Pitt-Greenville's new terminal facilities are expected to be ready in January

Airport Expansion Will Solve Space Problems For Decade

By J.R. Williams
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Expansions under way at Pitt-Greenville Airport should be enough to satisfy the public's needs for the next 10 to 20 years and possibly beyond if the facility continues to function as a commuter airport, according to the manager.

Jim Turcotte said the airport's 11,000-square-foot expansion, expected to be completed by the beginning of January, will be able to comfortably serve the 120,000 passengers who use the commuter airport yearly.

"Based on the information we have now, the space is designed for the number of people we have at peak time," Turcotte said. "If that role changes then we're going to have to re-look at it."

In January, existing ticket counters, waiting areas and arrival and departure areas will be moved to the new facility, Turcotte said. Then, the area now in use, about 5,000 square feet, will be renovated.

Turcotte said the facility will be comfortable after expansions if passengers leave direct from the airport, and it isn't used as a connecting stop on a consistent basis.

"Our present structure was one of the first commuters in the Southeast, but it was only designed to handle 20,000 people," said Turcotte, who has been at the airport for 15 years. "We are severely cramped for space."

"We have a number of passengers that are standing because there is no where for them to sit. We're just going to improve the basic concept of it."

The new facility, while remaining an origin-to-destination airport, will have a larger waiting area, additional ticket counters, a larger baggage claims area, a bigger lobby and an increased security area, according to Turcotte.

"Our tentative completion date is the end of February in 1990," said Michael Nieri of Eastern Construction Co., general contractor for the project. Nieri said the project also includes renovation of the existing restrooms, baggage claims and car rental areas.

Turcotte said the airport is not the only business that will benefit from the new facility.

"Most businesses look to locate where they can get their people in and out, where they can get their products out and the airport is crucial to that," he said. "The airport goes hand and hand with business, industry and the quality of life for people who travel for pleasure."

Latin Chiefs Denounce Noriega's Government

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ICA, Peru — Two Latin American presidents broke with tradition at a regional summit and denounced Panama's government, which Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega effectively heads, as a dictatorship.

Presidents of the Group of Eight nations, meeting in this desert city, were to consider expelling Panama from the organization.

The Central American country was suspended from the regional group last year, when Noriega engineered the removal of civilian President Eric Delvalle after Delvalle tried to fire him.

The presidents, in opening statements Wednesday, also urged that the United States and Europe balance police actions to cut the production and trafficking of drugs with efforts to wean its population from addiction to them.

President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela told other leaders that Panama's military government is a "masked dictatorship." The comment came one day after he accused Noriega's Panama Defense Forces of murder in snuffing out a coup attempt Oct. 3.

Peru's Alan Garcia, host of the meeting that ends tonight, used his opening remarks to "express publicly the Peruvian people's and the Peruvian government's repudiation and condemnation of the military dictatorship."

Perez and Garcia's condemnations broke with the traditional reluctance of Group of Eight nations to publicly denounce a member at such meetings.

The summit began a day after Garcia, Colombia's Virgilio Barco and Bolivia's Jaime Paz Zamora agreed to invite President Bush to a drug summit in Latin America that would take place within 90 days. Bush accepted immediately.

The three Andean nations are the source of nearly all of the world's cocaine.

Perez and the other presidents made clear Wednesday they did not share Bush's focus on police action as the best way to fight the drug trade.

"The more demand grows in the North, the more production will grow in the South. Police actions will be useless unless demand is reduced," Perez said.

"The problem is not only in Medellin," said President Julio Sanguinetti of Uruguay, referring to the Colombian city that is home to the world's largest cocaine cartel. "It is also in the streets of New York City."

The Medellin cartel has virtually been at war with the Colombian government since suspected drug assassins killed the country's leading presidential candidate Aug. 18.

Perez, Sanguinetti, Garcia, Barco and presidents Jose Sarney of Brazil, Carlos Menem of Argentina and Carlos Salinas de Gortari of Mexico were taking part in the third summit of the Group of Eight, which was founded in 1987.

The leaders were meeting under heavy security at the plush Hotel Las Dunas on the outskirts of Ica, a city of 350,000 people in the desert 180 miles southeast of Lima.

Other topics on the summit agenda were Central America's conflicts, the regional foreign debt burden and environmental damage to the Amazon.

Deeper In Debt Could Be Better

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

By going deeper in debt, Pitt County Memorial Hospital's financial picture — especially as far as its bond rating is concerned — could be dramatically improved, medical center officials told members of the Board of County Commissioners on Wednesday.

But commissioners, who were asked to endorse the concept by approving a proposal to issue two series of bonds totaling as much as $88.46 million, delayed action on the request until a scheduled meeting Monday in Bethel.

Cathy Barger, PCMH's chief financial officer, told commissioners at an early-afternoon meeting that the hospital's plans to issue between $50 million and $60 million in bonds to finance construction of an additional 143 beds need to change.

While PCMH's debt position is considered "very strong" because the medical facility has relatively little debt, Mrs. Barger said the hospital's cash position — with some $25 million in the bank — is considered weak when compared to other financially strong hospitals with an A-plus bond rating.

Mrs. Barger said a strategy approved by the hospital's board to improve the chances of getting an A-plus rating for bonds to construct the additional beds includes issuing two series of bonds.

Barbecue And Stew Mix With Politics

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Politics and barbecue went hand in hand at the North Tar River Fellowship Club's annual meeting Wednesday at River Road Ranch near Greenville.

Legislators, judges and Council of State members balanced plates of shredded pork and Brunswick stew in one hand, leaving the other free to press the flesh with the more than 200 people who showed up.

Between bites of barbecue and sips of iced tea, the participants chatted, campaigned and traded gossip.

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter and other local officials also worked the crowd, seeking votes in November's municipal election.

Before eating, the group paused to mourn former Superior Court Judge Charles B. Winberry, who died Monday in his Rocky Mount home.

Winberry had one of the best political minds in the state, State Bureau of Investigation Director Robert B. Morgan, a former U.S. senator, said. "He was one of my two closest and dearest friends," Morgan said, the other being former East Carolina University Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins, who died in January. Morgan is a former chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

Among the many candidates and potential candidates at the meeting was former state Sen. Bo Thomas, a Hendersonville businessman who said he wants to be the Democratic nominee who challenges U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms next year.

Thomas said he has traveled back and forth across the state several times, trying to establish name recognition, especially in eastern North Carolina, where he is still a relative unknown.

"I've driven over 300 miles today and I ain't where I'm going yet," he said. "I'm going to wear it out."

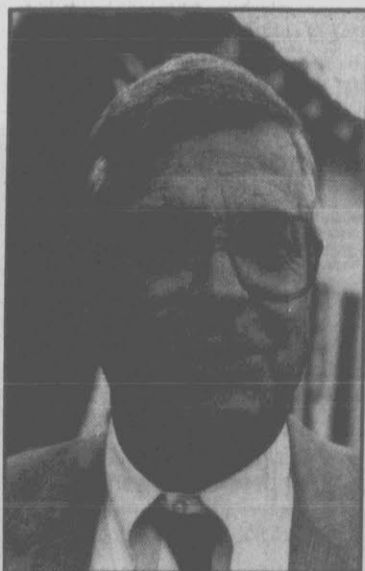

Thomas said he is the Democrat who can beat Helms, because he said he can win the farmers, small businessmen and factory workers who usually vote for Helms.

"Jesse Helms was elected in 1972 by Richard Nixon," Thomas said. "In 1984, Jesse didn't beat Jim Hunt, Ronald Reagan beat Jim Hunt."

"Now, Jesse doesn't have Ronald Reagan or Richard Nixon, he's got me."

Thomas criticized Helms for supporting oppressive regimes in other countries, while ignoring the needs of North Carolinians. "There's no question — Jesse Helms has been the best senator South Africa ever had."

He also said Helms will not gain black support by hiring civil-rights activist James Meredith as an adviser. "He won't net one vote from that," Thomas said. "He'll get James' vote — if he registers in North Carolina."

BO THOMAS

Architect Approved For Jail

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County now has an architect to design a new jail and if everything goes well could have a new 284-bed facility ready for occupancy in the spring of 1992.

County commissioners on Wednesday OK'd a contract with Grier-Fripp Associates of Charlotte for design of the jail, then gave architect Bill Fripp some guidance as to how many prisoners the facility should hold.

Fripp, who told commissioners last week that his firm's fee would

Honecker May Be Ousted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East Germany's Communist Party will consider social reforms but will stick to a strict socialist ideology and maintain its grip on power, a high-ranking party official said today.

But there were indications of differences within the party hierarchy over how to deal with an increasingly agitated populace demanding more freedoms from the hard-line government.

West German media speculated today that 77-year-old Erich Honecker may be forced to step down as East German leader.

Some Communist Party leaders warned Honecker in a Politburo meeting on Wednesday that unless calls for democratic reforms are urgently addressed, he could face labor unrest, party sources said.

Sports Bar Request Withdrawn

The Greenville Board of Adjustment was spared from taking sides in a potentially heated neighborhood controversy Wednesday night when the J.M. Kane Co. withdrew its request for a special use permit to locate a sports bar near The Plaza.

Merrill Flood, city planner, said approximately 30 to 40 people appeared at Wednesday night's hearing, with the majority in opposition to Kane's request.

J.M. Kane, a construction contractor out of Raleigh and the leading developer of The Plaza reconstruction, had sought the special use permit to operate a bar with billiard tables on an outlying parcel of the mall property on N.C. 43.

In other business, the board:

- Granted an ordinance variance to the Pitt County Mental Health which would allow the group to locate a family care home at 1100 Ward Street.

The facility for recovering drug-dependent adolescents can now be located within a half-mile radius of three other family care homes. If the request to the Board of Adjustment had failed, the group could have appealed to the City Council for a change in the city's zoning ordinance.

Mental Health's request drew a majority of the council members together on Sept. 22 to hear discussion between the city's development department and Mental Health.

Flood said the board, in deciding to allow the variance, was looking for some common ground between the city ordinance and federal standards.

- Granted a special use permit to Heritage Development to allow the expansion of a proposed bank at Executive Park West on Stantonsburg Road.

- Continued a request from Hallmark Development Co. pending an ordinance amendment. Hallmark had originally requested a special use permit to allow signs at the southeast corner of Stantonsburg Road and Moye Boulevard.

- Denied a request by Earl Lee for a variance to create a lot not meeting minimum area requirements for locating a duplex at the corner of Clark and 12th streets. The request was denied because Lee did not attend the meeting.

- Continued a request by Pleasant Ridge Development Co. for a variance to construct a duplex on a substandard lot at 1309 Forbes Street.

Truck Rams Office Building

By Frances Horton Arrington
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — A tractor-trailer hit a car and then rammied into an office building here Wednesday evening, injuring the truck driver and four people who were working inside the office, according to a Washington Fire and Rescue Department spokesman.

Fire/Rescue Chief Hugh Sterling said his crews responded to a call around 3:45 p.m. Wednesday at the North Carolina Natural Gas building on East Fifth Street.

"The entire-18 wheeler went through the wall, all the way in," Sterling said. "It was a good three to five feet inside the office."

According to Sterling's report, the tractor-trailer hit a car driven by Joseph Rhinehart at the intersection of Market and Fifth streets and then swerved into the building.

Sterling said that when his crews arrived at the scene, the truck was inside the building and five people, including the truck driver, were still inside.

One woman, Lydell Martin, was pinned between the truck and the wall, Sterling said. She was conscious and alert, seated in an upright position with her legs pinned under a desk, according to Sterling. He said it took rescue workers about an hour to free the woman.

Sterling said his crews finished clearing the scene around 8:30 p.m. He said the gas company building appeared to be a loss. "I've never seen anything like that," Sterling said.

The five injured people were taken to the Beaufort County Hospital. Their conditions were not known today.

No information was available from the Washington Police Department this morning on the identity of the truck driver or the others injured in the accident.

Scout Camporee Scheduled

The Cub Scouts of Pitt District will join the Boy Scouts in many of the activities during the weekend.

The camporee events, which will be held just off N.C. 11 near Winterville, are open to the public.

Seniors, 'Olympic' Athletes Honored

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission on Wednesday night honored local participants of the Senior Games and the Special Olympics Soccer Team.

Chairman Rosemond Tipton and Boyd Lee, department executive director, presented certificates to residents who took part in the North Carolina Senior Games in Raleigh in September.

Connie Sappenfield, the department's coordinator of special programs, joined Mrs. Tipton and Lee in presenting each participant of the soccer team a Special Olympics paperweight and a certificate. The local team placed fourth in a roster of 10 teams competing in Memphis, Tenn. earlier this month.

Ms. Sappenfield said that due to routing complications, the team had to return to Raleigh from Memphis via New York, "which gave the boys an opportunity to see something of the big city, an exciting bonus for them."

Lee said a considerable savings in utilities charges at the Aquatic and Fitness Center operated by the department has been realized. Lee presented a report by Bill Twine, coordinator of the center, which shows savings of $4,644 following installation of a propane gas fired pool heater and aerobics room air conditioning system.

The utility bill for June, July, August and September at the center this year totaled $10,812, according to the report, compared to the 1988 bill of $15,477.

Lee said that work at the Little League fields and renovations at Guy Smith Stadium is progressing on schedule.

According to the department's quarterly report, participation in activities and programs at facilities and parks totaled 114,971 users for the months of July, August and September.

Implications At Home & Abroad

The military balance of power between the United States and the Soviet Union has been a fragile item since the end of World War II. Now, that balance may undergo some changes that have sweeping implications both across the globe and at home.

The Soviets, through decades of internal military dominance, have maintained and expanded a huge war machine at the expense of domestic needs.

The United States has provided consumer goods for its citizens, but at the same time it has found it necessary to stay in the military race to avoid potentially being overrun in a quick war with the Soviet "enemy".

That is one of the things that is rapidly changing in Gorbachev's Soviet Union.

With the consumer economy drained by military expenditures and faced with great dissatisfaction among its citizens, Gorbachev is seeking to channel more of the economic output into consumer goods.

That means cutbacks in military spending, and that action has far reaching significance for the United States and its western allies.

The International Institute for Strategic Studies says that if Gorbachev makes the promised cuts the Soviets will be incapable of launching a surprise attack on the West by 1990. That is a huge development.

"The unilateral reductions will, once complete, virtually eliminate the surprise-attack threat which has so long concerned NATO planners," the institute said in its annual survey.

While the Soviets would still have a huge military force, the institute says it would take one to two weeks to marshal forces for an attack.

The implications are large in western Europe, which would be the focus of Soviet surprise attack. They are also significant for the United States, which has obligations to protect its allies.

In easing the military spending for the Soviet Union, Gorbachev is also opening the door to reducing military spending by the United States. That is a positive. While defense spending hasn't sapped the consumer market in the United States, it has contributed to a huge federal deficit which must be brought under control. Perhaps the international military outlook will help the nation move toward reducing this deficit which casts a shadow on the future of the world's largest democracy.

She died at age 81 last week, but she will never be forgotten.

There are two Academy Awards to remember her great acting career by, and there is far more.

Her past, present and future fans — and we can be certain that some of them are not yet born — will have a long list of films to savour through the decades.

Almost 100 films are left including "Dark Victory" with Ronald Reagan, "The Little Foxes", "Jezebel", "Of Human Bondage" and "Dangerous".

In the 1940s there were "The Man Who Came To Dinner", "Watch On The Rhine", "Mr. Skiffington", "The Corn is Green", and "A Stolen Life".

