State Workers Pitch In To Clean Up After Hugo

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A virtual army of workers has been assembled here for a massive cleanup of trees, stumps and other debris left behind by Hurricane Hugo that is expected to take five weeks and would fill about 160,000 dump trucks.

"I came because they needed me," said Richard Oliver who traveled 250 miles Sunday from New Bern in a N.C. Department of Transportation yellow dump truck.

"I didn't come because I wanted to."

About 300 state workers in about 200 Transportation Department trucks arrived Sunday in Charlotte. They'll help about 250 city workers and 16 private companies in a mass curbside cleanup of tree limbs, stumps and other debris that began this morning.

It will be the first cleanup in all sections of the city since the hurricane struck more than a month ago on Sept. 22.

"We believe the emergency conditions will be eliminated in about five weeks," said Pressley Beaver, the city's cleanup coordinator.

The state workers came from about 80 of the state's 100 counties. City officials decided to ask for emergency help after they failed to get more than 16 private companies to bid on the cleanup work.

The state workers will remain in Charlotte for two-week shifts, working 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. every day. While in Charlotte, they'll stay in three motels along Interstate-77.

N.C. Transportation Department

division engineer Don Goins greeted the workers about 4 p.m. Sunday as they arrived at a DOT facility.

Goins' job was to make sure the men and their equipment got to where they needed to be Sunday night.

"Go ahead and refuel," Goins instructed the workers. "Then line up in the road."

Yellow trucks waiting for directions lined North Tryon Street on Sunday afternoon.

The workers were to drive their trucks to specific parking lots. After that, the equipment would remain near the work site.

"The cleanup itself is a very simple task, you just haul the debris to the dump site, but it gets very complex with all this equipment," Goins said.

Meanwhile, city workers are ready to go, Beaver said.

Each group of workers will have a section of the city to clean up. State and city crews will be working mostly in southeast and southwest Charlotte. The private companies have already begun cleaning up the northern portion of the city.

State workers will have to learn about Charlotte's streets and its traffic. But many were planning to spend Sunday night finding out about more pleasant aspects of Charlotte life.

"It's kind of fun to get out of your hometown," said J.R. Miller, a Transportation Department worker from Craven County. "I'm hoping to find some social activity as soon as possible."

'Sweet' Thatcher Will Stay

By Gilbert A. Lewthwaite
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, facing the worst political crisis of her decade in power, responded Sunday by telling the nation: "I am staying my own sweet, reasonable self. ... Strong leadership will continue."

Mrs. Thatcher robustly denied responsibility for the surprising departure last week of her chancellor the exchequer, Nigel Lawson.

In a nationally televised interview, she repeatedly refused to explain why she had allowed Lawson to leave the Cabinet rather than fire her personal economics adviser, Allan Walters of Johns Hopkins University.

Lawson resigned Thursday, saying he could not work with the prime minister as long as she continued to listen to Walters' private advice.

Mrs. Thatcher said Sunday that she had tried three times to persuade Lawson to stay in government, but he was determined to leave.

Walters, vacationing in Florida when Lawson announced his move, resigned within an hour of Lawson, stripping the British prime minister of her two most authoritative economic advisers.

The double departure increased uncertainty in the international financial markets and started a run on the pound sterling, which could worsen this week.

Mrs. Thatcher sought to use Sunday's television interview to reassert her personal authority and bolster waning public confidence in her government.

She did so as a major opinion poll said that a majority of voters here thought she should step down after 10 years in power.

The Mail reported Sunday that a national poll showed 54 percent of the voters blamed her for the Lawson debacle and wanted her to resign before the next election, which must be held by summer 1992.

'Excellance' In Education?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A banner that misspelled the word "excellence" was quickly removed today by embarrassed organizers of the first meeting of the Task Force on Excellence in Secondary Education.

A banner that was supposed to be behind the podium where Bobby Etheridge, state superintendent of public instruction, and Gov. Jim Martin spoke read "Excellance in Secondary Education." The banner was rolled up and the wall remained bare during the speeches.

The 21-member task force was appointed by Etheridge in earlier this month after statistics showed North Carolina students ranked 50th in a state-by-state list of scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

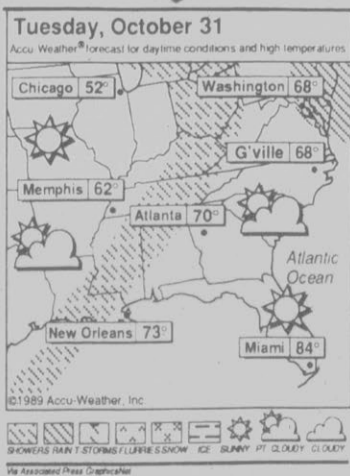

Etheridge told the group that North Carolina's ranking is symptomatic of problems in the state's high schools that must be fixed if the state is to offer its children the education to which they are entitled.

"I have said repeatedly that I understand the disadvantages of attempting to use the SAT ranking as a valid indicator of our whole public school offering," Etheridge said.

"I have yet to have anyone offer me a logical explanation of why students in Virginia score 66 points better on average than do North Carolina students," Etheridge said.

Martin told the task force members that he didn't want them to recommend gimmicks — such as reducing the number of students who take the SAT.

Black Rally Scrutinized In South Africa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police said today they were investigating for possible prosecution participants in a rally by 70,000 people in which the outlawed African National Congress' guerrilla campaign was repeatedly praised.

"All that was said and all that took place is being studied," said police spokesman Col. Vic Haynes the morning after the welcome rally for seven recently freed ANC leaders in a soccer stadium outside Johannesburg.

Nearly everything about the gathering violated security laws, but police kept their distance and state television led the evening news with a report on what was the largest anti-government rally in South Africa's 79-year history.

Newspapers, including pro-government media, today called on the government to do away with laws restricting political activity. And the government hinted it may be considering lifting some restrictions on political expression to allow peaceful protests.

"We must be prepared to run risks," Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok said on government-run television Sunday night, adding that maintaining the status quo is riskier than allowing mass protests.

The government granted permission for Sunday's rally as part of an attempt by new President F.W. de Klerk to promote black-white negotiations. But a magistrate had warned organizers that speakers should avoid promoting ANC aims.

"We refused," said Cyril Ramaphosa, a union leader and one of the main rally organizers. "The ANC lives. It is amongst us."

"Today, the ANC has captured center stage in South Africa," declared Walter Sisulu, 77, the group's former general secretary, in the main address Sunday to the cheering, singing, dancing throng which filled most of the seats in the recently opened stadium.

Police and soldiers set up roadblocks nearby and searched vehicles, but few security force personnel were visible at the stadium itself.

From a podium erected beneath huge banners of the ANC and the South African Communist Party, Sisulu appeared with six ANC colleagues freed unconditionally from prison Oct. 15. All but one had spent at least 25 years in prison.

Deafening cheers arose when Sisulu and his colleagues slowly circled the playing field, each walking under an umbrella, behind an honor guard of 20 young militants, clad in khaki uniforms and marching in military style.

"ANC, ANC," shouted the crowd, many dressed in the movement's green, black and gold colors, or wearing T-shirts with the slogan, "ANC Lives" and the names of the freed prisoners.

The crowd included white South Africans and diplomats from at least 15 countries.

Sisulu said his movement would never abandon its guerrilla campaign unilaterally. But, repeating previous offers, he said it would consider suspending violence and entering talks if the government frees all political prisoners, legalizes the ANC and lifts the 40-month-old state of emergency.

"To date, we see no clear indication that the government is serious about negotiation," said Sisulu, who urged intensified economic sanctions. "All the utterances are vague."

The crowd roared when prominent activist Murphy Morobe read a letter of greeting from Oliver Tambo, the exiled president of the ANC, who may not legally be quoted in South Africa.

"This is a joyful day for all of us," said the message. "We meet to celebrate a victory that belongs to all the people of our country."

Tambo directed part of his remarks at South African whites who seek to maintain apartheid, which denies the nation's 28 million blacks a voice in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate schools, districts and health services.

Carrier Crash Kills 5 Sailors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A jet practicing take-offs and landings crashed into the tower of the aircraft carrier Lexington, then cartwheeled and burst into flames on the flight deck, killing five and injuring two, authorities said.

The two-seater T-2 Buckeye jet, based at the Naval Air Station in Meridian, Miss., crashed Sunday afternoon during the training mission about 30 miles south of Pensacola in the Gulf of Mexico.

The pilot approached too low for a landing and deck crewmembers tried to wave the flier off before the crash, according to Rep. Earl Hutto, D-Fla.

The plane hit the tower of the 46-year-old aircraft carrier, flipped over and slammed into a row of parked planes, said the congressman, who was briefed by Navy officials.

Aviation fuel immediately ignited on the 889-foot-long blacktop deck, but the fires were quickly brought under control, said Navy Cmdr. Dennis Hessler.

The crash caused major damage to two aircraft on the ship and minor damage to another, said Army Maj. John Smith, a Pentagon spokesman. The Lexington, the Navy's oldest aircraft carrier, was not damaged extensively. It was due to arrive today at its home port in Pensacola, said Navy officials.

The ship, which came under a deadly Japanese kamikaze attack 45 years ago this week, has 1,440 crewmembers and is the Navy's on-

Navy Puts Word Out: Lose That Fat Or Get Lost

By Nora Zamichow
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SAN DIEGO — Senior Chief Tom Cook would punch a wall when he got angry at his crew aboard a guided missile frigate. And then he would eat, and eat, and eat. Standing 6-feet-1, he saw his weight fluctuate between 205 and 260 pounds.

After 12 years of unswerving loyalty to the Navy, Cook was recently told to lose weight or lose his job. "I was very, very angry," said Cook, 32. "I'm just fat, but I'm doing my job. Why get rid of me?"

The Navy says overweight sailors and officers are not fit for combat, and it is cracking down.

Today, in a last-ditch effort to rescue their careers, the best and the biggest sailors vie for a spot at one of four weight-loss clinics conducted by the Navy across the country, the largest of them at the Naval Alcohol Rehabilitation Center on the Miramar Naval Air Station here.

In the Navy, after a minimum of three warnings, anyone can be discharged if he remains overweight. An individual can also be prevented from transferring or advancing in rank because of his weight. For every dollar spent on an individual in treatment, it would cost $12 to replace that person, according to Navy estimates. The Navy says it costs $3,200 to put a person through the six-week program.

"It provides more productive man-hours, I feel, than any other program in the Navy today," because it saves personnel from being discharged, said Capt. Ronald B. Lewis, commanding officer of the Miramar center, which treats 192 alcoholics, drug abusers and overeaters. About a quarter of those patients are usually overeaters.

The Navy considers any man overweight if he has more than 22 percent body fat; for a woman, the level is 30 percent. Last year, the Navy tried to help about 26,000 enlisted men and women, or 4 percent of its personnel, lose weight. Almost 900 were treated in residential programs. Officials declined

Tourism Making Comeback In S.C. After Hurricane

By Bruce Smith
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Nearly six weeks after Hurricane Hugo hit, horse carriages are clapping through city streets, golfers are back on the links, and tourism officials have begun a campaign to lure tourists back.

"We want to create an awareness that we weren't wiped off the face of the Earth," says Helen Stansell of the Charleston Trident Chamber of Commerce.

Hugo, which cut a swath of destruction along more than half of the state's 187-mile coastline on Sept. 21, resulted in an estimated $200 million loss to the state's $4.7 billion a year tourism industry. The industry provides 98,000 jobs and $280 million annually in state tax revenues.

"What we had hoped for was an 8 percent growth on $4.7 billion spending in 1988," said Bob Liming, tourism director for the state Department of Parks, Recreation and Tourism.

"What we're looking at now is a growth of 3 to 4 percent," he said. "We did have a very good summer and the first part of the fall was good from Labor Day until the storm hit."

State and local tourism groups are telling U.S. and Canadian travel agents that travel spots are open. Myrtle Beach officials are raising $500,000 for a national advertising campaign.

In the Myrtle Beach area, 62 of the area's 63 golf courses are open. Hilton Head Island and other tourist points south of Charleston sustained little, if any damage.

In Charleston, about 95 percent of the 10,000 tourist rooms are open, and most of the area's more than 500 restaurants have reopened, Ms. Stansell said.

The annual candlelight tour of historic homes is scheduled for next month, and Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbor, where the first shots of the Civil War were fired, reopened to visitors last week.

"The Number 1 reason people come to Charleston is because of the historic appeal. We were fortunate we didn't lose any of that," she said.

Church Honors Ayden Man

AYDEN — Members of the Ayden United Methodist Church held Roy Turnage Day Sunday in honor of Turnage, an active member of the church and community.

Turnage serves on the administrative board of the church and fills in for its pastor, the Rev. John D. Mitchell, when needed.

Turnage, an ordained minister, also teaches Sunday school classes at the church and at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He is president of the Greenville Golden Kiwanis Club, a member of the Ayden Masonic Order and a leader in the Ayden Sunshine Club.

Turnage began his ministerial work serving Macedonia Methodist Church, where he was conference lay leader for years. He served his first pastorate of Holy Trinity United Methodist Church in Greenville and left there to become pastor at Salem United Methodist Church near Goldsboro.

After retiring from Salem, he moved back to Ayden. His wife, Cora Bob Smith Turnage and their five children, their spouses and the couple's nine grandchildren, were present for Sunday's celebration.

Mavretic Likely To Face Opposition For House Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — House Speaker Joe Mavretic could face an uphill battle to win a second term in 1991, particularly if Democratic leaders succeed in healing the party split that helped put him in the post.

Mavretic remains publicly confident that he will be re-elected. He said that partisan loyalties are becoming less meaningful in choosing leaders in the House.

"The speaker of the House from now on is going to be the member who can attract 61 (of 120) votes," Mavretic said. "The day is gone when a minority (of the controlling party's caucus) can choose who the speaker is going to be."

But top House Democrats say Mavretic's election was a response to frustrations that grew under former House Speaker Liston Ramsey's tenure, and they predict that the House will return to more traditional partisan lines.

"I'm of the firm opinion that the next speaker will be elected by the Democratic caucus," Majority Leader Dennis A. Wicker, D-Lee, told the Winston-Salem Journal. "House Democrats are re-uniting."

Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, was elected speaker in January with the support of 20 Democrats and 45 Republicans in a dramatic coup against Ramsey, D-Madison.

Ramsey, who retained the backing of 54 Democrats, had been considered virtually certain to win an unprecedented fifth term until three days before the Legislature convened Jan. 11.

Mavretic has announced his intention to seek a second term, but at least four other House members have said that they may run, too.

The outcome of the speaker's race will be heavily affected by the 1990 election, in which all 120 House seats will be up for grabs. Both the state Democratic and Republican parties are investing considerable energy and money in trying to change the 84-46 Democratic majority.

Republican House members caucused Oct. 21 in Statesville, with some representatives saying they believed that they were being summoned to discuss a plan to nominate Minority Whip Charles L. Cromer, R-Davidson, for speaker in the next session.

That discussion apparently did not take place during the closed meeting, and Republican leaders, including Cromer, say that they anticipate sticking with Mavretic — for now.

"I think that is the only proper thing to do, because, at this point, nobody has any idea what's going to happen in the general election," Cromer said.

Minority Leader Johnathan L. Rhyne Jr., R-Lincoln, added: "My advice to Republicans was to work hard and elect enough people so that we could have a Republican speaker... But we also have the knowledge that the current speaker has, by and large, been fair to us, and we will not forget that."

Three Democrats in addition to Mavretic are openly campaigning to be speaker in the next session: Reps. Robert C. Hunter of McDowell County, John J. "Jack" Hunt of Cleveland County and Joe Hackney of Orange County. Also, Rep. George W. Miller Jr., D-Durham, said recently that some House members have urged him to enter the race and that he may do so.

But none of those candidates has gained a distinct advantage so far, and several other names surface frequently as possible compromise choices, including Wicker and Reps. Martin L. Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, and Daniel T. Blue, D-Wake.

Virtually all the mainstream Democrats say that some form of amnesty will have to be offered to some Mavretic supporters — but it will probably not apply to Mavretic himself.

Asked if Mavretic could ever receive the support of the Democratic caucus, Nesbitt said: "It's absolutely and completely out of the question."

Flowers Placed At Site Of Fallen Foot Bridge Where 5 People Died

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HEBER SPRINGS, Ark. — Residents placed flowers at the foot of a collapsed suspension bridge to mourn the five people who died after the wood-decked span plunged 50 feet while being swayed.

Eighteen others were injured in the collapse.

Pedestrians at each end of the 77-year-old bridge ran in an attempt to get off, but as it fell into the Little Red River, people "were just running in the air," said Jennifer Johnson, who was driving to her nearby home when she saw the accident.

Seven people remained hospitalized, with conditions ranging from satisfactory to serious, authorities said.

The 550-foot-long bridge hadn't been open to vehicular traffic since 1972. It had been inspected three times since it was dedicated as a national historic site in 1986, said Cleburne County Judge Harvey Adcock.

The cause of the collapse was under investigation.

At least 30 people were on the bridge Saturday and they were rocking it back and forth when the steel cables snapped, said David Lambert, an engineer for the state Highway and Transportation Department.

There were no signs at either end setting capacity or warning visitors against swinging the bridge. Officials did not believe any warnings were needed, Adcock said.

"If we would have had any inkling that it wasn't safe, we would have had it shut down," Adcock said.

Those on the bridge were attending an annual meeting of the Full Holiness church movement at nearby Prim.

Ms. Johnson said she saw the upstream side buckle. "It just turned upside down and fell into the river," she said.

"One girl said it felt like a dream until she hit the water," said Cindy Watkins, who had traveled from Oklahoma with her sister, Vicki, for the church outing. "Everybody was up there laughing and then all of a sudden it screeches and pops. It was real scary."

Another member of the church group, Daniel Rafferty of Seymour,

Mo., said he saw the bridge being rocked as he arrived.

