Eveready Confirms Plant Closing Greenville Battery Facility To End Operations In About A Year

By Frances Horton Arrington
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Ralston Purina announced Wednesday that the company will shut down operations at Eveready Battery Co. Inc. in Greenville in about a year, forcing 225 employees at the local plant out of work.

The Greenville facility, which manufactures batteries, will be phased out over the next 11 to 14 months, according to Patrick Farrell, manager of corporate information for Ralston Purina in St. Louis, owners of Eveready.

Farrell said in a telephone interview the company will offer jobs to the remaining 45 of the 270 employees at the Greenville Boulevard facility. Those jobs would be mostly white collar and would require workers to relocate to plants across the country, he said.

Officials of the local plant informed employees of the closing Wednesday afternoon.

"This was a very difficult and sad decision for the people at Eveready to make. Greenville has been in our system a long time," Farrell said of the plant closing. "The overall health of the company is what's at stake here. We're being forced to make a difficult decision, for the good of the entire corporation."

Farrell said a shift in consumer demand for alkaline batteries over carbon zinc batteries prompted the company to close the local plant, which produces mostly AA carbon zinc batteries.

"Consumers are shifting to alkaline batteries. That is a fact. That's what's taking place out there," he said. "Companies such as ours that have been making both products have to make changes to reflect that demand."

"We have one too many plants operating and unfortunately the Greenville plant was chosen as the one to close."

Eveready workers, left to right, Stuart Beamon, Billy West, Felix Whitehurst and Steve Williams gather in the plant's parking lot Wednesday after it was announced the plant will close in about a year. Ralston Purina, owner of Eveready, blamed shifting consumer demands for the decision to close.

Stuart Beamon leaned back against the green and white pickup truck, propping his arms and feet on it as though he needed it for support.

He and three friends, all employees of Eveready Battery Co. Inc. of Greenville, gathered around the truck to talk Wednesday afternoon just after hearing that their jobs would be gone within the next year.

Collectively, Beamon, Billy West, Felix Whitehurst and Steve Williams have given 78 years of service to the local company.

Toddler Jessica McClure clowns with Bush's glasses

Jessica Steals Show From Bush

WASHINGTON — Jessica McClure, the toddler pulled from an abandoned well two years ago as the nation watched rescuers struggle for 58 hours, is now 3 years old and capable of stealing the spotlight from even President Bush.

Bush scooped the Midland, Texas, girl into his arms Wednesday during a White House ceremony honoring Sioux City, Iowa, for its response to the crash of a United Airlines jumbo jet last July 19.

Jessica grabbed Bush's glasses off his face and faced the clicking cameras with them balanced on her nose.

Even as he walked into the Roosevelt Room to present the Midland Community Spirit Award to Sioux City, Jessica did not appear impressed.

"Who's that, mama?" asked the blue-eyed girl in a red corduroy smock with Winnie the Pooh on the front, tossing her ponytail.

Later, as she returned his glasses to Bush's breast pocket, Jessica discovered the president's white handkerchief.

"This may make that — what do you call it? — the blooper of the week," said the president after Jessica tried to drape the handkerchief over his head and dabbed his nose.

"I'm sorry about that. You can go to your mother," he said, laughing and handing the wriggling girl to her mother, 20-year-old Reba "Cissy" McClure.

After paying tribute to Sioux City as an example of his "thousand points of lights" volunteerism, Bush said, "Thank you all and as for you, Jessica, where's my handkerchief?"

And as the audience howled, Bush asked: "How old are you now?" She held up three fingers.

"C'mon Jessica. You want to see where I work?" Bush said, and the two, with her parents trailing behind, bounded off to the Oval Office.

Mrs. McClure said the Oct. 16, 1987 rescue of her daughter, who was 18 months old at the time, was similar to the rescue of passengers trapped inside Flight 232.

"Everybody pulled together to save the people," she said. "There were people trapped in that plane and couldn't get out — mothers and fathers and children and they couldn't find them. And that's exactly how I felt — I was running through the back yard looking for my child and I couldn't find her."

Carter Promises Police Probe

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The two candidates for Greenville mayor faced off against East Carolina University students who turned a scheduled debate Wednesday into an opportunity to air their grievances against the city.

The students grilled incumbent Mayor Edward E. Carter and challenger Nancy Jenkins, a City Council member, about the city's handling of Halloween celebrations and a recent change to the city's noise ordinance that may mean the end for loud outdoor parties and concerts in Greenville.

Many of the students attending the debate were among those arrested Tuesday after police broke up a large gathering at the Tar River Estates apartment complex. Some students said police overreacted to the party and blamed the trouble on the city's decision this year to cancel the annual Halloween celebration downtown.

"The situation at the Tar River Estates was a very unfortunate situation," Carter said.

He promised to investigate complaints of mistreatment by police. "In the event that you actually were mistreated, I certainly am supportive of an investigation and I certainly am supportive of corrective action," he said.

But Carter also defended the decision to cancel the Halloween celebration, saying that it had gotten out of hand in recent years.

Ms. Jenkins defended the police action to break up the gathering Tuesday night, saying that they were successful in protecting people from harm in what she called a "mob situation."

"That was the most important issue — that nobody was hurt," she said.

On the noise issue, students complained that the council ignored them when council members amended the local noise ordinance Oct. 23 to eliminate special permits to exceed approved noise levels.

Ms. Jenkins received loud applause when she criticized Carter for ignoring the work of a committee appointed to review the ordinance that included ECU students and administrators.

"I was shocked...that the committee was not heard and their findings were not followed," Ms. Jenkins said.

She promised to suggest "forcefully" that the council reorganize the committee to reconsider the ordinance if she is elected.

But Carter said the council's decision would stand because it was a fair one.

"You cannot justify allowing bands to disturb the quality of life in our community," he said.

'We Were Totally Violated'

By J.R. Williams
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Some East Carolina University students and residents of the Tar River Estates neighborhood have a different view than Greenville police on what happened in the area Halloween night.

Police say that, after receiving a number of noise complaints in the Tar River Estates area Tuesday, they ordered a crowd of revelers to disperse and when those orders weren't followed about 140 people were arrested.

But some students and residents say the police were looking for trouble from the start and arrived on the scene arresting anyone who was in the area without first telling the crowd to disperse. During the commotion, those arrested say they were never read their rights or told why they were being arrested.

"We didn't have any rights whatsoever," said Adele M. Goodman, 24, of 300A Cedar St., a former ECU student who was arrested.

"We were totally violated," she said. "I just felt helpless."

"I just can't believe they had on masks and everything," Ms. Goodman said of the riot gear-equipped police. "It was like they were looking for a fight."

ECU Students Eye Boycott

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University student leaders want to make Greenville see purple instead of gold.

Some members of the Student Government Association are asking ECU students to boycott local businesses Monday to show city residents what students mean to the local economy.

"Relations between students and the town are at rock bottom right now," SGA President Charlie T.

"Tripp" Roakes III said.

The "Purple Monday" boycott is to protest a recent decision by the City Council to stop issuing permits for parties that exceed noise limits set by the city's noise-control ordinance, he said.

The council's decision to change the ordinance went beyond the recommendations of a committee appointed to review it. That panel, which included ECU students and administrators as well as representatives of neighborhood groups, Police Chief Jerry Tesmond and council member Mildred A. Council, recommended only stricter enforcement, greater public awareness and more training for police.

Roakes, a member of the ordinance review committee, said the council's decision was a slap in the face for ECU students.

"There was nothing wrong with the noise ordinance," he said. "There was nothing wrong with the noise permits in Greenville." Roakes claimed that revoking the permits was a political move

Mirrors Proposed For School Buses

By Katherine Rizzo
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Many deaths could be prevented if the Bush administration would require schools to put better mirrors on their buses, some House members said today.

"School children at an alarming rate are being killed by their own school buses," said Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, chief sponsor of a bill that would order the federal government to update its safety standards for school buses.

Eckart wants the government to require special mirrors that eliminate driver "blind spots" that can leave children vulnerable to being hit by buses.

Jeffrey Miller, acting administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, told the hearing the agency has begun working on new rules for school bus mirrors and swing-out "stop" sign attachments. "Therefore we believe that legislation of this type is unnecessary," he said.

Miller also told the panel the agency objects to the 180-day deadline proposed in Eckart's bill.

"Arbitrary rulemaking deadlines could interfere with our ability to complete the careful analysis needed to assure maximum safety benefit," he said.

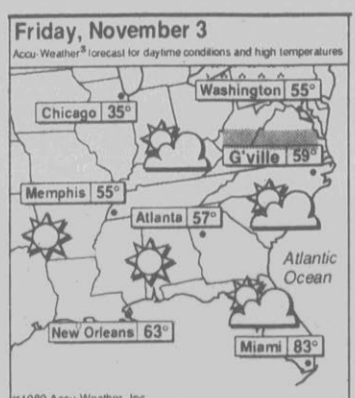

A member of the National PTA board urged the panel to support Eckart's bill, saying her meetings with the NHTSA left her convinced the agency didn't consider the issue a top priority. "NHTSA's attitude was one of a 'big yawn' — insensitive and apathetic," said Millie Waterman of Mentor, Ohio.

"Today we're going to wake NHTSA up," promised Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on transportation and hazardous materials.

"We're going to find out why NHTSA is callously stalling on updating its mandatory safety standard for school bus mirrors while children are continuously being killed and injured throughout the country," he said.

Miller told a CBS-TV interviewer school bus-related fatalities shouldn't be considered "a big problem area."

Injured Professor Wants Roundtable To Proceed

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University professor Dr. Mohammed Ahad, who was shot on a Brooklyn, N.Y., street Saturday night, is recuperating and has a major wish: that the Chinese Culture Roundtable he was to direct in Greenville proceed as planned on Friday.

Sponsored by the North Carolina Humanities Council, the roundtable will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Willis Building at First and Reade streets. The last of four cultural roundtables directed by Ahad, it is being presented by the East Carolina University School of Medicine, of which Ahad is a faculty member.

Dr. Prabhakar Khazanie, an East

Carolina University School of Medicine faculty member, has visited Ahad in Interfaith Medical Center in New York since the shooting. He says his friend is recuperating well and has total recall of the incident.

Khazanie calls the fact that Ahad does not appear to be irreversibly damaged by the two bullets fired downward through his neck and into his chest "miraculous."

AHAD

"This was an execution-type shooting," he said. "Two young men stopped him on the street. He told them they could have his wallet, but please not to take his shopping bags that held gifts for family and friends.

"They took his wallet and the bags and they hit him on the head and shot him twice. They were apparently taller than he and shot downward with a handgun.

"Ahad never lost consciousness," Khazanie said. "He was losing blood fast, but he walked to the door of a nearby hospital where a security guard spotted him and put him in a wheelchair and took him inside."

"I talked to his doctors and they said they cannot understand why the bullets did not hit his heart, lungs, spine or major arteries. He did have one lung collapse, but he was on a respirator from Saturday until Tuesday morning and it has re-inflated," he said.

He said Ahad, whose wife, son, two daughters and son-in-law have gone to New York to be with him, will probably be in the intensive care unit of Interfaith Medical Center for about two more days. Then, he likely will be placed in a less intensive level of care in the same hospital for a few more days. Plans are to transfer him back to Greenville as quickly as possible.

"Everything I can learn tells me he's going to be fine — just as energetic as ever," Khazanie said. "And everyone who knows him knows how endlessly energetic he is."

He said he understands New York police have made no headway in catching the two men who robbed and shot Ahad.

Ahad left Greenville Friday about noon, planning to visit friends and nursing colleagues in Brooklyn and Union, N.J., during the weekend.

Wildlife Refuge

The Mattamuskeet Refuge Wildlife open house will be held Dec. 2 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. A wildlife tour will depart from the lake landing parking lot, off U.S. 264, every 30 minutes and will last about one hour. All activities are free. For more information, call 926-4021.

Week Designated

Gov. Jim Martin has designated Nov. 6-12 as Employ the Veteran Week. "Employ the Veteran Week" is an attempt to make veterans and employers aware of the services which the Employment Security Commission provides veterans," Martin said.

The Greenville Employment Office has a veterans representative, Don Anders, and a disabled veterans representative, Lorraine Alexander, to help place veterans in employment.

Civitan Officers

Mark Meltzer was installed recently as president of the Greenville Civitan Club for 1989-90.

Other officers installed were Glenn Cox, president-elect, Pete Caulk, vice president, and Bob Thompson, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the club's board of directors are Bill Martin, Ron Sessoms, Hugh Wease, Loran Norris and Henry Dunn.

Fatal Accident

A man died and a house was knocked from its foundation in a one-car accident on secondary road #110 about 2.7 miles northeast of Grifton Wednesday afternoon.

Trooper John Tomer identified the driver killed at the scene as Willie Green Jr., 64, of Route 1, Grifton. He said Green's car was traveling at about 80 mph when it hit the house.

According to Regional Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris, there was evidence that Green's severe heart disease could have played a part in causing the car to go out of control, but he said the injuries sustained in the accident caused Green's death.

Wednesday Thefts

Two thefts were reported to Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer G.M. Savage said a video cassette recorder and compact disc player were taken from 2709 E. Third St. in an incident reported at 5:30 p.m. and $500 in cash was taken from 904 Douglas Ave. in an incident reported at 6:45 p.m.

Five Arrested

Five people were arrested on theft charges Tuesday by Greenville police.

Officer T.L. Forrest said William C. Covan, 34, of Route 3, Greenville, was charged with shoplifting in connection with a 5:41 p.m. incident at the Foodland supermarket at the Buyers Market at West End Circle.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said David Joseph Gordon Jr., 19, of 212B Lewis St. was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of a bicycle from the same address in an incident reported about 9:09 p.m.

Officer Alexander Batts said three women were arrested on larceny charges about 11:40 p.m. in connection with the theft of $205 worth of shirts and pants from Trocadero Tom Togs at 1900 Dickinson Ave. about 10:38 p.m.

Batts identified the three arrested as Sandra Jo Powell, 24, of 1705 Hopkins Drive; Gloria Jean Price, 29, of 1617 Hopkins Drive, and Michelle Hardison Duffie, 22, of 1702B Hopkins Drive.

Larceny Arrests

Greenville police arrested two people on larceny charges early Wednesday in connection with the theft of $13 worth of soft-drinks from The Pantry at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive.

Officer R.D. Andrews said Ricky White, 21, of 602A Hooker Road and Brenda Moye, 34, of 411 Paige Drive, were arrested in connection with the 1:51 a.m. incident.

EASTERN STAR

Ladies Delight Chapter No. 10 Order of Eastern Star will meet at Mount Calvary Church Friday at 7 p.m. for the final rites of S.E. Hemby.

Attorney Named

Greenville attorney Charles M. Vincent has been named to a committee to establish a criminal law section within the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers.

Vincent was appointed while attending a long-range planning session of the 4000-member academy in Myrtle Beach, S.C. He is a trustee of the academy's Political Action Committee and serves as the eastern North Carolina representative on its Quality of Life Steering Committee.

Students Accepted

Three local high school students have been accepted for admission to the North Carolina School of the Arts for the 1989-90 academic year.

The students are Shelley W. Lucht, Benjamin M. Meggs and Nairobi L. Morgan, all of Greenville.

Ms. Lucht, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Lucht, is a senior studying violin. Meggs, son of Dr. and Mrs. William J. Meggs, is a sophomore studying saxophone. Morgan is a senior studying visual arts.

Located in Winston-Salem, the North Carolina School of the Arts trains students at the college and high school levels for professional careers in the performing arts. It is part of the University of North Carolina system.

Meeting Slated

The Carolinas-Virginia chapter of the National Agri-Marketing Association will meet Nov. 15 at 6 p.m. at the Ramada Inn during the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show.

Comedian Jerry Clower will headline the program. Drue Seefeld and Myrna Krueger, from the Ciba-Geigy Corp. in Greensboro, will give an update on the recent reorganization of the firm's agricultural seed division.

Reservations may be made with Blake Lewis at the Carolina Farmer office in Greenville at 757-0336, or 1-800-233-8596.

Community Appeal

The Creative Living Center of Greenville is appealing for a used piano in tunable condition or an 88-key portable keyboard for one of its participants. This elderly woman has, with the help of a music therapist at the center, learned again to play the piano, and the center staff is seeking a piano or keyboard for her use at her home. 757-0303.

The annual Wilson Technical Community College fire school will be held Nov. 11-12.

The two-day school, open to paid and volunteer firemen, "is a great opportunity for firefighters ... to come together and update the skills that are necessary for them to do their job well," said Frank Kidd, dean of continuing education at WTCC.

Flammable liquid firefighting will be conducted on a truck, an automobile and a mock aircraft crash. Pit fires, bulk-tank simulations and tanker fires will also be covered during the school.

For more information, contact Doug Batts, fire training coordinator, at (919) 291-1195, extension 242.

Students Hosted Kids

Residents of Cotten Hall at East Carolina University hosted approximately 80 children from the Greenville Boys Club and Operation Sunshine on Tuesday for an afternoon of Halloween fun.

"Project Boo" was created by Sandra Carter, an ECU student and Cotten Hall representative, to give the children a safe opportunity to celebrate Halloween.

Activities arranged by Ms. Carter and the Cotten residents included apple bobbing, face painting, mask making and trick or treat.

Officers Elected

Members of the East Carolina University student group, Allied Blacks for Leadership and Equality (ABLE), have elected new officers for the 1989-90 academic year.

Carla Michelle Hooker, a sophomore communications major from Maryland, was elected president. She is also chairperson of the Student Union Special Concerts Committee, a member of the ECU Gospel Choir and president of the Sweethearts of Kappa Alpha Psi.

Other officers are Tanya Darnae Scott, vice president; Cheyenne Denell, secretary, and Andrea Rochelle Murray, treasurer.

Heading the organization's Judiciary Committee is Marlon Roel Murphy.

ABLE, formerly known as the Minority Student Organization, is open to all students on campus who are interested in issues relating to black people. Its adviser is Dr. Larry Smith, an assistant vice chancellor in the ECU Division of Student Life who heads the ECU office of Minority Student Affairs.

Drug Awareness

Senators Pledge Early Passage Of Bill Raising Minimum Wages

By John King
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Senate leaders are promising to pass the first raise in the minimum wage in nearly a decade before Thanksgiving following a lopsided House vote for the compromise increase.

The House voted 382-37 on Wednesday to raise the minimum wage from $3.35 — its level since January 1981 — to $3.80 next April 1 and $4.25 a year later.

A vote in the Senate, where the measure has overwhelming support, has not been scheduled but could come as early as next week. Senate passage would send the measure to President Bush, whose compromise with Congress Tuesday ends an eight-year political fight between congressional Democrats and two Republican administrations.

Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell of Maine called the compromise "a victory for working Americans, those at the bottom of the economic scale, who need a boost and need it as soon as possible."

House Democrats who had failed in years past to raise the minimum wage said their victory was tempered by an increase smaller than they had passed earlier this year and by the new subminimum wage for teen-agers new to the job market.

"This vote represents only a partial victory for low-wage workers," Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., said after the House endorsed the compromise. "However, something is better than nothing. ... We should never again allow a decade to elapse with no action."

The lower minimum could be paid to workers from 16 to 19 years old for their first three months of work experience. It could be extended for three more months for youths in certified training programs.

The lower wage would be 85 percent of the prevailing minimum wage except for in the first year of the increase, when it would be barred from being below the current $3.35 an hour minimum. The subminimum would be $3.61 when the minimum wage rose to $4.25.

The provision allowing the lower wage expires in April 1993.

Democrats complained the increase was too small and the subminimum created a dangerous two-tiered wage system. Some conservative Republicans opposed any increase and said Congress was intruding on business costs.

But the fierce partisanship that characterized the fight over a bill Bush vetoed last summer was absent.

"We could have let politics override our effort to reach an agreement on minimum wage," said Rep. Thomas Ridge, R-Pa., who had urged the White House to drop its refusal to compromise. "That political debate is behind us."

Voting for the compromise were 247 Democrats and 135 Republicans. Two Democrats who support a higher minimum wage, Carl Perkins of Kentucky and George Miller of California, voted no because they oppose the subminimum. Thirty-five Republicans voted against the measure.

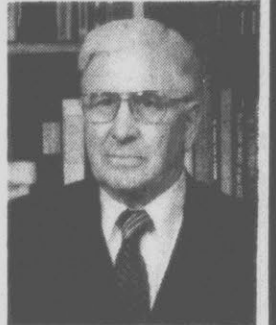

To strike the deal, Democrats agreed to push back the effective dates of the increases from January to April, accept the subminimum wage and drop their insistence on a commission to make annual recommendations on the wage level, a mechanism Republicans said would have been used to seek annual increases.

Bush, in what the administration insisted until Friday was his "first, best and final offer," earlier this year offered an increase to $4.25 and a six-month lower minimum for new workers regardless of previous experience. He agreed to the increase nine months earlier than he had proposed and accepted a far more restrictive subminimum wage.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Good Timing

Summit Decision Is Opportune

If ever there was a time for a summit meeting between leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union it is now.

It will be. President George Bush and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev announced that they will be meeting Dec. 2-3, on an American naval vessel and on a Soviet military ship in the Mediterranean.

