Treasury Chief Proposes New Reforms In Trading

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady today called on Congress to make additional reforms in the way financial markets are regulated, saying the Securities and Exchange Commission should be empowered to halt trading in times of emergencies.

The SEC's chairman has said he does not want such authority.

In his first testimony to Congress since the Oct. 13 market slide, Brady said the financial turmoil had not altered his belief in the soundness of the U.S. economy. But he said it did point up the need for further changes in market regulation.

The power to halt market trading now rests solely with the president. Brady's support for giving this authority to the SEC is at odds with the recommendation from SEC Chairman Richard C. Breeden, who told Congress on Wednesday that his agency does not need or want the power to halt trading.

Brady, in a letter accompanying his testimony to the Senate Banking Committee, noted the SEC's reluctance to take on the emergency trading halt power, but he said he believed the change was needed.

He said the initial governmental response to market emergencies should come "from a regulator with expertise and proximity to the markets."

Brady noted that legislation pending before both the House and the Senate gives the president power to terminate SEC emergency actions and would require presidential approval for any trading halt longer than 24 hours.

Brady, a former Wall Street executive, gave his general support to the package of changes but cautioned lawmakers against going too far in their efforts to eliminate market volatility.

"We cannot and should not attempt to eliminate major market moves, whether by legislation or regulation," he said.

AZT Use Is OK'd For Kids

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The federal government will allow wider distribution to children of AZT, the only government-approved anti-AIDS drug, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan announced today.

The action marks the first time any AIDS drug has been approved, even conditionally, for use in children under 13.

The drug will be available under what the Food and Drug Administration calls a "Treatment IND," which allows widespread distribution of a drug that appears to be promising on the basis of clinical trials.

"Today's action is a significant advance in extending AIDS therapy to children. It will give many sick children availability to a drug that

A-G Students Hear Former Con Tell All

By J.R. Williams
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The post office thief jumped into his car, throwing the loot and his revolver onto the empty passenger seat.

When the police heard of the robbery, they started looking for the culprit and focused on the speeding car.

With police in close pursuit, the robber pushed his car to its limit only to have it spin out and crash. Desperate and feeling alone after just splitting with his wife, he reached for the gun, ready to put an end to his life. But he couldn't find the gun, which had slipped between the seat and door.

Today, George Holley, 51, doesn't flinch when he tells an audience about the post office incident. He has been telling his story since he got out of prison on Feb. 8.

The ex-convict who spent 9½ years behind bars for stealing $89.50 from the post office, now tells high school students that it's easy to be a successful failure. But he tells them that some effort must be put into being a success.

Holley has spoken to more than 170 school, church and civic groups. He gave his message to students Wednesday at Ayden-Grifton High School as part of the school's observance of North Carolina's Drug Awareness Week.

Between anecdotes and metaphors, Holley threw hard statistics at the students to get his point across, transforming an impatient, moody group of teen-agers into an attentive audience.

"As of a year ago, 20 percent of the prison population was your age," he said. "Out of the 18,000 people in prison, 66 percent never graduated from high school. They were losers before they ever got started."

Often apologizing for his bluntness, Holley told the students about the crude reality of prison life.

"If I went to prison looking like any of you high school boys, it would be hell from day one," said the short, pudgy man who never stood behind the podium that had been

Bond Critics Are Unorganized

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Supporters of the Dec. 12 bond referendum have a slogan that's hard to beat — "I'm for Kids" — and an army of volunteers prepared to ask every voter in Pitt County to support the $25.7-million bond.

But some people may still say no. School board members, county commissioners, community and business leaders have lined up behind the campaign to raise money for school construction. They say the need for that money is real and immediate. Pitt County schoolchildren will suffer if the bond is not passed, they argue.

So far, no organized opposition to the bond has surfaced. No one has publicly questioned the school system's need for the money.

Instead, public opposition to the bond has come from those who say they do not trust the school board to spend the money fairly.

Some of the bond's opponents live in the D.H. Conley attendance area, where parents have organized an alliance to protect their interests before a school board they claim is biased toward Greenville.

During an alliance meeting Sunday, many D.H. Conley parents expressed opposition to the bond because they said they feel the school board does not represent them. They said a vote against the bond is the only leverage they have to force the board to listen to their concerns.

"It's the only way to get the county to know that we exist," the Rev. Richard H. Crapps, an alliance director, said.

Bond supporters say this approach will cause more harm than good. "Who are they trying to influence?" Joe Gantz, co-chairman of the bond campaign, asked.

"By opposing the bond all you're doing is just cutting your nose off," he said.

The need for school improvements is well-defined and universally accepted, Gantz said. If the bond is defeated, the D.H. Conley area will lose more than $2.5 million worth of improvements that are badly needed, he said. "To show one's displeasure by voting against the bond — all that's happening is the physical needs won't be met," Gantz said.

Some parents in the Conley area agree that the bond money is needed. "We need every bit that is promised in that bond in these schools," Glenda McLawhorn, another alliance director, said.

But people in the area are confused by recent board actions such as the decision not to renew the contract of Superintendent Edwin L. West Jr. and frequent attendance-line changes, Ms. McLawhorn said. They have lost confidence in the board because they feel the board has not given them a satisfactory explanation for these actions, she said.

"All that confusion is what has fueled the whole thing and makes people wonder, 'What in the world

School To Limit Use Of Animals

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An East Carolina University School of Medicine official said the school is continuing to study alternatives to the use of animals in the teaching of basic sciences.

Dr. William H. Pryor Jr. of the school's department of comparative medicine said the effort is being made, at least in part, in response to continuing demands made of the school by animal rights activists.

Pryor said interactive computer programs are largely replacing practice on animals in basic science labs.

The university announced in 1987 that it would declare a moratorium on the use of animals in basic science physiology and pharmacology laboratories. This was done, Pryor said, and the moratorium has been extended into a second and a third year.

Prior to the 1987 ban, approximately 70 dogs were used in these courses and all were killed with intravenous doses of concentrated barbiturates following anesthetized surgery, Pryor said.

It was during 1987 that a videotape made in a physiology laboratory demonstration procedure was taken under false pretenses from the medical school communications center, Pryor said. The university believes, he said, and a study by the National Institutes of Health confirmed that the film was edited by animal rights activist groups and used to make it

Giants Fan Had Bird's-Eye View Of Earthquake

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Steve Pardini of Tucker Estates in Greenville is a die-hard San Francisco Giants fan.

To see them play in the World Series, at Candlestick Park, against the Oakland A's — their Bay-area rival — would be a childhood dream come true for the California native.

The plans were set. Pardini made the arrangements and departed Pitt-Greenville Airport at 7 a.m. Oct. 17 destined for San Francisco. He was ready for his trip to the fall classic.

He wasn't, however, ready to witness the second worst earthquake in the nation's history.

Pardini arrived at the ball park in the afternoon, in

Larceny Charge

Craig Donaldson Moyer, 23, of 107 W. 13th St., was arrested on larceny charges by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer R.L. Jones said Moyer was charged in connection with a 3:39 p.m. incident at the K mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center.

Marijuana Charges

Greenville police said Michael Eugene Nelson of 6 Country Manor Apartments was arrested on multiple drug charges after 61 marijuana plants were found growing in his apartment by police Wednesday.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said a search conducted about 5 p.m. uncovered the marijuana plants as well as several items of drug paraphernalia.

Hilliard said Jones was charged with manufacturing marijuana, possession with intent to sell and deliver marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia and maintaining a dwelling for the sale of marijuana.

Bond on the charges, to assure Jones' appearance in court, was set at $10,000.

Horse Directory

The N.C. Department of Agriculture, Division of Marketing, announced that it is compiling a new N.C. Horse Industry Directory.

The directory will include lists of firms, individuals and organizations providing services to the horse industry. It will be distributed statewide.

Listings will include state residents and companies servicing the state. Part of the directory will be devoted to government organizations.

For more information, contact Steve Mobley, NCDA, P.O. Box 27647, Raleigh, N.C., 27611, or phone 733-7136.

Membership Meeting

Selvia Chapel Original Free Will Baptist Church will hold a membership meeting Nov. 3 at 7:30 p.m.

Program Rescheduled

A presentation, "Censorship or Accountability? When Taxes Pay for Art," at the School of Art, East Carolina University, has been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Board Appointment

Greg Knowles, Greenville city manager, was recently appointed by Gov. Jim Martin to the Water Treatment Facility Operators Board with a term expiring in June 1992.

The purpose of the board is to protect public health through water conservation, classification of public treatment facilities and certification of operators.

Knowles holds a master's degree in urban affairs from Virginia Technical Institute. He is a member of the International City Management Association and the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Students Honored

Two seniors from Ayden-Grifton High School have been named the first recipients of the Greenville Morning Rotary Club's Student of the Month Award.

Stacy Lynn Creech and Michael Jason Williams were honored by the club for their achievements and activities in school and the community.

Ms. Creech is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger L. Creech of Ayden. She is a member of Future Teachers of America, the National Honor Society, yearbook staff and French Club.

Williams, the son of Richard and Toni Williams of Grifton, is a member of the National Honor Society, Science Club, Quiz Bowl, Math Team and the Student Government Association.

The two were presented copies of Roget's Thesaurus by the Morning Rotary.

School Project

Students at Elmhurst Elementary School are collecting product labels to redeem for a color printer for the school's computer.

To earn a printer, the students must collect 23,750 labels by March 1.

Labels may be mailed or brought to the school. For more information or a list of eligible products, call the school.

Halloween Carnival

Falkland Elementary School will have a Halloween carnival Friday at the school from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. A costume contest is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

An auction will be held after the carnival.

Remodeled Brody's To Reopen

Brody's will reopen its doors and present its remodeled and expanded 83,000-square-foot store at The Plaza mall Friday, according to H.J. Brody, president of BrodyCo Inc.

"This store should be much simpler for customers to shop because of clear, wide aisles and transitions between departments," Brody said. "This layout brings the maximum amount of merchandise close to the aisle."

Brody said Italian marble forms all the aisles and are arranged in patterns which complement the store's visual merchandising. He said the new part of the store has a continuation of the phase one and phase two theme, and approximately 20,000 square feet have been added to the completed store.

New areas opening Friday are the petite department, the misses sportswear area, the junior department, and the hosiery and accessory division.

The store will be managed by Betty Lou Brock of Winterville and Kiplan Clemons of Greenville. BrodyCo Inc. and Brody Brothers Inc. operate seven stores in eastern North Carolina. Brody's has over 250 employees.

Our People Built Brody's

As we open our doors tomorrow at 10 am for the Grand Opening of our beautifully remodeled Plaza store, we, at Brody's, want to thank the people who have made us what we are. The best asset every business and organization has is its people. Brody's is fortunate to have employed many of the finest citizens of Eastern North Carolina. These people are what made Brody's the fashion leader in Greenville. These fine people are responsible for Brody's impressive growth, success and customer confidence. It is their knowledge...their courteous manner...their friendly faces...their loyalty...their helpfulness...their ability and talent which has made Brody's, Brody's.

When you shop our new Plaza store, you will find that our people are genuinely interested in seeing that all your needs are met. It is this care and attention to you and your wishes which is in itself Brody's.

Brody's merchandising has become one of our biggest attractions. Our buyers and salespeople live right here in Eastern North Carolina, so you can be sure that our fashions reflect your lifestyle. Our buyers spot fashion trends early, and we have become famous for setting the pace...for being there first...for good taste...for understanding your needs.

Brody's cares about Greenville. That's why when we built our new 83,000 square foot store we used predominantly Greenville contractors for our work. The fine construction firm of Miller and Davis of Greenville was instructed by us to use as many local businesses as possible. If you do business in an area, you should support the business of that area. Brody's can make this claim and challenge other Plaza merchants to try to top the number of Greenville contractors we used in constructing our Plaza store.

Brody's and Greenville have grown up together. We have been in this city for over fifty-four years and are proud of its growth, and proud we could help to contribute to the many needs of the citizens, the University and the Hospital. We feel we are a part of that special lifestyle which is Eastern North Carolina.

As Greenville has changed, Brody's has changed. Brody's has become the fashion leader in Eastern North Carolina. With seven, Brody's stores located east of Raleigh, we know the needs of our customers. Brody's is innovative (as in the design of our new store)...Brody's is ever-changing (new departments to serve you such as boys wear, men's shoes and petites)...Brody's is imaginative (we will work hard to impress you)...Brody's is honest. All these ingredients are what a fashion store is all about!

With this fantastic combination of people, thoughts and principles, Brody's can look to the future and rely on our heritage, people, and philosophies to propel us forward into even greater growth and broader horizons.

It is for these reasons that we salute those sensational people who have made Brody's, Brody's for fifty-four years...and with our Grand Opening Friday, October 27, we will have over 300 dynamic associates ready to serve your every need in the style which is uniquely Brody's!

Slippery Path

From The Valley To The Peak

The road faced by North Carolina State University right now is a slippery one pointing straight uphill. At the top is integrity, both academic and athletic. The university rests at the base of this mountain, laden with a serious athletic scandal, yet preparing to navigate the slope ahead.

It will be a precarious journey for N.C. State, weighted with the baggage of a blemished reputation — shameless manipulation of academics for athletics and misdeeds by players and coaches. The continued presence of head basketball coach Jim Valvano is one piece of luggage that must be left at the bottom if the summit is to be reached.

The Poole Commission report, released Oct. 22 after being kept under wraps by that group, which investigated the allegations of wrongdoings at N.C. State, makes Valvano's share of the blame undeniable.

Of greatest concern are the violations of academic standards for athletes, violations which pointed to complicity by Valvano. In one instance, a basketball player was allowed to play parts of two seasons while earning no academic credit whatsoever. The wrongdoings made a sham of N.C. State's academic rules.

In addition, players sold for profit their complimentary tickets to games. Under Valvano's lax, voluntary non-punitive drug testing program, athletes who tested positive for drug use were allowed to continue to play sports. Campus records of athletes' summer employment earnings were not carefully supervised and, in at least one case, were not accurate. Valvano, as former athletic director and current head basketball coach, must accept responsibility for these failings.

Those manipulations are wrongdoings are inexcusable and have done serious harm to the reputation of a distinguished university. The resignation of former NCSU Chancellor Bruce Poulton was proper and was the first step toward repairing that damage. The resignation of Valvano as athletic director was another step.

But without Valvano's removal from his position as head basketball coach, the healing cannot take place. As long as he remains, questions about the integrity of athletics will linger — as will public doubt about the prowess of a great university.

Valvano must step down as head basketball coach or be removed. The cost of firing him could be steep — the university might be forced to pay him $500,000 to break his contract. But the cost of not acting is much steeper. Clouds will continue to occlude the future of N.C. State, its board of trustees, the entire university system and the board of governors which directs this system if he is allowed to remain.

Under the leadership of acting NCSU Chancellor Larry Monteith, the university will begin the painful process of putting its misdeeds behind. But it cannot succeed if baggage from those failings hangs heavily around its neck. Valvano must go if N.C. State is to successfully return from the valley to the peak.

A Policy Built On Weak Cement

WASHINGTON — The collapse of the savings-and-loan system and the necessity of a $50-billion federal bailout didn't do it. The 180-point drop in the stock market, which knocked 7 percent off the value of listed securities in a single day a couple weeks ago, didn't do it.

David Broder

The California earthquake, whose cleanup costs clearly will bust the federal budget ceiling, hasn't done it either.

None of those shocks was enough to shake Washington into getting serious about the budget deficit.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, which is supposed to limit deficits, is in shreds. Even as its sequester provisions slice indiscriminately into useful and wasteful domestic and defense programs, Congress and the administration blithely issue "budget ceiling waivers" to avoid paying for the spending needed to deal with the crises of Bush's first year. So the bill for this — and for an increasing proportion of routine government spending — is covered by borrowing from abroad and passed on to the next generation, provoking recurrent spasms of understandable nervousness in the financial markets.

How did we get into a situation where only a financial or physical disaster of immense proportions can jar Washington to its senses?

A year ago this week, the editors of The Economist (of London), which leans to conservatism at home and abroad, felt called upon to explain why they would not endorse George Bush, as they had Ronald Reagan. Despite what they regarded as the manifest foreign-policy shortcomings of Michael Dukakis, their editorial said, Bush "has failed the one big test, on the budget, that the fates have set him. Inviting Americans to 'read my lips,' he has promised not to raise taxes, thus unilaterally disarming himself in the greatest battle he may have to fight... Mr. Bush has insured that the economic side of his presidency would be crisis-driven."

The Bush "read my lips" promise was, at first, no more than a rhetorical tactic to help him recover from a setback in the Iowa caucuses and regain his footing in the following week's primary in New Hampshire, probably the most tax-averse state in the nation. "The pledge" was vital to Bush's recouping the lead from Sen. Bob Dole (R-Kan.), who put governmental responsibility ahead of political opportunism.

Repeated often during the general-election campaign, it became a commitment from which the newly elected President could not renege. And as long as the President kept taxes off-limits, there could be no large-scale assault on the budget deficit. As Senate Minority Whip Alan Simpson (R-Wyo.) said years ago, the only way to reduce the deficit was for "everyone to link arms and go over the cliff together," by agreeing that all elements — entitlements, discretionary domestic spending, defense and revenues — would be part of the solution.

Early this year, Budget Director Richard Darman hinted to congressional negotiators of both parties that if they would not press Bush to go back on his word in the talks then taking place, everything — including taxes — might be on the table by this fall. That prospect now has vanished.

There's a reason why Bush is increasingly locked into his no-new-tax stance. It's not just stubbornness. It's a hard political calculus, spelled out in private conversations by some of the people to whom the President listens closely on election strategy.

Like all politicians, they worry first and foremost about nurturing their base constituency. For all the President's high standing in the polls, they know that core is shaky.

From 1980 through 1988, the Republican-conservative coalition had three cementing issues. The first was staunch anti-communism, a readiness to stand up to Moscow and to deploy the military strength that would make the Kremlin bosses think twice.

That cement is weak. Bush is cheerleading for Mikhail Gorbachev's "perestroika" and barely squawking about the cuts in the Pentagon budget.

The second bond was furnished by "the social issues," of which abortion was by far the most emotionally important. As long as Republicans could rail against abortion, while the Supreme Court protected abortion rights, the GOP could use the issue as a rallying point, without mobilizing those who were on the other side of the question.

But that luxury disappeared with the Webster decision last spring. Increasingly GOP strategists recognize they have to find some way to move off their strong anti-abortion position — or pay a high price.

So what does that leave them? It leaves them the no-new-tax pledge. That is one place, and perhaps the only place, they can tell their core constituency that they really are different from the Democrats, who are stuck with a reputation for always wanting to raise taxes and spend more money.

What this means is that even if George Bush were inclined to renege on his New Hampshire-born promise, he would hear strong voices in his political entourage telling him that he would thereby jeopardize his own reelection and his party's hopes of expansion in the 1990s.

Thus do desperate campaign tactics become bedrock national policy. Remember that when it all comes crashing down.

A Shaky Record For Quigley On Earthquake Prediction

WASHINGTON — Joan Quigley returns my call. Her voice is familiar. Once Nancy Reagan's astrologer, Quigley has been ubiquitous on television recently — taking credit for all sorts of things, not the least of them being the end of the Cold War. That, though, is not the reason for my call. I want to know where she was when the earthquake hit. Joan Quigley, it turns out was at home. In San Francisco.

"I've never been so jolted, so shaken," she says. "We lost some china. We were sort of dazed by it." I felt sympathetic, but Quigley's welfare was not the reason for my call either. What I want to know is why a woman who told the President of the United States the precise moment to sign a treaty couldn't see an earthquake coming.

It turns out that some astrologers can predict earthquakes. Alas, Quigley is not that kind. She specializes in political and economic matters. The prediction of earthquakes is best left to an earthquake astrologer. In an age of specialization, I suppose we should not be surprised. We should not expect house calls, either.

Not that Quigley did not see this earthquake coming. In the first place, Nostradamus, the famous French astrologer, wrote in the 16th century that an earthquake would hit the city of St. Francis — although, to be picky, he said nothing about the World Series. And second, a year ago in May, Saturn and Uranus were in alignment (or something) and this, Quigley explained, is very destabilizing.

She knew an earthquake was on the way. "I wasn't certain when it would happen," she said. "That it would happen I had no doubt."

No doubt. But the fact remains that the woman who says she told Nancy Reagan what treaties Ronald Reagan should sign, when he should sign them, what to do and when to do it at Bitburg, when Air Force One should take off, when press conferences should be held and — even — that Mikhail Gorbachev was on the level and it was time to drop the "evil empire" nonsense, did not get out of town for an earthquake.

Now I am sure I have some of the details wrong, even though Quigley spoke slowly and asked me to stop her when I got confused. She might have sensed that I am a skeptic, having read that every scientific study of astrology proves it worthless. Once before I expressed these views in print and was chastised by scores of believers who insisted that (1) I was a moron and (2) they had books saying otherwise and (3) Reagan's career proved that more than dumb luck had to be involved.

But in the case of Nancy Reagan we are not talking about someone who peruses a newspaper horoscope for the fun of it or grabs for the fortune cookie in a Chinese restaurant. And neither are we talking about someone who can, for a mere $100, send their relevant birth data to Quigley and be told, according to the telephone tape, more than anyone could possibly bear to know about themselves.

No. We are talking, instead, about a President's wife who admits astrology became "a habit," who — like some junkie — turned over control of her life to something outside of herself. CBS reports that Mrs. Reagan paid Quigley $3,000 a month which amounts to an incredible $36,000 a year — this from a woman who wrote in her new book, "My Turn," that she borrowed designer dresses because she couldn't afford new ones.

On the same network, Quigley indicated she was a bargain at twice the price. Nancy Reagan could be on the phone several times a day, Quigley said. At one point, Quigley worked up Gorbachev's chart and concluded that the Soviet leader was the Real McCoy — a strong, bold leader whom Reagan could trust. She says she told Nancy who, presumably, told Ron who did not raise his eyebrows but possibly went around the White House looking for the missing $36,000.

Others will draw conclusions from this behavior. They will characterize Reagan and, by complicity, her husband as silly. The pious may denounce them for proclaiming religious belief and then relying on an astrologer in matters both little and big. The intellectually inclined may conclude that astrological belief was not an aberration for the Reagans, but consistent with their outlook. In other areas, Reagan never let facts interfere with his beliefs.

As for me, I draw no conclusions. An Aquarian who was born at the same time Pluto was "acting out," I am a looney-goosey sort of guy who says, hey, live and let live. But I did wonder if the former presidential astrologer — knower of so much, seer of nearly all and, really, a delight on the phone — got out of town in advance of the earthquake.

Turns out she didn't and, instead, planned a night at the opera. Wrong Marx Brothers movie. Sounds like "Duck Soup" to me.

Poultry Workers Want Fine Upheld

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The company that puts Frank Perdue's name on every chicken last week signed its name to an appeal to a recent fine for violating health and safety standards.

And poultry workers and advocates for a safer workplace fear the state will lessen the impact of the fine.

Representatives of poultry workers on Wednesday met with officials from Perdue Farms Inc. and the state Department of Labor, saying they feared the state would reduce a $40,000 fine recently assessed the poultry company, the Associated Press reported. The fine was levied against Perdue two weeks ago for violations at its chicken processing plants in Robersonville and Lewiston-Woodville plants.

"We just don't want to see this fine or the citations bargained away," said Bob Hall, research director of the Institute for Southern Studies in Durham, a group that has been working with Perdue employees suffering from repetitive motion injuries. "This affects thousands of workers in northeastern North Carolina," Hall told the AP.

Perdue had been scheduled for an "informal meeting" with Occupational Safety and Health Act officials to negotiate on the fines and citations, but that was undercut when Perdue filed a formal appeal.

"It is out of the hands of OSHA now and with the Occupational Safety and Health Review Board," said Russ Edmonston, the spokesman for the state Labor Department. He said the appeal superseded the negotiating meeting so workers were invited inside for an information session. Only a few workers were present.

The Labor Department cited Perdue for willful violations at the two plants by underreporting the number of workers' medical problems.