"We thought it was kind of fun and it scared some people," Rafferty said.

It "just happened so quickly that no one had a chance to cry for help," he said. "They didn't know what happened. It was pure terror. Arms were flailing. People were panicking. Everyone was trying to save themselves."

As crews worked with cranes and bulldozers to remove the debris, residents brought flowers to lay at the foot of the bridge to remember the victims.

Among the dead was Gayla Carlton, the 34-year-old daughter of the host pastor, the Rev. Vernon Carlton of Prim.

Her uncle, Tony Carlton, had two teen-age daughters on the bridge. Both survived.

"At bedtime last night I told my daughters, 'Let's thank the Lord that y'all made it one more time.' We knelt at the bedside and prayed," Carlton said. "I have feelings for the others. There's no way I can explain it."

The others killed were Jason

Williams, 16, of Muldrow, Okla.; Dana Waltman, 11, of Vancleave, Miss.; David Shane Warren, 13, of Mayfield, Ky.; and Catrina Cotrell, in her early 20s, of Stratford, Okla.

Faircloth Heads Helms Panel

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Supporters of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., today announced a conservative support committee that will be headed by former Democratic governor candidate Lauch Faircloth.

Faircloth told a breakfast meeting of Helms backers that he hoped the senator would attack one issue — the federal deficit — in his next term.

The Conservatives for Helms Committee will be co-chaired by J.T. Knott of Raleigh and will receive help from former Democratic state senator Harold Hardison of Lenoir County. Hardison resigned his seat to run for lieutenant governor last year.

Faircloth said he felt like a lone voice crying against "the complete runaway and out of control federal deficit and the total disregard of the federal government to do anything about it."

Hardison did not speak but was at the head table. He left before the meeting ended and Faircloth refused to answer reporters questions after the meeting broke up.

Asked what role Hardison would take in the committee, Helms strategist Tom Ellis said "they're going to help us with this organization, lining up people."

Helms said he appreciated the support because he knew Republicans could not get elected to office without the help of conservative Democrats.

"It doesn't matter what party straightens out this country as long as one of them does," Helms said.

Helms said he had not made a final decision on seeking a fourth term, but that he was '99 and 44-100ths percent sure" he would seek re-election.

The Choices

Today The Daily Reflector continues its endorsement for selected candidates in races for Greenville's City Council and mayor. The newspaper's opinion is based on candidates' records of public service, statements made at public forums, and in most instances, personal interviews.

In no case does the newspaper make any claim to omniscience. These recommendations are offered to assist those in need of guidance, those who may be new to the community or those needing a quick update.

Voters will elect a mayor and six city council members in the Nov. 7 municipal election. Each may cast ballots for a mayor, one at-large council member and a district representative.

Today the newspaper presents its endorsements for members of the Greenville City Council, Districts 4 and 5. An endorsement in the mayor's race will follow Tuesday.

Zincon's Experience An Asset

Two newcomers to public office and a former Greenville City Council member are challenging each other in District 4, a largely residential district near East Carolina University.

L.H. (Buddy) Zincon and Tom Johnson Jr., both fresh faces, appear evenly matched in ability. Both are strong candidates. Jimmie Lee, who served on Greenville's City Council in the 1960s, has experience in public office but has not demonstrated as current a knowledge of issues as his opponents.

Zincon's experience as a member and chairman of the Greenville Utilities' Commission, his extensive knowledge of city issues and his management expertise make him the better choice for voters.

Zincon is an associate dean in the ECU School of Business, where he chairs the department of decision sciences. He shows keen insight into complex issues like budgeting, the community's economic structure and medical district zoning. His knowledge and training, combined with his background and his tenure on GUC, give him the skills to represent his district's interest and respond to the broad interests of a rapidly-changing city.

Zincon has discussed campaign issues in a forthright and informational manner. In doing so, he has shown a thoughtful and methodical approach that would serve well in government.

This expertise gives him an advantage over his opponents. Zincon is the best choice for District 4.

Forbes For District 5

The candidates for office in District 5 both see managing Greenville's growth as one of the city's top challenges into the 1990s. Blanche Forbes, a realtor, and Tom Harwell, an engineer, have stressed Greenville's traffic problems and emphasized the importance of zoning in their campaigns.

But Ms. Forbes has the better perspective from which to make decisions that address these concerns. Her stated positions attest to this. For example, she identifies the ECU Medical School as one of the community's top assets and suggests a non-profit organization should be formed to buy property in the medical arts district and develop it properly.

District 5 includes some of the city's most affluent areas, many of which are pressured by urban growth. Ms. Forbes has shown she understands these concerns and can address them as a city council member for District 5.

Return Shinn To Office

Greenville has only one at-large council member accountable, at the ballot box, to every voter in the city. For that reason, it is imperative the person who fills that role be knowledgeable of the diverse concerns of a constantly-changing city.

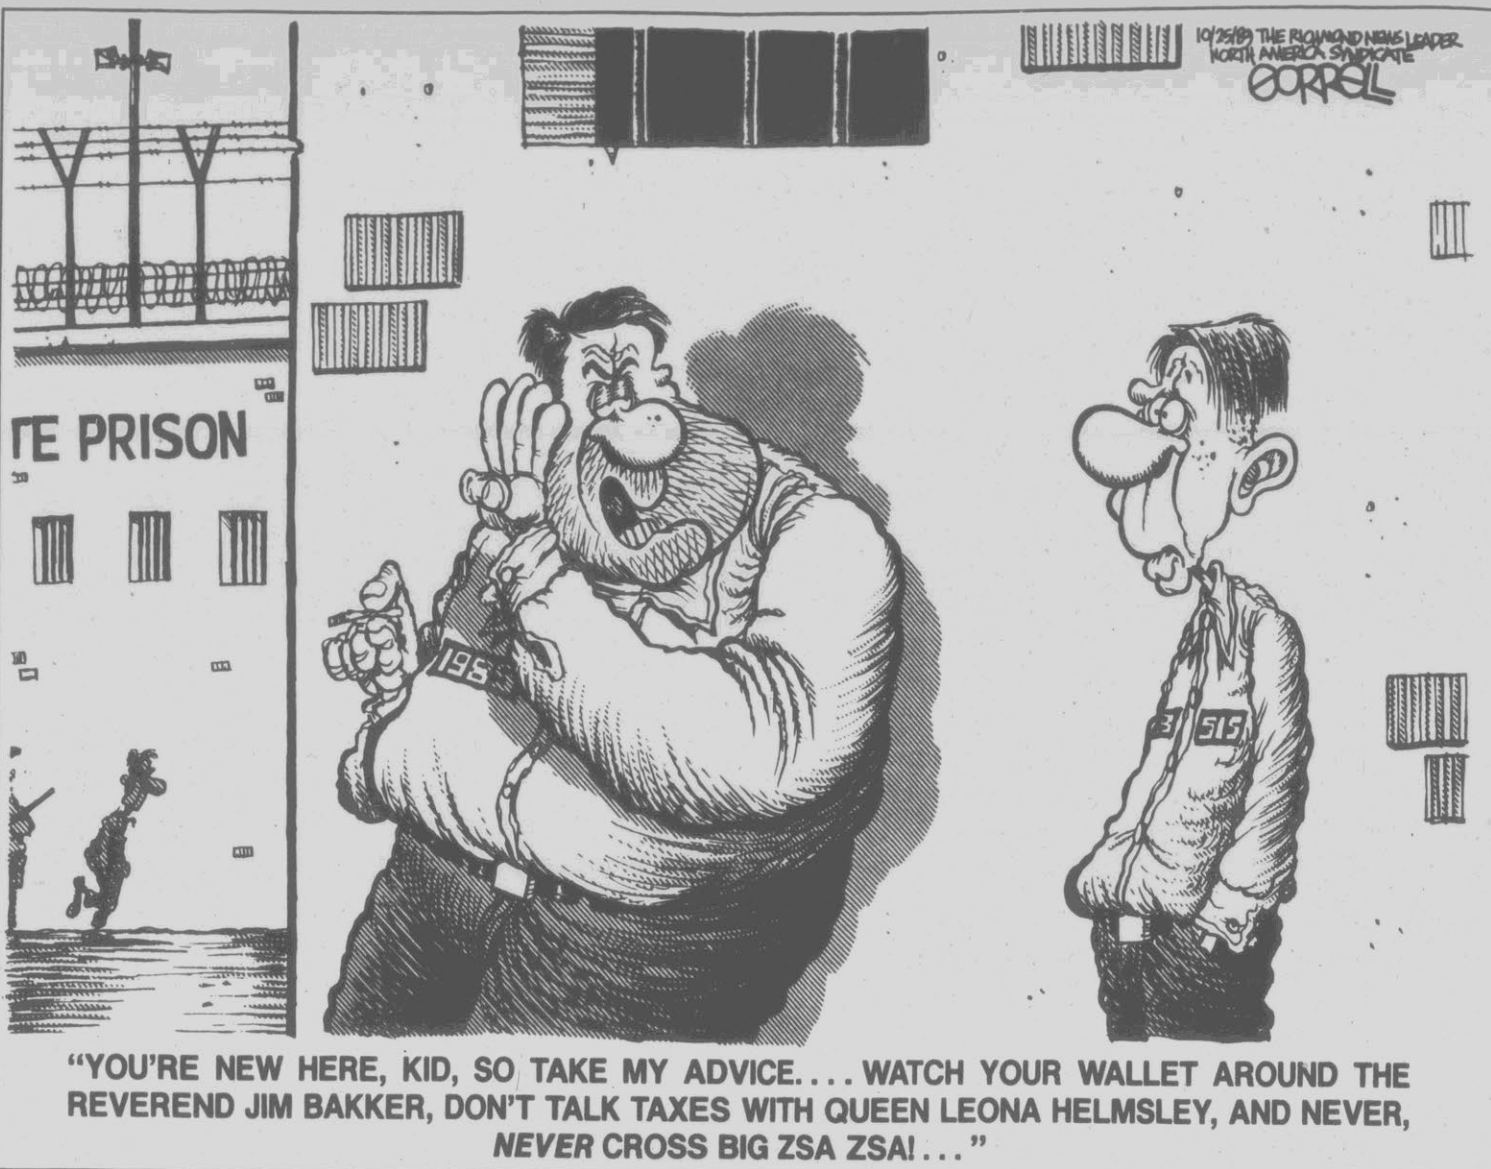

Incumbent Lorraine Shinn, who is seeking her third term as an at-large member of the city council, has demonstrated such proficiency. Her tenure in public office has given her the background and perspective necessary to represent broad interests. Her opponent, Chuck Autry, lacks this experience.

Ms. Shinn, a regional manager for the N.C. Department of Natural Resources, brings to the job a businesslike approach. On budgets, she wields a sharp pencil. The record shows she does not mind asking penetrating questions about spending. It also shows she alone voted against Greenville's four-cent property tax hike in 1988, correctly citing an administratively top heavy budget.

Ms. Shinn's record also demonstrates she is sensitive to diverse needs. She backed additional funding for law enforcement and drug education and supported a strong environmental designation for the Tar River.

Ms. Shinn needs to re-examine her thinking on Greenville's medical arts district, however. She has supported efforts to dilute zoning requirements in strict medical-related zones near Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the ECU Medical School. Ms. Shinn should recognize the long-term potential of that property and use her position in public office to secure its future.

Nevertheless, Ms. Shinn has proved she can balance broad interests as an at-large city council member. She deserves another term.

Public Forum

To the editor:
The recent decision by the Greenville City Council to revoke noise permits is one I am highly disturbed by.

Over the summer I was a member of the committee to review the noise ordinance for the City Council. After many hours of hard work and thought, our committee came to a unanimous decision to recommend the following:

1. The Greenville Police Department should train more officers to operate noise meters.
2. The city needs to educate the citizens about the ordinance.
3. If there were ever any other problems, this committee would be brought back together to work them out.

There was no discussion to eliminate noise permits. It was continually stated that the noise permits were working very well.

Last Monday, less than one hour before the council meeting, I received a call telling me a resolution to accept the findings of the Noise Ordinance Committee would be passed. Aside from the fact that I received less than one hours notice, I saw no reason to go.

In "the heat of the moment," Mildred Council, who chaired the committee and voted unanimously with the committee, Rufus Huggins and Lorraine Shinn, along with Mayor Carter, on our findings, voted to eliminate noise permits.

I now ask you, Mildred Council, how could you chair this committee and then totally disregard their recommendations? Did these four people even read the report? Obviously not, or they wouldn't have reacted this way.

I ask of you City Council, open this back up for discussion. Do the proper thing and send this back to our committee to review once again, only this time please let someone chair it who will listen to the members.

On behalf of all the students of ECU, we want to work with the council. Please let us.

To the editor:
After three months in the city, I've started a little list: Things I Like about Greenville.

It includes banks that stay open until five, neighbors who obey the leash law, a single bill for all utilities, football fans who don't block my driveway, a good video store, the recycling program, cultural events at ECU, the New York Times available on Sunday. Such things make life here convenient and pleasant.

Yesterday, however, after nearly being run over on Charles Boulevard, I started another list: Good Grief, Greenville!

Motor traffic is well regulated here, but forget walking or biking. The major arteries in town have no bike lanes, no sidewalks, no walk lights. Have you ever tried to cross the intersection of Charles and Greenville on foot? Have you ever ridden a bike on 10th Street? Some people do, mostly teenagers and ECU students, and they're treated like public enemies — honked at, yelled at, gestured at. But they're not the ones sitting in long lines at the traffic lights, wasting gas and adding to pollution.

I live less than a mile from two major shopping centers, a movie complex, three upscale restaurants, the library, and the university, but I need a car to get to any of them. How ridiculous!

Many people have told me, "I used to bike," or "I'd like to walk," but "now traffic is too bad..." The cars wouldn't be such a menace, however, if the city would just allocate some space for cyclists and pedestrians, too. It couldn't be that expensive — a little paint, a little concrete, a manually-triggered walk light here and there.

What do the candidates for mayor and city council have to say about it?

Not As Simple As Black & White

WASHINGTON — Virginia, which has been my home for the last 30 years, is an old-fashioned state in many ways. It does not crave publicity, being quietly confident that in satisfying its own standards it probably exceeds most others.

The national attention that its 1989 gubernatorial race is drawing is therefore viewed with bemusement — and not the lip-smacking delight that other (not to say lesser) states would feel at finding themselves on the network news. Reporters from three continents have been crowding into Richmond because of the possibility that Virginia may become the first state since Reconstruction with a black governor, as a result of the Nov. 7 election.

Lt. Gov. L. Douglas Wilder (D), who is black, is narrowly ahead of former state Atty. Gen. J. Marshall Coleman (R) in most of the pre-election polls.

All of us in journalism twitch when a possible "first-time-ever" story comes our way. This one has the added element of "well I never" implausibility, as in, "Well I never thought that the 'Capital of the Confederacy' and the 'Home of Massive Resistance' would be the first state to elect a black governor." Platoons of TV producers are scouring the back roads, looking for some authentic Virginian agreeable enough to say on camera, "Well, I bet old Harry Byrd must be spinning in his grave."

As a resident, it has been a fascinating experience to watch visiting journalists squeeze the complexity of this contest into their preconceived story line. It's never quite as simple as our business makes it seem.

Certainly if Wilder wins — and it's no cinch — it will mark a significant milestone in the long struggle of blacks to become full stakeholders in American society. But this campaign has not been about race and it's unlikely that race will decide it.

For Virginians, the real surprise in this contest is not that a black man is running for governor and might win, but that the choice to fill the state's top job has come down to two men so heartily disliked by so many others in the leadership of their own parties. Either way, Virginia is going to have a maverick as governor — and that is what Virginians find extraordinary.

Coleman won a bitter three-way Republican primary with only 37 percent of the votes. Four years ago, he lost to a political nobody in a two-way contest for the nomination for lieutenant-governor. Four years before that, he lost in his first try for the governorship. His only statewide victory came in the 1977 race for attorney general, when he was 35 years old. His brashness then deeply offended some of the pillars of the Old Guard, who have neither forgotten nor forgiven.

In seeking to regain a political base, Coleman has wandered all over the ideological map and has wound up well to the right of his original position on many issues. He has sacrificed some credibility in his struggle to survive.

But his transformation is less radical than Wilder's, who came to the state senate 20 years ago as an Afro-haircut advocate of black causes and now campaigns in the button-down conservative guise of the classic Richmond establishment lawyer.

Wilder has played rough to get where he is. His threat to run as an independent candidate in the 1982 Senate contest forced the Democratic establishment to drop the anointed contender and pick someone who, as it turned out, lost the race. That has not been forgotten. Wilder has feuded publicly with former Gov. (now Sen.) Charles S. Robb (D) and retiring Gov. Gerald L. Baliles (D), both of whom are now supporting him.

Coleman and Wilder have both been opportunistic on the abortion issue. The Republican developed a strong anti-abortion stance which helped in the primary. But when Wilder, who had not previously been identified as an abortion-rights activist, jumped on him in debates and ads, Coleman began backing away. Despite its prominence in this contest, the issue likely will remain dormant in the Virginia legislature, which has a strong pro-choice majority.

While Virginia happily voted Republican in the three presidential contests of the 1980s (and coincidentally profited mightily for the Reagan defense buildup), its last two Democratic governors have given the state exceptionally able leadership. Robb was competent and wildly popular; Baliles, less flashy and less adored, may have been even more resourceful in introducing activist government to a deeply conservative capitol.

In seeking to follow them, Wilder is very deliberately promising to emulate their example. His race may be unprecedented, but his tactic is as old as the hills. In challenging Wilder, Coleman is also battling the legacy of Robb and Baliles, while trying to square things with those he has offended in the past. It's a tall order and a more complex story line than TV's black-and-white drama.

