Soviets Devalue Ruble

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The State Bank announced today that it was dramatically devaluing the ruble for people and businesses needing convertible currency to travel abroad.

The new rate of 6.26 rubles to the dollar is a tacit admission that the ruble is not worth anything near the existing official rate of .6277 per dollar.

It means that Soviet travelers, instead of receiving $1.59 per ruble, will instead get about 16 cents.

The announcement, reported by the official Tass news agency, indicated the standard rate will remain in effect for most transactions, such as for foreign firms doing business in the Soviet Union and for most international trade with the West.

"The special rate will be used by banking institutions in the U.S.S.R. when selling hard currencies ... to citizens traveling abroad on personal matters and when purchasing such currencies," Tass said.

"It will also be used when selling hard currencies ... to state, cooperative and other public and other enterprises for business trips of their workers abroad."

One Western diplomatic analyst, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the announcement could mark "an initial step toward eventual convertibility of the ruble" on international currency exchanges. But the source called it too small a step to have any obvious effect on the Soviet Union's foreign trade status.

Because the ruble cannot be freely exchanged for dollars, yen, marks and other hard currencies, it has virtually no value outside the Soviet Union.

Bakker Enters Prison To Begin 45-Year Term

By Paul Nowell
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Before sentencing PTL founder Jim Bakker to 45 years in prison, U.S. District Judge Robert Potter read from a recent letter the televangelist and his wife, Tammy, sent out soliciting donations.

The letter, mailed last month from Bakker's new TV ministry in Orlando, Fla., asked for 300 supporters to send in $1,000 apiece to alleviate a financial crisis.

"Sounds familiar to me," Potter said before imposing the lengthy prison term and fining Bakker $500,000 for defrauding his former supporters who sent him $158 million.

Potter refrained from ordering Bakker to make restitution to his victims, saying that issue needed to be resolved in bankruptcy court. Prosecutors had said Bakker cheated his followers out of as much as $100 million.

Tuesday's sentencing was the final chapter in Bakker's fall from power that began in March 1987 with revelations about his brief sexual encounter with former church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Enlarged Plaza To Open Friday

Mall Is Twice Its Former Size

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After Friday, shoppers from Greenville, Pitt County and the region will have easy access to a mall that is being billed as one of the largest shopping facilities in eastern North Carolina.

The Plaza, located at the intersection of 264 Bypass and Arlington Boulevard and formerly known as Pitt Plaza, is set to reopen Friday at twice the size it was a year ago, according to Lisa DeOreo, corporate marketing director for J.M. Kane & Co. of Raleigh, developers of the new mall.

"We set October 27 as our opening date and we are opening on time," Ms. DeOreo said. "We're really excited about establishing The Plaza as the hub of shopping for eastern North Carolina."

Ms. DeOreo said about 100 stores will be housed in the new mall which has been expanded from a structure of 250,000 square feet to one of 500,000 square feet. The new development sits on 45 acres of land, she said.

The extensive renovation project, which included the addition of 100,000 square feet of shopping space, parking and site improvements, revised mall entries and a new food court, cost the developers $35 million, Ms. DeOreo said.

She said construction, which began last July, went smoothly and the project was completed on schedule and within the anticipated budget.

"There were really no surprises. Everything went as we had expected. We're quite pleased with the finished product," DeOreo said.

Some of the major changes in the mall include the addition of a 46,000-square-foot Belk store, a new and enlarged 76,000-square-foot Brody's fashion department store and a completely remodeled 67,000-square-foot J.C. Penney store.

A new 54,000-square-foot Rose's store is also in the mall. Ms. DeOreo said the old Rose's store was completely demolished and a new one was built at a different location in the facility.

She said construction of the food court, which had been planned for the final phase of the renovation, is incomplete. She said developers had expected the delay, since the section housing the court remained opened while construction was finished on the other sections.

Ms. DeOreo said developers of The Plaza do not consider the new facility to be in competition with Carolina East Mall, another Greenville mall.

"We don't feel that we're in competition with them. We're not trying to take business away from Carolina East," Ms. DeOreo said. "What we're trying to do is enhance the area so that when people think of shopping they think of Greenville."

Mayoral Candidates Say Change Needed In Workshop Site

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Both candidates for mayor in the upcoming Greenville elections said Tuesday that changes should be considered pertaining to the venue of City Council workshop sessions.

At a candidates forum at the Willis Building, mayoral candidates Nancy Jenkins and incumbent Ed Carter voiced displeasure at the policy of conducting workshop sessions in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

As is current practice, the front doors of City Hall are locked at the workshop's usual starting time of 6 p.m. Subsequently, visitors must enter through the police department entrance to get to the meeting room.

Seating in the conference room is limited and on many occasions the council has ordered city staffers to set up folding metal chairs to accommodate the overflow. Seating at some sessions has been so limited that residents have been forced to stand while the council discusses the issues affecting them.

Responding to a question by one of the approximately 70 people attending the forum, both Ms. Jenkins and incumbent Ed Carter said changes in the current policy need to be considered.

"It's a problem that we have to work on," Carter said. "I think ultimately we'll look forward to moving (the meetings) downstairs."

"I've been very attentive in terms of attendance to the City Council workshop meetings and on several occasions I've started to move it to the larger chambers," he said.

Carter said the council has made an effort to alleviate overcrowding by first considering the issues which have brought the greatest numbers of people to the meeting. After discussion of those particular issues, the involved residents usually leave, allowing added working space in the conference room.

Meanwhile Ms. Jenkins, a current council member, expressed a desire to move the workshop sessions away from City Hall.

"I would like to see the meetings moved not just downstairs, but to various facilities all over town," she said.

"I am dedicated to openness in our meetings and I think there would be no finer way than for our workshop meetings to be at various places. They may be held at River Park North, or we may meet at the public works facility."

"Some of you don't visit these places. It would give the citizens and the

Police Talk Gunman Out Of House; Hostage Freed

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville police were able to defuse a potentially deadly situation Tuesday night and jail a man, who held a 20-year old woman at gun point in a Bremerton Drive home for about 40 minutes, without anyone being injured.

Police said a call was received at 8:11 p.m. from a nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital saying Jack Jones, 18, of Route 1, Bethel, who had admitted himself to the hospital's psychiatric unit earlier in the day, had walked away.

The nurse also told police that after leaving, Jones had called to say that "he was at his girl friend's house, that he had a gun and that he was going to kill her," Lt. C.B. Landreth said.

As a result of the report, police went to 530 Bremerton Drive, where Jones, armed with a .12-gauge shotgun, was holding 20-year-old Stephanie Bland in a second-floor bedroom, Landreth said.

At one point Jones fired a shot from the gun, which went through a wall and into the ceiling of an adjoining room, but no one was injured from the blast, Capt. R.M. Nichols said.

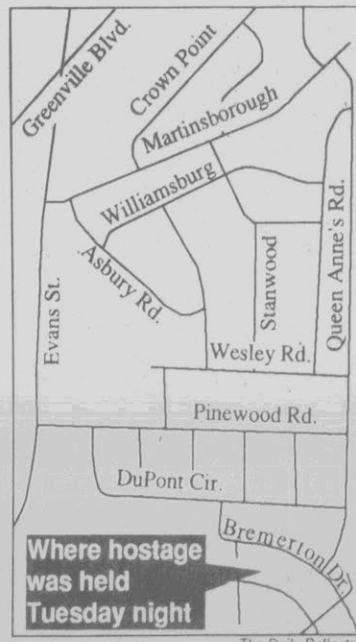

For most of the time, police dispatchers Davis Williams and Mike Webb kept Jones talking on the telephone, trying to keep him calm, and finally got Jones to agree to come outside without the gun, Nichols said.

Jones kept saying "he was not going to hurt her," Williams said Tuesday night after the standoff was over. "I talked him into going to the garage."

Nichols said that once Jones came downstairs, put down the gun and came to the door, "Landreth talked him out (of the house) face to face."

Fire Leaves 31,000 Homeless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — A husband hurled a kerosene lamp during a fight with his wife early today, triggering a massive seven-hour fire that left 31,000 people homeless and one person dead in a Manila slum, officials said.

Investigators said initial reports indicated the fire started in the house of Jose Gallen, the lone fatality. They said his unidentified wife was hurt when Gallen threw the kerosene lamp during an argument.

Residents said the fire in suburban Pasay city spread rapidly because of the fire department's slow response and poor equipment. One resident said a fire truck arrived but it had no water.

Another firetruck stalled and blocked a street, and had to be pushed away by the residents, witnesses said.

Fire investigator Renato Recto said they responded immediately as soon as the fire station received the alarm at 2:30 a.m., but vehicles parked on the narrow streets in the community prevented firetrucks from moving closer to the blaze.

The fire was put out seven hours later.

The Department of Social Work and Development said the houses of more than 6,000 families were destroyed or damaged, with a total of 31,000 people without shelter.

Court Slaps Zsa Zsa With A Stay In Jail

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The law slapped back at Zsa Zsa Gabor with a three-day jail term for slapping a policeman, ending a circuslike case that left the actress unrepentant and her husband fuming.

"Yes, I'm upset," said Miss Gabor's eighth husband, Frederick von Anhalt, as he stormed down the steps of the courthouse after Tuesday's sentencing. "I will ask the court if I can go to jail instead of my wife."

Miss Gabor, a one-time Hungarian beauty queen believed to be in her mid-60s to early 70s, snickered, smiled and made quips as Beverly Hills Municipal Judge Charles Rubin announced the sentence, peppering his statements with rebukes and warnings.

"Now you laugh," the judge said, before lecturing Miss Gabor about the 25,000 Americans who die yearly in alcohol-related accidents. Among Miss Gabor's misdemeanor convictions was driving with an open container of alcohol.

"The law applies to everyone, whether they are rich or poor and whether they are famous or not," Rubin said before sentencing her.

"In the absence of extremely mitigating circumstances ... if you strike a cop, you go to jail."

Along with the jail term, the judge ordered Miss Gabor to pay $12,937.50 in fines and restitution and to perform 120 hours of community service in a women's homeless shelter, where she may not talk about her case or give media interviews. Miss Gabor, who returned home after the verdict, was given until Dec. 29 to complete the jail sentence.

She also was ordered to be interviewed by a psychiatrist and to refrain from driving until she gets her real age on her driver's license.

During the trial, Miss Gabor claimed the license was stolen and altered by someone else.

The judge repeatedly attacked Miss Gabor's demeanor inside and outside of court, saying she was "milking this case for publicity" at the expense of the taxpayers who paid for the trial.

"She has demonstrated an attitude continually of contempt for law and order and these proceedings, without a hint of remorse or contrition of any kind," the judge said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Don't Make The Students Pay

Investing in the interests of its schoolchildren is the most important venture Pitt County can undertake. The upcoming bond referendum is the type of investment that can pay big dividends for these children. It shouldn't fall victim to short-sightedness.

At a meeting Sunday, around 100 parents organized the Alliance of Parents for Quality and Stability in the D.H. Conley Attendance Area. Frustrated by the fact that none of the school board's 12 members live in the D.H. Conley attendance area, the Alliance elected a board of directors. It plans to circulate a petition against board chairman George Williams and board member Frank Grooms, who represent the school district D.H. Conley is located in but live in another attendance area.

The group also wants to challenge the Dec. 12 $25.7 million bond referendum for building new schools in Pitt County. Members want to postpone the referendum until their concerns about representation are addressed.

'Undermining an issue that will ultimately benefit every child in every district in every corner of the county is a threat with serious implications.'

That stance is a myopic and self-serving one. The concerns of one area do not supersede the needs of 17,500 students, many of whom attend classes in run-down, substandard, crowded classrooms. These kids, along with the teachers, principals, janitors and cafeteria workers at the schools, must live day-to-day with the space problems and deplorable conditions a bond issue would address.

In 1986, Pitt County schools merged with Greenville schools to become a consolidated school system. It was not an easy marriage. Both partners had to put aside their own interests and adopt joint goals. One of those aspirations was an improved learning environment for the county's children. Another was to reach ahead to the future, to prepare, physically, for the 21st century before it arrives.

The long-awaited, badly-needed bond referendum, if it is successful, will give the county the means to accomplish just that.

But a handful of parents want to jeopardize the future of education to avenge their own interests. That's a short-sighted way to air concerns. Undermining an issue that will ultimately benefit every child in every district in every corner of the county is a threat with serious implications.

Would those parents have kids continue to attend classes in trailers? Would they have science students continue to struggle to learn on old laboratory equipment? Would those parents penalize the schools to benefit themselves?

That would be the result if their self-indulgence succeeds.

The parents of the D.H. Conley attendance area have a legitimate gripe about their representation on the school board. Threatening the bond referendum, however, is the wrong way to make their voices heard.

If the election districts are inadequately drawn, change them through legislation. If the school board is unresponsive, adjust it at the ballot box. But don't make the schoolchildren pay for these shortcomings.

Public Forum

To the editor:

What is the measurement of a great Nation? Is it the number of sporting events? Is it the number of space expeditions? Is it the number of task forces studying a problem?

Once again a natural disaster has struck our nation. The devastation of the California earthquake appears overwhelming. Via satellite we see people trapped in cars, crushed under tons of concrete, wandering in shock and disbelief. What is our response? Several persons casually ask "Are we playing baseball tomorrow night?" "Will we still send up space shuttle?" The president tersely states "We are putting together a 'Task Force'." These persons, did not say "How awful, we must help those in need" or "Quickly lets get supplies and help to those in trouble." A Nation that will be considered great by future historians is one which places overwhelming compassion above all else. Only then can future generations have a true foundation for greatness.

I am a reading volunteer. I feel I am making a big difference in someone's life. The thoughts of being able to bring someone from being a literacy handicap to a functional reader so that they can be self-helping are gratifying.

I can't imagine what it would be like to be in an earthquake or hurricane like Hugo and not know how to read or get help. They couldn't even read a telephone book or read where to get help in the newspaper. They would have to rely on someone to be responsible for telling them. If they knew where to go, they would not know how to fill out the paperwork to get help.

There are 27 million Americans who cannot read. The volunteer program is one way I can help America and share some of the gifts I have been given.

As the Bible says, "Some have more talents than others" but it's the way they are used that counts. Louis Braille of France, although blinded at the age of 3, created the Braille system of reading with hands after becoming a church organist and a teacher of science and music.

I thank God for the people who could teach you to read and stuck with it till you did. I love my neighbors and this is the way I can show it. They have talents that I don't also.

I challenge all of the reading public to join the fun of learning through reading. I have found that the reading materials they choose to read are very interesting and informative. That is one other nice benefit to the program. All teachers will admit they have learned a lot from their students.

To the editor:

As I sit here writing this letter, the sirens are squealing outside for the umpteenth time—I live on Memorial Drive. When returning home at 8:30 this morning, I drove past a "body" lying in the road. This the second body "body" in less than six months that I have seen lying in the road. The first was killed.

I heard nothing about that incident on either television or in the newspaper.

With election time right around the corner, I strongly feel like monitoring the speed of motorists on Memorial Drive should be an issue. Never have I seen a police officer stop anybody for speeding on this highway. The speed limit on this road is 45 mph not 55 mph or 60 mph!

While repairing old roads and constructing new ones is a major issue across North Carolina, let us not forget some of the reasons for doing this, one of them being—better traffic control—this includes the speed at which the road is meant to be traveled.

To the editor:

The editorial cartoon of Oct. 18 is a grossly distorted message. The cartoon implies the president does not protect the rights of the "poor and pregnant" because he will not use tax money to pay for abortions. This thinking reflects typical pro-abortion half truths by ignoring the presence of the prenatal child in the mother's womb. The belief of the pro-abortionists seems to be that if half the truth is ignored, people will forget all about it. I have not forgotten.

The deliberately avoided truth is "Every abortion kills a prenatal child". We know the child was alive before the abortion because if the child was not alive in the womb, the child's mother would not have been pregnant. We know the child was killed because the child is dead after the abortion. The prenatal child is not a disposable piece of tissue. He or she is a young human being with as much right to live as you and I. The president is to be commended for his stand in defense of "The right to 'live' your life..."

To the editor:

In Sunday's paper, Mayor Ed Carter stated that he has received nothing but positive feedback concerning the city's decision to cancel the traditional Halloween celebration this year. Mayor Carter, here's your first negative comment.

This action is just another message designed to make the students of ECU, already classified as "transient citizens," feel like intruders in this community.

Weren't the instigators of the trouble last year mostly high school students? Permanent (until they're old enough to get out of town, anyway) citizens of Greenville? Why are ECU students blamed yet again for something we didn't do? Does this remind anyone of the last N.C. State-ECU football game, where we were blamed for relatively minor wrongs, while the real perpetrators were Cary students?

I am also highly suspicious of George Saieed's comments. I have heard rumors that the "unanimous" vote to close downtown bars on Halloween was somewhat induced by the city. I find it hard to believe that the bar owners are happy to lose that much business. Rio certainly should be packed that night.

But I am most offended by Mayor Carter's attempts to sound tough. His assertions that the National Guard will be called if necessary and that we better think again before we bring machine guns downtown, is just self-righteous drivel. Mayor Carter, I wonder why you are making such a big deal out of this. Can you not find a costume to wear? Or are you trying to go as George Bush?

If East Carolina University were located somewhere else, Greenville would be exactly what it deserves to be... a tiny speck on the map that no one had ever heard of, nor would want to. I certainly wish I'd never heard of it.

If Medical Care Is Rationed, Ration It Across The Board

WASHINGTON — Soaring hospital and physician costs are putting a tremendous strain on America's medical system, and there is a growing consensus that something has to give.

So far that something has included such direct cost-cutting measures as a reduction in the length of the average hospital stay and such indirect adjustments as shifting more of the cost of group-health coverage from employers to employees.

But it isn't enough, and the idea is gradually taking hold that, sooner or later, we are going to have to ration medical care.

The Oregon Legislature has chosen to act sooner. Pending the necessary federal waivers, Oregon will soon begin an explicit program of rationing for Medicaid patients. Under the proposed scheme, state officials will make a list of priorities for health services and establish a budget to pay for them.

The plan was introduced by State Sen. John Kitzhaber, the only physician in the Oregon Legislature, on the advice of a California bioethics consulting firm. It is an admirably straightforward approach. But is it ethical? Is it fair?

Arthur L. Caplan, director of the University of Minnesota's Center for Biomedical Ethics, responds with an unequivocal "no" on both counts.

The trouble, he says, is that the plan rations medical treatment only for the poor.

It's not a pretty picture that Caplan paints. He isn't talking about cosmetic surgery, which was not covered to begin with. He's talking about such expensive but life-saving procedures as bone-marrow transplants. "How," he demands, "do you say to low-income parents that their child has to die because they are dependent on Medicaid?"

William B. Schwartz, who teaches medicine at Tufts University, takes an opposite view. The only real choice, he says in a recent op-ed piece in the New York Times, is whether we ration silently — by using cheaper and less safe procedures, restricting the availability of effective but expensive new technologies or cutting back on research — or do it explicitly.

Caplan, in an article he wrote for the Los Angeles Times, accepts the necessity of cost containment, but questions a rationing scheme that would affect only the poor.

"Before saying goodbye to the indigent," he wrote, "why aren't public officials in Oregon and California (Alameda County considered and rejected the Oregon-style proposal) thinking about reforming a malpractice system that adds tens of millions of dollars to state-financed health-care costs each year? Before saying no to a bone-marrow transplant for a 3-year-old whose mother is on Medicaid, couldn't legislators insist that every licensed hospital and physician be required by law to provide a fixed percentage of care for those who cannot pay? Before creating laws that would send some of the poor to a premature demise, officials ought to require private health insurers to charge subscribers an additional premium that could be used to supplement the pitifully small budgets of Medicaid and public hospitals."

Schwartz, who has heard the arguments, insists that "rationing care — even for those who are insured — will soon provide the only effective strategy for cost containment."

One fallacy of the Oregon model is that it accepts as a given what doctors, hospitals and pharmaceutical houses are charging. Those charges, though necessarily high, are not fixed.

Nor is it easy to dismiss Caplan's main point: "At a time when some can indulge their wants by buying a face lift, it seems extraordinarily hard for ethicists or legislators to convincingly argue that they have no other option but to condemn the poor to die for want of money."

In other words, if we are to ration medical care, let's ration it for everybody.

IN THE STATE

Candidate Charged

PRINCEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A candidate for the Princeville Town Board of Commissioners has been arrested on charges of selling crack cocaine, an investigator with the Tarboro Police Department says.

Annie Mary Brown, 42, was arrested on warrants charging her with three counts of felony sale and delivery of crack cocaine, said Robert Cherry, a Tarboro narcotics officer. He said she was also charged with three counts of maintaining a dwelling for the sale of illegal drugs.

He said Ms. Brown had been released after posting $10,000 bond.

Permit Rejected

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — The state has rejected Ashland Chemical Co.'s application for a permit to relocate a chemical processing plant to High Point's watershed.

The N.C. Division of Environmental Management was to mail notification to Ashland Tuesday saying its request for a stormwater release permit is being returned, said Dale Overcash, DEM supervisor in charge of the necessary permit.

Ashland had said stormwater would be tested and released only if safe; critics said the company has a bad safety record and the stormwater would pose a risk to the lakes.

Overcash said if Ashland wants to apply again, the company must begin the entire process again.

Curator Retires

RALEIGH (AP) — John Funderburg, the curator of the N.C. Museum of Natural Sciences, has retired amid an investigation by federal wildlife agents.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said Tuesday that Funderburg, 67, had asked to retire for health reasons from the position he has held since 1974. He said that the retirement will take effect Nov. 1 and that he would name an acting director in the next few days.

Investigators for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are looking into whether Funderburg used his position as curator to enable big-game hunters to gain permission to kill endangered species abroad to be brought back to the United States in exchange for donations to the Raleigh museum.

Finance Director

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — A District Court judge Tuesday ordered the city's finance director to undergo a psychiatric evaluation following his apparent suicide attempt one day after the city launched a probe into missing funds.

James Featherstone, who is charged on four counts of embezzlement, was ordered to undergo an evaluation at Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh during a hearing in Onslow County District Court.

The 54-year-old finance director was found to be indigent and was appointed a lawyer.

Featherstone was hospitalized Friday suffering from an overdose of a mixture of prescription drugs. Police reports listed the overdose as an apparent suicide.

Cocaine Found

GREENSBORO (AP) — Authorities who boarded a south-bound Greyhound bus in Greensboro seized 885 grams of crack cocaine, but the owner of the suitcase slipped past four federal Drug Enforcement Agencies and a Guilford County deputy sheriff.

Fred Gregory, head of the DEA's Greensboro office, said the crack had a street value of $177,000.

Weyerhaeuser Fined For Mill Spill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The state has assessed Weyerhaeuser Co. more than $8,000 in fines and costs for separate spills of chemicals and wastewater from a pulp mill on the Roanoke River near Plymouth earlier this year.

Debbie K. Crane, a spokesman for the state Division of Environmental Management, said Tuesday the $8,040 assessments resulted from investigations that determined the company was responsible for illegal discharges into public waters in April and July. A third incident, in which about 2 million gallons of wastewater overflowed into Welch Creek on Sept. 17 when the pumps failed, is still being reviewed.

The company has 60 days to pay the fines, seek a remission or reduction of the penalties or disagree and appeal to an administrative law judge, Ms. Crane said.

Keith R. Hundley, a Weyerhaeuser spokesman in New Bern, said the company had taken action to avoid future spills.

"We regret that the incidents occurred in the first place and apologize to the communities nearby for any inconvenience," he said.

The company was fined $2,000 in connection with an April 20 incident in which an estimated 3,100 gallons of sodium hypochlorite used in a bleaching process ran into the river when an employee was changing a pump. Some 225 fish were killed in the spill.

The division imposed a $4,000 fine plus $2,040 in investigative costs for a July 19 overflow of about 4 million gallons of untreated wastewater into Welch Creek, a tributary of the Roanoke River. Company officials said a power failure during a storm knocked out pumps that carry wastewater to a series of treatment ponds.

Mavretic Defends Committee Changes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — House Speaker Joe Mavretic, criticized for removing unsympathetic House members from key study commissions despite their qualifications, sidestepped criticism about political motives and said more changes may be in the offing.

Mavretic said the appointments reflect the political process that was in place long before he upset former Speaker Liston Ramsey with the help of a coalition of 45 Republicans and 20 Democrats.

"The first thing a speaker does is reward the people who support him. That's the political system," Mavretic said. "You don't kick your friends in the face."

Prior to 1989, candidates for speakers usually released their supporters when they knew they would not win, Mavretic said. That reduced strife by allowing near unanimity in the final vote.

"The old leadership this year refused to release a single vote," Mavretic said. "Now, many of these people are complaining about the system and the way it works. You're not hearing any whining and carping from the members who supported me."

Some legislators Tuesday expressed dismay that Mavretic removed Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, from the Joint Select Committee on Low-Level Radioactive Waste and Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, from the Environmental Review Commission.

House Majority Leader Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, who also was removed from the Environmental Review Commission, said the omission of Hackney and Miller takes the House's leading experts on hazardous waste and low-level nuclear waste from the field of public policy.

"I am astonished. To me this is not a matter of good judgment," he said.

Mavretic responded: "I am not willing to accept the majority leader's whine of the week."

And he said more changes are likely.

"If some members are surprised to date with their appointments, I would point out that I am not through yet," Mavretic said. "There are other major issues out there and I intend to send messages on them."

He said he had taken Miller off the radioactive waste committee because that panel "has pretty much run its course."

Miller, who sponsored legislation that helped form the eight-state Southeast Compact Commission, is one of two North Carolina delegates to the commission and the acknowledged expert on radioactive waste issues in the House.

North Carolina is scheduled to host a low-level radioactive disposal site beginning in 1993.

Educator Says Job Training 'Dangerous'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Schools can learn a lot from businesses, but educators should not confuse making a living with learning, the president of the North Carolina Association of Educators said during a meeting between industry executives and teachers.

"I think that's what we have tried to make education in the past," Julia Kron said Tuesday at a two-day conference sponsored by the Public School Forum, a non-profit group that advocates the reform of the public education system. "But the truth is we would have been better served if we had looked at learning as an end in itself."

Ms. Kron said it is beneficial to see what employers look for in high school graduates. But she said job-oriented education is dangerous in an economy where employers' needs are rapidly changing as the nation moves from an industrial to a communications age.

"I think we definitely do not need to treat education as ... a way to go out and get a job," she said. "What happens if the job disappears? You've made your product sort of undesirable."

She suggested that business leaders and school officials instead examine the issue of working students, whose jobs may result in neglected studies and failing grades.

Officials from about 25 North Carolina school systems were booked for the conference. Guest speakers, who include executives from IBM, were to address changes facing public schools and how school-business partnerships can help solve them.

"The corporate world's point of view and interest in this is that they have an educated work force and that educated work force is what will indeed drive our economy," said Jo Ann Norris, associate executive director of Public Forum.

The business community is often besieged by requests for contributions to public schools, Ms. Norris said.

But donations have tended to fund extracurricular activities such as athletic programs, graduation ceremonies, building repair and band trips, she said.

"What we're looking at here are ways the business community can ... better facilitate the learning process in a more lasting way than just bake sales," Ms. Norris said.

Topics at the event, which runs through Wednesday, range from incorporating technology into the classroom to promoting teaching as a profession to viewing students as customers.

Officials also hope to explore the issue of parenting in an age when an increasing number of households have two wage-earners.

But the basic thrust behind the event is that businesses should be sharing the expertise of their chemists, engineers, managers and other professionals with those who will one day replace them, Ms. Norris said.

Teen Followers Of Satan Increase

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Teen-age devil worship may soon become so serious that schools will hold classes in occult awareness similar to those for drug awareness, a criminal justice instructor at Fayetteville Technical Community College said.

Kathy Price, who has investigated cases dealing with the occult and worked with victims, spoke to nearly 200 parents and students at a symposium sponsored by the Fayetteville Police Department and FTCC's Criminal Justice Association.

"Murders and human sacrifices are being made in the name of Satan, and that is entirely different than a murder committed in the heat of passion," Ms. Price said. "Until we document it, we will continue to be walking around in the dark like we're walking around right now."

Other speakers included Michael Martin, Fayetteville director of Youth for Christ, and the Rev. Michael Fletcher of Manna Church.

"The purpose of the meeting was to offer a profile of the teen occult dabbler" to help parents recognize possible symptoms of involvement their own children might display, Martin said.

Popular culture — from slasher movies and heavy metal music about dark powers and human sacrifice to fantasy role-playing games like "Dungeons and Dragons" — de-sensitizes children to violence, Ms. Price said.

Lower-Priced Furniture Leading Way At Home Furnishings Market

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH POINT, N.C. — With the economy in a slump, lower-priced furniture appears to be leading the way at this season's International Home Furnishings Market, officials say.

"When retail is soft, retailers look for manufacturers that are going to bring customers into the store," said Simon Soloman, Armstrong Furniture national sales manager. "Our product and price does that."

He said Armstrong is seeing a return of retailers who had moved up to higher-priced furnishings. "They are back looking for the promotional goods to get the traffic in their stores," Soloman said. "As they look for business, they are looking for performers, and Armstrong is a performance leader."

John St. John, Progressive Furniture executive vice president, said sales are far above any expectations. The Progressive lineup includes bedroom groups, game sets and tables that all range from $39 to $899.

"We expected coming in here that sales would be good, but they have been fantastic," St. John said.

Promotionally priced items are being used to lure customers into stores. Tables from $39 to $89 or bedroom groups from $399 and up are advertised heavily to attract buyers to a store then retailers show their full product mix.