The two plants employ about 3,000 workers. The processing plant in Robersonville employees approximately 800 workers.

In Robersonville, investigators found that Perdue failed to report 45 cases of injury, illness, time away from work or restricted work because of injuries from 1984 to 1989.

Officials at the plant referred all questions and comments to the corporate headquarters in Salisbury, Md.

In a prepared statement, Jimmy Chappell, director of human resources in North Carolina, said the company was appealing the fine because of a lack of OSHA standards to correct repetitive motions in the workplace.

"We are contesting the citations simply because nobody really knows how to correct them. Now OSHA will have to go before an administrative law judge and the burden will be on the agency to establish industry standards once and for all," Chappell said in the release.

The statement also called the charges of underreporting "record-keeping errors."

At Lewiston-Woodville, investigations found 17 cases of unreported medical problems in 1989.

The fines were the first ever assessed by the state for repetitive motion disorders. Workers at the plants have complained that performing the same motion over and over at high speeds has left many of them with injuries ranging from strained muscles to permanently damaged nerves.

"Some days it would take 20 or 30 minutes just to get my hand to wake up," said Donna Bazemore of Williamston, who worked for Perdue for 2½ years. "I had trouble shifting gears in my car," Ms. Bazemore told the AP. "And if I brushed both of my daughters' hair in the same hour, my hand would just start jumping. You could just watch it jump around."

offers promise for improving or even extending their lives," Sullivan said in a statement announcing the program.

"We still need more data to be absolutely sure about the full range of effects from AZT," Sullivan said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program. "But we have enough preliminary evidence that the drug is effective and seems to be safe under the conditions of usage."

Sullivan said studies on AZT in children will continue.

"This is indeed an interim process before the drug is finally approved for use in children," the secretary said.

Children ages 3 months to 12 years who have symptoms of advanced infection with the AIDS virus will be eligible to receive it free under the program sponsored by the maker of AZT, Burroughs Wellcome Co., based in Research Triangle Park, N.C. The drug is manufactured in Greenville, N.C.

According to the latest count by the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, 1,859 children under 13 have AIDS. They constitute about 2 percent of all AIDS cases.

Physicians who want to enroll child patients in the AZT program can call Burroughs Wellcome's toll-free number, 1-800-829-7337 from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. EDT.

Fan Survives California Quake

time to watch batting practice. He stood inside the park for half an hour thinking to himself how perfect the day was for baseball.

"Suddenly, the aura of the spectacle and the balmy, baseball weather are broken by the dull roar and nervous vibration of sixty-thousand feet stomping," Pardini noted in pages he scribbled on the plane back to Greenville after witnessing the earthquake.

"Only no one in the stands is cheering," he wrote. "The sound rapidly escalates to a loud rumble and the stadium begins to shake violently. There is no doubt we are in a severe earthquake."

Having been born and raised in California, this wasn't Pardini's first earthquake. But, he is quick to admit it was his worst.

"This was many times worse than anything I'd ever been in," Pardini said in an interview in Greenville this week. "The aftershocks from this one were like what I'd been used to. This one was just incredible."

When Pardini talks about the earthquake, his eyes pop open wide. He wrings his hands red and throws up his hands inadvertently. His eyes gloss over a bit.

A week after the event, he still cannot believe it actually happened. Or that he survived it. The fear he felt that day at Candlestick Park still shows.

He was seated in section 57 of the stadium, on the second deck, almost directly under the overhang, when the earthquake hit.

"I looked over at section 53 and the expansion joint opens up and the two sections of the stadium slam against one another," he recalled. "Bolts from the expansion joint pop out, sparks are flying from the light fixtures and pieces of concrete break free, falling all around me."

"The ground is bouncing wildly. I hold onto my seat to keep my balance. I wonder, 'How much more of this can the stadium withstand?'" Pardini said, shaking his head in disbelief. "Thoughts rush through my mind. I may never see my family again. Will this be the place my life ends? God forgive me."

Pardini was relieved that the stadium had withstood the tremendous jolt. "The stadium held. It took a very severe hit and it held," he said.

Pardini said he felt a mix of emotions during the 15-second-long quake — fear, resignation, peace. He thought he would not survive. "It will at least be quick. I think so," he recalled thinking.

Then even more suddenly than the earthquake began, it stopped. There was a surprising period of calm after the earthquake, Pardini recalled.

No one panicked. The power was out and Pardini said it might have been a different story altogether had the earthquake happened at night.

He said some people were crying and were having to be held up, but others waited calmly to get out of the stadium. Some waited to go back inside, thinking the game would still be played.

People were getting their hands stamped so they could return, Pardini said. But, so many people pressed to leave that the gate attendant finally let them all out without stamping their hands. The attendant told them to hold onto their tickets stubs, he said.

Pardini said people gathered in the parking lot outside the park. No one was hurt in all the excitement, but people swapped stories of towering light posts swaying violently and parked cars and trucks bouncing up and down like popcorn.

"We didn't know then, any of us, the extent of the earthquake," Pardini said. He said he was heading to his car when a limousine chauffeur told him that a section of the San Francisco Bay Bridge had collapsed.

"I said 'No way'. Then, I peered at the TV screen inside the limousine and saw a 50-foot section of the upper deck that had fallen onto the lower deck," Pardini recalled. "I knew a terrible, terrible thing had happened. I felt very sad."

Pardini said he went back to his car to meet family members who were in different sections of the ball park. Everyone was fine. They all talked about the earthquake.

For days afterwards, Pardini said that was what everybody talked about. He stayed in San Francisco for a few days after the earthquake. Television showed film of it, the newspapers wrote about it, the radio talked about it.

"I felt like I was in a place in time that would be remembered in history," Pardini said.

Pardini said that with his vacation used up, he will not be able to go back to San Francisco when the Series resumes. Plans call for game three to be played Friday night at Candlestick Park.

reserved for him at the school.

There was laughter for the audience.

"If you think that's funny," Holley countered. "You're sick. In my opinion everyone in here — and I don't see any ugly people in here — is God's creation. And if you could take all of nature and round it up into one ball, it would not be as beautiful as one of you."

Walking slowly as he talked, never venturing closer than about 10 feet from the student-packed bleachers, Holley offered a reason why he thinks the 89 prisons in North Carolina are crowded: alcohol and drugs.

Holley urged the students to choose education over drugs and alcohol.

"Take it from an old loser," said Holley, in offering himself as an example. "Please stick with this school."

Aircraft Problems

GREENSBORO (AP) — A USAir jet returned to the Piedmont Triad International Airport shortly after taking off after one of three engines developed problems Wednesday, officials say.

Flight 1232 with 158 people aboard was bound for New York. The 727 jet landed shortly before 5:30 p.m., according to USAir spokesman David Shipley.

"The plane was leaving Greensboro when it developed problems with one of the engines," Shipley said. "The pilot returned and landed normally."

appear that a dog that was not fully anesthetized was being operated on by an instructor.

Pryor said an extensive NIH study following the incident showed that the medical school uses correct and humane procedures in all its work with animals.

He said dogs are still used in upper-level courses and research. Also used in research are mice, rats, guinea pigs, monkeys, pigs, a few cats that are not killed but rather placed for adoption after use, and dressed chickens from local grocery stores.

Dogs continue to be used in upper-level surgery courses, Pryor said. They are obtained as needed from animal shelters in Beaufort County, Edgecombe County and the city of Tarboro, he said.

The ECU chapter of Students for Ethical Treatment of Animals continues to speak out against any use of animals. Its president Craig Spitz pointed out that no animals are used to teach surgery in Great Britain.

Bakker's Attorney Plans To Appeal

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT MILL, S.C. — Claims of pretrial publicity, errors in jury instructions and an excessive sentence will form the grounds of Jim Bakker's appeal of his fraud and conspiracy conviction, the fallen television evangelist's attorney says.

Bakker was sentenced to 45 years in prison and fined $500,000 Tuesday. He was immediately taken to federal prison in Talladega, Ala.

Bakker, 49, is being held at the medium-security Federal Correctional Institution at Talladega. Depending on the outcome of an appeal, he will serve at least 10 years before being eligible for parole.

Attorney Harold Bender filed a notice of appeal with the district court Tuesday after Bakker, 49, was sentenced for defrauding followers of millions of dollars intended to pay for lodging in a PTL theme park. Court clerks said it would take several days before the appeal goes to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

In an interview with CBS News on Wednesday, Bender said prejudicial pretrial publicity will be the key issue on appeal.

"I think the most obvious and most discussed issue is the pretrial publicity that pervaded this community," he said. "We also believe Judge Potter made some errors in his instructions to the jury. The others are evidentiary matters."

In addition, Bakker's 45-year sentence is excessive, the attorney said.

"We believe because of his celebrity status that the sentence was in the range that it was," he said.

Bender expressed confidence in the success of the appeal.

"Obviously we're hopeful," he said. "We think we have a good case for an appeal. What we have to show is there are some grounds for granting us a new trial."

Bender said he last spoke with Bakker before federal marshals drove him to prison.

"He was concerned about it family, friends and supporters," he said. "He was more concerned about them and their situation than he was concerned about himself."

Meanwhile, two of Bakker's former aides reported Wednesday to another, minimum-security prison in Alabama to begin serving sentences they received a month ago — more than 18 years for David Taggart and 17 for his brother, James.

Prosecutors said Bakker raised thousands of dollars since his Oct. 5th conviction and needed to be imprisoned to stop him from using TV and the mails to raise more.

Bakker's fall from power began in 1987 with revelations about a sexual encounter with former church secretary Jessica Hahn, who received $265,000 in hush money.

Prosecutors called Bakker "a con man, a common criminal."

Bakker was convicted of 23 counts of fraud and one count of conspiracy in an indictment that charged him with diverting $3.7 million in ministry finances to finance his lavish lifestyle out of the $158 million sent him by followers.

Bakker had faced a maximum sentence of 120 years, but the judge consolidated the 24 counts to nine and sentenced Bakker to five years on each.

Nearly 153,000 people sent money to Bakker between 1984 and 1987 to become "lifetime partners" at the PTL's Heritage USA retreat in nearby Fort Mill, S.C. Bakker was convicted of selling guarantees of lodging at the retreat when he knew rooms weren't available. He spent contributors' money on luxurious homes, fancy cars, jewelry, vacations, an air-conditioned doghouse, a swimming pool heated to 90 degrees, and gold-plated bathroom fixtures.

Voters Dwindle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's registered voters dropped by nearly 400,000 this year, with Republicans falling below the 1 million mark just one year after reaching that plateau for the first time in state history.

Total voter registration on Oct. 9 was 3,054,689, compared with 3,432,042 in October 1988. Democrats still outnumber Republicans by a 2-1 margin, according to figures released Wednesday.

The GOP, which saw its numbers fall from 1,016,546 to 936,963, was prepared for the drop, said Tom Ballus, communications director the state Republican Party.

Ballus said voter registration programs, including those which encourage Democrats to become Republicans, probably would pick up steam next year with a U.S. Senate race and legislative campaigns.

"It is hard to get people interested in changing their registration, or even registering to vote, when it's an off-year," Ballus said.

The number of registered Democrats, meanwhile, fell from 2,247,759 last year to 1,968,901 in 1989.

Some 374,337 voters who have not voted since the 1984 presidential election were purged from the voting rolls this year, said state elections director Alex Brock.

"Anybody who voted in the 1984 presidential election or any local or state election since then is still on the books," Brock said. "Our purge usually drops about 10 percent from the voter totals, and this is about 11 percent, so it's about what you'd expect."

The new figures show that Republicans have more registered voters than Democrats in six counties — Alexander, Davie, Henderson, Randolph, Wilkes and Yadkin.

Republicans and Democrats are nearly even in Catawba, Clay, Graham, Moore and Watauga counties.

In the state's most populous county, Mecklenburg, Democrats show 136,687 registered voters, with Republicans at 93,862.

There are 2,475,562 white registered voters, the figures show, compared with 549,427 blacks, 20,921 Indians and 8,779 voters of other races.

Product Recalled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Star Food Products Inc. of Burlington, N.C., is voluntarily recalling 7,335 pounds of chicken salad from three states because some may contain a potentially lethal food-poisoning organism, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

Lester M. Crawford, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said the company's product, "Star Food Chicken Salad," was distributed in North Carolina, South Carolina and southern Virginia.

Crawford said some of the product may be contaminated with the bacterium Listeria monocytogenes, which can cause listeriosis, described as "a rare but potentially fatal disease."

The product is sold in 7-ounce, 12-ounce and 24-ounce plastic containers with plastic lids. The name "Star Food Chicken Salad" is printed across the lid, and "Est. P. 6599" is printed inside the USDA inspection seal on the label.

Health Insurance Proposal Estimated At $1.4 Billion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The North Carolina Institute of Medicine has unveiled a $1.4 billion proposal to provide health insurance to all state residents, a plan that could alleviate the problems of nearly 1.2 million people who are now uninsured.

Under one proposal in the report issued Wednesday, employers would take on much of the burden. Nearly all firms would be required to provide coverage to full-time workers, retirees and part-time employees working 17.5 hours or more a week. The plan also calls for an expansion of Medicaid, which would bring in $675 million a year in federal funds.

"Because of its size and complexity, the medically indigent problem cannot be solved either by the public sector or the private sector working alone," the report said. "If everyone does their share, universal health insurance coverage is possible for all North Carolina citizens."

Drafters of the report described it as a starting point and agreed it might draw fire from businesses unwilling to foot the bill.

"For the first time, we will set on the table a plan so that people can begin discussion," said Sandra Greene, chairman of the institute's task force on indigent care and senior director of health economics research for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina. "Instead of continuing to discuss in a piecemeal way, we will discuss the whole problem."

Nearly 1.2 million of North Carolina's 6.4 million residents are uninsured at least some time during the year, and another 750,000 are underinsured, according to the task force report, which will be the focus of a conference Monday at Duke University.

Spokesmen for the governor, as well as the departments of Human Resources and Environment, Health and Natural Resources, declined to comment until they read the report.

Robert Scoggin, interim president of the N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry, said he could not calculate the effect of the proposals on the business community.

"It would have to be studied to know the full implications," he said.

The minimum health coverage would include basic primary physician's care and 10 days of hospitalization, and optional coverage for prescription drugs, mental health benefits and convalescent care.

In addition to the increased coverage by employers and Medicaid, the plan calls for two new insurance pools, one for those without employee coverage and another for about 100,000 people considered high medical risks because of illness such as heart and kidney ailments or diabetes.

Health insurers would be required to participate in the high risk pool. Premiums for the pools would be based on income, with those below the poverty level paying no premiums.

The task force also recommended the following:

Deductibles for the minimum coverage would be limited, with annual out-of-pocket expenses limited to $1,500 for individuals and $2,500 for families, or 10 percent of the family income, whichever is less.

The plan prohibits exclusions for pre-existing conditions and mandates coverage to start from the first day of employment.

Using 1988 figures, the estimated premium for the minimum benefits package was $7 per month for an individual and $200 per month for a family. The firms would pay 80 percent of coverage for an individual working 30 or more hours a week, and 50 percent for those dependents. Employers would be responsible for a smaller percentage for those working less than 30 hours.

Exceptions would be those companies with fewer than six employees and those in business less than five years. But the small firms would be required to contribute a portion of premium costs for their employees to the statewide pools, and the new firms would be required to participate on a phased-in basis.

The state should require legally responsible adults to cover themselves and their dependents through the plans available to them. "Anyone who is without a potential source of coverage can join the state health insurance pool as a last resort," the report said.

The state should increase Aid to Families with Dependent Children payments to 75 percent of poverty.

The Institute of Medicine is an independent non-profit corporation chartered by the General Assembly in 1983.

Martin Seeking Hugo Funds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin is expecting the Council of State to approve the use of a fund set up to cover state employee health-care costs to offset state spending for Hurricane Hugo, which may exceed $10 million.

Joe Myers, director of the state Division of Emergency Management, said if the demand for aid were a bit higher, the state could escape having to pay anything. If the state's share reached $15 million, he said, the storm would be characterized as a "catastrophic disaster," and the entire amount would have been covered by federal agencies.

But the $10 million far exceeds the $900,000 the General Assembly set aside for emergencies for the entire year.

To make up the difference, Martin may ask to dip into a $30 million reserve fund set up to cover rising health-care costs for state employees. Extra money for health insurance, if needed, then would be diverted from other state agencies.

Durham Presents Award To Koop

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Dr. C. Everett Koop, the former U.S. surgeon general and one of three physicians to receive City of Medicine Awards, said he has received wide support for his campaign against smoking even in tobacco states such as North Carolina.

Koop, at a press conference Wednesday, said he was delighted to receive an award from a city that has gone from being a tobacco center to one that carries the title "City of Medicine."

Koop continued his anti-smoking campaign, saying the nation is long overdue in finding a solution to the economic problems surrounding the tobacco issue.

"The cigarette companies like to paint me as the enemy of the tobacco farmer," he said. "Not at all. They are much more involved in the problems of the farmer than I am."

"If they wanted to pay every tobacco farmer in this country for what he makes for the rest of his life, compared to other things we spend our money on, it's a drop in the bucket," he said.

More and more tobacco companies are turning to overseas markets to sell tobacco products, which poses a moral dilemma for Americans, Koop said.

"There are many people who agree with me that it's rather immoral to export disease, disability and death to the Third World, especially when those countries cannot in the days ahead take care of the health bill," Koop said.

Dr. Willem Kolff, who developed the artificial kidney, and Dr. Thomas Earl Starzl, a pioneer in the transplanting of human organs, also received awards recognizing their contributions to medicine.

In 1956, Kolff developed the artificial kidney that made dialysis possible. In 1982, Kolff's research team at the University of Utah led to the development of the artificial heart that became known as the "Jarvik Heart."

The artificial heart offers a long-term solution to transplantation, but it is not a replacement for a donor heart, Kolff said Wednesday. One patient has lived for 22 months with an artificial heart, which is the record, he said.

"The real future for the artificial heart will be for the approximately 33,000 patients per year for who you cannot find a donor and are going to die unless they get an artificial heart," Kolff said.

Starzl, who performed the first liver transplant in the world, is the leader of a research team at the University of Pittsburgh that is investigating a powerful new drug that prevents rejection of organ transplants.

The drug, called by its code name, FK-506, has had "remarkable effects" but the long-term effects need to be studied, he said.

Attorney Blames Doctor For Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A lawyer for accused murderer Angela West said her son may have died from a mistake at the Burlington hospital where he was first treated — not from a nine-quart water overdose prosecutors blame for the death.

During closing arguments in Mrs. West's murder trial Wednesday, defense attorney Robert Jacobs said a former emergency-room physician at Alamance Memorial Hospital, Dr. Paul Mele, might have given Christopher West a sugar-water solution that worsened his condition Oct. 2, 1988.

Mrs. West is on trial in Wake Superior Court for allegedly forcing 6-year-old Christopher to drink a fatal amount of water that day as punishment for eating some lime sherbet at their Burlington apartment.

She contends she gave only one to two quarts to "flush" his system of the sherbet, which she thought was spoiled.

Defense lawyers and prosecutors were expected to finish closing arguments today. The case could go to the jury later today after Judge J. Milton Read of Durham gives jurors their final instructions. Mrs. West is facing a possible death sentence if convicted.

In the first phase of closing arguments Wednesday, Jacobs said Mele gave varying accounts of whether he injected Christopher with a salt-water solution, which would have helped, or sugar-water, which might have harmed him.

"He treated with water just like Angela had, but he put it directly into the vein," Jacobs told the jury.

Jacobs said Christopher may have consumed only the smaller amount of water like Mrs. West said. But he speculated the boy drank it faster than the three hours Mele and other experts estimated, making the hospital's alleged mistake more critical because the emergency was still developing when Christopher arrived at the hospital.

But prosecutor Ernest Harviel said Christopher's death occurred only because Mrs. West tortured her son with a seven-to-nine-quart overdose of water. The prosecution contends she and her live-in boyfriend, Jonathan Crawford, were angry the boy ate sherbet without permission. Crawford was convicted of murder last spring in Alamance County and was sentenced to life in prison.

Harviel said the alleged water torture is in keeping with Mrs. West's history of disciplining her children with "cruel and bizarre" methods, such as putting hot sauce on their tongues and paddling the bottoms of their feet.

"There's nobody on this side of heaven or hell who can explain to you why Angela West did the things she did," Harviel told the jury.

Harviel urged jurors to "show her no more mercy and pity than she showed her own son."

However, Mrs. West's ex-husband, Michael West, said outside the courtroom that his wife had been an exemplary mother who knew that Christopher needed special care.

When their son was about 2 years old, he was taken to the hospital with a high fever and convulsions, the result of an ear infection, West said.

"The doctor told us Christopher had a very high tolerance for pain, so he said if he exhibited any signs, we should react immediately. So we'd always been real protective of him," West said.

Mrs. West testified Tuesday that it was her husband who had been abusive during their marriage.

Early in 1987, while living in Durham, her sons were rambunctious, and she asked her husband to tuck them in, Mrs. West testified.

Rates Ordered Lower

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Utilities Commission ruled Wednesday that Duke Power Co. must reduce its rates by $4 million less than the panel set in earlier decision.

The commission revised an order filed June 30 by a three-member hearing panel that ordered Duke Power to reduce its rates by $13.3 million. The utility appealed to the full commission, which decided that Duke must now reduce its rates by $9.3 million.

The change would reduce the monthly rate reduction that became effective on July for a typical residential customer using 1,000 kilowatts per month to 24 cents from 35 cents.

But rather than making a rate change at this time, the commission decided to allow the existing charges to remain in effect until Duke's next fuel adjustment proceeding in May 1990.

All costs associated with deferral of the new rate charge, plus interest of 10 percent per year, will be considered at the next fuel hearing for Duke.

The rate decrease was ordered by the hearing panel after a review of Duke's fuel expenses during the 12-month test period that ended Dec. 31, 1988.

Duke appealed the hearing panel's ruling, saying a 62 percent nuclear capacity factor, which had been proposed by Duke and the Public Staff, should have been used, rather than a 63 percent factor.

The Public Staff represents the public in before the commission.

Land Scam Inquiry Continues

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HENDERSONVILLE — Federal agents and law officers from five states are helping local police in a widening investigation of four men believed to have used local land scams to fund an extremist group.

City police and the Henderson County Sheriff's deputies said at a news conference Wednesday evidence strongly suggests the four men are members of Posse Comitatus — a violent, right-wing, paramilitary group that does not acknowledge the authority of the federal government.

Police remain unsure of the identities of the four men arrested here Oct. 23. The men carried no identification and gave authorities what the four called their "federal slave names" — David Ben Israel, Paul Stephen, Phillip David Barrett and Robert Curtis Donnell Jr. The men were indicted Tuesday on 43 charges involving phony land deals and are each being held under a $5 million bond. They have refused to be represented by attorneys.

"These men are very educated, soft-spoken, reserved, articulate and they know their laws and the Constitution," said sheriff's Capt. George Erwin.

The discovery of an estimated $30,000 worth of business equipment and materials at the house suggests to police that they may have uncovered the Posse Comitatus "corporate headquarters." Two typewriters, a photocopy machine, a paper shredder, a light table, a library of law books, computer software and eight file cabinets were among the items seized.

Police believe other members of the group may have fled the house with computers, record disks and other items. The only weapons found at the house were two large hunting knives. The four men were unarmed at the time of their arrest.

Also seized was a bag of gold seals used to notarize documents, business cards from a bank in Grenada and 70 one-ounce, pure silver Liberty Dollar coins.

First Sgt. W.E. Bayless displays a Ford Mustang being used to catch speeding motorists

Troopers Obtain Faster Cars

RALEIGH (AP) — Highway Patrol troopers patrolling interstate highways in North Carolina are using a new weapon to fight speeders, patrol commander W.D. Teem says — a car that can keep up with them.

The patrol has begun phasing in Ford Mustangs with the familiar silver and black paint to replace the standard, four-door Highway Patrol cruisers that have been used for years.

