Going To The Hospital May Mean Loss Of Nursing Home Bed

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When a nursing home patient is transferred to a hospital, his family often is faced with the dilemma of either paying to keep his nursing home bed or risking the loss of it.

The way things are, in terms of both finances and bed shortages, the nursing home has no obligation to hold a bed for an individual. Indeed, it has an obligation not to hold a bed, but to open it to the next appropriate patient.

Some 98 cent of today's nursing home residents are either Medicaid or Medicare clients and the law makes it clear that health care at two places will not be paid for by either of these two entities, according to Sandy Hall, Pitt County Memorial Hospital's director of discharge planning.

Placement of a patient in a home other than the one of his family's choice can often be upsetting for all involved, said Terry Fuller, Greenville Villa nursing home social services director. It's also upsetting, she said, for the professionals who must go by the rules, even as they sympathize with the people involved.

"We feel very sympathetic," Mrs. Fuller said. "And we go to bat for our people in every way we can. But we have to look seriously to see if there is another patient to take any bed that is vacated. And we always have a waiting list, both inside and outside the facility."

Mrs. Fuller said she can hold a bed as long as the patient is kept in the emergency department of the hospital. "And once they go into a regular bed at the hospital, we can still hold off a few more days," she said. "We figure it would take a while to process a new client into our facility or to process a move from, say intermediate care to skilled care, so we try to use that time in favor of the old patient instead of working on a new admission."

"Once it's clear that the patient is going to be at the hospital awhile," she said, "I get on the telephone and talk to their families. I do everything I can to see that the bed is held."

A family ensuring that a bed is kept must pay the per diem price of the bed for the number of days it must be saved. Mrs. Fuller would not cite prices, saying they vary according to level of care.

"Of course, many families cannot do this," Mrs. Fuller said, "but we do everything we can to get our own back as quickly as we can, even if they have to go elsewhere for a short while. We see ourselves as a Pitt County nursing home and we seek to keep our people here."

The Martin General Hospital board went on record in late August as being disturbed about the Medicaid policy which requires nursing homes to let go of beds so quickly.

"It's costing individuals and it's costing us all through high health care costs," George Brandt, Martin General Hospital administrator, said. "We have Martin County people who are well enough to leave sitting in the hospital waiting for a ... nursing home bed. The general public needs to let it be known that this situation shouldn't exist."

But what can the general public do? Not much, according to Ms.

Hall. "Medicaid and Medicare policy is very clearly stated. And one or the other is the billpayer for virtually every nursing home patient," she said.

How is Pitt County Memorial Hospital addressing the problem? "We have a Matrix Team," Ms. Hall said, which meets weekly to oversee, and discuss problems related to discharge planning. It is composed of the social work director, the manager of the department of quality assurance-utilization review, the financial counseling department manager and myself, with Paul Jensen as the liaison from administration.

"We meet every week and talk about our discharge policy, but we also review the cases of any patients who are presenting problems which make them difficult to place either in their homes or other facilities. These people are usually very medically sick, often with pressure sores, on ventilators, or any other ways demanding of lots of care. We have to work very closely with their physicians," she said.

"One thing that would help the overall situation," said Dr. Michael Vernon, director of the Geriatric Division of the East Carolina University School of Medicine's Department of Family Practice, is more nursing home beds. Vernon said he understands that the state Department of Facilities Services has recently approved 60 more nursing home beds for Pitt County.

"And it's none too soon," he said. "It will still take about a year and a half to get them built. And they're needed right now."

Shots Fired At Noriega Command

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY — A heavy exchange of gunfire broke out today at the Defense Forces headquarters and continued into mid-morning.

It was not immediately clear if there had been an attempt to overthrow the Defense Forces' chief Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who controls the country.

Soldiers of the Defense Forces' Urraca unit, which guards the headquarters, surrounded the facility and kept reporters about 100 yards away, but shots could be heard.

Helicopters of the U.S. military's Southern Command also were seen in the area.

There was no confirmation of casualties, but neighbors of the headquarters in Panama City told The Associated Press there were dead and wounded. A press spokesman at the headquarters said he had no information on the shooting.

Neighbors, who insisted on not being identified, said they heard both small arms being fired and bursts of automatic weapons.

Neighbors and reporters saw three ambulances leave the headquarters compound, but it was not immediately clear whether they carried casualties.

The Red Cross, which is located a few blocks away, said the military inside the compound had not asked for any help.

However, a source there, who insisted on anonymity, said the headquarters had summoned a number of doctors working in public hospitals and other government health organizations to the compound.

Shooting began with a few bursts of fire shortly around 7 a.m. (8 a.m. EDT) and was continuing intermittently three hours later.

East German children play at refugee camp in Giessen, West Germany, as parents check in

Refugees Hurt

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — About 250 East Germans stormed across police lines into the West German Embassy today, and witnesses said some refugees were injured. East Germany blocked citizens from traveling to Czechoslovakia in an effort to stem the flow to the West.

Until today, East Germans needed neither a visa nor a passport to travel to Czechoslovakia. The state news agency ADN said that effective immediately, such documents would be required. That will effectively block ordinary citizens from going there.

The ADN dispatch said the move was based on reports indicating "that certain circles in West Germany are preparing provocations in conjunction with the celebrations of our 40th anniversary" on Saturday.

ADN did not say anything about changes in travel to Poland, where East Germans have also holed up in the West German Embassy. East Germany currently need government permission to travel to Poland.

In another development, the Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda accused West Germany of interfering in East German affairs by allowing its embassies in Prague and Warsaw to grant asylum to refugees.

"Political leaders of West Germany have made naked attempts to interfere in the internal affairs of sovereign East Germany," Pravda said.

East Germany during the weekend reluctantly allowed 7,000 of its citizens who had holed up in the embassies in Poland and Czechoslovakia. Thousands more East Germans subsequently converged on those embassies to follow their countrymen.

East Germany said the initial exodus was a one-time occurrence and demanded that West Germany expel the thousands of other would-be emigres who subsequently converged on the missions to follow their countrymen to West Germany.

Washington Water Has Traces Of Carbon Tet

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — While residents are still unable to use city water tainted by high levels of trihalomethane, state health officials have determined that carbon tetrachloride in the town's primary source of drinking water poses no health danger.

After conducting tests last week on the city's water, technicians from the state Division of Health Services in Raleigh found only small amounts of carbon tetrachloride, a cancer-causing chemical which researchers have also linked to some birth defects.

State scientists and city officials decided last month to test the water for carbon tetrachloride after dangerously high levels of trihalomethane, another cancer-causing chemical, were found in it during a routine analysis.

"Both our results and the city's results were well below the allowable limits," said Debbie Crane, public information officer for the DHS. "We think this is a very good analysis, very accurate data."

Ms. Crane said EPA regulations allow 5 parts per billion of carbon tetrachloride in water. She said the highest level found in Washington's water was 2.6 parts per billion, recorded at the elevated water tank on Third Street.

Other test results revealed only 2.2 parts per billion recorded at Oakdale Cemetery, 1.6 parts per billion at City Hall, and 1.2 parts per billion on Third Street at the bridge. All other samples showed less than a part per billion, Crane said.

Ms. Crane said state technicians gathered water samples from 10 different sites in Washington and sent the samples to Raleigh to be tested for the presence of carbon tetrachloride. She said the city of Washington also conducted tests for the chemical, taking water from the same sites and sending those samples to the Oxford Laboratory in Wilmington for testing. Results from the two laboratories were very similar, she said.

Bruce Radford, Washington city manager, expressed relief at the latest findings.

"We did not have a single test that showed levels higher than EPA allowed levels," Radford said. "We are very pleased with the results."

As a precaution, Radford said the city will continue to test for carbon tetrachloride in its water for the next few weeks.

Meanwhile, the city is still providing untainted drinking water to its 9,000 residents who were told last month to stop drinking and cooking with the water after excessive amounts of trihalomethane were found in it.

Officials say the bulk of the safe water is coming from Washington's Slatestone groundwater well site, which state health officials have declared free of dangerous amounts of the chemicals.

Water from the Slatestone well is also available from the elevated water tank, facilities at Oakdale Cemetery and on Third Street at the bridge.

At Radford's request, the U.S. Marine Corps in Jacksonville has also brought water wagons into the city and stationed them at key locations to provide residents with drinkable water.

Carbon tetrachloride and trihalomethane are byproducts created when the chlorine Washington uses to purify the water taken from Tranter's Creek reacts with naturally occurring organic humic and fulvic acids.

The city is searching for ways to reduce trihalomethane levels, but state scientists say a permanent solution could be years away.

Citizens Protest Vote On West

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Some residents in the Cherry Oaks neighborhood are angry at the Pitt County Board of Education.

About 25 of them went to the board's meeting Monday to ask it to reconsider a Sept. 18 vote to deny Superintendent Edwin L. West Jr. renewal of his contract.

Some of the residents said they will vote against a $25 million bond issue for school construction Dec. 12 if the board does not satisfy their concerns about stability in the school system.

"When a board displays this kind of judgment on Dr. West and does not justify its actions, how can I have faith in the board's ability to wisely spend $25 million?" Jim Nedlonek said. Nedlonek was one of six Cherry Oaks residents who expressed concerns about the board's leadership of the school system and asked it to rehire West. Neighborhood residents decided at a meeting Sunday night to go to the board with their concerns, Nedlonek said.

The board's Sept. 18 action took people by surprise because they were not kept informed of what was going on, the chairman of the D.H. Conley High School advisory council said. "I cannot see why you all voted the way you did two weeks ago," Wayne Vincent said. "I cannot see why people weren't made aware of what was going on."

Many people in the Grifton area also support West. George Saleeby said. "We in the Grifton area feel strongly that we do have the best superintendent in the state," he said.

Saleeby, a former chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Party, questioned whether the board's move was political because no reason has surfaced for its decision.

"I was amazed with the awards that he's received that the board did not renew his contract," Saleeby said.

Other speakers supported the board's decision not to renew West's contract. "I think you need to know there are a lot of us here who support what you've done," Stephen D. Blades said.

Blades, a former chairman of the Greenville K-6 advisory council, criticized the media for a "one-sided and biased" attitude toward the board's work.

Another speaker, Mary Aleszter, said the board made its decision on West fairly and deserves to be supported.

Board members also defended their action. Chairman George E. Williams said the board carefully considered its options and made a decision based on the best interests of the students of Pitt County. The board is committed to providing the best education possible for those students, he said. "There's no doubt in my mind that this board of education takes this responsibility seriously," he said.

Williams praised West for innovative and creative leadership during his tenure as superintendent.

"My concern is just getting the children educated," board member Mary L. Williams said in an interview after the meeting. She said she voted to deny West a new contract because she felt it was in the best interest of the children of Pitt County to do so. However, Ms. Williams would not discuss specific reasons why West should not continue as superintendent.

"When you're talking about personnel you can't go into specifics because confidentiality is involved," she said.

Ms. Williams criticized those who plan to vote against the bond referendum because of the board's decision. "Our system is bigger than Dr. West," she said.

Fair Wet But Open

Only half the rides were up on the midway for opening night and some cars got stuck in the rain-soaked fairgrounds, but patrons still flocked to the Pitt County American Legion Agricultural Fair on Monday.

"Considering the weather, we had an excellent night," said Fair Manager Elvy Forrest. "We opened as planned and everything went just fine."

Forrest said many of the midway rides could not be set up Sunday because of the wet weather. Some rides were late getting to Greenville from Fayetteville, because Fayetteville had also received a lot of rain, he said.

Forrest said that with improved weather conditions today, all the rides should be set up by tonight. "They should all be up and we'll be running at full speed."

A few people got their cars stuck in the mud Monday night, but fairground workers were able to get them all out and there were no major complaints about it, Forrest said.

Admission to the fair is $3 for adults and $2 for children. Children with school passes are admitted free on Monday through Friday. Passes must be used by 6 p.m. and only on the designated days.

