Bond Backers Say No Tax Hikes Needed

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

On Dec. 12, Pitt County voters will have a chance to raise $25.7 million for school construction without paying extra taxes, supporters of a school bond referendum say.

They say the money is badly needed to renovate the county's aging school buildings and to cope with the rapid growth in its student population.

The proposed bond issue will raise money for school renovations to accommodate new students and programs. It will also fund a new high school in Greenville and a new elementary school in the Stokes community, replacing schools that are too old and run-down to use.

The bonds will be paid off over a 15-year period from sales-tax revenue provided by the state through the Public School Building Trust Fund. Under state law, one-tenth of the 5 percent sales tax goes into the fund. The money is collected by the state and paid to the counties each year.

But school officials say the money is needed now. Pitt County gains 200 new students a year — the equivalent of a new school every three years, Superintendent Edwin L. West Jr. said. Spending for school improvements — $18.3 million since 1984 — has not kept up with this growth, he said.

The school administration presented a proposal to the county Board of Education Sept. 18, detailing how it would spend the bond money. The proposal, based on a 10-year plan for school improvements adopted in 1984, covers the system's most critical needs, West said. The board is expected to approve the administra-

Smoke pours from Phillips chemical plant in Pasadena, Texas, where 23 people are missing after a blast Monday

Chemical Blasts Hit Texas Area

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Texas — Six firefighters and safety experts ventured into the smoldering rubble of a plastics plant today to determine whether rescuers could begin searching for 23 workers missing after fiery explosions killed at least one employee and injured more than 100 others.

Authorities offered mixed prospects of finding survivors in the Phillips Petroleum Co. factory, where explosions Monday afternoon flung debris five miles and shook the ground 25 miles away.

"You always hope for the best. Our fingers are crossed," said Phillips spokesman Jere Smith.

"We don't think there's anybody alive in there," said Dr. Paul Pepe, director of Houston's emergency medical services.

Seismologists at Rice University in nearby Houston said the blast appeared to be the equivalent of 10 tons of dynamite. The first explosion could be felt as far away as 25 miles. Several explosions followed.

Doctors treated 124 people for injuries. Thirty-five were hospitalized, up to six of them in critical condition, Pepe said. Some had severe burns, he said.

Survivors said they had less than half a minute's warning to get out of the plant after a reactor began leaking flammable gas that ignited in a huge fireball.

"I thought it was the end," said Billy Ridenour, a 35-year-old worker. "I was thinking, 'Run till you die.'"

Twenty Phillips employees and at least three contract workers were unaccounted for, Phillips Petroleum President Glenn Cox told reporters late Monday. The body of a worker was found at the plant, but Cox did not have other details.

Crime Rate Drops 8 Percent

Wilmington and Greenville showed a decline in crime activity during the first half of 1989, offsetting a statewide trend that saw the crime rate jump 12 percent.

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said the crime jump in other parts of the state indicates North Carolina needs to reform its criminal justice system.

Greenville's crime rate for the first half of this year was down by 8 percent, according to the index released Monday by Thornburg. Wilmington's crime level dropped by 11 percent during the same period.

According to the Associated Press, High Point Point showed the greatest increase in reported crimes with 31 percent, followed by Fayetteville with 29 percent and Greensboro and Burlington, each of which reported a 26 percent increase.

"When the crime figures were released for last year, it was clear that most of the increases related directly to more serious drug activity," Thornburg said Monday. "That is still the case."

"But this year, North Carolina is seeing more vividly the problems of a criminal justice system that is out of balance and in need of some major repair," he said.

Statewide the crime report showed robberies increased 25 percent over the same period in 1988 while violent crime was up 11 percent, including a 19 percent increase in murders. Rape increased 8 percent and aggravated assault rose 6 percent, the report said.

Property crimes were up 12 percent for January to June 1989 over the same period last year, with a 21 percent increase in motor vehicle thefts and a 12 percent increase in larceny.

A shortage of judges, prosecutors and prison cells has made plea bargaining a regular practice to relieve crowded court dockets, Thornburg said.

Shootings Spur Anti-Drug Fight In Ayden HUD Units

By J.R. Williams
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

AYDEN — Local residents living in housing funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development could see an increase in security to combat drug selling in their areas, which have seen two drug-related shootings in the last week.

If HUD allocates Ayden the $100,000 it is requesting from the federal agency's Drug Elimination Grant, 56 hours a week of concentrated police security from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. will be added in the North, South Ayden School and Liberty Street housing developments.

Police Chief Tim Phillips said the shootings occurred on High and Barwick streets.

The town's Board of Commissioners, which met in a special meeting Monday night, decided against contracting with a private security agency because board members said a security guard wouldn't provide the necessary authority. Security guards are not allowed to carry weapons and don't have the power of arrest.

The money would be used for a new officer's salary, uniforms and equipment for two years. It would also pay for his training, a police car with radio and car maintenance for two years, a drug dog, commuter software to store drug information, additional lighting and fencing for the housing area, an I.D. card system for residents and equipment and supplies for crime watch and drug education.

Mayor C. Baldree Jr. said some of the items, like the I.D. card system for residents and the drug dog, may be dropped and the funding directed toward funding for a second officer.

There will be more specific discussion on the subject in the next regular board meeting at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 2, Baldree said. Deadline for submitting the proposal to HUD is Dec. 1.

First Federal Sold To BB&T

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

First Federal Savings Bank of Pitt County was purchased Monday by BB&T Financial Corp. of Wilson in a stock exchange worth about $15.8 million, according to Burney S. Warren III, First Federal's president and chief executive officer.

Officials at BB&T and First Federal in Greenville have been involved in acquisition talks for the past two months and reached a final purchase agreement late Monday, Warren said. He said First Federal stockholders were notified of the sale by letter Monday night.

"We're extremely excited about the transaction. BB&T is an excellent bank and a premiere financial institution," Warren said from his office this morning. "Being associated with them will benefit our stockholders, our customers will have access to more services and our employees will have access to some of the benefits that are available through such a large institution."

Warren said all First Federal employees would be retained as part of the purchase agreement. "We're excited about merging our employees with those of BB&T and expanding our customer services," he said.

He said no decision had been made on whether any of First Federal's offices would be closed. "Those plans are not determined at this point and will be determined over the next nine months," he said.

Together, First Federal's and BB&T's banking deposits represent the largest share of banking deposits in Pitt County and the second largest in Greenville.

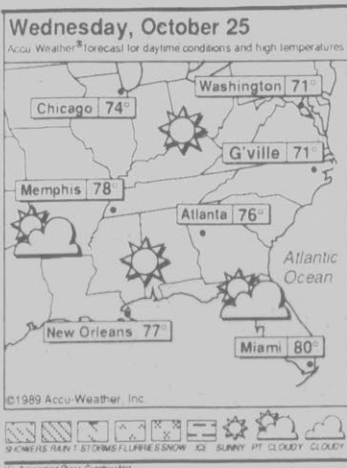

The proposed purchase agreement is pending approval by requisite votes of shareholders and by certain regulatory authorities, Warren said.

Under the agreement, BB&T will issue 1.75 shares of its common stock for each of the 388,500 shares outstanding of First Federal common stock. Based on Friday's closing price for BB&T stock — $23.25 — the acquisition has a per share value of $40.69.

Warren said that amount is 1.71 times First Federal's book value noted at the end of September. "I think that indicates what a strong company

Police Nearing End To Racial Bias Probe

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council heard the third — and possibly last — report on an internal police investigation into allegations of racial bias during a closed session at Monday's council meeting.

In a memo released to the council, Assistant City Manager Ron Kimble and police Detective J.E. Harris, the two investigators, said they expect to complete a final draft by Nov. 20.

The draft "should contain as much relevant information as possible in order to address each of the 15 concerns expressed by the concerned officers group, and any other pertinent data that has come to light during the course of the investigation," the memo stated.

The City Council spent more than an hour in closed session, and heard reports from Personnel Director Gerry Dail, Police Chief Jerry Tesmond, Kimble and Det. Harris.

City Attorney Mac McCarley, the appointed spokesman for the council, referred all questions to the memo.

Kimble and Det. Harris reported in the memo spending more than 456 hours investigating the charges of racial allegations against the department. Following public charges of racial discrimination against the department, and a council directive to begin an internal investigation, Kimble and Det. Harris began interviewing on Aug. 30.

With 38 eight-hour workdays since the investigation began, the two investigators would have had 608 hours to spend on the investigation. Including eight-hour days on weekends, Kimble and Det. Harris would have had a total of 832 hours to spend investigating the charges of racism. Kimble said the overall figure of 456 hours included a typist transcribing the interviews for approximately 50 hours.

A group of black officers presented a list of grievances on Aug. 4, charging racial bias in promotions, raises and shift assignments. The group of officers and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, a civil rights organization, have since called for the removal of Tesmond, two other high-ranking officers in the department — Capt. Randy Nichols and Capt. Nelson Staton — and City Manager Greg Knowles.

Friday, five of the original 13 officers who signed the list of grievances, called for an independent investigation, and listed further allegations against the department. The officers said the city could not conduct an impartial investigation, and the process had already taken too long.

The memo presented to the council Monday night stressed the investigators work toward completing the report. "We fully understand the consequences of any undue delays in the investigative process, and will work diligently and aggressively towards the finalization of our report," the memo stated.

So far, 37 interviews have been conducted during the investigation, and the investigators needed to interview possibly 10 people to confirm earlier testimony, the memo said.

Discounting any possible delays in interviewing and transcribing, Kimble said he hoped to present a draft of the findings by the target date of Nov. 20.

Council Members Make Noise Of Their Own To Quieten City

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The City Council raised a little noise of its own in trying to make Greenville a quieter place to live.

A scheduled report from the noise ordinance committee turned into an open, and sometimes heated, debate Monday among the council members.

When the noise died down, the council strengthened the existing ordinance and made a commitment to providing more police equipment and training to handle the problem of noise in the city.

In its final meeting before the Nov. 7 elections, the board also granted approval to Frank Peterson Jr. to establish a taxicab franchise and approved two general resolutions — one supporting the school bond referendum and the second supporting the formation of a county environmental advisory board.

The two mayoral candidates — incumbent Mayor Ed Carter and Council member Nancy Jenkins — squared off against each other on the most heated issues up for consideration.

Carter and Ms. Jenkins took opposing sides on consideration of the noise ordinance. Carter pushed the council to strengthen the ordinance, and Ms. Jenkins called for further review by the committee before the council voted changes "in the heat of the moment."

Council member Bill Hadden sided with Ms. Jenkins in a losing battle to give more consideration to the findings of the review committee.

Carter fought for, and won, a change in the ordinance that would eliminate the possibility of applying for a permit to exceed the 70-decibel limit in residential areas. The council also approved two recommendations from the review committee to certify 10 to 15 officers for reading noise meters and to buy three more noise meters for use by the police department.

Geraldine Keech, a member of the noise ordinance review committee, played a tape recording of a party that she said occurred near her apartment on 11th Street earlier this year. Along with the stricter limits on decibel levels, Ms. Keech called for stronger enforcement of the existing ordinance.

The police department reported 952 noise complaints between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30.

John Anema, president of the Tar River Neighborhood Association, sent a letter to the council supporting the review committee. He also supported stronger enforcement of the ordinance and possibly higher fines for repeat offenders.

The noise ordinance now sets standards for residential and commercial areas ranging from 60

70 decibels. And fines for exceeding the noise levels now stand at $50 for each offense.

The upcoming school bond referendum also won support from the council, even after Carter and Ms. Jenkins took issue with the manner of the request.

Barry Gaskins, Pitt County Schools public information director, wrote to the council seeking general support for the referendum. Ms. Jenkins said she was leery of one board presenting a resolution, even a general resolution of support, to another board. And Council member Lorraine Shinn sided with Ms. Jenkins' reasoning.

The resolution of support passed with Ms. Jenkins and Ms. Shinn not voicing a vote.

For the same reasons, Ms. Jenkins abstained from voting on a resolution supporting the formation of a county environmental advisory board. The Greenville Environmental Advisory Commission asked the council for the resolution, saying Pitt County and Greenville would be dealing with regional issues that the county would have a say in.

The board also approved three resolutions from Greenville Utilities Commission, authorizing the transfer of money to pay for the addition of a third transformer, the abandoning of an easement on Arlington Boulevard and the installment purchase for water gradient system improvements.

Deadlines Nearing For New Cards For Migrant Workers

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Deadline dates for renewal of employment authorization cards for migrant workers in North Carolina and South Carolina are drawing near.

The cards, form I688A, were issued in late October and early November 1988 for a one-year period to eligible migrants. Migrants holding these cards have a legal immigrant status.

Bonnie Ford, legalization adjudicator in the legalization department of the Immigration and Naturalization Office in Charlotte, said that timely action is needed to secure the required extension in order to maintain a legal status.

Unless a check with the national migrant records reveals a criminal or other record of undesirability, renewal of the card takes only a short time, she said.

Office hours are from 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"Our office is the only legalization point for North and South Carolina," Ms. Ford said. "Unfortunately, paperwork for extending authorization can only be done with each migrant coming in person to Charlotte. There is no way at this time that extension can be handled through mail or by phone."

To receive an extension, each migrant must present the I688A card issued in 1988. There is no cost involved. Expenses for the initial authorization, which included medical examination, immigration office fees and other costs, typically total more than $300 for each applicant. That initial expense covers costs for subsequent authorizations.

"Each migrant is required to report to the Charlotte office on or before the expiration date stamped on their 1988 cards," Ms. Ford said. "In the event of illness or some other unavoidable circumstance, an applicant can have a delay of up to two weeks past the deadline date."

Employers of migrant workers are encouraged to insure their workers do not miss the extension deadlines.

Appointments are not made for this service. Instead, each applicant is to come in on a walk-in basis. The immigration and naturalization office is located in Suite 138 at Number 6 Woodlawn Road, Charlotte, a short distance off Interstate 77.

Court Reprimands Mayoral Candidate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — A part-time Pacolet magistrate who used a racial epithet to describe a Spartanburg mayoral candidate won't say whether he thinks the public reprimand he received from the state Supreme Court will hurt his authority or reputation.

H. Mauldin Pearson declined to talk about the public reprimand issued Monday. Pearson's Spartanburg lawyer, Claude Taylor Jr., said his client admitted making the statement, but was repeating what he had heard about Linda Bilan-chone, not giving his opinion.

The high court said in its written opinion that Pearson violated several rules of judicial conduct when he made the statement in April at Pacolet Town Hall.

Pearson was talking with town clerk Toni Kirby about the Spartanburg mayoral race. Dupre Sims, who is black, was behind a partition in the same room, filling out an application for a police department job, and overheard the remark.

Sims told the Spartanburg County chapter of the NAACP about the comment. The group filed a complaint with the Judicial Standards Commission.