It is an opportunity President Bush could not afford to miss. The changes under way in the Soviet Union and in the Eastern European bloc have been astounding. No one knows where it will all lead. It is obvious, though, that the Soviet Union and other Communist countries have major economic problems. Goods and services are not being delivered to people who were supposed to be the beneficiaries of Communism.

Gorbachev has responded with increased freedoms in his own country and more independence for eastern European nations. The Soviets say they will be reducing military spending to allow more of the nation's production to go to consumers. Even some capitalism is creeping into the Soviet Union as a way to improve things.

'Almost certainly no startling developments will come from the summit, but the two leaders can come away with a better understanding of each other.'

Most important, Gorbachev seems to want better relations with the western nations which he, no doubt, sees as a source of consumer goods his country so badly needs.

All of that will be open for discussion as the leaders of the two super powers meet in December. Almost certainly no startling developments will come from the summit, but the two leaders can come away with a better understanding of each other.

The Soviet Union is not going to become a democratic, capitalistic country in the near future. It is clearly being forced into change through economic realities.

The United States must consider every opportunity for encouraging arms reduction and reducing the chances of conflict with the Soviets. As a capitalist country we can also recognize there is a huge market for our goods in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

This is a meeting that must be held. President Bush must be wary, but be receptive. Mankind could be living in a much changed world in the coming decades.

Excellence Begins With Spelling

It's not easy when you make a mistake and everybody knows — especially if the error is a simple one and detracts from a very important message. For the state's public schools, promoting excellence without being able to spell it correctly is painfully embarrassing.

Excellence in Secondary Education, proclaimed the wayward banner at a state meeting exploring ways to improve Scholastic Aptitude Scores — at first. After the mistake was discovered, it was redone. "Excellence" in Secondary Education, it then read. (That's better.)

Just how do a bunch of school officials — erudite, all; many of them, former teachers — misspell excellence? It seems the sign was prepared by a private company and the company made the error. To make matters worse, the president of that company is a college graduate. She said the mistake was an oversight, a mistake made in the haste of a deadline.

Nobody knows how bad a boo-boo hurts more than those who work in a newspaper office — those who ruin their eye-sight proofreading headlines and those who dream about the typos they didn't catch.

But when a school banner misspells its vowels ...

Humiliating, funny, ironic, uncomfortable ... but nothing for the state's citizens to wring their hands about. A good chuckle is about all that it's worth. The seriousness of the message remains.

Yes, the state does want excellence in secondary education. Part of that excellence is spelling words correctly. Now at least more of the state's citizens know how excellence is spelled. That's a start.

Miss Manners At Armageddon

WASHINGTON — Riiiiiiiiing. Riiiiiiiiing. Riiiiiiiiing. Click. "Hi, it's me. I called to say Miss Manners has just published" — thock — "Sorry, that's my 'call waiting.' let me put you on hold for just a second."

Pause. More pause. Still more pause.

"I'm back. Now, where was I? Oh, yes Miss Manners says..."

Miss Manners is, yet again, dismayed. Having spent a lifetime writing bulletins from the front lines in the unending etiquette war, she has had so many searing experiences it is well-nigh impossible to flabbergast her, but flabbergasted she is by call-waiting.

That is the latest wrinkle in telephone annoyances. It is a system by which the telephone, while in use, makes a peremptory noise — thock! — telling the users that a third party wants the attention of the party who owns the telephone equipped with call-waiting. That misguided person would not have installed it were he or she not prepared to commit the impoliteness of receiving such incoming calls on a "last-come, first-served basis," thereby reversing the sensible order of precedence.

Miss Manners says call-waiting "is like a child screaming for attention while one is on the telephone." It is the second-worst idea, so far, from the world of telephones. (It is impossible to write, in language suitable for a family newspaper, about the practice of playing music at people whose calls have been put on hold. Being on hold is tolerable; one can daydream, write letters, read novels. But being on hold with Barbra Streisand singing "Pee-pul, Pee-pul who need pee-pul..."? Intolerable.)

These are subjects for Miss Manners' severities in her latest canonical publication, "Miss Manners' Guide for the Turn-of-the-Millennium." To people who practice the instant intimacy she so rightly deplors "Nowadays, if someone said, 'Call me Ishmael,' few people would. Strangers would say, 'How y'doing, Ish?'" Miss Manners is known as Judith Martin, the columnist.

To those of us who sit at her feet for guidance, she is the tutor who alternatively purses her lips and clucks her tongue (she might be able to do both, simultaneously) as she peers, with eyebrows arched and head tilted back sufficiently to elevate her nose for an editorial sniff, through her lorgnette at the stricken field of modern manners. Determined not to let society seek its own level, she fixes upon offenders a glare that would freeze claret or wilt lettuce, and vows not to let up until everyone is behaving.

We live in a statistically improbable moment, when divorces seem to outnumber marriages and, as she delicately observes, "Weddings are bed at what we shall ever so gently call a later state of courtship. It is an interesting question. How does one properly refer to a person of the opposite sex sharing living quarters? POSSIC does not have enough vowels to denote anything other than a small railway junction in Wales. How about household-mate? Paraspouse? Pliance? Rhymes with fiancé. Derives from 'persons living in a noncommitted environment'."

Miss Manners stands at Armageddon and battles against people practicing therapeutic rudeness. She increasingly hears idealism invoked as an excuse for bad manners, as in the all-purpose, self-flattering explanation that, "I am too free a spirit to..." (You name the social convention: Wear socks, write thank-you notes, eat what is put in front of you.)

To all those shouting "Oh, wow! Freedom," she says, "Nice try. Now get a grip." And she asks, "What about when society is right? That does happen occasionally."

Yes, Government Is Working — Badly

WASHINGTON — The Redskins, the only professional team to play its games in the city of Washington, have a quarterback, Mark Rypien, of whom it is said, with fatal accuracy, "Every time he gets hit, he fumbles." The same, sadly, can be said of government in Washington.

David Broder

Sports reporters notice things like Rypien's tendency to give up the ball when sacked. Political reporters, unfortunately, tend to be less attentive to a pattern of failure on our beat, especially when it involves a whole institution, rather than an individual. A few years back, one New Yorker remarked that for 25 years, "the New York Times had reported everything that happened in the New York City schools except that they were collapsing." The same thing can be said of most of the Washington press corps and the national government today.

Truth is, few Washington reporters know much, or care much, about what goes on inside government. We write about scandals, when they are gamy enough, and about the handful of policy fights which pit the White House against Congress, like the battle over capital-gains taxes. But the question whether government is working well — or working at all — is not one that usually draws our interest.

Today, by almost any measure, government is working very badly, so badly in fact that even journalists are beginning to notice it. When Stanley W. Cloud, a veteran Washington reporter and editor, took over recently as Washington bureau chief of Time magazine, he persuaded his editors to do a cover story, headlined, "Is Government Dead?"

The answer, Cloud's story said, is that if government is not dead, it increasingly "looks like a costly irrelevancy today... Under the shadow of a massive federal deficit that neither political party is willing to confront, a kind of neurosis of accepted limits has taken hold from one end of Pennsylvania Avenue to the other." Whether the challenge is an oil spill in Alaska or a hurricane in South Carolina, an abortive coup in Panama or a democratic revolution in Eastern Europe, the government's response is slow, grudging and massively inadequate.

When confronted by a crisis or even an unexpected opening, it fumbles. And on the larger, long-term challenges — things like the decline of the schools, the deterioration of our transportation system, the scourge of drugs and the steady accumulation of unpaid debt — its tendency is to postpone hard choices and posture rather than produce.

The explanation is two-fold. What we choose to call a government is no such thing. In our era of debilitated political parties, Washington is run by 536 individual political entrepreneurs — one President, 100 senators and 435 members of the House — each of whom got here essentially on his own. Each chooses the office he seeks, raises his own money, hires his own pollster and ad-maker and recruits his own volunteers.

Each of them is scrambling to remain in office, no matter what. And each of them has commitments and objectives he considers paramount. When George Bush says, "Read my lips," each member of Congress replies, "I want mine." And the result is the paralysis of which Time wrote.

The second part of the story is laid out in the October issue of a magazine called Government Executive, a sort of trade paper for the bureaucracy. In a piece called "Hollow Government," writer Mark L. Goodstein cites example after example of how the budget cuts of the 1980s have left "federal agencies increasingly unable to perform the missions for which they were created."

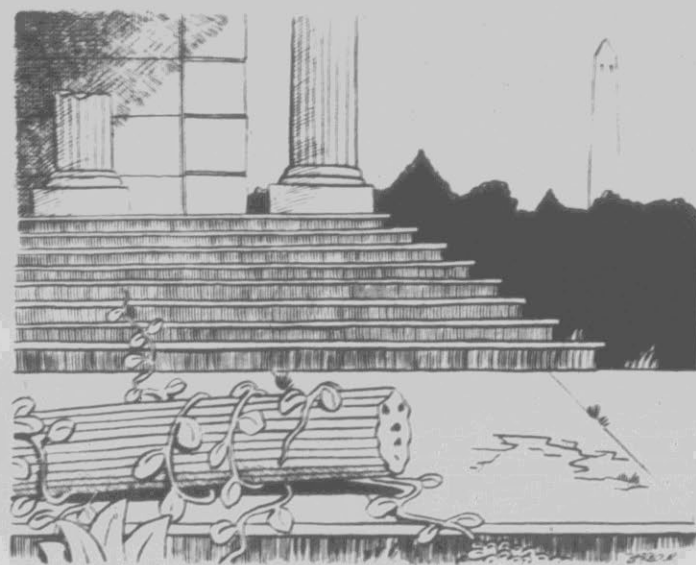

His story is a compendium of examples of government struggling with outmoded equipment and inadequate staffing. A former Internal Revenue Service commissioner says the IRS computer system "is somewhere in the ice age." At a time when the nation is aging and new programs for the elderly are being enacted, the Social Security Administration has had a 20 percent cutback in personnel.

The root of this problem is that Presidents and Congresses in this decade have lacked the courage to ask people to pay for the government services they receive. This year's budget fiasco compounds the hypocrisy. When the political cowards in the Bush administration and on Capitol Hill decided last month it was easier to admit failure than to reach agreement on a budget, that triggered automatic, across-the-board cuts in hundreds of domestic and military programs.

No one seems to know or care what those $16 billion cuts will do to the people who depend on those services. The President and Congress are engaged in a conspiracy of silence to keep the public from putting the blame where it belongs.

But those cuts guarantee that a "hollow government" will be further drained of the talent, the energy and the equipment it needs to do its job. When the complaints come in, the politicians will do what they always do: blame the bureaucrats. "Is government dead?" The answer is that it might as well be, so debilitated and demoralized has it become.

Dole Gets The White House Message: No New Taxes

Walter Mears

WASHINGTON — It may take White House touring in remedial lip-reading to keep Republicans in line with President Bush's across-the-board vow that there will be no new taxes.

There's been some GOP talk about boosting the federal gasoline tax, notably by the Senate Republican leader. That's an idea that has been advanced before, usually by Democrats, to raise money and promote energy conservation at the same time.

A gas tax boost is one Bush vehemently ruled out when he was a candidate, and his spokesman did so again the other day. Democratic leaders already had said they were not going to risk advocating a tax increase the president would block and the GOP would use against them later.

"Everyone has read his lips..." said Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, the majority leader.

But Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the GOP leader, said he would be for an increase as long as the money it raised went to finance the highway system, and wasn't earmarked to reduce the national debt as sometimes has been proposed. "I would support a gas tax increase for rebuilding the infrastructure, not for debt reduction," Dole said Sunday.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said earlier that he would support a gas tax increase if needed to rebuild earthquake-damaged highways in the state where he's running for governor next year.

But there's no real chance the tax, now 9.1 cents a gallon, is going to be increased. Bush isn't bugging, and Democratic congressional leaders are not going to take on the political burden of pushing an unpopular tax increase against his opposition.

The new round of tax talk goes out of the need for disaster funds, for California and to repair the damage caused by Hurricane Hugo in the East.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said when the Senate passed a disaster relief appropriation that the earthquake and hurricane "should have awakened us to the fact that we do not have the revenues we need to build and maintain vital physical infrastructure..."

He said Bush had an opportunity to say so, despite his campaign refrain that he would tell Congress: "Read my lips — no new taxes."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, was advocating an increase in the gasoline tax long before the disaster hit.

So has Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who said a higher tax would encourage conservation and lower American dependence on foreign oil, which is increasing steadily.

Each one cent increase in the federal gasoline tax raises about $1 billion a year, a prospect that led to earlier proposals for a sharp increase to reduce the federal deficit. Gas tax revenues go into the highway trust fund; roadbuilders, the oil industry and allied interests are determined to keep it that way.

Dole, appearing on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press," said he'd read Bush's lips, too, and hadn't forgotten the injunction against new taxes, but wouldn't consider a roadbuilding gas tax to be a major increase.

The distinction did not register at the White House. "We do not feel that an increase in federal gas taxes is necessary at this time," said Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

When the government began the interstate highway system in 1956, it was to be financed by a federal gasoline tax of 3 cents a gallon. Advocates of an increase say that if the gasoline tax had kept pace with inflation, it would now be at least 13 cents a gallon instead of 9.1.

With gasoline prices down, petroleum imports are increasing. In July, oil imports accounted for more than half of U.S. consumption for the first time in a dozen years. The Department of Energy estimates means it isn't going anywhere. House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said he favors an increase, but would push one only if it came with an ironclad Bush endorsement. "We're not going to engage in a kamikaze effort to raise taxes," Mitchell said.

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 25 years.

that the import rate will reach 65 percent by the year 2,000.

"We are getting back into all the old habits, getting more and more dependent on foreign oil," Moynihan said.

But the idea Dole endorsed isn't going anywhere without Bush, which

State Tightens Belt As Budget Squeeze Looms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State budget officials are worried there could be a shortfall in revenue and are warning government agencies to watch their spending.

The Office of Budget and Management has told department and agency officials that they cannot fill vacancies, continuing a hiring freeze that is almost a year old. Last December, to avert a budget crisis, Gov. Jim Martin's budget office ordered a freeze on filling vacant posts.

"After review of the revenue sources dedicated to support the state's general fund budget, this office is concerned that all the projected tax and non-tax revenue may not materialize," C.C. Cameron, director of the Office of State Budget and Management, said in the memo.

The office also has cut by 1 percent the amount of money distributed to departments and agencies in each of the first two quarters of the fiscal year, the Greensboro News & Record reported in today's editions. The state's financial year runs from July 1, 1989, through June 30, 1990.

The office is trying to avert any drastic end-of-the-year budget cuts, as were necessary last spring. Last May, the budget office cut distributions to all departments and agencies by 5 percent to avoid deficit spending, banned by the state Constitution. The cuts sparked protests from several agencies, particularly universities.

A memo dated Sept. 21 that warned of a possible revenue shortfall was sent to top agency officials from Cameron. A copy of the memo was reprinted in the office's newsletter this week.

The key problem areas, Cameron said, are uncertainty about the amount of money the state will collect in tax windfalls expected from the sale of RJR Nabisco, through increased enforcement of tax laws, and through the recently passed Tax Fairness Act. Also, the recovery from Hurricane Hugo will cost about $15 million to $20 million, far more than the amount usually set aside for emergencies.

The Martin administration won't make a prediction of how much will be collected through the RJR windfall; the legislature estimates $129 million.

The legislature predicted $46 million would be collected through increased enforcement of tax laws. The Martin administration predicts it will be closer to $27 million — a $19 million difference.

And while legislators say the tax fairness act — which will take 70,000 low-income people off the tax rolls and increase taxes for those in the upper-income levels — won't have any impact on revenues, Martin's budget office is concerned the state may come up short.

Deputy Budget Director Marvin Dorman said Wednesday he won't know how close those collections come to the state budget's estimates until the spring.

College students and Greensboro citizens join hands at Bennett College Wednesday night as they sing "We Shall Overcome." The song was part of a service marking the 10th anniversary of a 1979 confrontation between the Ku Klux Klan and backers of the Communist Workers Party in which five CWP members were killed.

Prisons To Begin Testing All New Inmates For AIDS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Beginning in about two weeks, all inmates entering the prisons will be tested for the AIDS virus as part of a six-month study to determine how widespread the virus is among people behind bars.

"If we don't know the population we're dealing with, clearly we can't plan for them efficiently and effectively," said Richard K. Panek, director of health services for the state Department of Correction.

The testing is to be conducted anonymously, meaning that it will not help individual inmates determine if they are carrying the AIDS virus. But Panek said that information should become known through other medical screenings routinely conducted in the prisons.

The General Assembly set aside $58,200 for the six-month study, which will result in about 10,000 inmates being tested. In North Carolina, about 60,000 people a year are tested for the AIDS virus either through the state's voluntary testing program or through private physicians.

The incidence of AIDS in North Carolina prisons has been lower than in the general population, but Panek says the numbers are increasing. Since 1983, there have been 53 cases of AIDS in the prisons.

Since April 1985, when the department began collecting such information, 457 prisoners have been found to carry the virus which causes AIDS. But Panek said that officials can't be certain they are getting an accurate measure of the problem.

"A lot of people lie about their risk factors," he said. "We don't find everybody. But your blood can't lie."

David C. Jones of the N.C. AIDS Service Coalition, a support group for victims of the disease, said he welcomed the study.

"First of all, we'll find out if we've really got a problem," he said. "I think it could help us deal with it, depending on what we find out."

Other states that have conducted widespread testing of prison inmates have generally found low incidence rates, according to a survey by the National Institute of Justice.

Dr. John A. Bartlett, clinical research director of the AIDS Clinical Trials Unit at Duke University Medical Center, said it is important to get an accurate measure of how widespread the virus is in the prison system.

"No one really knows at this point how many prisoners are HIV-infected or how to prepare for their health needs," said Dr. Bartlett, who might work with the department on the study. "It will give us some idea how to plan for the next five or 10 years."

Panek said such planning is critical because of the high cost of caring for AIDS patients. The results of the survey will help the department prepare budget requests to provide medical care for AIDS patients, he said.

Due to an illness, Eric Braeden (Victor Newman of The Young & Restless) will not appear at The Plaza on Sat., Nov. 4th. His appearance will be rescheduled and will be announced when confirmed. We are sorry for any inconvenience.

Baptist Says Church Needs Involvement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The leader of North Carolina's largest black religious group shook up his constituents Wednesday with a plea for church action against the spread of crime and drug abuse.

"There are more black boys in jail in this country than there are in universities and colleges," said the Rev. J.B. Humphrey, president of the 450,000-member N.C. General Baptist State Convention. "That ought to shock us out of our seats."

"It is a responsibility of ours to keep the horse in the fence because when he gets out, it costs a whole lot more money to get him back in."

College enrollment of black men has been a subject of national concern.

A study released by the American Council on Education earlier this year showed that black men represented 4.3 percent of U.S. college enrollment in 1976. Their share had dropped to 3.5 percent — 436,000 students — by 1986.

Humphrey's remarks, greeted with shouts of "Amen" and "Preach, brother," came during the state convention's annual meeting at Salem Baptist Church. More than 800 people packed the sanctuary for the morning session.

The president urged leaders of the convention's 1,700 churches to get involved in programs such as Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts that help provide positive role models and wholesome activities for young people.

Humphrey asked the convention to organize Baptist student unions at college campuses across the state and to create a commission on conflict management in churches.

He also urged approval of a $2.3 million budget for 1990 and asked congregations to collect a special offering this month for the financially troubled divinity school at Shaw University in Raleigh.

Key Witness In Robeson Case Found

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SMITHFIELD, N.C. — A man prosecutors say is a key witness in the trial of a man charged in the death of Robeson County Indian activist Julian Pierce has been found after a five-month search, officials say.

An agent of the State Bureau of Investigation and a sheriff's deputy found Kim Locklear Jr. on Tuesday at the home of a relative in the Robeson County community of Red Springs, said Ray W. Davis, district supervisor for the SBI.

The trial of Sandy J. Chavis on charges of first-degree murder in the March 1988 shotgun death of Pierce was postponed indefinitely in June after police were unable to locate Locklear.

Since then, Chavis seriously injured himself in a fall while out of jail on bond and has been hospitalized.

During a brief Johnston Superior Court hearing Wednesday, Judge Wiley F. Bowen ordered Locklear held in jail with his bond set at $25,000. Judge Bowen also appointed Smithfield lawyer Dale Stubbs to represent Locklear and set another hearing for next Tuesday, said Will Crocker, the Johnston County court clerk.

At that hearing, the court will determine two things: whether Locklear is a material witness and whether he should be detained until Chavis' trial begins, said William Farrell Jr., a special deputy prosecutor for the state attorney general. A new trial date for Chavis has not been set.

SBI agents and others began looking for Locklear in June, hoping to serve him a with subpoena for the trial. When he could not be found, Judge Anthony M. Brannon of Durham issued a court order instructing officers to find him and bring him into court.

Davis declined to explain exactly how officers knew where to find Locklear who is in his 50s and has used a number of aliases in the past.

Farrell, the special prosecutor, would not discuss exactly what kind of information Locklear could provide from the witness stand.

Previously, James J. Coman, another special prosecutor in the case, said Locklear "is an essential witness because of the contact he had with the defendant in the hours after Mr. Pierce's murder."

