Reports Circulating That Eveready Will Close

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Plans to shut down Eveready Battery Co. Inc. of Greenville may be under way, according to unconfirmed reports circulating in Greenville.

A shift worker at the plant who wanted to remain anonymous said today that talk of the plant closing has circulated among employees over the past few weeks.

Joseph T. Tisone, manager at the local plant declined comment this morning on whether or not the plant is closing, but referred a reporter to officials at Ralston Purina, owners of Eveready.

Patrick Ferrell, manager of corporate information for Ralston Purina, would neither confirm nor deny the company has plans to close the Greenville plant.

"We don't have anything on that right now. When we do have something to announce, we will do it in a press release," Ferrell said today from his office in St. Louis, Mo.

Earlier this month, Eveready announced plans to lay off 38 workers. That layoff was to take effect by mid-November. Tisone said, at the time, that the layoff was "due to a downturn in sales." He said the company would recall workers if sales picked up.

About 270 people are employed at Eveready, according to Tisone. The plant, which manufactures Eveready batteries, was once owned and operated by Union Carbide Corp.

Ralston Purina bought the Greenville and other Eveready plants when Union Carbide sold off its consumer products division early in 1986.

Street Mob Pelts Police As Parties Spill Over

Revelers' Outburst Brings On Arrest Of 140

By Stuart Savage
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Law enforcement officers, who were pelted with bottles and rocks after they ordered a Halloween street party to disband, arrested about 140 people in a Greenville residential neighborhood Tuesday night.

Those arrested were charged with failing to disband and officials said that, for the most part, the arrests were made peacefully.

Law enforcement officers were sent to the Tar River Estates apartment complex about 9:30 p.m., Capt. R.M. Nichols said, after a number of loud noise complaints were received.

The only injury reported during the evening, Nichols said, occurred when Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy Paul Scott fell, dislocating his shoulder and breaking a collar bone.

At one point after police arrived, the crowd, estimated at about 300 people, blocked Oak Street and attempted to overturn an occupied vehicle that was "caught in the crowd," Nichols said.

After that initial group was dispersed, Nichols said, the mostly college-age crowd regrouped a block away on Ash Street. "While attempting to disperse this crowd," Nichols said police and East Carolina University officials "were pelted with bottles and debris from the crowd." They were throwing just about "anything they could get their hands on," Nichols said.

"We tried to talk them into dispersing. Instead of dispersing they started throwing liquor bottles, beer bottles, 2-by-4s, anything they could get their hands on, at officers."

At about 10:30 p.m. the lawmen moved in and, during the next two hours, made about 140 arrests for failing to disperse, according to Nichols.

Those arrested were placed on buses furnished by the N.C. Department of Corrections and taken before magistrates for processing before being jailed under $200 bond each. Most of them had been released on bond before daybreak.

Of those arrested, Nichols said, only about 19 were residents of the Tar River Estates apartments. Thirty-four gave ECU dormitory addresses.

"We feel like we acted in a very professional manner," Nichols, who head's the department's administrative and technical services division, said. "We did what we had to do to effect the arrests after the command was given to disperse."

Ortega Ends Cease-Fire, Threatens To Halt Voting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega today ended his government's 19-month truce with the Contras, citing continued rebel attacks, and threatened to cancel elections scheduled next year. Ortega accused President Bush of "supporting terrorism in Nicaragua."

By suspending the truce, Ortega has invited renewed U.S. military aid to the Contras.

He made the announcement this morning at a news conference that was broadcast live on a nationwide radio chain.

On Friday, the Sandinista leader stunned a summit of Western hemisphere leaders when he announced he would not renew the truce, which the government has done monthly.

Ortega was immediately condemned and world leaders expressed concern about his risking the painstaking peace process in Central America as well as Nicaragua's scheduled elections Feb. 25.

By going through with the threat, he could trigger international condemnation and loss of support of Western European friends, who have defied U.S. pressure and aided Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Bush said Tuesday he would review U.S. policy toward Nicaragua if Ortega ends the cease-fire.

"We are waiting for that re-evaluation," said a Contra leader, Adolfo Calero, in Miami. "For our part, we have to defend ourselves. Every man has the right to survive, and we have to look for the way to survive."

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today: "We'll consider the situation, analyze the options, determine the appropriate response, but at this point, no decisions have been made one way or another."

Asked if this might prompt the administration to seek renewed military aid for the Contras, Fitzwater said, "We haven't even considered (that). We haven't considered any response, except that we were trying to preserve the ceasefire and preserve the peace process."

Fitzwater added that he did not expect the administration to make "any immediate response" to the move by Ortega.

Ortega said the February elections in Nicaragua depend on the willingness of Bush and Congress to divert humanitarian funds to demobilize the rebels.

Ortega's comments differed from the text of an official communique, which said the Nicaraguan govern-

Sailors, Missiles Washed Overboard Off Hatteras

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORFOLK — Two sailors were missing and presumed dead after being swept overboard from aircraft carriers in the Atlantic and Pacific in the third and fourth accidents on Navy ships in three days.

The accidents occurred 11 minutes apart, at 1:15 a.m. Tuesday on the USS Dwight D. Eisenhower about 30 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., and at 10:26 p.m. PST Monday on the USS Carl Vinson in the Pacific about 620 miles north of Wake Island, the Navy said Tuesday.

On the Eisenhower, a wave struck a freight elevator as the sailors moved missiles from one deck to another, sweeping three sailors and 38 missiles into the sea, the Navy said. Two sailors were rescued just before the end of the Cold War. The Cold War was dumped down to the bottom of the Mediterranean Sea.

He was interviewed from Moscow on the ABC-TV show, "Good Morning America."

The December meeting, to be held on U.S. and Soviet warships on alternate days in the Mediterranean Sea, would be the first presidential today. "I think that this meeting can just be the end of the Cold War. The Cold War was dumped down to the bottom of the Mediterranean Sea."

He said one sailor's condition was upgraded from critical to serious after dramatic improvement overnight. John identified the sailor as Airman Carroll Anthony Washington of Richville, S.C. He did not know the sailor's age. The other sailor was in good condition, but his identity was unavailable, was in good condition, said Lt. Paul Jenkins, an Atlantic Fleet spokesman.

Navy planes and ships searched through the day Tuesday for Craig

A. Harris, 22, of Uniontown, Pa., missing from the Eisenhower. Joining in the search were the destroyer USS Dewey and the guided missile frigate USS Carr, as well as aircraft from the carrier, said Lt. J.G. Karl Johnson, an Atlantic Fleet spokesman.

The search for Harris was called off late in the afternoon.

Seawater Summit Plan Stirs Bipartisan Praise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is drawing bipartisan praise with his announcement of a seawater summit Dec. 2-3 with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to discuss "dynamic change" in the communist world.

Bush, making the announcement Tuesday, said the meeting will not focus on strategic arms reduction talks but instead will allow the leaders "to put up our feet" and "deepen our respective understanding of each other's views."

"I don't want to have two gigantic ships pass in the night because of failed communication," Bush said. "I just didn't want to — in this time of dynamic change — miss something, something that I might get better firsthand from Mr. Gorbachev."

Gennady Gerasimov, Soviet foreign ministry spokesman, said

WILLIAM A. BLOODWORTH

Bloodworth Named To Missouri Position

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Dr. William A. Bloodworth, who served as East Carolina University's acting vice chancellor for academic affairs during the past two years, will leave ECU to become chief academic officer at Central Missouri State University in January.

Bloodworth, 46, professor of English and a member of the English faculty at ECU for 17 years, will become provost of the rapidly growing regional state university in Warrensburg, Mo., effective Jan. 3.

He served for five years as chairman of the English department and in July 1987 was appointed acting vice chancellor for academic affairs upon the resignation of Dr. Angelo A. Volpe. Volpe was elected president of Tennessee Tech University in Cookeville, Tenn.

Last July, following a national search, ECU named Dr. Marlene Springer, a vice president at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, as Volpe's successor. Bloodworth most recently was assigned as a member of the chancellor's staff to coordinate ECU's $25.4 million Joyner Library addition project.

As provost at CMSU, Bloodworth will have oversight responsibility for four colleges and CMSU's division of academic services and development, the Missouri Safety Center and the Center for Technology and Small Business Development.

Bloodworth is a native of Texas and holds degrees from Texas Lutheran College and Lamar University and a doctorate from the University of Texas. He joined the ECU English faculty in 1972. His specialties include western American literature and he has published frequently in that field.

In July and August, Bloodworth was one of 94 higher education administrators in the nation chosen to attend the Harvard University Institute for Educational Management.

ECU Archaeologist Restores Old English Cannon Found On Coast

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A crusted and rusty hunk of iron donated to East Carolina University in 1983 may be the oldest English cannon ever found near the U.S. East Coast, an East Carolina University archaeologist says.

Bradley A. Rodgers, a lecturer in ECU's Maritime History and Underwater Research Graduate Program, has restored the cannon and identified it as a 'field piece' dating from the late 16th century. Measuring 4½ feet long and weighing 300 pounds, the gun was pulled from the Atlantic Ocean several years before it was given to ECU.

"It's a very unusual gun," Rodgers said.

He quoted an English gun expert he consulted as saying he believes that the gun was made in England between 1580 and 1590. "If it's this old, it dates from the time of the first English colonists on Roanoke Island," Rodgers said. "And, if this is true, it could be the oldest English cannon found in the United States."

Rodgers directed the painstaking process of peeling concretion — a combination of calcium carbonate and iron corrosion products — from the cannon and stabilizing the metal to prevent further rust. "When I first saw it, I believed it was a swivel-mounted cannon that was no more than 100-to-200 years old," he said.

But as the concretion fell away, Rodgers saw, by the decorative moldings, that it was an old and unusual piece. Upon scraping the rust from inside of the barrel, he also found the gun loaded. Its powder was still dry.

He soon realized that the gun was different from any he had ever seen. So he started studying many books seeking to find reference to a similar one. He sent pictures and drawings to the Tower of London, a museum which referred him to C.J.N. Trollope, an ordinance expert in Clay Barn, England.

It was Trollope who identified the gun as an English Falcon. Rodgers said identification was made by its moldings, bands around its barrel, and its muzzle, an uncommon type found on only three other surviving English guns.

Trollope said it is a gun used primarily on land rather than on ships.

Once it was identified, speculation as to how it came to be on a ship which sailed in the New World could begin. "There are some exciting possibilities," Rodgers said.

He quoted Gordon Watts, co-director of the ECU Maritime History and Underwater Research Program, as saying that the cannon could have been from one of Sir Francis Drake's vessels that patrolled the coast of the 'New World' during the period. But, Watts pointed out, Drake's ships were heavily armed for England's war with Spain, usually with guns much larger than this one.

It could have also been aboard a ship that was supplying the colony at Jamestown.

Another possibility Watts suggested is that it was aboard Sir Humphrey Gilbert's vessel Squirrel that was lost at sea.

Rodgers said the cannon also may have been an old weapon taken aboard a 17th century vessel. He even suggested that it may have been junk in a ship's hold used for ballast. This theory seems unlikely, however, he said, since the gun was fully loaded with a charge of powder, wadding, a two and a half inch iron ball and a dozen iron grapeshot.

The grapeshot, which Rodgers believes will prove to be the earliest ever found near the U.S. East Coast, was used in loads to be fired at people rather than at hulls of vessels. The shot was surrounded by a canvas bag. This and wadding are perfectly preserved.

Spangler Says He Committed Mistakes In N.C. State Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — University of North Carolina system president C.D. Spangler Jr. said in an interview published today that he made mistakes in handling the investigation of North Carolina State University's basketball program.

Spangler, whose comments appeared in today's editions of The Charlotte Observer, said the investigation should have moved faster and that he should have consulted more often with the 35-member board of governors.

"I have 35 bosses on the board of governors and I enjoy my job at their pleasure," Spangler said. "I have no tenure and I have no contract. It is very important for me to be aware of their thoughts and to address matters that they want addressed."

Spangler's response comes after board members Walter Davis and William Johnson, a non-voting member emeritus, called for his resignation on Saturday.

Former board chairman John Jordan stopped short of calling for Spangler's resignation, but said his image has been damaged.

Other board members interviewed this week agreed that Spangler could have handled the N.C. State investigation better and that he has an image problem. But they say he still enjoys the support of a majority of the board, which hires the system president.

Spangler, 57, a former Charlotte construction executive and NCNB director, was named university system president in 1986. He followed William Friday, who gained a national reputation for building one of the country's top university system's in the 30 years that he held the position.

Some, including Johnson, don't like Spangler's membership on the boards of directors of several private industries. They think it takes time from his job as university president. Their most serious criticism has been of his handling of the probe into the N.C. State basketball program.

Some thought the 6½-month-long probe by a special commission appointed by Spangler took too long. They didn't like voting on Spangler's recommendations — which were aimed at ensuring academic integrity in the university system's athletic programs — without seeing them in advance.

There were some who disagreed with his decision to keep the commission findings from the public and board members.

Shotgun Blast Hits Automobile

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A family returning from an evening of trick-or-treating in Bethel found the frights of Halloween all too real.

Bethel police Chief J.B. Buell said this morning that a group of four adults and one child was traveling south on N.C. 11 about 7:45 p.m. after trick-or-treating when a shotgun blast peppered the drivers' door with buckshot. The family returned to town to report the incident and noticed a group of youths in an alley where the shot had come from.

Buell said he called for assistance from the state highway patrol and the sheriff's department. He estimated that 20 to 30 officers responded to the call, and the police blocked off the alley near Church Street.

Buell said the officers searched through the crowd but did not find the shotgun.

No injuries were reported in the incident, and the investigation continues with the help of the state, Buell said.

The mayor of Bethel called for a curfew throughout the town at about 8 p.m. And Buell said town police spent the next few hours clearing the streets.

"We didn't have any more problems after that," Buell said.

Earlier in the evening a driver reported a rock thrown through the rear window of his car which was traveling south on N.C. 11.

"It started early in the evening. A lot earlier than we expected," Buell said.

The investigation into both incidents would continue, Buell said, but he worried about the bad publicity Bethel would receive from the Halloween tricks.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Vote No

In addition to choosing six city council members and a mayor in the Nov. 7 municipal election, Greenville's voters will be asked to make two decisions about the way their city is governed.

Voters will have to decide whether their mayor should have a vote on council and whether their elected officials should serve two-year or four-year terms. A referendum on these two issues accompanies the municipal election. With voters' approval, the city can amend its charter and change its structure.

These may sound like trivial points, but they aren't. A big part of good government is fine-tuning. Democracy is an experiment. Find what works and stick with it; discard what doesn't.

The two issues that await the public's verdict are an important part of this process. They represent adjustments that would hinder the government of a changing, diverse city. Voters should give both issues a thumbs-down.

Thumbs Down To Mayoral Vote

The first of these two issues is the question of whether to allow the city's mayor to have a vote on every council issue. That adjustment would be a step backward for Greenville. Right now, the city's top elected official can only vote to break a tie. That's a sound way to balance the power of that office. A mayor should be a persuader and a director, not a dictator. History teaches that lesson.

Before 1981, Greenville's mayor had a vote on council. The system wasn't producing good government because the mayor had too much power. The vote encouraged the city's top elected leader to hand pick candidates for council. Once these candidates reached office, the mayor had voting power plus control of the council. That's not balanced government and it didn't work in the best interest of the city.

In addition, a mayoral vote historically works against minority interests. While the city has a black mayor now, it won't always. Greenville worked very hard in 1985 to revise its voting districts and method of election to increase minority representation on the city council. Those changes have been effective and have prompted improved attention to minority issues. But that progress, again, rests upon balance, and giving any one individual too much authority upsets that symmetry. A mayoral vote would give one person potentially disruptive power. Citizens should vote no on this issue.

Two Years Long Enough

The second issue facing voters is the length of office for its leaders. Currently council members and the mayor are elected for two years. But if the referendum passes, officials would serve four-year terms. That's a change with distinct disadvantages to a city moving so quickly it trips over its feet.

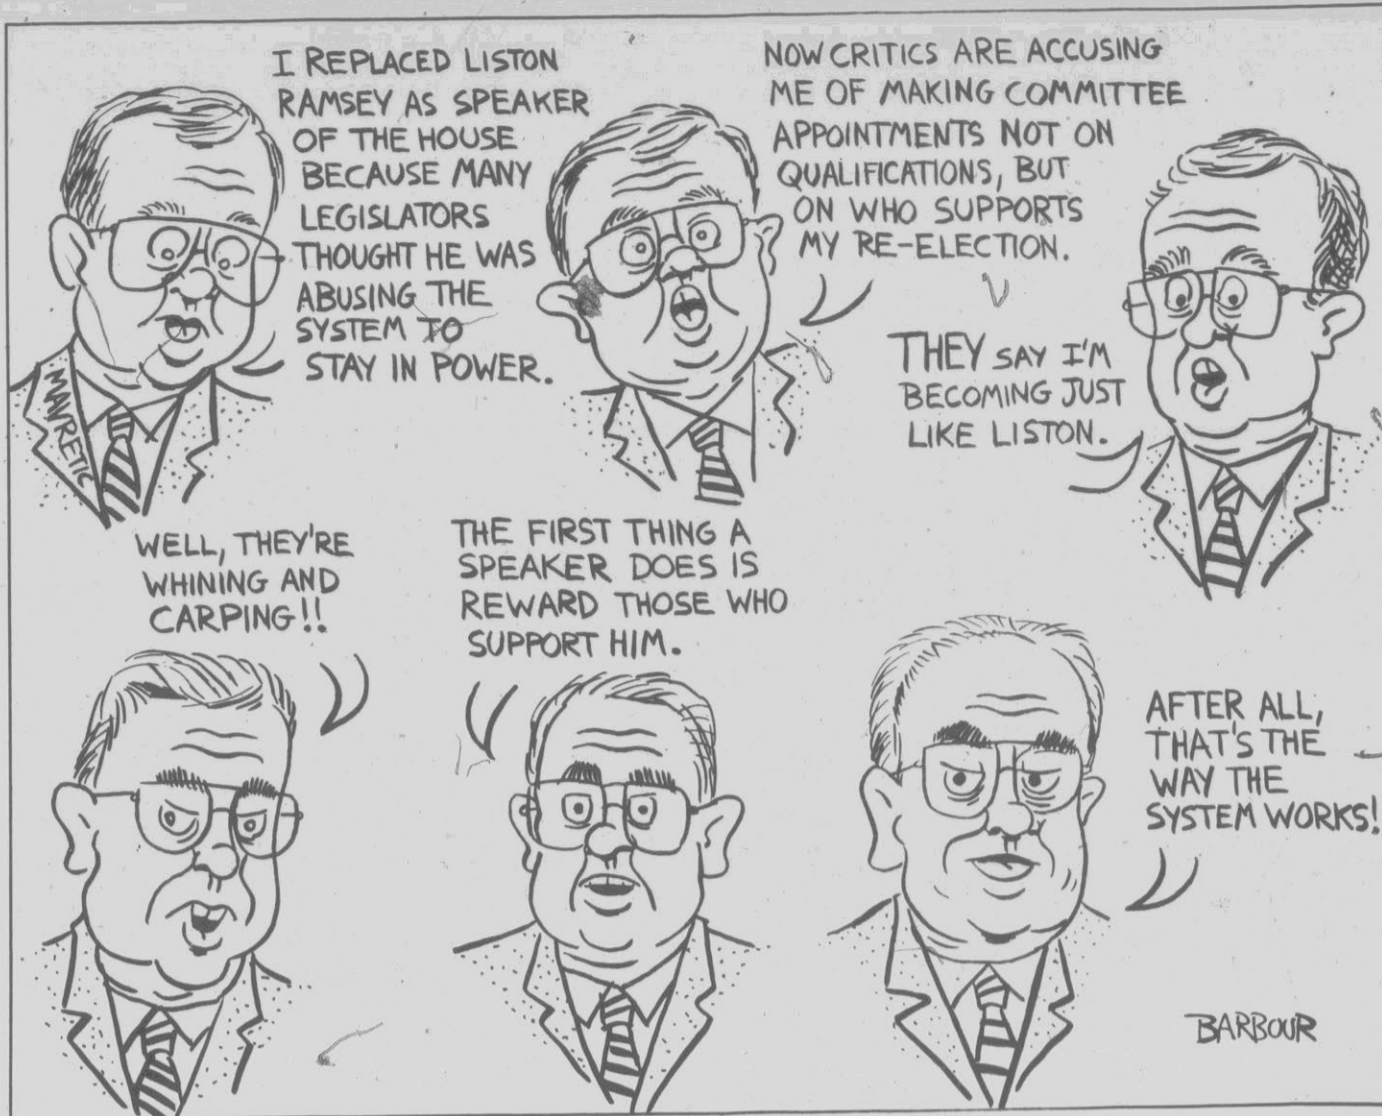

During periods of rapid growth, a city's leadership must be flexible. It must respond to change as quickly as change occurs. Long terms spell slow turnover in government and stagnation.

That simply won't provide the community with the responsiveness to change it requires. Quick-growing cities need government that can also change — at the ballot box — to reflect shifting demographics. Four-year terms for officials would be a cumbersome option which would shackle progress.

Besides, nearly all of North Carolina's expanding urban areas have two-year terms for city councils and mayors. Only Rocky Mount has four-year terms. Raleigh, Fayetteville, Wilmington, Salisbury, Charlotte, Greensboro and New Bern all have two-year terms. All shifted to shorter terms because four-year terms just didn't work.

The lesson? Progressive cities prone to change function better with short terms of public office. There isn't enough accountability to voters with long terms. Voters should say no to that regressive proposal.

Greenville needs resilient leadership to guide it through the turbulence of change. The current lengths of office and balance of power are designed to provide that flexibility. Voters should give them an opportunity to work by voting against the two proposed changes in the city charter.

Public Forum

To the editor:
The League of Women Voters has a position on the question of two or four year terms for our City Council. We studied this issue in 1983-84, and reached the position that Greenville's citizens are best served by council members with two year terms. Our reasons for this conclusion are:

1. Officials are more responsive and accountable when they are up for election every two years.
2. A two year term allows for quicker replacement of ineffective officials.
3. It allows for more frequent opportunity for minority representation.
4. It encourages change and new ideas.
5. It provides for greater involvement for more citizens.

We urge the voters to consider these factors when they decide their position on the referendum considering length of terms for our city council.

To the editor:
Once again our pumpkins have been stolen from their place in our front yard. Each year our family goes on a pumpkin hunting expedition just to find the right pumpkins for our house. And each year some inconsiderate person or persons steals it right before Halloween.

It's to these persons that I address my plea. You're the ones who need to be around when a 3-year old and a 10-year old discover that their pumpkins are gone or rather stolen. You're the ones who need to be around to hear the crying of a 3-year old because some "naughty" person stole his favorite pumpkin; or to answer a 10 year old's questions about why would anyone want to steal a pumpkin from children. You're the ones who need to think before you act and realize how many people you're hurting when you steal anything!

It would be nice to wake up one morning and see our family's pumpkins returned to their rightful place. I rather doubt that I will.

Those Who Preach Should Practice

WASHINGTON — The D.C. City Council, for reasons that defy common courtesy, common sense and common decency, has cited Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan for inspiring a successful anti-drug effort in a Northeast Washington neighborhood.

Naturally the resolution made no mention of Mr. Farrakhan's anti-Jewish mouthings. It mentioned only his "effective leadership in helping to rid the black community of the scourge of drugs." Councilman Harry Thomas, whose idea it was, and the other black council members who voted for it, must have thought it a clever separation. As Councilman John Wilson put it, "I don't have to agree with everything they are doing. They are doing a good job in the drug program, and that's what I supported."

It's a bit like the Georgia Legislature praising Forsyth County for its well-kempt lawns, or the New York City Council citing Bernhard Goetz for promoting subway safety.

William Raspberry

For all their gratitude for what the local Muslims have done to drive drug dealers out of Mayfair Mansions and Paradise Manor, the council members had to know that the citation would be an insult to Jews. The question is why, in the absence of any compulsion to do anything at all, they felt obliged to take this action.

The answer, I suspect, is that some of them believe (correctly?) that "standing up to the Jews" is effective politics, while others (including the three white members of the council) feared that a vote against the resolution would be seen as taking the Jewish side in a black-Jewish controversy.

There is no question that much of the city is grateful for the leadership of Dr. Abdul Alim Muhammad, administrator of the local mosque, in driving the drug traffickers out of Mayfair Mansions and Paradise Gardens. He didn't exactly "rid the black community of the scourge of drugs," but it was an exemplary piece of work, and he brought it off without resort to racial divisiveness.

Indeed, it had been my idea that the city ought to retain him and his Fruit of Islam workers to spread the anti-drug message to other neighborhoods. Thus I was particularly disappointed to learn that he had said (at the mass meeting where Farrakhan was presented his citation) that he had told D.C. Mayor Marion Barry that "when people see you, weak and afraid, bowing down to the Jews, they will hate you."

I don't know what accounts for this gratuitous anti-Semitism, nor do I fully understand why so many blacks — even those who studiously avoid expressing it themselves — see it as somehow gutsy to say these hateful things.

Do they believe that Jews are specially involved in the drug trafficking that is wrecking so many black communities? Do they believe that Jews are more anti-black than other groups? Is it lingering resentment over Jewish opposition to Jesse Jackson? Do they see Jews as some special species of enemy? Does it count for nothing that in city after city, Jews have been the electoral margin for black candidates?

In the past few days, I have had conversations with respected black friends who are pleased that the council refused to be caught "bowing down to the Jews." Some of them, I am convinced, would not have been all that upset if the council had passed a resolution that simply said "The hell with Jews." Why, they ask, should we care that Jews are offended?

Well, for the same reasons we insist that others should care when we are offended; for the same reasons we thought it a good thing when Jewish leaders disavowed the recent racist remarks of comedian Jackie Mason. In a country made up of minorities, insensitivity to any minority is a threat to political health and civility.

Blacks in particular are at pains to force America to face up to its racism, blatant or subtle, and to demand that others be sensitive to our special concerns. Is it too much to suggest that those who demand sensitivity have a duty to practice it?

Bush Does About-Face In Meeting With Gorbachev

rapidity of change in Eastern Europe; the emergence of democracies in this hemisphere; and this concept that I just didn't want to, in this time of dynamic change, miss something — something that I might get better first-hand from Mr. Gorbachev."

Bush's administration is still divided over Gorbachev's chances of ultimate success, with most senior officials privately pessimistic about how far the Soviet reform program known as perestroika is likely to go. But after months of internal debate, aides say, they have largely agreed that the United States has no choice but to meet the Soviet leader and take a direct role in supporting reform in the communist bloc.

Among the changes officials referred to:

- Accelerated political reform in the Soviet Union, along with a deepening economic crisis
- The election of a non-Communist government in Poland, led by the Solidarity movement
- The decision by Hungary's ruling Communist Party to turn the country into a democracy
- Gorbachev's role in urging more reform on his Soviet bloc allies, including hard-line East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

"Gorbachev has passed several tests with flying colors, most importantly in Eastern Europe, where the Cold War began," said Dmitri Simes, a Sovietologist at Washington's Brookings Institution. "His actions have demonstrated that his declarations of 'New Thinking' in rapidly take up positions on three sides of a rural Contra stronghold in Jinotega province Friday and then heard heavy fighting. Ten Contras were reported killed in a single clash last week in Chontales.

Diplomats and human rights monitors say a lightning offensive would be risky because once begun, it would be hard to shut off. They recall that the Contras waged their fiercest attacks against Sandinista civilian targets when the army tried to drive them over the border during a year-long suspension of U.S. military aid in 1985-86.

They also believe that the psychological effect of Ortega's announcement could intensify the fighting or intimidate opposition candidates whether or not the army launches a major offensive.

"It would have been more effective to step up their counterattacks without declaring the cease-fire over," an Asian diplomat said. "Ortega's reasons are obviously more than military."

Indeed, Sandinista officials said Ortega made his announcement during the summit to dramatize his anger over continuing Contra hostility. Since the cease-fire took hold in March 1988, he said, rebel attacks have left 736 dead and 1,153 wounded.

"We hear that George Bush has pressure with the right wing in his country not to abandon the Contras," said a Foreign Ministry official. "Don't forget, we have pressure from our citizens to get rid of them. Outside Nicaragua everybody wants to pretend that the war is over. We have a lot of grieving mothers to prove otherwise."