One medium- to upper-end producer knew, coming into market, that the time was right for promotional goods. Kincaid developed one line of lower-priced goods that the company says has done well.

"We designed it on our own for that hard-hitting promotional market," said Steve Kincaid, president. "We knew it was coming and wanted to keep our customers with us instead of going somewhere else."

He said the bedroom group has received the most attention and orders. "Our other goods are still strong. They're the bread and butter stuff," Kincaid said. "We're pleased with the response we've had there."

Other high- and medium-priced manufacturers report that traffic has been excellent and orders are being made. A sampling of buyers say there's as much looking as buying.

"Everything looks good here, but we haven't had the best year," said Bill Rhodes of Leisure Furniture in Elgin, S.C. "We still have a warehouse full of things, so we're here gathering information about what's new."

"When we sell what we have, we'll be more in line to buy what we've seen," he said.

Passenger Is Injured In Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KNIGHTDALE, N.C. — One passenger was seriously injured when a single-engine airplane carrying three Raleigh residents crashed near a subdivision, authorities said.

The Cessna 172 Skyhawk was less than a mile from the Raleigh East Airport off U.S. 64 when it went down 100 to 200 feet behind homes in the Robin Hood subdivision about 1:13 a.m. Tuesday, said Knightdale Fire Chief George E. Gupton Jr.

A wing of the aircraft was torn off by the impact.

The flight originated in Millville, N.J., about 10 p.m., said John K. Carlisle, area supervisor for Raleigh Flight Services.

Authorities said everyone on board was conscious when rescue workers arrived. Those on board were: Scott Kellum, 30; Sarah Elaine Erwin, 34; and William M. Bagliani Sr., 52.

Kellum, who tentatively was identified by authorities as the pilot, was pinned in the wreckage after the crash and later was taken to Wake Medical Center, where he was listed in stable condition Tuesday night, said Elizabeth H. McRoberts, a hospital spokesman.

Ms. Erwin was in serious condition Tuesday night in the surgical intensive care unit, Ms. McRoberts said.

Bagliani, president of Resco-Raleigh, an electronics company, walked away from the accident. He drove himself to Rex Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Interim President Named In Stanly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBEMARLE, N.C. — An interim president has been appointed at Stanly Community College as trustees try to erase the "chaos" caused when the former president resigned amid reports that he lied to state auditors.

"The school is in bad need of leadership," Elbert Whitley Jr., chairman of the trustees, told county commissioners in announcing the appointment of Jan Johnston Crawford, 46, who had been vice president for instruction at the college. "We've had right much chaos at the school."

Acting President Donnie Lowder said college officials don't know when Crawford will start work but expect him on the campus soon. Whitley said Crawford's appointment could last until March or even June, when administrators' state contracts expire. Trustees will accept applications for the president's job through December.

a reversal from two weeks ago, when trustees voted Oct. 12 to allow Page to continue in his position.

Lowder also said he will reprimand Jim Yandle, 45, assistant to the president for public affairs and marketing, and slash his salary 25 percent from $40,824 a year to $30,624. State auditors said Yandle lied to them during a recent investigation.

The two men's troubles are the result of events unfolding since July, which also led to Byrd's resignation in September. He is now doing some planning work for the college, and his resignation is effective Dec. 13.

Byrd resigned amid reports that he sexually harassed college recruiter Linda Funderud, lied to state auditors and encouraged Ms. Funderud to tamper with documents. State auditors began investigating the college in August after The Charlotte Observer reported that Ms. Funderud was paid $20,904 a year but wasn't working.

Their audit found that Byrd reassigned her to work out of her Cabarrus County home after she accused him of sexual harassment. He also paid her and her attorney $7,500.

A&T Donation

GREENSBORO (AP) — Officials of North Carolina A&T State University have acknowledged the receipt of a contribution of more than $1 million in equipment and funds from AT&T.

Announcement of the gift was made by Carl C. Ashby, operations vice president, AT&T's federal systems division.

The AT&T grant consisted of $857,000 in equipment, mostly computer equipment and software packages. The remainder of the gift was $150,000, payable over a three-year period, and is to be used for the university's scholarship and faculty development programs.

Officer Shot

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — An assailant grabbed a Winston-Salem police officer's service revolver and shot him in the leg during a scuffle Tuesday, authorities say.

Officer C.A. McClearn, an 18-year-old veteran of the police department, was listed in stable condition after undergoing surgery Tuesday night at North Carolina Baptist Hospital. He was shot in the right thigh.

A man reportedly wanted on charges in Winston-Salem and in another state fled the scene and police and bloodhounds were still searching for him Tuesday night.

Beirut Victims Recalled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE — A bugler played taps and mourners wept in silence at a ceremony to commemorate the sixth anniversary of the Beirut bombing, which left 241 servicemen dead, many of them from Camp Lejeune.

About 200 people gathered Monday at the camp's Beirut Memorial to pay tribute to the marines killed Oct. 23, 1983, when a suicide driver at the wheel of a vehicle loaded with explosives drove onto the base in Lebanon.

Brig. Gen. Charles C. Krulak, who is assistant commander of the 2nd Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, was the main speaker.

"We on active duty have a responsibility to them. They set a level of dedication that we'd better be prepared to meet. We need to understand our own mortality," Krulak said.

Krulak called for a pledge to remember the soldiers.

The participants included ex-Staff Sgt. John Hendrickson, who was in a wheelchair. Hendrickson was severely wounded in the blast and later contracted multiple sclerosis.

As Taps was played, Hendrickson wept. His wife wiped away his tears.

Bakker Goes To U.S. Prison For 45 Years

Bakker, along with three of his former aides, was indicted last year following a 16-month grand jury investigation into PTL's fund-raising programs.

Prosecutors convinced Potter to order marshals to take Bakker into immediate custody, saying he needed to be stopped from using TV and the mails to raise more money.

"He's able to walk out of this courtroom today and continue to perpetuate this fraud," said assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry Miller. "He hasn't blinked."

Most of the nearly 153,000 so-called "lifetime partners" who sent Bakker money between 1984 and 1987 to construct hotels and other facilities at PTL's Christian theme park did so in $1,000 increments. In exchange, Bakker promised them free lodging for four days and three nights each year for life.

"I'm deeply sorry for those I have hurt," Bakker said. "I have sinned. But never in my life did I intend to defraud anyone."

Prosecutors didn't buy his courtroom apology.

"This man is a con man, a common criminal," said Miller, who said Bakker was continuing to raise about $100,000 a month. "He's ready, willing and able to pick it up where he left it off. He's ready to go back to the henhouse."

Richard Dortch, Bakker's former right-hand man at PTL and co-defendant, was sentenced to eight years in prison and fined $200,000 in a plea agreement that called for his testimony against Bakker.

Brothers David and James Taggart, who also were top aides to Bakker, were convicted of tax evasion and sentenced by Potter to long prison terms and hefty fines. However, they could have their sentences reduced after cooperating with the government in the Bakker trial.

Defense attorney Harold Bender asked the judge to place Bakker on probation and order him to return to PTL's Heritage USA retreat.

"Order him to make his victims whole," Bender said. "If he doesn't, take the pound of flesh."

Bakker stood and stared straight ahead as the judge sentenced him. A few minutes later, Potter ordered marshals to take the fallen PTL leader to a federal prison in Talladega, Ala.

Bender had asked that Bakker be freed on bond pending appeal. But Potter said he posed a substantial flight risk.

"I'm not going to take that chance," Potter told the defense attorney. "He has supporters who think he can do no wrong and who say they are willing to do anything for him. I believe them."

Bakker should learn in a few weeks where he will serve out his sentence. He will be eligible for parole in 10 years under federal guidelines.

"Mr. Bakker thinks he deserves all of his gains," said Potter, whose nickname is "Maximum Bob" for handing down stiff sentences.

Bakker's daughter Tammy Sue Chapman sobbed when the judge refused to set the appeal bond.

Several minutes later, Bakker smiled as he was led from the old granite courthouse in handcuffs and leg irons. Several hundred people lined the parking lot as he was driven away by two federal marshals.

For sentencing, the judge consolidated the 24 counts to nine and sentenced Bakker to five years on each. Bakker faced a maximum 120 year prison sentence — five years for each count — and a fine that ranged between $500,000 and $5 million.

A jury of six men and six women convicted him on Oct. 5 of 23 counts of fraud and one count of conspiracy in an indictment that charged him with diverting $3.7 million in ministry funds to his own use out of the $158 million sent him by followers.

The sentence "sends a message that you can't use TV and the mails to make fraudulent statements to get people to send money to you," said Miller.

As he was led from the courthouse to a government sedan for the seven-hour drive to Alabama, Bakker wore a blue windbreaker, blue shirt and blue pants.

Bender said he plans to appeal the conviction to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond and will ask the appeals court to free Bakker on bond.

Bakker Processed As 'Normal' Inmate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALADEGA, Ala. — Jim Bakker, whose dynamic personality charmed millions of television viewers before his religious empire crumbled in disgrace, quietly walked into a federal prison in handcuffs and shackles for his first night behind bars.

"My reports are he's going through the process very normally," Warden Don Southerland said after Bakker arrived at the Talladega Federal Correctional Institution late Tuesday night to begin serving his 45-year sentence for fraud and conspiracy.

Bakker, the founder of PTL, was subdued when he arrived at the rural, medium-security prison in east Alabama for what officials said would only be a temporary stay. He will be transferred to another facility, probably within two weeks.

"Obviously, he is not a normal inmate, but he is being processed as a normal inmate," Southerland told more than two dozen reporters and photographers who gathered outside the red-brick prison, which is surrounded by two 15-foot fences topped with razor wire.

Bakker, wearing a blue jacket, jeans and tennis shoes, kept his eyes on the ground as six guards hustled him from a brown sedan to the prison entrance about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday. He had no comment for the dozens of reporters gathered behind a white fence, about 20 yards away.

Another federal prison in Alabama will be home to former Bakker aide David Taggart and his brother, James. The Taggarts are scheduled to begin serving their prison sentences Wednesday at the minimum-security prison at Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery.

Southerland said Bakker would be allowed to contact his family before being placed in his two-man cell for the night. "We always allow the prisoners to call their families so they'll know where they're at and know they're all right," the warden said at a late night news conference.

Like another new arrivals, Bakker had his valuables impounded and his cash placed in an account. He was fingerprinted and photographed, went through medical and social interviews, showered and received his prison clothes and cell assignment.

Nearly 14,000 Left Homeless In California

By Robert Dvorchak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Recovery advanced into its second week today for an earthquake-rattled region feeling an aftershock of numbers — a stronger Richter reading, a 50-50 chance of a new jolt and an infusion of relief money.

Nine people remain missing, and the death toll from the Oct. 17 temblor climbed to 63 with a coroner's discovery of a 39th victim from double-decked Interstate 880 in Oakland.

The state Office of Emergency Services reported today that 13,892 people have been left homeless, nearly double the previous figure.

The first damage claim against the state was filed by two motorists injured in the collapse.

In Congress today, the Senate was expected to approve a House-passed bill that would send $2.85 billion to Northern California. Damage estimates have been set at $7.1 billion, making it the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history.

"We were hit by 10 times the amount of explosive power of World War II, including the atomic bomb," said U.S. Rep. Nancy Pelosi, who represents San Francisco's hard-hit Marina district.

Santa Cruz County got a $356,460 check from state Controller Gray Davis on Tuesday. The check is 75 percent of the money the county already has spent on earthquake response.

Church bells tolled at 5:04 p.m., one week to the minute after the quake. It packed more punch than first thought, according to the U.S. Geological Survey, which upped the magnitude to 7.1 from 6.9 on the Richter scale after checking 18 seismic stations around the world.

The homeless figure climbed after rain forced many into shelters, where county officials are compiling counts of those displaced, according to OES spokeswoman Nancy Sutton.

A geologist warned that because of the recent rain, huge sections of land in Santa Cruz County cracked by earthquake fissures are in danger of sliding this winter and burying hundreds of homes.

"What's happening today is frightening to geologists who have looked at it," Professor Gary Griggs of the University of California, Santa Cruz, told county supervisors Tuesday. "I think there's a cause for alarm, but not instant alarm until we've had more rain."

Jumpy residents also were told that there is a 50-50 chance of a 5.0 aftershock during the next two months, and there is an 11 percent shot of a 6.0 shock. A 5.0 Richter reading can cause considerable damage; 6.0 can be severe, especially to buildings already weakened.

An aftershock of 4.5 was registered at 6:27 p.m. Tuesday, the latest of about 3,500 aftershocks since Oct. 17.

"I'm still shook up. Every time I hear a noise I jump," said Ela Mae Douglas, owner of a soul food cafe near I-880.

And for all the death and destruction, Elizabeth Patrice Cupples celebrated her first week of life. She was born at 5:03 p.m. on Oct. 17 by Caesarean section, and doctors shielded her mother by leaning over the incision.

"You were born and the earth moved," said her father, James, who was at his wife's side in the delivery room of Santa Cruz Community Hospital.

In Oakland, crews were taking down sections of I-880. They fear that still-standing sections of the state's first elevated freeway could topple like dominoes onto the 1¼-mile stretch that crumpled.

Four sections remain inaccessible, and the search for more bodies was delayed until at least Thursday because the road is too shaky. Authorities have abandoned hope of finding anyone alive in the rubble.

"I'm not willing to speculate how many of those nine missing people may or may not be up there," said Lt. Kris Wraa, an Oakland police spokeswoman.

Officials said 135 people evacuated from homes near the highway Sunday may be allowed to return to their homes by Thursday.

In the damage claims, which could lead to a lawsuit, Hayward residents Milton Wade Jr. and Askia Y.M. Hurts, who were returning from a plumbing job in Wade's car on the freeway, asked the state to pay unspecified medical damages.

Workers, meanwhile, removed the section of the lower deck of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge on Tuesday. It will take at least a month to rebuild the five-lane, 50-foot pieces. The hole in the 53-year-old bridge is as gaping as the hole in the area's transportation system.

Without the bridge and key sections of devastated highways, transit officials have jury-rigged a jammed commuter system with extra trains, ferries and other alternatives.

Inconvenienced commuters abandoned their cars and took to public transportation in record numbers. The Bay Area Rapid Transit by 9 a.m. Tuesday set a weekday ridership record with 99,135, 4,300 more than the previous day.

Meanwhile, 300 men found shelter and plentiful chow on a Navy vessel built to deploy assault troops by helicopter. Most of the men, part of the city's permanent homeless population, were staying at the Moscone Convention Center but were shipped to the USS Peleliu to make room a convention of plastic surgeons.

"We're getting steaks, roast beef, ham and eggs, vegetables and snacks all day — and regular showers — the Navy's doin' a good job," declared John Clulow on the carrier's cavernous hangar deck.

San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos called on the federal government to raise the maximum home rebuilding loan to $500,000 from $100,000 because of the high housing costs in the region.

Californians Pause To Reflect On Fear

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Beneath a cracked steeple, people prayed and embraced. By a flattened freeway, children played in the setting sun. As bells tolled, a man stared at the shards of his old piano.

It was 5:04 p.m., and Northern California took a minute for reflection on a minute of fear.

Exactly one week after the Oct. 17 earthquake, the sound of church bells filled San Francisco, and James Eimers returned to the ruins of his Marina district apartment building, the focus of the Goodyear blimp's network camera as the structure blazed that night.

"I came back just to see. I wanted to get in and see what I could see, to put some kind of closure on the whole experience," Eimers said.

His 1914 Steinway piano was barely discernible in the debris. Burned were 15 years of genealogical research on his family. Missing were his cats, Patrick, Nicholas and Lucy.

"I'm still pretty numb," he said.

The bells' tolling surprised Nicole Hinton, who was talking with a friend on steps next door to the city's 200-year-old Mission Dolores church.

At 5:04, they happened to be discussing the quake.

"I'm refeeling the fear and terror of not knowing if my brother and sister-in-law are safe," she said. "The feeling the world's not safe to walk on."

Down the coast in Santa Cruz, Holy Cross Church is closed, a red tag marking a portal and the steeple cracked by the quake.

"We're not going to be saddened. We're going to rebuild, not out of fear but out of hope," Pastor James P. Henry said at an outdoor service at 5:04.

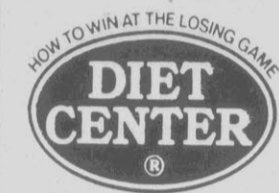

Some of the 150 people present embraced, listening to readings from the Book of Genesis.

All was quiet in Candlestick Park, where light stands had shook and concrete had fallen in chunks a week before. At 5:04 Tuesday, construction workers were patching cracks, getting ready for Friday's restart of the World Series. They didn't seem to notice the time of day.

It was sunset, and light winds wisped through the blue-collar neighborhood on the west side of sagging Interstate 880 in Oakland.

Children played and giggled, regardless of the road's looming wreckage.

Police Follow Siren Over Car Phone To Couple Who Was Kidnapped, Shot

BOSTON (AP) — The wails of a siren over a car phone led police to a wounded pregnant woman and her unconscious husband, who had been abducted and shot. Hours later, the woman died but doctors delivered her baby.

Charles and Carol Stuart had been headed home from Brigham and Women's Hospital, where they'd attended a birthing class Monday night.

But they were abducted by a man who drove them to the city's Mission Hill district, then robbed and shot them, apparently thinking they were police officers because of the car's cellular phone, authorities said Tuesday.

Mrs. Stuart, a 33-year-old attorney, ended up back at the hospital she'd left hours earlier, and died there early Tuesday of a gunshot wound to the head.

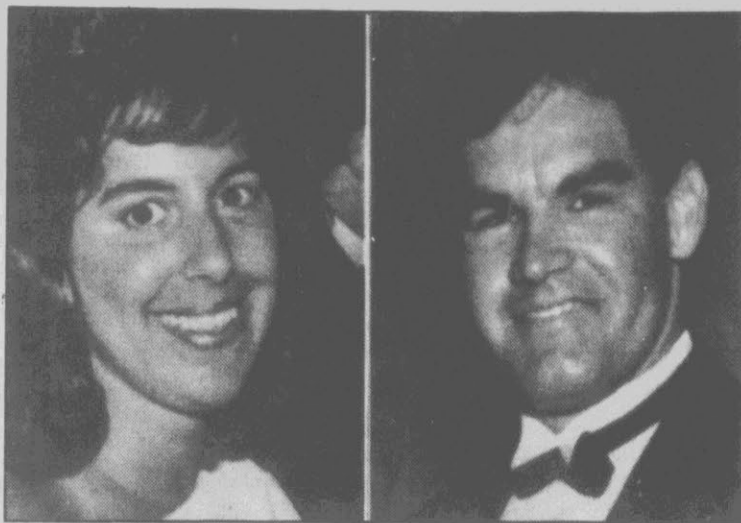

Doctors performed an emergency Caesarean section to deliver her son while she clung to life.

The baby — whose parents had planned to call Christopher — was delivered one month before he was due, the hospital said. The infant was in intensive care early today, a nursing supervisor said.

Stuart, 29, the general manager of a fur store in Boston's Back Bay, was in critical condition to-day with a gunshot wound to the abdomen, a Boston City Hospital spokesman said.

Police have no suspects.

The gunman apparently thought the Stuarts were police officers after seeing the car phone, said Joseph Dunford, deputy police superintendent. Before shooting the couple, according to Dunford, the gunman said, "I think you're five-o," slang for police.

CAROL STUART

CHARLES STUART

Stuart battled for himself and his wife in the minutes after they were shot and left for dead, police said. But as he spoke to police on his telephone, he faded in and out of consciousness while his pregnant wife lay dying next to him.

He cried in pain and confusion. Not knowing where he was, he couldn't tell state police dispatcher Gary McLaughlin where to send help.

"Oh man, it hurts and my wife has gunshot injuries, she's stopped breathing," Stuart called out, according to a transcript released Tuesday by police.

Then there was silence.

"Chuck, can you hear me? Chuck, Chuck can you hear me, buddy," McLaughlin pleaded. "Pick up the phone, Chuck. Chuck? Come on Chuck, can you hear me, Chuck? Chuck, pick up the phone, I can hear you breathing there Chuck, come on, buddy."

Still, nothing. McLaughlin instructed Stuart at one point to open his door or window to see if he could identify some landmark, so that help could find him.

But Stuart only replied: "I'm blanking out."

"You can't blank out on me, I need you man. Chuck? Chuck?"

In a desperate effort to home in on the car, police in cruisers were told to flick their sirens off and on, one by one. McLaughlin was able to tell which cruiser was near the Stuarts' car by listening to the sirens coming over the phone.

"Get my wife out," Stuart told the officers who found him.

The ambulance crew that came to the aid of the Stuarts had been riding with a camera crew from the CBS-TV series "Rescue 911," which tells real-life stories about rescue operations.

The crew videotaped Stuart regaining consciousness and talking about the attack as paramedics worked on him en route to Boston City Hospital, and was allowed into the emergency room, CBS spokesman Mike Silver said in New York.

Mayor Raymond Flynn asked that every available detective be put on the case, said police spokeswoman Jill Reilly.

At a news conference, Flynn was asked why the killing was getting so much attention when shootings occur almost daily in other distressed areas of the city.

"No matter whether it happens in Roxbury, Charlestown, Back Bay or Beacon Hill, whatever area or color or ethnicity, it will be handled in the same aggressive and fair way by the Boston Police Department," he replied.

Ted Kakas, an owner of the fur store where the Stuart couple had just celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary. The child was the couple's first.

Sales Climb On Existing Homes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sales of existing homes rose for the second consecutive month in September, climbing 4.3 percent to the highest level this year, a real estate trade group said today.

The National Association of Realtors credited lower mortgage rates for the spurt in home sales, which rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.63 million units.

The September increase followed a 4.5 percent rise in August and marked the third time in the last four months that rates have increased since hitting a low-point this year in May.

For a year, the Federal Reserve pushed interest rates higher to battle inflationary pressures. But since the spring, the central bank has been gradually easing its grip on mortgage pressures, allowing mortgage rates and a variety of other consumer and business loan rates to fall.

Customs Relaxes Zero Tolerance Policy On Seizure Of Cars, Boats

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government is again easing the "zero tolerance" anti-drug policy — which required immediate seizure of illegal drug users' cars and boats — to let some people pay a fine and go on their way.

"Our goal and intent is still user accountability," said Customs Service senior special agent Ed Callahan, who oversees the program along with the Coast Guard.

The changes are intended to "streamline the program, make it more effective, more equitable," he said Tuesday.

Officials hope the new guidelines will save time and money now spent on seizing cars, trucks and boats at the borders or in U.S. territorial limits because small amounts of illegal drugs are found inside.

This is the third easing in the zero tolerance program since it began March 21, 1986, with then-Customs Commissioner William von Raab declaring: "There will be no mercy."

Under the original rules, a driver heading across the border into the United States with a small amount of marijuana in his car could be stopped and his auto seized by the government. If he wanted to get the car back immediately, he would have to pay the full value of the car plus any fines, said Customs Service spokesman Dennis Shimkoski.

The new guidelines were signed Oct. 18 by Acting Customs Commissioner Michael Lane, but they were effective Oct. 11.

The limits of drugs for which the new rules apply are an ounce of marijuana or hashish, a gram of cocaine, heroin or methamphetamine, one-tenth of a gram of PCP and 500 micrograms of LSD, Callahan said.

Under the new rules, Callahan said, the car still could be seized by federal agents under certain circumstances, such as if the driver were impaired by the drug found in the car. More likely, the driver simply would be charged with a failure to report that he was bringing marijuana into the country.

That violation required a penalty of $5,000 to $10,000, but the Customs Service has reduced that by 90 percent, he said.

"Realizing that that is not proportionate to the violation, the penalty would be $500 for the first offense, $1,000 for the second offense," Callahan said.

"If you pay that penalty at the time of the incident, you get in your car and drive away," he said. "If you refuse to pay the penalty, the automobile will be seized, just as it was in the past, because we have made an offer of a mitigated penalty, which you have rejected."

But forget putting the fine on Visa or MasterCard. The Customs Service doesn't take plastic, only cash, a cashier's check or some other negotiable instrument, he said.

Pennsylvania House OKs Restrictions On Abortion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISBURG, Pa. — The state House approved a strong abortion control bill that advances Pennsylvania toward becoming the first state to take advantage of new restrictions allowed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The state Senate delayed discussion of the bill until after it returns from a two-week break for elections. The state's Democratic governor, Robert P. Casey, has said he supports new controls on abortion.

"Pennsylvania sent to the nation this message," said Rep. Stephen Freind, a Republican and sponsor of the anti-abortion proposal. "Pennsylvania is, Pennsylvania was and Pennsylvania always will be down the road pro-life."

In Lansing, Mich., meanwhile, the Republican-controlled Senate was to begin debate today on a bill requiring parental consent for abortion until a woman is 18 years old.

After nine hours of debate Tuesday, the Pennsylvania House voted 143-58 in favor of a bill that would ban abortions after the 24th week of pregnancy in most cases. It also would require a 24-hour waiting period before an abortion; require women to tell their husbands in most cases if they plan abortions; prohibit sex-selection abortion; and restrict, but not ban, the use of tissue from aborted fetuses in scientific research.

Anti-abortion lawmakers defeated several attempts to weaken the bill, which Democratic Rep. Karen Ritter, the Legislature's pro-choice leader, called "cruel and mean-spirited."

"This is a very sad day in this House and for the women of Pennsylvania," she said.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Pennsylvania called passage of the measure "an unconscionable tragedy."

"The state House of Representatives has done the women of Pennsylvania an unforgiveable and unforgettable injustice," said Sue Frietsche of the ACLU.

Anti-abortion leaders were jubilant.

"It was a good vote in behalf of the women in this state and for unborn children," said Mary Beliveau of the Pennsylvania Pro-life Federation.

Pennsylvania's Legislature repeatedly had voted for abortion controls since the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision.

Anti-abortion efforts were renewed after the U.S. Supreme Court's July ruling that restored key sections of a Missouri law restricting the use of public money and facilities in performing abortions.

The Florida Legislature, called into special session by Gov. Bob Martinez earlier this month, rejected all of his proposed abortion restrictions.

Last week, a committee of the Illinois House blocked a bill to restrict abortions.

Prison Terms

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Two men convicted of helping an international heroin ring infiltrate North Carolina have been sentenced to long prison terms by a federal judge.

Judge Richard C. Erwin sentenced Ceno "Sam" Muca, 41, to 10 years and 11 months in prison with no possibility of parole. Muca was convicted in August of conspiracy to possess heroin with intent to distribute it.

Erwin sentenced Giuliano Giunta, 46, of Palazzolo, Sicily, to eight years and one month in prison with no parole allowed. He was convicted in July of conspiracy to import heroin and conspiracy to possess heroin with intent to distribute it.

Clerk Shot

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A 21-year-old convenience store clerk was shot and killed during an early morning holdup, authorities say.

Tony Rogers, 21, of Spring Lake died in Cape Fear Valley Medical Center about 6 p.m. Tuesday after undergoing several hours of surgery, officials said. Rogers was wounded about 4:30 a.m.

Two Bodies Found In Plant's Debris

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Texas — Crews began assembling heavy equipment today to clear tons of twisted, blackened rubble at a plastics plant, where a series of explosions and fire may have killed up to 25 workers, officials said.

Two bodies have been recovered. Miles of charred strings of pipe from Monday's accident were piled haphazardly around the Phillips Petroleum Co. plant. Some buildings are gone, and eight giant reactors now look like huge, smashed tin cans.

"Any employee in that wreckage probably didn't survive," said Jere Smith, Phillips' director of public relations, looking at the scene.

Twenty-two workers remained missing and believed to be entombed, he said. But late Tuesday, officials at the company's Bartlesville, Okla., headquarters released a list of 19 missing Phillips employees and said four contract workers also were missing. Officials could not immediately explain the discrepancy.

The plant's emergency alarm system had been tested and was problem-free hours before the explosions, said Greg Derrick, a Phillips spokesman in Bartlesville.

Smith said officials were mobilizing heavy cranes and bulldozers to remove the wreckage. The effort would proceed slowly as crews look for victims while removing debris, he said.

"The devastation in the plant is a whole lot more extensive than we thought," said Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen. "Some of the buildings are gone. There's nothing there. Others are crushed in, flattened."

Frantic relatives gathered and scanned lists of known survivors. Many held a vigil outside the complex, which produces 4.5 million pounds a day of plastics used in milk jugs and grocery sacks.

Mary De La Vergne, 38, found the name of her common-law husband, Cipriana Rodriguez, 43, on the list of missing workers.

"I had just taken him lunch," said Ms. De La Vergne, dressed in black. "I heard the explosion when I was going back home."

"I can only keep on hoping," she said, collapsing into tears.

The blast injured 124 workers, including 35 who remained hospitalized Tuesday. Up to six people were in critical condition.

blocks away in this town of 13,000 people just west of the Pennsylvania state line.

"This felt like someone hit the house," she said. "Like a semi hit the house. All the neighbors ran out in the street saying, 'What was it?'"

W.A. West said the blast rocked his house two miles away.

Thirteen people were injured, none critically, in the explosion Tuesday that may have involved illegal fireworks, Fire Chief Bim Orrenmaa said.

The explosion that leveled the houses on a tree-lined street came amid a 20-minute series of several smaller blasts, he said.

Contest To Pick Favorite Bureaucrat Proves A Dud

By Robert M. Andrews
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Please, doesn't anybody out there love a bureaucrat?

Last June, entrepreneur Matthew Lesko launched "My Favorite Bureaucrat" contest and invited people around the country to submit "a brief, verifiable story of 250 words or less about how a government bureaucrat helped you."

Lesko offered a $5,000 cash prize for the winning entry and figured he'd be swamped with nominations. After all, he says, there are plenty of federal, state and local bureaucrats to choose from — about 15 million altogether.