"The reason we obtained the Mustangs to start with was we couldn't keep up with some of the speeders on the interstates," says Teem, who became the commanding officer for the Highway Patrol Oct. 1.

"There was a time when we had 450-cubic-inch engines that could run 150 miles an hour," he said. "But the speed has gradually been downgraded over the years."

"We had to have a high-speed car out there, especially on the interstates," said Teem. "We went to the 5-liter Mustang because there's no denying it's a fast car and so far it has given us good results."

The smaller chase car is fast enough that troopers get special training in handling it before they are allowed to take it on patrol.

"The training is as much for the sake of the equipment as for the troopers," said Teem, 59. "Our troopers are good drivers, but that car will get away from you if you're not used to it."

Teem, a 34-year veteran of the patrol, said Tuesday that the growing number of four-lane roads, drivers and vehicles keeps his 1,242 uniformed troopers busy.

"Our people are really overworked," Teem said. "There has been a great increase in traffic and drivers, but from 1973 to 1985, we had no increase in personnel."

Court rulings that law enforcement officers, as well as other public employees, are subject to overtime laws also have put a crimp in using the officers that are available.

"Sometimes it makes it tough, especially on Friday and Saturday nights when your DWI offenders are out in force," Teem said. "In my early days, we would sometimes work all night on a volunteer basis just to fight that problem."

"But now, when a trooper has worked his eight hours, you have to send him home," he said. "It makes it hard to keep things covered."

Teem said he will work to get a tougher penalty for driving while impaired, as well as for more troopers to enforce the state's traffic laws.

Seat belt enforcement, he said, also will be a high priority, in part because of his personal experience with the belts.

"I was chasing a drunk driver when he caused me to wreck my vehicle," Teem said. "At the time, we didn't have the shoulder belts, just the lap belts, but I'm convinced that belt saved my life."

"If you look at the number of fatalities since we passed the seat belt law, there has been a steady decline," Teem said. "I really think those belts are a lifesaving device that everybody should use."

Teem's path to the patrol's top job started with the Korean War, when he served in an Air Force police unit.

"I enjoyed the work and decided I wanted to make law enforcement my career," the Avery County native said. "The Highway Patrol had, and still has, I think, a reputation as an elite law enforcement group."

In 1955, Teem came to Raleigh for his first assignment as a trooper. He enjoyed that posting, but four years later jumped at the chance to move to Boone.

Pancreas Cancer Investigated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — A Duke University Medical Center researcher hopes new study could lead to immunization against cancer of the pancreas, the fifth-largest cause of cancer deaths in the United States.

"The pancreas is in a site difficult to see with most imaging techniques," said Richard S. Metzgar, professor in Duke's department of microbiology and immunology. "There is no way of knowing about the tumor until the pancreas feels the symptoms. But by then, it has usually spread beyond the pancreas."

Metzgar is studying the possibility of developing a vaccine that will elicit special "immunological killer" cells in pancreas cancer patients.

Metzgar is collaborating with researchers from the E.I. du Pont Co., which is funding the project with two grants totaling $253,000.

The body has two main lymphocyte systems for defending itself against cancer, bacteria and viruses. One system is made up of B-cells, which produce antibodies that flow through the bloodstream. The second system is based on a class of cells called T-cells that circulate through the lymph system and regulate the cellular immune system.

Both classes of cells work by recognizing particles as foreign and destroying them.

"We are looking at cytotoxic (cell-killing) T-cells from patients with pancreatic cancer," Metzgar said. "We use lymph nodes as the source for these cells. We generate T-cells outside the body by exposing them to tumor cells in test tubes. The result is that we are able to produce the types of T-cells that will kill primary tumor cells in an in vitro systems."

The T-cells have been effective in killing tumor cells without affecting other cells in animal and in vitro models, Metzgar said.

Group Remembers Shootings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ten years after a Death to the Klan rally erupted in gunfire and four protesters were killed, racism remains a problem in Greensboro and the nation, says the widow of one of those killed.

"I think there's much more intense and open bigotry, actual acts of people saying things to each other and how they feel," said Dale Sampson, who leads the Greensboro Defense Fund. "I think there's a lot of bigotry and a lot of resentment because people are told to resent."

Ms. Sampson, in a telephone interview on Wednesday from Baltimore, said the nation is still filled with racial turmoil.

That turmoil will be part of the focus of discussions and ceremonies commemorating the 10th anniversary of the shootings at a "Death to the Klan" rally in a Greensboro housing project on Nov. 3, 1979. The protesters died when shooting erupted during a confrontation with a caravan of Ku Klux Klansman and members of the American Nazi Party.

Fourteen Klansmen and Nazis were arrested in connection with the shootings but all were acquitted in two trials, one in state court and the other in federal court.

At a subsequent trial in 1985, Klansmen and Nazis were convicted of violating the civil rights of the protesters.

"It was a very bittersweet victory," Ms. Sampson said. "When I allow myself to think about the Klansmen and Nazis who walk around scot free, I still get pretty upset about it. But since there's nothing I can do about that, the thing I do, and what other victims have done, is continue to work for what we were working for 10 years ago."

The Greensboro Defense Fund now aims its work toward helping other organizations fight racism. It is sponsoring three nights of discussions and concerts in Greensboro and Durham.

Events include a tribute to Sandra Neely-Smith, the only black person and only woman among the anti-Klan demonstrators who died.

Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 38.00; Wallace 39.00; Spivey's Corner 39.00; Rowland unreported.

BROILERS: The North Carolina broiler flock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,174,000, compared to 2,121,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 2 cents higher, 2.52-2.70 in East and mostly 2.62-2.77 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans steady to 5 cents higher at 5.46-5.76 in East and mostly 5.41-5.50 in the Piedmont; wheat 1 cent lower at 3.36-3.81; new crop oats .96-1.21; new crop wheat 3.10-3.21; P.I.K. certificates steady and ranged from 98 to 99 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today as investors studied the latest data on the pace of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 4.30 to 2,648.98 in the first half hour of trading. Losers outnumbered gainers by about 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 317 up, 613 down and 504 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 21.08 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Before the opening the Commerce Department reported that the gross national product grew at a 2.5 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, in the third quarter.

That matched the increase posted for the second quarter and was in line with, or slightly stronger than, advance estimates in the financial world.

The figures elicited no strong response in either the stock or bond markets. Some observers said traders were relieved not to see the economy slowing too suddenly.

GNP Up Slightly

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy grew at a moderate annual rate of 2.5 percent from July through September despite the poorest trade performance in six years and a $4 billion income loss from Hurricane Hugo, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the increase in the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, matched a 2.5 percent rise in the April-June quarter. Third-quarter growth was aided primarily by a boom in consumer spending that resulted from heavy car sales.

Trade had been one of the economy's brightest spots as a boom in export sales had spurred a rebound in U.S. manufacturing. However, economists have warned for some time that hefty increases in the value of the dollar threatened to derail the trade improvement by making American goods more expensive on overseas markets.

Writer Mary McCarthy Dies Of Cancer At 77

NEW YORK — Critic and novelist Mary McCarthy, whose "ice clear" observations of politics and literature placed her among America's literary giants, has died. She was 77.

Miss McCarthy died of cancer Wednesday at New York Hospital, said Dixie Sheridan, spokeswoman for the author's alma mater, Vassar College in Poughkeepsie.

Called "our first lady of letters" by Norman Mailer, Miss McCarthy first made her mark among the brawling New York intellectuals of the 1930s, writing scathing literary and theatrical reviews for "The Nation" and "Partisan Review."

She reached a wider audience in 1963 with her spicy best-selling novel "The Group," chronicling the lives of eight women who graduated from college in the 1930s.

Her numerous awards including membership in the American Academy of Arts and Letters and the National Institute of Arts and Letters, two Guggenheim Fellowships, the National Medal for Literature, and the Horizon Prize.

She was the owner of a "wholly destructive critical mind," possessed of an "unerring ability to spot the hidden weakness or inconsistency in any literary effort and every person," said writer Alfred Kazin.

"There was a dedication to the art of living as well as to the art of writing," said essayist Elizabeth Hardwick, a close friend. "I loved her not only as a writer but as a person. She was into all the things that go into good living — making homes and cooking and being enormously hospitable and having friendships that lasted for decades."

She also was capable of devastating acerbity. She provoked a celebrated literary feud with Lillian Hellman by declaring, on national television, "Everything she writes is a lie, including 'and' and 'the.'"

Miss Hellman sued for libel, but died in 1984 before the suit reached a trial, which Miss McCarthy eagerly had sought.

To the late poet Robert Lowell, Miss McCarthy was "rash to awkwardness," blurring "ice clear" sentences above the "mundane gossip and still more mundane virtue of her colleagues."

With her keen eye for detail, ruthless wit and deep insight, Miss McCarthy for decades was regarded the ultimate highbrow of New York radical and intellectual circles.

Smooth Switch Bucs Make Transition To Lewis

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

If anything can smooth over a coaching transition it's winning. So far, that's the case with East Carolina football coach Bill Lewis.

The first-year Pirate coach has guided his team to a 4-1-1 mark, the best start since 1983 when ECU recorded an 8-3 record.

The first year with any new coaching staff is an adjustment, both for the players and the coaches. But, for now, prospects are good for the Bucs. The disappointment over last year's 3-8 record and the resulting resignation of former coach Art Baker has faded.

"I don't know how the fit was," Lewis said during a press conference earlier this season. "I think the timing was good and I think the key to what we've been able to accomplish so far is the players."

"They've been receptive to our ideas as a coaching staff. We were able to bridge the transition period very smoothly."

The Pirates, coming off a big 14-10 homecoming win over Virginia Tech, have little time to relax with Saturday's game against a strong Syracuse team at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, N.Y.

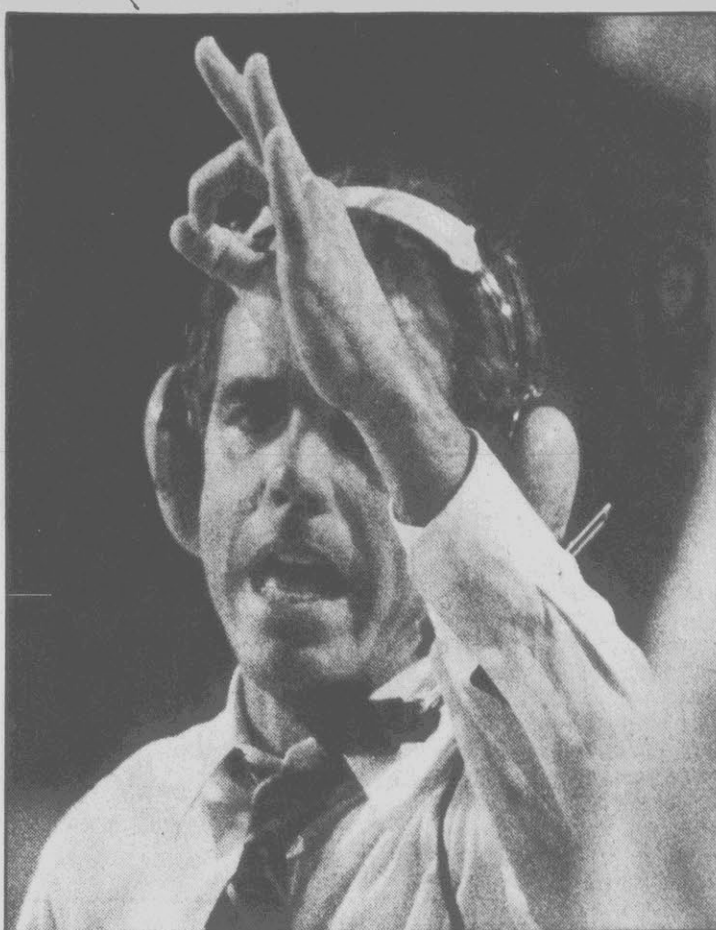

"Our football team has made improvement," Lewis said. "At times we haven't quite got the results we've wanted. But I think the program is being pointed in the right direction."

"To look at the rest of the season: there is a look at only one team — Syracuse."

Lewis' beginning was made easier by a softer early season schedule that didn't end the season before the opening kickoff.

Tagliabue Chosen NFL Commissioner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Paul Tagliabue was elected commissioner of the NFL today, seven months after Pete Rozelle announced his retirement.

Dan Rooney of the Pittsburgh Steelers, chairman of the five-man committee appointed Wednesday night to break the stalemate among the 28 owners, said the committee unanimously recommended the selection of Tagliabue as commissioner for five years.

"We come out of this meeting as one," Rooney said. "I think everybody just felt it was time to do the job, and it was in the spirit of doing the job for the league."

The vote of the league's owners was believed to be unanimous after a long deadlock. In recent weeks, a bloc of owners repeatedly denied the required majority to Jim Finks, the early favorite and recommendation of the original selection committee.

At one point, Finks, president of the New Orleans Saints, came within three votes of election.

"My congratulations go to Paul," Finks said in a statement released from New Orleans by public relations man Rusty Kasmiersky. "He will be an outstanding commissioner, and should serve the NFL for many years to come."

Tagliabue was en route from his Washington office to Cleveland at the time of the announcement and was not immediately available for comment.

Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns, a staunch Finks' supporter, said that within the last 48 hours, Finks was offered a job of president of the NFL in charge of football operations. However, he declined the offer.

"The intention was to bring both Paul Tagliabue and Jim Finks into leadership roles," Modell said.

Tagliabue, 48, is an NFL counsel and partner in the prestigious law firm of Covington & Burling. He's been a quiet, but powerful league insider for 20 years.

After 50 hours of debate during three meetings since July 6 — including 19½ hours over the last two days — the deadlocked owners decided on the committee approach on Wednesday night. The idea was to break the deadlock between adherents of Finks and Tagliabue by getting the four main antagonists together with one relative neutral and asking them to decide between the two candidates.

Another deadlock by that committee probably would have killed the candidacies of both men, but today's agreement ended that possibility.

"We felt that it might be easier for five men to reach a unanimous decision than 28," said Rozelle, who announced his resignation 219 days ago and warned this week that he might walk away if the impasse isn't ended.

On Tuesday, Rozelle hinted he might step down if the impasse isn't settled, even though he had pledged back in March that he would stay on until a successor was found. He had assumed that a commissioner would be in office before the season began.

"I've already lost part of my retirement," Rozelle said.

Syracuse's Record Masks True Strength

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Anyone thinking that Syracuse University doesn't have a quality football team this season should think again, East Carolina coach Bill Lewis says.

The Orangemen, 3-3, will entertain East Carolina on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in the Carrier Dome. It's the first trip there for the Pirates, who lost a game in Ficklen Stadium to Syracuse last year, 38-14.

"Three and three is misleading," Lewis said. "They played Pittsburgh, Florida State and Penn State in three straight games. A lot of teams struggle against them."

The Orangemen opened their 1989 season against Temple, another future East Carolina opponent, rolling up a 43-3 victory. They then slipped past Army, 10-7 before losing a close decision to Pittsburgh on the road, 30-23.

That was followed by two losses at home, to charging Florida State, 41-10, and to Penn State, 34-12.

Syracuse snapped that three-game dive with a 49-28 romp over Rutgers this past Saturday.

The game, too, will see Syracuse coach Dick MacPherson going for his 100th career victory as a college coach. Overall, he's 99-63-3 in his 16 seasons, including a 54-41-2 mark in nine years at Syracuse.

Success is no stranger to the Orangemen under MacPherson. Since 1987, two and a half seasons, Syracuse is the fifth-winningest team in the country with a 24-5-1 mark. Two years ago, they were undefeated, having only a tie with Auburn in the Sugar Bowl to spoil the record. Last year, the Orangemen lost twice, but beat Louisiana State, 23-10, in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

Much of the success lies with quarterback Bill Scharr, named the ECAC's Offensive Player of the Week following last Saturday's romp over Rutgers. Scharr completed 18 of 24 passes for 293 yards and a school-record tying four touchdown passes. He also scored once himself on a 20-yard quarterback draw.

For the season, Scharr has completed 80 of 132 passes, 60.6 percent, for 1,121 yards. He's thrown five touchdown passes but has had seven

New Approaches For Series Teams

By Ben Walker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Oakland A's are going back to spring-training basics. The San Francisco Giants are going back to having fun.

A day before the World Series resumes, which way will win?

"The hardest thing is to sit down and figure out what's best to get your players ready to play," Giants manager Roger Craig said Wednesday. "I think every manager has to do what he thinks is right. The Athletics did what they thought was best and we're doing the same."

The Athletics, afraid of bad weather that never came, went to their spring training site in Phoenix. Under hazy skies that turned sunny, they played a simulated game and today planned to play against their instructional league team in Arizona.

"I'm not worried about motivation. This is the World Series. This is what you come to spring training thinking about," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "We're here to work."

The Athletics weren't totally serious, but they were all business. They lead the series 2-0 and plan to keep going Friday evening in Game 3.

The Giants seemed to do as much joking as hitting, pitching and fielding at their practice at sunny Candlestick Park.

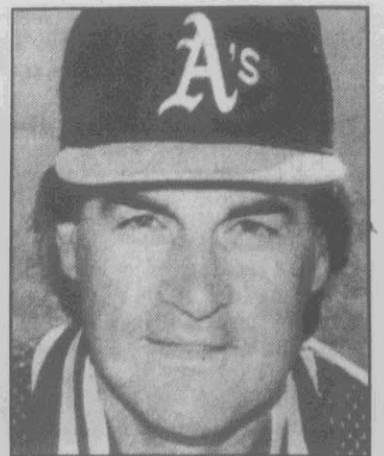

"Like a bunch of kids on a sandlot.

That's the kind of atmosphere I want, having fun," Craig said. "If they're mentally ready to play, the physical aspect will be there. If their hearts aren't in it, it won't matter."

The weather is expected to be fine for Friday. The teams are just hoping everything else is OK.

For the second straight day, an aftershock bounced the Bay area. On Tuesday, it came shortly after 6 p.m., which would've been around

Playoff Spot On Line In Rose-Fike Game

Both Teams Need Win To Stay In Race For Top Spot In The Big East

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Playoff aspirations and a lot of footballs will fill the air in Demon Territory Stadium Friday night when Rose High rumbles in for a crucial Big East Conference clash with Wilson Fike.

Both teams kept alive their bid for one of two 4-A Big East Conference playoff spots last week with pressure-packed wins. The two teams are tied for first with Wilson Hunt at 3-1.

Elizabeth City Northeastern (3-2) and Northern Nash (2-2) are still entertaining dim hopes of landing a playoff spot.

In other Big East action Friday, Hunt hosts Rocky Mount (1-3) and Northern Nash travels to winless Kinston.

The final week has the Rampants visiting Rocky Mount, with Fike making the long trek to Northeastern and Hunt traveling to Northern Nash.

Elsewhere in the area Friday night, North Pitt hosts Farmville Central; Greene Central entertains Ayden-Grifton. Washington hosts Northwest Halifax; Roanoke is at Columbia; Jamesville visits Chocowinity, and Williamston travels to Plymouth.

D.H. Conley, which wrapped up a Class 3-A playoff spot with a 38-6 thrashing of West Carteret last week, has the week off. The Vikings invade West Craven next Friday to battle for the Colonial Conference championship.

By Air Or By Ground?

With defenses loading up to stop the run, Rose coach Chip Williams has resorted more to the airways and junior quarterback Columbus Grice has responded.

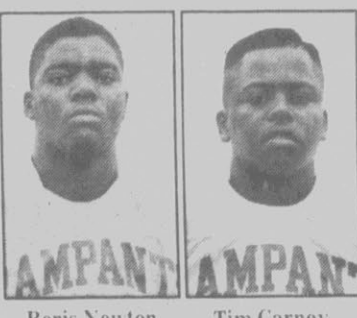

Grice had his finest evening as a Rampant last Friday when he connected on nine of 16 passes for 121 yards and threw for three touchdowns.

"We try to take what the defense gives us," Williams said. "Of late, people have been playing some eight-man fronts on us and we've been able to have some success passing."

"If that's what they do Friday night, then that's what we'll opt to do to."

However, Williams knows his team must establish the run to consistently be successful against teams in the Big East and

Backfield Injuries Pile Up On Pirates

East Carolina will have to do some reshuffling in the offensive backfield as they wind up preparations for a game at Syracuse Saturday. Tailbacks Denell Harper and Eric Booker have both suffered injuries during practice this week which make them doubtful for the game against the Orangemen. Harper, who alternates with Willie Lewis in the top spot, suffered sprained rib cartilage. Booker, the third-team tailback, sprained his knee. Backup offensive guard Tod Creech also suffered a sprained knee. Freshman tailback Cedric Van Buren will back up Lewis. The third team tailback will be David Daniels, a former Rose standout, who will also be the backup fullback. ECU coaches had hoped to use Van Buren, who is the fastest of the tailbacks, at length against Syracuse to take advantage of his speed on the Orangemen's artificial playing surface at the Carrier Dome.

Conley Doubles Team Set For Tourney

WILSON — D.H. Conley's unseeded doubles team of Nicole Bloodworth and Jenni Bradburn is headed to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association Class 3-A state tennis tournament. Bloodworth-Bradburn earned the trip to the state tourney, scheduled for Nov. 1-2 in Charlotte, with a pair of wins in the Class 3-A regionals at Wilson Beddingfield High School Wednesday afternoon. Bloodworth-Bradburn opened with a 6-0, 6-0 win over Vick-Rose of Tarboro then defeated Morgan-Nance of Washington, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3. They were scheduled to face the top-seeded team of Cameron-Avery of Harnett Central today at 10 a.m. in the semifinals. Conley's entries in singles didn't fare as well. Gail Lilley was defeated by Tarboro's Kendra Stallings, 6-1, 6-1, while Heather Merrill fell to Tarboro's Ashley Cooper, 6-1, 6-2. The other doubles team of Vanessa Small and Julie Bradburn lost in the first round to M. Artz and K. Evans of Southern Durham, 6-1, 6-2.

Roanoke, Williamston Advance Teams

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Roanoke High School advanced one doubles team and Williamston, two, into the semifinals of the Northeastern 1-A/2-A tennis regionals Wednesday. All three automatically qualify for the state tournament, to be held next week. Roanoke's Dawn Briley and Amy Oakley defeated Kimberly Wilkins-Nikki Nassef of Rosewood, 6-1, 6-0, in the first round, then beat Pam Miller-Shelley Potts of Edenton, 6-1, 6-1, to reach the semifinals. Roanoke's other doubles team of Michelle Roberson and Cindy Powell defeated Frazer-McGee of Rosewood, 6-2, 6-1, but then lost to Dee Dee Mills-Dawn Bundy of Williamston, 6-3, 5-7, 6-1. In the singles, Roanoke's Shannon Warren, after a first-round bye, beat Nikki Garner of Roanoke Rapids, 6-4, 6-3, before bowing to Andrea Byrnes of Franklinton, 6-0, 6-1. Rhonda Bailey, also with a first-round bye, beat Rosewood's Stacy Surratt, 6-4, 6-2, before falling to Roanoke Rapids' Laura Eure, 6-3, 6-1. Briley-Oakley will face Carrie Bussell-Hope Roberson of Williamston in their semifinals, while Mills-Bundy will meet Coburn-Lyles of Roanoke Rapids. Roanoke, Williamston and Roanoke Rapids each have 15 points in the team standings, while Edenton has 12.

Rose Advances Two Singles To State

WILSON — Rose High School's Paige Powell, the top seed, and Tricia Tripp, seeded fourth, both advanced to the state 4-A tennis tournament by reaching the semifinals of the Northeastern Regionals Wednesday. Powell, who was the state runner-up last year, had a first-round bye, then beat Angie Abernethy of Rocky Mount, 6-0, 6-0. She then beat Heather Olsen of Jacksonville, 6-0, 6-0, to reach the semifinals. She will face Shilpa Jaggi of Fike today in the semis. Tripp, also with a first-round bye, beat April Dean of Southern Wayne, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5. She also beat Aimee Ipock of New Bern, 7-5, 7-6 (7-3), to reach the semifinals, where she will face Caroline Vinson of Goldsboro, the second seed. Rose's doubles entries fared less well. Taylor Evans and Laura Young had a first-round bye, then beat Heffner-Malpass of Southern Wayne, 6-0, 6-1, before losing to Sarah Webster-Sophie Hilmers of Northern Nash, 6-0, 6-1, the second seeds. Camilla Brown-Jenny Stoneham also had a bye, but then lost to Holly Hudyma-Bowler of Eastern Wayne, 7-5, 6-3. Two-time defending regional and state champion Goldsboro leads the team standings with 19 points while Rose and Fike are tied for second with 15 each.

