UNC Board Eyes Role Of Athletics

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — A former chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors says it is time for the board to take a closer look at the role of athletics in the 16-campus system and find out what changes need to be made.

"We need to put athletics under the microscope," said William Johnson, a member emeritus from Lillington.

"There is growing sentiment that something needs to be done to correct the sorry state of intercollegiate athletics," he said Thursday.

Johnson asked the board's committee on education planning, policies and programs to support three resolutions on athletics, the most sweeping of which would be the study.

After brief discussion, the committee agreed to consider Johnson's call for a study at its meeting next month.

Johnson said he believes a study is necessary "to determine if there ought to be any changes in the way we have been dealing with intercollegiate athletics."

"We need to assure that we don't have in the future the kind of problems we have been experiencing in our athletic programs," he said.

Johnson said he was referring to the recent abuses in the men's basketball program at North Carolina State University and the buyout of University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill football coach Dick Crum's contract nearly two years ago.

"The people who know something about education say (the situation with athletics) is wrong," Johnson said before the meeting. "But it keeps getting worse. Look at what happened at Florida this week."

SCLC Calls For March On Drugs

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which normally fights racial injustice, is turning its attention this weekend to fighting drugs in the community.

The Pitt County chapter of the civil rights organization has scheduled a march through downtown Greenville and a rally at the Town Common to call attention to the need to eliminate drugs in the area.

The march will begin at 12:30 p.m. at 623 Albemarle Ave., headquarters of the Pitt SCLC unit, and proceed through the downtown area. The rally on the Town Common will begin following the march.

"We are concerned about the children," said Melvin McLawhorn, vice president of the Pitt chapter. "We're concerned about the children in all neighborhoods of Greenville."

McLawhorn said the rally will focus on keeping children away from the deadly influence of drugs and drug dealers. "They have not yet had an opportunity to live," he said.

The rally downtown will include testimonials from former drug

Evans Street Contract OK'd

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The widening of Evans Street will be completed with work on a section of the corridor from Howell to 10th covered under a $602,695 contract awarded this morning by the N.C. Board of Transportation at a meeting in Raleigh.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the transportation board, said the contract for the .456-mile project, awarded to Barrus Construction Co. of Kinston, "was 15.3 percent below our engineer's estimate" for the work.

The Howell to 10th contract, Doub said, includes widening, grading, drainage, paving and pavement markings.

"We were very pleased with the bid," Doub said, noting that work on the project should begin by mid-November and be completed by Aug. 1, 1990.

Work is already under way on the first portion of the Evans Street widening, from Howell Street to Greenville Boulevard.

The completion of the project, Doub said, "would not have been possible without the cooperation" of the Greenville City Council "through cost sharing on right-of-way acquisition." For that, the transportation board member said, "the citizens of Greenville should be most appreciative."

The transportation board this morning also allocated $14.7 million from the highway trust fund for construction on 3.7 miles of the new U.S. 264 northwest Greenville bypass and more money for right-of-way acquisition on an additional 2.3 miles of the proposed road.

Doub said the construction money was for work on the portion of the new road from U.S. 264 to Secondary Road 1401, which is scheduled to be let to contract in February.

The right-of-way money, some $1.56 million, is for a 2.3-mile section from SR 1404 to west of SR 1579. Doub said that this section of the bypass is not affected by the realignment at Burroughs Wellcome.

Smoking Is Falling, But At A Slow Pace

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Cigarette smoking continues to decline steadily in America, but not fast enough, according to federal health officials who say the country is going to miss a 1990 goal for snuffing out the habit.

A survey of adult Americans conducted in 1987 shows that 28.8 percent are cigarette smokers, the Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday. That's down from 30.1 percent in a similar 1985 survey, but apparently too small a decline for researchers to project meeting the federal government's official goal of less than 25 percent by 1990.

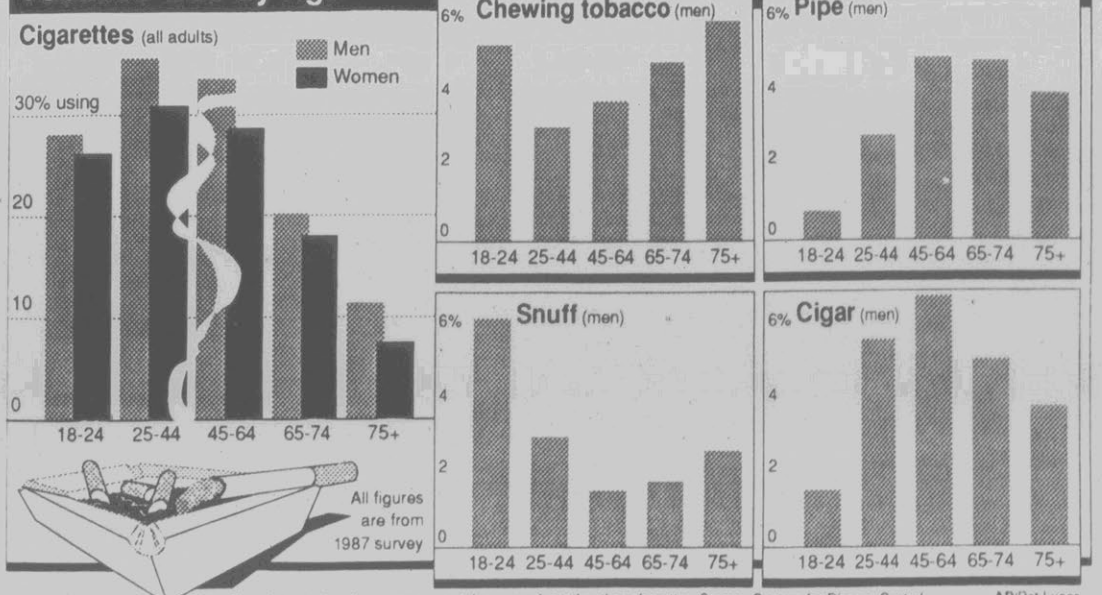

"We're getting pretty close," said Dr. Ron Davis, director of the CDC's Office of Smoking and Health. "We're making progress, and we're heading in the right direction."

CDC officials believed two years ago that the 1990 goal — one of several health targets set by federal officials as this decade began — could be reached, partly because of a 1986 survey showing a national smoking rate of 26.5 percent.

But that survey, conducted by phone, probably isn't quite as precise as the face-to-face 1987

Washington Can Cook, But Drinking's Out

By Frances Horton Arrington
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — While state health officials have lifted restrictions on cooking and bathing with the city's water, they are still warning residents of the Beaufort County town not to drink it.

Dr. Ronald Levine, state health director, partially lifted Thursday a full ban he placed on the city's water last month after excessive amounts of a cancer-causing chemical, trihalomethane, were found in it.

After studying the results of recent tests on the water, Levine said the levels of trihalomethanes have decreased significantly, but are still above those considered safe by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

There is no danger in inhaling the vapors from cooking or showering with the water or washing vegetables with it as health officials had warned last month, according to City Manager Bruce Radford. He said this morning that the water should not be used in vaporizers.

Since the ban was issued, Washington administrators have worked with state scientists on ways to reduce the level of the contaminants in the water. Radford said the partial lifting of the ban is proof that their efforts are paying off.

"It's definitely a step in the right direction," Radford said. "We had hoped they (state health officials) would relieve the advisory on drinking the water altogether. But, it appears they will stick with the 100 parts per billion requirement."

The EPA allows 100 parts per billion of trihalomethanes in drinking water and levels above that are considered unsafe for consumption.

Radford said Washington water had tested as high as 365 parts per billion in some areas of the city and as low as 2 parts per billion in others. The systemwide average is about 189.7 parts per billion, he said.

Radford said the city has taken a number of steps that he believes are responsible for the recent reduction of trihalomethanes in the water.

He said the city has cut back the flow of water from the Jordan Water Plant, which brings water in from Tranter's Creek and has stepped up the flow of water from the Slatestone groundwater well.

Tranter's Creek, which is primarily swamp water, had been the city's main water source. State scientists believe dangerous amounts of trihalomethanes were being produced when the chlorine used to cleanse the water reacted with the naturally produced organic acids.

However, health officials last month declared the water from the Slatestone site free of any dangerous contaminants.

Radford said the city has also begun introducing a powdered carbon into the water coming into the city from Tranter's Creek before any chlorine is added.

"In essence, the carbon powder acts as an absorption material for the organics," he explained. "So, that when the powder makes contact with the organics we don't produce as high levels of trihalomethanes."

Radford said progress on reducing the water contamination has been evident, but the city ultimately needs to achieve the EPA allowance of 100 parts per billion.

"We're going to work very diligently to get down to that level," he said.

New Storm Developing

MIAMI (AP) — The season's 10th tropical storm formed today after a depression strengthened rapidly off the Mexican coast, forecasters said.

Tropical Storm Jerry had maximum sustained winds of 65 mph and was moving north through the Gulf of Mexico at about 8 mph, according to the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables.

Forecasters predicted some further increase in Jerry's strength today. They said there was about a 10 percent chance of the storm's center passing within 65 miles of various Gulf Coast points from Brownsville, Texas, to Gulfport, Miss. by 7 a.m. Monday.

Thursday Thefts

Investigators said five thefts, including a $40,000 roller-packer, were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said the roller-packer, powered by a four-cylinder engine, was driven away from a job site at the old Greenville Utilities Commission electric generating plant on Plant Street in an incident reported at 9:20 a.m.

Officer C.N. Gray said a camera valued at $150 and a tubeless tire repair kit were taken from a vehicle parked at 1110 Douglas Ave. in an incident reported at 12:05 p.m., while two bicycles were taken from 110 Crown Point Road in an incident reported at 3:31 p.m.

Officer C.L. Robertson said a carton of cigarettes was taken from the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 1:02 p.m., while Officer C.A. Curtis said $70 in cash was taken from a purse at 208 Pineview Drive in a break-in reported at 6:36 p.m.

Larceny Charge

Ophelia Branch Royster, 31, of Washington, N.C., was arrested by Greenville police Thursday on larceny charges.

Officer L.T. Gray said that in addition to the larceny charge, which resulted from an incident at the K mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center about 8:55 p.m., Ms. Royster was charged with resisting, obstructing and delaying an officer in connection with the incident.

Drug Arrests

Greenville police arrested two people on drug charges about 4:15 p.m. Thursday.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said Shirley Arrington Dupree, 29, of 112 Howard Circle was arrested in the 100 block of Howard Circle on charges of possession of cocaine and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Officer J.A. Felton said Byron Keith Blackwell, 16, of 321E Roundtree Drive was taken into custody on Paige Drive on charges of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine.

Felton said two grams of crack cocaine valued at $275 and $135 in cash were taken from Blackwell when he was arrested.

Man Arrested

Vernon M. Morrison of Lot 91, Eastwoods Country Estates in Greenville, was arrested Wednesday and charged with four counts of obtaining property by false pretenses, according to Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Tyson said Dr. Stephen Cohen of Greenville alleged in a complaint that Morrison collected rent from three of Cohen's tenants without the doctor's authorization.

Two rent payments in the amount of $70 and one $140 payment were collected, the sheriff said.

Morrison was released from the Pitt County Jail on Wednesday after posting a cash bond of $12,000. A court date has not been set.

Wreck Dumps Hogs

A tractor-trailer truck carrying hogs collided with a car north of Greenville early today, slightly injuring the driver of the car and killing some of the hogs, according to Trooper J.B. Heath. The investigator said the truck, operated by Charles Marion Butler of Clinton, was traveling north on N.C. 11 about 4.3 miles north of Greenville when a car in front of the truck made a left turn. Heath said Butler told him he was not able to stop and swerved left, striking the side of the car operated by James M. Short. Heath said the hog truck then struck a utility pole and fell on its left side. Butler was not injured, Heath said.

GUC Board Lets Contracts On Two New, Larger Elevated Water Tanks

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville will have four fewer elevated water storage tanks once two new — and much larger — storage facilities are built to help improve water pressure for Greenville Utilities Commission customers.

The GUC board this week awarded bids for construction of the two new tanks to CBI Na-Con Inc. of Atlanta.

The $2.38 million price tag includes construction of a new 1.5-million-gallon tank behind the Wal-Mart store under construction on Greenville Boulevard near the Hooker Road intersection, and a new

1-million-gallon tank on Greenville Boulevard near the 14th Street intersection where an old tank is located adjacent to the Eastside electric substation.

The bid price also covers dismantling six of GUC's present seven tanks, including: a half-million-gallon tank on Greenville Boulevard across from the Ramada Inn that was built in 1982; the 500,000-gallon tank on Greenville Boulevard near the 14th Street intersection which was built in 1963; a 300,000-gallon tank on Chestnut Street in service since 1935; a 300,000-gallon tank on North Greene Street constructed in 1953; a 300,000-gallon tank on Jarvis Street which was put there in 1935, and a 300,000-gallon tank on South Washington Street which was built in 1935.

The only elevated storage tank now in use that will not be dismantled as part of the improvement program is a 500,000-gallon tank built in 1965 in the industrial park north of the city.

Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, said the industrial park tank will remain until the utility's board decides whether or not to create a second water system to serve the industrial area. Such a water system, Green said, would supply process water to industries in the area.

Green said that rather than abandon two deep wells in the area that have a high fluoride content, the wells and the tank could be used to provide a separate process water system for industrial customers in the area, thus freeing up some of the production capacity of the water treatment plant.

Most industries, Green said, don't need drinking quality water for the water needed in their production processes.

The two new tanks will be 30 feet higher than the existing seven tanks in the system, Green said.

The building of the new tanks and the dismantling of the old tanks is scheduled to take about a year.

In addition to the tank construction bids, the board also awarded bids for modifications to the high service pump station which includes four new high service water pumps and two new motors as part of the water pressure improvement program.

The new pumps will have a greater capacity and pressure than the pumps they are replacing.

The general contract for the pump station work was awarded to Peters & White Construction Co. for $218,900, while the electrical contract went to L.J.'s Electric Co. for $79,790.

A graduate of Duke University, he is an ordained minister in the Free Will Baptist Church. He was honored with a honorary doctor of laws degree by Atlantic Christian College in Wilson and obtained a master's degree from Florida State University.

Raper and his wife, the former Rose Mallard of Trenton, are parents of two sons and four daughters.

DAVISS. BRODY

Brody Is Appointed To Board

FAYETTEVILLE — The University of North Carolina's Board of Governors appointed David S. Brody to the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital today.

The board's action came during its regular meeting this morning at Fayetteville State University.

Brody, 38, is chairman and chief executive officer of Brody Brothers Dry Goods in Kinston. He is also a former member of the hospital board, serving a term that expired in March.

The Board of Governors appoints eight members to the 20-member hospital board. The other 12 are appointed by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

Dedication Ceremony

Formal dedication ceremonies will be held Sunday at 3 p.m. at Beaufort County's new Northside High School.

Dr. Burkette Raper, president of Mount Olive College, will give the dedication address. A native of Wilson County, Raper has served as president of the college since 1954, and has served as a member of the board of trustees since 1977.

Ken Jackson of the city's public works department will speak about city beautification plans.

Permit Issued

The city of Greenville has issued a solicitation permit to the Oliver Yak Bell Memorial Scholarship Fund to raise funds to send children to summer camp and parks and school recreation programs in Pitt, Lenior and Greene counties.

Approximately 40 volunteers are permitted to hold a fashion show and seek donations door-to-door through Dec. 1.

YOUR EYEGLOSS PRESCRIPTION

What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions"?

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?

A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?

A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?

A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?

A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?

A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580 defense of his much-criticized handling of the failed coup attempt in Panama two weeks ago, when U.S. troops stationed nearby were not directed to intervene on behalf of the rebels.

"I would hope I would never be reckless enough as commander in chief to make a commitment to force without knowing the facts" of a coup attempt. He said he'd seen no evidence of a crucial gap in intelligence.

"I wouldn't mind using force if it could be done in a prudent manner," he said in defending the decision not to take part in the coup. "So I'm not ruling out the use of force for all time."

He hinted broadly he might seek congressional approval for greater authority in dealing with situations like the coup in Panama. "We may, we may," he said. "I want as broad a power as possible and I think under the Constitution the president has it."

Bush continued his defense even as he was walking out of the briefing room.

"I can understand instant hawks appearing from where there used to be the feathers of a dove, because some of it is political and some of it is the frustration they feel because this man is still in office," he said.

Bush also urged Congress to approve his plan for a cut in the capital gains tax, and said he would consider signing legislation that combined his plan with a Democratic proposal liberalizing individual retirement accounts.

"The mixing of IRAs and capital gains in this debate is troublesome to me," Bush said. "Whether there is room for compromise on that, I'd leave it to those who are negotiating."

Most of the attention during the brief question and answer session was focused on Noriega.

The Panamanian leader is under indictment in the United States for drug trafficking, and the president said he's not willing to have the indictment dropped in exchange for Noriega giving up power.

He blended his call for Noriega's ouster with his defense of his own actions two weeks ago.

"I am not going to give carte blanche support for an operation, particularly when they don't ask for that support," he said. "I have to reserve that right, I have at stake the lives of American kids."

Bush brushed aside critics who said he missed an opportunity to assist in Noriega's ouster in the failed coup.

"I've seen no fact that would make me change my view," he said.

"I will allow the bill to become law, but without my signature. I am withholding that signature to signal our belief that the constitutional amendment is the best way to provide protection for the flag."

Asked about attempts in Congress to repeal catastrophic health care legislation for the elderly, Bush said he was "letting the congressional process hash this out."

survey reported Thursday, Davis said.

The CDC said Thursday that smoking rates continue to fall by a steady half-percentage-point a year, as they've done since 1964, the year of the surgeon general's landmark warning that smoking causes cancer and heart disease. At that time, 40 percent of the country smoked.

The number of Americans who smoke will continue to drop, possibly until just a small "hard-core" band of smokers is left, Davis projected.

"So far, we haven't seen any evidence of a leveling off (in smoking's decline)," he said.

"We need to intensify our efforts. ... Smokers tomorrow may be more resistant to our message than smokers today," he said. "We still have almost 400,000 Americans dying every year because of smoking-related disease. We can't be complacent about smoking rates going down."

Thursday's CDC report, based on a survey of some 44,000 people, showed that one in three adult Americans uses tobacco of some sort, including cigarettes, pipes, cigars and chewing tobacco — 39 percent of men and 27 percent of women. Among men, 31 percent smoke cigarettes, compared to 27 percent of women.

The margin of error for the overall smoking survey was 1 percent.

Young people are more likely to smoke cigarettes than older people: 33 percent of Americans ages 25-44 smoke, compared with 19 percent ages 65-74 and 9 percent ages 75 and up.

Five percent of U.S. adult men smoke cigars, while 3 percent smoke pipes. Four percent use chewing tobacco and 3 percent use snuff. The percentage of women using such alternate tobaccos was below 1 percent.

In addition, the CDC noted, cigarette smokers were somewhat more likely to be big beer drinkers: 11 percent of smokers drank beer five times a week, compared with 9 percent of former smokers and 3 percent of those who never smoked.

Judge Includes Book Reports In Sentence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A judge threw the book, or rather books, at a pair of drug defendants, and he's demanding book reports as part of the novel sentence.

Circuit Judge John E. Rochester said Thursday he's been imposing book-reading sentences for about nine months in his rural circuit because he's tired of seeing convicts return to prison again and again.

"I'm trying to identify people who won't continue in that cycle," he said.

On Wednesday, Rochester ordered Henry McQueen, 31, and Isaac McQueen, 30, to read five novels each.

The brothers, who pleaded guilty to cocaine-possession charges, have to write reports on the books and keep weekly diaries on what they are doing with their lives and what they've learned from this brush with the judicial system.

Henry McQueen was ordered to read "The Grapes of Wrath" by John Steinbeck, "Lie Down in Darkness" by William Styron, "Animal Farm" by George Orwell, "Bonfire of the Vanities" by Tom Wolfe, and "The Reivers" by William Faulkner.

Isaac McQueen's reading list consists of "Lord of the Flies" by William Golding, "Crime and Punishment" by Feodor Dostoevski, "The Trial" by Franz Kafka, "Confessions of Nat Turner" by Styron, and "East of Eden" by Steinbeck.

The McQueens each were given suspended sentences of one year and a day, plus five years supervised probation, which the judge said could be revoked if they failed to do their book reports or keep their diaries. He also said the sentences would remain suspended as long as they hold jobs and obey the law.

School Board

Some At-Large Seats May Be Needed

When you look through a tube, your view is constricted. All you see is the small picture. That's OK for examining something under a microscope, but when that perspective is applied to government, it becomes inadequate. Public boards whose members are elected by districts run a sharp risk of developing such a narrow view.

The Pitt County Board of Education, composed of members elected by districts only, is in such a danger zone. That method of election was questionable when it was approved in 1986. There are sound reasons to examine it and adjust it to include at-large voting after the 1990 census results are available.

For example, parents in the D.H. Conley High School attendance area are concerned that their community may be the victim of a restricted perspective on the school board. They say they have no real representation on that board because both its board members — Frank Grooms and Board Chairman George Williams — live outside the attendance area and send their children to other schools.

At a meeting Sunday, more 200 citizens met to air their concerns over that issue and others. They expressed fears that their community's interests would be overlooked in board decisions because that area doesn't have a voice on matters. Those fears are fed by single-member district representation.

While it would be ideal for all board members to live in the attendance area they represent, in order to achieve racial balance on a board and to meet the one man-one vote requirements of the U.S. Constitution, election district lines can't always match school district lines. Sometimes, elected officials will not reside in the area they represent. Such is the case in Pitt County and in many other counties in the state.

But that fact in itself does not create a problem. What prompts concern is the fact that each of the 12 members of Pitt County's school board is elected only by the voters in the respective districts. There are no at-large representatives on that board. That means that at the ballot box, each school board member answers only to a small handful of voters — those in one district.

Such limited public accountability sets the stage for a board with a perilously narrow perspective. If, for example, the voting power of Greenville overrides the voting power of Winterville in a district, as it did in the last election, an elected official could choose to listen only to the concerns of the more powerful constituency. It would be very difficult for the overlooked community to remove that person from office. That is the fear articulated by parents from the D.H. Conley attendance area.

If, however, there were representatives on that board who were elected by all voters, they would be compelled to consider the broad interests of all the voters, regardless of where they reside. That would guarantee each community a voice on issues and give it authority at the ballot box.