As in the past, however, Ortega miscalculated the international outcry against what, in political terms at home, seemed like a reasonable position. In 1985, for example, he visited Moscow to seek help in the face of declining economic assistance from the West. The trip came on the heels of a congressional vote to suspend Contra aid and prompted shocked lawmakers to reverse their decision.

The spectacle of Ortega in army uniform at a summit honoring 100 years of democracy in pacifist Costa Rica, announcing a return to war, was equally stunning to the region's other leaders. Nobody supported him, and a joke circulated that he had come in a costume thinking it was already Halloween.

"One can question the timing and the handling of the announcement," said Paul S. Reichler, a Washington attorney for the Sandinista government. "But the fact remains that the Contras are on a rampage. They are killing people." A Sandinista official conceded: "That message didn't come through as clear as Ortega hoped."

Despite his considerable efforts to make peace with the Contras and hold internationally supervised elections, Ortega has been frustrated by lingering distrust abroad and a failure to secure Western aid to rebuild his destitute country. His recent tour of Mideast oil states gained no pledges of petroleum. A special conference between Nicaragua and potential Western donors set this fall has been postponed until after the election.

In addition, the Soviet Union has suspended arms shipments to Nicaragua and obliged East Germany to do likewise.

"The Sandinistas have a strong feeling of isolation these days," the Asian diplomat said. "Because of this, they cannot sit quietly on the sidelines. When things go against them, they have a psychological need to do something drastic to attract attention."

Soviet policy are real. ... The administration recognizes that. This (Bush-Gorbachev) meeting will establish the U.S. commitment to change in the Soviet Union. It is a way for the administration to show faith in Gorbachev."

It is also a way for the administration to score "a very easy foreign policy success," he added.

Indeed, the political payoff for Bush's move was immediate. Both Democrats and Republicans in Congress applauded his announcement, including some who have spent months criticizing Bush as "timid" in his approach to the changes in the Soviet bloc.

"I commend the president for this step," said Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, one of the most persistent critics. "I think it will be useful."

Asked whether the meeting had changed his judgment of Bush, however, Mitchell added: "No, the mere fact they are meeting doesn't deal with the substance of policies."

But other analysts — and some administration officials, speaking on condition that they not be identified — said that there had been a series of significant shifts in Bush's policy.

When Bush entered the White House, he demanded that Gorbachev prove that his new approach to Soviet foreign policy was genuine, calling repeatedly for "actions as well as words." And some officials, like deputy national security adviser Robert M. Gates, warned that it was dangerous to change U.S. policy in response to Gorbachev's reforms because the Soviet leader might soon fail.

Since then, Bush aides have been convinced, as one said, "that Gorbachev is real." In Eastern Europe especially, he said, the Soviets' commitment to reform has surprised American policy makers: "They have demonstrated a tolerance level that exceeded our expectations."

The second issue was more problematic: Should Bush stick to his cautious position because Gorbachev's reforms appear likely to fail? That question divided the president's advisers — but not his Western European allies, the Eastern European reformers or a growing body of U.S. critics, all of whom argued for a greater American role in aiding reform in the Soviet bloc.

As the pressure to act increased, Bush and his advisers agreed on a new posture: a still-cautious, but more active, search for what Secretary of State James A. Baker III called "points of mutual advantage" with the Kremlin.

"It would be (a) great blunder to ignore the possibility that perestroika might go much further and to retreat instead into a suspicious stance of disengagement that would never put perestroika's promise to the test," Baker said in a major speech on Soviet policy last month.

"Any uncertainty about the fate of reform in the Soviet Union ... is all the more reason, not less, for us to seize the present opportunity," he argued.

That was "a crucial change," said Arnold Horelick of the Rand Corp. in Santa Monica, Calif. "Bush's new look started in the spring, largely under pressure from the Allies. It was pushed by changes in the Soviet Union and accelerated by events in Eastern Europe."

Baker's speech "ended the argument" that instability in the Soviet Union should lead to more caution in Washington, he said.

Another major factor, administration officials said, was the increasing need for high-level U.S.-Soviet talks over the future of Eastern Europe.

But whether or not all-out war resumes, Ortega's move is a risk that could shift the onus for any new fighting from the U.S.-backed rebels onto his own government and undermine faith in an election that is crucial for reviving this shattered nation's economy.

The Contras were shunted off Washington's agenda last spring by a bipartisan agreement to keep their army intact but passive through that election next Feb. 25. Four Central American presidents then joined Ortega in signing an Aug. 7 accord to "demobilize" the Honduras-based rebels but offered no means to force them. With the war reduced to skirmishes, few outsiders cared that up to 10,000 rebels remained under arms.

In recent weeks, however, the Contras have filtered into Nicaragua by the hundreds, warned rural people not to vote for Ortega, assassinated a candidate of the ruling Sandinistas in a small-town election and, in a sharp escalation eight days ago, killed 18 army reservists being trucked to register to vote, according to government officials and independent monitors.

Ortega now faces demands by the Sandinista army to end a 19-month-old cease-fire. One of his aides said the army has proposed a blitzkrieg to drive the Contras back to Honduras by December, hoping the final three months of the election campaign can be waged peacefully.

But when Ortega used a summit meeting with President Bush and 14 other Western Hemisphere leaders in Costa Rica last Friday to announce a truce suspension as of Nov. 1, he was ostracized for overreacting and suspected of maneuvering to cancel the vote.

Since then, Ortega has fudged that impending date and downgraded his vow to "hit the Contras hard" from a decision to a threat. Speaking in the town of Rivas on Sunday, he insisted "we cannot keep turning the other cheek." But he said he is "analyzing the situation" while seeking firmer diplomatic support for disbanding the Contras, and added that he will announce a decision Tuesday.

"The idea was a mistake," an aide to Costa Rican President Oscar Arias said Sunday. "We're still hoping he will back out of it."

While the Contra attacks have brought the delicate process of peace through elections to a crisis, the burden of solving it seems to have fallen on Ortega. U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Saturday that he was "deeply worried" about "the inherent danger of renewed combat" here just days before the Security Council is to vote on a plan by the Central American presidents to station U.N. truce observers throughout the region.

"This is a tricky situation for Ortega," said a foreign election observer in Managua. "The Sandinistas have right on their side, but as the government in power, they have more responsibility to keep the war from revving up. The Contras are beyond the law, but if the cease-fire breaks down, the government would be the villain of the piece."

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — By first vowing to end Nicaragua's cease-fire and then seeming to back away, President Daniel Ortega has managed at least to refocus attention on a problem the world had almost forgotten — the Contras.

YOUR EYEGGLASS PRESCRIPTION
What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions"

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?
A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?
A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?
A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?
A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?
A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580

Thornton holds copy of crew chief's pay record

Crew Chief's Ledger Shows How Charges Bind Some Migrants

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH, N.C. — Labor officials and farmworker advocates have said for decades that credit sales of wine, cigarettes and drugs have been used to bind migrant workers to the fields. Now a federal inspector says the discovery of a ledger of such sales proves the allegations.

The spiral notebook was turned over to inspectors Oct. 10 by the wife of a Johnston County crew chief when she was asked to turn over records for inspection.

"Most of the time we are relying only on the word of the worker. But in this case you can see the charges that are being made against the workers' pay," said Dewey Thornton, a wage and hour director for the U.S. Labor Department.

Investigators believe recurring charges in the book of 60 cents are for soft drinks, while $1.50 and $2.50 entries are believed to be for cigarettes and pint bottles of cheap wine that can be bought for half that price.

Nineteen workers living at the labor camp are in North Carolina for the sweet potato harvest. They work for the crew chief, who contracts with farmers. The 19 have been at the camp since late September.

The ledgers of illegal sales are called "wine books" in migrant camps for the cheap wine they often include.

A few of the entries in the notebook are marked "tobacco" or "light," apparently for an electric bill, said Thornton. But most of the entries carry no designation. Workers have their own pages in the book, with lists of deductions from their pay.

Another record book discovered earlier this year in eastern North Carolina carried $50 and $100 fees for "coyotes" — smugglers who help illegal aliens cross the border from Mexico, Thornton said.

He said the investigation of the labor camp is continuing and could lead to a civil fine and the loss of the crew chief's federal license to operate a labor camp. Thornton would not identify the crew chief or say whether any of the 19 workers in the camp were illegal aliens.

An estimated 40,000 to 50,000 migrant workers pass through North Carolina each year, helping with tobacco, fruit and vegetable harvests. The last of the migrants probably will be gone from the eastern part of the state in the next several weeks when the sweet potato season ends.

Thornton said investigators are concerned by reports of crack cocaine use among migrants. He said some of the entries in the book could have been for crack and other drugs.

"For the crew leader, that would give him a captive work force," Thornton said. "If you can get your workers addicted to crack, then they're not going to leave you. They're going to stay with you to keep getting the drug."

Patient Dies After Getting Wrong Blood

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Errors by two hospital employees led to the death of an 86-year-old Charlotte patient who received Type A instead of Type O blood in a transfusion during surgery, officials said.

The patient died at Presbyterian Hospital on Monday after receiving blood from a mislabeled container.

But Debbie Pressley of the Mecklenburg County medical examiner's office confirmed that the case of Adella Jane McCuen, who died of complications from a blood transfusion reaction, had been referred there. Pressley said the medical examiner decided no autopsy was needed.

One of the employees at Presbyterian Hospital, a medical technologist, resigned. The other, a laboratory technician with less training than a medical technologist, was suspended for three days and put on probation for six months.

"This is a medical technologist's worst nightmare come true," said Robert Hamon, administrative director of Presbyterian's laboratories and also a medical technologist.

Telephone calls to McCuen's daughter went unanswered Tuesday, and Howerton said the family asked that no specifics about the patient's medical care be made public.

"The family is obviously extremely upset and concerned and grieving the loss of a loved one," said Howerton. "Our sympathy and empathy and heartfelt concern and regret has been extended to the family. We have admitted that it occurred, and we have tried to keep the information going to the family."

Howerton added that the two hospital employees were "emotionally devastated" by their mistakes.

Hamon said medical technologists are "drilled" during four- and five-year degree programs about the importance of checking labels on blood.

Blood comes in four major types — A, B, AB and O. And transfusing a patient with the incorrect type of blood can result in shock, kidney damage and bleeding problems that can lead to death.

A patient with Type O blood can only receive Type O blood, said Dr. Jerry Squires, medical director of the American Red Cross Greater Carolinas Chapter.

Mecklenburg Puts Recycling Plan On Display

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — As in many other communities across the country, it took some time for the residents of Charlotte to warm up to recycling as a way of life.

Things have changed.

"If you're not dealing with the issue today, you're just prolonging the agony," explained Brenda Barger, a resource recovery specialist with Mecklenburg County.

More than two years ago, the county launched a pilot program in which some city neighborhoods were asked to place recyclables — aluminum cans, glass containers, plastic bottles and newspapers — into a specially marked container.

The containers were picked up at the curb and taken to a recyclables processing center, where the different materials were separated.

The county's recycling program also includes drop-off centers, metals recovery, office paper recovery and yard waste recovery. But the pilot curbside collection program has drawn the most praise from recycling experts across the country.

"Our philosophy was to start small and work out the bugs before going city-wide," said Ms. Barger.

The pilot program became a huge success, with nearly three out of every four households participating on a regular basis. Once the program goes city-wide early next year, a private firm will be hired to process the recyclable materials.

Delegates to this week's 8th National Recycling Congress — the country's largest forum on recycling issues — will visit the processing center during their stop in Charlotte. What they'll find is a program that has been fine-tuned to the needs of the community.

"Our object was to design a program that was easy to participate in," Ms. Barger explained.

A key element in any successful recycling program is cost.

"That's the part we try to caution people about," she said. "For some communities, money is almost no object. Others need to be more careful."

Education was another key factor in the success of the county's curbside pickup program. That was done with a carefully planned public relations campaign.

"People see they are better off in the long run if they join," she said. "It changes your life. You think about what you're throwing in the garbage."

Ms. Barger said the United States lags behind many other countries when it comes to recycling. But those days are over, she said, as a growing percentage of the country's solid waste landfills are nearly full and the cost of creating new landfills is becoming astronomical.

Busts Returned

KILL DEVIL HILLS, N.C. (AP) — The figureheads of the Wright Brothers have reappeared at the site of man's first powered flight just as mysteriously as they disappeared more than 2½ years ago.

The busts of Orville and Wilbur Wright disappeared in April 1987. Maintenance workers found the figureheads, which were not damaged, Sunday morning on the grounds alongside the entrance.

Chief Park Ranger Larry Roush said the park service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation are continuing their probe to find out who took the busts and why.

The busts were ripped from pedestals next to the monument on top of the hill overlooking the site of the first flight.

Gasoline Leak

HIGH POINT (AP) — A ruptured underground storage tank at a service station leaked about 1,400 gallons of gasoline, forcing the station to close, authorities said.

Tests were scheduled to determine if the gasoline had gotten into the groundwater.

Charles Priddy, operator of the North Main Street station, said the leak, discovered during a daily check of gasoline sales on Oct. 7, took place over a two-day period.

Environmental engineers called to the scene found a 13-inch gash along the seam of one of the 8,000-gallon tanks and removed the tanks and 120 tons of contaminated dirt.

Hugo Assistance

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Federal disaster relief officials say checks have been mailed to about 70 percent of the Hugo storm victims eligible for housing assistance and grants.

"Our first check for housing assistance went in the mail five days after the disaster application centers opened, and the state, which administers the grant program, started mailing checks three days later," said Tom Credle, Federal Coordinating Officer of the disaster recovery effort.

Credle stressed that the deadline for residents in the 29 North Carolina counties eligible for federal disaster dollars is less than a month away.

"We cannot help anyone until they have made their needs known by putting in an application," he said.

The crew of the 693-foot-long and 155-foot-wide ship will be in town for about nine days and to do them honor, the city has scheduled a slate of events ranging from concerts to soccer and rugby matches.

Naval Visit

WILMINGTON, N.C. — The first British aircraft carrier and the largest naval vessel ever to visit Wilmington pulls into port Tuesday carrying more than 1,200 young sailors who have not touched dry land for a month.

The first car careened back to the left, continued across the median toward the two Cannady vehicles and slammed into the younger Cannady's car broadside before striking a fifth vehicle head-on.

Three people went to the hospital, including the younger Cannady. The Cannadys' home caught fire last week while the father was busy fighting a fire elsewhere.

House Votes To Expand Smoking Ban To Cover Virtually All Domestic Flights

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A House vote to ban smoking on virtually all domestic airline flights is a step toward further restrictions on the tobacco industry, a cigarette industry opponent contends.

The House voted Tuesday to forbid smoking on all routes in the continental United States and on all flights to and from Hawaii and Alaska scheduled for six hours or less.

That would allow smoking on just 28 flights — 24 to Alaska and Hawaii and four to Guam — of 17,500 flights the industry says are scheduled daily, according to sponsor Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill. The ban would take effect 96 days after the measure is signed into law.

"In February or March of next year, airline passengers across America can finally start to breathe a little easier," Durbin said.

Current law bans smoking on domestic flights of two hours or less.

The prohibition is part of a compromise House-Senate measure providing $12 billion for transportation and $3.2 billion for anti-drug programs for the fiscal year that started Oct. 1. The House is expected to send the legislation to the Senate for final congressional approval as early as today.

Durbin said the proposed smoking restrictions, which the House adopted on a voice vote and with little debate, indicate a shift in federal policy toward the tobacco industry. The next target, he said, could be cigarette company advertising aimed at attracting young new smokers.

"Our agenda must move forward," Durbin said.

Tobacco lobbyists, however, said they do not believe the vote spells a new hostile attitude by lawmakers against smoking.

"An airline cabin is a unique environment because a passenger is in effect a captive," said Charlie Whitley, a consultant to the Tobacco Institute, the cigarette industry's trade group. "For that reason we don't think this sets a precedent for anything else."

Tobacco-state lawmakers and other opponents of the smoking ban, realizing they were badly outnumbered, offered little resistance on Tuesday.

They largely confined their remarks to complaints that Congress should have waited for a Department of Transportation study of airline cabin air quality, due early next year. Tobacco supporters have argued that cigarette smoke is but one pollutant in cabin air, which is recirculated in flight.

The House voted 259-169 on Aug. 2 to make permanent the ban on smoking on flights lasting two hours or less. On Sept. 14, the Senate voted 77-21 to end delaying tactics by lawmakers trying to block a permanent ban on all flights. The version considered Tuesday was a compromise.

Durbin and his allies have argued that non-smokers can get cancer and lung and respiratory diseases by breathing cigarette smoke. They have been backed by a legion of health associations and unions representing airline employees.

Jessica Will Host Special On Pay-TV

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Let history record that on Nov. 10, those willing to pay $9.50 for some, er, culture can see "Thunder and Mud," a pay-TV special that features heavy metal rock, female mud wrestling and ... Jessica Hahn.

There may be those who say, "You're kidding."

To them, Jessica Hahn would say that there will be such a show, that it runs 90 minutes, that she is the hostess and that "it's not 'Masterpiece Theater.' It's a little crazy."

"I'm just there for the p.r., if you ask me," says the former church secretary, whose sexual encounter with television evangelist Jim Bakker led to his loss of his PTL empire in 1987.

Bakker has been sentenced to 45 years in prison and fined $500,000 for defrauding his followers for his own enrichment. Hahn now lives in West Hollywood, Calif., where she gave several interviews about him last week.

She told reporters she wasn't satisfied with the sentence given Bakker. She is pretty much talked out about him, she now says. But she's fully aware that "it's always going to be identified with me because, in one sentence here and there (in interviews), I'm always asked about it."

A cheerful-sounding woman, despite occasional verbal rocks cast at her by those who are without sin, Hahn readily acknowledges that her "Thunder and Mud" stint and earlier entertainment ventures are due to the publicity she got when the Bakker matter first surfaced.

"Of course. One thing led to another," she says. She cites her Playboy magazine appearance, talk show visits, and frequent on-air joking with Howard Stern, the much-publicized bad boy of New York radio.

"He's a crazy man, but I love him," says Hahn.

Last year, she also was featured in a "Wild Thing" video that aired on MTV. The video spoofed rock videos and starred Sam Kinison, the comic who screams.

"He sang 'Wild Thing' or screamed it, whichever, and I kind of fooled around," she says. She describes her latest venture, taped last month, as "kind of a battle of the bands with a twist."

The twist is that female mud wrestlers grapple with each other while rock bands grapple with music. Each wrestler, she says, represents a different band. The bands have names like Nuclear Assault, Tuff, and She-Rok.

Five Die As Train-Car Collide

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CALERA, Okla. — Five people, including three children, died when the car in which they were riding was crushed by a Union Pacific freight train in southern Oklahoma, authorities said.

"It had hit the driver's side of the car. Everything was just crushed," said Nancy Utter, a reporter for television station KTEN in Sherman, Texas. She happened by the scene moments after the collision Tuesday night.

The Oklahoma Highway Patrol said the train had 80 cars and three engines.

Bryan County Sheriff B.J. Moore and Oklahoma Highway Patrol dispatcher Shaun Houghston said the car was dragged about one-quarter mile down the tracks after being hit at the railroad crossing on State Highway 70E, just off U.S. Highway 75.

Calera is about 90 miles south of Oklahoma City and just north of the Texas state line.

Julia Turnbull, 21, of Bells, Texas; Dawn Barnett, 24, of Calera; Michael Barnett, 6; and Shelelia

Barnett, 5, all of Calera, died at the scene, authorities said.

Darwin Turnbull, 1, of Bells, Texas, died later Tuesday night in surgery at Southeastern Oklahoma Medical Center in Durant, hospital officials said.

Hospital officials said they could not immediately determine the relationship of the victims.

Ms. Utter said lights from the railroad crossing were flashing when she and a half-dozen other cars pulled up to help.

"People were yelling to get help for the people trapped," Ms. Utter said.

Infant Survives Plunge That Killed Three People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. — A month-old baby was breathing through a ventilator as doctors worked to keep her alive after she was pulled from a car that skidded into a river. Her mother and two grandparents died in the crash.

Samantha Venable's 19-year-old father, Gabriel Rivera, said his baby, who had been submerged 45 minutes in the frigid water, was a "real fighter who's going to make it."

Several of his relatives were at the hospital, touching and kissing the 9-pound infant who lay with life-supporting tubes stuck in her tiny limbs.

"We were going to get married in December," Rivera, of Kingwood, Texas, said about his baby's mother.

"Now it's just me and the baby. I feel ... no, I believe, she will survive."

Dr. Jim Piper said Tuesday the baby's "short-term and long-term outlooks are in grave doubt," but added that she was responding to treatment.

"She seems somewhat more stable, although no one could give you a good outlook now," he said.

Piper said it would be impossible to estimate whether the infant will suffer long-term brain damage or other problems.

The baby remained in critical condition in the intensive care nursery of St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction.

The accident occurred Sunday when the car in which the family was riding skidded off a snow-packed highway near Aspen and plunged 60-feet into the Roaring Fork River.

Doctors and fire crews rappelled down the gorge on Independence Pass to reach the car.

Dr. Steve Ayers, shivering in the water, pulled the baby from the car and said she had "no pulse, no respiration, was blue in color."

The baby's mother, Kay Venable, 19, of Kingwood, died four hours after being pulled from the water. Her parents, Omand Harrison, 64, and his wife, Marjorie, 61, of Houston, also died.

The family was vacationing in Colorado when their car slid off icy Independence Pass into a snow bank. They then hitched a ride with two Aspen teen-agers.

After that car skidded off the road, Britt Rosen, 17, and Maelle Deschutter, 16, managed to kick out the windows in the overturned, partially submerged car, struggle to the road and call for help.

Samantha initially was brought to Aspen Valley Hospital.

"When she arrived at the hospital, the baby's body temperature was less than 50 degrees, she had no heart rate and no brain wave activity," said Dr. William Mitchell. "This baby, when it arrived, was white, cold and just totally stiff."

Dr. Hugh Macaulay, the emergency room physician, said intravenous fluids and oxygen were warmed before they were administered to the infant.

"We used hot towels, but eventually what we had to resort to was just sticking the baby in a sink of water heated up to about 100 degrees," Mitchell said.

Falwell Praying For Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LYNCHBURG, Va. — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says he wants God to provide a "divine financial provision" of $10 million to help him pay off short-term loans to his Old Time Gospel Hour.

"We'd like to close the year out with the books balanced, and we're praying for that to occur," Falwell said.

At services throughout the day Sunday, Falwell asked his Thomas Road Baptist Church congregation to pray every day in November for God to help his Lynchburg-based ministry.

Falwell later said most of the $10 million in loans he wants to pay off was borrowed in 1987 to offset a financial crunch in the wake of the PTL scandal.

Falwell said his ministry is not facing a financial crisis. If the money is not raised, the debt would have to be refinanced, something "we've been doing year after year," he said.

Falwell said it was time to retire the debt as the ministry entered the 1990s.

"Instead of refinancing, we are making an effort this month just to pay off approximately $10 million in mortgage financing," he said.

In addition to praying, Falwell said he will mail thousands of letters to major donors asking for "substantial contributions."

Detroit firefighter sprays water on house apparently torched by Devil's Night revelers

Devil's Night Arsonists End Burning Of Houses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Police rounded up 64 youths on the last night of a dusk-to-dawn curfew, and firefighters got some rest after scrambling 24 hours earlier to douse fires set by Devil's Night mischief-makers.

The 6 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew for minors began Sunday, netting 169 arrests Sunday and 165 on Monday, police spokesman Sgt. Christopher Buck said. The arrests included four suspected of arson.

Police were allowed to detain youths under age 18 overnight if they were caught on the streets without a parent. The curfew ended at 6 this morning.

One house fire was confirmed Tuesday, the final night of the three-day Devil's Night period.

"It's a lot better tonight (Tuesday) than last night," said east side resident Gerald Badgett, one of about 30,000 volunteers who joined the battle against Devil's Night arson this year. "Last night was the worst night I think in the last two years."

Elsewhere, Halloween found scores of youths rampaging through New York City, committing robberies on the streets and in businesses and injuring at least five people, police said.

Sixty-seven people were arrested and charged for taking part in Tuesday's terror sprees, which began in the morning, New York City police said.

"Halloween was the excuse for random violence," said Officer Jimmy Lee.

"This day every year brings out the worst," said Capt. Stephen P. Davis.

Detroit's one reported arson fire on Halloween contrasted sharply with Monday night when several homes were torched and dozens of blazes flared in trash bins and garages. Fires Monday left at least five families homeless. No injuries were reported.

Robert Berg, a spokesman for Mayor Coleman A. Young, said 64 minors were arrested for violating the curfew Tuesday. Most were released to their parents after paying a $50 fine, he said.

Tracey Bryant said her east side home was gutted by a fire Tuesday evening.

"I thought it was just a cheap little joke," Bryant said. "Just like an April Fool's joke. ... A stupid little joke."

Officials refused to release any information about the number of Devil's Night fires until this afternoon, when Young was to hold a news conference.

The Detroit Fire Fighters Association said, however, about 285 blazes were reported Monday. If true, the number would approach that of 1984 when 297 fires were reported on Oct. 30.

Last year, 229 Devil's Night blazes raged, and so far this year the number is higher, City Councilman Mel Ravitz said Tuesday.

"We've got to find a way to either re-educate or incarcerate those who engage in this sport," he said.

Also, 157 fires were fought in Flint on Monday, including 25 house fires, said Officer Joe Florida.

Detroit's Devil's Night tradition began about 10 years ago with pranks such as ringing doorbells and soaping windows. The practice of starting fires was first acknowledged in 1983.

The number of blazes apparently peaked in 1984, when firefighters battled 808 fires during the last three days of October. The number of fires has declined steadily.

Two More Bodies Pulled From I-880 Rubble In California

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Two more bodies were pulled from the rubble of Interstate 880, and authorities said they did not expect to find any more victims at the earthquake-flattened highway.

The discoveries raised the death toll from the Oct. 17 earthquake to 66.

The bodies of Joyce Ann Mabry, 31, of Berkeley, and James J. Flores, 39, of Rohnert Park were recovered as searchers slowly pulled apart the doubled-decked Oakland freeway.

"It's a terrible thought to think that somebody you love is up there in the rain, the cold, the night, and it's hard to describe, but we're glad he's down," Flores' brother, Leonard, said Tuesday.

"Gradually, as time goes on we'll be able to continue life and, like I said, put flowers on his grave and talk good things about him and not think of him as he was in that smashed truck like that."

Flores, whose body was found Tuesday, had a teen-age child. The body of Mabry, who had a 3-year-old son, was discovered late Monday.

Forty-one bodies have been recovered at the highway, the most of any single location hit by the quake.

"We have no reason to believe there are any more bodies there," said Alameda County sheriff's Sgt. Jim Knudsen. "We're checking the vehicles for personal belongings."

The 7.1-magnitude quake that spread ruin along a 90-mile swath from Watsonville north to San Francisco and Oakland was the focus of a hearing Tuesday by the state Seismic Safety Commission in San Francisco.

"Seismic reinforcing has been painfully slow and has depended upon available money and social priorities," said Chairman Lloyd S. Cluff.

Protester Left Off Charges Over Flag

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The protester who started the furor over flag burning says it's "a miscarriage of justice" that he won't be part of the first court test of the nation's new flag protection law.

"This is a case of selective non-prosecution," attorney William Kunstler complained Tuesday after the government decided not to charge Gregory Johnson, who was arrested with three other demonstrators during a flag-burning protest Monday on the Capitol steps.

Johnson's conviction for burning a flag at the 1984 Republican National Convention led to the Supreme Court ruling in June that such activity is protected under the First Amendment.

Charges were filed Tuesday against the other three protesters, but the U.S. attorney's office said there was insufficient evidence to charge Johnson.

"I was there," complained Johnson. "I am outraged" at not being prosecuted, he said, adding that the government's decision was a "miscarriage of justice."

Putting Johnson in the case with the three other demonstrators would have been "too much of an organizing tool" for opponents of the new law, which took effect on Saturday, said Kunstler.

Johnson, who spent Monday night in jail with the three co-defendants, called the government's decision "an act of cowardice on the part of (President) Bush and the administration."

U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens said his office, not Bush administration officials, decided the evidence was too thin to charge Johnson.

The charges against the three "vindicate the deep offense Americans feel ... regarding desecration of the national symbol," said Stephens.

The protesters chanted "burn, baby, burn" as they ripped and burned American flags on the Capitol steps. Capitol police tore pieces of a shredded flag from the hands of one protester and later aimed fire extinguishers at the burning remnants.