Tate, Jackson Get ECU Volleyball Awards

Debbie Tate and Rhonda Jackson have been named the East Carolina volleyball players of the week by head coach Judy Kirkpatrick. Tate, a senior outside hitter from Arcadia, Fla., who in four Colonial Athletic Association games last week had 37 kills. Jackson, a junior from Greenville, was instrumental in ECU's first-ever CAA win over James Madison last Saturday and the Lady Pirates' three-game sweep over Campbell.

State Prep Gridiron Awards Given

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Elijah Timmons of Hendersonville was named the 1-A football player of the week by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. Timmons, a tailback, rushed for 215 yards and scored on touchdown runs of 2 and 8 yards to lead the Bearcats to a 43-8 victory over Polk County. Running back Jamie Hill of Winston-Salem Parkland was named the 4-A player of the week after rushing for 174 yards and scoring three touchdowns in a 39-36 victory over South Rowan. Quarterback Billy Herrell of Franklin captured 3-A player of the week honors. He completed 19 of 31 passes for 227 yards, and two touchdowns. He also caught a pass for 30 yards in Franklin's 13-0 victory over North Buncombe. Whiteville running back Kevin Manning, who rushed 26 times for 212 yards and a touchdown, was named the 2-A player of the week. Manning scored on a 12-yard run in the Wolfpacks' 21-0 victory over West Columbus.

Wilkins Agress To Play Guard

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Hawks forward Dominique Wilkins said Wednesday that he has agreed to play off-guard for the team as needed this season. If John Battle, who has a bad knee, can't play the entire opening-night game against Indiana on Nov. 3, Wilkins said he probably will start at off-guard. "But he doesn't want to be called anything but a forward. "Got to be that way," he said. Wilkins wants to help the team in a pinch, but he also wants to do what is best for himself. "If they put me down as a guard, no way can I make first-team All-Star," said Wilkins, who has attained that honor for the past two years. "No way I can beat out Michael Jordan. But I got to believe I'm one of the two best forwards, so I know I can make it if they call me a forward."

Texas Student Bookies Busted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two University of Texas business students and a graduate with a degree in finance allegedly masterminded a bookmaking operation that drew nearly $100,000 a weekend in sports bets, Austin police said. Adam Don, 20; Dan Sachnowitz, 21, and Christopher J. Trapp, 23 — were accused by authorities of running the gambling business out of an apartment in north of the campus. In addition to ledgers police say were used to record the bets, police seized four vehicles, cellular telephones, a desk telephone system, an answering machine and ledgers they said were used by the three in their illegal business, said Lt. Jerry Slatton of the Austin Police Department's vice squad. Don was charged with engaging in organized crime by promotion of gambling, while Sachnowitz and Trapp were charged with engaging in organized crime by keeping a gambling place.

Sumrell Guiding Valkyries To Title

Conley Takes On West Henderson For The State 3-A Volleyball Crown

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Tracy Sumrell was a freshman when D.H. Conley captured the North Carolina High School Athletic Association 3-A state volleyball championship in 1986. She spent much of that year sitting, watching and learning. Now as a senior — the only one on the squad — she has her sights set on another state crown. Sumrell and Co. will get their opportunity Saturday at 5 p.m. when they take on West Henderson in Carmichael Auditorium on the campus of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. The Valkyries bring in a 28-1 record with the lone loss coming at the hands of undefeated Durham Jordan, which will battle Waynesville Tuscola at 8 for the 4-A title.

"I never thought we would get this far since we are such a young team," Sumrell said. "We've really worked hard. "Our goals were to go undefeated and win the state championship. We lost one game so that ruined that goal, but we still have one more left."

Returning to Chapel Hill has far exceeded the expectations of Conley coach Martha McCaskill. Foremost on her agenda was reclaiming the Coastal Conference championship that was relinquished to West Carteret in 1988.

With that accomplished, the Valkyries proceeded to knock off South Johnston, Harnett Central, Wake Forest-Rolesville and Southern Alamance to reach the state finals. "The immediate goal was to try to get the conference title back and kind of go from there," McCaskill said. "(Reaching the state finals) was not realistic, but it's the kind of thing a coach uses to try to pump a young team up and get them excited and get them to work hard. "You do have to have goals in mind."

Sumrell and sophomore Virginia Hall have teamed to form a powerful duo up front, but contributions have come from a number of sources, some of which McCaskill said were unexpected.

Junior Nikki Adams has been a consistent setter while junior Tracy Stancil has turned in solid back-line defense. Juniors Darvetta Patrick and Leasa Evans, sophomore Angie Jones and freshman Lori Waters have performed capably in their respective roles.

"We've been lucky enough to play enough matches that we've been able to take the strengths of this player and utilize them and then take the strengths of another player and use that," McCaskill said.

"We did a lot of experimenting early on to try to find what was the best combination and that is so crucial in volleyball. We found it and it started clicking, so we haven't changed it."

However, the key ingredient may be one that can't be coached — chemistry. The Valkyries are friends on and off the court and are able to lift one another's spirits in the rare times they struggle. "We've been a family," Sumrell said. "When you work well together and communicate and really care about the people you play with it really makes it easy."

State Bound

"We have a little motto. When anybody gets down we say 'I luv you' and everybody smiles and knows we're behind them."

McCaskill says it's that special quality that all her successful teams have possessed.

"I've never had a successful team that didn't do this — they go places together as a team, they spend the night at each other's houses," McCaskill said. "The year we won it they were very much that way."

"They kind of kid about being a family and they're. You'll never convince me that's not important when it gets to crunch time. I guess you call that chemistry."

McCaskill also credits Sumrell for accepting a leadership role. Sumrell is Conley's only captain and has assisted in the development of the young squad in a lead-by-example method.

"Tracy has been a good captain," McCaskill said. "She's done a lot of things with the team. She has been a great leader. I think the fact that she was the only senior has made her work that much harder."

"When we don't play well Tracy blames herself and I've really had to work with her on that because it's not all her fault."

Of course, with only one loss, Sumrell has had few moments for concern. But she realizes the burden of leadership rests on her shoulders and she gladly accepts the challenge.

"I have to really be the leader," Sumrell said. "Everybody looks up to you when you're a senior."

For Hall and Adams, who were on Conley's state runner-up basketball team last year, the return to Chapel Hill will be a mission of redemption of sorts, but the experience will be new for the remaining team members.

Is there any pressure?

"I would think there was something wrong with them if they didn't walk in that place and absolutely be nervous wrecks," McCaskill said. "Hopefully that won't last too long into the first game. That's something a coach has to try to mentally prepare them for."

"As the week goes by I get a little more excited and a little more nervous. We feel very fortunate — and lucky. The only thing I want us to do is play like we're capable of playing." Said Sumrell: "There's a lot of pressure. A lot of people expect us to win."

Norman Seeking Status Change

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Greg Norman called for a change in status for the ultra-rich Nabisco Championship that began today at the Harbour Town Golf Links.

"Make it a special event, a year-ending event, a bonus. Make the money unofficial," Norman suggested before the chase for almost $3.5 million in individual prize money.

"I like the idea," Payne Stewart, the currently leader on the money-winning list, said. "But it's not going to happen."

"Nabisco isn't going to let it happen. You have to look at it from their standpoint, too. If they put up all that money, they want it to be official," Stewart said.

"I can't see that happening," Commissioner Deane Beman said when asked if the possibility existed that the Nabisco Championship — offering almost three times as much as any other tournament — could become an unofficial money event.

A number of the game's leading players, however, feel that the enormous prize money in this tournament overshadows the rest of the Tour.

"It's too much," said Curtis Strange, the Tour's leading money-winner in three of the last four years and the defending champion in this tournament.

"Look, we play hard for 10 months. Then we come down to this one tournament and everything can change. Everything we've done for 10 months is changed on one tournament. I don't think that's right."

"Don't get me wrong. I love playing for this kind of money. But it throws the rest of the season out of balance," he said.

That, essentially, was the basis of Norman's thinking in arriving at his suggestion to make it an unofficial tournament.

"I think it's great to have a season-ending tournament like this," the Australian star said. "It's the culmination of 10 months of hard work."

"It's such a good event, make it something special. It's what we're all trying to get into all year long. You start putting together your schedule and the first thing you do is block out this week hoping you'll make it."

"So make this a bonus for your good play all year, but don't let it wipe out the rest of the year."

"I've won about $730,000 this year. I played hard for it. I played good. But I can almost double that in one week. That's not right," Norman said.

The tournament offers $2.5 million, with $450,000 to the winner. That huge prize gives more than a dozen players in the 30-man field an opportunity to take over the money-winning lead. That race closes in this tournament.

In addition, another $985,000, including $175,000 to the winner, will be distributed among the season's top 30 money-winners, all of whom are in this field.

Stewart currently leads the list with $825,301. He's followed by Tom Kite, $770,278; Paul Azinger, $737,399; Norman, $723,930, and British Open champion Calcavecchia, $694,741.

The tournament also closes the Player of the Year race. The leading contenders are Calcavecchia, 72 points; Kite, 66; Stewart, 60, and Norman, 54.

Rose-Fike ...

especially in postseason play.

The Rampant running game lost its primary punch when Maurice Hines suffered a season-ending injury four games into the season. That has left the burden on Andre Perkins, Anthony Love and Tye Fickling to carry the load.

Promising sophomore Jermaine Williams was elevated from the junior varsity two weeks ago and has flashed signs of brilliance.

"High school football is not won on the passing game nine times out of 10," Williams said. "In the state championship, most of those teams can rush the ball pretty well, whether they have eight-man fronts or whatever. We certainly are going to have to do both."

Fike, with sophomore quarterback Michael Dunn at the controls, poses a versatile offense. Dunn has completed 75 of 154 passes for 1,208 yards and nine touchdowns. He has been intercepted six times.

Clee Atkinson, Tyrone Hilliard and Kevin Bowen have been Dunn's top targets.

The backfield features a potential superstar in 5-11, 225-pound freshman fullback Darrell Carson.

Crucial for Rose will be mounting a pass rush, thus limiting Dunn's time to sit in the pocket and look for an open receiver.

"If our defensive line gives them a day-and-a-half to complete a pass then they are going to be pretty successful," Williams said. "They do run quick pass routes with three-step drops, so sometimes they are going to try to rush them as best as we can."

Fike is coming off a stunning 14-7 upset of previously unbeaten Hunt, and has emerged the dark horse in the Big East race. Rose can clinch a playoff spot with a win. However, the Golden Demons will not be guaranteed a berth with a win.

"They are a young team and the young people have kind of jelled for them," Williams said. "It's not surprising. I think our league is pretty tough top to bottom."

Of course, the Rose-Fike rivalry transcends the boundaries of the football field.

"Fike has always been tough with us even if they are here," Williams said. "They've always played us very well. We've got a little rivalry."

"I know in track they are always real good and we go at 'em. In basketball they're usually pretty good and we go at 'em too. And in football there's always been a rivalry there."

"They've had some great players come through like Anthony Thompson over at East Carolina and we'd like to think we've had a couple of good ones come through, too."

Fan Pleads With Giants: Don't Go Through Motions

A lifelong San Francisco Giants fan was, sad as hell and decided he wasn't going to take it any more. So Glenn Smith dashed off an open letter to Manager Roger Craig and the ballplayers, pleading, "PLEASE, don't just go through the motions" when the World Series resumes Friday.

Craig found it sufficiently inspirational that he planned to read it to his players before Game 3, which was postponed after an earthquake devastated the Bay area Oct. 17. Craig made copies of the letter available to reporters on Wednesday.

Craig

"Perhaps you serve a far more valuable purpose than you realize," wrote Smith, a 38-year-old real estate appraiser from nearby Concord. "Haven't you ever seen a cony old movie where the entertainer goes on stage despite great personal tragedy because 'the show must go on'?" Why does Bob Hope visit the troops? Why does the dying child in the hospital want a visit from his favorite athlete as his last request? Have any of you seen 'Field of Dreams' for God's sake?"

But the Athletics, already leading 2-0, flew Wednesday to the team's Phoenix, Ariz., spring training site in a bid to minimize distractions and any possible disruptions because of the fast-changing weather.

The Giants, however, decided to continue working out at Candlestick Park and some fans, citing that move, have begun questioning the team's commitment.

Smith, who called the team's 1962 appearance in the World Series one of the greatest thrills of his childhood, was anything but critical of the Giants.

But in his letter, he said all of the people of the Bay area shared some responsibility for helping the community get back on its feet, either through donations, volunteerism or simply lifting spirits.

Craig said he had received a number of letters, but was particularly moved by Smith's.

He said he would read it to the players Friday "unless I memorize it. Then I can say it to my players and they'll think I'm real smart, because it will sound like it's coming from me."

Good Weather Prediction

The National Weather Service is forecasting clear skies and mild temperatures for Friday's scheduled resumption of the earthquake-delayed World Series between the San Francisco Giants and Oakland Athletics.

Temperatures were expected to be in the low 60s at the start, dropping to the 50s by game's end for both Game 3 and Saturday's Game 4, the Weather Service said Wednesday. There was an outside chance of rain predicted for Sunday when Game 5 would be played, if necessary.

Meanwhile, the A's moved their workouts to their spring training base at Phoenix and missed a lovely day with sunny skies and mild temperatures in the Bay area.

Daryl Williams, a forecaster with the National Weather Service, said he had talked with Oakland GM Sandy Alderson before the team moved.

"I couldn't give them a definite yes (that it wouldn't rain), so they took off," Williams said.

Owners To Donate Cash

Major league baseball owners have agreed to set up a fund to help victims of the earthquake that devastated northern California last week, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner told a Toledo TV station Wednesday.

Steinbrenner told WTOL the 26 major league teams will contribute $40,000 each, or $1.04 million, to the Red Cross to help earthquake victims.

"They (owners) are going to make a sizable contribution to the San Francisco Bay area ... which we should do. I think this is something that all Americans should care deeply about and should get involved," Steinbrenner said after attending a funeral for a Toledo labor leader.

"And I compliment Commissioner Fay Vincent on what he's done. I think it is a magnificent gesture."

The Oct. 17 earthquake, which left dozens of people dead and others missing, has caused billions of dollars' worth of damage in the San Francisco Bay area. It also placed the 1989 World Series between the San Francisco Giants and Oakland A's on hold.

The resumption of the series is scheduled for Friday.

Hassey Injured In Practice
Oakland Athletics catcher Ron Hassey appeared to be injured Wednesday in the final inning of an intrasquad game at Phoenix Stadium.

Hassey took a foul tip in the right shoulder and fell to the ground. He was down for a minute and appeared to be in pain. He got up by himself and walked off the field.

Hassey

"I think that was a veteran trick," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "He's fine. I think he just wanted to get the game over."

Reds Mum On Next Skipper

Cincinnati Reds general manager Bob Quinn still isn't tipping his hand about who the team's next manager will be, but he says he would like to have the choice made next week.

"We're really trying to be as thorough internally as possible," said Quinn, who was hired only Oct. 13 as the Reds' general manager and vice president. "This is a vital decision. It's my first major decision, and we want to be sure what we do is in the best interests of everyone."

Quinn has identified top candidates for the job as former New York Yankees manager and Chicago Cubs executive Dallas Green, interim Reds manager Tommy Helms, former Cleveland manager Doc Edwards and ex-Houston manager Hal Lanier. Former Cleveland manager Pat Corrales is also a candidate. The Cincinnati Post reported Wednesday, quoting unidentified sources.

Green, fired in August as the Yankees' manager, says Reds owner Marge Schott has offered Green the job, but he is still deciding whether he wants it. But, Quinn has been saying only that Green is a candidate and that the job has not been offered to anyone.

Arizona Trip Lifts A's

PHOENIX — A quick trip to Arizona did more for the Oakland A's spirit than their batting eye.

The A's were pleasantly surprised Wednesday when they arrived at Phoenix Municipal Stadium and found more than 6,000 fans waiting to watch their World Series workout.

"I was definitely shocked about the crowd," A's shortstop Walt Weiss said. "I thought they had a carnival out here or something."

Long lines of cars waited to get into the dirt parking lot, and the stands were just about filled by the time the A's took the field.

Game 3 of the World Series is scheduled for Friday at San Francisco's Candlestick Park after an 11-day layoff because of an earthquake.

Oakland moved to its spring training facility in Phoenix because rain had been forecast in the Bay area through today.

When the A's arrived in Phoenix shortly after noon on Wednesday, the skies were overcast. But like their moods, the skies turned partly sunny as the day went on.

"To tell you the truth, we would have been better staying in Oakland. But they couldn't guarantee we would have good weather and the outfield was already soggy," A's manager Tony La Russa said.

The two-day move to Phoenix cost the A's about $25,000.

As fans entered the stadium on Wednesday, Red Cross volunteers asked for donations for the earthquake victims in the Bay area. A Red Cross official said nearly $9,600 was raised.

Children arrived with Oakland yearbooks, baseballs and trading cards hoping to get an autograph from Jose Canseco or Mark McGwire.

One group of kids even came as part of a class field trip. The adults were excited, too.

"This is history," said Randy Woods, a fan who was at Candlestick on Oct. 17 when the earthquake hit just prior to Game 3. "I had to be here today."

The A's had a brief workout in Oakland on Tuesday, but had to cut it short because of the soggy outfield at the Coliseum.

"It's my responsibility to get this team ready for the big prize and the organization felt this was the best way to do it," La Russa said. "I didn't think we were ready to play."

Will Candlestickphobia Strike Oakland Tonight?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Is there such a thing as Candlestickphobia? Roger Craig thinks there might be.

"They have to be thinking," the San Francisco Giants manager said Wednesday of the Oakland Athletics. "We've been back here and seen that there's nothing wrong."

The Athletics, who won't come back to Candlestick until the World Series resumes with Game 3 Friday night, went to their spring-training base Wednesday. The A's will play an exhibition game today against one of their instructional league teams.

Will Clark suggested that there might be some mind games behind Oakland's trip to Arizona.

"All of a sudden, this earthquake can shake anyone up," the Giants first baseman said. "Not only physically, but mentally."

The A's won't return to Candlestick until Friday. Oakland manager Tony La Russa didn't think another practice in San Francisco would do any good. He said fear had nothing to do with not going back to Candlestick, where an earthquake struck about 30 minutes before the scheduled start of Game 3 last week.

"You can't schedule a workout there without traffic problems either before or after," La Russa said before going to Phoenix.

The Giants didn't consider returning to their spring training site at Scottsdale, Ariz.

"Put it this way," Clark said, "it's October whatever it is and I'm tired of traveling. The next traveling I'm going to do is going home."

Brett Butler agreed with Clark. "Personally," he said, "I'm glad I didn't have to get on a plane and go someplace else."

The A's said they went to Phoenix because there was a chance of rain in the Bay area. But it was sunny Wednesday with barely a cloud in the sky.

"It's a beautiful day," Clark said, looking up above Candlestick.

The Giants, who trail 2-0 in the best-of-7 series, went through two hours of batting practice and then took infield. Last week, the Giants played intrasquad games but Craig said Wednesday that he didn't think they were doing any good.

"I'm going to use some of the psychological effect," he said. "They weren't having any fun. I think they like this a lot more."

Clark described his teammates as "loosey" and "goosey." He said the Giants, for the first time in a week, were able to concentrate solely on baseball.

Waiting Soon To Be Over ...

the second inning if the World Series had resumed on the day baseball had originally hoped.

On Wednesday, the stadium slightly shook around 3 p.m. The Giants had left by the time that happened.

While the teams worked out, the Athletics tried to work out a compromise with the Rolling Stones. The two sides met Wednesday, but no resolution was announced.

The Rolling Stones are scheduled to play at the Oakland Coliseum on Nov. 4-5, and their contract allows them to move into the stadium five days beforehand to set up. If the Giants can force the series back to Oakland, there would be a conflict for Games 6 and 7 on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

Candlestick Park, meanwhile, is ready. As the Giants practiced, maintenance crews cleaned the stadium of cups and hot dog wrappers left from Oct. 17, when the earthquake struck.

Once the 'Stick and Stones are set, all that remains is baseball.

The Giants planned an easy practice today.

"No simulated games. No intrasquad games. We tried that the first few days and some of the players were bitching, throwing bats," Craig said. "With the earthquake, they had other things on their minds and didn't want to be doing that."

"They didn't really enjoy it. You can't force them to do things they don't want to do," he said. "Today, they were having fun and got something out of it."

The Footballs Are Flying

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Woody Hayes' worst nightmare has come true: College football has turned into an aerial circus.

The late Ohio State coach abhorred the pass, preferring to grind it out on the ground with "three yards and a cloud of dust." Hayes considered passing an act of desperation. Now it's an act of destruction.

Led by the bionic arm of Houston's Andre Ware, college quarterbacks are throwing the ball at a record-setting pace that is causing horrible headaches for defensive backs and statisticians.

Consider this: Prior to this season, there had been only two weekends in college football history when all the teams in action had combined to average more than 400 passing yards. Last Saturday, it happened for the fourth consecutive week.

The national average is 395 passing yards per game, 23 more than the record set in 1985 and 116 more than the average at the start of the decade. That's combined yardage for both teams. Houston alone gains an eye-popping 543 yards per game through the air, more than any other team gains in passing AND running.

What's causing the passing craze? Jim Van Valkenburg, the NCAA's director of statistics, says teams are taking advantage of rule changes in the 1980s that made it more difficult to stop the pass.

"It pays to pass," he said. "Teams are passing more than ever — 40 percent of the time. It's obviously a major trend."

Speaking of trends, many people predicted a big drop in field goal accuracy this season because of the new ban on kicking tees. So far, they're wrong.

At midseason, field goal accuracy was 67.9 percent — better than last year's 67.6 and just behind the all-time high of 68.2 in 1984.

Beamer Undergoes Surgery
Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer underwent a surgical procedure Wednesday to expand a narrowed coronary artery that caused him to experience chest pains during a game last Saturday, Beamer's doctor said.

Beamer, 43, was resting comfortably and may be able to resume some of his duties next week, said Dr. Robert Rude, a cardiologist at Roanoke Memorial Hospital who performed the procedure.

Moorman Grateful For New Start
Marshall flanker Percy Moorman thanked his coaches for giving him another chance at a degree but doesn't want to talk further about his well-chronicled legal problems.

The junior from Danville, Va., was convicted of sex-related crimes twice, but had one conviction overturned. He also faces theft charges in Oregon and accusations that he failed to show for trial and violated probation terms.

College Football

"I appreciate what Coach (George) Chaump has done," Moorman said this week. "I love him to death. I wish everyone would get off his back."

Moorman had six catches for 172 yards and one touchdown last Saturday when the Thundering Herd fell to No. 1 Eastern Kentucky. The effort placed him among the leaders in Southern Conference receiving and all-purpose yardage.

WVU's Jones Awaits Major Decision
Which way Major Harris scrambles at season's end will determine which way Greg Jones goes.

Speculation has it that Harris, West Virginia's junior quarterback and a leading Heisman Trophy contender, will be heading to the National Football League next spring.

If that happens, Jones, the backup quarterback, will stick around and probably will be the starter in 1990. But if Harris comes back for his final year, Jones will accept his degree in secondary education in May and get on with his life.

"When the season is over, Major will weigh his options, and whatever he does, I think I'll do the opposite," Jones said.

"I've sat around for four years (one as redshirt) and to sit around my last year — there's no point in it. I might as well go on and graduate and start my career in whatever I might do."

Jones hasn't had much luck in college football. The graduate of Edison High in Miami, Fla., signed with the University of Miami, then sat on the bench behind 1986 Heisman winner Vinny Testaverde.