Bilan-chone, a Spartanburg city councilwoman, and Bob Rowell are running for mayor of Spartanburg. The election is Nov. 7.

The court said Pearson violated rules that require a judge to "observe high standards of conduct so that the integrity and independence of the judiciary may be preserved."

Also, the court found that Pearson did not adhere to the principle that a judge "should conduct himself at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary."

State Court Administration Director Louis Rosen said Pearson's punishment is the reprimand, but that when his job comes up for reappointment, the incident may play a role.

"The appointing authority could take that into consideration," said Rosen.

Bond Proposal Includes Funds For New Schools

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

About $10 million of the $25.7 million expected to be raised by the bond issue will go to convert Greenville Middle School into a high school, according to the proposal submitted to the Board of Education last month by school administrators.

A new elementary school in the Stokes area will use more than $3 million of the bond money. The rest of the money will be used to build classrooms and buy equipment for other county schools over a five-year period, according to the proposal.

Here is a school-by-school breakdown of where the bond money will go:

Ayden-Grifton attendance area
Total — $1,183,894

— Ayden Elementary School: $753,225 for eight classrooms, asbestos abatement and kitchen equipment.

— Ayden Middle School: $25,635 for science equipment.

— Grifton Elementary School: $254,034 for three classrooms, science equipment and cafeteria furniture.

— Ayden-Grifton High School: $151,000 for a track, two tennis courts and kitchen equipment.

D.H. Conley attendance area
Total — $2,584,888

— W.H. Robinson Elementary School: $593,875 for seven classrooms, building renovations and kitchen equipment.

— Wintergreen Elementary School: $580,500 for eight classrooms.

— A.G. Cox Middle School: $470,843 for six classrooms, science equipment, kitchen equipment and renovations.

— Chicod Elementary School: $312,770 for four classrooms and science equipment.

— G.R. Whitfield School: $262,635 for renovations, science equipment, drainage improvements, cafeteria furniture and a public-address system.

— D.H. Conley High School: $364,265 for four classrooms, kitchen equipment, a track and tennis courts.

Farmville attendance area
Total — $1,740,826

— Falkland Elementary School: $577,826 for building additions, drainage improvements and kitchen equipment.

— Sam D. Bundy School: $67,200 for drainage and kitchen equipment.

— H.B. Sugg School: $70,900 for cafeteria renovation and kitchen equipment.

— Farmville Middle School: $261,400 for four classrooms, science equipment and kitchen equipment.

— Farmville Central High School: $763,500 for asbestos abatement, track and tennis court renovation and kitchen equipment.

J.H. Rose attendance area
Total — $12,133,876

— Sadie Saulter School: $15,000 for kitchen equipment.

— Elmhurst Elementary School: $445,050 for six classrooms.

— South Greenville Elementary School: $377,898 for six classrooms, kitchen equipment and renovations.

— Eastern Elementary School:

$37,500 for air conditioning and kitchen equipment.

— Third Street Elementary School: under the proposal, Third Street will no longer operate as an elementary school.

— Wahl-Coates School: $285,965 for four classrooms and street paving.

— Greenville Middle School: $10,040,000 for conversion to a high school.

— E.B. Aycock Junior High School: $912,463 for 10 classrooms, science equipment, building improvements and renovations and kitchen equipment.

— Agnes Fulwider School: none.

— J.H. Rose High School: $20,000 for repairs to the heating plant. The school system expects to raise $3.5 million from the sale of this school to East Carolina University.

North Pitt attendance area
Total — $3,828,787

— Belvoir Elementary School: $502,617 for six classrooms.

— Stokes Elementary School: $3,009,300 for a new school.

— Pactolus Elementary School: $90,500 for renovations and kitchen equipment.

— Bethel Elementary School: $39,535 for science and kitchen equipment.

— Wellcome Middle School: $25,635 for science equipment.

— North Pitt High School: $161,200 for a track, two tennis courts and kitchen equipment.

In addition, $4,227,729 will be spent on systemwide items such as: seven new school buses, roofing renovations, furniture and equipment.

Guns Play Major Role In Deaths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — About one in 10 children who die before they reach age 20 are killed with guns, the government's National Center for Health Statistics reported today.

Black male teen-agers are most at risk to die in shootings. More than 40 percent of the deaths in this group are associated with firearms, compared with 16 percent for white male teen-agers, a report said.

The report, "Firearm Mortality Among Children and Youth," was released in conjunction with the premiere of a television documentary on youth homicide, produced by the Department of Health and Human Services. The program will air in Washington tonight and is being offered to stations nationwide.

HHS Secretary Louis Sullivan said the statistics show that "we are losing our youth — not only to disease — but increasingly to injury and violence."

"Just as we have controlled so many childhood diseases, we must now mount an equally aggressive campaign to rid our children's lives of the causes and tools of injury and violence," Sullivan said in a statement accompanying the report.

The report counted 3,392 firearm-related deaths among children ages 1 to 19 in 1987 — about 11 percent of all childhood deaths. Among children ages 1 to 4, guns accounted for about 1 percent of deaths, but the proportion rose to 17 percent among teen-agers, the report said.

Of the firearm deaths among teen-agers, about 48 percent were homicides, 42 percent were suicides and 8 percent were unintentional shootings.

Israel Accepts U.S. Peace Plan With 2 Reservations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens has notified Secretary of State James A. Baker III that his government accepts a U.S. plan for Palestinian negotiations, with two reservations, the Israeli embassy said today.

One proviso is that Baker provide assurances that the Palestine Liberation Organization will not participate in the talks. The other is that any Israeli meeting with Palestinians before elections are conducted on the West Bank and in Gaza would be restricted to arrangements for the balloting, said Ruth Yaron, the embassy spokeswoman.

Arens sent a letter to Baker on Monday night outlining his government's position. It was delivered by Ambassador Moshe Arad after Baker returned from San Francisco, where he made a speech on U.S. arms control policy.

"He is not optimistic or pessimistic," a U.S. official said after Baker read the letter. "He is realistic."

Arens informed Baker in the letter that Israel "accepted basically" his five-point proposal for a meeting with Palestinians, Mrs. Yaron said.

Baker's proposal included an assurance that Israel would be "satisfied" with the composition of the delegation and it assigned Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak a middle-man role of consulting with the PLO.

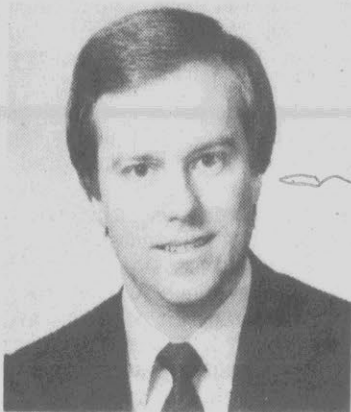

However, Mrs. Yaron said Arens also requested what she called two "tactical changes." One would assure Israel that the PLO would not participate in the meeting and the other would limit the agenda to the election itself.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Arens and other members of the ruling Likud coalition have been concerned from the outset that the meeting would turn into a negotiating session. Shamir's election plan provides for negotiations after the 1.4 million Palestinians on the West Bank and in Gaza choose their representatives.

The PLO, meanwhile, has rejected both the Shamir and Baker proposals. It was not clear whether an Israeli-Palestinian meeting could be held without at least PLO acquiescence.

"We have been saying all along that we do want to advance the peace process," Mrs. Yaron told a reporter.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Freedom

The Plug Can Still Be Pulled

No one can deny that startling changes are taking place in the Soviet Union society. There is more free speech and the leadership is more permissive of criticism.

Somehow President Mikhail S. Gorbachev hasn't quite grasped the idea of how a free press operates in its relation to government officials.

Like western politicians Gorbachev railed at the new breed of editors which were hurtling criticism his way. Unlike western leaders he still has the power to do something about the unruly editors.

Gorbachev hasn't taken action against the editors but he demonstrated that he can. Pravda, the Communist Party daily, could not be accused of taking the role of a western newspaper in leading the Soviet society to openness. Its aging editor, Viktor G. Afanasyev, led the resistance against the openness that Soviet Union is now experiencing. Last week he resigned. In his place was put Ivan T. Frolov, one of Gorbachev's trusted advisors.

'Somehow President Mikhail S. Gorbachev hasn't quite grasped the idea of how a free press operates in its relation to government officials.'

Frolov may be more in tune with the reforms Gorbachev is attempting to carry out, but it is not likely that he will be overly critical of his old boss.

Other editors, wherever they stand in the spectrum of glasnost, must be considering that they can be replaced ... and the nation's president can decide who replaces them.

Well, things are different in the Soviet Union these days and the difference is better insofar as individual rights are concerned.

Without a capitalist system the Soviets can't invent an independent press overnight. It takes money to operate and the money must come from the Communist system.

The embryonic developments in press freedom are refreshing ... but the leadership makes it clear it can still pull the plug.

A Rumbling Reminder Of Humanity

BOSTON — When it was over, a ballplayer looked at the infield that was now steady and the cantilevers that had held up over his head, and said "This just goes to show you how trivial a baseball game is."

Life is like that. At 5:07 p.m., the most important thing in the world can be winning the World Series. Fifteen seconds later everything shakes down into a different order of priorities. The most important thing is to find your kids in the stands.

One minute a stockbroker in a skyscraper is worrying about the wobbly Dow Jones. The next minute his building waves like a stalk of grain in the prairie wind and he worries about another kind of crash.

One minute a commuter is driving home from work in a world of her own. The next minute she's wondering if the road will hold, if there'll be a home.

The drama of this earthquake was hard to overstate, no matter how many times some seismologist says with that strange voice, "This was not the big one." If Hurricane Hugo was a stunning reminder of the power of the water and wind, the unnamed, unannounced Quake of '89, was a reminder of how the earth can shift under everyone's feet.

And the videos of Highway 880

flashed the same sign: Be mindful of the uncertainty of life.

Just a week earlier, this visitor to the Bay Area had wondered about the bravura of a television ad that boasted about a city so wonderful that 4.5 million people live on a fault "and nobody is leaving." This disaster also had a distinctly San Francisco flavor. The homeless being served calamari. A man, appearing on network television in the only clothes he'd rescued, joking, "This is the ensemble."

For a time, this hip and civilized city has gone back to basics. Survival. Cooperation. A spirit of community.

For the previous days, traveling in that private cocoon of a book tour over ten cities, I had been experiencing a very different American world, worrying about a very different American perspective. The daytime world of television where all problems are emotional and doctors deal in broken hearts instead of limbs.

On the talk-show circuit, I was struck by this televised stage of self. Self-doubt, self-improvement. The drama here is relentlessly personal, the central character an "I," and the "I" an endless terrain for exploration. One day in one city, I followed a doctor whose specialty was helping the abandoned get back their lovers. The next day, it was an M.D. sub-specializing in the loneliness of togetherness. This was the world of the wounded and overweight who were asked to look inward for healing.

But once the earth shifted, so did the scene and the lens on human response. Here were the doctors who saved people out of their cars. Here was a couple who opened the door of their apartment to welcome an unknown woman after she'd been rocked out of hers. Here was a private citizen lowering himself from one span of bridge to another to rescue another stranger.

All around the fissures in the road and the buckled highways there was evidence that altruism, a communal spirit of helpfulness is also an instinct. One after another, people said, "I did it without thinking." How remarkable it sometimes seems to us when thoughtlessness is heroism.

The range of human behavior is a mystery. For many Americans, the experience of being in something together has become truly rare. Do we need the common-ground-shaking under all of us to remind us of our connection? Is it only some natural enemy like wind or some common enemy like war that draws people out of their isolated lives?

The survivors of this quake may, I know, find this spirit of community grow thin as traffic thickens and nerves fray. The lawyers will find a reason to sue, the insured will be battling their insurers, the government will wrangle with the engineers and neighbors may grow weary and testy.

Indeed, survivors will eventually go back to wondering how their relationships are and whether they weigh too much. By Tuesday, the World Series may be the most important thing in the world. But for a time, a quake, a shifting in the ground, jolted the structures that separate Americans into the self-centers of our daily lives.

It was a rumbling, awesome reminder from the earth that we are in this together.

Americans Expand The Traditional Definition of 'Family'

Richard Morin

WASHINGTON — Americans are rediscovering the family, though the family of the 1980s is something quite different than Ward, June, Wally and the Beaver.

Today, family often includes friends. It may not include close relatives. And it is defined as much by the quality of relationships as by blood ties, according to a national survey of 1,200 adults conducted in June by the research firm of Mellman and Lazarus for Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co.

So what is a family? According to the poll, three out of four persons interviewed defined a family as "a group of people who love and care for each other." Only about one in five said a family was a group "related by blood, marriage or adoption."

In fact, when asked whom they considered their "close family," one out of 10 persons interviewed mentioned friends.

What are family values? Perhaps surprisingly, they are not found in the ideological mush fed to voters in 30-second sound bites during most political campaigns. To find out what that concept means to people, researchers asked respondents how well the term "family value" described 28 separate values.

At the top of the people's list: Being able to provide emotional support, respecting parents, respecting other people "for who they are," and being responsible for personal actions.

At the bottom: Being free of obligations "so I can do whatever I want to do," opposing abortion, having nice things and favoring prayer in the schools.

"Family values address the nature and quality of relationships among people," according to the study summary. "Despite the Moral Majority attempt to associate their objectives with the definition of family values, the American public does not place opposition to abortion and support for prayer in schools among the top family values."

According to the poll, nearly two out of three persons interviewed said they got the greatest pleasure in their lives from their families, while just 7 percent mentioned friends.

But a majority of Americans believe that the quality of family life is, at best, only fair and is likely to get worse. Fifty-six percent of those interviewed rated the quality of family life today as only fair or poor, while 44 percent rated it as excellent or good.

Looking ahead, Americans likewise are uncertain about the direction American families are headed. When asked to speculate on the quality of family life 10 years hence, 34 percent offered positive evaluations, while 59 percent were negative.

"It is striking that the only category that shows an increase is 'poor,' which nearly doubled from 16 percent to 29 percent," the researchers wrote. "By contrast, only 16 percent of those who are now negative expect things to be better in the near future."

Americans also were quick — perhaps too quick — to see other families in trouble while viewing their own families as relatively problem-free.

"People seem to saying, 'I'm OK, but you're not,'" researchers said. "For example, while a 56 percent majority rates the quality of American family life negatively, 71 percent say that they are at least very satisfied with their own family life," with 24 percent reporting that they were extremely satisfied.

Moreover, a majority of people reject the notion that their parents were more satisfied with family life than they are: Just 26 percent of those interviewed said their parents found family life more satisfying than they themselves do. "Similarly, while almost two in three Americans believe family values have gotten weaker, about 60 percent say their families did 'very well' in teaching them their values, and another 30 percent said their families did 'pretty well.'"