Then there was "All About Eve" and an Oscar for "The Star". She frightened us to death in the 1960s in the horror movie "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?"

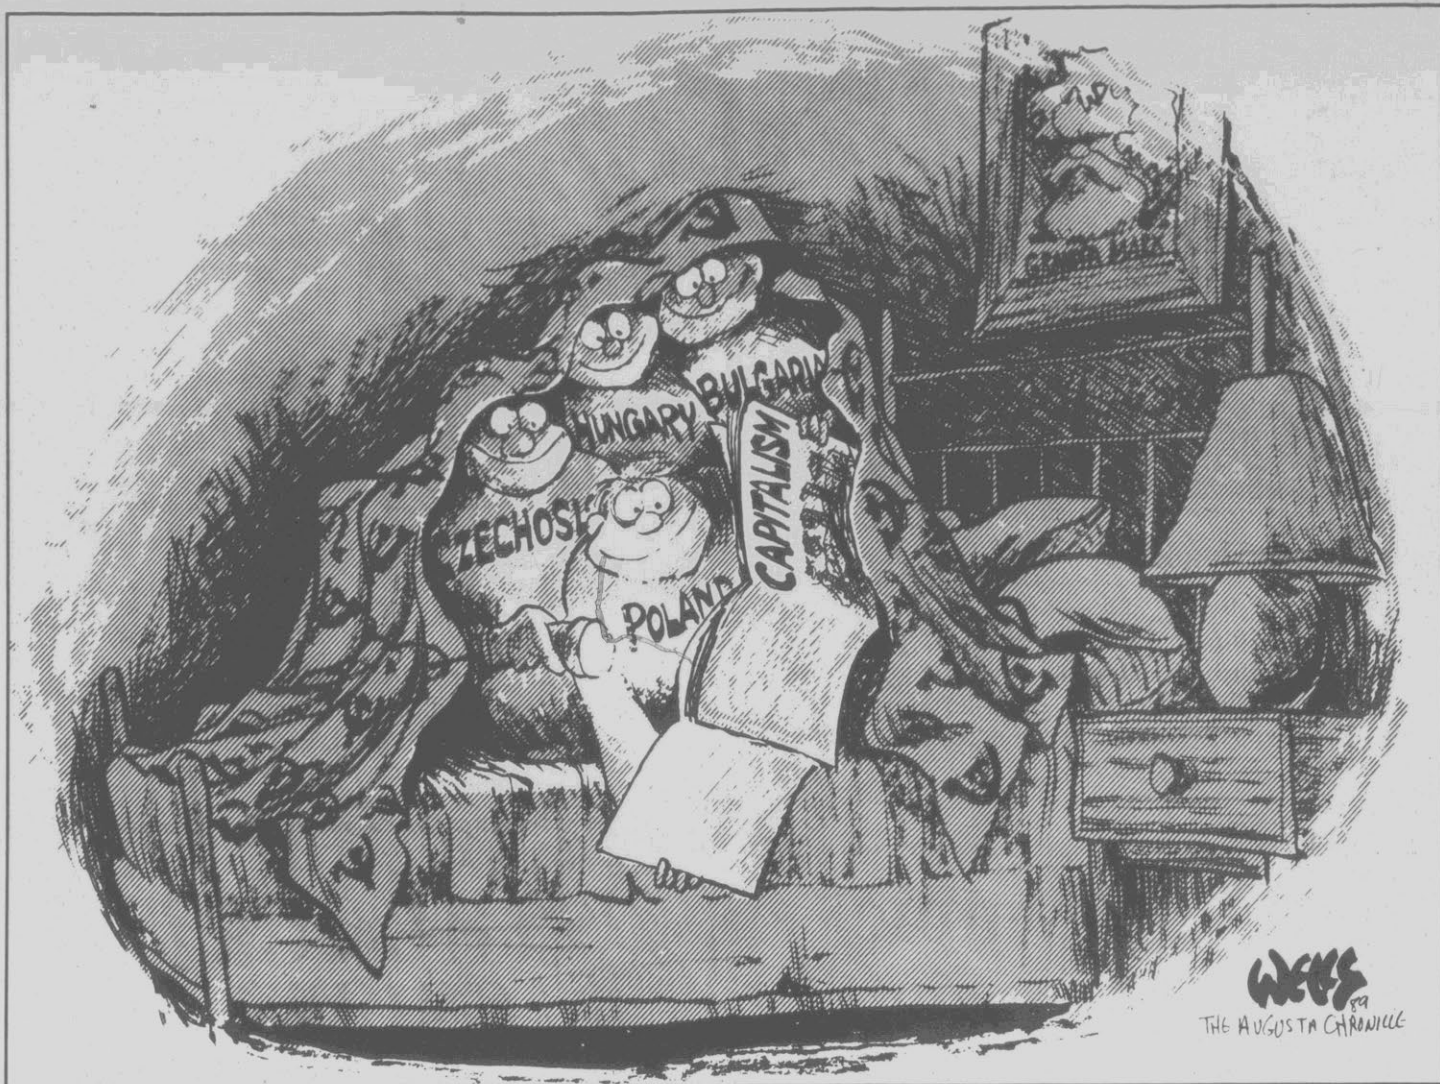

As a young actress she was beautiful in a different way from other female Hollywood stars. Her eyes were unforgettable. Her great acting ability captivated the public and, somehow she seemed at her best in evil roles.

Bette Davis was a perfectionist who battled her way to the top.

She said, "I was a legendary terror. I was insufferably rude and ill-mannered in the cultivation of my career. I had no time for pleasantries. I said what was on my mind, and it wasn't always printable. I have been uncompromising, peppery, intractable, monomaniacal, tactless, volatile, and often disagreeable. I suppose I'm larger than life."

She was all that and much more. She assumed control when she appeared on the big screen. She was a star when the term meant everything in Hollywood. Her final movie has been made, but Bette Davis will fascinate us forever.

Questions to ask about elected officials:

Is he my elected official when I ask for a reason for his decision and he tells me it's personal?

Is he my elected official when I want levelheaded judgment and all I get is him screaming "I resent that."?

Is he my elected official when I need him to work for my child's best interest and he wants to work to see "Where the rumors are coming from"?

Is he my elected official when I ask for calm reasoning and I get illogical rantings?

Is he my elected official when he represents a select group and not my attendance area?

Is he my elected official when his defense is no defense?

Is he my elected official or should a recall vote of a Board of Education member be a serious consideration?

Is he my elected official when I go to the voting polls next? Never!

To the editor:

I have read the letters, editorials, and articles discussing the mayhem and madness of the Pitt County Schools. I have listened to the opinion of my colleagues, which are largely ignored. I have heard the viewpoints of those elected to represent us. What I haven't heard lately from the media, the politicians, the public, and yes, even teachers themselves, is what a good job we are doing! Teachers are teaching, students are learning! Despite the bickering and the politicking, terrific things are happening in classrooms across this country! Step into a classroom and see what's taking place. It's exciting! A visit to your nearest school will do wonders for the "blues" and other "ailments." I would recommend it to everyone! Become involved in your local schools. Be a positive part of the learning process for our kids. Remember, they are our future, and they do learn by watching and listening to us! Let's step back, take a few deep breaths, and remember why we're all here!

Singed By A Firefly

WASHINGTON — Twice last month George Bush mused, almost wistfully, that he had not yet been "tested by fire." Last week he was tested by a firefly and got singed.

The insect, Noriega, threatens no significant U.S. interest and deserves U.S. attention only for humanitarian reasons: Panamanians have suffered enough. But so has U.S. governance suffered enough, from pandemic unseriousness of the sort revealed in the latest policy train wreck regarding Panama.

Asked whether there had been a problem with communication of clear thoughts within his administration during the attempted coup, Bush illustrated the problem: "I don't think so. We had kind of almost a running meeting there and I think that's a good question, and I don't think I can factually answer that yet."

To other questions, Bush responded characteristically by caricaturing the questioners: "What people, some people seem to have wanted me to do is unleash the full military.... I suppose you could have gone to general quarters...." The real questions are more mundane, such as: Why block only two roads in Panama City, simultaneously implicating the United States in the coup and guaranteeing its failure?

Bush's playground non-arguments are now a pattern. When reporters questioned him about the phony drug bust, staged at the behest of his speech writers across the street from the White House, he testily said to the questioners: "Are these advocates here for this drug guy?"

Flippant responses to serious questions are an administration specialty. The secretary of state has rejected criticism of a particular policy because the administration is "rocking along with a 70 percent approval rating." The symbol of this administration should be a wetted finger held up to the breezes.

The administration is justifiably cross about Congress' attempt to have things both ways, to have fastidiousness (no "interference" in the "internal affairs" of others) and also the fun of Noriega-bashing. But the administration is soggy with the "to get along, go along" spirit. The President's political philosophy is, Hey, we were not sent here to bicker. So he seems to have vaguely sagged into a policy of encouraging Panamanian coups — but only those in which the toppled dictator will be read his Miranda rights and kept intact.

This kind of split-the-difference spirit produces the use of U.S. troops to block two roads but not a third because, that third road being important, there might have been trouble. That was a policy likely to produce what it did produce: U.S. complicity in failure.

Sen. Sam Nunn says dryly that sometimes we should be prepared for our policy to succeed. But was encouraging a coup really U.S. "policy"? Words do not constitute policy. There must be some serious intending.

It is said that Bush's is a "presidency of good intentions" but that it is a bit careless about connecting ends with means. That criticism is too kind. The administration's airy words are not as substantial as serious intentions. When there is a pattern of willing ends without willing means, it is reasonable to conclude that the ends are not willed at all.

The reason that Bush's Washington is such a happy place for politicians of both parties is that words have, by presidential example, been completely severed not only from actions but even from any serious states of mind.

It's urgent to enact a catastrophic health-care program? Oops.

George Will

Bad vibes from the grass roots. Repeal program. Excuse me, but is there a public-health policy buried in here somewhere?

Cut the deficit to meet the "requirements" or the "law"? We won't even calculate the deficit in accordance with common sense.

The "Education President" proposes an education initiative costing 1-800th of the cost of the manned flight to Mars that he blithely endorses. No one bats an eye because no one really believes that anyone means much of anything said about anything. Some Panamanian plotters, now deceased, who heard all those words about America's unsleeping passion to unhorse Noriega, did not understand the game.

What the game gives America is a splash-of-the-week presidency, as in the splashy endorsement of a "global" and "verifiable" ban on chemical weapons, something that no adult anywhere believes is possible. This is not to say Bush is cynical. On the contrary, there may not be a scintilla of cynicism in him. Cynicism involves a complexity, perhaps even a purposefulness, of which Bush seems innocent.

Topless Ordinance Omitted

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. — Theoretically, women could have been parading around the beach with their shirts off all summer without breaking the law.

A law to "prohibit exposure of the female breast" has been in the town code of ordinances for years. But that particular ordinance was omitted from the code by mistake when the town rewrote its ordinances this summer, Town Manager Dale Ralston said this week.

"We didn't know it wasn't on the books until Surf City called to find out how our ordinance was worded," Ralston said.

Surf City had two separate incidents in one week last month involving topless sunbathers on the beach. Surf City had no ordinance to deal with the uninhibited. To maintain a family-oriented beach, its town officials decided a law was needed, so they called Wrightsville Beach for the proper wording.

Realizing they, too, were powerless, town officials started rewriting the ordinance, which is scheduled for adoption at today's monthly Board of Aldermen meeting. The law will be effective immediately following adoption, Ralston said.

Wrightsville Beach police get two or three complaints per summer about topless women, but it's not a problem in the town, said Police Chief George Antley.

"When there is a complaint, the officers usually rush down to investigate," Antley said. "We had one report that you could hear officers all over town trying to get there until they learned it was males."

Most of the culprits stopped by police have been from foreign countries that allow topless sunbathing. Some people from France couldn't understand when police tried to explain that they were breaking the law, Antley said.

IN THE STATE

Parks Open

RALEIGH (AP) — Four state parks, closed since Sept. 22 due to damage caused by Tropical Storm Hugo, have been reopened, the N.C. Division of Parks and Recreation announced Wednesday.

South Mountains State Park in Burke County and Boone's Cave State Park in Davidson County reopened. Morrow Mountain State Park in Stanly County also reopened, but trails and part of the campground remain closed. Stone Mountain State Park in Wilkes and Alleghany counties has reopened with most facilities in operation.

The U.S. 221 and the Alleghany County accesses at New River State Park in Ashe and Alleghany counties remain closed. The Wagoner Road access at New River is open for picnicking and canoeing.

Crowders Mountain State Park in Gaston County and Duke Power State Park in Iredell County remain closed. Division officials said leaning trees and snags pose a danger to visitor safety and would have to be removed before these parks are reopened.

Complaints Filed

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — A female police department employee who has alleged sexual harassment by a male officer is also accusing the department of retaliating against her for a statement she made in the investigation of Lenoir's former police chief.

John Day, assistant city manager said Tuesday that the complaints are being investigated. He said city officials stand behind their actions taken in the matter.

Day said the city would abide by any finding that the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which is handling the complaint, might decide.

Anita Griffin, 38, hired into the department in December 1983, has filed a discrimination and retaliation claim with the EEOC.

"I was sexually harassed by Patrolman Bruce Roland. I was demoted in status and pay," Griffin states in the EEOC complaint. "I was transferred to an assigned shift with longer duty hours and not properly paid overtime. I have been constantly harassed because I opposed practices unlawful under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended."

Roland, who has been with the department since 1984, on Tuesday declined comment on the allegation, saying it was in his best interest not to respond.

Fire Reported

DURHAM (AP) — Five families were left homeless Wednesday after a fire destroyed one apartment and damaged several more Tuesday night.

Two other apartments may have suffered water damage, for a total loss in the blaze of more than $75,000, Durham Fire Investigator M.E. Smith said. The building is owned by Lee Ray Bergman.

The fire started about 11:30 p.m. when a candle left burning next to a bed in a rear bedroom of an upstairs apartment apparently fell over, Smith said.

The resident, Roberta Scott Pay, 29, was using candles and kerosene lamps in the apartment, where she had been without utilities for more than two months, Smith said.

Action Postponed

HIGH POINT (AP) — A policy on sexual harassment was tabled Tuesday, but Guilford County school board members are expected to adopt the measure next month.

Board Chairwoman Jeanette Pippin said Wednesday that action on the policy was postponed because several board members had questions about it. She expects the board's policy committee to work on the sexual harassment policy with board attorney John Hardy later this month, so the board can reconsider it Nov. 14.

"There were some board members who had some concerns that the policy didn't read smoothly," Ms. Pippin said. "It was tabled so everyone could get their two cents in."

Fires In Plants Not Uncommon, Official Says

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Fires like the one that occurred this week at the Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant are a known hazard at power plants that use hydrogen-cooled generators, a Nuclear Regulatory Commission spokesman said.

"This type of fire occurs from time to time, although not often, at a power plant," said Kenneth Clark, an NRC spokesman in Atlanta. "It is an infrequent occurrence, but it does occur at power-generating stations."

In some power-plant generators, hydrogen gas is used to cool the system, and to prevent electrical charges inside the generator. "Unfortunately, under the right circumstances, it does ignite," Clark told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

He said the Shearon Harris generator, which is outside the nuclear reactor, is similar to those used at hydroelectric, coal-fired or gas-turbine power plants.

"This was a totally non-nuclear incident," he said. "This was an industrial accident, not a nuclear accident."

There have been similar fires at nuclear plants in the United States in recent years, he said, but Monday's fire was the first in North Carolina.