Today, Lesko is flabbergasted. In the past four months, he has received exactly one entry.

Even worse, it was submitted by a woman employee of the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance who nominated her boss.

"My God, I just can't believe the lack of response," said Lesko, the author of books and newsletters on where to get free advice from government experts on everything from playing the stock market to curing a backache to buying a new refrigerator.

Lesko says he plugged the contest in thousands of news releases mailed from his suburban Chevy Chase, Md., office, on Larry King's radio show, Pat Sajak's television show and the C-SPAN cable TV network, and in speeches around the country promoting the dozen books he has written.

Besides the $5,000 prize for the contest winner, Lesko promised $500 to each of two runners-up, a plaque for the winning "favorite bureaucrat" and a free list of the government's two dozen best sources of information for every contest participant.

"I can't believe how this idea fell so flat," Lesko complained. He suspects the problem runs deeper than any lack of publicity.

"The government is the biggest source of information and help on anything you could want," he said. "All the millionaires, like Lee Iacocca and Donald Trump, use it. I even got free legal advice from the Federal Trade Commission on how to run this contest."

"But the average guy in the street probably just hates the government, is intimidated by it and doesn't think there's anything there but waste, fraud and abuse," Lesko said.

"The only contact most people have with the government is dealing with the Internal Revenue Service and the division of motor vehicles, which are probably the two worst experiences anybody can have."

The public's antagonism toward the government apparently is so virulent, Lesko said, that a contest to nominate the biggest bureaucratic bunglers probably would produce a flood of entries.

"I wouldn't do that to the Post Office," he said.

Seattle Tops List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Seattle has been named America's Most Livable City and San Francisco, now recovering from a devastating earthquake, was ranked second, according to the 1989 edition of the Places Rated Almanac.

The book ranks the top 10 metropolitan areas, in order, as Seattle, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, Washington, San Diego, Boston, New York, Anaheim-Santa Ana, Calif., Louisville, Ky., and Nassau-Suffolk, N.Y., according to The Pittsburgh Press and the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

The rankings in the almanac's third edition were based on scoring in categories including crime, health care, the environment, transportation, education, the arts, recreation and climate.

The bottom 10 areas, starting with the lowest ranking, were Pine Bluff, Ark.; Odessa, Texas; Laredo, Texas; Yuba City, Calif.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Victoria, Texas; Greeley, Colo.; Gadsden, Ala.; Casper, Wyo.; Albany, Ga.; and Naples, Fla., according to USA Today.

Pittsburgh was named America's Most Livable City in the 1985 edition of the almanac. It was also published in 1981.

The publisher, Prentice Hall Travel Books, had planned to announce the findings Nov. 3 in New York City. After the Pittsburgh newspapers and other news organizations obtained copies, the company moved the news conference to Thursday.

Reagan's Documents Could Be Subpoenaed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — John Poindexter's daily meetings with President Reagan on Iran-Contra may entitle the former national security adviser to subpoena some of the ex-president's notes and diaries, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene on Tuesday gave Poindexter the go-ahead to seek "relevant" documents from Reagan. He set Jan. 22 for Poindexter's trial on charges of conspiracy, making false statements and obstructing Congress in the Iran-Contra affair.

Greene said Poindexter will assert in his defense that his activities were authorized by Reagan, contentions that suggest that Reagan was far more deeply involved in details of the Iran-Contra scandal than he has acknowledged.

Greene rejected a request by Poindexter for permission to subpoena notes of then-Vice President Bush, saying Poindexter failed to show that Bush might have authorized his activities. But the judge held open the possibility that Poindexter might be allowed to seek documents from Bush later if he can show "a more pressing need."

"If the claims" by Poindexter are correct ... there is a 'sufficient likelihood' that the documents sought from President Reagan would be material to the Poindexter defense," the judge said.

"If the defendant submits ... subpoenas ... for specific, relevant documents in the custody of former President Reagan" or the National Archives, "the court will authorize their issuance," Greene said.

Reagan would have to produce any subpoenaed documents by Nov. 23, but such a subpoena could invoke a claim of executive privilege. Theodore Olson, a lawyer for the former president, declined to comment.

U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell quashed subpoenas for testimony from Reagan and Bush in the trial of Oliver North, the former White House aide who worked under Poindexter.

Poindexter, Greene said, contends that Reagan met with him "daily, frequently alone" and that they "routinely" discussed such matters as "the role of Richard Secord as a middleman in the transfer of arms to Iran."

Poindexter maintains in sealed papers that Reagan was briefed about a false chronology of the administration's arms sales to Iran involving four of the criminal charges against Poindexter.

The chronology stated that no one in the U.S. government knew before January 1986 that a November 1985 shipment to Iran contained Hawk missiles. The CIA assisted the shipment without a signed presidential finding as required by law.

Poindexter asserts that Reagan, on the inaccurate chronology and other matters, either "formulated the administration's position" or "entertained Poindexter's plans without voicing any objection."

"It appears that notes were taken by the president and others on these conversations and, according to the defendant, these notes or presidential diary entries ... would support his defense to the charges," Greene said.

Poindexter contends that he and Reagan discussed "the administration's view" of a contemplated House committee inquiry into the then-secret Contra resupply program operated by North.

Poindexter is charged with obstructing Congress by encouraging North to lie in an Aug. 6, 1986, meeting with members of Congress about assisting the Contras. After the meeting, in which North denied aiding the rebels, the proposed resolution of inquiry was shelved.

Poindexter sent a "well done" message to North after the Aug. 6 meeting.

Greene also said Poindexter maintains he discussed frequently with Reagan "the depth of the administration's commitment to the Contras and its desire to continue to provide military support to them."

Two Killed

DURHAM (AP) — Two Campbell University students from Raleigh and Wilmington were killed when a Honda automobile collided with a pickup truck on N.C. 55 southeast of Durham.

First Sgt. R.W. Isley of the Highway Patrol said Tuesday the Honda's driver, Duff Gordon Freeman Jr., 19, of Raleigh, and his passenger, Katherine Michael Prichard, 17, of Wilmington, died within an hour after the accident at 4:10 p.m. Monday. They were taken by LifeFlight helicopter to Duke Hospital.

The driver of the pickup, Ted Arnold Jenkins, 51, of Durham, was taken by ambulance to Duke Hospital with facial and head injuries. He was treated and released Monday night.

No charges were filed.

Task Force Reports Civil Cases Delayed Too Often

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Judges must crack down on lawyers to prevent non-criminal cases in federal courts from taking too long and costing too much, a special task force is telling Congress.

"The excessive cost and delay associated with litigating civil cases in America should no longer be tolerated and can be forcefully addressed through procedural reform, more active case management by judges and better efforts by attorneys and their clients," says a report the task force made public today.

The report is the result of a nine-month study by a 36-member group of lawyers and law professors. The study was conducted at the suggestion of Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., who chairs the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Biden called the report's recommendations "an important and encouraging start" and said his committee "will give a high priority to civil justice reform."

The report focuses on federal courts, but the task force said its recommendations could be applied to state and local courts as well.

The task force urged Congress to provide "a mix of suggestions and incentives" to spark change, "and then let those who use the system fill in the details."

"Our core recommendations allow each federal court ... to develop its own set of reforms for reducing delay and litigation costs within some broad parameters that Congress would establish through federal legislation," the report says.

The task force recommended:

- That Congress require all federal trial judges to streamline the pretrial exchange of information between both sides of a lawsuit. That process, called "discovery," accounts for an estimated 60 percent of all federal litigation costs.
- Each trial court's streamlining plan should include a system of assigning differing "tracks" to cases of different complexity. Fixed timetables and deadlines for completion of discovery and the start of a trial would depend on what track a case is assigned.

—Judges should adopt "a firm and consistent policy for minimizing continuances" or exceptions to the deadlines.

—Clients, either in person or by telephone, should participate in any court-sponsored settlement conferences. That would make it "impossible for the attorneys to delay settlement discussions, often for weeks or months, with the time-honored excuse, 'Let me get back to you after I've discussed this with my client,'" the task force report said.

—Judges should not rely on magistrates as heavily as some now do in keeping track of civil cases that have not yet gone to trial.

The report also recommended giving trial judges more administrative support by increasing staffs, using computers more and raising judges' salaries.

"The nation needs — and must get — a substantial commitment from the bar to address this challenge as well," it said.

The task force noted that the legal profession increasingly is dominated by escalating lawyer salaries and heavier demands for billable hours.

U.N. Struggling In Role As Global Peacemaker

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

UNITED NATIONS — One year after receiving the 1988 Nobel Peace Prize for its blue-helmeted peacekeeping forces, the United Nations is struggling anew to fulfill its role as an international peacemaker.

When the prize was awarded, it symbolized a global trend of embittered regional adversaries to turn from force of arms to the United Nations to try to resolve their differences.

From Afghanistan to the Persian Gulf, Cambodia, the Western Sahara, Cyprus, and southern Africa, the world organization — diplomats and peacekeeping forces alike — was at the cutting edge of efforts to defuse tensions.

Coming after years of condemnation for alleged ineffectiveness, radicalism and financial profligacy, last year's sudden rush by so many governments to U.N. mediation and peace-keeping caused Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to remark, "We are back in fashion."

Now, however, predictions that the United Nations would become the world's principal forum for maintaining peace, as hoped at its founding in 1945, have given way to worries that the hopes were unrealistic.

The continuing failure of many of the United Nations' 159 member states to pay their dues and assessments has brought financial crisis, forcing cliffhanger efforts to meet monthly payrolls. As of July 31, past due payments totaled $688 million, exclusive of peace-keeping and other special operations.

The biggest debtor is the United States, which owes $278.8 million — still "Uncle Deadbeat" despite promises to pay up by then-President Ronald Reagan and President Bush, who so far has not won Congress to his plan to pay up over the next six years. Meanwhile, Washington's failure to pay $216 million of its assessment for this year has raised the overall U.S. debt to $495.8 million.

In addition, many critics are now asking if the United Nations' diplomatic accomplishments in 1988 were more illusory than real.

A Paris conference to bring the contending forces in Cambodia into a coalition government bogged down and is shelved; efforts to mediate a cease-fire between Morocco and the Polisario guerrillas in the Western Sahara remain inconclusive, and years of attempts have failed to heal the Greek-Turkish divisions on Cyprus.

The Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan has led not to peace but to a three-sided civil war with guerrilla factions fighting the communist government and each other. In the Persian Gulf, while Iran and Iraq maintain an uneasy truce, substantive negotiating has not begun over the differences that led to eight years of bloody warfare.

"It's true that we have no treaties carved in marble," Alvaro de Soto, a key aide to Perez de Cuellar, acknowledged. "But one shouldn't underestimate the fact that there are cease-fires in places where people were being killed a short time ago."

One place where a cease-fire has taken hold is in the remote Southwest African territory of Namibia, where the United Nations is scheduled next month to oversee elections that could open the way for the territory to gain its independence from South Africa.

USAir Group Reports Setback

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

In a further setback to an already beleaguered airline industry, USAir Group Inc., the parent of USAir, said Tuesday it lost $77.7 million during the third quarter.

The loss was partly blamed on a combination of a 20 percent increase in operating expenses and a sluggish rise in passenger revenue compared with a year ago and the temporary closing of the company's hub in Charlotte, N.C., in the wake of Hurricane Hugo.

The Arlington, Va.-based company also said the results stemmed partly from a $40 million overestimation in the amount of revenue its Piedmont Airlines subsidiary generated during the first half of the year — a restatement that was applied to the third quarter. Piedmont was merged into USAir operations in August.

Investors reacted quickly to the disappointing news, announced before the stock market opened Tuesday, as the opening of the company's stock was delayed when sell orders outstripped buyers. The stock, traded on the New York Stock Exchange, closed the day down 2 3/8 a share to 40 1/8 a share.

"They certainly didn't anticipate this," said Robert N. Bernstein, an airline analyst with Edward D. Jones & Co. in St. Louis, Mo. "It's not as if they're going under, but it's not a good situation either. The question is what are they going to do from here."

Although the news of the quarterly loss was tempered somewhat by the company's announcement two weeks ago that it anticipated "significantly lower" results for the third and fourth quarters this year compared with last year, few investors expected a loss of this magnitude, analysts said.

The earlier announcement was made the same day it was reported an investment group was reporting its stake in the company's common stock, propelling USAir stock up 3 3/8 a share to 52 1/4 a share, near its 52-week high of 54 3/4.

Soviet Pledges Good Ties With Poles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — The Soviet foreign minister met jointly with Communist Party officials and one of their harshest foes today and said later his country is determined to maintain good relations with both sides.

Eduard Shevardnadze also emphasized the need to clear up "blank spots" in the countries' history. One such "blank spot" is a World War II massacre of Polish officers, for which Soviet forces have generally been blamed.

Shevardnadze met for more than an hour with the Communist Party's first secretary, Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, and then invited Adam Michnik to join them. Michnik is editor in chief of the pro-Solidarity Gazeta Wyborcza daily and spent nearly five years in jail for his opposition activities.

Michnik, a close adviser to Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and perhaps Poland's best-known critic of one-party rule, was the only reporter allowed into the room. The three talked for about 10 minutes before Shevardnadze came out.

Shevardnadze told reporters he is willing to meet with "every party, with anybody" and said the Soviet Union wants close relations with both the Communist Party and with Poland's new government, which is led by Solidarity.

Speaking of "blanks spots" in Polish-Soviet history, Shevardnadze promised they would be cleared up.

"We want only the truth. It is needed by our two nations and is in the interest of friendship," he said.

Asked how much change the Soviet Union would tolerate in Poland, he responded: "We don't set up order in other countries. Would you want it to be so?"

Shevardnadze arrived in Poland on Tuesday and, as a sign of goodwill, promised that Moscow will maintain fuel deliveries crucial to Poland's survival.

He also met Tuesday with Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the East bloc's first non-Communist prime minister, and the two announced that Mazowiecki will visit Moscow next month.

The Kremlin has said it views the radical political changes in Poland to be an internal matter. Its decision to allow Poland and Hungary to chart an independent course marked a significant shift in Soviet policy toward its East bloc allies.

Mazowiecki and his Solidarity-led Cabinet have promised, however, to respect the country's military obligations to the Soviet-led alliance.

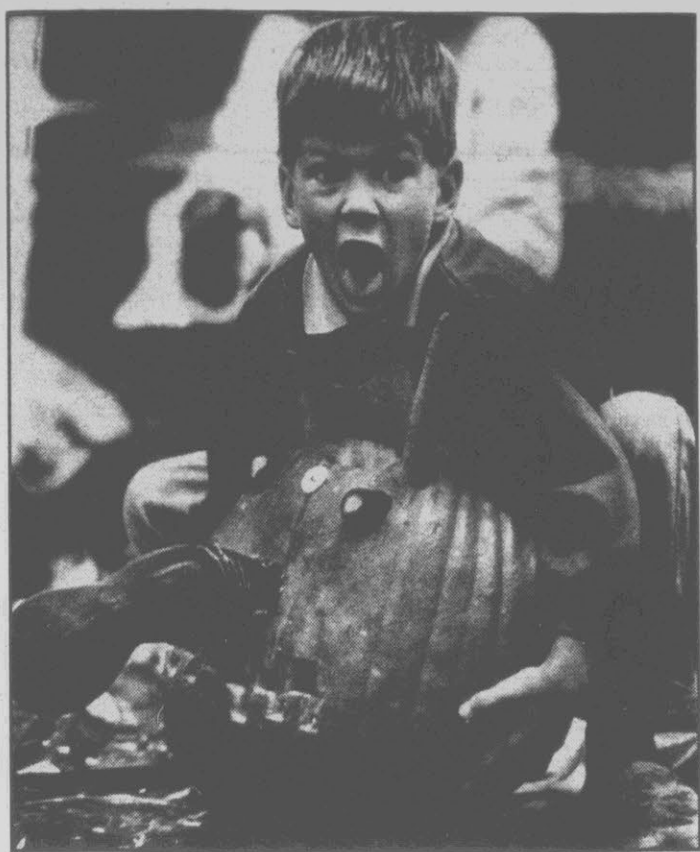

Shevardnadze, the highest-level Soviet official to visit Poland since Mazowiecki's took office in mid-August, held a meeting with the prime minister Tuesday that lasted an hour longer than planned.

"I am very happy about our many-faceted talk," Mazowiecki said after the two-hour meeting. "I accepted the invitation to Moscow with gratitude." He said the visit would be on Nov. 23.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Stefan Staniszewski said after the meeting that "There are some problems, but they were discussed in the spirit of understanding and seeking solutions."

He said Shevardnadze pledged the Soviet Union would maintain its level of deliveries to Poland, which is dependent on Moscow for oil, gas, electricity and raw materials.

A Lifting Experience

Carving a large jack-o-lantern is a lot of fun until it's time to lift it. Six-year-old Trevor William of Redding, Calif., discovered the problem during a pumpkin decorating contest, as his face attests.

Soviets Reportedly Cutting Tank Force

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union is trimming tank production by half for the next five years, building only 850 tanks annually, according to a report published today.

Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov made the promise during meetings earlier this month with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, according to unidentified defense officials cited by The Washington Post.

In Vilamoura, Portugal, today, Cheney said Soviet officials have "indicated it is their intention to produce fewer tanks than they have in the past."

"We have seen some beginning signs that in fact that transition may be occurring," he said at a news conference on the final day of a NATO nuclear strategy session.

Even so, he said, "As of today, their tank production still far exceeds that of the West, all NATO nations combined, although it does appear to be lower than it has been in the recent past."

Pressed about a promised reduction to 850 tanks a year, Cheney replied, "I wouldn't want to be more precise than I have been."

The Defense Intelligence Agency has estimated annual Soviet tank production at 3,500 in a total Warsaw Pact output of 4,200, but Soviet Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev told the House Armed Services Committee in July the figure was about 1,700.

The newspaper said DIA recently reported a reduction in Soviet tank production.

If Yazov's pledge of an additional 50 percent reduction is realized, Soviet tank production would be about 850 per year. U.S. production is about 775 in a total North Atlantic Treaty Organization output of 925 a year, the newspaper said.

An unidentified senior defense official told the Post that the production cut may be a result of the Soviets reconsidering what kinds of weapons are effective.

"While tank production is decreasing, production of artillery and armored personnel carriers is increasing," the official said.

Schools Fined

RALEIGH (AP) — The state has fined the Chatham County school system $95,000 for sewage-treatment violations at six rural schools.

The state Division of Environmental Management also is fining the Wake County schools $12,500 for violations at East Wake High School's sewage plant.

The Chatham schools' fine was the largest of more than 30 the state announced Tuesday after a statewide enforcement conference last week on environmental regulations.

In most cases, the state says sewage-treatment or other water-pollution requirements were violated. R. Paul Wilms, director of the environmental management division, set the fines. They are subject to appeal.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in an atmosphere of uncertainty after Tuesday's volatile session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 6.35 to 2,652.87 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers held a narrow edge on losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 497 up, 461 down and 479 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 23.95 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Dow Jones industrial average plunged about 80 points in early trading Tuesday, and then rebounded to recoup most of its loss.

Among actively traded blue chips, Philip Morris dropped 1/4 to 44 1/4; McDonald's slipped 3/8 to 32 3/8; General Electric lost 1/8 to 55 1/8, and American Telephone & Telegraph was up 1/8 at 43 1/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 23 to 189.82. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .18 at 376.18.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials finished with a loss of 3.69 at 2,659.22.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 7 to 2 on the NYSE, with 360 up, 1,213 down and 381 unchanged.

Gunman

Once outside, Landreth and about a half-dozen other officers "got him down and handcuffed him without hurting him," Nichols said.

Jones was charged with first degree burglary, assault with a deadly weapon and kidnapping and placed in the Pitt County Jail under a $75,000 bond.

Chief Jerry Tesmond said this morning, "I think the officers did an exceptional job. It was very well handled and I'm very pleased with it. All of the people involved are to be commended."

The manner in which the situation was handled, Tesmond said, "shows the professionalism within this police department."

Guilty Plea

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A teacher who was on suspension from his job at Dobson Elementary School has pleaded guilty to misdemeanor assault on two of his fifth-grade students last year.

Glenn Sanford Roberts, 54, of Route 1, Jonesville, was sentenced to two years in prison, suspended for five years.

Judge James M. Long of Surry Superior Court placed Roberts on supervised probation for five years and ordered him, during that time, not to teach in public or private schools where children are students. Long also ordered Roberts not to take any other job in which he would directly with children.

Long ordered that Roberts receive a mental health evaluation and comply with the recommended treatment or counseling. He was ordered to do 400 hours of community service within two years and to pay a fine of $2,000 and court costs.

Puppy Stolen

HINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Thieves who stole a specially bred golden retriever and left behind a pumpkin won't face criminal charges if they return the puppy unharmed, its owner says.

While stealing the 9-week-old female Monday, the thieves also painted the words "Happy Halloween. Thanks for the dog. Sorry no money...Don't worry, be happy," police said.

The 18-pound pup, named Penny, is a top-of-the-line show dog, the product of 17 years of breeding, said owner Lynda Bennett, a breeder and veterinarian. She said the puppy is worth $30,000 to her but would not be worth as much to thieves because they lack documentation that it is a purebred.

She said she would drop all charges and ask no questions if Penny was returned.

"They've taken away my future on top of breaking my heart," said Bennett.

Bush, Solons Discuss Capital Gains

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush met today with a group of Democratic senators his spokesman said "want to talk about possible compromises" on the administration's capital gains tax cut proposal.

The senators who met with Bush "are all Democrats in various stages of support" for a capital gains tax cut, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "We are working to pick up new votes all the time."

He said senators at the White House meeting "are interested in capital gains, supporters in a general sense of one bill or another, but also have problems or reservations, and want to talk about possible compromises."

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell on Tuesday accused Republicans of applying "a double standard of unfairness" in their zeal for a cut.

"The capital gains tax cut has become the Holy Grail of this administration," the Maine Democrat said.

Republicans fired the first volley in the latest skirmish over capital gains, saying they wanted a simple majority vote in the Senate on their proposal to cut the rate of the capital gains tax, levied on increases in the value of stocks, bonds and real estate.

Mitchell said that would require an unfair change in Senate rules and blasted the administration for suggesting it. His comment reflected the newly sharpened style that has marked the Democratic leader's floor statements in recent weeks.

The administration, Mitchell said, "has cast aside any concern for the deficit."

"It has cast aside any concern for the budget process, it has now cast aside any concern for fairness and it has cast aside any concern for relations with this Congress" on the capital gains issue, Mitchell said.

He said the White House had won victories under the Senate's complex rules 34 times in the last two years with support from only a minority of the lawmakers on the floor.

Actress Sentenced

"And that is very relevant to sentencing."

As Miss Gabor left the courtroom, she disputed the judge's contention that she not only slapped a police officer, but the American people by her statements out of court that the United States was worse than the Soviet Union or Nazi Germany.

"I'm a very good American. I love America," she said. "Why should I slap the face of America?"

Miss Gabor, star of such B-films as "Queen of Outer Space" and "Picture Mommy Dead," faced a maximum of 18 months in jail, and the judge warned that she could get more jail time if she violated her parole.

The tempestuous celebrity slapped Officer Paul Kramer on June 14 after he stopped her Rolls-Royce convertible. The actress testified she instinctively struck Kramer after he roughed her up. Kramer overreacted, she said, and used undue force in arresting her.

Besides the alcohol offense, a jury convicted Miss Gabor on Sept. 29 of battery on a police officer and driving without a valid driver's license. She was acquitted of failing to obey an officer. All the charges were misdemeanors.

"When she was first convicted, we felt that the police department and Officer Kramer were vindicated," said Lt. Robert Curtis, a police spokesman. "We certainly feel that this (sentencing) is even further vindication."

The trial drew more than 100 reporters, camera crews and photographers from throughout the world.

The sentencing attracted a Zsa Zsa Gabor look-alike, a man who wrote a poem for the trial, several people wearing "Fry Zsa Zsa" buttons, a man with "John 3:16" on a T-shirt and numerous tourists with pocket cameras.

After the sentencing, a three-piece band played a drum roll as von Anhalt walked down the court steps, then later played a song written for the trial, with lyrics that included: "Zsa Zsa, she's going to jail. She's paying some fines now."

Pirate Running Game Suffers Recently

East Carolina Garners Only An Average Of 76 Yards In Last Three Games

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

For the past three weeks, East Carolina's running game has been on a downhill roll.

Coach Bill Lewis is looking for ways of turning that trend around, especially since his Pirates were among the national leaders in the run just a few weeks ago.

"A lot of it has had to do with the defense of the teams we've been playing," Lewis said Tuesday at his weekly press conference.

Especially Virginia Tech's Hokies, whom the Pirates beat, 14-10, this past weekend. Tech came into the game as the country's No. 9 team against the run among Division I-A schools.

The Hokies held the Pirates to just 62 yards rushing, much of that in the final quarter.

But earlier, Louisiana Tech, which tied the Pirates, 29-29, had limited the Bucs to just 94 yards on the ground, and South Carolina which took a 47-14 win over ECU two weeks ago, allowed just 72 yards.

That's an average of just 76 yards a game over the past three games. In the first three games of the year, the Pirates were averaging 291.0 yards a game. Even going into the Virginia Tech game, the Pirates were still averaging 207.8 yards a game, 20th in the country.

But after last week, the Pirates have slumped to 183.5 yards a game — a drop of over 100 yards a contest in just three games.

"We are working every day to become better (at the running game)," Lewis said. "But it's not just one thing that you can put your finger on and fix."

Lewis said that, in practice, the Pirates run through a number of drills designed to improve the rushing attack, but at the same time, ECU is also trying to come up with a balance with its passing attack, too.

"We're just working hard to try and get back to where we were before," he said.

This week, when East Carolina travels to Syracuse University it will be a new experience for Lewis, his staff and his players. It marks the first time that any one of them has played inside the Carrier Dome, the Orangemen's indoor arena. It will be the second game of the year, however, on artificial turf. Cincinnati's Nippert Stadium also has that surface.

Because of that, ECU's running game will take on more importance. Lewis said that freshman Cedric Van Buren, who is the third-leading rusher on the team, will likely see more action. Van Buren is one of the quickest running backs the Pirates have and could be faster on the artificial surface.

Tailback Willie Lewis is the leading rusher for the Pirates with 300 yards, while fullback Michael Rhett is next with 158. Van Buren, who did not play against Virginia Tech, has 154 yards on the ground, while Denell Harper is next at 144. Quarterback Travis Hunter has 128 yards.

One other Pirate, back-up fullback David Daniels, has over 100 yards rushing with 121.

The Pirates should go into the Syracuse game fairly healthy. There are no serious injuries and most of those sidelined last week should be back, Lewis said.

"I may knock wood, but we're as healthy as you can be at this point of the season," the coach said.

Stewart Southall, an offensive guard, suffered a bruised calf; split end Clayton Driver sat out the Tech game with a leg injury; split end Walter Wilson had some soreness in his shoulder; linebacker George Koonce was held out of the Tech game with a groin and hamstring pull; and Chris Hall, a defensive back, has a shoulder bruise. All should be ready to play on Saturday.

Lewis listed two players as "Top Pirates" for the Tech game, and an entire unit. The special-team winner was punter John Jett, who kicked 10 times for a 42.7 yard average.

"It was especially good in a swirling and strong wind," Lewis said. "He did an outstanding job in a game that required a good kicking game."

Jett also had a touchdown-saving tackle on a return that was called further back by a clip.

On offense, Lewis singled out Hunter for his play, saying he did an outstanding job of moving the team.

"He made several big plays, including the short-yardage pass to Charlie Tyson for the (game-winning) touchdown," Lewis said.

And while Lewis said that several defensive players, notably tackle

Joe Holmes, end Anthony Thompson and backs Ricky Torain and Chris Hall, all could have been named on defense, he and his staff had decided to cite all of the defensive players who were in the game 20 or more snaps.

"They did many things as a unit. It was an entire team effort," Lewis said.

Game captains for Syracuse will be Jett and Stephen Braddy on special teams, tackle Todd Drugac and Hunter on offense and Holmes and Thompson on defense.

Lewis said Braddy made two big plays on punt coverage, first stopping a Tech return for zero yardage and also recovering a fumbled punt late in the game to return the ball to ECU allowing the Pirates to run the clock down to nearly 1:00 left.

Drugac, Lewis said, is having "a consistently good year."