The Flag Protection Act of 1989, which took effect Saturday without President Bush's signature, carries penalties of up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine for anyone who "knowingly mutilates, defaces, physically defiles, burns, maintains on the floor or ground, or tramples upon any flag of the United States."

Bush has sought a constitutional amendment to ban flag burning, contending that the statute would not withstand a court test.

The law sparked a series of protest flag burnings in cities across the country over the weekend.

U.S. Magistrate Deborah Robinson released the defendants on their own recognizance, requiring them to report weekly to federal pre-trial services offices.

Pan Am Files Suit Over Bomb Alert

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Pan Am has filed papers in U.S. federal court seeking to prove that Israeli agents warned U.S. authorities of a planned terrorist attack on Flight 103 a day before a bomb blew up the jet, a newspaper reported today.

The Independent said Pan Am and its security firm also were taking action to prove West German police had warned U.S. officials of suspicious activities in the baggage area at Frankfurt 90 minutes before the flight left there.

It said Pan Am believes a videotape exists of the suitcase containing the bomb being loaded in Frankfurt onto the Boeing 727 that flew to London on the first leg of the New York-bound flight.

The newspaper quoted lawyers for families of Flight 103 victims as saying Pan Am was on a "fishing exercise" to try to shift blame for the disaster. The airline has been sued for more than $300 million, the report said.

The Boeing 747 that passengers boarded in London exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland on Dec. 21, killing all 259 people aboard and 11 on the ground.

The Independent, a respected London daily, said "subpoenas deposited at the U.S. District Court in Washington" call on the CIA and five other U.S. agencies "to disclose any documents relevant to surveillance by the BKA (West Germany's FBI) of the Pan Am baggage-handling area at Frankfurt, including video recordings made on the evening of 21 December 1988."

It said the papers demand all documents relating to "warnings" from the Israeli secret service Mossad "within the 24-36 hours before December 21, 1988 that Pan Am Flight 103 ... was the target of a terrorist attack."

The paper gave no other details about the alleged Mossad warning.

The Independent report was the first of a warning to U.S. officials that Flight 103 specifically had been targeted.

The British government has admitted it received telephone warnings of a bomb on a U.S. carrier in the weeks prior to Dec. 21, and U.S. diplomats in Europe had been warned to avoid Pan Am during the Christmas season.

Paul Hudson, an Albany, N.Y. lawyer who lost his 16-year-old daughter on the plane, said his reaction to the Independent's report was "one of shock ... one of dismay, followed by a furious reaction by most of the relatives."

Hudson, chairman of a group called Families of Pan Am Flight 103, also predicted a "tremendous outcry for accountability" if authorities "knew that this flight or one very close to it was to be bombed."

In its report, The Independent said: "The lawyers for Pan Am and the security firm, Alert Management Systems Inc., evidently believe that a videotape exists of the bag containing the bomb" being loaded onto Flight 103 in Frankfurt.

Young Kennedy Fails Bar Test

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — John J. Kennedy Jr. has failed his first attempt at passing the state bar examination, a newspaper reported today.

The 28-year-old son of the slain president failed the test in July when about 7,000 people took the exam, according to unidentified sources quoted by New York Newsday.

About 70 percent of passed, according to the New York Law Journal.

Kennedy's sister, Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg, 31, was notified in May that she passed the exam in February, on her first try.

But cousin Robert F. Kennedy Jr. failed the bar exam in 1983 the first time he took it. He passed it later and was admitted to the New York bar in 1985.

John Jr. is an assistant district attorney in the office of Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, earning $30,000 a year. Under office policy, he can take the exam twice more before being asked to resign if he fails to pass.

Under court rules, he can work as an unadmitted lawyer on misdemeanor cases and, under the supervision of a member of the bar, on certain state Supreme Court matters. State Supreme Court is the trial-level court.

Kennedy is a graduate of New York University law school

NANCY M. JENKINS
MAYOR

On November 7, you will be deciding on the office of Mayor, council, and two more vital issues — two referendums. One is to change the mayor and city council's length of terms from two years to four years. The other is to give the mayor the vote on all issues. If the mayor is allowed to vote, the mayor and three council members will serve as a quorum and majority. If they are allowed this authority for four years, there may be too much power in the hands of too few for too long. I believe the consequences could be devastating and oppose both referendums.

Our city is growing rapidly — careful planning and skillful leadership are vital. I have the know-how, energy, and desire to lead a prospering Greenville into the 1990's. I ask for your support and vote for mayor on November 7.

Bush Draws Praise For Summit Proposal

meeting between Bush and Gorbachev. They met previously in New York on Dec. 7, 1988, when Bush was vice president and president-elect.

Bush and Gorbachev still plan to meet next spring or summer to discuss arms control in a more formal setting, said the president and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who made a simultaneous announcement in Moscow.

The decision to meet less formally before the end of 1989 "is a very positive thing," said House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., adding that he hoped the meeting would "stimulate greater speed in moving on the arms control proposal."

"I think a saltwater summit is a good idea," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. "An informal meeting at sea could provide the right atmosphere to get things moving in several channels, including trade as well as arms control."

The deputy GOP leader in the Senate, Alan Simpson of Wyoming, said, "It is a good time to have a meeting."

But the senior Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said it was "more public relations" by Gorbachev.

"I hope that no fundamental decisions of any sort will be made," said Helms, one of the few members of Congress to criticize the announcement.

One of Bush's most vocal critics, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, applauded the meeting, but repeated his charge that Bush was too "timid" in responding to Gorbachev's domestic reforms, the democratic changes in Poland and Hungary, and the demands for freedom in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, asked what country Bush would use as the staging area for the talks, said, "We don't know yet." However, sources suggested that Naples, Italy, a major seaport, was the most likely area.

Ortega Ends Truce

ment "independent of the attitude that the mercenary forces assume, will guarantee the good development of the electoral process."

In fact, Ortega said: "Now it will depend on the Yankee Congress and the Yankee president that these elections take place on Feb. 25."

Under an agreement signed Aug. 7 by Ortega and four other Central American presidents, the rebels are to be disbanded and relocated by Dec. 8. In exchange, Nicaragua has pledged that elections will be free and fair.

According to the six-point government communique, more than 1,100 Contras have infiltrated Nicaragua across the border from their Honduran jungle camps over the past three weeks. The communique said the number of Contra attacks against civilian, economic and military targets in Nicaragua has "intensified dramatically."

At the news conference, Ortega referred specifically to the latest reported attack by the Contras, on Monday night, that left four civilians dead and five wounded.

"We have the responsibility of defending the lives of Nicaraguans," Ortega said. "Therefore, we can't allow assassinations to be committed" against civilians, Ortega said.

Calero denied Contra involvement in the attack. "It's too coincidental not to have been staged," he said.

Ortega blamed Bush in part for his decision, saying Bush was "supporting terrorism in Nicaragua." "This is/very clear when the (U.S.) government instead of using (Congress-approved non-lethal funds) ... for the demobilization of the Contras, uses these funds as logistical support" for the rebels, Ortega said.

Ortega complained that his government had been making a one-sided effort to bring peace to Nicaragua.

"We made an effort for a long time, more than a year ..." he said, referring to the truce signed in March 1988. "We would present the cheek, then the other cheek."

"But even Christ ran out of patience and used the whip to push out the merchants" from the temple, Ortega said.

Ortega, his defense and interior ministers, international observers of Nicaragua's electoral process and a U.S. Embassy official, traveled by helicopter Tuesday to the site of the latest reported attack by the rebels.

The Defense Ministry said a group of about 30 Contras attacked an eight-family farm cooperative near San Miguelito, killing four people, wounding five and kidnapping one woman.

After returning from the site, a remote village 200 miles southeast of Managua, the top Sandinista officials met for four hours with their top military officers.

The Contras were forced to the negotiating table with the Sandinistas after Congress refused to renew weapons and ammunition supplies to the Contras in February 1988.

A month later, the Contras and Sandinistas signed a temporary cease-fire which the Sandinistas have renewed on a monthly basis. Talks to turn the agreement into a lasting peace broke down in September 1988.

Ortega said today his government was not interested in talking about the truce any more, but rather about putting a definite end to hostilities.

"The problem here is not the ceasefire; the problem here is the demobilization ..." he said heatedly.

About 11,000 Contras have since withdrawn to base camps in jungles across the border in Honduras.

At the San Jose summit, called to celebrate 100 years of Costa Rican democracy, Ortega said continued attacks by the 2,000 to 3,000 Contras who remain in Nicaragua were forcing him to break the truce.

More than 730 people have been killed and more than 1,000 wounded in Contra attacks since the truce was signed, he said.

Revelers Arrested

and the crowd did not break-up.

Nichols emphasized that, for the most part, the arrests were made peacefully. "There was not much physical confrontation in the arrests. Very few resisted. For the most part it was just telling people they were under arrest," and them going without any problem.

"Our main intent last night was to follow through on a (City) Council directive not to allow a party in the downtown area ... which did not happen," Nichols said, thanks to the cooperation of "the students and business owners."

Members of the Downtown Association of Restaurants and Taverns voted to close their doors Halloween night in an effort to prevent disturbances that could lead to a riot such as those that occurred in 1974 and 1975. About 50 people were arrested in downtown disturbances last year, while about 40 were arrested on Halloween night the previous year.

Although the downtown area was quiet Tuesday night, Nichols said there was "no indication that the Tar River (Estates) event was in lieu of the downtown celebration. It was just a spontaneous event because of the number of parties being held in the complex."

"There is no indication at all that it was an organized event. It was a spill-over from parties in the area. The parties dumped people out onto the streets and common areas of the complex."

Nichols said, "It sort of put people in the wrong place at the wrong time." Nichols said between 80 and 85 Greenville police officers were on duty in the city Tuesday night during the time the arrests were made, with between 30 and 40 city officers participating in the roundup at the apartment complex.

In addition to the city police, Nichols said 20 N.C. Highway Patrol troopers, four Corrections Department officers and five Pitt County sheriff's deputies were assisting with crowd control in the Tar River Estates area.

On stand-by or working in other areas of the city were eight state Alcohol Law Enforcement agents, two military policemen from the U.S. Marine Corps base at Camp Lejeune, and representatives of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the state probation and parole department.

Sewage Fertilizer

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two Haywood County towns hope to turn sewage sludge to salable fertilizer in what would be the first such operation in North Carolina.

Aldermen in Maggie Valley and Clyde have agreed in principle to plans for a small-scale lime mixer, backing out of earlier discussions with a half-dozen western towns considering a similar regionwide plan.

Until Wednesday, Clyde collected Maggie Valley's sewage sludge, dried it with its own, and trucked the ashen leftovers to Waynesville's landfill.

Though the two towns generated only about 20 cubic yards of dried sludge each month, Waynesville agreed to take the waste only through Nov. 1. Wednesday's deadline leaves Clyde and Maggie Valley with no place to dump their sludge because recent state laws prohibit burial of the waste in sanitary landfills, as the two had done before turning to Waynesville.

Analysts said the news was taken as reassurance that merger and acquisition activity wasn't going to disappear as a result of recent problems involving several debt-financed buyout plans.

Nekoosa shares, up 20 1/2 on Tuesday, rose 1/4 to 63 1/2 as the most active NYSE issue today.

At the same time, analysts said, worries persisted about the numerous disappointments that showed up in corporate earnings for the third quarter of the year.

Those reports prompted talk of a possible significant slowdown in the economy, and downward revisions of profit projections for the rest of this year and early 1990.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .22 to 189.46. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .53 at 371.11.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 41.60 points to finish at 2,645.08.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 5 to 2 in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 1,111 up, 448 down and 413 unchanged.

Economic Forecast Advances

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

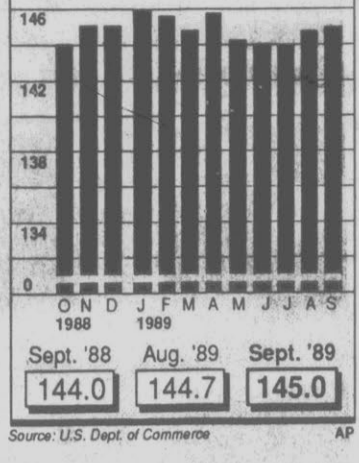

WASHINGTON - The government's chief economic forecasting gauge inched ahead 0.2 percent in September for its second consecutive monthly advance, the Commerce Department said today, indicating continued but slow growth in the months ahead.

The increase in the Index of Leading Indicators, designed to foretell economic activity six to nine months into the future, followed an advance of 0.5 percent in August that was revised upward from a 0.3 percent gain reported earlier.

The often-volatile index was unchanged in July and had dipped 0.1 percent in June. The July figure also was revised, down from the 0.1 percent increase originally reported.

Analysts said that, while the index indicates continued but slow growth, the immediate future will be a precarious time.

"The economy looks very soft right now," said Bruce Steinberg, senior economist for Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York.

New Home Sales Sag Sharply

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

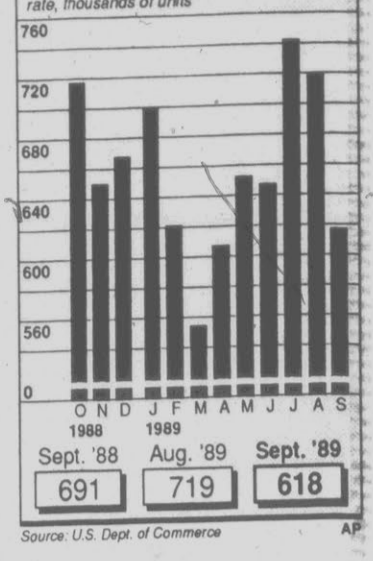

New home sales dropped as dramatically in September as they had climbed in July, the Department of Commerce reported Tuesday, but the yaw from economic analysts was almost audible.

Having gotten used to the pop-stick ups and downs of monthly home-sale figures, market watchers said the aggregate trend this year is what they expected: a generally flat housing market in a cooling economy.

The seasonally adjusted annual rate for September showed a 14-percent drop in sales - the steepest monthly decline in more than 7 1/2 years - to 618,000 single-family homes. Sales in August had dipped 3 percent after soaring 14.6 percent in July.

The Northeast, which has been the weakest housing region this year, with nearly one-third of the national inventory of unsold new homes, showed the sharpest month-to-month sales drop in September, 35.6 percent.

RJR Sends Its Ads Through The Mail

By Cindy Roberts THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Even though Congress banned broadcast cigarette advertisements two decades ago, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. is managing to get its message onto the small screen.

The nation's second largest cigarette-maker has mailed a 78-second videotape commercial about its low-tar Now cigarette to smokers of Carlton, a competing smoke made by American Brands in Reidsville.

Critics say the videotapes violate Congress' intent when it banned cigarette advertising on television.

Not so, says Reynolds spokeswoman Maura Payne.

"The mailing does not violate the broadcast ban on advertising," Ms. Payne said. "We're not forcing anyone to watch it. If someone is not interested, they could simply throw it away."

"The fact is there are roughly 48 million Americans who choose to smoke, and they have a right to know about the products," Ms. Payne said Tuesday. "We would defend our right to give customers access to information about our brand."

Ms. Payne declined to say how many tapes were involved in the August mailing and the cost of the publicity campaign.

In the commercial, an announcer compares the two low-tar brands and suggests that Now smokers are inhaling less tar than Carlton smokers. The videotape is labeled as an advertisement and includes the surgeon general's warning that smoking is harmful.

Ms. Payne said the company was encouraged by a videotape test in which it mailed videotapes to smokers.

Phil Wilbur, director of the Health Advocacy Resource Center in Washington, said the videotapes are a violation of the intent of the law if not of the letter.

David Hudgins agreed. Hudgins, the spokesman for Greensboro to Alleviate Smoking Pollution, a group that is waging a campaign to ban smoking in some public places in Greensboro, said the issue is less one of health than civil rights.

"I'm opposed to any type of cigarette advertising," Hudgins said. "But I can't say they (Reynolds) are outside of their rights."

"What people have to show and view in the privacy of their own homes is their own business."

Burroughs Wellcome Post Goes To Tracy

Philip R. Tracy has been appointed executive vice president of Burroughs Wellcome Co. effective May 1. Tracy succeeds T.E. Haigler Jr., who retired today.

Tracy joined the pharmaceutical company in 1974 as assistant general counsel. He was promoted to secretary and general counsel in 1983, and is a member of the company's board of directors.

A spokesperson for the company at Research Triangle Park declined Tuesday to comment on any changes Tracy might make in the operations of the company, but said Tracy would be available for comment later this year.

Burroughs Wellcome is based in the Research Triangle Plant. It has nearly 1,600 employees at its Greenville manufacturing plant.

First Union Runs Into Merger Snag

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. - Charges from minority groups in Florida and North Carolina of discriminatory lending practices by First Union Corp. may have foiled the banking firm's hopes of buying Florida National Banks of Florida before year's end.

First Union's $849 million cash and stock bid for Jacksonville-based Florida National suffered a setback Monday when the Federal Reserve Board postponed its decision on the purchase pending an investigation into First Union's minority lending record.

The delay was prompted by three separate complaints filed with the board by Winter Park lawyer Gabe Kaimowitz, four Florida legal service agencies - including the Rural Law Center in Apopka - and a coalition of community groups in Charlotte.

First Union, according to the complaints, has failed to live up to its obligations under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977.

The CRA requires federally insured financial institutions to actively solicit and serve the financial needs of minority and low-income individuals in their market areas.

The investigation, by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the principal supervisory agency for national banks, is to begin in two weeks and should take at least 30 days, Gary Pannell, a lawyer with the comptroller of the currency in Atlanta, told the Orlando Sentinel in a report published in today's editions.

Tough Challenge Rose's Powell Aims At State Title

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Winning a state championship is a difficult thing, and Greenville's Paige Powell admits that this year's North Carolina High School Athletic Association girls' 4-A tennis championships will be that way again.

"This will be a really tough year," Powell said. "There are a lot of tough people in the field: Scotti Thomas (the defending 4-A champion from Durham Jordan) and Helen Spencer (last year's 3-A titlist from Burlington Williams)."

But being there won't be a new experience for the 15-year-old sophomore at Rose High School. She was there last year and went all the way to the finals before falling to Thomas.

In fact, that was Powell's only defeat last year in high school. She's unbeaten again this year going into today's first round of state play.

Powell is seeded third behind Spence of Burlington Williams and Thomas of Jordan. She opens play against Tracey Carroway of Morganton Freedom.

A total of 24 girls will be competing for the crown, including Rose teammate Tricia Tripp, who also qualified for the state tournament.

The pressure of being a freshman in the big leagues last year didn't bother Powell, a veteran of tournament play since she was 10 years old.

"I'd been in a national tournament before, so I wasn't intimidated by the state tournament," Powell said. "Of course, it is a really, really, really big tournament, but I had enough experience so that (the pressure) wasn't really that great."

"It's a tough tournament, but I'll just have to relax," she added. "I just have to play to win and not play not to lose."

Powell's tennis career started early, when she was only six. Her father, Howard Powell, started her into the sport then, with tournament play following when she reached 10.

Among her tournament victories are age group titles in both the North Carolina Qualifier twice and the North Carolina State once.

Paige has been seeded second in ages 14-and-under and in the 18-and-under group last year. This year's rankings are not out yet.

Powell, currently ranked 19th in the South, continues to take lessons locally under Alan Farfour.

"I play year around," Powell said. "In the winter, I just wear a lot of clothes."

But don't get the idea that tennis is everything to Powell.

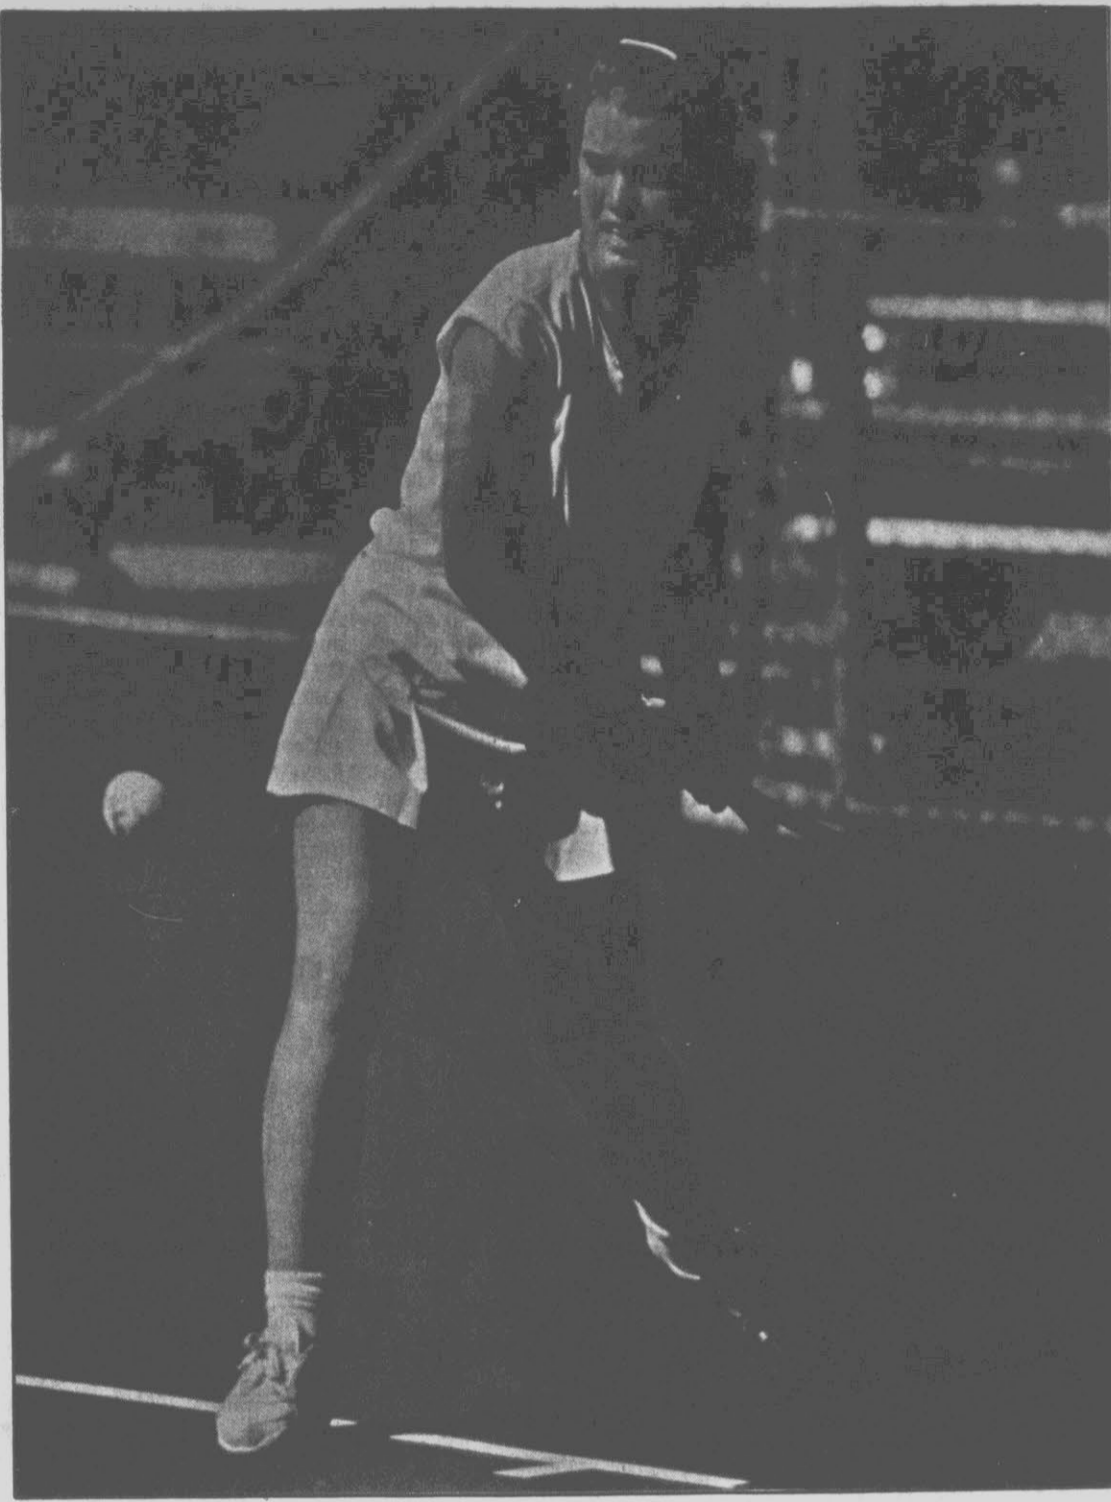

"Tennis is big (in my life) but not the biggest thing," she said. "I play an hour-and-a-half to two hours every day; more on weekends. But I don't play all the time. I like to stay home (from tournament play) and do stuff with my friends."

Currently 32-1 in high school play, Powell missed the first part of this year's season while attending the Hendersonville Tennis Academy for several weeks. There, she attended high school academic classes, then worked on her tennis game from 2 to 6 p.m. daily.

"A lot of people go there the whole year," she said. "I learned a lot and it's helped my game a lot."

She admits that there are faults in here game.

'Canes Look To Rebound

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — The Miami Hurricanes' first loss of the year and second in 50 regular-season games has been reflected in Coach Dennis Erickson's mail this week.

"There haven't been any checks," Erickson joked Tuesday. "It's ugly, but that's all right. ... I'm not going to resign."

Miami (6-1) dropped from second to seventh in the AP poll after Saturday's 24-10 loss to Florida State at Tallahassee, but the first-year coach predicted the Hurricanes will rebound quickly.

"They have a great attitude and great character and they'll come back," said Erickson, whose team plays East Carolina at home Saturday.

"The biggest thing we can do to take the sting of the loss out is to come out Saturday and play well; play like we're capable of and get our confidence back."

"They took it very hard. The thing about losing when you're not used to losing is it hurts."

Junior quarterback Craig Erickson, who started Miami's first four games, rejoined contact drills on Tuesday after missing three games with a broken knuckle on his throwing hand. Redshirt freshman Gino Torretta played well in Erickson's absence until he threw four interceptions against Florida State.

Erickson will start against East Carolina (4-2-1) if he's sharp in practice, the coach said.

"We'll see how Craig comes along," Coach Erickson said. "Right now he's probably 80 percent."

He said it's uncertain whether the interceptions against Florida State damaged Torretta's confidence.

"We really won't know until we go down the road," Erickson said. "Lack of experience in a big game was a reason for a couple of the mistakes he made."

Scenery Change For Rose In Playoffs

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Meadowbrook Field is the regular season home for the Rose soccer team, but a change of scenery is on tap for the opening round of the state 4-A playoffs.

The Ram-pants, who needed a late-season surge to capture their sixth consecutive Big East Conference title, will entertain Wilmington Hoggard tonight at 7 p.m. at Percy Daniels Field, home of the football Ram-pants.

The match will also be a change from the regular-season afternoon tilts.

"The nice thing about this field is that it's all grass, so it's going to be plush," Rose coach Charlie Harvey said. "The guys love playing under the lights so that's going to be a plus."

"It kind of sticks us in a neutral-site type atmosphere only because we haven't played on that field all year, but we'll have a home crowd and I'm anticipating a lot of people showing up."

Hoggard, the No. 3 seed from the Midwestern Conference — the conference that annually concedes first to mighty Jacksonville and plays for second place — escaped with a 1-0 victory over Rose when the teams met earlier this season.

But that was two months ago.

"Man for man, they out-skilled us at the beginning of the year, but I think with the team play we've been putting out and the way we are playing now it will be a pretty decent game," Harvey said.

"I know we've improved a lot and it's just a matter of what caliber they've improved because they worked the ball around well, they communicated well and their transition was right on the money. Those are the type things that we were working on to get better throughout the year. I think we've done that."

The Ram-pants, 13-3-3 overall, are making their sixth straight playoff appearance but have yet to advance past the second round.

A win over Hoggard would send Rose against defending state champion Raleigh Sanderson, a 2-0 winner over Cary Tuesday night.

But first Rose must get past the Vikings at less than full strength defensively. Senior Cliff Ferrell will definitely be sidelined with a knee injury while junior Bert Powell is questionable due to an infected leg.