Under the current system, balanced representation depends on the integrity of each elected official. The parents who met Sunday should note that in addition to one of their district's representatives — Frank Grooms — two other school board members without any ties to the district — Mary Williams and Walter Morehead — came to the meeting to listen to concerns. That indicates a broad interest by those elected officials.

But a board elected exclusively by single-member districts does not produce sound government. Instead, it opens the door to provincialism. The noise in Winterville is a warning sign that an adjustment, including at-large representation, must be considered for the school board.

It's Unclear How Far Leadership Will Go

Robert McCartney

BERLIN — East Germany's Communist leadership, under pressure both from lower-ranking party members and swelling protests in the streets, has backed away from its staunch opposition to reform but has left unclear how far it will go to meet popular demands for a more open society, analysts said Thursday.

The uncertainty has been heightened by the widespread belief-shared by Western diplomats, officials and private analysts in East Berlin and West Germany—that chief of state Erich Honecker will be forced out of office in the coming weeks or months.

"It's obvious Honecker will leave. This marks the total ruin of his policy," said Falk Bamsdorf, a research fellow at the Foundation for Science and Politics, a think tank in Ebenhausen near Munich.

The 21-member Politburo, or executive body of the Communist Party, clearly shifted course on Wednesday by pledging to consider changes in media coverage, travel rights, and economic and environmental policy.

The Politburo statement marked the leadership's first acknowledgement that East Germany has problems that have contributed to an exodus of more than 40,000 disgruntled citizens to West Germany in the last month alone, and that the nation should be concerned about the mass emigration.

After declaring defiantly in recent years that there was no need for East Germany to consider reform despite the historic changes under way in much of Eastern Europe, the Politburo said it would make proposals in the near future in line with a strategy of "continuity and renewal."

Opposition leaders, the Lutheran Evangelical Church and the West German government welcomed the declaration as a recognition, finally, that reforms are needed in East Germany.

But they expressed skepticism over whether the current leadership was prepared to move far enough to allay popular discontent that has triggered demonstrations by tens of thousands of East Germans in the worst wave of popular unrest since 1953.

Baerbel Bohley, a co-founder of the nation's loosely organized, leading pro-reform group, New Forum, said she welcomed "the fact that the party now sees something must change." But she also condemned the Politburo statement as "only a verbal turnaround," and criticized the Politburo for branding demonstrators as counter-revolutionaries.

In Bonn, Chancellery Minister Rudolf Seiters, who is Chancellor Helmut Kohl's top adviser on East Germany, said, "I am very cautious about forecasting how far the East German leadership is willing and able to make a far-reaching change of policy."

The Politburo's new line appeared to reflect the influence of middle-and lower-ranking members of the party, who have grown increasingly frustrated with the leadership's resistance to change and are more closely in touch with grass-roots sentiment, Western diplomats in East Berlin and other analysts said.

The Politburo issued its statement after a two-day meeting during which it took the rare step of inviting some members of the 163-member Central Committee to participate. The Central Committee is the party's highest organ, while the Politburo is its executive body.

There had been signs earlier in the week that middle-ranking party people were unhappy with the top leadership, especially in the southern industrial cities of Dresden and Leipzig where the biggest protests have taken place. The mayor of Dresden took the unprecedented step of meeting with a delegation of demonstrators on Monday, and three top-ranking local party leaders in Leipzig issued a statement the same day saying they wanted a dialogue with protesters.

City authorities in Leipzig and East Berlin were preparing to enter talks with representatives of demonstrators, following the example set in Dresden, Protestant church sources in East Germany said Thursday.

"Local authorities, who are really facing trouble, think they can't let their beautiful cities go down the drain no matter what the blockheads in East Berlin think," a West German government expert on East Germany said.

In another signal Thursday of pro-reform sentiment within the establishment, the governing body of the elite Academy of Arts urged an end to media censorship and all other restrictions on freedom of debate.

"Our reserves of thought and intellect, the best currency of the GDR (German Democratic Republic, or East Germany), must be set free," the academy said.

But the government signaled that it would neither recognize nor meet formally with representatives of New Forum, which is technically illegal but whose activities have been tolerated.

The Communist Party's chief ideologist, Kurt Hager, pointedly did not mention New Forum Thursday in listing the groups that the party would talk to.

"We have many discussion partners in all parts of the population-allied political parties, social organizations, the church," Hager said in an interview with West German television during a visit to Moscow.

Honecker's position appeared precarious in part because the Politburo's statement struck a radically more conciliatory tone than his recent declarations. On Monday, just hours before police stood by passively during a demonstration by more than 50,000 persons in Leipzig, Honecker had suggested that protesters might face a brutal crackdown similar to China's suppression of pro-democracy demonstrators in June.

Prenatal Care: An Ounce Of Prevention

WASHINGTON — America spends more by far on child care than any country in the world — some $2.5 billion a year. Yet its infant-mortality rate is no better than about 18th among industrialized nations — behind Singapore, Hong Kong and, in some instances, behind even some poverty-stricken countries of the Third World.

Why aren't we getting more for our infant-care dollars?

Lawton Chiles, the retired Florida senator, has no doubt. "There's nothing wrong with our medicine," he said in an interview. "We're just applying it at the wrong time — after the crisis occurs."

As a result, we are spending scores of thousands of dollars on ailing babies (and still losing an unconscionable number of them) when a few hundred dollars spent on prenatal care might have prevented the problems in the first place.

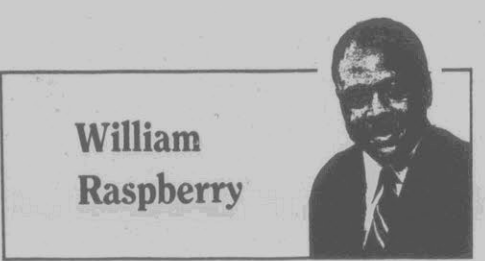

Chiles, founding chairman of the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality, said he first became aware of this country's shameful infant-mortality rate when he headed the Senate Appropriations Committee's subcommittee on labor, health and human services, and education.

He was so shocked that he decided to establish the commission to do something about it. One result of the commission's deliberations is a proposal for universal access to prenatal care.

"It quickly became apparent that the biggest thing we were looking at was low birth weight — pregnancies not going full term, and babies having babies. We held a series of meetings around the country, and then we went to the United Nations to talk to representatives of countries that are doing considerably better than we are, and to find out why."

The answer, it turned out, is that pregnant women in those countries get better care, earlier in the pregnancy. They deliver healthy children and thus have less need for the American-style neonatal facilities that can cost anywhere from $20,000 to $250,000 for a few days' care.

"Japan's infant-mortality rate is half of ours

William Raspberry

— 5.2 deaths per thousand children under age 1, while ours is over 10. The interesting thing is that, 30 years ago, their figures were worse than ours — the worst in the industrialized world. What has happened since then is that they have made children a national priority. They give early and comprehensive care to all their pregnant women, and it has made a dramatic difference."

America has yet to make that sort of commitment, and the result is a scandalous mortality rate that is even worse than the overall figures suggest. Washington, D.C., ranks behind Jamaica; and Indianapolis is about as bad. In fact, if you look only at America's disadvantaged population, some Latin American countries are doing better.

The Chiles commission is pressing to make medical care for pregnant women and their children up to age one a matter of entitlement. "We did it in the case of older people, when we said that every senior, without regard to his or her ability to pay, is entitled to medical care. We need to do it for pregnant women and children as well."

And for reasons both moral and pragmatic. The moral side is obvious in a country as rich as America. The pragmatics are less obvious but equally compelling. Sickly children may grow up to become poor learners and workers. Children of poor teenagers are likely to form a new generation of welfare, or to become criminals. Some of the physical and mental damage resulting from prematurity and poor health care are never fully overcome. All these things have a cost.

But the major cost is in the neonatal care — the oxygen tents, the incubators and the long hospital stays — that a few hundred dollars of prenatal care might have rendered unnecessary.

"It will take a major educational program," said Chiles, "but people who resent being called on to pay for universal access to medical care, who think of the beneficiaries as shiftless bums, must be made to see that they are already paying a tremendous cost in health care for premature babies."

"And they are paying hundreds of times more than it would cost to prevent the problems in the first place. It's a case of 'pay me now, or pay me later.'"

Nor is Chiles simply hoping that throwing money at America's infant-mortality problem will make it go away. His specific, pragmatic ideas about what we ought to be doing will be the subject of the next column.

Study Shows State Fails In Equal Opportunity Education

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite the injection of more than half a billion dollars through the Basic Education Program, North Carolina's school systems are not providing equal educational opportunities for their students, a study says.

"The Basic Education Program is designed to provide a minimum curriculum for every child, but it does nothing to reduce the disparities among school districts," said Ran Coble, executive director of the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research. "Some states have a state equalization fund to deal with this. North Carolina does not."

The study, released Thursday by the independent non-profit group in Raleigh that studies state government and policies, found that the Basic Education Program doesn't address differences in financial support from district to district.

The challenge will test whether the state is living up to its constitutional promise to provide a "uniform system of free public schools ... wherein equal opportunities shall be provided for all students," according to the study.

"The disparities between school districts are caused mainly by differences in local supplements and lead to greatly differing education programs among the city and county systems," Coble said.

The program, which seeks to provide a minimum standard of courses and support services for every public school pupil in the state, is in the fifth year of an eight-year schedule. Ultimately, the goal is to increase spending by $800 million to $1 billion and improve educational opportunity by providing additional teachers, support personnel and smaller classes.

The study showed the kinds of differences that exist from school system to school system. Students at Blue Ridge High School in Jackson County, for example, have 116 fewer courses from which to choose than those at Northern Durham High.

The portion of school spending from the federal government has dropped from 14.2 percent in 1972 to 7.7 percent for the 1987-1988 school year, the most recent year for which information is available.

The state's share of spending has remained about 69 percent, while local spending has increased from 19 percent to 23 percent.

Differences arise because school districts with greater wealth can provide more money to their schools than those in poorer areas.

A district-by-district study of per-student spending on public education is included in the center's new book, "North Carolina Focus." It shows that per-pupil spending varied by as much as 56 percent among the state's 140 school systems in the 1987-88 school year.

"This kind of disparity has led courts in eight states to find school finance systems unconstitutional," Coble said.

The most recent example came Oct. 2, when the Texas Supreme Court ruled that state's system of financing created unequal educational opportunities between rich and poor school districts.

Courts in California, Connecticut, Kentucky, New Jersey, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming also have struck down school financing methods judged to discriminate too greatly among school districts.

At least one district in North Carolina, the Reidsville City Schools, is looking into suing the state because of the current method of financing public schools.

"There's no question that there's a pretty wide disparity between the per-pupil funding throughout the state," said Robert Watt III, attorney for the Reidsville schools. "Obviously, we'd like our students to receive better funding, whatever that takes."

Watt said his board has instructed him to research the law and funding matters to see if a legal challenge is appropriate. He said now he's just seeing if "there is a legitimate basis for us to proceed with."

There is no timetable or deadline for any decision, Watt said.

Bob Etheridge, the state superintendent of public instruction, said he is concerned about the growing differences in spending from district to district.

"There is some relationship between the ability of a district to provide money and how students perform," Etheridge said.

He stressed that money isn't the only factor, or even a determining factor, in student performance, but it is an ingredient.

There are no easy solutions, Etheridge said, but the state needs to start thinking more about the situation before a successful legal challenge creates a school-funding crisis.

The possibility of a successful legal challenge is not necessarily assured. While the state constitution calls for equal opportunity for all students, it also lets local schools add to the money with local funds.

Fewer Minority Students Attending North Carolina Community Colleges

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite continuing efforts to boost black enrollment in the state's community colleges, North Carolina still has not been able to substantially increase the number of minority students in the two-year public schools.

Morris Johnson, director of federal compliance services for the community college system, said 17 percent, or 6,711 of the system's full-time students in college-transferable programs are black, down from 19 percent in 1983.

Johnson's report to the State Board of Community Colleges Thursday showed black employment at the faculty, executive and administrative levels increasing from 7 percent in 1983 to 9 percent this year. In addition, over the past 10 years the percentage of blacks on community college governing boards has increased from 11 percent to 15 percent.

While federal officials ruled in February of 1988 that North Carolina's community colleges had complied with a mandate to take steps to increase the enrollment, state officials voluntarily agreed to continue the efforts to bolster minority enrollments.

Johnson offered no explanations for the decline in minority student enrollment. However, despite the growing number of blacks employed in the schools, some officials blamed a lack of role models.

"Your guess, really in truth, is as good as mine as to why," said Frank Eagles, president of Wilson

Technical College. But he said the numbers might reflect "a lack of orientation to the education process and a lack, in some instances, of a sufficient number of older role models."

In an interview after the meeting, Eagles said his campus has been significantly more successful in recruiting female black students than males.

Bryan Brooks, president at Davidson County Community College, told the Greensboro News & Record he's frustrated at the school's inability to attract minority applicants.

Oil-Spill Legislation Postponed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Congressional action on oil-spill liability legislation has run aground again, with turf battles in the House delaying a vote for at least another week.

The political jockeying, which has postponed action repeatedly in recent months, reflects the high stakes involved. The legislation promises to be the first of its kind in 14 years, and the outcome will help decide who will pay for multimillion-dollar cleanups of spills similar to the Exxon Valdez disaster in Alaska.

A key player is Rep. Walter B. Jones, a North Carolina Democrat who chairs the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. He is pushing a bill that would tighten the liability requirements of oil transporters and owners.

But his bill, which previously had been scheduled for debate this week, has one provision that environmentalists reject and oil companies embrace. It would prohibit coastal states from setting stiffer liabilities than federal law allows against those who spill oil.

The Senate already has rejected such a plan, and opponents of the Jones bill will try to amend his legislation on the House floor to do the same.

Environmental groups say companies that cause major oil spills should be held responsible for the full damage. The oil industry says unlimited liability would make insurance prohibitively expensive and would spur oil shippers to seek legal loopholes for avoiding huge damage payments, rather than taking steps to reduce the chance of spills.

Rose Nixes Senate Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said Thursday that he would not seek the U.S. Senate seat held by Republican Jesse Helms but will instead run for re-election.

Rose said he made his decision Wednesday after conferences with a number of supporters in the 7th Congressional District, "who urged me to remain in the House where I stand a good chance of becoming chairman of the Agriculture Committee."

Rose is urging his supporters to back Brunswick County District Attorney Mike Easley, a Democrat who announced recently he will seek Helms' seat.

Rose said he believed that "when I began to look into the possibility of entering the Senate race, this would be a good year to make the challenge against Sen. Helms."

"I have talked to people in the district whom I respect and admire, and the response has been overwhelming for me to remain in the House."

North Carolina State Fair Opens Today

By Cindy Roberts
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite the cotton candy, the rides and the lights along the midway, North Carolina's 122nd State Fair still has its roots on the farm, fair officials say.

"The difference between North Carolina and some of the other (state fairs) is that we are an agricultural fair, and that is our number-one priority," said Barbara Williams, fair entertainment director. "Agriculture is very important, although we do offer other attractions to give well-rounded entertainment."

The annual fair opens today, and officials anticipate a record crowd of 750,000, providing the weather is as fair as the event. Last year's turnout was about 685,000.

No doubt many will come for the midway, which offers more than 75 rides, including the Wave Swinger, where riders sit in chain chairs and swing through the air, and the Rainbow, which has church-pew-like chairs that move back and forth.

Much of the most popular entertainment is agriculture-related.

"The racing farm animals are always popular with adults, grandparents and children, and certainly the lumberjack shows that we have are of the era of agricultural days gone by," said Ellen Brightwell of the state Department of Agriculture.

But there's also other forms of entertainment. Among those appearing this year are Conway Twitty, Ray Stevens, Tanya Tucker, Waylon Jennings and The Shirelles.

One of the most touted animal attractions this year is the Croaker College frog show, to be held daily near the administration building. An amphibious gymnastics troupe of sorts, the frogs lift barbells, do chip-ups on a crossbar, ride motorcycles and compete in jumping contests.

In a grand finale, the frogs will appear in costumes representing famous actors, singers and politicians.

The exhibit that seems to sum up this year's fair is appropriately dubbed The Goodness Grows Country Store, reproducing an old-fashioned country store setting stocked with contemporary goods and staffed by storekeepers in period garb.

"The theme this year is the unforgettable. We want people to remember it as the best one we've had. But we don't want it to be the best we'll ever have," said Jim Devine, a spokesman for the Department of Agriculture.

The store has farm artifacts that only the oldtimer would recognize but it also offers something for those who don't know a turnip from a potato.

"We've got a lot of people who are new to North Carolina and a lot of people moving in who don't have rural backgrounds," explained department spokesman Jim Knight.

"This is the biggest exhibit we've ever done. We've got 28 different commodity groups representing farms from the mountains to the coast," he said.

The 2,280-square-foot exhibit includes apple varieties with long-forgotten names like Sheepnose, Lumbertwig and Stayman, medicinal herbs, a 1918 boll weevil trap and other sundry farm implements, a "three-in-one potato" and North Carolina-produced wine.

The exhibit adds a touch of nostalgia to the fair in keeping with the "unforgettable theme" and demonstrates to newcomers the way food used to be marketed when the state was still primarily rural.

The fair is not all fun and games despite the carnival atmosphere. On the contrary, it's "very serious business" for those in the farming industry, said Devine.

Devine pointed to the example of the cattle breeder hoping to introduce his prize steer.

At a time when farming is on the decline in many parts of the country, the fair serves to promote agriculture among the young and instill a sense of pride in North Carolina-grown produce, he said.

The fair runs through Oct. 22.

State Road Plan Set To Be Adopted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Today, the State Board of Transportation will put its stamp on the largest public works project ever undertaken by the state of North Carolina.

The 22-member board will officially adopt a schedule for completing a 3,000-mile intra state system of four-lane highways. In 13½ years, after spending $5.325 billion, the state will have completed the remaining 1,716 miles of the system — that's $3.1 million a mile.

Among the Piedmont highways to become four lanes as part of the system are U.S. 220 in Rockingham County, by 1998; U.S. 64 from Siler City through Asheboro to Lexington, by 2002; and U.S. 158 from Caswell County through Rockingham and Guilford counties to Winston-Salem, by 2004.

The system, designed to bring a four-lane highway within 10 miles of 95 percent of the state's population, was included in the landmark highway program the General Assembly passed last summer, the Greensboro News & Record reports today.

The program also calls for building multi-lane connector roads and urban loops around major cities — including the so-called Painter Boulevard in Greensboro and a northern beltway around Winston Salem.

Financing comes through a variety of tax increases North Carolinians are already paying — particularly the state tax on motor fuel, now one of the nation's highest at 21 cents a gallon, and the tax on motor vehicle purchases. The money will go into the new N.C. Highway Trust Fund.

"It's just another positive milestone," said state Rep. Sam Hunt, Democrat, who helped lead the effort to pass the program in the legislature.

"When we started the (legislative) session, a lot of people were doubting whether we could get the thing done," Hunt said. "Now we've not only got something done, but we're seeing the results. People are seeing projects, projects are being announced, schedules are being changed and the board is taking action."

Copies of the intrastate construction schedule and a draft of the annual Transportation Improvement Program for roads and highway were distributed Thursday during board committee meetings.

During legislative debate on the highway program, some lawmakers complained that they were being forced to choose between roads and education.

Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington alluded to that in a statement to Transportation Board members Thursday, saying he objected to the notion that somehow the increased money for roads was taking money from education.

Even with the additional highway money, he said, there is still more extra money being pumped into public schools through the Basic Education Program, which is designed to improve educational opportunity by hiring additional teachers and support personnel and cutting class size.

"There is no one who believes more in education than I do," Harrington said.

He said there are clear objectives — from which projects will be done to standards of performance — that are tied to the higher taxes for road funding.

"The Highway Trust Fund has definite objectives in it, a map of what we're to achieve," Harrington said. "Not so for the BEP (Basic Education Program)."

Harrington also said the Transportation Department will closely monitor all projects to be sure they are being done properly and without graft or corruption.

"We are not slacking our efforts, to be sure the money is there and properly spent," he said.

He appointed a special board committee to review or propose new procedures for monitoring projects. The committee is Seddon "Rusty" Goode of Charlotte, Brent Kincaid of Lenoir and Charles Shelton of King.

Moderate Stress Just May Be Good

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Long considered a villain to good health, stress may actually enhance the immune system, helping your body fight illness, researchers at Duke University say.

A recent Duke study of rats and their immune response to stress confirms earlier research showing high stress may weaken the immune system. But that same Duke research uncovered a unique finding: moderate stress may enhance rather than suppress the immune system in rats.

By measuring the level of certain chemical substances and the rate of division by immune system cells, Duke researchers found that moderate stress increased those substances and cell division — the kind of activity important to the immune system's fight against virus or bacteria.

This marks the first time researchers have identified a particular "range" of stress that may have positive effects — a discovery that suggests some interesting possibilities for humans, says Jay Weiss, a neurobiologist and professor in the Duke Department of Psychiatry.

"The global suggestion is that there may be behavioral therapies effective in enhancing aspects of immune function. That's the promise, the potential," he told the Greensboro News & Record.

But first, Weiss and other Duke researchers will have to more clearly define what "moderate" stress may be.

Would it be the physical stress of a 50-yard dash or a five-mile run?

Would it be a tongue-lashing from the boss?

Might it be the anxiety a resident physician feels before starting a 36-hour hospital shift?

"We'd have to study that in more detail. Anyone who would make recommendations as to what would be appropriate stimuli is really just fantasizing," he said.

Weiss and other Duke researchers spent two years studying how stress affects the immune system in rats and it will likely be two more years before similar work is done in humans.

In the Duke research, published earlier this year in the Journal of Clinical Psychiatry, Weiss exposed rats to different levels of stress, including electrical shock.

Weiss said that someday it might be possible to boost the immune system naturally, without help from prescription drugs.

It's doubtful stress therapy would help a patient with a severely weakened immune system, Weiss said.

"A terribly bad car engine often doesn't benefit by having 92 octane gasoline in it rather than 89 octane," Weiss said. "The clearest potential benefit is for taking normal people with normal functioning immune responses and making them better."

Accidental Shooting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Police are investigating the shooting death of a 13-year-old Winston-Salem boy who was killed when his 15-year-old friend fired a bullet into his chest from a gun of unknown origin.