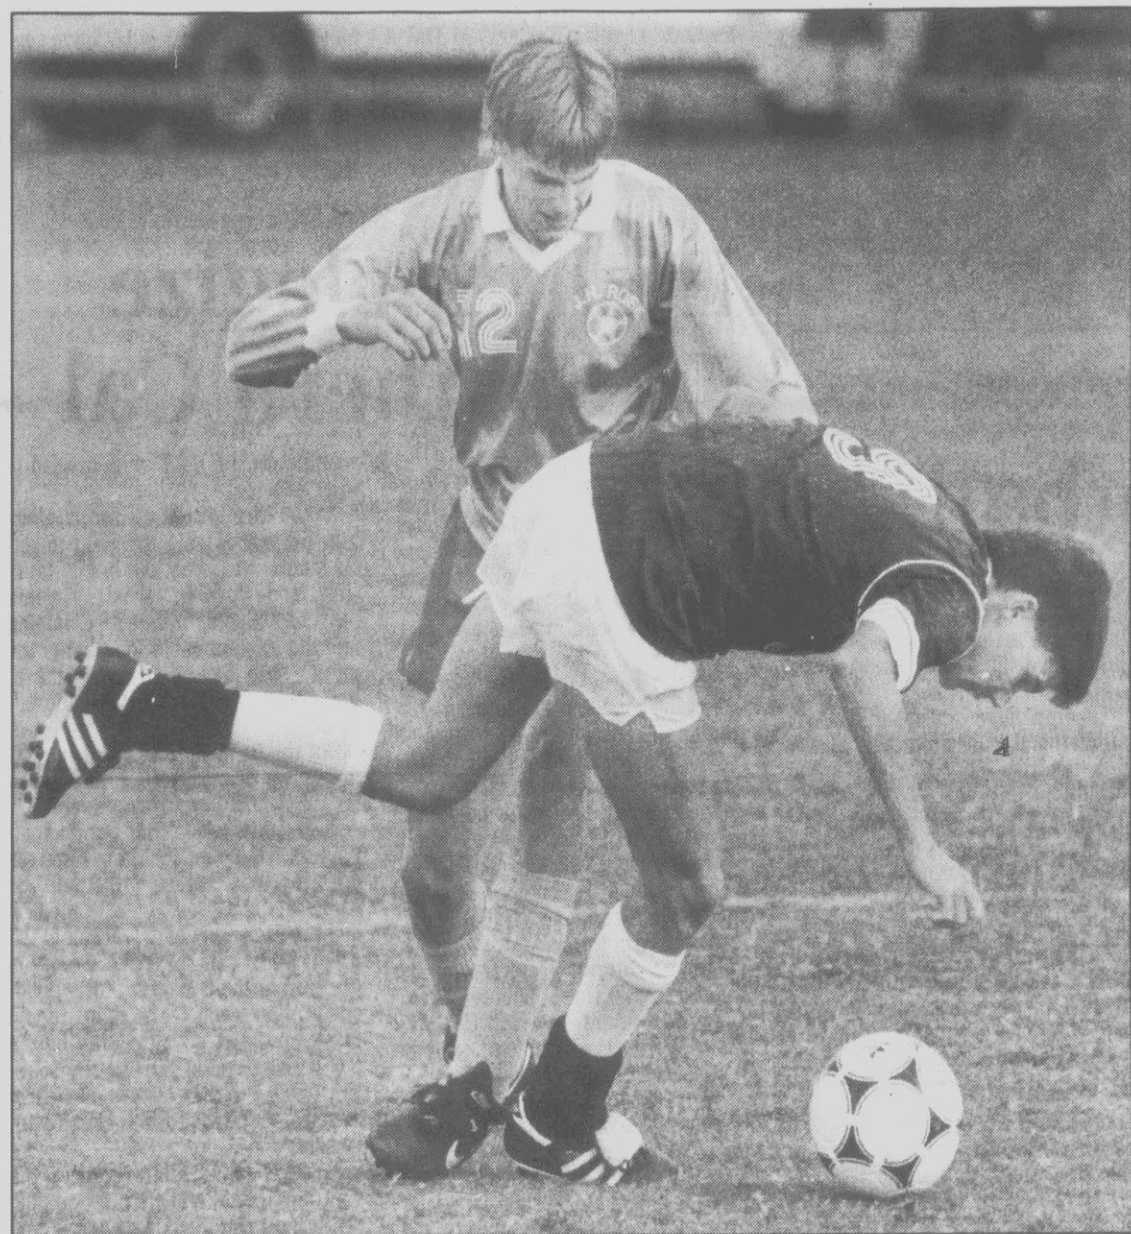

The ECU-Syracuse game will kick off at 1:30 p.m. The contest will also be shown over Home Team Sports on a delayed basis Sunday at 10 a.m.

Rose Nips Fike, 1-0, Ices Big East Title Once Again

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Although the throne showed signs of crumbling around the edges this season, Rose High still reigns as king of the Big East Conference soccer.

With a hard-fought 1-0 victory over contending Wilson Fike Tuesday afternoon at Meadowbrook Park, the Rampants seized their sixth consecutive conference crown and will advance as the league's No. 1 seed in the North Carolina Athletic Association Class 4-A state playoffs.

Rose, which concludes the regular season Thursday at home against Rocky Mount in a 4 p.m. match, will open the playoffs against the still-undetermined No. 3 seed from the Mideastern Conference.

Senior Jason Bizzaro's goal on an assist from junior Thomas Leahy with 13 minutes to go proved the difference as Rose climbed to 8-1-2 in the conference and 13-3-2 overall.

The Golden Demons, who posted a 2-0 win over the Rampants in the first meeting this season, slipped to 7-3-1 in the league and 13-5-2 overall.

"Last game they came out fired up and that's why they beat us," Bizzaro said. "They outthrusted us and outplayed us. That's something we talked about in practice and before the game and we came out ready to play."

"It was just a matter of going to the ball."

Junior Bert Powell, who turned in a gutsy effort despite being hampered by a slight groin pull and 101-degree fever, triggered what culminated in the only score.

Powell cleared the ball down the right sideline and Leahy controlled just right of the penalty box.

Fike goalie Shannon Bearden aggressively came out to challenge Leahy, but Leahy crossed the ball to Bizzaro, who then rifled a shot from about 12 yards out into the unprotected net.

"The ball was chipped over the top and the goalie was coming over," Bizzaro said. "Thomas Leahy was crashing in and I just had an open net."

"All game we had been getting in open space and trying to score and it finally happened."

A finesse passing game centered around Powell, Bizzaro, senior Toure Claiborne and junior Aaron Tschetter enabled the Rampants to control the midfield although a quick-strike Fike squad managed several thrusts led by Chris Gentry, Reggie Harrison and Jim Miles.

Rose finished with a 13-6 advantage in shots. Bearden had 10 saves while Rose goalie Russell Nelson had four.

"It was a well-played game — one of the best-played games I've seen coming out of this league," Rose coach Charlie Harvey said. "Both teams were high-pressed and intense."

Fike coach Rick Stout agreed.

"It was a well-played game overall," Stout said. "I'm disappointed, of course, but you have to hand it to Rose. They scored when they had to."

"They have won it (the conference championship) five straight years, six now. It's hard to dethrone somebody when they've been there and know how to win."

"We knew we had a hard task ahead of us having to win today and Thursday."

The Golden Demons are scheduled to host Elizabeth City Northeastern (7-3-1, 9-3-1) Thursday afternoon in a game that will decide the league's No. 2 representative in the state playoffs.

Northeastern, a 4-3 victor over Fike last week, has never lost to the Golden Demons.

Harvey said the loss to Fike earlier this season served to snap Rose out of a lull and helped the team rediscover its intensity — not to mention focusing on defending its long-running title string.

"That, in my opinion, was good for us," Harvey said. "That game we were not ready to play."

Jaguars, Panthers Clash In Key EPC Game

Farmville Central Can Wrap Up League Title With Victory; Ayden-Grifton Faces Rams

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

North Pitt coach Stuart Ennis talks about the challenge facing his team this Friday against Farmville Central in David vs. Goliath proportions.

The Jaguars, second in the state in the latest Associated Press Class 2-A poll, are undefeated at 8-0 and coming off a 26-0 vanquishing of Eastern Plains Conference foe Greene Central.

North Pitt stands at 5-3 overall and 3-0 in the EPC.

"We're definitely the underdogs," Ennis said.

Both teams match up fairly even in terms of size, with the Jaguars holding an edge in terms of depth.

"Both teams will be emotionally ready to play," Farmville coach Dixon Sauls said. "It's a county rivalry and a conference game. We play the game of the week every week, it seems like."

"That poses a challenge for us. Our team has shown that ability to rise to the occasion. We've played better against better teams. We hope that continues."

Both teams come in with no conference losses, so the winner figures to have the edge in the battle for the league's top playoff spot and home-field playoff advantage.

With a win, Farmville would wrap top seeding for the playoffs. A North Pitt victory, combined with a Greene Central win over Ayden-Grifton, would throw the race into a three-way tie.

Ennis has been looking for any Farmville weak spots on both sides of the line of scrimmage, and says he hasn't found many.

"They're so diversified with their offensive attack," he said. "They have the good runners in Anthony Foreman and Rasel Daniels. Of course no one can say enough about how valuable (quarterback) Morris (Foreman) is for them."

"Offensively, they have experience and a big experienced offensive line. With those things in mind, we're going to have to perform defensively to our maximum potential."

North Pitt's defense will be stacked to stop the Farmville running game as well as the option talents of Morris Foreman.

"We must make sure we block the inside gaps first," Sauls said. "That has to be our first priority. We need to mix up some passing with our running game."

The variable here is Morris Foreman. In the big games this year, he has risen to the occasion. A threat running or passing, he's the most dangerous on broken plays.

"Morris is such a good athlete, he does things you can't teach people to do," Ennis said. "That just allows him to turn broken plays into long gains and touchdowns."

"We're going to try and mix up our defense some. We want to put some pressure on him and try to contain him. But you can't put everyone on Morris. You have to respect their receivers and their running backs."

North Pitt's best defense may be its own offensive ball control. Ennis would like to have some time-consuming scoring drives to keep the ball out of the hands of Foreman and company.

"We've definitely improved defensively," Ennis said. "The kids are playing our scheme well. But no matter how well you play defense, when you have such a diversified attack you have to be on your p's and q's at all times."

"If we had our druthers, we'd like to go out and play a ball-control type of game," Ennis added. "Their defensive personnel are so strong. They pose some problems for our offense also."

"I think we're going to have to mix up our offense. I don't believe we can sit back and say we're going to run all night."

For sure, Sauls hopes so. North Pitt halfback Reggie Daniel, who is doubtful for the game with an ankle injury, has 630 yards rushing. Fullback Malcolm Wiggins has 628 yards on the ground.

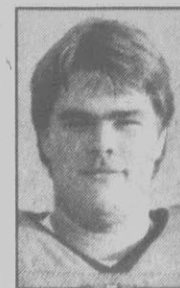

Farmville's interior linemen and inside linebackers must curtail the running of Wiggins and quarterback Randy House, while the perimeter people must keep an eye on halfback's Marcus Purvis and Daniel.

"That is one of the keys to their offense," Sauls said. "We must contain their fullback. That sets up the rest of the offense. That's one of the Significance: Despite its 2-6 overall record, Ayden-Grifton is still in the race for a playoff spot. A win here would sustain that hope. Greene Central could not afford another conference loss after falling to Farmville Central last week, 26-0. The Chargers have their hands full in trying to stop Ram fullback John Dixon, but, if they can, they have a chance.

The Panthers were to play at Farmville Central this Thursday and at Greene Central Nov. 2.

Pirate Spikers Defeat Campbell

East Carolina overcame a sluggish start before rolling past Campbell in three straight games in college volleyball Tuesday night in Minges Coliseum.
The Lady Pirates, 13-10 overall, trailed by as many as nine points in the opening game before rallying for a 15-12 win. ECU won the next two games 15-10 and 15-4.
Campbell dropped to 14-13.
Lady Pirate head coach Judy Kirkpatrick's team is looking to secure its first winning season since 1982. This year's squad has already won more games than any ECU team since 1982 when the Lady Pirates posted a 26-15 mark.
ECU will be in action again Friday in Atlanta against Georgia Tech and Tennessee Tech. Saturday, ECU will play on the road at Augusta and South Carolina State.
Colonial Athletic Association play resumes Tuesday at UNC-Wilmington.

Timberwolves Slip By Hornets, 88-82

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Eugene Royal scored 18 points and Sam Mitchell added 16 as the Minnesota defeated Charlotte 88-82 for the expansion Timberwolves' first NBA exhibition victory Tuesday night at Rupp Arena.
Scott Roth added 13 points, including 11 in the fourth quarter. Todd Murphy had 12, Tony Campbell added 11, and Jim Thomas had 10 in the victory, which spoiled the return of former Kentucky star Rex Chapman.
Chapman, left Kentucky after his sophomore year, led the Hornets with 16 points and had four rebounds and three assists.
Dave Hoppen added 14 points for the Hornets, Dale Curry had 13, and former North Carolina star J.R. Reid had 10.
The score was tied at 39-39 at halftime, and the Timberwolves outscored Charlotte 11-2 in the first four minutes of the third period to take command of the game.
Royal scored nine of his 18 points in the third quarter to give the Timberwolves their biggest lead of 66-51 with 59 seconds left in the period.
Charlotte's Dell Curry pulled the Hornets within 11 points at 65-55 before Thomas' 15-foot shot enabled Minnesota to take a 65-58 advantage at the end of the period.
Charlotte pulled within seven points at 83-76 with 2:06 left, but Roth hit a 3-pointer and the Hornets could not come closer.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland Athletic Director Lew Perkins may remain in the hospital for a week for treatment of phlebitis, an athletic department spokesman said Tuesday.
Perkins entered Doctors Hospital in Lanham on Monday.
Athletic department spokesman Herb Hartnett said the illness was not considered serious.
Phlebitis is inflammation of a blood vessel.

Weik Leads Super Seniors Event

WILMINGTON (AP) — William Weik of Lebanon, Pa., fired a 1-over-par 73 Tuesday to take a one-stroke lead into the final round of the World Super Seniors amateur golf championship.
Weik, one of 32 golfers with less than a 10 handicap invited to play in the tournament, had a two-day total of 150 heading into Wednesday's final round.
Ed Letscher of Kerrville, Texas, trailed Weik by one stroke after carding a 77 Tuesday.
James Wilson of Palm Desert, Calif., was another shot back at 152, followed by Chris Kappas of Ponte Vedra, Fla., at 153.
Two other golfers are tied at 155 on the par-72, 6,100-yard Landfall Golf Club course.

Lewis Files Suit Against Magazine

NEW YORK (AP) — Olympic champion Carl Lewis has begun legal action against a West German magazine and a Canadian cable network for reporting that he used performance-enhancing drugs, according to a published report.
The New York Times reported in Wednesday's editions that Toronto lawyer Timothy Danson has sent letters seeking a retraction, an apology and damages from Stern magazine and The Sports Network.
Under Canadian libel and slander laws, plaintiffs are required to notify defendants of pending legal action, then must file suit within 90 days.
Also being notified is Darrell Robinson, the former American 400-meter champion who accused Lewis of using drugs in the Stern story, and Bill Waters, a commentator on TSN, who according to Danson said on the program "The Sports Page" that Lewis used drugs.
"His reputation means a lot to him and he feels people are spreading lies about him," Danson told the newspaper by telephone from Toronto. "Ignoring them invites others to take cheap shots at him."
All to whom letters were sent acknowledged their receipt except Robinson, the newspaper said. Robinson, whose accusations against Lewis were contained in Stern's Sept. 21 issue, told the newspaper he was unaware of any legal action against him.
Michael Juergs, editor-in-chief of Stern, said by telephone from Hamburg, West Germany, that the magazine stands by its story. Watters said he stands by his comments of Sept. 24, in which he said "... we all know Carl Lewis was on steroids."

Angry-Mom Fight Set For Rematch

READING, England (AP) — The two British boxers whose bout ended with the mother of one of them hitting his opponent with her high-heeled shoe will fight again next month.
The mother has been told to stay away.
Promoters said Tuesday that light-heavyweights Tony Wilson and Steve McCarthy would meet Nov. 15 in this city about 45 miles west of London.
Their first bout, in Southampton, ended in chaos last month. McCarthy had just floored Wilson for an eight-count in the third round when Minna Wilson, the boxer's mother, jumped into the ring and started hitting McCarthy over the head with her shoe.
McCarthy was hospitalized for a head cut and Wilson was awarded the victory because of his opponent's inability to continue. The British Boxing Board of Control upheld the referee's decision but said a rematch also was in order.
Wilson has told his mother to stay away from his fights from now on.
The Wilson-McCarthy rematch will be on the undercard of the British welterweight championship between Kirkland Laing and George Collins.

Dinkins May Make Rockets' Roster

Former North Carolina-Charlotte star Byron Dinkins, one of three point guards still in the Houston camp, has survived several cuts and his chances of making the 12-man roster are looking better and better as the start of the NBA's regular season draws closer.
It's a scenario many would have figured unlikely last spring, when he completed his senior season. Some basketball scouts were saying he was too frail to handle the physical pro game, and he was coming off a season in which his shooting percentage dropped to 43.8 percent, and his scoring went to 17.6 points, down from 21.5 in his junior season.
"It surprised me, but I came in the first day of camp and wasn't nervous at all," Dinkins told The Charlotte Observer. "That was probably from playing at home with some of the Hornets, and playing with Michael (Jordan) the day he was in Charlotte."
"People were telling me I could play. And you have to be confident to do this, because everybody you're playing with is so good."
Dinkins is playing behind starter Sleepy Floyd and veteran John Lucas at the point. He had more company there as camp began, but longtime Houston guard Allen Leavell was waived, then rookie Jay Burson of Ohio State was cut late last week.
Rockets coach Don Chaney has not said how many point guards he'll keep for the regular season.

Rozelle Threatens Walkout Unless Owners Pick New NFL Commissioner Soon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Paul Tagliabue, one of Pete Rozelle's closest advisors, is three votes away from becoming Rozelle's successor as commissioner of the NFL.

The question now is whether Rozelle's implied threat to walk out of the job he had vowed to keep until a successor is chosen will be enough to break the deadlock among NFL owners.

The owners met for 11 hours Tuesday and adjourned after four votes with Tagliabue three short of the 19 needed for election. He had 16 votes to 11 for Jim Finks, the New Orleans Saints president and the candidate of the so-called "Old Guard" owners. Finks had seemed to have the job locked up in July until a group of 11 insurgents blocked his election.

Now it's Tagliabue, who is about as old guard as can be after two decades working closely with Rozelle and old-line owners, who seems in position to get the job.

"Jim Finks' candidacy is dead," Philadelphia's Norman Braman, one of the leaders of the insurgent group, said.

It is blunt statements like that made by Braman which have kept the deadlock going through 40 hours of meetings and 10 ballots. What might eventually break it is Rozelle's implied threat to walk out. He announced his retirement on March 22 and has been living in a New York hotel suite since Aug. 1 while his wife, Carrie, prepares for their move to the San Diego area.

Even if Finks lacks the votes for election, he has more than enough to block Tagliabue. Wellington Mara of the New York Giants and Art Modell of Cleveland are owners who like Tagliabue, a 48-year-old Washington lawyer, but don't want to cede control of the NFL to newcomers.

The new commissioner will have to get 19 votes from just 26 voters. The Los Angeles Raiders' Al Davis left town on Tuesday and San Diego's Alex Spanos won't be present for today's meeting. Both were aligned with Finks.

"There's going to have to be a solution that provides an opportunity for everyone to save face," conceded one of those newcomers, New England's Victor Kiam, who has owned the Patriots for less than a year. "Right now, there's a lot of pride involved."

Rozelle wasn't interested in face. Clearly exasperated with the delay — it is now 218 days since he announced his retirement — he left some strong hints that he might walk away if the deadlock continues.

"I indicated my patience was becoming very short," he said. "I didn't give them an ultimatum, but they understood how I felt."

Then he added: "I feel like I've lost some of my retirement already."

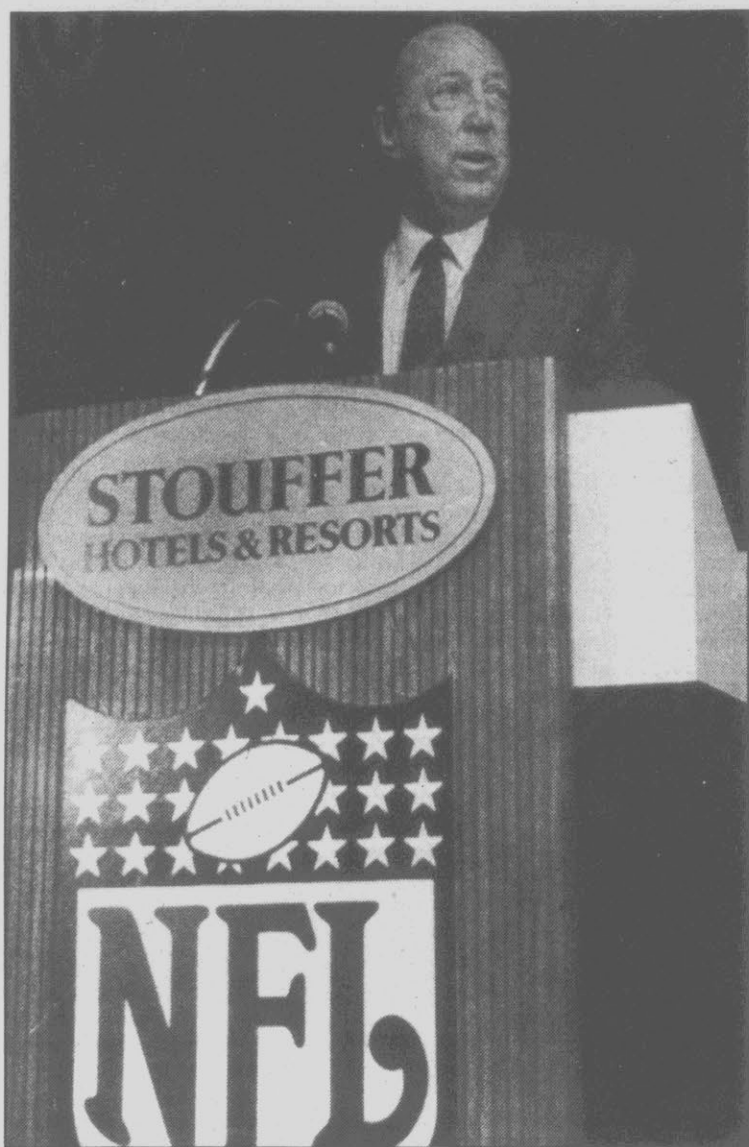

Moreover, the core of the Finks support seemed solid. "I'm still committed to Jim Finks and I'll stay with him until he's voted down," said Modell, who had hinted last week he might switch in the interest of harmony. "If I lose, I lose."

Asked about Rozelle walking away, Modell replied:

"He might. I wouldn't blame him if he did. I'd like to see him leave with his head held high, but if he does step down, we have contingency plans in our by-laws for an interim commissioner."

Rozelle said if the deadlock wasn't broken today, a third candidate would have to be brought in. Who that might be remains in doubt. In fact, owners on both sides have suggested that Tagliabue might have been a perfect third candidate.

"I think our mistake was to make Paul our candidate from the start," Dallas' Jerry Jones said.

keys. They do so many more things (though).

"We can't let them establish the fullback. They certainly have the strongest corps of running backs we've faced."

Ayden-Grifton-Greene Central
After breaking a six-game losing streak with a 19-12 win over Pamlico County, Ayden-Grifton coach B.T. Chappell feels his team is beginning to show improvement.

"We've come a long way," he said. "The defense is head and shoulders above where it was three weeks ago. We've moved the ball the last three weeks. We've hit on over 50 percent of our passes."

"It's nothing to get over-enthusiastic about, but we haven't had total breakdowns."

The defensive improvement has Chappell a little bit happier of late. With only one senior returnee (James Williams) on the defensive line, and one senior back at linebacker (Scott Cannon) the going has been slow at times.

Still, the Chargers have a tough task against Greene Central, which utilizes a strong running game featuring the talents of hard-running fullback John Dixon and elusive tailback Timmy Wilkes.

"Teams have (successfully) run options and run off-tackle around end against us," Chappell said. "Those are some of the things Greene Central is going to do."

"We're playing better. I don't know if they're playing well enough to stop Greene Central."

Offensively, the Chargers have been hurt by an inexperienced line that lacks fundamentals. But against Pamlico last week, that line helped Cannon and halfback Ricardo Gamble gain 72 and 89 yards, respectively.

"We just felt like we matched up better with them," Chappell said. "Both of us are playing some young players. For a change we weren't outmanned."

"It certainly helped more than a loss. The biggest thing now is we play in spells. We got to hope get together and play a good ball game this week against Greene Central."

Irish Apologize To Southern Cal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame has apologized to Southern California for the fight among players before last Saturday's game between the longtime college football rivals.

Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal telephoned his Southern Cal counterpart, Mike McGee, to smooth out the ruffled emotions left by the incident.

"He called to apologize and said to expect a letter of apology from Notre Dame and assured us they were working to correct the situation," Tim Tesselone, USC's sports information director, said.

Athletic administrators for the schools maintained public silence over the incident, in which USC and Notre Dame players battled near the tunnel leading to the locker rooms.

Rosenthal and McGee couldn't be reached for comment and Tesselone said USC coach Larry Smith, who had angrily denounced Notre Dame's failure to prevent the brawl, refused to discuss the matter further.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz discussed it at length, however, during a press conference Tuesday.

Holtz said he feared Notre Dame's reputation could be tarnished by the incident. He labored to polish the image, vowing to punish any players involved in the fracas and to resign if it happens again.

Yet Holtz veered back and forth, holding his players blameless at one point, then later promising disciplinary action.

And while accepting responsibility for the fight, the third since last fall involving Notre Dame players, Holtz implied Southern Cal may have been at fault, too. When pressed on that point, Holtz passed on the opportunity to absolve the Trojans and called the question "irrelevant."

On at least one crucial point, however, he was unchanged.

"We at Notre Dame take responsibility for that thing occurring," he said.

The first fight occurred Oct. 15, 1988, when Miami and Notre Dame became involved in a pre-game melee inside Notre Dame Stadium's narrow tunnel. Holtz dismissed that incident as a misunderstanding, saying Miami players had mistakenly believed Notre Dame players rushing off the field were headed to attack them.

At the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 2, Holtz himself rushed onto the field to settle his players, who had begun taunting and shoving West Virginia players with only minutes remaining and the Mountaineers long out of the game. "We were completely out of line, and I've said that before," Holtz said.

But the incident with Southern Cal may have been different, at least in the mind of Holtz and his players.

"The connotation that our football players tried to instigate this or start it, I can't agree with that," he said.

In explaining events leading to the fight, Holtz said practice areas on the football field are carefully divided to allow each team room to run plays and punt. The division line, a dog-leg jag running from the south 40-yard line to the north 40, is clearly marked in the visitors' locker room, he said.

A 20-year-old ritual requires the visiting team, practicing on the south half, to follow the narrow and crowded sidelines to the tunnel when the players leave the field. "That's their obligation," Holtz said.

The entire width of the field at the north end, just outside the tunnel, belongs to Notre Dame.

Holtz suggested Southern Cal players crossed through the still-practicing Notre Dame team, a small incursion that could ignite the high emotions on both sides of the longtime rivals.

Asked whether he believed Southern Cal had behaved provocatively, Holtz said, "Whether they did or not isn't really relevant."

"What's relevant is that we did not handle it the way you have to handle situations like that."

At another point he said, "I don't care what the other team does, you as the home football team and host should avoid this kind of thing at all costs."

Holtz said he sent a letter of apology and was prepared to ensure no recurrences. "I will resign, number one," he said. "Number two, we'll let people warming up do what they want to do."

"I've got somebody on an independent study to get to me who was involved on our side and who tried to prolong it," he said. "There will be disciplinary action taken when I get that report."

Athletics Jet To Phoenix To Work Out For Series

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Before the World Series resumes at Candlestick Park, part of it will spend some time in Phoenix.

The Subway Series is taking a jet. The Oakland Athletics were to work out today and Thursday at Phoenix Stadium, their spring training facility.

A week after a devastating earthquake hit the Bay area, San Francisco and Oakland worked out Tuesday after morning showers.

The World Series is scheduled to resume Friday at Candlestick after an 11-day delay between games. It's the longest delay in the history of the Fall Classic.

The decision to move to Phoenix was made after Tuesday's workout by General Manager Sandy Alderson.

"Sandy told the players this was their best chance to get ready," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said.

"We'll work out at 2 (p.m.) on Wednesday and noon on Thursday and leave at 6 (p.m.)," La Russa said.

"If they could guarantee we could do everything here that we need to do, we would stay here," La Russa said. "The people here just want us to be ready."

Scattered showers were predicted for the Bay area for today and Thursday.

The A's started their season in Arizona in February and played their first exhibition game at Phoenix Stadium on March 5.

It was suggested to La Russa that the A's are going back to spring training.

"I wouldn't put any label on it," the A's manager said.

"It's more like being on the 15-day disabled list," A's catcher Terry Steinbach said. "I'm sure everyone will feel a little strange on Friday at Candlestick."

The Giants will continue their workouts in San Francisco, where an aftershock of 4.5 was registered Tuesday. The aftershock, the latest of about 3,500 to hit the area since the quake, did not affect the teams nor the stadiums.

"We're feeling a lot better now because we know what's going on," Giants pitcher Kelly Downs said. "It would be real tough if they would've needed to delay it again. If that happened, I'm sure a lot of guys would feel that they should just cancel the World Series."

Candlestick Park, meanwhile, is set to go for Game 3 on Friday evening. San Francisco mayor Art Agnos on Tuesday certified the stadium as structurally sound.

"It's as safe as any facility can be, before or after an earthquake," he said.

The weather also seemed ready to cooperate. After a week of scattered showers, the National Weather Service predicted clear skies for the weekend.

"As we're getting closer, I think it will be easier," Oakland pitcher Dave Stewart said. "It's like opening a present on Christmas eve and then opening everything else the next morning. There's a growing sense of anticipation."

The weather is beyond the Athletics' control. But the Rolling Stones aren't.

The rock group is scheduled to play at the Oakland Coliseum on Nov. 4-5 and nearly 120,000 tickets have been sold. The Stones say their contract allows them to move into the stadium five days early to set up, and that could conflict with Games 6 and 7 of the World Series, if necessary, on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

"Maybe we could be the opening act," Alderson joked. "I'm sure something can be worked out. It might mean a delay of a day or two for the concerts."

Concert promoter Bill Graham said that his options included postponing the show for a day or having the Rolling Stones play at the Coliseum on a smaller stage that would not take as much time to set up.

