscribed with the Bears' rallying cry "Whatever It Takes."

After making some disparaging remarks about what could be done with the shirt, Ryan took some rips at Ditka.

"There never was a relationship between him and I," Ryan said. "He's not my kind of people anyway."

Ryan also intimated that Ditka had never gotten over the fact that the late George Halas, longtime owner of the Bears, rehired Ryan before he hired Ditka as head coach.

Although the Eagles are 2-1 after blowing a big lead to San Francisco last Sunday and the Bears are 3-0, Ryan said, "I think we're a better football team than they are. I thought we were last year and we're a better team this year than last year."

The Bears have never lost to the Eagles at home, going 12-0 overall — 7-0 in Wrigley Field, 1-0 in Dyché Stadium and 4-0 in Soldier Field.

Laurie Anderson: Avant-Garde Artist Who's Still Avant-Garde

By Mary Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Laurie Anderson became America's best-known performance artist in the early 1980s. And, unlike some avant-garde artists, with whom the mainstream catches up, she's still avant-garde.

She opens the Brooklyn Academy of Music's Next Wave Festival on Tuesday with a piece called "Empty Places," which she premiered this year at the Spoleto Festival in Charleston, S.C.

"Empty Places" has Anderson on stage singing without a band. Screens on two 20-foot towers show computer-controlled slides and film. Images range from grim homelessness to bluebirds of happiness.

"I love the way pictures and music can be made to work together," Anderson said.

"It's never one of my goals to be a cutting-edge artist. I think of myself working in the world's oldest art form — storytelling. There's nothing new about that. The trick is, how do you tell a good story?"

"I suppose my goal in 'Empty Places' is to describe how much the world seems to me to have changed in the last few years. It tries to describe suffering and people's ideas of utopia," she said.

"This is going to look very different than things I've done before. I have absolutely no interest in whether they're avant-garde or not. Of course artists don't want to bore people and it's important to invent things. I love things that are surprising and shocking; I actually consider it a kind of responsibility to do things not in a usual way."

A new Laurie Anderson record, "Strange Angels," which she worked on for two years, will be released by Warner Bros. on Oct. 24. Seven of its songs are in "Empty Places." Anderson will tour the show, starting in December in Canada, returning to the United States in February.

She has changed the show since Spoleto.

"There were a few 'head-scratchers' in there," she said. "I love things that are puzzling in good ways. I had to take out a couple that were just plain puzzling. I kind of ripped the whole show apart."

Then she got sick and spent time visiting doctors. "I went to Rio to do a concert; there were eight people in my group. From eating fish, quite a few of us got one of these strange new poison ocean diseases that nobody knows very much about and can't fix very easily. I got the version of being completely dizzy. We're all a lot better than we were."

"I'm putting the show back together. It is becoming a lot more political than it was before. The more I look around and also try to understand what this particular piece is about, the angrier I get, mostly with things that not too many people seem to be really talking about."

"Everybody in New York knows what it's like to walk out and see six people lying in their little sidewalk dormitory. It was just so odd that nobody talked about that in a coherent way in the last elections. You look around at the eight years that Reagan created and it is so horrifying to see the results of this rampant 'gimme, gimme' economy," she said.

"I'm really trying to look at that from a few different angles. I'm in the midst of redefining the introduction. It is places that I've shot pictures of, mostly in downtown New York. They're not exactly ruins but they look like it."

"That has been one of the nicest things about working on this piece," Anderson said. "I go out at night a lot, real late, and shoot a lot of places. I've shot thousands of things for this piece, slides, moving images and films that were sent through a visual digital computer and look very grainy. It's a beautiful look."

"Stories work so much better at night and these aren't exactly bedtime stories. I find some of them kind of horrifying. People have drifted into the shots. It's a whole different world from midnight on out there. It's making me feel at home in New York in a way I never have before."

The show also has some cheery animation. "I was trying to make a real cartoon with all these screens. I thought, 'I need some Disney-type bluebirds.' Bluebirds make me happy. I drew them on the computer, with picket fences and roses. There are songs about Utopia."

Are they ironic?