Montreal Sinclair, a seventh-grader at Cook Middle School, was shot inside his home in the Kimberly Park neighborhood shortly before 7 a.m. Thursday, said Capt. E.L. Moreau of the Winston-Salem Police Department. The identity of the 15-year-old boy was not revealed because he is a juvenile.

Exact details of the shooting remained sketchy, and police and Forsyth District Attorney Warren Sparrow were discussing late Thursday whether any charges will be filed.

The two boys were getting ready for school when Montreal took out a small-caliber automatic pistol to show his friend and pulled the ammunition clip from the pistol, apparently thinking the weapon was unloaded, Moreau.

But one bullet remained in the chamber, Moreau said.

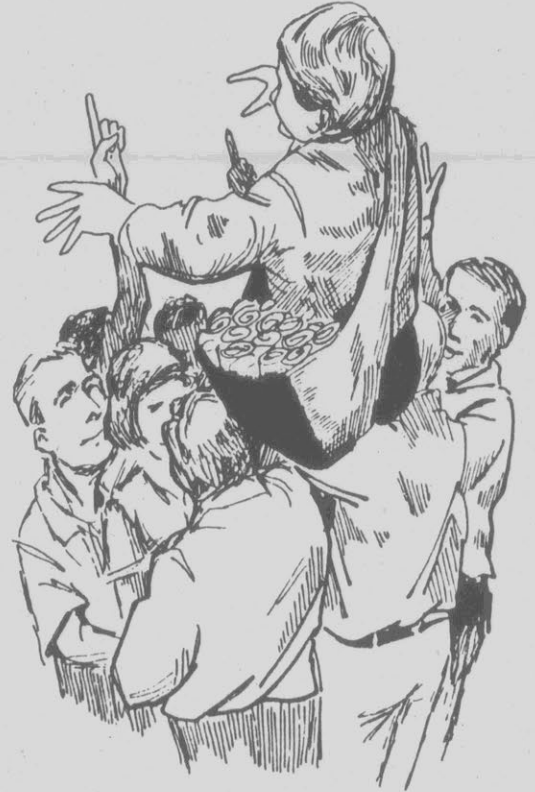

Elizabeth Sinclair, Montreal's mother, was upstairs when her son was killed.

"This little boy came over and they were in the front room talking," Ms. Sinclair said. "And then I heard this sound...."

"The little boy started racing up the stairs and he was yelling, 'We have to call the police. Where's the phone?' I got downstairs and he was lying in the hallway."

No person was ever honored for what he received. Honor has been the reward for what he gave.

GOP Circles Discussing Lt. Governor Position

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Democrats and even some Republicans are skeptical, but the talk in state GOP circles these days is that Charlotte Mayor Sue Myrick ought to run for lieutenant governor in 1992.

Ms. Myrick says she's heard it and is at least receptive.

"I'm open to it, of course," she said this week. "I haven't really thought about it, but people are telling me that's what I ought to do."

She insisted that her main concern is winning her November bid for a second term as mayor.

Ms. Myrick said she's done no polling or organizing for any race other than her current one. But Brad Hays, Gov. Jim Martin's top political adviser, is a consultant for her mayoral campaign.

State GOP Chairman Jack Hawke is among those touting a Myrick candidacy.

"I have talked to some people close to her and told them that I would encourage her," Hawke said Wednesday. "She's a proven vote-getter in the largest metropolitan area in the state. She also happens to be a woman who has experience in office. That is a big plus for us."

Women have tended to vote Democratic more often than men in state and national elections. Hawke said putting Ms. Myrick on the ticket in 1992 could help narrow the Republicans' "gender gap."

Charlotte lawyer Bob Bradshaw, a former state GOP chairman who's on Ms. Myrick's finance committee, said being mayor of the largest city may be a plus by 1992.

"The state is growing more urban and suburban by the day," he said. "A candidate from urban and suburban areas was once looked on as a sort of oddity in North Carolina. Now the political reality is that they come with a real base of strength. If she has aspirations, she would be a good candidate."

Study Says State Schools Still Aren't Funded Equally

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite the injection of more than half a billion dollars through the Basic Education Program, North Carolina's school systems are not providing equal educational opportunities for their students, a study says.

"The Basic Education Program is designed to provide a minimum curriculum for every child, but it does nothing to reduce the disparities among school districts," said Ran Coble, executive director of the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research. "Some states have a state equalization fund to deal with this. North Carolina does not."

The study, released Thursday by the independent non-profit group in Raleigh that studies state government and policies, found that the Basic Education Program doesn't address differences in financial support from district to district.

The challenge will test whether the state is living up to its constitutional promise to provide a "uniform system of free public schools ... wherein equal opportunities shall be provided for all students," according to the study.

"The disparities between school districts are caused mainly by differences in local supplements and lead to greatly differing education programs among the city and county systems," Coble said.

The program, which seeks to provide a minimum standard of courses and support services for every public school pupil in the state, is in the fifth year of an eight-year schedule. Ultimately, the goal is to increase spending by $800 million to $1 billion and improve educational opportunity by providing additional teachers, support personnel and smaller classes.

The study showed the kinds of differences that exist from school system to school system. Students at Blue Ridge High School in Jackson County, for example, have 116 fewer courses from which to choose than those at Northern Durham High.

The portion of school spending from the federal government has dropped from 14.2 percent in 1972 to 7.7 percent for the 1987-1988 school year, the most recent year for which information is available.

The state's share of spending has remained about 69 percent, while local spending has increased from 19 percent to 23 percent.

Differences arise because school districts with greater wealth can provide more money to their schools than those in poorer areas.

A district-by-district study of per-student spending on public education is included in the center's new book, "North Carolina Focus." It shows that per-pupil spending varied by as much as 56 percent among the state's 140 school systems in the 1987-88 school year.

"This kind of disparity has led courts in eight states to find school finance systems unconstitutional," Coble said.

The most recent example came Oct. 2, when the Texas Supreme Court ruled that state's system of financing created unequal educational opportunities between rich and poor school districts.

Courts in California, Connecticut, Kentucky, New Jersey, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming also have struck down school financing methods judged to discriminate too greatly among school districts.

At least one district in North Carolina, the Reidsville City Schools, is looking into suing the state because of the current method of financing public schools.

"There's no question that there's a pretty wide disparity between the per-pupil funding throughout the state," said Robert Watt III, attorney for the Reidsville schools. "Obviously, we'd like our students to receive better funding, whatever that takes."

Watt said his board has instructed him to research the law and funding matters to see if a legal challenge is appropriate. He said now he's just seeing if "there is a legitimate basis for us to proceed with."

There is no timetable or deadline for any decision, Watt said.

Bob Etheridge, the state superintendent of public instruction, said he is concerned about the growing differences in spending from district to district.

"There is some relationship between the ability of a district to provide money and how students perform," Etheridge said.

He stressed that money isn't the only factor, or even a determining factor, in student performance, but it is an ingredient.

There are no easy solutions, Etheridge said, but the state needs to start thinking more about the situation before a successful legal challenge creates a school-funding crisis.

The possibility of a successful legal challenge is not necessarily assured. While the state constitution calls for equal opportunity for all students, it also lets local schools add to the money with local funds.

Ward characters: Rocky, Bullwinkle Moose and spies Boris Badenov and Natasha Fatale

Cartoonist Jay Ward Dies Of Kidney Cancer At Age 69

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jay Ward, who helped create a world of memorable cartoon characters including the bumbling Bullwinkle J. Moose and his sidekick Rocky the Flying Squirrel, has died of kidney cancer. He was 69.

He died at home Thursday with his wife, Ramona, and three children present, said Ward's longtime publicist and friend, Howard Brandy.

Ward and his partner Bill Scott, who died four years ago, were credited with bringing sophistication to cartoons with the witty "Rocky and His Friends" and "The Bullwinkle Show," cartoons born in the late 1950s and early '60s and kept alive through syndication.

The partners, working with some of television's brightest young minds, created such characters as the plucky Rocket "Rocky" J. Squirrel; the cynical spies Boris Badenov and Natasha Fatale; overacting villain Snidely Whiplash; Way-Back Machine inventor (and dog) Mr. Peabody, and his boy, Sherman.

The characters were savvy, dumb, well-meaning, brave, flawed, and uttered atrocious puns as they helped or chased each other through unlikely situations in a series of cartoon shows by Ward and Scott.

Never shy to use wicked satire and potent puns, Ward and Scott produced episodes entitled "The Guns of Abalone," "The Whale: Maybe Dick" and "On the Shores of Veronica Lake There Sails the Ruby Yacht of Omar Khayam."

Ward, a bull of a man with a handlebar mustache, was a penny-pinching producer who at the same time would lavish gifts and trips on his workers and amuse them with a contagious laugh and wacky sense of humor.

"He was cheap to a fault, but boy did we have fun," said Allan Burns, the Emmy-winning producer of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" who got his start in television as a writer and artist with Ward.

The Ward and Scott team's first effort was "Rocky and His Friends" for ABC that ran from 1959 through 1961.

From 1961 to 1962, Ward and Scott produced for NBC "The Bullwinkle Show," believed to be the first prime-time cartoon segment for network television. The show ran until 1964, and its last network appearance, in reruns, was in 1982.

The show featured such sequences as "Fractured Fairy Tales"; "Peabody's Improbable History"; "Aesop and Son"; and "Adventures of Dudley Do-Right," which eventually became its own series.

"The shows were on two plateaus," said June Foray, the voice of Rocky and Natasha. "The children enjoyed it because of the humorous look of the characters and the sounds of the voices. The adults find it so inventive because of the puns, the satire. ... It was a show that was different from everything that came before it or after it."

Ward's own career as a cartoon creator — he never was an animator — began with an episode as oddball as one of his "Fractured Fairy Tales."

A Berkeley native, he went to the University of California for undergraduate studies, then attended Harvard Business School for a master's degree.

Spending Varies In Local Systems

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Per-pupil education funding in area counties differs by as much as $600, according to the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research study.

The study used figures from the 1987-88 school year supplied by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

Spending ranges from a high of $3,526 per pupil in Greene County to a low of $2,904 in the Washington city school system. In Pitt County, education funding amounts to $3,190 per pupil.

Greene County's total per-pupil spending includes a $2,804 contribution from the state, the sixth highest amount paid to any school system. Pitt County ranked 58th in state funding, receiving $2,391 per pupil.

The relatively low total per-pupil spending for Washington schools is partially the result of a local contribution of only $389, second-lowest of any area county. Pitt County's local contribution is $644 per pupil.

Federal dollars also play a role. The money, funneled through a variety of programs for economically or culturally disadvantaged children, is designed to supplement state and local contributions. Edgecombe County, with a high percentage of these students, got $297 per pupil in 1987-88, while Pitt County received $155.

The following is a breakdown of total per-pupil spending by county: Beaufort County — $2,917; Washington City — $2,904; Craven County — $2,931; Edgecombe County — $3,161; Tarboro City — $3,111; Greene County — $3,526; Lenoir County — $3,186; Kinston City — $3,128; Martin County — $3,215; Pitt County — $3,190, and Wilson County — $3,094.

Japanese Firms May Come To N.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — At least two overseas businesses could be coming to North Carolina, bringing trade and a culture exchange, Gov. Jim Martin said.

The governor, in a telephone news conference from Seoul, South Korea, where he is on an 11-day trade mission to that country, said he expects two Japanese firms to open major plants in the "high-tech industries" for the state in the near future. And he said there could be more.

During this decade — but not necessarily during the Martin administration — Japanese investments included $60 million by Ajinomoto USA Inc. of Raleigh, which produces amino acids for pharmaceutical uses; $50 million by Sumitomo Research Triangle Park Inc., which researches, develops and produces fiber optics; and by Mitsubishi Semiconductor America Inc.

of Durham, which was started with an initial $35 million investment and makes semiconductors.

Last year, North Carolina sold $700 million in goods, mostly tobacco, to Japan.

Also on the governor's mind was whether North Carolina still has a good chance of participating in a Southeast compact to handle hazardous waste, even though the state may not meet a federally mandated deadline.

North Carolina may not have an agreement with seven other states before an Oct. 17 deadline set by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Martin said. After that date, states that do not have the ability to handle the hazardous waste they generate will be denied some federal waste-cleanup funds.

"If it turns out that we don't meet the deadline ... then what would happen is that some $37 million of Superfund cleanup money that's available for North Carolina would be deferred until we do meet the EPA standard," Martin said. But he added, "I'm not that pessimistic yet."

Martin said he has been on the telephone almost every day with governors in the compact states, but he declined to give details of the negotiations, saying public comments have disrupted the talks in the past.

"Every time somebody from one of the states gets quoted trying to explain, for general consumption, their side of it ... the unfortunate result of that is that it ends up offending one of the states that you're trying to deal with," he said. "And I don't want to undercut the bargaining position of North Carolina."

North Carolina's commitment to host a regional low-level radioactive waste facility starting in 1992 could be jeopardized by the latest compact talks, Martin said.

How's Your PC Behaving Today?

BALTIMORE — Threats of a virus set to strike personal computers today are overblown, but fears of the bug should prod computer operators to make sure they have backup copies of their files, computer experts say.

Top computer security specialists at an annual convention in Baltimore said they doubted many users would wake up today with symptoms of the so-called Columbus Day virus.

The virus was set to activate after computers' internal clocks hit 12:01 a.m. today; whatever damage it causes was expected to be noticed later in the morning when most users began operating their computers.

Computer viruses, created by anonymous programmers, are pieces of software that make copies of themselves and spread from one machine to another through infected floppy disks, office networks or phone links such as computer bulletin boards.

Once activated, the rogue program copies itself like a breeding germ, eating away processing power and storage space or destroying information. About 30 viruses are known to exist, not counting strains and mutations.

Fears of a virus could be salutary if they get people to "think of making backup files as readily as they think of wearing seat belts," says Martha Brothers of AT&T Bell Laboratories.

"When you get in a car, you put on a seat belt because you want to protect yourself in case of an accident, but you don't expect to get in an accident. Well, think of making backup copies of your work in the same way," she said.

"People who don't have backups, that's just plain silly," said Ross M. Greenberg, a computer security specialist in New York and creator of the Flu-Shot Plus and Virex-PC anti-viral software. "That's the equivalent of someone breaking into your apartment when you leave your door wide open."

Experts said they didn't believe many computers were infected with the Columbus Day, or Datacrime virus. An older virus, known as PLO, is far more widespread and likely to cause more damage today, Greenberg said. PLO is designed to erase programs it has infected every Friday the 13th.

"All the people I consider to be respectable in the anti-virus community have a similar opinion to mine, that the Datacrime virus has been blown away out of proportion by an unknowledgeable media," he added.

By early this morning, Greenberg said he had received only one call, from a distressed computer administrator working late at a bank whose network was affected by the PLO virus.

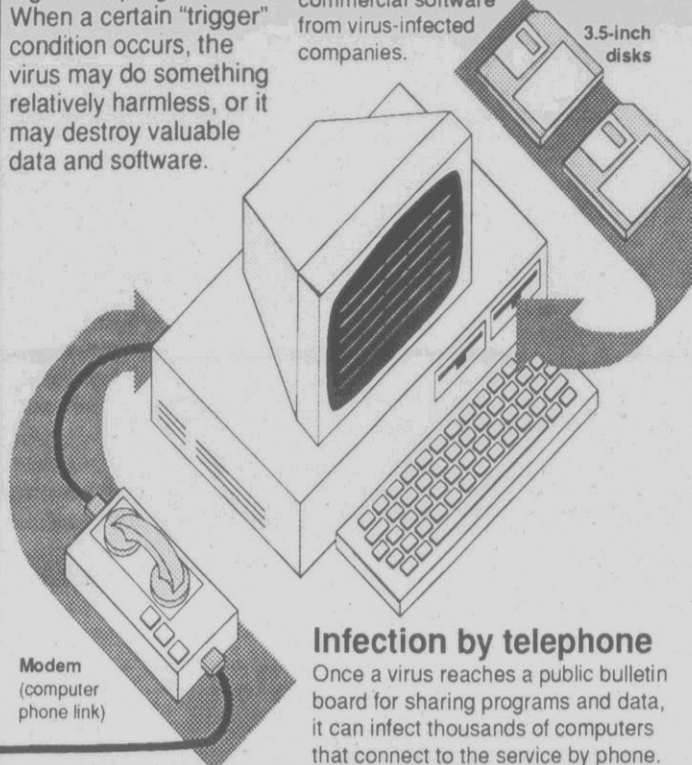

The Columbus Day virus is programmed to scramble indexing information in IBM or IBM-compatible personal computers. It would be the equivalent of removing index cards in a library so books would be impossible to locate.

COMPUTER VIRUSES

A virus is a small piece of computer code that can automatically hide duplicates of itself inside legitimate programs. When a certain "trigger" condition occurs, the virus may do something relatively harmless, or it may destroy valuable data and software.

Infection by floppy disk

Viruses travel from computer to computer attached to the programs on swapped or shared disks, and in some cases on new commercial software from virus-infected companies.

Infection by telephone

Once a virus reaches a public bulletin board for sharing programs and data, it can infect thousands of computers that connect to the service by phone.

COMPUTER VIRUS GLOSSARY

- Time bomb Virus triggered by the computer's clock reaching a certain date and time (often Friday the 13th).
- Logic bomb Virus triggered by a certain value appearing in a certain part of the computer's memory, either relevant to the virus's purpose or at random.
- Trojan horse Innocent-seeming program deliberately infected with a virus and circulated publicly.
- Vaccine Program that watches for typical things viruses do, halts them, and warns the computer operator.

Blacks Object To King Stories

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Civil rights leaders are demanding that the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy retract statements from his new book that recall the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s encounters with women on the night before he was killed.

Abernathy's autobiography, "And The Walls Came Tumbling Down," published this month, says King spent parts of the night before his death alone with two different women and physically fought with a third.

Abernathy has said that he did not include passages about King's extramarital affairs out of malice, but felt he needed to address the issue since it had been discussed in previous biographies of the Nobel Peace Prize winner.

"I loved Martin Luther King more than a brother. I would never do it to injure him," Abernathy said.

A coalition of black leaders including Jesse Jackson and Andrew Young said Thursday they objected to the controversial passages and doubted that Abernathy wrote them. A spokesman for the book's publisher replied that the whole book was written solely by the Atlanta minister.

The group's statement concluded that "the Memphis section" of Abernathy's book was so out of character with Abernathy's life and previous statements that it must have been "put into your mouth by others who needed a sensational story to sell books and slander the name of your martyred brother."

Steve Sorrentino, a spokesman for Harper & Row in New York, said the allegations are untrue.

"The book is entirely Abernathy's words. There was no co-writer, no ghost writer," Sorrentino said. "He stands by everything he says in the book. I wonder if all the people sitting back criticizing now have read the book."

"The book is not a sensationalized, 'put down Martin Luther King' book," Sorrentino said.

Wholesale Prices Rebound Sharply

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices shot up 0.9 percent in September, fueled by a sharp rise in energy costs, the government said today.

The climb in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index last month wiped out consecutive price declines of 0.4 percent in August and July and 0.1 percent in June.

The September reversal brought the annual wholesale inflation rate for the first nine months of the year to 5.1 percent and marked a return to the high inflation of the early part of the year.

Although wholesale inflation is not nearly as bad as feared after prices advanced at a 10.1 percent annual rate in the first quarter, it is still significantly higher than the 4.0 percent rate posted in all of 1988.

Contributing to the big September jump was a statistical glitch in the measurement of auto prices. Manufacturers offered their end-of-the-year price incentives earlier in the summer than usual.

When month-to-month increases are adjusted for normal seasonal variations, that produced a big price drop in July, but an increase of 3.8 percent in September.

According to a Labor Department analyst, roughly 0.8 percentage points of the 0.9 percent monthly rise in the inflation index was attributable to motor vehicles and energy.

When seasonal adjustments are factored out, auto prices actually declined 0.5 percent.

However, energy prices, which had fallen in June, July and August, shot up 6.5 percent last month. Fuel oil rose 16.3 percent; gasoline, 10.6 percent, and natural gas, 3.4 percent.

In good news, the department said food prices dropped 0.6 percent. Vegetables were down 16.1 percent; turkeys, 4.9 percent; pasta, 4.4 percent; and beef, 4.0 percent. Prices for pork, fish, fruit and rice also fell.

Excluding the usually volatile food and energy categories, prices rose 0.7 percent in September following a 0.5 percent increase in August.

Ocean Tides Could Be A Foot Higher

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Higher tides than normal beginning today and lasting for the next week may cause flooding and present extra risks to Americans living near the ocean, the government says.

The higher tides are produced by the configuration of the Earth, moon and sun, the National Ocean Service said Thursday.

The service, an arm of the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said high tides on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts could be up to a foot higher than the highest tides of the past few years.

On the Pacific Coast, high tide could equal the highest marks of recent years, the service said.

"The threat of coastal flooding increases if a storm surge should occur at the same times as the astronomical high tide," the service said.

Tide tables will show the expected heights. Fishermen, boaters and residents of flood-prone areas should consult the tables and be alert to weather forecasts, the service said.

Higher than normal tides also will occur Nov. 12-13 and Dec. 10-12, the service said.

PEOPLE POWER

IT WORKS FOR YOU

You could say that all electric utilities are special because they provide a necessary public service. Some, however, are more special than others. Like the one that serves our community - Greenville Utilities.

For one thing, you own GUC. Private companies, owned by investors, concentrate on making a profit. We concentrate on providing a service. At GUC, all dollars not used to purchase power and operate the utility go to the City of Greenville. GUC has been able to provide over $9.2 million to the city's general fund over the past 5 years.

GUC does not make a profit from your utility bill, and then pass the dividends on to someone else. That alone makes public power special.

There are many special characteristics of public power systems which make them so different from private power companies.

•Because public power users and owners are one and the same, the managers of our utility are responsible only to you - not to stockholders scattered about the country. You have a say in how we do things. Greenville Utilities Board of Commissioners is made up of local people - your neighbors - who set rates, policies, budgets and development plans. You are welcome to attend Commission meetings which are held the second Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the Board Room of the Greenville Utilities building on the corner of 5th and Washington Streets.

•Local public power systems have increased over the past 50 years, and now number nearly 2,200. Private power companies, down from 1,882 in 1930 to 219 last year, are becoming fewer and larger corporate giants.

•Most publicly owned utilities provide substantial financial and other assistance to their local communities and pay proportionately more of their gross revenues to local governments than do private companies.