Monday's alert was the second for Shearon Harris, operated by Carolina Power & Light Co. The company's Brunswick Nuclear Plant near Southport also has had two alerts, and Duke Power Co.'s McGuire Nuclear Station near Charlotte has had one.

Stabilization Tobacco Way Up This Year, Officials Indicate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON — A sudden surge this year in tobacco going "under loan" reverses an earlier trend of strong demand and sales, a situation that could affect the amount Southern growers are allowed to produce next year, officials said.

If the trend continues, a grower-owned tobacco co-op may have to buy twice as much tobacco this year than in 1988.

As of Tuesday, the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. had bought 12 million pounds. At that rate, the co-op will buy between 25 million and 35 million pounds, said Fred Bond, stabilization's general manager.

The cooperative buys tobacco that fails to receive bids higher than the federal price support. The tobacco is processed and later sold to repay loans made by Commodity Credit Corp., the financial arm of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Growers received an 18 percent increase in the production quota this year, the largest in several years. The increase was questioned by some people and prompted agriculture officials to caution farmers about going in debt for bulk curing barns, automatic harvesters and other equipment to produce the tobacco. The officials said the quota could easily fall the following year, which could cause financial problems for producers with large loan payments.

"It was questionable whether we needed an increase or not," said Larry Wooten, a Pender County tobacco producer and former president of International Tobacco Growers Association.

"Here's the disappointing thing. ... The competition and strong demand are not there that I thought were going to be there," Wooten told the Wilmington Morning Star. "We thought — I thought — the market was going to be a lot stronger than it has been."

Farmers, he said, "were expecting a super year marketwise."

Until about three weeks ago, the cooperative was buying less than 1 percent of total sales each week at auction markets, Bond said. Two weeks ago, that figure climbed to 2.5 percent. Last week, stabilization's purchases soared to 7.8 percent. Tuesday, the first day of sales this week, stabilization bought 7.4 percent. "I think we'll have a better handle on it after this week," Bond said.

The 15 million pounds stabilization bought in 1988 was less than 2 percent of total sales.

Bond estimated that between 170 million and 180 million pounds remain to be marketed this season. If 180 million more pounds are sold this year and stabilization buys 9 percent of it, Bond said, the co-op would buy 16 million more pounds before the season ends, bringing the total purchases this year to 28 million pounds. "Obviously we're going to have more tobacco than last year."

The increase in stabilization's purchases this year coincides with a decrease in prices of upper-stalk leaves.

"When looking at the receipts we're handling," Bond said, the co-op is buying more upper-stalk tobacco, also known as "leaf" tobacco, than it did in previous years. Upper-stalk tobacco has higher federal price support levels than lower-stalk leaves.

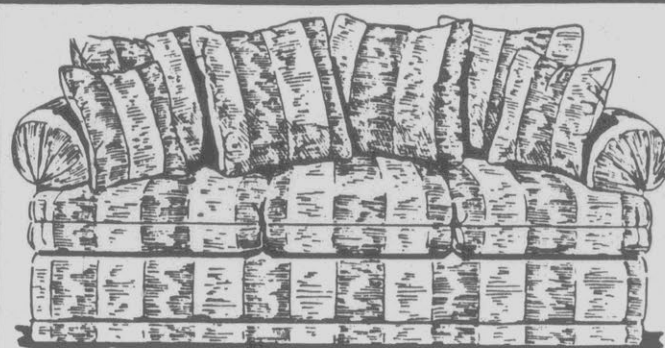

Although he is unsure why demand is light for upper-stalk leaves, Bond said that the approximately 50 million pounds of "carryover" tobacco sold early in the season may have caused demand to drop. "Carryover" tobacco, which is primarily upper-stalk leaves, is tobacco that farmers produced the previous year but could not sell because they had already met their marketing quota.

Tar Heel Waste Plan Charlotte Suffers Hugo's Aftermath Still Up In The Air

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina will submit to the federal government next week a half-finished plan for coping with hazardous wastes in an effort to meet an Oct. 17 deadline to get $26 million in federal Superfund cleanup money, officials said.

Even though the plan's centerpiece — a regional agreement for handling hazardous wastes — won't be in place by then, the state hopes to convince the Environmental Protection Agency that it is on the brink of such a pact, aides to Gov. Jim Martin told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

If an agreement among eight Southeastern states is reached, it would require the governor to call an extra session of the General Assembly to ratify North Carolina's role. No session has been called yet, virtually ruling out any chance of ratifying an agreement by the deadline. Once an agreement is sealed, the state would revise its written comments to EPA.

It's unclear whether they would withdraw the Superfund money for the entire year, said Linda Little, director of the Governor's Waste Management Board, or whether the money would be unfrozen at the time our plan is acceptable — next month, December, whenever.

Carl Perry, an EPA spokesman in Atlanta, said there was no indication how much flexibility states would get, if any, to revise plans after Oct. 17. But another official said it would take weeks to review reports from all 50 states, thus allowing a state to revise its report after the deadline but before EPA officials examined it.

The $26 million is intended for the cleanup of chemically tainted soils near Aberdeen and Wilmington.

For months, North Carolina has been negotiating with seven other states over the agreement, which would allow states to share facilities for treating and disposing the wastes during the next 20 years.

Alabama has been holding back on the hazardous waste agreement, saying it only wants to work with states that have existing waste facilities or firm commitments to build them. But on Tuesday, North Carolina officials said plans for North Carolina to build a disposal site for the region's low-level nuclear waste could be derailed if no hazardous waste alliance is forged with the other states — South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

"We have an independent process, but we may be affected by it (the statement)," Raymond Murray, chairman of the North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority, told a meeting of the American Chemical Society in Winston-Salem. "We are very hopeful that we do not become hostage to" those negotiations.

Linda Little, executive director of the Governor's Waste Management Board, confirmed that North Carolina's commitment to build a disposal site for low-level waste has entered the negotiations as the state tries to persuade Alabama to open access to its hazardous-waste landfill.

"We have tried to keep the negotiations separate until recently," she told the Winston-Salem Journal from her office in Raleigh. "But they are inextricably mingling in the minds of many people in North Carolina, including legislators."

Key North Carolina legislators said Tuesday that, if the regional plan for hazardous waste fails, they would support an effort to overturn the 1983 compact among North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi. That compact includes a 20-year plan to dispose of low-level nuclear waste at a single site.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Three weeks after Hugo ripped through this tree-lined city with a vengeance, its mark can be seen on almost every street.

"From an airplane, it looks like a forest that got hit by a hurricane," said Don Steger, an assistant city manager who was in charge of emergency operations after Hugo hit in the predawn hours of Sept. 22.

"Charlotte was the silent victim," Steger said, referring to the national coverage of the devastation in Charleston, S.C. "One certainly didn't expect a city 200 miles from the ocean to suffer this kind of damage."

On some streets, storm debris is piled so high that houses are nearly hidden. Stumps the size of small pickup trucks offer a formidable, if not impossible, challenge.

Like many cities, Charlotte likes to brag about its picturesque tree-lined streets. On Queens Road and other residential streets surrounding the business district, 100-foot-tall willow oaks form a canopy. Pine, magnolia and hickories also are popular.

When Hugo came blasting through, many of those trees were down — some blocking streets and knocking down power lines. Many others smashed against homes.

City arborist Don McSweeney said the overall number of trees that came down actually was small.

"The city lost about 1 or 2 percent of its tree population," he said. "In certain areas, though, it was closer to 100 percent."

While no part of the city was spared, Hugo seemed to cause more problems in the older, residential areas near the heart of the city. Those areas — Myers Park, Elizabeth and Dilworth — have a lot of older trees, which tend to be larger.

"A lot of the trees have had their lives shortened as a result of the storm," McSweeney said. "Many will die over the next few years from decay and disease."

City officials say it will take until March to haul away all the storm debris. By the end of the month, contracts will be awarded to remove 200,000 truckloads — enough to fill a 60-story skyscraper three or four times.

The cost to remove the storm debris is expected to be about $10 million. So that the federal government would pick up most of the tab, city crews were instructed not to haul away any more trash after Thursday.

Meanwhile, residents were being asked to remain patient. That's not always so easy.

"You can't walk on the sidewalk to catch the bus," said Mike Gardner, who is still waiting for estimates on damage to his house in southeast Charlotte from four downed pines.

Old Law May Be Used In Case

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE — At least nine defendants who blockaded an Asheville abortion clinic in July are relying on a defense 114 years old, but say they're ready for fines or jail if they lose.

The "Operation Rescue" defendants appeared in Buncombe County Superior Court Monday and last week to plead innocent to charges of second-degree trespass. All are appealing guilty verdicts from District Court. The defendants are among 61 people police removed July 22 from the entrances of Western Carolina Medical Clinic.

Most of the 51 adults pleaded no contest or innocent to trespass charges. Those who chose to fight the charges in Superior Court plan to use what is known as the necessity defense, according to the Rev. Alan Bragwell, one of the defendants.

The defense, first recognized in North Carolina in 1875, says laws can be broken to prevent greater harm. Running into a park after hours to keep a child from falling into a pool is an example, said Charlotte attorney Tom Bush.

Bush's successful use of the defense led to the acquittal in June of five Operation Rescue members in Mecklenburg County District Court. They were among several who blockaded a clinic on Dec. 3.

The strategy was first used successfully in North Carolina in 1875, when a state court ruled that a druggist who sold "spirituous liquors" to a sick woman in violation of an ordinance could not be indicted. The trial judge said the law had been "broken," but questioned whether its intent had been violated, since the spirits were sold for medicinal purposes.

Abortion Advocates Claim 'Turnaround'

By William M. Welch
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Abortion rights leaders claim an "unprecedented turnaround" is putting anti-abortion forces on the political run following defeats in the U.S. House and a special legislative session in Florida.

And in Virginia, Democratic candidate for governor Douglas Wilder is challenging political wisdom on abortion by airing pro-choice television ads aimed at winning support among conservative voters.

"This is evidence that the anti-choice minority no longer inspires fear in elected officials," said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

The House voted 216-206 on Wednesday to allow federal aid for abortions for poor women who are victims of rape or incest, rejecting Medicaid restrictions it has kept in the law since 1981. It instead backed more liberal provisions already passed by the Senate.

The vote was a defeat for conservatives and put Congress in opposition to President Bush, who has promised to veto Medicaid abortions.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., attributed the vote to an abortion rights movement galvanized by the Supreme Court's decision in July giving the states more power to restrict abortions.

"The Webster decision was a wakeup call," she said.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., for years the leader of anti-abortion forces in the House, said House members are increasingly "perceiving their constituencies as pro-choice."

Darla St. Martin, leader of the National Right to Life Committee, said the vote "opens the door to the use of tax funds to destroy innocent unborn babies" and vowed that members who switched on the issue "will now hear from constituents."

In Tallahassee, Fla., a special session of the state legislature called by Gov. Bob Martinez rejected a series of proposed restrictions on abortions that the Republican governor sought.

"A right, having been established, is not easily removed," said Tom Gustafson, Florida's speaker of the House.

The Florida session was the first in the nation since the July 3 Supreme Court ruling gave the long-standing debate over abortion a fresh and relevant political focus.

Florida was closely watched as a bellwether for the nation, and more than 10,000 demonstrators had descended upon its capital.

In Virginia, independent polls show Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wilder overtaking his anti-abortion opponent since he began airing a tough ad accusing Republican Marshall Coleman of trying to take away women's right to a legal abortion, even in cases of rape and incest.

Coleman accused Wilder of trying "to spread fear — fear from a single, divisive issue." The election is in four weeks.

Michelman, head of the national abortion rights group, said the votes in Florida and in Congress "are overwhelming evidence of the dramatic and unprecedented turnaround among elected officials on this issue."

She credited abortion rights demonstrators and dismissed the anti-abortion forces as "a small minority whose electoral bite does not match their bark."

Supporters of expanded abortion rights argued the Supreme Court's ruling in the Webster case mobilized their side by making the possibility of new abortion restrictions seem more likely — and in the process prompted some abortion supporters to become single-issue voters, just as some abortion opponents have been.

The Associated Press

Pro-choice leader Elaine Gordon joins Florida celebration

The provision adopted by the House would allow Medicaid payments for abortions when the mother's life is in jeopardy or when the pregnancy resulted from rape or incest — and was "promptly" reported to authorities.

Since 1981 the House has voted for language allowing federal aid for abortions only in cases in which the woman's life was in danger. Medicaid financing for poor women's abortions has been restricted in one way or another since 1977.

The abortion provision is part of a $156.7 billion measure to finance labor, health and education programs for fiscal 1990, which began Oct. 1. The spending bill, which was approved 364-56, now moves to the Senate.

Bush threatened in August to veto the bill if it contains the more liberal abortion language, and administration officials reiterated that threat this week.

Hispanic Population Goes Over 20 Million

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The United States has more than 20 million Hispanic residents, the Census Bureau reports, meaning only five other countries have larger Latin American populations.

"This is our first estimate of over 20 million," Jorge Del Pinal, chief of the Ethnic and Hispanic Statistics Branch at the bureau, said Wednesday. "It's up from about 14.5 million in 1980."

Brazil has the largest Latin American population at more than 147 million people.

The only other countries in this hemisphere with more Hispanics than the United States are: Mexico with 86.7 million; Argentina, 31.9 million; Colombia, 31.2 million and Peru, 21.4 million.

The new Census analysis showed that as of last March Hispanics constituted 8.2 percent of the U.S. population and are the fastest growing large population group.

Abernathy Memoirs Say King Showed Weakness For Women

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The memoirs of the man who marched beside the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. depict him as a leader of outstanding moral character but who had a weakness for women, even on the night before his assassination.

"And The Walls Came Tumbling Down," published this month by Harper & Row, chronicles the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy's life as a preacher and civil rights activist, including his many years as King's closest friend and confidant.

Abernathy reveals that King had encounters with various women on the night before his April 4, 1968, assassination at a Memphis, Tenn., hotel.

The revelation corroborates longstanding reports that King had extramarital affairs.

But in an advance copy of the book, Abernathy staunchly defends his friend's morality, without condoning his activities. He explains that he felt compelled to write of "my friend's weakness for women," and devotes part of one chapter in the 610-page book to King's private affairs.

King "believed in the biblical prohibition against sex outside of marriage. It was just that he had a particularly difficult time with that temptation," Abernathy wrote. "We all fall short of the mark. ... Sexual sins are by no means the worst. Hatred and a cold disregard for others are the besetting sins of our time."

Abernathy said he might have avoided the matter had others not dealt with it in detail.

He said he wanted "to make some attempt to render justice to the dead without causing too much unnecessary pain to the living."

Abernathy names none of the women with whom King allegedly was involved. He said extended travels during the civil rights movement were one reason, but not the main one, for King's extramarital liaisons.

"He was ... a man who attracted women, even when he didn't intend to, and attracted them in droves," Abernathy said. "He was a hero — the greatest hero of his age — and women are always attracted to a hero."

Abernathy praised his friend for courage, saying had King "been a coward rather than a truly brave man ... we might still be riding in the back of buses and eating in segregated restaurants."

He also said he felt other King aides saw him as "no more than an appendage to Martin, someone who served as a part companion, part bodyguard, but who never played an important role in the decisions that affected the direction of the movement."

Abernathy said those people did not realize how much King depended on him for advice and counsel outside the limelight.

Detailing the night before King's assassination, Abernathy wrote that after King's "I have been to the mountaintop" address, King, Abernathy and a colleague went to the home of "a friend of Martin's."