That experience prompted Jones to transfer to West Virginia, only to find that the offense had been geared around the nimble Harris. So Jones, a 6-foot-2, 190-pound pro-style, drop-back passer, sat as the Mountaineers went 11-1 last season.

Little but the team's record has changed this season. The Mountaineers, ranked as high as No. 3 last season, are currently 15th with a 5-1-1 record. But Harris is still in charge and Jones is still on the bench. Jones has played in three games this year, completing eight of 14 passes for 146 yards and one touchdown.

Ray Enjoying Football Again
Billy Ray didn't exactly enjoy Duke's upset victory over Clemson, but he's felt better about his football life ever since.

Ray threw five interceptions that day, and he also was under the impression that he'd have to have some big numbers.

"I realized even if I made a couple of mistakes, we were still capable of winning a ballgame," he said. In Duke's earlier games, Ray said he felt pressured to pile up big passing numbers.

"Before, I was saying if I didn't have a game where I threw for 300 yards, we're not gonna win," he said.

Ray's two predecessors in Coach Steve Spurrier's pass-oriented offense, Steve Slayden and Anthony Dilweg, had led the Atlantic Coast Conference in passing in each of the past two years. Last year Duke went 7-3-1, its best record in 26 years, and the only notable loss on offense was Dilweg.

If the offense failed to move, Ray would be tagged as the roadblock.

More times that not, Duke's offense has been firing up without a sputter. Through seven games, Ray has passed for a league-leading 1,807 yards and 15 touchdowns, completing 63.7 percent of his passes.

The biggest knock on Ray has been his high interception count (12), but in his last game he completed 20 of 32 passes for 308 yards and three touchdowns without an interception in a 46-25 victory over Maryland.

"The first thing Billy said to me after the game was, 'Coach, no interceptions,'" Spurrier said.

Only the most unrealistic fans expected Ray, who transferred from Alabama with two years of eligibility remaining, to take up right where Dilweg left off. Dilweg threw for an ACC record 3,824 yards last year and was named the conference's player of the year.

"I'm new here," Ray admitted this week. "I'm almost like a red-shirt freshman."

Clark Ready For A War
Middle linebacker Bernard Clark is dragging out all the war metaphors to describe Miami's game with Florida State on Saturday.

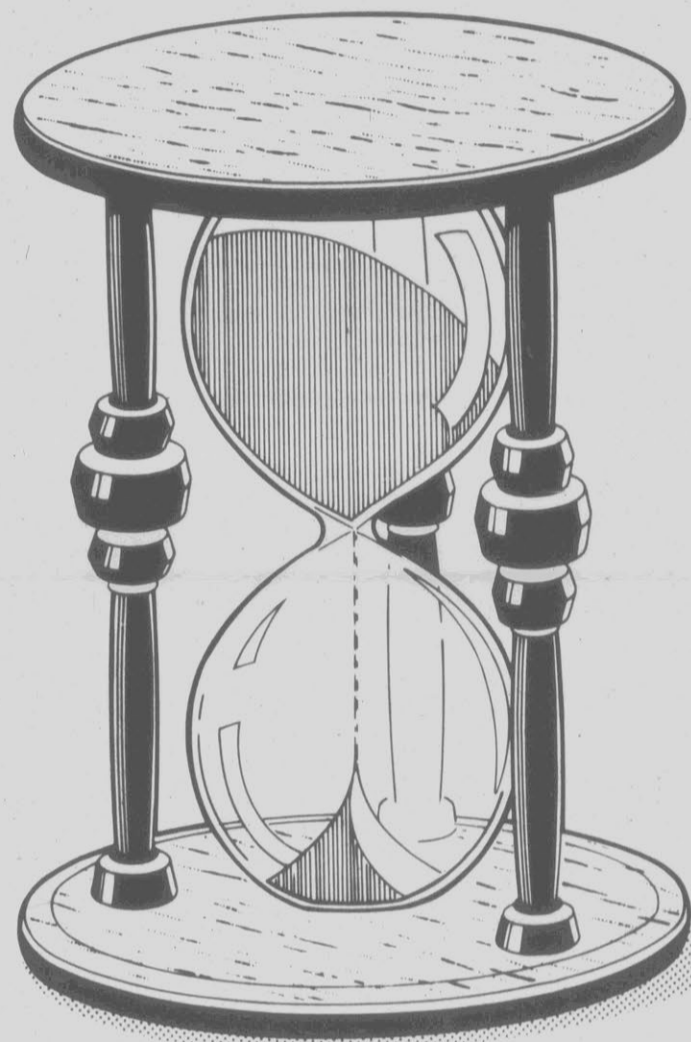

"Everybody's talking about how much of a war it's going to be," the Hurricanes senior said. "I hope Florida State isn't packing hand-guns, because we have M-16s. I hope they bring their artillery."

Clark, whose class is 4-0 against the Seminoles, said his injured leg has been sore and stiff this week. But he hopes to be able to play the whole game.

"I wasn't planning on missing this one. I was going to do whatever it takes to get back."

Colorado Set For Sooners
Forget for the moment that some fans think Colorado is the best team in the country. Bill McCartney would settle this weekend for being the best in Norman, Okla.

Transition ...

But the bottom line is that ECU has won this time around while only falling to 25th-ranked South Carolina and tying Louisiana Tech. The win over Virginia Tech, though, served to temper those feelings.

"It all meant a lot to us," ECU defensive tackle Mike Applewhite said after the win over Virginia Tech. "It's the next step for East Carolina. With the caliber of team we were playing in Virginia Tech, we had to win."

Indeed they did. Because from here on out, the schedule returns to past ECU form — in other words — glutinous.

Over the final five weeks of the season, ECU will face, in addition to a strong Syracuse team, two road games against nationally-ranked Miami and Pittsburgh.

"I feel good and positive about the situation we're in," senior wide receiver Walter Wilson said. "We control our own destiny. If that's the meat of the schedule, then bring it on."

Lewis, though, isn't thinking past this Saturday, and that philosophy has carried over to his players.

"Really, I think the coaches are just trying to take it one game at a time," offensive tackle Grant Lowe said earlier this year. "We want to win every game, but you can only play one team one time a week. You just have to concentrate on that game."

That preparation style shows in this year's improvement. At this time a year ago, ECU was 1-5.

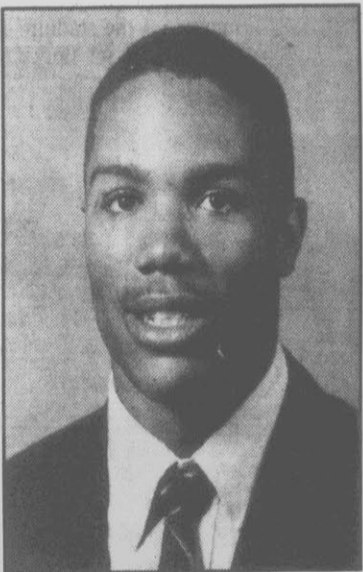

Wilson credits two main catalysts — the new coaching staff and this year's seniors — for the turnaround.

"I think it really is the senior leadership," he said. "The last couple of years, I didn't always feel comfortable about the leaders we had."

"The players feel good about the team now. We're performing a little more consistent."

And that is a credit to the new coaching staff. From day one, Lewis has been all business, and the squad has spent a lot of time on the practice field both last spring and this fall.

So far, this team has not done things to beat itself, especially in late-game situations — a frequent shortcoming of the Baker era.

"I'd give (credit) to coach Lewis and the new coaching staff," Wilson said. "Coach Lewis is a disciplined coach. It's his way or it's no way at all."

"In the past it was a kind of lackadaisical attitude. I've been waiting a long time for East Carolina to play football and win."

ECU has been Lewis' second chance. In his first try as a head coach, he guided Wyoming to a three-year mark of 13-21-1 from 1977-79.

The year after he was let go, former ECU coach Pat Dye came in and went 6-5 in a season that served as a springboard for Dye to go to Auburn.

"I thought when I went out there I was ready to be a head coach, but the results indicate that I didn't do as good a job as I would have liked to," Lewis said. "I think I grew from that experience."

Lewis moved on to Georgia after Wyoming, serving as the secondary coach and then the defensive coordinator.

"I think I grew from the nine years I was at the University of Georgia," he said. "I do feel, and the results are still not in, I was better prepared when I came here last December."

"When you go through an experience like that you're a little more prepared the second time because of anticipation of some situations."

So far, the results are positive. Lewis junked the run-and-shoot for the I-formation and switched the defensive scheme from an eight-man front to a multiple

Illness Forces Postponement Of Tyson Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EDMONTON, Alberta — Mike Tyson's Nov. 18 heavyweight title defense against Razor Ruddock has been postponed indefinitely after doctors found that the champion had come down with a suspected virus.

A painful inflammation of Tyson's rib cage felled the undisputed heavyweight king, who may have picked it up as he conducted roadwork in pre-dawn temperatures that sometimes dipped below freezing.

Promoter Garry Stevenson said during a news conference on Wednesday that he was confident the fight can be held, perhaps in January. For now, Tyson will return to Las Vegas for a few weeks and likely won't be able to resume training for a couple months.

"Breathing hurts, and worse, coughing and laughing," said Dr. Gerhard Sollbach, medical examiner for the Edmonton Boxing and Wrestling Commission, who confirmed the diagnosis of Tyson's personal physician.

"The good thing about it is, it always goes away. But it can be painful."

Mike Tyson

Both Sollbach and Dr. Elias Ghanem, Tyson's physician, said the ailment was probably caused by a virus.

The sickness results in an inflammation of muscles and nerves, in this case in Tyson's right rib cage.

Sollbach said it was similar to pleurisy, an inflammation of the lining around the lung.

"It hurt him to breathe deeply," Sollbach said. "He is disappointed he is ill. You can't train, you don't feel like training. It knocks you out. He wasn't up to it."

He added there is no known cause and there is no way of knowing how Tyson became ill. There is no fever or cough associated with the illness and Tyson has not been admitted to hospital.

Ghanem said the lining of the lung becomes inflamed and any intake of breath causes pain. Tyson now needs rest to heal the area, the doctor said.

"For somebody in his condition to be able to go and spar or fight, we don't want him to get hit on the ribs or anything of that sort. He cannot jog, he cannot run, he cannot spar," Ghanem said. "There's no way we're going to allow him to do that."

Tyson, who had arrived in Edmonton last week to continue training for the fight, had his first sparring session last Thursday.

He looked tired following six rounds against three opponents and while striking a punching bag complained to trainer Aaron Snowell. He had a look of concern on his face as Snowell told him it was the climate change.

"It kept happening to him, he looked lethargic," Snowell said. "He wouldn't complain about the pain, Mike's not a quitter. But he kept trying to push his body. It turned out to be more than getting acclimatized."

Tyson's promoter, Don King, said he called Ghanem in Las Vegas to say Tyson wasn't feeling well. Ghanem flew to Edmonton on Sunday and told the champ he shouldn't be training.

He said Tyson, who didn't attend the news conference, continued to train because he wanted to go on with the fight. Ghanem flew back to Las Vegas but returned later and the fight was postponed.

Stevenson said another date for the fight can't be set until Tyson's recovery is well under way. He said it was also too early to discuss the financial implications of the postponement.

King said he was disappointed the fight had to be put off but "these things do happen in sports and prevention is better than cure."

King tried to douse speculation that the fight will be moved elsewhere. He said he had opportunities before to stage the fight at another site because contractual obligations had not been met.

"I'm here because I want to be here," he said. "I'm not here because I want to find any kind of way ... to try to escape. We ain't lookin' for ways for it not to work. We want to make it work."

Tyson, 23, has a 37-0 record with 33 knockouts. Ruddock, of Canada, is 22-1-1.

Delroy Ruddock, the fighter's brother and manager, wondered just how sick Tyson might be.

"I don't know if it's the truth or if maybe Tyson needs more time to train," he told the Toronto Star. "With Tyson and Don King you never know. They're so unpredictable."

"After putting in all the training we did and spending a lot of money it's really depressing to go this far and get chopped down," Delroy Ruddock said. "But this is boxing. ...

We just have to regroup and maintain what we've done this far."

Ed Bean, the Edmonton businessman who is putting up roughly $3.5 million to stage the fight in the Northlands Coliseum, said the postponement is a real let-down.

"We were sort of getting to the stage where the hype and the enthusiasm about this event was really starting to come on strong," he said.

"I'm disappointed in it because I think the second time around, the bloom is off the rose a little bit. We hope we can reschedule this thing sometime soon."

King said he expects to be back in the city for the bout as long as Tyson recovers well, a new date can be booked at the Northlands and other commitments can be reshuffled for the new year.

"We should let him get well and then we should come right on back into Edmonton and reschedule and put on the Cold War, and possibly it really will be cold when we come back."

Ex-Pat Moore Killed

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Steve Moore, a former starting offensive lineman for the New England Patriots, was shot and killed after apparently being robbed outside a convenience store, police said.

Moore, 29, a tackle for the Patriots from 1983 through 1987, purchased several items at the store Wednesday night and then was shot outside as he returned to his car, Lt. Hank Arnold said.

The store clerk heard what he thought was a car backfiring, Arnold said.

Moore came back into the store and told the clerk he'd been robbed and shot, Arnold said.

"I'm dying," the clerk quoted him as saying.

Moore died at the Regional Medical Center at 10:09 p.m. EDT, an hour after the shooting.

There were no witnesses and police have no suspects, Arnold said.

Moore, a right tackle, was a starter on the Patriots' Super Bowl team that lost to the Chicago Bears 46-10 in Super Bowl XX in 1986.

He was a starter during the 1985 and 1986 seasons, but suffered an ankle injury and missed much of the 1987 season.

Moore was living in Memphis, where he had graduated from Fairley High School. He played at Tennessee State University in Nashville and was a third-round draft choice.

His sister, Monice Regina Hagler, said Moore moved back to Memphis three weeks ago. She said he was in the area of the store visiting his girlfriend, who lives nearby.

Syracuse Still Strong ...

picked off. His back-up, Mark McDonald, has connected on 21 of 28 for 234 yards, so MacPherson can go to his bench with confidence if necessary.

Scharr has three receivers who have grabbed off as many as 20 passes thus far. Wide receiver Rob Moore has 28 catches for 583 yards and four touchdowns, while his opposite at the other end of the line, Rob Carpenter, has 25 catches for 365 yards and two scores. Duane Kinnon, the fullback, is also a competent receiver, with 20 catches for 228 yards and one score.

Moore stands fifth among all-time Syracuse receivers in catches with 81 and is third in yardage with 1,641, just three yards behind former NFL great Art Monk. He also shares the career lead in touchdowns with 17, tied with Tommy Kane.

Just for the season along, Moore is eighth in yardage and 10th in TD receptions. Scharr, incidentally, is tied for eighth in single season passing yards.

But while Syracuse has made great strides with its passing game, it does not overlook the running game. The Orange are led by tailback Michael Owens, who's 110 carries have covered 515 yards. He's scored six touchdowns. Kinnon, meanwhile, has carried 52 times for 195 yards.

Defensively, the Orangemen are led by inside linebacker David Bavaro with 61 tackles. His running mate, Dan Bucey is next with 55 while outside linebacker Terry Wooden had 46 grabs and has been credited with four and a half quarterback sacks.

Safety Rob Thomson has picked off six interceptions on the year, returning one of them for a touchdown.

Syracuse has a strong kicking game, too, led by place-kicker John Biskup. Biskup, however, saw Syracuse's long NCAA record streak of over 260 consecutive points-after-touchdown broken this year. Biskup is 13 of 16 thus far this year, but ended the 10-year-plus streak of the Orangemen in that department.

He's hit on six of nine field goals to lead the team in scoring with 31 points.

"Notre Dame has the Rocket, but Syracuse has the Missile," Lewis says of Syracuse's kick return game. Qadry Ismail, called the Missile, is the brother of Notre Dame specialist Raghib "Rocket" Ismail. Ismail is averaging 24.5 yards per kickoff return.

Overall, the Orangemen field a veteran team, returning a number of players in their front seven on defense and their offensive line.

Citizens Group Says Tax Reforms Are Succeeding

By Jim Luther
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The number of large profitable corporations that manage to avoid paying federal income tax dropped from 50 to 7 since passage of the 1986 tax overhaul, a labor-backed group said today.

"Tax reform is working," Robert S. McIntyre, executive director of Citizens for Tax Justice, said in releasing his group's report. "Not only has reform permitted more efficient and freer decision-making, but corporate profits have risen at a much faster rate in the years after tax reform than in the years before."

The average tax rate paid by the nation's 250 biggest moneymaking companies climbed last year to 26.5 percent, compared with 14.3 percent during 1981-1985, the group reported. Forty-five corporations — a drop of more than half — paid less than 10 percent of their income in taxes.

Citizens for Tax Justice is a labor-financed research organization whose annual reports about big corporations that pay little or no tax were credited with spurring passage of the new tax law. The reports are based on the organization's interpretation of companies' public documents.

The 1986 law provided across-the-board tax-rate reductions for individuals and corporations while cutting or repealing several deductions and exclusions.

The major changes affecting corporations included repeal of the investment tax credit; tightening of the "minimum tax," designed to ensure that profitable companies pay some tax even if they have large deductions and credits, and scaling back the completed-contract method of accounting, a big tax-deferral benefit for defense contractors and large builders.

Even under the new law, many companies may still defer large amounts of tax liability into the future by buying machinery and equipment. Also, the study found, the "minimum tax" has loopholes that make it less than totally effective.

The new law is shifting more of the total tax burden onto corporations, the study said.

"Corporate taxes, which paid for almost one-quarter of the cost of federal programs (excluding Social Security) in the 1960s and more than 17 percent in the 1970s, fell to less than 8 percent in the first half of the 1980s," the report stated. "But in 1988, corporate tax payments covered almost 12 percent of the non-Social Security federal budget."

The report said six large companies paid no tax in 1988 and actually received refunds of past-year taxes, resulting in negative tax rates.

They were: Kroger, $29 million profit and a negative tax rate of 28.3 percent; Pinnacle West, $75 million profit, minus 28.1 percent; CSX, $402 million profit, minus 14.7 percent; Illinois Power, $227 million profit, minus 11.3 percent; Media General, $75 million profit, minus 5.7 percent, and Santa Fe Southern Pacific, $180 million profit and a negative tax rate of 1.2 percent.

Gulf States Utilities was reported as having a profit of $164 million and neither paying a 1988 tax nor receiving any refund.

Because the report is based on Citizens for Tax Justice specialists' interpretations of company data, the conclusions often are challenged by some corporations.

Three Bodies Found

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Texas — Crews clearing tons of wreckage left by a huge plastics plant explosion found three bodies, bringing the number of confirmed dead to five, and continued to search today for 17 people believed killed.

Investigators have not determined the cause of the series of explosions Monday at the Phillips Petroleum Co. plant, which produced 4.5 million pounds of plastic a day.

Even experts were surprised at the extent of the destruction, apparently touched off somehow in leaking ethylene and isobutane gas.

"It's total devastation," said Assistant U.S. Labor Secretary John Scannell, who heads the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"In 30 years of experience in the chemical industry, I've never seen such massive equipment twisted and strung about," said Scannell, who toured the plant on the Houston Ship Channel on Wednesday.

Fifteen OSHA investigators joined Phillips workers cleaning up the plant and searching for the cause of the explosion.

The clean-up continued around the clock, with big floodlights illuminating the scene at night as workers used hydraulic shears, cranes and other heavy equipment to cut through a tangle of metal beams and pipes.

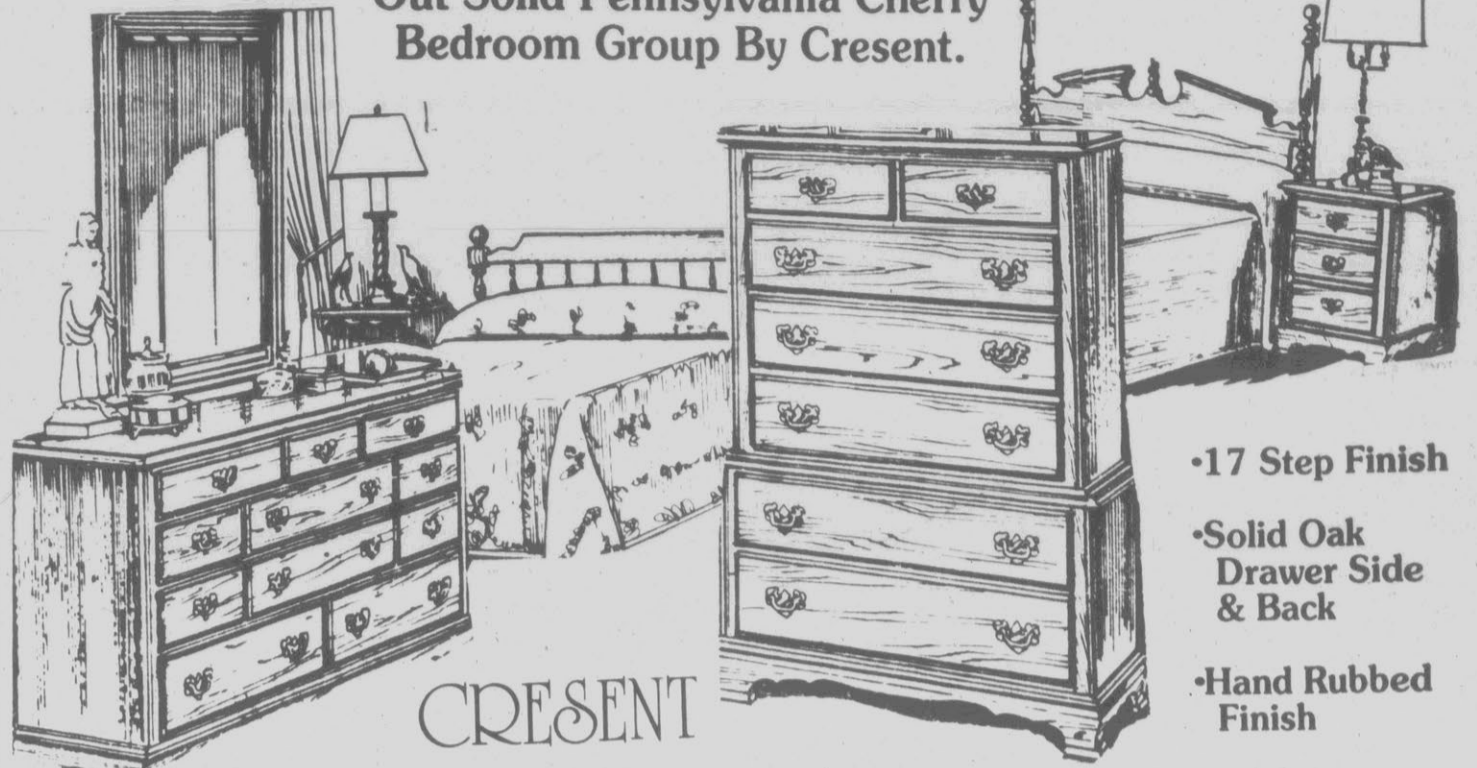

Of the three bodies found Wednesday, two were near a storage area for polyethylene pellets manufactured at the plant, said company spokesman Bill Wicker. The third was in a maintenance area. Two others were found Monday and Tuesday.

An official of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union said plant employees had complained that staff shortages, long hours and an abundance of workers from outside contractors could have caused lapses in safety procedures.

Senator Slugged By Man

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A "yuppie-type" man faces arraignment on a charge of slugging Sen. John Glenn one day after authorities say he broke through a police line and approached Vice President Dan Quayle's motorcade.

Glenn, a former Marine officer, rubbed his jaw and said "I haven't been hit like that in 30 years," said Gary Nurenberg, a television reporter who was talking to the senator Wednesday when a well-dressed stranger approached from the side and landed a solid right.

The man, identified by Capitol Police as Michael Breen, 31, of Washington, was muttering about earthquakes and the Pope, Nurenberg said.

Glenn's jaw was red and sore but he did not see a doctor and kept to his schedule, aides said.