Improved Tackling Is Panthers' Key

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

North Pitt coach Stuart Ennis hopes running back Reggie Daniel is back at full strength this week against Greene Central, but his real concern lies with his defense.

The Panthers meet Greene Central Friday at 8 p.m. in Bethel, and the winner will earn the number-two playoff spot in the Eastern Plains Conference as well as a home date in the first round of the playoffs.

The Rams boast a strong rushing attack led by fullback John Dixon (1,026 yards) and tailback Timmy Wilkes (729 yards).

The Panthers fell to Farmville 20-7 last week, and one of the culprits in the defeat was poor tackling, according to Ennis.

"We're just going to have to do a better job fundamentally in tackling this week," he said. "That's going to be a must. I don't think anybody has stopped them this year. We just want to

ECU coach Bill Lewis' Pirates must overcome some injuries

ECU's Challenge: Getting Healthy

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Pirates face their biggest challenge of the season Saturday afternoon at the University of Miami and the injury list is growing by leaps and bounds, causing Coach Bill Lewis a lot of concern.

"It's of tremendous concern," Lewis said at his weekly press conference Tuesday. "We had several people injured in the Syracuse game that will either keep them out of Saturday's game or will limit the amount of practice they'll be able to do before the game."

And not being able to practice with a team like Miami just ahead could be critical, Lewis said.

Among those sidelined in one form or another are:
□Fullback Michael Rhett, who suffered a severe knee bruise. He was held out of practice Tuesday, but hopefully will be able to work out today and Thursday.

□Linebacker George Koonce, hampered by injuries all season long, broke his wrist in three places Saturday and was to undergo surgery today. He will miss at least three weeks, and possibly the rest of the season.

□Offensive tackle Todd Drugac, who suffered a shoulder bruise, will have no contact during practice this week.

Florida Purging Continues; Sloan Resigns

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Fall housecleaning continues in Florida's troubled athletic department with basketball coach Norm Sloan the latest victim of an investigation that had already claimed football coach Galen Hall.

Sloan, whose fiery temperament earned him the nickname "Stormin' Norman," walked away without a fight on Tuesday, allowing the university to announce his retirement amid allegations of wrongdoing in his program. The 63-year-old coach again denied violating NCAA rules, but said he agreed to step aside for the good of the school and his players.

Don DeVoe, fired despite leading Tennessee to a 19-11 record last season, was named interim coach. He scheduled a news conference today.

"My retirement might be considered by them (players) as abrupt, but it is in their best interest which they will know in time," Sloan said in a six-paragraph letter to university president Dr. Robert Bryan. "I leave with great sadness, but with my head held high."

Sloan's 627 career victories over 37 seasons place him 10th on the NCAA's career list. He coached at N.C. State from 1967-80.

"I regret very much the events that have occurred today," Bryan said. "However, I believe what has occurred is in the best interests of the university's athletic program and the university as a whole."

The basketball program has been under scrutiny for more than 18 months. A U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration investigation triggered an internal investigation later joined by the NCAA.

Former Gators star Vernon Maxwell, now with the San Antonio Spurs of the NBA, reportedly told a federal grand jury that Florida coaches made secret payments to him dating back to high school and that some of the money he received in college was used to buy drugs.

Maxwell, Sloan and two of his assistant coaches, Monte Towe and Kenny McCraney, are listed as possible witnesses in the trial of 11 Gainesville area men facing drug charges in federal court this week. The men were indicted by the same grand jury that charged four sports agents with defrauding the university by signing several former Florida athletes to contracts.

Adrian Adams In Legion Hall Of Fame

Adrian Adams, manager of the American Legion Post 39 baseball team, has been elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame of the North Carolina American Legion during its recent convention in Charlotte.

Nominees must have been outstanding in their service to the state-wide program and no more than four nominees, plus one post-humous award may be named in any one year.

Of the seven nominees, Adams received the highest number of votes. Three others were also elected: Jack Bennett of Post 50, Laurinburg; Willie Jones of Post 94, Snow Hill, and Harold Kivett of Post 81, Ramseur.

An installation banquet will be held in Raleigh on Feb. 14.

Adams has served as manager of the Post 39 team for the past 18 years. In that time, his teams have frequently been area champions. About 30 former players have gone on to play collegiate baseball and three have entered professional baseball, one making it to the major leagues. Another, Joe West, is a professional umpire in the National League.

Striped Bass Commercial Season Opening

The striped bass season will open Nov. 15 for commercial harvest in inland coastal waters only, Dr. William T. Hogarth, director of the Division of Marine Fisheries, announced.

The Marine Fisheries Commission adopted a regulation in June which gave the director proclamation authority over the striped bass fishery until Sept. 1, 1992.

This season's opening has been delayed two weeks in an effort to conserve an improving population that resulted from the 1988 spawning season. Those fish presently range in size from 13 to 16 inches total length.

The division will be monitoring the striped bass harvest and should excessive harvesting of small fish occur, the season, or areas, may be closed in order to allow for the harvest of larger striped bass during the spring shad fishery.

The waters of the Atlantic Ocean will remain closed until further notice as far as striped bass harvesting is concerned.

ECU Takes CAA Win Over UNC-Wilmington

WILMINGTON — East Carolina recorded its second Colonial Athletic Association volleyball win ever by topping UNC-Wilmington Tuesday night.

The Lady Pirates took a 15-6, 15-13, 8-15, 15-13 victory as senior Debbie Tate had 11 kills, four block solos and four blocked assists.

"The credit has to go to our seniors," ECU Volleyball coach Judy Kirkpatrick said. "They showed more poise than any group of young ladies that I've ever coached."

ECU moves to 2-3 in the CAA and 16-12 overall. UNC-W falls to 12-8 overall and 2-3 in the CAA.

S.C. Officials Encouraged By Delay

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A move by prospective NFL owners to put off deciding where to build a $125 million football stadium could be seen as a "positive statement" for a proposed South Carolina site, officials said.

The delay, announced Monday, until Dec. 15 leaves sites in York County, S.C., Charlotte and Cabarrus County still in the running.

The group of 15 potential owners on Oct. 23 was poised to commit to the uptown Charlotte site, but the Charlotte City Council delayed approving a $79,000 down payment because of contamination from underground fuel tanks there.

The group is led by Mark Richardson, whose father, Spartanburg, S.C., businessman Jerry Richardson, is a former NFL player.

The delay actually is a "positive statement for South Carolina" and allows the state to "fine-tune" its incentive package to the Richardsons, said Debbie Bass, executive assistant to the state Coordinating Council for Economic Development, which has been heading South Carolina's NFL effort.

Hayes, Lanier Nominated For Hall

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Premier pivotmen Elvin Hayes and Bob Lanier were among 16 people nominated for election to the Basketball Hall of Fame, but former NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien asked that his name be withdrawn because he disapproves of the secretive process.

Hayes and Lanier were nominated for the first time, as were players Nate Archibald and Calvin Murphy and former Marquette coach Al McGuire.

Players renominated for possible enshrinement included Earl Monroe, Dave Bing and Walt Bellamy, a New Bern native.

Election requires 18 votes from the 24-member Honors Committee and inductees are announced in February.

NFL Players Of The Week Are Announced

NEW YORK (AP) — Cleveland's Webster Slaughter, who caught four passes, including scoring throws of 80 and 77 yards, in the Browns' 28-17 victory over Houston, was named AFC Offensive Player of the Week. Slaughter had 184 receiving yards in all, the third straight game he's exceeded the 100-yard plateau.

Green Bay quarterback Don Majkowski, who threw for a career-high 367 yards and two touchdowns in the Packers' 23-20 victory over Detroit, was named NFC Offensive Player of the Week. Majkowski completed 29 of 45 passes against Detroit and leads the NFL with 16 touchdown passes and 2,303 passing yards.

Los Angeles Raiders safety Eddie Anderson was named AFC Defensive Player of the Week after picking off two passes and making six tackles in the Raiders' 37-24 win over Washington.

New Orleans linebacker Pat Swilling was voted NFC Defensive Player of the Week after he recorded three sacks and forced two fumbles in the Saints' 20-13 victory over Atlanta.

Trust Fund Set Up For Paralyzed Player

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — The University of Mississippi established a trust fund to help provide lifetime care for Ole Miss defensive back Roy Lee "Chuckie" Mullins, who was paralyzed during a game Saturday.

Powell Is Set ...

"I'm not a volley player," she said. "I would be better off if I volleyed more. But I have to learn to be aggressive. I'm not there yet. I've got to work on getting my serve stronger and my volleying."

Rose coach Elizabeth Langston, however, says that Powell's game is, like that of Chris Evert, a baseline game.

"Her ground strokes, her serves and volleys are strong," Langston said. "She's worked on it so hard. She just doesn't make mistakes. Like (Goldsboro regional finalist Caroline) Vinson said, you can't sit back and wait for her to make a mistake. She just doesn't make them."

Vinson fell to Powell in the regional finals this year, 6-0, 6-1.

Langston said Powell has room for improvement but seems to be at the top of her game right now.

"If I had to pick one thing (she needs to improve) it would be getting her first serve in," Langston said. "But she's a lot quicker than she was last year. Sometimes she goes to the net, but generally she's a baseline player."

Powell hopes to eventually continue her career in college.

"I want to earn a scholarship to a good (tennis) school and take it from there," she said.

Would from there be a try at the pros? Possibly, but that would depend on how things go from here.

That should include not only this year's state tournament, which will wind up Thursday, but a couple of more trips her junior and senior seasons.

And, she hopes, at least one state championship to carry on with her.

Hornets Release Cureton, Turner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The Charlotte Hornets have waived veteran forward Earl Cureton and free agent guard Andre Turner to bring the roster to the mandatory limit of 12 active players, officials announced Tuesday.

"Earl is another one of our original players that has shown strong leadership and helped us through our first season," said Carl Scheer, Hornets president and general manager. "We are still focused on the future and we feel that there is a need to give a younger player such as Terry Dozier an opportunity to develop."

Cureton, 32, was one of two Hornets to play in all 82 games in last year's inaugural season, averaging 6.5 point and six rebounds a game. He led the team with 61 blocked shots.

Cureton, who signed with Charlotte as a free agent after two seasons with the Los Angeles Clippers, missed two preseason games this year because of tendonitis in both knees. In the five games in which he played, he averaged two points and 3.8 rebounds.

Turner, who averaged 4.6 points and 5.3 assists during preseason, has played parts of three NBA seasons with Boston, Houston and Milwaukee.

Bulls Trim Roster

The Chicago Bulls Tuesday waived three rookies to cut their NBA roster to 13 players.

Matt Brust of St. John's, Mike Doktorczyk of California-Irvine, and Adrian McKinnon of North Carolina Central were cut. The Bulls will reach the 12-man limit for their season opener Friday night when they place rookie Jeff Sanders on the disabled list. Sanders has a foot injury and is not expected to play until December.

Bad News For Ex-Jayhawks

It was a bad day for former members of Kansas' 1988 NCAA championship team.

Milt Newton and Scooter Barry, who helped the Jayhawks to a surprising victory in the Final Four, were cut by their NBA teams on Tuesday.

Newton was cut by the Los Angeles Lakers, who also put veteran forward Orlando Woolridge on the injured list to get the team at the roster limit of 12. Newton missed most of training camp due to an ankle injury and averaged 3 points in four exhibition games.

The Boston Celtics reduced their roster to 13 players by waiving Barry and forward Dave Popson.

Barry, son of former NBA star Rick Barry, played in five exhibition games, scoring six points.

Allen Leavell, Frank Johnson, John Long and Earl Cureton were among the longtime veterans cut Tuesday as NBA teams pared their rosters before Friday's season openers.

Cureton, a member of the 1983 champion Philadelphia 76ers, was dropped by Charlotte, with whom he played all 82 games last season and averaged 6.5 points. Cureton is a nine-year NBA veteran of five teams.

Leavell, who played 10 years with Houston before being waived last week and picked up by Denver, was waived by the Nuggets along with guard Corey Gaines and forward Winston Crite. Leavell averaged 3.3 points for Houston last season and 9.5 for his career.

Long, an 11-year veteran, was dropped by Dallas, which had signed him as a free agent. He averaged 5.5 points with Indiana and Detroit last season and has a career mark of 14.6.

Johnson, an eight-year veteran, was cut by Orlando, which signed him as a free agent during the off-season. He averaged 4.4 points for Houston last season and 9.5 for his career.

In other roster moves, Tyrone Corbin, expected to start for Minnesota at forward, ended a 25-day holdout that cost him $11,350 in fines. With the addition of Corbin, taken from Phoenix in the expansion draft, the Timberwolves still must try to sign Steve Johnson.

The Timberwolves pared their roster to 14 players by cutting forwards Shelton Jones and Mike Whitmarsh. They need to waive two more players by Wednesday night to avoid having to pay those players for the opener.

The Indiana Pacers waived guards Mark Wade and Everette Stephens and forward Anthony Frederick.

The Miami Heat waived forward Sylvester Gray and center John Shasky, both of whom played for the team last season. The Heat also cut rookie free agent guard Kenny Drummond in reducing their roster to 13 players.

The Chicago Bulls waived three rookies to trim their roster to 13 players. Matt Brust of St. John's, Mike Doktorczyk of California-Irvine and Adrian McKinnon of North Carolina Central were cut.

The Bulls will reach the 12-man limit for their season opener Friday night when they place rookie Jeff Sanders on the disabled list. Sanders has a foot injury and is not expected to play until December.

The Cleveland Cavaliers waived forward Ron Grandison and guard Craig Neal.

The agents pleaded guilty to reduced charges last month and are to be sentenced Dec. 11. Sloan has said he regretted the case not going to trial because it would have given him an opportunity to take the stand and offer his side of the story.

The coach's retirement came 24 days after Hall gave up control of the football program amid allegations that he violated NCAA rules by paying unauthorized salary supplements to assistant coaches and helped a former player handle a child-support problem.

In his letter to Bryan, Sloan said he resigned at the request of the University Athletic Association, a private organization that governs the athletic department.

"Its officials have presented evidence that certain student athletes (not now enrolled) during my tenure have received benefits above those allowed by the NCAA," said Sloan, who led Florida to its first-ever Southeastern Conference championship last winter.

"I deny any such violations have occurred, but I have nevertheless decided to honor the request that I retire now," Sloan said in the letter.

DeVoe said he was offered the interim job by Florida athletic director Bill Arnsparger. DeVoe was at Tennessee for 11 seasons before being forced to resign in March.

"I am looking forward to immediately coming down to Gainesville and coaching the Gators," DeVoe said in a statement.

A Florida official said Sloan will be paid a lump sum of $139,000, the amount he would have received under a contract that runs through March 1991.

Sloan informed his players of the decision during an emotional meeting that senior Dwayne Schintzius indicated showed a side of the coach the players had never seen.

"It doesn't seem fair," the 7-foot-2 star center said. "If you could have seen him in the locker room, he about broke down. I've never seen him like that. For him to have to tell me and the rest of the guys that, it was really something."

Sloan, responding to media reports that he had resigned or was about to be fired, said two weeks ago that the investigation had failed to produce any evidence of wrongdoing. In his letter, though, the veteran coach said he decided against fighting to keep his job.

"I believe such would be counterproductive for our university athletic program, and I believe that you face a great task in keeping our school as the academic flagship of Florida universities. My very strong loyalty prevents my doing anything that might focus energies away from that principal mission."

Arnsparger said DeVoe, 47, would be an excellent replacement. He compiled a 204-137 record at Tennessee, leading the Volunteers to six NCAA Tournament and three National Invitation Tournament appearances. Still, taking over only a month before the season opens is a big challenge.

"It makes a difference, but it's a team that won the SEC championship a year ago," DeVoe. "They have some things that are very solid. I hope to pick up where they are, and not do anything adverse to their style of play. Yet the team has to make some adjustments to what I want to do."

Florida was 235-194 in 15 seasons under Sloan, who coached at the Gainesville school from 1960-66 before leaving for North Carolina State. He was with the Wolfpack for 14 years, winning the NCAA championship in 1974. He returned to Florida in 1980 and led the Gators to three NIT and three NCAA Tournament appearances.

The athletic director also asked for the resignations of Towe, Mc-Craney and another assistant, Phil Weber, and confirmed they would no longer be with the team, the Florida Times-Union in Jacksonville reported today.

"Psychologically we know the style of play we want to play. It's just a matter of these guys coming out ready to play hard for 80 minutes."

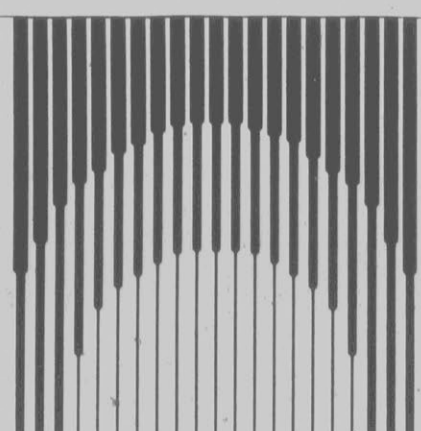

"The guys, knowing that's the situation, have a tendency to mentally prepare themselves a little bit better than they do for just a regular game. They are more in tune which makes my job a little bit easier."

Bay Area Series Flopped As TV Ratings Declined

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
NEW YORK — The Bay area World Series was a flop on television.

The ratings plunged to their lowest levels in at least 21 years, and maybe ever, with less than a sixth of TV sets in the United States turned to the games on average.

The Oakland Athletics' four-game sweep of the San Francisco Giants on ABC got a 16.4 rating, according to statistics released Tuesday by Nielsen Media Research. Nielsen, which has been keeping ratings since 1950, said it was the lowest numbers since at least 1968, but that it would take additional research to determine if the ratings were the lowest ever.

Game 4 on Saturday night was the lowest-rated primetime World Series game ever, getting a 14.7 rating and a 28 share. It was outdrawn by three programs on NBC: "Golden Girls," "Empty Nest" and "Hunter."

This year's rating was 28.4 percent less than the 22.9 rating of the 1984 World Series between the Detroit Tigers and the San Diego Padres. The Bay area Series got a 29 share, meaning that fewer than three of 10 sets on at the time had baseball tuned in. That's 25.6 percent less than the previous 21-year low of 29, set last year.

Before this year, the lowest-rated prime-time game was in 1987, when Game 1 between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Minnesota Twins got a 19.2 rating. Game 1 this year got a 16.2 rating and a 30 share. It improved to a 17.4 rating and a 28 share for Game 2 and, after a 10-day delay caused by an earthquake, a 17.5 rating and a 32 share for Game 3.

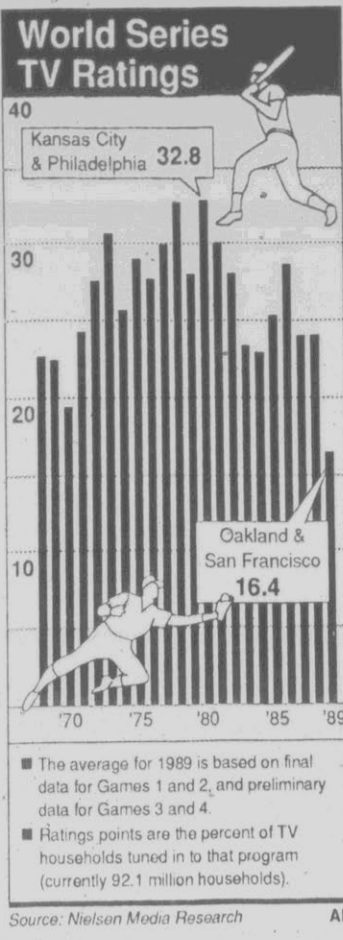

Dennis Swanson, the president of ABC Sports, refused to discuss the ratings, ABC spokesman Mark Mandel said. The network just completed its six-year, $75 million contract with baseball.

"It shouldn't surprise anyone," Barry Kaplan, a television industry analyst at Goldman Sachs & Co. said of the ratings. "Nobody expected it to be a barnburner being from two cities in the same area and neither New York or Los Angeles involved. On top of which, it was lopsided competitively and top of which, it was interrupted by an earthquake. I would have been shocked if it wasn't the lowest-rated in a long time."

Kaplan said ABC probably would not have to refund money to advertisers because ratings are not normally guaranteed for sports telecasts.

"They probably could have made up any theoretical shortfalls in the inventory of advertising they had," Kaplan said.

CBS takes over as baseball's network next season, beginning a four-year, $1.06 billion deal. Susan Kerr, the director of programming for CBS Sports, said the network was still happy with its deal.

Clinton To Top Dark Horses Top 2-A State Poll

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
RALEIGH — Clinton became the third team in North Carolina to rise to the top of The Associated Press' 2-A high school football rankings after fighting its way through the tough East Central Conference undefeated.

The Dark Horses (9-0) received eight of a possible 11 first-place votes from a statewide panel of prep sportswriters after defeating previous No. 1 Wallace-Rose Hill. Defending state champion Thomasville also was top-ranked at the start of the season.

Another impressive victory by Clinton earlier this season was over conference rival and No. 10 Warsaw Kenan. With one week left in the regular season, the Dark Horses travel to South Lenoir (1-8) before playoff time.

Seven undefeated teams still dot the 4-A poll, including top-ranked Richmond County, winners of 24 straight games.

Positions 1-8 remained the same in the 4-A rankings. Following Richmond County were Asheville Reynolds, Garner, Greensboro Page, Northern Durham, East Forsyth — all undefeated — Fayetteville 71st and undefeated West Forsyth.

Playoff regular and No. 9 Jacksonville (8-1) moved into the rankings for the first time this season after seven straight victories.

South Mecklenburg (8-1) stayed in position No. 10 despite an overtime loss to Charlotte Garinger.

Burlington Cummings also is riding a 24-game winning streak and remained atop the 3-A rankings.

Statesville was right on the heels of the Cavaliers at No. 2, followed by Lexington, South Iredell, West Craven, Smoky Mountain, Kannapolis Brown and Bertie.

Three teams made the 3-A rankings for the first time this season. They included Greenville Conley, Asheboro and Eastern Randolph. Top-ranked Cummings travels to Eastern Randolph to close out the regular season Friday night.

Following are The Associated Press high school football polls with team, first place votes in parenthesis, record, total points and poll position last week as voted upon by a panel of North Carolina prep sportswriters.

Zimmer Gets NL Skipper Award

Don Zimmer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
CHICAGO — So what if the team from the Second City finished second-best? For once, Don Zimmer is in first place.

Zimmer, who led the Chicago Cubs to the National League East title before losing to San Francisco in five games in the playoffs, was a near-unanimous choice for NL Manager of the Year in voting announced Tuesday.

"I think it's a great thing to have the writers vote you Manager of the Year," Zimmer said. "It's a great honor. It's never happened to me before."

He garnered all but one of the 24 first-place votes cast by a panel chosen by the Baseball Writers Association of America. The other first place vote went to San Francisco's Roger Craig, Zimmer's close friend and former teammate.

"You feel like you want to share it with everybody who played a part," Zimmer said, "the players who did the playing and Jim Frey, who hired me and got criticized for doing it. It just seemed like every move he made helped out the club."

"Jim Frey took a lot of criticism," Zimmer noted, saying that some people accused the general manager of hiring him out of friendship and not because he could do the job.

Zimmer did the job, leading the Cubs into postseason play for only the second time since World War II and nailing down his first division title in 11 seasons as a major-league manager.

It was vindication for Zimmer, who was run out of Boston for not leading the Red Sox to a division title in the late 1970s.

Elsewhere in EPC action, Farmville entertains Pamlico County and Ayden-Grifton travels to East Carteret.

Daniel has been hampered for the last few weeks by a turned ankle. He played against Farmville, but the ankle was still sore. That kept the Panthers from using him around end on the option, a big part of the North Pitt offense.

"He ought to be back pretty close to wide open," Ennis said. "In this case, Reggie is very important in our offense."

The loser of this game figures to earn a first-round trip to undefeated Northampton East for the first round of the playoffs.

The winner will get a home date against the winner of the Northside-Plymouth game.

Ennis felt his team came back from the loss to Farmville and had a productive practice day Monday.

"After we reviewed the film and talked about our mistakes we would very much welcome the idea of meeting Farmville again in the playoffs," Ennis said.

Jags Go For Unbeaten Season

With one game standing between Farmville and an unbeaten regular season, Jaguar coach, Dixon Sauls is hoping his team doesn't look past this week's opponent, Pamlico County.

"It's tough to be highly motivated when you're playing an opponent you are favored over," Sauls said. "But there are upsets every day in sports. We must not be looking ahead to the following week."

"You are always concerned with the level of play. You'd like to maintain a certain level of play and you'd like to improve. We can't always say we play at that level."

The Jaguars are currently ranked number two in the state.

Chargers Looking To Build Momentum

Ayden-Grifton (1-3, 2-7) has had a tough season, but Charger coach B.T. Chappell is trying to make the best of things.

"We spent some time this week off the practice field and we talked about next year and things we'd like to see different. It's kind of a disappointing season, but I hope it's one that we can learn from."

Numbers caught up with Ayden-Grifton this season. After three straight years in which the Chargers either tied for or won the EPC title, Chappell found himself with an extremely young squad this year.

"These boys have been riding on the coattails of a really good group," Chappell said. "They haven't put in the summer-time workouts, and I knew it was going to be tough this season."

"Trying to convince them of that was not very easy. Hopefully some of these young boys will realize what needs to be done."

This week, Ayden-Grifton takes on East Carteret, a team that has also struggled at times this season and stands 1-3 in the EPC and 3-6 overall.

"I wish I had the talent they had," Chappell said. "I don't believe I'd be 3-6. They graduated a whole lot of people off a good team last year. For us to be able to play with them, we'll have to play well."

Clemson Still Views Carolina As Key Rival

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's Clemson vs. Carolina time this week. No, not South Carolina — North Carolina.

While no team is a more bitter rival to Clemson than South Carolina, the Tigers see North Carolina as one of its most heated rivals in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We know that throughout the '80s that's been one real fine football rivalry," Clemson coach Danny Ford said at his weekly news conference Tuesday. "I don't think the records of either team will keep that from happening again this week."

Ford

The Tar Heels come into the game in Chapel Hill, N.C., with only one win in eight games and no victories in five ACC contests. Clemson, which is ranked 21st this week, is 7-2 and 4-2 as it closes out its ACC schedule against the 2 1/2-point underdogs.

Moreover, Clemson has won nine of the last 11 meetings between the teams, although six of those victories have come by nine points or less. The Tigers whipped the Tar Heels 37-14 last year.

North Carolina coach Mack Brown admits most people don't believe the Tar Heels have much of a chance against Clemson on Saturday. But he says his team will be emotionally ready for the contest.

"Preparing against Clemson you don't need motivation," Brown said at his weekly press conference.

"They'll get ready to play Clemson."

Brown says it remains to be seen if his team will have the offensive weapons needed to overcome their Atlantic Coast Conference rival, particularly after losing to Maryland 38-0 last week.

Freshman Chuckie Burnette and sophomore Todd Burnett will share the quarterback duties against the Tigers' attacking defense, Brown said.

Brown had been planning to red-shirt Burnett but decided to use him after senior Jonathan Hall injured his shoulder against Georgia Tech two weeks ago.

Brown said it's unlikely Hall will be able to play again this year.

Ellis' Doctor Optimist
South Carolina quarterback Todd Ellis underwent surgery Tuesday to repair torn ligaments in his left knee and has an excellent shot at a full recovery, the surgeon who performed the operation said.

Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Robert Peele said this knee injury won't keep Ellis from playing in the National Football League, nor will he be susceptible to knee injuries in the future.

"He's a very motivated individual," Peele said at a news conference following surgery. "He'll do exactly as we ask of him for his rehabilitation, ... and I expect him to have a very mobile, functional knee afterward."

Ellis, who had missed only three plays in his career because of injuries, was hurt Saturday when he was hit by linebacker Mark Thomas on the third play of South Carolina's game against North Carolina State. South Carolina lost the game, 20-10.

The injury ended the college career of the Greensboro, N.C., senior, who set 29 school records at South Carolina.

The two-hour operation at Baptist Medical Center, in which a 4-inch to 5-inch incision was made in Ellis' kneew, showed that the initial diagnosis by team trainer Terry Lewis was correct: Ellis tore ligaments on the inside of his left knee, but suffered no other ligament or cartilage damage, Peele said.

Ellis faces about six months of rehabilitation, including three to three and a half weeks in a cast. Once the cast is removed, Ellis' leg will be placed in a brace and he will begin motion and weighted exercises.