Pierce was killed at his home in Wakulla on March 26, 1988, by three shotgun blasts. A popular Lumbee Indian attorney, he was running for Superior Court judge of Robeson County against then-District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt.

Activists in Robeson County contend the shooting was politically motivated.

Dog Attack

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The attorney for the man who owns two Rottweilers suspected of killing a Winston-Salem man said he will seek records from the police and health departments and the animal control office to try to save the dogs.

Attorney Phillip S. Banks III said Tuesday the dogs were unfairly ordered destroyed Monday when the Forsyth County health director ruled that the dogs were dangerous and should be killed.

Banks has 30 days to appeal the decision to kill the dogs.

Detectives with the Winston-Salem Police Department and Thomas R. Dundon, the health director, said Monday that the Rottweilers killed Hoke Lane Prevette, 20, on Oct. 20 as he jogged.

School Closed

ASHEBORO (AP) — Schools officials closed New Market Elementary School Tuesday after tests showed high levels of fecal coliform bacteria in the school's drinking-water well.

The well may have been contaminated for months before it was discovered because the schools test their wells every three months.

New Market School, on U.S. 311 between Asheboro and Archdale, sent its 500 kindergartners through fifth-graders home before lunch, and school was closed Wednesday while officials scrambled to find a new water source.

New Market is the second Randolph County school to lose its well-water this year because of bacteria contamination. Coleridge Elementary School has trucked in water since March, when its water supply was found to be contaminated.

Cocaine Arrest

DURHAM (AP) — A five-month

hunt for an accused cocaine trafficker ended Wednesday when Durham police arrested him at an apartment at which they also found 12 vials of crack and 131½ pounds of marijuana.

The drugs have an estimated street value of $16,000, police said.

Leverne Burns, 30, who was arrested Wednesday, also is wanted in New York City in connection with the shooting of two people, police said.

Life Sentence

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Mecklenburg County Superior Court jury has sentenced Walter Weddington to life imprisonment after finding him guilty of first-degree murder in the shooting death of the 36-year-old woman with whom he lived.

The woman's body was found in a parking lot at Charlotte Memorial Hospital shortly after midnight April 16. She had been shot in the head.

Weddington was found guilty of shooting the woman at the home where he lived with her and her children, then leaving her at the hospital. A security guard found the woman's body.

Prison Term

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 42-year-old Bonlee man accused of pouring kerosene on his uncle and setting the man on fire has been sentenced to life in prison by Superior Court Judge Sam Currin.

Ray Cotton, who pleaded innocent at his arraignment in Chatham Superior Court, withdrew his plea and entered a guilty to first-degree murder in the burning death Jan. 27 of June Marsh, 69.

District Attorney Carl Fox said the defendant told the victim he was going to set him on fire after the men argued about an incident that had occurred several years earlier.

Bond Sought For Bakker Pending Appeal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND, Va. — PTL evangelist Jim Bakker should be set free pending the appeal of his fraud and conspiracy case because of substantial evidence that his trial was conducted in a "circus atmosphere," says a lawyer for Bakker.

A three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that heard arguments Wednesday on Bakker's effort to obtain bond while his case winds through the courts did not issue an immediate ruling.

At the 30-minute hearing, Milton E. Grusmark, Bakker's attorney, said the evangelist's trial in Charlotte, N.C., was a flawed proceeding, largely because of attention given by the media.

At the very least, Grusmark said, the jury that heard the case should have been sequestered. "They went home every night," he said. "There was no excuse for that."

However, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry W. Miller, who prosecuted Bakker, said some of Bakker's followers who testified during the six-week trial that started in late August showed a loyalty to him that "bordered on the irrational."

Miller said Bakker's followers have the financial resources to establish an "underground railroad" to keep the evangelist in hiding if he is released pending appeal and the appeal fails.

Tricked Homeowner Wins $1 Million Suit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — A construction firm has been ordered to pay over $1 million to an illiterate man it overcharged for fixing a leaky roof.

James W. Shaw became mired in a legal nightmare in which he nearly lost his home after he signed what he thought was a contract to have his roof fixed for $1,500.

Cumberland County Superior Court Judge George R. Greene on Monday approved a judgment in a lawsuit against Heritage Design Builders Inc. of Garner for more than $1.065 million for unfair and deceptive trade practices.

Officials with the firm couldn't be contacted for comment. Heritage's telephone has been disconnected and no new phone numbers for the firm are listed in directory assistance.

Two other co-defendants — the credit company and the man who started to buy Shaw's home during the repossession proceeding — have settled out of court by agreeing to let Shaw keep his home.

The trouble began when someone from Heritage came to Shaw's home in June 1988, saying a new roof could be put on his house for $1,500. Shaw, who is in his 60s, lives on a disability income on a street of nearly identical brick or frame ranch houses in western Cumberland County.

Shaw was told that if he put his mark on a contract, the roof would be replaced for that price. But the contract actually said the repairs would cost $3,700.

To cover the cost of the repairs, Shaw signed a promissory note for the amount and put his house up as collateral through a deed of trust. His wife's name, Ophelia Shaw, was forged on both documents, which were then assigned to Goldome Credit Corp. for collection, according to court documents.

When Shaw discovered he had been tricked, he stopped making payments to Goldome Credit and ignored repeated warnings that his home would be foreclosed.

"If you don't read or write or understand how things work, that's what you do," attorney Bruce Allen said. "He keeps on getting these papers and he chucks them out because 'they did me wrong and I am not going to pay.'"

Goldome Credit Corp. foreclosed on the property and a man named Titus Capers made arrangements to buy the house.

Allen said that both Goldome Credit and Capers acted in good faith, but because of the forgery, there wasn't any clear right to foreclose. Both have agreed to let Shaw keep the house.

Greene's order says that because Heritage Design Builders Inc. failed to appear in court or file a response, a default judgment has been entered against it. It orders the firm to pay Shaw $1 million in punitive damages; $65,000 in actual damages; and $2,000 in attorneys fees.

Meanwhile, the roof still leaks.

Two State Pilots Suspended After Audit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Two top pilots responsible for aircraft operations of the state Department of Economic and Community Development have been suspended without pay pending the results of an internal investigation, officials say.

A tip to the state auditor's "hotline" led to the suspension.

The department announced Wednesday that division Director Roger L. Lowery and Deputy Director Donald E. Lewis have been suspended without pay.

Kenneth C. Rabb, a department spokesman, said he could not say why Lowery and Lewis were suspended.

State Auditor Edward Renfrow

said he couldn't comment until an audit being prepared by his department is finished in about three weeks.

Lowery, who was suspended Monday, was still on the job Wednesday, cleaning up paperwork. Asked why he had been suspended, he replied, "I wish you'd find out for me."

"They've given me a letter, but it's all general stuff," he said. "It pertained to some phone calls and, let's see, some expense account forms, stuff like that."

He said he had filled out his expense account claims the way he had been told to fill them out and that he had never "intentionally or knowingly" made a personal call on the state telephone.

"I don't think it's justifiable to suspend me until they get all the information and ... give me a chance to confirm it or deny it," Lowery said. He has worked for the state since June 1985 and has been paid $51,060 a year.

Lewis, who was suspended Friday, could not be reached for comment at his home in Hickory. He has worked for the state since December 1986 and has been paid $32,148 a year.

Renfrow said his office began an audit of the aircraft division about three weeks ago, after receiving the telephone tip.

"What we're doing is evaluating the flight operations, financial records and so forth — work schedules, expense accounts, state equipment — to see if it's been used for official state use; and utilization of aircraft, to see if it's been done in an economic and efficient way," he said.

Auditors had discussed preliminary findings with the Department of Economic and Community Development.

The department subsequently began an internal investigation that led to the suspensions, said Rabb, the spokesman.

"We're right in there with our sleeves rolled up just like the auditors are," he said. "We're going to get to the bottom of it."

The suspensions leave the department with more aircraft than pilots. It has a total of seven pilot positions, but one is vacant and one pilot is on sick leave, leaving three pilots still on the job.

Agenda For Bush-Gorbachev Sea Talks Still Up In Air

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — U.S. and Soviet officials are jockeying over expectations for next month's summit between President Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, debating whether it will be merely a low-key meeting or a milestone in superpower relations. Planning for the Dec. 2-3 summit took a leap forward Wednesday with the announcement that the talks will be held in the Mediterranean on ships off the coast of Malta. An independent republic consisting of five islands, Malta lies 58 miles south of Sicily, 220 miles north of Libya and 180 miles east of Tunisia. For years, Malta had strong ties to Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, who stands accused by the United States of being the paymaster for bloody acts of terrorism around the globe. But over the past two years Malta's government has taken a sharp turn and welcomed U.S. investment. With the staging area fixed, the White House said planning was under way on the substance of ideas and issues that Bush will raise with Gorbachev. The Soviets moved quickly to raise the stakes. "I think that this meeting can just be the end of the Cold War," said Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov. "The Cold War will be dumped down to the bottom of the Mediterranean Sea." Gerasimov's dramatic prediction stood in stark contrast to Bush's portrayal of the talks as a relaxed opportunity for a get-acquainted session with no expectation of any agreements. He said the whole trip, including

“I don't think we expect substantive results,” said a U.S. official. The official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Bush and Gorbachev were expected only to “make sure we have good lines of communication. It is not an area ripe for agreements.” In keeping with U.S. efforts to play down the meeting, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater beat a hasty retreat after referring to the talks as a “summit.” “Let me retract the ‘S’ word,” Fitzwater laughingly told reporters. “Let's call this ‘The Meeting’ — the ‘Big M.’”

While Gorbachev is expected to describe his problems in length to Bush, officials said Moscow has given no indication through diplomatic channels that the Soviet leader would ask for specific technical or other U.S. help. “Asking for direct help would not be suitable,” one official said. “It's one thing to talk about your problems. It's another to appear to be relying on the United States for help. The Soviets are strongly independent about this.”

U.S. Cautious About Resuming Contra Aid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega is drawing harsh criticism from President Bush and members of Congress for canceling his country's cease-fire, but they're not ready to resume military aid to the Contra rebels reported to be re-entering their homeland. U.S. officials said Wednesday up to 1,500 Contras have crossed the border into Nicaragua over the past month from base camps in Honduras, bringing the guerrillas' troop strength to about 4,000. Ortega cited renewed rebel attacks as the reason for suspending the cease-fire and hinted he might cancel the national elections set for Feb. 25, saying the actions of “Yankee Congress and the Yankee President” will determine whether they take place.

around the single issue of a cease-fire. We do not consider it an acceptable cease-fire when we cease and the Contras fire.” One major irritant to the administration was the seizure at the Honduran border two weeks ago of a large quantity of weapons the Sandinistas reportedly had earmarked for leftist rebels in El Salvador. Officials said Secretary of State James A. Baker III confronted Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin with photographs of some of the seized equipment, including Soviet-made AK-47 rifles. Under a Central American peace plan, the Contras are supposed to be disarmed and demobilized by Dec. 5.

Later, a Nicaraguan official said that country has no plans to cancel the elections, and Ortega insisted in a column published in today's New York Times that the elections will be held and that the Sandinistas will win. Bush lashed out at Ortega, saying, “The man is so out of step with the other democratic countries in this hemisphere and so wildly insensitive to the feelings of others that we shouldn't have been surprised” by his action. “On the other hand, I don't think he has unleashed a full-scale offensive at this moment,” Bush said in a radio interview with ABC News. “He's hedging his bets now.”

Ortega's announcement that he was calling off the truce, reached in March 1988, touched off high-level meetings among administration officials and expressions of anger on Capitol Hill. “Ortega is a damned fool, and he's always been a damned fool,” said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee with jurisdiction over aid to the Contras. House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said, “I can't conceive of the House moving now toward providing military assistance. That's not in the direction of the peace process.”

Asked about prospects for renewing military aid to the rebels, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, “We don't want to go that route. We want to get free elections.” But some conservative supporters of the Contras began discussing legislative language that could lead to renewal of military aid to the Contras if the elections are canceled or delayed. The administration said Bush was consulting with leaders in Central America to bring diplomatic pressure on Ortega to reverse course. Ortega wrote in the Times, “It is now clear that there is little point in concentrating our peace efforts

Khamenei Urges Anti-U.S. Effort

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEHRAN, Iran — As a wave of anti-Americanism sweeps Iran, the country's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, called on citizens “to wage perpetual struggle” against the United States. Khamenei addressed hundreds of students Wednesday, the same day Parliament passed a law giving the government powers to arrest Americans anywhere and put them on trial if they seek to harm Iranians or the Islamic republic. The move came three days before expected mass anti-American demonstrations to mark Saturday's 10th anniversary of the seizure of the U.S. Embassy. Militants stormed the sprawling embassy complex Nov. 4, 1979 and held 52 diplomats and other embassy personnel hostage for 444 days. “The dismay and shame resulting from this humiliation will always remain on the face of the oppressor ringleaders of the United States,” said Khamenei, a former president and successor to the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

State Auditor Edward Renfrow

said he couldn't comment until an audit being prepared by his department is finished in about three weeks.

Lowery, who was suspended Monday, was still on the job Wednesday, cleaning up paperwork. Asked why he had been suspended, he replied, "I wish you'd find out for me."

"They've given me a letter, but it's all general stuff," he said. "It pertained to some phone calls and, let's see, some expense account forms, stuff like that."

He said he had filled out his expense account claims the way he had been told to fill them out and that he had never "intentionally or knowingly" made a personal call on the state telephone.

"I don't think it's justifiable to suspend me until they get all the information and ... give me a chance to confirm it or deny it," Lowery said. He has worked for the state since June 1985 and has been paid $51,060 a year.

Lewis, who was suspended Friday, could not be reached for comment at his home in Hickory. He has worked for the state since December 1986 and has been paid $32,148 a year.

Renfrow said his office began an audit of the aircraft division about three weeks ago, after receiving the telephone tip.

"What we're doing is evaluating the flight operations, financial records and so forth — work schedules, expense accounts, state equipment — to see if it's been used for official state use; and utilization of aircraft, to see if it's been done in an economic and efficient way," he said.

Auditors had discussed preliminary findings with the Department of Economic and Community Development.

The department subsequently began an internal investigation that led to the suspensions, said Rabb, the spokesman.

"We're right in there with our sleeves rolled up just like the auditors are," he said. "We're going to get to the bottom of it."

The suspensions leave the department with more aircraft than pilots. It has a total of seven pilot positions, but one is vacant and one pilot is on sick leave, leaving three pilots still on the job.

Agenda For Bush-Gorbachev Sea Talks Still Up In Air

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — U.S. and Soviet officials are jockeying over expectations for next month's summit between President Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, debating whether it will be merely a low-key meeting or a milestone in superpower relations.

Planning for the Dec. 2-3 summit took a leap forward Wednesday with the announcement that the talks will be held in the Mediterranean on ships off the coast of Malta.

An independent republic consisting of five islands, Malta lies 58 miles south of Sicily, 220 miles north of Libya and 180 miles east of Tunisia.

For years, Malta had strong ties to

Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, who stands accused by the United States of being the paymaster for bloody acts of terrorism around the globe.

But over the past two years Malta's government has taken a sharp turn and welcomed U.S. investment.

With the staging area fixed, the White House said planning was under way on the substance of ideas and issues that Bush will raise with Gorbachev.

The Soviets moved quickly to raise the stakes.

"I think that this meeting can just be the end of the Cold War," said Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov. "The Cold War will be dumped down to the bottom of the Mediterranean Sea."

Gerasimov's dramatic prediction stood in stark contrast to Bush's portrayal of the talks as a relaxed opportunity for a get-acquainted session with no expectation of any agreements.

"I don't think we expect substantive results," said a U.S. official.

The official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Bush and Gorbachev were expected only to "make sure we have good lines of communication. It is not an area ripe for agreements."

In keeping with U.S. efforts to play down the meeting, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater beat a hasty retreat after referring to the talks as a "summit."

"Let me retract the 'S' word," Fitzwater laughingly told reporters. "Let's call this 'The Meeting' — the 'Big M.'"

He said the whole trip, including flying back and forth to the talks, would not involve more than three days away from Washington.

The principal subject for discussion is expected to be Gorbachev's effort to boost the faltering Soviet economy through a reconstruction program known as perestroika.

It is spilling over into the political arena, encouraging political reform at home and in Eastern Europe and challenging the Marxist system and the cohesion of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact.

While Gorbachev is expected to describe his problems in length to Bush, officials said Moscow has given no indication through diplomatic channels that the Soviet leader would ask for specific technical or other U.S. help.

"Asking for direct help would not be suitable," one official said. "It's one thing to talk about your problems. It's another to appear to be relying on the United States for help. The Soviets are strongly independent about this."

U.S. Cautious About Resuming Contra Aid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega is drawing harsh criticism from President Bush and members of Congress for canceling his country's cease-fire, but they're not ready to resume military aid to the Contra rebels reported to be re-entering their homeland.

U.S. officials said Wednesday up to 1,500 Contras have crossed the border into Nicaragua over the past month from base camps in Honduras, bringing the guerrillas' troop strength to about 4,000.

Ortega cited renewed rebel attacks as the reason for suspending the cease-fire and hinted he might cancel the national elections set for Feb. 25, saying the actions of "Yankee Congress and the Yankee President" will determine whether they take place.

Later, a Nicaraguan official said that country has no plans to cancel the elections, and Ortega insisted in a column published in today's New York Times that the elections will be held and that the Sandinistas will win.

Bush lashed out at Ortega, saying, "The man is so out of step with the other democratic countries in this hemisphere and so wildly insensitive to the feelings of others that we shouldn't have been surprised" by his action.

"On the other hand, I don't think he has unleashed a full-scale offensive at this moment," Bush said in a radio interview with ABC News. "He's hedging his bets now."

Ortega's announcement that he was calling off the truce, reached in March 1988, touched off high-level meetings among administration officials and expressions of anger on Capitol Hill.

"Ortega is a damned fool, and he's always been a damned fool," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee with jurisdiction over aid to the Contras.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said, "I can't conceive of the House moving now toward providing military assistance. That's not in the direction of the peace process."

Asked about prospects for renewing military aid for the rebels, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, "We don't want to go that route. We want to get free elections."

But some conservative supporters of the Contras began discussing legislative language that could lead to renewal of military aid to the Contras if the elections are canceled or delayed.

The administration said Bush was consulting with leaders in Central America to bring diplomatic pressure on Ortega to reverse course.

Ortega wrote in the Times, "It is now clear that there is little point in concentrating our peace efforts around the single issue of a cease-fire. We do not consider it an acceptable cease-fire when we cease and the Contras fire."

One major irritant to the administration was the seizure at the Honduran border two weeks ago of a large quantity of weapons the Sandinistas reportedly had earmarked for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Officials said Secretary of State James A. Baker III confronted Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin with photographs of some of the seized equipment, including Soviet-made AK-47 rifles.

Under a Central American peace plan, the Contras are supposed to be disarmed and demobilized by Dec. 5.

Khamenei Urges Anti-U.S. Effort

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

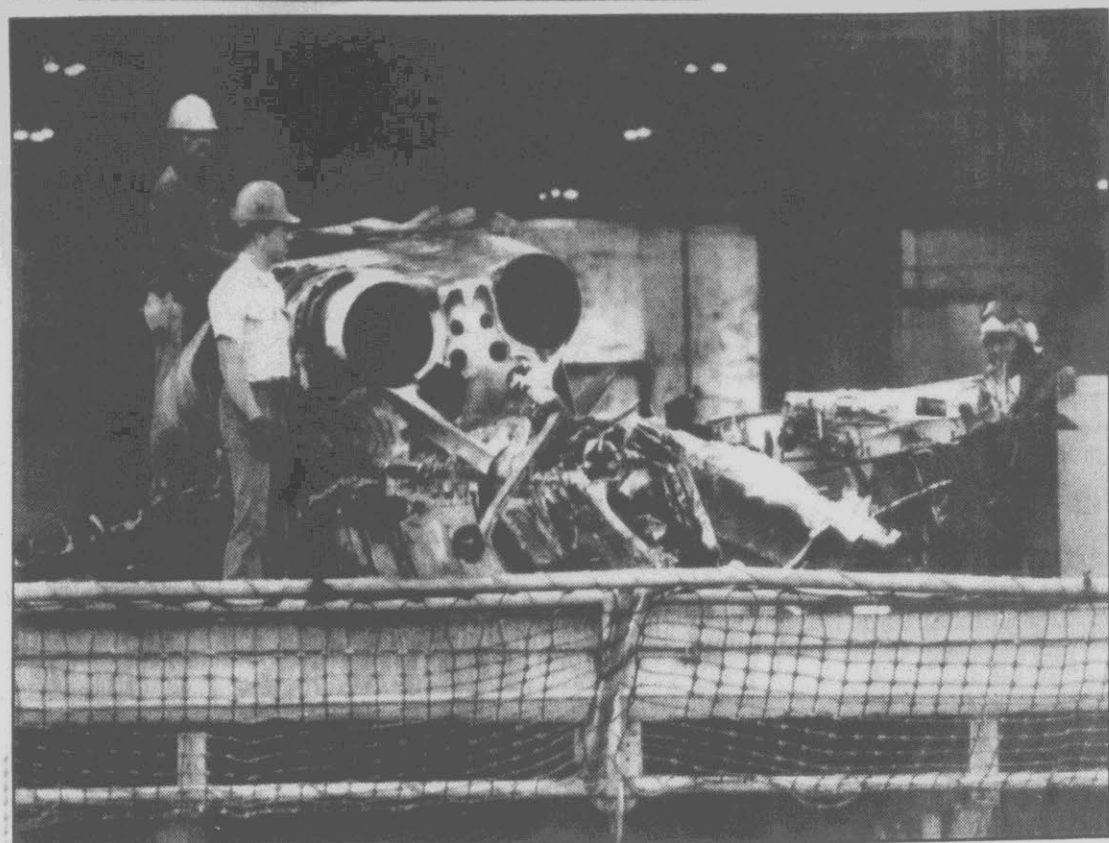

TEHRAN, Iran — As a wave of anti-Americanism sweeps Iran, the country's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, called on citizens "to wage perpetual struggle" against the United States.