•Public Power's mission is to provide the best possible service at the lowest possible cost. As a citizen and customer of a public power system, you should feel special too.

FBI Given Power To Snatch Fugitives In Other Lands

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Acting with unusual secrecy, the Department of Justice has given the FBI legal authority to apprehend fugitives from U.S. law in foreign countries and return them to the United States without first obtaining the foreign state's consent.

The ruling could apply to such cases as the U.S. effort to bring Panamanian strongman Manuel A. Noriega to trial on federal drug trafficking charges in Florida.

In a June 21 legal opinion requested by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, Assistant Attorney General William P. Barr reversed a ruling dating back to the Carter administration that had denied the FBI such authority to take unilateral action overseas. The Carter ruling had even warned that federal agents could face kidnapping charges abroad if they used such tactics.

The new opinion by Barr, who is the attorney general's chief legal adviser in his capacity as head of the office of legal counsel, has been dubbed "the president's snatch authority" by some administration sources.

There are no indications that any fugitives have been apprehended so far under the new ruling, which carries the title "Authority of the FBI to Override Customary or Other International Law in the Course of Extraterritorial Law Enforcement Activities." But any such actions could be expected to bring protests from nations where suspects are seized on grounds that their sovereignty had been violated.

But department officials refused to discuss the broad new grant of power, the legal grounds they used to justify it or even to acknowledge its existence.

"I just don't discuss the work of the office of legal counsel," Barr said. "The office ... provides legal advice throughout the administration and does it on a confidential basis."

The refusal by Barr, David Runkel, Thornburgh's chief spokesman, and other department officials to discuss the ruling, which does not carry a security classification, is puzzling because the March 31, 1980, opinion that it reversed had been made public and published.

That ruling by the then-head of the legal counsel's office, John M. Harmon, was issued in response to an FBI proposal to abduct fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco, who was in the Bahamas.

Flames leap from six-story building in Boston's Chinatown

Fire Detonates Fireworks Cache

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A fire in a bustling Chinatown neighborhood detonated 2,000 pounds of illegally stored fireworks, destroyed one building and injured 17 people, officials said.

Firefighters worked through the night Thursday tearing down the six-story brick building where the fire broke out to prevent the structure from collapsing and to speed containment of the blaze.

The fire, which broke out about noon in a building that had a small grocery store on the ground floor, was controlled at 5 p.m., but pieces of the building continued to burn.

The blaze spread to two adjoining buildings, igniting as many as 29 explosions in fireworks stored illegally in one of the buildings and forcing some of the 200 firefighters to evacuate, said Fire Commissioner Leo Stapleton.

"I'm very disturbed about that," Stapleton said. "We could have lost a lot of firefighters there."

Of the 17 people injured, 13 were treated at the scene for minor injuries, three were treated at area hospitals and released, and one — a firefighter — was hospitalized in stable condition suffering from smoke inhalation, spokesmen said.

The fire broke out just before noon in the compact and congested neighborhood of Asian restaurants, bakeries, apartments and small businesses, casting a pall of thick black and gray smoke over the city's skyline.

The fire appeared to have started on the ground floor of the six-story building, where there were reports that workers might have been using welding equipment or cutting torches, Stapleton said. The cause remained under investigation, and preliminary estimates put the damage at $2 million, he said.

Damage estimates for the two other buildings were incomplete early today.

Within the last month city officials had ordered the stoppage of illegal construction work at the building where the fire started, said fire Lt. Joseph McDonnell.

Firefighters had trouble getting adequate pressure in their hoses, said Deputy Fire Chief Paul Christian. He said he was unsure if more pressure might have saved the six-story building, but he said it might have enabled firefighters to keep the flames from spreading.

Officials from the Boston Water and Sewer Commission said two valves under the street had been closed, possibly by a contractor doing work in the area.

Proposed Sale Of N.Y. Airport May Be Start Of Privately Run Airstrips

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBANY, N.Y. — By big-city standards, the Albany County Airport is a modest operation, yet what happens there in the coming weeks may influence the way airports are run around the nation.

A pair of private companies wants to buy the government-run airport for $30 million and run it for a profit, and some government officials are pressing to accept the offer.

Such a sale could signal a trend toward privatization of other airports run by cities and local governments. These airports are increasingly beset with crowding and flight delays because terminal expansion has failed to keep up with the growth in airline travel. The last big new airport to open was Dallas-Fort Worth's 15 years ago.

Backers of private ownership say the profit motive would force corporate operators to do a better job running airports than governments do. Opponents worry that private owners would raise the fees they charge airlines, thus driving up ticket prices.

"Private industry has a tendency to do things more efficiently and at a faster pace," said Peter Cornell, president of British American Development Corp., a Latham, N.Y., development company that's bidding to buy the Albany County Airport.

British American is in a joint bid with Lockheed Air Terminal Inc. of Burbank, Calif. A smaller bid was submitted by the Capital District Transportation Authority, which runs the regional public bus system.

"If the existing system were working so well and everyone was pleased, I don't think we would have airports currently looking at privatization," said Cornell. "Albany is not an isolated case. It seems to be a movement going around the country, and in places around the world."

The British government sold off its major airports two years ago. Denmark is selling Copenhagen airport and officials in Peoria, Ill., Atlanta and Los Angeles have at least considered selling their airports, said Robert Poole of the Reason Foundation, a conservative Santa Monica, Calif., think tank.

"Governments are facing up to the fact that we do not have enough airport capacity in this country and need to draw more resources," Poole said. "We simply do not have enough airports in this country."

A powerful incentive to local governments is the money to be made from selling the airport.

James J. Coyne, the Albany County executive leading the campaign to sell the airport, warns that big property tax increases could be needed if the sale isn't approved.

"Airports have really outgrown local government management," Coyne said, adding that there's little incentive to do a good job. "If you make money at the airport, the money goes back into the airport. If you lose money, the taxpayers dig into their pockets to pay for the deficit."

The Federal Aviation Administration, which must approve the deal, is reviewing the sale proposal and is expected to rule within a few weeks.

The proposal also is before the county Legislature, where a vote could come late this month or early next month.

A sale would need the approval of the New York state comptroller and Transportation Department.

Opponents, including the airport's biggest user, USAir, argue that a private owner would raise landing fees and other charges to the point that airlines would be forced to increase ticket prices. And, they argue, a private owner would be tempted to cut back services in economic hard times.

"Airports are a little bit like interstate highways in that there is a social cost involving huge capital expenditures," said one opponent, Kenneth Wagner, executive director of the Albany-Colonie Regional Chamber of Commerce. "I don't know of a private firm that could build and operate a highway system for a profit."

To make the deal worthwhile to the county, the FAA must approve use of the sale revenue for such county needs.

Koreans Storm Ambassador's Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Radical students hurling homemade bombs and swinging iron bars broke into the U.S. ambassador's home today and went on a half-hour rampage, smashing artwork and other objects before police dragged them out, officials said.

Ambassador Donald Gregg and his wife escaped unhurt.

Later, hundreds of radical students staged anti-U.S. protests on at least three Seoul college campuses, burning American flags and calling for the expulsion of U.S. troops from South Korea. One protest, at Kyunghee University, turned violent when about 200 students hurled rocks at riot police, who drove them back with tear gas.

The Greggs said they heard the intruders on the other side of their locked bedroom door but managed to escape via a side door.

The six students who occupied the Greggs' home gained entry by throwing homemade bombs to distract police guards outside the residence, police said. They then scaled the wall around the house, throwing tear gas to keep guards away.

After occupying part of the residence, the students blocked the main door with chairs and sprayed the floor with paint thinner, which they threatened to ignite if police attacked, officials said.

Unlike the U.S. Embassy, the ambassador's residence is not guarded by U.S. Marines. Korean police are responsible for guarding the outside of the house.

Embassy officials said they would review the security system.

The students who attacked the residence were from a self-proclaimed "Anti-U.S. Death Squad." They were protesting U.S. pressures on South Korea to open its markets and demanded that President Roh Tae-woo cancel his visit next week to Washington for talks with President Bush.

The also demanded a meeting with Gregg and hurled homemade bombs at police, officials said.

The attackers smashed objects and rampaged through the house in central Seoul for about 30 minutes before riot troopers firing tear gas forced their way inside and seized the students, police said. "Punish Gregg!" and "We oppose U.S. trade pressure!" the students shouted. One was draped in a South Korean flag.

Police said one student was slightly injured in the scuffle. They said they were searching for four other students who helped the six attackers into the compound.

Gregg and his wife, Meg, said they were sleeping when they heard an explosion near dawn. They did not see the students but heard them on the other side of their locked bedroom door.

Gregg dismissed the attack as the work "of six people who broke into our home, and I don't put a larger significance on it than that."

In Newark, N.J., White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Thursday that Bush "just asked if they (the Greggs) were safe and I assured him they were."

Radical students have tried to use Gregg's appointment to galvanize anti-U.S. protests, contending the former Seoul CIA station chief was sent to South Korea to impose military rule. They held anti-Gregg protests after he arrived in September, burning the ambassador in effigy.

Gregg's appointment was opposed by some U.S. senators because of charges he misled Congress about his role in the Iran-Contra affair as then-Vice President Bush's national security adviser. Some South Korean opposition leaders questioned whether a former CIA official was a suitable choice as ambassador, but the Seoul government said it welcomed the appointment.

South Korea's governing Democratic Justice Party condemned the attack as a "senseless riot," and the main opposition parties also denounced it.

South Korea's radical students are a small but vocal minority on college campuses. They have little public support because of their violent tactics and extremist views.

The radicals oppose Seoul's ties with the United States, claiming the government is a front for American rule. They have staged a series of attacks on U.S. facilities to demand withdrawal of the 43,000 American troops based in South Korea.

Ailing Shuttle Computer Replaced

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Technicians replaced a flawed computer today in the space shuttle Atlantis, keeping it on track for a Tuesday launch to deploy the Jupiter-bound Galileo probe.

NASA officials said the work was running slightly ahead of schedule despite the cramped quarters in which workers had to labor to install the spare computer among the pipes and wiring of a shuttle engine.

Officials said they had a good chance of launching on Tuesday if tests today show the new computer working properly.

The task of replacing the 230-pound, $6 million computer began soon after the countdown was halted Tuesday because the device gave a false pressure reading. Launch had been set for Thursday.

The tedious work involved removing engine heat shields, erecting access platforms and unhooking about two dozen connections between the computer and the shuttle. Because of limited space in the engine compartment only six people can work there at a time.

A federal judge on Tuesday rejected a request by environmental groups to halt the flight for fear the nuclear-powered Galileo probe could scatter plutonium over Florida if the shuttle exploded.

The groups filed notice with the judge Thursday that they were going to appeal his ruling to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Had NASA tried to launch Atlantis Thursday as originally planned, the effort would have been canceled because of clouds, high winds and intermittant rain, officials reported. The early outlook for Tuesday is good, weather officials said.

Lift-off on Tuesday was scheduled for 12:57 p.m., the start of a 24-minute period in which Jupiter will be in the proper position to nearly cross paths with the Galileo spacecraft in 1995. Wednesday has a 27-minute launch window, and Nov. 21 is the last day Jupiter will be in the proper position until mid-1991.

After launch, Atlantis' crew of five astronauts is to release the nuclear-powered probe for the six-year journey to Jupiter.

Pre-Flight Crack Found In Fan Disk

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal investigators are examining a pre-flight crack in a DC-10 engine fan disk found in an Iowa corn field this week, nearly three months after the crash of a United Airlines jet.

James Kolstad, acting National Transportation Safety Board Chairman, said Thursday he hoped the disk section unearthed by an Iowa farmer would tell investigators what caused the July 19 crash that killed 112 of the 286 people aboard Flight 232.

Kolstad expressed the optimism even before a second farmer on Thursday found what a lawyer hired by engine-maker General Electric said is the final one-third part of the disk.

Kolstad announced discovery of a crack in the larger section unearthed by farmer Janice Sorenson on Tuesday as she was harvesting with a combine near Alta, Iowa. The section included about two-thirds of the 300-pound disk and parts of 25 of its fan blades, Kolstad said.

Lawyer Steve Gadd, hired by GE to assist in the search, confirmed late Thursday that the final third of the titanium disk was found by farmer Harold Halverson about a half-mile from the Sorenson discovery.

The company had offered $271,000 for various missing pieces of the engine and has delivered a check for $116,000 to Mrs. Sorenson.

Investigators say the plane's tail-mounted No. 2 engine disintegrated in flight, throwing out pieces that severed hydraulic flight control lines. Pilots said they used only thrust from the remaining two engines to steer the plane to the Sioux City airport where it cartwheeled in flames upon landing.

Kolstad said the precise "size, nature and reason for the crack" found along the interior surface of the engine disk had yet to be determined.

Commentary

NEW YORK (AP) — Commentary without an immediate response has been ended at Cable News Network in an unexplained move that CNN spokesman Steve Haworth in Atlanta said "was a just a management decision."

The action, which CNN said was taken Monday, ends the wry observations of Linda Ellerbee, and the commentary of Robert Novak, Marty Schramm, weatherman Flip Spiceland and sportscaster Jim Hubert on the 24-hour network.

All do other work for CNN, except for Ellerbee. "We hope to keep her on the air in some capacity," spokesman John Bianchi said in New York Thursday.

He said that commentaries heard on CNN discussion programs, and the opposing views expressed on the shows, will continue. The programs are "Crossfire," "Evans & Novak" and "Capitol Gang."

Bethel Church Has Long Been A Spiritual Home For Lil Bunting Carson

She'll Be 97 Tuesday, Church Is 175 Sunday

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — Lil Bunting Carson says that Bethel United Methodist Church has been a major influence in her life for more than her 82 years of membership.

The church marks its 175th anniversary Saturday and will celebrate it Sunday, just in time for Mrs. Carson's 97th birthday Tuesday.

The lifelong Bethel area resident has been a member of the church longer than any other living person. She joined the church when she was 15 — in 1907. Even before joining, she took part in the activities of the church that her parents John and Sallie Bunting had attended from before her birth.

A former public school teacher, Mrs. Carson said that the church of her childhood was strictly a place of worship. It wasn't a place for socials, she said. Most community socializing was done through the schools.

It was an institution that took strong stands on moral issues, she said. For example, the church worked in tandem with the Women's Christian Temperance Union to dissuade alcohol use and abuse in Bethel. She was a member of the WCTU from age 12 onward.

Still able to attend church today, Mrs. Carson said, "I am what I am by the grace of God. And my church has meant a lot to me all my life."

The name of Mrs. Carson's home community means House of God. And the earliest "House of God" in Bethel that anyone today knows about was the Bethel Meeting House, referred to in Patent Office records. These records state that a stagecoach, which traveled a road from Edenton to "the back provinces" around Hillsboro, stopped both at the Bethel Meeting House and the Bethel Inn. The exact location of this meeting house is not known.

Bethel resident and longtime church member Daisy Carson Latham referred to this meeting house in her "History of the Bethel Methodist Church," compiled in 1964, the church's 150th anniversary year.

And she quoted Minnie Manning, 76 years old then, as telling of another church building known as Staton's Lane Church. This was either a non-denominational meeting house or a Methodist Church. Staton's Lane ran off the old Greenville road, she said, behind the J.L. Gurganus pasture. Mrs. Manning told her that Stanley Barnhill, 95 years old in 1964, remembers the church and said it was built of logs. Mrs. Manning, whose mother also talked of the church, believed that the church was Methodist.

Mrs. Latham wrote, "Whether this legendary church was a community meeting house or a Methodist house of worship will be hidden forever in the past. There is evidence, however, that the famous Bishop Francis Asbury visited the Bethel area in 1782, 1784 and again in 1804. Since the documented Bethel Church of 1814 apparently was not in existence, evidence leans heavily toward the Staton's Lane House being Methodist."

The church now serving Bethel and the larger community through the stewardship of its 463 members has verifiable history from 1814 on. According to Mrs. Latham, the first Methodist Church building in Bethel was constructed that year on a lot deeded to Richard Whitehurst, Charles Whitehurst, William Bryan, John Bryan and William Carney on Oct. 11, 1814.

Early church member Maliza Bryan Ward told of going to school as well as worshipping in this building. Another early church member Betsy Matthews said that early Methodists preached "under bushwhacks" (arbors) before their first building was erected.

A new church building was apparently constructed around 1849. Minnie Manning remembered this building and said it was a crude one. It was reported that William Closs, presiding elder at the time, said that his father and many others "had better barns for their cattle than this building used as a house of worship."

The church was apparently used as a place to worship by both whites and black slaves in those pre-Civil War days. An early member of the church was reported to be Zibe Barnhill, a slave who did much of the sawing for construction of the 1849 building. In 1964, the church building was still standing but was a storage building in Zibe's son Stanley's yard.

History of the church through the Civil War and

LIL BUNTING CARSON

Reconstruction days is scarce, but Mrs. Manning remembered her parents telling of a revival held about 1863. She said her parents joined the church during that revival, at least three weeks in length, conducted by L.L. Nash.

"My mother, 17 at the time, went every night but one and on that one, her mother made her stay at home and sleep. I have heard my mother and father talk a lot about this revival," she said.

"They said that the church was lighted by candles brought by the members and first placed on the altar. People would carry long lightwood splinters for lights on their way home from church. It was nothing for some to walk several miles. My father and mother went to school in this church. Mr. Nathaniel (Nat) Hammond was the teacher."

Another church building was the result of a revival in 1877. When completed, it was said to be "the most beautiful church building in Pitt County." It had a bell tower, lightning rods, weather vanes and "advanced style" (stained glass) windows. This building, then with wooden siding, is now the brick-covered Medley's Chapel A.M.E. Zion Church at Main and Church streets.

That building was sold to the African Methodists in 1909. A record of the meeting in which the action was taken said that white Pentecostal Holiness Church members wanted to buy the building, but the church voted to sell it to "other Methodists" at a price of $50. M.O. Blount was quoted as saying, "Personally, I am not willing to let it go to anybody but Methodists."

A church structure built in 1910 was used only until 1922 when the present church at the corner of U.S. 64 and James Street was constructed.

The Bethel Church has been an influence in the Bethel community throughout its history. And it has served, too, in the larger Methodist community. Members of the Bethel Church have been on the North Carolina Conference Board of Pensions since 1926. These Pension board members are John Staton, R. Harold Staton, Clifton W. Everett, David O. Speir and Ferrell L. Blount.

The first years of the new church were concerned with financing its building and furnishing. Several celebrations of notes paid were held through the years until 1927 and beyond.

The church parsonage was renovated in 1949-50 and again in 1986-87; the church parlor in 1985. The church expansion program began in 1953.

A fire started by a roof repairman did major damage to the church building in 1963. The sanctuary was ruined, but the education building was left and some sanctuary furnishings were saved. Restoration of the sanctuary began almost immediately and the first service in the restored facility was held April 5, 1964.

Celebration of the 175th anniversary is being made all this year. A "Heritage Day" was held Sept. 17.

A special homecoming service in celebration of the anniversary will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday. Bishop Carlton P. Minnick Jr. will conduct the service. Also on the program will be the pastor, the Rev. Earl Dulaney; Greenville District Superintendent Alton Hill Jr., and returning minister Ellis Bedsworth of Plymouth. Dinner will be served on the church grounds immediately following the service.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

DAVID AND SAUL

STANDING ABOVE THE UNGUARDED, SLEEPING BODY OF KING SAUL, ABISHAI HAS SNATCHED UP A SPEAR TO KILL THIS MAN WHO THREATENS DAVID'S LIFE, NOW...

AND WITH THESE SOUVENIRS OF THEIR VISIT TO THE SLEEPING CAMP, DAVID AND ABISHAI STEAL OUT OF THE MIDST OF SAUL'S ARMY AS SILENTLY AS THEY ENTERED IT!

East German Lutherans Caught In Power Struggle

By Girard C. Steichen
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — In the Gethsemane Lutheran church in East Berlin, thousands of pro-democracy activists find sanctuary as security police roam the streets outside.

At sister churches in Leipzig and Dresden, East Germans who have been refused permission to emigrate to the West gather weekly for candlelight vigils to protest the government's decision to make them stay.

Thousands of East Germans have recently spilled out of the churches and into the streets as protests against the aging Communist leadership's hard-line policies have swelled to record proportions.

Suddenly, the church has been plunged into the middle of efforts to achieve political reforms in one of Eastern Europe's most tightly controlled societies.

The church has long sought an uneasy co-existence with the 40-year-old, officially atheist state.

Although there are no recent census figures, it is estimated that 80 percent of East Germans are Protestants, predominantly Lutheran.

Martin Luther, leader of the Protestant Reformation, was born in Eisleben, now in East Germany.

While it has championed human rights causes and increasingly pressured the government for more openness and dialogue in society, the Lutheran Church has largely steered clear of open confrontation with the state.

East German officials have tolerated the church as long as it confines itself to activities on its property, although its publications are routinely censored.

After years of relative tranquility, church leaders have found themselves in tense mediations with police to prevent protests from escalating into violence.

Their run-down churches have increasingly become forums for disparate opposition groups and pro-democracy supporters.

Church leaders are also speaking out more boldly for democratic change.

Hans Otto Furian, a church protest in East Berlin, has called on the ruling Communist Party to "give up its grip on total power."

Church sources inform Western media of dissident developments and act as mediators between opposition groups and government officials.

Opposition groups have flocked to the churches because they are the only haven of free speech in the strictly regulated country.

Church property is also off-limits to state security officials under terms of a law separating church and state.

While there are similarities to the Catholic Church's support of the Solidarity movement in Poland, the German Lutheran Church has never had the same influence on daily life as the Catholic Church in Poland.

Western diplomatic observers and East German church leaders say there are clear limits to the church's new role. Many say its current role has been assumed reluctantly.

"The church has not deliberately chosen this role," said a Western diplomat who tracks East German religious affairs. "It was forced upon it."

East Berlin pastor Rainer Eppelmann said the church, in seeking to help many East Germans disillusioned by their society, has found that "people we're trying to reach out to are being torn apart."

"You have to deal with these problems," said Eppelmann, who was among the first East Berlin pastors to give sanctuary to fledgling ecology and human rights groups.

Johannes Hempel, the Lutheran bishop of Dresden, said he does not believe the church is actively seeking the forefront of the movement for changes in East German society.

"What is happening now is not really an activity of the churches," he said. "It comes from a large part of the population, and only a small part are Christians."

Hempel said the church's role is to help "avoid escalation and violence" and to build bridges between the opposition and the state.