No Guarantee For Tech
Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Ross says his Yellow Jackets should beat Division 1-AA opponent Western Carolina this Saturday, but that there's no guarantee.

"Everyone would say, 'Here's a game Georgia Tech should win,'" Ross said Tuesday. "We should be better than Western Carolina. But at the same time, we are the type of team that we've got to go out and play well."

The Jackets shoot for a 4-4 record Saturday against Western Carolina, which led by former Georgia assistant Dale Strahm, is 3-4-1.

"To me," Ross said, "it's a very important football game, because it gets us to 4-4 if we win."

Wake Minus Two Defensive Starters
Wake Forest will be without the services of two defensive starters when the Demon Deacons battle Duke Saturday in Winston-Salem, Coach Bill Dooley announced Monday.

Defensive tackle Marvin Mitchell and free safety Ron Lambert will miss the remainder of the season because of knee injuries sustained in the game against Clemson on Oct. 28.

Mitchell, a 6-foot-6, 295-pound junior from Eastville, Va., underwent reconstructive surgery earlier this week. A starter in 29 of the last 30 games, Mitchell also will miss spring practice.

Lambert, a 5-10, 175-pound freshman from Dania, Fla., underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Tuesday. His injury is not as severe as Mitchell's, and Dooley expects him to return for spring workouts.

Citrus Scouting 4 ACC Teams
The Citrus Bowl is still scouting four Atlantic Coast Conference football teams and may invite one to its postseason game despite an option year that doesn't guarantee a bid, a bowl official said.

The ACC has a four-year agreement (1988-1991) with the Citrus Bowl, with the bowl hosting the league champion in 1988 and 1990. But the bowl has the option to invite an ACC team in 1989 and 1991, or may pass and invite any two teams it wishes.

Conference champion Clemson defeated Oklahoma in the New Year's Day game this year.

Three ACC teams are ranked in The Associated Press top 25 this year, but none are in the top 10. If either No. 18 North Carolina State, No. 21 Clemson, No. 24 Virginia or unranked Duke don't move up in the rankings in the final weeks of the season, a bid to the Citrus Bowl appears unlikely.

Cobb Signs With An Agent
Former Tennessee running back Reggie Cobb has signed a contract with an agent and will test his value in the NFL.

Jimmy Sexton, vice president of Athletic Resource Management of Memphis, confirmed Monday that Cobb has signed to be represented by the agency.

Cobb was kicked off the Tennessee team by coach Johnny Majors on Oct. 12, amid newspaper reports that he failed a drug test. At the time he was the leading rusher in the Southeastern Conference with 616 yards, and finished his abbreviated career at Tennessee as the third-leading rusher in school history with 2,360 yards.

As a fourth-year junior, Cobb is eligible for the NFL draft this spring. Sexton declined to comment on what effect Cobb's reported drug problems would have on his value in the NFL, but said he believes the 6-foot, 210-pounder will be a first-round pick.

Irish Looking To Orange
Bowl bids are still weeks away, but circumstances have brought Notre Dame and the Orange Bowl closer together for a potential match with the winner of Saturday's Colorado-Nebraska game.

The vagaries of the college football season and self-interests, however, keep the bowl picture highly speculative, bowl directors and Notre Dame said.

"Everybody in the world is doing everything they can to come up with what the public would consider a national championship game," John Heisler, sports information director for Notre Dame, said.

With previously undefeated Miami beaten Saturday by Florida State, a Notre Dame appearance at the Orange Bowl grew increasingly likely. "That's the most logical thing right now, if we remain unbeaten," Heisler said.

But with bowl bids not out until November 25, neither has a lock on the other.

Sugar Bowl Pulling For Tide
Five teams are still in contention for the Southeastern Conference title. But Sugar Bowl officials are pulling for fifth-ranked Alabama.

The New Year's Day game, which has a long-standing contract with the SEC, hasn't had a national championship game since second-ranked Penn State defeated No. 1 Georgia 27-23 in 1983.

Alabama, the SEC's only unbeaten team at 7-0, offers that possibility this season — provided the Crimson Tide can keep on winning. The Tide hasn't been to New Orleans since 1980.

"At this point, Alabama gives us our best opportunity to get a game for number one," Sugar Bowl executive director Mickey Holmes said. "So as far as we're concerned, Alabama is definitely in the driver's seat. Right now, anyway."

Dye Worried About Smith
Auburn didn't have to worry about Florida tailback Emmitt Smith last season, but the Tigers won't be as fortunate Saturday.

Smith, who missed the 1988 game against Auburn because of an injury, is healthy and running well as No. 19 Florida prepares for a must-win Southeastern Conference game against the 12th-ranked Tigers at Jordan-Hare Stadium.

"The main thing is to keep Florida out of the end zone," Auburn coach Pat Dye said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "Emmitt's going to get his yardage, but you have to be sound against a runner like Emmitt. He's as good as we've played against."

Smith, a 5-foot-10, 201-pound junior, already has rushed for 1,128 yards this season. He is averaging more than six yards per carry and has scored 10 touchdowns.

"Florida is a much better football team than we played against last year in Florida," Dye said, referring to the Tigers' 16-0 victory in Gainesville. "Their offensive line is the biggest improvement. Last year, we didn't play against Emmitt, and that is a big bonus to them to have him this year."

Florida's defense is allowing less than two touchdowns per game. Said Dye: "They're not real big, but they're strong at every spot defensively."

However, the Gators have been a team in turmoil this season. Coach Galen Hall resigned amid allegations of wrongdoing, and starting quarterback Kyle Morris was kicked off the team for betting.

"They've had some problems," Dye said, "but they look on the field (like) they're not playing with those problems. We have to have a good physical and emotional peak to beat Florida."

The Tigers (5-2 and 3-1) have struggled on offense, particularly through the air. After scoring 80 points in their first two games, they've been held to 75 in the last five contests.

"In my opinion, we weren't really good either way (running or passing) against good football teams," Dye said. "I think we lost confidence in our passing game. We work on our passing game every week to try to improve. A good sound passing game against Florida would be an asset."

Fortunately, the Tigers' defense has been up to par most of the season, posting two shutouts — including a 14-0 victory last week over Mississippi State — and allowing no touchdowns in two other games.

'R' Rated

East Carolina football coach Bill Lewis watched the films of the Miami-Florida State game in preparation of his team's meeting with the Hurricanes on Saturday.

"Miami is a very physical team," Lewis said. "The game film should be 'R' rated because of the violence."

"We had to check the ages of our players before we let them see it."

No Respect

East Carolina's Pirates seem to get no respect.

Last week, Syracuse players were quoted in the press and on television as questioning who East Carolina was; that they had played no one and shouldn't be on the Orange schedule.

This week, Miami follows suit. The Hurricanes' press release makes note under ECU practice plans: "The Bearcats will practice on Friday at the Orange Bowl."

ECU Injuries ...

- separated cartilage in his ribs, will continue to be out of action.
- Defensive end Anthony Thompson, with a shoulder bruise, will not have contact during the week.
- Defensive end Brian McPhatter, with an elbow bruise, will not have contact this week.
- Tailback Eric Booker, with a knee injury, is expected to be sidelined for three weeks.
- Offensive tackle Tod Creech, also with a knee injury, will also be out for about three weeks.
- Wide receiver Clayton Driver, who missed the Syracuse game, has been found to have a stress fracture of the lower leg and is out indefinitely.
- Wide receiver Walter Wilson, who missed some time earlier because of a separated shoulder, reagravated it Saturday, but should be ready to go by Saturday.
- And fullback David Daniels, with a sprained thumb, will see only limited practice time.

"When you play a team as physical as Miami, you have to be concerned about the number of injuries," Lewis said.

The Pirates, however, seem to have bounced back from their heart-breaking 18-16 loss to Syracuse. That came when the Orangemen kicked the winning field goal with just four seconds left to play.

"We've done a good job (of bouncing back) all year," Lewis said. "The team was absolutely broken-hearted Saturday in the locker room. I saw more emotion in our dressing room than I've seen before."

"But this is a positive for us because it showed that the game meant a lot to us. You have to have that to be successful."

Lewis said he believes the Pirates have made progress these last two weeks following a blowout at the hands of South Carolina, 47-14.

"It doesn't take away the loss, but we have played better and we've played hard these last two weeks," he said. "But we need to raise our level of play just a little more to keep a drive going or to stop someone else's drive."

Lewis said there were a number of plays in the Syracuse game where you could say, that had anyone of them had gone ECU's way, the outcome probably would have been different.

Among these were the fumbled punt that ECU almost recovered in the end zone for a touchdown but went for a touchback; the field goal lost when ECU had 12 men on the field; the field goal that was later missed; the final third down that the Pirates failed to convert; and the fourth-and-three that Syracuse converted on its final drive.

Top Pirates for the Syracuse game included McPhatter on special teams, Willie Lewis on offense and Thompson on defense.

Lewis said McPhatter did an excellent job on the coverage teams and was in on the hit that jarred loose the punt that nearly went for an ECU touchdown.

Willie Lewis, according to the coach, had one of his best running efforts of the year. And Thompson is playing the most consistent football of his career.

Game captains for Miami will be McPhatter and deep snapper Brian Walsh on special teams, Rhett and Wilson on offense and Thompson and nose guard/tackle Mike Applewhite on defense.

ECU will face Miami in the Orange Bowl at 4 p.m. Saturday.

East Germans Say Sweeping Reforms Likely

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East German officials acknowledged that the country's rigidly planned economy is in serious trouble and that sweeping reform may be on the way.

Gunter Schabowski, a member of the policy-making Communist Party Politburo, told a West German magazine the government must lift a wide range of subsidies on goods and services.

"We subsidize even flowers and taxi fares. That's an impossible situation," Schabowski was quoted as saying. "Subsidies are not sacred cows."

Schabowski, in the interview published today with the magazine Wirtschaftswoche, or Economy Week, was quoted as saying the leadership also was considering an overhaul of the country's industry.

Schabowski said the leadership would examine whether the organization of industry into huge "combines" still makes economic sense.

The exodus of tens of thousands of East Germans has added to the mounting problems for the nation's industry, while continuing protests have increased pressure on the government to institute reform.

Communist Party leader Egon Krenz was holding talks this week in Moscow with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to discuss possible reforms in East Germany.

For years, the East Germany's Communist leadership has spoken of its economic system as an unqualified success. Although the country's standard of living has been the envy of many of its Soviet bloc allies, ordinary citizens still have to deal with many hardships.

Quality consumer goods are in short supply and buying a car can take 10 years or more.

A top manager told an East German newspaper that food and consumer goods supplies were falling far below the expectations of a dissatisfied population.

Heinz Warzecha, director of the machine tools combine named "October 7," told the East Berlin newspaper Berliner Zeitung that more openness was needed in the way the economy was run and that such problems as inflation must be publicized.

"The level of food supplies, consumer goods and services in many areas does not meet the expectations that citizens of one of the 10 leading industrial nations have the right to expect," Warzecha told the government-controlled newspaper in today's edition.

"Whether we like it or not, the people are comparing us with West Germany and other capitalist countries," he added.

Warzecha said salaries should be linked to performance, asserting that "whoever produces more deserves better pay."

"The annual inflation rate must be made public and the government should discuss the causes and remedies with the people and inform the Parliament," Warzecha said.

The Communist Party newspaper Neues Deutschland, in a front-page article today, also spoke of a lack of raw materials and workers in a machine tool factory in Goerlitz.

Nearly 70,000 East Germans have fled to West Germany in recent months, and many are skilled, young workers.

West Germany's ARD television reported the opposition group Democratic Awakening has demanded a major change in East Germany's legal system.

ARD said the group has demanded the formation of a constitutional court, so that "every citizen has the right to have the legal and constitutional basis of government decisions reviewed" in court.

China Pulls Policemen On Nixon's Demand

BEIJING (AP) — Rifle-toting police disappeared from outside the U.S. Embassy today for the first time since June after former President Nixon told the Chinese he didn't want to visit an embassy surrounded by guns.

An American diplomat told Nixon he had accomplished in one day what the embassy had been trying to achieve for five months.

Nixon, on the last full day of a five-day fact-finding visit, told embassy staff members he had reached few points of agreement with Chinese leaders over the government's bloody suppression in June of the pro-democracy movement.

"We see it from totally different vantage points," he said, describing the discussions as "like two ships passing in the dark."

A member of the Nixon party said the former president, in a meeting with Premier Li Peng on Monday, told the Chinese he didn't like guns and didn't want to see guards with AK-47s outside the U.S. Embassy when he visited.

The embassy has protested three times in the past week over the alleged harassment of diplomats and their families — including police pointing rifles at diplomats' children. American officials also have expressed concern over sharply increased surveillance of the embassy compound in recent days.

Former President Nixon shakes hands with passers-by on a street in downtown Beijing

Li told Nixon the police presence was needed to guard against a possible escape by dissident Fang Lizhi and his wife, Li Shuxian.

Fang and his wife sought refuge at the embassy after the June military crackdown, when troops killed hundreds of unarmed civilians in clearing central Beijing of protesters. Both are wanted by Chinese police on charges of counterrevolutionary agitation.

Although the rifles disappeared for Nixon's visit, a large contingent of People's Armed Police remained on guard today outside the embassy buildings. Six stood at posts around the main embassy office that Nixon visited, two guarded a consular office down the street and seven congregated outside the residence of Ambassador James Lilley several blocks away.

All wore belts with small pistols. Most embassies have only one or at most two Chinese guards stationed at their gates.

On Tuesday, senior leader Deng Xiaoping said China has not done a single thing harmful to the United States, and accused the United States of being "involved too deeply in the turmoil and counterrevolutionary rebellion" — the government's terms for the pro-democracy movement.

Nixon said the Chinese insisted for one of the worst rifts in relations since Nixon restored official contacts in 1972, and demanded Washington act first to ease the strain.

"If that attitude had existed back in 1972, there would have been no embassy," Nixon told the diplomats.

Nixon and the Chinese leaders have agreed on the need of the two countries to have strong relations that transcend ideological differences.

"China is indispensable" in today's increasingly complex international scene, Nixon said.

Early today, Nixon spent 30 minutes walking around the Xidan free market in western Beijing, chatting with shoppers.

He is to return to the United States on Thursday. Nixon aides said it is likely he will provide a written account of his talks to President Bush.

Train Derailment Leaves 36 Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — An express train traveling from New Delhi to Calcutta derailed today, killing at least 36 people and injuring 78 others, a government spokesman said.

Press Trust of India said there were unconfirmed reports of 100 dead and 200 injured, but a spokesman for the Railways Ministry said the reports were incorrect.

Ten of the Toofan Express' 18 coaches derailed outside the railroad station at Sakaldia, about 435 miles southeast of New Delhi, the spokesman said.

The cause of the derailment was not known, he said, speaking on condition of anonymity in keeping with government practice.

He said he did not know how many people were aboard the Toofan Express. Trains between New Delhi and Calcutta are usually crowded, carrying several hundred people.

Press Trust and United News of India said one of the derailed cars plunged into a water-filled ditch. The agencies' initial reports said eight cars had fallen into the ditch.

Press Trust said injured passengers were taken to the railway hospital at Mughalsarai, 11 miles west of the crash. Doctors from other towns were rushed to the area.

Mughalsarai is a major railroad junction near the border of Uttar Pradesh and Bihar states.

In April, 67 people were killed when several cars of a high-speed train derailed and tumbled down a rocky embankment near Lalitpur, 280 miles south of New Delhi.

More than 100 people were killed in July 1988 when another high-speed train plunged off a bridge and into a river in the southern state of Kerala.

Salvadoran Union Calls National Strike Over Bombing That Killed 10

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The country's largest labor federation called for a nationwide general strike today to protest a bombing that tore up the union hall of a leftist affiliate, killing 10 people and wounding 29.

The federation also exhorted workers to take to the streets in a massive funeral procession for those killed Tuesday at the headquarters of the National Federation of Salvadoran Workers, or Fenastras.

The attack at Fenastras followed a pre-dawn bombing at the offices of Comadres, a human rights group, in which four people were slightly wounded. Leaders of both organizations blamed the armed forces for the attacks.

Government and army spokesmen routinely characterize Fenastras and Comadres — the Committee of Mothers of Political Prisoners, Disappeared and Assassinated of El Salvador — as fronts for leftist guerrillas.

Two Americans, Mark Anner of Greenwich, Conn. and Brenda Hubbard of Los Angeles, were injured in the attacks. Anner was wounded at Fenastras and Miss Hubbard at the Comadres office.

Hubbard and Anner are so-called "solidarity workers," members of North American and European organizations that work with local leftists in the belief that the presence of foreigners makes official repression less likely.

"We the workers see more clearly than ever that we are at war against Arena," the rightist governing party, said Humberto Centeno of the National Union of Salvadoran Workers, the country's largest labor federation.

He spoke at a news conference amid the rubble at Fenastras.

The government of President Alfredo Cristiani, whose party has in the past been linked to death squad activity, said it "energetically condemns the terrorist acts against Comadres and Fenastras."

It called the attacks, as well as Monday's guerrilla mortar assault on the Defense Ministry, "part of a conspiratorial plan whose goal is to create obstacles to the process of dialogue."

Government and guerrilla representatives have met twice since September in an effort to find a way to end the 10-year-old civil war. The two sides, far apart, have been able to agree only to continue talks in Venezuela on Nov. 20.

The government said the bombings were being investigated, and that it would not allow escalating violence to knock the peace process off track.

"We should not lose our serenity and the hope of finding a solution to the conflict by civilized means," it said in a communique.

The blast at Fenastras virtually destroyed the two-story building in the center of the downtown area just two blocks from the National Police barracks. Six people were killed immediately, and four died later Tuesday in the hospital.

One of those killed was Febe Velasquez, a leading figure in Fenestras. The union's secretary-general, Gerardo Diaz, was among the wounded.

Israeli Troops End Futile Bid To Crush Arab-Led Tax Revolt

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BEIT SAHUR, Israeli-occupied West Bank — Israeli troops and tax officials withdrew from Beit Sahur Tuesday, ending a near-siege that failed to crush a tax revolt. For six weeks, they had restricted access to Beit Sahur and confiscated household and industrial goods from defiant residents.

The withdrawal ended one of the most unusual episodes of the Arab uprising. Beit Sahur, a middle-class community of 12,000 at the edge of Bethlehem, was the first and only town in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to protest the occupation by resisting every form of Israeli taxation.

The protest enraged Israeli officials, and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin vowed to "teach them a lesson." Israeli authorities forbade outsiders to enter, intercepted supplies of food, cut telephone lines, arrested dozens of tax resistors and most recently, threatened to freeze the bank accounts of all residents.

Still, almost no one paid, despite raids on homes day and night and heated debate within the community over whether it would not be better to work out some sort of deal with the authorities. Complaints from church officials in Jerusalem and from Pope John Paul II in Rome — Beit Sahur is largely Christian — were mounting as the confrontation dragged on.

Tuesday, as troops swept aside stone and sand roadblocks, residents celebrated by chanting, "Israelis, out," and singing the Palestinian anthem. "My Homeland, My Homeland."

Privately, residents were cautious, aware that the blockade could be restored at any time.

"I am happy," said Raji Qumsiyeh, an upholsterer who lost the furniture in his living and dining rooms and also his television set to the tax men. "But the soldiers could come back in two days or two weeks. We don't know."

The troops maintained a large encampment in fields next to the site where Christians believe angels announced the birth of Christ. As they pulled out Tuesday, a military communique announced that "tax collection and law and order will continue ... in the future as planned."

Army officials sought to put the best face on the decision to withdraw. They said that $1.5 million worth of goods had been taken from more than 300 families, and they expressed satisfaction that no other town had taken up Beit Sahur's cry of "no taxation without representation."

Brig. Gen. Shaikhe Erez, military governor of the West Bank, told Israel Radio that he was "convinced the tax rebellion is broken."

Bhutto Survives Her First Major No-Confidence Vote

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto weathered the first major political test of her 11-month-old government today, surviving a no-confidence motion in Parliament.

The opposition failed to secure the necessary majority in the 237-seat National Assembly, mustering just 107 votes. Ms. Bhutto's governing Pakistan People's Party has 116 seats in the chamber.

"I have no rancor nor any ill will against those who have moved the no-trust motion against me," Ms. Bhutto said after House Speaker Meraj Khalid read the count. "With today's clear vote of confidence in the government of Pakistan, this chapter is closed."

The debate lasted just 2½ hours despite predictions it might stretch on until Thursday.

The no-confidence motion, the first in the government's 42-year history, stemmed from brutal ethnic violence in this nation of 109 million people.

The violence has chipped away at Ms. Bhutto's power base, turning the slums of Karachi — Pakistan's largest city — into virtual war zones and creating a big business in illegal arms.

Some observers feared before the vote that whatever the outcome, it could ignite new violence.

Ms. Bhutto, 36, who is expecting her second child by the end of the year, told a crowded news conference her party wants to open negotiations with some of her opponents.

Assault Arrest

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh man who is wanted in Texas on several counts of aggravated sexual assaults involving children was arrested at his Raleigh home Tuesday, the FBI said.

Frederick Dennis Clark, 36, was being held in the Wake County jail pending extradition proceedings. He was arrested on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution, the FBI reported in a statement.

Clark had been sought since 1987 on warrants from Texas charging him with several counts of aggravated assault on children, said Paul V. Daley, the FBI's special agent for North Carolina.

BENAZIR BHUTTO

"This is a time for reflection by the government," she said. "We are exploring the possibility of negotiating with the more moderate elements of our opposition."

She ruled out early elections, predicting her party would be returned with a simple majority as it was in November 1988.

Ms. Bhutto's supporters rose in applause as she entered the debate chamber at the start of the debate clad in a loose, green native dress and a white scarf — the colors of the Pakistani flag.

Her entrance interrupted a speech by Fazle ur Rehman of the small, Moslem fundamentalist Jamaat-i-Ulema-i-Islam party, who said he objected to Ms. Bhutto's leadership because she is a woman.

Lawmakers received a military escort to the flat, modern building that houses the legislature, which was protected by a ring of troops and police.

The extraordinary security was provided at the request of the opposition. Helmeted troops in khaki uniforms, some gripping machine guns, manned barricades in a 3,500-yard radius of the assembly, the policy-making lower house of Parliament.

Police in riot gear patrolled intersections near the building but there were no signs of trouble.

Authorities banned demonstrations in Islamabad and some other Pakistani cities to prevent any clashes between pro- and anti-government forces.

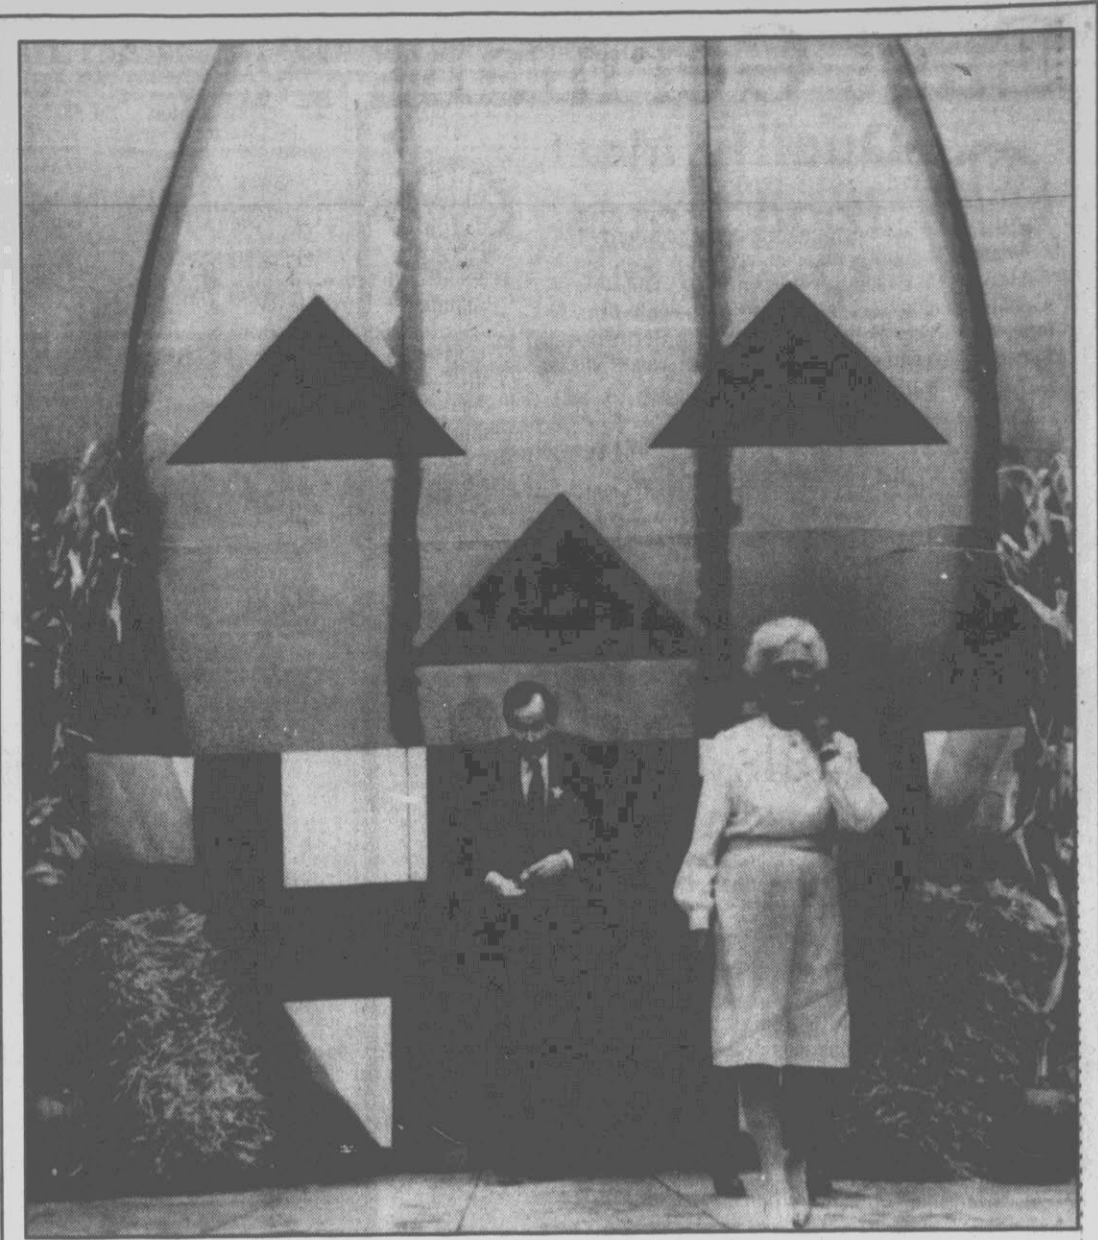

Ms. Bhutto's opposition, most of whom belong to the nine-party Islamic Democratic Alliance, sought the no-confidence motion after a small party of Indian immigrants who had supported the government abruptly changed sides on Oct. 23.

The immigrants, called mohajirs, accused the 11-month-old Cabinet of failing to fulfill promises to combat discrimination and provide more jobs.

Ms. Bhutto denied the accusations, and her aides alleged the party was dishonestly lured into the opposition camp.

Both sides in the quarrel have accused the other of bribery and coercion as they scrambled for votes in the days leading up to the no-confidence vote.

Ms. Bhutto's party emerged as the country's largest one year ago in Pakistan's first free elections after 11 years of military rule under late President Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, who died in a plane crash in August 1988.

U.S.-Soviet Aims In Africa Are Similar, Official Says

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A senior State Department official said Tuesday that after years of proxy wars the United States and the Soviet Union now have nearly similar aims in Africa.

"Until two years ago there was a total opposition between U.S. and Soviet interests," said Herman J. Cohen, the department's chief policy-maker for Africa. "There was very little dialogue."

"Now," he said, "we have about 80 percent overlapping interests with the Soviet Union," evidenced by superpower cooperation on Angola, Namibia and Ethiopia, scenes of bitter wars.

In unusually frank testimony on Capitol Hill, Cohen, an assistant secretary of State, also forecast a near-term solution to the long civil war in Mozambique and said that he favored extending diplomatic recognition to marxist Angola but had been overruled.

Cohen told the House International Operations Subcommittee he dated Moscow's turnabout in Africa at "the middle of 1987, when Soviet interests began to change."