Khamenei addressed hundreds of students Wednesday, the same day Parliament passed a law giving the government powers to arrest Americans anywhere and put them on trial if they seek to harm Iranians or the Islamic republic.

The move came three days before expected mass anti-American demonstrations to mark Saturday's 10th anniversary of the seizure of the U.S. Embassy.

Militants stormed the sprawling embassy complex Nov. 4, 1979 and held 52 diplomats and other embassy personnel hostage for 444 days.

"The dismay and shame resulting from this humiliation will always remain on the face of the oppressor ringleaders of the United States," said Khamenei, a former president and successor to the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Congress, Experts Debate Causes Of Navy Accidents

By Susanne M. Schafer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The recent string of accidents aboard Navy vessels may just be due to bad luck, rather than a lack of training or poor equipment, congressional military experts say.

But one civilian specialist who's studied hazards aboard aircraft carriers and hazardous industrial systems.

Overall, Ms. Roberts said, the Navy's safety record "is excellent." From Sunday's jet crash aboard the aircraft carrier USS Lexington that claimed five lives to Wednesday's fire aboard the oiler USS Monongahela, the week has brought a series of accidents that has left Navy brass shaking their heads.

"Operating at sea is an arduous life, and the lesson is that even at peace time there are dangers," said Rear Adm. Brent Baker, the head of the Navy's information division.

"That's no consolation to the families who have lost sons or daughters. But those who have been around the Navy a long time realize that's why business at the University of California at Berkeley, said that while the sailors are young — averaging usually 20 years of age — they are trained for specific jobs through "a repetitive system that demands attention to safety and accountability."

The Navy released figures saying that since the beginning of this year, there have been 101 "operation and training related" fatalities throughout the service.

However, included in this number are the 47 fatalities that resulted from the explosion on board the USS Iowa. Excluding those, there have been 54 fatalities this year, the Navy said.

The Navy counted 64 operation and training related fatalities in 1984; 61 in 1985; 56 in 1986; 72 in 1987, and 63 in 1988.

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., chairman of the House Armed Services subcommittee on seapower and strategic and critical materials, said "these tragic, these sad" events are "not in substance very much connected."

Bennett said the incidents of the past week could be viewed as a "product of bad luck, but that doesn't mean we can't use them to prepare for the future."

we train so hard and emphasize safety. ... You can't prepare for war at the pier," said Baker.

The admiral called the string of accidents "frustrating. It's a real streak of bad luck."

Sen. John Warner of Virginia, the ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee who served as undersecretary and secretary of the Navy for five years, called the incidents "an extraordinary grouping of unrelated accidents."

"Unquestionably we have the finest Navy in the world. We have the best equipment, the best training that money can buy," Warner told reporters.

Warner called charges that Navy personnel were too young for their duties "nonsense." The senator said that when he served in the Navy during World War II, many of the personnel were 17 years old and some could not read or write.

Novella Named Surgeon General

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House denies it has a "litmus test" for its appointments, but concedes Dr. Antonia Novello never would have been named surgeon general if her abortion views clashed with those of President Bush.

Novello's selection as the nation's chief public health officer was announced on Wednesday. A pediatrician and expert on AIDS in children, she would be the first woman and the first Hispanic to hold the post if confirmed by the Senate.

She would succeed the outspoken C. Everett Koop, who served for seven years.

Her nomination comes amid controversy over White House questioning of candidates for a variety of health positions on their abortion views.

Presidential Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater acknowledged such screening took place, but defended it. "We don't hire people that don't support our policies," he said.

In this case, Novello "supports the president's policies," he said.

Although the president's own position has changed since 1980 — when he voiced support for the Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion — he currently opposes all abortions except to protect the life of the mother or in cases of rape or incest.

On the issue of federal funds, his views are more restrictive. Within the past month he vetoed two bills that sought to expand federally financed Medicaid abortions to include cases of rape or incest.

L.A. Paper Closes After 86-Year Run

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Herald Examiner, once the nation's largest afternoon newspaper, published its last edition today, announcing its bittersweet farewell with the headline "So Long, L.A."

Virtually every columnist and many of the 86-year-old newspaper's reporters confessed in print to giving way to tears while composing the edition.

"They tore a part of my heart out yesterday," sports columnist Doug Krikorian declared on a sports page whose headline asserted "We're outta here!"

Humor columnist Gordon Dillow found himself without a joke.

"Tough, hard-bitten journalists aren't supposed to cry," he lamented. "And yet ... when the announcement came that this would be the last edition of this newspaper, dozens of tough, hard-bitten reporters and editors who have spent years dealing with death and destruction and calamity on a daily basis stood around with tears welling up in their eyes."

Hearst Corp. attributed the closing to losses of up to $2 million a month and a lack of suitable buyers since the paper was offered for sale last summer.

The announcement of the closing, which leaves the nation's second-largest city with just one daily paper, came Wednesday from Robert Danzig, general manager of Hearst Newspapers, who spoke from atop the newsroom's copy desk.

"Although operating at a financial deficit for more than two decades, there was never a deficit in the quality and the vigor of its editorial commitment to the people of Los Angeles," he said. "It has been a losing business, but a winning newspaper."

The paper's 831 employees will receive 60 days' severance pay and help in looking for work; longtime staffers will get additional, unspecified benefits.

Founded by William Randolph Hearst in 1903 as the Los Angeles Examiner, the newspaper was under intense pressure in recent years from the Los Angeles Times, the region's dominant daily with five times the Herald's daily circulation.

Aftershock Jolts Northern California

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — An "awesome" aftershock to last month's deadly earthquake jolted Northern California, but the only harm appeared to be more jangled nerves, authorities said today.

The aftershock, which struck at 9:50 p.m. Wednesday and measured 4.4 on the Richter scale, was centered slightly north of the epicenter of the Oct. 17 main shock, said Pat Jorgenson, spokeswoman for the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park.

It was the 84th aftershock of at least magnitude-3.0 and the 21st of 4.0 or greater since Oct. 17. The largest aftershock was magnitude 5.2 and hit 37 minutes after the Oct. 17 quake, which measured 7.1 on the Richter scale.

"Awesome," said Santa Cruz County sheriff's dispatcher Kevin Fink of Wednesday's jolt. "We were sweating bullets for a few seconds."

No damage was reported in Santa Cruz or Watsonville — the region of the epicenter — and only minor damage was reported in San Francisco's Marina District, which was devastated last month.

"Just bricks falling," said Officer Gordon Clark. "People have been calling in sheer panic saying, 'The big one is on the way.' We try to console them and tell them it's an aftershock."

The tremor came as California continued to try to repair its vital transportation links, help displaced people rebuild their lives and figure out how to pay for billions of dollars in damage.

The California Legislature today was scheduled to begin a special session in Sacramento to decide whether to increase the state sales tax by one-quarter cent for 13 months to pay quake costs. Gov. George Deukmejian and the Legislature's top four leaders of both parties have agreed on the plan, which would raise $800 million. The current sales tax is six percent.

Providing shelter has brought the American Red Cross face to face with a new problem — coping with chronically homeless people along with those who lost their homes to the earthquake.

NAACP Says Politics And Self-Help Best

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — After four days of strategy sessions dealing with what they regard as the "present crisis" in civil rights and racial relations, some 300 black leaders have concluded that increased political clout and a new emphasis on self-help are black America's best weapons for resolving the crisis.

They further concluded that an old ally, the U.S. Supreme Court, can no longer be counted upon for support.

The leaders, from predominantly black national and community organizations, reached these conclusions — in a mood, as more than one participant put it, that "it's time to march again," both figuratively and literally — as they ended here Wednesday a "Conference on the Present-Crisis" sponsored and dominated by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The meeting's major target of concern was a spate of recent Supreme Court decisions on civil rights and employment discrimination, characterized at the conference by NAACP executive director Benjamin L. Hooks as "outrageous, dangerous, reactionary" rulings which, "left unchallenged, will do great and irreparable injury to the hopes and aspirations of black Americans."

The conferees agreed that their best chance for overturning the decisions would be an all-out lobbying campaign to secure passage by Congress of legislation aimed at rolling back the rulings, but they recognized that the bill — to be introduced soon — will face strong opposition from conservatives in Congress and the possibility of a presidential veto once it gets to the president's desk.

Nevertheless, the lobbying effort began Tuesday and continued Wednesday right up to the end of the conference as participants from more than 40 states visited the offices of their senators and representatives, Democrats and Republicans alike.

The conference's adoption of a strategy against the Supreme Court decisions also reflected a general view among participants that the court, which had been looked upon for at least the last 35 years as the black America's fundamental base of support for civil rights progress and as the last bastion of protection against the erosion of those rights, no longer can be counted on to perform that role.

German refugees climb over embassy fence in Prague

East Germans Take Advantage Of New 'Open Door' Policy

BERLIN (AP) — About 8,000 East Germans swarmed into Czechoslovakia after East Berlin lifted a travel ban and many reached the West German Embassy in Prague, seeking to follow thousands of countrymen to the West.

The resumption of what has been a historic exodus came as the country's new Communist leader, Egon Krenz, arrived in Warsaw today for meetings with Poland's Communist Party leaders and the new Solidarity prime minister.

Krenz said it was a "great pleasure" for him to meet Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the East bloc's first non-Communist head of government.

"It is a new experience for me, but I think something good can come out of this experience for East Germany," he said.

Pro-reform demonstrations continued across East Germany on Wednesday. The state-run ADN news agency said 20,000 people marched in Neubrandenburg and tens of thousands protested in Frankfurt-on-the-Oder.

The demonstrators have been urging reforms that include free elections, a multi-party political system and an end to press censorship.

Restrictions on travel to Czechoslovakia were imposed Oct. 3 by Erich Honecker, whom Krenz has since replaced, in an attempt to thwart an exodus of young skilled workers fed up with decades of rigid Communist rule.

Krenz rescinded the ban as he began steering East Germany on what he termed "a new course" of tolerance and openness that has included dialogue with the leading banned opposition group, New Forum.

More than 70,000 East Germans have fled to West Germany since August through Hungary or after seeking refuge in West German embassies in Warsaw and Prague.

ADN said at least 8,000 East Germans crossed the border into Czechoslovakia as East German authorities renewed visa-free travel to the neighboring country. West Germany's ZDF television network said this morning that nearly 1,000 East Germans had massed at Bonn's embassy in Prague. ZDF added that more than 1,000 East Germans were still in Warsaw waiting for passage to West.

Krenz has said he wants political and economic changes but has not indicated how far he is willing to go. He has, however, announced an amnesty for people who fled to the West illegally or were caught trying to escape.

Additionally, a prominent East German lawyer reportedly said Wednesday that the government has begun freeing some political prisoners.

After meeting in Moscow with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Krenz said East Germany would follow Gorbachev's path of reform. He told reporters that the two had reached "total agreement on all questions we discussed," one of which was reform in both of their countries.

The West German newspaper Die Welt quoted East German government attorney Wolfgang Vogel as saying his country already has begun freeing political prisoners after pledging amnesty last week.

Vogel said the released prisoners could choose to stay in East Germany or apply for emigration to the West. Die Welt reported.

He also reportedly said the West German practice of paying East Germany for the release of political prisoners has ended.

Protester Is Killed In Belgrade

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Hundreds of people protesting the trials of 15 Albanian separatists battled police in the ethnically torn province of Kosovo, and one protester was killed, sources said today.

The demonstrator, identified as Bedri Sokolji, was shot Wednesday night while taking part in a protest by about 1,000 people in the province's capital of Pristina, informed sources told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

The official Tanjug news agency also confirmed a death during protests on Wednesday.

The sources said several smaller groups of demonstrators fought running battles with police today in different Kosovo towns to protest the trial of Azem Vllasi, a popular former provincial Communist Party chief, and 14 other ethnic Albanians.

The defendants are charged with engaging in "counterrevolutionary activities" and opposing constitutional changes that limited the province's autonomy.

Death is the maximum penalty on conviction of the charges, which include inciting ethnic Albanians to riot and strike. Vllasi's co-defendants are officials and workers at a zinc and lead mine where a strike occurred in March.

Shots were heard today in the Pristina district of Sunceci Breg where security forces used tear gas and firearms to quell a demonstration by an unspecified number of ethnic Albanians, the sources said.

"A real war is going on out there," said a source in a telephone interview. He said the area was sealed off by heavy police forces and armored vehicles.

Drug War Claims Two More Victims

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — A federal judge in Medellin was assassinated as she opened her garage door and a congressman was murdered as he arrived home in a taxi, the two latest apparent victims of the drug lords' war on the government.

Mariela Espinoza was the second judge slain since the government began its crackdown on traffickers 11 weeks ago. The murdered congressman, Luis Francisco Madero, was an active opponent of the powerful drug bosses.

No one claimed responsibility for Wednesday's killings, but suspicion immediately fell on the traffickers.

Colombia's 5,000 judges and other court workers hinted at a new strike. The judicial employees, who struck for three days after another Medellin judge was slain Oct. 17, say the government has not done nearly enough to protect them.

"We are not willing to continue to be the targets in this war," said Helmut Romero, president of the court workers' union. The workers demand bodyguards and bulletproof vests and cars.

Ms. Espinoza, 43, was killed by assailants firing submachine guns as she arrived home in Medellin, the heartland of Colombia's cocaine trade.

U.S. Protesting Police Build Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — The U.S. Embassy has issued its fourth protest in a week over a massive Chinese police presence outside its compound and the harassment by guards of staff and visitors, an embassy source said today.

Also today, China said the visit of former President Nixon will help restore badly strained relations with the United States, but insisted again that the blame for the strain lies with Washington.

The embassy source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the latest verbal protest came Wednesday, hours before another night of provocations outside Ambassador James Lilley's residence.

On Wednesday night, about two dozen uniformed police and at least 10 plainclothes police congregated outside the gate to the residence, shining a spotlight and forcing visitors to go through a gauntlet of armed guards.

Another 20 policemen were posted on nearby streetcorners and along the street in front of the compound, turning some cars away and forcing those going to the embassy to park hundreds of yards away even though there were many empty spaces near the gate.

When visitors tried to park closer to the embassy, police banged on their cars and yelled at them to leave.

Police cursed at a CBS crew that tried to film them, and shined another spotlight into the crew's camera.

A similar massing of police occurred Tuesday evening, only then they were armed with automatic rifles and did not carry spotlights.

In an apparent gesture to Nixon, the People's Armed Police around the three American embassy compounds did not carry rifles Wednesday for the first time in four months.

Nixon aides said the former president told Premier Li Peng he did not like guns and did not want to see rifle-toting guards when he visited the embassy.

Today, guards continued to wear pistols, and eight black or gray Mercedes, some without license plates, were again parked along the street outside the ambassador's residence with men, apparently plainclothes police, seated inside.

The embassy also has complained of three cases of embassy staff finding their car tires slashed and security forces tailing embassy employees as they left the compounds.

Crash Kills Commander

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMMAN, Jordan — The commander of the armed forces in southern Jordan and seven other military men were killed today in a helicopter crash in the region, the government-run radio announced.

Brigadier Saoud Maghsoub Harahsheh was among the eight soldiers and officers who died in the accident, state-run Jordan Radio reported.

It did not say the cause of the accident but a senior army official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it was apparently caused by a technical defect. More details were not immediately available.

The official said the accident occurred in the early morning in the Ghor Al-Safi region, about 60 miles southwest of Amman.

The Ghor Al-Safi is part of the deep valley that divides Jordan from Israel south of the Dead Sea.

Arrangements are being handled by Homestead Funeral Home.

Eveready Confirms Local Plant Will Close

Farrell said operations at the local plant, which also produces a variety of nickel cadmium or rechargeable batteries and a special lithium battery, would be shifted to three other Eveready facilities.

He said the production of carbon zinc batteries will move to Red Oak, Iowa, while the production of rechargeables will move to Fremont, Ohio, and the lithium operations will go to St. Albans, Vermont.

Farrell said the first wave of layoffs would likely come late this month when about 25 people will be laid off. He said, beginning in December, there would be four additional layoffs over the next year or so. Layoffs will come several months apart with 40 to 50 people losing their jobs each time, Farrell said.

He said the shifting of operations to other plants would determine which workers will be released first. "It has everything to do with which functions are being shifted first and that's not all decided yet," Farrell said.

He said Ralston Purina will offer "a generous severance package to financially help our employees and that will vary by years of service." The company will also help employees find new jobs, he said.

Farrell would not discuss details of the severance arrangements, but said most of the company's 270 workers have been with Eveready for an average of 15 years. He said all but 20 workers at the Greenville plant are eligible for some type of retirement or vested pension benefits.

Eveready has been a major Pitt County employer for years and its closing will have a definite impact on the area, according to Lebern E. Rouse, office manager at the Employment Security Commission office in Greenville.

"Eveready's been around for a long time and we're always sorry to see something like this happen," Rouse said from his office this morning. "But with it (the closing) being drawn out like that, over 11 to 14 months, hopefully these people can find jobs."

Rouse said Pitt County's unemployment rate is low enough — 3.3 recorded in September — that workers may not have difficulty finding employment. He said his office would assist Eveready officials in placing workers in new jobs.

"We've been in contact with the people at the plant this morning. We'll be working with them to help the people that are being laid off to get jobs and to get them training if retraining is needed for any of them."

The local facility, which was once owned and operated by Union Carbide Corp., is a 150,000-square-foot structure and has an annual payroll totaling $7 to $9 million, according to Farrell.

Ralston Purina, a food processing company, bought the Greenville plant and other Eveready plants in 1986 when Union Carbide sold off its consumer products division.

Farrell said officials at Ralston Purina have not decided what they will do with the Eveready building or the property on Greenville Boulevard. He said the property will probably be sold once the plant closes.

Nationwide, Eveready employs about 5,000 people and operates 10 facilities, including three in North Carolina — the Greenville plant and two others in Asheboro. Farrell said the Greenville closing would not affect the two Asheboro plants which employ 1,200 people.

Workers Look Ahead

Workers gathered in small clusters across the company parking lot Wednesday, apparently talking about the plant closing.

Like Beamon and his three friends, the employees seemed to need each other's support after hearing the company would shut down over the next 11 to 14 months. The four men weren't talking much when a reporter walked up.

"What I've got to say, you couldn't put in a newspaper," one of them said. The others laughed and shook their heads in agreement.

One shook his head from side to side as if he still couldn't believe the news. Another flushed red with anger. One kicked the toe of his shoe softly into the pavement of the company parking lot. Nervous tension.

All four stood together, quietly for minutes, watching one another, helping each other soak in the bad news.

When they did talk, it was about retirement. All had worked at the company for at least 14 years, yet they worried that they wouldn't meet requirements to receive full benefits.

Under the company's benefit package, the men said a worker's age and his number of years of service had to total 85 in order for the worker to get full benefits. They knew they qualified for partial retirement benefits, but were sure they would not get full benefits.

Retirement, plans to find work, financial obligations, all were concerns voiced by Eveready workers as they emerged from the plant Wednesday after hearing company officials tell them in a mandatory staff meeting that the plant is closing.

"I'm numb right now. It hasn't even sunk in yet," said Raymond Bryant as he walked alone to his car. Bryant has worked at Eveready for 19 years.

"They told us that due to deteriorating sales of batteries, it's necessary to phase out the Greenville plant," Bryant recalled from the staff meeting. "I guess it's just one of those decisions that had to be made."

Bryant is not sure what his next move will be. He has some electronics training and some bricklaying experience. Maybe he'll look for a job along those lines, he said.

"I'll go home and talk it over with my wife," he said. "I'll have to start looking for a job as soon as possible. I do know that."

He said the plant closing came as no real surprise to workers.

"Every time we had a business meeting, there was nothing positive. We all had a feeling," Bryant said. "We never thought it would actually hit here, but it did."

Sam Daniels, who has also worked with Eveready for 19 years, said his years in the National Guard will help him get through what he anticipates will be a rough time.

"I'll survive this. I'll be just fine," Daniels said. "I'm a professional soldier. Soldiers are taught to survive devastation."

Marjorie Foreman, who worked at the local plant for 3 years, was not as calm or as optimistic as Daniels.

Boycott

designed to help the re-election campaigns of certain candidates.

The permits were issued with major restrictions on the time of day and number of hours parties could occur, Roakes said. Police representatives who spoke to the committee said they had no problems with the permit system, he said.