The games, though, will go on, but not before a reflection on the tragedy and a tribute to those who helped the Bay area recover.

Before Game 3, there will be a moment of silence at exactly 5:04 p.m., the time the earthquake shook northern California. The ceremonial first pitch, which was to be thrown by Giants Hall of Famer Willie Mays, will be made by a representative of the relief efforts.

Pitchers Will Have Edge As World Series Resumes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The muscles have tightened. The timing has been lost. But who has been hurt more by the 11-day World Series layoff, hitters or pitchers?

"You'd think the pitchers would be on top. That what you always hear," said Scott Garrelts, the San Francisco Giants' scheduled starter in Friday's Game 3.

"I think the pitching will be the closest thing to normal this weekend," Oakland Athletics manager Tony La Russa said. "But baseball being baseball, the score Friday night will probably be 10-9."

Conventional baseball wisdom says pitchers are ahead of hitters at the start of spring training. That's what some players think will be the case this weekend.

"The pitchers are throwing," Oakland's Mark McGwire said. "Batting practice isn't anything close to a game situation. But then, pitchers definitely have the advantage in the World Series, anyway. You don't see them. You don't know their tendencies."

Dave Stewart, who threw a five-hit shutout in Oakland's victory in Game 1, will start Game 3. He's not worried about having too much rest.

"I think the rest does me good. It makes me stronger," he said. "I'm not worried about overthrowing. It just means picking up your concentration a little better."

Layoff Benefits Injured

Will Clark was bothered by a sore leg and Kevin Mitchell by a sore wrist. Don Robinson, Mike La Coss and Garrelts were among the pitchers with nagging aches when the Series was interrupted.

Stones Also Waiting On Coliseum

The top teams in baseball and the top group in rock 'n roll want the same thing: the Oakland Coliseum next week.

The Rolling Stones are scheduled to play the Coliseum Nov. 4-5 and fans have bought 120,000 tickets for the group's first Bay area concerts since 1981.

The concerts themselves don't interfere with the revised World Series schedule, but it takes four days to build the huge stage, the largest ever for a rock concert.

Games 6 and 7 of the World Series, if needed, would be at Oakland on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1. They were scheduled for Oct. 21-22 before an earthquake struck the Bay area.

"Maybe we can be the opening act," joked Sandy Alderson, Oakland's vice president for baseball operations.

Baseball Notes

County Coliseum gave it use of the stadium starting Monday, and that the Stones needed the time to erect the stage.

Graham suggested the World Series skip the off day between Games 5 and 6 next Monday and end the Series on Tuesday at the latest.

Alderson said he didn't know what would happen — except that the A's had the right to the building.

Graham said Tuesday that he may ask the group to postpone the Oakland shows by a day. The Stones are off on Nov. 6 and are in Dallas' Cotton Bowl for the following two days.

"That depends on what the Rolling Stones' management says," Graham said.

He also might ask the band to appear without its elaborate stage, which resembles a steel factory.

"Let's face it," Alderson said, pointing to center field. "If the Stones played on a coffee table out there, they'd draw 60,000 fans."

Only 20 Tickets Returned

Only 20 tickets were returned Tuesday for World Series Games 6 and 7 at the Oakland Coliseum, according to Andy Dolich, the Athletics' vice president for business operations.

The games, scheduled for Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, if needed, originally were to be played Oct. 21-22. The Athletics said fans wanting to refund tickets could do so all day Tuesday and until 2 p.m. PDT Wednesday.

San Francisco gave fans the opportunity to refund tickets for Game 3 and 5 last weekend. Only 75 tickets were returned, the Giants said.

Helms Gets A Meeting

Tommy Helms met with new Cincinnati Reds general manager Bob Quinn on Tuesday, but didn't learn anything about his chances of staying on as manager.

Helms was interviewed one day after he publicly criticized the front office's handling of its search for a manager. Helms took over on an interim basis last August when Pete Rose was banned for life, and had been identified by Quinn as one of several candidates for the job.

However, no one from the front office contacted Helms about an interview in the three weeks after the season ended, leaving him unable to plan. He criticized the front office for leaving him in the dark Monday, and got a telephone call from Quinn several hours later setting up the interview.

Former New York Yankees manager Dallas Green already has been interviewed by Quinn and is considered the team's first choice. Green has told Quinn he's not sure whether he wants to get back into baseball at this time.

Helms also figures the ballclub wants Green, so he asked Quinn on Tuesday what his prospects are for retaining the job.

"I asked him if I should look for another job. He said, 'You're still a candidate,'" Helms said.

Quinn has said he'd like to have a new manager named within two weeks. He has declined to identify the other candidates.

Most Reds' players willing to discuss the managerial situation say they hope Helms returns next season. Helms, a former Reds' player, took over for Rose on Aug. 25, when the team was out of contention, and guided it to a 14-21 record.

Majority owner Marge Schott contacted Green shortly after he was fired by the Yankees this season. Quinn confirmed that Green is thinking about whether he wants to get back into baseball again.

Quinn took over the general manager's job when Schott fired Murray Cook earlier this month. Schott has expressed her unhappiness with the way the team played under Helms, summoning him and his coaches into her office after one game that was part of a 10-game losing streak.

Sports Helps Bring Life Back To Almost Normal

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. — On the east side of what once seemed like heaven, kids began bouncing basketballs again to try to forget those few minutes of hell.

Nealy Jones, her blond ponytail trailing behind, threw in a handful of jump shots Tuesday and forgot, for the time being anyway, that her family no longer had a home.

Calley Bryce, wearing the coveted red and white of the Branciforte Junior High cheerleading squad, raised her arms in triumph and for a few moments, the sadness slipped away — much as her father's home had done in the foothills of the Santa Cruz mountains exactly one week ago.

At 5:04 p.m., church bells pealed and 150 people gathered in the center of Santa Cruz to sing and say thanks for surviving the earthquake that had leveled the downtown of their almost-idyllic, oceanside community.

At 5:04 p.m., the referees called the captains from Branciforte and Mission Hills to the center of the floor and reminded them that bumping, shoving and slapping might be appropriate for football, but was certainly out of place in an eighth-grade girl's basketball game.

Outside the bandbox of a gym, the breeze rustled a stand of tall Monterey pines and small shards of glass glistened in the late-afternoon sun. Inside, principal Roy Nelson dutifully noted the one-week anniversary on his wristwatch, took a deep breath, and said, "It's not a week that we'd want to go through again."

Indeed not. A handful have died and thousands in the county, some 1,200 in nearby Watsonville alone, are homeless. As recently as Monday night, a steady rain pushed water through the roof and forced officials to abandon the aging Civic Center, which had been pressed into service as a temporary shelter. The same rain touched off another round of landslides in the mountains just a few miles away and dragged down another two dozen homes.

And yet, 10 miles from the epicenter of the second-most devastating earthquake in California history, the destruction was as random as it was costly. Most people in this affluent community of 40,000, a comfortable mix of aging activists and professionals who commute to Silicon Valley, were lucky enough to escape with their belongings intact.

But just about everyone knows someone who did not. And no one, least of all the kids, feels certain they would be safe the next time.

That, Nelson said, was the reason the schools decided to resume playing.

"We got them back in here Monday and there was a real edge to everybody's emotions. It seemed what they needed, as much as anything else, was a sense of continuity, a sense that what happened before is going to go on again."

"I don't mean to say we won't acknowledge what we went through. ... It's certainly going to take a while to come to grips with it."

That was apparent almost immediately. A handful of girls on both the seventh- and eighth-grade teams were hesitant to practice Monday in the gym, remembering what happened the last time they set foot in there.

"We were a couple of minutes into the third quarter on the eighth-grade game," recalled Holly Bayne, a park district referee who worked last Tuesday's contest and was back on the floor for this game.

"The gym was full and there was so much yelling that when the earthquake started, my first thought was, 'These people are out of control. There's too much energy in here.'"

"But then I saw the basket moving by itself." A handful of players ran with coach Kristin Ard and huddled under the doorway to the locker room. It was a smart move. Three windows high on the west wall broke and sent glass showering down on people rushing for the exits.

Freckle-faced Heidi Bonser got hit with one chunk — right on her headband. As the cheerleaders went through last-minute preparations outside the gym, she wore it like a badge of pride.

"It's fine," she said, fingering the wide green band. "Weird, huh?"

"Yeah," Tabby Lam chimed in, "and it's going to be weird going back in there and cheering, because you know everybody's going to be thinking about what happened."

And for the first few minutes, she was probably right. Come Monday, people some 75 miles up the coast in Candlestick Park will probably have much the same feeling.

But if things go nearly as well as they did Tuesday at Branciforte Junior High, there may be reason to celebrate the World Series after all.

The Bees were getting buzzed by a powerful Delmar squad when nature stepped in. This Tuesday, both the seventh- and eighth-grade contingents sent crosstown rival Mission Hills home with lumps.

"It's funny," coach Ard said, as the handshakes at midcourt were finished. "I couldn't tell if they'd ever get back into playing. Yesterday, the first things the kids said to me when I told them about practice was, 'We're going back into that place?'"

"We were really sloppy, and then before this game, they seemed nervous to me. But they kept saying they wanted to beat this team," she added, "and you saw what they did."

As the gym emptied, someone asked Ard whether this week's ending wasn't a little more satisfying than last week's.

"Yeah," she said, "and this time, at least, we made it to the end."

Quake Or Not, Series Teams Eye New Homes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
SAN FRANCISCO — Even an earthquake measuring 7.1 on the Richter scale couldn't sway the San Francisco Giants and Los Angeles Raiders from eyeing potential new homes in the Bay area.

"It is certainly a very difficult time to convince the public to support investments in sports when clearly resources need to be invested to rebuild the two cities," San Francisco political consultant Paul Ambrosino said Tuesday.

Both projects, particularly the Proposition P measure for a 45,000-seat stadium in the China Basin district of San Francisco, face longer odds because of the Oct. 17 earthquake. Each city has shelved the Oakland City Council decides whether to approve a $257 million package to lure the NFL Raiders back from Los Angeles.

Potential beneficiaries if the Bay area projects fail are Sacramento, the other front-runner in the four-city battle for the Raiders, and Santa Clara, runnerup to San Francisco in the competition to build a new ballpark.

Prop P, already trailing narrowly in early October polls, is widely considered doomed in the Nov. 7 election with voters reeling from the estimated $2.5 billion in city-wide quake damage. Giants owner Bob Lurie, nearing a self-imposed deadline for finding a stadium to replace gusty Candlestick Park by 1994, said Tuesday that the proposition might be scrapped.

The campaign, rightfully so, has stopped," Lurie said. Corey Busch, the Giants' executive vice president, vows it will resume. He plans to point out to voters that the city won't have to spend any money on the privately run project until the stadium's hoped-for opening in 1994 or 1995.

Hill Wants To Unify Title Kinchen Down; Williams Figures To Be Next Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BISMARCK, N.D. — World Boxing Association champion Virgil Hill is looking Down Under to begin unifying the light heavyweight division after knocking veteran James Kinchen down and out of the ring.

After the fight, Hill yelled out to Charles Williams, the International Boxing Federation light heavyweight champion. "You're next, you're next," Williams had a ringside seat for Hill's victory.

Williams said before the Hill-Kinchen bout that he would like to fight Hill, saying he and Hill were the best fighters in the division.

"I will come here and fight Virgil because ... I'm the best light heavyweight in the world," Williams said before the fight.

For the time being, however, the city's interests lie in its massive recovery effort.

City and private backers of Proposition P, including Mayor Art Agnos, are not now planning to resume the blitz of radio advertising, mailers and telephone calls to voters.

Williams said he would like to fight Hill, saying he and Hill were the best fighters in the division.

Virgil Hill gets set for an uppercut against James Kinchen

Hill entered the fight against Kinchen after fighting off a bout with hypoglycemia, which results from too little sugar in the blood. Hill showed no effects of the disorder as he dispatched Kinchen quickly.

The victory was the shortest defense of his WBA title, which he won in 1987 from Leslie Stewart.

"My finishing has been getting better," Hill said. "We've been working on that in the gym."

"Once I got him in the corner, he couldn't go anywhere," the champion said. "I think he was unable to slide down the ropes, and as a result he stood straight up ... and he got caught."

"I was moving really good, just hadn't got my stuff together yet, and I got caught," said the 31-year-old Kinchen, whose record dropped to 44-7-2. "I wasn't tired. I just hadn't warmed up good enough."

Hill said he would not consider fighting anyone from the World Boxing Organization because the WBO was not sufficiently recognized by the boxing world.

Ford Warns Tigers Can't Overlook Deacons

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clemson coach Danny Ford said Tuesday the 22nd-ranked Tigers best not look past Wake Forest or they may not like what they find.

"There are still a lot of good things that can happen to this football team if we focus on Wake Forest and that's all," Ford said at his weekly news conference.

"We don't have the ability to think of two things at one time," he said.

Clemson (6-2 overall and 3-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference) is coming off a 30-10 victory over North Carolina State, a victory that dropped the Wolfpack into a first-place tie with Virginia at 4-1.

The Tigers have been on an emotional roller-coaster ride the past four weeks, losing to Duke and Georgia Tech — two teams they should have beaten — while beating Virginia and N.C. State, two of the top teams in the ACC.

If the events have taught Clemson anything, it should be not to take any team lightly. Wake Forest is 1-5-1 and 1-3, having beaten only lowly North Carolina and tying Rice.

"Anything less than how we prepared last week might not get the job done. I know so emotionally," Ford said. "I've seen us unemotional (in) two football games, or a game and a half. Real unemotional. I've seen us semi-unconscious a couple of other times trying to play."

Ford also said tailback Terry Allen, the team's leading rusher this year and the second all-time leading rusher in school history, is "a whole lot closer" to being able to play Saturday. Allen suffered a knee injury against Virginia two weeks ago.

Ford said he wouldn't know for sure whether Allen will be ready until Friday.

"I don't think you can depend on Terry for a football game the rest of the year," Ford said. "I'd like for Terry to play. I think we need Terry to win against Wake Forest, because I think we're going to have to have some good strong running to beat them."

move the ball because its inability to do so has left the defense on the field too long, Brown said.

The areas that need the most improvement, he said, are the skill positions — running back, wide receiver and quarterback, where Jonathan Hall completed 9 of 25 passes against the Yellow Jackets.

"We've got to make some plays with our skill people we have not been making to have a chance to win," Brown said. "It's time we made some improvement in our offense."

While the defense has been performing well, Brown said he is concerned about Maryland quarterback Neil O'Donnell.

"Neil O'Donnell cannot only beat you, he can embarrass you," Brown said. "When he goes out there and plays well, they can beat anybody in the country."

"We're concentrating on getting better and eliminating our mistakes," Dooley said. "We've got to stop our turnovers in order to win."

Wake Forest hasn't thrown the season away, he said. "We keep striving to improve, and we will improve," Dooley said.

Erickson Gets Rivalry Lesson
Miami Hurricanes first-year coach Dennis Erickson says he learned last March about the intensity of his team's rivalry with this week's opponent, Florida State.

"You get the sense more and more every day this week," Erickson said Tuesday. "But I had a sense of the rivalry when I first came into town and people said, 'The two things you do are beat Florida State and Notre Dame.'"

"That kind of tells you how important it is."

The second-ranked Hurricanes (6-0) play the ninth-ranked Seminoles (5-2) Saturday night in Tallahassee.

The game will affect bowl bids and the national championship race. But even if it didn't, it would have special importance to the players for both teams, since most are from Florida.

Erickson, a Washington native who came to Miami from Washington State, said the Cougars' rivalry with the Washington Huskies was similar. But Miami-Florida State is different from other intrastate series, he said.

Richmond County Leads 9 Undeclared 4-A Teams

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina's 22 undefeated, untied high school football teams continue to dominate The Associated Press prep football polls as the regular season nears an end.

Nine teams ranked in the 4-A poll this week were undefeated with two games remaining before the state playoffs. Included in that group was top-ranked and defending state champion Richmond County, who has outscored opponents 380-58 in rolling to an 8-0 mark. The Raiders received 13 of a possible 14 first-place votes for 139 points from a statewide panel of prep sportswriters.

Asheville Reynolds (8-0) received the other top vote and was ranked second with 123 points.

Garner, Greensboro Page and Northern Durham held firm in positions 3-5.

The biggest jump in the 4-A poll saw East Forsyth (8-0) go from No. 8 to No. 6 after Wilson Hunt dropped to 10th after its first loss.

The rest of the 4-A poll included Fayetteville 71st, West Forsyth, East Mecklenburg and newcomer South Mecklenburg.

For the first time this season there was no change in the 3-A rankings as each team recorded victories last Friday night.

The first six teams are undefeated and included Burlington Cummings, Statesville, Lexington, South Iredell, West Craven and Smoky Mountain.

Bertie, Canton Pisgah, Burns and Kannapolis Brown made up the rest of the 3-A poll.

The 2-A poll and 1-A poll each had three teams from one conference ranked.

Top-ranked Wallace-Rose Hill, No. 4 Clinton and 10th-ranked Warsaw Kenan are all members of the East Central Conference. The Bulldogs (8-0) will be challenged to hold on to their top spot with regular season-ending games against Clinton and Kenan.

The rest of the 2-A poll included Farmville Central, Clayton, Newton-Conover, Forest Hills, Northampton East, Whiteville and Thomasville.

Smoky Mountain Conference members Swain County, Cherokee and Murphy hold down three of the top six 1-A positions. Second-ranked Swain County hosts No. 6 Murphy the final week of the regular season.

Meanwhile, top-ranked Currituck remained the only undefeated, untied 1-A school at 7-0.

The only scare on fourth-ranked Bladenboro's 7-0-1 record was a season-opening 12-12 tie with St. Pauls (5-2-1).

East Montgomery, North Edgecombe and Goldsboro Rosewood held positions 6-8, while Southwest Onslow and Elkin cracked the poll for the first time.

Union and Polk County fell from the 1-A rankings after losses last Friday.

Top Four Remain The Same In Reflector Prep Rankings

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

All four leaders held onto their respective top spots in The Daily Reflector high school rankings.

Garner, 8-0, saw its lead fall to only a single point over second place Richmond County. Richmond, also 8-0, jumped up from a tie for fifth to challenge for the lead nine weeks into the season. Garner has 66 points through this weekend's games, while Richmond County has 65. Northern Durham, second a week ago, slips to third with 63 points.

East Wake, in at ninth, is the lone newcomer to the 4-A list this week.

The rankings rate teams on their success against the strength of their schedule. Points are awarded for each game a team wins, with additional points awarded each time a team they have beaten wins a game. Fewer points are awarded for playing teams below a team's classification, and more for winning against a higher classified team.

Lawndale Burns continues to lead the 3-A ranks with 57 points. Burns, 8-1, is a week ahead in the schedule of the rest of the teams in the top 10, however, so the Bulldogs may not be able to hold on through the end of the regular season.

Smoky Mountain, 8-0, is second with 54½ points while Statesville, 7-0, is third with 53. All three hold their spots from last week.

There were no newcomers to the 3-A list.

Clinton, 8-0, was a point ahead last week among the 2-A's, and holds to that this week with 51 points. Clayton, 8-0, remains a point back at 50 in second place while Farmville Central is third with 49½, up one place and 8-0.

James Kenan, the lone newcomer, moves into the 10th spot this week.

East Montgomery, 7-1, remains atop the 1-A ranks with 39 points. Currituck, 7-0, is still second with 34 points, but has to share the position with Bladenboro, 7-0-1.

Elkin and Hobpton are both new to the list this week, moving in at fifth and a tie for 10th, respectively.

Irish Atop Reflector Rankings

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Notre Dame, leader on the Associated Press poll, continues to lead The Daily Reflector computer rankings this week, slightly increasing its lead over second place Clemson.

The first three teams from last week hold their positions, but there are a number of changes following third place. Arizona, ranked 18th last week, leaped up to seventh this week, making the biggest move within the top 25, while Illinois dropped the most, falling from 11th to 21st.

The computer rankings rate teams on their success against the strength of their schedule. Teams are awarded points for each game they win, plus points for each game a team it has beaten wins, to the third level of competition.

Teams playing and winning against a weak schedule will tend to be ranked lower on the list while those playing and winning against a strong schedule will be ranked higher.

Too, as the season moves along, ratings will become more accurate.

Notre Dame, 7-0, has compiled 1,144 points to hold a 70-point lead over Clemson, 6-2. The Tigers have 1,074 points.

Colorado, 7-0, holds third place with 1,062 points. Alabama, 6-0, moves from ninth to fourth with 1,004, while Washington State, 6-2, falls from fourth to fifth with 886.

Arkansas, 5-1, drops from fifth to sixth with 872, followed by 5-2 Arizona, up from 18th, with 860; Nebraska, still eighth at 7-0 and 858; Southern California, down from sixth at 5-2 and 816, and South Carolina, up from 11th, at 5-1-1, with 810 points.

Following are the top 25 teams, along with the rankings of East Carolina, its opponents, and the other Atlantic Coast Conference teams:

1. Notre Dame (7-0)	1,144
2. Clemson (6-2)	1,074
3. Colorado (7-0)	1,062
4. Alabama (6-0)	1,004
5. Washington State (6-2)	886
6. Arkansas (5-1)	872
7. Arizona (5-2)	860
8. Nebraska (7-0)	858
9. Southern California (5-2)	816
10. South Carolina (5-1-1)	810
11. Tennessee (5-1)	806
12. Fresno State (7-0)	784
13. West Virginia (5-1-1)	778

Brown Re-Evaluating

A lackluster rushing performance by North Carolina has resulted in plenty of openings on the offensive line, Coach Mack Brown said.

Only four players are assured of playing after the Tar Heels gained just 195 yards in a 17-14 loss to Georgia Tech last week, Brown said. They are tailback Aaron Staples, guard Pat Crowley, tackle Kevin Donnalley and fullback Michael Benefield.

The Tar Heels (1-6 and 0-4 in the Atlantic Coast Conference) play Maryland (2-6, 1-4) at noon Saturday in College Park, Md., in a regionally televised game.

Dooley Lauds Clemson
When Wake Forest meets Clemson Saturday in Death Valley, the Demon Deacons will face a typical Tiger squad — one that is experienced, talented and strong, Coach Bill Dooley said at his weekly news conference Tuesday.

"Everyone normally puts Clemson in a class by themselves because they have such tremendous depth," Dooley said. "They've done an outstanding job defensively. They make you hurt yourself. They forced N.C. State into five turnovers, and that was the difference in the game."

Offensively, he said Clemson depends on the running game. "Their quarterback, Chris Morocco, adds another dimension to the offense with the way he runs the option," Dooley said.

But he said the Demon Deacons will go into the game believing they can win.

U.S. Skeptical Of Soviet Stand On Afghanistan

By George Gedda
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — While applauding the Soviet admissions of past mistakes, some Bush administration officials are concerned that the Kremlin may be engaged in a sophisticated campaign to weaken U.S. resolve on key foreign and defense policies.

The administration's public response Tuesday to the speech by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was decidedly favorable, with spokesmen using words such as "extraordinary" and "striking" to describe the Soviet diplomat's statements.

In a speech Monday, Shevardnadze condemned the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979 and, in effect, said the United States was correct in contending that a controversial radar station in Siberia violated bilateral agreements.

But one U.S. official, speaking anonymously, said Shevardnadze's statements on Afghanistan may have been aimed at rallying U.S. public opinion against continued U.S. military involvement in Afghanistan.

The United States has been providing substantial assistance to the Afghan rebels and encouraging them not to enter peace negotiations with the pro-Moscow regime in Kabul.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler welcomed Shevardnadze's admission that the invasion had set the Soviet Union "against all of humanity" but she added that the Kremlin should do more to erase its mistakes.

Specifically, she encouraged the Soviets to transfer power from the "illegitimate" government in Afghanistan to a "government acceptable to all the Afghan people."

"The legacy of the Soviet invasion continues as long as the current Kabul regime retains power in the face of a determined effort by the Afghan people and the international community to see it removed," she said.

The Afghan war has continued to rage even though the Soviets completed their troop pullout eight months ago.

According to U.S. estimates, the Soviets have been airlifting $250 million to $300 million worth of arms a month to Kabul. Soviet military involvement in Afghanistan, among other regional conflicts, was perhaps the main area of disagreement during Shevardnadze's talks last month with Secretary of State James A. Baker III in Wyoming.

The administration was clearly elated over Shevardnadze's remarks on the Krasnoyarsk radar site.

Ms. Tutwiler said: "We have long maintained that the radar is a violation of the ABM treaty. We therefore welcome Mr. Shevardnadze's statement just as we welcomed the Soviet decision in September to completely eliminate that radar."

Other officials, insisting on anonymity, expressed concern that the Soviets might try to parlay their mea culpas over the radar issue into a campaign aimed at reversing U.S. public support for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said in a television interview today that the speech was almost certainly aimed at giving the Soviets leverage against the space-based missile defense system.

"One of the motives, I am sure, is to make it more difficult for us to withdraw from the ABM Treaty, which we should do," Weinberger said on ABC's "Good Morning America" program. "And so this is part of the Soviet pattern of trying to prevent us from proceeding with President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative."

The United States had argued that the Soviets could have utilized the Krasnoyarsk radar to develop a first strike capability against U.S. targets. The Soviets have used the same argument in opposing SDI.

One official said Shevardnadze's statements on the Krasnoyarsk site have immense "propaganda potential" if they weaken U.S. resolve to push ahead with the SDI program.

The official added he believes it is essential for the United States to proceed with the program, contending that the Soviets themselves have their own SDI project under way.

Still, the administration seemed pleased at the overall tone of Shevardnadze's remarks and suggested that they bode well for the future.

"They're extraordinary," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. He called Shevardnadze's candor "a step in the right direction" for arms control.

Ms. Tutwiler called Shevardnadze's statements "strikingly forthright admissions" of past Soviet mistakes.

"They reflect new thinking and they demonstrate the Soviet acknowledgment of the importance of being honest about past Soviet policy," she said.

Activists Invited To Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East Germany's new Communist Party leader today reversed the party's position and said pro-democracy activists will be invited to join in national talks on possible reforms.

In another change, state-run media reported that the government will propose a law next month allowing all citizens to travel to the West and dropping requirements that family members stay behind as insurance.

And party chief Egon Krenz hinted Tuesday he is considering amnesty for people jailed on charges of trying to flee West. Western sources estimate thousands are jailed on such charges.

Krenz, speaking in response to reporters' questions after meeting with a senior West German official, said pro-democracy activists could take part in the reform talks.

"No one will be excluded from the dialogue," he said.

Krenz did not say whether the nation's growing opposition would be officially recognized, or whether challenges to the socialist foundation of East Germany would be tolerated.

Communist Party officials previously had made it clear that opposition groups would be excluded from such talks, and staunchly reaffirmed the country's socialist basis.

In the first meeting between the new leader and a senior West German official, Krenz met for two hours with Wolfgang Mischnick, parliamentary leader of the Free Democratic Party, the junior partner in Bonn's governing coalition.

On Tuesday, about 12,000 East Germans defied a warning from Krenz and protested in the streets of the capital after Parliament confirmed him as president. Police did not intervene.

After the ritual confirmation in the traditionally rubber-stamp chamber — some deputies voted "no" for the first time in the country's history — Krenz called for an end to street demonstrations by advocates of a more open society.

He also promised to investigate charges of police brutality during protests earlier this month and Communist authorities admitted, for the first time, that some police had used excessive force against peaceful protesters.

Krenz was in charge of East Germany's police at the time.

The 52-year-old career politician replaced Erich Honecker last week as party leader, East Germany's supreme leadership post, and promised "a new course" for the country that young skilled workers have been leaving by the tens of thousands.

The state-run ADN news agency reported Tuesday that when the Communist Party's governing Central Committee begins its next session Nov. 8, it will consider reform proposals including a more liberal travel law.

ADN said the party's ruling Polit-buro would propose a system under which every citizen could get a passport and be allowed to travel "to all nations and West Berlin."

It said the Politburo would call for an end to the current requirements that family members stay behind as insurance that the travelers will return, and that current demands for "grounds" to travel should be dropped.

Since Hungary opened its Western border last month, more than 50,000 East Germans have fled to West Germany, which grants them automatic citizenship. Tens of thousands more have taken to the streets, saying they are staying to fight for reforms including free elections and speech.

Gorbachev Seeks Help In Finland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HELSINKI, Finland — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev today began a visit to a thriving Soviet neighbor, seeking Finnish help in bolstering his country's ailing economy.

Accompanied by his wife, Raisa, Gorbachev was given a red-carpet airport welcome by President Mauno Koivisto and driven under overcast skies to the waterfront presidential residence in downtown Helsinki.

A handful of demonstrators were among several hundred Finns who lined the street near the palace, many cheering and waving small Finnish and Soviet flags.

The demonstrators wanted their government to seek the return of Karelia, an eastern region which Finland ceded to the Soviets in 1944 after fighting two wars in five years.

"Give us back our Karelia!" the protesters shouted in Finnish as Gorbachev reviewed the honor guard in a light rain.

"I want the Soviets to discuss with us whether they would return it, since they said Stalin took it and that it was an unwarranted aggression."

... What would be wrong with correcting that mistake?" said Martti Siirala, 66, who said he was born in the annexed territory.

Finnish officials have said they did not expect the issue to be raised during Gorbachev's three-day visit, and they said most Finns accept Soviet control of the region. About 400,000 Finns were displaced by the annexation.

Gorbachev, whose economic reforms need an infusion of Western technology and business acumen, planned to sign a five-year trade agreement and several specific accords for new joint businesses.