In The Area

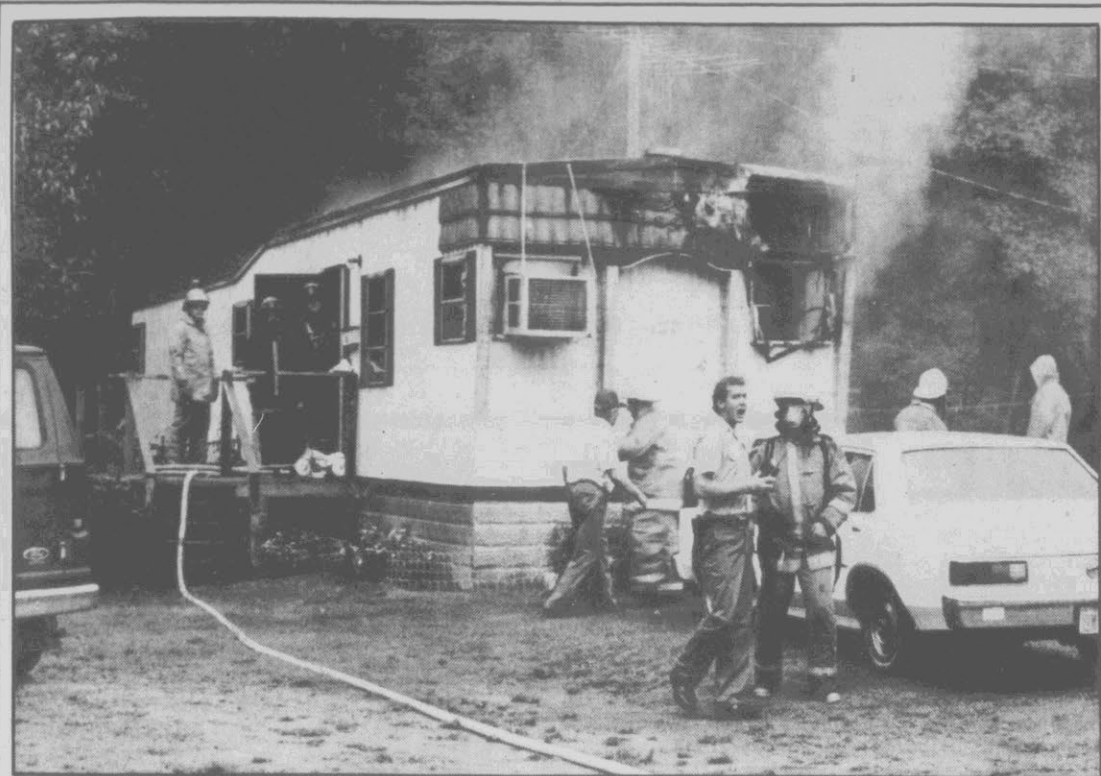

Monday Thefts

Investigators said seven thefts were reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer M.E. Hayes said $8 worth of beer was taken from the Fast Fare convenience store on Cotanche Street in an incident reported at 12:29 a.m., while Officer L.C. Overby said a television set, later recovered, was taken from Bonner's Lane Day Care at 420 Bonner's Lane in a break-in reported at 7:08 a.m. and a television set was taken from a van parked at Consolidated Freightways at 110 Wilson St. in an incident reported at 7:42 a.m.

Officer R.L. Forrest said a bicycle was taken from an apartment at 3005 Adams Blvd. in an incident reported at 8:46 a.m., while Officer J.E. Umphlet said $435 worth of tires were taken from Budget Tire Center at 1620 N. Greene St. in a break-in reported at 8:56 a.m.

Officer E.A. Tyson said $325 worth of golfing equipment — clubs, a bag and balls — as well as a rod and reel valued at $110 were taken from a vehicle at the Pitt County Fairgrounds in an incident reported at 7:13 p.m., while officer C.M. Credle said a radar detector was taken from a car parked at 102 Granville Drive in an incident reported at 9:06 p.m.

Mobile Home Fire

Pitt County firemen from three departments fight a blaze at the mobile home of Elbert Mills on Allen Road Monday afternoon. Fire officials said the cause of the fire had not been determined. Firemen from Red Oak, Bell Arthur and Winterville responded to the call. There were no reports of injuries.

Fire Investigation

Greenville police and fire investigators are looking into the cause of a fire at Stewart's Sandwiches at 821 Dickinson Ave. that was reported at 6:16 p.m. Monday.

Fire-Rescue Capt. Michael Branch said this morning that the fire, which started in a storage room, was quickly extinguished. But Branch, who characterized the fire damage as relatively minor, said smoke damage to the building was heavy and water damage was listed as medium.

Both Branch and police Detective S.B. Pass said the fire was suspicious looking and said efforts to determine the cause were continuing this morning.

Pass said investigators were told Monday night that the employees left the building and it was locked about 5:30 p.m. or 5:45 p.m. The fire was reported at 6:16 p.m.

Traffic Accident

A Cherry Point Naval Air Station ambulance transporting a woman in labor was involved in an accident at Charles Boulevard and Red Banks Road at 10:47 a.m. Sunday.

Officer R.C. Broadway said the Navy ambulance collided with a car driven by James Melvin Riley, 24, of Baytree Lane. He said Riley was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

The driver of the ambulance was identified as Kevin Johnson, 20, stationed at Cherry Point. The woman being transported was identified as Candice Wood of Havelock.

Council Studies Parking Problems Near University

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Discussion of city parking problems slowed the City Council's progress through Monday's workshop agenda.

Three proposals to restrict or eliminate parking along city streets near East Carolina University drew broad acceptance from the council. And further restrictions may follow as a result of citizen and council concerns raised during the meeting.

The council also reviewed the final action aimed at curbing the problems with dead pigs at a livestock yard inside the city limits on N.C. 11.

In another matter, Mayor Ed Carter disagreed with a unanimous decision on the part of the council to approve the use of city personnel to repair and weatherize the relocated Patrick-Arthur house.

During the workshop session, council members reviewed two requests from the city Parking Authority to restrict and eliminate parking on sections of four city streets.

A citizen petition from residents along four blocks of Third, Fourth and Harding streets generated the first request to limit parking. The second request to eliminate parking along parts of Fourth Street and Beasley Drive came from citizen concerns raised about safety along the streets.

John Childers, one of the resident petitioners, told the council that resident parking is almost impossible near the university. He asked the panel to also look at stronger measures if controlled parking is not effective.

The council has scheduled final action on the requests for Thursday's meeting. And Council member Inez Fridley asked the Parking Authority to study parking control measures at other university towns in looking at possible further restrictions on parking on residential streets near ECU.

Complaints from Greenville police and the Parking Authority raised a possible third parking control ordinance.

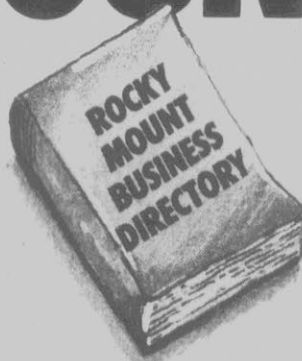

Present ordinances prohibiting parking on sidewalks and curbs allow motorists parking on the median between the curb and sidewalk to fall between the legal cracks. The proposed ordinance from City Attorney Mac McCarley up for adoption Thursday will eliminate the loop-hole and parking between the sidewalk and curb.

The council also heard a review Monday of an ordinance addressing the East Carolina Livestock yard on N.C. 11. If passed, the ordinance will allow the owner of the yard three years to close down. The mayor requested the ordinance after citizens reported dead pigs in the yard this summer.

A proposal to provide city assistance to the weatherization project on the Patrick-Arthur house that was moved to 14th Street drew unanimous support from the council until Mayor Ed Carter objected to spending any more public money on the house.

Discussion Planned On Aids, Minorities

The impact of AIDS on the black and hispanic communities will be discussed Saturday at 4 p.m. at West Greenville Gymnasium.

Fred McRee, founder and director of the AIDS Awareness in the Black Community Project of Wilmington, will be the featured speaker for the program, sponsored by the Pitt County Minority AIDS Committee.

McRee has been involved in promoting AIDS education programs in eastern North Carolina for the last several years and works as a consultant to state and national agencies, providing data on the effects of AIDS on various communities.

According to Dr. Donald E. Ensley, associate professor and chairman of the Department of Community Health at East Carolina University, AIDS is a disease that many black Americans and hispanics associate with gay, white males. But he said national statistics show that nearly one-third of all reported AIDS cases involve black men, and eight of 10 babies born with the virus are black.

"The local program is an extension of a national effort to provide more information on the effects of AIDS to minorities in their communities," said Ensley, also a member of the Pitt County Task Force on AIDS.

"Despite several public awareness campaigns, it seems the message has missed the mark in the black and hispanic communities," he said.

The program is free and open to the public. For additional information, call Mildred Council at 355-9000.

Chemical Society

Vincent Paul Wilson of New Bern, an East Carolina University senior, has been elected president of the American Chemical Society Student Affiliation. A chemistry major, Wilson is also a recipient of the University Scholars academic scholarship.

Also elected as officers of the organization are Bruce Mayhue Jr., vice president; Carla M. James, secretary, and Rebecca Louise Denison, treasurer.

Farm Scene

By Sam Uzzell
PITT EXTENSION AGENT

After a difficult start to this growing season, the end is nearly in sight for Pitt County peanut farmers.

Most of the production decisions have been made, except for the most critical one, when to dig the plants. Choosing the right digging date is as much an art as a science, and can make the difference in yield and quality that amounts to hundreds of dollars on the average peanut farm.

Even though this growing season has been one of the most difficult on record, peanuts appear to be getting very close to maturity. One reason that may be proposed for the rapidity by which peanuts have made up for a late planting start is that optimum temperatures were experienced more during this growing season than many others. In other words, it was neither too hot nor too cool for much of this summer. So despite a late start, and a real threat of a hurricane, peanuts have reached a point in which harvesting on time is a good possibility.

To determine the optimum digging date, traditionally, growers would pull plants from several areas of the field, shell out some of the peanuts, and examine the color of the interior hull surface. The inner surface of the hull will indicate maturity by the presence of dark spots and bright pink seed coat. This method is a good indicator of maturity, and if a high percentage of the peanuts were found in this condition, then the grower dug and harvested the field. The major drawback to this procedure, called the "shell-out method," is that it is a slow and laborious affair.

A newer method of determining optimum digging date is the so-called "hull-scrape method." Similar to the shell-out method, the hull-scrape method involves examining the color of the hull interior to determine maturity. As peanuts grow from early season to harvest, the inner hull color changes from white, to yellow, through orange, and on to brown and finally black. The hull is scraped with a pocket knife to allow a look at the inner hull color. When a high percentage of the peanuts are revealing brown and black, then digging commences. Although this method is quicker than the shell-out method it still is a bit time consuming.

Agricultural engineers at the University of Georgia have developed a machine to reduce the amount of time needed to remove the outer hull and make a maturity determination. The machine is called a "wet pod blaster" and utilizes small glass beads in a stream of water under pressure to get the outer hull off the peanut pods. If a sample of peanuts is brought in and "blasted," then the color of the hull can be placed on a color chart and, not only can the percentage of mature hulls be determined, but also the number of days away from optimum digging.

Raleigh Newspaper To Shut Down

RALEIGH (AP) — Calling it a "wrenching decision," the publisher of The Raleigh Times said the newspaper will end 110 years of publication Nov. 30 so that its resources could be used on its sister paper, The News and Observer.

"It was a pretty wrenching decision," said Frank Daniels Jr., president of The News and Observer Publishing Co. "The reader has voted, and what they have said is, they want the N&O, a morning paper, instead of The Raleigh Times, an afternoon paper."

An internal task force had recommended closing The Raleigh Times as part of a plan to expand and improve The News and Observer, Daniels said in a news conference.

"The recommendation to cease publication of The Raleigh Times was one that was accepted reluctantly, but it was not unexpected," Daniels said. "For several years, we have watched as afternoon dailies in metropolitan areas closed. We cannot make the improvements The News and Observer needs and still publish a quality afternoon newspaper."

Daniels said most of the task force recommendations "were directed toward making The News and Observer a better and more complete newspaper." Many of those improvements could not be made as long as The Times was being published, he said.

Daniels said no employee layoffs are expected. The news staffs of The Times and The News and Observer were combined in 1987. The additional staff would be used to improve The News and Observer's coverage of Wake County and its communities and Durham, he said.

The Raleigh Times has a circulation of 21,500, while The News and Observer has a daily circulation of 145,000, Daniels said.

Daniels read The Times daily himself "but just not enough people wanted to read it. I thought it was a daggone good newspaper," he said.

The closing of The Raleigh Times follows a trend for afternoon newspapers around the country and in North Carolina. In recent years, afternoon newspapers in Winston-Salem, Greensboro and Charlotte also have ceased publication.

"What is happening is that people aren't reading two papers," Daniels said. "They're reading one paper. The buyer has voted for a morning paper, pretty much across the country."

"It's not a dollar savings so much we are looking at as a reallocation of people," he said.

The News and Observer will have five sections effective Dec. 1 to accommodate syndicated columns and features carried by The Times, as well as expanded news coverage, Daniels said.

Daniels said it was coincidental that the decision to close The Times came one week after the announcement that on Jan. 1 the company would sell its three South Carolina daily newspapers and affiliated weeklies.

"The only connection between that announcement and the one today is that they both are part of our emerging strategy to concentrate on our flagship paper," he said.

The Times grew from the Raleigh Evening Visitor, which was founded in 1879. After merging with two competitors, the paper was renamed The Raleigh Times in 1901. The Park family of Raleigh purchased The Times in 1911, with John A. Park serving as editor and publisher for 44 years.

The Times was sold to The News and Observer Publishing Co. in 1955.

Runoff Election Called

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Martha S. Wood concluded a week of soul-searching Monday and formally called for a runoff against G. Dee Smith, the narrow victor in the three-way Democratic primary for mayor Sept. 26.

Both candidates promised more of the same in their campaigns during the two weeks before the runoff Oct. 17.

"I'm on my way to the board of elections to let them know I'll be calling a runoff so we can determine without doubt the Democratic nominee for mayor of Winston-Salem," Mrs. Wood said at a morning press conference at her headquarters.

A week ago Mrs. Wood won 48.3 percent of the vote in losing to Smith by 87 votes. Smith won 48.8 percent of the vote, and Gerald M. Thornton won 2.9 percent. Because Smith did not win more than 50 percent of the vote, Ms. Wood had the right to call a runoff.

There will also be a Republican runoff between Lenville M. Sale and William T. Skidmore, the top vote-getters in the four-way GOP primary.

Tax Amnesty

RALEIGH (AP) — In the first month of North Carolina's tax amnesty program, nearly 1,400 people have paid $1.9 million, Revenue Secretary Helen Powers says.

During the amnesty, delinquent taxpayers can pay back taxes without facing jail terms or fines. The state is offering the amnesty until Dec. 2, when tougher tax penalties will go into effect.