That role will be challenged as opposition leaders continue to demand more dialogue with the government.

So far, only Communist officials in Leipzig and Dresden have agreed to talk to opposition representatives.

Church leaders there played key roles in setting up those talks.

Church leaders in East Berlin say "working groups" also exist between the church and officials in the capital to discuss solutions to the current unrest.

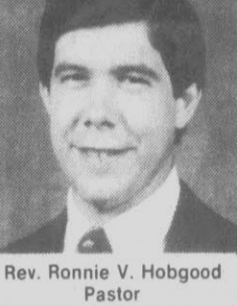

Several church leaders are known to have good contacts with high-ranking party officials.

Church officials say they expect their mediation role to continue to be a difficult one because many in the government led by 77-year-old Erich Honecker have been unwilling to discuss the need for changes.

Bargain Fixer-Upper House Could Have Major Problems

By Ellen L. James
LAT-WP News Service

Near Gettysburg, Pa., a young couple happened upon a 165-year-old farmhouse for sale four years ago. At $80,000, the historic log house seemed like a steal and the elated couple quickly bought the place.

But it wasn't long before the couple discovered that their supposed diamond in the rough was actually a plain, rough rock. Contrary to popular belief, a true, bargain fixer-upper is a rare phenomenon, real estate experts caution.

In the Gettysburg-area case, log beams on the first floor were rotten — a massive ordeal to replace. Water seeped into the basement. The electrical system was totally outdated. And the asbestos-covered furnace was obsolete. All told, the couple expects to spend more than $100,000 on repairs.

"I see a lot of people drawn to houses that need a whole lot more work than they imagine. Too often, they're in for a rude awakening," says Mark J. Reinmiller, who owns Building Consultants Inc., a home inspection firm in Lansdowne, Pa., outside Philadelphia.

Finding a good "handyman special," as realty agents are fond of calling such properties, is not out of the question and could be a good strategy for young buyers with more energy than money. But be sure the house gets a thorough analysis before you're locked into its purchase.

"Please, please look it over and understand what you're buying. Don't buy with your heart, buy with your head and your heart will come later," counsels Russell W. Allen, who heads A.A. Home Inspection Services in Sykesville, Md.

As with nearly all home buys, it's a good idea to make the sales contract for your fixer-upper contingent on a professional home inspection. If there's reason to suspect foundation, soil, termite, lead paint or asbestos problems, it's wise to bring in specialists in those areas, too.

Yet, even with a thorough analysis by experts, prepare yourself for unforeseen problems. Old homes, especially, can be laden with costly defects. Roger R. Hankey, a home inspector in Minneapolis, calls it the "mushroom factor" — when the attempt to solve one problem leads rapidly to the discovery of others.

"When you pull out the old sink, you discover bad plumbing. Then you pull out the bad plumbing, you discover floor boards or wall studs that are rotten. Pretty soon the project you thought you could do in a weekend for $200 turns out to take a month and $2,000," says Hankey, who heads Real Estate Support Services Inc.

Of course, not every older home in the fixer-upper category has severe, latent defects. Stanley J. Sersen, whose home inspection firm works in both Washington D.C. and the nearby Annapolis, Md.-area, says it's possible to find a real diamond in the rough whose only problems are on the surface.

"If someone is willing to look past the cosmetics and the heart of the house is sound, they'll have a good buy. All the house may need is the tender loving care to put the polish back on the diamond," says Sersen.

For a client, Sersen recently conducted an inspection of just such a property, a split-level priced $15,000 to $20,000 below market because it showed so badly.

"Cosmetically, the house — which had been rented — looked trashed. Doors hung on their hinges. The paint was worn. The walls had been scribbled on by kids and the place was extremely dirty," he recalls.

Yet Sersen determined that all five of the home's basic components — its roof, foundation, plumbing, heating, and electrical systems — were in good shape. On that basis, the Anne Arundel couple bought the place, spending just $5,000 to bring it up to grade.

The key to buying the right fixer-upper is to rule out properties with potentially very serious problems.

"The houses you don't want to deal with are the ones with bad soil, shifting soil, or foundation problems," says Mr. Hankey, the Minneapolis home inspector. "These can get you into some very, very expensive repairs — $10,000 to $20,000 easily."

Fortunately, most residential communities in the country aren't troubled by clay or other soils that can shrink or expand dramatically, causing a house to destabilize. But look out for telltale signs of this problem: sloping floors, cracked plaster and doors or windows that no longer close squarely into their openings. Buckled or cracked basement walls may be symptoms of a bad foundation.

Environmental hazards are another group of problems you'll probably want to avoid in selecting your fixer-upper. To remove lead paint or asbestos properly, you may need to call in costly and specialized contractors. And realize that you, as the homeowner, could be held legally responsible for the safety of those doing the abatement work as well as those who may live in the home after you've sold it.

"It's the headache factor as well as the money," says Hankey.

Still another group of troublesome problems are those associated with homes in high water areas or flood plains. While most leaky basement problems can be solved for a relatively small amount of money through gutter improvements or regrading, water difficulties in these areas may be ongoing and chronic.

Comparatively speaking, the cost of replacing an outdated roof, plumbing, heating or electrical system can be fairly reasonable to a buyer intending to reside in the house for an extended period of time. Since there are lots of tradesmen in these fields, pricing for such standard items is competitive. And the work, once done, usually doesn't need to be repeated for a decade or two. Regardless of the extent of work required, you're not a prime candidate to buy a fixer-upper unless you bear up well during home renovation, says Kent A. Boucher, vice president of Claxton Walker Associates, a home inspection firm in the Washington suburb of Potomac, Md. "You can get awfully tired of eating plaster dust after a couple of weeks," he says. The right buyer for a home renovation project "has patience, knowledge and the time to do a lot of work himself," he says.

Boucher speaks from experience, having gutted and totally renovated a 40-year-old Williamsburg replica home in Olney, Md. When he first saw the place, he remembers, "it had eight inches of water standing on the basement floor, the roof was in bad shape and plaster ceilings in two to three rooms were gone."

But the Olney home also included some splendid architectural treasures, including antique hardwood floors, beams and bricks brought in from much older homes. Nine years after he bought it, this fixer-upper has more than tripled in value and Boucher is well pleased.

"I think I have a fine home that I wouldn't have traded for a lot of the new construction today."

With a master's degree in construction and years of work behind him as a heating and air conditioning contractor, Boucher was well suited to take on a major renovation. But most home buyers — even those able to farm out most of the work to contractors — a place requiring only cosmetic surgery is a far better bet.

"The houses that are more of a bargain than others are in good mechanical condition. They need only paint, paper, cleaning and other inexpensive improvements," says Reinmiller, the Philadelphia-area home inspector. Look for solid houses priced below market because they show badly due to such superficial problems as pet odors, carpet stains, chipping paint and faded wallpaper.

Says Reinmiller: "If you can find one of those, it can be a good deal."

Cindy Stevenson Is Speaker

Cindy Stevenson was keynote speaker at the meeting of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club Tuesday evening.

A pediatric nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, she spoke on the safe sitter course available to boys and girls ages 11-13. The club will have its annual tasting tea March 17. The sunshine chairman is Jill Booch.

Receiving the yard of the month award were Larry and Sue Schell.

Engagement Party Held

Allyson Johnson and Cameron King were honored at an engagement party Saturday night held at the home of Larry and LaRue King of Farmville.

A "love boat" cruise was used as the party's theme. Music for the evening was provided by Mark Ford of the East Carolina University School of Music.

The couple will be married Jan. 20 in Pullem Memorial Baptist Church in Raleigh.

Al Hight Gives Club Talk

A program on fall yard cleaning was given for the Lakewood Pines Garden Club Tuesday by Al Hight.

He discussed slides concerning lawn and landscaping problems, and told of new types of pansies for fall planting and of vinca and petunias. Hight is a Pitt County agriculture extension agent.

Members will be participating in the home tour and luncheon being sponsored by the women of the First Christian Church.

Reader Worries About Flag Disposal

Dear Abby: When I studied civics in high school, I was taught that the proper, respectful way to dispose of an American flag when it became soiled, torn or damaged, and therefore unsuitable for displaying, was to burn it.

Now with the current move to make such an act unconstitutional, I ask you, what am I to do with my flag should it become unsuitable for displaying? — Patriotic And Perplexed

Dear Patriotic: First, one would have to determine whether the flag burner burned the flag to show contempt or respect.

When a flag becomes unsuitable for displaying, call the local chapter of your American Legion. They collect such flags and dispose of them in a dignified and respectful ceremony.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I am writing in defense of the couple who announced their divorce to their friends at their 25th wedding anniversary party. Although "Was There" thought the couple's actions were unbelievable, I think that their actions were kind, compassionate and mature. Their announcement must have put a damper on the party, but if their marriage could not be reconciled, they did the next best thing for themselves, their family and friends.

It is much nicer if divorcing couples can part as "friends" rather than to go for the jugular. The anger, accusations and pain should not be hashed and rehashed. By making a joint announcement with all of their friends in attendance, they avoided the painful explanation to each friend, as well as the inaccuracies that occur through gossip and the placing of blame. They also gave their children and friends permission to remain friendly with both parties.

Their actions were commendable. May they both find happiness as they each make a new life. I've thought of doing the same thing myself. — On The Brink In Sacramento

Dear On The Brink: I am not advocating dissolving marriages, but if you decide to go that route, this seems the most civilized way to do it.

Dear Abby: Re the couple who announced their divorce on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary: Bravo! I only wish my parents had the good sense to do the same.

They have plenty of money to go their separate ways and make new lives, but they just stay together — quarreling and unhappy.

Congratulations to the couple who admitted their marriage wasn't working anymore and went on with their lives.

Evicting Bats From House Presents Problems

By Leslie Zganjar
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENE, N.Y. — Ever since she was a child and a bat flew into her bedroom one night, Brett Whitney has feared the little monsters. Now she's scared to death.

It all began when she and her husband, Bill, bought a century-old farmhouse in upstate New York, not knowing the attic was a roost for 1,600 of the night-flying creatures.

"I've never heard of this many bats in a house before," Brett Whitney says.

At dusk, the sky blackens and fills with screeches as hundreds of bats pour out of the house, spreading their wings and dropping like miniature parachuters before circling back up over their roost and heading for the nearby Chenango River to feed.

"I don't want to go up there," Mrs. Whitney says, motioning toward the attic where the bats hang upside down from the rafters during the day like clusters of grapes.

But while many people like the Whitneys are trying to rid their homes of bats, conservationists are working to save them.

Bat experts say the winged mammals are vitally important for insect control, eating up to 50 percent of their body weight during each nocturnal feeding.

"Bats are some of the most misunderstood animals in the world," says Pat Morton, director of the Texas-based Bat Conservation International. "They've been shrouded for centuries in myth and misinformation because they fly at night and are needlessly feared."

Her organization educates people about the importance of bats. And with the return of Batman to movie screens across the country this summer, that job was made a little easier. Morton says requests for information about bats has doubled.

Even Brett Whitney has been leaning on the Caped Crusader to help her deal with the thousands of bats in her home.

"You have to have a sense of humor about it. I'm buying all this Batman paraphernalia," she says, pointing to the bat sticker on the window of her black Renault. "I tell my friends I'm driving my Batmobile to the Bat House."

Bats have been soaring around the planet for 60 million years, at speeds of up to 40 mph. They're not blind but use sound waves for navigation and to hunt for food.

Despite sensational accounts of people being bitten by rabid bats, such attacks are rare. Less than one-half of 1 percent of bats contract rabies, and those that do seldom become aggressive, said Dr. Stephen C. Frantz of the New York State Department of Health.

In fact, bats do more for us humans than we think.

Many flowers, fruits and plants grown in the tropics, including peaches, grapefruit, avocados and bananas, depend on bats for pollination.

The bat's instinctive radar system may lead to development of devices to help the blind.

Man has also put bats to use in research for new contraceptives. A unique hormone allows bats to give birth once a year. The female is inseminated in the fall, but fertilization is delayed until spring, after a winter of hibernation.

Even so, having hundreds of bats living in your attic is enough to, well, drive you batty.

"We've been fighting them for five years," says Robert Harrington, who has 2,000 or so living in the attic of his North Bay home on the shore of Oneida Lake.

Harrington has spent almost $1,500 trying to keep the flying creatures out of his attic. But it hasn't done any good. They can get through a hole the size of a dime, he says.

"I've sprayed ammonia, bought cases and cases of mothballs, and all it's done is stunk up the house," he says.

His two daughters refuse to sleep in the house. They sleep outside in the family's truck.

There are no exact figures on how many houses in the country are infested with bats. In New York state, Frantz knows of about half a dozen homes where more than 500 bats have moved in and taken over.

He says in most cases of major bat infestation, the houses are old with dark and poorly ventilated attics, something bats love. He says the homes are also near water, which attracts numerous insects and makes for a good night's meal.

Frantz, who works for a research arm of the state health department that studies rodent diseases, such as rabies, visits many of these bat-infested houses to get information for his research.

Once he's finished gathering data, he shows the residents how to bat-proof their homes. And he does a little handholding.

"A lot of time these people just need someone to talk to and to tell

Bill Whitney crouches in the attic in the farmhouse he's renovating in Greene, N.Y.

The Associated Press

them things aren't so bad," he says. "They need to know that their house is not unlivable. They just have to get the bats out."

"I guess you could say I'm the living Batman."

Brett Whitney and her husband didn't know their house had bats when they bought it — as is — last spring, intending to fix it up themselves. Now they're living elsewhere.

Mrs. Whitney says she remembers smelling a powerful odor when she walked through the house and recalls seeing animal droppings. But she just assumed the previous owners had pets — lots of them.

Frantz says the bats were probably hibernating in nearby caves when the Whitneys saw the house and returned shortly after the purchase agreement was signed.

The Whitneys discovered the bats when Bill peeked into the attic and saw foot-high mounds of bat guano.

"I was shocked," he says. "They were just hanging on the rafters. It was like being in a cave."

He went immediately to the county's environmental officials. When he mentioned the address, they began nodding their heads.

"They told me the house had been infested for years," Whitney says.

Frantz says that because the colony is so large, it probably dates back to the early 1920s. Whitney found bat guano beneath the insulation, which was put into the house in the 1930s.

Whitney, a self-employed roofer and contractor in the Binghamton area, plans to renovate the house himself.

He says the roof will have to be torn off and replaced, and all the manure- and urine-soaked insulation will have to be shoveled out of the walls and replaced with new insulation. He says the ceilings and walls on the second floor will also have to be removed because they're soaked with bat waste.

"It's not an unsolvable problem," Whitney says. "People are abandoning houses with bats. I looked at the deeds in the county office and they show that this house has changed hands a lot. I guess the owners discovered bats and ran."

"But there's nothing wrong with the house. It will take a total renovation, but it's structurally sound."

The Whitneys, who have two young children, hope to move in this month.

Frantz says the best remedy for ridding an attic of bats is waiting until they're out for a night of feeding and then seal off points of entry and exit.

He says the best time to bat-proof is late fall through winter, when bats are hibernating in caves. He says bat-proofing should not be done in late spring and early summer because baby bats can become trapped inside and repopulate.

Harrington says he's looking forward to getting some help in his private war from the Oneida County Community Action Agency Inc. The organization is preparing a grant application specifically to get money to help people bat-proof their homes.

Harrington says he's pretty much bat-proofed the living areas of his home. He says that before he did he used to get bats in the house all the time. Now he sees only a couple in the living quarters.

Program Finds Foreign Workers For Jobs

By Paige St. John
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. — Here on this resort island in the Great Lakes, Jamaican waiters and Austrian cooks square off in a soccer match.

Jamaican Independence Day is celebrated on Mackinac Island with a dinner party thrown by the waiters. Islanders still talk about the time a tureen of goat's head soup from the party wound up the next day on the serving table of one of the smaller hotels.

Down on the wharf on a recent weekend, the sugary smell of fudge mingled with that of horses and cyclists and tourists all perspiring under an unseasonably hot sun.

Above it all at the cliffside Grand Hotel, LeRoy Champagne smoothly waited tables by the golf course. Not a drop of sweat beaded his brow nor stained his white coat.

He doesn't mind the heat. In fact, he's quite happy. "I like the work," he says in a thick Jamaican accent.

Champagne is among 32,000 foreign workers brought to the United States this year under the U.S. Labor Department's temporary certification program to take jobs some employers claim Americans either can't or won't fill.

These legal aliens cut Florida sugar cane, pick Maryland apples and, in Michigan, they wait upon the mostly white, rich tourists at the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island.

Federal overseers acknowledge the program is a target for legal suits from any number of contestants — including displaced Americans and advocates for foreign laborers.

"Court cases go hand-in-hand with this program," said one administrator, Tom Bruening in Washington, D.C.

This year, for instance, apple growers in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia were ordered to pay more than $2 million in back wages to 10,000 underpaid Jamaican field hands.

Yet employers such as the Grand Hotel swear by the program.

Service at the impeccable Grand was getting, well, sloppy, before the Jamaicans arrived, says owner Dan Musser.

Ten years ago, the hotel was hiring American college students who cared little about what to do with the wine cork. "I think our service showed it, dramatically," Musser says.

Even that kind of help was hard to find. Eight people answered the hotel's advertisement in a Detroit newspaper offering $3.35 an hour minimum to waiters, waitresses and chambermaids.

Five of the American applicants were hired. Only two showed up for work, Musser says.

Meanwhile, in Jamaica, the Grand's headwaiter, Kenneth Salmon, sifted through thousands of applications for the same jobs. The 123 Jamaican waiters, Austrian cooks and Mexican maids the Grand Hotel hired not only wanted the seasonal jobs, they are professionals who work the high-class resorts of their home countries the six months of the year they are not on Mackinac Island.

Slowdown Forecast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOT SPRINGS, Va. — The nation's top business leaders today forecast a significant U.S. economic slowdown for 1990 and warned that an outright recession is possible unless the Federal Reserve cuts interest rates.

The Business Council, composed of 100 chief executives of the country's largest corporations, predicted that the economy will grow next year at the most sluggish rate since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

However, the expected slowdown will turn out to be the "pause that refreshes" and growth will rebound in 1991, giving the country an unprecedented nine consecutive years without a recession, the business leaders forecast.

This optimistic outlook came with a major caveat that the Federal Reserve must cooperate by moving soon to lower interest rates to spur economic activity.

"There are a variety of potential weaknesses in the economy that carry the risk of a recession," said Lewis T. Preston, chairman of J.P. Morgan Inc., the giant New York bank. "If I were the Fed, I would be inclined to lean in the direction of an easier policy. My sense is that we will need a fair amount of insurance against trouble."

The call by the business leaders for the Fed to relent in its inflation campaign and start nudging interest rates lower echoed comments being made by the Bush administration, which is worried that a sluggish economy next year could harm Republican chances in the 1990 congressional races.

industrials rose 3.48 to 2,763.32 by 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Volume on the Big Board came to 22.13 million shares in the first half hour of trading.

The Labor Department reported this morning that the producer price index of finished goods rose 0.9 percent in September, abruptly reversing a series of declines through the summer months.

In theory at least, the news seemed to dampen hopes for any action soon by the Federal Reserve to relax its credit policy.

However, analysts noted that a rise of about that size had been widely expected in the financial world.

Board Eyes Study unauthorized payments to a player and his assistant coaches in violation of NCAA rules.

"You've got to assume that (all the problems in athletics) haven't turned up yet," said Johnson.

Johnson said the study should focus on areas such as freshman eligibility, length of seasons, post-season competition, the role of television, impact on the academic needs of students and how athletes are treated on campus in comparison with other students.

Johnson said athletes should receive no financial support beyond their scholarships.

Some sports observers believe major colleges and universities should share more freely with their players the revenues they make in their football and basketball programs.

Johnson also said he believes the board has gone too far in delegating the control of intercollegiate athletics with the system's chancellors.

"Occurrences have shown us a lot of damaging instances in which that policy did not work," Johnson said.

An examination of that policy would be part of the athletics study Johnson wants done.

Specifically, his resolution calls for a "complete study of intercollegiate athletics within the University of North Carolina system for the purpose of developing a definitive statement of what should be the appropriate relationship between the Board of Governors and the athletic programs at the (various) institutions."

Johnson said the study should also make policy recommendations which should be adopted by the board to assure a proper relationship between the academic and athletic programs at an institution.

Puckett Paces AP's All-Star Team Becomes First Player To Make Team For Four Consecutive Years

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Kirby Puckett, who won his first American League batting title this season, is the first player to make The Associated Press Major League All-Star team for four consecutive years.

San Francisco's Will Clark, the Most Valuable Player of the National League playoffs, was the top vote-getter for 1989 team, which was announced Thursday. He received 143 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and editors. Pedro Guerrero of the St. Louis Cardinals and Fred McGriff of the Toronto Blue Jays were next at first base with five votes each.

Puckett has made the AP All-Star team in four of his five full seasons with the Minnesota Twins. Joining him in the outfield were Kevin Mitchell of the NL champion Giants and Ruben Sierra of the Texas Rangers, both first-time picks.

Third baseman Howard Johnson of the New York Mets and catcher Mickey Tettleton of the Baltimore Orioles also were first-time selections.

Shortstop Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles, selected to the team from 1983-85, was picked for the fourth time. Second baseman Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs, a 1988 pick, was elected for his third time overall.

Bret Saberhagen of the Kansas City Royals was voted right-handed pitcher, Joe Magrane of the St. Louis Cardinals was picked as the left-hander and Mark Davis of the San Diego Padres was named the reliever. All three were first-time picks.

Designated hitter Dave Parker of the American League champion Oakland Athletics beat Harold Baines of the Texas Rangers 48-33 in the closest race. It was the first time on the team for Parker. The AP began selecting one team for both leagues in 1982.

Most of the selections were overwhelming choices. Sandberg beat Texas' Julio Franco 134-11 and Saberhagen beat Oakland's Dave Stewart, a three-time 20-game winner, 128-11.

Davis beat the Cubs' Mitch Williams 119-14 and Ripken beat the Cardinals' Ozzie Smith 98-17. Tettleton beat Carlton Fisk of the White Sox 60-24 and Magrane beat Sid Fernandez of the Mets 72-21. Johnson got 74 votes at third to 30 for Oakland's Carney Lansford and 27 for Boston's Wade Boggs.