Laurie Anderson

"Some of them are; some aren't," she replied. "Irony is a really tricky thing. I try to use irony sparingly. I'm doing a lot more singing in this show. I find I can say ironic things but I can't sing ironic things."

Actress Could Dance Down Aisle To Marry Major Dad

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — All the world loves a lover, particularly the Nielsen-family world. So tonight, Shanna Reed will wed Gerald McRaney on CBS' Marine Corps sitcom, "Major Dad." Odds are the ratings will be up.

This is because marriage, even in a sitcom, is a serious step.

But if the script called for it, Reed, who essays a widow with three daughters, could sing and dance her way down the aisle with McRaney's hard-nosed, soft-hearted Corps character, Maj. J.D. MacGillis.

At 17, she was in the chorus line of a Gay Paree show in Las Vegas. A few years later, she was playing Kristine, then Judy, in the national touring company of Broadway's still-running musical hit, "A Chorus Line."

One Broadway musical called "Dancing" later, she was starting life new as an actress in "Texas," an NBC soap opera. Such is the nature of TV that the show was taped in Brooklyn.

"They told us no Texas accents," she reports. "It makes you wonder."

A tall, lithe, hazel-eyed woman with a happy-go-lucky manner, Reed was born in Kansas and raised in Arizona, first in Phoenix, then Scottsdale, then Paradise Valley. She is no stranger to big families or show business.

She was one of six kids in her family, she says, when Tommy Reed, a big-band leader who became her stepfather, proposed to her mother. A seventh child was born of that marriage.

All this, plus the life of a chorus gypsy, plus acting studies with teachers from New York's Neighborhood Playhouse and Actors' Studio, readied her for the Great Adventure of 1981 — moving to Los Angeles.

"I like an adventure," she says. "I'm a sucker for a challenge. I had money saved and I thought, 'I'll give it a year, or one big job, and then I'll go back.'"

She stayed, save for a memorable trip back here in 1983. That was for the night she and some 300 present and former "Chorus Line" players, dashing on and off stage at the Shubert Theatre, all reprised their roles in the show as it broke the record for Broadway's longest-running musical.

That extravagant evening was much like a family reunion, says Reed, even though some of the clan that night had played in the show in such off-Broadway locales as Tokyo, London, Berlin and even Stockholm.

She had been touring with it in Philadelphia when she decided it was time to leave what for 17 months had been her family. Her first months in Los Angeles proved a different matter altogether.

She had an agent, and lived with one of her sisters. But she didn't know anyone else in town, she says. She also found it a paradoxical place.

Even though actors there come and go so quickly it is said Mario Andretti drives the welcome wagon, Reed discovered that TV producers and casting directors wanted to be sure she'd stay put before they'd talk roles.

"You have to make them believe that you're going to stay there for awhile beyond the (series) pilot season," she says. She did that but continued her stage work, acting in five plays in Los Angeles.

As she had hoped, she landed TV work. Her dossier includes "The Colbys," "Cheers," "Newhart" and two movies about dancers, "Legs" and "Mirrors."

She landed co-stardom in "Major Dad" after one get-acquainted interview with the producers in which they just talked, and then three auditions.

After she got the job, she also hung out at a newspaper for a while, watching reporters at work. This is because her mother-of-three character, Polly Cooper, also is a reporter for a fictional Southern California newspaper near the big, real Marine base, Camp Pendleton.

As a journalistic courtesy, Reed, when interviewed at the headquarters of The Associated Press here, was invited to write a news story. She sat down at one of the computers that reporters use nowadays.

Farmville Arts Center Unveils Theatre Additions

A Review

The Farmville Community Arts Center officially unveiled the new additions to its theatre Thursday night with a rollicking presentation of Larry Shue's farcical play, "The Nerd."

The opening night audience was treated to backstage tour of the new additions to the facility — an extended wingspace, a large area for set construction and storage, three restrooms, and two dressing rooms...

Director Doug Mitchell assembled a high-spirited cast for this irreverent farce that was originally on Broadway in 1986. Mitchell's direction produced a show that was fast-paced.