"We had a great working relationship (with the police)," Roakes said.

The one-day boycott is designed to show Greenville residents and officials how much ECU means to the community, not to hurt local businesses, Roakes said. "This is not against the businesses — it's against the people that are hurting us."

Roakes said he hopes city officials will listen. "I would like for them to reconsider this issue of noise permits," he said. "I would like for them to start listening to the students' viewpoint on these issues and recognize how important ECU is to this community."

But the city's attorney said today the boycott will miss its intended target. "I certainly regret it, but it's nothing that affects the city government," MacCarley said.

An organizer of the boycott said she expected most ECU students to participate, especially those in fraternities and sororities.

"If one Greek's going to do it then the whole Greek system's going to do it," Renee Cundiff, the SGA representative who came up with the boycott idea, said. The students plan to survey businesses later in the week to see how successful the boycott was, she said.

Students

"If I would have heard the word disperse or 'you're going to be arrested if you don't leave,'" he would have been gone, said Samuel Randall Whitten, an ECU student who was arrested. Whitten, 26, lives on Library Street.

Whitten, who said police were not using sirens or blue lights, said he leaned against a police car for several minutes without being told anything by officers, who were standing close by.

"It gave the appearance that the police were controlling the party," Whitten said.

People arrested during the confrontation were put on buses parked near the intersection of First and Oak streets. From there, they were taken before a magistrate.

Mike Snell, a resident of Oak Street who was not arrested, said the arrests could have been avoided.

"If they had just opened downtown, all this trouble would not have happened," he said.

In a debate at ECU on Wednesday night, Mayor Ed Carter said he would support an investigation of police conduct in the incident.

Youth Get A Boost In Poor Dublin Neighborhood

By Robert Barr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUBLIN, Ireland — The ladder of ambition for some of the young men in old Dublin begins with breaking a car window, then stealing what's inside the car, then stealing a whole car. Then they burn it, without stripping a few saleable parts.

"They don't think that far," says Gus Monaghan, who works with young school dropouts in the rough and ready streets of the Liberties, hoping to steer them away from a life of breaking into cars.

The neighborhood where Jonathan Swift wrote "Gulliver's Travels" and George Frideric Handel premiered his "Messiah" can be described today by what it lacks: parks, jobs and, for many, a future.

At a school established by the South Inner City Community Development Association, Monaghan starts with the basics, teaching often unruly young school dropouts how to iron a shirt, cook a meal or do simple carpentry.

"These young people have never been asked to accept the consequences of their own actions," says David Orr, the school's director.

They and their neighbors are quite unprepared for any economic miracles that may occur, Orr added.

"If Toyota walked in here and created 2,000 jobs, there would be no one here to take them," he said.

The Liberties, so called because it is outside the medieval city walls, stands apart from an Irish economy that is generating record trade surpluses and strong economic growth of 5 percent this year.

That fortunate Dublin is seen on Grafton Street, where Ralph Lauren and Laura Ashley set the marketing tone, but not on Meath Street, the gritty strip in the Liberties where the inner city association has its offices.

"It's a different world really," says Roisin Elliott, whose work at the association includes counseling frightened people in debt to loan sharks.

Employment at the Guinness brewery, the neighborhood's biggest industry, has dropped from 4,000 jobs two decades ago to 1,400.

Liam Fenlon, who is chairman of the association's board, says the group has put 175 young people to work — "people who normally never ever got work, three-fourths of whom, I have no hesitation in saying, would end up in jail."

The school's courses include woodworking, sewing and photography, and it is placing 60 percent or more of its graduates in fulltime jobs, he says.

Three students have been studying German and will go to West Germany for three months' work experience.

"If I get a job I'll stay, because there is nothing here," says Jinet McGuinness, 17, who left school three years ago.

Glen Duggan, 17, also bound for Germany, joined the training program a year after being expelled from school — for throwing chairs, he explains. Then he drifted on the streets.

Stephen Domican, 16, is learning carpentry and wants to stay in Dublin but says the neighborhood needs "more houses, more jobs, more construction."

Others cannot wait to leave.

"I'd go now but you're not allowed," said Audrey Langley, 15.

"I'd hate leaving my family and friends and where you grew up and all," she added. "Still, they can't expect you stay here and live on the dole for the rest of your life."

Poverty is an ancient presence in the Liberties.

Jonathan Swift, the dean of St. Patrick's Cathedral, raged at Ireland's deprivation and in 1729 offered "A Modest Proposal" for Preventing the Children of Ireland from being a Burden to their Parents or Country." In that famous satire, his modest proposal was to eat the young.

Swift's grave in St. Patrick's Cathedral is a highlight of a Liberties tour developed by the inner-city association to create four part-time jobs.

Margaret Doyle always points out the banners of the Order of St. Patrick in the cathedral and retells the story, possibly apocryphal, of how prospective members demonstrated aristocratic credentials.

"You had to prove that your family hadn't worked in 200 years," she said. "We'll all qualify for it soon."

Wedding Vows Said Sunday Afternoon

CHICOD — Mysha Leah Alexander and Mark D. Dixon were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in a double-ring ceremony.

The Rev. Bobby Williams conducted the ceremony in Shelmerdine Pentecostal Holiness Church.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde B. Alexander of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby R. Dixon of Grimesland.

Kim Garner of Wilmington was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Debbie Hearn and Barbara Eadie, both of Greenville.

The best man was Gary Phipps of Greenville, and ushers were Jerry Dixon of Grimesland, brother of the bridegroom, and Phillip Winstead of Greenville.

Organist Diane Hawkins, vocalist

Marilyn Gerlinger, violinist Kathryn Jenkins and flutist Mike Army presented wedding music.

The bride wore her mother's formal wedding gown of tulle and lace over satin with a chantilly lace bodice, long sleeves and V-neckline. The skirt had panels of lace forming a chapel train. Her veil of illusion was attached to a halo of silk flowers and pearls. She carried silk roses with ribbon.

Each of the attendants wore a pink taffeta tea-length dress and carried a white lace fan with pink silk roses.

A champagne reception was held at the home of the bride given by the bride's parents and grandmother, Mrs. Sam Richardson of Rocky Mount.

The couple will live in Grimesland after a trip to the North Carolina mountains.

The bride is a registered nurse at

MRS. DIXON

Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and the bridegroom is employed by the City of Greenville fire and rescue.

An after-rehearsal dinner hosted by the bridegroom's parents, a shower and a bridesmaids luncheon honored the couple prior to their wedding.

Flu Can Be Extremely Serious

By Dr. T. Franklin Williams
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BETHESDA, Md. — The old adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," holds true for the flu.

Each winter millions of Americans suffer the fever, aches and pains of influenza. Most recover from the effects in a week or so, but for many older people the flu and its complications are extremely serious.

While the body's immune system is busy fighting the flu, a person is less capable of resisting another life-threatening infection like pneumonia. Older people and those with chronic diseases such as heart disease, emphysema, asthma and diabetes have the greatest risk of developing pneumonia along with the flu.

And older people are more likely to require hospitalization. Flu and pneumonia combined are the sixth leading cause of death in the United States, and 80 to 90 percent of the deaths are in people 65 and older.

But flu and its complications need not be deadly, and can be prevented by vaccinating high-risk individuals six to eight weeks before the season begins.

Influenza is caused by a virus that infects the nose, throat and lungs. Flu travels quickly, especially during winter in crowded indoor places like malls, grocery stores, theaters and hospitals. When someone with the flu coughs or sneezes, droplets containing particles of the virus spread to other people.

refer to places where large outbreaks of new flu strains have first appeared.

The vaccine is made from highly purified, killed viruses. Because the flu shot does not contain infectious viruses, it does not cause the flu. The most common side effect is a sore arm, which occurs in less than one-third of those vaccinated and usually lasts only a day or so. A few people also may develop a brief, low-grade fever and some minor aches and pains, which begin six to 12 hours after vaccination and can persist for one or two days.

If a person has no special reason not to take aspirin, low doses (such as one tablet every three to four hours) usually will relieve these symptoms.

Immediate allergic reactions, such as hives, rarely occur after influenza vaccination. Anyone allergic to eggs, which are used to grow the virus for the vaccine, should NOT receive the vaccine since some egg protein may be present.

Since the flu vaccine takes several weeks to work, the best time to be vaccinated is in November. A vaccine also is available against the most common types of bacteria which cause pneumonia. The flu shot can be given at the same time as the pneumonia vaccine without increasing the side effects. The flu shot must be given every year, but the pneumonia vaccine should be given only once.

In addition to the flu shot, an antiviral drug — amantadine — can prevent infection by certain strains. The drug is useful for people who have not had the vaccine or as extra protection for those who have been immunized.

When taken soon after the early signs are felt, amantadine reduces the duration of fever and other symptoms. It also can prevent infection if taken during the entire four- to six-week course of a flu epidemic.

After people stop taking the drug, they become susceptible to the virus again. It occasionally causes difficulty sleeping, impaired concentration and dizziness, and has been associated with falls in older people. As with all medication, patients should take it only with a doctor's recommendation.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John Jake Godbold Jr. of Lincolnton announce the engagement of their daughter, Susan Gladys Godbold, to Karl Justin Stuppig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph H. Stuppig of Charlotte. A March 17 wedding is planned.

After infection, symptoms usually appear in two to four days; the disease continues to be contagious for another three to four days.

Once the virus enters the body, it multiplies and causes a variety of well-known complaints, including chills and fever, headache, runny nose, sore throat and a dry cough. Extreme weakness and muscle aches and pains often last for several days. If the virus invades the lungs, viral pneumonia can develop.

To prevent the flu, people 65 and older and residents of nursing homes and other chronic-care facilities should be vaccinated. Also, health professionals, nursing home workers and family members who live with someone over 65 should get a flu shot to avoid spreading the disease to those at risk.

Unlike other viruses, the flu virus changes from time to time. Because different strains of the virus tend to spread flu each season, a new vaccine is prepared every year. It contains strains of the flu virus recently circulating worldwide and believed likely to hit during the coming winter. Nicknames such as the "Spanish flu" and "Hong Kong flu"

Dear Abby: In a recent column, you praised the "Hug a Tree" survival program and credit "Abe Taylor" as its creator. In the first place, the man's name is "AB Taylor," and in the second place, he did not create the program, I did.

I wrote every word of that program and took every photographic slide. Of course, Mr. Taylor was very helpful, but the material was mine. I even had it copyrighted.

In the past, you have always given credit where credit was due. Will you kindly do the same for me? — Thomas R. Jacobs, author of Hug a Tree and Survive

Dear Mr. Jacobs: You bet! Consider yourself duly credited for that wonderful program. And my apologies to Ab for calling him Abe.

For a dandy tip for campers who camp out with toddlers, read on:

Dear Abby: Hugging a tree is good advice for youngsters who lose their way in the woods, and as one writer suggested, a whistle around the neck is also a good idea for campers.

But what about toddlers who wander off in a wooded area and are too young to follow instructions about hugging a tree? Or even blowing a whistle should they get lost?

My husband and I have been camping in the Colorado Rockies with our children since they were babies, and I have a suggestion for parents who camp out with very young children.

To keep your children from getting lost, simply remove their "car seats" from the automobile and use them as security chairs. Infant car seats provide comfortable, "escape-proof" chairs that can be placed by campfires, rivers or wherever you are on your camping trip. While parents are fishing, erecting a tent or preparing meals, with the little ones safely in their escape-proof car seats, there is no need to worry about where they are.

Children under 3 years of age do wander, and in hilly, wooded terrain like we have in Colorado, only a few minutes is all it takes for a youngster to get lost. And sound doesn't carry very well in the mountains.

I hope this suggestion will save some toddler the grief of getting lost, or some parents the pain of losing a child on a camping trip. Sad to say, it happens to somebody's child every year. — Carolyn Reed, Denver

Dear Abby: Our family has a problem. We say it's Mom's job to check the pockets before putting clothes in the washer. Mom says it's the wearer's job.

Abby, when an article of clothing is in the laundry, it should be ready to be washed! So whose job is it to check the pockets? — Arguing In Odgen, Utah

Dear Arguing: The wearer should check the pockets first. And if the wearer isn't doing the laundry, the person who does it should check the pockets to be sure the wearer hasn't overlooked something that probably will not survive the wash cycle — such as paper money, a lottery ticket, a parking ticket or somebody's telephone number.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Childbirth Educator Issues Guide

By George Tibbitts
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — If you became a father in the last three decades, odds are you could experience what your father couldn't: being there.

If you became a mother, you may have avoided what to many women of your mother's generation was a humiliating experience.

Credit your parents and yourselves for the change, says Penny Simkin, an internationally recognized childbirth educator and author of a new guide for fathers, medical caregivers and others who help women give birth.

Simkin, a physical therapist and a mainstay of the Childbirth Education Association of Seattle, has written "The Birth Partner: Everything You Need to Know to Help a Woman Through Childbirth."

Simkin and CEAS' Janet Whalley and Anne Kepler already have won Seattle a reputation within the natural childbirth movement, and wrote a widely used text for new parents, "Pregnancy, Childbirth and the Newborn," published in 1984.

"It's one of the most accepted books in the childbirth field," said Trudy Keller, president of the International Childbirth Education Association. The Seattle group is one of the most influential within ICEA, and Simkin and Kepler especially are sought to speak on teaching techniques, she said.

Since the late 1950s, treatment of pregnant women and fathers-to-be has changed, mostly because parents have demanded it. Realization that pregnancy and birth "really are conditions of health and not illness," Simkin said, has "given consumers more leeway in what kind of care they can get."

It wasn't long ago that giving birth meant being drugged, shaved and strapped to a table and stirrups while husbands waited in the hall. It's common for women to resent the humiliation they felt, even long after their children are grown. "Wherever I go, a woman comes up and says, 'When you talk about remembering ...' and she gives me this story about how she was hurt."

While medical intervention often is critical, in most normal births the mother should call the shots, Simkin says, and tells birth partners: "Your main role ... is to help her have the kind of birth she desires."

Her book, published by Harvard Common Press, already has been hailed by experts, including La Leche League International co-founder Marian Tompson, who said it's "destined to become the birth partner's bible."

"I think it's terrific," said Sheila Kitzinger, a leader of the natural childbirth movement and author of "The Complete Book of Pregnancy and Childbirth."

"It's very much needed. I think it will be very helpful for a husband, for anyone, supporting a woman in childbirth," Mrs. Kitzinger said in an telephone interview from her home near Oxford, England.

As recently as the 1970s, "natural childbirth" meant birth without pain medication, but still with the mother on her back, feet in stirrups and usually undergoing an episiotomy, or incision to widen the vagina, Simkin said.

Today, three-quarters of all new mothers receive childbirth education, and women who want to avoid drugs are encouraged to do whatever helps them relax in labor, be it a warm bath, walking hospital halls, massage, cold treatments or special breathing techniques.

Having the father at her side to encourage, steady and coach is crucial, Simkin said. "I would say the father is the sine qua non. I think the love and the intimate knowledge of the woman can't be replicated by anyone else."

Her book, much of which has appeared as photocopies and handouts in her classes, offers dozens of suggestions for easing labor, as well as information on what's going on physically and emotionally in the mother.

"It's a very concise, step-by-step guide," Mrs. Kitzinger said. "I think it's also got a warmth in it, an understanding of how the partner may be feeling."

CEAS started in the 1950s, and is the third-oldest group associated with the International Childbirth Education Association. Simkin, 51, didn't become involved until 1968, when she and her husband, Peter, a professor of medicine at the University of Washington, moved to Seattle with their four children. She thought teaching CEAS classes would be a good part-time job.

"I was not sure childbirth education was really helpful — I had had four babies without it." But at a reunion following her first class, she was taken by the enthusiastic response from the new parents. "I really got hooked."

CEAS, which has about 40 instructors, teaches more than 2,500 families a year. Simkin estimates she has taught over 4,500 families in 21 years.

Though she is allied with CEAS and is one of its teachers, Simkin has made a business of teaching childbirth instructors and publishing specialized books and pamphlets for them. Classes cover anatomy and physiology, but also focus on what parents want from childbirth, beyond a healthy child. Time is spent on feelings and practicing breathing, massage and other comfort measures.

"So often things we emphasize in childbirth class really haven't been explored in a relationship," Simkin said. "It's not sexual, but intimacy. How she likes to be touched, how she likes to be talked to. A lot find they learn about their partner things they've never known."

The classes also teach how a woman can negotiate with a doctor or hospital for the birth she wants. While most caregivers now accept natural childbirth as the norm, and many hospitals give their own classes, "I think there are people in this field who still resent women and partners who want to participate." "I guess the message I would give to medical caregivers would be: 'This woman will never forget this day in her life and she will never forget your part in it. And you have a choice in how you will be remembered.'"

Perfectionists Learn Rules

I'm one of those people who leafs through airline magazines and can't resist taking the Leona Helmsley quiz. The teaser says, "Spotless. But not to Leona Helmsley. Can you see why?" I look at four hand towels and two bath towels hung neatly on a bar and scratch my head. Looks all right to me. Wrong! According to Leona, there should be four bath towels to go with the four hand towels.

I also miss seeing two extra pillows in the closet instead of one, and a chair without an ottoman. I blow my chance to play the Palace. Is that sick or what?

There is no need to wonder how little girls grow up to be fastidious, nit-picking, domestic perfectionists. They are groomed that way. Several weeks ago, I heard from children who had been raised by "The Speed Demon," a woman obsessed with cleanliness. The children had some concern about their futures.

This prompted a letter from "Raked But Not Ruined," four sisters who said their mother, Donna Reed, not only vacuumed the rug every day, she raked it. If you made the mistake of walking into the living room, you had to rake your way back out. They revealed she once extinguished the pilot light on the water heater as she was vacuuming it!

The scary part about all of this is how growing up in this antiseptic

Restoring Houses

NEW YORK (AP) — When you see that quaint little place in the country and experience love at first sight try to remember that the house may well require "a little cosmetic work."

Here are some restoration tips from Family Circle magazine:

— Inspect Before You Buy: Have a thorough inspection of the premises done by a professional. A written report usually costs $150 to $250 and will flag structural weaknesses.

— Hire a Contractor You Can Trust: Look for someone who shares your enthusiasm. If a contractor talks about dropping a ceiling or removing period molding, he's probably not right for the job.

— Evaluate Pre-Existing Conditions: Be aware that charming architectural details often require more than normal upkeep.

— Obtain a Written Guarantee of Workmanship: An old-house specialist should be willing to assure you that his finishing work — the details — will last for years.

At Wits End

environment ultimately affects your life. Do your children become Leona Helmsleys in spite of themselves?

The "Raked But Not Ruined" heirs say "yes." "When you least expect it," they wrote, "you find yourself wanting to wash your playing cards. You develop an uncontrollable urge to clean the insides of electrical outlets. One bright, sunny Saturday morning you wake up with no other thought in your mind than scrubbing your baseboards with a toothbrush. You are never safe. You have to force yourself to leave some crumbs under the toaster."

My children don't have a thing to worry about. One day I looked down and saw these little people who left footprints on the ceiling and I said to the dog, "Don't kiss 'em. You don't know where they've been." I was losing the domestic battle and I knew it. From that day forward, I bought black towels, considered dust a blackboard of life, and told everyone unmade beds gave you good skin. Don't look for anyone in this family to discover a crease in his sheet at 1 a.m. and awake the maid to demand the sheet be ironed and the bed remade.

I tend to live by the adage, "If a man's home is his castle ... let him clean it!"

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward today as traders awaited the latest reading on the state of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 10.24 to 2,635.66 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 375 up, 524 down and 524 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 19.56 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Labor Department is due to report Friday morning on the employment situation for October.

Advance estimates call for the figures to show a relatively modest increase in nonfarm payroll employment, reinforcing recent evidence of slowing economic growth. That would presumably give the Federal Reserve extra leeway to relax its credit policy soon, encouraging interest rates to fall.

But brokers said investors were still worried about unexpectedly weak earnings reports issued by many companies for the third quarter.

A good many Wall Streeters believe profits and dividends may suffer further this winter, even if the economy is able to achieve a "soft landing" rather than any severe slump.

Uneasiness on that score was heightened today when Compaq Computer projected lower fourth-quarter profits. Compaq shares were delayed in opening.

UAL rose 2 to 179 following word late Wednesday that Reliance Group sought clearance to increase its interest in the company to more than 15 percent.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .45 to 188.39. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 10 at 372.24.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average edged up .82 to 2,645.90.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE, with 841 up, 632 down and 475 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 154.24 million shares, against 176.10 million in the previous session.

Kirk To Head Business Council

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Phil Kirk, chief of staff for Gov. Jim Martin, has been selected president and secretary of North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry.

Kirk will assume his duties as top executive of the Raleigh-based statewide business association on Dec. 1.

"We at NCCBI believe that Phil Kirk has exactly the right combination of skills and experience to lead our organization to new heights," said NCCBI Chairman Edwin B. Borden.

Kirk has served twice as secretary of the state Department of Human Resources. He was executive director of Martin's transition team in 1984, administrative assistant for former U.S. Rep. and Sen. Jim Broyhill, vice president of operations for Moderncare Management Co. in Whiteville and administrative assistant to Gov. Jim Holshouser.