Spangler Facing Calls For Resignation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Some members of the governing body of the University of North Carolina say system President C.D. Spangler has mishandled his job and two members say he should resign. But others say Spangler simply has not adjusted to working in the public eye and sometimes is misunderstood.

"I have finally reached the point that I feel that it is in the best interest of President Spangler for him to give up his job," said William Johnson, a former board chairman from Lillington who had favored Spangler's selection as president. "I am convinced ... that he doesn't have the kind of leadership the university needs to take it into the next decade or the next century," Johnson said.

Spangler has been criticized for his handling of an investigation into allegations of academic abuse in the North Carolina State basketball program. The probe led to the resignations of Bruce Poulton as N.C. State chancellor and Jim Valvano, the Wolfpack basketball coach, from his position as N.C. State's athletic director.

"I feel he handled the N.C. State matter as badly as it possibly could have been handled," said board member Walter Davis.

"I warned him personally that he should handle it quickly and absolutely — whether it was keeping both Valvano and Poulton, or firing both Valvano and Poulton — but it needed to be handled quickly or it would cause the university system and the Board of Governors a lot of problems they didn't deserve," Davis said.

The criticism represented a departure for Davis, who was instrumental in Spangler's election in 1986 as president.

Spangler's supporters countered that he is a strong leader who is simply misunderstood and has not yet adapted to working in the public sector.

"I disagree 100 percent with anybody who is calling for Spangler's resignation," said board member J. Earl Danieley. "My judgement is that Dick Spangler is an exceptionally able man. He is honest, open and decisive."

The criticism has not been limited to the Wolfpack probe. Spangler's critics cite a number of mistakes during his tenure, including delays in implementing tougher system-wide admission standards and in bringing about the resignation of Jane Milley, the controversial chancellor at the N.C. School of the Arts in Winston-Salem.

But they agree Spangler's biggest problem is his poor public image.

"The greatest problem right now is that he does not have the confidence of the public and he does not have the confidence of many people on the various campuses. It is going to be extremely difficult — if not impossible — for Mr. Spangler to gain the public confidence. That being true, I don't see how he can lead," said board member John Jordan, a former chairman of the 32-member board, who stopped short of saying Spangler should give up the post.

Spangler, 57, has served as president of the 16-campus UNC system for more than 3 1/2 years and earns $134,450 annually.

Critics said the Charlotte businessman does not seem to understand his role as a public official. Disgruntled board members said he excludes them from major decisions, and others faulted him for what they say is his lack of academic vision.

Spangler countered that he has the support of the majority of the board and added that he does not plan to step down.

"I have not considered that as a solution that would help the problems of the university at this time," Spangler said. "It is not an easy job. I am doing the best that I can."

He promised to work harder at keeping his board informed and equated his situation to the parable of the lost sheep.

"I don't want to lose the 90 percent (of the board) who are indicating confidence," he said, "but I will still try to address the needs of the three who have lost confidence."

The most recent and by far most serious criticism of Spangler was triggered by his failure to promptly release all the details of the findings of the Poole Commission, a panel he appointed to probe allegations of wrongdoing in the Wolfpack basketball program.

In particular, board members chided Spangler for failing to mention in his oral presentation of the commission's findings the stinging details included in Poole's written report, released last week.

"I think that the president's report, insofar as Valvano is concerned, is a cover-up if not a whitewash," Johnson said.

Davis said Spangler's actions put heat on the board, which meets Nov. 10.

"The Board of Governors has suffered undue criticism because we were kept in the dark" during the probe, Davis said, "and further, ended up completely in the dark after Spangler made his (oral) report to the board."

Spangler's advocates dismissed much of the criticism as "the Bill Friday syndrome," saying the president's detractors are frustrated because he is not more like his highly popular predecessor, who had held the job for 30 years.

But they acknowledged his shortcomings, saying he needs to work at consensus building, an area in which Friday excelled.

"He has made some mistakes when he has made decision quickly without extensive consultation with board members, giving some reason for dissatisfaction," Danieley said.

And this week's editorials in the Wilmington Star News and the UNC Chapel student newspaper The Daily Tar Heel calling for Spangler's resignation have convinced Danieley and others of the need for immediate damage control.

Heritage USA Residents Adapt To Quiet Life As They Await Future Minus Bakker

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT MILL, S.C. — While Heritage USA's future hangs in limbo, residents of the once-thriving religious theme park have adapted to the solitude.

"(God) told us to come. He hasn't told us to leave," resident Jean Lyons said.

The 400 families at the park developed by former PTL leader Jim Bakker await word of a new buyer.

Former Winston-Salem, N.C., Mayor M.C. Benton, the U.S. Bankruptcy Court trustee, shut down the hotel and shopping mall on Sept. 25. He also ordered everyone but residents barred from the 2,400-acre complex until someone comes forward to buy it.

"It's different, all right," said Freddie King, 67, a retired NASA researcher who lives in Mulberry Village, one of four subdivisions.

In 1978, Bakker purchased more than 1,000 acres of undeveloped land along the border of North Carolina and South Carolina.

In the next few years, he installed a $1 million satellite system and a $10 million water park. The 500-room Heritage Grand Hotel was completed in 1984 and work was begun on an adjacent 500-room Towers Hotel.

In late 1986, Bakker launched his most ambitious project to date — the $1.5 billion Villages of the World. In January 1987, ground was broken on a $100 million, 30,000-seat Crystal Palace.

That year — Bakker's last full one at PTL — the ministry boasted annual revenues of $129 million. About 6 million visitors toured Heritage USA that year — ranking it up there with Disneyland and Disney World.

It all came crashing down near the end of 1986 when Bakker resigned as PTL's president as The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer was preparing to publish the details of a $265,000 hush payment made to former church secretary Jessica Hahn, who had a brief sexual encounter with Bakker in a Florida hotel room in 1980.

This month, Bakker was convicted of 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy for overselling lodging guarantees, called "lifetime partnerships," at the religious retreat. He was sentenced to 45 years in prison and fined $500,000.

The solitude at Heritage USA has prompted mixed reaction among residents.

"We went to East Berlin on May Day one time," said Mulberry Village's Lola Pinney, 70, who testified on Bakker's behalf at his trial and recently named the Bakkers her heirs. "This is almost like that."

Added her husband, Belmont Pinney, 72: "Like a jail."

Many residents, however, said they have lived through worse. They said they will cope as best they can until something better comes along.

Security has tightened at the complex to keep out tourists who want to gawk at what the Bakkers built.

Guards are turning away about 20 would-be visitors a day, said security chief Jack Jens.

Some residents said the loss of the open atmosphere has cast a depressing pall over life at Heritage USA.

"Sometimes it's a hassle," said Maria Adams, 21, who lives in Dogwood Hills. She complains that residents are forbidden even to drive to the hotel, mall and lake.

"It's quiet. You're to yourself," she said. "We can't even go down by the lake and fish anymore."

While Heritage USA residents wait for a buyer, officials pledge existing homes are safe no matter what deal gets done.

Residents in the four subdivisions own their homes. They rely on Heritage USA for utilities and maintenance. The residents share ownership of the land. Only the 42-unit Meadows apartment complex is tied up in bankruptcy proceedings. "No one can touch the developments," said Mary Ellen Buehring, broker-in-charge of Heritage USA Real Estate.

Abuse Protest

WILMINGTON (AP) — About 125 people marched Saturday to deliver the message that battered wives, abused children and victims of rape are not responsible for the violence against them.

The participants marched from the Battleship North Carolina to the New Hanover County Courthouse waving banners and chanting.

Many of the marchers wore "You Can't Beat A Woman" T-shirts and a drum was beaten every 15 seconds as they walked to indicate that a woman is beaten every 15 seconds.

Lemonade

RALEIGH (AP) — Five people attending an IBM Family Day went to the hospital after drinking lemonade that had been mistakenly prepared with dishwasher detergent, police said.

Three of them were admitted for observation, and two were treated and released from Rex Hospital.

They complained of mouth and throat irritation after drinking the lemonade at the catered picnic. The detergent was accidentally added to the drink when it was mistaken for lemonade mix, police said.

Professors

RALEIGH (AP) — A statewide association of university professors has endorsed measures designed to give senior faculty members greater oversight of athletic programs on their campuses.

Prompted by concerns about academic abuses at North Carolina State University, the steps are intended to apply to all colleges and universities with athletic programs.

The measures were approved in the form of a resolution this month by about 40 members of the N.C. Conference of the American Association of University Professors. The resolution has been sent to Robert L. "Roddy" Jones, chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, and UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr.

Arson Arrest

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Wilmington woman was arrested Sunday and charged with setting her housemate's bed on fire after a night of violence that earlier brought police to the house.

Mary Harvin, 35, was charged with first-degree arson and was held Sunday night in the New Hanover County Jail under $25,000 bond.

Shooting Death

GREENSBORO (AP) — The shooting death of a 21-year-old man early Sunday in a crowded Greensboro parking lot triggered a melee that left a police officer unconscious and four people in custody.

Franklin Leon Johnson, 21, of Greensboro was killed by shotgun wounds to the neck and cheek as he stood in the parking lot of the East Bessemer Ave. Auto Shack about 1:10 a.m., police said.

Four people, including Johnson's brother, Michael Lendl Johnson, 25, were charged with obstructing police at the scene as they investigated the shooting, according to warrants.

Police used Mace to disperse the crowd after several officers were hit with bottles and other objects after they arrived at the parking lot, Officer R.W. Hardee said.

Drug Dealers Getting Longer Prison Terms Than Murderer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Convicted drug dealers are getting longer prison sentences than are convicted murderers under new federal sentencing guidelines. Some of the judges handing out the sentences say they are just following the law.

When U.S. District Court Judge Hiram Ward sentenced Albert Booker of New York City to 27 years in prison without parole on a charge of selling crack cocaine last week, he told Booker's attorney: "To be quite frank with you, I don't like the guidelines any more than you do. But they are the law of the land, and I'm sworn to uphold it."

Last week in U.S. District Court in Winston-Salem, the first 25 defendants sentenced under the guidelines received an average sentence of more than 11 years in prison without parole. Most of those defendants were convicted of drug or robbery charges.

That average is more than a year longer than the 10-year sentences given in state court to Herbert Duckett, who was convicted of shooting his wife to death, and Thomas Michael Eaton, who was convicted of beating his girlfriend to death with a baseball bat. And Duckett and Eaton will be eligible for parole after serving less than four years.

U.S. District Judge Richard Erwin took the unusual step of sentencing below the guideline minimum. Charlie Wade Powell, 56, was convicted of cocaine trafficking and faced a sentence of 22 years to 28 years without parole. Erwin reduced the sentence to 20 years, saying, "I think a judge ought to have some control over the sentence he imposes."

U.S. Attorney Robert H. Edmunds Jr. said the longer sentences are the result of a growing intolerance among American toward drugs and drug-related crimes. The sentences "do seem kind of startling," he said. "... but I don't feel that they're unnecessarily harsh given the magnitude of the problem."

Erwin has taken to explaining the sentences to defendants. "You understand, do you not, that the good citizens of this country have decided to declare war on drugs," he asks, explaining that they are now a prisoner of that war.

Those explanations are aimed more toward the public and potential drug dealers, Erwin said.

Edmunds said it's too soon to tell if the sentences are deterrents to other drug dealers. But the sentences have one major benefit, aside from whether they serve as a deterrent. "These folks won't be doing it again," he said.

And that's good news to Fred H. Gregory Jr., the agent in charge of the local Drug Enforcement Administration office.

"I'm all for Congress when they give the courts authority to give the longer sentences," Gregory said. "The heavier the penalty the better, as far as I'm concerned."

But some attorneys are concerned that the sentences are too harsh.

"It's become outrageous," Winston-Salem attorney David B. Freedman said of the federal drug sentences. "The point is, you have to make the punishment fit the crime. And in the drug cases, I'm not so sure that's the case."

District Of Columbia Matches Record For Killings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The District of Columbia's 1989 homicide toll already equals last year's record of 369 killings — with more than half blamed on drug-related violence — and officials say they see no end in sight.

With two months remaining in 1989, district police reported that five slayings discovered during a seven-hour period over the weekend brought the tally to last year's record death total.

Three of the weekend killings were linked to drugs. The other two were a 13-year-old girl and her aunt who were found stabbed to death in their apartment Saturday.

Police blame more than 60 percent of the district's slayings on drugs, particularly the arrival of crack cocaine.

The federal government is making the nation's capital a test case for national anti-drug strategies, and city police are working long hours trying to curb drug-related violence.

"It's awful. But people in this community are resorting to deadly violence to resolve conflict," said police spokesman Lt. Reginald Smith.

The most recent victim of the weekend was a 41-year-old man found dead of multiple gunshot wounds early Sunday. He had $11,000 cash and a large quantity of heroin in his pockets when his body was found, according to police detectives.

At the end of 1988, police had said 372 people were killed in homicides, but they revised that number downward Sunday by subtracting three victims of police shootings from the official total.

Barry, whose political fortunes are slipping partly because the murder rate is skyrocketing, calls the problem "unstoppable."

National Drug Policy Coordinator William J. Bennett acknowledged recently that the district's drug and crime problem — the focus of special attention from his office — will be difficult to solve.

"No one should be surprised to learn that the nation's capital is still plagued by a serious drug problem," Bennett said while reviewing federal efforts in the district's drug war. "The drug-related murder rate is intolerably high, the prisons are too crowded, drugs continue to be sold openly around schools, parks and housing projects."

Bennett has lent federal prison space, special agents and investigative tools to the city's anti-drug effort, and city police have been working 12-hour shifts patrolling drug-infested neighborhoods and housing projects.

But on Friday, President Bush vetoed the city's annual spending bill, delaying a special $32 million federal anti-crime package.

By vetoing the bill because it would allow the city to use local tax money to finance Medicaid abortions for poor women, Bush put on hold a plan to hire 700 extra police, eight new judges, and a host of school-based anti-drug educational programs.

"We're going to have to study whether to cut out overtime," Police Chief Isaac Fulwood said after the veto. "Certainly, we need to rethink purchasing strategies, and slow them down ... This certainly won't help fight crime."

Most city officials feel that until the city's appetite for drugs subsides, there is little they can do.

"The large percentage of the killings are related to the drug scene, and in many cases ... hits that are put out in arguments over turf," said Barry spokeswoman Lurma Rackley. "We can delay them, but as long as the drug market is still thriving, those targeted killings are probably going to continue."

Fulwood, who has contradicted Barry's negative view of the murder situation, said the situation isn't as bleak as the mayor suggested.

"We are making some progress, and there are some things that are positive," Fulwood said. "The number of killings, per day, is decreasing. It's still too high, but we are going in the right direction."

According to police statistics, 49 people were killed in the nation's capital during August, 32 in September, and 34 in October. Still, the September and October figures represent a murder a day.

Parents Try To Keep Ghouls And Goblins Of Halloween Out Of The Public Schools

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pumpkin festivals are sprouting in some school districts, where parents are trying to keep Halloween out of the hallways and off school grounds because of its connection with witches and Satan.

In Alachua County, Fla., Robert Guyer gathered the signatures of about 200 fellow parents who think the holiday is a religious celebration of Wicca, a modern pagan witchcraft cult.

When teachers dress up like witches, "what happens to these little Christian kids like mine?" asked Guyer, a University of Florida law student. "How are they going to feel when it's dress-up day and they don't dress up?"

Officials in Alachua County left the decision on Halloween to school principals.

In neighboring Levy County, the superintendent asked schools to avoid using Halloween decorations and to cancel school celebrations.

Halloween, which is being celebrated Tuesday night, apparently sprang from an ancient ceremony honoring the Celtic god of death. In medieval England, it came to be known as All Hallows'

Eve, celebrated before the feast day of All Hallows, now All Saints' Day. As is the case with the pagan Christmas tree, few pay attention to its religious origins.

But Guyer cites a recent 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in Atlanta that found that prayers before high school football games violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

"As Easter has been banned in favor of spring holiday, as Christmas has been banned in favor of winter holiday, so, too, Halloween should be banned in favor of fall holiday," he said.

The Rev. Bill Ligon of Brunswick, Ga., agreed: "Some of the symbolism used for Halloween is used also by recognized religions. I think the law as interpreted by the 11th Circuit should be impartially applied to any religious activity at school."

Halloween's defenders say it has become a non-religious holiday.

"The witches and goblins of Halloween are no more believable than Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny or the Tooth Fairy. ... Are they going to ban those, too?" asked Charley Mack, a father of six in Tallahassee, Fla., where several schools are inaugurating "harvest festivals" in place of Halloween.

In Texas, Harlingen Superintendent T. Carl McMillan responded to parents' anxieties by asking principals to tone down celebrations.

"I asked them to review their practices and if they had anything that depicted blood and gore to try to eliminate that," McMillan said.

An elementary school in Amarillo planned to celebrate Pumpkin Fun Day rather than Halloween.

And in Frederick County, Md., three elementary schools have discontinued Halloween events. At least one decided to hold a fall celebration instead.

"I personally have trouble defending ghosts and goblins in our instructional curriculum," said John Thompson, a county school official.

Parents are upset by lurid descriptions of devil worship on television and in rock music, said Fred Eisenbraun of the Rapid City Cops for Christ, in South Dakota.

Eisenbraun was in Worthington, Minn., last week to conduct an Occult Awareness Seminar for teachers, parents and teenagers.

"Satanists do not isolate themselves to New York, to Denver or to Dallas," Eisenbraun said. "They like rural areas, like Worthington, Minnesota, or Rapid City, South Dakota, where there's an availability of abandoned buildings, animals, and wide-open areas where there aren't enough cops to check on them."

The popularity of slasher movies and costumes that imitate them worry other parents.

Movies like "Halloween" and "Friday the 13th," are popular enough to make their protagonists among the hottest-selling costumes this year, outfitters say — along with Batman and Jim and Tammy Bakker.