Miss Powers said she was pleased with the initial response to the program, but she expected most participants in the program would wait until the last minute to pay up. She said she was hopeful that the amnesty program would reach its goal of $20 million.

In all, 4,424 taxpayers have sought applications to participate in the program or asked for assistance with it.

Of those, 2,097 have filed applications with the department, reporting some $3.2 million in delinquent taxes. But so far only $1.9 million has been paid by 1,393 taxpayers.

Lawyer Disbarred

RALEIGH (AP) — A New Bern lawyer who has a history of battles with the State Bar over accusations of misconduct has been disbarred.

A three-member committee of the Disciplinary Hearing Commission on Saturday ordered the disbarment of Reginald L. Frazier, finding that he had tried to induce a client to sign an untrue statement.

Frazier has been suspended from practicing law three other times and has been censured once.

The committee made the decision after a two-day hearing, said A. Root Edmonson, attorney for the State Bar.

Frazier, who has run unsuccessfully for lieutenant governor and the state Supreme Court, said Monday that he had not decided whether to appeal. If he appeals, the state Court of Appeals will review the panel's decision. If the disbarment stands, he will be eligible after five years to reapply for his law license.

"My contention is that I have done absolutely nothing wrong as a lawyer, absolutely," he said.

Gas Spills At Garage

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Firefighters in Onslow County were called to a school bus facility to help clean up more than 3,000 gallons of gasoline spilled over the weekend.

A broken seal on a valve to the above ground tank at the school bus garage in Jacksonville was blamed for the slow leak that saturated the ground around the tank.

Meanwhile, Jacksonville firefighters ordered about 20 trailers at a mobile home park evacuated when a resident there accidentally cut a gas valve while mowing his grass. Firefighters searched for hours for a proper cut off valve, and evacuated more of the homes as the gas cloud spread.

By 11 a.m. Monday, the residents were allowed to return to their homes, after the gas was cleared.

Principal Charged

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — An elementary school principal accused of shoving children on a school bus in September was charged Monday with seven counts of assault on children less than 12 years old, according to a criminal summons.

William E. Honeycutt, 55, principal of Mineral Springs Elementary School, was suspended with pay last month by Larry D. Coble, the superintendent of the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County Schools. Coble acted after the staff of the school system investigated the incident.

School officials said last month that the incident happened Sept. 11, when Honeycutt boarded a school bus to look for a child. According to children on the bus, he then shoved several of the students.

The Winston-Salem Police Department requested the summons after interviewing between 10 and 20 children who were on the bus.

The summonses charge Honeycutt with assaulting seven children who are 6 to 11 years old.

According to the summons, four girls were shoved, another was slapped in the face, another was hit on the side of the head, and a boy was kicked.

The charge of assault on a child under 12 is a misdemeanor and carries a maximum sentence of two years in prison, meaning that Honeycutt could be sentenced to up to 14 years if found guilty of all charges.

Bakker Says Falwell Cheated Followers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — With his fraud trial nearing an end, Jim Bakker said it was fellow evangelist Jerry Falwell who was guilty of cheating PTL followers and sparring with a prosecutor who claimed Bakker fabricated his defense.

"The real conspiracy to defraud came from that group of people who took over the ministry for their own selfish gains," Bakker said. Bakker invited Falwell to take over the PTL ministry when Bakker resigned in 1987 in a sex and money scandal.

Jury deliberations in Bakker's trial were expected to begin as early as Wednesday after closing arguments today.

Bakker, 49, is charged with 15 counts of wire fraud, eight counts of mail fraud and one count of conspiracy to commit wire and mail fraud. Bakker is accused of conspiring to defraud followers of $158 million and diverting more than $3.7 million in PTL money for his own benefit.

If convicted on all counts, he faces up to 120 years in prison and more than $5 million in fines.

Prosecutor Deborah Smith asked Bakker Monday to explain apparent contradictions between his story and testimony and exhibits presented by the government, including statements from former PTL board members who said they didn't remember voting on some of the large bonuses for Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye.

Bakker said Falwell and his attorney, Norman Roy Grutman, had intimidated the directors.

"Norman Roy Grutman and Jerry Falwell threatened those board members that they would be in terrible danger," Bakker testified.

Bakker testified that he and his wife accepted $3.1 million in bonuses in the mid-1980s at the same time the ministry's finances foundered. He said that at the same time he raised more than $425 million for the ministry and put it to "the work of Jesus Christ."

The bonuses, he said, amounted to less than 1 percent of the money he raised.

Bakker said PTL board members granted the bonuses "of their own free will" and often told him, "I was worth much more than this, and they would say that over and over again."

Bakker, who began his testimony Friday, spent 10 hours on the witness stand. He was the last defense witness.

During defense questioning, Bakker summed up his defense: "We were a church, and people always wanted to run it like a business. I had to keep telling them, this was a church, not a business."

Easley To Seek Nomination

RALEIGH (AP) — Promising "honest, positive politics," District Attorney Mike Easley became the second Democrat to say he will run for the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat held by Jesse Helms.

"I want to prove that honest, positive politics works in North Carolina and I think honest, positive politics can win," Easley said in a news conference. "I have been disappointed by low-road politics in our state that fail to reflect the good-hearted decency and integrity of North Carolina's people."

Easley has been the district attorney for Bladen, Brunswick and Columbus counties since 1982. His district was the first to use investigative grand juries to seek drug indictments, and he lobbied in the most recent General Assembly session to extend the use of such grand juries.

"I am proud of my involvement in the fight against drugs on the state level over the last decade," Easley said. "But I am also very frustrated because I know that drug trafficking is preeminently a national problem."

In the government's rebuttal Monday, prosecutors tried to portray Bakker as dishonest and vindictive.

Prosecutor Smith challenged Bakker's claim Friday that PTL had room to house as many as 211,000 donors, a tally that relied heavily on space in buildings never completed.

From 1984 to 1987, PTL issued more than 150,000 "lifetime partnerships," typically promising three free nights' stay annually for life in exchange for a $1,000 donation. Prosecutors have tried to show that Bakker oversold the partnerships and that Bakker kept critical information from the partners.

Admirable

Difficult Goal, Distinguished Effort

It takes far more than public services to meet a thriving community's needs. Some can only be eased by the touch of volunteers or the talent and dedication of private endeavors.

Those are the kinds of needs that are addressed by the Boys Club of Pitt County. With a roster of 800 boys and a waiting list of 400, it's clear that organization plays a major role in the lives of the community's youth. Soon, it will be able to play a much larger role, thanks to the foresight of its directors and the overwhelming generosity of the community.

A campaign to raise $900,000 for construction of a new Boys & Girls Club facility exceeded its goal last week. A $125,000 pledge from the James J. and Mamie Richardson Perkins Memorial Fund pushed the fundraising over the top to $902,000.

That is a distinguished effort the people of Pitt County should take pride in for two reasons.

First, every cent of the $902,000 came from Pitt County. It is both astounding and humbling that a community could muster that kind of financial strength. While Boys Club operation is funded by United Way, the money for a capital project of this scope had to come from a separate source.

The cause is an excellent one, but raising nearly a million dollars requires a great deal of personal sacrifice — both in time and money. It means a significant number of people gave freely and magnanimously.

Second, the new facility will allow Boys Club to serve girls. While the organization has worked admirably with the boys who have needed and requested its services, a large gap has emerged. Boys aren't the only ones who need assistance growing up and sorting the cards life deals them. Young girls need help too. A program similar to the one offered by Boys Club is suitable for them as well. There's just one problem — the current facility isn't designed to accommodate both sexes.

With that in mind, the Boys Club board of directors made a laudable decision to build a new building, one that can allow the young girls of Pitt County the same broad opportunity for growth and guidance that young boys have. That progressive move was the beginning of the fund drive, and now, with the completion of that effort, the goal will become a reality.

In addition, the new facility will increase the number of boys that can be served. When an organization has a waiting list of 400, expansion is an important step.

Conceiving, designing, funding and building a Boys & Girls Club facility is an ambitious but innovative undertaking. Only a few cities in the nation have been brave enough to attempt such an effort. Soon, Pitt County will be among those at the forefront.

All the problems of a growing community can't be solved by government. Neither can all the solutions be paid for by taxpayers. That's why organizations like Boys & Girls Club are so vital — and why successful fund drives like the one just completed should never be taken for granted by a community with such lofty goals.

'Every cent of the $902,000 came from Pitt County. It is both astounding and humbling that a community could muster that kind of financial strength.'

Compromise Between Punitive & Caring

BOSTON — I do not know how long it's been since Father knew best and Mother knew everything going on in the lives of her children. Maybe that was never more than an image we carried around in our heads about our own parents' self-confidence as adults, as heads of households, as moms and dads.

Ellen Goodman

But if anything has changed in the last generation it is the erosion of this confidence. As parents today, we are openly uncertain about how we are doing. How would we rank on a national passfail system? How often, for that matter, are we marked absent?

Our anxiety peaks as our kids enter their teens, the corridor to adulthood that's often marked by their closed doors. Suddenly the most sophisticated find ourselves uttering old clichés: It's 4 p.m. or 1 a.m., do you know where the children are and what they are doing?

The worry that kids are out of control, at least out of our control, runs deep. And parents are increasingly attracted to anything that holds out the promise that it can strengthen our authority and the bonds between us and our teen-agers.

Today, one of these promises comes wrapped in the spate of "parental-consent laws." Such laws offer us a shred of knowledge and control over our daughters' lives. They seem to promise that at least these girls, whether 13 or 17, won't go through an unwanted pregnancy and abortion without us.

This is why parental-consent laws have become popular in recent years. Nearly three-quarters of adults support them, pro-choice as well as pro-life Americans. They have listened to the supporters of those laws argue that no minor can have her ears pierced without parental consent. Why then can she have an abortion without permission?

Politicians, in turn, who read the polls and seek some elusive "compromise" on the hot issue of abortion, often pick this one restriction on minors to prove they are "pro-family." Even the Bush administration, shying away from anti-abortion activism, will enter a Supreme Court brief this term on the Minnesota law requiring parental notification. It is considered a politically safe move.

But the issue isn't as simple as it first appears or appeals to us. In real life, minors do not need permission slips to have sex. Once pregnant, 15-year-olds do not need to notify their parents in order to deliver the baby. Indeed, once a teen-ager becomes a mother, she is legally an adult. We don't retain control over child and grandchild.

Most parents who are attracted to consent laws like to assume that every family is like theirs. They assume that girls are exaggerating when they say, "My parents would kill me." They assume the best.

For the most part, girls do tell parents. But not all of them can. As Harrison Hickman who does polling for pro-choice groups says, "When people hear the phrase 'parental consent,' they need to think, not about loving families sitting around making decisions. They need to think about young women, abandoned and abused." To give an abusive parent more power over a child is more punitive than caring.

So the question behind the political and psychological support for parental consent has been whether we can provide support to "good" families without punishing the daughters of "bad" families?

There may, just may, be a compromise in the offing.

On Sept. 30, a new law went into effect in Maine. It is labeled parental consent. But it might more accurately be called an adult-involvement law.

The state has cut a wider legislative pathway that may ensure adult presence in the lives of pregnant teen-age girls, but without putting up barriers to force them into motherhood. A girl in Maine can get permission for an abortion from any family member of her choice — parent, sister, aunt, grandparent. As a second resort she can choose another adult — a minister, counselor, nurse, judge, physician — to accompany her through a counseling and informed-consent procedure.

In the politics of abortion, such a bill is certainly a compromise. It's a pro-choice, pro-family bill, supportive of "good" families without being punitive to pregnant girls. It is one way to separate out the anti-abortion crowd from the majority who worry about girls going through a crisis alone.

For families it is also a compromise. A compromise with reality. Adolescence is indeed a corridor. During this time, our children are neither full-grown adults to be treated as independent individuals, nor are they dependents with no say over their own lives. Gradually the law may be scratching out a middle ground that reflects the truth about adolescence.

To the editor:

It appears that Pitt County Schools is about to lose one of the best school system administrators in the nation. Dr. West has been selected as School Superintendent of the Year on a regional, state and national level and is again a candidate for National Superintendent of the Year. Dr. West has not received these honors and many others by chance. He and his administration have developed programs that have improved test scores, accreditation ratings and other advancements that make Pitt County Schools one of the best systems in the state. Yet, a majority of our elected board members have decided that Dr. West is not good enough for Pitt County.

As superintendent, Dr. West carries out and implements policies and directives of the Board of Education and receives the criticism when certain areas or districts are dissatisfied with the outcome. Our elected board members must overcome their petty prejudices and make all decisions on what is best for the whole school system and not just their individual districts. The board's decision not to renew Dr. West's contract appears to be based on these prejudices of what an area has lost or others have gained in implementing the board's directives and state and federal mandates.

The Board of Education must assure us as parents and concerned citizens that we have the best superintendent possible to continue the advancement of programs and keep Pitt County Schools at the top. We have lost one of the best!

Ron Hardison

To the editor:

Dr. (Eddie) West did not cause the unbalanced black-white ratio in our schools (it was worse before he came), nor will the Board of Education's refusal to reappoint him cure any of these problems. Instead, their action has so angered corporations and foundations who support our school system that 3/4 of a million dollars may be withdrawn in grants from our schools. So, in the end, closed door politics may have cheated all of our children out of $750,000 we can not afford to lose. This money goes with Dr. West when he leaves because the powers behind these grants still believe in him, as do many parents.