And although respondents said other people placed a higher value on material things than on family, only 6 percent of those interviewed said "earning a living is more important to them than providing emotional support to the family."

"Thus Americans seem to see the family in decline everywhere but in their own home," a phenomenon that perhaps is simply due to people's reluctance to acknowledge personal or potentially embarrassing problems, as well as to the emphasis on dysfunctional families in the media.

The public's prescription for healing whatever ails the family: more time together.

"The deeply felt need for more family time is evident in response to questions throughout the survey. Eighty-six percent agree with the view that "families seem to spend less time together than they did 30 years ago."

More than half of those interviewed said spending more time with the family would be "extremely effective" in strengthening family values. Just about a third — 32 percent — said providing better role models on TV and in the movies would be similarly successful. 30 percent said teaching family values in church and synagogue, and 28 percent said having a full-time parent raising children.

And marriage is back, too. Most Americans have a traditional view of marriage. More than two thirds — 69 percent — saw marriage as "a permanent commitment," with 28 percent saying that marriage was "something that should only last as long as it makes both people happy."

"Older people, who were socialized in a period when divorce was less frequent, are more likely to stress the permanence of marriage (75 percent to 23 percent). Those 18 to 29, however, are somewhat less committed to the traditional view (64 percent to 33 percent). But even those who are currently divorced believe in the permanent of marriage by a narrow margin (51 percent to 45 percent)."

Abernathy's Book On King Deserves A Read

Theo Lippman Jr.

The day he checked out of Johns Hopkins Hospital after a successful "brain artery bypass" operation, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy said here he was going to write a book.

"I am going to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help me God," he said. That was in 1983. The book has just come out and, brother, does he need God's help. The critical reaction to the book has been blistering, especially among the most devoted disciples of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Abernathy was King's right-hand man and then successor at the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. In his book he discusses King's previously well-known adulteries in a general way. He tries to explain them. To me he does, and in a credible way. He describes King as a lonely, heroic soldier, attractive to women as heroes always are, attracted to them as men away from wives and in mortal danger always are.

Worse than this, in the view of the book's critics, Abernathy describes somewhat circumspectly King's last night alive in Memphis, during which he had encounters with three women.

The reaction to the book has been reminiscent of that to "The Last Temptation of Christ" and "Satanic Verses." In each, a revered religious figure was depicted in a dream sequence involving sexual sin. Fundamentalist Christians and Moslems went crazy. However, I suspect, and hereby suggest, that if Abernathy would now say he meant the Memphis episodes to be a dream sequence, the whole storm over the book would blow away.

Just kidding. In fact, I hope the storm doesn't blow over, because as long as the publicity rages, a lot of people are going to read this book, and it is a good one. It is both memoir and assessment of what is surely the most important event in American life in the post-World War II period. I mean the civil rights movement that King led, with Abernathy at his side.

It is important that those days be recalled in these days because so many of the lessons have been forgotten by those old enough to have lived through them, or never learned by those young enough for it to be only dim second-hand history.

As the author puts it, "I have decided to write this autobiography ... first, to show how life was lived during the era of Jim Crow and, second, to show how it was like at the center of the civil rights movement as it operated on a day-by-day basis."

It is for the most part a painful narrative, but it has its funny moments. My favorite has nothing to do with civil rights, and may be unintended humor. Just before that brain surgery, a Hopkins physician says to Abernathy, "Now when you come out of the anesthetic, we're going to ask you who the president of the United States is, and we want you to say 'Ronald Reagan.'"

At that, the author relates, he immediately passed out cold. I don't know why, but I love that story.

Harris Fire

RALEIGH (AP) — An Oct. 10 fire at the Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant caused about $2 million in damage to electrical equipment, Carolina Power & Light Co. officials say.

Insurance will cover all damages over $1 million, officials said.

The first $1 million in repair costs will be absorbed by the utility, but company officials say they don't expect to raise power bills.

"We do not expect to file for a general rate case any time in the near future," CP&L spokeswoman Elizabeth Bean said Monday. "The damage done by the fire is part of the costs of doing business, but it will not cause us to come in early for a rate case."

Trooper Cleared

RALEIGH (AP) — An official investigation has cleared a Highway Patrol trooper of wrongdoing in the Oct. 15 shooting death of a suspect near Clinton, officials say, but a group of Sampson County blacks says it is not satisfied.

Bill Cannell, a spokesman for Crime Control and Public Safety, said Monday the State Bureau of Investigation found that the shooting was justifiable. He said he did not know the details of the investigation. The SBI routinely conducts investigations of police shootings, he said.

Trooper T.M. Bass shot and killed Clarence Lee Clegg, 32, of Clinton about 9 p.m. during a struggle in the trooper's patrol car. Bass is white and Clegg black.

Bass arrested Clegg on charges of driving while impaired and driving with a revoked license after the man was involved in an accident.

About 50 members of Sampson County Concerned Minorities, an ad-hoc committee of the Voter's League of Sampson County, demanded Monday that a new investigation be conducted by state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, the U.S. attorneys office and the FBI.

Manning To Run

RALEIGH (AP) — Howard E. Manning Jr. of Raleigh, the first Republican elected to the Superior Court bench in this century, says he will run in 1990 for chief justice of the state Supreme Court.

If he gets the Republican nomination, Manning will face incumbent Jim Exum, a Democrat, in the election.

Exum fought off Republican Rhoda B. Billings in an intense contest in 1986.

Pedestrian Killed

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A 33-year-old Monroe woman was killed early Sunday morning when a tractor-trailer truck backed over her while she walked.

Francis Sturdivant was killed instantly about 2:50 a.m. when struck by a truck driven by Horace Barbee Jr., 48, of Wingate, said Monroe Public Safety Chief Bobby Kilgore.

Barbee was backing out of a parking space when the accident occurred. He has been charged with driving while impaired and felony death by vehicle, Kilgore said.

Professors Ranked

GREENSBORO (AP) — Three professors in the department of child development and family relations in the school of human environmental sciences at UNC-Greensboro have been ranked among the top 30 scholars in the field of family science.

The ranking was based on a study by the National Council on Family Relations.

The three are: Vira Kivett, who specializes in social gerontology and rural aging; Hyman Rodman, who focuses on family science policy; and Rebecca Smith, who specializes in adult development and moral reasoning in the family.

No other university in North Carolina was represented by faculty ranked among the top 30 scholars in the country in the field of family science, UNC-G officials said.

NCAB Officers

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Jan Caddell of radio station WJSK in West Jefferson became president Monday of the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters at the group's annual meeting here.

Caddell succeeds Jack P. McCarthy of Voyager Communications in Raleigh. Cullie Tarleton of WBT-TV in Charlotte was named president-elect.

George Beasley of Beasley Broadcast Group in Goldsboro was named vice president for radio, and Alan Nesbitt of WTVD-TV in Durham was named vice president for television. Don Curtis of Great American Media in Raleigh was elected secretary-treasurer.

Mavretic Ousts 3 Ramsey Backers From Key Legislative Study Panels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Three key legislators on environmental issues have been stripped of study committee appointments by House Speaker Joe Mavretic, who is drawing fire for resorting to the heavy-handed politics he campaigned against in assuming the seat.

Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, replaced Reps. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, George Miller, D-Durham, and Dennis Wicker, D-Lee — all supporters of former House Speaker Liston Ramsey before Mavretic deposed him this year.

Mavretic could not be reached late Monday after his office announced his appointments to several study committees — which will be responsible for drafting significant legislation for the 1991 General Assembly. Tim Kent, Mavretic's administrative assistant, declined to comment on the appointments and Eddie Caldwell, the speaker's legal counsel, said he was not authorized to comment.

Wicker, the House majority leader and principal sponsor of legislation enacted this summer to clean up leaking underground storage tanks, said the move is in retaliation for supporting Ramsey.

"In my own mind it is obvious that those who do not support the speaker are being punished," Wicker said from his law office in Sanford. "I regret that very much because he is engaging in the very kind of conduct that he accused the former speaker of in ousting him." Hackney and Wicker were left off the Environmental Review Commission, which oversees such issues as hazardous waste, incineration, recycling and the state's environmental-regulatory agencies.

Miller was deleted from the Joint Select Committee on Low-Level Radioactive Waste, which is the lead legislative panel in the state's pending search for a 500-acre site to house low-level nuclear waste from across the Southeast for centuries.

Wicker told the Winston-Salem Journal the omission of Hackney and Miller removes the House's leading experts on hazardous waste and low-level nuclear waste from the field of public policy. "I am astonished. To me this is not a matter of good judgment."

Miller, whom Mavretic earlier declined to reappoint as chairman of the House Finance Committee, was in Jackson, Miss., as a member of the Southeast Compact Commission and could not be reached. He is the leading House expert on low-level radioactive waste and sponsored legislation that helped form the eight-state compact on handling the waste, which will result in a disposal site opening in North Carolina in 1993.

Hackney, the chairman of the House Environmental Caucus and the primary House leader on hazardous-waste issues for five years, said simply, "That's the speaker's call. It's not a surprise."

Boy Killed

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A 4-year-old Fayetteville boy was killed when he was struck by a car as he was riding his tricycle, authorities say.

Elliot Taylor Silcox was struck by a car about 12:50 p.m. Sunday, Fayetteville police Sgt. Orval Cox said.

Boyles Backs Use Of Venture Capital

RALEIGH (AP) — Venture capital companies, which involve small groups of investors in backing new or developing businesses, offer a new resource in an area that may be too risky for banks, officials say.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, whose office arranged a meeting Monday among about 800 businessmen and scientists, said commercial banks have been the lifeblood of the state's economy over the years. But he said a modern economy calls for "an additional resource, a new resource for us."

The state Enterprise Corp. was authorized by the legislature in 1988. It combines a $10 million investment from banks and private corporations with $10 million from the state to make investments in growing companies in rural areas of the state.

The corporation invests in companies that have the potential to create jobs and diversify or stabilize the economies of 94 counties that have no city larger than 60,000 people.

Those attending the conference heard presentations from six private venture capital companies that include the state as an investor, plus the North Carolina Enterprise Corp. and the N.C. Industrial Facilities and Pollution Control Financing Authority.

Company representatives said most of their businesses define a successful investment as one that returns investors twice the money they put in over a period of a few years. "Superwinners" can return 20 times the original investment or more.

Other small companies either go bankrupt or become what the industry calls "the living dead" — businesses that can sustain themselves but do not give their venture capital investors big returns.

Former Gov. Jim Hunt, speaking for the financing authority, said the group allows small and medium-sized manufacturers to get tax-exempt financing for growth. The bonds frequently are used by economic development agencies to help new or existing industries to expand.

Another former governor — community college system president Bob Scott — urged the businessmen to use their community colleges to train both workers and themselves.

"We've got to think of education as a continuum, a lifelong learning process," Scott said. "We've spent a lot of time rearranging the deck chairs in education, but not enough time considering the port we should be heading to."

"The facts are clear that most business failures are more due to a lack of management ability than a lack of capital," he said.

Panelist Contends Drug War Needed In Public Schools

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — To combat the problem of substance abuse, more efforts must be made at the public school level, even if it means reducing traditional weapons in the war on drugs, Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., was told at a public hearing.

Panelist Dr. Jim Palmer, former assistant director for the alcohol and drug defense program in Chapel Hill, said early intervention and identification programs are key factors in fighting drugs.

"It's going to take more resources, more money, and working together from prevention to treatment," Palmer said, adding that developing programs to identify students with drug problems at an early stage can reduce the need for expensive care.

Sanford started Monday's session at Weaver Education Center by saying more efforts need to be aimed at drug users rather than suppliers.

"If we cut off demand, we don't have to worry about supply," he said. "If we get at the root of the problem and stop the user, partially by the fear of jail, and primarily by education and the kind of facilities to deal with people already addicted and caught up in the habit."

Sanford told the group that he supports President Bush's initiative to step up the war on drugs, but he said the administration has shown a "lack of commitment to providing adequate financial resources for funding."

"I believe we must concentrate much more of our resources on treatment, rehabilitation and prevention programs," he said.

However, Palmer and Sanford had a brief exchange over the issue of money spent on other forms of intervention. When asked how much comprehensive school-based programs would cost, Palmer said he didn't know. But he added, "It would be a lot less expensive than what we're spending on supply and demand with buying helicopters."

Sanford replied, "I don't want to take the helicopters away. I don't think it's either or."

According to a survey conducted by the Department of Public Instruction, more than 380,000 children are at high risk for substance abuse and more than 116,000 have significant substance abuse problems.

Palmer told Sanford that about one out of every six students in grades 7-12 (or about 100,000) in North Carolina have been identified as problem drinkers. But there's little treatment available for them, he said, especially in the schools.

A Word of Thanks to the Students of East Carolina University

By now, you've heard just how dangerous Greenville's annual Halloween celebration can be. You've heard about the large numbers of students injured and assaulted last year, about the tremendous property damage -- and you've thought about the potential threats posed by the outsiders who flock to the downtown area looking for excitement.

By now, you probably know that a committee composed of students, business and government leaders reached unanimous agreement and reported the following:

- Reacting to the riots of 1974 and 1975, the City Council halted the Halloween celebrations from 1976 to 1979. During that period, the downtown bars closed their doors.
- In 1979, the City Council reversed its position and allowed the celebrants to party in the streets once again.
- In 1987, the number of Halloween partygoers swelled to more than 20,000 and more streets were closed off for the celebration. Five persons were injured, seven were arrested and the City spent 800 manhours in employee overtime, costing taxpayers between $10,000 and $15,000.
- In 1988, although the crowd was much smaller than the year before, with between 8,000 and 10,000 persons present, the number of arrests jumped to 56 and an unknown number of persons were injured.
- Small gangs of youths from outside the city assaulted numerous people at the 1988 celebration, intentionally striking men and women alike and running away into the large crowd before police officers could catch them.

East Carolina students have responded by asking friends to stay at home this Halloween. Residence halls won't allow nonresidents to spend the night on campus. Sororities and fraternities are closing their doors to out-of-towners, too. And everywhere, students are making plans for a safe Halloween without the use of alcohol. We thank you. The Greenville community is grateful for your support.

No Survivors Left In Rubble

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — A week after a devastating earthquake, Congress moved to offer billions in aid to Northern California, commuters returned to work and hopes ended for finding any more miracle survivors in a crumpled freeway.

The death toll rose to 62, with dozens still listed as missing in the rubble of Interstate 880 in Oakland, which was the first elevated freeway built in California.

Those left homeless by the earthquake numbered in the thousands, and their ranks continued to grow Monday when additional homes were evacuated near I-880.

Crews preparing to dismantle a shaky section of the double-deck roadway planned to start today after bracing the structure further. The search for bodies remained on hold because of a fear of further collapse — even from pooling rain water.