In 1970, Kirk became the youngest state senator in North Carolina history, representing Davie, Davidson and Rowan counties until 1972.

Kirk replaces interim President Robert Scoggin.

Pipeline May Cut Gas Rates

By Stuart Savage

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Construction of a $7 million underground natural gas pipeline between Emporia, Va., and Roanoke Rapids could lead to lower natural gas rates for Greenville Utilities Commission customers, GUC General manager Malcolm Green said this morning.

North Carolina Natural Gas Corp., GUC's wholesale supplier, said Wednesday that Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. would build a 7.5-mile, 16-inch diameter line to connect an existing Columbia Gas System line with existing NCNG facilities near N.C. 48 at Roanoke Rapids. The line is expected to be in service by late December.

"Columbia coming into the state gives us two suppliers," Green said. Now all natural gas coming to NCNG's system comes from Transco, formerly Trans Continental Gas Pipe Line Co.

"Having Columbia in the state does two things," Green said. "It gives Transco some competition," which may cause their rates to drop, "and gives us the ability to transport gas from two directions. We will have two sources for transporting wellhead gas."

Since the summer of 1988 the GUC has been buying wellhead natural gas during the summer and having it transported to Greenville, by Transco and NCNG, for resale. The utility has saved enough through the wellhead purchase program that GUC's board, last month, voted to cut gas rates by 5 percent for residential customers.

Having two sources for transportation — Transco or Columbia — "should allow us to transport later in the year, in cold months when Transco suffers capacity problems on their line, and let us start (transporting) earlier in the spring," Green said. "That will amount to cost savings."

Ford Makes Offer For Jaguar

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Ford Motor Co. today made a friendly offer of $2.5 billion in cash for the struggling British luxury carmaker Jaguar PLC.

Jaguar, which had been negotiating a deal with General Motors Corp. to fend off unwanted advances from Ford, said it would recommend that its shareholders accept Ford's offer of 850 pence a share, the equivalent of $13.35 a share. Shareholders must approve a takeover by a 75 percent majority.

GM said it was reviewing its options. The world's biggest automaker has U.S. regulatory approval to buy up to 15 percent of Jaguar.

Until this morning's announcement, GM was intent on pursuing a deal to preserve Jaguar's independence, said a GM spokesman in London, speaking on condition of anonymity.

No Surprise: JMU The Pick In CAA

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — To the surprise of just about no one, James Madison University has been picked to win the Colonial Athletic Association's 1989-90 basketball championship.

Well, maybe JMU coach Lefty Driesell says he's surprised, but everyone is taking that with a grain of salt.

"It's ludicrous," Driesell said after both the coaches and the media voted his Dukes as the team to beat during the CAA's annual Media Day activities Wednesday.

"Last year, you all picked us to finish last and this year you picked us first? I've only got four players back from last year."

It's not so much what Lefty has back, although one of those four is William Davis, the CAA's Rookie of the Year. He's also loaded up with transfers and other newcomers who have a reputation that has preceded them.

Madison received four coaches' votes in that poll and earned a total of 46 points. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own teams.

The Dukes were followed in the balloting by Richmond, George Mason, American, UNC-Wilmington, East Carolina, William & Mary and Navy.

The media ballot also tabbed JMU, followed by Richmond, American, George Mason, UNCW, ECU, William & Mary and Navy.

American's Ron Draper was selected as the pre-season choice for Player of the Year by the media, receiving 15 votes. Richmond's Ken Atkinson and JMU's Steve Hood each drew two votes.

Draper, a 6-8 forward/center, averaged 16.4 points and 12.0 rebounds last year while Atkinson, a 6-0 guard, averaged 13.9 points per game for Richmond's Spiders.

Hood, a 6-7 transfer from Maryland, will be in his first season with the Dukes. In two seasons with the Terps, he averaged 10.8 points a game.

The media all-conference pre-season team includes Draper (21 votes), Atkinson (20), Navy's Eddie Reddick (11), Hood (9), George Mason's Steve Smith (8) and Richmond's Scott Stapleton and JMU's Billy Coles and William Davis (6 each).

The coaches' all-conference team consists of Atkinson, Draper, Smith, Reddick, Coles and Davis on the first team. JMU's Troy Bostic, Hood, William & Mary's Scott Smith, Stapleton and GMU's Byron Tucker made the second unit.

Atkinson and Draper were the only unanimous choices on the coaches' ballot.

Doughnuts and Sweet Stuff

After having had the benefit of such players as Brian Rowsom and Larry Houzer on the inside, UNCW coach Bob McPherson calls this year's Seahawk squad a doughnut team.

"We just don't have anything in the middle," he quipped to the media.

American's Eddie Tapscott took a cue from that, saying the Eagles were just the opposite.

"We've got the sweet stuff in the middle (Draper), but we've got to find a way to sweeten up the bread around it."

Steele Missing

East Carolina coach Mike Steele was the only one of the league's eight coaches missing from Media Day.

Assistant coach Chris Benetti filled in for him, saying Steele had a strep throat.

"You know how much Coach Steele likes to talk," Benetti told the gathering. "Well, he hasn't been able to yell for about a week now, so it's been pretty quiet in practice."

"I'm not sure that I want to be around when he gets his voice back," Benetti joked.

Transfer Haven

Is the Colonial a haven for the transfer student/athlete this year?

A look through the CAA media guide shows 13 transfers who are eligible this year. Six of those are on Madison's roster. American, East Carolina and George Mason each had two and Richmond one.

All five teams are expected to make great use of the transfers, and all five may have them among their starters.

But the use of junior college transfers is nothing new for the conference. A difference this year is the number of transfers from other four-year schools.

At JMU, Steve Hood (Maryland) and Fess Irvin (Louisiana State) are two of the main reasons the Dukes are picked to win the league.

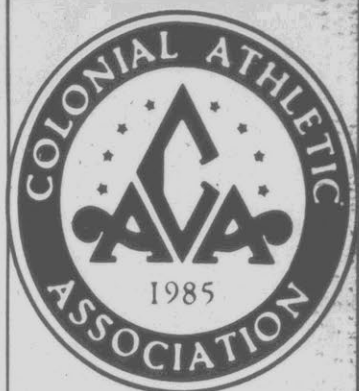

At GMU, 6-9 Byron Hopkins (North Carolina State) will be eligible in the second semester and he gives the Patriots added strength up front.

In addition, there are several others in the league who will be sitting out after transferring.

Both Navy's Pete Herrmann and William & Mary's Chuck Swenson said that transfers were of no consequence to them, unless it's someone leaving.

But others, like Driesell, said he had no qualms about accepting transfers, saying that if they had graduated from a junior college and had the proper credits to transfer, he saw no problem with it.

Dick Tarrant of Richmond, the dean among the CAA coaches, said he rarely took a junior college transfer, calling them academic risks. He does take transfers from other four-year schools, noting that most of the time, he has been involved

Burnette Adjusts To A Faster Pace

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina linebacker Ken Burnette grew up accustomed to peace and quiet and a lot of it, which made his adjustment to college life a big one.

Three years ago, Burnette decided he wanted to play college football, so he left his hometown of Spruce Pine, located in the mountains about halfway between Asheville and Boone, and came to Greenville at the urging of then ECU assistant coach Don Powers.

He soon found the differences between Greenville and Spruce Pine to be considerable.

"It's a real big town for me, huge," Burnette said as he broke into a smile and shook his head. "It's flat and it's hot. It's already snafed a couple of times at home. It was a real culture shock as far as the people. That's not detrimental or anything."

"Everybody is kind of wild down here compared to at home, I guess. At home everybody kind of stays at home. There's no such thing as night life where I come from. You can cruise town maybe. That's about it. We've got one movie theatre. Down here it's a big thing."

On the field, though, things have gone pretty smoothly for Burnette, who on Saturday will start at defensive end against seventh-ranked Miami.

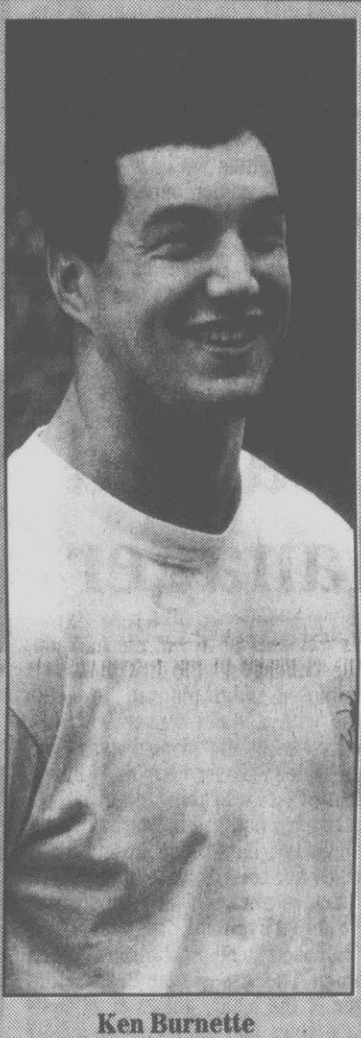

It's the third position for Burnette since he's arrived in Greenville.

A high school quarterback, Burnette rushed and passed for 1,585 yards during his senior year at Mitchell High School.

As a freshman, he played defensive back and was red-shirted. The following season he was moved to linebacker and earned a scholarship, playing in all 11 games, with a high of 14 tackles against Cincinnati.

"With the weight program down here I kind of outgrew defensive back and moved to linebacker," Burnette said. "Initially on the linebacker transi-

'Canes Tradition Continues

QBs Still King Under Erickson

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Miami's Hurricanes saw a 13-game winning streak come to an end this past weekend as arch-rival Florida State pulled out a 24-10 win.

That dropped the 'Canes from second to seventh in the Associated Press poll but makes them nonetheless a formidable foe for East Carolina's Pirates this Saturday in the Orange Bowl. Kickoff is set for 4 p.m.

East Carolina has never won in the seven-game series, although it did come close back in 1983 when a dropped pass in the end zone on the final play of the game allowed Miami to take a 12-7 win. The Hurricanes went on that year to win the national championship.

But aside from that game, the series has been one-sided. Last year, Miami took a 31-7 win, running out to a 17-0 lead at the end of the first half.

And although quarterback Steve Walsh elected to go pro after the season ended, the Hurricanes, as they always seem to do, have come up with another good one.

Another? Sorry, how about a couple of other good ones.

Two key reasons are quarterbacks Craig Erickson (no kin to the coach) and Gino Torretta.

Erickson drew the starting assignment after the end of fall drills. Before suffering a broken knuckle against Michigan State, he guided the team to three straight wins. Torretta finished off the Michigan State win and added two more before stumbling against Florida State.

Erickson may be back for this Saturday's game, but ECU coach Bill Lewis says it really doesn't matter. The two are very, very similar and either will cause trouble for the Bucs.

Erickson, in his three-plus games, has connected on 75 of 140 passes for 1,001 yards with eight touchdowns and six interceptions. Torretta, meanwhile, has hit 91 of 165 for 1,184 yards, eight touchdowns and as many interceptions.

The Associated Press

Leonard Conley leads Miami's rushing attack

Two weeks ago, Torretta passed for a school-record 488 yards, hitting on 32 of 49 attempts.

Miami's offense under Coach Erickson is somewhat different than in the past, Lewis notes. Rather than giving an I-backfield look, the Hurricanes use a one-back offense — and at times, a no-back offense.

"They'll put Leonard Conley back there and hand off to him on a couple of basic plays, or put him in motion and throw the ball," Lewis said. Conley has carried the ball 104 times, more than twice that of any other back, and picked up 410 yards.

The run, however, has resulted in less than one-third of the total offense.

The quarterbacks have four prime receivers. They are wingback Wesley Carroll, flanker Dale Dawkins, split end Randal Hill and tight end Rob Chudzinski.

Carroll is far and away the leader. He's caught 40 passes for 595 yards and has five touchdowns. Dawkins has 31 grabs for 478 yards and one score, while Hill has 26 catches for 352 yards and four scores. Chudzinski has 15 catches for 157 yards.

Conley, out of the backfield, has 14 catches for 153 yards.

All four of the primary receivers have had 100-yard games so far this year.

One of the most potent weapons in the Miami arsenal, however, is kicker Carlos Huerta. Just a sophomore, Huerta has yet to miss in 76 point-after-touchdown conversions. And he's 32 of 36 on field goal attempts of less than 50 yards. Thus far this year, he's made good on all 32 of his PAT and 12 of 15 field goals.

Defensively, linebackers Maurice Crum and Richard Newbill lead the way with just under 60 tackles each. Cornerback Roland Smith is the leader in interceptions with four while corner Kenny Berry has three.

The 1980's have been kind to Miami. During that period, only Nebraska has a better overall percentage — and Miami has beaten the Cornhuskers in both of their meetings — in Orange Bowl Classic games.

Miami has a 29-game winning streak in the Orange Bowl and is 49-6 in the Orange Bowl during the decade.

The Hurricanes also have lost only two regular season games over the last five years and have won 29 of their last 31 games overall.

Powell Reaches Semifinals

CHAPEL HILL — Rose High sophomore Paige Powell advanced to today's semifinal round of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association Class 4-A girls' tennis championships with three wins Wednesday afternoon at the University of North Carolina Tennis Complex.

Powell, a two-time Wilson Regional champion and a runner-up to Durham Jordan's Scotti Thomas in last year's state tournament, dropped only six games in setting up a meeting with eighth-seeded Cara White of Henderson Vance.

Powell swept past Traci Caroway of Morganton Freedom 6-0, 6-2, Kristy Goodman of Richmond County 6-2, 6-0 and Tory Shroeder of Chapel Hill 6-1, 6-1.

White received a first-round bye then eased past Kathryn Birzenieks of Wilmington Hoggard 6-0, 6-0 before stunning Thomas 7-5, 2-6, 6-4.

Top-seeded Helen Spencer of Burlington Cummings, the state 3-A champion last year, will meet fifth-seeded Mandy Saharic in the other semifinals.

Rose's Tricia Tripp was ousted in the opening round by Sara Cranford of Winston-Salem Parkland 6-0, 6-0.

Two-time defending state champion Goldsboro, Durham Jordan and Chapel Hill share first place with nine points each. Charlotte Myers Park managed seven points, followed by Rose, South Mecklenburg, Burlington Williams and Hickory with six each.

In doubles, the top-seeded team of juniors Daniela Marx and Lee Worrell of Goldsboro stormed into the semifinals, where they will face the freshman duo of Elizabeth Donovan and Liz Tuttle of Hickory.

Marx-Worrell have captured the state title the past two years.

Susannah Cobb-Jennifer Thomas of Chapel Hill will meet Lisa Cook-Vera Jandera of South Mecklenburg in the other doubles semifinals.

The finals are also set for today.

Washington's Manning Advances To Semifinals

CHARLOTTE — Lisa Manning outlasted Kendra Stallings of Tarboro 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 to land a spot in today's semifinal round of the girls' Class 3-A state tennis championships Wednesday on the campus of UNC-Charlotte.

Manning notched three wins to help the Lady Pam Pack to a fourth-place tie with Brevard.

Asheboro, Lenoir Hixbriten and Northwest Cabarrus each recorded seven points to share the first-round lead. Brevard and Washington had six points each, followed by Skyland Roberson with five and High Point Central and Statesville with four each.

Manning began with a 6-1, 6-1 win over Gena Godfrey of Central Cabarrus then defeated Paige Jones of East Rowan 6-4, 6-2.

A Showdown In Vanceboro Vikings, Eagles Meet For Conference Title

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A better script could not have been devised for the Coastal Conference championship.

On the final evening of the regular season, all eyes are upon a showdown between D.H. Conley and West Craven that will decide the undisputed league champion and the top seed in the Class 3-A state playoffs.

Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. in Vanceboro.

"It's one of the goals we've been working for all year," Conley coach Steve Craft said. "We haven't realized it yet, but we've got a chance at the goal and we're happy to get the chance.

"We want to prove we're a good football team, and to prove you're a good football team, you've got to beat a good football team."

West Craven certainly fits that bill with a 9-0 record and a No. 3 ranking in the latest Associated Press 3-A poll. But the Vikings have turned some heads of late by reeling off seven consecutive wins and coming in this week as the state's 10th-ranked 3-A team.

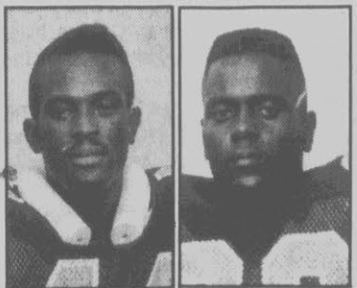

The much-anticipated, regular-season finale certainly has high stakes but neither will be doomed by a loss. Both have state playoff berths securely tucked away and will suit up next week despite the outcome.

"The big thing is that it's not a pressurized game," Eagle coach Clay Jordan said. "You hope to get to this point and it just worked out this way that both teams are still undefeated in the conference."

Rose High has a more precarious situation, however, as the topsyturvy Big East Conference moves into its final week. Amazingly, five teams still entertain hopes for one of two berths with only preseason favorite Rocky Mount and winless

Pirate Booters Fall In Finale, 3-0

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — A disappointing season for the East Carolina men's soccer team came to an end Wednesday in a 3-0 Colonial Athletic Association loss at William & Mary.

The Tribe, which owned a 29-2 advantage in shots on goal, struck for one first-half goal and added two more in the second half.

Steve Kokulis got the Tribe on the board at the 28:24 mark with a goal on an assist by Jim Hauschild. The two teamed again at the 50:47 mark for a 2-0 lead.

Eric Dumbleton, on an assist from George Strong, closed out the scoring at the 59:12 mark.

Paul Lumpkin, Steve McCarthy and freshman goalie Todd Aspden led the Pirates' defensive effort. Aspden collected a career-high 18 saves.

East Carolina finishes 2-18-1 overall and 0-7 in the CAA. William & Mary improves to 10-5-3 overall and 4-1-1 in the CAA.

The Tribe travels to Navy Saturday.

LSU's Jackson Denies Illegal Offer

ATLANTA (AP) — Louisiana State basketball star Chris Jackson denied on Wednesday that Mississippi State offered him money to play basketball.

"They never offered me anything," Jackson said during the Wednesday's session of the two-day SEC preseason basketball media event. "I'm not for sale."

The accusation was raised in an excerpt from the recently published "Don't Count Me Out — The Irrepressible Dale Brown and His LSU Fighting Tigers" printed in The Baton Rouge Sunday Advocate.

East Forsyth Running Backs Honored

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — East Forsyth running backs Malcolm Marshall and Tim Witherspoon share the North Carolina High School Athletic Association 4-A football player of the week honors after each rushing for more than 200 yards in a victory last Friday.

Marshall rambled for 215 yards and one score while Witherspoon picked up 212 yards and three touchdowns in a 34-28 victory over Winston-Salem Glenn.

Bryan Littlejohn of Lincolnton rushed for 170 yards and scored on a pair of 36-yard touchdowns in a 35-7 victory over East Lincoln to pick up the 3-A award.

The 2-A award went to Swannanoa Owen wingback Chico Kemp, who caught a 42-yard TD pass, threw a 12-yard scoring strike and ran 10 yards for a score — all in the fourth quarter — to lift his team to a 28-20 victory over Mountain Heritage.

Aaron Hackett of North Moore received the 1-A award after rushing for 180 yards, recording eight tackles and breaking up a potential touchdown pass late in a 20-6 upset victory of East Montgomery.

Reports Say Sloan Resignation Forced

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Norm Sloan resigned as Florida basketball coach rather than face indictment on federal charges, two newspapers reported today.

The Orlando Sentinel and the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale, each quoting unidentified sources, reported that Sloan and his lawyers were informed of the possibility of an indictment by the office of interim president Robert Bryan. It was suggested that Sloan and assistants Monte Towe, Kenny McCraney and Phil Weber resign rather than be fired after charges were filed.

The Sun-Sentinel said Sloan would have been accused of mail fraud. Neither newspaper was able to reach Sloan or Bryant for comment.

According to the Sentinel, Sloan's lawyer, Dexter Douglass of Tallahassee, confirmed that he advised Sloan to accept the retirement rather than face the charges.

Cooperation May Not Be Enough For Pack

RALEIGH (AP) — Although N.C. State cooperated with an investigation of the school's basketball program and imposed some penalties on its own, that doesn't guarantee the program will be treated lightly by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, an investigator says.

David A. Didion, who has been investigating the basketball program since the school requested an inquiry in January, said the NCAA's infractions committee will decide whether N.C. State genuinely wants to end abuses. Committee members meet for three days in Tucson, Ariz., beginning Friday.

"They have to judge the credibility of the people before them," Didion told The Charlotte Observer in telephone interview from the NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kansas. "They'll weigh every bit of information, everything the institution's done, and take that into consideration when they deliberate."

The NCAA has said its investigation uncovered eight violations of NCAA rules, including bans on players selling their complimentary game tickets and athletic shoes.

They also established mandatory drug tests for basketball players, something that University of North Carolina system President C.D. Spangler Jr. has ordered for all system athletes.

Asked if the school's actions would result in a lighter punishment, Didion said: "It's impossible to tell. The committee has to determine that on a case-by-case basis."