The Board of Education members are publicly elected officials, and they have openly refused all requests to explain the direction they took, as if they are above reproach.

There is talk the Lyndale area now wants to force Cherry Oaks from its neighborhood school district into their school district instead of cleaning up racial balance in its own backyard. It is not that Lyndale/Bedford doesn't have the children to balance the black-white ratio, they just have too many parents who refuse to work to achieve this balance, choosing instead to place their children in private schools. We all need to be more aware of the consequences of our actions where our children are concerned.

The Greenville area has the rare opportunity to come together to reduce hunger which threatens much of the world's population. The annual CROP Walk, beginning at the Town Commons at 1:30 p.m., Oct. 8, is a symbol recognizing the needs of hungry people locally and elsewhere.

The funds raised by the CROP Walk are distributed by Church World Services, with twenty-five percent remaining in Pitt County for Meals-On-Wheels, Soup Kitchen, and Women's Shelter programs.

Many of the walkers and sponsors in the CROP Walk this year will be inspired by Congressman Mickey Leland and his colleagues, who were killed in a tragic plane accident in Ethiopia earlier this year, reminding us that risks are necessary if we are to feed the hungry.

All persons are welcome and invited to participate in the CROP Walk.

Ex-Agent Remains In Jail

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Former FBI agent Richard W. Miller was in prison on the fifth anniversary of his arrest even though his conviction and life sentence for conspiring to commit espionage for the Soviet Union have been dismissed.

"I think there's something very wrong with a system that allows a man to be held five years without a fair trial," Miller's attorney, Stanley Greenberg, said.

A 20-year FBI veteran, Miller was arrested five years ago Monday. He was subsequently convicted — after two trials — on charges of delivering secret U.S. documents to his lover, Svetlana Ogorodnikov. His first trial ended in a hung jury.

U.S. District Judge David Kenyon sentenced Miller to two life terms plus 50 years.

But in April, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the conviction, ruling that Kenyon had erred in allowing lie detector evidence during the 1985-86 trial. The panel ordered a new trial for Miller.

In July, Kenyon refused a defense motion to release Miller on bail pending the outcome of a government appeal. Kenyon ruled that Miller was a flight risk.

In August, the appeals court refused to reconsider its decision. U.S. attorneys had the choice of appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court or prosecuting again in district court.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Russell Haymen, who helped prosecute Miller, did not immediately return telephone calls seeking comment Monday.

Miller, the only FBI agent ever convicted of espionage, spends his time in prison taking computer classes and waiting to see whether the government will try him again.

"He seems to be holding up better than you or I would," Greenberg said. "He is a very stoic kind of fellow who takes what comes his way, or goes with the flow, to use one of his expressions."

At his trials, prosecutors depicted Miller as a bitter and vengeful man who was repeatedly reprimanded for ineptitude on the job. They said Miller was easily recruited the summer of 1984 by Svetlana and her husband, Nikolay Ogorodnikov, Soviet emigres living in Los Angeles.

On Sept. 27, 1984, Miller walked into an FBI office and confessed to having a relationship with Mrs. Ogorodnikov. He contended that he was trying to redeem his career by infiltrating the Soviet KGB.

For the next four days, testimony revealed, Miller underwent grilling by FBI agents while Mrs. Ogorodnikov made frantic calls to his Lynwood home and FBI offices in Los Angeles and Santa Ana, trying to find him.

The two had planned a trip to Vienna to meet with Soviet intelligence agents, prosecutors charged.

He was placed under arrest Oct. 2, 1984.

The Ogorodnikovs, as co-defendants, pleaded guilty and are serving time in federal prison.

Greenberg said he was confident Miller would get a new trial or reach a "realistic solution" with the government.

"I think the government has always blown this case far out of proportion to what it really is," Greenberg said. "We're hopeful as we start down the road again that there will be a more realistic solution."

Stevens Bows Out Of Case

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — One of the Supreme Court's abortion rights supporters is not taking part in a key abortion case before the court in its 1989-90 term.

Justice John Paul Stevens disqualified himself from the Illinois case, one of three the high court is considering this term, for unstated reasons, court spokeswoman Toni House said Monday.

Stevens had not disqualified himself when the justices agreed last July 3 to review the case, one of three abortion disputes before the high court this term. But a minor court order issued in the Illinois case Monday noted that Stevens did not participate.

Stevens was one of four dissenters from the court's decision last July letting states make abortions harder to get. He has provided a consistent vote in support of the 1973 court decision that women have a constitutional right to abortion.

The Illinois case focuses on a state law that would require abortion clinics to add services and equipment now found only in hospitals.

The law could force many clinics to close down, and could add up to $50 to the cost of an abortion performed in the first three months of pregnancy.

Panel Backs Stiffer Auto Emission Laws

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Clean air legislation is gaining momentum in the House, following a breakthrough agreement that would apply California's tough auto tailpipe standards to the whole country starting with 1994 models.

The 22-0 vote Monday in the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee came after two powerful lawmakers — Reps. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., and John D. Dingell, D-Mich. — shook hands and ended a bitter dispute over the auto standards.

Waxman, the champion of environmental groups, and Dingell, the auto industry's best friend in Congress, said Monday they would oppose any attempts to change the agreement. Their pact virtually ensures new, tough auto pollution controls because the Senate's clean air legislation is even stricter than the compromise.

The auto industry was quick to express its displeasure with the proposed exhaust standards. Harold A. Poling, chief operating officer for Ford Motor Co., said the standards "are not feasible and ... would improve air quality by less than 1 percent compared with the president's proposal."

Richard Ayres, chairman of the National Clean Air Coalition, called the vote "a genuine step forward" and "a signal to the industrial community and others that achieving clean air will take a commitment from all interests to do their part." The coalition includes environmental groups and their allies.

The California requirements, tougher than the rest of the country's, would be phased in beginning with 1994 models and be complete in the other 49 states by 1996 — at an average cost to consumers of nearly $100 per car, according to Environmental Protection Agency estimates.

The emissions disputes have helped keep clean air bills in a legislative bottleneck in past years, and threatened to torpedo President Bush's clean air bill, which the subcommittee vote amended.

The Dingell-Waxman agreement is mainly designed to reduce ozone pollution.

Court To Rule On Need For Miranda Warnings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — When Lloyd Perkins boasted about his experience as a killer to two fellow jail inmates who said they wanted to help him escape, he didn't suspect he was incriminating himself in a 2-year-old unsolved murder.

Perkins' statements are the focus of a potentially important Supreme Court case that could roll back the rights of criminal suspects to be given so-called Miranda warnings.

The high court, beginning what promises to be another controversy-laden term Monday, agreed to use the Perkins case from Illinois to decide whether undercover agents may elicit confessions from jailed criminal suspects.

The justices said they will hear arguments by Illinois officials seeking to use Perkins' statements to prosecute him for murder.

In its normally busy opening session, the court issued orders in more than 1,000 cases — denying review to most and agreeing to study 22 that will be among more than 150 disputes to be decided by the end of the term in July.

The court heard arguments in a Yonkers, N.Y., desegregation case in which four city councilmen were held in contempt for opposing a plan for attracting subsidized housing to the city's white neighborhoods.

The justices also are looking ahead to a term in which they have agreed to decide thorny right-of-privacy arguments in three abortion disputes and the high court's first "right to die" controversy.

In other action on the first day of its term, the court:

—Agreed to decide whether police nationwide may use sobriety checkpoints in trying to curb drunken drivers. The court will review rulings by Michigan courts striking down that state's sobriety checkpoint program as an unconstitutional invasion of privacy. Courts in other states have upheld virtually identical police tactics.

—Agreed to use a multimillion dollar dispute over the Alfred Hitchcock classic, "Rear Window," to resolve key copyright issues.

—Said they will decide in an Illinois case whether public employers may be forced to put aside partisanship when hiring, promoting and transferring employees.

tion of a $300,000-a-year tax break for a men-only golf club that has counted presidents and members of Congress among its members.

—Refused to spare an evangelical Christian group in Lenox, Mass., from having to return $5.5 million donated by a wealthy ex-member.

—Allowed states to criminally prosecute employers accused of neglecting the health and safety of their employees. The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling in an Illinois case that federal workplace regulations do not bar such state prosecutions.

In the Perkins case, the court could weaken its famous 1966 Miranda ruling that requires police to warn suspects of their right to an attorney and to remain silent.

An Illinois appeals court ruled in November that police violated Perkins' rights when they planted an undercover agent in jail to question him about a murder.

Perkins was charged with fatally shooting Richard Stephenson on Nov. 8, 1984, in Fairview Heights.

Police lacked a suspect in the murder in 1986 when Donald Charlton, an inmate at Graham Correctional Facility in Hillsboro, told authorities he had information about the homicide.

Police then placed Charlton and undercover narcotics officer John Parisi in the Montgomery County Jail on March 31, 1986. Perkins was being held there awaiting trial on a charge of aggravated battery unrelated to the homicide.

Parisi, using the alias Vito Bianco, wore motorcycle garb and told Perkins he was interested in planning an escape.

S.C. Says Relief Agencies Flooded With Clothing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Crews worked to reopen a bridge and officials ordered construction of an eight-mile-long sand dune as South Carolina struggled to recover from Hurricane Hugo.

As tons of supplies poured into the state, relief officials said they were awash in clothing and urged donors to instead send cash, food and building supplies.

Vice President Dan Quayle's wife, Marilyn, returned from a helicopter tour of the coast Monday sobered by the extent of the destruction.

"It's really incredible. There are areas that look like war zones," said Mrs. Quayle, who helped out Monday taking applications at a Federal Emergency Management Agency center in Moncks Corner.

"I think people understand that this has been devastating. I think we can see that in the nationwide outpouring of volunteers that the whole country understands."

Hurricane Hugo slammed into South Carolina Sept. 21 with 135 mph winds, leaving at least 18 dead, 50,000 homeless, 270,000 jobless, and homes, businesses, schools and municipal buildings damaged or destroyed far inland and into North Carolina. In all, Hugo killed 29 people on the U.S. mainland.

The nation's generosity toward storm victims has brought a backlog of donated clothing, including boxcar loads from the West Coast, said Maj. Ken Bush of the Salvation Army.

In the hard-hit fishing village of McClellanville about 30 miles northeast of Charleston, the school is filled with donated clothes, said Billy Newsome of the American Red Cross.

"Used clothing has almost choked us to death," he said, adding what's needed is donations of non-perishable food and building supplies.

The Army Corps of Engineers prepared to repair the Ben Sawyer Bridge — the only link between the mainland and the devastated resorts of Sullivan's Island and the Isle of Palms. The storm left the swing bridge hanging at a 45-degree angle with one end submerged in the water.

Workers were to float barges under the dangling section and use the rising tide late today to help raise the bridge, said corps spokesman Rod Ruffennach. Then cranes will swing the bridge back into position.

The bridge will be left in position for cars to traverse until experts determine whether they can repair the swing mechanism that opens the bridge to allow boats to pass on the Intracoastal Waterway.

The Corps also announced that two contractors will pour sand on eight miles of beaches from North Myrtle Beach to Pawleys Island later this week.

The sand is meant to block further erosion of hurricane-damaged property during a surge of high tides expected in mid-October.

Charleston Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr. said 60 trucks carrying canned food, clothing and other necessities rolled into the city Monday.

The mayor also said the city's dawn-to-dusk curfew, in effect since the storm, has been shortened to 9 p.m. to 5 a.m., but was still being enforced by the National Guard.

Riley said about 90 percent of the city's hotels have reopened and many restaurants are back in business.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., took to the Senate floor Monday and continued his criticism of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which is coordinating the federal government's response to the disaster.

"FEMA does not have but 10 centers in South Carolina 10 days after the disaster," he said. "And, as far as I know, they still haven't given out a financial grant yet."

Damage in South Carolina alone has been estimated at $3 billion or more, with crop damage placed at $100 million.

Texas Must Alter School Financing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN, Texas — A ruling that the funding of Texas schools is unconstitutional will mean a chance at equality for poorer districts in the nation's second-largest school system, a lawyer in the case says.

The state's education commissioner, who had defended the financing system, called for a tax increase so poorer districts can "equalize upward." But Gov. Bill Clements said more money won't necessarily solve the problem.

Monday's unanimous 9-0 decision by the Texas Supreme Court found "glaring disparities" between rich and poor school districts, violating a requirement in the state Constitution for an "efficient system" of public schools.

The court said financing for Texas' 3.3 million students must be overhauled by May.

"A remedy is long overdue," Justice Oscar Mauzy's opinion said. "The Legislature must take immediate action."

Clements said he will call a special 30-day session of the Legislature in the spring to grapple with the problem after a task force still to be named makes its recommendations.

The court said it would not tell the Legislature how to correct the inequities or order it to increase taxes, but warned: "A Band-Aid will not suffice; the system itself must be changed."

The state, whose school system follows California as the nation's largest, will make nearly $10 billion available for public schools in 1990-91, and almost $12 billion is expected from local districts.

But because of disparities in property wealth, annual spending per student among districts ranges from $2,112 to $19,333, the court said. Schools are funded with local property taxes and state aid.

In 1988, Comptroller Bob Bullock found 730 of the 1,100 districts spend less than the statewide average of $3,290 per student per year. The average in those districts was $2,976.

An Austin state district judge had declared the system unconstitutional in a 1984 case brought by poor districts against state Education

Commissioner W.N. Kirby and others. That ruling was overturned last December by a 2-1 vote of the Austin-based 3rd Court of Appeals.