The title character — the nerd, "Rick Steadman" — is taking a break from his job, traveling around on his unemployed brother's credit cards. His job? A chalk inspector at a chalk factory ("It sounds cool but it's really not"). This guy's idea of the perfect Christmas gift is a "Mr. Microphone."

The play centers around Rick's visit to the home of architect Willum Cubert. This Nerd is an unlikely hero of sorts. In Vietnam he rescued a wounded Willum from the Viet Cong. Though Willum never saw his benefactor's face, he feels indebted to him. They've corresponded all these years and this visit finally unites them. "The Amityville Horror," as one character puts it, has arrived.

Eric Shine had the title role, and he gave it his non-stop all. Never letting up for a minute, Shine creates a character that would drive even the most stalwart of us crazy. Truly "A poster child for Planned Parenthood," as one character says.

Jay Brumeloe did not disappoint as the hapless Willum. He was fine as the architect who thinks his life is falling apart because he's losing job contracts and his girlfriend is moving away. But he realizes his life was a bed of roses compared to life with "The Nerd."

The show is full of wacky characters with even crazier names. There's Willum's would-be-weathergirl lady-love Tansy (nicely played by redhead April Wainwright) and his pal Axel, the theatre critic, which was performed right on target by Wayne Harris who had some of the show's wittiest lines.

Shelton Chesson was hilarious as "Ticky," one of Willum's clients and the comic foil for a lot of the show's jokes. Newcomer Bobbi Harmon was just right as the timid Clelia, "Ticky's" wife, a teacher of "slow learners" who lets out her frustrations by neatly breaking things. And as their son, Thor, Walker Bradham added new meaning to the term "spoiled brat" in a small but memorable role.

The production did have its few flaws — some muffled lines coming from a telephone answering machine that plays a significant part in the events, especially in the surprise twist at the end — some of the characters lines were also lost from speaking too quickly or too loudly.

One audience member asked me "Does this play have a plot?" Well, not really. It's not for the strictly serious theatre-goer, and the script is not as cohesive nor the characters as well-defined as in Shue's previous play, "The Foreigner."

A final word about the Farmville Community Arts Center, which was formerly the old Paramount movie theatre. It's the most charming community theatre facility I've ever seen. With flashing marquee lights, elegant lobby, and its red carpet literally rolled out Thursday night, it presents the perfect image of a "mini-Broadway." It's a theatre of which Farmville can be very proud.

The Family Circus By Bil Keane

"We're starting a newspaper. You can be in it if you do something exciting."

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Oct. 3
ARIES (March 20 to April 17): You can put your best talents to use on your business deals today. Your most income will be derived from smaller sums today and you can put in effect that new plan you like at home.
TAURUS (April 18 to May 19): Your vacation will be more than usually pleasant for you today. Don't get in a business deal with an unreliable friend.
GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Don't let a thoughtless fellow home owner hurt your feelings today. Avoid spending more than you can afford on social pleasures.
MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Stop procrastinating and pitch in and do those house repairs awaiting your attention. Your financial affairs should now be on the up and up.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You now find that you can get rid of long time and limiting tasks. Your popularity will reach a new high with your friends.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Don't take as gospel all you are told to do to improve your financial situation. Pursue in a balanced manner any business dealings of importance.
LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Don't put in effect a new business deal until it has been thoroughly tested. A big wig will now extend to you an important social favor. Accept.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You are all fired up to and should put new ideas in effect at work. Accept social invitations, even though you are not with the friends you most want to be with.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Now is a good time to advance yourself with a business contact. See your attachment and go along with the invitation extended by a couple who like you.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Your judgment in how to use money you have earned is now excellent. Consult both friends and advisors as to your future course in business.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Resentment at the projects you have to do should be carefully suppressed. A day to entertain those who are having troubles in your home.
PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Do your home repairs now so that your neighbors will applaud you. New ways to make money now are in your consciousness.