One agreement is to set the groundwork for new industries in the Kola Peninsula, which until recently was a closed military area. It is the home of the Soviet Northern Fleet and the base for northern defenses.

In the Gorbachev entourage was Vaino Vyalys, the Communist Party chief of Estonia. His inclusion reflected recognition of the cultural links between the Finns and the people of the Baltic republic across the Gulf of Finland.

Soviet government spokesman Gennady Gerasimov, also in the entourage, reiterated in an interview that Moscow has no plans to hinder East bloc countries instituting democratic reform.

"The Brezhnev doctrine as you called it is dead and there is no hope of revival," he told ABC's "Good Morning America," referring to the concept of intervention named after the late Soviet leader.

"These countries — Poland, Hungary and others — are members of the Warsaw Pact, which we want to disband together simultaneously with the NATO pact, and they are still members of the mutual council on economic assistance," he said.

Despite a bloody history, the Soviets and Finns have close business ties, based for many years on the barter of Soviet oil for Finnish goods.

Finland still is the Soviets' second-largest trading partner in the capitalist world after West Germany. But its own trade dependency on the Soviet Union declined as oil prices plunged.

The Finns increasingly have turned toward western Europe and shifted their economy from basic industries and shipbuilding to electronics and high technology. Finland's trade with the Soviets fell from 25 percent of its total exports in 1983 to just 13 percent this year.

Libyan Chief Admits He Sponsored Terrorism, But Claims He Stopped

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAIRO, Egypt — Libya's Moammar Gadhafi has admitted for the first time that he sponsored international terrorism but says he stopped when he discovered the terrorists were working for themselves and not for all Arabs.

He also told Cairo's state-owned weekly magazine Al-Mussawar, published today, that he wants no confrontation with the United States and would welcome a dialogue toward friendlier relations.

Al-Mussawar said the interview was conducted a week ago, a day after Gadhafi met with President Hosni Mubarak in Tobruk on Libya's Mediterranean coast to discuss improving relations after 16 years of friction.

Gadhafi spoke about a reversal in his policy toward terrorism in reply to a question suggesting that support of "groups that practice terror in the name of revolutionary violence" may have harmed Libya.

"At one point, we supported some of these groups without meticulously examining their aims and role," he told Al-Mussawar editor Makram Mohammed Ahmed, a Mubarak confidant.

"But when we discovered that these groups were causing more harm than benefit to the Arab cause, we halted our aid to them completely and withdrew our support."

Sounding apologetic, Gadhafi added: "We erroneously thought that these groups could be part of the (Arab) national liberation movement. But we found out that they were practicing terrorism for the sake of terrorism and for other objectives that had nothing to do with our national cause."

Gadhafi, a disciple of the late Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and the main current proponent of Nasser's ideas on Arab unity, did not say what terror groups he had in mind. One is known to be the Fatah Revolutionary Council, a dissident Palestinian group led by Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabry el-Banna.

In the past, Gadhafi insisted he helped only national liberation movements.

"Let me tell you frankly that hijacking planes and killing civilians are acts of murder that have nothing to do with combat," Gadhafi said. "(Libya) should not be called to account for any of these acts, because we have withdrawn our support of such groups."

Gadhafi's sponsorship of international terrorism was the principal cause of his rift with the United States. In September 1987, U.S. officials presented to the United Nations a selected chronology specifying 60 cases of what they termed Libya's terrorism and support for various terrorist groups.

U.S. warplanes raided two Libyan cities, the capital Tripoli and the Mediterranean port of Benghazi, in April 1986, 10 days after Libya was blamed for masterminding the bombing of a discotheque in West Berlin frequented by U.S. servicemen.

An American soldier and a woman died in the bombing and 200 people were wounded.

In the interview, Gadhafi seemed to be telling the Americans he wants bygones to be bygones and is eager to turn a new leaf.

He said he would welcome a dialogue with the Americans "anywhere they want on condition it is held in the public eye."

"I say very clearly: We do not believe that conflict with the United States is necessary. We believe that many of the problems between us can be solved at the negotiating table. We are prepared for relations based on mutual respect and common interests. We harbor no hatred for the American people, and we also believe that the American people have no such feeling for us."

Car Bomb Goes Off In Colombian Capital

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — A car bomb exploded in the resort city of Cartagena just hours after the government pledged to resist a terror campaign and keep extraditing suspected drug traffickers to the United States.

The bomb went off late Tuesday in the Bocagrande section of the city near the Barlovento hotel, injuring two people and causing extensive damage, the radio network Caracol reported. The hotel is popular with U.S. tourists.

Sixteen people have been killed and 201 injured in bombings blamed on drug gangs since mid-August, when the government launched its anti-drug campaign and cocaine barons reciprocated with a declaration of war.

The State Council, a panel of top government leaders, said Tuesday that an emergency decree issued Aug. 19 by President Virgilio Barco allowing extradition to the United States would continue to be applied.

The council also said it has no intention of entering negotiations with traffickers, as some have proposed.

Barco issued the extradition decree after assassins shot to death a leading presidential candidate. Colombia's previous extradition treaty with the United States had been struck down in the courts.

Elegance Returns To Writing As Fountain Pen Comes Back

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A relic with a rich heritage is staging a pointed comeback.

The fountain pen, that messy, inconvenient product from a time gone by, is seeing a surprising resurgence in popularity. From the corporate board room down to the shipping dock, people of all positions and occupations are indulging in the lavish feel of the fountain pen as it smoothly glides across a piece of paper, delivering that lustrous configuration of ink.

To sign one's name with a fountain pen is not to produce a mere signature, but to create a work of art. A letter scribed with a fountain pen seems more than just a personal note — it becomes a private communicative.

Shouldn't all love letters be properly written solely with the swooping, graceful lines created only by a fountain pen?

The fountain pen was once the only way to write. That was until the technology developed the ball point, a cheap and reliable alternative which provided a steady supply of ink without the risk of spilling it all over your hands and the front of your shirt.

Subsequently, the fountain pen became a rarity — used mostly by eccentric English professors and lonely, poetry writing types.

Until recently, local merchants report that more and more shoppers are seeking fountain pens. Susanne Griffin, store manager at Hungates in The Plaza mall, said an increasing number of customers in recent months have inquired about the traditional writing instruments.

"Mostly those people interested in them are doctors and lawyers and professional types — people who are particularly interested in quality," she said.

Jimmy Garris, head of the electronics department at Dawson's, said sales of fountain pens have picked up considerably in the past six months, while Jehu Taff, president of Taff Office Equipment, says that interest is so great that one manufacturer who helped perfect the ball point has just recently jumped into what it perceives to be a quickly-growing fountain pen market. Another company, Taff said, has even developed a throw-away fountain pen.

Some fountain-pen makers are marketing their products with a definite upscale tone. That high-end image, bolstered by advertising in upscale magazines such as Esquire and Forbes, is reflected in the cost of some fountain pen models.

The solid gold Montblanc Meisterstück is priced similarly to an economy automobile — a staggering $7,600.

But according to Richard Mattes, vice president of marketing at Montblanc, a leading manufacturer of pens, writing instruments are not just functional items anymore.

"They are also fine jewelry and fashion accessories to be changed answer lies somewhere in the pen's role in American history.

"When you look at the history of communications, you find that to be literate and to be able to write immediately set you aside from the majority of people because most people could not read or write," he said.

"Professional clerks were employed and they wrote everything in a very handsome script. That's how records were kept and that's how communication was done — by hand and in ink. That in itself was a form of status — to be able to write.

"Over the decades, as we became more literate and reading and writing became taken for granted as a skill in American culture, the ball point pen was introduced and that became a very convenient, cheap, and foolproof way of writing."

Wheatley said that at one point in the business world, facsimile signatures became widely used. These mechanically produced signatures became a mainstay of form letters and often times left an impersonal impression with the recipient.

"Sometime in the '70s but certainly in the '80s, more and more people began to use the fountain pen again as a way of differentiating their signatures. Many of these people are managerial and professional people," he said.

"As more professionals went back to the fountain pen, the fountain pen became a popular gift item. What do you get your boss? A nice pen is a very safe, professional gift which can be used and valued.

"Now you began to get into the pen as a status symbol — the pen as a piece of image-wear. Here is when you begin to see the gold-plated and the engraved pens," he said.

Wheatley says his department at ECU sends out hundreds of letters each year, many to students and their parents.

"I sign each one of those letters individually with a fountain pen," he said. "I think that it conveys a much different message than a ball point pen and certainly than a facsimile signature."

"In my view, it's a little more distinctive, creates an image of quality and it says to the recipient of the correspondence, 'you're important and this is very special from me to you.'"

Selecting A Pen Is A Painstaking Process

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

So you've decided to add a little panache to your life by putting some zip into your handwriting — you're going to give that ball point pen a rest and try a little flair a la the fountain pen.

Purchasing a delicate writing instrument which you will use to pen love letters to your sweetheart and requests for pay advances from your boss should be a careful process.

"Selecting a fountain pen is much like selecting a fine pair of shoes," says Richard Mattes, vice president of marketing for Montblanc pens. "Both should look sensational, complement one's wardrobe and be of the highest possible quality."

Because fountain pens, like shoes, are available in a wide range of styles, shapes, sizes, colors and materials, it's not always easy to decide which one to buy.

Mattes offers the following suggestions when shopping for a fountain pen:

Size — Study the shape and proportion of your hand. Whether male or female, small hands or short fingers will be most comfortable holding a slim-bodied fountain pen, while larger hands or longer fingers can use a thicker model.

Hold the pen, with the cap placed securely on the end, in your hand. The clip should be aligned with the center of the nib (the point of the pen) for ideal balance. The bottom of the cap should rest right in the crook of your thumb.

Balance — When resting in your hand, the pen should feel balanced and comfortable. The joy of a fountain pen is its ability to glide effortlessly across paper. Ink will flow smoothly from pen to paper only when it is allowed to do so.

Nib Type — Because a nib is flexible and yields to pressure, downstrokes are heavier than upstrokes, and ordinary handwriting takes on a calligraphic quality. Since gold nibs are the most flexible and conform better to individual writing styles, they are the best choice for those who use fluctuating pressure when writing. Steel nibs are not as flexible and are best for those who write with heavy pressure.

Filling System — A pen with a piston filling system can only be filled from a bottle of ink. Other fountain pens are designed for ink cartridge use. If you do a great deal of writing or travel frequently, a cartridge system may be more convenient. If you are a purist, only bottled ink will do.

Having acquired the perfect fountain pen, you will undoubtedly be swept away by the ease and magnificence of your writing. It is best however, not to do something as irrational as to throw away all your other writing instruments.

There are certain tasks for which a fountain pen is not well suited. Credit card receipts and bank deposit slips, for example, require the hard impression of a ball point or roller-ball pen.

And most crossword puzzles are better off attempted with a pencil — complete with a large eraser.

Although you might want to impress upon friends your affection for your newly acquired fountain pen, it is best not to lend it to anyone.

Everyone has a different handwriting style, and each pen's nib will wear in a unique way. While lending your fountain pen to your business associate may seem an commendable gesture, once the pen is returned, it may never write the same again.

Young Film Director Takes Aim At Apartheid

By Donna Britt
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Euzhan Palcy is smart. She is upside-your-head, thunderclap beautiful. As if that weren't enough, the Martinique-born director — whose anti-apartheid drama, "A Dry White Season," lured Marlon Brando back to the screen after an eight-year absence — has a buttercream voice that says things like:

"I am bezy, bezy, bezy." Sitting in her suite at the Ritz-Carlton here, Palcy, who was in the midst of a press tour for "Season," looks exactly like Cleopatra in a black Azedine Alaia shimmy and 3-inch pumps.

"Tomorrow I go to Zan Franzeesco; ze next day to Los Angeles, ze next day to Parees to speak wiz ze French press. I am over-exhausted, obzolutely tired," she sighs. "But I have to do eet. You don't spend five years working on a project like zat weez zo much emotion and just stop eet. When ze movie comes out, forget about your entire zoul. When you een eet, you're een eet."

The 32-year-old director has been up to her Egyptian necklace in it. Critics tossed around words like "powerful" and "wrenching" ("It stirs you to outrage," Time magazine said of the film), even though "Season" is only Palcy's second film after the critically acclaimed, low-budget 1983 folk drama, "Sugar Cane Alley."

Euzhan Palcy, whose first name means "light and purity" in Greek, isn't complaining about her budding celebrity (she's been featured on the morning TV shows, in Vanity Fair, Essence and USA Today), or her grueling interview schedule.

Palcy Is First Black Female To Direct Full-Length Movie

That's because she feels that the more interviews she endures, the more attention will be paid to the ugliness that is apartheid.

"Films are powerful weapons," she says over and over, her heartfelt mantra for the press. "I won't say my film will change things in South Africa. But it can hit people, it can give them the truest information about what's happening over there. Just to, to make ... one person see, then maybe another, as human beings to say, 'We've got to do something.'"

"If a mass of people say it, if they put pressure on the president here and in England, with anybody who maintains a good relationship with South Africa, that can help."

So can getting a high-profile cast to drive your message home. Donald Sutherland plays Ben du Toit, an easygoing Johannesburg schoolteacher. His comfortable life within the racist system shatters in the aftermath of the beating death of his gardener's son by police following the Soweto massacre in 1976.

Janet Suzman plays du Toit's unsympathetic wife; Susan Sarandon has a small role as a journalist critical of the system.

Palcy says getting Brando, whose interest in human rights is nearly as well-documented as his penchant for privacy, to play the brief-but-memorable part of a liberal lawyer was surprisingly easy. She and producer Paula Weinstein were discussing who should play the part of Ian McKenzie, who at tempts to expose a white official responsible for numerous killings of blacks.

"I was explaining the kind of actor I wanted for McKenzie; someone with charisma, power, the right politics. (Weinstein) said, 'You need Brando.' I said, 'Of course, but how to get him? It's been 10 years since he's had a film; this is not a lead part.' She said it didn't hurt to ask."

Brando read the script, written by Palcy and Colin Welland, and said he was interested.

"I told him, this is not a big-budget film ('Season' cost $9 million). He said, 'I'm not talking about money; I don't want to be paid.' But he had to accept union scale. For someone who can make $10 million per film, that means he worked for free."

Palcy says this with admiration, not surprise. For a highly paid actor to accept practically no money to make a film he believes in is a political decision. Like Spike Lee and Costa-Gavras, Palcy approaches film-making — and life — the same way.

This is a woman who never saw herself as a singer, but who cut an album of songs for local children, because "the only albums of song for children in Martinique were coming from France; with white singers singing about the realities of France — snow, things these kids never saw. I wanted them to have music about their realities; their environment, their lives."

When she was a child, she was mesmerized by the films of Fritz Lang, Alfred Hitchcock and Orson Welles. She wasn't impressed so much by the stars or costumes or story lines as by the power of film to make her feel and believe things she wouldn't have otherwise.

"I remember the bad films I'd see about the (American) Indians, Westens, the bad way they portrayed them. As a little girl in Martinique, if I had by some miracle met an Indian in the street, I would have run and hidden, tried maybe to hurt him, just because of the cliché.

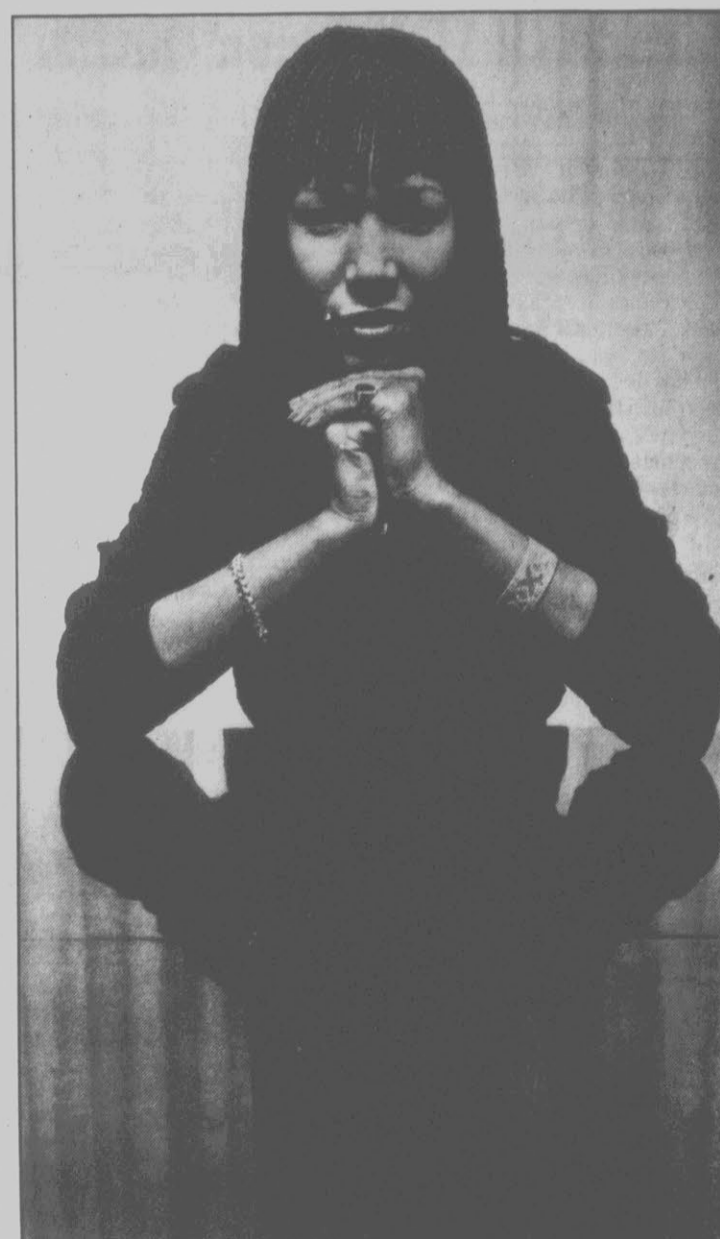

"It's the same thing with black people," she continues. "How do you want white kids from anyplace in the world to have any respect for a black person when you give them films with black people being portrayed as unintelligent, people without any dignity?"

"It's why I said, 'Okay, it doesn't help to be angry; if you want to change things, be a film-maker.'"

The movement and sweep of film, its animated, breathing characters, can give it an impact far beyond that of newspapers and still photos, she says. That and the fact that it provides no easy escape for audiences make it the perfect medium for enlightening people about apartheid.

"When you turn on the TV, you can push a button and go to another channel. People don't want to deal with this; it's easier to have a good time, not to think about this terrible thing. But ... when you sit in a theater to watch a film, there is no way out unless you leave the theater. But since you paid for that, you're committed to it."

Despite her own commitment, Palcy says she hopes not to be labeled a "serious" director, or any kind of director.

Holiday Whimsy Knit Into Vest

A bit of Christmas whimsy is knit into this festive holiday sweater vest. The playful kitty batting at a free branch is worked in stockinette stitch from a chart.

Except for the charted area, most of the vest is worked in a simple mock seed stitch, and ribbing finishes off the rounded neckline, armhole and bottom bands. A soft, acrylic worsted-eight yarn with a gauge of four stitches per inch is used. Easy-to-follow directions are written for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 38, 40 and 42 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making our Cat for All Seasons vest, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-102289 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-102289 by sending a check or money order for $13.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of red with white, cat or white with gray cat.

The mock seed stitch pattern used in the Cat for All Seasons vest is a good one to add to your pattern stitch file. It is worked on a multiple of four stitches, which means that you cast on any number of stitches evenly divisible by four.

row. Repeat these four rows for desired length. That's all there is to it, and I think you will like the effect.

There are many good ways to keep a file of pattern stitches. Why would you want such a file? There are a number of reasons. Suppose you have a good basic sweater pattern that fits you well. There's no reason to make several just like it when you can choose from your file a pattern stitch that will make a big difference in the sweater's appearance.

You can select one pattern stitch, such as the one above, and use it as an overall design. At other times, you might want to use one of more different pattern stitches in vertical or horizontal panels. In either case, all you need to do is to be sure you are getting the correct gauge as given on your directions.

If you place a sample swatch together with the pattern stitch directions and write down information on the yarn and needle size used in the swatch and the gauge achieved, you will have an idea if that stitch is a good choice. Several readers have suggested keeping all of this in clear plastic sheet protectors in a loose-leaf notebook.

Sometimes you can alter the pattern by simply changing the yarn type and/or needle size. In other cases, the solution is adding or deleting a few stitches to make the

Universal Press Syndicate

Playful kitty is worked in stockinette stitch gauge come out right. For example, cables tend to compress the design from side to side. Let's say your gauge should be four stitches per inch, and you work a six-stitch cable panel on a sweater. To stay on gauge, that panel should measure 1½ inches, but you find that it measures just 1 inch. That tells you that you need to add two extra stitches to the stockinette stitch section to make up for the lost ½ inch for each cable panel used.

Lacy, openwork stitches will add extra width to a panel. In this case, measure to see how many stitches you should delete to make things work out correctly.

Whenever you change a basic design with the addition of pattern stitches, you are creating something unique — unlike any other. You can create a lasting and useful item if you combine panels of various stitches in an afghan, for instance. If you give it as a gift, as many do, take a picture before you give it away and keep it on file along with your pattern stitch notes so that you can duplicate it if you like.

Help Children Be Individuals

Dear Abby: A mother signed "Frustrated" asked, "Is it rude to invite only my child's playmate, even though there are three other children in his family?"

You replied, "It's not rude to invite only your child's playmate — regardless of how many siblings he has."

As a teacher, I think your answer was right on target. We do our children a disservice when we fail to teach them that they are not a package deal, but individuals, with separate friends, interests, activities and lives.

Life isn't always fair or equal, but invitations usually balance out. If one child is consistently excluded, it may be because he (or she) has a problem (behavior, personality, etc.). If so, perhaps the parents need to give that child more time doing special things and let that child choose a special friend for an outing. — Helen Molles, Seal Beach, Calif.

Dear Helen: I agree. Brothers and sisters who are close in age can easily become a "package deal," because it's more convenient for parents to send all the kids over to the "Joneses" than to make separate plans for each child. But it's worth the extra effort to help a child develop as an individual.

Dear Abby: The next time I read about all these women asking where are all the good men, I'd like to bob them on the side of the head to wake them up!

People can be so blind that they can't see the forest for the trees. In all the singles ads, women are looking for tall, athletic professionals with the spending power of Donald Trump. These women are looking for the wrong things in a man —

Dear Abby

that's why they keep getting jerks.

So, the next time you go looking for "Mister Right," he might not be tall, he might wear a blue collar and carry a lunch pail instead of a briefcase, he might not have as much hair or be as trim as your dream man, but don't turn up your nose. You could be passing up the sweetest guy in the world!

Let's not judge a man by his height, collar or what he carries his lunch in. You could make yourself — and some nice guy — happy, too.

Not all the trees in the forest are tall. — Single And Short In Minneapolis

Dear Single And Short: Right on! The world is full of towering midgets and "giants" from the eyebrows up. Women, give a little guy a break. You could get the prize (and surprise) of your life. Trust me.

Dear Abby: You almost scored a direct hit. The name of the person who invented the flush toilet was not "John" — it was Thomas Crapper. (Really!) He lived in Chelsea, England.

You can find the story of this invention in Mr. Crapper's biography titled "Flushed With Pride."

As to where the term "John" came from, I'm afraid you'll have to come up with another explanation. — Darwin Williams

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Chase-Johnson Duo Wed

ROBERSONVILLE — Rebecca Jane Johnson of Robersonville and Todd Hamilton Chase of Tampa, Fla., were married Saturday at 4 p.m. in First Christian Church. Dr. Donald Weaver and the Rev. Torrence Osgood performed the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Russell Johnson of Robersonville, and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Glosinger of Tampa, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Chase of Sacramento, Calif.

Grandparents of the bride are Lillian Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Roebuck, all of Robersonville.

Music was provided by Mike Harris, organist, and Lisa Lau, soloist.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a long satin gown with a bow sabbina neckline, short puffed sleeves, a fitted bodice and dropped basque waistline. The skirt and attached chapel-length train were trimmed with matching lace. Her two-tiered veil of illusion featured a pouf attached to a modified crown of silk flowers accented with pearl sprays. She carried a bouquet of Rubrum lilies, white freesia, springerli and stephanotis.

Maid of honor was Deanne Johnson of St. Petersburg, Fla., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Nancy Johnson of Robersonville, sister of the bride; Dana Chase of Sacramento, sister of the bridegroom; Leah Glosinger of Tampa, sister of the bridegroom; Martha Zweier of Charlotte, Sheri Ross of Raleigh, and Cynthia Gibson of Cincinnati, Ohio. Each wore a midnight blue, tea-length gown and carried a nosegay of springerli, alstromeria, gypsophila, statice with pearl sprays and double-face satin streamers.

John Green of Tampa was best man. Groomsmen were Todd Kleman of Winston-Salem, Pete

Wilkins of St. Petersburg, Matt Taylor and Mike Gerive, both of Tampa, and Jeff Kirby of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Junior groomsmen were Michael Chase of Sacramento, brother of the bridegroom, and the flower girl was Nicole Chase of Sacramento, sister of the bridegroom. She wore a white, floor-length taffeta gown and carried a white wicker basket.

The mother of the bride wore a pale mauve tea-length dress and the bridegroom's mother wore a teal-length dress of sapphire blue. Both wore orchid corsages.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Jesuit High School in Tampa, and Wake Forest University. He is employed by First Union National Bank of Florida in Jacksonville. The bride is a graduate of Roanoke High School and WFU. She is employed by Arthur Anderson Co. in Jacksonville.

Following a cruise to Cancun, Mexico, the couple will reside in Jacksonville.

MRS. CHASE

A reception was given by the bride's parents at the Robersonville Country Club. Other pre-nuptial parties given for the couple included a wedding day brunch, after-rehearsal dinner, picnic, cocktail party, tea and several showers.

Clowns Lead Sew-It-Yourself Parade Of Halloween Outfits

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — If you're planning to clown it up this Halloween as Bozo or Clara Belle or some semblance thereof, you aren't alone.

The Sewing Fashion Council says when it comes to making your own costume, the clown is not only the favorite for kids, it's No. 1 among grown-ups, too.

The preferences were based on pattern and fabric purchases at retail outlets nationwide as well as a consumer poll at point of purchase.

NPD, a research concern that monitors the home sewing industry, says $6 million in patterns for Halloween costumes are sold annually, more than half in children's sizes 2 to 7.

According to the survey, dressing up as Batman was second on the adults' list but only fourth for kids, who wanted another form of fantasy.

Their No. 2 pick was to be a prince, princess, knight, bride, or ballerina. Imitating Garfield was the children's third choice, followed by Batman, scary monster, super hero, animal, '50s costume, scarecrow or hobo and crayon or soda can.

Togas, perhaps because a sheet and some fancy rope and tassels will do the trick, were third among adults, followed by variations on the French maid; harem dancer or sheik; monsters; Antony and Cleopatra, gambler, mobster or flapper; king or queen; and fabulous felines or other sexy animals.

Designer 'Reclothes' Farmhouse

By Barbara Mayer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When Alexander Julian and his wife bought a country estate not far from New York City, the land was just what they wanted but the house, though in good repair, was not to their taste.

Five additions, each in a different style, had enlarged what originally had been a small farmhouse. There were also a number of outbuildings with unmatched exteriors that detracted from the site's beauty.

Since Julian, the men's clothing designer, and his wife, Meagan Mannell-Julian, plan to build a main house on the acreage, they didn't want to spend a lot of money and time redoing the farmhouse which eventually will be used as a design studio.

Their solution came right out of Julian's clothing design experience. They "reclothed" the buildings' roofs, walls, floors and ceilings in textures and colors. Though this creative approach was successful and relatively inexpensive, it took a certain amount of courage. Virtually every time the Julians called a professional renovator for a specific project, they were advised to gut the room and start over.

To the rescue came Bruce Smith, a 30-year-old California-born artist Julian met at a craft show. After buying one of Smith's paintings, Julian hired him to cover all the roofs in the antique copper color that Smith had used in the painting. The Julians were so pleased with the results, they commissioned him to redo the exterior walls.

Eventually, Smith and the craftsmen he hired moved into the house for almost a year to work on it. They used common materials such as burlap and muslin, plaster of Paris, white glue and paint. They experimented with textures, surfaces and colors, often using Julian's characteristic multi-colored weaves as a guide. In one room, for example, they duplicated with paint the colors of a sweater in Julian's sportswear line.

The overall result is romantically rustic. Rooms with heavily textured walls, exposed wood beams and bare wood floors provide a fitting backdrop for a mix of antique American country furniture and vivid modern art.

Outdoors, the new shuffleboard court has been painted like Joseph's coat of many colors, including teal, peach, white, yellow, orange and gray.

In the main room, the dark wood paneling and floor were sandblasted and bleached. A log banister was installed in the stairway leading to the second floor.

In the kitchen, Smith and his crew covered appliances and plastic laminate cabinets with a plastic resin auto body filler. The material will stick where most others won't, is easy to paint and can be scrubbed, says Smith. The new surfaces were painted in a green and white abstract design that suggests both a woody retreat and camouflage fabric.

In the bathrooms, a stucco-like texture was achieved with plaster of Paris. Embedded in the plaster are strips of wood, once again suggesting a romantic rustic retreat.

For walls in a number of rooms and hallways, they devised a covering of muslin, white glue and very thin plaster. They precut the fabric, dipped it, stapled it near the ceiling and quickly smoothed it to adhere to the wall.

After the wallcovering dried, Smith and his workers trimmed the edges and painted the surface, using a white latex paint. Then they applied color by splattering it on or by washing the wall.