But the high court found "the state's school financing system is neither financially efficient, nor efficient in the sense of providing for a 'general diffusion of knowledge' statewide."

The ruling prompted celebrations in Edgewood Independent School District in San Antonio, the lead plaintiff.

"We took on the state of Texas and we beat 'em," said Superintendent James Vasquez.

About 1,800 students and teachers rallied at the Edgewood stadium, holding banners reading "Victory" and "Edgewood All the Way".

Quayle Says Stars Wars Still Active

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle says Soviet officials are "misreading the tea leaves" if they think the Bush administration is lessening its commitment to the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"They better go back and read what we said and what the SDI program is all about now," Quayle said Monday.

The vice president created a stir last month when he said the Reagan administration had indulged in "political jargon" when it originally portrayed the SDI program — also known as Star Wars — as a leak-proof, impenetrable anti-missile shield.

The Soviets, in their latest strategic arms initiative, conditionally dropped their insistence that Americans abandon plans to deploy a space-based anti-missile system. But they reserved the right to abrogate a strategic arms agreement on short notice if the United States ever actually deployed such a system.

Quayle, in an interview with The Associated Press and other news organizations, said the concept of SDI had been scaled back in the last 12 months of the Reagan administration.

"What we're talking about is a realistic SDI system," said Quayle. "If (the Soviets) view a phased deployment and a redefinition of SDI as lessening of the commitment, they're misreading the tea leaves."

"It's showing you can do it from a political point of view, from a technological point of view and that President Bush is serious about an SDI system," said Quayle, a stalwart SDI supporter.

Drama Over Marcos' Burial Is Only Part Of Filipino Tradition

By Robert H. Reid
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — The standoff over where to bury Ferdinand Marcos is the latest example of "body politics" — a Filipino game Corazon Aquino's supporters once played themselves to rally a nation and topple a dictator.

Rules of the game demand protracted wakes, vigils and novenas.

Players include grieving relatives who regale reporters, television audiences and crowds of spectators with tales of injustice and appeals to respect Filipino tradition.

The object is to play on the Filipino's almost mystical respect for the dead to promote the cause of the deceased and the fortunes of the living.

Since Marcos died Thursday in exile in Hawaii, Manila radio and television stations and newspapers have in daily reports showed the grieving widow, Imelda, standing before the former president's open coffin.

Mrs. Marcos has vowed to do all she can to return her husband's remains to his homeland, despite President Aquino's refusal to allow his burial here.

"I also ask for your prayers to give me strength so that I will see the victory of my struggle to clear the name of President Marcos and the whole nation," Mrs. Marcos said in a radio interview broadcast here today.

The scene in Honolulu is an ironic parody of the events of six years ago, after Mrs. Aquino's husband, Sen. Benigno Aquino Jr., was murdered moments after returning from the United States to challenge Marcos.

After the Aug. 21, 1983, slaying, the Aquino family held a nine-day wake during which thousands of people filed by to view the body, still dressed in the blood-soaked clothes in which Aquino died.

Perhaps two million people turned out for the funeral, as Aquino's body was paraded over a 19-mile route aboard a 10-wheel flatbed truck.

The outrage over the killing galvanized anti-Marcos sentiment and paved the way for the uprising which toppled the longtime president and propelled Aquino's widow into the presidency on Feb. 25, 1986.

Body politics has been played by lesser figures, too.

Marcos' mother, Josefa Edralin-Marcos, died on May 4, 1988. But Marcos' followers hoped to use her death to dramatize their leader's exile and embarrass the government into allowing him to return. The ploy failed.

Mrs. Edralin-Marcos remains unburied, lying in an open casket in Batac, 250 miles north of Manila. Die-hard Marcos' loyalists carry on a vigil which has been largely forgotten.

The military has also discovered the merits of body politics in its campaign to discredit the Communist New People's Army, which is waging a 20-year insurgency.

Under Marcos, the military tried to hide figures on the number of soldiers killed by both Communist insurgents and Moslem guerrillas in the south. But no more.

On Sept. 3, rebels killed 13 soldiers working on a highway construction project in Quezon province. As commanders spoke of this "outrage," television cameras panned the flag-draped corpses and grieving widows.

The military also claims the rebels have been carrying out a protracted purge of their ranks and have killed scores of party members suspected of disloyalty.

With the discovery of every "killing field" — where rebels allegedly bury the victims — the military encourages television cameras to film as bones are unearthed from shallow graves.

At dinner-hour newscasts, Filipinos watch as elderly peasants weep over the bones, supposedly of their sons and daughters "executed" by the rebels.

Government Orders Probe Of Crew's Shipwreck Tale

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — The government ordered a probe today into why searchers failed to find any trace of a capsized yacht whose crew claims to have drifted four months off New Zealand before being washed ashore.

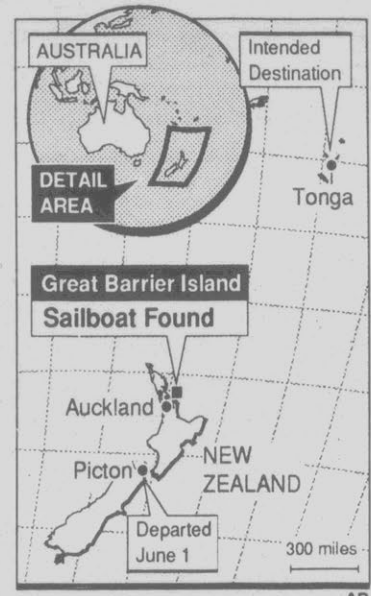

"There are many discrepancies in their story," said Terry Knight, head of the New Zealand Search and Rescue.

The four say their 42-foot trimaran capsized in a storm June 3 and that they survived the 121-day ordeal huddled in the overturned craft by spearing fish, eating seaweed and trapping rainwater.

The four turned up over the weekend on Great Barrier Island, but some officials have expressed skepticism about their story, saying they appear too healthy.

"We needed a miracle and we got one," said John Glennie, skipper of the sailboat, the Rose Noelle.

Glennie said the trimaran left Picton, on the northern coast of the South Island, on June 1 for a three-week Pacific islands cruise to the Polynesian kingdom of Tonga.

He told authorities the boat was flipped over by a huge wave in a 60-knot wind on the third day of the journey and that the four activated an emergency beacon after scrambling to retrieve radio equipment, flares, clothing and food.

"It's an amazing story," said Knight. "The area the yachtsmen say they were in when they made their last radio message was not anywhere near where the search was done."

The inquiry was announced by Transport Minister Bill Jeffries, whose responsibilities include the Marine Division in charge of sea rescue operations.

Jeffries told reporters his department wanted to clarify why the boat was apparently hundreds of miles from where its distress signal was sent and why the yacht's emergency beacon apparently operated for a week well within range of an aircraft monitoring service without being detected.

"They say they were just off the New Zealand coast but the radio message we had put them hundreds of miles away at the Kermadec Islands, nearer Tonga," Knight said.

'Current Affair' Appears To Be Winning In Ratings

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The first reports from the new tabloid television wars are in, and "A Current Affair" and "Hard Copy" both have opened strongly while "Inside Edition" and "USA Today on TV" appear doomed.

In this fall's jammed field of reality-based shows, other early casualties look to be "Crimewatch Tonight," "Trial by Jury" and "USA Today Weekend."

According to the initial Nielsen Syndication Service ratings, Fox's nightly "A Current Affair" was the seventh most popular syndicated show at the start of the new television season. Finishing ahead of "Entertainment Tonight" and "Donahue" in the ratings, "A Current Affair" was seen in more than 6.9 million homes, the survey said.

"Every time a new show starts like 'Hard Copy,' 'Inside Edition' or 'Crimewatch Tonight' it becomes more competitive," said Peter Brennan, co-executive producer of "A Current Affair."

"But the strange thing ... is that when 'Inside Edition' started we never had better numbers. So far, in the first week against 'Hard Copy,' we've done the highest numbers we've ever done."

Brennan said "A Current Affair" has attempted to fight off its challengers by trying to "give more serious thought to the stories we do. You try to avoid doing the celebrity rip-offs and the easy T&A shock-value stories."

He said critics who blast "A Current Affair's" coverage of news and personalities as tawdry aren't fair to the show's intent.

"The worst kind of criticism that's written says that shows like 'A Current Affair' seek to horrify, shock and offend," Brennan said. "Because if somebody shocks and horrifies and offends me on a regular basis, I'm going to turn off. And I won't let my kids to watch it, either."

Because it debuted Sept. 18, "Hard Copy" was not included in the first Nielsen syndication report. But the news-oriented program, once entitled "Tabloid," has performed strongly in Los Angeles, Chicago, New York and San Francisco, according to its producers.

Culp Says He Helped Cosby

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RADNOR, Pa. — Robert Culp says he made Bill Cosby an actor, putting his own career in jeopardy to save their mid-1960s "I Spy" show and Cosby's future with it.

"Bill was not much of an actor when I first met him, and he struck me as the angriest man alive," Culp said in this week's TV Guide magazine. "He had this tremendous chip on his shoulder, as if the world owed him a living."

Culp said Cosby's performance in the first episode of the television show didn't impress Grant Tinker, then NBC's West Coast programming chief, and he canceled the show.

Culp said he defended Cosby and pressured NBC to give the series another chance.

"I was convinced Bill was going to be right for the part," Culp said. "People only had to be patient. I knew it was risky to go out on such a limb, but I was sure I could make Bill an actor overnight by rewriting the scripts for him. So I told Leonard: 'If NBC gets rid of Bill, they'll have to get rid of me, too.'"

Cosby won't talk about the matter and Tinker has trouble recalling the events, TV Guide said. But the show's executive producer, Sheldon Leonard, disagreed with Culp's comments on the early cancellation order, saying NBC had a year's commitment.

"The show couldn't be canceled," Leonard said. But he added, "There were some doubts about Cosby's acting — he had only been a stand-up comic."

Zsa Zsa Files Suit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Zsa Zsa Gabor, convicted last week for slapping a police officer, has filed suit against a neighbor, claiming roots from his trees cracked her driveway.

The Hungarian-born actress filed the lawsuit Monday in the Los Angeles County Superior Court.

She said she was forced to remove dried and overgrown brush extending from the yard of Austin Young onto her property and to install sprinklers and new plants at her own expense after Young failed to clear the property.

The lawsuit seeks at least $47,000 in damages and a court order requiring Young to better maintain his yard.

Young wrote in a June 1988 letter to Miss Gabor that he was willing to arrange and pay for the driveway's repaving, but couldn't reach her by telephone to discuss the work.

On Friday, a Beverly Hills Municipal Court jury convicted Miss Gabor of misdemeanor battery on an officer, driving with an expired license and with an open container of alcohol in her Rolls Royce Corniche.

CBS News Imposes Gag Rule

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — In a move that is unusual for a news-gathering organization, CBS News employees are under instructions from CBS News President David Burke not to discuss with the press the controversy over whether a free-lance cameraman faked footage in the network's award-winning coverage of the war in Afghanistan.

CBS News executives are looking into the allegations and plan to meet this week with the cameraman, Michael Hoover, to go over the questioned footage, according to sources. Hoover reportedly was on assignment in New Zealand when the charges broke last week in The New York Post.

But beyond stating that CBS stands behind its coverage of the Afghan war, Burke has asked everyone involved, including anchorman Dan Rather, not to comment until CBS can complete its own inquiry.

CBS has been contacting sources involved in the story to create a point-by-point analysis of the allegations, which go back to the mid-1980s. It is unclear whether CBS intends to publish that analysis.

The current stance — which is consistent with Burke's policy since taking over the news division a year ago — is frustrating to those within CBS News who want the network to respond more aggressively to the charges in the Post, a tabloid newspaper that has been running detailed allegations regarding the CBS coverage along with front-page photos lambasting "Silent Dan" Rather.

"This is a very important issue that questions the credibility of CBS News," said one producer. "We should not just stick our heads in the sand and hope it goes away."

CBS executives have said that they do not want to lend credence to the charges in the Post, a newspaper not known in recent years for investigative journalism. But, countered Jerry Nachman, the new editor at the Post, "When a tabloid runs 50 inches of cold, gray type, it's been vetted seriously. Why am I defending a piece attacking someone else's journalism?"

The Post charged last week that CBS had aired faked battle footage and false news accounts of the war in Afghanistan in the mid-'80s. The footage aired on "The CBS Evening News" and later in a 1987 "CBS Reports" documentary, "The Battle for Afghanistan."

Anorexia Nervosa Causes Are Very Different

By Lesly Tamarin Mega, M.D.

Anorexia Nervosa became a household word after the untimely death of Karen Carpenter. The following are frequently asked questions relating to this disorder.

Some people seem able to eat a lot and still appear unbelievably thin. Why is this?

The first explanation is fairly obvious. If you are always very active or an athlete who is exercising a great deal, you will have to eat a lot to make up for the calories you are burning. However, it has been discovered that some overweight people do not eat more than others and seem to be equally active. An explanation of this phenomenon is that each person has their own set point or regulatory mechanisms which helps keep their body weight the same over a long period of time. Some have regulatory systems set at a level which allows them to eat heartily and remain thin, but others do not.

Can you usually trace this abnormal fear of gaining weight to an unpleasant event a patient experience while growing up?

Yes, there is an event in a person's life that seems to trigger this illness.