For most of the San Francisco Bay area, returning to routine meant snail-paced commutes on a jury-rigged transit system that includes extra trains and ferries because vital freeways and the crucial Bay Bridge remain closed.

Monday's heavy rain tapered off by evening rush hour, and only scattered showers and a few thunderstorms were forecast for later today.

In Washington, a relief package of $2.85 billion moved ahead in Congress, with the full House expected to consider it today. San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos called on the federal government to raise the maximum home rebuilding loan to $500,000 from $100,000, reflecting high housing costs in the region.

"One-hundred thousand dollars in South Carolina can make a big difference. It doesn't here," Agnos said.

Already, damage from the quake of one week ago today — estimated at more than $7 billion — has surpassed Hurricane Hugo as the costliest disaster in U.S. history.

Gov. George Deukmejian said he would call a special legislative session within two weeks to work out the state's response to the devastation.

Buck Helm, the gritty longshoreman who was dug out alive Saturday from the wreckage of Interstate 880 in Oakland, continued to heal and signaled to incredulous doctors Monday that he now felt no pain.

Helm's condition was upgraded Monday from critical to very serious and may improve again today to serious, Dr. Floyd Huen said.

House Committee Approves Earthquake Aid Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — California lawmakers say a House plan to pour $2.85 billion into their earthquake-damaged state isn't nearly enough even though it's larger than the White House proposal.

The House Appropriations Committee approved the aid package Monday and sent it to the full House for action today after rejecting the California delegation's request for $3.8 billion.

The spending committee rejected, 26-7, an amendment supported by the state delegation and instead favored a proposal by chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., which essentially split the difference between the state and White House plans.

The committee approved $1.1 billion for the Federal Emergency Management Agency to repair the devastation and $1 billion for the Federal Highway Administration's emergency fund. Most of the deaths and the worst damage from last week's quake in the San Francisco Bay area was related to highways.

In addition, $500 million would be given to the Small Business Administration for emergency loans, and $250 million to President Bush to spend at his discretion on other operations.

The aid package, which could still be modified in the Senate, was expected to get speedy passage. It was attached to a stopgap spending bill that must be passed before Thursday to avoid a government shutdown.

Rep. Vic Fazio, deputy chairman of the House Democratic Caucus and the California delegation's point man in the committee, said the state would keep pressing in the Senate and on future legislation to get more aid.

"Certainly, $2.8 billion is not bad," he said, but added it was only a start. "I don't think we've done the job yet."

Fazio said he was especially concerned that the committee didn't waive time limits for aid requests and other federal requirements he said would be difficult for local authorities to meet.

"The need is there. It's not going to go away," said Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., of San Francisco.

"It was speedy and it was a good first start," said Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif.

"But obviously, everybody knows the cost is going to be greater than that," added Rep. George Miller, D-Calif. "We're going to have to work to keep (the money) going."

The California delegation request included the $1.1 billion for FEMA and $1 billion for the highway emergency fund. But it wanted $1.2 billion for SBA loans, a $100 million loan fund for poor people, and a $400 million discretionary fund for the president.

The White House, by contrast, said the SBA should handle the disaster out of its existing funds, sought no presidential fund, and wanted $600 million for the federal share of repairing the highways. In all, the $2.5 billion administration proposal included just $1.5 billion in spending above what was already in the federal budget.

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., the senior Republican on the committee, said the Bush administration could accept the proposal passed by the committee. He and others at the committee meeting complained that the powerful California delegation was asking for too much too soon.

He said Congress needed to meet the need and "to do less is heartless." But "to do more, is to punch more holes in the lining of an empty federal pocket."

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., proposed and then withdrew an amendment giving his home state $5 billion to compensate for all the hurricanes it has suffered since the turn of the century.

"We are the Golden State and I think there is a certain amount of jealousy," Fazio said afterward.

Committee Chairman Whitten said he would consider a request for more money later.

Report Says DOE Downplayed Problems

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department underestimated or ignored health and safety problems at the Rocky Flats nuclear arms plant as it gave the operator millions of dollars in bonus fees, federal auditors said today.

A report by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said in the fiscal years 1986-88, Rockwell International Corp. won $26.8 million in award fees for running the plant, which has been under FBI investigation for alleged criminal violation of environmental laws since June.

"We believe that the seriousness of the (environmental, safety and health) problems ... were never conveyed in the evaluations" of the plant's performance, the report concluded.

Rockwell announced last month that it was withdrawing from the plant, and the Energy Department said Oct. 11 that EG&G Inc. had agreed to take over Jan. 1.

The plant makes plutonium triggers for nuclear warheads and is owned by the government.

The GAO report was being released today during a House Government Operations subcommittee hearing on Energy Department problems with the private companies that run major nuclear weapons facilities in 12 states under government contracts.

Many of the contracts, including that at Rocky Flats, reimburse the company for all operating costs and allow bonus fees based on performance in key areas, including production of arms materials and compliance with health and safety rules. The fees are set during semiannual performance evaluations.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., chairman of the subcommittee, said Monday that the terms of the Rockwell contract made it difficult for the Energy Department to effectively manage the plant about 16 miles from downtown Denver.

Synar said the Rocky Flats problem was typical of management weaknesses throughout the nuclear weapons manufacturing complex, which includes 17 major plants.

"The department effectively has left itself no way to control the performance of its contractors or to hold them fully accountable for their actions," Synar said.

The GAO said the $26.8 million in bonus fees for Rockwell during the 1986-88 period represented 84 percent of the total awards possible under its contract.

In this period, the Energy Department's operations office in Albuquerque, N.M., rated Rockwell's health and safety performance as "moderately good" to "excellent."

The report said that while Rockwell rightly was applauded for holding down the number of work days lost due to injury, fire loss and property losses, some of its shortcomings in the health and safety area were underestimated or ignored.

Among the problems downplayed by the Energy Department, according to the GAO report, were an inadequate health physics program, repeated violations of environmental regulations and the "questionable quality" of the monitoring data used to comply with environmental laws.

Baker Calls For Reducing Nuclear Weapons

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Reducing first-strike nuclear weapons is the top goal set by Secretary of State James A. Baker III for U.S. and Soviet negotiators trying to complete a new arms reduction treaty.

Baker singled out the deadliest missiles in superpower arsenals, capable of devastating an enemy in a surprise attack, during a speech Monday in San Francisco. He also urged the Soviets to join in a strategy shift to defense.

"We want to see Soviet defensive military operations made habitual," Baker said in his first in-depth description of the Bush administration's goals for negotiations under way in Geneva to cut strategic weapons — bombers, missiles and nuclear submarines — on both sides.

He said the United States would explore "a cooperative and stable transition to a greater reliance on stability-enhancing, cost-effective strategic defense."

Baker's emphasis on reducing first-strike weapons, such as Soviet SS-18 intercontinental ballistic missiles, signals a subtle shift from the Reagan administration's stress on across-the-board strategic cuts.

Baker made no reference to the 30 percent to 50 percent cutback U.S. negotiators have been aiming for in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks. Some analysts, such as former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, have urged greater emphasis on slashing first-strike weapons such as the Soviet SS-18s.

Designed to destroy an adver-sary's ballistic missiles in their silos, first-strike nuclear weapons have a potential of wreaking havoc on the other side's nuclear forces.

Former President Reagan responded to a perceived Soviet threat by beginning a defensive program, known popularly as Star Wars, designed to destroy Soviet ballistic missiles in space before they could destroy their targets.

Baker, in his speech, encouraged the Soviets to concentrate their efforts on defense as well, while the Bush administration pursues the Strategic Defense Initiative.

He said the U.S. goal in the Geneva talks was "a new relationship in which the capabilities and incentives to attack first are minimized and the possibilities of strategic defense are pursued."

He said the Bush administration had tailored its proposals in Geneva to emphasize the relative merits of slow-flying weapons, such as cruise missiles and bombers that are not suitable for a first strike.

At the same time, Baker urged a skeptical Congress to approve a White House request for $100 million to produce mobile Midgetman missiles. Otherwise, he said, the Soviets could exploit differences between Capitol Hill and the Bush administration.

The House eliminated the request from the $305 billion defense authorization bill, but the Senate gave its approval for the funds. A congressional conference committee is trying to reconcile this and other differences.

Reagan Continues Tour Of Japan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — A capacity crowd of 56,000 cheered today as former President Reagan tossed the first pitch of the third game of Japan's version of the World Series, narrowly missing a Kintetsu Buffaloes batter.

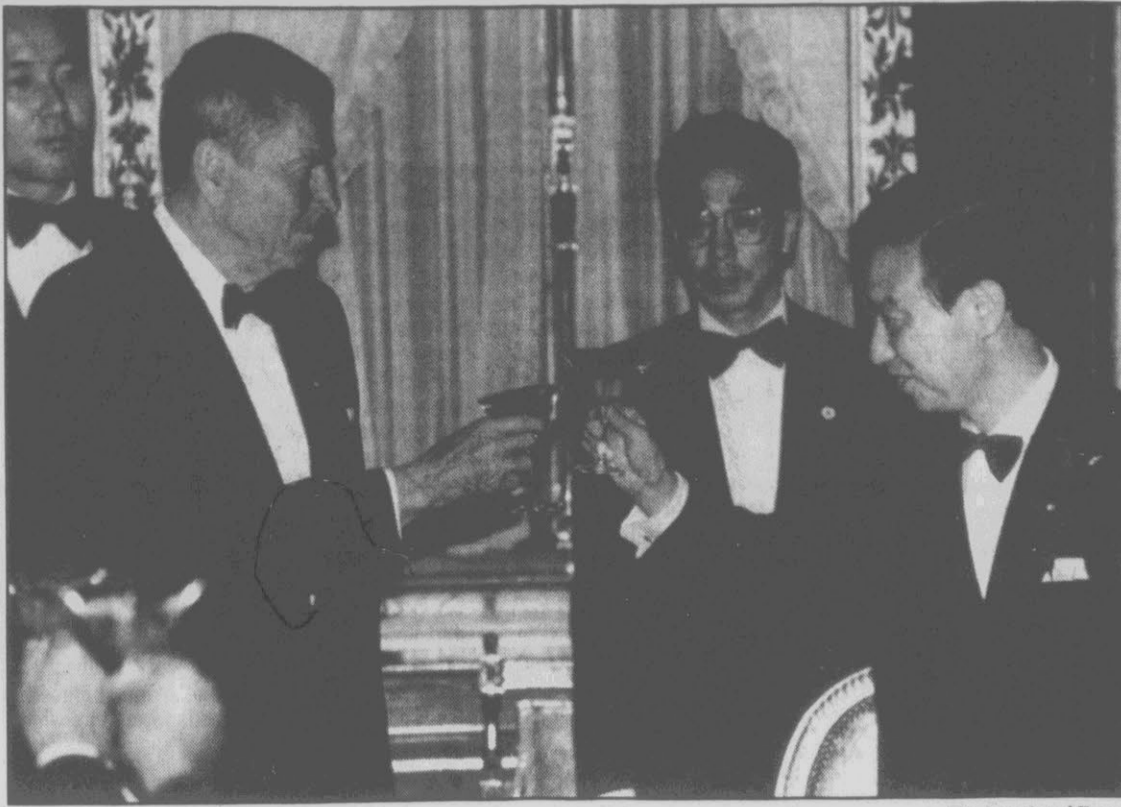

Winding up about halfway between home plate and the pitcher's mound, Reagan, a former sportscaster, fired off a throw that barely cleared batter Daijiro Ohishi's backside.

Reagan, wearing a blue suit, laughed and waved to the crowd. Some people chanted, "Reagan, Reagan."

The former president is in Japan on a nine-day visit at the invitation of the Japanese government and Japan's largest media conglomerate, Fujisankei Communications Group.

Fujisankei reportedly is spending about $7 million on the trip, which aims at improving ties between the United States and Japan. Fujisankei officials have refused comment on reports Reagan and his wife Nancy will earn $2 million.

On Monday, Reagan met with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and Emperor Akihito. He received one of Japan's highest awards, the Grand Cordon of the Supreme Order of the Chrysanthemum, for promoting free trade and friendship.

As Reagan entered the field at the Tokyo Dome for the Japan Series game between the Yomiuri Giants and Kintetsu Buffaloes, an announcer asked the audience to make donations to victims of last week's San Francisco earthquake "to promote U.S.-Japanese relations."

The tremor, which measured 6.9 on the Richter scale, struck shortly before the scheduled start of the third game of the World Series in San Francisco. At least 60 people were killed and damage is estimated at $7 billion.

Foreign Minister Offers To Dissolve Warsaw Pact, Leave Overseas Bases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze says the Soviet Union is willing to negotiate an end to the NATO and Warsaw Pact military alliances and is prepared to eliminate its own overseas bases by the year 2000.

And he has promised that as East bloc countries move away from one-party Communist rule, the Soviet Union will observe strict principles of non-intervention and "absolute freedom of choice."

In a major foreign policy address to the Supreme Soviet legislature on Monday, Shevardnadze also condemned his predecessors' decision to send troops into Afghanistan, calling it a "gross violation" of Soviet law and ethics.

He also admitted that the Soviet radar station in Krasnoyarsk violated the U.S.-Soviet Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. The Soviets said last month that it would be dismantled, ending a dispute that soured U.S.-Soviet arms control talks for years.

Shevardnadze's speech was extraordinary in its frankness and elevated the Supreme Soviet to a forum for major policy statements.

Without specifically mentioning any East bloc country, he said

Moscow would henceforth relate to its Warsaw Pact allies on the basis of "sovereign equality, the impermissibility of any kind of intervention and the recognition that each country has the right to absolute freedom of choice."

Poland and Hungary, former one-party Communist states, are hurtling toward Western-style democracy and hundreds of thousands of people are taking to the streets in East Germany to demand a similar transformation.

The foreign minister said Moscow is prepared to liquidate all its foreign bases by the year 2000 and draw back to within its own borders.

He did not specify what conditions would be set for such a withdrawal, but a year ago President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced the start of a pullback that he said would result in a 500,000-man reduction in Soviet military forces.

Shevardnadze told the lawmakers proudly that already, "Not a single Soviet soldier is participating — nor, I'm sure, will participate — in military actions anywhere in the world."

And he said his government is "prepared to head toward the dissolution of the military-political blocs in Europe" in a mutual arangement worked out by NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

He added, however, that despite recent historic changes in the Warsaw Pact, the Soviet Union considers that "all our obligations remain in force."

Shevardnadze denounced the decision by the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev to send Soviet soldiers into Afghanistan in December 1979 to help the Marxist government there fight the anti-communist guerrillas.

He disavowed any connection with the decision to intervene and said it involved "gross violations of our own laws, intra-party and civil norms and ethics."