Americans Share Prize In Physics

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — U.S. scientists Norman F. Ramsey and Hans G. Dehmelt and West German Wolfgang Paul shared the Nobel Prize for physics today, the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences announced.

The 74-year-old Ramsey, of Harvard University, was awarded half the prize for inventing a method for measuring time that is the basis for the present standard of time.

The 67-year-old Dehmelt, who was born in Germany and is associated with the University of Washington in Seattle, and the 76-year-old Paul, of the University of Bonn, shared the second half of the $469,000 prize. They were cited for developing ways of trapping atoms to study a single electron or ion with extreme precision.

"All three of them have developed exact methods of measurement which has made it possible to conduct experiments that might force us to reconsider some basic physical laws, especially regarding time and space," said Ingvar Lindgren, chairman of the awarding committee.

Ramsey's invention — the separated oscillatory fields method — yielded the cesium atomic clock. It is the basis for the present standard of time, with an accuracy of about one part in ten thousand billion, or 10 followed by 13 zeros.

NATO Sailors Go On Rampage In Lisbon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LISBON, Portugal — About 400 U.S. and British sailors on shore leave from NATO exercises went on a drunken rampage in downtown Lisbon, brawling, smashing windows of shops and bars and attacking cars, police said.

More than 100 U.S. and British sailors were arrested by Lisbon police during Wednesday night's disturbances and at least seven people were injured, a duty officer at Lisbon Public Security police said.

He said the British were from the carrier Ark Royal and Americans from the tank landing ship Barnstable County and the amphibious transport docks ship Shreveport. The ships were berthed in Lisbon during a break from NATO exercises off the Portuguese coast.

The duty officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the arrested sailors were returned to their ships after their officers gave assurances there would be no further disturbances.

He said the injured included four sailors, three Portuguese policemen and at least one Portuguese civilian and none were believed seriously hurt.

The four sailors were taken to Lisbon Hospital but released after treatment. One of the policemen had his nose broken during the fighting, the officer said.

He said the trouble started with a brawl in a quayside bar between a group of black American sailors and a group of white sailors believed to be British.

Lisbon police intervened to break up the fight but the violence escalated, with rampaging sailors smashing the windows of shops and bars and attacking parked cars in the dockside Cais do Sodre quarter and the Chiado shopping district, he said.

Shuttle Launch Scheduled For Tuesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Technicians are working around the clock to swap out a faulty engine computer and get space shuttle Atlantis on track for a new launch target of next Tuesday.

In announcing the new date Wednesday, NASA said "there is a 50-50 chance of completing the necessary work in time." The agency said shuttle managers would meet Saturday to decide whether to hold to a Tuesday launch or to delay until Wednesday.

Liftoff on Tuesday would take place in a 24-minute period beginning at 12:57 p.m.

The launch of Atlantis originally had been scheduled today, with five astronauts who are to dispatch the nuclear-powered Jupiter spacecraft to Jupiter.

But officials had to postpone the flight on Tuesday after engineers were unable to determine why the computer, called a master controller, gave a false fuel pump pressure reading.

The delay was announced just 90 minutes after a federal judge rejected a request by three anti-nuclear groups to halt the flight. The groups claimed the shuttle's plutonium-powered payload could scatter its radioactive fuel over Florida if there were an accident during launch.

Making a Tuesday launch date will depend on how work progresses in installing and checking out the new computer in engine No. 2, one of three main engines that propel the shuttle into orbit.

Technicians opened Atlantis' cramped engine compartment Wednesday and set up work platforms so they could gain access to the bad unit.

Jail

be 5.2 percent if construction costs run between $8 million and $9 million, said Wednesday that the entire cost of the project — construction and other associated expenses — might be in the $10 million range.

The board earlier this year decided to finance the project through a type of lease-purchase plan.

After some discussion, commissioners agreed that the new jail should have 148 pretrial beds — all in single cells — including 24 for maximum custody inmates, 96 for medium custody prisoners, 16 for families and 12 for prisoners needing special observation for medical or other reasons.

Some 186 beds for post-trial inmates should also be included in the facility, board members said, including a 24 single-cell segregation area for men, 16 single cells for families and 96 dormitory-type beds.

Fripp said that the single-cell beds could be contained in one building. Adjoining it would be a building housing the 96 dormitory-type beds.

With the dormitory type facility being "a completely separate operating unit unto itself," Fripp said that that part of the jail project might be completed and occupied — possibly in the spring of 1991 — before work on the single-cell area is finished.

He said design of the dormitory could be completed and that facility ready for bids in six months. But he said "it will take a year to build."

Fripp told the board that, in addition to the cells to house prisoners, the jail complex would include kitchen, medical, exercise, laundry, visiting, storage, conference, booking, storage and other areas.

Commissioners have yet to acquire a site for the new jail.

The board held a short secret meeting Wednesday to discuss the purchase of land for the jail but came to no decision, officials said.

PCMH

Under the plan, she said, $33.46 million in bonds would be issued in one series, with a second issue of $55 million at a later time.

Some $20 million from the first issue — considered pay-back for capital projects already paid for from hospital revenues — would be deposited in the bank. The remainder of the first issue and the proceeds from the second issue would be used to pay for the 143-bed addition and other capital projects.

The additional $20 million in cash on hand would increase the hospital's cash position to the point, Mrs. Barger said, that the $55 million bond issue would receive a higher rating, thus decreasing the hospital's cost of financing.

Even if the $33 million issue is insured — which would result in a AAA rating — as has been proposed, hospital officials and financial advisers from First Boston Corp., the hospital's bond underwriter, said the two-bond-issue plan would be most beneficial and least costly way to proceed.

Mrs. Barger said that in effect, the hospital's debt is so low that an additional $33 million would not effect the bond rating to a great degree. But she said that an additional $20 million in the bank could mean the difference between a BBB rating and an A-plus.

If the county commissioners approve and if other details are worked out, the first bond issue would come before the end of the hospital's fiscal year, which began Oct. 1. The second issue would come in early fiscal 1991.

Repayment of the bonds will be from hospital revenues. No property taxes would be used to repay the debt.

For W.Va. Phones, The Party's All Over

By Kelly P. Kissel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALCOTT, W.Va. (AP) — The party line helped make great friends and great enemies and once even helped derail a presidential campaign.

Now, for rural telephone customers in West Virginia, the party's over. Reflecting a national trend, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. is hanging up its party lines after stringing them throughout the countryside for the first six decades of this century.

"The 16-party line service was basically used as an intercom. One person would call somebody else on the line and everybody would pick up," said Kenneth Pitt, a spokesman for Bell Atlantic, C&P's parent company.

"The housewives would get on there and talk for two hours or maybe three hours. It was a different day and age. Those days are gone."

There was a time, however, when telephone company workers like Sonny Stroud climbed mountains, crossed rivers and dug trenches to set up the party lines.

"Just being able to provide service, even on a party line, just thrilled us then," said Stroud of Rainelle, who took a C&P job in 1948. "We'd do anything to get the system to whoever wanted it."

Phone service first came to southeast West Virginia in 1904, the majority of it through party lines. One-tenth of West Virginia's telephone customers were on party lines on Nov. 1, 1985, when the Public Service Commission approved a C&P request to eliminate that service.

"It's considered a lesser quality of service — like driving the battered pickup truck versus driving a shiny new one with velour seats," explained Pitt in an interview from his office in Arlington, Va. "It isn't even seen as telephone service."

Talcott residents made their last party line calls this summer. When a handful of Eastern Panhandle residents are switched over soon, all of C&P's 635,000 West Virginia customers will be on private lines.

One customer who's happy about that is Jim Monroe Jr. of Greenbrier Nurseries, which was on a party line for 31 years — "a terrible inconvenience."

"Most of the time we had it, we had only one other person on it. There was this family up at Barger Springs, they were a Greek family that barely spoke English, so they barely made phone calls."

"But then there once was another woman who spread gossip around and was on the phone all the time."

The business now plans to install a toll-free 800 number, something not possible on a party line.

Around the nation, 2.8 million people remained on party lines at the end of 1987, the latest year for which figures were available, according to the United States Telephone Association. In 1985, there were 4.6 million party lines.

The Rural Electrification Administration in Washington, which lends money to rural telephone companies that serve 5 million people, still will handle requests from 4-party line systems.

But, said Fred Albrecht, an REA telecommunications specialist, "I don't know of one made in the last 10 years."

"We discourage them. In today's age, you can build a 1-party plant as cheaply as a 4-party plant."

It wasn't unusual to have even more people on the line, said Jim Davis, an external affairs manager for C&P, recalling one copper line that had five 10-party lines. "It was so hot they had to use gloves to handle it."

Nowadays, thousands of calls can be routed simultaneously on fiberoptic cables. A standard cable with 12 pairs of lines can handle hundreds of customers as computerized equipment switches from line to line thousands of times per second and sends voice and data impulses.

State Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, was campaigning for the 1st District seat in the U.S. Congress, but said he hasn't decided when he'll officially run.

"I certainly want to (run)," he said. "There's going to be a seat available one day, and I'm getting ready."

Basnight has been mentioned as a possible candidate if U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones Sr. of Farmville retires in 1990 instead of seeking re-election.

But Basnight said he may still challenge Jones if the congressman doesn't retire. "I think competition's healthy for all people," he said.

The annual gathering began about 15 years ago as a way to give residents of Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe, Wilson and Greene counties a chance to meet their elected officials, said David O. Speir, president of the North Tar River Fellowship Club.

"When we first got started, we met at different locations," he said. About eight years ago, the club decided to stay in one place and chose River Road Ranch, which is owned by Marvin Blount Jr., son of one of the club's founders, Speir said.

Reforms

After the two-day meeting ended, the Politburo maintained a public unity that offered firm support for the policies of the past but offered an olive branch to a growing movement for reform.

The Politburo said in a statement: "All expressions of opinion and suggestions for attractive socialism in (East Germany) are important. We are open to discussions."

But any reforms "will serve the further development of socialism," said Otto Reinhold, a party Central Committee member and head of the government's Academy for the Social Sciences.

"There is a need for clear positions from the party, as to how the socialist system can be further shaped," Reinhold said in a commentary carried today by the official news agency ADN and the state newspaper Berliner Zeitung.

ADN said he wanted to distinguish the role of the party in East Germany from that in some other socialist countries. The government in East Berlin has long emphasized it rejects the democratic reforms taking place in Poland and Hungary.

Saudis Looking To Sun As More Abundant Energy

By Donna Fenn Heintzen
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — The Saudis have oil reserves that will easily last 100 more years, but they're looking for a more abundant resource for their energy — sunshine.

The sun, which raises temperatures to 120 degrees in summer, disappears behind clouds only a few days a year and that's mainly in some of the higher plateau regions.

A $26 million "solar village" with 160 photovoltaic solar generators each containing 251 solar cells is operating in the desert 32 miles northwest of Riyadh, the capital.

Built in 1982 as part of a $100 million Saudi-U.S. solar research cooperation agreement called Soleras, it is the largest facility of its kind in the world and one of 10 in existence.

U.S. involvement in the project ended two years ago, but Saudi solar research continues.

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, is hardly desperate for an alternative energy source, but it is trying to lessen its economic dependence on oil.

Solar energy is still prohibitively expensive and relatively inefficient.

Current technology can convert only about 12 percent of the sun's energy to electricity. Storage of the energy in solar batteries, which last five to seven years, adds about 30 percent to the production costs.

But officials at King Abdul-Aziz Center for Science and Technology, a quasi-governmental organization that spearheads solar research, are not discouraged.

"We knew it would be expensive at first," said Fahad Huraib, the center's solar research program director.

"But most of the money went into research. It helped in promoting this type of technology. To develop an energy source takes from 50 to 100 years."

The solar village contains a sophisticated solar laboratory, where environmental effects on the efficiency of solar energy can be simulated and measured.

The village's original purpose was to use a concentrated photovoltaic system to convert the sun's rays into 350 kilowatts of direct current electricity a day.

The beneficiaries are the 4,000 residents of three nearby villages. They received solar-generated electricity for five years, their first source of reliable power.

The villages are now hooked into Riyadh's main power grid, which is also supplied by the solar village.

Saudi authorities hope that, in time, solar energy will be used to bring electricity to all isolated villages.

Huraib said that could encourage people to stay in their villages and help curb mass migration to the cities.

In other parts of Saudi Arabia, solar projects are already running. They include a water desalination plant in the Red Sea industrial city of Yanbu.

"It produces 200 cubic meters (52,600 gallons) of water a day from indirect freezing techniques using solar energy," Huraib said.

Concentrated heat from the sun produces steam that powers the refrigeration equipment for the system. As seawater is chilled, fresh water crystallizes and forms ice which is then washed and melted.

In southern Saudi Arabia, highway tunnels through mountains are illuminated by on-site photovoltaic collectors.

Huraib said the Ministry of Transportation and Communications is studying the possibility of lighting all remote tunnels in this manner.

The kingdom's giant oil company, Saudi Aramco, is using solar energy to provide cathodic protection for some of its pipelines in the eastern province.

At the King Abdul-Aziz Center in Riyadh, solar thermal water heaters service all staff housing.

Yassen al-Saedi, site manager at the solar village, said that next year the center will begin experimenting with solar-generated irrigation on a half-acre vegetable plot.

But the most ambitious of the center's plans is a Saudi-West German research and development project to produce hydrogen through solar energy.

"Hysolar will be the largest project of its kind in the world," al-Saedi said.

Financed by the center and several West German government organizations, the project will use the solar village's photovoltaic solar generators to produce hydrogen by splitting water molecules into hydrogen and oxygen.

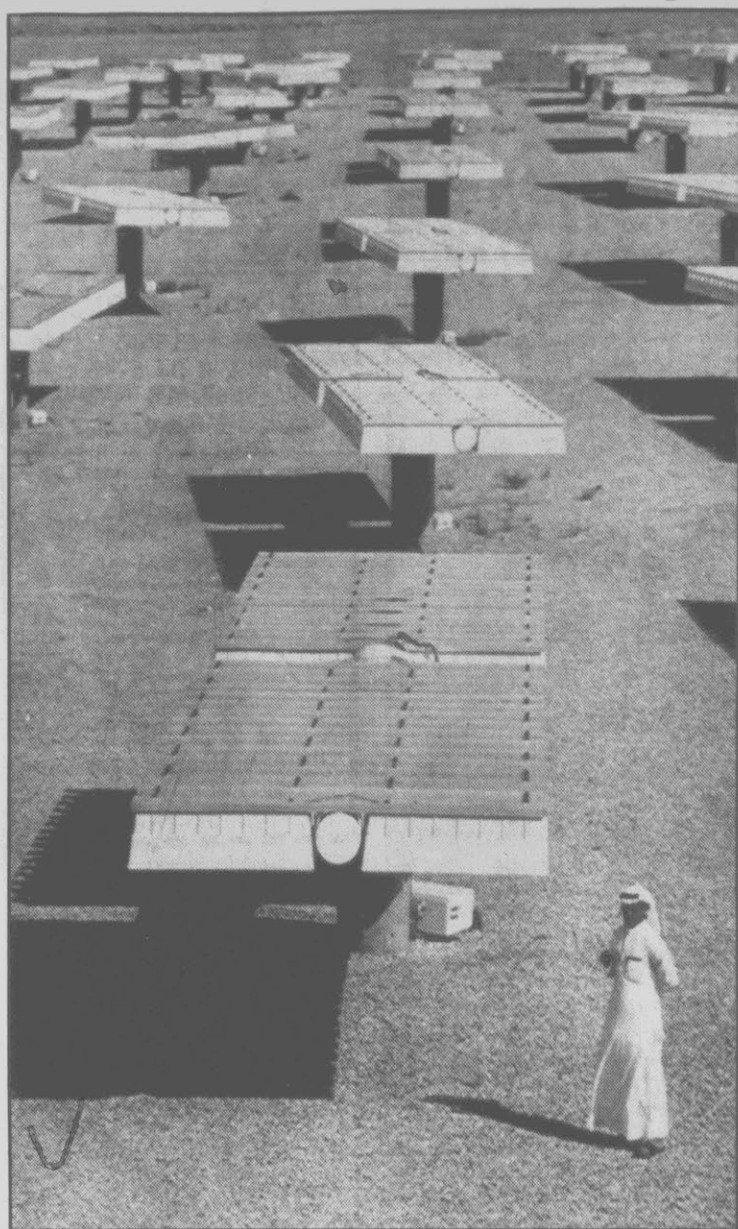

"It's the fuel of the future," Al-Saedi said.