Bridge

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ
Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A7 ♥QJ762 ♦AK1032 ♣A
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ 2 ♣
 4 ♥ 4 ♣ Pass Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—At rubber bridge, it's probably right to take your sure profit by doubling four spades. At duplicate, you have a real headache—your penalty might not compensate for the game. We would bid, and our choice would be a natural five diamonds, to give partner a choice of contracts.
Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠73 ♥1042 ♦AKJ4 ♣AJ108
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 NT Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—Because of your no trump rebid, partner's two hearts is not forcing. Since you have already advised partner of the shape and strength of your hand, your duty now is to elect your preference between his suits. Your hearts are clearly better, so pass.
Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠73 ♥1042 ♦AKJ4 ♣AJ108
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 NT Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—You are on the borderline between a pass and a raise to three no trump. Although we like to be rather conservative at this vulnerability, our support for partner's diamond suit tilts us in favor of three no trump. You have a probable source of tricks in diamonds.
Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A9852 ♥Void ♦J10753 ♣852
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Dbl ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—From your point of view, you can't be sure your side can beat six hearts! Your spade length detracts from partner's defensive capabilities, but makes your hand attractive for offense. Jump to four spades to make it as difficult as possible for the opponents to get into the auction.
Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K107 ♥K98 ♦J652 ♣J53
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
 A.—Avoid raising partner's minor with weak four-card support if you can find any alternative. Here, your hand is no trump in shape and you have an honor in every suit. A response of one no trump describes your hand to a tee.
Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K107 ♥K98 ♦J652 ♣J53
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
 A.—Avoid raising partner's minor with weak four-card support if you can find any alternative. Here, your hand is no trump in shape and you have an honor in every suit. A response of one no trump describes your hand to a tee.

Drug Suspect Deported By Ecuador

By Tom Wells
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Ecuador says it has deported a top drug suspect to Colombia and Bogota newspapers report that the army seized guns and cash at the home of another reputed cocaine kingpin.

"Drug traffickers should know that they can't hide in Ecuador," Andres Vallejo, that country's Interior Minister said in Lago Agrio, Ecuador.

An official statement released in Quito late Sunday said suspected drug dealer Evaristo Porras Ardila was sent back to Colombia earlier in the day but gave no details.

Porras was ranked No. 8 on a list of traffickers who were most-wanted in Colombia's 6-week-old war on the nation's cocaine cartels.

He is not, however, among the 12 Colombians the United States wants extradited to face drug charges. None of the 12 has been captured.

Porras was arrested in Quito, Ecuador's capital, on Wednesday, according to the government statement. Since 1987, he had lived in that country under an assumed name and was president of Ecuamer, an import-export enterprise, the statement said.

Vallejo earlier said Porras was to be sent to the border, where he would be met by Colombian police. The Bogota daily El Tiempo reported that four detectives were sent to bring Porras back to Colombia.

El Espectador, another Bogota daily, quoted an unidentified police official as saying 500 officers and soldiers tried to capture another major trafficking suspect in a raid Saturday 50 miles north of the capital.

But as the army and police closed in, two helicopters flew away from the suspected hideout of Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, the newspaper said.

Rodriguez Gacha, 42, a leading figure in the Medellin cocaine cartel, is on the U.S. Justice Department's list of the 12 mos-wanted drug figures. He faces drug-trafficking, conspiracy and racketeering charges in Florida and New York.

The cartel is headquartered in Colombia's second-largest city of the same name. The Medellin and Cali drug cartels are thought responsible for 80 percent of cocaine entering U.S. markets.

Saturday's raid was near the town of Pacho, where troops last month seized 18 ranches belonging to Rodriguez, El Espectador said. Police seized $196,000 in burlap bags and 40 guns, El Espectador said.

Train Plows Into Truck; 4 Die

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — An Oslo-bound passenger train collided with a truck and derailed on Sweden's west coast this morning, leaving four people dead and 22 injured, police said. All the derailed cars were sleepers.

The train had originated in Hamburg, West Germany and the collision occurred at Varobacka, 25 miles south of Goteborg at 7:10 a.m., said police spokeswoman Marina Larsson said.

She said the identities and nationalities of the victims had not yet been established.

"The engine is standing beside the rails and the four first cars have derailed and overturned," Jan Sjostedt, head of the rescue operation, said on the Swedish Radio.

A local radio reporter, Mats Wetterlund, said the train driver survived the accident. He quoted the driver as saying he had desperately tried to catch the truck driver's attention before plowing into the vehicle.