A spokeswoman for U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens said Breen was expected to be arraigned this afternoon in U.S. District Court on a felony charge of assaulting a member of Congress. The charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Breen was arrested Wednesday outside the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum, where Glenn was attending a ceremony, said District of Columbia Police Officer Quintin Peterson.

U.S. Capitol Police and the Secret

The Associated Press

TV image shows Glenn's head rocking as assailant's fist strikes his jaw

Service identified Breen as the man detained for about two hours Tuesday after he broke through a police line outside the Capitol and tried to approach Quayle's motorcade.

"He was just trying to pass a letter," U.S. Capitol Police Officer Dan Nichols said. Breen was stopped before he got to the cars and was not arrested, Nichols and Secret Service spokeswoman Jane Vezeris said.

Glenn was knocked a bit off balance by the sideways, closed-fist slug but quickly immobilized his assailant by grabbing his arms, witnesses said.

"This guy starts muttering 'The earthquakes are starting, the earthquakes are starting,' comes up and socks Glenn on the jaw," said Rebecca Bell, Glenn's press secretary.

"The senator, with both hands on the man's arms, pushed him toward the security guard," said Nurenberg, a correspondent with Gillet News Bureau. "The senator at 68 had better reflexes than anybody else there."

Before District of Columbia police took Breen into custody, Nurenberg said Breen said he believed the California earthquake was a harbinger of imminent catastrophe in which two-thirds of the world's population would be wiped out.

"He talked about the children of Fatima. He said the Pope is withholding information," the correspondent said.

Nurenberg described the man as well-dressed, wearing a coat, tie and suspenders. "He looked to be a professional, yuppie type," he said.

The assailant told Nurenberg he slugged Glenn "to get attention," the correspondent said.

House Abortion Vote Falls Short

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Abortion rights advocates in Congress say they're not giving up their bid to allow Medicaid abortions for rape and incest victims, despite falling far short of overriding President Bush's veto.

The House sustained Bush's veto Wednesday in a 231-191 vote, 51 fewer than the two-thirds majority needed to overturn a veto.

Rep. Chris Smith R-N.J., called the vote "a decisive victory for the pro-life movement" and evidence the political ground has not shifted on the abortion issue, as abortion rights advocates say.

But Democrats and Republicans who back the more liberal restrictions argued that public sentiment is on their side and that the vote will yield far-reaching political damage for Bush among younger voters.

"I am amazed," said Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., "to see the Republican White House hand over to the Democratic Party a political generation that's out there and awakening to this issue."

"President Bush may well have stumbled on the one issue that could cost him re-election," said a Republican, Rep. Bill Green of New York.

The vote followed Bush's veto on Saturday of the provision, which is but a paragraph in a $156.7 billion appropriations bill for health, education and labor programs for the 1990 fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The provision would loosen an eight-year ban on federal financing of abortions for poor women except in cases where the woman's life is endangered by her pregnancy. It would have permitted Medicaid abortions for poor women who are victims of rape or incest and who "reported promptly" to authorities.

Although it was designed to cover a relatively narrow group of women, the issue took on symbolic importance in the growing political struggle over abortion. Its approval by the House two weeks ago on a 216-206 vote marked the first time that body had voted the more liberal abortion language, although the Senate has repeatedly backed it.

With the agencies continuing to operate under a stopgap spending measure, the spending bill and vetoed abortion language were sent back to the House Appropriations Committee for revision.

Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., and other abortion rights leaders vowed to offer similar language on other bills and repeatedly put Bush and anti-abortion House members on the spot.

"We will keep on coming back," Boxer said.

House Democratic Whip Bill Gray, D-Pa., said he did not think Democrats would attempt to add similar abortion language to the same appropriations bill. Boxer and her allies, however, held out that possibility.

Bush, meanwhile, has threatened to veto an appropriations bill for the District of Columbia because it would allow Washington D.C. to spend local tax money on Medicaid abortions for victims of rape and incest.

Smith and other abortion opponents said Wednesday's vote demonstrated they can overcome future efforts to weaken the prohibition on most Medicaid abortions.

"They made the mistake of thinking this was a one-round fight," said Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn. "Some members who were panicked by pro-abortion propaganda in the last few weeks are going to be surprised. ... We're now beginning to see some victories on our side of the issue."

42 Injured In Prison Riot

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMP HILL, Pa. — Hundreds of inmates ended a fiery seven-hour uprising after the warden agreed to meet with a small group about their complaints. Forty-two people were hurt during the siege and the prison was heavily damaged.

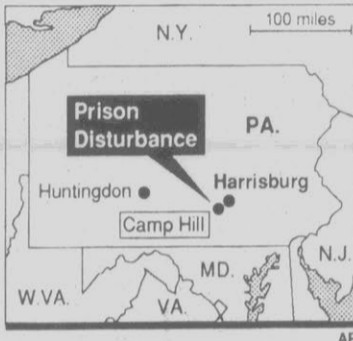

Eight guards were held hostage Wednesday in the state's second prison rampage in two days.

Robert M. Freeman, superintendent of the medium-security State Correctional Institution at Camp Hill, said 1,200 of the prison's 2,600 inmates joined the riot at various stages.

He planned to talk with five inmates today.

A new rule barring inmates' families from bringing in homemade food may have sparked the outbreak, said Freeman, who explained that the rule was established to prevent contraband from slipping into the prison.

About 300 police officers and firefighters were sent to the 32-acre complex after the riot began Wednesday afternoon when an inmate beat a prison staffer.

Smoke permeated the air as police struggled to secure the prison so firefighters could extinguish four blazes.

Inmates demanded a press conference, changes in medical and family visitation rules, and amnesty.

John Palakovich, assistant to the superintendent, said the uprising spread quickly to six cellblocks. Fires were started at the prison furniture factory, a commissary, another food service area and a gatehouse, he said.

No damage estimate was immediately available.

Thirty-five guards or staffers, five inmates, one firefighter, and one state trooper were injured, Palakovich said.

At least nine were hospitalized. None were listed as critical, although one guard was in intensive care.

Using homemade weapons, inmates took the hostages but released them within six hours.

The prison in Camp Hill, 3 miles west of Harrisburg, is about 45 percent above capacity. Freeman said overcrowding was not mentioned by inmates, but he added it might have been a factor in the riot.

On Monday night, a three-hour rampage at the Huntingdon state prison injured 29 staff members and 19 prisoners. Inmates took over a cellblock and broke windows and furniture and set small fires, authorities said. Huntingdon is about 100 miles west of Camp Hill.

Freeman doubted a link existed between the two prison upheavals.

"But, sometimes you have a domino effect," he said.

Farm Price Growth May Slow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Farmland prices are expected to increase in 1990 but at a much slower pace than this year, according to a survey reported by the Agriculture Department.

Based on a survey of farmland appraisers made in early August, prices are likely to rise an average 3.5 percent by August 1990. That would be about half the 6.5 percent increase reported for 1988-89.

Farmland prices plummeted in the early 1980s, and by 1986 had reached a 19-year low average nationally of $548 per acre before turning back up. The peak was $823 per acre in 1982.

One reason suggested by appraisers for the slowdown in the price increase is a drop in corn and soybean prices from the drought-prices of last year. But higher wheat prices probably are helping support some values, particularly in the Great Plains.

A group of about 500 appraisers is checked quarterly by a University of Wisconsin survey laboratory for the department's Economic Research Service, said analyst Roger Hexem, author of the report.

Hexem said in a telephone interview that the year-ahead estimate by appraisers was "somewhat lower than we have been forecasting" within the agency. The information is being reviewed and will be considered when USDA issues its next farmland forecast late in November.

Study Says Schools Show Modest Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — States have made only modest gains toward school reform this decade, and few are heeding calls to shift more power and responsibility to local schools, a report says.

The report, "The Progress of Reform: An Appraisal of State Education Initiatives," found that only a few states such as Washington, Arkansas, Maine and Massachusetts have programs to encourage local districts to find creative ways of improving classroom instruction.

The study, released Wednesday, concluded that state efforts since 1983, when the federal report "A Nation at Risk" heralded the school reform movement, generally have lacked coherence.

It suggested that future items on the reform agenda such as more equitable distribution of school funds to poorer districts and giving teachers and parents more authority in school governance will be dauntingly difficult.

"If we're going to get those kinds of things, people are going to have to be willing to stay at it for a long time," said William A. Firestone, associate professor of education at Rutgers University and co-author of the report.

The study was produced by the Center for Policy Research in Education, a consortium of the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers, Michigan State University school of education, the Stanford University school of education, and the University of Wisconsin-Madison Center for Education Research.

"High school curricula are more academically oriented, standards for entering the teaching profession are more selective, teachers' salaries are higher and state and local governments have boosted educational funding," the report said.

But "there are still doubts about the rigor and challenge of some of the new courses in academic subjects, the impact of reform on at-risk students, the quality of teachers and teaching and the equitable funding of schools."

Educators have said lately that the current reform movement passed through a "first wave" from 1982-86 during which states tightened teacher certification standards, boosted graduation requirements, and required students to pass more tests and demonstrate competency.

Since then, reformers have spoken of a "second wave" of educational improvements, often called "restructuring," during which schools themselves are being given more freedom to innovate and teachers and parents are being made more equal partners with administrators in school governance.

President Bush endorsed many of those "second wave" ideas at last month's "education summit" with the nation's governors.

But this latest study suggests that those principles remains wishful thinking in most states.

While a few pioneering districts such as Rochester, N.Y., Cincinnati, and Dade County, Fla., have local restructuring strategies, "states are still enacting policies more characteristic of the first wave of reform," according to the report.

"States are exhibiting no clear shift in direction from the first wave of reform to the second," the report said.

Its other authors were Susan H. Furrman, professor of policy at Eagleton, and Michael W. Kirst, an education professor at Stanford.

Virginia To Get Private Toll Road

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEESBURG, Va. — Transportation officials at home and abroad are watching plans for a 15-mile stretch of road in congested northern Virginia that the builder says will be the first private U.S. toll road in 30 years.

"I love a traffic jam," said Ralph L. Stanley, former chief of the federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration and president of the Toll Road Corp. of Virginia. "They're all customers to me."

The $155 million road would extend the existing Dulles Toll Road, adding a third east-west route from the Leesburg area to the nation's capital, Stanley said.

"This idea needs a tire-kicking example," said Stanley. "Virginia to me is a case study of what is happening in a lot of other states. It's happening all over the world. It's just a matter of time."

As proposed, the toll would be 8 to 10 cents a mile or about $1.50 for commuters who travel the entire route. It would be eliminated once they had paid for the road, he said. "That's the advantage to it," he said. "The toll would be temporary."

The State Corporation Commission must approve the plan. Stanley said he hoped to hear by Nov. 30.

Stanley said the road could be finished by the end of 1991, 15 months sooner than the state has said it could complete the route. That's because as a private company, Toll Road Corp. would not have to hold bond referendums or open work to competitive bidding.

Another advantage to construction handled by a private company as opposed to the state is ease in acquiring land, Stanley said. Most of the land needed is being donated by property owners who see the need for such a road, he said.

Supporters say allowing a private company to build the road also would mean the state could spend its money on other needed projects.

"People don't care who builds it," Stanley said. "The Virginia Department of Transportation doesn't build roads. They hire the same guys we're hiring to build roads."

State transportation officials acknowledged that the company could build the road faster and at a lower initial cost, but said the road would cost more in the long run because the company must pay higher interest rates than the state.

Ray Pethel, the department's commissioner, said overwhelming public support for the private road outweighed such concerns.

The Virginia General Assembly passed legislation in 1988 allowing private companies to finance and build roads.

Great Britain and Mexico have passed similar laws, as has California, which is now faced with rebuilding roads damaged from last week's earthquake. A bill also has passed in the Illinois Senate. Louisiana and Florida also are considering such bills, Stanley said.

"We just don't have the transportation dollars to meet the transportation needs in the state," said Tracey Weatherby, spokeswoman for the California Department of Transportation.

Transportation planners aren't the only ones keeping an eye on the proposal.

"We needed it yesterday," said Brian Carroll, who commutes 42 miles from Leesburg to Washington every day.

Even though Carroll is in a van pool, it takes him 90 minutes during rush hour.

Report Finds Insignificant Changes In Ocean Heat Over 6-Year Period

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Researchers looking for confirmation of the greenhouse effect said today the world's oceans and seas did not show significant warming from 1982 to mid-1988.

The new findings, based on data gathered from ships and buoys, are at odds with an analysis of satellite data published in April.

A major reason for the difference was that airborne particles from a Mexican volcano skewed satellite readings during 1982 and 1983, making water temperatures appear cooler than they really were, researchers said.

Scientists are interested in ocean temperatures because they may reflect the greenhouse effect, a predicted global warming due to buildup of carbon dioxide and other gases in the atmosphere.

The 1982-88 period itself, however, is too brief to draw any conclusions about the greenhouse effect, researchers said.

The new study, by Richard

Reynolds, research oceanographer at the federal Climate Analysis Center in Washington, D.C., and two British scientists appears in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

They took issue with a study by A.E. Strong, a research oceanographer with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and a visiting scientist at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

In April, Strong reported that satellite observations show the world's oceans and seas were warming at the surface by about one-fifth of a degree Fahrenheit a year between January 1982 and mid-1988.

The new work considered some satellite data as well as readings from ships and buoys. Reynolds, in a telephone interview, said the volcanic particles were the main problem with the original study.

He also said calculating a temperature trend over the analyzed period is difficult because the period is brief, and because it included two unusual warmings of the eastern equatorial Pacific Ocean, events called El Ninos.

Zsa Zsa Ridicules Judge At Her Trial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A day after being sentenced to 72 hours in jail, Zsa Zsa Gabor ridiculed the judge as needing "a blood transfusion" and derided the prosecutor as enjoying the trial's circuslike atmosphere more than she did.

During an appearance Wednesday night on Fox TV's "A Current Affair," the actress was asked if she were at all repentant for slapping Beverly Hills Police Officer Paul Kramer on June 14.

"For what?" she replied. "That I was beaten half to death by a 6-foot-4, macho policeman because my driver's license had expired? I was defending myself. I think all of Beverly Hills owes me an apology. I tried to fight for the battered woman."

A jury convicted Miss Gabor on Sept. 29 of misdemeanor charges of battery on a police officer, driving without a valid driver's license and having an open container of alcohol in her car.

The former Hungarian beauty queen, believed to be at least in her mid-60s, was acquitted of failing to obey an officer.

On Tuesday, Municipal Court Judge Charles Rubin ordered her to serve the jail time by Dec. 29, but gave her the option of reporting to any jail in Los Angeles County.

During her confinement, the star of such B-movies as "Picture Mommy Dead" and "Queen of Outer Space" will have to trade in her designer gowns for a jail-issued cotton shift or pantsuit and will forsake her luxurious home for an 8-by-10-foot concrete cell with a bed, sink and toilet.

Although authorities promised no special privileges, Miss Gabor's celebrity will allow her to be segregated from other prisoners.

"Anytime we have an inmate who is recognizable, we separate them from the general population for their own safety," said sheriff's Lt. Joe Sargent, head of operations for Sybil Brand Institute, the county's main jail for women. "People with that kind of notoriety can be preyed upon. I imagine there are some people who don't like Zsa Zsa Gabor."

The judge also ordered Miss Gabor to pay $12,937.50 in fines and restitution and perform 120 hours of community service in a women's homeless shelter.

She also was ordered to be interviewed by a psychiatrist and refrain from driving until she gets her real age on her driver's license. Court documents said she was 66. During the trial, Miss Gabor claimed the license was stolen and altered by someone else.

"Maybe I should have my head examined," she said on "A Current Affair." "He's right. If I tried to fight City Hall and the Beverly Hills police, a woman should have her head examined."

Brothers Battle Over Dying Mom

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. — A man who had traveled more than 2,000 miles to help comfort his dying mother was shot to death by his brother after they argued about how to care for her, police said.

The battle began when Charles Barber and his wife arrived from Las Vegas two weeks ago, police said. It ended Wednesday when Larry Barber gunned his brother down in their mother's laundry room, according to authorities.

"It was just a constant argument," Police Sgt. Sam Leffingwell said. "Charles was caring for the mother and had to get up every four hours to tend to her."

Police said Larry Barber had a drinking problem and did little to help.

The shooting occurred about 5:30 a.m. after Charles Barber told his brother he was tired of arguing and would return to Nevada, police said.

Charles was in the laundry room preparing to pack his bags when his brother entered with a shotgun and fired, Leffingwell said.

Larry Barber, 53, called police to report the shooting and surrendered when officers arrived. His 51-year-old brother was dead at the scene.

Their mother, Maude P. Barber, suffers with cancer and lapses in and out of comas. She was unaware of the shooting, Leffingwell said.

Barber pleaded innocent to first-degree murder, and was ordered held without bond. He asked for a court-appointed attorney.

Wednesday's argument began about 2:30 a.m. The brothers stopped for a short period but resumed the argument, which escalated to the shooting, Leffingwell said.

"Charles said he and his wife were going to leave and get out of this mess. Larry went upstairs, got a 12-gauge shotgun and shot Charles in the front lower part of the chest," said Leffingwell.

Leffingwell said officers interviewed Charles Barber's wife and 11-year-old son, who witnessed the shooting.

Bush Signs Huge Relief Package For California

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush today signed a $3.45 billion earthquake relief plan for California — Congress' largest disaster aid bill — after it was rushed through the House and Senate.

Bush signed the legislation soon after awaking this morning, said deputy White House press secretary Stephen Hart.

Besides providing earthquake recovery aid, the measure averted a federal government shutdown today and keeps the government operating through Nov. 15 while Congress and the White House complete some late spending bills.

"This bill is an unprecedented federal response to a disaster of unprecedented dimension," Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., said Wednesday.

But the Californians predicted they'd be back for more. "We have done a little better than a down payment," said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif. He predicted a request for more aid in the spring, but said the current bill would help provide "some sustenance, some security, and some comfort in their hour of need."

The bill was given final congressional approval Wednesday night when the House accepted, by a 303-107 vote, a Senate amendment that added to a $2.85 billion relief plan the House passed Tuesday.

The Senate beefed up the package, which it passed 97-1, by waiving federal rules that would have slowed the flow of money to the state and blocked federal aid in some cases, including repair of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

In addition to the $2.85 billion in federal spending passed by the House, the Senate voted to allow earthquake victims, as well as those rebuilding from Hurricane Hugo, to take more out of a Small Business Administration disaster fund. That could bring an extra $600 million more to California, sponsors said.

The legislation dwarfed the previous largest disaster bill, a $1.1 billion package passed only a few weeks ago in response to Hugo.

Many expect the San Francisco-area quake to rank as the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history, with estimates running above $7 billion.

The emergency legislation includes $1.1 billion for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, $1 billion for highway repair and a $250 million fund for the president to spend on earthquake efforts at his discretion.

The legislation adds $500 million to the existing SBA disaster fund and includes a provision designed to let the agency make available up to $1.8 billion from that fund this year, with an estimated $1.1 billion of that going to California earthquake victims seeking to rebuild their homes or businesses.

California lawmakers said they would try to persuade Bush to lift a $100,000 cap on what the SBA can loan to any individual homeowner.

Anti-Soviet Afghan Group Creates 'Third Force' To Work For Peace

By John Pomfret
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — Former top officials and military officers known for their refusal to work with the Soviet-backed government have formed what they call "a third force" to promote peace in Afghanistan.

The 15 men, many of whom were educated in the West, seek to bridge the gap between the Moscow-style government and the U.S.-backed mujahedeen guerrillas who have been at war for a decade.

Calling themselves the National Salvation Society, they issued a manifesto this month calling for an end to both Soviet and American interference in Afghanistan.

The society's members, most of whom served former King Zahir Shah, say they want to unite Afghanistan and start repairing the damage.

According to their estimates, which are slightly higher than information available to the United Nations, 2 million Afghans have been killed and 7 million have fled the country since the 1978 Marxist revolution. Of the 15 million Afghans inside and outside the country, 95 percent are illiterate and 70 percent of the arable land has been abandoned, they say.

"We are the group who stayed in Afghanistan during the last 10 years," said Mohammad Asghar, the society's chairman and a former justice minister. "The destruction has got to such a point that we felt we would be committing a grave sin if we didn't work for peace."

Other members of the group include former agriculture and finance ministers, a former national police chief and an ex-governor of the central bank.

Foreign diplomats say the group has great popular support. Speaking on condition of anonymity, diplomats and an Afghan observer said the group could develop into a potent political force if it can stay independent of both the government and the mujahedeen, whose name means Islamic holy warriors.

"But their risks are tremendous," one diplomat added. "History has never been kind to moderates."

The society's manifesto was carried by the government-run press and radio station on Oct. 7, but the group insists it is independent of government control.

"We are a third force," said Asghar, who studied philosophy and education at Columbia University in New York. "Alien powers have changed our free country into an exercise board of their politics as well as a theater of international confrontation. Giving fatal arms and boundless financial support to the warring sides, they add, at every moment, fuel to the flames of war."

The group's manifesto was significant in that it did not distinguish between the United States and the Soviet Union. It also pointedly criticized the Kabul government's centralized economic policies and urged the establishment of a free market economy.

Abdul Qudoos Majid, the society's secretary and former deputy minister of mines and industries, said it took 16 days to get the government to agree to publish the manifesto.

"Where else could we have gone to get our message across?" asked Majid, a graduate of the Colorado School of Mines. "We also went to them because we wanted to test the government's sincerity."

Moscow Beefs Up Defense System

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — U.S. intelligence sources say the Soviet Union is deploying two new types of advanced nuclear-tipped missiles around Moscow as part of a vastly upgraded defense of the capital.

A sophisticated new radar system is also being deployed, the sources said Wednesday night.

When completed, the three-part upgrading program, legal under the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with the United States, would defend Moscow with 100 new launchers, most of them underground.

The complex network would also protect the Soviet high command, sources told The Associated Press. The Soviets already have a labyrinthian system designed to speed Soviet leaders to safety in the event of a nuclear war.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Soviets had been working on an improved missile defense since 1980, but only last spring were found to have begun making the system operational.

New long-range missile interceptors, designed to take the place of an earlier, less sophisticated version of the weapon known in western military circles as "Galosh," have the mission of stopping incoming ballistic missiles above the atmosphere.

A shorter-range, extremely fast missile known as "Gazelle" is being deployed as a complementary defensive missile designed to catch missile warheads in the atmosphere that might have gotten by the "Galosh."

Gazelle is supposed to be able to discriminate between decoys and the real thing.

The new radar at Pushkino, about 25 miles northeast of Moscow, was described as "considerably advanced" and able to track targets anywhere in its 360-degree field of vision.

First word of the new Soviet deployments came in a report on the Cable News Network.

The 1972 treaty limits U.S. and Soviet defenses on the basis of the then-dominant theory that a potential attacker might be deterred from striking if massive retaliation was the likely response. A defense against retaliation might lead the possessor of such a defense to the conclusion that he could strike in safety, according to that theory.

However, the treaty was amended to permit the two countries to protect their capitals and one other target, and then was amended again to permit the defense of one place in each country.

The Soviets chose to shield Moscow while the United States installed a "Safeguard" system to protect Minuteman missiles near Grand Forks, N.D. The North Dakota system was dismantled shortly after it was finished in 1975 and none has been built since.

Kemper Rejects Program Traders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Money management firms applauded a decision by Kemper Financial Services Inc. to stop doing business with four Wall Street brokerages involved in controversial computerized program trading.

Kemper, which manages $57 billion in assets, on Wednesday sharply criticized the trading strategy, saying it had scared away individual investors by increasing stock market volatility.

"I think those guys are terrific," said New York money manager James Cramer of Cramer & Co.

"We didn't have this horrible kind of volatility when these firms were refraining from it," said Cramer, whose company manages $20 million in assets. "Now that they're back we have the volatility."

Kemper cited what it called the "disruptive and destabilizing influence" of the trading strategy, which some blame for worsening the 1987 crash and the 190-point plunge in the Dow Jones Industrial average on Oct. 13.