Three major Saudi universities are also participating in the research.

The plan is to experiment with several possible consumer applications, such as running internal combustion engines and as a fuel cell to produce electricity.

Huraib does not rule out the possibility of exporting hydrogen.

"It could be transported through the pipeline as a natural gas," he said.

Threat Of Suits Forcing Doctors To Avoid Deliveries

By Paul Reecer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A fear of being sued is causing doctors to stop delivering babies, leaving impoverished women with poor obstetrical care and contributing to an increase in infant mortality, the Institute of Medicine says.

"Significant numbers" of obstetricians, family physicians and nurse-midwives now are limiting their practices because of frequent malpractice lawsuits and sharply increasing insurance premiums, the institute study committee reported Wednesday.

"The fear of being sued has caused many doctors and midwives to limit care especially for women with high-risk pregnancies," said Roger J. Bulger, chairman of the committee and president of the Association of Academic Health Centers.

"In urban areas, this often means that low-income women have been hurt the most by the lack of providers," he said, but noted that there is a "serious shortage of obstetrical care" in both rural and inner areas.

He said health providers tend to avoid patients with high-risk pregnancies. These most often are the impoverished because they generally are more likely to smoke and have poor diets, both of which increase the risks of having an imperfect child.

One result, he said, is that the United States ranks 19th in the world in infant mortality and, by some measures, the statistics of infant death are getting worse.

"In 1985, infant mortality for blacks and other non-whites actually increased for the first time in 20 years," said Bulger. "While the causes for this increase are many, the inaccessibility of care for poor women, a situation clearly made worse by liability concerns, is an important factor."

The committee found that legal claims against obstetricians run two to three times higher than for other medical specialties, and that juries are twice as likely to find for the plaintiff in cases where an obstetrician is the defendant.

"It is easy to understand this situation, since most cases involve brain-damaged infants whose parents generally are without the resources to provide for a lifetime of complex health care," Bulger said.

Malpractice insurance premiums for obstetrics in some cities now exceed $100,000 a year — and sometimes the pro-rated cost per delivery is higher than the Medicaid reimbursement for a normal delivery, the committee found.

Members of the committee said they found a number of misperceptions on the part of both patients and baby doctors.

Dr. Arthur L. Herbst, chairman of the department of obstetrics at the Pritzker School of Medicine, University of Chicago, said many doctors mistakenly believe poor families are more apt to sue if there is a poor result from childbirth.

What Will TV Viewers Be Looking At When Your Commercial Comes On?

BARBOUR

There's nothing TV reps love more than telling you who's watching what show when. Unfortunately, the one audience they can't tell you anything about is the one watching your commercial. Because, many times, it's going to end up playing to an empty room. Recent studies bear it out. At the first sign of a commercial break, studies show that 50% of viewers either head for the kitchen, the bathroom, change the channel or just turn off the sound. Your commercial has been missed and that's bad - and expensive too! With newspaper, your message is there to be read at their convenience.

In a 1988 study by the Gordon S. Black Corporation, an independent Washington, D.C. media and opinion research firm, Greenville/Pitt County adults rely on The Daily Reflector 5 times more for their advertising information than television. Of the same group of respondents, only 1 out of 5 reported paying close attention to television commercials while more than a third pay little or no attention at all. Within the higher income groups (the most desirable audience) these figures climb even higher.

With a paid circulation of 18,300 Monday through Friday and 20,800 on Sundays, let The Daily Reflector work for you. The Daily Reflector reaches 74% of the Greenville/Pitt County market weekly.

Most importantly, it reaches them at their request!

That means you not only have a better chance of getting their attention, you have a better chance of holding it. Think about it - people paying to read your message at their convenience! Don't find your audience out to lunch! Call your Daily Reflector Advertising Account Executive at 752-6166 for answers to your advertising questions.

Miracle Drug Sales Studied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Health officials are investigating sales of a dangerous drug compound in Texas under the name "The Miracle Herb."

Texas health officials last year found "chuiifong tokuwan," a drug compound made in Hong Kong, for sale in pill form, said the Centers for Disease Control. Chuiifong tokuwan first appeared in the United States in 1974 and was banned by the Food and Drug Administration in 1978.

The product contains several drugs, as well as lead and cadmium, which can cause kidney dysfunction, the CDC said. The drugs found in Texas usually were repackaged and labeled "The Miracle Herb — Mother Nature's Finest."

Manny's Is Mecca For Top Musicians

By Larry McShane
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Henry Goldrich is the guy who told Harry Chapin that "Taxi" ran too long to be a hit. He's also the guy who kicked George Benson out of his store because of that annoying guitar.

"Back in the '60s, I told Paul (Simon) that Simon and Garfunkel was a lousy name. And I still think it is," Goldrich says.

Fortunately, musicians want instruments and not advice from Goldrich — which is why his music store, Manny's on West 48th Street, has served everyone from Dizzy Gillespie to Guns N' Roses in the past five decades.

The Beatles invaded Manny's before they did the rest of country; these days, Sean Lennon buys his guitars there. Mick Jagger was looking for the right ax for this year's Stones' tour when he ran into Bo Diddley. David Johansen has been a customer since he was a New York Doll; he visits now as Buster Poindexter.

"The Who — when they were in town, doing the show — they were in here. Except Daltrey. He bought a guitar once and never played it," says Goldrich, dropping names as fast as Clapton works a fret board. "They came to my son's bar mitzvah; flew over. They're friends."

Goldrich, a gray-haired, bearded man with a slight pot belly, is the son of the original Manny and current keeper of the family business. His dad established the store in Harlem 54 years ago, and they became a 48th Street fixture in the late 1940s. The musicians followed and never left.

"It's word of mouth. We have a very long and great reputation," says Goldrich, whose earliest recollections of the store involve a nodding John Coltrane asleep on an upstairs couch.

Manny's customer list reads like a history of American music: Charlie Parker in the '40s; Buddy Holly in the '50s; Jimi Hendrix in the '60s; Paul Simon in the '70s; David Byrne in the '80s. Most have provided autographed pictures, an invaluable collection that covers the walls of the stores.

"Elvis Presley is the only big rock star who never walked in the store. ... We delivered stuff to his hotel," says Goldrich.

Manny's and Rudy's Music Stop across the street still cater to the big names, but most of their old neighbors are gone. There were once 25 music stores along the strip that comprised the Big Apple's bandstand. Today, a half-dozen remain, the rest replaced by the westward creep of Rockefeller Center and the eastern move of grocery stores and fast-food joints.

Such intrusions don't mean the area has lost its magnetism for musicians, who still pass through midtown construction and the surrounding porno shops to check out what's what.

"Go to West 48th Street to look at all the guitars and amps. Go to Manny's and Rudy's. Look at all the great new equipment. That's my idea of a good time," Lou Reed told Rolling Stone. Most musicians heed his advice.

Guns N' Roses featured the store in their video for "Paradise City." Soviet rock star Boris Grebenshikov hit the 48th Street shops shortly after arriving in the United States to examine the merger of music and capitalism. And then there's the time Mark Knopfler turned a salesman into a sideman at Rudy's Music Stop.

Part-time Rudy's worker Jack Sonni met Knopfler through the shop, which the Dire Straits leader began frequenting in 1979. Five years later, Sonni signed on with Dire Straits for the "Brothers in Arms" LP after getting a surprise invite from Knopfler.

The Associated Press

Henry Goldrich, Manny's son, inside 48th Street store

At least Sonni knew who Knopfler was. When Guns N' Roses guitarists Izzy Stradlin and Slash showed up at Manny's, Goldrich didn't have a clue as to their identities.

"The music now is very heavy metal, which is not my favorite. You can't whistle it," said Goldrich — Itzhak Perlman is his kind of musician. "But the kids — they're probably just as nice."

When Goldrich started in the business, the musicians were as hard up for cash as the struggling Manny. A day's receipts could total $18; many of the musicians bought on credit and took a long time to pay, he says.

Mencken Book Dispenses Advice To Mothers

By Mary Maushard
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — Although newspaper columnist H.L. Mencken had no experience taking care of children, that didn't stop him from writing a book in 1910 about babies — one that is being reissued in November.

The book, "What You Ought to Know About Your Baby," has been updated by two Baltimore doctors, and "most of that information is not only valuable for its time, but remains true to this day," insists Dr. Howard Markel, the book's principal researcher and writer.

For more than a decade, Mencken told virtually no one about the book, which consisted of 15 essays on breast-feeding, bottle-feeding, sleep, general baby care and infectious diseases that was published and given away free from 1910 to 1923 by The Butterick Co., a dress pattern company.

Those essays are the core of "The H.L. Mencken Baby Book," which updates the medical advice in the earlier book and presents the unlikely tale of how Mencken, novelist Theodore Dreiser and Baltimore physician Leonard K. Hirshberg — three men with, collectively, almost no knowledge of children — came to produce a popular book of advice for the mothers of 80 years ago.

Hirshberg, who at one time was Mencken's physician, provided the medical information for the original baby book. He brought Mencken together with Dreiser, who edited "The Delineator," a million-circulation Butterick Co. magazine in which the Mencken essays first appeared.

Mencken and Dreiser remained friends, but Mencken and Hirshberg, who was sentenced in 1923 to four years in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta for a $1 million stock market scam, soon parted company.

"The advice that Mencken and Hirshberg give on breast-feeding is just perfect," Markel said in a recent interview. "I'm biased because I'm a pediatrician. I have to give the pitch for human milk. But I can't do it nearly as strong as H.L. Mencken. I can't say any woman who doesn't breast feed is not worthy of being called a woman."

But Mencken could, and did. "What You Ought to Know About Your Baby" did not escape Mencken's firm touch. The writing is irreverent and straightforward, with the authors' biases clearly divulged. The baby is often referred to as "it." "The book's strongest suit," say

Markel and his co-author, Dr. Frank Oski, "is that no other book in the fields of child care or medicine displays the acerbic and lively style of a writer as gifted as H.L. Mencken."

Markel happened upon the early book while "aimlessly looking around" the Mencken collection at the central branch of the Enoch Pratt Free Library. "It struck me as incredibly intriguing," says the specialist in adolescent medicine, who is also a medical historian and long-time fan of Mencken.

So intriguing, in fact, that "I've devoted the last two years of my life to it," he says. Markel thought he would write one article on the Mencken work, now considered a rare book and bringing hundreds of dollars at auction. But the project "just snowballed" into a much larger work and, eventually, the small Philadelphia publishing company, Hanley & Belfus, beeped him in the emergency room one day to say that it wanted the book.

Amid the pressure of internship and residency, Markel found the project a refreshing outlet, a chance "to escape into a benign time, 1910."

Oski, director of Johns Hopkins Hospital Children's Center here and chairman of the pediatrics department at the Johns Hopkins medical school, encouraged Markel from the beginning and updated the answers to questions that follow each essay. Each question carries a 1910 and a 1989 answer.

The original book does not mention Mencken, which seems to be how he preferred it. "Mencken made a point of not telling anybody until the late '20s. He gave a few copies to some close friends but he always signed in the flyleaf 'the fact that I have written this has, to my knowledge, never gotten out," Markel says. The new book adds commentary and historical perspective to the original work. Mencken's first chapter, "The Slaughter of the Innocents," for example, details how mothers often endanger the youngsters through common child-rearing practices.

"The mother takes a milk bottle from her satchel, carefully wipes the nipple with a rag, and gives it to her offspring. A gurgle — and he is still. The women talk on. The child empties the bottle and begins to cry again. The mother produces a rubber 'pacifier' from her capacity hand-bag and he begins to gnaw it."

Mencken and Hirshberg cite to mother for "two crimes": keeping the bottle and "rag" in her germy infested bag and "producing the pacifier."

Many Men Want Old-Fashioned Values

Dear Abby: You recently advised a 15-year-old virgin whose boyfriend threatened to dump her if she didn't have sex with him, that she should dump him.

You said, "There are plenty of fish in the sea." Well, you're right, but all the fish want the same thing, and if she doesn't give it to him, some little slut will, and she will go to her grave with her virginity.

Face it, Abby, good girls end up alone. — Been There

Dear Abby: Wrong! I constantly hear from men who say they'd give their right arm to meet a girl with good old-fashioned values. Read on:

Dear Abby: I have a message for the young girl whose boyfriend had been pressuring her for sex: Don't give in! I was in the same spot when I was your age and, I'm sorry to say, I wasn't strong enough to hold out. I'm not putting all the blame on him, because I was a willing partner, but once I lost my virginity, it was easy to have sex again — and not always with the same partner.

dning night. — Sorry I Didn't

Dear Abby: Thank you for writing. I hope those who need to heed your message get the message.

Dear Abby: Darryl and I were recently married. While we were having dinner together at a popular restaurant, a woman who was a close friend of Darryl's former girlfriend stopped by our table to speak to Darryl.

He introduced me as his wife and put his arm around me. Abby, the friend made no acknowledgment of me. Instead, she started telling Darryl what "Sheila," his former girlfriend, was up to. She stood there talking about Sheila until our food arrived.

When she finally left, she said to Darryl, "I'll tell Sheila you asked about her."

Abby, he didn't ask about Sheila at all — she just started talking about this girl! What should I (or Darryl) have done or said? — Bugged In Minnesota

Dear Abby: You behaved appropriately by remaining silent. If Darryl had been a little swifter, he might have pointed out that he did not ask about Sheila. But since he didn't, you were wise not to have made an issue of it.

Dear Abby: Today I renewed a prescription for 20 pills containing barbiturates. The last refill (eight months ago) was one pill short; today the refill was also one pill short. I reported the shortage the first time; today I counted the pills in front of the pharmacist. He apologized and said that the pill-counting machine sometimes "acts up," which is possible, but the issue here is not the money, and we're not talking about jelly beans. We are talking about a 5 percent discrepancy in a prescription for a powerful drug.

I have written a letter to the pharmacy's corporate headquarters. Is my experience unusual, or are other people having the same experience? — Judith O'Halloran-Rosen, Venice, Calif.

Dear Judith: Since pill-counting machines are fallible, it's possible for errors to occur. But now that you've called attention to that possibility, with the price of pills not easily swallowed, it's wise to count the little critters before leaving the store.

Dear Abby: This is just a note of thanks for your endeavors and articles with regard to laboratory animal abuse.

I understand that you urged Maryland state legislators to pass a historic bill that would have made Maryland the first state to outlaw blinding and poisoning tests on animals by cosmetic and household product manufacturers.