Wetterlund said there was virtually nothing left of the truck, which was crushed and caught fire. It was assumed one of the dead was the driver.

Police, firefighters and ambulances were sent to the accident site from Varberg, just south of Varobacka. The injured were taken to the town's hospital, police said.

The train carried nine cars, most of them sleepers, said Alf Tornberg, head of the information department at the Swedish State Railways in Goteborg. He said the derailed cars ere all sleepers.

Israel Seeks U.S. Aid In Resettling Soviet Immigrants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Israel has asked the United States for $400 million in housing loan guarantees for about 100,000 Soviet Jews expected in the country now that Washington has tightened its visa rules, officials said today.

Some dwellings probably will be in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, Israeli officials have said. There is concern that settling Jewish immigrants in the West Bank could stall Middle East peace efforts.

The funding request was made by Finance Minister Shimon Peres, who returned Friday from a trip to Washington, ministry spokesman Arieh Greenblatt said.

It will cost an estimated $3 billion to educate, house and employ the immigrants, Greenblatt said.

He said that about one-third that total would be sought from the United government, $600 million dollars might come in donations from American Jews and $400 million dollars through U.S.-guaranteed loans.

The guarantees would allow Israel to borrow money from commercial banks at low interest. U.S. law limits loan guarantees to $25 million per country per year.

Simcha Dinitz, chairman of the quasi-government Jewish Agency, which helps resettle refugees, told Israel radio today that some 100,000 soviet immigrants were expected over the next three to five years.

Questions have been raised about whether Israeli plans to settle some of the immigrants in the occupied West Bank might interfere with Middle East peace efforts.

Israel has occupied the West Bank — home to one million Palestinians and 70,000 Jewish settlers — since the 1967 Middle East war.

Israeli Housing Minister David Levy recommended in June that new immigrants be put in West Bank settlements.

But the U.S. has repeatedly called on Israel to stop settlement activity there, a major issue in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Savimbi Wants U.S. To Take More Active Role In Peace Effort

By George Gedda
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Angolan rebel leader Jonas Savimbi is calling on the Bush administration to take a more active diplomatic role to head off the possible collapse of peace talks designed to end the 14-year old civil war in his homeland.

Savimbi said Sunday he will carry that message to President Bush, other senior administration officials and congressional leaders this week. He said a stronger U.S. role is appropriate in light of the long history of U.S. diplomatic activity in the area.

"The United States knows the players," said Savimbi, head of the UNITA rebel group.

Angola seemed on the verge of a peace settlement in June when representatives of the leftist government and of Savimbi's U.S.-backed rebel movement reached agreement on a cease-fire and on negotiations intended to lead to national reconciliation.

But the truce broke down in August, with each side blaming the other, and the situation has been aggravated during Zaire-mediated talks by profound differences over what constitutes national reconciliation.

Savimbi, speaking with two American reporters on Sunday, reaffirmed his view that a settlement can come about only through the creation of a national unity government whose main task would be to arrange for free and fair elections.

The government of Angola, meanwhile, has said reconciliation should consist mainly of the rebels' integration into the existing political and military establishment.

Savimbi also said he was prepared to meet with a high-level Angolan Foreign Ministry delegation, which is due to arrive here on Wednesday.

However, in the talks mediated by Zaire, the two sides have refused to negotiate in the same room. Adding to Savimbi's frustration is the perception among some that Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko has embraced the Angolan government's view of the requirements for peace.

On Sunday, however, Savimbi declined to criticize Mobutu, concentrating his fire instead on the Angolan government.

The Soviet Union has been Angola's chief supplier of military equipment. Cuba has had troops in Angola since 1975 but in December agreed to withdraw them by 1991 as part of a U.S.-mediated settlement. The United States has been providing military and other assistance to UNITA since 1986.

Savimbi said election processes are being used to bring about change in countries as diverse as Poland and Namibia, where South African colonial rule is ending, and he said elections are the only guarantee of peace in Angola.

"The power has to come from the people," he said, adding that he is confident the majority of Angolans are on UNITA's side.