"A decision that had very serious consequences for our country was made behind the back of the party and the people," Shevardnadze said in the speech, the full text of which was carried by the official Tass news agency. At the time, both he and Gorbachev were non-voting members of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo.

It was not the first time highly placed Soviets have disclosed that the decision to intervene in Afghanistan was made by a small circle around Brezhnev. But it had not previously been characterized by a government spokesman as an outright violation of law.

The last Soviet troops pulled out of Afghanistan in February.

Shevardnadze said it took Gorbachev's government four years to determine that the location of the Krasnoyarsk radar station in Siberia violated the 1972 ABM treaty, as claimed repeatedly by the United States.

He said that as the Soviet Union tried to move forward on arms treaties based on the pact "there stood the station, the size of an Egyptian pyramid, representing, to put it bluntly, a violation of the ABM treaty."

Shevardnadze said the station will be dismantled but added:

"We are saving the ABM treaty and opening the way to the conclusion of a treaty on strategic weapons (long-range nuclear missiles). And we're gaining the legal and moral right to demand clarity on the question of American installations in Greenland and England which were modernized, as we understand, in violation of the treaty."

The United States has claimed the treaty does not apply to its modernization of the stations in Thule, Greenland, and Fylingdales Moor, England, because they were in place before the ABM accord was signed.

Parliament Confirms Krenz As Head Of State

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East Germany's Parliament today elected Communist Party chief Egon Krenz as president, one day after more than 300,000 people marched in Leipzig to demand greater freedom in the nation's largest protest ever.

Krenz urged an end to further demonstrations but also promised an investigation of police brutality during protests earlier this month when he was in charge of internal security.

"Demonstrations, however peacefully they may be planned and thought out, carry within themselves the danger of ending in a different way from how they started," Krenz told the People's Chamber after his election.

"Our society, which has so many new things to tackle, is thus put under increasing tension," he said, calling on East Germans to refrain from demonstrations to avoid a "worsening of situation or confrontation."

The official East German news agency ADN said Parliament elected Krenz, who took over as party chief last Wednesday, with a large majority of the votes in the 500-member chamber.

But for the first time during an election of an East German president, there were votes against the single candidate. Twenty-six members of the People's Chamber voted against Krenz and another 26 abstained, according to Parliament speaker Horst Sindermann.

Parliament is under the tight control of the Communist Party, and Krenz's election as president was assured after his nomination by the 21-member ruling Politburo. The People's Chamber also elected Krenz to be the head of the nation's armed forces, with eight votes against and 17 abstentions. ADN said.

The peaceful two-hour protest in Leipzig and an announcement from several hundred factory workers Monday that they formed the country's first independent labor union were considered tests of Krenz's professed desire to embrace reform.

Soviet Editor Won't Resign His Position

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The editor of the Soviet Union's most popular newspaper says Communist officials want to scare the press into toeing the party line by making an example of him for straying.

But Vladislav A. Starkov says he will resist pressure to quit.

The editor-in-chief of the weekly Arguments and Facts appealed to Western public opinion on Monday from the office President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had suggested he vacate.

"It's a great injustice and a violation of all my journalistic rights," Starkov said in an interview of the attack on how he has run the paper.

He said he was the victim of unspecified high party officials who were trying to make an example of him "to frighten the whole press."

Starkov said officials have forced him to cancel a planned trip to Canada on Saturday, and that he was afraid he might also have to forgo a trip to New York scheduled for Oct. 25.

Eleven days ago, Gorbachev criticized several top Soviet editors as inflaming passions and hurting reform effort by allegedly overplaying the country's economic and ethnic troubles.

He reportedly said Starkov should resign over a poll his paper carried implying that human rights activist Andrei D. Sakharov is more popular than Gorbachev.

"Mikhail Sergeyevich told me that in my place he would resign," said Starkov. "But I took it as a warning, not a direct firing order."

Despite this, Starkov reiterated his strong support for perestroika, Gorbachev's program of economic and political reform.

"The most insulting thing for me in all this is that I'm being considered almost an enemy of Gorbachev, or an enemy of perestroika," he said. "There was never anything like that."

Hoffman Prepares For Broadway

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Dustin Hoffman's Shylock on the London stage is now a memory, leaving a legacy of mixed reviews, packed houses and great expectations for Broadway, where he opens in December.

Sir Peter Hall's production of Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice" was the lone smash hit in an otherwise lackluster summer for British drama. It opened June 1 at the Phoenix Theater for a 13-week run that was extended through Sept. 23.

Hoffman as Shylock was a risky venture. It wasn't just a question of ironing the New York inflections out of Hoffman's voice, but of how the fastidious British theater-going public would take to a Hollywood star attempting Shakespeare.

"I didn't quite know what it would be like. All I knew is I would learn something," Hoffman said.

Explaining the mixed reviews, he blamed the speed with which the production was rushed onto the stage, due to his father's illness, which forced him to spend time at his bedside in the United States.

"We opened in this play after 10 public performances, and my performance for me was like those incisions you see from people who've been operated on," he said in an August interview.

"You still see their fresh wounds and their stitches; now I'm at a point where you can barely see the scars."

Shylock is the Jewish moneylender whose thirst for revenge against Antonio (Leigh Lawson), the Venetian merchant of the title, finds its match in the exacting legalistic heiress, Portia (Geraldine James).

Hall, who directed the play, said that as an authentically Jewish actor, Hoffman "changed the part historically."

"Merchant" seemed to me particularly right for him," Hall said in an interview. "Shylock is about the outsider, the man coming into the society which he is foreign to, which was very much Dustin's situation coming into an English theater company."

Assessing Hoffman's achievement toward the end of the London run, Hall said: "Shylock is wheeling and dealing and surviving, and that's what Dustin seizes hold of. To me, he answers the question, is Shylock comic or tragic, by saying he's both: he's a man."

The Shylock character traditionally provokes the accusation that Shakespeare was anti-Semitic, and anyone involved in staging "The Merchant of Venice" knows how sensitively it must be handled.

Simon Dutton Is 'The Saint' In Movie Series

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Author Leslie Charteris was skeptical when Simon Dutton, the 12th actor to play Simon Templar in "The Saint," told him his mother had named him for the famous semicrooked detective.

Charteris, who wrote the best-selling novels about the dashing character, asked Dutton whether he actually had been named for the character or if he'd made it up "for the newspapers," the actor said.

"When I assured him my mother was a fan he invited her to his 81st birthday party in London."

"The Saint" that Charteris created is a swashbuckler of dubious morality, a "Robin Hood of crime" dedicated to justice. Roger Moore, who played him on TV from 1967 to 1969, is perhaps the best-remembered of those who have tackled the role.

Dutton's version is part of the syndicated "Mystery Wheel of Adventure." Six two-hour movies of original "Saint" mysteries are among the 10 shows being telecast by 102 stations.

Since "The Saint" sought adventure all over the world, the six new TV movies about him were filmed on location in London, Paris, Berlin, Luxembourg and Australia. All the stories are original.

Dutton met Charteris during a visit to New York. Charteris, born Leslie Yin in Singapore of a Chinese father and an English mother, is an American citizen who lives in England.

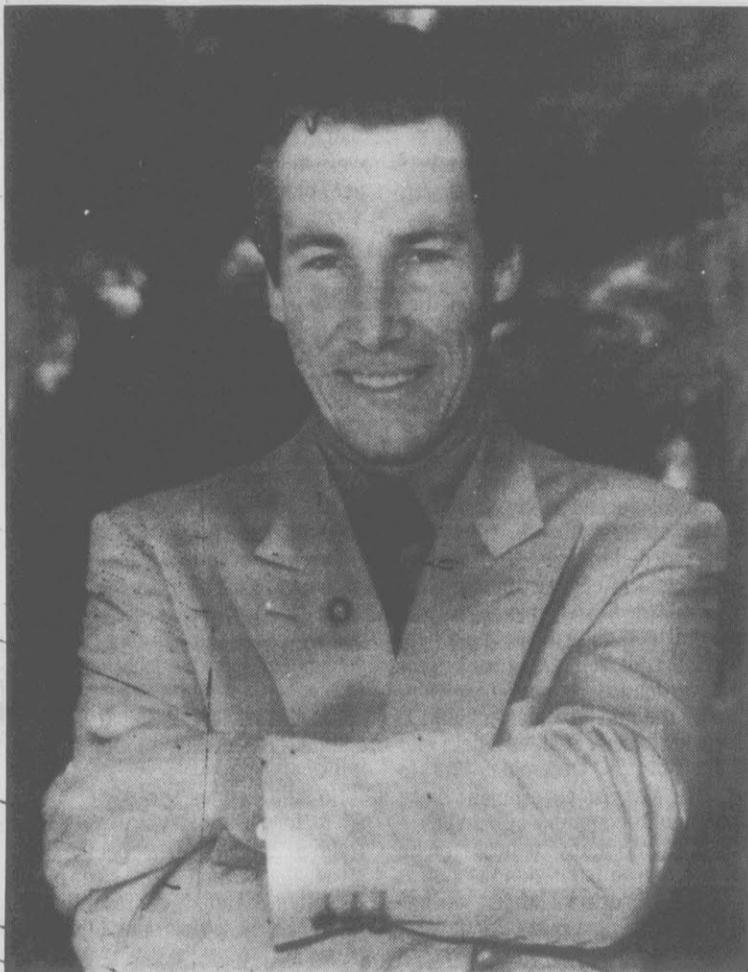

His mysterious, urbane adventurer made his first appearance in "Enter the Saint" in 1930, the first of 45 novels. "The Saint" also has appeared in movies, television, radio and comic strips.

When interviewed, Dutton, whose thick black hair is turning gray at the temples, was just back from filming the final movie in Sydney, Australia. He stopped here en route to his home in London.

"Simon Templar is really an adventure seeker," he said. "He becomes involved in the crimes in various ways. Maybe a friend gets in trouble. He smells out danger and intrigue. He works both sides of the law under various aliases. He's very much a product of English public schools. His clothes are from Saville Row."

"He's from a wealthy, aristocratic family but probably from the wrong side of the sheets. He's not a playboy. He makes his living as a jewel thief. Charteris was very much influenced by Raffles, the gentleman burglar. The heavies in the novels were based on real people Charteris met in his travels."

The British actor, 31, has been on American television before. He starred in a CBS movie based on Agatha Christie's "Man in a Brown Suit."

Estefan's Return To Roots Is Smart Business

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — With the recording of two of the Miami Sound Machine's latest songs in Spanish as well as English, Gloria Estefan's return to her roots is not only a nice gesture, but smart business.

Estefan, a Cuban immigrant, recorded and released her hit song "Don't Want to Lose You" in English and Spanish this summer. Another song, "Oye Mi Canto" ("Hear My Voice"), was just released in Europe with the bilingual touch. Even the music videos were done in both languages.

"I just thought it was a little plus," Estefan said prior to leaving on a European concert tour. "I don't want to alienate my Spanish fans because they have been good to me for a long time."

The Miami Sound Machine is one of the first major rock groups to put both a Spanish and English version of the same song on one LP.

"Cuts Both Ways" has hit the top of the charts, and the compact discs and cassettes have the two different versions.

"What is happening for the Spanish-speaking people is they feel proud about it because you didn't forget them, so you identify with them," said Emilio Estefan, Gloria's husband and music producer who also is a Cuban immigrant. "For the American people, it's something new. And they like it."

That tested true when Estefan and the group recorded and released "Anything for You" in both English and Spanish a couple of years ago.

"Anything for You," in English was a hit, and the Spanish version gave it that final kick," said Larry Stessel, vice president of West Coast operations in Los Angeles for CBS records, the label that distributes the Miami Sound Machine.

That "final kick," perhaps, is coming from the growing audience of Hispanics in the United States. The U.S. Census Bureau estimates the country's Hispanic population will have grown by 34.5 in the last 10 years. Yet, the total population is expected to have grown only 9.9 percent.

And that Hispanic population is younger than the overall population, which translates into more sales and more exposure.

Irish rocker Laura Branigan said she hopes to capture a bigger Hispanic market by making two separate albums. Branigan, who recorded "Gloria" in 1982, is working on two albums that will have the same music but English lyrics on one and Spanish on the other.

Other artists also have cashed in on the growing market. Most artists have taken their hit English songs and then translated them into Spanish, such as Suzanne Vega who did her Top 10 hit "Luka," and Sting who did the same with "Fragile."

But few if any have put the Spanish-version songs on a new album and released the songs to radio listeners in both languages at the same time, Estefan said.

"We don't do it because it's more commercial or because we want to sell more albums. We do it because it's very natural for us," Estefan said. "People feel proud about it, and we feel very lucky that we've been able to do something for our people."

The Who Enter Rock Hall of Fame

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The Who, The Four Tops, The Platters, Bobby Darin and Hank Ballard have been selected to enter the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, the Daily News reported today.

Joining those rock notables, in the forefathers category, will be Louis Armstrong and Ma Rainey, the newspaper said.

The Who — whose hits include the song "My Generation," the rock opera "Tommy," and guitarist Pete Townshend's in-concert destruction of his instruments — will be inducted along with the other nominees at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York in a ceremony in January, the newspaper said.

The hall's announcement was expected at a news conference today in Cleveland, where the four-year-old Rock and Roll Hall of Fame is based.

Cleveland has raised $37 million of the $40 million necessary to build a museum honoring the new members as well as the 56 people and groups already inducted, said the hall's director, Larry Thompson.

Holiday Mailing Provided Romance, Marriage

Dear Abby: I participated in Operation Dear Abby in 1987, never dreaming what it would lead to. (Given the odds, I thought my chances for winning the lottery were far more favorable than finding a husband!)

I lived in Cleveland, and Cesar was stationed in Korea. I sent one Christmas card with a letter to each of the five addresses you printed in your column. That was in December of 1987. The other correspondences faded out, but the one with Cesar continued, and we really got to know each other through our letters and the pictures we exchanged.

As luck would have it, Cesar was relocated to Tucson, Ariz., in

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

April. This gave us an opportunity to call each other as well as write letters. Cesar's leave was scheduled for Sept. 1, 1988, and that's when he came to Cleveland to meet me.

Our meeting was a dream that had come true. We were married six days later -- Sept. 6. Abby, this is the best thing that has ever happened to us. I tease him and call him my "mail-order groom."

How can I thank you? -- Shelly

K. Davila, Mayfield Heights, Ohio

Dear Shelly: You just did. Congratulations and best wishes for a lifetime of happiness.

Dear Abby: Last year, through Operation Dear Abby/America Remembers, your readers sent more than 6 million pieces of mail to our troops in Okinawa, Germany, the Philippines, Iceland, Korea, Europe and beyond to tens of thousands of young men and women in the military stationed abroad and at sea during the holidays. In addition to the avalanche of holiday cards and letters, there were home-made brownies, cookies and fruitcakes!