Abby, please continue your heroic efforts. Those who cannot speak need all the help they can get. — Francine Meinelschmidt, Miramar, Fla.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Divorce Is Too Good For Him

Editor's Note: Erma Bombeck is on a book tour. This Best of Bombeck column originally was published on Nov. 4, 1984.

There are several all-encompassing categories for divorce: irreconcilable differences, incompatibility, infidelity, and cruel and inhuman treatment. Any one of them will get you a place in the middle of a bed by yourself with no contest.

Living with a runner who cannot run, however, is in a class all by itself. It's mental cruelty I wouldn't wish on my worst enemy.

Runners generally don't hurt anybody. Oh sure, they wear their little gym shoes to everything from brunches to black-tie affairs. They sweat all over the sheepskin seat covers in the car. They hold up every meal until they've stretched, run and stretched again. And they will unveil their purple toes, blisters and stress fractures at the drop of a split time. But they're reasonably pleasant — until they come up with an injury that keeps them from running. Then they don't want to live any more.

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

A couple of weeks ago, I said to my incapacitated husband, "Good morning."

He said, "What do you mean by a crack like that?"

"Nothing. It's just your basic generic greeting."

"Easy for you to say," he said. "You're out of shape anyway."

"There's no need to be insulting," I said. "I'm sorry you can't run."

"Do you know how long it's going to take me to get back up to 10 miles a day?"

"Three months," I said.

"It's going to take me three months. Three months of running with pain, gasping and sweating, with leg cramps and sore muscles."

"Sounds terrible."

"That's not the worst of it," he said. "The worst of it is sitting around the house eating meals on time, resting and socializing."

"Someone has to do it," I said.

During the next few weeks, I had to endure his whining, irritability, boredom, impatience, criticisms and long periods of silence. "Why don't you have a midlife affair like other men do?" I asked.

"Who would look at anyone who can't run a 10K?" he sneered. "For God's sake, woman, when will it sink in that I have a pulled hamstring? I am doomed to spend another week in this house with nothing to look forward to in the mornings but reading the paper and drinking coffee. There are no dogs to nip at my calves. There is no carbon monoxide from traffic to fill my lungs. No rocks in my shoes to make my feet bleed. All I have left is my sense of humor."

Divorce would be too good for him.

Papal Visit Interrupted By Youths

DILI, Indonesia — Banner-waving youths opposed to Indonesian rule of East Timor fought baton-wielding police in the territory today before the altar where Pope John Paul II was finishing his benediction to about 60,000 people. At least four people were injured. Hurling chairs and shouting "Viva independence!" and "Viva Papa!" about 20 youths unfurled a banner in front of the altar. As the pope looked on, plainclothes police hit the youths with canes. Much of the crowd scattered, but about 100 people came to the aid of the youths, hurling chairs at the police. The protesters were supporters of Fretilin, the pro-independence movement that has been fighting Indonesian troops since the Portuguese left the former colony in 1975 and it was annexed by Indonesia. They got to within 100 feet of the steps to the high altar where the pope stood watching. The pope did not seem directly threatened.

Mitchell A No-Show Misses Mandatory Workout, Faces Fine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — When Dennis Eckersley strides in to make his first World Series appearance against the San Francisco Giants, Roger Craig is sure to be watching closely.

But the Giants manager will only hint playfully at whether he plans to raise the "foreign substance" issue that nearly created an international incident in the American League playoffs between Toronto and Oakland.

Athletics manager Tony La Russa said this week that a man of Craig's baseball stature "wouldn't pull something" like Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston did when he asked the umpires to search Eckersley during Game 5 of the playoffs last Sunday.

It's not that Craig can't take a compliment; he's just not sure La Russa's right.

"He don't know me that well," Craig said, his eyes twinkling, as the Giants held their first World Series workout at Candlestick Park. "If I think someone's cheating, whether it's a spring training game or whatever, I'm going to try to stop him."

Craig, after all, has been trying without success for years to stop Houston's Mike Scott, whom he accuses of scuffing balls.

After enjoying a day off after Monday's clinching of the National League pennant, the Giants focused seriously for the first time on the team located 10 miles across San Francisco Bay. Craig named Don Robinson as his Game 3 starter, following Scott Garrelts and Rick Reuschel, and said Mike LaCoss, Kelly Downs and Garrelts are being considered for Game 4. He said Ernest Riles will be his designated hitter for games played at Oakland.

Craig Mitchell

But that news was overshadowed, even for the players, by the conspicuous absence of Kevin Mitchell.

Mitchell, who's expected to be at practice this afternoon, incurred the wrath of Craig and his teammates over what the club described as a misunderstanding about the day of the first mandatory workout. The slugging outfielder had flown home to San Diego and was unable to make it back on time even though he apparently found out about the Wednesday practice from hitting coach Dusty Baker Tuesday night.

Craig said Mitchell faces a substantial fine.

"I feel bad about it," Craig said. "I feel bad for the ballclub. Some of the players were a little upset. I think they all expected me to do something, and I am going to do something."

Mitchell, who led the major leagues with 47 home runs, was the only no-show. One player who disapproved was Clark, who at first refused to comment on the matter, then said later, "Everybody keeps saying Clark and Mitchell, Clark and Mitchell, Clark and Mitchell. But it's a 24-man team. ... Everybody has to police himself."

Baker suggested that perhaps Mitchell couldn't catch a plane north Wednesday morning.

"I'm sure Kevin's working someplace," he said. "I know Kevin. I'd want to bet you anything on earth he's somewhere hitting right now."

If any Giants plan to accuse Eckersley of using a foreign substance on the baseball, they weren't tipping their hand Wednesday.

Pitcher Mike Krukow, who said he has known Eckersley for years, pooh-poohed Gaston's allegations.

"I have a lot of respect for Dennis Eckersley," Krukow said. "I've heard that stuff about everybody. I've even heard accusations about myself. Eck doesn't need to do that to be effective."

Brett Butler is likely to face Eckersley at some point in the series, but he seemed uninterested in the debate.

"Everybody gets on Scott, too, about scuffing," Butler said. "If somebody cheats, they cheat. That's something they have to deal with themselves. I can't be worried about that."

California Teams Enjoy Golden Era

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRESNO, Calif. — Want to find a pro championship team? Go West, sports fan, go West.

The last 18 years have been a golden era for sports fans in California. The Golden State's teams have won 18 world championships since 1972 and are guaranteed a 19th with the San Francisco Giants and Oakland Athletics in the World Series.

The titles have been divided fairly evenly — seven NBA titles, six Super Bowl victories and, counting this year, seven World Series championships.

"I don't know if it's a coincidence or not — whether it's more than just an oddity — a lot of them coming from California," said Bob Waterman of Elias Sports Bureau, the official statisticians for Major League Baseball, the NFL and the NBA. "I don't know how significant it is."

But Waterman thinks the sheer number of California teams may partly explain their recent dominance.

"There are more California teams, period," Waterman points out.

From San Diego to Sacramento, California has 13 baseball, basketball and football franchises. No other state has even half as many.

"Only a couple of clubs are doing it, really," Waterman said in a telephone interview. "The Giants haven't won much, the Dodgers and Oakland (A's) won their share, the Lakers dominated their sport, and the football Raiders and 49ers, obviously."

The Los Angeles Lakers have won six championships since 1972 and the Oakland-Los Angeles Raiders and San Francisco 49ers three Super Bowls apiece. The Athletics have won three World Series while the Giants are seeking their first title in 32 years in San Francisco. The Los Angeles Dodgers have won two World Series and the Golden State Warriors of the NBA own one.

The state's prominence in pro sports is underlined by statistics prepared by Doug Purgason of San Francisco for a book called "Ultimate Bragging Rights."

His analysis of winners in four sports, including hockey — California is yet to produce a Stanley Cup winner — shows the Los Angeles area and the San Francisco Bay Area nearly equal as the winningest pro sports communities of the 1980s.

California's climb to the top began in 1972 when Jerry West and Wilt Chamberlain led the Lakers to their first NBA title.

The same year, the Athletics won the first of three straight World Series.

The Warriors chipped in with an NBA crown in 1975, and the Raiders won their first Super Bowl in 1977.

That was the final California championship of the 1970s, but the Lakers, led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson, won their second NBA title in 1980 and followed with four more — in 1982, 1985 and consecutive championships in 1987 and 1988.

The Dodgers and Raiders each won titles in 1981, and the 49ers were Super Bowl champs for the first time the next year.

Hopfenberg Appointed Interim AD At NCSU

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — While a search for a permanent athletics director continues, a man with very limited sports experience will head North Carolina State University's athletic program.

Interim Chancellor Larry Monteith announced Wednesday the appointment of Harold Hopfenberg, 51, at a news conference. He also named Carl Dolce, former dean of the N.C. State College of Education and Psychology, as chairman of a search committee for a permanent athletics director.

Monteith said he selected Hopfenberg, an associate engineering dean who will take over his new job Monday, because of their similar backgrounds and feelings about the university.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors had ordered Jim Valvano to relinquish his athletics director job after a six-month investigation uncovered abuses of academic standards in the men's basketball program. He will remain as the Wolfpack's head basketball coach.

Monteith said his decision to name an interim athletics director immediately, rather than wait until the Dec. 31 deadline set by UNC officials, was not related to Valvano's handling of a situation in which members of the Wolfpack wrestling team were charged in an assault on two men and a woman.

Valvano drew sharp criticism from Monteith last week for not telling university administrators for more than a month about the Sept. 1 assault

Speaking to reporters Wednesday, Hopfenberg described his appointment as "a bridge linking the hopes, the aspirations, the needs of people in the program of athletics with the people in the programs of the greater academic community."

"He doesn't make things work," he said. "Administrators should make things work smoothly. I may have entered a different playing field, but our goals are exactly the same."

"We have a lot of programs in athletics for which we can take pride," Monteith said. "The charge to Dr. Hopfenberg is to learn enough about athletics to be their advocate and to work with the entire university to build more direct bridges to academics."

Hopfenberg said he was prepared to remain interim athletics director for several months. But when asked whether he would consider taking the job permanently he said, "Under no circumstances will I seek it or accept it."

Both Monteith and Hopfenberg said the interim athletics director will be instrumental in improving areas of weakness targeted by the UNC investigation.

Conley, White Oak Renew Rivalry

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With only two playoff berths up for grabs in the rugged Coastal 3-A Conference race, every game borders on a must-win situation.

And with D.H. Conley having already knocked off two-time defending champion Havelock and sporting one of three unbeaten records in the league, Friday night's trip to Jacksonville to take on White Oak at 7:30 p.m. looms as a pivotal contest.

A three-game win streak since entering conference play has propelled Conley to a 5-2 record overall. White Oak, also nicknamed the Vikings, shares second with West Craven at 2-0 while standing 5-1 overall.

Conley will host West Carteret next Friday, then after an open date, will visit West Craven in the final regular-season finale. White Oak has games remaining with both West Craven and Havelock. "It's an extremely big ball □Significance: Both teams are still unbeaten in the conference and in the hunt for one of the league's two berths to the state playoffs. It's a battle of Vikings pitting the preseason favorite (Conley) against one of the league's newcomers and a possible sleeper for the conference crown (White Oak).

game but we're only halfway through the conference race," Conley coach Steve Craft said. "It's too early to be talking about where we're at because we ain't at nowhere yet."

"We're halfway up the stalk but we can't start leaving leaves now."
The meeting is the first between the two teams since 1984 when White Oak prevailed 28-15. White Oak rolled 37-0 in 1983.
Elsewhere Friday night, Ayden-Grifton is at North Pitt, Washington hosts Bertie, Farmville Central entertains East Carteret, Greene Central hosts Pamlico County, Jamesville is home against Mattamuskeet, Williamston hosts Northside and North Edgecombe visits Roanoke.

Rose and Chocowinity have the week off.
Defense has been the cornerstone of White Oak's success. An unbending 4-4 alignment, which is anchored by middle linebacker Reggie Slade, defensive tackle Andre Purvis and defensive end Jerry Goodlow, has allowed a paltry average of 7.8 points, 77 yards rushing and 103 total yards a game while forcing 13 turnovers.

"They haven't allowed much," Craft said. "They play real solid defense. They are a quick, aggressive defense and play with good fundamentals."

"On the offensive side of the football, they have a solid passing attack. They are a tailback-oriented offense and they keep pounding and pounding at you until they're standing in the end zone."

"White Oak doesn't beat themselves, that's one thing we noticed on the films. They don't make mistakes. They're just a solid football team."

Senior tailback Tracy Boone has been the catalyst of the White Oak offense with 703 yards on the ground and seven touchdowns. Boone has cracked the 100-yard barrier three times, including his last two games.

Pirates Take Time Off Over Weekend

East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis has given his Pirates a few days off this week as ECU has an open date on its schedule Saturday. The Pirates practiced this morning, then will be off until Monday. Fall break began Wednesday evening on the East Carolina campus and many Pirate players will take the opportunity to return home. "After Thursday's practice we will give the players off until they are scheduled to return on Sunday evening," Lewis said following a two-hour workout on Wednesday. "This will give our players a chance to get their legs back under them. We have a lot of work to do to get ready for Virginia Tech." ECU, 3-1-1, is coming off a 47-14 loss at South Carolina last Saturday. The Pirates will host the Hokies in Ficklen Stadium on Oct. 21 for ECU's Homecoming. That game will mark the first time that Tech has ever played in Greenville. The Hokies are coming off a big 12-10 upset victory over West Virginia last week. The open date has also afforded the Pirate football staff the opportunity to move into its offices in the new Physical Education/Sports Medicine Building, the new home for ECU athletics.

Fike Hands Rose First Big East Loss

WILSON — Wilson Fike handed Rose High School's soccer team its first loss of the Big East season Wednesday, capturing a 2-0 victory. The Golden Demons scored once in each half. David Wolfe scored off an assist by Reggie Harrison at the 11 minute mark. Then, with less than 10 minutes left in the game, Harrison scored on a penalty kick after being tripped. Fike totally dominated the game, outshooting Rose 10-1 in the first half and 16-4 in the game. "They just wanted it more than we did," Coach Charlie Harvey said, "and we didn't play to our potential. We're just not getting intense when we have to. When the team's down, I can't find people to pick them up." Rose, which drops to 6-1 in the Big East and 10-3-1 overall, returns to action today, traveling to Wilson Hunt.

Peace Defeats East Carolina Netters

Peace College handed East Carolina's women's tennis team a 7-2 defeat Wednesday. East Carolina's only wins came in the number one singles and number three doubles. Top-seeded Nicole Catalano, who took a 6-4, 7-6 win in her match is unbeaten in three dual matches this year. The other win saw Jennifer Fenton and Kelly Buck combine at number three doubles. ## Hockey Returns To Greensboro

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Monarchs, Greensboro's first professional hockey team since 1975, will begin playing in the three-year-old East Coast Hockey League on Oct. 26, officials say. Players will report to camp next week to prepare for the minor-league season in an organization officials say is two steps from the National Hockey League. "This is a professional league," said Coach Jeff Brubaker. "In the past, hockey in this area was on a semi-pro level at best. This will be a developmental league for the National Hockey League." There will be eight teams in the league this season with other members in Winston-Salem, Hampton Roads, Va., Nashville, Tenn., Knoxville, Tenn., Vinton, Va., Erie, Pa. and Johnstown, Pa.