Kemper, a Chicago-based money manager that has about $7.5 billion in its stock portfolio, said it had ended equity dealings with four firms that conduct program trading for their own accounts. It didn't identify the firms.

The practice of trading millions of shares of stock in seconds via computerized buy and sell programs — which are used mainly by huge institutional investors — has been accused of widening stock market price swings. That volatility is seen as frightening individual investors out of the market.

After the 1987 crash, most big brokerages curtailed program trading for their own accounts, but use of the strategy has increased recently.

The New York Stock Exchange said program trading accounted for 13.8 percent of its average daily volume in September, up from 10.3 percent in August and the highest percentage since the exchange began the calculation in July 1988.

Several money managers criticized the practice of "index arbitrage," a form of program trading that employs computers to rapidly buy and sell huge blocks of stocks in New York and stock-index futures in Chicago in an attempt to profit from minute differences in prices on the two markets.

"We hope that this practice stops and prefer to conduct our business with brokerage firms who do not engage in this trading strategy," said Stephen Timbers, Kemper's chief investment officer.

David Dreman, a managing director of Dreman Value Management, which has $4 billion in assets, said a boycott of brokerages that conduct index arbitrage would be "very effective." He said his company would consider ending its orders with such firms if clients agreed to it.

Defenders said program trading has been made a scapegoat for normal market fluctuations.

"It's a shoot-the-messenger issue," said R. Steven Wunsch, vice president for financial futures at Kidder, Peabody. "Arbitraders do bring selling pressure from one market to another market. But the selling pressure came first. They didn't cause it."

Reagan Asks Japan To Assist Poland

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TOKYO — Former President Ronald Reagan called on Japan Wednesday to use its economic strength to help Poland "make the transition from communism to free enterprise."

Reagan, speaking at a banquet hosted by a Japanese communications conglomerate that is paying him $2 million for a nine-day series of appearances, observed that Japan is entering a "golden age" with an economy that has "the power of a harnessed volcano."

In its new status as the world's largest donor of foreign aid, Japan should not overlook Poland, a "nation fighting to go democratic," Reagan said.

"This is your golden age. Join us in a golden partnership for democracy in Poland and around the world."

WHEREAS, the City Council intends to close Smith Street and a portion of Watauga Avenue, in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 160A-299;
NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL, that it is the intent of the City Council to close all of Smith Street and a one hundred foot portion of Watauga Avenue, more particularly described as follows:

To Wit: Smith Street and a portion of Watauga Avenue as shown on a map entitled, "Street Closing For Smith Street and a Portion of Watauga Avenue", dated April 16, 1989 and prepared by the City of Greenville, Engineering Division.

Location: Lying and being inside the City of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, and bounded as follows: on the north by the Norfolk-Southern Railway and Watauga Avenue; on the east by the Norfolk-Southern Railway; on the south by the City of Greenville Public Works Garage property, and on the west by Skinner Street.

Beginning at the point where the eastern right of way of Skinner Street intersects the centerline of the Norfolk-Southern Railway and running with the aforesaid centerline, N 84° 00' E, 347.34 feet to the point where the western right of way of Watauga Avenue intersects the centerline of the railroad; thence running with the said western right of way, N 34° 04' 17" W, 56.67 feet to the northern right of way of the aforesaid Railway; thence continuing along the northern right of way of the Norfolk-Southern Railway and crossing Watauga Avenue, N 84° 00' E, 56.67 feet to a point on the eastern right of way of Watauga Avenue; thence running with the said eastern right of way, S 34° 04' 17" E, 56.67 feet to the centerline of the aforesaid Railway; thence running with the said centerline, N 06° 00' E, 24.09 feet to a point; thence leaving the said centerline, S 06° 00' E, 50.00 feet to a point on the southern right of way of the said Railway; thence westerly along the said southern right of way, S 84° 00' W, 427.68 feet to the eastern right of way of Skinner Street; thence along the said eastern right of way, N 06° 28' 20" W, 50.00 feet to the point of beginning and containing 24,230+- square feet.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a public hearing will be held in the Council Chamber, Municipal Building, Greenville, North Carolina, on the 9th day of November, 1989 at 7:30 p.m., to consider the advisability of closing the aforesaid streets. At such public hearing, all objections and suggestions will be duly considered.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be published once a week for four (4) consecutive weeks in The Daily Reflector, that a copy of this resolution be sent by certified mail to the owners of property adjacent to the above described streets, as shown on the County tax records, and that a copy of this resolution be posted in at least two (2) places along Smith Street and the portion of Watauga Avenue to be closed.

Duly adopted this 5th day of October, 1989.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Bethel will hold a public hearing in the Town Office on Tuesday, November 14, 1989, at 7:00 p.m., for the purpose of seeking public comment on the question of rezoning from a R-4 residential zone to a R-75 those certain lots or parcels of land bounded on the south by Lewis Street, bounded on the west by Smith Street and bounded on the north by the Barnhill properties, which lots or parcels of land are more particularly described as Lots No. 1 through 35 as shown on Bethel Tax Map 314 and Lots No. 36 through 54 as shown on Bethel Tax Map 314A.

During this public hearing, suggestions or objections will be received by the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Bethel. All interested citizens are urged to attend the meeting. A copy of the aforesaid maps, applicable zoning ordinances, and zoning map are on file with the Town Clerk at the Town Office in Bethel, North Carolina, and all citizens of Bethel are invited to review said ordinances and maps.

This is the 19th day of October, 1989.

READVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
Pursuant to General Statutes of North Carolina, Section 143-129, as amended, sealed proposals will be received by the City of Greenville, North Carolina, in the Public Works Department Progress Room, 1500 Beatty Street, Greenville, North Carolina, until 2:00 P.M. on November 3, 1989, and immediately thereafter opened and read for the 1989/90 Street and Downtown Parking Lot Resurfacing Project. The Street Resurfacing will consist of placing approximately 3,375 tons of bituminous concrete, Type I-2, and making necessary adjustments to valves. The Downtown Parking Lots will consist of placing approximately 250 tons of bituminous concrete, Type I-2, and associated work related to parking lot construction. The Street Improvements will consist of placing approximately 1,065 tons of bituminous concrete, Type I-2, and fine grading approximately 9,200 square yards of crushed aggregate base.

Proposals must be enclosed in a sealed envelope addressed to the Purchasing Agent, City of Greenville, Post Office Box 7207, Greenville, North Carolina 27835-7207, and the outside of the envelope must be marked "Proposal for 1989/90 Street and Downtown Parking Lot Resurfacing Project". The name, address, and North Carolina license number of the Bidder, and the date and time of Bid opening shall be clearly indicated on the outside of the envelope. One (1) unbound copy of the Proposal form is furnished in the Specifications which must be executed and submitted.

Public Notices
The City of Greenville reserves the right to reject any or all Bids, to waive any informalities, and to award Contract or Contracts which appear to be in its best interest. The right is reserved to hold any or all Proposals for a period of forty-five (45) days from the opening thereof.

Drill Instructor Says Career Is No Obstacle To Femininity

By Hugh A. Mulligan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. — Charging through the boondocks with a 50-pound pack on her back, rappelling from a 45-foot tower, or crawling under barbed wire to the chatter of machine guns may seem a long way from Bergdorf's, but Marine drill instructor Ann Marie Wells doesn't think her chosen career is bizarre.

"Shoot, when women first voted that was considered bizarre," she says in a demure Philadelphia accent reminiscent, like her up-swept strawberry blond hairdo, of a young Katharine Hepburn. "Mine just happens to be a career a lot of women don't pick. Or males either, for that matter."

Staff Sgt. Wells turned up her voice level and barked an order at a recruit daydreaming in the shade of a scrawny tree to the blam-blam lullaby of the adjacent hand grenade course. "Grab your war bonnet, Pyle, and double-time back to your squad."

"Aye, aye, Ma'am," cried the boot, gathering up her M-16 rifle and disappearing into the woods while trying to jam the new Kevlar helmet onto a matted mop of pinned-up curls.

Platoon 4028 was in its ninth week of boot camp at Parris Island, three weeks shy of graduation. They were found bivouacked in pup tents at the edge of an abandoned airstrip, fighting a guerrilla war against mosquitoes, sand fleas, an occasional rattlesnake and raccoons as big as dogs.

"Those raccoons thrive on our MRE's — meals ready to eat," the D.I. explains.

Reveille had sounded at 4:45 a.m. A murky blob of a sun, promising another blistering, humid day, barely pinked the surrounding marshes when Wells double-timed her 47 charges out to the infiltration course.

Two dead rats floating in the ditch before a wall that had to be scaled added an unscheduled horror to the grueling exercise.

"Crawl, use both legs, keep your heels and head down. Low silhouette on that wall," Wells told her recruits between TNT blasts anointing them with mud.

In the control tower, synchronizing the detonations so a charge went off whenever a recruit crept near a sandbag bunker, Gunnery Sgt. Harvey Sanders spotted one boot more terrified of the dead rodents than the live explosives. She bounded out of the ditch and over the wall like an Olympic hurdler.

"You're dead," he rasped over the loudspeaker in a deep Kentucky drawl. "You didn't check for booby traps. Now somebody's got to go to your Mommy and Daddy's home and tell them you're dead because you didn't listen."

Since the Marine Corps a decade ago mustered out demeaning obscenities and an occasional busted lip as too negative an approach to molding character, drill instructors have resorted to a lingua franca rich in morbid humor and inelegant variations just a tad shy of the scatological.

"Camouflaged cussing," as one of them called it, has made trash an all-purpose word, as when a D.I. bellows, "Don't give me any of that trash" or "Pick up your trash and move out" or "Plunge those gun barrels 15 times. Get all that trash out of there."

All prospective women Marines go through boot camp at the Parris Island Recruit Depot under female instructors who work side-by-side with male instructors. Their training is as rugged as males undergo, except that women spend an extra week honing combat skills because they will not be going on to advanced infantry training.

"They claim we women will not be going to war, and will only be used in support, but I don't know anyone who believes that," Wells said as her sweat-soaked, mud-caked recruits hurried off to the last of the three hot showers allotted during their 10 days in the field. "We teach 'em to be aggressive and to know how to defend themselves. If it ever comes down to it, they're going to fight."

Recruits rarely wear makeup in the field, except facial paint for combat maneuvers. But Marines of both sexes slish on a particular brand of bath oil in the belief that it fends off the low country's voracious insects.

"They don't completely surrender their femininity," observed Wells, looking feminine in her utility field cap, polished combat boots and a wide shiny black belt — the sign of a senior D.I. — hugging a Meryl Streep figure in crisply starched "cammies," camouflaged fatigues.

Female boots can make appointments at the beauty parlor, while men get those flat-tops on a barbershop assembly line. "They can wear their hair any way they want, as long as it doesn't fall below the shoulder," Wells says.

Female instructors never fancied the "Smokey," the broad-brimmed felt hat that their male counterparts tilt over their eyes.

rope" draped over the left shoulder. On parade, both sexes expertly brandish a ceremonial sword.

How did an admittedly "shy, quiet kind of kid" from a Roman Catholic high school in northeast Philadelphia wind up swinging on a rope like Tarzan's Jane across a murky pond and bellowing "Roll over like a dead roach with your feet in the air" at recruits who fail to don a gas mask in nine seconds?

"The nuns back at St. Hubert's would never believe it," says Wells, who turns 24 this month. "I didn't feel like going on to college, but I didn't want to do anything ordinary. So I joined up." Good at sports, she breezed through boot camp, became a coach on the rifle range, went to radio school, then spent 9½ weeks at Parris Island's co-ed drill instructors school.

"The most strenuous course in the corps," proclaims 1st Sgt. Larry Carson of New Orleans, the top NCO at the D.I. school. "But lady leathernecks don't get any breaks around here. When I look down that line, I don't see males or females. I just see Marines."

In the courtyard beyond his window, Staff Sgt. Marie Price of Chicago, the first female instructor at the D.I. school, was drilling men and women D.I. candidates in the bombastic basics of issuing commands.

"Their voices may sound different, but they got to be loud," mused the first sergeant. "These women come to hate me as much as the men, but after they leave here they have a change of heart. Some even invite me to their weddings."

Recruits may doubt it, but a drill instructor's heart is capable of a meltdown leading to matrimony. Sometimes they marry other drill instructors.

"And that's total war," laughs D.I. Sandra Love of Charlotte, N.C., one of Wells's cohorts who has undergone an interesting change in nomenclature.

Before her divorce, she was Sgt. Nails and gloried in the mock initials H.A. for "Hard As Nails." Her modest boast is "never having met a recruit I couldn't handle, but I know my day is coming."

In her knife defense class, Sgt. Love sent a recruit sprawling and nimbly missed straightening her Orphan Annie curls with a combat boot to the cadence cry of "grab, smash, hook, twist and stomp."

"Nothing I like better than seeing Marines slamming hard on the deck," says the close

Kung Fu Expert A Blur Of Fists And Hot Wheels

By Edmund Newton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

When Ron Scanlon demonstrates his fighting skills, he keeps up a continuous, easy patter, like a magician going through his paces.

"You see, it doesn't matter if you're standing, sitting or lying down," he says, relaxed but alert in his wheelchair. "Fighting is the same. You can break his wrist..."

Ben Smith, tonight's "opponent," slashes at Scanlon's face. Scanlon leans back, grabbing Smith's arm and twisting it like a pipe wrench. Smith hits the mat like a wet rag.

"... You can break his arm..." Smith charges again, and Scanlon smashes his arm against the wheelchair's armrest.

"... You can break his thumb..." Another impetuous charge brings another twisting maneuver, leaving Smith in a heap on the mat.

Paralyzed from the waist down since he was 9, Scanlon, now 32, is just getting warmed up. He has been laying waste to opponents since he was 17, when he first showed up at Bill Lasiter's little martial arts studio on Holt Boulevard in Ontario, Calif. The chop-and-grunt discipline is a demanding one, he says, with grueling physical conditioning and exacting sparring exercises.

After 15 years at it, he is a master kung fu practitioner, an eighth-degree black belt who teaches self defense to other people with disabilities at the Casa Colina Centers for Rehabilitation in Pomona, Calif.

At the 66-bed rehabilitation hospital, where Scanlon puts patients with brain injuries or spinal cord injuries through their paces, he's a rolling role model, a supremely confident paraplegic who has never acknowledged that he has a "disability." At Lasiter's storefront studio, where Scanlon has worked as an instructor, he's the resident phenom. As he maneuvers the wheelchair around the mats, the green belts and white belts keep a respectful distance.

"For me, being in a wheelchair was an advantage," insists Scanlon, who was paralyzed after breaking his back in an automobile accident. "I think it gave me confidence as an individual."

Is he good? "He's the first handicapped person I've ever seen who can teach upright people," says Lasiter, Scanlon's teacher for 15 years. "He doesn't have the use of his legs but he can teach people how to kick."

A less independent person probably wouldn't have achieved half as much. From the start of his life as a paraplegic, Scanlon got a taste of some fusty old attitudes toward the disabled, he says.

Fresh out of the hospital, he was relegated to a school for the handicapped in his hometown of Upland, Calif. School administrators put him on an easygoing academic track, where he didn't even have to do his homework, he says. For physical education, they gave him meaningless archery practice, positioning him a few feet from the target.

"You couldn't miss," says Scanlon, a brawny man from the waist up, with electric blue eyes and a thatch of dun-colored hair. "There was no skill building, nothing to build self-esteem."

It was a bitter pill for the youngster, who by then was ranging freely in his wheelchair, playing sandlot baseball and sometimes brawling with other teen-agers. He had developed an adolescent defensiveness about being in a chair. "It's the same as if people were always teasing you about wearing glasses," he says. "Sooner or later you're going to pop somebody."

Lasiter remembers the day Scanlon first showed up at the martial arts studio. "He had wheeled over from Upland, about six or seven miles," he says. "He was sitting there watching. I said, 'Why don't you join?' He said, 'Me?'"

"I got bit by it," says Scanlon. "I'd wheel down for the afternoon class, then stay on for evening class."

Scanlon, who eventually was admitted to Upland High School and went on to Chaffey Junior College, still loves contact sports. He's a member of the Casa Colina Condors, national wheelchair basketball champions last year. And he plans to play later this month in the annual "Blister Bowl," a scrappy game of wheelchair football in a Santa Barbara, Calif., parking lot.

"Kung fu san soo," based on centuries-old fighting techniques from China, Japan and Okinawa, is a punishing means of self-defense, greeting attackers with kicks to the groin, knees to the spine and fingers to the eye. It's particularly adaptable to the wheelchair-bound, who can use parts of their chairs as weapons, "stomping" with the front wheels or "kneeing" with the edges.

"There's no particular fighting stance," Scanlon says. "You fight from whatever position you're in. If somebody breaks into your house while you're in bed and grabs you around the throat, you can't say, 'Wait a minute, let me get into my stance.'"

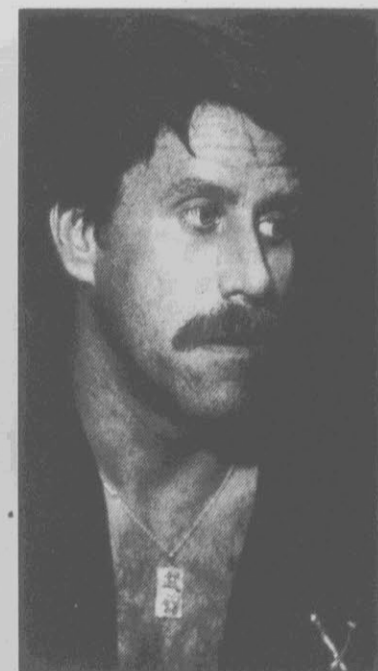

It's also a great way to widen a disabled person's horizons, Scanlon says. He tells of a young woman with muscular dystrophy who was wheeling down a boulevard in Los Angeles when a man attacked her.

"He came up from behind and tried to pull her top off," he says. "She backed him into a wall, forced him around in front of her and started chasing him in her wheelchair. She came back to the class with a grin from ear to ear."

When he works with the disabled, Scanlon is gentle and methodical. A young quadriplegic with limited movement in his arms, sits in the class, slumped motionless in his wheelchair. Scanlon coaxes him forward and soon has him blocking jabs from a volunteer.

"When you're on the street," he instructs the young man, "things happen and little red flags should go up. Not that you should be scared or paranoid. Just aware."

"Out on the street," Scanlon says, "you can't afford to be a nice guy about it."

Cathy Blake shows breakfast of eggs, hash browns, scrapple

Philadelphians Enjoy Flavor And Mystery Of Their Scrapple

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

PHILADELPHIA — "What is scrapple?" shouted waitress Lynne Brown at the quizzical customer in the Down Home Diner.

"Honey, you're not from Philly, that's for sure," laughed Brown, who promptly explained:

"Scrapple is a Philadelphia dining specialty. It's a Philadelphia tradition. It's the leftover scraps of pig, everything but the oink, with cornmeal, buckwheat and spices thrown in. Try it with eggs, you'll love it."

Just about every diner, restaurant and cafe serving breakfast in Philadelphia offers scrapple, which comes in precooked loaves, then is sliced and fried. When people order eggs, the waitress asks:

"You want bacon, sausage or scrapple with your eggs?"

Some order their scrapple fried crispy, some fried medium. Some want it soggy. Some smother it with ketchup, some with syrup, others with horseradish, apple sauce or apple butter.

"Everybody from Philly eats scrapple — blacks, whites, Chinese, Germans, Poles, Yugoslavs, Greeks, Italians," said Mario Monzo, chef at the Penrose Diner. "It's a very popular food."

Penrose Diner waitress Cathy Blake noted that many eat scrapple for lunch and dinner: "There is an old saying 'Scrapple, potatoes and vegetables at lunch or supper is real eating.'"

It may be the rage of Philadelphia but few outside this city or the surrounding Pennsylvania Dutch country have ever heard of scrapple, let alone tried the tasty dish.

Philadelphia author Kenneth Finkel, who has written several articles about the breakfast specialty, is the city's scrapple historian. He even lectures about it.

"Scrapple is a metaphor for Philadelphia. It was invented here, going back to the 1680s, to the very beginning of this city. It hasn't changed. It still has the same ingredients today as it had 300 years ago," said Finkel, the pied piper of the Philadelphia pate.

Poetry and songs have been written about scrapple. For example this bit of doggerel from William M. Bunn's "Some After Dinner Speeches" was published in Philadelphia in 1906:

"This world is all a fleeting show,
Since Adam ate the apple,
Its smiles of joy, its tears of woe,

Deceitful shine, deceitful flow —
There's nothing true but — Scrapple."

"Scrapple's roots go back to medieval times to Holland and North Germany where remnants of butchered pigs were made into a meat pudding. This practice was brought to the New World, especially to Philadelphia," Finkel said.

"Once here, the Pennsylvania Dutch went a few steps further. They added cornmeal, buckwheat, sage, cloves and other spices."

Scrapple is sold in Philadelphia supermarkets, corner grocery stores and butcher shops in 1-, 2-, 5- and 10-pound loaves for about $1.50 a pound. On the counter at Larry Fogarty's butcher shop in the Terminal Market, a small sign advertising "Hatfield Country Scrapple" lists the product's ingredients: "Pork stock, pork skin, pork hearts, pork snouts, pork liver, pork tongue, yellow cornmeal, wheat flour, salt, spices."

Hatfield Quality Meats, one of the biggest meat packers producing scrapple, sells upwards of 50,000 pounds a week and 2.7 million pounds a year, reports Abe Landes, the company's marketing manager.

"One of the first products Hatfield made in 1895 was scrapple. It is one of the mainstay items that has made the company the success that it has been all these years," Landes said.

Although a lot of people used to make their own scrapple years ago, very few people do now, Landes noted, "because it is too time consuming a process, too complex a recipe and it has to be made in such big batches. They buy it already made in the scrapple loaves at the marketplace."

Punishment Should Fit The Crime

Dear Abby: My husband uses "grounding" for every little infraction our 15-year-old son commits. "Rick" loves sports, and he's very good at basketball and soccer. He's on his high school teams for both sports.

My husband feels that when Rick is grounded he should not be able to go anywhere — including practice for sports or playing in the games. I feel that taking away Rick's TV and telephone privileges and going out in the evening is punishment enough. Besides, if Rick is grounded from practice and playing in sports, he'd be letting his school and teammates down. Being grounded from sports for two weeks could even cause him to lose out playing a whole season.

I think I have a fairly good chance of winning this argument, but I need your help. I hope you're on my side, Abby. Say what? — High-Schooler's Mom

Dear Mom: I think the punishment should fit the crime. If Rick's offense is serious — drinking, doing

Dear Abby

drugs or breaking the law — I'd say ground him all the way, sports included.

But for relatively minor offenses, denying Rick TV and telephone privileges, plus going out — other than for practice and games — is sufficient punishment.

Dear Abby: You advised a reader who was harassed by obscene telephone calls to report such calls to the telephone company. What do you expect it to do for her?

I was employed by the telephone company as a customer service representative for 25 years, and when people complained to us about such calls, we would refer them to the police department. The police department would then refer them back to the telephone company. Of course, customers would feel that they were getting the runaround — which they were.

The best thing to do is to change your telephone number — and there a charge for that. However, if the calls are life-threatening and a police report is filed, the phone company will change your number without charging you for it.

Most people think it's easy to trace a telephone number. It's not. It's a very involved procedure, and the telephone company and police department must work together in order to trace a call, but this is done only in life-threatening circumstances.

If the calls are obscene or harassing, the best way to discourage them is to keep a whistle near the phone and give the caller an earsplitting blast. — Old Rep From California

Dear Old Rep: Thanks. You reached out and touched a few million people. Read on:

Dear Abby: After reading the letter about obscene phone calls, I had to write and tell you what has worked for me. When the caller starts in with the spiel, I listen and make no comment until the caller has finished, then I say, very innocently: "Would you mind repeating that, please? I don't hear very well, and I didn't understand what you were talking about."

The caller usually slams the receiver down forcibly! — Las Vegas Reader

Dear Reader: Not a bad idea, but that necessitates having to listen to some disgusting dialogue.