Having sent large amounts of arms and money to Angola, Mozambique and Ethiopia "they decided for their own needs at home that they would disengage," he said.

"They wanted to disengage and we wanted them to disengage. Therefore we were able to have a dialogue with them on Cuban troop withdrawal from Angola, independence for Namibia and the peace process in Ethiopia," he said.

Cohen said that in the State Department's Africa bureau he is "perfectly free to deal with the Soviets on Africa" with "very, very little interference" from the CIA, the Department of Defense or the State Department's European bureau, which handles the bulk of Soviet affairs for the department.

The assistant secretary's testimony was striking evidence of how far the United States and the Soviets have pulled back from confrontation in the Third World.

Mercy Killer Has Settled Into Prison Life

After Shooting Bedridden Wife, He Prayed To Die

By Tony Kennedy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STILLWATER, Minn. — On the eve of his imprisonment for the mercy killing of his diseased and bedridden wife, Oscar Whelem Carlson begged God to strike him dead.

"I was so afraid that I prayed that night that I could have a heart attack and die," Carlson said. "I was at my lowest."

The 79-year-old retired dairy farmer and former bus driver said he was petrified at the thought of living in a maximum security penitentiary with rapists, thieves, drug dealers and psycho killers.

He was at peace with his earlier decision to pump four bullets into his wife of 47 years, Agnes. But he had hoped for a more lenient sentence than 3½ years at Minnesota's Stillwater Prison.

About halfway into his stay, Carlson is delighted with the place.

If he could draw an occasional furlough to visit his wife's grave in Evansville, he says he wouldn't mind making it his permanent home.

"I'd much sooner stay here than in an old folks' home," said the bespectacled Carlson, who shares laughs and meals with convicted felons one-fourth his age. "Agnes was in that nursing home and she didn't like it there one day."

On Feb. 29, 1988, Carlson sneaked an old revolver into the nursing home room where Agnes, 71, lay suffering from Alzheimer's disease and a broken hip. He spoke with her briefly, then pulled the trigger repeatedly. At his trial two months later, Carlson pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

Carlson said many of his fellow inmates aren't aware of his past. But when they ask questions, he doesn't hesitate to answer.

"I talk to them like I was one of the boys and they treat me that way," Carlson said.

Prison caseworker Glenn Hall said Carlson is a refreshing prison oddity: a secure, gentle man who adores his job as caretaker of a prison garden brimming with melons, tomatoes, corn and other crops.

"They all kind of treat him like a grandpa," Hall said. "Even I do in a way."

Carlson spent his first 11 months in the "big house" before getting a bed March 20 in a minimum security building just outside the prison walls. With credit for good behavior, he could be released next September.

Carlson said he didn't seek the transfer and actually missed the maximum security unit for its assortment of religious services. He grew up Lutheran, but participated in spiritual gatherings of all sorts and had befriended a Roman Catholic priest.

Marcene Cole of Fergus Falls, Carlson's oldest daughter, said she was surprised at the speed of her father's adjustment.

"I think he was awfully scared at first," Cole said. "But he made the best of it. He seems to look at things positively."

Bill Schroeder, Carlson's longtime friend, said prison may have been a blessing in disguise because many people in the Evansville area would have shunned Carlson had he been ordered instead to do community service.

Carlson said Marcene and his youngest daughter, Millie, supported his decision. But he said his other daughter, Mary Beth, was angered that her mother's life — albeit miserable at times — was cut short. She declined to discuss the ordeal.

"I wasn't too happy at first," said Schroeder. "I was really shocked and really angry with him. It took me quite a while to get myself together on this to realize that Oscar was at his breaking point. Everybody has a breaking point."

For Carlson the breaking point arrived when he received word from a hospital in Alexandria that Agnes would have to undergo hip surgery.

"That's when my mind slipped and I got my gun," Carlson said.

Carlson retrieved the weapon from his woodshed, drove to the nursing home and prayed before asking his wife if she wanted to have the surgery done.

When she declined, Carlson said he asked her if she wanted a "shot" — a term she understood from his days as a butcher when he used the revolver to kill pigs and cattle.

"She looked right at me and she said, 'Yes,'" Carlson said. "I shot her twice in the heart. She knew I was pretty handy with the gun."

Seeing her mouth open and fearing doctors would rush in and attempt to revive her, Carlson said he shot her again — once in the eye and once in the mouth. Before sheriff's deputies arrived about 20 minutes later,

The Associated Press

Carlson said, he wept and prayed over his wife's body.

Asked by Douglas County District Judge Paul Ballard why he killed her, Carlson said, "Because she was suffering and I couldn't stand to see her suffer any longer."

He said his only regret about Agnes was placing her in the nursing home in the first place. But Alzheimer's had warped her mind, he said, and he was weary from providing 24-hour care.

Although the Carlsons' rural Evansville house had indoor plumbing, Agnes began insisting on using the outhouse and Carlson said he had to accompany her to prevent her from wandering away. She had long since started to believe that Carlson was her father and she often didn't recognize her children, Carlson said. In addition, the vegetable garden that had been the centerpiece of their lives had gone to weeds.

Inside the nursing home, Carlson said, Agnes took a turn for the worse. She had been there about 10 months before he killed her.

"I wouldn't care to stay in that place any more than she did," Carlson said. "They called it murder what I did. But she very much agreed on it so I think I helped her out of a lot of mess."

While Carlson enjoyed maximum security, he said minimum security provides for group outings that allows him to bowl, attend Sunday religious services in Stillwater and shop.

Better yet, the spy Carlson can tend to the prison's half-acre garden, situated near the prison golf course. Carlson said he works from 7:30 a.m. until 11, breaks for a 90-minute lunch, and ends his day in the garden at 3 p.m.

"We got bankers' hours," he said. Despite being well-liked, Carlson said he hasn't made any close friends in minimum security because "they come and go too soon."

But he said three strangers have written to him to offer their companionship upon his release. The most serious offer came from a 73-year-old Florida woman who read about his plight and offered to care for him "the rest of my days," Carlson said.

"It's a possibility," he said. "But like they tell me, I've got a long time to make up my mind. I'm in no hurry to leave."

College Trains Students Of Crime

By Kay Bartlett
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — John Salamy, a 22-year-old aspiring FBI agent, was a bit disconcerted when he looked down during an exam and saw a .38-caliber revolver strapped to the ankle of the student next to him.

On this campus, you may smoke only in designated areas. You may carry your gun anywhere.

The John Jay College of Criminal Justice, part of the City University of New York system, is indeed an unusual institution of higher learning.

It is a liberal arts college where you cannot major in English, history or philosophy, but you can major in forensic psychology, criminology or deviant behavior and social control.

A science lab is equipped to do DNA testing, the ultimate in identification. Kojak is now filming in the environs. A vintage firetruck, enclosed in glass, is the major artwork of one building.

"It's the only school where you might have an ex-felon, a recovering alcoholic, an FBI man and a cop all taking notes in the same class," says Dr. Charles Bahn, a psychology professor.

"In fact, we used to joke back when it was nearly all cops, 'How do you grade a class where everybody is armed?' We told them we gave credit for time served and were open to plea bargaining."

John Jay is one of only a few colleges of criminal justice, including those at the universities of Chicago, Nebraska at Omaha, Wisconsin, Louisville, Baltimore and East Tennessee State.

Soon to celebrate its 25th anniversary, John Jay is still called the

The Associated Press

"cop school," but it has expanded its horizons since it was housed in the Police Academy and all the students were New York's finest.

In the ensuing years, the college moved to several different locations in Manhattan, but up until the 1970s about 70 percent of its students were police officers.

Now housed in two buildings near Lincoln Center, and just south of a housing project, the student body is predominantly civilian, with only a quarter of them cops or others in uniformed services.

Still, the coffee shop-deli down the street would not make the day of an armed robber. There is a lot of firepower beyond those pastrami and corned beef sandwiches.

There are more than 8,000 students, most of them pursuing associate and bachelor's degrees. In addition, 550 are working for their masters and 103 their doctorate.

John Jay, named after the first U.S. Chief Justice, has a special mission within the CUNY system, the largest urban university in the country with 19 schools and 194,000 students. Says Jay's president, Gerald Lynch:

"We hope John Jay will help professionalize the criminal justice system, teach people in law enforcement that life is ambiguous, that life is made up of grays, that it will give them more compassion."

"We don't teach fingerprinting here. We have a library, which I insisted be the first thing people see when they enter the new building.

We have a 625-seat theater.

"The students learn things here they will use outside of their professional life, things to enrich their personal life."

Students often complain about the liberal arts courses, since many have already decided on a career. Salamy, for example, wants to become either an FBI man or a DEA agent.

Despite the similarity of interest, there is great diversity.

"Students here want to be anything from probation officers to judges to senators," says Julia Bryant, a school spokeswoman. "There are 19-year-olds who want to be on '21 Jump Street' and older cops who want to be commissioner."

Hollywood Spills Its Christmas Fare For Oscar Derby

By Jack Mathews
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — "Cinema Paradiso." Note the title, write it down on your Christmas calendar, consider it a little surprise gift that you can unwrap yourself during the holidays. Do it now because once the onslaught of advertising and publicity for the major studio Christmas fare begins, it will be hard for independent movies — even those of gem quality — to shine through.

"Cinema Paradiso," or "Paradise Theater," is the story of a successful Italian filmmaker who is led by the death of an old friend into reflecting on his childhood in a small town in Italy where the lone movie house served as both the community's social center and its window on the real and romanticized worlds outside.

The movie focuses on the relationship between a young boy and the man who runs the theater, but it is more a tribute to the allure and power of film itself. It is a reminder of those seminal moments when those of us who have come to love movies first felt the tug. "Cinema Paradiso" was one of the hits of this year's Cannes Film Festival and is being delivered on these shores by independent Miramax Film just in time for Christmas.

Meanwhile, Hollywood has a whole new generation of moviegoers to romance and this Christmas, major studios are sending out more than a dozen movies aimed at seducing them. Sixteen pictures are now set to open nationally between Nov. 17 and Christmas. More than a half a dozen others will be given limited send-offs before the end of the year in order to qualify for the next important event, the Oscar Derby. A scattering of others — "Cinema Paradiso" and Cinecom's "Handmaid's Tale" among them — will try to be heard above the din.

Much weeping and gnashing of teeth occurs in studio executive suites whenever attempts to handicap the Christmas field make their way into print. But given the amount of horse manure that accompanies the release of most broad audience movies, and the frequency with which marketing people go to their whips during the holiday run, a horse race is pretty much what it has become.

So, with the educated opinions of well-placed industry experts, plus eyewitness reports from a handful of early screenings, the careful reading of career curves and the usual seat-of-the-pants guesswork, here is one touter's look at how Hollywood's last Christmas of the '80s will finish at the box office.

Back to the Future II: Universal Pictures. Release date, Nov. 22. Time travel has always been an intriguing theme for film makers, but rarely has it worked as well as in the 1985 "Back to the Future," in which Marty McFly (Michael J. Fox) went back in time to help his parents fall in love so they could get married and have him. The series could go on forever, and may. In Part 2, Marty goes into the future for his time-warped adventure. Part

Teach Children Cross-Stitch

"Home Is Where the Heart Is," a tried and oh-so-true sentiment, is delightfully depicted in this cross-stitch picture. The old-fashion saying is illustrated by a cozy house in a heart and surrounded by a lovely floral border. Extremely easy and enjoyable to do, the finished size is 11 by 14 inches.

Our kit includes the cross-stitch fabric with stamped design, the correct amounts and colors of floss, plus a chart showing the correct color placement. For those who prefer counted cross-stitch, just order our leaflet and purchase your supplies separately.

To obtain directions for making the Home Cross-Stitching Picture, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-102989 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-102989 by sending check or money order for $13.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and all materials required to make this project.

In the needlework field, no craft is easier than cross-stitch. In fact, it is perhaps the best way to introduce children to the joys of stitchery, particularly with prestamped fabric. But whether you choose to work on this type fabric or on blank fabric in counted cross-stitch, the results are exquisite with a well-chosen design.

There are a few tips that will help you to achieve the very best results. First, prepare your fabric before you take the first stitch. The even-weave fabrics used for cross-stitch will ravel as you handle them. Turn under and hem all the raw edges, either by hand or machine, to eliminate this problem.

As a self-taught cross-stitcher with no one to advise me, I learned the hard way on my first project when I found the raveling fabric threads catching into my stitches.

Then, just to make life easier, sort and label the threads with the corresponding color and symbol. For example, if the color chart shows that the symbol "X" stands for dark green stitches, label the dark green strands with an "X". When two or more colors are very close in shade, as they often are in any given project, it helps to look at them in daylight to correctly identify them.

It is important to separate the strands and to not let them twist as you stitch. When they do twist, just give your needle a counter-clockwise turn or two, or let the needle hang below your fabric and it will spin out the unwanted twisting. It's also a good idea to use short lengths of floss in your needle.

You almost always will be instructed to use fewer than six strands at a time. For example, on 11-count Aida fabric you normally will use only two or three strands in the needle, depending on the desired effect. One of the charms of cross-stitch is an almost airy look that is lost if you use more than the recommended number of strands.

To start the first strand, hold the end of the thread behind the fabric

Universal Press Syndicate

Children can learn pattern cross-stitch until it is secured by the first few stitches. After that, begin and end new strands by running the thread needle under a few stitches on the wrong side. If you anchor pale threads under stitches made with other pale threads and dark ones under those made with dark thread, your anchored ends will not show on the right side of your work.

Finally, a few words about knots and snipping. Never use knots in your thread. These can work through to the front, and even if they stay in place on the back they will give a bumpy appearance to the right side. Tangled threads on the wrong side can create this same problem. To avoid this, keep a small pair of scissors handy and always snip away any loose ends each time you rethread the needle.

Take Time Out From Your Children

Dear Abby: I am the mother of five (three boys and two girls) whose ages run 2, 5, 8, 9 and 10. I am their nurse, teacher, recreational director and cook — but sometimes I feel like I'm their slave and their warden. This morning I lost my temper and slapped my 8-year-old daughter so hard I left my handprint on her face. (I had just mopped my kitchen floor when she came running through the kitchen with muddy shoes.)

I am so ashamed. I never thought I could lose control like that. Am I losing touch with reality? Please help me. — Ashamed

Dear Ashamed: I doubt if there is a mother alive who has not done or said something in anger. (One need not lift a hand to hurt a child. Words can cut as sharply as a knife.)

The next time everyday pressures build up to such a pitch that you feel like lashing out, STOP! And try any of these simple alternatives suggested by the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse. Remember, Take Time Out. Don't take "it" out on your child.

1. Put your hands over your mouth. Count to 10. Or, better yet, 20.
2. Stop in your tracks. Press your lips together and breathe deeply.
3. Phone a friend.
4. Phone the weather.
5. Recite the alphabet out loud.
6. If someone can watch the children, go outside and take a short walk.
7. Take a hot bath, or splash cold water on your face.

8. Pick up a pencil and write down your thoughts.
9. Close your eyes and imagine you're hearing what your child hears.
10. Turn on the radio or TV.
11. Hug a pillow.
12. For further information on raising a family, preventing child abuse and for the location of a support group in your state, write: The National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, P.O. Box 2866, Chicago, Ill. 60690. (It is a non-profit organization, but donations are gratefully accepted — include a dollar or two with your request. The money will be well spent.)

Dear Abby: I work as a receptionist for a large company and I love my job. I am always in a good mood and smiling comes easily to me. Would you please tell me what to say to people who say things like,

"I hate people who are always cheerful in the morning — you make me sick!"

"I once had a woman say to me, 'You must be either very stupid or incredibly lucky, because nobody can be that happy all the time.'"

Abby, just once I would like to have some kind of comeback that would shut them up or put them in their place. Thank you. — Happy And Shpws It

Dear Happy: The most effective response to a rude comment is no reaction whatsoever. As my sainted grandfather used to say, "Never get into a wrestling match with a skunk."

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6944, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Mums Brighten Coastal November

By Garry Mitchell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THEODORE, Ala. — Ducks waddle, bunnies hop, but the blooming chrysanthemums remain the center of attention at Bellingrath Gardens during November.

The gardeners prefer fewer rabbits in the flower patches, but they have developed a tolerance for them since they came with the territory in this rural area of coastal Alabama. The ducks are part of the landscape in the Oriental Gardens, one of the featured areas of Bellingrath.

"We get a few deer running through and the bobcats like the ducks, and we've had a few alligators in the lake," said general manager John "Doc" Brown, discussing some of the big pests that befuddle the 40 gardeners trying to maintain floral order.

But it's the flowers that this time of year hold special meaning for the gardeners, who realize when a freeze hits the North, more visitors head South.

Setting out thousands of mums, the season's favorite flower, takes timing, but the results are splendid. First imported from Japan some 200 years ago, mums vary in color from pristine whites and bright yellows and golds through russets and reds and deep purples.

Brown said 12,000 to 15,000 people will visit the gardens during November to see acres of mums displayed in huge plots and cascading from columns.

But he said, "They really can't rival the azaleas," which draw the largest crowds to the 65-acre gardens during the spring.

Brown said the gardeners are always trying to improve the floral displays, sometimes changing the plots for a better view. He said they are sensitive to the high humidity and heat, which sometimes requires relocating plots. In the hot months, he said, the yellow allamanda shows off 3-inch blooms in the full sun.

"After the mums go out, we put out the poinsettias, then in January and February, forced tulips and daffodils," he said.

Robert Stovall of Atlanta, director of special services at the Southeast Tourism Society, described Bellingrath's "chrysanthemums extravaganza" as one of the area's Top 20 events in November.

A panel of judges selects two events from each of nine Southeastern states and two "at-large" events to come up with 20, Stovall said. He lists another top November floral event as Christmas at Roseland at the 118-acre American Rose Center at Shreveport, La.

At Bellingrath, more than 60,000 mums plants produce the millions of blooms in a variety of colors. Most spectacular are the cascading mums, flowing from walls, bridges and displays in the shapes of monoliths and pom poms.

Pat Ryan, a horticulturist at Bellingrath, said mums production starts early to have new, fresh stock plants that will produce cuttings in sufficient quantities for the displays.

Some of the earliest rooted cuttings are selected to be the plants for training as cascades, baskets, and columns. He said these plants are pinched once to force side shoots, with one of the new growths becoming the leader that will form the main stem of the cascade.

All other shoots developing from the laterals along the stem are soft pinched when two to three sets of leaves have developed on the shoot. These plants are planted three to a five-gallon container to be trained as cascades.

Brown said the plants are grown in some 60,000 square feet of greenhouses. There are about 18 greenhouses in the complex, including those containing tropical plants on display.

The gardens opened to the public in 1932, and operate under the auspices of the Bellingrath-Morse Foundation as requested by Coca-Cola pioneer Walter Bellingrath. The gardens were developed on what was Bellingrath's fishing camp in 1927.

'Tis The Season For Blockbuster Films

3 (all three episodes are directed by Robert Zemeckis) is currently being shot in northern California.

Harlem Nights: Paramount. Nov. 17. Eddie Murphy is one of the modern screen's only true movie stars, a star being defined as someone who can draw crowds even to a bad movie, which most of his have been. Murphy is the writer, director and executive producer of this film, as well as his star, and is working with what he says is a personal passion — the music and people of 1930s Harlem.

The story is set in a Harlem nightclub that is run by Murphy and a partner-mentor played by Richard Pryor, with help on the floor from a croupier played by Redd Foxx, and challenged from the outside by racketeers and crooked cops. There is a fresh score from Herbie Hancock, and plenty of classics from the likes of Duke Ellington and Louis Armstrong. The soundtrack, at least, ought to be great.

Always: Universal. Nov. 20. Steven Spielberg directed this remake-adaptation of Victor Fleming's 1942 "A Guy Named Joe," and when Spielberg directs, people watch. Part romantic adventure, part fantasy, it stars Richard Dreyfuss as a daredevil pilot who flies to his death while fighting a forest fire in the Northwest, only to be returned to duty as the guardian angel for a young pilot played by newcomer Brad Johnson (Van Johnson was discovered in that role the first time around). Holly Hunter ("Broadcast News") plays Dreyfuss' wife; the part was originally played by Irene Dunne.

The Little Mermaid: Disney. Nov. 17. and All Dogs Go to Heaven: MGM. Nov. 17. The studios will not like it, but we will pair them here as an entry since they represent the complete resurgence of classical animation and more than $100 million in box office receipts between them.

"Little Mermaid," based on the Hans Christian Anderson story about a mermaid who falls in love with a man (shades of "Splash!"), is Disney's first animated fairy tale in 30 years, and the studio was so excited about it that it began screening the film in rough cut form for critics months ago.

Credit for part of the new revived commitment to animation at Disney goes to former Disney animator Don Bluth, who led an animation department mutiny at the Burbank studio 10 years ago, and eventually set up a studio in Dublin, Ireland. "All Dogs Go to Heaven" is the third Bluth film sent home from Ireland ("An American Tail" and "The Land Before Time" preceded it) to compete head-to-head with his old studio.

She-Devil: Orion. Dec. 8. Meryl Streep and Rosanne Barr — an elegantly serious actress with limited box office appeal and a slovenly comedian with immense TV ratings — are both cast against type in a dark comedy about a discarded wife (Barr) plotting revenge against her husband (Ed Begley Jr.) and his new toy (Streep). The film could move way up or way down on the box office list, depending on how well the casting takes. Orion, which had no hits during Hollywood's recent record-shattering summer, badly needs one now.

Steel Magnolias: Tri-Star. Nov. 17. Robert Harling's hit stage play about the events in the lives of six Southern women who congregate at a residential beauty parlor has, under the direction of Herbert Ross, become a movie with the sentimental aspirations of "Terms of Endearment." The high-powered cast includes hairdresser Dolly Parton, her assistant Daryl Hannah, the diabetic beauty Julia Roberts and her baleful mother Sally Field, grumpy neighbor Shirley MacLaine and the proper widow Olympia Dukakis. Dukakis and Field share the kind of scene in the final reel that usually brings Oscar nominations.

War of the Roses: Fox. Dec. 8. After 18 years of a seemingly perfect marriage, Washington, D.C.'s most enviable couple — Oliver and Barbara Rose (Michael Douglas and Kathleen Turner) — decide they have in nothing in common except their mutual admiration for their house. With Oliver's law school buddy (Danny DeVito) serving as his divorce lawyer, the house becomes a battleground. DeVito, reunited here with his "Romancing the Stone" co-stars, also directs the dark comedy adapted from a Warren Adler novel.

National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation: Warner Bros. Dec. 1. For whatever reason, Chevy Chase is a star (see above definition) and this formula comedy, in which Chase's well-intentioned bumbling dad Clark Griswold leads his family into a series of sit-com disasters, has found a large audience. Its steady customers will get it off to a fast start, but it should fade quickly.

Blaze: Touchstone. Dec. 15. Paul Newman and newcomer Lolita Davidovich co-star as Louisiana Governor Earl Long and the stripper, Blaze Starr, who brought him down. Ron Shelton had the hot land last summer, as writer and director of the baseball comedy "Bull Durham," but sex scandals are a whole new ballgame.

Family Business: Tri-Star. Dec. 22. Sean Connery, Dustin Hoffman and Matthew Broderick are the grandfather, father and grandson who plan a low-risk, high-return robbery in this drama directed by Sidney Lumet. Lumet has been hot and cold in recent years, but he's still one of the most gifted directors of drama around and the cast is certainly hot.

The Wizard: Universal. Dec. 15. This road story about a young teen-ager (Fred Savage from TV's "The Wonder Years") who discovers that his dysfunctional half-brother (Luke Edwards) is a genius at video games sounds like an adolescent version of "Rain Man." It also sounds like an attempt to tap that shrinking youth audience that has begun to let Hollywood down.

Prancer: Orion. Nov. 22. Family films are hot, and a family film with a holiday hook could be very hot. Newcomer Rebecca Harrell stars as a young girl who rescues a wounded reindeer.

Fort To Have Celebration

HAMILTON — A trip back in time 127 years ago to the Civil War year of 1862 will take place on the grounds of Martin County's Fort Branch and the nearby village of Hamilton this weekend.

On Saturday and Sunday, a wide ranging celebration will take place at both sites.

The Civil War fort is located atop the steep 90-foot bluffs locally known as Rainbow Banks on the south side of Roanoke River, two miles east of Hamilton.

The best way to get there from Greenville is to take N.C. 903 through Stokes on to Robersonville, continue to Gold Point and on to the junction with N.C. 125-903. Turn left, continue about one and one-half miles to the first paved road on the right, SR 1416, the Poplar Point Road. Take that road for the one-mile drive to the fort.

The celebration begins early on both days. Unless otherwise noted, all events are free. Activities scheduled are:

Fort Branch, Saturday
8 a.m. to noon, living history program; 8:30 a.m., formation of troops; 9 a.m., flag pole dedication; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., walking tours with tour guides to be stationed throughout the fort, and booths for memberships are open along with a quilt exhibit; 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., lunch served at the Battlefield Commission booth, and 1 p.m., Old fashioned children's games. A cake walk is $1 per person.

Hamilton, Saturday
10:30 a.m., parade of soldiers; 11 a.m., memorial service, Methodist Cemetery; 11:30 a.m., Historic Hamilton homes tour. Tickets, $6 at Larchmont Visitors Center; 11:30 a.m., troops march out for tacticals, and First N.C. Regiment Ladies' Auxiliary Victorian Fashion Show with folk musician Jimmy Arnold. Larchmont Visitors Center; 2:30 p.m. Jimmy Arnold concert, St. Martin's Episcopal Church; 3 p.m., Ladies' Auxiliary tea; 8 p.m., Civil War era dance, Edna Andrews School. Tickets $4 singles, $6 couples.

Fort Branch, Sunday
8:30 a.m., colors; 8 a.m. to 11 a.m., living history program; 9:30 a.m., church service; 10:30 a.m., company drill; 12 noon, historical perspective; 1 noon to 1 p.m., camp life; 2 p.m., spectator battle re-enactment.

Hamilton, Sunday
12 noon to 5 p.m., Larchmont Visitors Center open.

The Fort Branch Visitors' Center will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Concessions will be available both days.

A parking fee of $1 will be charged at the fort. Parking on the road is risky as the road is quite narrow at the entrance site to the fort.

Sponsors for the celebration are the Fort Branch Battlefield Commission, the First North Carolina Volunteers; Eleventh North Carolina Troops; the First North Carolina Ladies' Auxiliary; the Historic Hamilton Commission and the Martin County Arts Council.

School Teaches The Very Brightest Criminal Minds

There are also indications that some of the police students are preparing for a second career. Security management is an increasingly popular major.

"Maybe the biggest thrill of going to John Jay is knowing you are going to have a job when you get out," says Dr. Lawrence Kobilinsky, who is a recognized DNA-fingerprinting expert. Graduates are heavily recruited by would-be employers, including law enforcement agencies. The Rochester, N.Y., Police Department set up a recruitment table early this semester.

The school's alumni include two dozen to three dozen police chiefs across the country.

The Criminal Justice Center housed at Jay is sort of an advanced cop school, but students don't take formal courses. It offers workshops and seminars on such things as hostage negotiation, stakeout and surveillance techniques, confidential informants, clandestine drug labs, bomb awareness. The classroom is often the street.

These specials, usually given for law enforcement agencies but occasionally for private industry, are not open for public inspection. They don't want to give away secrets of the sleuthing trade.

"The mutts don't know these things," said one of the 35 New York City housing cops who attended a five-day workshop on narcotics investigation.

The workshop was conducted by Lt. Frank Bunting, division chief of a drug enforcement task force that includes federal, state and city agents.

Bunting presented the latest technology and offered advice growing out of his own experience. In discussing surveillance he talked of "ghosts" and "uncles" and other undercover operatives.

The students role-play a drug bust, and sometimes they make mistakes. In one, the major suspect simply strolls out of the room while the "arresting officers" question the lesser crooks.

Bunting poses another scenario: "All right," he says. "It's 102 degrees out, you're in the South Bronx and you've got 300 people around you now. What are you charging this guy with?"

A Hispanic cop, getting into the spirit, jumps up and confronts her classmate.

"What are you doing? That's my brother. He didn't do nothing."

The laughter drowns out Bunting. Bunting once gave a lecture to a group of mystery book writers and was deluged with offers to co-author a book.

Dr. Alan Goldstein, a psychology professor, says he was once teaching a class about schizophrenics and their usual non-violent nature.