Greenberg Chosen As Deputy Commissioner

NEW YORK (AP) — Stephen Greenberg, the son of Hall of Famer Hank Greenberg, was appointed Deputy Commissioner and Chief Operating Officer of Major League Baseball. Greenberg is an attorney and former managing partner of the Los Angeles law firm, Manhatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Phillips. He will take office on Jan. 1.

Over the past 12 years, Greenberg has practiced various aspects of business law, including corporate and real estate matters, but has mostly specialized in sports law.

Two Different Injuries In Mullins' Case

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — The temporary paralysis sustained by Mississippi's Roy Lee "Chuckie" Mullins in 1988 has no connection with the injury that has paralyzed him from the neck down, a trainer for the football team said.

After the 1988 incident, Mullins was tested and X-rayed by doctors and given clearance to resume practice when there were no signs of serious injury.

On Saturday, Mullins, a 6-foot, 170-pound backup defensive back, was hurt when he tackled a Vanderbilt receiver to break up a pass play. He fractured the third, fourth, fifth and sixth vertebrae of his neck when he took a blow on the top of his head.

Kentucky's Newton Is Hospitalized

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — University of Kentucky athletics director C.M. Newton has been hospitalized because of an irregular heartbeat. The 59-year-old Newton was admitted to Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington on Monday following an examination by a family physician. Newton was listed in satisfactory condition Wednesday and was undergoing diagnostic studies to determine the cause of the irregular heartbeat, according to Howard. He said Newton could possibly be released from Central Baptist today.

Polonia Gets Temporary Release

MILWAUKEE (AP) — New York Yankees outfielder Luis Polonia, who was sentenced to 60 days for having sex with a 15-year-old girl, was released at least temporarily today after serving nearly half the term.

Polonia's attorney, Dennis P. Coffey, filed a motion, asking Circuit Judge Thomas Doherty to modify the sentence to the time served.

The judge denied that motion, but said he would stay the balance of the sentence as suggested by Milwaukee County Assistant District Attorney John DiMotto with the approval of the girl's family.

Hoggard Boots Rampants, 2-0

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A fast start loomed especially large for Rose in the first round of the state playoffs, but Wilmington Hoggard beat the Rampants to the punch.

The Vikings, back in the postseason play after a one-year absence, used their speed and precision teamwork to seize control of the midfield early en route to a 2-0 win in the first round of the state 4-A playoffs Wednesday at Percy Daniels Field.

Hoggard now faces the task of taking on nine-time and defending state champion Raleigh Sanderson. Rose, the top seed from the Big East Conference, finishes 13-4-3.

"The style of game they play is what I've been working on getting my guys to play," Rose coach Charlie Harvey said. "It's a quick, two-touch game."

"They didn't let us turn, they kept high intensity, high pressure all night."

Hoggard was not assured of a playoff spot until defeating rival Wilmington New Hanover Monday night.

Viking coach Matt White said a quick start spurred his team in that game. The strategy was the same Wednesday night.

"We had played a big game Monday night against our intra-town rival New Hanover and the difference in that game was the first 15 minutes," White said. "We came out and stuck a goal in and took control of the midfield and made them play defensively."

"We made a conscious effort tonight to take the beginning of the match and maybe take it away from them because we knew they had a big crowd and they were playing at home. It was important for us to go out and establish ourselves."

Hoggard, which had a 16-6 advantage in shots on goal, dominated the first 15 minutes and only a terrific diving save by senior goalie Russell

Nelson 7:44 into the match preserved a scoreless tie.

Rose, although unable to sustain a consistent offensive push, did manage a couple of break-away opportunities midway through the first period, but each was turned away by Viking goalie Evan Stewart.

The Rampants' best scoring chance came when senior center midfielder Jason Bizzaro dribbled into the penalty box and fed to Thomas Leahy for a shot from about 10 yards, but Stewart was able to smother the attempt.

Stewart was again on the spot two minutes later to cradle a cross from the right wing by senior John Beasley.

The Vikings got on the board 23:32 into the match when Steve Peterson drilled a low line-drive to the right of a diving Nelson.

Hoggard barely missed adding another goal a minute later when Heath Galloway's shot bounded off the crossbar.

With Rose still trailing 1-0 and the clock dwindling to under 10 minutes, Harvey shifted senior sweeper Toure Claiborne to the front line for offensive support, but the Vikings capitalized on the other end with Tom Matthes heading in a cross from Chad Windham with 6:12 left.

That sealed the spot for Hoggard in the second round and shut the door on the season for Rose.

"With 10 minutes left I took Toure off the back line and didn't replace him with anybody because, in my opinion, down 1-0 you've got to play to tie it up then try to win," Harvey said. "I stuck an extra man on the front line. I anticipated them picking it up and they picked it up right away and, consequently, they got their second goal."

"I think if we had capitalized on the opportunities we had — we had two or three golden opportunities in the first half — it would have been a different game."

The win was Hoggard's second of the season over Rose. The Vikings claimed a 1-0 win in early September.

The Daily Reflector/Mike Grizzard

The earlier meeting aided the teams as far as familiarity in styles of play, but both teams had obviously tuned up their respective games.

"(The first match) was so long ago that I knew it wouldn't have much to do with the match really," White said. "I went home Monday night and looked at the videotape of when we played earlier and I realized by looking at our team that we were nothing like that now. I knew that they'd be better, they won their conference, so I knew they would be improved. We knew they had a couple of guys they went to a lot, so that helps."

Claiborne, Bizzaro, Beasley, Nelson, Edwin Manning, Park Williams and Danny Weisenberger closed out their careers at Rose. Senior Cliff Ferrell did not play due to a knee injury.

"I would have liked to have won this game and gone on a bit further and I think we could've if one of those chances in the first half would have went in," Harvey said. "We were a little bit sluggish the last 20 minutes."

Robinson Named Top AL Manager

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Frank Robinson stepped into the Baltimore Orioles' spring training camp in February for his first full year as manager armed with a new approach and a lot of new players. It was a combination that wound up two games shy of a division title.

What happened in between was so unexpected — a team that finished 54-107 one year battling for a division crown the next — that Robinson was named the American League's Manager of the Year on Wednesday for presiding over the phenomenon.

"It ranks right up there with the MVP awards, as far as managers are concerned, because it's the highest honor that you can achieve," Robinson said by telephone from his home in Beverly Hills, Calif. "It says you did the best job with the team you had, and that your team played well."

Robinson, the only player to be named Most Valuable Player in both leagues, was rewarded for the patience with which he presided over the group of unproven players who assembled at the Orioles' training facility in Sarasota, Fla.

"The players deserve the credit. The coaching staff deserves a large part of the credit, as does the entire organization," Robinson said. "What I think I gave this ballclub was a direction, a sense of what we wanted to do. I think I kept it in the right direction through the season."

Robinson, 54, guided the Orioles to the second-best turnaround in American League history. The Orioles finished with an 87-75 record and were in the American League East title chase until the last week of the season.

The Orioles spent 116 days in first place, including 98 consecutive days from May through August, despite opening the season with baseball's youngest roster. Robinson cajoled his team through the highs and lows of the season with a temperament he didn't display during managerial stops at Cleveland and San Francisco.

"I knew that was the approach that I would have to take for the team to be successful in the 1989 season," Robinson said. "But, also, from the time I was let go at San Francisco until the time I came back to manage in 1988, I had taken a step back and looked at myself and thought about the approach I would like to take if and when I came back as a manager in the major leagues."

This was part of it, but the makeup of the team had a lot to do with it."

Robinson, who planned to celebrate with a quiet dinner with his family, said the award was not unexpected. "Everybody had kind of told me that I was going to win."

Had he not, Robinson said he "would not have been upset, but I would have been disappointed."

"You're always a little apprehensive until it's official," he said.

Robinson, who had already been named The Associated Press Manager of the Year, got 23 of 28 first-place votes and 125 points on a 5-3-1 basis from a panel chosen by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Vikings-Eagles...

Kinston having been eliminated.

A win last Friday over Wilson Fike would have vaulted the Rampants into sole possession of first and sealed a playoff spot, but by virtue of a 21-14 overtime loss, Rose is faced with a must-win situation at Rocky Mount and then has to hope for some help.

A number of scenarios are possible, but Rose's chances are zero without a victory.

"The pressure's on. The bottom line is we've got to win," Rampant coach Chip Williams.

Fike is alone at the top with a 4-1 record but must travel to Elizabeth City Northeastern. Hunt, Northern Nash, Rose and Northeastern all stand 3-2.

Hunt, which has dropped consecutive games to Fike and Rocky Mount, winds up its regular season at Northern Nash.

Elsewhere Friday night, Washington hosts Hertford County, Greene Central visits North Pitt, Farmville Central entertains Pamlico County, Ayden-Grifton is at East Carteret, Roanoke visits Jamesville, Williamston hosts Edenton and Chocowinity hosts Creswell.

The Washington-Hertford County victor sews up the No. 3 spot in the Colonial 3-A Conference. Farmville has secured the top spot in the Eastern Plains Conference, while North Pitt and Greene Central battle for the No. 2 seed and a home date in the first round of the playoffs.

Defensive Battle Expected

Conley and West Craven boast aggressive, hard-hitting defenses that concern the respective head coaches.

But a number of offensive weapons on both sides make for an intriguing matchup.

"(Conley's) defense is exceptional," Jordan said. "Their defense is probably by far the best we've seen this year. They have so many good athletes, real physical athletes. We have to do a very good job of mixing up our offense."

The Eagles have been able to do that thus far with junior tailback Lee Becton and quarterback Kevin Holzworth posing a double threat. Becton has rushed for 1,360 yards and scored 24 touchdowns while Holzworth has thrown for 730 yards. His top target has been Kip Bryan, who has 26 receptions.

Craft said the Vikings would concentrate on Becton, but they can't afford to overlook the Eagles' other offensive weapons.

"Becton is a superstar, no doubt about it," Craft said. "He's the ice in their coca-cola so to speak. Holzworth is one of the premier quarterbacks in the state and they have three receivers that can go get the football."

West Craven's defense, which Jordan feels has improved with each game, must also be braced to defend the run and the pass. The Vikings are led by Mike Clark, who has rushed for 847 yards, and quarterback Scott Seymour, who has passed for 571 yards and hit on 54 percent of his passes.

"Our defense has gotten better each week," Jordan said. "We didn't start off the year playing very well. Our defense has given up some yardage, but we've kept people out the end zone."

Said Craft: "One thing nobody really looks at is they have a fantastic looking defense. They are extremely fast. Coach Jordan and his crowd have done a super job."

The Vikings had an open date last Friday, and Craft is hopeful it won't have any adverse affect.

"It didn't hurt us," Craft said. "We needed some time to heal some bumps and bruises. We had five pretty intense weeks so it gave us a chance to sort of catch our breath."

Can Rampants Regroup Again?

Rose has shown the ability to rebound from each of its losses this year and Williams is hoping his players can dig deep and regroup once again.

"It's a hard thing to try to build yourself up after a tough loss, especially when you think you play as hard as you can" Williams said. "It's hard for an athlete to come back but that's what life's all about."

"You have to deal with disappointment. We're very fortunate in that we've got an opportunity. As a coach, you want to go into that last game knowing it means something."

Although the Gryphons are not playoff-bound, Williams is sure Rose will be in for a dogfight. Rocky Mount, which has overtime losses to Fike and Northeastern and a 20-18 loss to Northern Nash, has settled into the role of the spoiler, beginning last week with a shutout of Hunt.

Wilson Files For Free Agency

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Pascual Perez, Willie Wilson and seven others have joined the group of baseball free agents, raising the total to 45.

Brian Harper, on the other hand, signed a two-year, $1.025 million deal with the Minnesota Twins on Wednesday. And the Chicago Cubs and outfielder Marvell Wynne were close to agreeing to a two-year, $1.075 million contract with an option for 1992 at $600,000.

Perez, who pitched a rain-shortened no-hitter in 1988, was 9-13 this season with a 3.31 earned-run average. He struck out 152 batters in 198 1-3 innings and made $850,000.

Wilson, a member of the Kansas City Royals since 1976, hit .253 with three homers and 43 RBIs while being paid $1.38 million. Wilson signed a four-year contract in 1985 that allowed the Royals to extend the pact through 1994 by exercising an annual option. Failure to do so, however, voids the remainder of the contract.

Terry Kennedy of San Francisco, Ken Phelps of Oakland, John Shelby of Los Angeles, Charles Hudson of Detroit, Joe Price of Boston, Dave Schmidt of Baltimore and Carmen Castillo of Minnesota were the others to declare on Wednesday.

Eligible players have until Nov. 13 to file. The list of eligible players dropped to 116 on Wednesday when the Texas Rangers exercised the option on the contract of second baseman Julio Franco for $1.25 million.

Among non-free agents, the California Angels placed infielder Glenn Hoffman on waivers for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Harper, who made $147,500 this season, gets $450,000 in 1990 and $575,000 in 1991. The catcher hit a career-high .325 last season with eight home runs and 57 RBIs.

Kennedy, the catcher for the NL pennant-winning Giants, batted .239 last season with five homers and 34 RBIs in 355 at-bats and made $850,000. Phelps, a designated hitter for the World Series champion Athletics, hit .242 with seven homers and 29 RBIs in 194 at-bats and made $655,000.

Shelby, who made $550,000, batted .183 with one homer and 12 RBIs. Hudson, who made $525,000, was 1-5 with a 6.35 ERA.

Price was 2-5 with a 4.35 ERA and made $500,000. Schmidt was 10-13 with a 5.69 ERA and made $650,000. Castillo hit .257 with eight homers and 33 RBIs and made $432,500.

Burnette Makes Adjustment...

tion, I liked it. I enjoy the contact aspect of the game. I like to get up there and hit people."

Things really started clicking for Burnette last spring though. He emerged during spring practice as ECU, under new coach Bill Lewis, made the adjustment to a new system.

Although undersized for a linebacker at 6-2 and just over 200 pounds, Burnette ended up a starter by the end of the spring as he earned the most outstanding and most improved linebacker awards.

As far as Burnette was concerned, all was going according to plan. He came into fall camp and continued his strong play. He was all set to share the inside linebacker duties with fellow sophomore Robert Jones.

But that all changed with one wrong move during an inside tackling drill a week before the season opener.

As Burnette stepped up to make the play, somebody fell on the outside of his knee, caving it in and tearing a ligament.

"It was terrible. When I first hurt it, (trainer) Greg Beres told me I'd be out 10 weeks," he said. "I was so down I couldn't hardly stand. I was crying and everything. Then the doctor said it would be four to five (weeks). That just made me want to work and get back."

So instead of starting, Burnette became a spectator on crutches. During the opening game of the year against Bowling Green, defensive end George Koonce went down with the exact same injury. The two became partners in pain.

"I guess we are," Burnette said.

Miami...

One must go back to Sept. 3, 1983, to find a loss by Miami to an unranked team. On that date, Florida took a 20-1 win over the Hurricanes. Since then, Miami has reeled off 41 straight games over non-ranked teams.

Add to that the fact that Miami is coming off one of those rare losses to any team and East Carolina's task becomes even harder.

CAA Picks...

with them in their original recruiting.

All-Star Team Travels

Richthoods has been signed on as a corporate sponsor of this coming year's CAA basketball tournament, to be played at the Richmond Coliseum.

Part of the agreement will send an all star team from the conference to Europe for a tour next summer.

Each team will nominate two players from their own team for the trip, one designated the 'A' choice and the other the 'B' selection.

Two league coaches will be named as co-coaches for the trip and they will select the final list of players, but must pick at least one from each of the league's eight teams.

Bucknall, Lebo On NBA Rosters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When both rounds of the college draft passed last June, chances of landing jobs in the NBA looked slim for former North Carolina teammates Jeff Lebo and Steve Bucknall. Neither was drafted.

Today both have made it, on the rosters of two of the top Western Conference teams. Lebo survived final cuts with the San Antonio Spurs and Bucknall earned a spot with the Los Angeles Lakers. N.C. State's Chucky Brown also made the Cleveland Cavaliers roster.

"I know Steve and I, when neither of us got drafted, we were kind of down," Lebo told reporters in San Antonio. "But now he's made the Lakers and I've made it here and it's such a great feeling."

Lebo got the last available spot on the Spurs roster. He'll apparently have one more hurdle to clear when Jens-Uwe Gordon, a free agent from Santa Clara, comes off the injured list in a few weeks.

Montgomery Soaring Pack QB Keys Team's Success

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Shane Montgomery is close to setting some records at North Carolina State. And he might just lift his team to an Atlantic Coast Conference championship while he's at it.

Going into Saturday's game with Virginia, Montgomery needs 19 yards to surpass N.C. State's all-time passing yardage mark of 4,602 set by Erik Kramer in 1985 and 1986. The Newark, Ohio, native also has the school's career records for pass completions and attempts, and he needs four touchdown passes to top the mark of 30, also set by Kramer.

With 1,918 yards passing at a 58.1 percent clip, Montgomery needs about 600 yards to surpass Kramer's record of 2,510 yards set in 1985.

"Maybe at the end of the year, when I look back and realize what I have done, that will make me realize what I've done and make me realize how my career has gone," Montgomery says. "Right now, I'm more interested in winning football games."

The Wolfpack is on the threshold of its first Atlantic Coast Conference title in 10 years. It needs to beat Virginia then take Duke in Durham to lock down the title.

The weekend also will help voters determine who they'll choose for all-ACC quarterback between Montgomery, Virginia's Shawn Moore and Duke's Billy Ray. Montgomery also could enhance his chances at league player of the year honors.

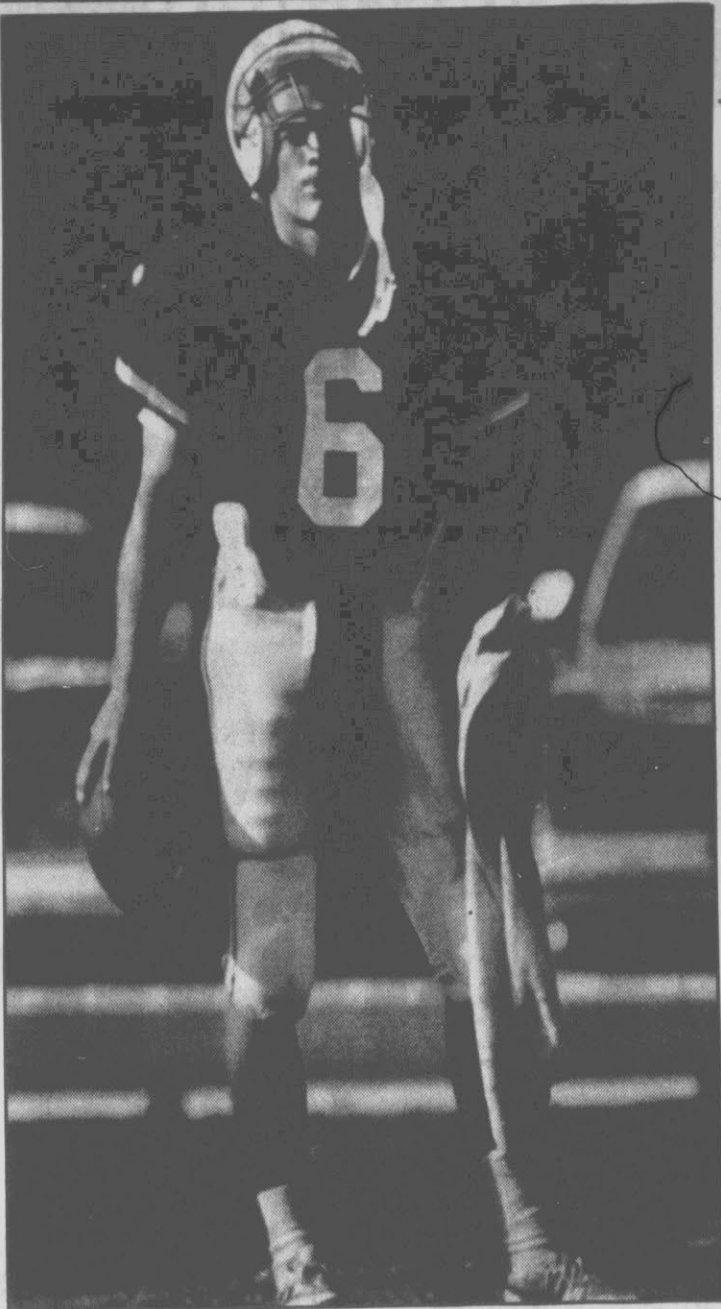

"That will be a great honor. My main objective is to help us win the ACC championship," Montgomery says.

"From a quarterback's standpoint, I've said all along the quarterback has to be the most consistent person on the field. I think if we happen to win the ACC championship, I would have to play well the last two ACC games. Anything after that would take care of itself."

That's coming from the same quarterback who in 1986 was just hoping to stay on the team and who was struggling two years ago just to stay on the field. It was early in 1987 when he was benched in favor of Preston Poag, but by the end of the season, he was off on his record-setting pace.

"I got an opportunity to come back against Duke and Virginia. We got to throw a lot," Montgomery says. In those two games, he completed 59 of 100 passes for 870 yards and six touchdowns as the Wolfpack beat Duke and lost to the Cavaliers in the season finale. It was a radical reversal from his inauspicious beginning. Meanwhile, Poag's role has been reduced to punting.