But Freddy Krueger, the ogre of Elm Street, isn't invited to the Halloween party at the Bethesda Elementary School in Waukesha, Wis. Students there were forbidden from dressing as characters in any of the graphically violent movies, said Principal Nancy Marsho.

"We don't appreciate Freddy here at Bethesda," Ms. Marsho said.

VA Panel Will Make New Study Of Claims Over Agent Orange

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An advisory committee to the Department of Veterans Affairs this week may open the door to a crack in disability benefits for Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange.

Responding to a federal court decision in May, the 15-member Veterans' Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards will look again at scientific papers and studies on the herbicide used to clear dense foliage that hid the enemy.

This time, however, the committee will use standards considered less strict than those used for determining other service-connected disabilities.

No one is predicting the outcome. But there is agreement that VA Secretary Edward J. Derwinski wants to resolve the issue quickly and in favor of veterans.

"I don't think he's going to fool around very long," VA spokesman Don Smith said. "He's so far exhibited a degree of willingness — if not impatience — to go along rather rapidly with this."

Once the committee does its work Derwinski is "kind of on his own as to how he wants to fly on this," Smith said. He said Derwinski will make a final determination on the committee's recommendations within two weeks of receiving results of the meeting.

According to one congressional source, Derwinski's actions mean "he's almost promised people" that he will take some positive action for veterans.

Veterans blame exposure to Agent Orange for cancers, skin diseases and genetic damage leading to miscarriages or birth defects. The committee will spend its first two days reviewing about 20 or 30 studies on the connection between exposure and non-Hodgkins lymphoma, one of the most frequently cited cancers, then study other diseases at later meetings.

Volunteers Aid Hunt For Fires

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Tens of thousands of citizen volunteers helped patrol streets in efforts to reduce the number of arson fires during the city's Devil's Night.

Authorities declined to release figures on the number of Sunday night fires and arrests in the pre-Halloween spree, which drew national attention in 1984 when 810 fires were set in Detroit. Since that year, the number of fires has declined each Devil's Night period.

Hawaiian Island Grieves Over Crash In Which High School Team Perished

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — A small island grieved over the loss of 13 residents, including members of a high school volleyball team, who were among 20 people killed in a twin-engine commuter plane crash.

A National Transportation Safety Board team left Sunday from Washington, D.C., for the island of Molokai to investigate the cause of the crash, which killed all aboard. A six-person NTSB team was expected at the site today.

The Aloha IslandAir DH6 Twin Otter crashed into the wall of Halawa Valley on the eastern end of the island, just below the ridgeline and about 700 feet above the valley floor, Coast Guard spokesman Scott Hartvigsen said.

The cause of the crash was not known.

Rescuers recovered 20 bodies from the charred wreckage of the plane on Sunday. Fire rescue teams used helicopters to ferry the bodies back to Kahului Airport on the island of Maui, said Maui Deputy Fire Chief Leroy Hokoana said. The islands are separated by 10-mile-wide Pailolo Channel.

The victims included eight members of Molokai High School's volleyball teams, the coach of the girl's team and the school's athletic director, Principal Clifford Horita said. Three other island residents also were killed.

Horita said school would be held today, but he planned to arrange a special morning assembly to help students cope with the tragedy.

"We'll try to help them learn how to handle this, first as a group and then for those who need it, individually," he said.

Before the wreckage was found, about 600 of Molokai Island's 6,000 residents gathered at a community center in the town of Kaunakakai. When officials announced that the plane had crashed and there were no survivors, many wept and comforted each other.

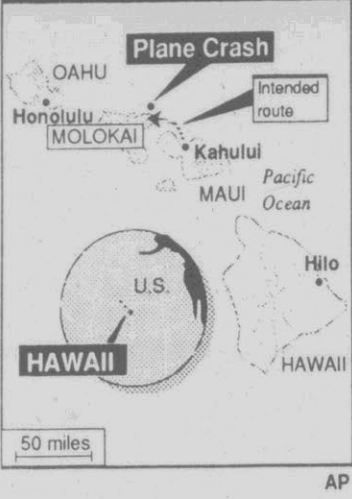

"In any tragedy in a small community like this, everyone feels very badly," Horita said. "Everyone knows everyone here."

The announcement of the wreckage was made by Jonathan Lindo, whose daughter had returned with other members of the volleyball teams on an earlier flight.

"They're still a part of us," said team member Rhonda Dudot.

The DH6 Twin Otter was rebuilt in 1986 and had no significant maintenance problems. Peter Dudgeon, the airline's vice president and general manager, said Sunday. The plane was 16 years old and had made 28,000 flights.

Missing DH6 Twin Otter found

The plane left Kahului Airport at 6:25 p.m. Saturday for a scheduled 35-minute flight, said Don Early, air traffic manager for the Federal Aviation Administration at the Honolulu Airport.

The Coast Guard launched a search shortly after 8 p.m. when the airline reported the plane missing, officials said. The plane was sighted at 5:45 a.m. Sunday. Wreckage was found over a 300-foot area.

There was no distress call from the crew and no signals were detected from an emergency locator transmitter aboard the plane, said Sgt. William Bowker, of the Joint Rescue Coordination Center.

The pilot of the plane, Captain Bruce Pollard, 30, had flown for the airline for two years, Dudgeon said. He and First Officer Phil Helfrich, 27, were from Oahu Island, where Honolulu is located.

The NTSB team is expected to interview possible witnesses, as well as review the maintenance history of the plane, the crew's training and weather conditions at the time of the crash.

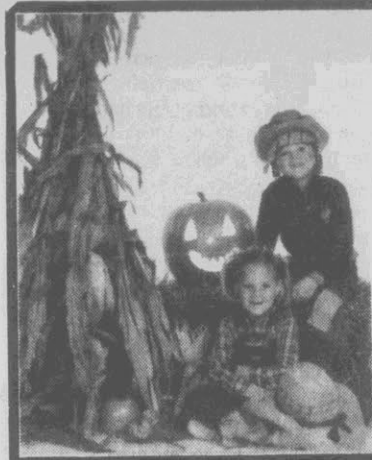

At the time of the flight, the area had scattered clouds and northeast winds at 18 mph, the National Weather Service reported.

Aloha IslandAir said the passenger list included Peter and Elizabeth Wiley of Philadelphia, John and Christina Craig of Houston, and Hank Gabriel of Maui.

The Molokai passengers were identified by the airline as girl's volleyball team coach Odetta Rapanot; the school's athletic director John Ino; Leilani Ahina, Jared Elia, Lea Dunnam, Colette Kekalia, Natalie Helm, Nancy Pierce, Nancine Mahiai, Aloma Spencer, Rodrigo Senica, Jovencio Ruiz, and Testa Ku.

Ages were not immediately available.

Anti-Abortion Forces Rally

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Anti-abortion activists accused their foes of manipulating public opinion and their pro-choice counterparts urged legislators to guard a woman's right to end a pregnancy during weekend rallies that drew thousands.

An estimated 10,000 to 20,000 anti-abortion activists rallied and then marched to the Ohio Statehouse on Saturday. A day later, a crowd estimated by police at between 10,000 and 15,000 marched past the Statehouse to Bicentennial Park to rally in favor of legal abortion.

Both events were peaceful and no arrests were made.

On Saturday, John C. Willke of Cincinnati, president of the National Right to Life Society, blasted the opposition, saying a reported upswing in support of the pro-choice movement was manufactured by well-financed interests.

"Is it true there is a major pro-abortion tide? It sure doesn't look like it," he said. "There is a campaign around the country, with a lot of money, and they're saying that America is changing its opinion on the abortion issue."

Willke also questioned polls and surveys on the abortion issue, calling them misleading.

Senate Leaders Join Bush In Condemnation Of Ortega

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congress should honor its commitment to the Bush administration to provide humanitarian aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua through next February's elections there, Senate leaders say.

Despite the weekend exchange of hostilities between President Bush and Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega in Costa Rica, administration officials are indicating it is unlikely they will seek a renewal of military aid for the U.S.-backed rebels at this time.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., on Sunday joined Bush's condemnation of Ortega for threatening to end a 19-month cease-fire.

"It was a very unwise move, particularly the timing of it," said Mitchell. Dole, calling Ortega a "tinhorn dictator," said he will present a resolution to the full Senate on Tuesday condemning the Nicaraguan leader.

For his part, Bush on Saturday called Ortega a "little man" and an "unwanted animal at a garden party" after Ortega said he might no longer honor the cease-fire between his Sandinista government and the U.S.-backed Contras that has been in effect since March 1988.

Although he later said he would decide on Tuesday whether to break the cease-fire, Ortega's original declaration marred a two-day Western Hemisphere conference held in Costa Rica to honor that nation's 100 years as a democracy.

Any effort to renew U.S. military aid to the Contras would be sure to generate strong new opposition in Congress. The agreement reached last spring between the administration and Congress envisions a disbanding of the Contras after the Feb. 25 elections.

The agreement gives congressional committees that oversee Contra aid the authority to cancel a $49 million aid package when they review it a final time in late November.

Bush, asked at a news conference on Saturday whether he would now press for more military aid for the Contras, said, "We'll let you know, we'll let you know."

However, a senior administration official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Bush was not trying to hint that he might seek to renew military aid.

Mitchell, interviewed along with Dole on NBC's "Meet the Press," called Ortega's declaration — which startled participants at the conference — an outgrowth of a rivalry between the Nicaraguan leader and Costa Rican President Oscar Arias.

"It is my hope the free and open election process will go forward and that the results will be accepted by the people of Nicaragua," Mitchell said.

He said "we intend to honor" the agreement with the administration last spring to provide humanitarian assistance through the Feb. 25 elections in Nicaragua.

Dole said he hoped as a result of Ortega's statements "we'd have quick action on the remaining humanitarian aid."

Detainees Traveled With Suspected Spy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MAPUTO, Mozambique — Six Americans members of a missionary medical team in custody after being seized by Mozambican soldiers were traveling with a Briton previously linked to spying for rebels, the government said today.

U.S. diplomats were seeking access to the Americans, who were detained last week near the border with Malawi, said U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Cynthia Eford. The group that sent the Americans said the Briton was acting as their guide.

The official news agency AIM today quoted the Foreign Ministry as identifying eight people who had allegedly crossed into Mozambique illegally. The Foreign Ministry said six were Americans, one was a South African missionary, George Bezedenhout, and another was a British citizen, Peter Hammond, who lives in South Africa.

AIM did not say what the government planned to do with the eight, but a spokeswoman for a Washington congressman said the Mozambicans planned to question them in Maputo.

Hammond's name came up in the 1988 trial of an Australian missionary who confessed to working illegally for the Mozambique National Resistance guerrillas and entering the country illegally.

"Hammond runs a far-right, quasi-religious outfit called 'Frontline Fellowship,' which is openly supportive of South African-backed bandit organizations such as UNITA in Angola, and the MNR in Mozambique," AIM said.

The agency claimed 'Frontline Fellowship' was founded by South African soldiers who wanted to take Bibles on operations into Angola.

GUILD OF OPTICIANS
YOUR EYEGLOSS PRESCRIPTION
What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions?"

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?
A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?
A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?
A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?
A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?
A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580

Reel-Coward Vows Spoken

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The wedding of Debra Melean Coward and Gilbert Michael Reel was solemnized Sunday at 3 p.m. in Tranters Creek Church of Christ. The Rev. William Roberson officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. James Earl Coward of Route 2, Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. Glen Gilbert Reel are parents of the bridegroom, and his grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. A.B. Ward Jr., all of Route 5, Greenville.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal satin gown with a jeweled sabbra neckline and long puffed sleeves trimmed with beaded lace motifs. The basque bodice was embellished with silk floss embroidered lace beaded with sequins and pearls. The full skirt extended into a cathedral-length train. Her double-layered, cathedral-length veil was attached to a tiara with pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of white and primrose silk roses accented by pearl sprays and streamers.

Denise Coward was maid of honor for her sister, and matron of honor was Shelia Dixon Foell. Both are from Greenville. Bridesmaids were Grayson Coward, sister-in-law of the bride, and Melinda McRoy, sister of the bridegroom, both of Greenville. Tina Morris of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl. All wore teal satin tea-length dresses and carried primrose carnations, baby's breath and greenery.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Groomsman were Jerry Coward, brother of the bride, and Rusty Foell, both of Greenville, and Dennis Roberson of Washington, N.C.

The mother of the bride wore a mauve satin street-length dress, and the mother of the bridegroom wore a rose street-length dress. Each wore a white cymbidium orchid, and grandparents were remembered with corsages.

Nuptial music was presented by pianist Lynn Coward and vocalist Beth Gurganus.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. An after-rehearsal pig picking was given by parents of the bridegroom. Several parties and showers were also given for the couple.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School, and is employed in the office of the Pitt County Clerk of Superior Court. The bridegroom, a graduate of North Pitt High School, is self-employed and also works at Weyerhaeuser.

The couple will live on Route 5, Greenville, after a wedding trip.

Wrong Direction, Abby

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I take strong issue with your response to "Wrong-Way Housewife." Daily experience convinces me that a sense of direction is either inborn or not, on an individual basis. I have always had it — my husband has not. And lest you assume he is "slow-witted," he has an IQ exceeding 150 and was a high-ranking military officer in a position requiring exemplary map-reading skills. He also has an MBA. By his own admission, he has absolutely no sense of direction. He has striven all his life to overcome this failing, to no avail. This is a man who has the willpower of a bull and intelligence approaching genius level, so please don't tell him to "try harder." — The Family Navigator In Scottsdale

Dear Abby: Usually you're right on course, but your answer to "Wrong-Way Housewife" was 180 degrees off course.

A sense of direction is a right-brain function, and some of us are more left-brained than right-brained. Case in point: My husband and our oldest son are very good at directions — they always know where north is and can get anywhere with no problem. They both tend to be right-brained people. My younger son and I barely know left from right and find directions impossible to follow. We tend to be left-brained people.

Abby, please be a little more sympathetic to the ones who have this problem. It's no fun, believe me. — Wrong-Way Kennedy

Dear Abby: While I was driving, my wife awoke from a sound sleep to tell me that I had made a wrong turn!

I can get lost in a revolving door, but my wife has an unerring sense of direction. Those of us without it know that to keep from getting lost is not, as you said, "Simply a matter of paying attention." The fact of the matter is that many of us have to work twice as hard to get lost only half as often. — The Rev. Raymond

Dear Abby: I can't believe you told "Wrong-Way Housewife" to "try harder."

Abby, her problem could be the result of a minor accident, or even something she was born with — in which case, no amount of "trying" can help her. It's like saying, "Abby, you could be a great opera singer, or a ballet dancer, or a gold medal Olympic winner, if you would just try harder."

Come on, Abigail, get real. — Disappointed In You

Dear Disappointed: All right, I'll take my lumps. I said, "No one is born with a sense of direction," which I still think is true. But I should have gone on to say that many people are born without one, due to a learning disability.

So, give me a break, and give me a charitable "D minus" on that one.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Couple Married Sunday

FOUNTAIN — Beth Ann Hines and Todd Mills Creekmore were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in Fountain Baptist Church.

The Rev. Robert C. White conducted the double-ring ceremony. Organist Janet Smith Williams and vocalist Lori Harper presented wedding music.

Daughter of Dalma and Shirley Hines of Fountain, the bride was given in marriage by her father, Wayne and Becky Creekmore of Fayetteville are parents of the bridegroom.

Terri Jennings of Greenville was maid of honor. Wendy Ellis of Farmville was matron of honor. Lisa Meeks of Greenville was bridesmaid. Honorary bridesmaids were Barbara Smith, sister of the bride, and Leigh Hines, sister-in-law of the bride, both of Fountain, and Tara Creekmore of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom.

Angela Jean Hines of Fountain, niece of the bride, was flower girl. The best man was Charlie Justice of Greenville. Ushers included Terry Creekmore of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom, and Bill Barrett of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of satin with a V-shaped, beaded neckline with illusion yoke and fitted bodice trimmed in pearls and iridescents. The back was accented by a semi-cathedral apron of schiffli lace. She wore a halo of seed pearls and flowers, and carried a bouquet of white and blue roses with seed pearls.

Bridal attendants wore satin royal blue tea-length gowns with three-quarter length puff sleeves. Their flowers were identical to those of the bride. The flower girl wore a long white dress of satin and lace with a royal blue sash. She carried a basket of blue and white roses.

A reception was held in the Fountain Community Building and was given by family and friends.

The couple will be living in Greenville after a wedding trip to Cancun, Mexico.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and is employed by Panama Jack of Farmville. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed by Grady White Boats of Greenville.

A rehearsal dinner, several bridal showers and a lingerie shower for the bride were held prior to the wedding.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, bouncing back from last week's drop.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 12.71 to 2,609.43 in the first half hour of trading.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 635 up, 359 down and 429 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 18.40 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said the upswing was attributable to "bargain hunting" by traders attracted to stocks that have been hit by selling this month.

They also noted hopes for evidence in the next few days that the economy was maintaining a moderate pace of growth, despite a recent barrage of dis-appointing corporate earnings reports.

The government is due to report Tuesday on the index of leading economic indicators for September.

Advance estimates call for the index, which is designed to function as a kind of economic crystal ball, to show a modest increase.

Among actively traded blue chips, Philip Morris gained 3/8 to 42; General Electric 1/8 to 53 3/4; International Business Machines 1/2 to 100 3/8, and Chevron 3/8 to 67.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .67 to 186.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .53 at 370.54.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 17.01 to 2,596.72, bringing its loss for the week to 92.42 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 5 to 2 on the NYSE, with 410 up, 1,102 down and 417 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 170.33 million shares, against 175.24 million in the previous session.

Wildfire Threatens Malibu Area

MALIBU, Calif. — Firefighters aided by decreasing winds worked through the night to surround a wildfire that charred more than 4,000 acres and forced 2,200 campers to flee, a spokeswoman said today.