In the outfield, Mitchell received 140 votes, Puckett 111 and Sierra 74. San Diego's Tony Gwynn was next with 48 and Milwaukee's Robin Yount was fifth with 30.

Robinson Is AP's Manager Of Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Frank Robinson, who guided the Baltimore Orioles to one of the greatest turnarounds in baseball history, today was named Associated Press Manager of the Year.

Robinson got 69 points and Don Zimmer of the Chicago Cubs had 51 in nationwide voting by sports writers and broadcasters. No other manager reached double figures.

"It's an honor, but often times the people who deserve the credit aren't the ones who get the awards," Robinson said. "I sincerely mean that. The players are the ones who did the job, the organization got me the players and the coaches taught them. I just oversaw the process."

Robinson, however, gave the young Orioles the hope and spirit that got them within one weekend of becoming the only team to go from last place to first in one season.

Baltimore went 54-107 in 1988, the worst record in the majors. Robinson, a Hall of Fame player with the Orioles from 1966 to 1971, was promoted from coach to manager after the Orioles began the year with six straight losses.

This season, with a pitching staff built around rookies and shortstop Cal Ripken the only proven star, the Orioles went 87-75 and came within two games of Toronto in the American League East.

Baltimore was expected to finish no higher than next-to-last. Instead, the Orioles moved into first place early in the season and stayed there.

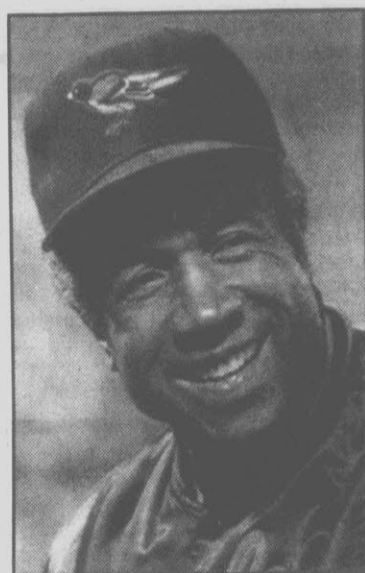

The baby Birds played like veterans, cool and confident, and Robinson — once impatient and temperamental as manager in San Francisco and Cleveland — led the transformation.

"What I brought to the process was a philosophy that we would play every game like it was the seventh game of the World Series," Robinson said. "We would go out and play hard every day. I asked for a total team effort and they responded."

At the All-Star break, after several feuds with umpires, Robinson threatened to resign. But a meeting with league president Dr. Bobby Brown helped settle the situation, and the Orioles held first place through the summer.

Rookie pitchers Gregg Olson, Bob Milacki, Pete Harnisch and Dave Johnson kept the Orioles winning, catcher Mickey Tettleton had an All-Star season and Baltimore set a record for the best defense in a full season. Baltimore fans appreciated the effort and set an attendance record.

Toronto caught the Orioles on Sept. 1 and the teams dueled down the stretch.

Walker To Vikings

Herschel Walker holds up Viking jersey after trade

Minnesota Sends Five To Dallas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — For the present, the Minnesota Vikings think Herschel Walker is at least 12 times as good as most NFL players. For the future, the Dallas Cowboys think most players are more than one-twelfth as good as Herschel Walker.

"We've improved our future. It's a cornerstone to build from," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Thursday after he sent Walker to the Vikings in exchange for five players and seven draft choices in one of the NFL's all-time megadeals. "The draft picks we got will give us a chance to build for the future and the players we got will enhance our competitiveness in 1989. It was very unique and in everybody's interests."

The Vikings' interest, of course, was in Walker, the All-Pro running back on whom they're counting to put them over the top.

"Depending on how things work out over the next three years, yes, we could have mortgaged our future for the good of the 1989 and 1990 teams," Vikings general manager Mike Lynn said.

"We felt that the last piece of the puzzle, the last spoke on the wheel, was a running back. And not just a running back, but a marquee running back."

"If we don't win the (NFC) Central Division, if we don't get to the Super Bowl while Herschel Walker is a member of the Minnesota Vikings, then we have not made a good trade."

Going to the Cowboys were four Minnesota regulars, if not always starters: linebackers Jesse Solomon and David Howard, cornerback Ike Holt and running back Darrin Nelson. Rookie defensive end Alex Stewart, who has spent the entire year on the disabled list, was included in the deal.

In addition, the Vikings gave up their first-round draft choice in 1992.

The Cowboys also got six "conditional" draft choices over the next three years — two first-round picks,

State Says Rule Violations Were Not Intentional Sins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH - N.C. State University officials say even though members of the Wolfpack basketball team violated several NCAA rules during the past four years, they weren't intentional transgressions.

That response is contained in a 1,600-page report answering eight allegations leveled by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The most serious accusation is that basketball players traded their complimentary game tickets and athletic shoes for cash and clothing.

The report, which was mailed to the NCAA earlier this month and made available to reporters Thursday, includes interviews with head basketball coach Jim Valvano, assistant coaches, athletic boosters and current and former Wolfpack players. It also contains extensive records detailing how complimentary tickets and shoes were distributed among players.

The report said some Wolfpack players had refused to be interviewed. All players' names were deleted in a copy released to reporters.

Officials stressed in the three-volume report, written by university counsel Becky French, that corrective steps had been taken to ensure that similar violations do not recur.

Larry Monteith, NCSU's acting chancellor, declined to comment on the report, saying he preferred to wait until university officials met with the NCAA committee on infractions in early November.

"I haven't completely read it," Monteith said, "and we're still developing our strategies and understandings for that meeting."

Council Leads Pant-Hers To Win; Conley Advances

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — North Pitt experienced its usual ups and downs in the service department Thursday night, but fortunately, sophomore Latasha Council hit a hot streak at the right time.

With the Pant-HERS clinging to a two-games-to-one advantage but trailing 9-6 in the fourth game of a best-of-five match, Council picked up nine consecutive service points to seal a second-round Class 2-A state playoff win over visiting North Carolina School of Science and Math.

The two teams split the first two games with North Pitt prevailing 15-10 in the opener and the Lady Unicorns 15-13 in the second. The Pant-HERS rallied to rule the third game 15-12 then iced it with a 15-9 win.

"I really don't feel like we served very well," first-year North Pitt coach Mary Powell said. "I don't think this was one of our better games but the girls were excited and that's what kept us going. "That last game we served as good as we had the entire match and that was the key for us."

North Pitt had to scramble back from a 10-6 deficit in the opening game. Council collected four service points to forge a 10-10 tie then Tracy Nichols, one of only two seniors for North Pitt, served out the match.

NCSM, behind Kathi De and Apos Patel, got into the flow of its offense and took command much of the second game and the early portion of the third.

But Council keyed the comeback in the third game with a string of six points. Nichols helped erase a 6-2 deficit with four straight points.

Neither team could push ahead by more than two points in the fourth game until a pair of spikes by Patel highlighted a four-point run that staked the Lady Unicorns to a 9-6 lead.

But upon regaining control of serve, Council went to work. The majority of the serves in the nine-point string were not returned but a pair of spikes by 5-9 sophomore Keisha Highsmith not only kept the string alive but fueled North Pitt's momentum.

Highsmith, although struggling with her serves, was a force prowling the net along with Council and sophomore Angie Ross.

Council's 20 service points led North Pitt. Nichols finished with 13 while sophomore Sheannette Sherrod had nine and freshman Fleur Morning had eight. Patel collected 13 service points to pace NCSM. De added 12 and J.D. Johnston had 10.

"North Carolina Science and Math was a good team," Powell said. "They were bigger than any of the teams that we've faced so far and they had a pretty balanced attack as far as hitting."

"I felt like we were on the defensive end of it the entire night."

The Pant-HERS, now 12-8 overall, advance to the third round Tuesday at 7 p.m. at home against perennial power East Duplin. East Duplin, which also carries the Panther nickname and are top seed from the East Central Conference, ousted

Pirates To Scrimmage At North Pitt

The East Carolina men's basketball team will hold its first intra-squad scrimmage of the season at North Pitt High School near Bethel on Nov. 8 at 7 p.m., announced Pirate head coach Mike Steele.

Admission will be $1 with all proceeds going to the athletic department at North Pitt.

The Pirates open basketball practice Sunday at 6 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. The ECU women also open practice Sunday, beginning at 8 p.m.

Rose Tops Hunt; Retains First Place

WILSON — Jason Bizzaro scored three first-half goals and led Rose High School to a 3-0 victory over Wilson Hunt in a key Big East Conference soccer match Thursday.

The victory enabled the Rampants, 6-1 in the Big East, to retain first place in the standings. The Rampants, who had suffered their first league loss just a day earlier to Wilson Fikes, are now 11-3-1 overall.

Each of Bizzaro's goals came on dead-ball situations. At 10:02, Bizzaro drove a direct kick into the goal, then added an indirect kick at the 18-minute mark, assisted by Aaron Tschetter. Bizzaro closed out the scoring at 21:30, converting a penalty kick off another assist by Tschetter.

It marked the second hat trick of the season by Bizzaro.

The Rampants outshot Hunt, 19-6. Goalie Russell Nelson preserved the shutout with a stop of a penalty kick at 45:47.

"Yesterday (against Fike) we were late to the ball," Rose coach Charlie Harvey said. "Today we were early because we were intense. We needed to play this way today, and we'll need to play emotionally the rest of the year."

Rose will return to action on Monday at 4:30 p.m., entertaining Hunt in the make-up of a rained-out game from earlier in the season.

Washington's Girls Get Revenge

Washington High School's girls, handed only its third loss in the last four years by D.H. Conley earlier this week, rebounded to top Conley in cross country action Thursday.

The Lady Pam Pack won the meet with 26 points while Conley finished second with 42. West Carteret took third with 81 and White Oak had 82.

In the boys' meet, Conley took first place with 34 points while Washington was a distant second with 74. Kinston was third with 78, followed by West Carteret with 79 and White Oak with 84.

Jeremy Hill of Washington won the boys' individual title with a time of 18 minutes, three seconds, while Dawn Wehrenberg, also of Washington, won the girls' title with a time of 21:16.

Conley's boys are now 21-3, while the girls are 15-5. Conley entertains New Bern on Tuesday.

Conley finishers included:

Boys: 3) Jason Wing 18:28; 5) Paul Andreu 18:51; 7) Jason Osborne 19:26; 8) Rodrick Walton 19:30; 11) Nathan Wright 19:48; 13) Ron Mills 20:02; 16) Adam Charlton 20:13; 21) John Dunn 20:49; 25) Alkiwan Thompson 21:38; 28) Steve Allen 21:48; 35) Michael Hanrahan 23:14; 36) Wally Heritage 23:30; 41) Matt Dunn 23:59; 43) Stacy Barr 29:28.

Girls: 5) Hope Harrington 23:06; 6) Amy Allen 23:57; 9) Tricia Smith 24:26; 10) Stacey Burhans 24:28; 12) Celeste Charlton 25:16; 14) Julie Smith 26:22; 16) Valerie Mills 26:47; 18) Wendy Dixon 27:04; 20) Pany Seyed 27:16; 21) Meghan Smith 27:35; 22) Geri Troiano 27:37; 25) Jennifer Stevens 28:17; 28) Carrilee Andreu 30:23.

Ayden, Aycock Claim Jr. High Wins

Ayden Middle School romped to a 32-0 victory over Bethel-Wellcome in junior high school football action Thursday.

Richard Stewart got the scoring going in the first period with an 8-yard run. Andreell Roundtree ran over the PAT for an 8-0 lead.

Angelo Hart then caught a 42-yard pass from Aledo Dunk in the second period for the second touchdown. Stewart ran over the PAT for a 16-0 lead at halftime.

Ayden added one touchdown each in the final two periods. Roundtree scored on a 22-yard run and Dunk added the PAT in the third, while Brian Crandall went in from two yards out and Keith Marrow added the final PAT.

Ayden, now 3-0, will be at home against Farmville on Thursday.

E.B. Aycock got touchdowns from four different players en route to a 38-6 junior high football win over visiting Jacksonville Thursday afternoon.

Aycock, now 2-0, got on the board in the first quarter on a 15-yard pass from Jamaine Reed to Dante Randolph and a two-point conversion run by Montez Barrett.

Barrett scored on a 3-yard run early in the second period and Reed ran in for a 16-0 lead.

Later in the quarter, Reed raced 10 yards and Barrett added the conversion for a 24-0 lead at the half.

Jeffrey Freeman accounted for Aycock's next two touchdowns with a 5-yard run and a 45-yard interception return. Jeremy Pierce tacked on a conversion run after Freeman's second TD.

Jason Thomas led Aycock with 137 yards rushing.

Aycock continues play next Thursday against J.T. Barber.

Junior Girls' Net Team Is Beaten

The Greenville Recreation and Parks junior girls' tennis team dropped a 9-5 decision to Ridgeway Thursday afternoon.

Emmye Taft, Amie Thompson, Pattie Wooten and Amanda Lail picked up singles wins for Greenville while Megan Schmidt-Kathryn Womack posted a doubles win.

Greenfield School of Wilson visits Greenville Monday.

Ridgeway 9, Greenville 5

SINGLES: Holy Evans (R) d. Morgan Bright 8-3; Emmye Taft (G) d. Anna Taylor 8-6; Blair Dollar (R) d. Megan Schmidt 8-4; Amie Thompson (G) d. Christa Farmer 9-8; Sammy Quereshi (R) d. Sofia Lannegren 9-8; Pattie Wooten (G) d. Kim Van Loton 8-5; Cindi Warren (R) d. Kathryn Wifort 8-3; Elizabeth Jenkins (R) d. Dempsey 9-7; Amanda Lail (G) d. Margaret Taylor 9-8.

DOUBLES: Evans-Taylor (R) d. Bright-Taft 8-4; Schmidt-Womack (G) d. Dollar-House 8-6; Farmer-Quereshi (R) d. Lannegren-Thompson 8-4; Warren-Van Loton d. Thompson-Dempsey 6-3.

Conley's JV Team Tops White Oak

D.H. Conley's junior varsity football team gained a 20-0 victory over White Oak Thursday night.

The victory boosts Conley to 7-1 overall and to 3-1 against Coastal Conference competition.

The game was scoreless until the third period when Daryl Tyson ran the ball in from eight yards away to give Conley the lead. He also added a two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead.

Conley picked up two more scores in the final quarter. Ronnie Barnhill scored from 20 yards out and Terry Turnage from 16.

Jesse Corey led Conley's rushing with 80 yards on 11 carries while Barnhill had 66 yards on just six trips.

The defense was led by Derrick Cox, Tyson (three sacks), Mickey Elliott, Steven Daughtry, Al Roland and Anthony Edwards.

The Vikings travel to West Carteret next Thursday.

Jaguars Cling To First In Top 12

Undeclared Farmville Central clings to the top spot in the Daily Reflector Top 12 prep football poll for the second week in a row after blitzing Ayden-Grifton 44-0 last week.

The Jaguars, ranked third in the state in the latest Associated Press Class 2-A poll, are 6-0 overall and stand 1-0 in the Eastern Plains Conference. They received both first-place votes.

Three more unbeaten — West Craven (6-0), Wilson Hunt (6-0) and Northampton East (5-0) — follow Farmville, respectively. Fifth this week is Bertie, followed by White Oak, Greene Central, D.H. Conley, North Edgecombe, Elizabeth City Northeastern, Washington, Rose and Columbia.

The poll ranks teams from the Big East, Colonial, Coastal, Northeastern, Eastern Plains and Tobacco Belt conferences regardless of classification.

A shake-up in next week's poll is likely with six of the Top 12 pitted against one another tonight. Wilson Hunt is home against Northeastern, Bertie hosts Washington and White Oak entertains Conley.

The Top 12:

- Farmville Central: Anthony

Foreman rushed for 168 yards and the Jaguars held Ayden-Grifton 226 yards in a 44-0 romp. They host East Carteret tonight.

- West Craven: Lee Becton's 6-yard run with 3:16 left lifted the Eagles over Havelock 12-7. They host winless Pender County tonight.
- Wilson Hunt: The Warriors' big-play offense led by Terris Hale, who threw one touchdown pass and caught another, toppled Rose 28-21. They host Elizabeth City Northeastern tonight.
- Northampton East: David Perry erupted for 305 yards and scored five touchdowns in the Rams' 50-22 romp over Northside. They host Plymouth tonight.
- Bertie: Derrick Watson scored a pair of TDs as the Falcons defeated Hertford County 22-8. They host Washington tonight.
- White Oak: Tracy Boone rushed for 133 yards and scored two touchdowns as the Vikings eased past West Carteret 21-7. They host D.H. Conley tonight.
- Greene Central: Timmy Wilkes and John Dixon combined to rush for 177 yards and four touchdowns as the Rams blitzed East Carteret 36-3 for their fifth straight win. They host Pamlico County tonight.

- D.H. Conley: The Vikings blocked two punts and Mike Clark ran for 143 yards in a 59-7 pasting of Pender County. They visit White Oak tonight.
- North Edgecombe: Orlando Whitaker threw five touchdown passes, giving him 53 for his career, as the Warriors scalped previously unbeaten Columbia 48-8. They visit Roanoke tonight.

- Northeastern: The Eagles may have been looking ahead but had enough to slip by winless Kinston 14-6. They visit Wilson Hunt tonight.
- Washington: The Pam Pack had last week open. They visit Bertie tonight.
- Rose: The Rampants saw a 17-game Big East winning streak end and tasted defeat for the first time in regular season at Percy Daniels Field. They have an open date tonight.
- Columbia: The Wildcats had a blemish put on their previously unbeaten record by North Edgecombe. They visit Creswell tonight.

three second-round choices and one third-round pick.

"We have the right to decide at any time what those conditions are," Jones said. "Everything must be settled over the next three years. It's our call. This is a draft-oriented trade."

Said Lynn: "We're not going to give a detailed breakdown of the conditions. It'll take you until 1993 to figure it out."

When you're the 1 in a 12-for-1 trade, when the man who runs your new organization is saying you're the key to Super Bowl hopes, that sounds like big-time pressure.

"I don't feel any pressure. I don't know whether I'm the answer or not," said Walker, who expected to take part in his first Vikings practice today and to play in his first game on Sunday against the Green Bay Packers. "If we win, that's great. But it takes a team effort. Herschel Walker is just another athlete that has come here to try to help this team win."

Coach Jerry Burns warned that people — including Lynn, his boss — shouldn't put too much pressure on Walker.

"He's a great player," Burns said, "but we have a lot of good players. He wants to fit in and help us win the Super Bowl. He's not responsible for getting us to the Super Bowl, he's just another cog to help us in that direction."

Walker, 27, in his fourth NFL season after three years in the U.S. Football League, was asked if he was worth 12 players.

"It's nice to have a chance to try to be worth it," he said. "I'm going to try my best to make it up to them."

Last year, Walker, who reportedly received more than $1 million in "exit" money from the Cowboys, became only the 10th player in NFL history to gain more than 2,000 yards from scrimmage.

Walker's statistics have fallen off sharply this year, however. He has rushed 81 times for 246 yards — a 3-yard average that is almost 1 1/2 yards less than his career average entering the season.

The Cowboys are 0-5 under first-year coach Jimmy Johnson, who led some of the nation's best passing offenses at the University of Miami. Johnson uses a pass-oriented attack whereas his predecessor, Tom Landry, favored the ground game.

Nelson at first said he might not report to Dallas. But after talking to Nelson, Johnson said: "Darrin was upset, but he's going to be here."

Nelson said the Cowboys got the best of the deal. "We (Minnesota) gave up too much. We gave up an awful lot on defense."

But many players who remain with the Vikings feel the trade helped Minnesota.

"I don't think any team is going to be able to concentrate on our passing game anymore," said cornerback Carl Lee, who at one point was rumored to be going to Dallas. "Obviously, you have to respect Herschel Walker."

riweather in April, giving this year's first-round draft choice to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Lynn said he has been obsessed with building a Super Bowl team since the Vikings went 3-13 under Les Steckel in 1984.

"At that time, when I talked to the team, I told them we were going to do everything we could," he said.

Everything included getting Walker, who has been one of the most ballyhooed athletes of the 1980s.

Minnesota and Dallas discussed a trade for Walker as early as last June — when the Vikings inquired about the availability of quarterback Steve Walsh — but the talks didn't heat up until two weeks ago, Lynn said. A deal was completed last week, but Walker said he wanted to think about it before coming to Minnesota.

"It was a shock more than anything," Walker said. "Anyone who knows me knows I always think about things before I make a big decision."

It didn't hurt that the Cowboys forked over the cash money.

"We paid Herschel under the do-right rule," Jones said. "It was very important he feel very good about the Cowboys when he left."

Walker is in the fourth year of a five-year, $5 million contract. Both Lynn and Walker say a contract renegotiation or extension hasn't been discussed.

The last two years, Walker has earned his salary as well as any other back in the league. No runner bettered Walker's 3,625 rushing-receiving yards over that span. His 1,514 rushing yards led the NFC in 1988, when he also caught 50 passes for 505 yards.

With 3,388 career yards, Walker is sixth on Dallas' career rushing list.

Of the players Dallas received, none could be termed true starters for the Vikings this season. But Solomon, Howard, Holt and Nelson all figure to contend for starting jobs with the Cowboys.

Rose 11-0 In League; Tigers Avenge Loss

Rose continued to roll through the Big East Conference, Williamston avenged its only Northeastern Conference loss and D.H. Conley notched a non-conference win in girls' high school tennis action Thursday afternoon.

Rose Eases Past Hunt

WILSON — Rose remained unbeaten in Big East Conference play with an 8-1 win at Wilson Hunt.

Paige Powell, Laurie Young, Tricia Tripp, Camilla Brown and Jenny Stoneham picked up singles wins for the Rampettes, now 12-1 overall.

In doubles, Powell-Tripp, Taylor Evans-Young and Brown-Stoneham were victorious.

Rose travels to Elizabeth City Northeastern next Thursday.

Rose 8, Wilson Hunt 1

Singles: Paige Powell (R) d. Debbie Williamson 6-1, 6-0; Emily Hodges (H) d. Taylor Evans 6-0, 2-6, 6-2; Laurie Young (R) d. Heather Howell 7-5, 6-3; Tricia Tripp (R) d. Lee Ann Flowers 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-5); Camilla Brown (R) d. Alicia Chapman 6-0, 3-6, 6-3; Jenny Stoneham (R) d. Brandy Hodge 6-2, 6-3 Doubles: Powell-Tripp (R) d. Williamson-Hodges 8-5; Evans-Young (R) d. Howell-Flowers 8-5; Brown-Stoneham (R) d. Chapman-Becky Barnes 9-7.