A cop-student asked: "Would you like me to show the class the two bullet holes I have in my buttocks from one of those non-violent schizophrenics?"

Goldstein says that is one of the great strengths of John Jay.

"We all learn to be tolerant and we learn from each other."

Meanwhile, back in the ivory tower part of the school, freshmen are wrestling with an English literature survey course, basic mathematics, speech, government 101, much like students at any college. Half of their credits must be in traditional liberal arts courses, but even those have a criminal justice flavor.

"Sometimes, we wish their interests were broader," says Dr. Dorothy Bracey, head of the anthropology department and an expert on international policing, particularly the criminal justice system in China. "But, in another way, it makes it easier to teach here. In theory, all students have some interest in criminal justice."

Forty percent of Jay's students come from families that earn under $12,000 a year. They are older than most college students and most of them work. About 80 percent receive some sort of financial aid.

The undergraduates are 36 percent black, 32 percent white, 28 percent Hispanic. Almost half are women.

Due to finances, about a fourth graduate in four years. With work and aid, almost three-fourths stick out 10 to 14 semesters to graduate.

Still, about 500 students get their baccalaureates each year.

The staff includes Olga Ford, a retired New York City detective. She has worked as technical adviser for TV shows. There was a reported contract out on her when she helped bring down drug kingpin Nicky Barnes.

As head of the internship program and knowing the reality of policing, she advises students: Don't take internships with private industry security men who are armed, never ride in a radio car, never visit a parolee, never walk with a cop to and from the precinct.

There's Dr. Ansley Hamid, an anthropology professor who specializes in crack-related violence and street gangs and maintains that crack is not as instantly addictive as it is being portrayed.

"The dealers are controlled users, or sometimes abstinent, and I recently met an 80-year-old grandmother, who has no previous history of alcohol or drug abuse, who is a controlled user," Hamid says.

"Crack just came on us so fast, there was no time for a body of experiential users to teach others. Now people are coming up with strategies for recreational use of crack. They might mix a little with some marijuana, for instance."

Is this a rather benign view of crack?

"Not benign," says Hamid, "just a business-as-usual view of underground economies."

"The real danger is the destruction of families and crack does the footwork. The marijuana dealer lasted a long time. Eventually he bought a small bakery or maybe a boutique in the neighborhood. With crack, the money doesn't stay here."

"The crack dealer doesn't last long. He is either arrested, killed by the competition or he becomes a crack head himself. But when he has the money, he conspicuously consumes, buying fancy imported cars and jewelry. The money doesn't go back into the community that generated it."

Over at the Criminal Justice Center, there is William McCarthy, retired New York City detective. With the code name "Mother," he was once the undercover owner of two houses of prostitution. As head of the bomb squad when he retired, he was known as "Billy Bombs."

Now working on his doctorate,

McCarthy says: "If it weren't for John Jay, I would never have gotten my bachelor's and master's degrees. Back then, it was the only place a cop could go."

In the next office sits William Loudon, also working on his doctorate. Loudon was the NYPD's chief hostage negotiator.

Psychology professor Bahns likes to tell about the FBI man in a public service administration course. The professor lectured that changes in top leadership should occur at least every 10 years.

Look Who's Talking Holds Onto Top Spot For Third Weekend

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — The comedy "Look Who's Talking" was the nation's favorite movie for the third straight weekend, making it Hollywood's biggest hit of the season.

The horror film "Shocker" and the nature drama "The Bear" opened to steady business, while actor Mark Harmon's "Worth Winning" bombed in its premiere.

"Look Who's Talking," starring John Travolta, Kirstie Alley and the voice of Bruce Willis, grossed $11.6 million last weekend. That raised its overall take to more than $45 million, more than any other movie this fall, according to figures released Monday by Entertainment Data Inc.

Director Wes Craven's "Shocker," a story about a television repairman whose execution doesn't go quite according to plan, finished second last weekend, collecting $4.5 million in ticket sales.

"The Bear," which chronicles three bears and two hunters struggling in the wilderness and broke several overseas box-office marks, opened to a $3.7 million gate in limited release.

"Next of Kin," the Patrick Swayze-Liam Neeson adventure movie, was in fourth place with $2.6 million. Next was the romantic thriller "Sea of Love," with Al Pacino and Ellen Barkin, which sold $1.84 million worth of tickets. The international cop drama "Black Rain" was sixth with $1.75 million.

In seventh was "Gross Anatomy," a look at the lives of students in their first year of medical school, with $1.74 million. "The Fabulous Baker Boys," starring Jeff Bridges and Michelle Pfeiffer, landed in eighth with $1.73 million.

In ninth was the adoption drama "Immediate Family," with James Woods and Glenn Close, opening weakly with $1.68 million. In 10th was "Worth Winning," starring Harmon in a game of sexual onepmanship. The movie collected just $1.5 million in its first three days.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Entertainment Data.

1. "Look Who's Talking," Tri-Star, $11.6 million weekend gross, 1,622 screens, $7,125 per screen, $45.4 million overall gross, three weeks in release.

2. "Shocker," Universal, $4.5 million, 1,783 screens, $2,530 per screen, $4.5 million, one week.

3. "The Bear," Tri-Star, $3.7 million, 858 screens, $4,285 per screen, $3.7 million, one week.

4. "Next of Kin," Warner Bros., $2.6 million, 1,358 screens, $1,949 per screen, $8.8 million, two weeks.

Chris Van Allsburg: A Wild Imagination

By Michael Bezdek
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Chris Van Allsburg, who recently shared in one of the largest advances ever paid for a children's book, didn't hesitate when asked to cite an important influence on his work.

"Harold and the Purple Crayon," he announced with speed and surety.

It was upon reading that Crockett Johnson book as a child in Grand Rapids, Mich., that Van Allsburg, one of America's most successful children's book authors and illustrators, set sail on his wild imaginings that have led in recent years to such works as "Jumanji," "The Wreck of the Zephyr," "The Garden of Abdul Gasazi" and "The Polar Express," which just sold its millionth copy.

His latest venture marks his first collaboration. He was paid part of an $800,000 advance to do the illustrations for Mark Helprin's "Svan Lake" (Houghton Mifflin, $19.95). Helprin and the "packager," who cut the deal also shared in the $800,000. The 80-page book was recently published.

In this derivative of the Tchaikovsky ballet, Van Allsburg tried to give his illustrations the look and flavor of a 19th century picture book to accompany the story of an ill-fated prince and princess.

Helprin's rich, although sometimes strained, style, and Van Allsburg's satiny portraits with a Far Eastern tinge largely make for a nice fit.

But most youngsters will need an adult to get them through the work, marked by passages such as "... the forest was in its own way inviolable — a domain of hearth smoke in un-screen, $5.3 million, two weeks.

8. "The Fabulous Baker Boys," 20th Century Fox, $1.73 million, 782 screens, $2,213 per screen, $9.8 million, three weeks.

9. "Immediate Family," Columbia, $1.68 million, 836 screens, $2,004 per screen, $1.68 million, one week.

wavering columns against a flawless blue sky, of mountains clad in wind-buffed ice, of the thinnest air, of rivers running white and bursting with oxygen."

Van Allsburg, an admirer of Helprin's New Yorker pieces and especially his novel "Winter's Tale," stumbled only once as he tried for the first time to put pictures to someone else's script. When he was called upon to supply a picture of the old emperor reclining on pillows on the floor, Van Allsburg kept shaping the pillows into the form of dogs.

"We talked and he said if I needed the dogs OK," Van Allsburg said. "The pillows just looked too much like dogs and I had to go with the pitch."

The scene remains slightly imperfect; the text says the emperor has a book beside him, but the illustration shows him reading it.

The hardest part for Van Allsburg began when the book was completed.

Houghton Mifflin decided on an enormous first run of 275,000 copies, including book club printings. Van Allsburg was asked to handle East Coast promotions and Helprin the West. That meant 25 days on the road.

Van Allsburg, a soft-spoken and retiring man of 40 who says one reason he teaches at the Rhode Island School of Design is to force himself out of the studio, is not particularly fond of public appearances.

But he is most engaging, and likely to be a fine salesman.

An encounter with him is like bumping into Peter Pan at the A&P and talking about the English poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge — or vice versa — and the ways of the imagination.

Beaufort Salutes Irving Berlin

A Tribute to Irving Berlin, including a sing-along, will be held at the Washington Civic Center in Washington, N.C. at 4 p.m. Sunday. Featured will be Phil Stovall and Beth Stovall, participants in the North Carolina Visiting Artist program, and Doug Cutler, pianist. The free event is being co-sponsored by the Beaufort County Community College and the Beaufort County Arts Council.

Mountains Exploding With Color

The most colorful foliage in the North Carolina mountains is now to be found at 3,000 feet and below, the Buncombe County Tourism Development Authority reports.

According to Wally Culbertson of the U.S. Forest Service, the area around Asheville has not reached 100 percent transition, but Chimney Rock Park still has most of its foliage, as do the foothills of the Northwestern N.C. mountains. The maples and beeches below 3000 feet still provide spots of color, he said.

Paula Abdul Burns Up The Charts With Newest Album

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — When Paula Abdul was a child, she dreamed of following in the footsteps of such singing and dancing legends as Gene Kelly, Fred Astaire and Judy Garland.

Today, it looks as if the diminutive 26-year-old vocalist and choreographer could be well on her way.

Abdul's debut album, "Forever Your Girl," has sold more than 2 million copies with three No. 1 singles: "Straight Up," "Forever Your Girl" and "Cold Hearted." A fourth single, "The Way You Love Me," is also burning up the charts.

To top it off, she recently won three MTV awards for her music and videos, and even more recently won an Emmy for her choreography of "The Tracey Ullman Show."

She is understandably overwhelmed.

"I feel redundant when I keep saying, 'I'm overwhelmed' or 'I'm excited,' but it's really something you can't explain," she said. "It's just an inner feeling that you have. You smile and you laugh and you think, 'I'm a real lucky girl.'"

Abdul has come a long way from her days cheerleading for the Los Angeles Lakers, considering it was an opportunity she almost missed.

She heard about the audition and went with her girlfriends, but became discouraged when she saw hundreds of Laker Girl hopefuls milling about waiting for their chance to perform.

"I drove the girls that were auditioning with me so I had to wait for them. And at the very last second, after hours, I said, 'What the heck, I'm just gonna go ahead.'"

"I was a big basketball fan," she said. "I was a huge Laker fan and we each would get two season seats. What more could you want? The Lakers were really hot."

Soon after being selected as one of the 12 cheerleaders in 1981, the choreographer left to get married. She asked a very young Abdul to take over the job.

Like everything she commits herself to, Abdul devoted herself to getting the Laker Girls noticed. She incorporated traditional cheerleading with jazzy dance steps and savvy street moves.

The fans did notice — and the offers started pouring in for Abdul to choreograph. She helped smooth out dance steps for a music video by the Jacksons and did some commercial work. Then she choreographed the videos for Janet Jackson's "What Have You Done for Me Lately?" and "When I Think of You," among others.

"I wasn't looking to become a choreographer really," Abdul said. "These were little jobs that came my way and it was something that was good money and it was fun."

Besides choreographing videos for Jackson, ZZ Top and the Pointer sisters, Abdul arranged dance steps for Aretha Franklin, Kool and the Gang and George Michael concert tours.

She also choreographed two films, "The Running Man" and "Coming to America." She became so busy she had to say goodbye to the Laker Girls.

But with the looming examples of Kelly, Garland and Astaire, Abdul still was drawn to song.

Abdul laughed as she talked recently about her break into the recording business. She said the record company executives who worked with her on music videos kept asking, "So what do you want to do when you grow up, Paula?"

She would respond: "I want to be an artist on your label."

Finally two executives took her seriously and signed her to a recording deal. "Forever Your Girl" was the result.

The album has since produced the three hits, and probably will generate a few more.

Bridge

By CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

LATE-NIGHT LUNACY

To play good bridge, you have to be alert. Strange things happen when your concentration wavers. This hand was played in the wee hours after some six hours of rubber bridge.

North's jump to six diamonds was something of a gamble, since declarer might be off two fast tricks in spades with the lead coming through the king. As the cards lay, however, all should have been well, but ...

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club with dummy's three. East happily overruffed with the four and returned a heart. West ruffed with the jack to insure a one-trick set, while at the same time creating the impression that it was East who held the last two trumps.

On the club return, a thoroughly rattled declarer took care to ruff with the ace of diamonds to prevent East overruffing with her supposed seven. That took care of the last entry to the table, so South tried to trump, and declarer was still stranded with a club loser. Down three!

It was not the most difficult hand in the world to make. Declarer needed only one simple precaution. Before going about ruffing clubs, ace of diamonds should have been cashed. That would have taken care of East's only trump, and declarer would have been able to ruff two clubs in dummy, using a spade ruff as communication. Another spade ruff provides the transportation to draw the last trumps, and a third club loser vanishes on the third heart. Declarer still surrenders a club, but that's the only defensive trick.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

Halloween

By Daniel Joffs

On Halloween the 31st
 Ghosts come out in a burst.
 They shake their rattled bones
 And sing their scary tones.
 When they come out at midnight,
 People fill with fright.

Carving a pumpkin, scaring a ghost
 Is what I like the most.
 Trick or treating, collecting candy,
 I think candy comes in very handy!
 A skeleton just glared,

Don't get scared!
 Have a Happy Halloween!

Daniel Joffs, 8, a student at Falkland Elementary School wins this week's writing contest.

A Spooky Story

By Deborah Robledo

Once upon a time on a dark Halloween night, Phillip and I went trick or treating. We walked up to an old castle.
 We knocked on the door. We heard steps. Phillip and I were scared. We wanted to run away but we couldn't move. We looked up and we saw a person in black. It was a witch. Phillip and I started to run away. The witch said,

 "Come back! I am a nice witch. We are having a party." All of her friends, the ghosts, the skeletons and the walking sticks, were having a good time eating pumpkin pie.

The Narrow Escape

By Tomeka Harrell

On Halloween night my friend and I went trick or treating. It was very cold. I looked at the sky and I saw white goblins flying in the air. I saw a full yellow moon.
 We walked past an old haunted-looking graveyard.
 We went to this old woman's house. She let us in the old house.

The door made a little squeaky sound. I saw a stew pot in her house. I told my friend that she was a witch. I was very tired and my friend was, too. So, she took us to her room. She put a rope around us. She had almost put us in the pot. We kicked her on her long nose. The old witch who let us in her old haunted house never messed with anybody again.

The Spooky House Across The Street

By Shakessta Bell

Once upon a time my mom, Linda Brown, moved across the street from an old house. Every night I would go to sleep then I would get up and look out of the window. I would see lights going off and on. So I would run to tell my mom and she would say to go back to bed. I would. The next day was Halloween. I stayed over at my new friend's house until it was time to go trick or treating. It was time to go so we went early. We went from house to house. We went to every house in our neighborhood. The last house was the old spooky house. My friend said, "Let's go there." So we went. We opened the gate and went in. We walked up the steps. We knocked and an old woman came to the door and gave us $10. She gave us a hug and we left!

Meana, The Witch

By Mary Suggs

There once was a witch called Meana. She was so mean that everyone in the town was afraid of her on Halloween. One Halloween, Meana put a spell on the children. All of a sudden, a little boy came to her house and he said he would cast a spell on her if she didn't stop it. The boy put a spell on the witch and made her a good witch and gave all the children a present on Hal-

Voting Rights

When you vote in any election or on any topic you are expressing your desire, wish or choice. Not all people in the world get to vote in who will run their government. In some nations, leaders dictate to the people who have no choices.

In the U.S.A., every person who is born in the country has the right to vote. Also people who are naturalized citizens have voting rights.
 The one major requirement to being able to vote in America is to be 18 years old.
 Also a person must register to vote. In Pitt County, you can register to vote at the Board of Elections office, at town halls, at the 5 high schools, Sheppard Library and the Bookmobile. In addition, at-large registrars can register county residents at other advertised locations.
 You must have a birth certificate, driver's license or a passport as identification in order to register.

In Pitt County, the 3-member Board of Elections oversees all election work.
 They select a supervisor who handles the business of elections. The elections office registers new voters, handles changes of address and name, trains precinct officials and calculates election statistics. Their most important duties include the making and security of ballots. Before every election, ballots must be printed, counted and kept under lock.

 After the elections are held,
 the ballots again are counted to be certain that none have been tampered with.

During the election, the Board of Elections office oversees the voting to be certain that everything is done honestly. In the last 5 years, all voting places in Pitt County have begun to use voting machines to count results.

In Pitt County today, over 45,000 people are registered to vote. In the last general election 67.4% of those who were registered actually did vote. That was in November 1988.

The next election held in Pitt County will be municipal or city elections. The regis-be electing mayors and city councilmen or aldermen to lead their communities.

 There are 16 township places

Alsations Understand The Food Of Fall

By Maureen Clancy
COPLY NEWS SERVICE

Few people on earth better understand the food of fall than the Alsations.

Tucked into a northeastern pocket of France, Alsace is separated from Germany by the Rhine River. It's bordered on the north by Belgium and Luxembourg, on the south by Switzerland. The region's food is heavily influenced by its neighbors and its climate — cold and snow-bound for about five months each year.

Alsace is the land of sauerkraut and sausages, of roasted goose, foie gras, chestnuts and chicken with morilles (wild mushrooms). It is a rural area where folks favor fricassees, beef stews, onion custard tarts and poultry stewed in one of the riesling wines for which the region is known.

Dumplings garnish many plates, as do a variety of noodles. Red cabbage shows up year-round. Turnips, parsnips, beets and other root vegetables keep meals interesting even when gardens are under a foot of snow.

Pork, often smoked or cured, is the most popular meat of the region. Such dishes as roast, stuffed suckling pig, pork shoulder with turnips and pork loin with plums and cabbage are remarkable for their balance of robust flavor and refined presentation.

Goose is popular for its oversize livers, flavorful meat and fragrant fat in which other foods can be cooked.

But not everything on the Alsatian plate is hearty and high in fat and calories. The cooks of this picturesque countryside add inimitable French finesse to the lusty but often unimaginative heaviness of German fare.

Menus in the region's upscale eateries often include delicate trout from the streams of the Vosges

Mounains; lighter-than-air quenelles made with pike fished from the Ill River; and subtle matelotes (fish stews) of freshwater fish and local riesling wines. Flammekueche, considered Alsace's answer to pizza, is a thin round of dough spread with white cheese, bits of bacon and slivers of onion.

At Chef Antoine Wesermann's Michelin-two-starred Buerehesel restaurant in Strasbourg, a nouvelle-inspired terrine of lightly smoked mackerel, fresh herbs and caviar shares the spotlight with a traditional roasted squab with cabbage and caramelized shallots.

Because pigs and geese are more important than cows and goats in Alsace, there is little locally produced cheese. Probably the best known is Muenster, which is often flavored with cumin or anise seed.

The best-known wines of the region are the rich, fruity rieslings,

Chef Says 'Gourmet' Is Simply Good Food

Titles Can't Beat Training, He Says

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Steve Dominick wants to give Greenville a taste of something he says it hasn't had — gourmet cooking.

Dominick is the executive chef at the Ramada Inn Restaurant and although he lacks formal training, he says his experience puts him at the head of his class.

"You've got to be down in the trenches to get the experience," he says. "Titles are not important. You have to be a good cook."

Dominick considers himself the only qualified chef in the area. He trained under French chefs in New Orleans and has 10 years of experience.

Now he wants to share his talents with Greenville.

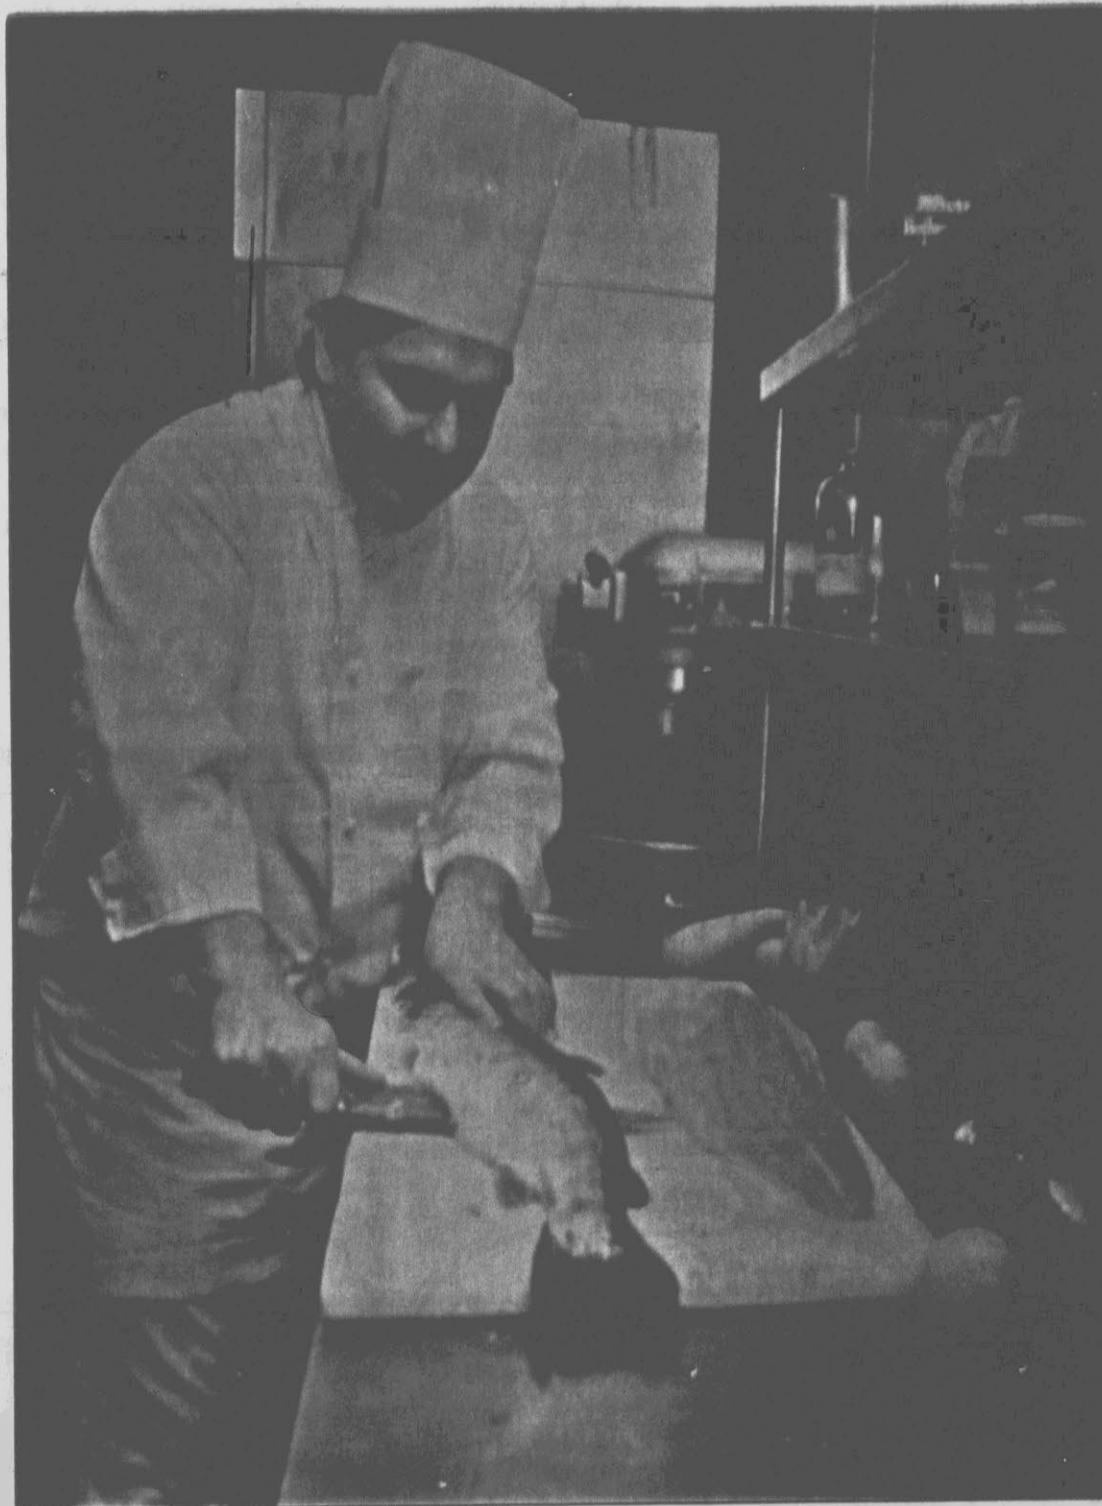

He is sure the people in Greenville want good food. "The only thing that Greenville doesn't like is the high prices," he says. "We are able to keep the price at a minimum."

He says dinner for one averages around $20-25 — not a high price to pay for quality food, he adds. His main concern now is building a clientele. The restaurant serves about 50 people each night and 150-200 for lunch.

"We don't make a penny on lunch," he says. The restaurant uses the time as a way to get people to come in. "If they like lunch maybe they'll come back for dinner."

He says the key to attracting a market in Greenville is to give people a comfortable place to eat good food. He describes the restaurant as a bistro-type place. "The food is elegant but the atmosphere is casual," he says. "It's not too fancy that people aren't going to be attracted to it."

It's not easy becoming a good chef, Dominick says. He washed

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Steve Dominick received 10 years of training with New Orleans chefs dishes at Darryl's for his first restaurant job. From there he moved to New Orleans where he became serious about cooking.

He started washing dishes in New Orleans and moved up to an apprentice. His apprenticeship lasted two to three years and led to the concentration on his interest, soups and sauces.

"You can't be a jack of all trades in a kitchen," he says.

After refining his interest Dominick became a sous chef, or an assistant to the executive chef. From there he simply had to wait for an opportunity.

"You need 10 years before you can even think about becoming an executive chef," he says.

One segment of his training didn't sit well with Dominick. "You are forced to eat things that you never thought you would eat," he says. The first time Dominick tried calf brains he thought they were awful. He said the second time he thought they were OK, and the third time, pretty good.

"You have to keep your mind open," he says.

He says sauces and presentation separate gourmet foods from all the others. "Food has to be appealing. It can't be slopped onto the plate."

A chef has to constantly look for ways to improve, he says. "Everybody's good. You have to be excellent to stand out in the cooking industry."

Dominick admits that anyone can claim to be a chef. "I've seen chefs in New Orleans that couldn't cook their way out of a wet paper bag." But if you can't cook that will soon be found out, he says.

Dominick says some chefs are just for show. "Cooking sometimes gets lost in the shuffle," he says.

Dominick doesn't take full credit for the apparent increasing popularity of the restaurant. "I have a big crew of hardworking people," he says. "They are the backbone."

He anticipates a promising future for the Ramada Inn Restaurant.

"I can picture this restaurant full of happy diners — the best restaurant in town," he says.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q: Kathy, thanks for already sharing some information about our Fall Into Good Health With North Carolina Cabbage campaign.

I thought you might like to share a recipe that is not in the brochure. I worked on a cabbage-turkey roll recipe that reminds me of some of the Polish food you used to talk about and tempt me to try.

At first we didn't include the cabbage-turkey roll because we thought it was too much work. But, I have played with the recipe and find it doesn't take too much work or time and it is my favorite recipe. Thanks, Carolyn Lackey, Food and Nutrition Extension Specialist, N.C. State University, Raleigh.

A: One of the best Polish cooks I know is Carolyn Lackey. That's pretty strange since Carolyn is from Fallston and of Anglo-Saxon heritage. We were in school together at the Big Orange, University of Tennessee, Knoxville where we began to learn about each other's food cultural traditions.

She taught me lots about Southern cuisine and I introduced her to Yankee foods, especially eastern European delicacies. She, like my Irish husband Patrick, still doesn't enjoy some of my favorites like kiska (A barley and ground liver sausage) or duck-fruit soup but there are some foods they have learned to enjoy.

Early in my career I was asked to write a chapter on food habits and their relationship to cancer for a book called "Anthropology of Health." I was inspired by Carolyn and our Michigan-North Carolina cooking and food friendship to call the chapter "I won't cook turnip greens if you won't cook kielbasa."