A million-dollar estate and another home under construction burned Sunday, but there was no immediate estimate of total damage, officials said. Among those who left their homes when the fire threatened areas in and around this celebrity enclave was entertainer Dick Clark, according to a neighbor.

Firefighters surrounded 80 percent of the blaze by early today, said

Vicki Crabtree, a Ventura County dispatcher.

"We still have wind conditions, but not as drastic as Sunday," she said today. Gusts had gone as high as 40 mph or more Sunday; Ms. Crabtree did not have an exact wind speed figure this morning.

The fast-moving fire began about 5 a.m. Sunday and thick, dark smoke forced closure of 10 miles of the busy Pacific Coast Highway. The cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Jo Ann Malac, a neighbor of Clark's, said she took her dog and fled in her car. "I freaked out. We were both screaming and barking," she said. She got behind another car going down a road toward the ocean, and in her panic "I thought, God, he's not going fast enough," she said. She said she later learned the other driver was Clark.

The fire left a barren trail similar to a moonscape. Up to 570 firefighters from Los Angeles and Ventura counties battled the blaze while four air tankers and six helicopters bombed a two-mile front of flames with retardant and water.

"We don't have access to the water up in those canyons. We are fighting it mainly from the air," said another fire spokeswoman, Sandy Wells.

A pillar of smoke blew over the ocean north of Malibu and could be seen for 30 miles to the south. Residents in the area hosed down the roofs of their homes, while charred trees and smoldering brush lined the coastal highway.

In other areas, flames burned down to the ocean's edge, where they were extinguished by waves.

About 2,200 people were evacuated from five area campgrounds, including 100 children from the Hess Kramer Jewish Temple Camp.

The 12- and 13-year-olds were on a three-day weekend retreat, said camp coordinator Paul Kipness.

"There wasn't time to be scared; you could see the smoke," Kipness said. "The kids responded very well."

Farther inland, firefighters contained a 376-acre blaze in the Black Canyon-Box Canyon area near Simi Valley Sunday afternoon, said fire spokeswoman Virginia Dillard. No structures were burned and there were no injuries.

The Simi Valley fire moved east along Black Canyon, away from the city of Simi Valley, before it was contained, Ms. Dillard said.

Navy Melting Fat

to say how many were discharged because of their weight. But the Navy estimates that about 10 percent of its 614,598 men and women are overweight.

In the Miramar program, the average person who attends is 50 to 100 pounds overweight. They are mostly people who have tried, without lasting success, everything from diuretics to laxatives, from fasting to purging. Most have spent many years in the military, and for them, success means staying in the Navy. Of those who enroll in the Miramar program, about 70 percent succeed in keeping their weight down, according to one-year follow-up surveys.

Since 1984, all Navy personnel are measured about every six months for fat and put through an hourlong "physical readiness" test that includes a 1 1/2-mile run, push-ups and sit-ups. Miramar is open only to supervisory officers, or second class petty officers and above. After investing what can add up to millions of dollars in training, the Navy is reluctant to discharge an individual because of his weight, Lt. Cmdr. Jim Blunt, an administrator involved with the program, said. But the Navy will enroll only those considered valuable and those who want to continue their service for several more years. "The Navy is not interested in investing six weeks treatment in someone who is going to be a poor sailor," Blunt said.

To the dismay of commanding officers who send personnel to Miramar's weight-loss program, many do not return dramatically slimmer than when they left.

"It's not our intention to melt the weight off because it won't work and the weight will come right back. We try to have a more long-term solution," Blunt said.

Many arrive at Miramar calling it a "fat farm," figuring they will be placed on strict diets and run through a treadmill of rigorous exercise. They are usually surprised to learn they are allowed to eat whatever they want.

"Nothing stops me from going to chow hall and pigging out," Chief Marc Rioux, in his final week at Miramar, said. "When I first got here, I thought this was asinine. How the hell would anyone lose weight with three meals a day? I thought they would give me a strict diet and run your butt off. And then I realized this place is working on your mind. I found myself asking for less and less food — and I was getting full."

Blunt and a staff of 22 counselors hope to help the individual alter his or her habits and outlook as they would any substance abuser. They believe the chronic overeater uses food just as an alcoholic drinks or a drug user takes dope. Each abuser, they say, has a disease over which they have little control. So the weight program is modeled after Alcohol Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous. And to the surprise of some, alcoholics, drug users and overeaters are placed in one program at Miramar.

"They get the opportunity to re-enter their disease three times every day. Alcoholics put the plug in the jug and that's it," said Blunt, a former overeater. "We have to take the tiger out of the cage and pet it three times a day."

Crash Kills Five

ly aircraft carrier used exclusively for training.

After the crash, helicopters flew the casualties to hospitals in Pensacola and Alabama.

Crewmember Anthony Lopez, 21, of West Valley, Utah, had second- and third-degree burns covering about 45 percent of his body, and was listed in critical but stable condition, said Suzette George, nursing supervisor at University of South Alabama Medical Center in Mobile.

The other person injured was being treated at the U.S. Naval Hospital in Pensacola.

The dead also were taken there. Their names were not released.

In Pensacola, relatives of crewmembers worried about finding out who the casualties were.

"We're all just shaken. We don't know what to think one way or the other. I just want to know something," said Cathy Webb, whose boyfriend serves on the carrier.

The crash occurred six days before the anniversary of the Nov. 4, 1944, attack that killed 47 and injured 127 on the ship in World War II.

The original crew plans to hold a reunion next weekend in Pensacola.

Commissioned Feb. 17, 1943, the Lexington's planes sank or destroyed more than a million tons of Japanese shipping and 1,039 enemy aircraft during World War II.

The carrier was dubbed "The Blue Ghost" by Japanese propagandist Tokyo Rose because she had reported it sunk several times only to return to battle painted a solid blue-grey color, unusual in wartime when ships are usually camouflaged.

After the war, the Lexington was mothballed until being reactivated in 1955. It reported to Pensacola on Dec. 29, 1962, to serve as the Navy's training carrier. It is scheduled to continue that role after moving next September to Corpus Christi, Texas.

The ship has been a favorite of movie producers with roles in the film "Midway" and the made-for-television mini-series "War and Remembrance."

A's Domination Overshadowed By The Quake

By Jim Litke
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some things are predictable and some things are not, and sometimes you can look plenty foolish trying to walk the fine line separating the two.

After Oakland's Athletics put San Francisco's Giants into the hole three games to none in the recently ended World Series, someone asked first baseman Will Clark whether there was any way his team could dig its way out before the trophy was signed, sealed and delivered to the eastern edge of the bay.

"Nobody's ever done it before," Clark said bravely, "but then they haven't had an earthquake around here in 80 years either."

Clark, one can safely assume, wasn't trying to be flip.

It was just a bad answer — the luxury of hindsight, if nothing else, reveals that much.

What's interesting about the answer, though, is the next question it begs: Will that same earthquake — and the asterisk and explanatory paragraph it will require in the record books — relegate one of the most dominant teams in baseball history to a footnote?

Time will tell, of course, and more than a few people are willing to wait for the answer.

Oakland pitcher Bob Welch, who lost the apartment he was living in and a home he had purchased just two blocks apart in San Francisco's devastated Marina district, was one of them. In the modest, non-alcoholic celebration in the A's locker room, someone — it's always someone — asked Welch if this series sweep was the beginning of a dynasty.

"Buddy," replied Welch, putting his hand on the reporter's shoulder, "the only thing you can look forward to tomorrow with any certainty is that the sun's going to rise."

True enough, especially in the wake of events after the tragic Oct. 17 quake. But just as there exists a scale to measure the magnitude of nature's fury (the predictable, like hurricanes, as well as the unpredictable), so, too, can the A's sweeping performance be ranked.

And by every measure, it was awesome:

— The A's never trailed once in the 36 innings played and wound up outscoring the Giants 32-14, a differential over four games matched in series history only by the 1932 Yankees, whose lineup included Ruth and Gehrig, Dickey and Lazzeri.

— Oakland tied the record for most home runs, nine, with their most consistent threat, Mark McGwire, being the only regular not to deliver a long ball. No Giants starter lasted past the fifth inning and manager Roger Craig used at least four pitchers every game.

— Rickey Henderson stole more bases than any player ever had in a series and slick-fielding Tony Phillips played more positions than anybody before him.

— Because of the interruption, Oakland starters Dave Stewart and Mike Moore, both forkballers of the first order, each got two turns. Stewart, the series MVP, finished Games 1 and 3 with 1.69 earned-run average; Moore was a slightly less effective 2.08.

The numbers go on, but the point is already clear. Speed, power, pitching, all in abundance.

"I think we could hold our own with any team," said Jose Canseco, who can be forgiven for bragging on this occasion. "I think that one thing you've got to realize is

A Bad Ending To A Good Game

Over the years, East Carolina is no stranger to despair in the final seconds of the game.

Of course, the Pirates have had their share of last minute heroics, too. One might recall ECU's victory over George Washington that propelled it into the first Tangerine Bowl appearance. Or, in that bowl game, a late two-point conversion that won the contest for the Pirates.

There were other victories along the way that came in the closing minutes of play.

The memory of those victories may somewhat dim as time goes by, but a bitter loss is something that is hard to erase — especially when it comes against great odds.

And, it would seem, the 80's have been especially hard on the Pirates when it comes to the final minutes of the game.

Saturday's loss to Syracuse after outplaying the Orangemen for most of the game is just the latest of these examples.

After the great decade of the 70's, in which the Pirates enjoyed an outstanding 73-36-1 record — and 14 of those losses came in the first two years of that decade — the Pirates have suffered through a 43-63-1 record that has included but two winning seasons. Of course, the hopes for a third winning season in the 80's still is very much alive.

Saturday, a victory could have just about clinched a winning year.

Even in the great year of 1983, when the Pirates were 8-3 and earned a national ranking for themselves, there were three difficult losses. A fumble late in the game probably cost a win over Florida State (47-46); Florida scored late and then held off one last dash by the Pirates to take a 24-17 win. And no one can forget the dropped pass in the end zone against Miami, Fla., on the final play of the game that gave the Hurricanes a 12-7 win — and eventually the national championship.

The Pirates have come close in other games of the decade — Pittsburg, a 17-10 loss, and Central Michigan, a 17-12 loss, both in 1984; Penn State, 17-10, Southwestern Louisiana, 16-14, and Tulsa, 21-20 in 1985; the 38-34 loss to Southern Mississippi in 1987.

Add to those three others that were especially hurtful — West Virginia last second victory, 24-21, in 1986; Southern Mississippi's steal of the 23-21 win that same year, and their last-second win a year later, 45-42.

Sometimes, taking a loss like that — when you know that you have every right to have won the game, is more crushing than a lop-sided victory to a highly favored team.

East Carolina went into the Carrier Dome a decided underdog. Syracuse's players and the media had put down the Pirates prior to the game. EC-Who? Well, at least they know now.

That, of course, is no consolation to those young men who went against the odds and nearly pulled off what would have been one of ECU's greatest wins. "We came up here to win," Bill Lewis said.

If what does go around, comes around — and it would appear from the 70's and 80's that it probably does, then pretty soon, those games will start going the Pirates' way. Virginia Tech can probably attest to that a week ago.

Bill Lewis appears on the verge of getting things turned around. Certainly, some of his priorities are going to be the big linemen that he needs to go up against the likes of Syracuse, which gradually wore down the smaller Pirates. That was easy to see. He must also come up with a proven kicker, someone who can get the ball between the posts when it counts.

Now, the Pirates must turn their sights towards another team that will be highly favored, the Hurricanes of Miami, coming off a bitter loss to arch-rival Florida State. The 'Canes will be angry. The Pirates have a chance to turn that anger against the Hurricanes come Saturday.

Bucs Look To Forget Tough Defeat

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A tough loss to Syracuse still weighs heavily on East Carolina, but there's little time for rest with a Saturday matchup against second-ranked Miami.

That's the unpleasant reality of the situation facing the much-improved Pirates, still smarting from the 18-16 loss to the Orangemen.

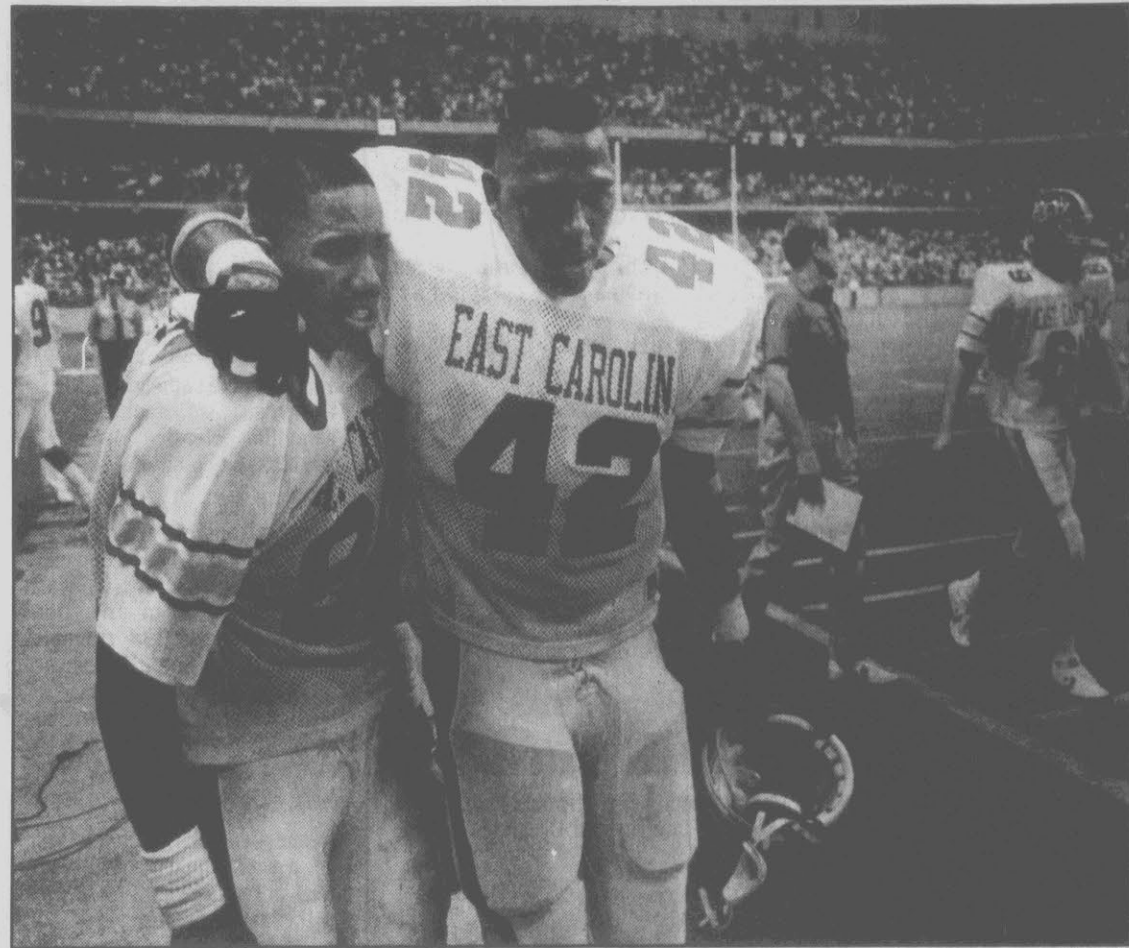

"Our football team has got to learn from this," East Carolina coach Bill Lewis said. "We've gotten into a position to win a ballgame. I think now that we can get to this position is we have to realize it takes a little something extra to win the next time we get in this situation."

It's a game that's likely to stick in the minds of the Pirates for quite a while. They led the Orangemen most of the way, but lost on a field goal in the final seconds.

"We've got to get ready to play Miami, which is a great team, a nationally ranked team," ECU safety Junior Robinson said. "We've just got to go out and try to prepare for them."

The Hurricanes are coming off a loss of their own after dropping a 24-10 decision to ninth-ranked Florida State Saturday. The loss was

Mississippi Player Set For Surgery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Mississippi free safety Roy Lee "Chuckie" Mullins was scheduled for "stabilizing" surgery today after suffering a paralyzing neck injury in the first quarter of Saturday's football game against Vanderbilt.

The 20-year-old Mullins was paralyzed from the neck down when he hit Vanderbilt receiver Brad Gaines while breaking up a pass play in Mississippi's 24-16 victory over Vandy.

"Chuckie received a fractured-dislocation of the fourth and fifth cervical vertebrae, which are located in the neck," said Leroy Mullins, Mississippi's head trainer. The two Mullins aren't related.

Mullins was listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Baptist Central Hospital in Memphis. A hospital spokesman said Sunday night that Mullins was set for surgery today "to stabilize the injury." He said he couldn't release any other information on Mullins' case.

"There were no neurological changes overnight. His condition is the same as when they brought him in. He's paralyzed," Ole Miss sports information director Langston Rogers said Sunday.

Mullins, a 6-foot, 170-pound red-shirt freshman from Russellville, Ala., was carried from the field on stretcher with 6:57 to play in the first quarter.

"He immediately told us he could not feel anything," trainer Mullins said. "We cut off a portion of his facemask and hinged it back in case we needed to assist his breathing. Shallow breathing was evident."

"Chuckie is paralyzed from the neck down. I've been an athletic trainer for more than 25 years, and this is the worst on-the-field injury I have been involved with."

"It's the type situation you constantly worry about and hope you never face. Our thoughts and prayers are with Chuckie."

The mood was somber in the Rebels' dressing room, and some players were seen crying.

"We won the game, but nobody celebrated," wide receiver Willie Green said. "It's sad to see someone go out like that."

Several players said the team talked about the injury at the half, as Ole Miss trailed 10-0.