A Tampa reader with a novel solution wrote: "I used to have trouble with obscene phone calls, then I kept my Bible by the phone and started quoting Scripture to the caller. After that, I wasn't bothered again."

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Joining The Illustrious Company Of FRUMP

Usually I am quite modest about all the awards (two) I have received professionally. Recently, however, I was given an honor that is long overdue. I was made an honorary celebrity FRUMP (Frugal, Responsible, Unpretentious, Mature People). Keeping me illustrious company are first lady Barbara Bush, Willard Scott, Roseanne Barr and Andy Rooney.

The founding mother of FRUMP is "Auntie" Barbara Hovanetz of Winter Park, Fla., who also edits the monthly newsletter, "It's Fall... the start of the annual Purge Your Expired Coupons Season!"

There are 2,000 card-carrying FRUMPS out there — women who wear polyester in midsummer, crochet poodles to cover bottles of booze and, in order to prevent the smoke alarm from going off while they're cooking, cover it with a shower cap.

I suspect there are a lot more women who aren't organized enough to know there's an organization organized just for them.

At Wits End

Some of us are destined for lackluster. We go through life carrying the same handbag in winter and summer. We buy a skirt for 50 cents at a garage sale and ask if they do alterations. If we have a season where our slips aren't too long for our dresses, then our coats are too short.

You can dress us up, put us at a head table and make us feel important, but let us sneeze and we quickly unfold from our handbag a half-roll of toilet tissue.

In a country that has a support group for everything, including dogs who have had hysterectomies, it is comforting to know there are other women out there who make dresses from curtain panels and hold bras together with safety pins and fallen hems with staples. Every day I see a world becoming more serious about itself.

Women are driven to "have it all," from bathrooms that sparkle to kids who carry color-coordinated food in their Batman lunch boxes. It's not an invention of the Baby Boomers. We've always been that way. At birth, every baby girl is given a Stepford booster shot. Somewhere between laundering plastic bags and hanging them out to dry and ripping off stamps on envelopes that I never returned, I learned to lighten up. I don't know when the first lady decided to bare her roots or Willard decided to bare his skull, but it has probably made life a lot easier for them. Or as one FRUMP put it, "Don't take life so seriously. You'll never get out alive!"

I don't owe anyone for this award — not my family, my editors or members of the academy. I did it all myself. I thank you for the honor and the white FRUMP T-shirt. Well, it used to be white. It is now pink, but then you probably anticipated that.

Families Should Work To Overcome Boredom

By Mary Jo Kochakian
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

No, it doesn't flatten you like a divorce or a death in the family. But boredom with family life is an insidious problem — and ignoring it can have some pretty unpleasant consequences.

In terms of basic survival — having food, shelter and good health — "it's not very important," says Milton Schwebel, professor emeritus of psychology at Rutgers University in New Jersey. "But in terms of the happiness and pleasure of the family, and goodwill in the family, (boredom) really can create havoc."

Typically, family members will begin to avoid one another, following pursuits that put even more distance between them.

Alienated people often create "family defense mechanisms — people love each other, they want to be together, but are having trouble when they're together. They get angry, irritable and they find a way of being apart," Schwebel says. For example, a parent might become overly involved in work or fitness.

"The other bad consequence is that kids become irritable and fight, and then the parents get involved and the parents get irritable, and they start fighting," Schwebel says.

Such a situation is bad enough to be considered a crisis by Schwebel and four other Schwabes. Three psychologists and two educators, together they wrote "A Guide to a Happier Family: Overcoming the Anger, Frustration and Boredom that Destroy Family Life" (Jeremy P. Tarcher, $17.95).

Certain people are particularly prey to boredom, Schwebel says.

"Some people are raised to believe having fun is not the right thing," he says. "They were never allowed to build fun into life — life has to be hard, life has to be hard work, life has to be serving others but not having fun yourself."

"They have an inability to accept fun and be playful and loving, although it's perfectly healthy and normal and good, for children as well."

Other families are disorganized. They want to do things together, but don't plan. When the weekend arrives, the children go off to their own activities while the parents are still trying to figure out what to do.

Couples who once truly enjoyed time together often seem in later married life hopelessly tied to routine. Schwebel advises them to figure out when they stopped having fun — often when the first baby arrived, or when professional demands began to take precedence — and work on what they used to have.

In all cases, the bored will have to get to work.

Prepare a list of possible activities — let it run into hundreds of suggestions, Schwebel says.

"There's an extraordinarily long list of activities one could engage in, whether it's bird-watching, going to museums, hearing music, playing music, painting, hiking, or whether it's stamp collecting or learning to use a camera, or collecting restaurrants, if you will," he says. "The list is so long, unless two people are consciously or unconsciously determined not to find something in common, it's very difficult not to find something that will strike some degree of interest in the two of them."

Narrow the list down to five or 10, taking children's interests into account. You have an advantage if the children in your family are young — they can be brought up to be interested in the activity, Schwebel says.

But don't choose competitive activities, he notes. Couples who decide to play against each other in tennis are not going to have heart-warming moments on the court.

Get into the habit of having fun. Whatever you decide on, stick with it and do it weekly, he says.

If it doesn't work, you may have more trouble than you think.

"If people go through the long process of selecting an interest and are not getting fun out of it, I think they have to wonder whether the problem is their choice or the difficulty they have spending time together. If it's the latter, I think they have to look into that," he says.

Drill Instructor Trains Female Recruits

combat instructor, identified by the skull and crossed bayonets on his T-shirt. "The female of the Marine species is way deadlier than the male."

The scene was a far cry from a decade ago when women recruits were taught how to pour tea and were required to wear girdles.

As D.I., Wells receives a $260 increment to her staff sergeant's basic pay of $1,325 a month. Her working hours from reveille at 4:45 a.m. to Taps at 8:45 p.m. leave "little time for romance," she says, while donning a MOPP (mission orientation protective posture) suit to lead her platoon into "the house of pain," the gas chamber. "When we're not working we're sleeping."

Ashore, as Marines call being away from the depot in Navy lingo, the D.I. enjoys being a young woman. "I still wear my hair long. People don't even know I'm a Marine. I love wearing bikinis, off-the-shoulder dresses and slinky long gowns."

"I like men picking up the dinner check — that's survival — and opening the door for you. Hey, I'm no brute."

D.I. Wells has never been in a situation where she had to employ her martial arts skill. "But stuff has sure happened to a lot of my recruits. They've been raped or mugged or something, and they wish they'd known then how to defend themselves."

Almost every new batch of recruits arriving at Fourth Battalion, the women's recruit unit, includes at least one undetected pregnancy.

several college graduates, a number of kids fleeing inner-city violence or small-town boredom, a couple of "Jane Wayne" over-achievers, and always the platoon comic.

"Comedians help relieve tension, as long as their jokes aren't aimed at us," Wells says. "We tell recruits when to laugh and when not to."

All recruits have to test drug-free, and 99 percent are high school graduates. Although boot-type "shock incarceration" programs are being tested at prisons in a dozen states, few come to Parris Island straight from the criminal court docket. "The old days of four in the corps or 10 in the pen are gone," says Gunnery Sgt. Sanders. "Hey, we're choosy now."

Drill instructors off duty swap stories about the "yo-yos" who march to a different cadence count under the platoon guide-on. "We get the female Gomer Pyles and the Pvt. Benjamins," Wells says. "They do some funny things."

"The Pvt. Benjamins are the best — the pretty ones with the long fingernails. We call them powderpuffs. They've been babied all their lives. We make them earn their keep."

Parris Island graduates 19,000 new Marines a year, 1,800 of them women. Both sexes have the same drop-out rate, about 15 percent.

"Mental stress washes out more of them than the physical demands," Wells says. "You can always build someone up, but some can't cope with having to do a couple of things at the same time in a hurry."

Her outstanding recruit this time around is

Pvt. Ramona Racquet, from Blossvale, N.Y., who stands 4-foot-9, wears a size 2½ shoe, totes a pack half her weight and outscored all the males on the rifle range. "I call her my mini-recruit," Wells says. "Her feet always hurt. They can't find boots to fit her, but she's proof that women can do it all."

Parris Island is just beginning to rebound from its "Lesbian Mafia" headlines of a year ago when three women Marines were jailed and 14 others were administratively discharged for homosexual liaisons that included drill instructors and recruits.

Now it is facing another social problem of our times: single parents. "We get single parents, both men and women, signing up for D.I. school," Carson says. "I got a gut feeling there's just no way a D.I. can make a good single parent."

Down the road, a decade or so from now, Wells sees herself in a more sedate career: "I'd like to be a housewife, with a couple of kids, but I'd have to do something else. I'm not much at sitting around the back yard."

Does she worry that her D.I. past might make her more of a martinet than a mother, bullying, even brutalizing her kids like the Marine parent in the movie "The Great Santini"?

"Who me?" she asks, those big gray eyes widening in shock. "No way. Shoot, the way I treat my recruits, why I'm so nice to them, they abuse me more than I abuse them."

LOS ANGELES — NBC won back first place in the Nielsen television ratings as the San Francisco Bay-area earthquake delayed the World Series and ABC's prospects for another victory.

The quake altered all three networks' schedule last week in one of the more inconsequential results of the disaster.

Instead of an anticipated second week on top, ABC fell to third place. The network was caught without alternative programming when its biggest night of the week, Tuesday, was pre-empted first by the World Series pregame show and then by coverage of the earthquake.

The quake hit just as ABC's coverage of the third game between the San Francisco Giants and the Oakland Athletics was beginning in San Francisco's Candlestick Park. The Tuesday night pregame show tied for 44th place. ABC had won the ratings race the previous week on the basis of the first two games, snapping NBC's record 68-week string of first-place finishes.

NBC's "Cheers" was first last week, closely followed by "The Cosby Show," ABC's highest-ranked show was its Monday Night Football game between the Los Angeles Rams and the Buffalo Bills, which was 10th.

NBC won the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey with a weekly primetime average of 14.1. CBS had a 12.6 and ABC 12.1. The ratings represent the percentage of the nation's 92.1 million households tuned into a program.

Here are the Top 10: NBC's "Cheers;" NBC's "The Cosby Show;" NBC's "A Different World;" NBC's "Golden Girls;" NBC's "Dear John" and CBS' "60 Minutes" tied for fifth; NBC's "Empty Nest;" NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" and the CBS movie "Do You Know the Muffin Man?" tied for eighth; and ABC's Monday Night NFL Football.

The World Series is not scheduled to resume until Friday, depending on weather and repairs to the ballpark.

The networks' special coverage of the earthquake was not ranked by Nielsen because it was unscheduled and not sponsored. The network evening news shows had nearly 5 million extra viewers, apparently because of the quake.

Here's how the networks did with follow-up coverage of the earthquake: ABC's "20-20" in a tie for 20th place, CBS' "48 Hours" 29th, ABC News special report 34th, ABC's "PrimeTime Live" in a tie for 37th place, and NBC's special report 43rd.

ABC's "World News Tonight" led the evening news shows with a rating of 11.5. CBS had an 11.2 and NBC 10.7. CBS was rated for only four nights because the night of the earthquake it had pre-empted its West Coast news feed for special coverage.

'Waves' Not Your Average Rock 'N' Roll Band

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Combine a mail deliverer, a dishwasher, a tour guide and a certified driller of bowling balls and you have 'Katrina and the Waves,' not the average rock 'n' roll band.

Take the name, for instance. Former postal worker Kimberly Rew is the acknowledged leader, the band's principal writer and arranger. So who gets top billing? Singer and ex-dishwasher Katrina Leskanich, of course.

"At first Kimberly was doing the singing and the group was called 'The Waves,'" explained drummer

Alex Cooper, the band's one-time tour guide. "But once Katrina started singing, we became 'Katrina and the Waves.' Someone said we'd get more dates at the military camps because the soldiers will come out for a girl's name."

Military camps are important because both Cooper and Leskanich grew up in military families that traveled all over the world. Leskanich alone has lived in England, Germany, the Netherlands, Nebraska, Massachusetts, California, Georgia and Kansas.

The group's first live performances were at military bases, before crowds that responded to a singer called Katrina.

"We used to play on these horrible naval bases up in Scotland where these guys had been submarines for six months and I was the first female they'd seen," Leskanich said.

"They'd go absolutely wild, they were up to here in liquor. They'd pull down their pants right on the dance floor. We just collapsed laughing, it was all a joke. We're trying to do our number and it was just ridiculous."

In 1981, Rew wrote "Walking on Sunshine," a good old-fashioned rock 'n' roll summer song — bouncy melody, memorable guitar riffs and Katrina's joyous vocals on top. It sounded like a sure hit, and was: four years later.

"We took it around to all the stations and all the companies, and nothing happened," Cooper said. "Then we were signed at the end of '84 to Capitol and at the end of '85 they put it out, pow! A classic! It was released at the right time, just one of those things."

After finally cracking the charts, Katrina and the Waves could be expected to get right to work on a new album. They did, but the record didn't come out until recently.

"We thought we had finished the record," Cooper said. "But we took it back home and listened to it, and said: 'Oh dear. I think we'll start again.' We did that twice."

The Waves consider their group a democracy; whoever shouts loudest wins. Nothing is considered finished until everyone is satisfied, and with four very distinct personalities, that can take time.

"Alex is dad. I'd sit home all the time if I could. 'C'mon,' he'll say, 'let's get on the bus,'" said bassist and bowling ball surgeon Vince de la Cruz. "Kim is the mad professor. Katrina is chief brat. I just try to do as little as possible."

The band agrees that Katrina's voice and Kimberly's guitar and songwriting are the key to their sound. But since Katrina won't sing anything that doesn't feel right, "creative differences" can emerge.

"Kim's songs are brilliant and he's still going to write songs on his own that the band's not going to touch," Katrina said. "But he's trying to write songs from my point of view and sometimes I didn't agree."

She cited "Crush on You," a ballad off the new album.

"At first, I thought it was a little too boy-meets-girl. That's a good example of one of Kim's 'boy-meets-girl' songs I tried to change but when I did, it lost the innocence."

"I have to sing a song from my point of view. I feel it's going to be believed. But when you are trying to write from someone else's point of view, you start getting into cliches."

Peck, Smits Suffer Stage Fright

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — They come from different backgrounds a generation apart, but Gregory Peck and Jimmy Smits have one thing in common: They both suffer stage fright.

Peck gets stage fright after 45 years in films?

"I always do," confesses the 73-year-old star who portrays the iconoclastic author Ambrose Bierce in "Old Gringo," co-starring with Jane Fonda and Smits.

"When I went down to rehearse in Mexico, I was playing catchup, because originally Burt Lancaster was to play the role. They were already rehearsing, and Jane knew all of her lines backwards, forwards and sideways, while I was carrying a script in my hand. When we first rehearsed a scene, she embraced me. Her tears were flowing, and I was trying to hold onto my script," Peck said.

"Jane was totally into the scene, and I was about 8,000 miles behind. I had a bit of stage fright the first day or two. That happens with every movie. Nothing unusual about that."

Smits, 33, had more reason to be nervous. He was making the leap from TV's "L.A. Law" to a $24 million epic with two screen legends.

"I would be lying to you if I said I wasn't nervous the first couple of days of shooting," he said.

"Besides the fact that I was working with Jane Fonda and Gregory Peck, on the first couple of days I was involved in an exterior scene that had 150 extras. I was on a horse, carrying a rifle and I spoke in two different languages. It was an exercise in shifting lots of gears at the same time."

"I went home that first night and I cried a little bit, because I didn't think I was up to spec. But they liked what I did."

Peck speaks well of his young co-star: "Jimmy is well-trained and schooled, holds a master's degree from Cornell (University) in fine arts, has worked with Joe Papp, has done Shakespeare in the Park, has done the classics. He's studied voice, he's studied movement, he's a trained young artist. He's ready for bigger things. He's wonderful in 'L.A. Law,' but he's going to be a movie star."

Peck grew up in idyllic La Jolla, Calif., the lonely son of a divorced druggist. He became interested in acting while studying pre-med at the University of California, Berkeley. He later went East to study at the Neighborhood Playhouse. After a few stage roles, he was signed to contracts with Fox, MGM, Selznick and RKO and became an instant star. A host of memorable roles followed, "To Kill a Mocking Bird" winning him the Academy Award in 1962.

"Old Gringo" is based on the Carlos Fuentes novel that fictionalizes Bierce's fate. The director is Argentine Luis Puenzo, whose "The Official Story" won an Oscar.

Peck has no plans to heat up his film career.

Andrews Saw Role As One Of Addiction

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Anthony Andrews saw his role in "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" as a man gone awry because of a drug addiction.

In the presentation on Showtime's "Nightmare Classics," Andrews merely combs his hair back instead of undergoing a hairy makeup transformation.

"I saw the only way to approach it was to treat it as a new exercise," said Andrews on a visit from his home in England. "We had very limited time. In fact, I didn't think at first we could do it. I tried to bring it into focus for today's audience. I had only a vague recollection of seeing Spencer Tracy in the role, so I had little in the way of preconceived notions."

"I knew it had been done a lot, and when you get into it you see why. It's an interesting dilemma to play the same man twice, with a personality change. What really attracted me to the part is that it's so closely aligned with the contemporary drug addict."

Dr. Henry Jekyll is a brilliant scientist, yet a shy, introverted man with a limited approach to life. He becomes addicted to a potion which releases the other side of his personality and gives him the confidence and facility to be somebody else. He becomes Edward Hyde, who is usually portrayed as a monster.

"That is exactly what I didn't want to do. I tried to play him as the same man who has the suppressed side of his personality released. I didn't use any prosthetic and no obvious makeup. I used the transformation of character in front of your eyes. He is really the same man."

"I'm not saying he's a nice man. He just doesn't change into a monster."

Laura Dern also stars in the one-hour show that makes its debuts on Sunday, and Rue McClanahan plays a London madam.

John Barrymore played the Jekyll-Hyde role in the 1920 silent film, based on the 19th-Century classic novel by Robert Louis Stevenson. Fredric March won an Oscar for his portrayal in 1932. Spencer Tracy played it in 1941 with Ingrid Bergman and Lana Turner in the cast.

A new twist in 1972 made it "Dr. Jekyll and Sister Hyde."

Michael Caine plays the role in "Jekyll and Hyde," an ABC movie tentatively set for after the first of the year, also starring Cheryl Ladd.

Shelley Duvall, known for her "Faerie Tale Theatre" and "Tall Tales and Legends," is executive producer of "Nightmare Classics."

"I'd always wanted to do something for Shelley Duvall," said Andrews. "She asked me to do several 'Faerie Tales,' but I couldn't do them. So it was nice when this came along and I was able to say yes for a change."

Andrews starred in "Brideshead Revisited" and "Danger UXB," productions shown here on educational television, and in such American movies as "A War of Children" and "The Scarlet Pimpernel."

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Oct. 27
ARIES (March 20 to April 17): A woman will introduce you to interesting acquaintances that could become friends. Being critical towards a business contact could be very unwise now.
TAURUS (April 18 to May 19): An analytical younger partner can aid you very much in a business matter. You will be shown by a good friend how to handle your problems much better.
GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Don't invite any contentious friends into your home or harmony will be threatened. New jet age ideas will help improve your present business conditions.
MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): You can make money now from your own creative ideas. Much harmony should exist today at your home. Listen to all those comments hurled in your direction now by co-workers.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Delve into a bigger course of action that can apply to your daily duties. Look at your big money possibilities now and don't fuss about the petty views.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Exciting conditions can be happening with you or your usual routine. Spend a little extra to make your property more attractive. A progressive friend will aid you with your duties.
LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 21): Do something new that will be of special importance to your attachment. Look for a plan in the future to better invest any assets.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Bring as much excitement as possible into your home today. Be more open minded to ways to add to your holdings. Much activity with many friends will require that you economize.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): Your business matters may be delayed but they break in your favor shortly. Give a nice party to repay your social debts and make new contacts.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Get into new phases of business, money that can add to your income. Look closely to the nature of any and all friends in your association.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): You can be very direct with your friends on just what they can do for you and study different ways to be more successful on your business affairs.
PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Put a check on the amount a profligate associate wants to spend. A delayed trip with an older friend is all to your benefit.

opener had the minimum the law allowed for an opening bid, South wasted no time in signing off at four spades.
 In response to his partner's double, West dutifully led a club taken by the ace. Since there was no way to avoid losing two diamond tricks, the fate of the contract hinged on declarer losing no more than one trick in trumps. Would you finesse for the queen?
 The Count set about his usual business. East surely had the king and queen of clubs as well as length in the suit. Had West held both king and ace of diamonds, he would have led one, so East had at least three points in diamonds and a total of eight or nine HCP in the minors. If he had the ace of spades as well, he would undoubtedly have opened the bidding.
 With the location of the ace marked with West, it was simply a matter of deciding whether trumps were 2-1 or 3-0. Since neither opponent had contested the auction, the former was more likely, so declarer led the ten of spades and, when West produced the six, rose with the king in dummy to fell the bare queen.

Bushes Put Speeches First, Dinner Second

By Sarah Booth Conroy
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The after-dinner speech is moving before dinner.

Brave Barb Bush — the first lady who dares to be a white-haired eminence — has struck another blow for common sense.

Appropriately, since Thomas Jefferson as president set many a style in White House entertaining, the Bushes began the turnaround at their Sept. 28 dinner at Monticello during the education summit in Charlottesville, Va.

The schedule of speeches first, dinner later worked so well, said Anna Perez, Mrs. Bush's press secretary, that the White House followed the same pattern at the dinners for the Mexican and Italian heads of state.

"The president and Mrs. Bush think it makes a better flow for their guests," she added.

The Bushes actually are reviving a practice followed by Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter, who put the speeches first. But the Reagans went back to having speeches and toasts at the end of the meal.

Secretary of State James Baker is following the Bushes, toasting before the meal at ceremonial luncheons in the grand banquet hall of the Department of State, such as the recent one for the Italian president.

Think what it would mean if everyone else in town were to follow the practice.

Dinner guests would have to listen to the speeches, if not cold sober and hungry, then at least with only the before-dinner reception fortifications of cocktails and canapes. This should result in the diners' actually being awake during the speeches, though this is not guaranteed.

Being alert has, of course, both good and bad aspects.

The level of dinner oratory may rise to the point where some people will actually be interested enough to listen. Hitherto, many speeches have tended to be rather perfunctory — one joke and many "thanks to our sponsor."

Being awake could often be lonely. On one memorable occasion, the courses were numerous, the multiple bands had played on and on, the introduction was fulsome and thus the speech began late. But the august and learned after-dinner speaker, vastly knowledgeable though unfortunately not a silver-tongued orator, was determined to give guests the full benefit of his scholarship. Unmindful of the snores, the tiptoeing of the departing guests or the frantic look of his host, the professor went on and on and on until close to the witching hour.

This listener, a connoisseur of the practice of after-dinner speaking, and no great imbibor, was charmed and edified by the speaker's erudition. Sadly, she was the only one still awake when he sat down.

Some hosts have devices for keeping guests awake and present to the last hurrah.

Clement Conger, chairman of the State Department's Fine Arts Committee and curator of the Diplomatic Reception Rooms, likes to split the speeches at the annual Jefferson Dinner, the elaborate $1,500-a-plate affair that benefits the rooms of American antiques. This year the dinner, on Nov. 17, will mark the bicentennial of the State Department.

While waiters are serving appetizers, Conger introduces hosts at each table, the Cabinet members, foreign ambassadors and their wives and the generous patrons who are picking up the dinner tab.

Guests are then graciously permitted to eat their many courses in peace before confronting the state of the world as disclosed in the speech, this year by Baker, following the dessert.

Inviting guests earlier and shortening the cocktail hour has its benefits as practiced by Alan M. Fern, director of the National Portrait Gallery, with the advice, no doubt, of his hostess, Lois Fern.

This month a dinner previewing the "Portraits of the American Law" exhibit at the Portrait Gallery began at 6:30 p.m. for drinks, 7:15 p.m. to sit down. The speeches, two brief but witty ones by Fern and Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist, were over by 9 p.m.