This year, the Pentagon has provided us with a list of ships and units ranging in size from five people to 500. Wouldn't it be wonderful if groups of caring Americans -- schools, service groups, business clubs, and perhaps towns and cities -- would "adopt" a unit for the holidays? Imagine how proud the small towns across America would be knowing they are taking care of "their" troops across the ocean. Elementary schoolchildren would work on special class projects, and teen-agers would also join in the operations. Imagine how thrilled the troops would be!

I hope that this idea, in addition to the usual Operation Dear Abby deluge of mail, proves successful. With deepest thanks to you, your staff and your millions of readers for all your love and concern. -- Donald P. Grimes, National Chairman, 1989 American Remembers Campaign

Dear Readers: You have proven yourselves to be generous beyond belief, and I hope this year you will open your hearts to our servicemen and women who will be far from their homes and families for the holidays. In past years, your cards, letters and goodies were tremendous morale-boosters. Some wonderful friendships were formed -- and a few even found romance.

Those interested in adopting a unit, please write to: America Remembers Campaign/Operation Dear Abby, P.O. Box 13202, Lansing, Mich. 48901. This year, no stamped, self-addressed envelope is necessary because Taco Bell has generously volunteered to pick up the cost of return mailing.

If you would like to write to Abby, send hour letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69410, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Halloween Can Scare Youngsters

By Lesly Tamarin Mega, M.D.

Halloween will soon be here. Many children will be trick or treating and meeting scary monsters and other creatures. Parents have asked the following questions how these encounters affect their children.

Lots of children are genuinely frightened by monsters while other children seem to be fascinated with them. Why?

Most children are frightened and fascinated by monsters at the same time. Their interest in monsters is normal and a result of the anxieties and stresses they experience. Generally, the creatures children use in their play, fantasies, or dreams come from their own inner wishes or something they fear outside themselves. Children often experience feelings and urges that confused them and lead to their need to gain control over them. For example, when Johnny is feeling aggressive and has the urge to bite, this upsets him. He can gain control of this urge through imagining a battle with giants, super heroes, or monsters. He can pretend that his monster toy is biting another toy. In this way, he has not hurt anyone and no one hurts him.

On the other hand, a child might be frightened by some realistic experience. For example, Johnny's parents may have scolded or punished him for doing something wrong. He may then see his parents as a menacing giant. Again, through play, he can re-enact the experience. He can do this by controlling the toy monster which represents his parent or teacher. He can even play the role of the giant or monster. In this way, he can better understand what has happened what has happened and gain control over his feelings.

Are younger children more frightened of Halloween?

Children fear different aspects of Halloween depending on their age. Two to three year old children are more frightened of people dressed in masks and costumes which distort normal human features or look like angry, vicious monsters which could hurt them. It is not unusual for a two or three year old to be petrified by a clown face like Ronald McDonald.

Children from three years of age and older are more apt to be afraid of the dark and spooky, imaginary creatures. Being surprised or caught off guard scares them because they are afraid something terrible will happen to them.

What do you suggest about taking children to haunted houses?

Many children enjoy going through a haunted house because it includes all the fears already mentioned: darkness, creatures, and surprise. Going through this scary make-believe situation challenges these fears and helps children conquer them. However, it is important to consider the child's life. Remember that young children have trouble knowing what is real and what is make believe. A sensitive or troubled child might be easily upset.

General rules to follow are:

1. Don't coax or force a child into a haunted house. Don't let his friends push him into doing this.

2. Have an adult equipped with a flashlight lead younger children through the haunted house.

3. Be certain your child knows how to exit the haunted house if he becomes upset.

Are there special things a parent can do to make Halloween less frightening?

It is important to show young children that there are harmless people under the masks and costumes before the first trick or treaters arrive. You can do this by letting them put masks on their dolls, stuffed animals, themselves, and you. An adult should accompany all younger children who want to go trick or treating. For older children, evaluate your neighborhood before letting your child go out on their own. In general, children feel safer when they go in groups.

Best wishes for a fun filled Halloween!

Children Change Restaurant Guidelines

The children of the '80s are veterans of car dining. They've been eating off dashboards and backseats since they were old enough to lose french fries in their diapers.

The etiquette for eating in a car, as I've recently written, is rather basic. If you get the wrong sandwich, you do not spit on it and throw it on the floor. Simply stick it in Daddy's ear. Other diners are not amused by two straws dripping malt shoved up your nose. Never order food in excess of your body weight. And remember, onion rings in the car cushions do not improve with time.

Since we have spawned an entire generation of peripatetic diners, most of these children haven't a clue regarding the rules of restaurant dining. I thought it might be helpful to children if these rules of etiquette were spelled out.

At Wits End

— First, to clarify the term, a restaurant is a place where you are not required to balance food between your knees or bag your own trash.

— Whereas in a car you can sit anywhere you like, a restaurant has guidelines. The younger the child being served, the closer you are in proximity to the kitchen. Age is also a factor in how quickly you are served. (We once had a waiter in Canada who said, "Could I get you your check?" and we answered, "How about the menu first?") — There are no toys in a restaurant. You may think that the piano leg in the center of the table is there to bludgeon a sibling with. However, it is a pepper mill. It is handled only by a waiter, who will hoist it like a chalice and then ask if you want him to serve you some. It doesn't matter what you say. There's no pepper in it anyway.

— Never order anything you can't pronounce. (It has always amazed me that a toddler who still goes "tinkle tinkle in the toi toi" is able to order escargot and filet mignon medium-rare with bearnaise on the side.)

— Steer clear of any item with the notation, "Price Subject to Season."

— Know that parents act differently in a restaurant than they do in a car. If you have an ice cube war with someone at the next table, your parents will say nothing. If you treat gravy as a finger food, they will remain silent. If you stage a temper tantrum because the umbrella in your Shirley Temple drink will not go up or down, they most likely will smile. But be advised that the minute you hit the car, there will be a serious discussion on whether or not you will be allowed to grow up. That's it, kids. Bon appetit!

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: The trend is $1 to $1.75 higher at N.C. buying stations. Kineston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 48.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 48.00; Wilson 48.00. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 39.00; Wallace 40.00; Spivey's Corner 39.00; Rowland no quote.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Final weighted average of 48.21 fob dock or equivalent. The market tone for next week's trading is steady to firm. The live supply is adequate for a good demand. Average weights desirable to occasionally heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 2,115,000, compared to 2,072,000 last Tuesday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply adequate for a good demand. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 21 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady, to 1 cent lower, 2.51-2.61 in East and mostly 2.62-2.76 in the Piedmont; New crop No. 1 yellow soybeans steady to 1 cent lower at 5.33-5.48 in East and mostly 5.38-5.48 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.67-3.76; new crop wheat 3.16-3.26; P.I.K. certificates steady to 1/2 percent higher and ranged from 98 to 99 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated again early today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 20.29 points to 2,642.62 in the first half-hour of trading.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones more than 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 316 higher, 651 lower and 507 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 27.92 million shares as of 10 a.m. EDT.

The government reported a slight decline in factory orders. Orders for "big ticket" durable goods slipped 0.1 percent in September, the Commerce Department reported.

UAL's opening on the NYSE was delayed due to an excess of sell orders over buy orders, with indications that it could open 20 to 30 a share below Monday's close of 178 3/8.

UAL's board of directors said late Monday it has decided to keep the parent company of United Airlines independent for now as it examines alternatives to a $300-a-share buyout plan that collapsed earlier this month.

Among other active issues in early trading on the NYSE were Phillips Petroleum, down 1/2 at 22 5/8; McDonald's, down 3/8 at 31, and Philip Morris, down 1/8 at 43 3/4.

tion's proposal when it meets Nov. 6.

But that proposal only covers about half of what the school system will need by 1994, West said.

"The $25.7 million will make a dent in existing needs," he said. "It will not completely eliminate them."

"We'll need an additional — minimum — $25 to 30 million," West said. Inflation and increased building costs may cause that number to go up, he said.

County officials say a bond issue is the only way to meet the school system's needs without a property-tax increase.

"I think that everyone should be aware of the fact that if it's not by a bond issue then the county commissioners are going to have to appropriate the money," school board member Mark W. Owens Jr. said.

A tax increase will probably be needed to pay for school construction if the bond issue fails, County Manager Kramer Jackson said. "I would say we're more likely to have a tax increase if the bond issue fails."

"If you don't vote for the bond issue, your taxes are likely to go up," Eugene James, chairman of the county Board of Commissioners, said.

we had and that BB&T was willing to pay an excellent price to our shareholders," Warren said.

B. Gloyd Stewart Jr., director of investor relations at BB&T in Wilson, said today that the acquisition of First Federal would solidify the holding company's assets in the area.

"It would greatly increase our market shares in Pitt County and Greenville," Stewart said from the Wilson office. "We're delighted at being able to get together with such a fine organization as First Federal."

Warren said First Federal became the target of several holding companies earlier this year when Congress passed legislation that bailed out the savings & loan industry and allowed commercial banks to buy healthy S&Ls.

"Because First Federal is such a strong company, a number of people were interested in acquiring our company," Warren said. "So, we could work at achieving the best deal, the best price for our stockholders and be able to assure its a win-win situation for our customers, employees and the community we serve."

First Federal reported assets of $141 million Sept. 30. As of June 30, 1988, First Federal controlled 14.8 percent of banking deposits in Pitt County, compared with BB&T's share of 8.6 percent. The local savings bank is among the most profitable S&Ls in the state.

In its fiscal year ended June 30, First Federal's return on assets was 1.05 percent, compared with the statewide average of 0.26 percent. Its net income increased by 8 percent in the fiscal year, rising to $1.4 million.

First Federal was founded in Pitt County in 1937 and currently operates five offices, two in Greenville and one each in Farmville, Ayden and Grifton.

Valvano Responds To New Charges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano said he rejects assertions that he cares more about player eligibility than education, but accepts other criticisms and vows to seek solutions to the problems.

"The easier thing would have been to run," Valvano said on Monday.

N.C. State's acting chancellor, meanwhile, said he had not plans to fire Valvano.

Larry K. Monteith said "it's hard to find any pride at all" in the findings of the Poole Commission report, but he said he thought several of the improper acts cited in the investigation had ended.

Asked whether he planned to fire Valvano, he said: "With the knowledge I have, the answer is no."

Valvano said he disagreed with the assertion that he cared more about player eligibility and raising money than he did about the education of his players.

"That we don't care about (academics) just as long as we win basketball games — that isn't true," Valvano said. "Ask our players and talk to them about the rules they themselves have accepted, about

Press Suit Filed Regarding Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The News and Observer Publishing Co., the North Carolina Press Association and a free-press foundation filed suit Monday to force the Poole Commission to disclose minutes, investigative reports and other documents from its probe of men's basketball at North Carolina State University.

The organizations, in a complaint filed in Wake County Superior Court, contend the items are public records that by law must be made available to the public.

The attorney who filed the suit, H. Hugh Stevens Jr., said the documents would answer questions about how the commission conducted its investigation. A report on the commission's work, written by the group's chairman Sam Poole, was released last weekend.

"The public's always entitled to have records of what is being done on their behalf, and of course, it's double important here because (commission members) have gone to great pains to say the report we got was not necessarily endorsed or even agreed to by all the members of the commission," Stevens said.

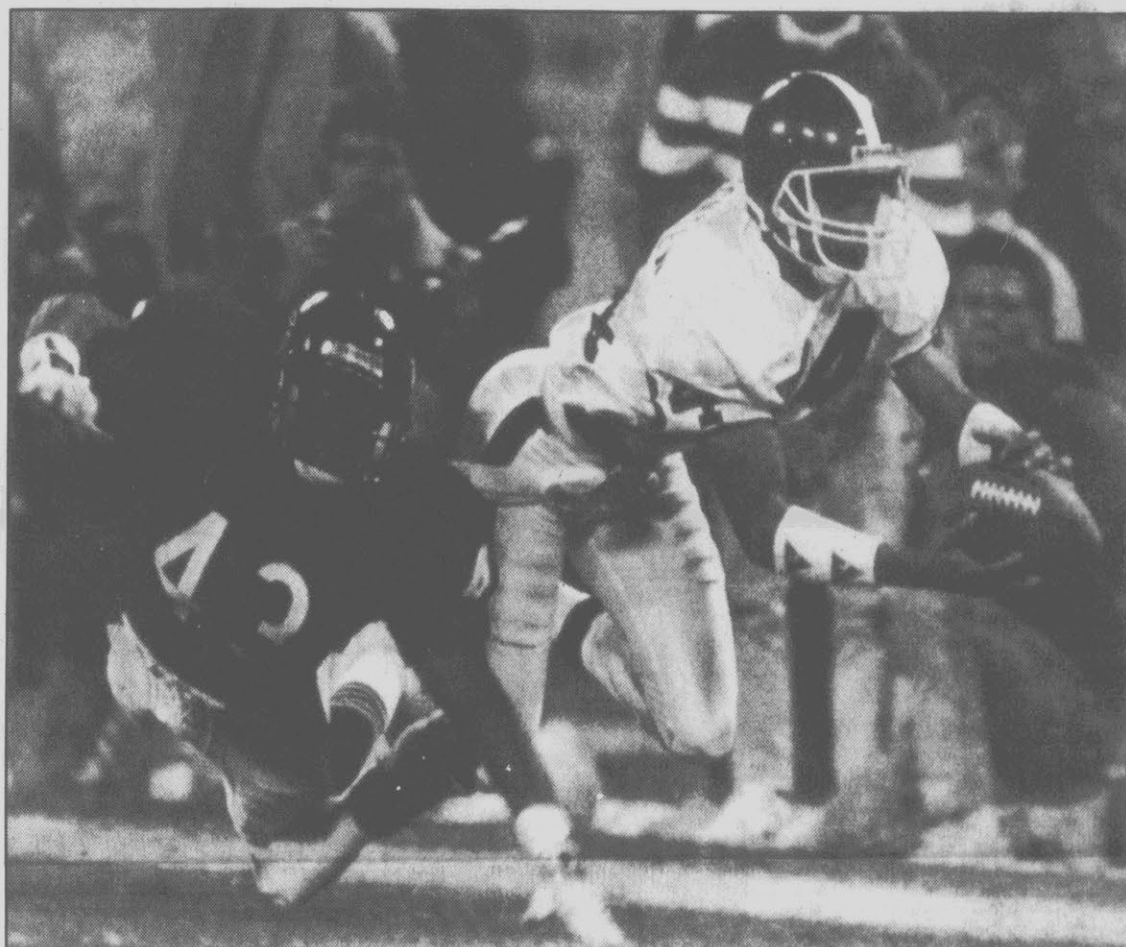

"I think at this point one of the focal points is becoming not only what did they find out about N.C. State basketball but what did they do and how thoroughly did they investigate."