"We came in the locker room after the first half and made up our minds to play," nose guard Darryl Smith said. "And, we came to play the second half for Chuckie."

"What happened to Chuckie kind of puts this in perspective," center Dawson Pruett said. "Sometimes this (game) just isn't the most important thing."

Giants Facing Tough Front

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

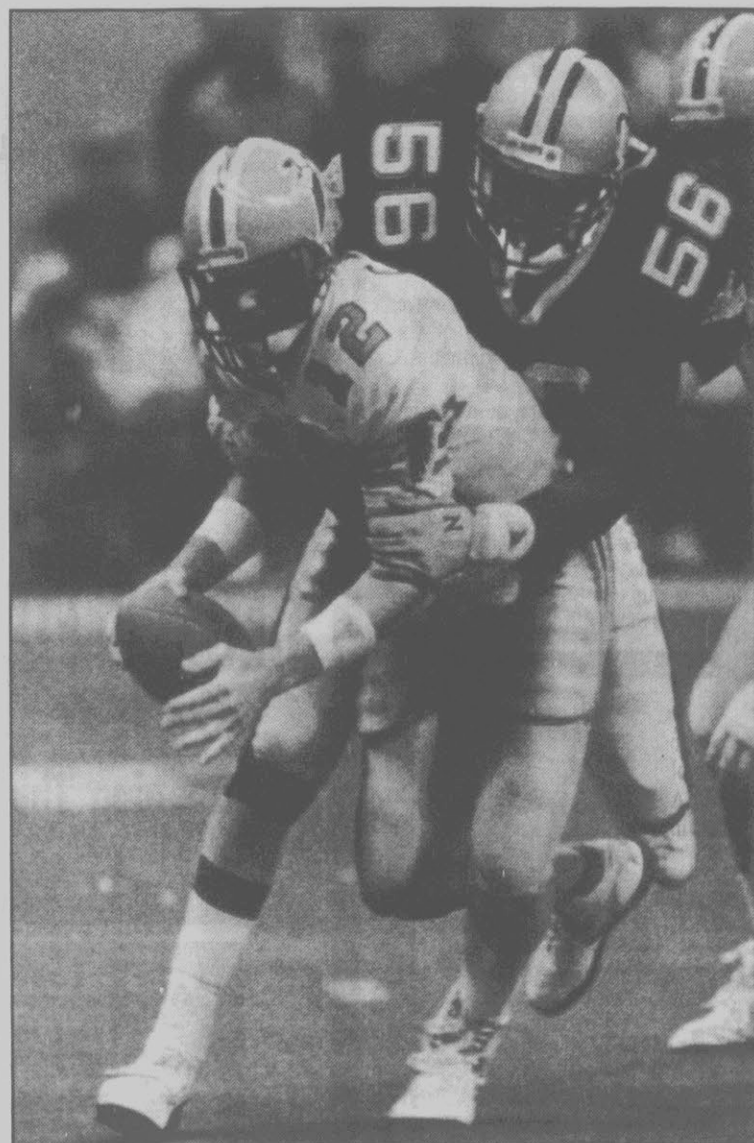

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Some of the National Football League's finest defensive front sevens have been on display this decade and the New York Giants are about to face one of them.

The 1985 Bears had a great one with the likes Richard Dent, Dan Hampton, Otis Wilson and Wilber Marshall, and the Giants had one just as good the following year with a group that included Lawrence Taylor, Harry Carson, Jim Burt and George Martin.

New York coach Bill Parcells says a unit that rates with those two is that of the Minnesota Vikings, who will be in Giants Stadium tonight to face the Giants in a nationally televised matchup of the leaders of the NFC Central and East.

The Vikings, 5-2 and riding a four-game winning streak, lead the NFL in total defense (226 yards a game) and sacks (37). Tackle Keith Millard, the league's runaway leader with 12, and end Chris Doleman, with seven, have combined for more sacks than all but six teams.

"These guys are relentless pass rushers," Giants offensive line coach Fred Hoaglin said. "They play real hard. Millard is real good and so is Doleman. We have

Ryan Supports The Call

Key Play On A Punt Helps Eagles Top Broncos

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It isn't often that Buddy Ryan agrees with the men in stripes, those much-maligned zebras whose decisions frequently divide victory from defeat in the NFL. This time, however, he was a staunch defender.

"It was a good call, no question about it," Ryan said Sunday after his Philadelphia Eagles beat the Denver Broncos 28-24.

Perhaps the location of one's final number begets vision extraordinary. Being to the left of the hyphen, Ryan saw it his way. On the right was Dan Reeves, who swears rookie Darren Carrington didn't do it.

"Darren says the punt did not hit him," Reeves said. "I don't think the referee saw it clearly."

What either coach thought mattered little, however, because referee Jim Tunney said an Eagles punt hit special-teamer Carrington midway through the fourth period. The ball was recovered by Philadelphia's William Frizzell, a former Rose High standout.

Frizzell

"I had an excellent view and I saw the ball hit the Denver player," Ryan said. "I was just afraid the ref was going to miss it."

But Tunney saw it and so, too, did the replay official.

Their decision gave the Eagles, trailing 24-21, the ball at the Denver 24. Two minutes later, Keith Byars ran one yard for his second touchdown of the day as Philadelphia (6-2) came from behind for a victory for the fourth time this season.

The call also wrecked Reeves' strategy.

"We had planned to run some time off and protect a three-point lead," he said. "And then all of a sudden they have the ball. I hate losing like that."

The loss dropped the Broncos to 6-2, but they lead the AFC West by two games. The Eagles are a half-game behind New York in the NFC East. The Giants host Minnesota tonight.

Elsewhere, it was the Los Angeles Raiders 37, Washington 24; Cincinnati 56, Tampa Bay 23; Cleveland 28, Houston 17; Chicago 20, the Los Angeles Rams 10; Buffalo 31, Miami 17; San Francisco 23, the New York Jets 10; New Orleans 20, Atlanta 13; Green Bay 23, Detroit 20 in overtime; New England 23, Indianapolis 20 in overtime; Phoenix 19, Dallas 10; Pittsburgh 23, Kansas City 17, and Seattle 10, San Diego 7.

Denver quarterback John Elway was sacked seven times and the Broncos committed six turnovers, including two in the closing minutes.

Randall Cunningham threw two touchdown passes, but his biggest play was to Gregg Garrity for 21 yards on third-and-18 to keep the decisive drive alive.

Denver rallied from 14-0 and 21-7 deficits to take the lead thanks to two touchdown passes and a 10-yard run on a quarterback draw by Elway.

Raiders 37, Redskins 24

The teams combined for 12 turnovers, but Los Angeles coach Art Shell wasn't unhappy with the outcome.

"As long as we keep winning and having fun, I'll be happy," Shell said after improving his record to 3-1 since replacing the fired Mike Shanahan.

The Redskins (4-4) turned the ball over eight times, allowed seven quarterback sacks and were penalized 12 times for 135 yards. Washington quarterback Mark Rypien accounted for five turnovers, fumbling twice after

USC's Ellis Set For Surgery Tuesday

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina coach Sparky Woods said he will go with Dick DeMasi to lead the Gamecocks offense as quarterback Todd Ellis prepared for knee surgery scheduled for Tuesday.

The school-record-setting senior went down with a career-ending torn knee ligament Saturday in a 20-10 loss to North Carolina State.

DeMasi, the 6-foot-1, 188-pound junior who subbed in for Ellis, was sacked five times, completed four of 12 passes for 65 yards and one interception.

"I think Dickie is for sure the leading choice for quarterback," Woods said Sunday. "He didn't play great, but he played hard and for what practice he has had, he did quite well."

Woods said Ellis was scheduled to have surgery on his left knee Tuesday to repair a tear in the medial collateral ligament. The rehabilitation time was estimated at four to six months by trainer Terry Lewis, who said Ellis could probably make a full recovery and still go on to play professional football.

"I've never had someone as important to the team as Todd is get hurt," Woods said. "I'm sad for Todd. He has done so much and committed so much of his self to being a good college football player and wanted so badly for this team to do well."

The Gamecocks, 5-2-1, will have to finish out the season against Florida State, North Carolina and Clemson without Ellis, the school's career passing leader and a starter in 43 consecutive games.

Woods said DeMasi will be backed by true freshman Ben Hogan, and will have to find a new No. 3 quarterback. "We've obviously talked about our options," Woods said.

Woods says one of those options for the No. 3 spot is Wright Mitchell, a 6-1, 190-pound redshirt freshman from Atlanta.

Despite the loss of Ellis, Woods said the Gamecocks would make few changes in their plan of attack. "We've invested too much in our offense to change much now," he said. "We've got to stick with what we've got."

ECU Volleyballers Earn Weekend Split

East Carolina's volleyball team, shooting for its first winning season since 1983, earned a split in four weekend volleyball matches.

The Lady Pirates opened with a loss to Tennessee Tech Friday, dropping three straight games, 14-16, 11-15 and 7-15.

In the same day, ECU came back with a win over Georgia Tech by the count of 12-15, 17-15, 15-3 and 15-9.

ECU also earned a 15-8, 6-16, 16-14 and 15-6 win over Augusta College Saturday. The Lady Pirates then lost to South Carolina State, 15-12, 15-4, 12-15, 14-16 and 7-15 to close out the weekend.

ECU falls to 15-12 on the year with its next match Tuesday at UNC-Wilmington.

Leading the way for the Pirates this weekend was Rhonda Jackson, a sophomore from D.H. Conley, with 55 kills, and Michelle McIntosh, with 38 digs.

Rose Wins In Cheerleading Competition

J.H. Rose's varsity and junior varsity cheerleading squads came out on top in the fourth annual Cheerleading competition at Sportsworld Saturday.

Conley, Ayden-Grifton and Hertford County also competed in the event. Rose returns to action in another competition Saturday at Carolina East Mall.

Greenville Soccer Team Gains State Title

RALEIGH — The Greenville/Pitt County Special Olympic soccer team has won the gold medal at the North Carolina State Special Olympics for the third year in a row.

The team swept four straight games in the event, giving up only two goals the whole way.

Pitt defeated Elizabeth City twice, winning 2-1 the first time and 1-0 the second time as Lamont Harris scored on a breakaway goal. Pitt then defeated Fayetteville 2-1 and 2-0.

The squad is made up of athletes from Wellcome Middle School and North Pitt High School.

Seikaly Keys Heat Past Hornets

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Rony Seikaly started an 11-point run in the middle of the third quarter and led the Miami Heat to a 106-101 victory over the Charlotte Hornets in both teams' final exhibition game Sunday night.

Seikaly had a 3-point play to start the scoring burst and ended it with a layup with 4:36 left in the third period at Greensboro Coliseum.

Rookie Glen Rice, who led Miami with 20 points, gave the Heat its biggest lead at 100-81 on a short jumper with 3:00 left in the game. Seikaly added 16 points, rookie Sherman Douglas had 16, Kevin Edwards 14 and Grant Long 10.

The Hornets, which trailed 46-43 at halftime, fell behind by eight early in the half, then came back behind the scoring of rookie J.R. Reid. Charlotte drew within 57-55 with 7:19 left in the third quarter on Reid's jump shot.

But Seikaly, Grant Long and Billy Thompson scored on consecutive trips down the court for the Heat, giving Miami a 68-5 lead.

Reid led all scorers with 24 points, while Kelly Tripucka had 18 and Dell Curry had 17 and rookie Terry Dozier 11.

Rex Chapman, out with the flu, missed his second straight game.

ECU Swimmers Earn Split With ODU

NORFOLK — East Carolina's men opened the swimming season with a win while the women began with a loss in a dual meet with Old Dominion Sunday.

The Pirate men totaled 128 to ODU's 115. Ray Kennedy led the way for ECU by winning the 200 breast and helping out on the winning 400 medley relay team.

In the women's meet, ODU scored 124 points to ECU's 117. Meredith Bridgers won the 200 breaststroke and was also on the winning 400 medley relay team for ECU.

ECU returns to action Friday at home against James Madison, 3 and 5.

Men's Meet: ECU 128, ODU 115

ECU Winners: 400 medley relay (George Walters, Ray Kennedy, Tom Holston, Steve Benkusky) 3:36.37; 1,000 Free (J.D. Lewis (10:05.18); 1-meter diving (Perry Smith (156); 200 backstroke (Mark O'Brien (1:49.50); 500 free (Andy Jeter (4:51.60); 3-meter diving (Matt Lawrence (no total); 200 breast (Ray Kennedy (2:14.34).

Tarpley May Have Violated Program

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks officials say forward Roy Tarpley's disappearance may have violated terms of a drug after-care program and he faces potential disciplinary action, including possible suspension and fines.

Tarpley, who will soon be given a drug test, faces suspension if results are positive for cocaine or heroin. National Basketball Association officials said Saturday.

Dr. David Lewis, head of the league's Adult Substance Abuse Program, or one of his assistants is expected this week to further evaluate Tarpley. They could determine whether Tarpley stays in uniform.

A two-time offender of the NBA's drug policy, Tarpley said he was upset with his performance at Thursday's practice and overslept Friday, missing a game. Players who violate the policy three times face an automatic two-year suspension from the league.

Kite Hopes Win Changes Some Minds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Tom Kite knows that his playoff victory in the ultra-rich Nabisco Championship doesn't change the past.

But it may change some minds, the 39-year-old veteran said Sunday after capping his career-best season with an extra-hole triumph over PGA champion Payne Stewart.

"Nothing will change the fact that I had such a poor final round in the U.S. Open," said Kite, who blew a last-round lead with an embarrassing 78 in the American national championship this summer.

It was one of a series of last-round mishaps that have so far deprived him of winning any of golf's Big Four titles.

As the final-round leader in the 1984 Masters, he hit into the water on the 12th hole. Another time, a back-nine triple bogey cost him the lead and the title in the British Open.

Then came the disaster of a triple bogey in the final round at Oak Hill in Rochester, N.Y., in June.

"I'm sure some people thought that would end my victories out here on the PGA Tour," Kite said. "I knew in my heart it wouldn't."

"Now, everybody knows."

In proving his point, Kite also:

— Jumped past both Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus and became the top money-winner in golf history with over $5.6 million.

— Clinched the PGA Player of the Year title.

— Set a single-season earnings record of $1,395,278.

The only major award that eluded him this season was Vardon Trophy for low scoring average, and he was second on that list. Greg Norman won it with a 69.49 average and Kite averaged 69.57 shots per round.

The outcome of all those races hinged on the Nabisco Championship, golf's richest tournament with almost $3.5 million in individual prize money at stake.

Kite, who lost this event in a playoff at Pebble Beach last year, won the last official-money event of the year and a total of $625,000 when Stewart missed a four-foot par putt on the second hole of a playoff.

The huge payoff sent Kite to the head of the all-time money list with $5,600,691. He went past both Watson and Nicklaus, neither of whom played in the Nabisco event. Kite kept it in perspective.

"That's a statistic that is distorted over the years by the increase in purses," Kite said. "It would be stupid to say I've played better than Jack or Tom."

Kite's third tournament victory of the year and 13th of his career lifted him over British Open winner Mark Calcavecchia on the points list that determines Player of the Year.

Stewart, who won the Heritage Classic on this same course six months ago, rushed away from the field with a course record 29 — including a 121-yard wedge shot for an eagle-2 — on the front side.

Playing the 18th hole, he led by two strokes, but three-putted for bogey, missing a three-foot second putt. It cut his lead to one.

"That let a lot of folks back in the tournament," Stewart said after finishing with a 66 and a 276 total.

Kite capitalized.

Playing behind Stewart, Kite's great shot into what he called "a hurricane wind" set up a 3-foot birdie putt to tie it.

Twice he backed away when rocked out of his stance by wind gusting off Calibogue Sound. When he coaxed in the putt, he had a share of the lead.

Kite preserved it with a one-putt par, another one of those nasty little 3-footers, on the 18th. His closing 68 set up the playoff.

He had to make still another 3-foot putt to survive the first extra hole, then won the tournament with a routine par when Stewart was unable to get it up and down from the fringe.

Stewart won $376,000, finishing the year with $1,201,301.

Player Of The Week

Farmville's Morris Foreman proved to be a double threat against North Pitt as he led the Jaguars to a 20-7 win that earned him The Daily Reflector Player Of The Week honors.

Foreman, a junior quarterback, rushed for 126 yards on 17 carries with two touchdowns on the ground and another through the air. Foreman, who also hit on four of nine passes for another 64 yards, also anchored the Farmville defensive secondary from his safety position.

He ran one score in from two yards and another from a yard out. Foreman then connected with Zimmie Coward on a 19-yard touchdown pass in the final quarter and added a two-point conversion pass to Jeff Tyson.

Foreman was the difference for the undefeated Jaguars, who earned the top playoff spot in the Eastern Plains Conference.

Prep Honor Roll

•Greene Central's Michael Dail: Dail, a senior quarterback, completed only three of five passes but they went for 108 yards and two touchdowns as Greene Central took a 35-0 win over Ayden-Grifton.

•Jamesville's Keith Basnight: Basnight, a senior fullback, had 75 yards rushing on 23 carries with two touchdowns as

Morris Foreman

Jamesville took a 14-0 win over Chocowinity.

•Washington's Damien Moore: Moore, a senior halfback, touched the ball eight times but made them all count as he rushed for 146 yards and scored four touchdowns in the Pam Pack's 56-0 win over Northwest Halifax.

•Roanoke's Levy Jones: Jones, a junior halfback, makes his weekly appearance in the prep honor roll after rushing for 119 yards on 18 carries as Roanoke took a 48-0 win over Columbia.

Bucs Regroup ...

the first of the year for Miami, under new coach Dennis Erickson.

The Pirates, off to one of their best starts in years with a record of 4-2-1 this season, took little solace in playing the Orangemen tough in defeat, least of all Lewis.