Hornets Pleased With J.R.'s Progress

CHARLOTTE (AP) — J.R. Reid has been given a lot to learn before his rookie season with the Charlotte Hornets, but coaches are giving him good grades so far. "I've had to learn maybe 40 plays," said Reid, the Hornets' top draft pick, as camp concluded at Appalachian State University on Tuesday. "The coaches have thrown a lot at me, but I understand why. I know they want me to play right away." Reid said he has already been exposed to about four times the plays the Tar Heels ran when he was at North Carolina. "In college, especially at Carolina, they're more team-oriented," he said. "Here you've got to get the best shot you can in a short time."

Jackets Focusing On Kicking Game

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's football team spent its Wednesday practice session focusing on its kicking game. Coach Bobby Ross says he wants Tech's kicking game to be flawless in this weekend's Atlantic Coast Conference meeting with Clemson — a team that capitalized on Tech kicking game problems two seasons in a row.

Whitaker, Belcher Get 1-A Honor

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Edgecombe quarterback Orlando Whitaker and wide receiver Dereke Belcher have combined to win the 1-A player of the week honor by the North Carolina High School Athletic this week. Whitaker completed nine of 16 passes for 269 yards and five touchdowns while Belcher hauled in four of those passes for touchdowns of 61, 25, 52 and 27 yards as the Warriors beat Columbia, 48-8. Others receiving the award include Henderson Vance running back Ray Wimbush, who scored four touchdowns in a victory over previously undefeated Oxford Webb, in the 4-A ranks; Northwest Guilford's Mike Green, who led his team to a 48-20 triumph over Western Guilford, scoring three touchdowns and running 31 yards for 201 yards; and Roderick Clark of Clayton went over the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season and scored twice on runs of 12 and 44 yards in a 35-0 Capital Area Conference victory over Bunn to receive the award in 2-A.

Walker Headed To Minnesota

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas — Pro Bowl runner Herschel Walker was traded to the Minnesota Vikings and moved his belongings out of the Cowboys suburban headquarters today.

"I'm outta here but I've got a lot of good memories," Walker told Cowboys assistant equipment manager Jerry Fowler as he cleaned out his locker at Valley Ranch before dawn.

Walker then boarded a plane for Minnesota with his agent.

"He's accepted the deal to play for Minnesota," said Lee Martin, producer of Walker's Dallas TV show. "From what Herschel told me, it's not so much that he wants to go to Minnesota, he just feels that he wasn't wanted here."

Vikings general manager Mike Lynn visited Walker's home Wednesday to try to convince him to join Minnesota. The Vikings and the Cowboys agreed to a package this week for Walker, who had spent several days trying to make up his mind on the matter.

In Minneapolis, Lynn would not confirm the trade.

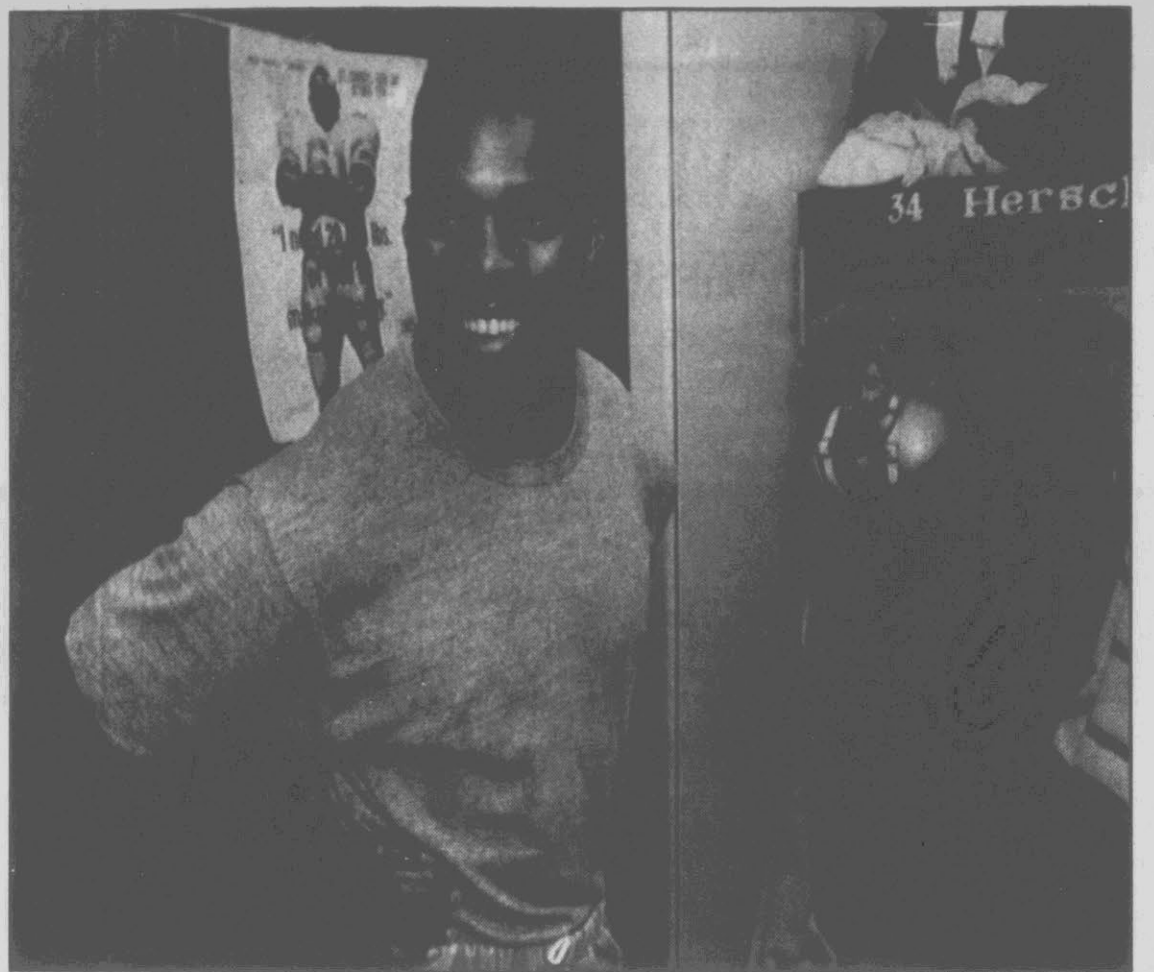

When told he has a running back in Walker, Lynn said, "We do? Can you wait a second. You're speculating. You're speculating. The deal is not done until we announce it. I've got no comment. If the Cowboys have made an announcement, that's one thing. Before you run off on a limb, get your facts straight."

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson, who took over the team in February and have struggled to an 0-5 start, had no immediate comment.

But Fowler said Walker told him, "I'll never forget my years in Dallas. I loved Dallas and I intend to keep my home here, but it's time to move on."

Walker told Fowler that he will play against the Green Bay Packers, the Vikings' opponent, on Sunday. Ironically, Walker just played against the Packers for the Cowboys last Sunday.

Martin wasn't as sure. "I haven't talked to him about that, but based on everything else they wouldn't put him in there Sunday because he isn't familiar with the blocking schemes and the system," Martin said.

Walker's equipment is being shipped to the Vikings by overnight express, Fowler said.

For Walker, the Cowboys will receive running back Darrin Nelson and Pro Bowl cornerback Carl Lee, two first round draft picks, two second round choices and a third round choice, reports say.

The producer said Walker would be available for comment later today.

On Wednesday night, Lynn predicted any deal would not be concluded soon.

"We're a lot closer today than, say, we were yesterday, and certainly a heck of a lot closer than we were on June first, when all this really started," Lynn told a Minnesota television station. Lynn said Walker and his wife were not extremely knowledgeable about life in Minnesota.

"They really didn't know anything about this state and like most Americans, think this is Siberia," Lynn said.

Jones said the Vikings were the only team the Cowboys were talking trade with.

Walker's agents were reported to be asking a renegotiated contract if he leaves the Cowboys. Walker is making $1 million a season and his contract expires in 1990.

In pass-oriented offense of new coach Johnson, Walker has carried only 69 times for 202 yards this year, a 2.9 average. He has scored only touchdowns and his longest run has been just 20 yards.

Walker complained that he wasn't getting the ball enough as the Cowboys skidded to the winless start, worst for the club since 1960.

Last year, Walker rushed for 1,514 yards on 361 carries and caught 53 passes for 505 yards. Walker also became only the 10th player in NFL history to gain more than 2,000 yards from scrimmage in a season.

Johnson has denied Walker doesn't fit into his system.

"Yes, he fits into our system and I'd like to have a back who can block like Herschel Walker, run the football like Herschel Walker and catch the football like Herschel Walker," Johnson said.

Walker, 28, came to the Cowboys in 1986 after the United States Football League folded. Dallas spent a fifth-round draft pick to get the rights to sign him.

Shriver Soaking In Russian Culture

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The line of questioning was not quite what Pam Shriver was used to.

"What food do you like eating?" "Anything — where do you recommend?"

"What profession do you want to take up after tennis?" "Maybe broadcasting."

When was the last time you visited the theater? How long each year do you stay at home? What is your home actually like?

Shriver tried to answer them all in her usual bubbly way, and threw in a joke or two as well.

"If I hold my serve and stay away from the vodka, I'll be OK," she said.

Later, the 27-year-old American, the top seed in the first professional tennis tournament in the Soviet Union, wasn't sure she had said the right thing.

"I'm not sure if they appreciated the joke about the vodka," Shriver said. "Guess I have to watch what I say until I've been here a while."

Although she hasn't won a singles title this year, Shriver still is ranked 11th in the world and could have been forgiven for passing up this event, a minor tournament by the standards of a top player, offering only $17,000 to the winner. But it was a tournament she badly wanted to play.

"The way I've been playing, it needed something special or I might well have taken a rest," Shriver said Wednesday. "But it's very seldom on the tour that you get an event that stands out. I'd have come here limping if necessary."

Shriver came through her first-round match in the $100,000 Virginia Slims event with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Louise Field of Australia. It was a rare easy victory for the American, whose season has been dogged by poor form and a split from her long-time doubles partner, Martina Navratilova.

Until two weeks ago, Shriver had been scheduled only to play doubles in Moscow. But she joined the singles draw, and gave the tournament a vital boost, because she needed match practice.

She said the differences between Moscow and playing in the West were easy to spot.

"The main thing is the lack of bright colors," Shriver said. "Even a new building here looks old. The Olympic stadium where we are playing is only about 10 years old but it looks five times that."

But tennis-wise, she said, facilities were as good as anywhere in the West.

"The courts are fantastic," Shriver said. "Indoors you very seldom get two match courts and a practice court under the same roof. My practice today went very well. Maybe these kind of surroundings are what I need to concentrate — not too many distractions."

Shriver said that while the tournament was a good starting point for professional tennis in the Soviet Union, it will need to offer more prize money to attract the stars.

"Any $100,000 event has difficulty attracting the top players," Shriver said. "But when I leave, I will encourage most of them to come and support the event. The people seem to be very excited. There is another women's tournament in Filderstadt (West Germany) at the moment and I imagine some of those players have mixed feelings about missing this historic event."

Mackey To Start For Jets Vs. Saints

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Although he might not have time to get comfortable in his new office, Kyle Mackey has quickly climbed the New York Jets' corporate ladder.

With four other NFL teams on his resume, Mackey joined the Jets in the mailroom, signing on for the 1988 training camp as insurance for perennial sore-armed quarterbacks Ken O'Brien and Pat Ryan.

Mackey became O'Brien's backup when Ryan was injured in the second exhibition game, and held onto the role despite the presence of veteran Mark Malone. On Wednesday, Mackey learned he'll start Sunday at New Orleans, replacing the struggling O'Brien.

"This is the chance I've been waiting for," Mackey said. "I have to go out and take advantage of it. I have to perform, that's the bottom line."

Coach Joe Walton, watching his Jets drop to 1-4 and fading fast, said the offense has been stagnant.

"I just feel the team needs a little spark," Walton said. "Kenny needs to back off a little bit. It's not his fault. I just felt Kyle might be able to give us a little lift."

Brown, Newcomers Try To Defend State Crown

Girls' State Golf Championship Begins Monday

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Rose High School got a lot for its dollar last year when it came to girls' golf. It won a state championship.

Monday and Tuesday, the Rampettes will try to duplicate that feat at the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's championships at the Finley Golf Course in Chapel Hill.

"We paid for the girls to spend two nights in a motel and gave them meal money," Rose athletic director Bud Phillips said of last year's expenses. "We didn't have to pay a coach, we had no home meets and no away meets, so it came out pretty cheap."

The team consisted of Camilla Brown, Charles Cox and Cammie Smith last year, accompanied by Lisa Chappell, a math teacher at Rose who went along as nominal "coach" of the team.

"She'd never been on a golf course before in her life," Brown said. "Then, she had to go out and accept the team trophy."

The tournament, a 36-hole, two-day event, combines the best two scores of the three team members to come up with the team's score. Brown claims not to remember exactly what it took last year.

"It was around 350, 360, something like that," Brown said. "And I think that can win for us again."

This year, however, Brown, a junior and the lone returning member of the team, had to go out and scout around to find two others willing to take to the course with her.

"It was hard," she said. "You have to have three people and it wasn't easy convincing people to play."

Non-Revenue Report

She finally came up with two sophomores, which means that — all things remaining equal — the same three could end up going again next year, too.

The two new members of the team are Robyn Galloway and Valerie Vincent.

Vincent, like Brown, is no newcomer to the course.

"I've been playing since I was little," Vincent said.

Galloway, however, is a novice at the game, having been playing only for about four months.

"My dad got me to start playing this summer," she said.

And what's been their best score? "Are you going to put this in the paper?"

Well, maybe not.

Brown, however, isn't shy about her best score.

"I've shot a 74 before, but that was from the men's tees," she said. "I don't play much from the women's tees."

It was Brown and Cox who first approached Rose about playing in the tournament a year ago.

"We heard about it from some girls we know at (Raleigh) Broughton," Brown said. "We asked Coach Phillips if he would send our names in to represent the school and he did."

After that, it was on to the title. Brown started playing when she was seven years old.

"My father started taking me out with him when he played and he'd let me hit it around a little," she said. "Then, Charles, my best friend, started playing, too, and that helped to keep up my interest. During the summer I play every day, but right now I'm just playing on weekends."

There's a reason for that, too. When not on the golf course, Brown can usually be found with a tennis racquet in her hands, playing the number five spot for the Rampettes. During the spring, she played soccer with the Rose team. This past winter, she also played basketball, but she's not sure that she'll continue with that.

Golf and soccer are her real loves, and she would like to continue playing golf in college.

A veteran of a number of tournaments throughout the state and in South Carolina, Brown hopes to keep her novice companions cool during the tournament next week.

"I think they'll be a little intimidated at the start, but I think once they get on the course, they'll be all right. I think we can place. As long as we break 100; keep it in the 80s and 90s, we'll do well again," she said.

N.C. State Wrestlers Face More Charges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A group of N.C. State University wrestlers face additional assault charges in connection with an off-campus brawl after a review of the incident showed the victims' injuries to be more serious than at first thought, a Wake County assistant district attorney said.

The charges were filed Wednesday in Wake County District Court against the wrestlers in connection with a brawl involving a married couple and a friend outside a Raleigh townhouse last month.

Eight NCSU wrestlers and one former wrestler were charged with two counts each of assault inflicting serious injury, a misdemeanor punishable by up to two years in prison and a fine.

Moreover, one of the men has been charged with assault on a female, which carries a maximum penalty of up to two years in prison.

Dowis, Rice Under Heisman Watch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Expect a lot of Heisman hype during Saturday's Notre Dame-Air Force telecast on ESPN.