Your Mental Health

Many times, it begins with a parent or friend innocently commenting on the person's weight, suggesting they should lose a little. Other times, it starts with a death or a smaller loss, such as missing out on a birthday present. For some, it begins when one is faced with new experiences or expectations. For instance, for some girls it begins following a date during which they are confronted with issues of sexuality for which they were not psychologically prepared. Long before the illness appears, however, the stage was set. There is not just one cause for Anorexia Nervosa; there are different causes for different people. The causes are as diverse as fashion, family conflicts, interpersonal conflicts and misperceptions of ones body. Basically, there is a problem in the development of ones identity and selfhood.

I know Anorexia Nervosa is an emotional disorder, but can it be physiological as well?

Anorexia Nervosa probably begins as an emotional disorder which later becomes physiological. As an anorexic stops eating, her body enters a starvation state. The starvation state creates its own problem because it changes normal body functions. If prolonged, these changes can be severe enough to result in death. The malnourished state also creates psychological problems in addition to the physiological ones. Studies of people in a starvation states show they become preoccupied with food, go on food fads, mix unusual food combinations and dawdle over meals. They may become indecisive, do things in excess (some chew 40-60 packs of gum in a day) and hoard things they need. Therefore the starvation state complicates the other symptoms of Anorexia Nervosa.

Do people with Anorexia Nervosa sometimes suffer from other emotional problems too?

A person with Anorexia Nervosa usually feels ineffective and not in control. She feels that while she may not be able to control anything else, she will at least control every morsel that goes in her mouth. Some anorexics are unable to express their feelings and experience only a narrow range of emotional reactions.

What age groups does it usually afflict? Do women suffer from it more frequently than men?

The most common age of onset is early adolescence, around age 13 or 14, but it can occur as late as 30 or 40 years of age. It is more common among sisters and mothers of individuals with anorexia than the general population. The rate of Anorexia Nervosa is 10 girls to one boy. Most commonly boys who develop this illness are preteens.

How can parents detect this illness in their child?

The following points can help distinguish the normal dieting adolescent from a potential anorexic.

Be suspicious:
— when the dieting girl insists she is not hungry.

— when dieting is undertaken explicitly to make one more attractive and respected but not lead to improved social activity or relationships.

— of dieting begun when the patient is not actually overweight.

— when dieting coincides with a new experience, such as going to a camp, a new school or college.

— of dieting in a girl who has an undue interest in and knowledge of foods, calories, nutrition, and so forth.

— of dieting in a girl who is a "good, sometimes almost perfect child."

— of dieting combined with abnormally strenuous exercise in a normal weight girl.

Have you seen a decline in the number of people with this illness since Karen Carpenter's death?

No. We have seen an increase in the number of patients since her death because families have become more aware of the disorder and are seeking professional treatment.

If a person knows they can die from this disorder, wouldn't they start eating to get better?

No. It is similar to the smoker or drinker who does not stop because they are told it is harmful to their health.

The symptoms, that of not eating, is helping the person cope with their conflicts and problems. The symptoms is their desperate attempt to gain some control and feel effective.

Low Self-Esteem Is Burden

Dear Abby: I applaud you for encouraging those who make disparaging remarks about fat people to change their ways. Fat children in our society often receive no support from any source: peers, teachers or family. And, as "Heartbroken Mother" so eloquently stated, parents are often blamed for the child's weight, when "blame" (if any) should be placed on metabolic and genetic factors.

It's unfortunate that you did not take the opportunity to explain the dangers of the "yo-yo dieting syndrome." Children who start dieting at an early age will probably end up fatter as adults than fat children who do not diet. Additionally, severe calorie-restricted diets during the developmental years can damage the body's growth and maturing process. The negative effect that dieting has on a child's self-esteem (giving them the message that they are not acceptable) cannot be overstated.

People come in all colors, shapes and sizes. If we would all be more accepting of the uniqueness of each person, instead of attempting to make everyone conform to a certain physical ideal, we would have a much healthier society, both physically and mentally.

Dear Abby: I am writing in response to your answer to "Heartbroken Mother." It appears this woman is really trying very hard to help her daughter, and that's great. But Abby, there are a lot of parents out there who just allow their children to become grossly overweight and deserve the condemning looks they get from passers-by.

These children grow up to be fat adults with high blood pressure, high cholesterol levels, heart problems, arterial blockage, etc. It used to be believed that chubby children were healthier than thinner ones. We now know this to be untrue. It's cruel and unfair for parents to doom their children through obesity to such a dim (and often short) future. — A Concerned Observer

Children Provide Drama

It's an age-old debate: Who is harder to raise, a boy or a girl? The answer is totally biased and usually depends on what you're raising.

A mother from Houston who has raised two daughters and a son leans toward boys being harder. She says her son is not mean or hateful, just real cute. In the middle of her lunch one day, her son — in his knowledge-is-golden period — observed that she was chewing a mouthful of corn. "How do you like eating the ripe ovaries of an ear of corn?" he asked. He then proceeded to inform her that he learned in school that pear halves were also the ripe ovaries of a pear tree. The kid could replace liquid diets.

When he got his driver's license, he figured out that whoever reached the car first got to be the primary driver of it. Since he is well over 6 feet tall and she is 5-5, he supposed that would put him in the driver's seat for the rest of his life. He was amused he had discovered this.

Mothers of girls are sitting out there reading this and shaking their heads. Cute isn't all that bad. At least with boys you know where you stand. They're honest with their feelings and direct. They spit out what they have to say and get on with their lives.

A daughter would sit at the table and observe her mother eating the same corn for 10 minutes in silence and then mumble, "Gross." If she were asked, "What's the matter?" she would say, "Forget it." When pressed, "Why did you say it was gross?" she would explode, "Look, I don't want to hassle anyone. I just want to eat my meal in peace, OK?"

Five silent minutes later she would add, "That's disgusting!"

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

When asked, "What's disgusting?" she would throw down her napkin and shout, "If you're going to sit there and eat ripe ovaries, don't ask me to watch." With that line, she would exit to her room, where the sound of the door slamming registers 5 on the Richter scale.

Girls tend to be more dramatic, more mysterious, more hostile. It's them against the world. Take the car incident. Girls would never race you to the car. They would simply point out that without a car, life for them is no longer worth living and they will just languish in their rooms taking shallow breaths until the end comes.

All kids are different, whether they be male or female. What sends one into tears doesn't penetrate the skull of the other one. But frankly, I lean toward the theory that boys are easier to raise. As I told my daughter once after I failed to convince her that piercing her ears caused severe depression (mine), "I wish you would have known me last week when I was 10 years younger."

Is your cholesterol level in the danger zone?

You may know the danger of high cholesterol—but do you know your number?

U.S. government health experts say all adults 20 and older should have their blood cholesterol levels screened.

If your cholesterol is under 200, that's a desirable level. And if your level is high, for every 1% you lower it, your risk of heart disease is reduced by 2%.

Take the first step by having your blood cholesterol level screened. It takes only three minutes with just a finger-stick sample. And there's no fasting required.

NEW YORK (AP) — Declining interest rates provided the spark for a broad advance in the stock market today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 10.25 to 2,723.97 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 410 up, 190 down and 393 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 27.24 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The market gathered some forward momentum late Monday in a late round of buying that lifted the Dow Jones industrial average above 2,700 to a four-week high.

County Board To Review Planning At Workshop For New Jail Facility

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County commissioners came close to approving a contract with an architectural firm for the design of a new jail at a meeting Monday, but decided to postpone action until after further review at an Oct. 11 workshop session.

But a tentative timetable presented to the board by Bill Fripp of Grier-Fripp Associates of Charlotte suggested that construction of a new jail could get under way in October 1990 with completion of the project in May 1992.

Commissioners, faced with crowded conditions at the present, outmoded jail at the courthouse, have for more than a year been actively moving toward construction of a new jail facility.

With a long-range county facilities master plan in hand that recommends construction of a 250-bed jail facility outside of downtown Greenville, commissioners asked a jail study committee to recommend an architectural firm to do the design work. Reviewing a number of firms, the committee decided to recommend Grier-Fripp.

Among other jail projects, Grier-Fripp designed the recently completed Johnston County jail in Smithfield and the Eastern Correctional Center at Maury.

Fripp said Monday that the construction of a new 250-bed jail is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $8 million to $9 million. Including land and other associated costs, Fripp said the total project could amount to from $9 million to $10 million.

Commissioners, who earlier this year agreed to finance construction of a new jail with a lease-purchase plan, have yet to acquire a site for the facility. However, the jail committee has screened several possible locations.

Fripp, who said his firm's fee would be 5.2 percent if construction costs run between $8 million and $9 million, told the board, "We would like to get started."

County Manager Kramer Jackson said this morning that, based on discussions with Fripp, part of a jail complex — a 100-bed dormitory facility for minimum security prisoners — might be completed early as a means of relieving pressure on the jail at the courthouse. But Jackson said even so, it would be probably March, April or May of 1991 before such a facility could be available.

Among other business Monday, commissioners approved the transfer of a cable television franchise held by Red's Cable TV Inc. to C4 Media Cable of Vienna, Va.

Representatives of C4 Media Cable, which operates cable systems in North Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee, including systems in Nash and Edgecombe counties, said the firm is in the process of acquiring all of Red's cable systems.

Sylvia Salmon, director of acquisitions for C4, said the firm would provide customer service through a Rocky Mount office with a toll-free telephone number. She also said C4 would expand the its service area in the county as soon as possible.

Red's now operates in the Grimesland and Simpson areas.

Board Eliminates Warm-Up Exams

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Eighth- and ninth-grade Pitt County students will no longer have to take a warm-up exam to prepare them for state competency tests.

The county Board of Education eliminated the systemwide use of precompetency tests Monday because the board feels the tests are no longer needed.

The tests were designed to prepare students for the North Carolina Competency Tests in reading and mathematics, which are given to high school students across the state each year, and to identify those who are likely to have trouble passing.

According to an in-house report presented to the board Monday, local school administrators feel the tests have outlived their usefulness.

In other action, the board: — Scheduled Oct. 9 as a make-up day for time lost when schools were closed because of Hurricane Hugo on Sept. 22.

— Approved a non-binding letter of intent to participate in the School Improvement and Accountability Act of 1989. Housing Panel Calls For Study On Wages

The Greenville Housing Authority authorized an independent study of the wage and salary scale for authority employees, and reviewed the monthly rent scale during its meeting Monday night.

Kenneth E. Noland, executive director of the authority, said board members approved letting bids for a salary study. The bids will be returned later this month, with final approval by the board set for the next monthly meeting.

off of $4,751.58 in debts owed the authority. Sallye Streeter, director of resident affairs, reported that average rents at developments operated by the authority in October amounted to $128.46. Rent included: Meadowbrook, $121.98; Kearney Park, $126.51; Moyewood I, $139.36; Moyewood II, 142.05; Hopkins Park, 118.91; Newtown, 116.18, and West Meadowbrook, 131.10.

Officers Elected
 Vicky Lynn Braswell, a senior at East Carolina University, has been elected president of Phi Upsilon Omicron, an organization within ECU's School of Home Economics which promotes academic excellence and professional and personal leadership abilities. Ms. Braswell is also the recipient of the Rocky Mount Guild scholarship and the Bessie McNeil Home Economics scholarship. Susan Michelle Bright of Elizabeth City was elected vice president. Additional officers elected include secretary, Faye S. Scott; treasurer, Karen Ann Thompson, and historian, April Lynn Parker.

The authority also declared Oct. 8 through Oct. 14 as fire prevention week in the city's public housing projects. With cooperation from the city Fire-Rescue Department, Noland said the authority would hold a series of fire prevention workshops in each of the housing projects. The board also approved a write-

Ditka Rubs It In After Bears Top Eagles

Mike Ditka

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Mike Ditka couldn't resist kicking the corpse.
"We might not be the best, but we know they're not the best," Ditka said after the Bears, certainly the best Monday night, had blitzed the Philadelphia Eagles 27-13.
The Eagles, Ditka added, "think they can come here and talk their way into a game and they got that from their coach, the Fat Man, and that's just stupid."
With that, Ditka got in the last swipe at his old nemesis, Eagles coach Buddy Ryan.
"It was a disappointing loss," said Ryan, who gets under Ditka's skin as much these days as he did when he was defensive coordinator for the Bears. "It was probably more disappointing than the (Fog Bowl) loss we had in the playoffs last year.

You can't turn the ball over five or six times and win.
"Instead of blocking a punt, we rough the kicker; instead of intercepting a couple of balls, they end up getting touchdowns," Ryan said. "It was just a great team win for the Bears and a terrible loss for us."
"We must be awful lucky," Ditka said, a note of sarcasm in his voice, "but the turnovers were the key. We don't lose when we get three turnovers and tonight we got six."
The Bears' victory kept alive two streaks: the Eagles have never beaten the Bears in 13 games on Chicago turf, and Ryan is winless in four outings against Ditka.
"You don't lose that many times to many people and stay in this business too long," Ryan said.
Quarterback Mike Tomczak directed the Bears to their fourth straight triumph by completing 24 of 38 passes for 266 yards and three touchdowns.

Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham had some flashy numbers of his own — 32 of 62 for 401 yards and one touchdown — but threw four interceptions and was sacked four times.
"The Bears are a better team than we expected," Cunningham said. "We were going downfield and we would turn the ball over. I thought we would be able to protect the ball better. But they had the stunts and (Richard) Dent took advantage."
Dent had two solo sacks and John Roper had one. They also shared a sack.
"Part of the idea was to pressure Cunningham," said Dent, held to one sack in three previous games. "I haven't been on the quarterback for so long that it felt good." Ryan thought Dent did more than just pick up 2½ sacks.