Return To Form Kosar Returns To Basics, Success

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Bernie Kosar, the awkward one, the one with the slow feet and the odd release, never worried much about looking good on a football field, as long as he got results.

But when his unusual throwing style began producing interception after interception, he decided it was time to go back to basics.

"I worked on my mechanics. It's something that I've had to concentrate on since I've been in high school," Kosar said after passing for 281 yards and two touchdowns as the Cleveland Browns beat the Chicago Bears 27-7 Monday night.

Kosar and the Browns had been mired in a four-game offensive slump during which they had produced 47 points. They hit bottom a week ago, when he threw four interceptions in a 17-7 loss to Pittsburgh, a team the Browns had defeated 51-0 in the season opener.

"It was important for us as a team and specifically for the offense to play a solid game," Kosar said. "There were still some mistakes, but there were no turnovers, and that helped us put together a couple drives."

To erase the slump, the Browns went to a ball-control, short-passing game that produced 22 completions in 29 attempts against a banged-up Bears' defense that was missing such stalwarts as linemen Dan Hampton and Richard Dent.

Rookie Eric Metcalf opened the scoring with a 3-yard touchdown reception on the Browns' third possession, capping a 14-play, 73-yard drive on which Kosar completed seven passes for 56 yards. Those were the only points in a first half that featured five punts by each team.

A 10-play drive in the third quarter set up the first of two Matt Bahr field goals, and Metcalf scored his second touchdown of the night on a 7-yard run three plays after Frank Minnifield intercepted a Mike Tomczak pass at the Chicago 25. That made it 17-0 late in the third period.

Then came the killer. Cleveland's defense stopped the Bears on downs at the Browns' 2-yard line, and on

Gubicza Gets Top Ranking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — His record was only 15-11 and most managers would rather have his teammate, Bret Saberhagen. Still, the Elias Sports Bureau computer says Mark Gubicza is the best player in baseball.

Gubicza, the Kansas City Royals right-hander, was rated at 96.528 on a scale of 100. San Francisco Giants first baseman Will Clark was next at 96.316, followed by Saberhagen at 96.230.

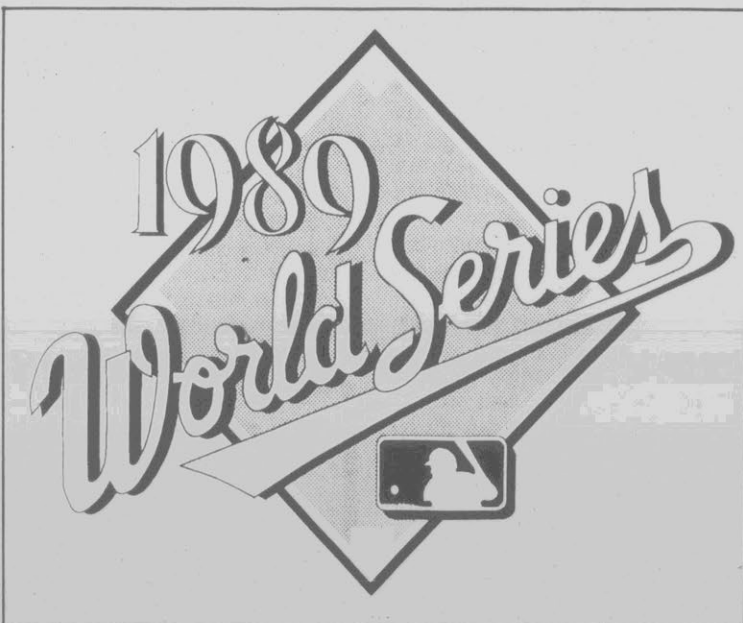

The rankings, used to determine free-agent compensation, are based on statistics compiled over a two-year period. The formula was agreed to by the Major League Baseball Players Association and the owners' Player Relations Committee in the 1981 and 1985 strike settlements. It is based on statistics such as batting average, plate appearances, home runs and runs batted in for hitters, and starts, innings, earned-run average, saves and strikeouts for pitchers.

Gubicza would have been eligible for free agency following the World Series but agreed to a three-year, $7.4 million contract in September. He took over as the American League's top-rated starter from Boston's Roger Clemens, who was baseball's top-rated player in 1988.

Shortstop Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals and second baseman Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs led their positions for the sixth straight season. Mike Schmidt's eight-year reign as the National League's top third baseman was ended by Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla. Schmidt, who retired in May, had been the only player to lead his position in each year of the rankings.

The New York Mets placed five starting pitchers among the NL's top 17. Frank Viola, acquired from the Minnesota Twins on July 31, was second, followed by David Cone, fifth; Dwight Gooden, 13th, Sid Fernandez, 16th, and Ron Darling, 17th. Bob Ojeda, another Mets starter, ranked 33rd among 68 pitchers.

Clark, selected most valuable player of the playoffs, led NL first basemen for the second straight year.

Series Losing Its Importance

Players Have Other Worries, Concerns To Deal With

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — The result of the World Series is becoming less and less important to many of the Giants and Athletics. They just want to finish a job and go home to their families.

Oakland and San Francisco will be at Candlestick Park on Friday for the resumption of the Series. They're just not sure what it all means anymore.

The earthquake that hit the Bay area on Oct. 17 has caused a record 11-day layoff between Series games.

"I wish we were in Florida right now," Giants reliever Don Robinson said. "I've got a new home I haven't seen. The last time I saw it was February. It was just a pile of wood."

The earthquake also caused death and destruction.

The A's and Giants are aware how much the area is suffering, but their personal sense of disappointment is also beginning to surface as life in the region gets back to normal.

"I can't see it being the same," Giants catcher Terry Kennedy said. "I'll be glad when it's over. I haven't seen my kids in some time now."

After taking a break from workouts on a rainy Monday, the teams will resume practice today.

"Batting practice and intrasquad games get old," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "We've spent time since the beginning of spring training getting the players motivated and ready to play. Then all of a sudden, it is destroyed and taken away from us. You can't replace in a week what we've been doing in eight months."

Bay Area Baseball Fans Set For Games To Resume

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — The people in the Bay area are working again and doing lots of other everyday things, too.

Some were buying Christmas cards at Woolworth on Monday, while others took advantage of a 20 percent discount on men's winter jackets at Macy's.

Many are also waiting for the World Series to start again.

The Series is scheduled to resume Friday night with Game 3 at Candlestick Park following a delay because the Oct. 17 earthquake.

Mostly, people are just thankful there's a Candlestick Park and a city to have a World Series.

The delay in the Series is a minuscule inconvenience compared to what many in the Bay area have gone through since last Tuesday.

The World Series has waited for nature before, although never for an earthquake.

The New York Giants and Philadelphia Athletics met in the 1911 Series and waited six days between Games 3 and 4 because of rain.

A headline in the San Francisco Chronicle read: "Rainy Weather is Killing Interest in the World's Baseball Series."

That Series picked up on Oct. 24 in Philadelphia and the A's went on to win six games.

Christy Mathewson, who went 1-2 in the Series for the Giants, said, "A certain amount of rest has done the team good, because I believe that some of the players were a little stale; but too much is going to hurt them."

It was raining in San Francisco on Monday morning, and the A's and Giants are in the World Series again. But rain isn't the reason this Series is being delayed.

Last Tuesday, 31 minutes before Game 3, the Bay area was hit by a devastating earthquake.

The 11 days between games is the longest in World Series history. For the record, the Oakland leads the best-of-7 Series 2-0.

"All I want to know is who's bringing the Thanksgiving turkey," Giants reserve catcher Bill Bathe said.

Commissioner Fay Vincent was hoping to resume the Series on Tuesday, but San Francisco mayor Art Agnos said the city wasn't ready.

"I think it's absurd," Oakland's Dave Parker said of the delay. "They're taking a lot away from what the Series represents."

Eighteen World Series since 1903 have been delayed by rain, cold weather and now an earthquake.

"Baseball is quite good at dealing with the rain," Vincent said. "But we're just learning about dealing with earthquakes."

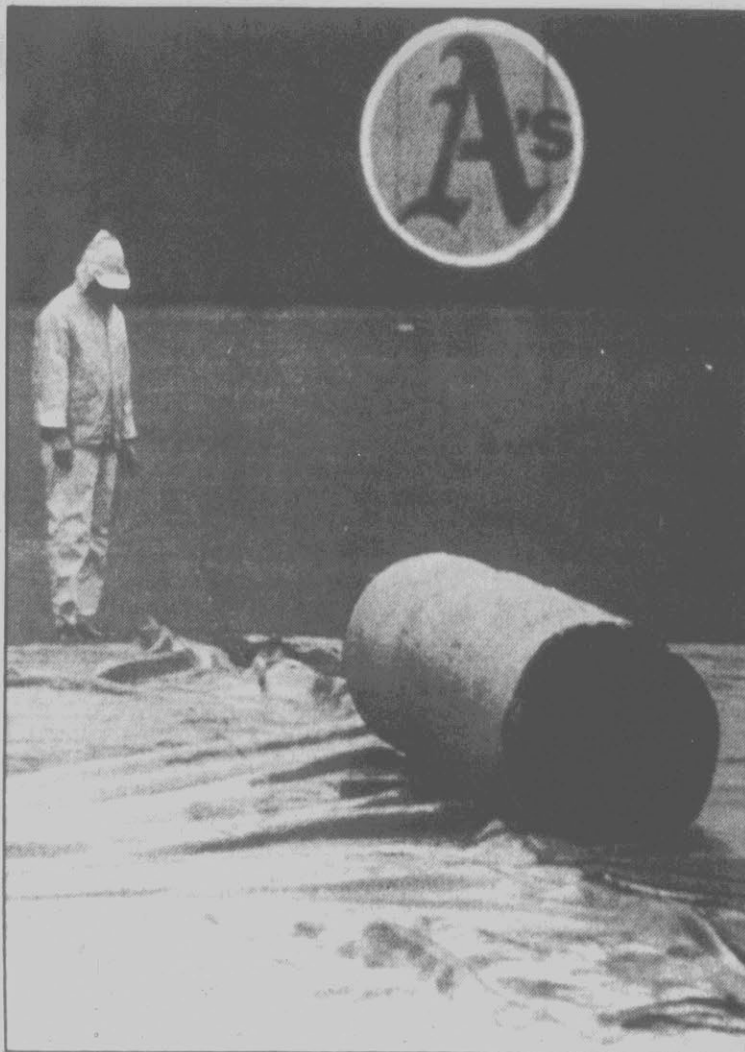

San Francisco recovered in no time.

The cable cars were operating within 48 hours of the earthquake and the opera was back on stage Friday.

"All I know is, I watched what went on in this area this weekend. And I watched what went on in that town (San Francisco)," a slightly disturbed Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "There was other entertainment. Why was it appropriate to have operas and plays?"

Agnos' decision on the Series had to include consideration of what engineers, police and community leaders said. In past Series delays, the commissioner only had to listen to the weatherman.

In 1962, the New York Yankees played the Giants in the first World Series in San Francisco and three games were rained out before Game 6 was played at soggy Candlestick.

Hawkins Captures Football Contest

James Hawkins of 1228 Farmville Blvd., Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest. Hawkins correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 32 games listed in last week's contest pages. Second place went to Victor Harper of 1108 Legion St., Greenville, who picked the winners in 25 of the 32 games. His victory came through his point total guess, hitting the actual total of 77 right on the nose. That total was scored in two games. Alabama's 47-30 win over Tennessee and Syracuse's 49-28 victory over Rutgers. One other person, Susan Tuten of Rt. 5, Cypress Shores, Washington, N.C., also had 25 correct picks but was further off the point total with a guess of 84. The next contest in the series appears in today's edition.

Beamer Hospitalized For Chest Pains

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer, who suffered mild chest pains during the Hokies' game at East Carolina Saturday, was hospitalized Monday for tests and observation, a Virginia Tech spokesman said.

Beamer, 43, said he is "feeling very well," according to spokesman Jack Williams.

Beamer underwent tests at Montgomery Regional Hospital in Blacksburg Sunday and was transferred Monday to Roanoke Memorial Hospital for further tests.

"He had chest pains as early as the third quarter and was feeling badly" after the East Carolina game, Williams said.

He said team physician Dr. Duane Lagan examined Beamer after the game and found that his pulse and blood pressure were normal.

Beamer felt better on the flight back to Blacksburg and had no problems Saturday night or Sunday, but decided to go to the hospital for tests at Lagan's suggestion, Williams said.

Williams said Beamer told him Monday afternoon that there had been no recurrence of the chest pains.

Beamer, who was listed in good condition, probably will be in the hospital through Tuesday, Williams said.

Assistant head coach Billy Hite will be in charge of the team in Beamer's absence. The Hokies, upset by East Carolina 14-10, face Tulane at home Saturday.

Beck Beats Azinger In Playoff

DAUFUSKIE ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Chip Beck beat Paul Azinger in a last-hole chip-off and won the seasonal finals in the Merrill Lynch Shoot-Out.

Beck, who lost a chip-off to David Frost on the final hole of the 1988 Shoot-Out finals, collected $90,000 in cash and a $100,000 zero coupon bond for his victory in the wind-up of the season-long series.

Azinger, who stayed alive with remarkable recoveries on the 11th and 17th holes at the Melrose Club, won $40,000.

FARMVILLE — The Bethel 9-10 Year Old Soccer team handed Farmville a 5-0 defeat Monday.

Doug Warren had two goals, while Cameron Young, Mark Roberson and Derrick Langley added the other scores.

Drug Accusations Fly At Marcum Trial

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Two South Carolina football players who had tested positive for drugs more than once were still on the roster when athletic director Bob Marcum was fired, a former interim director has testified in court.

And at least two South Carolina football players who had tested positive for cocaine played in the 1987 Gator Bowl, John D. Gregory said in U.S. District Court Monday, in Marcum's contract dispute with the university.

Gregory said the two players who were still on the roster were among several during Marcum's tenure who were identified as users of cocaine, marijuana, steroids and other drugs.

The names appeared on a list that, "I dealt with" in the first few days on the job, he said.

Clemson Reaps ACC Weekly Honors

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Four Clemson players were selected as Atlantic Coast Conference football players of the week by a panel of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association after the Tigers' 30-10 victory over North Carolina State.

Stacy Long was selected as the offensive lineman, Vance Hammond was named the defensive lineman, Dexter Davis was the defensive back, and Robert O'Neal won rookie honors.

Also named were Bruce McGonnigal of Virginia as the receiver of the week, and quarterback Billy Ray of Duke as the offensive back.

Long, a 6-foot-2, 280-pound junior tackle from Griffin, Ga., graded out at 82 percent with seven knockdowns in 67 plays. Long had the key block on both Clemson touchdowns in the first quarter when the Tigers jumped out to a 14-0 lead.