Conley Defeats Rosewood, 8-1

D.H. Conley claimed wins in five of six singles and swept the doubles to roll up an 8-1 victory over Rosewood.

Conley's only loss came in the number one singles match where Nichole Bloodworth was defeated in straight sets by Susan McMahan.

Heather Merrill, Gail Lilley, Jenni Bradburn, Vanessa Small and Julie Bradburn each had singles wins for Conley.

The win boosts Conley's record to 6-5 on the year. The Valkyries return to action on Monday against Roanoke.

Conley 8, Rosewood 1

Singles: Susan McMahan (R) d. Nichole Bloodworth 6-3, 6-0; Heather Merrill (C) d. Rebecca Frazier, 6-3, 6-3; Gail Lilley (C) d. Stacy Surratt, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1; Jenni Bradburn (C) d. Kimberly Wilkins, 7-6 (7-2), 6-1; Vanessa Small (C) d. Tonya McGee, 6-1, 6-0; Julie Bradburn (C) d. Jennifer Smith, 6-1, 6-3.

Doubles: Bloodworth-Je. Bradburn (C) d. McMahan-Surratt, 8-3; Merrill-Lilley (C) d. Frazier-McGee, 8-3; Small-Ju. Bradburn (C) d. Wilkins-Smith, 8-2.

Lady Tigers Share Title

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston avenged its only Northeastern Conference loss Thursday with a convincing 7-2 tennis victory over Edenton Holmes.

Edenton, which won the earlier meeting of the two, managed only the number one singles and the number two doubles matches this time around.

The victory enabled Williamston to earn a share of the regular-season championship with the Lady Aces, both finishing at 5-1 in conference play.

The match was the final of the regular season for the Lady Tigers, who close 12-3 overall. They will enter NEAC tournament play on Wednesday and Thursday at Edenton.

Williamston 7, Edenton 2

Singles: Gabriella Webster (E) d. Dawn Bundy 5-7, 6-3, 6-2; Hope Robinson (W) d. Holly Goins, 6-3, 6-2; Carrie Bussell (W) d. Gina Swanner, 6-3, 6-0; Deedee Mills (W) d. Sarah Boyce, 6-1, 6-1; Beverly Bullock (W) d. Pam Miller, 6-1, 6-4; Nancy Bullock (W) d. Shelley Potts, 6-1, 6-2.

Doubles: Bussell-Robinson (W) d. Swanner-Goins, 8-6; Webster-Wendy Copeland (E) d. Mills-Kris Maner, 8-6; Rytessa Rodgers-Jamie Hardison (W) d. Miller-Potts, 8-4.

It was the league's biggest trade since the 1987 three-team deal that sent Eric Dickerson to the Indianapolis Colts, Cornelius Bennett to the Buffalo Bills and Greg Bell, Owen Gill, three first-round draft choices and two second-rounders to the Los Angeles Rams.

Jones used that trade, comparing Dickerson to Walker, to project a sunny future for his team. "Los Angeles did it. Now they're 5-0."

The 6-foot-1, 226-pound Walker is the second "impact" player Lynn has acquired since last season. He traded for linebacker Mike Mer-

Grizzard Ups Lead To Four

Mike Grizzard continues to hold the lead among our group, and is slowly gaining ground on the rest of us. He now holds a four-game lead over his closest competitor.

And Vickie Spivey is making her promised move, having vaulted from a tie for last to a tie for third place this week.

Joe Jenkins, who brought up the bottom of the pack for some years, dropped by the sports department the other day and asked how we were managing without him to kick around.

And I must admit that it's been tough. He wanted to know who I was teasing now, and I told him that was quite a problem.

"It's not easy to tease yourself," I replied. But maybe better things lie in store.

Our current standings find Grizzard in first with a 55-14 record, followed by Tom Baines at 51-18. Spivey and Greg Laudick are tied for third with 50-19 marks, while Tom Morris is next at 49-20. And, sorrowfully, I'm last at 48-21.

With two teams, Rose and Chocowinity taking the week off, and the panel looking at the D.H. Conley-White Oak game, there are some fewer games for me to look at alone.

First off, Ayden-Grifton visits North Pitt. The Panthers seem to have put things together over the last few weeks, having won three in a row. Ayden-Grifton, on the other hand, is still trying to find its feet after an opening-night win and a string of losses since then. When these two meet, however, records have a tendency to mean little.

Still, I'll go with the Panthers to win this one for a change, taking a 21-7 victory.

Woody Peele

Farmville Central, rolling along with a third-place ranking in the state, plays host to Eastern Plains Conference newcomer East Carteret tonight. The Jaguars are hitting their stride now while the Mariners haven't quite lived up to their preseason reputation. Farmville must guard against a letdown, however, and should pull out a 35-13 win.

Elsewhere, I look for Jamesville to top Matamoras, North Edgecombe to stop Levy Jones and Roanoke; Greene Central to run past Pamlico; Northside to beat Williamston; and Bertie to slip past Washington.

Last week's record: 7-0; season: 39-10.

In the other high school games, Conley takes to the road to visit White Oak. The Darryl and Darryl of the Coastal Conference (both of them are Vikings) sport unbeaten league records. Conley has lost only to two strong 2-A powers (Farmville and Clayton), while White Oak's lone loss came against 4-A Jacksonville in a close one.

With the schedule like it is, Conley could just about ensure itself of a playoff berth with a win. White Oak, however, must still face two other top contenders, Havelock and West Craven.

The panel is picking the Vikings — well, sure! OK, it's the White Oak variety, by a 5-1 count. My own choice is White Oak, 15-7.

Our other consensus picks: Maryland over Wake Forest; Washington over Oregon; Arizona State over Oregon State; Louisville over Southern Mississippi; Georgia over Mississippi; Clemson over Georgia Tech; Virginia over North Carolina; UCLA and Arizona, a toss-up; Syracuse over Penn State; Michigan over Michigan State and Texas Christian over Rice.

Rickey Henderson Can Do No Wrong For The A's...

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson can do no wrong these days. So with a chance to hit against some Oakland pitchers, he got right to it.

Henderson singled on the first pitch of a simulated game Thursday as the Athletics continued to prepare for the World Series.

"You see that? I haven't lost it," Henderson smiled after his hit off Bob Welch.

In his next at-bat, against reliever Dennis Eckersley, Henderson hit a line drive into the right-field corner.

"I don't know if you'd say I'm in a groove," said Henderson, the MVP of the American League playoffs. "I just put four or five good days together."

"I'm concentrating real hard, even more than usual," he said. "And I'm seeing the ball real good."

Henderson reached base in 14 of 23 plate appearances in the playoffs. He batted .400, hit two home runs, was successful on all eight steal tries and was the only player to start every game and not strike out.

Henderson will play his first World Series game Saturday at 8:25 p.m. EDT. Dave Stewart will start for Oakland against San Francisco's Scott Garrelts.

"I've waited a long time for this," Henderson said. "It's the World Series. I want to get started."

Both the Athletics and Giants have spent this week trying to stay sharp. Each ended their playoff series in five games, resulting in a Super Bowl-type payoff.

The Athletics played a five-inning game Thursday following an afternoon practice. Manager Tony La Russa made sure the game started at twilight, the same conditions as for the World Series opener. Across the field at the Oakland Coliseum, the Giants' equipment started arriving.

Welch, who will start Game 3 Tuesday night, joined Eckersley, Rick Honeycutt, Matt Young and Todd Burns in pitching. "All of the Oakland batters got a chance to hit and Jose Canseco came the closest to hitting a ball out of the park."

The real close call came when Henderson fouled a ball back that almost hit La Russa in the head. La Russa was standing near the backstop.

During Wednesday's workout, La Russa was standing off to the side when the automatic sprinkler system turned on and got him wet. "Got to be careful out here," he said.

The Athletics, meanwhile, want to be careful to keep Henderson. He is eligible for free agency at the end of the World Series and will surely attract attention.

The New York Yankees, the team that traded him back home to Oakland on June 20, are among those certain to be interested.

"Atmosphere is important and I like it here," said Henderson, who built a home in San Francisco overlooking the city. "But if George

Sports Figures Need No 13's For Superstitions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Superstitious? Who's superstitious?

Kansas City Chiefs kicker Nick Lowery hugs the goal posts during pregame warmups because he wants the posts to know he loves them, and should stand still when he kicks the ball their way.

Well, maybe superstition does have a little something to do with it.

On a day like today, when people dodge black cats, avoid upright ladders and, if they have to deal with mirrors, do so gingerly, some NFL players scoff at such one-day fears.

Superstitions also can be wearing. Quarterback Doug Flutie of the Patriots wears a T-shirt acquired in Japan under his jersey for home games. O.J. Anderson, the New York Giants running back, wears the same Cardinals T-shirt under his jersey for all games. He once played for St. Louis.

Dallas Cowboys center Tom Raftery will not turn in his uniform for a new one until it is nearly in shreds.

New York Jets guard Dan Alexander held up his pants with the same belt throughout the first 13 years (oh-oh) of his career. The belt, ragged and worn, finally broke this year. But Alexander still has it ... in two pieces.

Rookie defensive back Deion Sanders of the Atlanta Falcons wears rubber bands around his wrists during games. The gold chain around his neck has nothing to do with superstition, he said.

New Orleans Saints equipment manager Dan Simmons not only has to put uniform shirts on cornerback Dave Waymer and tackle Stan Brock but he has to tuck in the shirts before the two will go onto the field.

Giants coach Bill Parcells has to be the team leader, and possibly the league leader, in superstitions. He goes to the same diner every day and sits in the same seat for a cup of coffee on his way to Giants Stadium. And when he gets to his office, Parcells is greeted by 200 statues and pictures of elephants — all with their trunks up and facing the door.

If Parcells finds a coin lying on the ground heads up, he will keep it throughout the season. If the coin is heads down, it will wind up over a door somewhere, but not near Parcells' office or the Giants' locker room.

This has to be a nervous day for John Cannon, defensive end for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. The number 13 upsets him and he avoids it, so much so that if there is a 13 on his hotel room door, he won't stay in it.

That raises an interesting question. Will Cannon pass up trying to sack Gary Hogeboom when the Bucs play the Phoenix Cardinals next month? Hogeboom wears number 13.

SAN FRANCISCO — Terry Kennedy fears that the Rickey Henderson Show may go into reruns if Henderson reaches base frequently in the World Series.

It's not the kind of entertainment that the San Francisco Giants' catcher prefers. Kennedy gets a chance to be the show-stopper starting Saturday night when the World Series opens in Oakland, although he says much of the responsibility lies with the Giants' pitchers.

"The odds are pretty much against you from the start" in trying to throw out a runner as good as the Athletics' leadoff hitter, Kennedy said. "The key, and this is obvious, really is to keep him off the bases."

Kennedy and backup Kirt Manwaring threw out only 37 percent of would-be basestealers this season, slightly below average. Henderson was only thrown out 14 times in 91 attempts, or 15 percent of the time.

"For a guy that steals as successfully as Rickey Henderson or Vince Coleman or Tim Lincecum, everything's got to be perfect for you to get him," Kennedy said Thursday as the Giants worked out at Candlestick Park. "You've got to keep him close, the pitcher has to have a good release and you've got to have a good throw. And you might make a good throw and he'll still be called safe."

It hasn't escaped the Giants' attention that Oakland's left fielder had just six hits in 22 plate appearances in the American League playoffs. He won the Most Valuable Player award largely because Toronto pitchers walked him seven times, giving him the chance to steal eight bases and score eight runs.

"Rickey's a great player, but he makes outs, too," said Brett Butler, San Francisco's own overshadowed leadoff hitter. "You've got to make him swing at pitches — he only hit about .250 this year."

Actually, Henderson was hitting .247 when Oakland acquired him from the New York Yankees on June 20. He wound up hitting .274 with an AL-leading 126 walks, 113 runs scored and 77 stolen bases. He also set new standards for intimidation and distraction in the series with the Blue Jays.

"If you let that stuff that Rickey does get to you, you're lost," Kennedy said. "He got in everybody's head in Toronto, and they were more concerned about all the things he was doing than with getting him out."

Scott Garrelts, the Giants' opening-game starter, said he hadn't given much thought to Henderson. Cutting back on walks was Garrelts' biggest priority this season, and he achieved that: 46 in 193 1-3 innings compared to 46 in 98 innings a year ago.

Rick Reuschel, the Game 2 starter, issued only one walk every four innings in 1989. Game 3 starter Don Robinson was better still, allowing only one base on balls every 5 1/3 innings.

"I'm going to throw him strikes," Robinson said. "My track record is one of not walking a lot of guys. Hopefully I won't walk him, I'll make him put the ball in play."

Mike LaCoss, the likely Game 4 starter if Garrelts isn't called back on three days' rest, led the staff with 65 walks in 150 1-3 innings. The bullpen had some problems walking in the go-ahead or winning run early in the season, but settled down in the second half.

"I don't ever concern myself with coming in and thinking I've got to throw strikes, because that's part of my game," said left-handed reliever Craig Lefferts. "I'm just going to face him (Henderson) like anybody else in their lineup."

Under Manager Roger Craig, a former pitcher, San Francisco issued the second-lowest total of walks in the league this season.

Missouri's Top 10 Tour Continues Against Nebraska

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At a naval banquet in Philadelphia in 1899, Congressman Willard Duncan Vandiver, a member of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, said in a speech:

"I come from a state that raises corn and cotton and cockleburrs and Democrats, and frothy eloquence neither convinces nor satisfies me. I am from Missouri. You have got to show me."

All right, already. Missouri has seen enough. Enough of The Associated Press Top Ten, that is.

Having lost to No. 2 Miami 38-7 last month and to No. 3 Colorado 49-3 last week, the Missouri Tigers are awaiting Saturday's visit from No. 4 Nebraska (5-0). Missouri (1-4) is a 27-point underdog.

"To get beat like we have the last few weeks is not a lot of fun," first-year coach Bob Stull said. "It chips away at your confidence. That's the toughest thing about playing a series of good teams in a row. It's hard to develop confidence in what you're doing."

"We're still struggling with a lot of different things, new players and new systems, and doing it against awful good teams."

Saturday's schedule is highlighted by two games between ranked teams — No. 1 Notre Dame at Air Force, which is tied for 17th with Washington State, and No. 5 Michigan at No. 21 Michigan State.

Rounding out the Top Ten, No. 2 Miami entertains San Jose State, No. 3 Colorado State visits Iowa State, No. 6 Tennessee is idle, No. 7 Arkansas is at Texas Tech, No. 8

Houston visits Texas A&M, No. 9 Pitt plays host to Navy and No. 10 Southern Cal plays at California.

Elsewhere, Southwestern Louisiana is at No. 11 Alabama, LSU is at No. 12 Auburn, Georgia Tech is at No. 14 Clemson, No. 15 Oklahoma plays Texas in Dallas, No. 16 Illinois is at Purdue, Stanford is at No. 17 Washington State, No. 19 Florida State is at Virginia Tech, No. 22 UCLA is at Arizona, No. 23 Penn State is at Syracuse, No. 25 (tie) Brigham Young is at Colorado State and Vanderbilt is at No. 25 (tie) Florida, North Carolina State, No. 13, West Virginia, No. 20, and South Carolina, No. 24, are off.

Although Nebraska has won 10 in a row from Missouri and leads the series 47-32-3, six of the last 10 games have been decided by 10 points or less and the series at Miz-zou's Faurot Field stands 15-15-1.

"Missouri always has good athletes," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. "They have big, strong guys. They can play very well on occasion, and that's been their history against us."

Nebraska had 17 yards in total offense at halftime a year ago before rallying to win 26-18.

"They have played pretty hard on defense," Osborne said. "Indiana worked very hard to win 24-7. I believe that score was maybe 7-7 at the half. And Miami didn't really move the ball up and down the field on them. They eventually got some points, but they had six interceptions playoffs, was 10th with three votes. Puckett had the top average on the team at .339, six points ahead of Clark. Sierra, at .306, was the only other .300 hitter. Mitchell was the major league leader in home runs and RBIs.

Saberhagen, the favorite for the AL Cy Young Award, was not elected to the AP team in 1985, his Cy Young season. He was beaten then by Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets.

"I'll be very pleased with a win of any type. I'm sure that many other people won't be pleased with that necessarily, but we just know enough about their athletes and the history of the thing that we better be ready to play, play hard and play well."

Notre Dame-Air Force matches two of the 11 unbeaten-untied Division I-A teams. The last time the Irish visited Colorado Springs, a young quarterback named Tony Rice made his first collegiate start, completing only one pass but rushing for 70 yards and two touchdowns in Notre Dame's 35-14 victory.

fourth nationally at 133.6.

"This Air Force team runs the wishbone as well as any I've seen," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "Our biggest adjustment will be going from seeing a Stanford team that threw the ball 68 times to an Air Force team that's going to run it most of the time."

"They execute it so well and with such discipline that it's very difficult to prepare in one week when you don't see this type of offense regularly. You look at their games and they really haven't been challenged, that's how dominant their offense has been. No one has been able to slow them down."

What Holtz neglected to say is that Notre Dame runs enough wishbone of its own that the Irish shouldn't be overly confused.

Suitt, Clark, Powell Notch 1sts In Legislators Tourney

Marion Suitt took first-place honors in the Corporate Sponsors and Special Guests division in the Legislators Tournament Thursday at Greenville Country Club.

Craig Sousa finished second, Ace Parker was third and Sam Whitehurst finished fourth.

Bill Clark placed first in the Sponsors Division. Craig Quick took second-place honors, James Langston was third and Ron Hardison finished fourth.

Linda Powell claimed first place in the Legislators and Legislative Staff Division. Richard Conder was second, Kenneth Royall third and Jones Spencer fourth.

The farthest advance by a North Pitt team was a spot opposite Louisburg in the Eastern finals in 1986.

Conley Downs Harnett Central

ANGIER — After dropping the first game, D.H. Conley rallied to win the next three and capture their North Carolina High School Athletic Association 3-A second-round volleyball playoff game over host Harnett Central.

Harnett won the opener, 15-11, but Conley came back to dash any hopes the Lady Trojans had of winning the best-of-five series.

"We struggled early on defense against their two power hitters," Conley coach Martha McCaskill said. "We just couldn't seem to be in the right spot."

But Conley, the Coastla Conference champion, made adjustments after the first game and came back to win the next three, 15-5, 15-13, 15-8.

"We played better defense," McCaskill said. "In the third game, we had a 13-8 lead, but blew it before Darvetta Patrick finally scored the final point on her serve. Then, we had some momentum going into the final game."

Patrick finished with nine effective hits and two putdown dinks. Virginia Hall had 11 hits and three kills, while Tracy Sumrell had nine hits and five kills.

"Tracy Stencil led the way on defense and Lisa Evans came off the bench for a strong performance," McCaskill said.

Conley will remain on the road in round three, traveling to Wake Forest-Rolesville on Tuesday.

Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame Denied Federal Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The city of Cleveland is finding out you can't always get what you want from the government — including the $6.9 million it wants to help build the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development said the museum must rock without the federal bankroll, but Rep. Mary Rose Oaker, D-Ohio, still held out hope that HUD Secretary Jack Kemp would find the cash.

"There is no possibility of a UDAG grant for the rock 'n' roll museum" under the Urban Development Action Grant program, Kemp told The Associated Press on Thursday.

"My children love rock 'n' roll. I love rock 'n' roll. But I have no discretion," Kemp said. "The rock 'n' roll museum is a worthwhile project for Cleveland and rock 'n' roll but it couldn't meet the criteria for a UDAG grant."

Sheltering the instruments of Chuck Berry and other guitar greats may not seem deserving of Kemp's attention, what with the multibillion-dollar scandal left over from the Reagan era and the need to revamp housing programs for the Bush administration.

But Kemp raised the subject of Cleveland's UDAG request during an appearance at the House Banking Committee on Thursday.

When Oaker pressed him about HUD rules for one program, Kemp defended his staff's decision in the unrelated Cleveland case.

"I have to call them as I see them," he told a visibly angered Oaker. "We don't think a UDAG grant for a rock 'n' roll museum was necessary."

Later in the day Kemp called Oaker to clear the air.

"He apologized for misunderstanding what I was getting at," said Oaker, who heads a subcommittee with jurisdiction over some HUD programs. "He thought I was mad at him because they didn't give the initial grant to the rock 'n' roll Hall of Fame."

Kemp said he made no promises, however, and held out no hope for a grant for the music museum.

"There is nothing that I can do about the rock 'n' roll museum aside from urging the private sector and the rock 'n' roll musicians and the music industry to put up some more money," he said.

HUD's denial two weeks ago sent Cleveland officials scrambling to try to line up enough financial commitments to keep the city's prize from dissolving into a rock 'n' roll fantasy.

Cleveland is where late-night disc jockey Alan Freed introduced a generation of teenagers to the term rock 'n' roll.

But the city is under the thumb of the New York-based Rock and Roll Foundation, which set a Nov. 15 deadline for securing $40 million in construction money for the proposed 18-story, 85,000-square-foot glass pyramid.

Hall of Fame officials estimate the museum will bring in up to 700,000 visitors and $85 million in revenue each year.

Oaker and others in Cleveland consider the $48 million project, and the 600 jobs it's expected to create, as the city's best hope for transforming a decaying riverfront area into a glistening tourist draw.

Cleveland earlier this year approved the sale of $18 million worth of tax-exempt bonds towards the project. The state promised to kick in about $4.4 million, Cuyahoga County committed $5 million, and corporations and other donors pledged $7.4 million, said Cleveland Department of Economic Development officer Chris Johnson.

The city's major banks agreed to back up the pledges with a $7 million loan intended to make up the difference if the major pledges didn't come through, he said.

Nostalgia Videos Catching On As Viewers Look Back

By Richard de Atley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Nostalgia videos — taped television shows and even commercials from the 1950s and '60s — have found an ever-growing market since Paramount Home Video introduced "Star Trek" on tape in 1985.

With unit sales for various "Star Trek" episodes on tape approaching $1 million, others in the video business have beamed aboard.

Now almost every kind of old program is on tape, from familiar titles such as "The Honeymooners," "The Lone Ranger" and "I Love Lucy" to cult shows like actor Patrick McGoochan's abstract "The Prisoner."

Outfits like Paramount and CBS-Fox Home Video have access to a wide library of shows.