"Dent put pressure on Cunningham all night," Ryan said of his former charge. "He was tough. We dropped some balls, we fumbled some balls, we did a little bit of everything. But Richard Dent really put the pressure on us."
Tomczak's first touchdown was for 14 yards to Dennis McKinnon, who made a circus catch between two defenders. It followed an interception by Shaun Gayle but was set up when Izel Jenkins roughed Bears punter Maury Buford.
McKinnon, asked to describe the touchdown, said, "It was a jump ball and I got the dunk."
Tomczak also hit Matt Suhey with a 1-yard touchdown pass for a 13-0 halftime lead. In the third period, Tomczak completed five straight passes in a drive that led to Neal Anderson's 2-yard scoring run.

The Eagles got back into the game on a pair of field goals by Luis Zendejas and a 24-yard touchdown pass from Cunningham to Gregg Garrity that cut the lead to 20-13.
Then came the clincher, a 36-yard touchdown pass from Tomczak to tight end James Thornton. It was one of eight completions to tight ends Cap Boso and Thornton.
"We made use of our tight ends," Tomczak said, "but that was the knockout punch. We used the rollout passes effectively because they had been leading the league in sacks."
Tomczak has been sacked but once this year and credits his offensive line for that.
How about Ditka's remark that the Bears are lucky?
"Good luck happens to great teams," Tomczak said.

New Jays Keyed Drive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — After Mookie Wilson took his swings in the batting cage, Lee Mazzilli stepped in. It's not the first time they have followed each other.
In a strange turn of fate, Wilson and Mazzilli were sent away by the New York Mets and ended up with the American League East champion Toronto Blue Jays.
On Monday, they were the center of attention by the press as the Blue Jays prepared for Game 1 of the playoffs Tuesday night against Oakland.

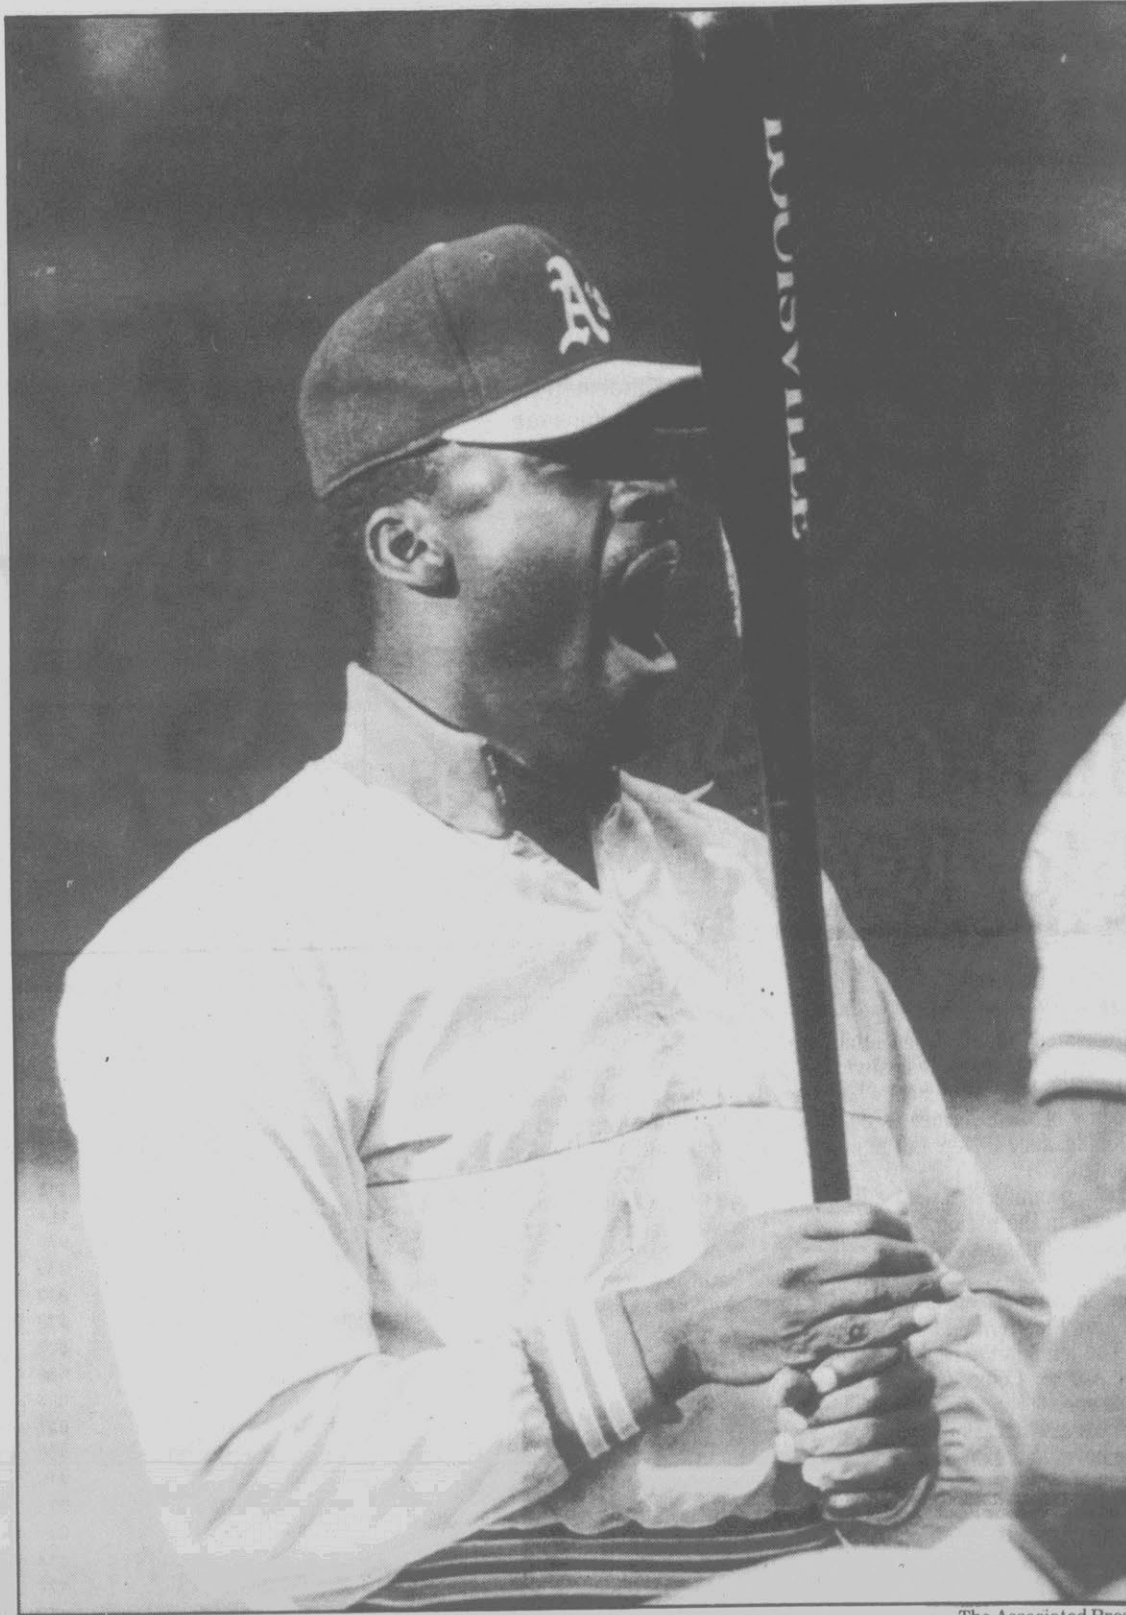

Wilson

Although the season is over, and they're 3,000 miles away, controversy has found the New York Mets in Oakland.
Wilson and Mazzilli were two of the most popular Mets with the fans and also with their teammates. But the Mets' front office decided there wasn't a place for them at midseason, releasing Mazzilli and trading Wilson.
The Mets picked up Wilson's option year last season at $1 million.
"I don't know why they did that if I didn't figure in their plans," Wilson said.
Since 1986, Wilson had platooned with Len Dykstra and he was prepared to do it again.
"I didn't like it, but I knew that was my job," he said.

But the Mets traded for Juan Samuel on June 18 and he became the starting center fielder.
"Until this day, I have no idea of what was going on and why they did certain things," Wilson said. "I went into talk to (Manager) Davey Johnson and I never got an answer of what I was going to do. I went to

No Time To Choke Gaston: Jays Can Win Big Games

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Cito Gaston rejects the talk that the Toronto Blue Jays can't win the big one.
In the next week, the Toronto manager wants to prove it against the Oakland Athletics.
The Blue Jays blew a 3-1 lead to Kansas City in the 1985 playoffs. Two years later, Toronto lost its last seven games to lose the American League East to Detroit.
"As far as big games," Gaston said, "you have to think about what happened."
"In '85, we had KC down 3-1, but they came back to beat us just like they did to St. Louis to win the World Series. We had two of our best guys go down in 1987 (shortstop Tony Fernandez and catcher Ernie Whitt) that really hurt us."
Last weekend, the current Blue Jays started to chip away at their image problem by rallying twice against Baltimore to win the AL East.
"Cito reminds me a lot of Joe Torre as a manager," Lee Mazzilli said: "He's calm and treats everyone fair. He was a player so he understands certain situations."
Gaston will send Dave Stieb (17-8) against Dave Stewart (21-9) tonight in Game 1.
The Blue Jays will need some great pitching by Stieb, who three times in his career has lost a no-hitter in the ninth inning.
"I guess you have to look at the different degrees of pressure," Stieb said. "We as players don't look at it that way, although the media likes to. My job is the same every time out. I have to go out Tuesday with my best stuff and do the job."
The A's, meanwhile, have been criticized for being too laid back.
"That's one of my raw nerves," Manager Tony La Russa said. "It seems like some media people say, unless in the clubhouse before or after the game you have players talking controversial stuff, putting the opponents down, or bragging about themselves, that it's not an emotional clubhouse."

Tigers Hope To Learn From Defeat

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Ashley Sheppard

DURHAM — Some valuable lessons can be learned from a loss. Those are lessons Clemson's seventh-ranked football team would prefer to do without.
However, after Saturday's still mind-boggling 21-17 upset loss to Duke in Wallace-Wade Stadium — a place the Tigers had not tasted defeat since 1975 — Clemson is now faced with trying to regroup for the remainder of the Atlantic Coast Conference schedule.
Ashley Sheppard, a freshman from North Pitt High School, says how the Tigers react will be a true test of the team's character.
"We've just got to go back now and regroup and win this conference," Sheppard, a 6-3, 225-pound backup outside linebacker said. "We're not out of it by a long shot. I think it's a character builder for us."
Teammate Wesley McFadden agreed.
"Being a young team like this, it's really going to show what kind of character we really do have," McFadden said. "Are we mature enough to bounce back? I think we are."
Hopes for a shot at a second national championship this decade have been dashed. Plus, the loss puts a damper on a possible fourth straight ACC title and the league's automatic bid to the Citrus Bowl.
But the Tigers are still well in control of their own fate with their chief rivals for the title, Virginia and N.C. State, having the unenviable task of coming to Death Valley.

Virginia, which has not beaten Clemson in 28 tries, visits the Tigers Saturday afternoon in a nationally televised game.
N.C. State, which has toppled Clemson the last three meetings, should roll into Tiger Town unbeaten on Oct. 21. The Wolfpack carries a 5-0 record into Saturday's game with Middle Tennessee State then has an open date before heading to Clemson.
Duke managed its improbable win over Clemson despite falling behind 14-0 at halftime as quarterback Billy Ray being intercepted five times.
And the Blue Devils rallied in a most surprising way — behind their defense.
After giving up 266 total yards the first half, including 211 to a Terry Allen-led rushing attack, Duke yielded only 46 yards on the ground and 95 total yards the second half.
Even more startling is they did all that with starting outside linebacker Randy Sally and inside linebacker Mark Allen sidelined due to first-half injuries.
Several players figured prominently into the second-half performance. Junior free safety Erwin Sampson collected a team-high 16 tackles; sophomore strong safety Derrick Jackson had 14 tackles, including two for losses; senior inside linebacker George Edwards had 11 tackles, including two keep

Cowboys' Situation Gets Even Worse

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas — How bad have things gotten for the winless Dallas Cowboys? Their third-string quarterback is a Scott Ankrum, a rookie wide receiver.
Coach Jimmy Johnson said Ankrum, who played quarterback for Texas Christian, would be the Cowboys' emergency third stringer should Steve Walsh and Babe Laufenberg go down on Sunday against the Green Bay Packers.

Doctors operated on $11 million rookie quarterback Troy Aikman's non-passing hand Monday, inserting four screws into the broken index finger on the left hand and putting on a cast that will sideline him at least a month.

Aikman, who sustained the break in the first period of Sunday's 30-13 loss to the New York Giants, will wear the cast for three weeks.
The Cowboys estimate that the earliest Aikman could return is four weeks with a six-week absence more likely.

"Realistically, he will be out four ball games," Johnson said. "We'll take a look at him before the fifth."
Aikman, the top pick in the regular NFL draft from UCLA, was tackled by linebacker Carl Banks while scrambling eight yards for a first down. Aikman returned to the huddle and asked lineman Kevin Gogan to look at the finger.