Haute Couture Goes To The Dogs And Cats

By Greta Beigel
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

On a sweltering Los Angeles morning Max, a much-loved terrier, is posing for photographers atop a rented red Jaguar outside a local pet store.

Promoting a line of "doggie" jewelry for his boss, designer Liza Lee, Max is wearing his jeweled ID tag, a 14-karat-gold necklace and a black tuxedo and top hat.

Gold chains and charms. Diamond collars. Colorful bow ties. Satin tuxedos. Party dresses and perfumes.

Accessories for animals have gone upscale, moving from leashes and collars to diamonds and furs. Nationwide sales for 1989 are expected to reach $2 billion.

Yet many pet owners, animal-rights activists and animal behaviorists question the wisdom of pampering pets beyond supplying them with the necessities of life.

Americans spend more than $12 billion annually on pet foods and pet products, according to Tom McLaughlin, executive vice president of Pasadena, Calif.-based Western World Pet Supply Association, a trade organization.

As spas for dogs proliferate and a growing number of owners seek to beautify their pets with haute couture, several department stores are meeting the demand.

At Macy's Petigree Shop, popular items are jogging suits for dogs costing $30, raincoats for $45 and English trench coats for $55. However, sales of bridal gowns, party dresses and sailor suits are on the wane, Macy's spokesman Tom Dy-jor says.

Best Bets at Bloomingdale's carries somewhat conservative creations — fragrances, sweaters, collars and jewelry.

"We are torn between knowing that people love their animals, but also wanting to make sure with all the misery and poverty in the world that we don't look silly," promotional director Miraed Smith explains.

The hottest outfits nationwide are matching sweaters for people and pets.

The Los Angeles Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals calls for caution if dressing up an animal, urging owners to make sure nothing can strangle their pets.

Washington-based People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, a national animal-rights organization, reminds people that animals are entitled to dignity and should not be made to wear anything "weird or uncomfortable."

"I'm offended by all this jewelry," says Ted Bergman of Los Angeles, who owns a West Highland terrier and a Scottie. "But let's face it, when it comes to pets, people are irrational and there are no limits."

Author and self-styled animal social worker Warren Eckstein, who conducts a weekly radio call-in psychology hour on pets, explains the trend:

As the number of pet owners increases and the relationship between pet and owner gets closer, Eckstein says, "more human traits are emerging in animals."

New York pet-fashion designer Ilene Hochberg, whose best-selling parodies on fashion magazines — "Dogue," "Catmopolitan," and the recent "Vanity Fur" — contain fashion tips for cats and dogs, believes that pets reflect an owner's sense of taste and values.

"They reflect your own particular image," asserts Hochberg, who has 11 dogs.

Moving toward high-quality goods, Robison's Pet Shop in San Francisco carries wool coats from England costing about $100, in addition to sweaters that sell heavily October through January.

And setting an example of true, Southern California fashion extremism, Nature's Grooming and Boutique in Santa Monica reports a run on matching jogging suits for dogs and owners and wedding dresses with antique lace costing from $150. There are also pin-stripe suits for dogs, at $24.95, and even yarmulkes, at $9.99 apiece.

While canine couture is readily available in all shapes and sizes, fewer choices confront the genteel cockatiel or the finicky feline, fastidious about what goes on his or her fur.

Costume designer Alicia Devora,

LAT-WP News Service

Kristie Hoffman with dressed-up Yorkshire terrier through her Port Townsend, Wash.-based company, Birdie's, designs bow ties for birds. Made to order, they run $9 each.

Macy's offers straw hats for cats at $3 apiece.

Silicon On Rubber Makes 'Smart' Tires

Arizona Artist Carves Surface Of Eggshells

By John Pacenti
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — At the turn of the century, Karl Faberge created treasured art by adorning eggs with jewels, gold and fine fabrics for the Russian czars. Bob Hoke of Scottsdale has taken the art of the egg to a new level.

Hoke carves the surface of ostrich and eggs of other large birds with high-speed dental equipment, creating detailed images surrounded by swirls, flowers and other background decoration.

The finished product on the eggs, some with shells only one-sixteenth of an inch thick, resembles porcelain, with detailing similar to that found in some ivory carvings.

"As far as I know I am the first one to do this," Hoke says. "Faberge cut a doorway into the egg and would find ways to decorate it, but I know of no one who has used the egg to do relief work."

Hoke's work is receiving some recognition. He traded one egg with a family's coat of arms on it for a Jeep. Ripley's Believe It or Not bought two eggs last year for $600 to place in its museums in the Virgin Islands and Grand Prairie, Texas. Hoke also sent an egg to former President Reagan.

The highest price paid for one of Hoke's works so far is $1,200 for a carved goose egg which was on display at the Valley National Bank Building in Phoenix last spring.

Jo Ann Johnson, concourse events coordinator for the Valley Bank Center, says Hoke's work "is part of a larger show that has been going on every Easter for nine years. Many of the eggs have ethnic designs, such as Polish art, or are painted. But on the other hand Bob carves his eggs with his own designs. I think his eggs are quite beautiful."

Hoke says one egg can take anywhere from 180 to 400 hours to complete, depending on the type and the design.

"I believe this is absolutely on par with the great masters in terms of hours spent on the actual art," he says. "When I take a blank egg shell, it's like a blank canvas, but it's so much more difficult to work with."

Hoke, 37, used to sell water softeners. Now he delivers pizza. He says he "dropped out of life" about three years ago, around the time he bought some dental equipment with the idea of doing some etchings on glass or steel.

"I didn't really like working with all those micro-bits of glass, so I started playing around with eggs," says Hoke, who had once seen a goose egg with some basic flowers carved in it.

He began to work on goose eggs and then moved to rhea and ostrich eggs. Hoke buys the unfertilized eggs from the Phoenix Zoo.

"The bigger eggs are quite durable," he says. "You can actually stand on them."

Hoke's process of turning an egg into art begins when he cuts a hole in the bottom of an egg and drains it. He draws the design on the egg before beginning the tedious task of carving background designs and adding the detail relief work.

"Let's face it" he says, "we all come from eggs. In some cultures the egg is very spiritual. I take that meaning and add another meaning of my own and create unique art."

Johnny Lee Climbs Back Into Limelight Again

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Johnny Lee was an unknown honky-tonk performer before his song "Lookin' for Love" from the movie "Urban Cowboy" climbed the charts.

His stardom, though, was merely a blink in time. His career, finances and personal life all plunged, and now he's trying to regain some of what he lost.

He has a 10-album contract with Curb Records. He's selling another LP, "Woods & Water," through TV marketing. His biography, "Lookin' for Love," has just been published by Diamond Books.

"The negative stuff is in the past," Lee said. "Things are positive now. I look forward to making good reords, having a family, being happy and healthy and being alive."

When "Urban Cowboy," with John Travolta and Debra Winger, came out in 1980, Lee's "Lookin' for Love" became a hit on both the country music and pop charts. Another song, "Cherokee Fiddle," was also on the movie's soundtrack LP, which sold 3 million copies.

He and his country buddy, Mickey Gilley, came to represent country chic in their snappy cowboy hats, spiffy Western shirts and expensive cowboy boots. They appeared on TV shows such as "Fantasy Island," "CHIPS," "The Dukes of Hazzard" and "The Fall Guy." And Lee married actress Charlene Tilton, who portrayed Lucy Ewing on TV's "Dallas."

Today, he and Gilley are hardly friends. He went four years without making a record. All the money he thought he made during his peak years has vanished. He and Tilton divorced. They had a child, Cherish Lee, 7.

"I lost everything except my talent," the 43-year-old singer said. "I never saw a dime."

Lee has since remarried, to Deb Lee in November 1986. That marriage was a year after he released "Keep Me Hanging On," his last album until this fall's "New Directions."

For reasons still unclear to Lee, no record company wanted him.

"I felt absolutely useless," he said. "My dignity was taken away. I just worked jobs at clubs here and there — did whatever I could do. It was quite devastating for a while."

Lee was a nightclub singer in the Houston area when he was chosen to sing "Lookin' for Love" in the "Urban Cowboy" movie.

"Everybody related to it," he said. "It's a meaningful, simple song. To this day, everyone still knows the words to that song."

He followed it with hit records such as "One in a Million," "Pickin' Up Strangers," "You Could've Heard a Heart Break" and "Yellow Rose," which also was the theme song for the former TV series.

But he had trouble getting money he felt was due him from his career. An associate who was handling money Lee earned from performing told him the money had been deposited in safe accounts, but when Lee tried to get his money back he was unable to do so. He hired lawyers to try to get the money, but legal fees mounted and he finally could afford them no longer. He gave up.

"I was ready to get on with my life and start over. That's what I had to do, start over," he said.

He and Gilley went their separate ways under strained circumstances, Lee said, because Gilley apparently felt Lee didn't support him in his own legal battles.

"I still think the world of Mickey," Lee said. "I love him like a brother. But I've called him numerous times and he's never returned my calls. I'm a little let down with him. It hurts me to think so much of someone ... you can only do that for so long. If they don't think the same about you, what are you going to do?"

"I still think he's a great talent and a great guy and I miss the relationship we had."

Lee estimates that he owns at least 100 cowboy hats.

'Look Who's Talking' Tops Box Office Receipts Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — "Look Who's Talking" held the top position in box office revenue for the second consecutive weekend, while "Fat Man and Little Boy," starring Paul Newman, made a dismal debut.

"Look Who's Talking," a comedy starring John Travolta, Kirstie Alley and Bruce Willis as the voice of a baby from conception to infancy, grossed $14.1 million last weekend, almost $10 million ahead of second-place "Next of Kin."

"Next of Kin," featuring Patrick Swayze and Liam Neeson pursuing their brother's killer, collected $4.8 million, Exhibitor Relations Co. reported Monday.

In third place was "Sea of Love," starring Al Pacino as a cop whose murder suspect (Ellen Barkin) is also his lover. "Sea of Love" had ticket sales of $3 million.

"Black Rain," the international adventure movie with Michael Douglas, finished in fourth with ticket sales of $2.84 million. In fifth was "Gross Anatomy," a new medical comedy featuring Matthew Modine and Daphne Zuniga. "Gross Anatomy" had receipts of $2.83 million.

The sequel "Halloween V: The Revenge of Michael Myers" landed in sixth with $2.79 million, down a sharp 45 percent from its opening weekend. In seventh was "The Fabulous Baker Boys," with Jeff Bridges and Michelle Pfeiffer, taking $2.78 million.

Falling four notches to eighth was Tom Selleck's prison movie "An Innocent Man," grossing $2.3 million. In ninth was the bittersweet family comedy "Parenthood," with $1.51 million.

In 10th place was "Fat Man," the story about the building of the first atomic bomb. The movie collected only $1.48 million for a terrible opening per-screen average of $1.752.

Woody Allen's "Crimes and Misdemeanors," while not making the top 10, was up 1.5 percent from its opening weekend.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations. Figures are based on actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures are not immediately available.

1. "Look Who's Talking," Tri-Star, $14.1 million weekend gross, 1,547 screens, $9,145 per screen, $30.1 million overall gross, two weeks in release.
2. "Next of Kin," Warner Bros.,

$4.8 million, 1,358 screens, $3,539 per screen, $4.8 million, one week.

3. "Sea of Love," Universal, $3 million, 1,419 screens, $2,080 per screen, $46.4 million, six weeks.

4. "Black Rain," Paramount, $2.84 million, 1,615 screens, $1,761 per screen, $36.4 million, five weeks.

5. "Gross Anatomy," Disney, $2.83 million, 853 screens, $3,318 per screen, $2.83 million, one week.

6. "Halloween V: The Revenge of Michael Myers," Galaxy, $2.79 million, 1,495 screens, $1,868 per screen, $9.1 million, two weeks.

7. "The Fabulous Baker Boys," 20th Century Fox, $2.78 million, 860 screens, $3,231 per screen, $7.3 million, two weeks.

8. "An Innocent Man," Disney, $2.3 million, 1,520 screens, $1,544 per screen, $15 million, three weeks.

9. "Parenthood," Universal, $1.51 million, 1,183 screens, $1,275 per screen, $89.4 million, 12 weeks.

10. "Fat Man and Little Boy," Paramount, $1.48 million, 843 screens, $1,752 per screen, $1.48 million, one week.

Busfield Applauds Producers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Timothy Busfield, who has gained fame as an actor in ABC-TV's "thirtysomething," says a little applause is needed for the most important people in theater — producers.

"The producer is the least egotistical person," Busfield said during a weekend appearance at the Tennessee Arts Commission Governor's Conference on the Arts. "And if he is effective, he gets artistic performances out of everybody. You need to find good producers to spread good producers across the state."

Next in line are writers, directors and designers, said Busfield, who holds a theater degree from East Tennessee State University and conducts summer workshops for young people at the school.

"The actor is the lowest one on the totem pole, and the most recognized, sometimes unrightfully so," Busfield said.

Busfield, 32, has worked as a producer, writer and director for the Fantasy Theater, California's 4-year-old state theater for children. On "thirtysomething," he plays Elliot Weston, a yuppie that Busfield has said "doesn't want to grow up."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Oct. 26

ARIES (March 20 to April 17): Make a list of your obligations so you can handle them efficiently. A down-to-earth conversation with those at home will produce fine results.

TAURUS (April 18 to May 19): Let a good friend aid you in solving a financial problem. A younger associate will have good ideas for you to make more money and business success.

GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Let your family see that you are really concerned with conditions at your residence. You can begin to realize reward from all of your hard work and conscientious duties.

MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): A good time to make an effort to see kin and comrades that you really like. Try to find out how you can please your attachment over a period of time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Concentrate on every single detail necessary for you to be successful in your business. You have a chance to get better acquainted by inviting fine persons into your home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): A trip with a resourceful couple can bring many benefits. Do cheerfully duties and chores expected of you by your attachment.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Two friends will be very helpful to you in a business or money matter. Take a long range view now just how you can improve home conditions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Your best opportunities now will come from a distance. Put some more modern and efficient touches on your residence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Be more aware of your public standing and improve it by doing a better daily job. Take some flowers home to please family and give more color to your residence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Use the expertise of a good friend now to your advantage. In spare time keep socially very busy. Try to get a family member to go on a jaunt with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Dashing many places with interesting friends will bring much pleasure. See with your attachment as many worldly matters and places as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Listen to the expert opinion given to you by an older and long-time friend. Invite the most important persons available into your home.

Bridge

DANGER, EXPERTS AT PLAY

Bridge players like to try a bit of one-upmanship against their peers. There's even a name—the Grosvenor Coup—for a deliberate play that could cost a trick but does not because your opponent won't ever believe you could be so foolish. It gives you the chance to smile pityingly at a player who has just missed a chance to pick up a trick. We came across this example at a rubber bridge game in New York's renown Cavendish Club.

With his wealth of aces and kings, South correctly decided his hand was too good for a one no trump opening bid. When North made a forcing jump in spades, South launched into Blackwood and settled in the small slam because of potential third-round losers in trumps, hearts and clubs.

West's natural lead was the queen of diamonds, taken in dummy. De-

Both vulnerable. South deals.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

declarer played low, East's trump trick would have vanished, but what sane East would play low holding Q 10 9 in the suit? So declarer rose with the king and, when West discarded a club, East smirked wickedly and South's face turned beet red.

But it was declarer who had the last laugh. He cashed the ace of spades, king and ace of hearts and king of diamonds, then ruffed a heart in dummy and a diamond in hand. To complete the strip, the ace and king of clubs were cleared. Now East was given the lead with his high trump. Holding only one card in each red suit, he could do nothing other than give declarer a ruff-sluff, allowing South to discard a club from one hand while ruffing in the other.

The Mystery Book

By Karen Peaden

One Halloween my family was trick or treating through the neighborhood. It was a very cold, dark, spooky night. The wind was blowing hard and leaves rustled. It was 12 o'clock midnight and there was a full moon. From the light of the moon, I saw a book on the ground.

On the cover it read, "Do not touch" but, everywhere I went it followed me. Finally, I picked the book up. It had a rule written in it. It said, "Say 'Oh, no' and you will go to a witch's castle."

Accidentally, I said, "Oh, no. Oops." Then I heard, "Pooff! Hee! Hee! Ahhh!

Be quiet little girl." It was a witch's voice.

I thought, how can I get back home? Then I heard a witch ask how to make a stew for Halloween. I'm not going to let a green-faced witch scare me, I thought. Then the witch shrieked, "I'm going to put you in my stew."

I yelled, "Oh, no!" the next thing I knew I had landed back on the same street with my parents. And after that, I never touched another mystery book again.

Zakvia

By Byron Mewborn

Zakvia, the nice witch, is going to get more things for her brew. When she left, a bat smelled the brew. He was hungry. He ate it all up. When Zakvia got back she was so mad she went to find the bat and she did. She turned him into a frog!

Byron Mewborn, 7, a student at Grifton Elementary School receives special mention.

The Walking Shoes

By Kate Harrington

In an old house by the river lived a witch. One day she went for a walk. She forgot her shoes. She turned around and her shoes were right behind her! "Well, goodness me," said the witch, "how in the world did my shoes get here?"

She walked back to the house and found two little mice inside the shoes giggling. "So, you were the ones that did it! Get out of here and don't come back!!" And they never came back.

Kate Harrington, 7, a student at Eastern School receives special mention.

Caroline Beasley, 7, a student at St. Peter's School receives special mention.

My Halloween Story

By Brittany Fleming

I saw a black spider that had eight legs. I saw a black cat that had glowing eyes. It was spooky but I survived. Then we went trick or treating.

Brittany Fleming, 7, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Bats

By Kim Jackson

Bats are good. Bats are great. Bats really communicate.

They don't use telephones. They don't use wires. They don't even use Indian fires.

They can't see. They can't hear. But they can fly as fast as a deer.

They use radars. They use waves. They also live inside of caves.

Kim Jackson, 10, a student at G.R. Whitfield School receives special mention.

Community Capsules

Chamber Of Commerce

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is very much a part of the county but it is not a department of county or city government. In fact, the chamber is an organization which unites professional and business people who join by paying a membership fee. These people come together to work together to solve problems concerning the growth of the business community. Locally over 1,100 members are working toward a more prosperous community. The purpose of the organization is to work toward community development, effective government and a growing economy. This is done by involving area leaders on chamber committees.

The Community Development Division of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber oversees a variety of community programs. Its safety committee assists in the 'Drug Stoppers' program for Pitt County Schools and holds appreciation dinners for law enforcement officers and fire and rescue members. The Drug Awareness Task Force works toward educating business leaders about drug problems in the work place. There is also a Human Relations Task Force, a Recreation and Attractions Committee and a 'Welcome to Greenville' sign committee. All of these are part of the chamber's Community Development Division.

The Economic Development Division has several tasks including helping to promote conventions and travel in Pitt County. It also has committees working toward better county transportation and agri-business.

A Public and Governmental Affairs Division of the chamber watches and studies local and state legislation which could affect Pitt County. The committee informs chamber members of what is being done and how legislators and local officials feel and vote on important issues. Two special committees have been established to deal with Pitt County education. One group promotes Junior Achievement, the RECAST program and the Teacher Work/Learn program. Another group meets with educators to work toward better Pitt County schools.

Other groups within the chamber are the Small Business Council and the Special Projects Division which coordinates EXPO every year. The Organization and Membership Division works toward recruiting new members and keeping those who already belong. Look for a sign on the door of a business when you enter. It will tell you that the business is a member of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

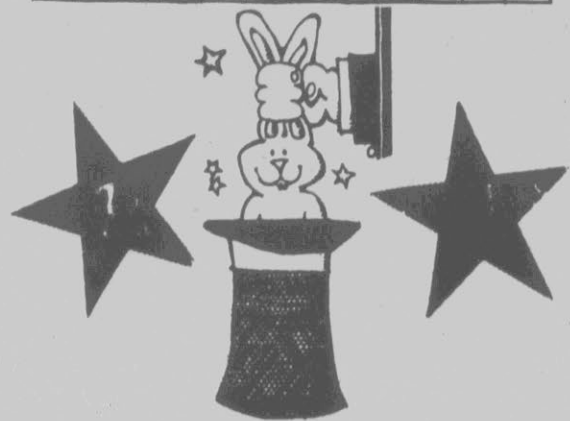

A Public Relations Division publishes a newsletter for members and helps to promote the work of the chamber. The Research Department keeps updated information about the cities within the county and the county itself.

Membership in the local chamber of commerce is voluntary. A business or professional person does not have to join but it does give them the chance to work together toward a better Pitt County.

Tasting Tours Kick Off Sale Of Cook Book

By Rosalie Trotman
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

KINSTON — A long range project and business venture has been initiated by the Mother's Committee of Arendell Parrott Academy in its newly published cookbook "Frantic Elegance."

"It took 20 months to research and finalize the contents," said Betsy Morris of Greenville, a member of the Mother's Committee.

The cookbook will be marketed in various cities, which have been planned by the publisher. "We hope the cookbook will be the major fund raiser for several years," she said.

In explaining the name of the cookbook, she said, "It came about as a tribute to today's busy women, who prepare meals on a time schedule. It was created for those who wish to conserve time, but not sacrifice taste. The cookbook is a collection of recipes from parents, alumnae and friends of the academy," she said. "Although only a portion of recipes submitted were included, all are family favorites."

"The academy is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, and "Frantic Elegance" is a commemorative edition," said Mrs. Morris.

Recipes include appetizers, beverages, soups, sauces, salads, breads, entrees, vegetables and desserts. One section was designed for "kids in the kitchen."

To promote sales, recipes printed in the cookbook will be included on tasting tours in Kinston, New Bern and Greenville. Four homes in Greenville will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday including, Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Holt, 119 Asbury Road, Mr. and Mrs. David Morris, 809 Bremerton Drive, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Minard, 3608 Coventry Court, and Dr. and Mrs. Mark Williams, 813 Bremerton Drive. The tasting menus for the four homes are different, but are printed in the cookbook.

A limited number of tickets are available at Jefferson's Florist, Little By Little and Bowen Cleaners.

Some of the recipes from the cookbook follow:

PEANUT BUTTER CREAMS

1/4 cup powdered sugar
1/2 cup sweetened condensed milk
1 cup chocolate chips
1 cup peanut butter

Mix all ingredients until well blended. Drop by spoonfuls onto waxed paper and chill before serving.

SAN FRANCISCO CHICKEN BREASTS

3 or 4 chicken breasts, boned and skinned
1/4 tsp. white pepper
3/4 cup dry bread crumbs
3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 tbsps. finely chopped parsley
2 tps. salt
3/4 cup butter
1 clove garlic
Juice of 2 lemons
Dash of paprika

Preheat oven to 350°. Split each breast and pepper well. With a fork, blend the bread crumbs, Parmesan cheese, parsley and salt. Melt the butter in a saucepan and press the garlic into it. Simmer gently for 3 minutes. Dip each breast into the butter and then into the bread crumb mixture. Roll each breast tightly and fasten with a toothpick or small skewer. Place in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle chicken breasts liberally with lemon juice, remaining butter and a dash of paprika. Bake for 1 hour, basting twice.

FRESH CRANBERRY SALAD

1/2 lb. fresh cranberries
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 bag miniature marshmallows
1/2 cup chopped pecans
1 20-oz. can crushed pineapple, drained

3 firm apples, unpeeled and chopped
1 9-oz. container of frozen non-dairy whipped topping

Grind the cranberries in a food processor. Stir in the sugar and set aside. Mix the marshmallows, pecans, pineapple, chopped apples and non-dairy whipped topping. Combine all the ingredients and chill overnight. This salad is better the older it gets as the flavors blend together. Serves 20.

SOUR CREAM BISCUITS

2 cups self-rising flour
1 cup sour cream

1/2 to 3/4 cup butter or margarine, melted

Mix all ingredients. Bake in mini muffin tins at 375° for 10 to 15 minutes.

SHRIMP MOLD

1 can tomato soup (undiluted)
7 oz. cream cheese
1 1/2 pkgs. plain gelatin
1/2 cup water
1 cup mayonnaise
1 small minced onion
1 1/4 cups chopped celery
Salt to taste
Dash to Tabasco
2 lbs. cooked shrimp, chopped in food processor

Bring soup slowly to a boil, add cream cheese and stir until melted. Remove from heat. Dissolve gelatin in the 1/2 cup of water and add to soup mixture. Add mayonnaise, onions, celery, salt and Tabasco to mixture. Let mixture cool and then add shrimp. Pour into mold and chill for several hours until set. Remove from mold and serve with crackers.

GLAZED LEMON LOAF

1 1/2 cups all purpose flour
2 tps. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla (optional)
2 eggs
1 1/2 tps. lemon rind, grated
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup walnuts, coarsely chopped (optional)
Lemon glaze

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cream butter and gradually blend in sugar. Add vanilla and mix well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating until light and fluffy after each addition. Add in lemon rind and mix. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk, mixing well after each addition. Include walnuts with the last of the flour. Pour into greased and lightly floured 8 1/2 by 4 inch loaf pan. Let stand for 10 minutes and then bake at 350° for 50 to 60 minutes or until cake starts to draw away from sides of the pan. Remove from the oven and allow to stand 5 minutes. When cooled, remove from pan. Allow to stand overnight before slicing.

Lemon Glaze:
2 tps. lemon juice
Combine ingredients and drizzle over cake while still warm.

Book Weaves Spell Of Halloween Fun

By Carol Deegan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A witches' brew of ideas for a safe, spooky and happy Halloween is conjured up by Meredith Brokaw and Annie Gilbar in "The Penny Whistle Halloween Book" (Weidenfeld & Nicolson, New York; $9.95).

This illustrated guide includes the story of the first Halloween, suggests appropriate activities for children from 2-year-olds to teens, and lists sources for ordering sound effects and make-up kits.

Ideas for making Halloween costumes with simple materials (a staple gun, glue, tape, needle and thread) are featured, plus party themes. Directions for making decorations and invitations — and party recipes (Tuna Spooks to Vampire Punch) — are included.

Some suggestions from the book:
— Make ice cubes with raisins in them to look like insects. Serve in punch.

— Put trick-or-treat goodies in a homemade cardboard coffin. Let the kids lift the lid and get the candy themselves.

This book, with wonderful illustrations by Jill Weber and its age-appropriate activities, will be a resource for many years.

Try Hot Fudge Pudding Cake for a sweet, chocolate treat for Halloween. There's magic in this cake — and you don't use a pudding mix!

HOT FUDGE PUDDING CAKE

3/4 cup granulated sugar
1 cup all-purpose flour
3 tps. cocoa
2 tps. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 cup milk
1/3 cup butter or margarine, melted
1 1/2 tps. vanilla extract
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 1/2 cups packed light brown sugar
4 tps. cocoa
1 1/4 cups hot water
Whipped topping

Heat oven to 350°. In medium bowl, combine 3/4 cup granulated sugar, flour, 3 tablespoons cocoa, baking powder and salt. Blend in milk, melted butter and vanilla. Beat until smooth. Pour batter into an 8- or 9-inch square pan.

In small bowl combine 1/2 cup granulated sugar, 1 1/2 cups brown sugar and 4 tablespoons cocoa. Sprinkle mixture evenly over the batter. Pour the hot water over top; do not stir. Bake 35 to 40 minutes in a 350° F oven or until center is almost set. Let stand 15 minutes. Spoon into dessert dishes, spooning sauce from bottom of pan over top. Garnish with whipped cream. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

GHOSTLY GHOULISH GLUG

Vanilla ice cream
Cold milk
Hubba Bubba Bubble Gum soda

For each child, you will need a balloon-shaped glass, a 14-inch square of white plastic, a 12-inch piece of orange yarn, black marker and straw. Have the children draw ghostly grins on the white plastic square with the black marker.

Place a small scoop of ice cream in the glass. Top with 1/2 cup cold milk. Top with soda. Fill all the glasses, then refill with soda as the bubbles subside.

Place the plastic square on the top of the glass, gather the bottom and tie with yarn. Make a snip in the top of the plastic to insert the straw. The ghostly glug is ready to slurp!

Hint: If you wet the plastic, it will adhere to the glass, making it easier to tie with yarn.

Include Cabbage In Diet To Reduce Cancer Risks

Q. Kathy, can you share with your readers information about the promotion of North Carolina cabbage that is being conducted by the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service and the local Cancer Society?

From Oct. 15 to Nov. 15 there will be brochures and displays in the produce section of many grocery stores. The program is called "Fall Into Good Health With North Carolina Cabbage." North Carolina produces 102 million pounds of cabbage each year in a spring and a fall crop. Those crops use 7,000 acres of land. We are fifth in cabbage production in the U.S.

Of course, the reason your readers would be interested in cabbage is because a 1/2-cup serving of cabbage gives adults 25 percent of their daily vitamin C. It is also a good source of potassium and is low in sodium.

Cabbage is a good food to include in a diet to reduce cancer risks. Our N.C. cabbage campaign also has a recipe booklet we developed for this promotion. It is free and should be available in grocery stores, or your readers could contact the Agricultural Extension Office in Pitt County. Call Addie Gore at 830-6370.

Thanks, Carolyn Lackey, Acting Specialist In Charge, Food and Nutrition Extension, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, N.C.

A. You may have seen Dr. Lackey on "Carolina Today" recently. She was joined by Dr. Corre Garrett of the School of Nursing who was represent-representing our local Cancer Society, and Don Young, N.C. Department of Agriculture. They talked about cabbage and about cancer prevention. Dr. Garrett shared the following information number for the American Cancer Society, (800) 227-2345.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

The dietary guidelines to lower your risk of getting some dietary related cancers are similar to those that help prevent heart disease:

1. Reduce your intake of total fat to 30 percent of total calories.
2. Increase consumption of fruit, vegetables and whole grain cereals.
3. Drink alcohol (including beer and wine) only in moderation.
4. Consume calories only in amounts to maintain reasonable weight.