Hammond, a 6-7, 295-pound junior from Spartanburg, S.C., keyed Clemson's pressure defense with eight tackles. He led the team by pressuring the quarterback four times and graded out at 85 percent on his assignments.

Davis, a 5-9, 180-pound sophomore cornerback from Sumter, S.C., had a team-high 10 tackles and one interception. He graded out at 92 percent on his assignments.

O'Neal, a 6-2, 180-pound defensive back from Clarkston, Ga., had nine tackles, deflected one pass and intercepted another. O'Neal, who was playing with a bruised shoulder, graded out at 90 percent on 50 plays. He leads the ACC and is 18th in the nation in interceptions with five.

McGonnigal, 6-5, 221-pound tight end from Baltimore, caught a career-high eight passes for 137 yards and two touchdowns in Virginia's 47-28 victory over Wake Forest. He caught a 25-yard pass for a score in the third quarter and added a 20-yard catch for a score in the fourth quarter, and he passed the 100-yard mark in receptions for the second time this season and for the third time in his career. McGonnigal, who has six touchdown receptions, leads the Cavalier receivers with 15.8 yards a catch.

Ray, a 6-3, 205-pound junior from Dunwoody, Ga., passed for three touchdowns and rushed for a fourth in Duke's 46-25 victory over Maryland. He completed 20 of 32 passes for 308 yards, and did not throw an interception.

Hornets Trim Roster By Waiving Lett

The Charlotte Hornets waived Clifford Lett, a rookie free agent guard from Florida, team officials announced Monday.

Lett (6-3, 170) averaged 3.2 points and 1.4 assists per game for the Hornets during the pre-season schedule. The Hornets signed him to a contract Aug. 28 after playing for the team during the NBA Summer Pro League.

As a senior at Florida, Lett was the team captain and averaged 13.1 points per game. He played most of his career at the wing, but moved to point guard his senior year.

Helms Angry With The Reds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Tommy Helms says he's hurt and angry at the way the Cincinnati Reds have ignored him during their search for a new manager.

Helms, who became interim manager when Pete Rose was banned from baseball last August, has been identified by new general manager Bob Quinn as one of several candidates for the job.

But he still hadn't heard from the Reds following several days of reports that Dallas Green, fired in midseason by the New York Yankees, was the choice of owner Marge Schott. Helms thinks he deserves better treatment by the front office.

"Class-wise, they're not handling this very well," he told The Cincinnati Post, in an interview published Monday. "This is supposed to be a first-class organization, but they're not looking very good now."

"If this goes on like this, I'll still be a fan of the Reds' players. I'll always be that. But I won't be a fan of the Reds' management. They've laid me out to dry. I've got nothing planned."

Quinn, an executive with the Yankees when Green was the team's field manager, met with Green in Philadelphia last Friday, and said he was getting ready to make telephone calls to set up interviews with several other candidates. But Helms thinks the choice has been made.

"Dallas is the man. Don't let anybody tell you otherwise. It's obvious," Helms said. "He's been the guy for about 30 days."

"Is the call I'm going to get (from Quinn) a courtesy call or what?"

Sure, I'm angry. I know what's going on. I was born at night, but not last night."

Schott contacted Green after his firing by the Yankees. Green says he's thinking about whether he wants to return to baseball right now.

"There's no question the talent is good and it's a great city. I just don't know if I want to continue as manager," Green said. "It's something I really have to set my mind to."

Quinn has declined to say whether Green is the team's first choice, preferring to hedge his public statements.

"You leave yourself open to second-guessing if you say Dallas Green is the No. 1 choice or even the leading candidate," Quinn said. "If you do that and he isn't offered the job or he doesn't take the job and another person is hired, people will say that man was the second or third or fourth or fifth guy you wanted."

Quinn said Green indicated during their talk that he was uncertain about returning to baseball.

"He just needed some things cleared up in his own mind," Quinn said. "Our discussion didn't really have to do with New York or Cincinnati really. He's just not sure if he wants to come back to baseball at all."

"At this point, Dallas is — confused wouldn't be the right word, but he's concerned whether baseball is the best thing for Dallas Green. We respect the reasons for him not wanting to make a decision about that."

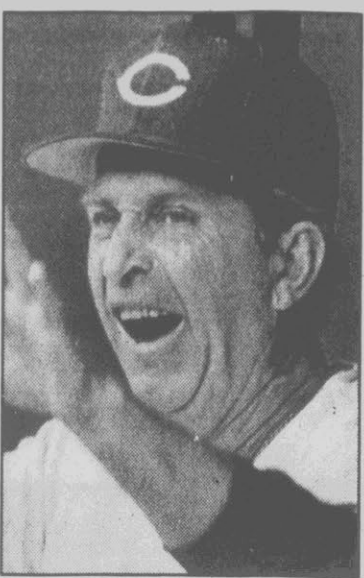

Most Reds players willing to discuss the managerial situation said they hope Helms returns next season. Helms, a former Cincinnati player, took over for Rose on Aug. 25, when the team was already out of contention in the National League West.

The Reds were 14-21 with Helms as interim manager. He thinks he deserves a chance to prove himself from the start of a season.

"I have nothing against Dallas Green," Helms said. "I've known him a long time and he's a good baseball man. But the thing that gets me is I keep hearing about all this loyalty stuff. Well, who's more loyal than me? I'm probably the most loyal person the Reds could even think about, plus I know the team."

Quinn declined to identify the other candidates for the job. He said he'd like to name a manager in the next two weeks.

Valvano Responds ...

the challenge. They want to be judged on what they do now, not on the past."

He said a report by a special commission of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and the NCAA is going to be "in the long run, very beneficial to our entire graduation program."

Allegations of wrongdoing in the program first appeared in advanced publicity of Peter Golenbock's book, "Personal Fouls."

In a 33-page report to the other commission members dated June 28 and released to the media during the weekend, commission chairman Sam Poole complained that N.C. State officials were uncooperative and that the "prevailing attitude" that "permeates the campus" was a rationalization of problems.

"A lot of this, remember, is Sam's opinion," Valvano said Monday. "I don't think we intentionally wanted to make their job difficult. If, in fact, we did so, then I regret that because it wasn't really intended."

Valvano said he may not have been receptive to the Poole Commission because N.C. State had already asked for an NCAA investigation.

"Initially we may have thought, 'My goodness, we have the NCAA in. That's the people who do this for a living. They know exactly where to look, what to ask and that kind of thing.' I mean, they're the body that shuts down sports if there's that type of problem."

"A lot of people may have felt, generally speaking, that your own university, through its own board, gets a chance to (investigate). Then you also have the NCAA. It's an uncommon thing."

Valvano said the entrance of the State Bureau of Investigation into the commission probe complicated the situation because it suggested criminal suspicion.

Tagliabue Tabbed As Top Choice Now

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Paul Tagliabue, who might have had an easier road to the NFL commissioner's job had he been the third or fourth choice of the owners rather than the second, is now the front-runner for the job that Pete Rozelle abdicated seven months ago.

The 48-year-old Washington lawyer, who has been one of Rozelle's top advisors for a decade, seems to have moved ahead of New Orleans Saints president Jim Finks in the balloting for the job.

Technically, the owners begin today's meeting as deadlocked in their search for a commissioner as they were two weeks ago in Texas.

But Mike Lynn of Minnesota, one of the leaders of the insurgent group that earlier blocked the election of Finks, said: "I think we can get something done this time."

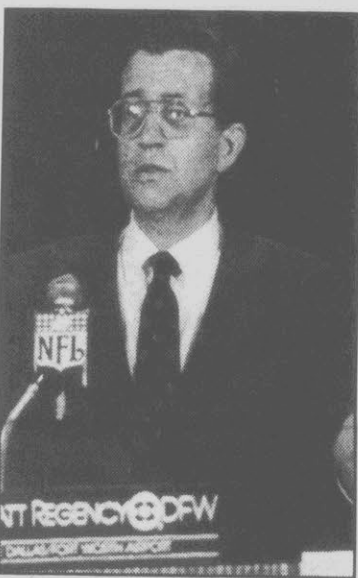

So far the owners have debated for 28 hours in meetings and endlessly by telephone in what has been the league's most celebrated and extended deadlock since 1960, when it took 23 ballots and 11 days to elect Rozelle, then the little-known, 33-year-old general manager of the Los Angeles Rams.

This time, there have been six ballots in the effort to find a successor to Rozelle, who announced his retirement in March and has been living in a New York hotel since September while his wife, Carrie, takes care of arrangements in their new home in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

The high-water mark was July 6, when Finks, the sole candidate recommended by the selection committee, got 16 votes, three fewer than required for election. Finks' election was blocked then by 11 abstentions, primarily from new owners and those who had largely been left out of power. A result of that impasse was that a second search committee was formed, this one made up of more than owners who had been in the NFL for 20 or more years.

When the owners got together again at Grapevine, Texas, they took four ballots. The last one ended in a tie, 13 votes each for Finks and Tagliabue, with two abstentions. That came after Tagliabue was made the candidate of the insurgents, despite his position close to Rozelle and his ties to many of the so-called old guard to which they object.

In fact, many Tagliabue sup-

porters thought he would emerge as a compromise candidate.

"I had envisioned that as the scenario," said a team official close to him. "I thought Paul might be elected, but as a compromise candidate if the others were deadlocked."

In fact, there were compromise candidates proposed, but only one, Pittsburgh owner Dan Rooney, might have had a chance. Rooney was one of the two owners who abstained on the final vote — the Los Angeles Raiders' Al Davis was the other — but Rooney was also a member of the original committee that had recommended Finks.

Rooney reportedly turned down the offer.

Rooney and Davis shifted in Grapevine, both willing to compromise while others among the older owners balked — not so much at Tagliabue but at the idea of giving into owners like Seattle's Kenneth Behring, Dallas' Jerry Jones and New England's Victor Kiam, none of whom has been in the league more than a year. Rooney and Davis reportedly would be willing to shift to Tagliabue if that's what it takes to get a commissioner.

Rozelle, meanwhile, has been working by telephone the last two weeks, urging compromise. He is known to be fond of Tagliabue, a former Georgetown basketball player.

Owners close to the commissioner have been holding out for Finks, although they might be persuaded to go for Tagliabue, who has good relations with both groups.

Suit Is Filed ...

The defendants are Poole, commission members Dean W. Colvard, C.C. Cameron and William A. Klopman; and commission secretary Hellon Senter.

The plaintiffs are the company that publishes The News and Observer and The Raleigh Times; the N.C. First Amendment Foundation Inc., a non-profit corporation formed by newspaper publishers; and the press association, a newspaper trade group.

The suit seeks:

— Minutes of the proceedings of the four-member commission, whose investigation ran from January through August.

— Written reports, based on interviews and related items prepared by the State Bureau of Investigation agents for the commission.

— Letters, memorandums, correspondence and other documents turned over to the commission by N.C. State officials and others, plus notes, outlines, drafts, summaries, memorandums and other documents prepared or used by commission members.

The commission's lawyer, Andrew Vanore, said in an Aug. 4 letter to Frank Daniels Jr., president of The News and Observer Publishing Co., that the commission had no legal obligation to disclose the items.

Vanore, chief deputy state attorney general, declined comment on the suit except to refer to the letter.

The organizations are seeking court permission for "expedited discovery" to allow their lawyers to question commission members about the nature of the records and how they were made and used.

Vanore declined to discuss the request, saying he would announce the commission's position at a court hearing on the question. A hearing is on the motion is set for Wednesday.

DUNKEL INDEX

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY Oct. 25
ARIES (March 20 to April 17): Discuss your present business affairs with an outside expert. Give your own family much desired compliments at this time.
TAURUS (April 18 to May 19): Entertain as much as possible at your residence today. Keeping promises, particularly those made to your partner, pays off dividends.
GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): A situation at home keeps you from entertaining at your residence. Bigger business aims can be secured by perusing outside periodicals.
MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): Go to see friends but use more care on the highway. Spend some extra money now to make your home more attractive.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You would be wise to invite close and confidential friends into your home. Every detail of your finances or business now is very important.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Happy times with good friends are best realized in intimate talks. Don't allow much confusion at home to get on your nerves.
LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Friends look on you with much favor and pride, so enjoy their society. Financial benefits depend upon the support given to you by others.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): There is so much activity of a business nature you need to be very selective. You need to do more what your friends expect of you now.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Carefully study every single factor involved before spending money. Home conditions will require much tact on your part.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Experienced friends should be encouraged now to aid you in your usual routines. Look for modern ideas through which to do your business.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Many new friends can now enter your life, but one friend gives confusing advice regarding business. Get your house in order for some interesting entertaining in the near future.
PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Old friends will expect a good deal of you now so don't disappoint them. Do special favors now for your attachment.

A WORLD OF BRIDGE FOR READERS

Opening lead: Ten of ♠ The Bridge World is making a special offer to readers of this column. For only $5, post free, readers can get six back issues of the magazine selected by us for its readability and interest. Order from the magazine at 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025. This article by Frank Stewart appears in one of the issues. "Everybody makes errors at the bridge table. Some people make subtle errors. Not me. I make glaring errors. That way, at least, I don't have to worry about whether I might have operated differently. I know. If you don't believe me, look at this.

 "This was matchpoints, and, as you can see, the opponents got a little carried away in the bidding. I led the ten of hearts, partner played the five and the ace won. Declarer, looking at about as many losers as winners, cashed the ace and king of trumps, and then belatedly led a queen of spades. I now led a club, which rode to South's jack. He ruffed his losing heart, led to the club ace, and played the ten and another spade, squeezing me in the minors—making six. Now, this was a fairly routine hand. I just ruffed my partner's good trick with my own natural trump trick, thereby endplaying myself into rectifying the count so I could be squeezed. And the dummy said, 'Nicely played!'

 There's a mixture of humor, theory, quizzes and interesting hands. You can't do better for five bucks!

Today's Cryptokuip clue: V equals P

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

When It Comes To Guaranteed Satisfaction...

LOWE'S

10% Low Price Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees our everyday low prices. If you find an identical advertised item at any retail competitor currently priced lower than ours, simply bring us written proof of that price. We'll match that price PLUS give you an additional 10% of the difference between the two prices when you buy from us. It must be an identical in-stock item. Closeout, discontinued and other clearance type sale items are excluded from this offer.

Satisfaction Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees that you will be satisfied with your purchase. If you are not completely happy with your purchase, simply return it along with your original sales receipt to any Lowe's store. We'll repair it, replace it, or refund your money.

Details on product warranties & Lowe's financing policy are available in store.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:

If an advertised item is temporarily out-of-stock, we will gladly issue a raincheck (except for items marked limited quantities, discontinued or closeout). When we restock you will be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price. Some stores may not stock all advertised items; however, every item shown can be ordered for you.