"There's not any thought about a turnaround," Lewis said. "The only thing you think about is about what happened out there."

"I'm proud of our football team. They fought a heck of a battle. In a game like this you have to find that something — whatever it is. Nobody can put a finger on it. Syracuse was able to find it and we weren't. But I'm proud of our team. They fought as hard as I think they could."

A win over Syracuse would have been a big confidence builder for ECU as the Pirates prepare for the final and most difficult portion of their schedule.

After the Miami game, the Bucs face Temple at home before closing with games against nationally ranked Pittsburgh and a talented Southern Mississippi team.

"Of course a win is always good," ECU tailback Willie Lewis said. "We played Syracuse, and they played a pretty good game and beat us."

"We're going to go back to prepare for Miami. It's going to be a totally different story. We're not going to look at this game as a momentum game going to Miami. We're just going to come out and play Miami just like we never played Syracuse."

That's good, because the teams bear little resemblance. Against Syracuse, ECU was able to utilize a significant quickness advantage on both sides of the line of scrimmage.

Quarterback Travis Hunter presented matchup problems for the Orangemen both with his arm (154 yards passing) and his legs (61 yards rushing) as he turned in one of his more credible performances of the year.

"Travis I thought had an excellent football game," Lewis said. "He's the quarterback. He's got to make things happen for us. I think he was able to do that. I think his performance was one of the better of his career."

On the other side of the line, defensive end Anthony Thompson raced through and around the lumbering Syracuse linemen for 12 tackles, including seven solos and two quarterback sacks.

Miami, though, is one of the quickest teams in all of college football, both in the skill positions and in the trenches.

It's the challenge of the season for the Bucs, not only in terms of the competition but also to come back from such a tough loss.

"I think our guys are going to respond this week," ECU wide receiver Walter Wilson said. "We'll have to regroup after we watch the films. We'll let the fellas know that it's not the end of the world. There's Miami next week and we just have to focus our attention to Miami and just let Syracuse go."

A's Face A Task In The Off-Season

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — The rest of baseball hasn't been able to break up the Athletics. Now it's up to the A's management to keep them together.

Oakland's future looks as bright as its immediate past, with depth, age and farm-system talent on their side. But, yes, spring training is less than four months away and the World Series champions have some pressing business to take care of soon.

Will Rickey run to another team via free agency? Should the A's gamble on losing Dave Parker by rejecting his demand for a two-year contract? How much should be spent to keep the somewhat disgruntled Storm Davis in the rotation?

Those questions must be answered before all this dynasty talk can be taken seriously.

"I can see us winning a few more, maybe five or six more," World Series MVP Dave Stewart said after the A's concluded a four-game sweep of the San Francisco Giants Saturday night. "But you don't know. Egos become involved. If this team stays together and doesn't get a big ego, we can do anything."

"The only team that can beat the Oakland A's is the Oakland A's."

It's going to take money — lots of it — and Sandy Alderson's usual off-season heroics if the A's have any intention of improving on their 99 regular-season victories. Even then, the general manager is not sure it can be done.

"Talent isn't the only thing that wins games," Alderson said after Saturday night's 9-6 victory in Game 4. "It takes talent, character and luck, and we had all three this year."

Those who witnessed Oakland's demolition of Toronto in the American League playoffs and the Giants in the World Series might question whether the Athletics need to get better. After winning 216 regular and postseason games in two years, the tendency might be to put the team on cruise control.

But the A's did not move into first place in the AL West to stay until Aug. 21. California and Kansas City both have younger teams on the way up. And as the post-1984 Detroit Tigers learned, the trip from best to worst isn't that long a ride if the right moves aren't made.

The first order of business will be to take care of players who are thinking of testing the free-agent market. Rickey Henderson, Parker and Davis all were big contributors in 1989 who can file for free agency as early as today.

Henderson, acquired in a June 21 trade from the New York Yankees, increased his value by his play down the stretch, winning MVP honors in the American League playoffs and starting in the World Series.

Syd Thrift, the former Pittsburgh Pirates and New York Yankees executive, said he asked Alderson during trade talks if he wanted the Yankees to try to sign Henderson for him before the trade became final.

"He said he believed he could sign him for less than that because of Rickey's love for the Bay area," Thrift said.

"I don't think he'll be signing for anything like $2.4 million after the postseason he's had. We're going to find out just how much he loves that Oakland area."

being sacked and throwing three interceptions.

"Their front four put a lot of pressure on me," Rypien said. "They played one of the best games I've ever seen them play."

Steve Beuerlein, making his first start of the season in place of ex-Redskin Jay Schroeder, threw two touchdown passes to Mervyn Fernandez. Bo Jackson, who gained 144 yards on 19 carries, ran 73 yards for another score for the Raiders (4-4).

Bengals 56, Bucs 23

Bomber Esiason matched his three-year-old club record with five touchdown passes as Cincinnati ended a two-week offensive drought with its most productive day since a 61-17 victory over Houston in 1972.

"I don't think any of us in our wildest dreams expected 50-some points," said Esiason, who threw five scoring passes against the New York Jets in 1986. "We had a lot of frustration built up the last two weeks, and somebody had to play for it."

The usually high-scoring Bengals (5-3) had totaled just 25 points in consecutive losses to Miami and Indianapolis. But they scored 42 in a row at one point against the Buc (3-5).

"In the second half, it was like we didn't show up," Bucs receiver Mark Carrier said.

Browns 28, Oilers 17

Cleveland, 5-3 and tied with Cincinnati atop the AFC Central, resorted to trickery. The Browns got one touchdown on a long flea-flicker from Bernie Kosar to Webster Slaughter and another on a halfback option pass by Eric Metcalf.

Both went for second-half touchdowns. Kosar also threw a conventional scoring pass to Slaughter — their TD connections went for 77 and 80 yards — who piled up 184 receiving yards for the second week in a row.

Houston (4-4) held Cleveland to 57 yards in the first half in building a 10-0 lead. But the Browns managed 328 in the final 30 minutes.

Bears 20, Rams 10

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh relieved Mike Tomczak in the second quarter and led Chicago (5-3) over Los Angeles as the Bears snapped a three-game losing streak. The Rams (5-3) have lost their last three.

Harbaugh directed a 39-yard drive when he entered the game with 5:50 left in the second quarter. Kevin Butler kicked a 35-yard field goal for a 3-3 halftime tie.

Harbaugh engineered two second-half touchdown drives, scoring one himself on a 1-yard run. He completed 10 of 13 passes for 157 yards.

Bills 31, Dolphins 17

Thurman Thomas and Larry Kinnebrew rushed for more than 100 yards apiece and each scored a touchdown as Buffalo (6-2), missing injured quarterback Jim Kelly, passed just nine times in 60 plays.

Thomas ran for 148 yards and scored on a weaving, 30-yard run.

Kinnebrew added 121 yards, scoring on a 1-yard run. The Bills gained 280 yards rushing against Miami in winning their third straight game.

A big surprise was a sack by the Buffalo defense, which put Dan Marino on ground twice. Miami (4-4) had not allowed a sack in its previous 19 games.

49ers 23, Jets 10

Jerry Rice made a leaping catch for a touchdown, and Mike Cofer kicked three field goals as the 49ers won their sixth straight road game. The Jets (1-7) have lost five games in a row.

Steve Young started for the 49ers (7-1) in place of Joe Montana, who was resting a sprained knee, and Steve Bono also saw some playing time. Bono completed the 45-yarder to Rice, who leaped over two defenders at the 2-yard line and came down in the end zone in the second quarter.

Saints 20, Falcons 13

Dalton Hilliard scored from a yard out with 2:12 to go, lifting New Orleans (4-4) over Atlanta (2-6). Saints linebacker Pat Swilling sacked Chris Miller three times and forced two fumbles.

Saints scores came on a 21-yard pass from Bobby Herbert to Hilliard, the rushing touchdown by Hilliard and field goals of 32 and 44 yards by Morten Andersen.

Packers 23, Lions 20, OT

Green Bay's Chris Jacke won the game with a 38-yard field goal. Jacke, who missed a 50-yarder on the final play of regulation, ended it three plays after Mark Murphy intercepted Rodney Peete on the first play after Detroit received the overtime kickoff.

The Lions (1-7) rallied with 10 fourth-quarter points, tying the score 20-20, and moved to the Packers 36 with 44 seconds left in regulation before Peete fumbled a handoff.

Green Bay is 4-4.

Patriots 23, Colts 20, OT

Greg Davis missed a 46-yard field goal at the end of regulation, then kicked a 51-yarder with 5:03 left in overtime, giving New England (3-5) the victory.

The Patriots started the winning drive from their own 12. Steve Grogan, who passed for 355 yards and one touchdown, was driven back to his own 4-yard line on a sack, but he hit three straight passes, taking the Pats to the 44 and keeping the drive alive. Indianapolis fell to 4-4.

Steelers 23, Chiefs 17

Returning after missing two weeks because of injury, Bubby Brister threw two touchdown passes to Louis Lipps, including a 64-yarder in the fourth quarter. Pittsburgh (4-4) had to rally after blowing a 16-point lead.

The Chiefs (3-5) scored 17 straight points after trailing 16-0 and took the lead when Dwight Stone fumbled on a reverse and defensive lineman Bill Maas returned it four yards for a touchdown with 3:51 left the third period.

Seahawks 10, Chargers 7

Dave Krieg threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Brian Blades with 40 seconds left, giving Seattle (4-4) the victory in a game that didn't really begin until the two-minute warning.

Seattle led 3-0 after a 27-yard field goal by Norm Johnson in the first quarter, and there wasn't another score until Jim McMahon came off the bench to throw a 14-yard touchdown pass to Arthur Cox with 1:53 to play.

San Diego (2-6) started Billy Jo Tolliver, but went to McMahon in the final period.

to get in front of them and block."

Minnesota is similar to Philadelphia in its ability to put pressure on the quarterback, but they do it differently. The Eagles are a power team, the Vikings quick and athletic.

"Basically we're all just playing well," said Millard, probably the quickest Vikings lineman. "Last year, we led the league with something like 36 interceptions, so I think coaches are telling their quarterbacks to hold the ball and that's a big reason we're getting the sacks."

The job of blocking Millard falls to Giants guard William Roberts a converted tackle.

"I have to give him an initial pop and slow him down," Roberts said. "I have to keep my hands on him because he's real slippery."

Millard said the one guy who could make life miserable for Minnesota is Giants quarterback Phil Simms.

"There is no question he is so smart," Millard said. "I was really impressed just looking at the films. He reads the defenses well, one of the best in the league. The thing that impressed me the most is that he stands in the pocket to the very last second, takes a pounding and still gets the ball off to his receivers."

Some of the Vikings have vivid memories of Simms from a 1986 game which Minnesota led 20-19 in the closing minute. With the Giants facing a fourth-and-17, Simms stood in the pocket long enough to find Bobby Johnson for a 22-yard completion that led to a 33-yard field goal by Raul Allegre and a 22-20 victory.

Jailed Mom To Control Docudrama

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Dr. Elizabeth Morgan will have "absolute control" over a TV docudrama about her two years in jail for refusing to tell a judge the whereabouts of her daughter, an attorney says.

The Washington, D.C.-area plastic surgeon signed with Lansburg Co., makers of "Adam," a television movie about a boy who was kidnapped and murdered, said Shelley Browning, an attorney who negotiated the deal for Morgan.

Morgan has alleged that her former husband, Dr. Eric Foretich, an oral surgeon, sexually molested their child, Hilary, now 7.

Foretich vehemently denies the charges.

Morgan was jailed in 1987 for civil contempt of court by the judge presiding over their custody dispute. Morgan refused to comply when the judge ordered her to allow Foretich unsupervised visits.

She was released two months ago from the Washington, D.C., jail after Congress approved special legislation.

Ms. Morgan will be a consultant on the film and will wield "final, absolute control over what appears," Ms. Browning said last week.

When informed of the movie deal, Foretich said: "I will absolutely sue them if my name or my daughter's name is used without my consent."

Ms. Browning said she expects to win any lawsuit by Foretich because "he has made himself a public figure."

Morgan's fee, an undisclosed amount totaling less than $250,000, will go into a trust fund for Hilary, Ms. Browning said.

Stars Do TV Ads Touting Las Vegas For $1 Apiece

By Robert Macy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — They draw six-digit salaries performing in this entertainment capital's glitzy showrooms. But when stars like Frank Sinatra, Bill Cosby, Barbara Mandrell and Wayne Newton go on national television to tout the city itself, the tab is $1.

More than 20 celebrities are popping up on TV screens across the country, singing the praises of Las Vegas, where they perform annually.

Under most circumstances, the talent fees would run in the millions. Not so for Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority commercials carrying the message: "Las Vegas: The American Way to Play."

When R&R Advertising sought out show business heavyweights for the TV and print ads four years ago it asked them to do it for $1.

Considering the fact the celebrities earn a healthy chunk of their annual income in Las Vegas' showrooms, it stands to reason they're willing to sing the city's praises for a buck.

The ads were the brainchild of R&R owner Sig Rogich and Billy Vassiliadis, the agency's president.

Rogich was a member of the Tuesday Team that produced former President Reagan's campaign advertising in 1984. And he was advertising director for the George Bush campaign in 1988. He placed his interest in the agency in a blind trust earlier this year when he went to Washington as a special assistant to Bush, handling media relations.

The idea of using stars evolved in 1985 when R&R, blocked by Federal Communications Commission rules that prohibit gambling advertising, was looking for fresh ideas to sell the city.

"Surveys by the Convention Authority show that, next to gaming, entertainment is the city's leading attraction," Vassiliadis said.

The agency contacted Sinatra, the city's highest-paid entertainer at a reported $500,000 a week. He is also the star most identifiable with Las Vegas, having performed here for 38 years.

"It was presented to him as a way of selling Las Vegas," Vassiliadis recalled. "He was very amenable to the idea. The town's been very good to him, and he's been very good to the town."

Or, as Sinatra put it himself, through spokeswoman Susan Reynolds: "I have been married to the city of Las Vegas since 1951 and there will never be a divorce. I love it."

Once Sinatra accepted the $1 deal, other stars fell into place. Today, the list of celebrities promoting the city reads like a Who's Who in Entertainment.

They include Cosby, Newton,

Mandrell, Kenny Rogers, Rich Little, Joan Rivers, Paul Anka, Sammy Davis Jr., Jay Leno, the Pointer Sisters, David Byrne, the Judds, Lee Greenwood, the McGuire Sisters, Siegfried and Roy, the Smothers Brothers, Smokey Robinson, Natalie Cole, Don Rickles, Norm Crosby, and coxers Sugar Ray Leonard and Tommy Hearns.

Working with the celebrities has been a pleasant surprise, Vassiliadis said. "We had been warned that some of the people would be terrible to work with, but they've just been great. You hear these horror stories about how tough they'll be to deal with, all the things you read in the rags. But they've been super."

Rogers interrupted filming of a movie in Oklahoma to fly to Las Vegas to do his spot when the movie ran longer than expected.

R&R is always searching out special environments to showcase the stars.

Newton was filmed with one of his prize Arabian horses at his Las Vegas ranch. Greenwood, well-known for his hit "God Bless the U.S.A.," is shown getting into the cockpit of an F-14 at Nellis Air Force Base here. Illusionists Siegfried and Roy, who live in Las Vegas, are shown walking across the Strip at night with one of their rare white tigers.

The agency spends about $250,000 a year making the celebrity-theme commercials, then spends about $4 million annually airing them in major Las Vegas market areas, including Los Angeles, San Diego, Phoenix, San Francisco, Denver, Dallas, Chicago and Detroit.

The commercials are also shown on cable television.

Bumpy Road

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Bob Hope found the road to Malaysia a bit bumpy.

After arriving here, the 86-year-old comedian told reporters Sunday night his Far East tour got off to a rough start in Taipei, Taiwan.

"They didn't understand English as much as I thought," he said.

"Later in Tokyo, things were better as there were more English-speaking people. It is very difficult to tell a joke, get 50 percent of laughs, have it interrupted and then do it again. It kind of ruins your timing. But the people there were friendly."

Singer Trades TV For Country Music

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — She once was a computer expert who helped fight crime with TV's "Knight Rider." But all Rebecca Holden ever really wanted to do was sing country music.

"Finally, I'm getting to do what I've always wanted to do," she said in an interview. "I think I'm happier than I've ever been."

After a modeling and acting career that included a brief stint on the soap opera "General Hospital," Holden has settled in Nashville and is making records and music videos for Tra Star Records.

On "Knight Rider," she portrayed April Curtis, a computer expert who helped fight crime. This led to her role as the wicked Elena on "General Hospital."

When her soap character died, she turned to country music. She's been the opening act at concerts by country stars such as Lee Greenwood, Tom T. Hall, Earl Thomas Conley and Ronnie McDowell. She and her four-piece band also made a concert tour of Canada.

Holden kept her hand in acting by appearing in music videos with the Statler Brothers and Ronnie Milsap.

"Singing is the only thing I ever wanted to do, ever," she said. "People get the idea that I'm an actress that's now trying to sing. That's not right. It just took me a while to make it happen. If I'd had my druthers, that's all I would have ever done."

Holden, raised in San Antonio, majored in piano and voice at North Texas State University. She had a modeling and TV career in New York where she also put together a country music band.

"My television career blossomed into something I never expected," she said. "I never had dreams of television or an acting career."

Millions saw her astride a horse in a TV commercial, carrying cologne on a tray to a waiting, handsome young man.

"They glued the bottle to the tray," she recalled.

Then later, she loved the challenge of the soap opera daily grind.

"There is a lot of dialogue to memorize. You do 70, 80 pages a day whereas on an episodic show maybe seven or eight. The crews have to be commended because you turn out an enormous amount of material each day," she said.

"It was exciting. I loved being put to the test."