There are a few dietary guidelines that are more specific to cancer risk reduction:

5. Consume salt cured, smoked and charcoal broiled foods only in moderation.

6. When eating vegetables, consume more of the vegetables high in beta carotene. Those are dark green and deep yellow vegetables, cabbage, spinach, carrots, broccoli, tomatoes and brussel sprouts.

7. When eating fruits, eat more of those with vitamin C, which are oranges, lemons, grapefruits, peaches, melons and tomatoes.

8. And eat vegetables with vitamin C like green leafy vegetables, cauliflower, green peppers, sweet and white potatoes. The advice is given to eat more cruciferous vegetables, which are vegetables from the cabbage family and include brussel sprouts, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, kale and turnips. Eating these vegetables without fat seasoning (or just a little bit) helps prevent stomach and colon cancer. Also keep the high-fat cheese sauces to a minimum.

Oh yes, Carolyn, who is a good friend and colleague, called back and said that the cabbage-potato soup in the printed brochure is even better if you add 2-3 chicken or beef bouillon cubes (that is, if you don't have high blood pressure).

Basics Pan Size Essential To Success

By Joan Drake
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

When baking, it is essential to use the size pan that a recipe specifies to achieve optimal results.

Some manufacturers provide a pan's size on their cookware; but if it isn't noted, here's the correct way to take a pan's measurements.

For length, width or diameter, measure the pan across the top, inside edge to inside edge (Step 1). For depth, stand a ruler in the pan and note the distance from the bottom to the rim (Step 2).

The volume of a pan is measured by pouring in water (Step 3) and recording how many cups or quarts are needed to fill the vessel to the rim. Eliminate the need to retake measurements by scratching or otherwise marking the size on the outside of the pan.

There are occasions, particularly in cake baking, when a different shape is needed or desired. "The New Doubleday Cookbook" (Doubleday; 1985; $16.95) by Jean Anderson and Elaine Hanna explains that there are some batters that bake successfully in pan shapes or sizes other than those recommended.

Most simple shortened cakes adapt well, but the authors warn against changing pans for poundcake, chiffon or other spongecakes and loaf cakes. The following information from the book may be used as a substitution guide. It is best not to fill pans more than half full. Any leftover batter may be baked into cupcakes.

Two (8-inch) round layers — 1 1/2 to two dozen cupcakes.

Three (8-inch) round layers — two (9-inch) square pans.

Authors Produce A Beautiful Book On 'Cooking With Herbs'

By Mary MacVean
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The authors of the popular "Herbs: Gardens, Decorations and Recipes" are back with another beautiful book.

In "Cooking with Herbs," a coffee-table style book (Clarkson N. Potter, New York; $40), writer Emelie Tolley and photographer Chris Mead focus on herbs in kitchens around the world. Recipes are accompanied by the stories of the cooks and how they discovered herbs.

There are well-known chefs such as Wolfgang Puck, who keeps an herb garden outside his Los Angeles restaurant, Spago. "California is one of the luckiest parts of the world for a cook," he says. "There is more variety in fish on the East Coast, but in California herbs and vegetables are fresh all year."

And there are Pam and Jay North, who started their first garden to provide vegetables for their pet monkeys. When they had more food than the pets could eat, they began giving it away and eventually selling it. One day, a chef asked for basil. Today, they are in the edible flower business.

"We talked to a lot of people, through word of mouth," Tolley said in a telephone interview. Some, like the innovative Santa Fe, N.M., chef Mark Miller, they had read about.

The book took 3 years to produce. It overflows with more than 300 lovely, warm photographs of herbs in gardens and homes and in the landscapes where they grow, as well as of tables of food.

People who cook, Tolley said, often become interested in herbs.

She grew to love thyme, of which there are dozens of varieties, including lemon, orange, English, French and garden thyme. Each is distinctive in looks and taste, and some varieties of thyme are not for eating at all but rather, are used as bedding plants.

"I'm in my lavender phase. I just think it's spectacular. I love the way it smells," she said. "Cooking with Herbs" includes several recipes using lavender, such as a butter sauce for salmon, pink lemonade and pound cake.

Tolley has one caution for cooks: Be careful of rosemary and lavender because they can overwhelm a dish.

"You can kill something with too much of any herb, but I think most recipes don't use enough to make a perceptible difference. With fresh herbs, I would almost always use more than the recipe calls for."

Like the rules for wines, rules for what herbs go with what foods have been broken. "The real thing you have to learn is what the herb tastes like," she said, adding the best way to do that is to use one herb over and over in different dishes.

Along with herbs, flowers have grown in popularity in foods, and Tolley and Mead include recipes using them. Tolley notes that nasturtiums, pinks and some other flowers actually are herbs.

Book Of Flowers
An indication of how much into the mainstream cooking with flowers has moved is the new Betty Crocker "Book of Flowers" by Jane Newdick (Prentice-Hall, $19.95).

In addition to information on growing, picking and drying flowers, preserving scents for potpourris and arranging flowers, the book includes a substantial chapter on cooking with flowers.

Of the interest in cooking with flowers, Newdick notes: "This may seem slightly odd to many people, but in fact flowers have been used as far back as our knowledge of history goes."

Among those she recommends for cooking are nasturtiums, marigolds, borage, violets, roses and bergamot flowers.

Also Available

"Cooking with Herbs" by Patricia Lousada (Viking, $12.95) contains a glossary of herbs and their uses, plus dozens of recipes to suit every occasion. All the herbs mentioned in the book are readily available and easy to grow.

"Indoor Kitchen Garden" by Joy O.I. Spoczynska (Harper & Row, $14.95) introduces the principles and practice of growing herbs indoors. Individual chapters explain how to grow over 20 different food crops, from the simple process of producing edible sprouts to the cultivation of tomatoes, radishes, beans, peas — and more. The book includes helpful illustrations.

HYSSOP, POTATO AND BEAN SALAD

This pretty and colorful salad goes perfectly with cold meats, but it can equally well be served as a main lunch dish on its own.

1 1/4 lbs. salad potatoes, cooked and cooled

10 oz. French beans, cooked and cooled

2 oz. black olives

8 oz. cherry tomatoes

2 tbsps. chopped fresh hyssop flowers and leaves

Sprigs of fresh hyssop flowers, to decorate

Gently mix all the ingredients together; and put in an earthenware dish. Over the salad pour a dressing made from 3 tablespoons olive oil, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 crushed garlic clove, salt and freshly ground pepper. Decorate with a few sprigs of fresh hyssop flowers and serve.

GRILLED SALMON WITH LAVENDER BUTTER SAUCE

This sauce is equally good with broiled or poached salmon. It can be prepared slightly ahead and kept warm in a bain-marie. Don't add the lavender until just before serving or the flavor will be too strong, although the fresher the lavender, the milder its flavor and the more you can use. If you prefer a lighter sauce, use less butter, as indicated.

Sauce

1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter cut into small pieces

1/4 cup minced shallots

1/4 cup dry white wine

1/4 cup Champagne vinegar

1/4 cup fish stock (recipe below)

2 tbsps. clam juice and 2 tbs water

2 to 4 lavender, flower buds chopped

Salt and white pepper to taste

Four 6-oz. salmon fillets

Olive oil

In a saucepan, melt 1 tablespoon butter over low heat. Add shallots and sweat until soft. Add wine, vinegar, stock and half lavender. Raise heat to high, and cook until liquid is reduced to 2 tablespoons. Remove from the heat and whisk in the remaining butter bit by bit. (Depending on your taste, you may not want to add all the lavender.) Strain the sauce through a sieve; add the remaining lavender. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Keep warm.

Prepare a fire in the grill. While the coals are covered with a white ash, the fire is ready. Rub salmon fillets with a little olive oil and place on the grill. Cook, baste occasionally with olive oil, approximately 3 to 5 minutes per side. Fish should be firm but not overcooked. Serve with the sauce on the side.

Prepare the stock in a large saucepan. Heat the oil and add vegetables and herbs. Saute on medium heat, sweating vegetables, for 10 minutes. Add fish and saute for another 10 minutes. Pour in water to cover (approximately 5 cups) and season to taste. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and cook slowly for 20 minutes. Strain. Serves 4.

Secret To Successful Home Entertaining Is To Enjoy Yourself

By Carol Deegan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Looking for a party plan that will fit your active lifestyle? Create menus that allow for advance preparation so you can spend limited time in the kitchen and more time with your guests.

Whenever possible, choose recipes that can be prepared ahead of time and stored in the refrigerator or freezer until serving. It's best to plan for one or two complicated dishes; the rest should be simple items. Don't choose recipes that require hours in the kitchen, or split-second timing to go from the kitchen to the table.

Do-Ahead Entertaining

Malabar Hornblower's "Do-Ahead Entertaining" (The Globe Pequot Press, Chester, Conn.; $19.95) outlines nine steps to successful entertaining including planning the event; planning the guest list and the menu; making a shopping list; preparing your home.

"First and foremost," Hornblower says, "the event should appear effortless. And, secondly, in order to appear effortless, the event should be as carefully orchestrated as any symphony, as carefully planned as any battle."

With the basic steps covered, Hornblower then presents 48 menus. These menus range from an Indian Meal for Four (Lamb Patties-Indian Style, Minted Carrot Puree, Rice Pilaf, Mango Chutney and Cucumber and Yogurt Salad) to a Relaxing Branch for Eight (Curried Shrimp Quiche, Tabbouleh Salad, Orange-Ginger Coffee Cake and Mulled Apricot Tea).

For each of the more than 200 recipes, Hornblower states how much time is needed for advance preparation and the time allowance for final preparation.

Quick Cooking Menus

"Quick Cooking Menus" by Martha Stewart (Clarkson N. Potter, New York; $22.95) features 32 meals and 230 how-to recipes. It is a companion to Stewart's popular "Quick Cook," published in 1983.

Stewart's menus are planned by season. For fall: Baked Scallops with Orange Sections, Lemon-Chive Pasta, Baby Green and Yellow Squash, Watercress Salad with Hazelnut Dressing, Tropical Fruit. For winter: Roasted Turkey Breast, Popovers, A-paragus with Green Herb Hollandaise, Mandarin Orange and Pecan Salad and Cold Lemon Souffle.

Many of the recipes need only a handful of ingredients; most can be prepared in an hour or less. Stewart includes tips on advance planning and ideas for presenting many of the dishes.

More Taste Than Time

There are no menus in Abby Mandel's "More Taste than Time" (Simon and Schuster, $19.95) but you can choose from a variety of delicious recipes including Fried Goat Cheese with Italian Tomato Sauce and Granny Apple Crisp.

Mandel includes the preparation and cooking time for each dish. Microwave instructions are given for recipes when appropriate.

Food For Friends

Barbara Kafka's "Food for Friends" (Harper & Row, $10.95) has 14 sections — from soups, pasta, seafood and meats to side dishes, sauces and desserts.

Kafka emphasizes items for buffet dinners and cocktail parties including Curried Chicken Salad, Beef Bourguignon, Star-Spangled Potato Salad and Chocolate Layer Cake. Included are sections on setting a table, planning a meal, wine and liquor.

Entertaining Tips

The test kitchen staff of the National Live Stock and Meat Board has these suggestions for entertaining:

— To create interest, send party invitations on the back of a recipe card for one of the dishes you plan to serve at the party.

— Keep a file of the foods served at different gatherings to avoid repetition — or to recreate special holiday celebrations.

— For an elegant arrangement of flowers — without spending a lot of money — mix fresh flowers with dried grasses. When fresh flowers aren't in bloom, accent your table with a bowl of fresh fruit or other colorful items used in your recipes.

— Perk up party platters with wedges of fruit, fresh herb sprigs, curled orange or lemon peel, ruffled vegetable tops, fresh flowers.

— Don't start cleaning up while guests are still present. The rush of clearing the table and clatter of dishes is an abrupt sign for guests to leave.

Barley Rediscovered As Source Of Soluble Fiber

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WF NEWS SERVICE

Despite its versatility as a nutritious addition to recipes, barley has been overlooked by most consumers who are searching for better health.

But the rich-textured, full-flavored grain has a long and colorful past, and it is currently being rediscovered as a good source of soluble fiber — the type associated with reducing blood cholesterol in humans.

As a cereal grain, barley has a 5,000-year history. It was, and still is, popular among the Chinese, Eastern Europeans, Scandinavians and Jews as a cooking ingredient.

Barley comes from a plant that is part of the grass family. And although it goes through a polishing process similar to other grasses such as rice, (the inedible husk of the grain is removed and discarded), pearled barley does still have a respectable amount of fiber.

A 3½-ounce serving of barley contains a little less than three grams of soluble fiber (oat bran boasts a whopping 14 grams for the same size portion), but it can have a cholesterol-reducing effect when made part of a weekly low-fat, high-soluble fiber diet that includes other rich sources such as apples, citrus fruits, legumes and oats.

Barley is similar in texture to al dente pasta, and it has a mild, nutty flavor. Serve it alone as a stand-in for almost any carbohydrate (rice, potatoes, pasta) or use it as a bulking ingredient in both sweet and savory dishes.

Although soups and stews have been the most traditional uses for barley, it is gaining popularity for use in casseroles, warm and cold salads, side dishes, breads and desserts. The hearty grain also may be enjoyed as a hot breakfast cereal. Simply top with fruit and low-fat milk and serve.

Barley can be added to favorite stir-fry recipes. Allow three cups cooked medium or quick barley for each pound of meat, chicken or fish. Cook until just heated through.

Or try combining barley with instant pudding and bananas for a delicious after-dinner treat that can be low in sugar and fat as well. Prepare one four-ounce package of instant vanilla pudding (regular or sugar-free) using non-fat milk as the package directs. Stir in three cups cooked medium or quick barley and mix well. Spoon one-half-cup portions into individual serving dishes, cover and refrigerate. To serve, top each with sliced bananas.

Look for barley in the rice and pasta section of the supermarket. Medium barley, which cooks in 45 to 50 minutes, is the choice for longer-cooking dishes. Quick barley, which has been steamed prior to drying and packing, displays larger and flatter grains and cooks in 10 to 12 minutes.

APPLE KUGEL D'LIGHT

- 1 (8-oz.) container plain low-fat yogurt
- 1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
- ¾ cup egg substitute or 6 egg whites
- ¼ cup light corn syrup
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1 tsp. ground cinnamon
- 3 cups cooked medium or quick barley
- 1½ cups finely chopped apples
- 1 cup raisins
- 2 tbsps. sugar

Combine yogurt, cottage cheese, egg substitute, corn syrup, vanilla and ½ teaspoon cinnamon in large bowl. Mix well. Stir in barley, apples and raisins. Mix well.

Place mixture in 11- by 7-inch glass baking dish, sprayed with non-stick vegetable coating spray. Combine sugar and remaining ½ teaspoon cinnamon and sprinkle over dish.

Bake at 350° 32 to 38 minutes or until edges are set and knife inserted in center comes out clean. Let stand 30 minutes.

Serve warm or cold. Store tightly covered in refrigerator. Makes 12 servings.

SAFFRON BARLEY PILAF

- 1 tbsp. olive oil
- ½ cup sliced leek
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 3 cups cooked quick or medium barley
- 1 medium sweet red pepper, cut into strips
- ½ cup dry white wine
- 2 tbsps. grated Parmesan cheese
- ¼ tsp. crumbled saffron threads
- ¼ tsp. black pepper

Heat oil in large saucepan and saute leek and garlic over medium heat about 1 minute. Stir in barley, red pepper, wine, cheese, saffron and pepper. Mix well. Cook until heated through. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN-BARLEY SALAD

- 1 (8-oz.) container plain low-fat yogurt
- 2 tbsps. soy sauce
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ½ tsp. ground ginger, optional
- 3 cups cooked quick or medium barley
- 4 small chicken breast halves,

- cooked and chopped
- 1 (10-oz.) package frozen Chinese pea pods
- 1 (9-oz.) can sliced water chestnuts, drained
- 1 medium sweet red pepper, cut into strips
- Pepper
- Lettuce leaves

Combine yogurt, soy sauce, garlic and ginger. Mix well. Stir in barley, chicken, pea pods, water chestnuts and red pepper. Mix until evenly coated.

Cover and chill several hours or overnight. Season to taste with pepper, then serve over lettuce leaves. Makes 6 servings.

BEEF AND BARLEY MEDLEY

- 1 tbsp. oil
- ¾ lb. lean round steak, cut into 1-inch strips
- 1 medium onion, cut into wedges
- 1 (14½-oz.) can low sodium whole tomatoes, chopped
- 2½ cups frozen mixed broccoli, cauliflower and carrots or other vegetable combination
- ¼ cup dry Sherry or water
- 1 tsp. paprika
- ½ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. black pepper
- 3 cups cooked quick or medium barley

Heat oil in 4-quart saucepan or

Dutch oven. Brown beef and onion, then drain. Return to pan and add tomatoes, tomato liquid, vegetables, Sherry, paprika, salt and pepper. Mix well.

Bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer, covered, 5 to 6 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir occasionally. Stir in barley and cook 3 minutes or until heated through. Serve warm. Makes 5 servings.

TOMATO-BASIL-BARLEY PILAF

- 1 tbsp. olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tbsp. snipped fresh basil
- ½ tsp. salt, optional
- ¼ tsp. black pepper

- 3 cups cooked quick or medium barley
- 1 large tomato, chopped
- ½ cup sliced green onions or ½ cup chopped green pepper

Heat oil in saucepan and saute garlic over medium heat about 30 seconds. Add basil, salt and pepper and mix well. Stir in barley, tomato and green onions. Mix well.

Cook about 3 minutes or until heated through. Serve immediately or cover and chill thoroughly. Makes 5 servings.

BARLEY FRUIT SALAD

- 1½ cups cooked quick or medium barley

- 1 medium apple, chopped
- 1 cup strawberry halves
- 1 medium banana, sliced
- ½ cup seedless grapes
- ½ small cantaloupe, cut into chunks
- ¼ cup light maple syrup
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1 tsp. grated lemon zest

Combine barley, apple, strawberries, banana slices, grapes and cantaloupe chunks in large bowl. Add maple syrup, lemon juice and zest gently with fruit mixture, and chill several hours or overnight. Makes 4 servings.

HeartGuide Seal Program Hits Some Resistance

By Carole Sugarman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

With its new HeartGuide seal program, the American Heart Association is slapping a high price on good health — and so far, the food industry isn't buying it.

Designed to help consumers identify nutritious foods in the supermarket, the AHA "tested and approved" seal will be used on products that meet the association's criteria for total fat, saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium.

The first food packages with HeartGuide seals won't appear until February, but already the program is controversial.

Recently 2,300 companies that manufacture crackers, margarines, spreads, shortening, oils, shelf-stable and frozen vegetables, or frozen dinners and entrees were invited to apply. And they were also invited to pay a hefty fee.

Unlike the seals awarded by the American Dental Association, which are free, AHA's must be bought. In fact, companies with the largest market share in a product category could end up paying more than $1 million a year to participate.

"It's very expensive," said John Cady, president of the National Food Processors Association, a trade group that represents the nation's biggest food manufacturers.

A handful of large companies — Kraft General Foods, Campbell Soup Co., Stouffer Foods Corp., Nabisco Brands Inc., and Procter & Gamble — all said they are still evaluating HeartGuide before they take the plunge, with cost being one of the major factors in their decision.

The way it works is this: Each manufacturer must pay an annual $40,000 "administrative fee," which covers product testing, evaluation, legal fees, insurance and other costs involved in implementing the program. This fee is non-refundable, even if AHA decides not to issue a seal to the company.

An annual "education fee" covers the cost of public relations, advertising and promotion, as well as a 24-hour toll-free hot line. The fee is based on market share, with a minimum of $5,000 and a maximum of $1 million per brand per year.

Advertising and promotion will put the HeartGuide program in the context of a balanced diet, attempting to alleviate the "good food-bad food" idea that approval seals on only some food packages might convey. All print ads will also inform consumers that the program has been paid for by participating companies.

Joe Marx, spokesman for the AHA, said that with the educational fees, "here we have a chance to reach millions of Americans with a health message. It costs a lot of money to get this message out." Marx said that the tobacco industry spends $2.5 billion a year advertising "a lethal message," so in comparison, AHA's fees are "not a lot of money to spend."

Mary Stiedemann, vice president of HeartGuide, pointed out that AHA will not garner any profits from the program, and that the association has already sunk a "couple million dollars" into it, which will take at least three years to recoup.

What's more, while NFPA's Cady said he has "tremendous reservations with the program," Stiedemann said that "it's the job of trade associations to deal with problems. They may be hearing a lot of bad things (from member companies), but many of their companies are also talking to us very intensely about participating."

If big companies are concerned about the price, small firms are even more displeased. "The fee structure for the HeartGuide program looks like an extortion racket," charged Richard Sullivan, executive vice president of the Association of Food Industries, Inc., a trade group representing 370 importers, food brokers and small food companies.

Sullivan is concerned that small companies will be forced to join the program so that their business won't slip away — even if they can't afford it. The pressure it puts on companies to jump on the bandwagon "doesn't add anything for the consumer," he said.

Stiedemann denied that the fee structure represents an "extortion racket," but agreed that the costs are "not a tiny amount of money" for a small company. Nevertheless, she said, "a small company could never do a project like this on its own. We feel they are getting something very significant."

Sullivan also said that most of his association's member companies that bottle olive oil will be unable to afford the program fees, but worries that a seal on a rival olive oil might lead consumers to believe that that oil is somehow more healthful.

Similarly, NFPA's Cady believes that since many manufacturers process food for both private label and store brands, consumers could possibly be faced with two identical products, a seal on one but not the other — if the chain opted not to apply for the program.

All this could skew market shares in strange ways, a factor that troubles people like Cady and Sullivan but fuels a program like Heart-

Guide. Stiedemann said that studies conducted by AHA have shown a "high level of consumer interest" in making purchase decisions based on acceptance seals.

Perhaps the most striking example of the effect that a seal can have on sales was when Crest received the American Dental Association's acceptance in 1960.

According to Bill Dobson, spokesman for Procter & Gamble, the toothpaste went from a 10 percent market share to the nation's leading toothpaste in two years. Dobson said that the day the seal was announced, trading of P&G stock was suspended because the volume was so heavy that the ticker fell behind.

But Dobson is doubtful that there will ever be another seal scenario like Crest. Not only was Crest the first consumer product to receive the ADA seal, but the fluoride-containing toothpaste was the first to be approved for its ability to reduce tooth decay, a problem that then affected 95 percent of the population, added Dobson.

More recently, however, Listerine received the ADA seal for treating plaque and gingivitis, and according to Warner Lambert spokesman Peter Wolf, "consumption of Listerine has gone up significantly."

Nevertheless, P&G Dobson's says that it is becoming more difficult to directly correlate sales increases with seal programs. The company clearly believes in them, however.

P&G's Citrus Hill Plus Calcium orange juice carries the American Medical Women's Association's seal of acceptance, its Puritan Oil has received the American College of Nutrition's seal and boxes of Pampers are graced with the seal from the National Association of Pediatric Nurses and Practitioners (NAPNAP).

Eileen McGrath, executive director of the American Medical Women's Association, said that the group's product-acceptance program, designed to help women purchase safe, effective health products, costs applicants $12,000 — a one-time fee.

The American College of Nutrition, which thus far has only accepted Puritan Oil and Mazola Corn Oil in its seal program, does not have a set application fee; it varies according to the out-of-pocket expenses incurred in reviewing the product.

Products will be reviewed every few years when out-of-pocket expenses will be reimbursed again, according to Mildred Seelig, a physician who is executive director of the association.

For both groups, the fees cover paying outside experts to review data, administrative costs, airfare and other general expenses. Companies that choose to promote the seal as part of their regular brand advertising pick up the tab, although the associations must clear the copy.

"When you don't charge a fee, someone has to pay for it," said Jim McKearn, director of product evaluations for the American Dental Association's Council on Dental Therapeutics, which has put its seal — free of charge — on 600 products, most of which are used by dentists. "In the case of this association, it comes out of the dues of the member dentists."

In the case of the Good Housekeeping seal, every product that gets one has to be advertised in the magazine. Applicants' products and their advertisements are reviewed through the Good Housekeeping Institute, which then either accepts or rejects them.

Pour On The Sauce To Add A Flavorful Twist To The Ordinary

By Nancy Byal

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Sauces add a flavorful twist to everyday meat and vegetables. For instance, just change the standard white sauce a bit and you have a new recipe. You also can lower the calories or adapt it to be quicker by cooking in the microwave.

White Sauce

- In a small saucepan melt 1 tablespoon margarine or butter. Stir in 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour, 1/8 teaspoon salt and dash pepper. Add 3/4 cup milk all at once. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir 1 minute more. Makes 3/4 cup.

Microwave Directions

- In a 2-cup measure cook margarine or butter, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 30 to 40 seconds or until melted. Stir in flour, salt and pepper. Add 2-3rds cup milk all at once and stir to combine. Cook, uncovered, on high for 2 to 4 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every 30 seconds.

- You need slightly less milk when cooking sauce in the microwave because there's less evaporation than in rangetop cooking.

Low-Calorie White Sauce

- Prepare as above, except omit margarine or butter and substitute skim milk for the milk. In a screw-top jar combine flour, salt, pepper and milk. Shake until blended. Cook as above.

Cheese Sauce

- Prepare White Sauce as above, except omit salt. Over low heat, stir 3/4 cup shredded process Swiss, American, or Gruyere cheese or 1/4 cup crumbled blue cheese into cooked sauce until melted. Serve with vegetables. Makes 1 cup.

- Process cheese makes a more satin smooth sauce than natural cheese.

Lemon-Chive Sauce

- Prepare White Sauce as above, except stir in 1 tablespoon snipped fresh chives and 1/2 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel with the flour. Serve with vegetables, poultry or fish.

Mexicali Sauce

- Prepare White Sauce as above, except cook 1/2 teaspoon chili powder in melted margarine for 30 seconds.

Stir 2 tablespoons diced green chili peppers into cooked sauce. Serve with beef or pork. Do not use microwave directions.

- Cooking the chili powder in the margarine mellows the flavor.

Sauce-Making Tip

- Prevent lumps in cornstarch- or flour-thickened sauces by stirring constantly. If lumps do form, beat the sauce briskly with a wire whisk or a rotary beater.

Cooking Out Hits Zenith In Midwest

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Although people throughout America cook out routinely, it is in the small towns and big cities of the Midwest that charcoal barbecuing has reached its cultural zenith.

New England has its clambake and Hawaii its Luau. But nowhere are hamburgers flipped with more skill, chicken barbecued with as much panache, or steak marinated with such reverence as in the spacious back-yards of America's mid-section.

On the West Coast, yuppies smear avocado on their tofu hamburgers and call it a cook out. In the East, all sorts of strange sea and shell life finds itself sizzling over flames. Texans cook their steaks without removing the animal's horns.

But in the heartland, where fresh ingredients are only a farm away, residents gather daily, stoke the flames, and carry on a quiet tradition with simplicity and integrity approaching a religious ritual.

In the suburbs of Chicago, homes are designed with grills in the patios. In the vast parks of Michigan, outdoor cooking devices are installed in every camp site. Along highways in Wisconsin the signs advertise beer, gasoline and charcoal - but not always in that order.

The fare at a Midwestern cookout can be as simple as a couple of fresh hamburgers, cold Old Style beers, and ears of unhusked corn soaked in water and thrown onto the grill. But it is an occasion for the gathering of friends or spontaneous reunions of families.

Despite harsh winter weather, many Midwesterners cook outdoors year-round. That is because the flat, prairie landscape offers so much outdoors to cook on.

Unlike the sprawling steer roasts of Texas or the white-gloved debutante events of Memphis, Tenn., cookouts in the Midwest tend toward the informal. No self-respecting Chicagoan would be caught dead serving something with wine sauces or pastry shells.

IOWA CORN ON THE COB

Butter
Salt

Immerse corn, husks and all, in pot of cold water. After an hour, remove ears and shake off excess water. Trim off dangling husk and silk to avoid flames and place directly on grill. Place directly on grill. Cover and cook 25-30 minutes, turning two or three times. Don't worry if the husks burn.

Remove with gloves. Pull back husk and prick a kernel with a fork to test for doneness. The liquid coming out should be clear. If it's milky white return it to the grill.

Let cool a few minutes and be careful of the hot steam. Serve with butter and salt.

MAMA FRIGO'S SECRET STEAK MARINADE

1 cup soy sauce
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
2 cloves garlic, halved
1/4 cup bottled gravy
1 tsp. seasoning salt
1 tsp. monosodium glutamate
Mix in blender or food processor at high speed until smooth. If not using immediately, store in refrigerator.

Pour 1/3 cup marinade over each steak. Refrigerate steaks up to 24 hours. Grill.

To create a new taste in hamburgers, add 1/4 cup marinade to each pound of ground beef.

UNCLE ROGER'S CHICAGO TURKEY

1 lb. dark brown sugar
1/2 cup canning salt, sometimes called kosher salt
1 gallon water
1/2 gallon white wine
Fresh, whole turkey
Mix all ingredients in pan big enough to hold turkey. Submerge fresh, whole bird in the mix and put in a refrigerator for a day or two.

In the grill, stack the charcoal briquettes around the outside of a foil pan with two to three inch sides. Fill pan with mix. Up on the cooking grill, perch bird over the pan. Open all the vents and get the fire going hot. Cook for about 12 minutes a pound, or 15 minutes a pound for birds under 15 pounds. For extra flavor, soak some hickory or mesquite wood chunks in water about 20 minutes and throw onto the hot coals during cooking.