"I thought it was just a dislocation and asked Kevin to give it a hard pull and a jerk, which didn't help," Aikman said.
"I gave it a hard pull like he asked and I sure hope I didn't hurt it more," Gogan said.

Lawless Wins Football Contest

What a difference a week makes. Last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest winner missed only two games. But this week, missing nine was good enough as Mary Jane Lawless of Rt. 3, Box 188, Snow Hill, captured first place. Lawless correctly picked the winners in 23 of the 32 games listed in last week's contest pages. Her victory, however, came on the basis of her point total guess. Her guess of 77 points was the closest to the actual total of 73, scored both in San Jose State's 40-33 win over Stanford and Colorado's 45-28 victory over Washington. Second place, also with 23 right, went to Ed Tracy of 208 Nichols Dr., Greenville. Tracy's point total guess was 79. Two other entrants also missed nine games, but were further off in their point total guesses. They were Thomas Spier, 201 Lake Road, Greenville (81) and Mac Hodges, Rt. 1, Box 321, Washington (42). The three ties in contests games were counted wrong unless "Tie" was written in the blanks. The next contest in the series appears in today's edition.

Greenville Nips Goldsboro In Tennis

Greenville's River Birch team nipped the Goldsboro Country Club team, 4-3, in Down East Tennis League results this weekend.

Singles: Winston Kobe (Gv) d. Neil Powell, 7-6, 1-6, 6-4; Goldsboro d. Greenville by forfeit.
Doubles: Betty Dees-Jackie Williams (Gv) d. Jennie Best and Sissy Weil, 6-0, 6-4; Marilyn Forenson-Nan Copeland (Gb) d. Esther Warren-Judy Jenkins, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3; Rosalie Farley-Teresa Stiley (Gv) d. Sandra Franklin-Bobbie Belinski, 6-4, 6-0.

Junior Girls Tennis Team Wins

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's junior girls' tennis team defeated Greenfield School of Wilson Monday, 7-2. Their next match will be held Thursday in Ahoskie against Ridgcroft School.

Singles: Catherine Lamm (Gf) d. Emmye Taft, 8-3; Morgan Bright (Gv) d. Wortley Forbes, 8-1; Kathryn Womack (Gf) d. Anna Rogerson, 9-7; Megan Schmidt (Gv) d. Cameron Kirkland, 8-2; Amie Thompson (Gv) d. Emma Powell, 8-0; Sofia Lannagren (G) d. Liza Pittman, 8-1.

GCA Sweeps Volleyball Match

The Greenville Christian Academy volleyball team raised its record to 3-5 overall and 2-2 in the conference with a 15-2, 15-4, 15-10 sweep of Wayne Christian Monday afternoon. Mahita Trasad led Greenville in the serving department while Melanie May led in bumps, Leslie Lupen in sets and Maria Stokes in spikes. GCA hosts Friendship Christian Academy Friday.

Farmville Middle Tops Aycock

Farmville Middle School handed E.B. Aycock a pair of junior high volleyball losses Monday. In A-team competition, Farmville won 15-3 and 15-11. In B-team competition, Farmville won 15-8 and 15-7.

Rotary Clubs Hold Golf Tournament

Greenville's three Rotary Clubs will combine to sponsor the First Rotary Golf Tournament on Monday at 1 p.m. at Greenville Country Club to raise funds for various club charities. The tournament will be a superball event for four-person teams, with a charge of $45 per team. The Oldsmobile Scramble Handicap System will be used for the tournament. A cookout will follow for participants and other Rotary members. The cost is included in the entry fee, but is $10 for those not playing. The deadline for entries is Saturday. Anyone interested may contact the pro shop at Greenville Country Club.

State Facing Underdog Challenge

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State's football team will have the same problem, but a different team, this week as it did last week, Coach Dick Sheridan said Monday. The problem is getting psyched to play a team that's obviously the underdog. Last week's team was Kent State (0-4). This week's team will be Middle Tennessee State (3-2), a Division I-AA team in the Ohio Valley Conference. "I think our players know ... we're playing better personnel than we played against Kent State," Sheridan said at his weekly news conference Monday. Against Kent State, the Wolfpack found itself trailing the underdog in the third quarter before getting back in the game and winning 42-22. But, a victory is still a victory. The last time N.C. State started a season with a 5-0 record was in 1974 when Lou Holtz coached the team to a 9-2-1 record and a tie in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl. Sheridan said it is difficult to get the players to prepare for a non-conference team after the Wolfpack has already defeated four Atlantic Coast Conference opponents. It's especially difficult to motivate players when the opponent is a division I-AA team. But Sheridan said there are few differences between Middle Tennessee State and his nationally ranked program. "I don't think anybody understands besides our staff the similarities in personnel," he said. "There's just not that big a difference. We've tried to recruit some of those guys at Middle Tennessee State, so we're familiar with the caliber of their personnel."

Falcons' Miller Returns To Practice

SUWANE, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta Falcons quarterback Chris Miller, who suffered a rib injury against Indianapolis, has been cleared to return to practice, Falcons officials announced Monday. A bone scan performed Monday on Miller's right ribs showed no cracks or fractures. Miller said he planned to practice with the team Tuesday and hoped to play against the Los Angeles Rams this weekend.

Craig, Zimmer Learned From Losing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Roger Craig and Don Zimmer have learned a lot about winning by losing.

They have been friends for about 40 years, and that won't end just because their teams will meet in the National League playoffs starting Wednesday night at Wrigley Field.

"Don and I have been friends for a long time," Craig said. "And no matter who wins, we'll still be friends."

"If we're not in the World Series, I'll be rooting for the Chicago Cubs."

Craig has taken a San Francisco Giants team that lost 100 games in 1985 to two division championships in the last three years.

Their careers started out promising enough, members of the World Series champion Brooklyn Dodgers in 1955.

Craig, a rookie, started Game 5 of the World Series and beat the New York Yankees 5-3. He pitched six innings and allowed four hits before Clem Labine finished.

"That was the only champion Brooklyn ever had and I was there at the start of my career," Craig said. "It wasn't always that easy."

Zimmer, an infielder, played in four games of the 1955 Series, with two hits in nine at-bats.

"Don could hit," Craig said. "But he had a couple of serious head injuries that hurt his career."

In 1956, Zimmer was hit in the head by a pitch from Cincinnati's Hal Jeffcoat.

"I don't think about what might have been," Zimmer said. "I consider myself lucky that I have always been around baseball. I've been in this game for more than 40 years. That's not so bad."

Well, some of it wasn't exactly pretty.

In 1962, Zimmer and Craig crossed paths again as teammates with the expansion New York Mets.

The Mets lost 120 games, a major-league record. Craig lost 24 games and Zimmer was the Mets' opening-day third baseman. He lasted 14 games, hitting .077.

"I learned a lot in those years," said Craig, who improved to 5-22 in 1963. "You have to look for the positives, try to build on that."

"Sure the Mets were terrible in 1962, but within seven years they won the World Series."

The last time the Giants won the Series was 1954, when the franchise was in New York. They haven't played in the World Series since losing to the New York Yankees in 1962.

The Cubs? They haven't won a World Series since 1908. Lights in Wrigley? There wasn't even a Wrigley Field then.

Craig learned from his long days with the Mets.

He was a member of the St. Louis

Cardinals in 1964 and helped them win a World Series. In 1984, Craig was the pitching coach for the world champion Detroit Tigers.

Zimmer's first managerial job came with the San Diego Padres in 1972-73. He finished last each season, losing 103 games in 1973.

From there it was on to Boston and things were looking good in 1978.

But the Red Sox blew a 14-game lead over the Yankees in mid-July and lost a one-game playoff when Bucky Dent hit a three-run homer off Mike Torrez at Fenway Park.

"That's history," Zimmer said. "I'm just thinking about the Giants right now."

Zimmer and Craig are finally in a position where they can't lose.

Craig took over for Jim Davenport in late 1985 as the Giants finished 62-100. The next season, Craig turned them into winners and in 1987 the Giants came within one game of going to the World Series.

The Cubs were 77-85 last season and many observers predicted a last-place finish this year after a 9-23 record in spring training.

"Playing for Don is fun," Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg said. "He keeps us on our toes and you never know what he's going to do next."

One thing is for sure. Don Zimmer will shake Roger Craig's hand, win or lose.

Inspired Buffaloes Moving Up Poll

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If motivation is the only factor, Colorado won't stop at No. 3 in the Associated Press college football poll.

Colorado players dedicated the 1989 season to quarterback Sal Aunese, who died Sept. 23 of stomach cancer. The Buffaloes have made it a season worthy of their former leader, charging to a 4-0 record and their highest ranking since 1977. But tight end John Perak said Monday that No. 3 isn't enough.

"We promised Sal the last time we talked to him that we would be the No. 1 team in the nation," Perak said. "We really need to press hard and get that No. 1 ranking for Sal."

Colorado thrashed Washington 45-28 on Saturday, the Huskies' worst home loss in 60 years, to improve two spots in the rankings. Notre Dame and Miami, Fla., remain 1-2.

The jump in the rankings came as a funeral was held at Oceanside, Calif., for Aunese. Colorado coach Bill McCartney said Aunese was an example of courage.

"We saw Sal compete. ... We saw him fighting the greatest of odds ... but we never saw him down," McCartney said. "He was always upbeat, always spirited. We knew he was suffering, but we didn't see the pain."

Colorado nose tackle Joel Steed said the No. 3 ranking was nice, but it won't go to his head.

"We're having a lot of fun with it, but we're going to keep working hard and keep our goals in sight. Coach Mac has us in the right frame of mind when he tells us to enjoy being ranked, but to stay focused."

Colorado's victory over a Washington team that was ranked 21st so impressed a nationwide panel of 60 sports writers and broadcasters that they vaulted the Buffaloes past last week's No. 3, Nebraska, which merely hammered Oregon State 35-7.

Notre Dame collected 57 first-place votes and 1,497 points after improving to 4-0 with a 40-7 defeat of Purdue. Miami, a 26-20 winner over Michigan State, got three first-place votes and 1,426 points.

Colorado had 1,344 points and Nebraska (4-0) 1,324. Michigan (2-1) rounded out the top five, improving one spot after beating Maryland 41-21.

Tennessee (4-0) made the biggest jump of the week, improving six spots to No. 6 after beating then-No. 4 Auburn 21-14. Arkansas (3-0) moved up to seventh by beating Texas-El Paso 39-7 and Pittsburgh (3-0-1) is eighth after tying West Virginia 31-31.

stops on Clemson's final possession; senior cornerback Rodney Dickerson had 10 tackles; and senior tackle Anthony Allen had eight tackles.

Jackson, a part-time player, was forced into action when Sally went down and responded with some big-time plays.

"I just let my instincts take over," Jackson said. "The coaches put us in perfect position to make the plays."

The work of the Duke secondary put the clamps on the Tigers' sweeps and options, limiting Terry Allen to 33 yards the second half after he had rambled for 110 the first half.

"They came out and did something different," Allen said. "I'm not sure what it was, but we couldn't adjust to it. The second half it was the best defense we've faced. They forced things back inside on the sweep and also did a good job on the option."

the front office and they said to ask Davey."

Mazzi

Mazzi, who was born in Brooklyn, joined a pitiful Mets team in 1976 and became an instant teen idol.

He had long black hair, good looks and wore his uniform just a little tight. While his numbers were just a little better than average, he looked like Mickey Mantle compared to the rest of the Mets.

Mazzi, however, lost his job in 1981 when the speedy Wilson came along.

After stops in Texas, Yankee Stadium and Pittsburgh, the Mets got Mazzi back on Aug. 1, 1986, and he was a member of their World Series championship team.

"I've really been lucky when you think of it," Mazzi said. "When you come to the park, look at the kids and look in their eyes. This is what they want to do and I've been doing it all my life."

Football Contest

1st Prize $25
 2nd Prize $15

The end zone in real estate is the closing meeting. As in football, it's a lot easier to get into the end zone if you understand and practice the fundamentals. My team is Aldridge & Southerland, and my coach will tell you that I practice the fundamentals. I've been in the end zone 24 times with 2 weeks left in the 3rd quarter. If you would like to hear more about the #1 team in Pitt County, and a Realtor who practices the fundamentals, give me a call.

WEEKLY PRIZES
 1st Prize $25.00
 2nd Prize $15.00

CONTEST RULES

1. Thirty-two football games are placed on these pages. Pick the winner of each game (not the score) and write the team name opposite the advertiser's name on the entry blank. The entrant picking the most correct winners each week will be awarded $25.00. Second place $15.00.
2. Pick a number which you think will be the most number of points scored by both teams in any one of the week's games listed and write your answer in the space provided on the entry blank. This will be used to break ties. In the event of a further tie the money will be equally divided between the winning entrants.
3. Only one entry per person per week. The contest is open to all except employees of The Daily Reflector and their immediate families.
4. Entries must be in The Daily Reflector office not later than 5:00 p.m. Friday or postmarked not later than Friday, 7:00 p.m. Address entries to: FOOTBALL CONTEST, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835. (Reasonable facsimiles also accepted).

For the absolutely best service department in Eastern North Carolina, WYNNE CHEVROLET of Bethel has got them all beat! If you want to go with the winning team, go to Wynne Chevrolet.

DUNKEL INDEX

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average position rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.