She calls her singing style contemporary country and believes she can broaden the base of country music.

"There are so many good young artists out there," she said. "I think maybe some of the newer people coming in to an industry can bring a new audience in. Maybe young people will hear them and say, 'Hey I like that. Is it country? I like it anyway.' Maybe I'll be able to bring in an audience who didn't like it before."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Oct. 31

ARIES (March 20 to April 17): See friends who have been away for a while but are back in your circle again now. Do your duties in the most unique fashion today.

TAURUS (April 18 to May 19): Sidetrack an argument pending at your residence and let your attachment be more aware of the plans you have for the two of you in the future.

GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Confusion at home can be eliminated by careful and exact expressions. Don't hesitate to be very direct and up front about any discussion arising with your loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): It's vitally necessary that you develop a more cooperative attitude at home. Don't allow too much emotionalism to upset your attachment.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Younger couples will be your best mode of social expression now. Don't take secret frustrations out on members of your own family.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): A good day for any changes you want to make at your residence. Your money affairs will now improve if you listen to a wise counselor.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Be social today as you will be able to have a very good time. Not a good time to argue with your family over outside contacts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Go along with desire of some exacting friends now and turn down no new business or money project before investigating it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): You will need to be very selective with the friends you join with today. Don't allow your emotional impulses to get you out of touch with your attachment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Don't get involved in an argument between family and an outsider. Your friends will have helpful ideas for your business progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Younger persons would now bring you more happiness in the home. Don't let a well-meaning friend change anything of a practical nature.

PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Don't try to put all your creative ideas into your business so quickly. Your family can help you very much and you need their now.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK6 ♥KQ10543 ♦85 ♣A6
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
A.—You have a hand worth almost eight playing tricks, and no simple overall is going to show that many potential winners. The way to describe your hand is to double now and then bid hearts as cheaply as possible at your next turn.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠76 ♥3 ♦AQ1093 ♣KQJ42
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
A.—You have found an eight-card trump fit! Partner must have at least a six-card suit to jump to three spades, and you have two spades and a ruffing value. Bid four spades, even if partner's bid is merely invitational. Four clubs only confuses the issue.

Saturday's Cryptoquip: IN THE TORRID ASIAN JUNGLE, BIRDS CAN ONLY JOIN BASEBALL TEAMS IN THE MYNA LEAGUES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: B equals H

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

U.S. Surprised By Soviet Acceptance Of Changes In Hungary, E. Germany

WASHINGTON — A Bush administration official expresses surprise at Soviet statements that the Kremlin would not object if Hungary chose to leave the Warsaw Pact or East Germany chose to reunite with West Germany.

Assistant Secretary of State Raymond G. Seitz said Sunday the remarks by Soviet party spokesman Nikolai Shishlin on Hungary and the Warsaw Pact indicated a new Kremlin policy.

"I found his description about what the commitment to the Warsaw Pact was, rather surprising," Seitz said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" program. "He seemed to suggest that there was choice involved," Seitz said.

"That would be welcome news, if it is correct. But that is not what the Soviet government has been saying," Seitz said.

Previously, Soviet and Hungarian officials have stressed that Hungary would stay in the Kremlin-led Warsaw Pact military alliance.

The statements by Shishlin and Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov followed a declaration by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev last week his nation had no moral right to interfere with changes underway in the Soviet bloc nations of Eastern Europe.

Gorbachev also declared a willingness to dissolve the Warsaw Pact if the West disbands the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, a step the Bush administration has rejected as an effort to cut U.S. influence in Europe.

Shishlin, appearing on ABC, was asked whether the Soviet Union would object if Hungary decided to leave the Warsaw Pact.

"We respect the Hungarian choice, anyhow. We are not afraid of these changes," said Shishlin.

Asked whether Hungary was "free to leave the Warsaw Pact," Shishlin replied: "Surely. But you know that Hungarian officials declared that they are ready to be in the Warsaw Pact, until now."

In 1956, a declaration by Hungarian leader Imre Nagy that his nation would quit the alliance prompted Soviet military intervention. In recent months, reform leaders elected to power in Hungary and Poland have declared their intention to remain in the Soviet alliance.

Shishlin also appeared to leave the door open to reunification of West and East Germany, which have been divided since World War II. The U.S. and West German governments historically have favored unification, but the East German and Soviet governments have not.

In light of the turmoil in East Germany, Shishlin said: "Nobody can predict what will happen. And I am sure that this situation should be changed and it will be changed."

"How will it be changed?" Shishlin was asked.

"By the right of choice," he replied.

"Everything depends on the Germans. But it is necessary to understand our interests, not to destabilize the situation in Europe," he said. "Let us wait a little bit, and I think we will find a new situation."

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gerasimov, appearing on the syndicated program, "One-on-One," called the new policy "the Frank Sinatra Doctrine."

"Frank Sinatra has a very popular song, 'I Had It My Way' So, Hungary, Poland, every other country, has its own way. They decide which road to take. It's their business. And we watch, watch closely, but we do not interfere," said Gerasimov.

Vice President Dan Quayle, appearing on a different segment of "One-on-One," said the administration was "encouraged by President Gorbachev's statement and the fact that he says that the Soviet Union does not have the right to interfere ... with Eastern Europe. That's positive."

Quayle advised caution in reacting to statements by Soviet leaders.

"We hope that perestroika succeeds," he said, using the Russian word for Gorbachev's reforms. "But as they talk about the Frank Sinatra doctrine — also remember the Nancy Sinatra doctrine in song, 'These Boots Are Made for Walking.'"

East Berliners Complain Publicly

BERLIN — (AP) — At a remarkable open forum, East Berliners joined before an open mike and said what once might have landed them in jail, jeering Communist leaders and calling on them to account for a host of misdeeds and blunders.

At least 20,000 people attended Sunday's rally, which was organized by the mayor of the East German capital to address calls for reform that have reached a fever-pitch this month.

Similar meetings were organized in other cities across the country.

At the request of a person who stepped up to one microphone at the gathering outside East Berlin's old City Hall, the crowd observed a minute of silence for those killed while attempting to escape over the Berlin Wall.

"We have to remember those who lost their lives in the minefields and along the barbed wire and in the waters of the Spree River just because once in their lives they wanted to see another part of the world," said the unidentified man.

It was the first such public mourning since Communist authorities built the wall in 1961 to prevent East Germans from escaping to the West. West German human rights groups say 191 people were killed trying to flee East Germany from 1961 to 1988.

One worker demanded the Wall be torn down. "It's time we were allowed to go where we want," he said.

The man who supervised construction of the wall, Erich Honecker, ruled East Germany for 18 years until being replaced nearly two weeks ago.

The new Communist chief, Egon Krenz, has promised "a new course" for the country, including freer travel to the West and an amnesty for people jailed for trying to escape what has been a tightly-controlled society.

East Germans have taken to the streets by the hundreds of thousands this month to demand a more open society with free elections, a free press and an end to one-party rule. Since mid-September, more than 50,000 have fled to the West, many of them young skilled workers.

Journalists Injured In Bogota Shooting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Attackers on a motorcycle shot and wounded two journalists in front of a television studio just hours after a purported cocaine kingpin was sent to the United States to be prosecuted.

No group claimed responsibility for Sunday's shooting in the capital, but it appeared to be yet another response by cocaine barons to the government's extradition of accused drug traffickers to the United States.

Jose Abello Silva, the Medellin cocaine cartel's reputed master smuggler, was handed over to U.S. narcotics agents before dawn Sunday at a Bogota airport and then flown to Tulsa, Okla. to face drug charges, U.S. authorities said.

He was the fifth and most important drug-trafficking suspect extradited to the United States since the Colombian government began an all-out war on drug gangs 10 weeks ago. Eight more suspects are being held for extradition.

In Sunday's attack, the two gunmen on a motorcycle shot Jorge Enrique Pulido, producer of the news program "Mundo Vision," and newswoman Ximena Godoy as they got into a car after leaving the studio, police said.

Pulido, 45, was shot twice in the shoulder and once in the throat, and Ms. Godoy, 22, was hit in the leg, a police spokesman said. Both were in stable condition at a Bogota hospital.

Police said they captured one suspect and he was being questioned.

Pulido and Ms. Godoy were the ninth and 10th news industry employees shot since the government began its crackdown in August after the assassination of a leading presidential candidate. The other eight died.

In the week after the crackdown began, a group of drug traffickers calling itself the Extraditables vowed in a letter sent to a radio network to attack the country's journalists and public figures.

Since then, the offices of two newspapers have been bombed.

Police said four bombs exploded in different locations in Bogota on Sunday night, causing damage but no casualties.

Afghan Rebels Join Forces To Take Government Camp

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — Guerrilla factions have united to capture a major government garrison in central Afghanistan, raising fears in the military that rebel factions are ending feuds, a government source and witnesses said today.

Divisions have hurt the U.S.-backed guerrillas in their campaign to topple the Kabul government after the last Soviet troops pulled out in February.

However, a source in the Moscow-supported government, quoted military officials as saying officers were worried that the fractious rebels are now beginning to join forces.

Several guerrilla factions reportedly fought together to capture the south-central city of Sore Kallin. The city is the hometown of the late Noor Mohammad Taraki, founder of the ruling Democratic People's Party of Afghanistan and the country's first Communist ruler.

Thousands of rebels attacked the Ghazni province city last week, according to the government source and two truck drivers who arrived in Kabul from the region today.

By Friday, rebel forces had routed the 3,000-member government garrison, they said. The truck drivers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, reported 10 rebels killed and 80 wounded but said they knew nothing of government casualties.

Rebels captured many government weapons, including thousands of AK-47 assault rifles, hand grenades and mortars, the government source said.

Taraki set up the garrison after he seized power in an April 1978 coup that touched off the country's civil war. Although Taraki was ousted and killed in another coup in September 1979, the garrison had remained among the strongest in Ghazni province, the government source said.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said rebels have been trying to knock out the garrison for several years. "The victory was the result of their unity," he said.

One truck driver said that after the rebel victory, several mullahs, or Moslem clergymen, were hung upside down from trucks after they were accused of supporting the government.

The government source said cooperation by separate guerrilla forces on a blockade of the government's main supply route from the Soviet Union also indicated new unity among rebel factions.

He said forces loyal to Ahmad Shah Massoud and others led by Gulbuddin Hekmatyar had been coordinating the 10-day blockade on the Salang Highway, the northern route out of Kabul.

The source said Massoud, a relatively liberal Moslem, had not previously united forces with Hekmatyar, a fundamentalist Moslem.

Rebels have also been blockading the three others highways out of Kabul, the capital, according to private truckers.

The blockade was forcing up food prices and raising fears of shortages. More than 2,000 trucks were said to be stuck on Salang Highway north of the fighting.

In addition, the rebels also stepped up rocketing on the capital's airport. Soldiers said at least six rockets crashed down there in the early morning today, but no casualties were reported.

However, they said air shipments from the Soviet Union were slowing down to about 10 a day from the usual 30.

Government officials have said if land and air routes are shut, the capital would be able to survive for about one month. Silos holding about 50,000 tons of flour are said to be full, and the government has also stockpiled gasoline.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Oct. 20.

HOUSE

ECONOMIC AID PACKAGE — By a vote of 280 for and 125 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2494) authorizing in fiscal 1990 about $20 million to help U.S. exporters and more that $260 million in foreign aid.

The bill provides $150 million to help the International Monetary Fund subsidize interest owed by developing nations, $110 million in "tied aid" that recipients must use to buy American goods and $20 million for Export-Import Bank subsidies of borrowing by American exporters. It also sends $232 million to the Inter-American Development Bank for loans to Latin America, beginning in fiscal 1991.

Supporter Al McCandless, R-Calif., said funding the Inter-American Development Bank is "the best way for the United States to have the maximum impact at the lowest cost in South and Central America."

Opponent Jim Bunning, R-Ky., objected to "yet another handout to the Inter-American Development Bank," which has helped the Sandinistas in Nicaragua.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

North Carolina voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Howard Coble, R-6, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Not voting: None.

AID TO POLAND AND HUNGARY — By a vote of 345 for and 47 against, the House sent to the Senate a Bill (HR 3402) authorizing nearly $840 million in fiscal 1990 to help Poland and Hungary remain stable as they open their political and economic systems to the West. The amount is nearly twice as much as President Bush requested this year in special aid to the two countries. It provides food shipments, trade benefits, environmental assistance, infusions of hard currency, grant to spur private enterprise and programs bringing Polish and Hungarian students to the United States.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

North Carolina voting yes: Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Voting no: None.

"CARGO PREFERENCE" — By a vote of 170 for and 228 against, the House rejected an amendment to scale back the "cargo preference" requirements of a bill (see preceding vote) sending special aid to Poland and Hungary. The amendment was backed by farm interests and opposed by the maritime industry.

At issue was a requirement that American-flag vessels haul all U.S. food provided to Poland. Of the bill's $125 million for food for the Poles, about $50 million would go for shipping. Critics said use of lower-cost foreign vessels would free up more of the $125 million for food. The amendment sought to permit half of the food to be carried to Poland under foreign flag.

Supporter Doug Bereuter, R-Neb., complained that money for food would be "siphoned off for the maritime industry."

Opponent Helen Bentley, R-Md., said 42 cents of each dollar spent on American flagships would "come back in taxes to help pay for the great subsidy (for) farmers that we all have supported."

Members voting yes wanted to scale back cargo preference requirements in the bill.

NORTH CAROLINA voting yes: Valentine, Lancaster, Neal, Rose, Ballenger.

Voting no: Jones, Price, Coble, Hefner, McMillan, Clarke.

Not voting: None.

SENATE

NICARAGUAN ELECTION AID — By a vote of 64 for and 35 against, the Senate sent to President Bush a bill (HR 3385) providing $9 million to boost the candidacy of Violetta Chamorro in the Feb. 25, 1990 Nicaraguan presidential election. Chamorro, a newspaper publisher, is the democratic opposition's candidate against Daniel Ortega, the Marxist ruler of Nicaragua.

Supporter John Chafee, R-R.I., said the $9 million will "help level the playing field" in the Nicaraguan contest.

Opponent Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said "it is time to let the Nicaraguan people attempt to resolve their own differences without interference from us."

Senators voting yes supported election aid to the Nicaraguan opposition.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., voted yes to support election aid to the Nicaraguan opposition. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., voted no, opposing election aid.

TO PROTECT THE FLAG — The Senate rejected a proposed constitutional amendment outlawing "the physical desecration of the flag of the United States." The tally of 51 for and 48 against fell short of the two-thirds majority required for approval. This killed the proposal, because both houses of Congress must approve amendments to the Constitution if state ratification is to go forward. The House has not taken up the amendment.

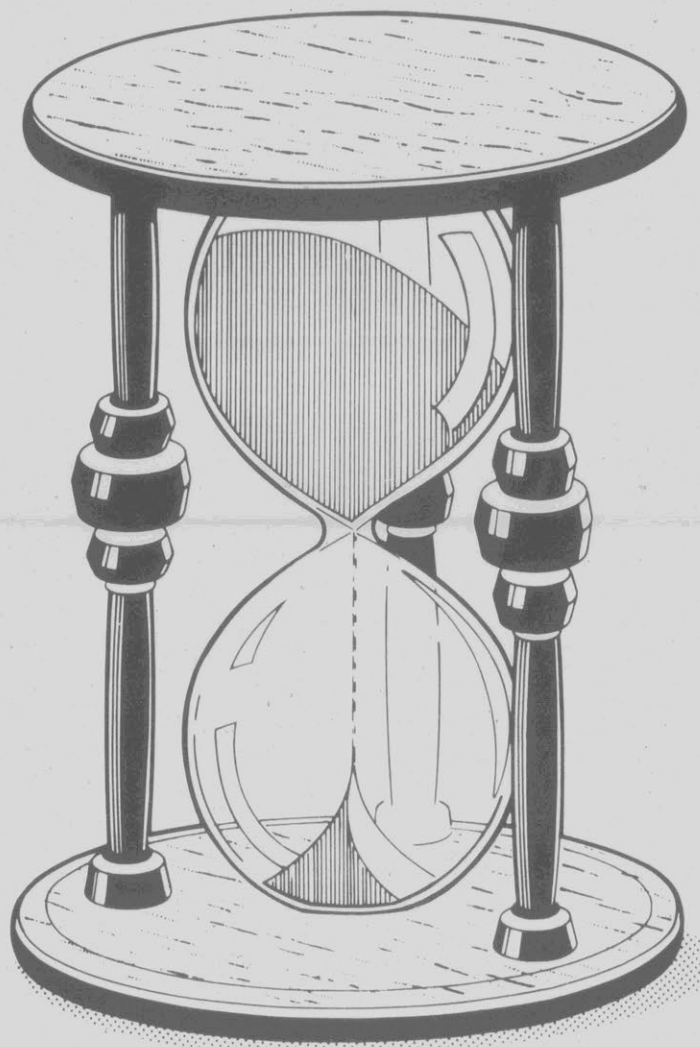

Supporters argued that action as drastic as amending the Constitution is needed to safeguard the flag, while opponents said the flag-protection statute recently approved by Congress will do the job.

Sanford voted no, opposing the constitutional amendment to protect the flag. Helms voted yes, supporting the amendment.

TO REMOVE JUDGE HASTINGS — By a vote of 69 for and 26 against, the Senate achieved the two-thirds majority needed to find U.S. District Judge Alcee L. Hastings of Florida guilty of the first of 17 articles of impeachment presented to it by the House. The article alleged he conspired in 1981 to obtain a $150,000 bribe from a defendant in his court. The Senate found Hastings guilty of seven additional impeachment counts related mostly to his conduct in 1983 as a defendant in criminal court accused of taking part in the alleged bribery scheme. It then removed him from office.

Helms voted yes to remove Judge Hastings from office. Sanford voted no, opposing Hastings' removal.