Paramount is considering the original "Mission Impossible," "The Untouchables," and "Mannix," as well as more recent items like "Beverly Hills Cop" and "Miami Vice."

CBS is looking at "Batman," "Gunsmoke," "Hawaii Five-O" and "Rawhide."

Arny Schorr, the vice president and general manager of Rhino Records, says the much-targeted baby boomers seem to be most willing to part with their money for nostalgia videos.

"They're the people who grew up with the stuff, and it brings back comfortable memories," Schorr said. "Also, if they have very young children, they know its OK to put 'The Lone Ranger' on. They know nobody is going to get killed and the good guys are going to win."

Rhino's video department is an arm of retrospective specialists Rhino Records in Los Angeles. It has such titles as "The Lone Ranger" and "Sgt. Preston of the Yukon" along with "Roger Ramjet," the late 1960s cartoon series filled with adult asides, "Death Valley Days," with stars including Ronald Reagan and Clint Eastwood, and "Peter Gunn," the popular detective series with its driving Henry Mancini theme song.

MPI Home Video has tracked the cult favorites, including a recently discovered batch of "The Honeymooners" episodes and "The Prisoner," starring McGoochan as a secret agent who resigned only to be a captive in a seaside village.

Both shows, said MPI Vice President Jaffer Ali, are good examples of what clicks in the nostalgia video market.

"Jackie Gleason has been popular for 35 years in 'The Honeymooners,' and its safe to say that 35 years from now, Ralph Kramden will still be funny," he said. "'The Prisoner' was not very successful in syndication, but it was a huge hit for us. There was a real following."

"It's almost a new kind of syndication, a video syndication," said Ali.

At the end of October, MPI plans to release five-episode tapes of the gothic soap opera "Dark Shadows."

Because vampire Barnabas Collins, the show's most popular character, did not appear until eight months into the series, the first "Dark Shadows" tape will include a special half-hour sequence outlining plot developments that took place before the Collins character was introduced.

"There is another ingredient, and that is cult status. There are 'Dark Shadows' and 'Prisoner' and 'Honeymooners' fan clubs," said Ali. "We recognize that as a hard-core base that we can build on."

Most of the nostalgia videos are priced from $10 to $20 for sale directly to consumers rather than rental stores, and even such giants as CBS-Fox Home Video have found that television advertising for mail orders — or using catalogues — increases sales for nostalgia videos.

Taking even a quirkier step into nostalgia is Video Resources New York Inc., whose founder Ira Gallen has turned his nostalgia film collecting and research efforts into six volumes of "Kid's Commercials Of The '50s and '60s" and 18 other volumes on commercials.

"I've been collecting films since I was 16," Gallen said. "There is not a school or museum in the country that has the full version of the history of TV commercials." Gallen said he makes most of his finds by contacting private collectors, along with the original producers, directors and writers.

Among his more recent acquisitions: RCA commercials with the late Vaughn Monroe; Choo-Choo Charlie chugging along with Good and Plenty candies; and Hertz putting folks in the driver's seat.

Head Over Heels

NEW YORK (AP) — Film director Louis Malle is a klutz who throws himself into life with such zeal that he often lands on his head, says Malle's wife, actress Candice Bergen.

"He's always bleeding," Bergen said in the Oct. 30 issue of US magazine. "Once, in Paris, I met him at the airport during the time of all the terrorist attacks. Suddenly, I saw everybody in the airport was backing up, aghast, as Louis parted the crowd with his head in bloody bandages."

"Everybody thought he'd been a victim of terrorism, but he'd just been running to get a luggage cart and hit his head on a pole," said Bergen.

Jennings Likes Role As Anchor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — He prefers working as a reporter, Peter Jennings says, but being anchorman of "ABC World News Tonight" is more compatible with fatherhood than a foreign correspondent's life.

"I have a lot of colleagues who have screwed-up children because they were on the road all the time when their kids were growing up," Jennings said in an interview in the Oct. 15 issue of Parade magazine. "So at the moment I'm pleased I'm not running around the world."

His job at the news show "suits me for when my children are young, so there's a measure of stability in my life."

His daughter, Elizabeth, is 9, and son, Christopher, is 7.

Jennings, 51, began anchoring at ABC in 1964 at age 26, just six months after being hired by the network. In 1967 he began reporting, including six years as a foreign correspondent based in Beirut.

Script Gives 'Mancuso FBI' Weak Start As Latest Detective Series

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — All right, class, there'll be a pop quiz soon on tonight's new NBC series, which is set in Washington, D.C. You may be asked who says:

—"Senator, that's a smear!"
—"Mr. Ambassador, Alexandria police are reporting that the nude body of your secretary was found floating in your swimming pool. ... Care to comment on that?"

—"I was a bachelor until I was 39. I had a lot of women, a lot of women. That was then, this is now. Now — I'm married."

—"Remember Chappaquiddick? I want the truth, not a paint job."

—"I've been through your file, Mancuso. You are a dinosaur. You are a hangover in a $10 suit."

If a key word in all this leads you to believe all this is in tonight's premiere of "Mancuso FBI," you need not take the test. Go read Shakespeare.

The rest of you, watch this show. It will illustrate how even a fine actor named Robert Loggia can be sandbagged by a script that gives bad a bad name.

Loggia plays FBI agent Nick Mancuso, a raspy-voiced, world-weary, 30-year FBI veteran. He is cynical but unwaveringly believes in the U.S. Constitution, despite all the powerful, immoral, unethical, scheming, rotten people in Washington, particularly those who jog.

Mancuso-Loggia was wonderful last year in NBC's kinky, sentimental and pretty good "Favorite Son" miniseries. That's the one where the president, apparently of NBC, persuaded him not to retire but do his own series.

An unwise move, if tonight's show is typical. Written by two of the series's producers, Ken Solarz and "Mancuso" creator and executive producer Steve Sohmer, it is of value only to classic-dialogue collectors.

Told in brisk, witless fashion, it concerns a scandal brewing amid Senate confirmation hearings on a nominee for secretary of defense. The nominee — stand back, friends and neighbors — is a liberal.

He is also a former U.S. ambassador to Belgium, a war hero and a heartless seducer of young women before he married at age 39. He claims to have given up seducing young women. But there are those, like everyone, who think that were he a Marine, his motto would be Semper Infidelis.

As mentioned in the dialogue, the deceased of tonight's plot is one of his secretaries. She lived in the guest house of the mansion the nominee and his wife shared. "She was a good secretary," he tells Mancuso.

"Yeah," Mancuso sneers. "What else was she good at?"

Why is Mancuso on the case? The FBI has been told to "quietly" re-open its background investigation on the nominee for secretary of defense.

In Washington, quietly means reliable sources climb to the top of the Capitol Dome and shout, "Hey, the FBI has reopened its background investigation into the life of the nominee for secretary of defense!"

Despite this, Washington's reporters learn something's up here. Sex, murder and national-security-threat rumors blossom. So do such dramatic Old Reliabilities as Mancuso's ambitious yuppie superior, a smarmy TV anchor lady, and even a shadowy figure who tries to drive over Nick and an apparently key potential witness at night.

The plot twists and turns before going into the Pentagon. Near the finale, in what probably will become a weekly event, Mancuso passionately rants about his beloved U.S. Constitution and causes a severe attack of righteousness.

Loggia's acting is good, likewise that of Charles Siebert, who plays his best friend, a forensics expert. But most of the other players give the impression that, on the whole, they'd rather be in Philadelphia. You can't blame them. It is difficult to be in a Washington show that is so darn realistic that early on, a key character up and says:

"Senator, I'm going to ask you a question. Is it liberal to support self-determination in Central America? Is it liberal to endorse sanctions against South Africa? Civil rights? Tougher environmental standards?"

Producers File Suit Over Beatty Movie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A group of producers sued Warren Beatty for $11.5 million and are trying to block the release of his upcoming film "Dick Tracy."

In a suit filed in Superior Court on Thursday, the producers alleged that they own rights to the film, which Beatty is directing and starring in.

Beatty, his production company and Universal Pictures are said to be in breach of contract, breach of trust and breach of good faith. Dick Tracy Productions, Floyd Mutrux, John Dough Corp., Art Linson Productions and Art Linson claim they are owed $545,000 plus 5 percent of the film's net profits.

The lawsuit seeks to stop the film's planned release next summer. It also asks for $1.5 million in general damages and $10 million in punitive damages.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Oct. 14

ARIES (March 20 to April 17): Don't let any resentment keep you from doing a good job. You will need to express your charm to get the attention and favors from a businessman.

TAURUS (April 18 to May 19): Your home decorating needs to be done today with more sense of a neat touch and fine finish. Look carefully at every angle of any business project before going into it.

GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): A delay in getting out some financial projects at daily times will not be harmful to you. Two highly-placed persons will give you the right advice about money or business.

MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): You will have more activity than usual with your investments. Going into the world with your friends will enhance your prestige now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You will get a sudden inspiration on how to conduct your business deals better. Plan to entertain others with a good friend for best results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): There will be much excitement at your home today so expect it. Don't give up a friend because of a financial situation that you do not like.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Two tightly-knit persons will have your welfare at heart now. You will find that friends will also be understanding of your duties.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You will have wonderful new ideas on your vacation so put them into effect. A friend will give you a brilliant idea for making more money.

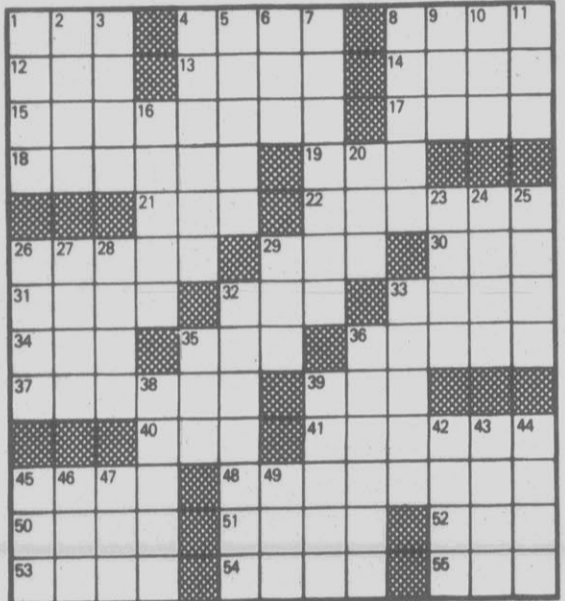

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Be receptive to new ideas on your home given to you by a decorator. Don't get upset because of a long-term investment not paying off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Don't conduct financial projects today unless you receive a just amount for them. Try to meet one from a distance who has business ideas that you need.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Join another person in going after money you are due to receive from your own investments. You will need to coordinate your efforts with others to get your greatest business success.

PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): You and a close companion can conduct business in harmonious accord. Your best bet now is through business and money ventures that are untried.

WINNING DEFENSE 66 YEARS AGO

Opening lead: King of ♣

How good were the bridge players of several generations ago? This hand is from Milton Work's Auction Bridge of 1924. What surprises us is the note that it was played on a commuter train in 1923!

The game was auction bridge, so the bidding shown is as it might go today. When North shows interest in a grand slam by confirming possession of all aces and asking for kings, South diagnoses correctly that his solid hearts make shooting for 13 tricks a worthwhile effort.

We venture to claim that most declarers would have little difficulty fulfilling the grand slam. Declarer wins the first trick and ruffs a spade high. On this trick, East must find a discard. If the defender sluffs a diamond, the long card in dummy sets up. Similarly, a club pitch allows declarer to take four tricks in that suit.

The winning defense is for East to discard—a trump! Now declarer cannot avoid losing a minor-suit trick. If South cashes all four trumps, dummy is squeezed before East. East simply discards whichever suit declarer lets go from dummy. If declarer discards a club from the table on the fourth heart, the long club in his hand is established, but there is no entry to the closed hand to cash the trick.

If they could defend that well in a commuter game, we would have dreaded crossing swords with those players at rubber bridge. It might have proved to be an expensive pastime.

Noriega To Purge Government Of Dissenters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The government will fire up to one-third of its nearly 130,000 employees in a purge of dissenters following the failed effort to topple Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, a city official said.

A human rights official said Thursday that said calls from residents after the Oct. 3 uprising indicate as many as 77 people died and 200 were detained. The Defense Forces said 10 rebels were killed and 37 arrested in the rebellion.

But Raul Escoffery, executive director of the Panamanian Human Rights Committee, said the higher casualty figure was based on sketchy evidence.

"It is not true, we will say it publicly," he said. "But until the government cooperates with us, we presume our information to be true."

City Council Vice President Jose Reyes Encier said Thursday that the firings over the next few weeks are to get rid of as many as 40,000 disloyal employees. There are nearly 130,000 employees on the public payroll.

"This is not persecution, but if you have a guest or someone in your home who turns against you, you must tell him to leave," Encier said.

Many public employees rejoiced while a rebel unit held Noriega hostage during the coup attempt. Forces loyal to Noriega, who as chief of the Defense Forces runs the country, later overcame the rebels.

Escoffery and Robert Troncoso, the rights committee's vice president, said the group received dozens of mostly anonymous phone calls from people who said a relative, friend or neighbor in the military had not been seen since the uprising.

He said the group has not received a response to a request for permission to visit those detained in the coup attempt.

The human rights officials and family members said they did not know where prisoners were being held.

President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela has accused the Defense Forces of carrying out summary executions.

Defense Forces spokesmen have denied reports that an enraged Noriega personally shot the coup leader minutes after the uprising was quashed.

Later, at a City Council meeting, an 11-year-old Michigan pen pal of Noriega was declared a "meritorious daughter" of Panama and said she did not believe "the bad things newspapers in the United States say about him."

Sarah York of Nagueane, Mich., was honored for her "noble sentiments expressed in favor of the nationalist cause of Panama."

The 10-day visit was her second. Earlier this year she came at the invitation of Noriega, with whom she had corresponded after seeing news reports of his struggle with the United States.

Sarah and her father, Mitchell, met Wednesday with Noriega, who introduced Sarah as "the truth of the United States, purity not hatred."

York said the conversation with Noriega covered "fishing, small stuff, what happened last week ... but I would not want to repeat what he said because I do not want to intrude. But he was very upbeat."

Flight Attendant Reports Kidnapping

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Armed civilians kidnapped a Swiss flight attendant in northern Lebanon early this week and freed her today, security sources said. Police here could not confirm the abduction.

In Bern, Switzerland on Thursday, Foreign Ministry spokesman Clemens Birrer said the woman, whom he refused to identify, was kidnapped by gunmen in northern Lebanon on Sunday.

A reliable Lebanon security source, speaking on condition of anonymity, identified the woman as Astrid Fischer, 31, and said she was released in Tripoli this afternoon.

The source said gunmen kidnapped Ms. Fischer from a house in the village of Koubaa, 31 miles north of Beirut, on Sunday. Birrer had said the kidnapping occurred in Tripoli, which is 50 miles north of Beirut.

The source refused to identify the kidnappers but said the woman, a flight attendant with Swissair, was "interrogated in connection with her activities and stay in Lebanon."

He refused to elaborate.

The abduction would be the third of a Swiss national in Lebanon in a week. The two previous kidnappings were linked to the case of a Shiite Moslem militant serving a life sentence in Switzerland for hijacking a jet.

When asked about the latest reported kidnapping, Tripoli police chief Col. Nabil Zein said today: "I have no information at all about this kidnapping. We have neither a notification nor a complaint about such a kidnapping."

"I read the report from Bern in the papers this morning," he told The Associated Press when contacted by telephone.

"There is no sign of a political background to this kidnapping," he added.

Birrer said the woman's parents asked authorities not to publicize the case. He told reporters of the kidnapping after being asked about unsubstantiated news reports of it.

Switzerland asked Syria, which controls much of northern Lebanon, to help find the woman, he said.

In all, 19 Westerners are missing in Lebanon, including eight Americans. The longest held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Hills Urges Japan To Ax Trade Policies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills today urged Japan to scrap discriminatory, anti-competitive trade practices and said Tokyo must work with Washington to overcome Americans' sense of frustration with Japan.

"Anti-competitive practices, whether official or private, run counter to the world we seek and to the world that brought Japan its prosperity," Mrs. Hills told reporters at the Japan National Press Club.

"There is a strong feeling of inequality — where the American market is open but markets overseas are closed, where the overseas investor buys stocks, bonds, businesses (in America), but Americans cannot do so overseas," she said. "We must work together to bring down that feeling of frustration."

Mrs. Hills arrived in Tokyo from South Korea Thursday for a four-day visit. She met Thursday with Construction Minister Shozo Harada and was to hold talks later today with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and International Trade and Industry Minister Hikaru Matsunaga.

She criticized some Japanese firms for buying only from Japanese suppliers and discriminating against foreign investors.

She said she was happy a joint venture between McDonalds Japan and an American toy retailer was likely to be approved by the Japanese government within two years, but added, "even two years is a long time compared to no wait at all when a foreign investor wishes to open a large store in the United States."

She also criticized a practice called "patent flooding" in which certain firms apply for so many patents it makes it difficult for their competition to market their own products.

"Apparently, Mitsubishi Electric Co. has 'flooded' the system with 300 patents that are closely related to

Freed Convict Says He Has No Bad Feelings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — A man who was freed from prison after an appeals court overturned his conviction in the slaying of Prime Minister Olof Palme said today he feels no bitterness toward Palme's widow, who testified against him.

Christer Pettersson, who has a long criminal record, was released Thursday after 10 months in prison.

He told a news conference broadcast live on national television and radio that he had refused police protection and a change of identity.

"Police had plans for me to go away for a few weeks. But I must face the world at some point anyway," he said.

A police spokesman said Pettersson might be placed under protection anyway.

Palme, a four-term prime minister and a prominent international figure active in socialist causes and nuclear disarmament, was shot Feb. 28, 1986 as he walked home from a movie with his wife, Lisbeth.

Mrs. Palme testified she was certain she saw Pettersson when she looked up from her dying husband.

Pettersson said today of Mrs. Palme: "It's unlikely I would ever meet her. But if it would happen, I would like to hug her. I share her loss and do not think she is lying."

Pettersson came home Thursday to his apartment in the northern Stockholm suburb of Rotebro several hours after the Svea Appeals Court threw out his July conviction.

Pettersson, 42, who has a record of violent crimes, including second-degree murder and armed robberies, is an acknowledged abuser of alcohol and drugs. He carried a bag

Greenville-Pitt County Home Builders Association

This Is Your Guide To Greenville's Finest New Homes

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

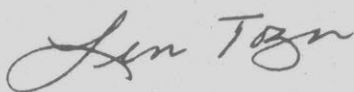

Welcome to the 1989 annual Parade of Homes sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County Home Builders Association.

I am proud to extend to you and your families a cordial invitation from all of our members to visit the outstanding homes on parade.

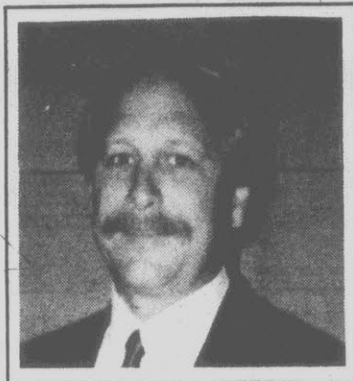

Home ownership has long been a part of the "American Dream". One of the best hedges against inflation is buying a home, and what better investment than a new home from local craftsmen to fit your individual needs. Our excellent economic environment in Pitt County rewards sound investment in real estate. With a broad based economy and steady growth your home investment is well protected. Now is the time with lower interest rates to buy a new home. It may very well be the best move you ever make.

I hope that you will visit all of the homes in the Parade this weekend. Our members take pride in their work and can be identified by the National Association of Home Builders seal. They prescribe to the code of ethics of the NAHB of which they are a member.

I sincerely wish you an enjoyable Parade tour.

Talk to Clark-Branch, Realtors Measure Our Service By Results

When you're making a decision to sell your house, then talk to Clark Branch, Realtors. We sell more homes than anyone in Pitt County. As a matter of fact, we sold twenty-four homes in August. Compare that to our competition. And let's talk about the fact that nationally little more than fifty percent of all listings sell. At Clark Branch, we sell 72% of our homes.

When we make our market presentation to you, ask how many homes we sold last month. Talk to Clark Branch, Realtors. Measure our Real Estate services by results.

BarclaysAmerican

The Pleasant Mortgage Experience.

All too often, the realization of the American dream, owning a home, becomes one of life's more frustrating experiences. And the frustration usually has something to do with the mortgage process. It's too complicated, it takes too long for a decision, no one knows what's going on, no one can give you a straight answer, and on and on.

We're BarclaysAmerican/Mortgage Corporation and although we can't promise an end to all of the frustrations, we can promise the care and concern of a staff of professionals who fully realize that a mortgage is more than numbers and interest rates. It's the realization of a dream. And that dream can be a pleasant experience. That we can promise.

WHY HAVE A HOME INSPECTION?

TO MAKE SURE EVERYTHING WORKS!

The one thing no one wants when they're buying a home is an unpleasant surprise after closing. Getting a professional home inspection before you buy is insurance against the hassels and expense of unexpected repairs. Get what you pay for—not more than you bargained for.

Why Settle for Less?

Insist on an E-300 Home!

E-300 builders voluntarily go beyond what's required. Their participation in Greenville Utilities' E-300 Program shows a commitment to lowering your heating/cooling costs.

E-300 standards ensure that the design of your home -- from the foundation up -- will reduce heating and cooling costs. An E-300 home can use up to 40% less energy than one built to code standards. On-site inspections verify that E-300 standards are being met.

If you're building or buying a new home, call GUC to make sure the home is submitted, inspected and certified through the E-300 Program.

For further information, call Greenville Utilities Energy Services, 752-7166, ext. 274.

Enterprising Young Professionals Need A Good Place To Start.

Everyone needs a good place to start. A place to dream. A place to learn and grow. A place to call home. In Greenville, that place is the Oaks at Treetops.

Nestled on acres of picturesque countryside just inside the city limits, the Oaks is a quiet neighborhood—the kind of place you want to raise a family. When you buy a lot at the Oaks, you're not only buying a completely developed piece of land with all city services, you're also buying peace of mind—the kind of peace that comes with knowing you've just made a good investment in your future.

Lots at the Oaks start at just $20,000, making your decision to invest not only good, but economical as well. Make an appointment to visit the Oaks today. Because young professionals of every age need a good place to start!