Quarterbacks Tony Rice of Notre Dame and Dee Dowis of Air Force are two of the leading contenders for college football's top award, and their head-to-head duel on national television could have a major impact on the voting.

Notre Dame has produced a record seven Heisman winners, so Rice has tradition on his side. But ESPN analyst Beano Cook says Dowis also has some built-in support.

"He's a military man, and we love to vote for people in uniform," he says.

While Major Harris' Heisman stock went down after a poor showing in West Virginia's loss to Virginia Tech, Andre Ware's continued to soar after a record-breaking performance against Baylor. The Houston quarterback completed 33 of 53 passes for 514 yards and six touchdowns against the nation's top pass defense.

"The question is, will writers vote for a player whose school is on probation?" Cook said. "I think they will. If Ware keeps this up, he can definitely win the Heisman."

As for Notre Dame-Air Force, Cook thinks the top-ranked Fighting Irish will overpower the No. 17 Falcons.

"Dowis has a better supporting cast for war, but Rice has a better one for football," he says.

The owl obviously isn't Jerry Berndt's lucky bird.

After losing 18 games in a row at Rice, Berndt is off to an 0-6 start as coach at Temple, another team known as the Owls.

Berndt will try to break his personal 24-game losing streak Saturday at Boston College, which is having problems of its own. The Eagles are 0-4 this season and have won only one of their last 10 games.

Charley Pell has some advice for Florida's football program: When it comes to breaking NCAA rules, just say no.

Pell, forced out as Florida coach in 1984 because of NCAA violations, is surprised that the same thing happened to his successor.

Coach Galen Hall resigned Sunday after he was accused of supplementing the salaries of two assistants and paying a player to help him with child support.

"Just don't do it," Pell said of breaking NCAA rules. "That's what you boil it down to. Just flat don't do it."

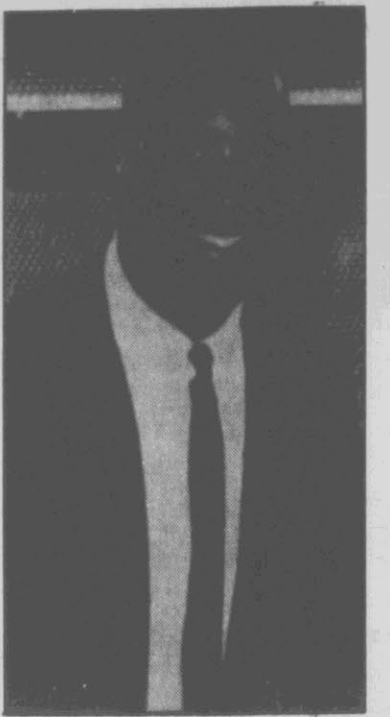

Idaho's most important touchdown of the season didn't occur on the football field.

The plane carrying the team home from Flagstaff after a win over Northern Arizona was forced to make an emergency landing at San Francisco International Airport on Sunday because of hydraulic problems. Passengers assumed a crash-landing position, but the plane landed safely.

"We finally get a game where I don't lose too much hair and then I lose a bunch on the flight home," Idaho coach John Smith said.

Schiller Accepts USOC Post Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — For the second time in as many years, Southeastern Conference commissioner Harvey W. Schiller has agreed to become executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Schiller, who took the SEC job in 1986, agreed in January 1988 to accept the Olympic post, only to return to the SEC after three weeks. At the time, he cited personal and professional reasons, including health problems from which he has recovered.

The USOC's executive board meets next week in Denver to approve Schiller's appointment to succeed Baaron Pittenger, whose term is scheduled to end Dec. 31, 1990.

The USOC executive director, based in Colorado Springs, Colo., is responsible for the daily operation of the organization, whose policies are created by the executive board.

Schiller announced his resignation from the SEC on Wednesday but said he will remain until a date to be agreed upon by the presidents of the conference's 10 schools.

Donald Zacharias, president of Mississippi State University and of the SEC, was out of the country, but University of Georgia president Charles Knapp, the SEC's vice president, said a search for a successor would begin immediately.

"The conference accepts Dr. Schiller's resignation with regret and appreciation for his extraordinary service to both the conference and its individual schools," Knapp said. "We wish Dr. Schiller the best in his new undertaking and know he will be successful."

Schiller was the fifth SEC commissioner, succeeding H. Boyd McWhorter when he retired.

Schiller developed such projects as the SEC's football and basketball television packages, the acquisition of funds to establish post-graduate scholarships for athletes, and the establishment of positions in athletics administration for minorities and women in the conference office at Birmingham.

He was a consultant to the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee in 1984, and participated in the administration of the Games as the director of competition at the Los Angeles Sports Arena. He was chairman of the Games Preparation Committee of the USOC and has had various other roles in the Olympic movement.

Rose Has Open Date...

Quarterback Jeff Fyberek has passed for 259 yards and has connected for four touchdowns.

Conley's offense, which erupted for a season-high 59 points against winless Pender last week, has been paced in the backfield by Mike Clark, a 5-7, 150-pound junior who has rushed for 670 yards and averages nearly six yards a carry.

Junior Kenny Haddock is the team's second-leading rusher but sophomore Anthony Barrett, projected to be the starter in preseason but sidelined by an injury, made an appearance last week but is still less than full speed.

"He's mighty, mighty rusty," Craft said of Barrett. "It will take a while to get the rust out."

The Conley passing game has been effective when called upon — although that has been seldom. Senior quarterback Scott Seymour has completed 50 percent of his passes with wide receiver Junior Farrow and tight ends, Hal Conger, Martin Patrick and Boris Harris his top targets.

Craft said Conley would attempt to establish its running game but feels confident attacking either by air or by land.

"We will try to do what we do best but if we feel like somebody is loading up on the run we feel comfortable we can throw the ball," Craft said. "Then again, if someone is loading up on the pass we feel comfortable we can run the ball."

The defense has also been the backbone of Conley's success, giving up just 16 points over the last four games and an average of 8.9 on the year.

"We feel good about what we're doing on defense but we're still got some room for improvement," Craft said. "Our tackling can improve but as a whole we've been fairly well-pleased with how far we've come."

Rose Prepares For Home Stretch
Rose has two weeks to mull over a 28-21 setback to unbeaten Wilson Hunt before embarking on the final three games of the season.

The injury-riddled Rampants are 5-2 overall and 3-1 in the Big East after having a 17-game winning streak within the conference snapped. Elizabeth City Northeastern and Hunt are the lone unbeaten in the league but they collide Friday night in Wilson for sole possession of first place.

Rose entertains Northeastern when it resumes play Friday, Oct. 20 then closes the regular-season with road trips to Wilson Fike and preseason favorite Rocky Mount.

"Elizabeth City will be a big game," Rose coach Chip Williams said. "We've got some time before that game but we'd rather it be after a win. We've got a long time for the kids to wonder why things are not positive."

One thorn in the side of the Rampants has been mounting injuries and Williams said he is still unsure if those who are currently sidelined will return by the Northeastern game.

Maurice Hines and Melvin Moore are lost for the season. Quarterback Hank Thompson, who has not played a down this year due to a fractured foot suffered in baseball, was to visit the doctor for a diagnosis this week.

Others listed as questionable for Northeastern are Boris Newton, Derick Wilkes, Ron Dupree and Chad Adams.

 Only a person with a very stubborn streak would take a finesse which is almost certain to fail. You must search for greener pastures. North made a well-judged leap to four spades on minimal values. Since partner's bidding promised a considerably better-than-minimum hand, North deemed that well-placed kings behind the opening bid and the ruffing value in clubs would almost surely be worth enough tricks for game because of the four-card trump support.  rounds of diamonds, declarer ruffing the third. Obviously, the problem was to avoid losing two heart tricks. Since East did not take a heart preference, chances of finding the jack of hearts well placed were negligible. Declarer found a way out of his dilemma. After drawing trumps in two rounds, South crossed to the king of clubs, ruffed dummy's last diamond, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club in dummy. With the minor suits eliminated, declarer led a low heart from the table to the queen in his hand, and West was a dead duck. The defender took the ace of hearts, but was faced with a choice of losing alternatives. If he happened to have a minor-suit card as an exit, declarer would ruff in one hand while discarding the losing heart from the other. That was not the case, so West had to lead a low heart away from the jack. But it was declarer, not partner, who held the ten. South allowed the heart to ride around to hand, and the game was in the bag.

Zsa Zsa Names New Attorney

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Zsa Zsa Gabor has replaced her trial attorney with another lawyer to pursue the possibility of appealing her cop-slapping conviction.

Miss Gabor, the former Hungarian beauty queen and sometime actress, will wait until after her Oct. 17 sentencing on the misdemeanor convictions before deciding whether to file an appeal, her new attorney, Harrison E. Bull, said Wednesday.

William Graysen, Miss Gabor's trial attorney, said he referred Miss Gabor to Bull because Graysen's firm does not handle appeals.

Miss Gabor was convicted on Sept. 29 of battery on a police officer, driving without a valid license and having an open container of alcohol in her car. She could be sentenced to 18 months in jail.

The charges stemmed from a June 14 traffic stop in which Miss Gabor slapped Officer Paul Kramer after he pulled over her Rolls-Royce convertible because its registration tags were expired.

House Donated

JENSEN BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Former movie star-singer Frances Langford has donated a $600,000 house on the Atlantic Ocean to the Florida Oceanographic Society.

The society is planning a $14 million Coastal Science Center, and Langford's gift will finance half of the center's first phase.

"The right people just happened to tell me about the Florida Oceanographic Society," Langford told reporters Tuesday. "Somehow, the activities of the society seem very exciting to me and so I was pleased to make the gift."

Old School Honors Michael Jackson

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Michael Jackson on Wednesday revisited the childhood he lost at Gardner Street Elementary School in Hollywood — the last public school he attended before becoming a superstar.

Jackson, the enigmatic pop star and Gardner's most famous alumnus, returned to his old school for the dedication of the newly refurbished Michael Jackson Auditorium.

And his agreement to be there guaranteed that the occasion would be more than just another ribbon-cutting. It became a Hollywood production in Hollywood.

The school was spruced up and security tightened. Media advisers herded the crowds of television and newspaper reporters. Glossy programs were prepared for school district officials and invited dignitaries.

One of the Los Angeles school district's top music coaches perfected the Gardner school choir's rendition of "We Are the World," a tune Jackson co-wrote. And The Boys, a new group that Motown Reords hopes will duplicate the success of the Jackson Five, were there to sing and share the limelight.

Laura Gerson, Jackson's sixth-grade teacher, introduced her former student.

"I remember seeing Michael for the first time on the playground. I remember thinking he was a beautiful little kid," she said. "But I had never heard of the Jackson Five."

It wasn't until later she learned that he was a talented singer. "He never talked about himself; he just settled down and was one of the kids," she said. "But occasionally, he would disappear now and then to perform on television. ... I knew he would be great, but I had no idea how great a singer, composer and songwriter he would become."

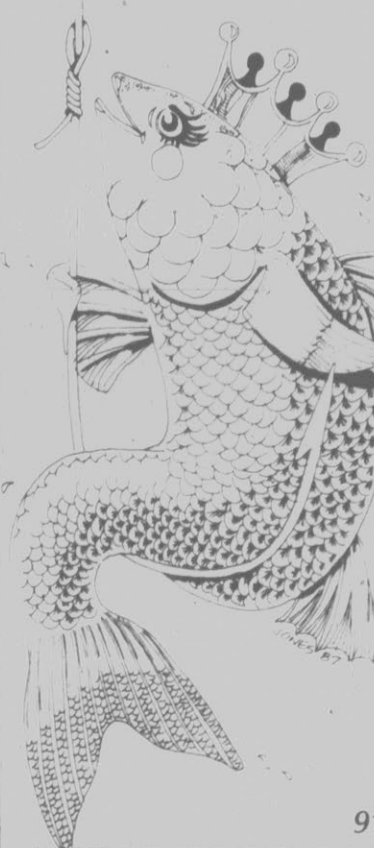

Jackson, dressed in a tight-fitting black and red outfit with silver buckles and a thick silver belt, walked on stage to loud applause and scattered screams.

Jackson was an 11-year-old lead singer for the Jackson Five when he moved to Los Angeles from Gary, Ind., with his four older brothers.

Arsenio Wanted Carson's Show

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Arsenio Hall, star of his own late-night talk show, was disappointed when he wasn't tapped to be the heir apparent to the king of the talk shows, Johnny Carson.

In Rolling Stone magazine's November issue, Hall said that when Jay Leno was selected as Carson's substitute host, "I thought it should have been me."

Hall has long admired Carson and dreamed of being host of "The Tonight Show."

"He was the guy," Hall said of Carson.

Palme Conviction Overturned

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — An appeals court today overturned the conviction of the 42-year-old Swede accused of killing Prime Minister Olof Palme three years ago, as the national TV news agency reported.

Christer Pettersson, who has been jailed since December, would be freed shortly, TT said, quoting Erik Hansson, an administrative official of the Svea Court of Appeals.

Pettersson, a drug and alcohol abuser, was convicted of the Feb. 28, 1986, murder in July. His appeal was heard in a three-week trial that ended Monday by a jury of three laymen and four professional jurors.

The court had set Nov. 2 for announcing its verdict, but TT said the jury concluded in only three days that "the investigation into the case was insufficient for a conviction."

It quoted Hansson as saying the decision was unanimous: The written verdict will be released Nov. 2.

Palme was a four-term prime minister and a dominant figure in the international socialist and disarmament movements. He also was a U.N. mediator in the Iran-Iraq war.

The conviction by a tribunal of six laymen and two professional judges was based largely on the identification of Pettersson by Palme's widow, Lisbeth Palme, who was walking home with her husband when he was shot from behind at close range.

Mrs. Palme said she saw Pettersson standing a few feet away after her husband was shot. Several other witnesses said they saw Pettersson apparently waiting for the Palmes to emerge from the theater.

But no one saw Pettersson with a gun, and police failed to produce any forensic evidence to link him to the shooting. They also could not ascribe a motive to the accused man.

Typhoon Dan Batters Philippines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — A strengthened Typhoon Dan roared toward Vietnam today after killing at least 30 people, injuring 57 and leaving 142,000 homeless in the Philippines, officials said.

At least 33 fishermen also were missing after Dan battered Manila and southern areas of Luzon Island Wednesday with 62 mph winds. Forecasters said winds increased late Wednesday to 74.4 mph, making Dan a typhoon.

Electricity had still not been restored today to wide areas of Manila. About 95 percent of the Manila area, which has a population of more than 7 million, lost power Wednesday as strong winds ripped down power lines.

Red Cross spokeswoman Lourdes Masang said 14 fishermen were missing aboard seven boats that disappeared in Subic Bay west of the capital.

Another 10 people were missing after a deep-sea fishing boat ran aground in Subic, she said.

In Batangas province south of Manila, the coast guard said 10 people were rescued after two fishing boats collided and sank. Early reports said up to 20 fishermen were missing but officials said all but nine had been accounted for.

Dan, the 16th tropical storm or typhoon to hit the country this year, slammed late Tuesday into Sorsogon province, on the southeastern tip of Luzon Island. It raced across southern Luzon, passing just south of Manila before entering the South China Sea.

An average of 20 typhoons or tropical storms strike the Philippines each year.

Marcos' Tomb

This wood and corrugated steel structure will house the body of former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, who died Sept. 28 at the age of 72. Entombment ceremonies are scheduled in Honolulu Sunday at the Valley of the Temples Memorial Park, where the air-conditioned shed is being built.