Can you guess that in spite of encouraging y'all to eat dark greens for their nutritional value, I am still not a great fan of them. The book chapter is about the American food habit melting pot. Some foods that may be accepted and loved by folks of one ethnic group, but seem to make others lose their appetites, are often lost from our culture. We are anxious to hear stories from Brenda Spencer's (our head nurse at Family Practice Center) daughter who will be moving to Michigan. We are helping Brenda learn about the different food practices in northern Michigan. For example, folks eat pastries in the winter—a pastry (pie-like) filled with meat and turnips and other cold winter vegetables. I don't expect pastries or many other ethnic foods to become widespread in the American food habit. But, of course, some ethnic foods do become accepted. How many of you grew up eating pizza or tacos?

Well, back to the story of Slavic

Foods. Some food companies make it easy for us to try ethnic foods. For example, Mrs. Pauls distributes pierogis nationwide (pierogis are Polish dumplings or pasta filled with potatoes or farmers cheese or ground meat or sauerkraut or fruit).

Also, there are folks like Carolyn Lackey who try new recipes and foods, experiment with them and then introduce them to their friends.

That's how, with the exception of my mom, Carolyn has become the best pierogi maker I know. Patrick enjoys these and the nalesniki (Blinzes or crepes) and potato pancakes we make as a side dish, although we think of them as entrees. I trust Carolyn's judgment on new recipes and so her recipe for cabbage turkey rolls that follows has to be a winner. The cabbage rolls she refers to in her letter are called golabki in Polish. Traditionally, they are made from ground beef and/or ground pork and veal. They are served with a mushroom sauce, tomato sauce or sour cream. Like spaghetti, they are best the day after they are made so the flavors have time to blend. Using turkey in Carolyn's recipe lowers fat content. Remember, that cabbage itself is low in calories (8 calories for 1/2 cup serving), and has no fat, and is low in sodium. So this recipe is a heart health recipe. There is another version of the cabbage roll recipe in a cookbook that I have mentioned before, "Living Lean and Loving It." Several of my patients have said this is an excellent recipe and worth the effort. Here is Carolyn's recipe:

CABBAGE-TURKEY ROLLS

- 12 large cabbage leaves
- 1 cup cooked rice
- 1/2 cup unsweetened applesauce
- 2 tbsp. chopped dates
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 cup chicken broth
- 1 lb. ground turkey
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1/2 tsp. poultry seasoning
- 1/4 tsp. pepper

Cook cabbage leaves in water until wilted (about 6 minutes). Drain. Combine turkey rice, onion, applesauce, eggs, dates and seasonings. Divide the mixture among the 12 cabbage leaves (about 1/2 cup portions). Roll up leaf from the stem end, folding edges of leaf inward. Place seam side down in a 9-by-13-inch baking dish which has been coated with a nonstick spray. Pour broth over the rolls. Cover the dish with foil. Bake at 325° for 1 to 1 1/4 hours. Serves 6. Reach For Herbs To Spice Up Those Ordinary Menus

By Linda Lowe Morris
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Contemplate the old-style, all-American way with fish: the fried fish patty, the fish stick, the floured and deep-fried fish fillet.

Then switch your imagination to the souks of Casablanca where vendors take fish fillets that have been marinating in chermoula — a redolent paste of cilantro, parsley, garlic, cumin paprika and lemon — fry them quickly and serve them hot and steamy.

Travel to Provence, in southern France, where fish is grilled over a bed of fennel leaves. Or to an English country inn where sea trout is served in a sauce of sorrel and wild mushrooms.

The difference is in the herbs, and it's a difference that American cooks are rapidly catching on to.

"People always used to think of using just a few herbs, like dill, with fish, but the way people think about cooking with herbs now has really loosened up a lot," says Emelie Tolley, author of "Cooking with Herbs" (Clarkson N. Potter; hardcover; $40).

"I like to compare it to the way we think about wine. Ten years ago people said, 'Oh, fish — white wine; red meat — red wine.' And now people are comfortable enough that if they feel like having a light red wine with fish, they will. And it's just as true with herbs. It's really just a matter of relying on your own sense of taste."

As we've discovered cooking with herbs, few of our dishes have benefited as greatly as fish. The flavor of fish, subtle and vaguely sweet, comes alive for us with just a sprinkling of fresh herbs and a touch of garlic.

"Fish basically has a fairly mild flavor that can really benefit from the zest of herbs," Ms. Tolley said in a recent telephone interview. "And fish, of course, has a natural affinity to lemon and there are so many lemon-flavored herbs that are really perfect with it, like lemon thyme and lemon balm and lemon grass."

Ms. Tolley is a writer and editor who has worked in publishing, advertising and fashion. In her spare time, she indulges her love of cooking and growing herbs. For six years, she produced an herbal newsletter, Living With Herbs.

Because of her expertise in herbs, she was asked to write a book and the result was the best-selling "Herbs: Gardens, Decorations and Recipes," written in collaboration with photographer Chris Mead.

In writing that book, which was intended as an introduction to the whole realm of herbs, Ms. Tolley and Mead found that the real herbal adventures were taking place in the kitchen.

"We discovered that many cooks planted their first herb garden in order to have their favorite herbs at hand, while gardeners were learning to use herbs in the kitchen. Experienced chefs and novices alike seemed interested in cooking with herbs and were searching for new herbal recipes," she explains.

For Centuries, People Have Counted On Soup

By Mary MacVean
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In times of famine, a watery broth with a few vegetables held off death. In mansion dining rooms, a perfectly clear consommé shows the epitome of elegance. For centuries, people have counted on soup.

"People like soup because it not only tastes good but they feel that they are doing something good for themselves," said Lee Bailey, author of the cookbook "Soup Meals." "It gives you all the feelings of security that we seem to need more as time goes by."

Although soups are made year-round, harvests seem to bring them more to mind. The vegetables available enable the home cook to try all sorts of combinations.

"Cabbage and broccoli are very strong. You have to be careful when you use them with other things. They combine well with potatoes, but they can overwhelm other things," Bailey said. "You can otherwise combine anything that suits your fancy."

Soups have several advantages. In most kitchens, an inventive cook can find ingredients for a serviceable soup. Soup can be made ahead. And most soups can be frozen.

If using canned stock, taste the soup before adding salt. The flavor of canned stock can be substantially improved by letting it simmer for a half hour or so with chopped carrots, onions and celery before it is used.

For cream soups, pureed vegetables or rice can substitute for cream.

Here are some recipes from Lee Bailey's "Soup Meals" (Clarkson N. Potter Inc., 1989, $19.95):

TURKEY AND VEGETABLE SOUP

- 2 tbsps. safflower oil
- 1 raw turkey breast carcass with meat on bones, chopped roughly into 4 or 5 pieces
- 7 cups chicken stock
- 4 cups water
- 1/2 large red onion, peeled and thinly sliced
- 2 cups fresh green beans, pureed to the consistency of relish
- 1 1/2 lbs. potatoes, peeled and cubed
- 4 large sprigs parsley, chopped
- 1/2 tsp. black pepper
- 1 10-oz. package frozen peas

In the safflower oil, carefully and thoroughly brown the turkey carcass parts and any bits of leftover meat. This may take about five minutes or more. Add stock and water. Bring to a simmer and continue to cook about 40 minutes, skimming occasionally. Remove the bones and meat and let them cool. Remove meat from bones and chop coarsely. Discard bones.

Add onion and green bean puree to the liquid and simmer over very low heat. Add potatoes and set timer for five minutes. Add parsley and pepper. (The pepper is very important here, so don't be shy about the amount.) Add reserved turkey meat and simmer just long enough to finish cooking the potatoes. Add peas and continue cooking for just a minute or so to heat them through. Yield: 8 servings.

SAUSAGE AND WHITE BEAN SOUP

- 2 cups dried white (navy) beans
- 8 cups chicken stock
- 1 large bay leaf
- 1/4 tsp. dried thyme
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1 1/2 cups coarsely chopped onions
- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped celery
- 2 cups carrots, peeled and cut crosswise
- 1/4 large green bell pepper, coarsely chopped
- 12 links pork sausage, or any other sausage (1 to 1 1/4 lbs.)
- 2 large garlic cloves, minced
- 1/4 cup dry red wine

Pick over beans and soak overnight. Drain and place beans, stock, bay leaf and thyme in a large pot. Bring to a simmer and continue to cook, skimming as necessary, until beans begin to get tender and fall apart, 1 1/2 to two hours. Add two more cups of stock, or to taste, if soup has reduced too much at the end of the cooking time.

Meanwhile, place olive oil in a large skillet and saute all the vegetables except the garlic until they start to brown. Scrape into a food processor and puree. Reserve this puree and add to the beans for the last 30 minutes of their cooking time.

Place sausages in a cold skillet and cook over high heat for six minutes, turning often. Pour off the fat. Add the garlic and red wine. Simmer, covered, for 15 minutes. Cut the sausages crosswise and add to the soup. Degrease the pan with a few tablespoons of water or stock, then add to soup. Yield: 6-8 servings.

Picturesque Town Is The Birthplace Of Pretzel Industry

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LITITZ, Pa. — This picturesque historic Lancaster county town dotted with pre-Revolutionary war homes, stores, churches and inns is the birthplace of America's pretzel industry.

The original pretzel factory is still operating. It costs $1 to visit. The ticket to get in is a pretzel.

Julius Sturgis established the first pretzel bakery in the United States in 1861. It has been in the same family every since. The Sturgis Pretzel House is a quaint stone home and connecting bakery erected in 1774.

"For the first 87 years the huge brick ovens were used to bake bread. Then in 1861, Julius Sturgis, a cousin — we have a common grandfather going way back — began the first pretzel bakery in this country. He used the brick ovens built by my great-great-grandfather," said Clyde Tshudy, 51, present owner of the pretzel company.

"We're still using the gas-fired 215-year-old brick and clay ovens to bake soft pretzels."

The Sturgis Pretzel House makes a variety of pretzels, salted and unsalted (called baldys), pretzels shaped like Amish horse and buggies, tiny pretzels the size of a quarter, giant-size pretzels, cheese pretzels, oat bran and whole wheat pretzels, left-handed pretzels and many others.

"People have been going nuts lately for oat bran pretzels. We can't make enough of them. Oat bran pretzels are a health kick fad," Tshudy said.

Tshudy, his wife, Barbara, son, Michael, daughter-in-law, Holly and a dozen others work part-time and full-time at the pretzel factory, a medium-size pretzel operation producing 5 tons of the snacks a day.

Last year's sales totaled $650,000, the biggest in the company's 128-year history, Tshudy said. Ten percent of the production was mail order and retail sales on the premises. The rest were wholesaled to stores and other outlets as far away as Miami.

The pretzel industry also recorded an all time high in sales last year — $430 million — according to Jane Wuerthner, spokeswoman for the Snack Food Association, headquartered in Alexandria, Va. That does not count sales by the plethora of mom and pop pretzel makers around the country.

LAT-WP News Service

Brian Whalen pulls a batch of soft pretzels from the oven

Pretzel producers have their own industry organization for nearly a century, the National Pretzel Bakers, based in nearby Lancaster, Pa., until it merged with Snack Food Association two years ago. Michael Tshudy was the last president of National Pretzel Bakers. All the records of the National Pretzel Bakers are now preserved in the Sturgis Pretzel House.

The twisted design of the pretzel with three holes in the middle dates back to a monastery in Southern France in 1610. It represents the custom of that era, arms folded in prayer. Business cards of members of the Tshudy family are in the design of a pretzel with three holes in the middle.

All pretzels were twisted by hand at the Sturgis Pretzel House until the early 1950s. The company then employed 30 twisters — men and women who hand twisted each pretzel — plus four bakers and four cookers, turning out 3,000 pounds of pretzels a day.

Transform Everyday To Spectacular By Cooking With Herbs

So, once they had finished the first book, they set out again to focus just on the cooking. In the process they traveled back and forth across the United States and to England, France, Spain, Italy and Morocco.

"The whole thing of cooking had changed," she says, "because people really started using herbs in a much more generous way in a recipe. Herbs became an ingredient rather than just sort of a very minor background flavoring."

One of her favorite herbs for fish is sorrel. "It has a lemony flavor, slightly bitter but very lemony. The leaves just melt when you put them in butter. If you chop them up and saute them in butter and add a little onion or something, it just becomes a very tart lemony sauce for the fish. You can add cream to it and make it a milder, creamier sauce if you prefer."

Thyme, she says, is another favorite and she has found that it's wonderful with tuna. "It gives tuna fish salad a wonderful zestiness but it also is great just on grilled tuna."

Thyme, like rosemary, is a strong herb, so you have to be careful not to use too much of it, she says.

While traveling to do research for the book, Ms. Tolley and Mead found some unusual recipes for fish with herbs.

In California, they found a chef who was serving salmon with lavender sauce. "Lavender is something we haven't used in the kitchen very much yet. But in the south of France they use it all the time. In that mix called herbes de Provence, which is so good for grilling meats, in many of them there's lavender — which is something most people don't realize. But now people are beginning to investigate how you can use lavender in the kitchen."

In England, a chef developed a recipe for a braised fish with lovage. Lovage, she explains, has "a strong celerylike flavor" and should be used very sparingly. But this English chef has developed a way to tame that flavor. He blanches strongly flavored herbs like lovage by placing them in boiling water for about 1 minute, then quickly refreshes them with cold water and adds them to the dish.

Ms. Tolley discovered fish grilled with fennel in France and tried the recipe at her weekend house in eastern Long Island where she has an extensive herb garden. "I did that at the beach house because I grow fennel," she says. "You cut the green part and just put it around the fish before you grill it so that the flavor permeates the fish as it's cooking."

A fellow Long Island resident, caterer Anna Pump, shared a recipe with her for bluefish salad. "Bluefish is a very strong fish and a lot of people don't particularly like it and I'm not mad for it either. But that bluefish salad is delicious. Even someone who doesn't particularly like bluefish will like that salad."

The salad includes chopped celery and onion, fresh dill, capers, vinegar and mayonnaise along with poached bluefish flakes.

"I don't know whether it's the dill or what, but something cuts the oiliness of that fish and it really is superb," Ms. Tolley says. She also likes strong spices such as cumin with bluefish.

Here are some recipes from "Cooking With Herbs:"

RED SNAPPER WITH LEEKS AND CHIVES

- 1 qt. red Burgundy wine
- 6 shallots, finely chopped
- 1 tbsp. red wine vinegar
- 6 tbsps. (3/4 stick) unsalted butter, at room temperature
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- 2 red snapper fillets, 8 oz. each
- 3 leeks (white part only), julienned

- 2 tbsps. chopped fresh chives
- 2 chive blossoms, for garnish

In a non-corrosive saucepan, combine the wine, shallots and vinegar. Reduce over high heat until only 1/4 cup remains. Remove from heat; add butter, a small piece at a time, swirling the pan to combine. Do not stir. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Keep warm while fish cooks.

Season the fillets with salt and pepper. Place the fish in a steamer with the julienned leeks; cook just until the fish turns opaque, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place a cooked fillet on each plate and arrange the leeks on top, mounding them into a nice pile. Spoon half the Burgundy butter around each fillet and sprinkle generously with chives. Garnish with a chive blossom, if desired. Serves two.

BLUEFISH SALAD

- 3 qts. non-beef bouillon or fish stock
- 8 lbs. very fresh bluefish fillets
- 1 large onion, coarsely chopped
- 4 celery stalks, coarsely chopped
- 1 bunch fresh dill, chopped
- 1/2 cup drained capers
- 1/2 cup distilled white vinegar
- 1 tsp. salt
- 2 tps. black pepper
- 1 3/4 cups mayonnaise

Place the court bouillon or fish stock in a large pot over medium heat. Bring to a boil, then reduce the heat, add the fillets and simmer gently for about 8 minutes. The fish should be cooked through but still firm. Allow the fish to cool slightly, then remove and discard the skin and dark center meat. Chill the fillets several hours or overnight.

When the fillets are cool, remove any bones and place the fish in a bowl. Add the onion, celery, dill, capers, vinegar, salt, pepper and mayonnaise.

POACHED SALMON WITH DILL AND MUSTARD SAUCE

- Poaching Liquid:
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
 - 2 slices lemon

- 1/2 tsp. peppercorns
- 1 sprig fresh dill
- 1 tsp. salt
- 6 salmon steaks, 8 oz. each

Dill And Mustard Sauce:

- 2 tbsps. (1/4 stick) butter
- 2 tbsps. all-purpose flour
- 2 cups half-and-half
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 2 tbsps. white wine vinegar
- 1 tsp. dry mustard
- Salt and pepper
- 1 egg yolk
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh dill
- Fresh dill for garnish

Place the ingredients for the poaching liquid in a large pot with 2 quarts of water. Bring to a boil over high heat, then reduce the heat to low and simmer for 15 minutes. Add the salmon steaks to the barely simmering liquid and poach for 5 to 8 minutes, or until they turn opaque and are firm to the touch. Remove from the liquid and keep warm.

To make the sauce, melt the butter in a saucepan over low heat. Stir in the flour with a whisk and cook, stirring occasionally, for 2 to 3 minutes. Gradually stir in the half-and-half and whisk until it is thick, about 5 minutes. Add the sugar, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper to taste and remove from the heat.

Place the egg yolk in a medium bowl and beat lightly. Stir a little of the hot sauce into the yolk, then pour in the remaining sauce, stirring with the whisk. Mix in the chopped dill. Serve the sauce over the salmon steaks or in a separate bowl. Garnish with fresh dill. Serves six.

MOROCCAN FISH WITH CHERMOULA

Marinade (Chermoula):

- 1 cup fresh cilantro leaves
- 1 cup fresh parsley
- 12 garlic cloves
- 1 tsp. salt
- Juice of about 2 lemons, or 6 to 8 tbsps. vinegar
- 2 to 3 tbsps. peanut oil
- 1 tsp. paprika
- 1 tsp. ground cumin
- Pinch of cayenne pepper

Fish:
3 lbs. fish fillets (hake, sea bass, snapper, shad, etc.)

Flour for dredging
Vegetable oil for frying

Place the cilantro, parsley, garlic, salt, lemon juice or vinegar, and oil in the bowl of a food processor or blender and puree. Stir in the paprika, cumin and cayenne. Cut the fillets into 3-inch pieces and arrange them in a single layer in a shallow pan. Pour the chermoula over the fish and marinate for several hours.

Drain the fish and dredge lightly in flour. Heat the vegetable oil to 375 degrees in a deep-fryer or a deep skillet. When the oil is the proper temperature, cook the fish pieces a few at a time until they are golden, about 6 to 8 minutes. Serves six.

Travel The Land Of Sauerkraut For A Traditional Fall Feast

clean, fresh muscats and spicy gewurztraminers. Though the people of Alsace have fought hard and often to be French citizens instead of German subjects, they are closely linked with their Teutonic neighbors through food and culture. That bond is especially noticeable at dessert time, when Alsations dig into fruit-studded custard tarts, buttery coffee cakes, towering kugelhopfs, sugar-dusted dumplings and spicy gingerbread — all recipes that traveled across the Rhine.

Choucroute Garnie, also known as choucroute a l'Alsacienne, translates as garnished sauerkraut and is the region's best-known export. The heaping mound of steaming sauerkraut dotted with juniper berries and trimmed with multihued sausages, ham, boiled potatoes and occasionally dumplings, is the perfect choice for special fall and winter feasts.

(Sauerkraut consists of finely shredded cabbage that is layered in a barrel with salt, caraway seeds and water, then weighted and allowed to ripen for several weeks in a cool cellar.

Though commercially prepared sauerkraut has a high salt content, it can be rinsed before being used in a recipe or soaked and squeezed of its brine and simmered with unsalted chicken broth, a bit of white wine and flavorings.

The finely shredded pickled cabbage can be bought fresh, in bulk, at some supermarkets. It can then be slowly cooked with consomme, bits of meat, garlic, peppercorns, juniper berries or caraway seeds, and garnished to taste.

There is no single recipe for choucroute. Each town of Germany, Austria and Alsace is likely to have its own version of the sauerkraut extravaganza.

In Strasbourg, the dish is often topped with smoked pork or goose and sausages such as knackwurst or frankfurters, then served with a puree of yellow peas.

Here are some classic recipes to introduce you to Alsatian cuisine.

CHOUCRROUTE GARNIE

- 2 (1-lb.) packets of sauerkraut, rinsed
- 4 lbs. pork neck bones
- 2 onions, chopped
- 2 cups chopped carrots
- 2 celery stalks, coarsely chopped
- 4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- Bouquet garni (thyme, parsley and bay leaf tied in cheesecloth)
- 1 hard green cooking apple
- 2 tsps. poppy seeds
- 2 crushed juniper berries (or 1/2 cup gin)
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 cup chicken stock
- 2 cups V-8 juice
- Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350°. Arrange all ingredients in large, heavy casserole in layers, in order given, except for bouquet garni, which should be dropped in midway. Season layers with salt and pepper as you go. Cover, place casserole in oven and bake for 3 hours. Check frequently to make sure juices have not evaporated; add more stock if necessary. Be sure to remove bouquet garni when finished.

Serve with hot sausages and buttered boiled potatoes. Yields 8 to 10 servings.

FLAMMEKUECHE

(A thin-crust cream, onion and bacon tart)

- 1 medium onion, sliced into thin rounds
- 1/2 cup cottage cheese or ricotta, whipped in blender
- 1/2 cup creme fraiche or sour cream
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 8 oz. basic bread dough
- 6 oz. slab bacon or side pork, rind removed, cut into matchstick-size pieces

Preheat oven to 450°. Combine onions, cheese, creme fraiche, salt and pepper and let sit about 15 minutes to soften onions. Roll dough on lightly floured surface into 10 1/2 inch circle and place on round baking sheet. Spread onion mixture over dough right to edge. Sprinkle bacon evenly over top, then sprinkle generously with pepper. Bake just until dough is crisp, 15 to 20 minutes. Serve immediately. Yields 1 10 1/2-inch tart.

ROAST PORK WITH PLUMS AND CABBAGES

- 2 lbs. rolled pork roast
- 3 tbsps. butter
- Salt and pepper
- A few leaves of sage
- 2 lbs. purple plums
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 lbs. potatoes
- 1 head of cabbage, cored and cut into 4 to 6 wedges
- 3 tbsps. lard or oil
- 1 cup broth or water

Set oven moderately hot (375°). Spread pork with butter and sprinkle with salt, pepper and sage. Put it in roasting pan and roast for 1 1/2 hours or until tender and juices run clear when meat is pierced with skewer;

baste meat frequently during cooking. While pork is roasting, prepare fruit and vegetables. Put plums in a pot with sugar and enough water to cover by half; simmer for 5 to 10 minutes or until just tender. Remove plums and boil liquid for 5 minutes or until a light syrup is formed. Replace plums in syrup and keep them warm.

Put potatoes in cold, salted water and boil for 15 minutes or until almost tender. Drain, refresh with cold water and drain thoroughly. Heat lard in a large pot and add potatoes, cabbage, salt and pepper. Cover and cook over a low fire for 15 to 20 minutes until slightly brown.

When meat is tender, carve in thick slices, arrange on serving platter with potatoes and cabbage and keep warm. Discard fat from roasting pan, add broth and stir to dissolve pan juices. Boil briefly until concentrated; taste for seasoning. Strain gravy over roast and serve.

Serve stewed plums in syrup in separate bowl alongside meat.

CHICKEN WITH BEER

- 1 1/2- to 4 1/2-lb. chicken
- 2 tbsps. oil
- 2 tbsps. butter
- 2 shallots, chopped
- 1/2 cup gin
- 2 tbsps. flour
- 1 cup dark beer
- 1/2 lb. mushrooms, halved if large

Bouquet garni
Salt and pepper
1/2 cup heavy cream or creme fraiche
1 tbsp. chopped parsley

Cut chicken into 8 pieces. Heat oil and butter in heavy, shallow casserole. Add chicken pieces and brown well. Lower heat, add shallots and cook 2 minutes until soft. Flame with gin. Sprinkle chicken pieces with flour; turn them over and cook

1 minute. Add beer, mushrooms, bouquet garni, salt and pepper. Bring to boil, cover and simmer 45 minutes until chicken is tender. Discard bouquet garni, skim off excess fat and add cream. Bring to boil and taste for seasoning. Serve chicken in casserole, sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Nutty Whole-Grain Flavor Of Loaves Goes Well With Soups, Stews, Salads

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Low-fat foods don't come much leaner or fuller in flavor than these little whole-wheat loaves that are virtually fat- and cholesterol-free. The nutty, whole grain flavor goes great with soups, stews and salads. Wrap and freeze unused baguettes the same day you bake. Store up to 8 months.

FAT-FREE BAGUETTES

- 2½ to 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 2 pkgs. active dry yeast
- 1 tbsp. sugar
- 1½ tps. salt
- 2 cups warm water (120° to 130°)
- 2 cups whole-wheat flour

- 1 slightly beaten egg white
- 1 tbsp. water

In a large mixer bowl stir together 2 cups of the all-purpose flour, the yeast, sugar and salt. Add warm water. Beat with an electric mixer at low speed for ½ minute, scraping sides of bowl constantly. Beat 3 minutes at high speed. Using a spoon, stir in the whole-wheat flour and as much of the remaining all-purpose flour as you can.

Turn out onto a lightly floured surface. Knead in enough of the remaining all-purpose flour to make a stiff dough that is smooth and elastic (8 to 10 minutes). Shape into a ball. Place in a lightly greased bowl; turn once to grease surface. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double (1 to 1½ hours).

Punch dough down; turn out onto a lightly floured surface. Divide dough in thirds. Cover; let rest 10 minutes. Roll each third into a 12-by-10-inch rectangle. Roll up tightly from long side; seal well. Taper ends. Place, seam side down, on a greased baking sheet. Brush with mixture of egg white and water.

Cover and let rise until nearly double (30 to 45 minutes). With a sharp knife, make three diagonal cuts about ¼-inch deep across tops of loaves. Bake in a 450° oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until done. Serve same day or freeze. Makes 3 loaves, 24 servings.

Stuff Pork For Elegant Entree

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

The tenderloin is the leanest pork cut; start with it for this elegant stuffed entree. Each serving contains only 5 grams of fat out of the 67 that's the recommended maximum for most of us. Tenderloin costs more per pound than some cuts, but there's no waste and you can plan on 6 servings from a pound.

PORK PINWHEELS WITH APRICOT STUFFING

- One 1-lb. pork tenderloin
- 1¼ tsp. instant chicken bouillon granules
- ¾ cup hot water
- ½ cup snipped dried apricots
- 2 tbsps. chopped onion
- 2 tbsps. chopped celery
- 1 tbsp. margarine or butter
- ¼ tsp. ground cinnamon

- Dash pepper
- 2 cups whole-wheat bread cubes
- 1½ tps. cornstarch
- Dash ground nutmeg
- 1 cup apricot nectar

Split tenderloin lengthwise, cutting to, but not through, opposite side; open out flat. Pound tenderloin lightly with meat mallet to a 10-by-6-inch rectangle.

For filling, dissolve bouillon granules in hot water; pour over apricots. Let stand 5 minutes. In a small skillet cook onion and celery in margarine until tender but not brown. Remove from heat; stir in cinnamon and pepper. In a large mixing bowl combine bread cubes, onion mixture and apricot mixture; toss lightly to moisten.

Spread filling evenly over tenderloin. Roll up jelly-roll style, starting from short side. Secure meat roll with wooden toothpicks or tie with string at 1-inch intervals beginning ½ inch from end. Cut meat roll into six 1-inch slices.

Place meat slices on rack of unheated broiler pan, cut side down. Broil 4 inches from heat 12 minutes. Turn; broil 11 to 13 minutes more or until done. Remove toothpicks or string; transfer meat to a serving platter.

Meanwhile, for sauce, combine cornstarch and nutmeg. Stir in apricot nectar. Cook and stir until mixture is bubbly. Cook and stir 2 minutes more. Serve with meat slices. Makes 6 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 198 cal., 19 g pro., 19 g carb., 5 g fat (23 percent of calories from fat), 56 mg chol., 207 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 23 percent vit. A, 27 percent vit. C, 40 percent thiamine, 16 percent riboflavin, 18 percent niacin, 11 percent iron.

Lil' Red® Low Ash Tuna

Why choose Low Ash Tuna? Because many veterinarians believe that a low ash content food helps prevent Feline Urological Syndrome (FUS). FUS is caused by an abnormally high concentration of magnesium and other minerals in cat food. Lil' Red Low Ash Tuna is specially formulated to provide reduced magnesium levels while maintaining 100% of your cat or kitten's daily nutritional requirements.