"Three years ago, I was about fifth-string," Montgomery says. "It was just something where I had to dig down inside and realize that if I ever wanted to play here, I had to work harder."

ACC Showdown Like A Playoff

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This weekend is as close to a playoff system as Atlantic Coast Conference football will ever get.

North Carolina State faces Virginia, and Duke is at Wake Forest, setting up the possibility of what would be a true fight for the ACC title. If the Wolfpack defeats the Cavaliers and the Blue Devils beat the Demon Deacons, Duke and N.C. State would meet next Saturday in Durham for the league crown.

"All the teams work very hard to play in a game like we have this Saturday," N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan says. "This is a game North Carolina State and Virginia had to work very hard to just have the opportunity for."

On the other hand, a Virginia (7-2, 4-1) victory would put the Cavaliers alone in first place with their game against Maryland between them and their first title ever. N.C. State (7-1, 4-1) and Duke (5-3, 3-1) would have two league losses and would have to rely on the Terrapins to win and create a bigger tie for the top.

While it is a showcase for two of the league's top teams, it's also a chance to help determine the all-ACC quarterback slot between Virginia's Shawn Moore and N.C. State's Shane Montgomery. Sheridan says it's not only the quarterback who will decide the winner.

"Hot quarterbacks are determined by good offensive line play and good play by receivers," Sheridan says.

"The performance of the quarterback is so dependent on other factors..."

Montgomery's forte has been passing, and he's already set several N.C. State records and can set others this weekend against the Cavaliers. Moore has shown his passing ability, but has combined his running to become a big threat to the Wolfpack defense.

"We have the biggest challenge we've had to stop a team that has the balance Virginia has," Sheridan says. "They have an athlete at quarterback who can take a bad play and can make it into a big play. We have to have a tremendous performance defensively."

Virginia coach George Welsh says his defense has fallen to Montgomery's efforts before.

"We're a zone team and he's hurt us before, and we're going to play a lot of zone," Welsh says. "We're not going to change too much right now."

"He's very accurate. It's been that way all year for them," he says. "We just hope that our front four can give us a little better pass rush than we've had some weeks."

Duke has its own offensive weapon in quarterback Billy Ray, who has passed for 2,035 yards and 15 touchdowns. But it's been the revamped running game and much improved defense which has been winning games for the Blue Devils.

"We've really changed our attitude and personality about how to play defense," Duke coach Steve Spurrier says. "We're blitzing and faking blitzes and it seems to be doing the trick for us right now."

Robinson Is Bucs' Triple Threat

STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

East Carolina senior safety Junior Robinson is proving to be a true triple threat this year.

Robinson is the only player in the nation to be listed among the top 25 in kickoff returns, punt returns and interceptions. The High Point native is 14th in kickoff returns (25.05 yards per return), 23rd in punt returns (10.58 yards per return) and 23rd in interceptions with four on the season.

Robinson has been a three-year starter in the secondary for the Pirates, starting at cornerback his first year before moving to safety midway through last season.

Robinson was also a member of ECU's 4X100 relay team that won All-America honors in 1988.

DeMasi's Plans Changed
Redshirt this season. Start in 1990 and 1991. Graduate in 1992. That was Dickie DeMasi's gameplan. Until The Injury. Until he became South Carolina's No. 1 quarterback.

"I was preparing for the spring and the upcoming fall, not necessarily now," he said. "All of a sudden, I have to change my whole thought process and prepare for Saturday."

DeMasi will make his first career start Saturday when the Gamecocks visits No. 6 Florida State.

The 6-foot-1, 188-pound junior took his first snap this season after starter Todd Ellis went down with a career-ending knee injury on the third play of last week's game against North Carolina State. Ellis underwent surgery Tuesday to repair torn ligaments.

DeMasi completed four of 12 passes for 65 yards and threw one interception in a 20-10 loss to the Wolfpack.

Ellis, a four-year starter, was supposed to complete his record-setting career in 1989. Freshman Ben Hogan was to play a mop-up role.

DeMasi, who had completed nine of 14 passes for 35 yards in his first two seasons, was part of a contingency plan. He would be used only if Ellis were injured. And then it was to be only if DeMasi could make a difference.

With that schedule in mind, DeMasi enrolled in some tougher courses this semester so he could concentrate on football next spring.

"Now, I might be graduating next year," DeMasi said. "I didn't plan on that. I'm taking organic chemistry because I figured I wasn't playing this year."

Duke's D Goes Blitz

After a 1-3 start, Duke head coach Steve Spurrier decided to throw caution to the wind, and he and his defensive coaches loaded up their defense with the same type of approach they gave to the offense — wide-open.

They went to the blitz and it worked against Clemson and Army, two run-oriented offenses that Duke overcame for victories. Then came the real test.

Spurrier

Spurrier

Maryland and Georgia Tech brought in quarterbacks whose idea of putting the ball in the air didn't mean a pitchout on the option. Duke hounded Maryland's Neil O'Donnell into a 14-for-35 passing performance in a 46-25 triumph, then held Georgia Tech to 258 yards of total offense in a 30-19 victory.

Actually, blitzing is nothing new for Duke. Every preseason some defensive coordinator would talk about a gambling defense, then got timid.

"It seemed like as the season went along, we got more conservative," defensive tackle Anthony Allen said. "It'd be nice to line up in a basic defense and stop people, but we can't do that. I don't know if anybody can do that."

Spurrier scrapped the stay-at-home defense when it failed to force a single punt from Virginia in a 49-28 rout at Charlottesville.

"We were at a point of saying, 'Hey, whatever we're doing isn't working,'" Spurrier said. "Let's take a chance and put a lot of people up there and see what happens."

The change led Duke to four straight victories to climb to 5-3, 3-1 in the ACC. The Blue Devils can own at least a share of the conference championship by winning their final three games against Wake Forest, North Carolina State and North Carolina, something Duke hasn't done since 1965. And if either N.C. State or Maryland can knock off Virginia, Duke could be the undisputed ACC champion for the first time since 1962.

The defensive backs, left to cover wide receivers one on one with no help from the linebackers, have risen to the challenge. "The backs have played some of their best ball these last few weeks," Allen said.

"Quinton (McCracken) and Wyatt (Smith) are the key," Spurrier said of his two sophomore cornerbacks. "If they couldn't cover, we'd be crazy to do this."

Junior free safety Erwin Sampson, the leading tackler in the ACC, has also come in for his share of solo coverage.

Allen said playing defense has become fun again at Duke. "It feels good to be successful as a defense," he said. "If you don't have a defense, you can't win ballgames. To be successful, I think you have to have a good defense."

NCCU's Harvey Waits

Quarterback Earl Harvey can find his name in the NCAA Division II record book, but not on an NFL roster.

"I'm the first person to tell someone to put the toys away and go on with their life," Tommy Marino, a scout for the New Orleans Saints, says of Harvey, a former North Carolina Central star. "But I think the kid has the potential to be a big-league player."

"I hope he doesn't give up the dream. With the right timing and someone who has the patience to work with him, he could make it."

Meanwhile, Harvey earns $5 an hour from Faulkner Security, standing guard from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. five days a week at a Durham car dealership. On weekends, he airs out his arm as the starting quarterback for the Triangle Cardinals semi-professional football team. On one weekend, he completed seven of 10 passes, all for touchdowns.

Washington's Manning In Semifinals...

Washington's other singles entry, Dodi Darrow, absorbed a 6-4, 7-6 defeat at the hands of South Point's Heidi Watts in the opening round.

D.H. Conley's duo of Nicole Bloodworth-Jenny Bradburn picked up one win but fell in the second round. Bloodworth-Bradburn defeated Tina Campbell-Kathryn McKinney of East Rutherford, 6-4, 6-3, in the opening round then were ousted by the fourth-seeded team of Chau Dang-Tam Dang of Northeast Guilford, 6-2, 6-1.

Williamston, Roanoke Entries Are Eliminated

RALEIGH — Three area doubles entries were denied a spot in today's semifinals of the Class 1-A/2-A girls' tennis championships at the N.C. State University Tennis Complex.

Williamston's tandem of Deedee Mills-Dawn Bundy, who helped the Lady Tigers to the Roanoke Rapids regional crown last week, reached the quarterfinals but fell there by a 6-1, 6-3 count to second-seeded Elizabeth Thigpen-Tina Hussey of North Moore.

Mills-Bundy received a first-round bye then defeated Jennifer Hege-Nicole Ward of Thomasville 7-5, 6-2.

Williamston's duo of Hope Robinson-Carrie Bussel defeated Krystal Tucker-Jennifer Hall of Piedmont 6-3, 2-6, 6-3 before falling to fourth-seeded Rennie Rice-Nicole Gignac Charlotte Catholic 6-1, 6-0.

Roanoke's Dawn Briley-Amy Oakley also reached the quarterfinals but fell to Jennifer Coburn-Michelle Lyles of Roanoke Rapids, 6-2, 6-3.

Charlotte Catholic, led by top-seeded singles player Laura Cowman and third-seeded Jenny Berry, clinched the team title after one day with 19 points.

Mount Airy is a distant second with nine points, followed by Roanoke Rapids with six, Charles B. Aycock with five, Williamston and Monroe Piedmont with four each and Union Pines with three.

Actress Shera Danese Makes Third Showing On 'Columbo'

By Jerry Buck

SHERA DANESE

LOS ANGELES — Actress Shera Danese, in her third appearance on "Columbo," is getting closer to her ambition to be the killer unmasked by the deceptively shrewd detective. "My first time on the show I was a secretary," she said. "The second time I was the killer's secretary. This time I'm the killer's wife."

Her earlier appearances were on "Columbo" when it was on NBC in the 1970s. She will be on the show tentatively scheduled for "The ABC Saturday Mystery Movie" on Nov. 25.

Danese is married to "Columbo" star Peter Falk but says that has not helped her get the roles. They met when she had a small role in "Mikey and Nicky," which was filmed in her hometown of Philadelphia.

"After we married I decided to go back to work and Peter had his agent sign me," she said. "He got me a part on 'Columbo,' so Peter left him. I think Peter thought I'd stay home and do nothing. The first time the producer hired me and Peter didn't know. The second time Peter made me read for the part."

Danese also has a starring role in a CBS comedy pilot called "Mulberry Street."

If it's picked up by CBS it will be her third series. She was Tim Conway's girlfriend in "Ace Crawford, Private Eye" in 1983. She was a model and Suzanne Pleshette's best friend in "Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs" in 1984.

Her only other acting appearance with Falk was in a play called "Knives," written by Falk's co-star in "Mikey and Nicky," John Cassavetes.

"John wrote three plays," she said. "His wife, Gena Rowlands, did one. Jon Voight did one. Peter and I did one. It was a serious play about a marriage. It wasn't like 'Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?' Peter wasn't meek in this. The character was pretty obnoxious. She wanted to be a singer or dancer or something. At the end the stage goes black and you don't know if she committed suicide or he killed her. When the curtain came up I was a lump on the floor."

There is no recognition between which also stars Connie Sellecca, Cesar Romero and Eddie Mekka, is about an Italian family in New York. "They changed my character after I was cast," she said. "I play Joanne, who's married to Eddie Mekka. The part was written for a straight-laced Catholic girl who married when she was about 16. She was prim and proper."

"I read the script and said they'd never pick me. But they cast me and changed the part. Now, she has a line in the pilot. I'd shoot him with a stun gun and strap him to the hood of my car."

Danese moved to Los Angeles in 1974. Her first role was on "The Bob Newhart Show."

"I figured I'd be a big star within three weeks," she said. "On the Newhart show I had two words. 'Hi honey.' I guess no one else read it like I did. After that I did a lot of roles in movies and on television. On 'Family' I made two appearances as a prostitute. I was usually a lingerie model or a cheap detective's girlfriend. 'Mulberry Street' is my first normal role in a series."

them in "Columbo," of course, but Falk supposedly had a twinkle in his eye during a beach scene.

"Every time the director called 'cut' you could hear Peter going 'Ha, ha, ha,'" she said. "In a sauna scene my character was drunk. Peter kept asking, 'You sure you weren't drunk?' I said, 'It was six o'clock in the morning when we filmed it. I'm in a sauna and they kept throwing cold water on me.'"

TV, Stars And Audience Growing Older Together

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Our star, recently turned 50, is waking up, smelling the coffee, and starting to give up that infatuation with young love. But memories linger...

Sound like the plot for a TV movie?

It's actually the plot for television itself, advertising and TV executives say, as shows like "The Golden Girls" draw big audiences and stars like Bob Newhart, Andy Griffith, Angela Lansbury and Carroll O'Connor shine.

"The audience is getting older," said David Poltrack, CBS senior vice president for planning and research. "The major population shift is the aging of the baby boomers. When they were young television was very youth-oriented."

"Gradually, the television networks are recognizing that the advantage is to go with this aging baby boomer generation."

Johnny Carson, at 64, is still the most popular talk show host. And when CBS' "Lonesome Dove" bowled over the competition last spring with aging Texas plainsmen Robert Duvall and Tommy Lee Jones, "Perry Mason" took the case and saved NBC from disaster. The Raymond Burr role appeals mainly to older viewers.

While the population is aging and older people have more disposable income, advertisers are slow to recognize the changes.

"We don't go as far as CBS would like us to go," said Betsy Frank, a vice president of Saatchi & Saatchi, the world's largest ad agency. "CBS has always been more successful when it programs for a more mature audience. Even ABC is making some concessions toward older audiences. Its 'ABC Mystery Movie' has older stars and should do well with older viewers on Saturday night. But Fox Broadcasting has succeeded by targeting a very young audience."

Nonetheless, Frank sees a shift to buying demographics of age 25-54.

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, agrees the audience is aging and has more money, "but you also have to look at consumer habits."

"Is the person who is 61 years old who's bought Maxwell House Coffee for 40 years really a good target for your new Vienna Roast? I recognize that they have more income but I would be careful about their buying habits."

"Our standard approach is to come up with a good show that has as widespread an appeal as possible. 'Golden Girls' is a show that recognizes the graying of America but it's universal in its appeal. It attracts teen-agers and young people as well. It defies advertisers who thought it would be a show that would appeal to only people over 50."

The Associated Press

Cast of 'Golden Girls' symbolizes success of older stars

Tartikoff believes older viewers will be more of a factor in the 1990s.

"The phenomenon of shows about older people is quite new to television," said Michael Dann, a consultant who formerly headed programming at CBS and NBC. "We always had older people in family shows, but the shows were always about kids and their problems. What you have now are shows built around the problems that older people face. The remarkable thing about 'The Golden Girls' is that its audience cuts through all age groups. One show is a hit, two is a trend. You clearly have that taking place today."

The problems older characters face aren't geriatric. They're the usual mix of romance, sex, appearance, divorce, and the conflicts of human nature.

Although favorable demographics is still the preferred method of advertiser selection, audience size is important and becoming more so, Dann said. "Years ago I personally canceled Jackie Gleason with a 37 share and Red Skelton with a 36 share. You won't find a television executive doing that today."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Nov. 3
ARIES (March 20 to April 17): Your home is your most important place of action today. You have still not been able to get off on that trip that means so much to you.
TAURUS (April 18 to May 19): You will have a very accurate hunch just what to do about a property matter. Take an especially nice present to your home for your family.
GEMINI (May 20 to June 20): Take the initiative in contacting friends you have not seen for a while. You will need to exercise much effort to be a true partner to your attachment.
MOON CHILDREN (June 21 to July 21): To keep your good friends you will need to spend more money on them. Listen to really understand the point of view of members of your household.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): This is a great day for much activity with your admiring friends. Not the time to go to see neighbors, relatives, close personal or business companions.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): A loyal man friend will help you with an important recreational matter. Three highly unusual persons will come into your home today. LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22): Don't hesitate in letting matters accomplished at home continue for a little while longer. A suggestion coming from a distance will aid your financial affairs.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Gain the good will of your family by being frank with them about business and money. Listen to a friend who is an expert and can show you how to better handle your obligations.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 20): You will be very sensitive to all home conditions but don't show it. Allow friends to take time away from your business responsibilities.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 21 to Jan. 18): Your daily duties should sparkle with ingenuity at this time. Many conferences will bring out your best business opportunities.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 19 to Feb. 17): Unique investments will be your best source for more money now. Do your job so that you do not miss any opportunity that is connected with your work.
PISCES (Feb. 18 to March 19): Don't take friends' advice now on how to handle your own intimate affairs. A little more emotion towards your attachment would be well received.

Study Says Panic Attacks Strongly Tied To Suicides

By Daniel Q. Haney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Doctors may be able to prevent suicides by recognizing when people are in the grips of terrifying panic attacks and helping them seek treatment, researchers report today.

The research published in the New England Journal of Medicine found that people who suffer recurring panic attacks are 18 times more likely than other people to try to kill themselves.

During panic attacks, people are gripped by sudden, unpredictable waves of intense apprehension or fear. They may suffer a variety of distressing symptoms, including difficulty breathing, palpitations, chest pain, choking, dizziness, faintness, trembling and hot and cold flashes.

Victims often believe they are suffering heart attacks or dying. When they go to emergency rooms, however, they are sometimes told nothing is wrong with them.

In an editorial accompanying the study, Dr. Peter Reich of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology called the findings "quite remarkable." He said they deserve widespread attention because they "may provide general physicians with new opportunities to prevent suicide by recognizing and treating panic disorder."

An estimated 1.5 percent of Americans, or more than 3 million people, have panic disorder, recurring bouts of intense fear that strike for no apparent reason. Up to 9 million people have occasional panic attacks.

The study directed by Dr. Myrna M. Weissman found that 20 percent of people with panic disorder had attempted suicide, as had 12 percent of those with occasional panic attacks.

The finding "points to a potentially serious complication of a common disorder that has been relatively neglected," commented Dr. Kerrin White of McLean Hospital in suburban Boston.

The researchers said that people plagued by panic attacks may believe they are going crazy and turn to alcohol, become afraid to leave their homes or grow depressed.

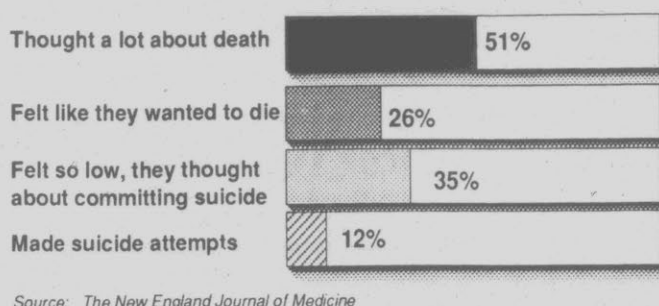

They said their work should encourage emergency room doctors and other physicians who often see people during panic attacks to offer treatment for their disorder.

"We hope this alerts the non-psychiatric physician to the potential mortality and morbidity of panic disorder," said Weissman, a psychiatric

Panic and Suicide

A research study showed that people who suffer panic attacks were 18 times more likely than usual to kill themselves, suggesting that this disorder may be a major contributing cause of suicides.

epidemiologist at Columbia University. "If a patient comes into the cardiac clinic and has panic disorder, and heart attack is ruled out, we would like the physician to realize that the patient should be evaluated for panic disorder."

Just why people with panic attacks are unusually prone to suicide is unclear. Some believe that depression may play a role, although it does not entirely explain the increased risk.

"People who have panic attacks for many years become demoralized," said Dr. Gerald L. Klerman of Cornell Medical School, a co-author of the study. "They stay at home and withdraw socially and become depressed. We know that depressive feelings are associated with suicide."

Panic attacks can be controlled with medical treatment and behavioral therapy. However, Dr. Brian Doyle of Georgetown University said that some people simply try to live with their episodes of terror.

"Many patients with panic disorder are fine, upstanding people who do not want to be considered flaky," he said. "So they tend to white knuckle through their panic attacks. Many times, they work very hard to control the symptoms, but internally they are in a great deal of distress."

The underlying cause of panic disorder is not known. However, the problem runs in families, and experts believe genetic factors may be involved.

In the study, researchers surveyed a random sample of 18,011 people in St. Louis, Baltimore, Los Angeles, Durham, N.C., and New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the 18 times greater chance of a suicide attempt by people who suffer recurring panic attacks, the study found that such people also were twice as likely as those with other mental disorders to attempt suicide. The risk grows as the number of panic attacks increase. It is also higher for those who have their first attacks at early ages.

Exercise Cuts Risk Of Death

By David Rocks
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — An eight-year study that followed more than 13,000 people shows that physical activity significantly reduces the risk of death from virtually all causes, including heart disease and cancer, researchers say.

While the risk of death was lowest among those who were the most active, the study's authors say that even a slight increase in activity may reduce death rates among the least fit.

"Moderate levels of physical fitness that are attainable by most adults appear to be protective against early mortality," say the authors of the study, to be published in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study by Steven N. Blair and others at the Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas indicated that if all the unfit people surveyed had taken measures to become fit, death rates would have been reduced by 9 percent in men and 15.3 percent in women.

The researchers studied 10,224 men and 3,120 women for an average of more than eight years. Of those, 240 men and 43 women died during the study.

The subjects were first tested on a treadmill to determine their fitness level and then tested for cholesterol, blood pressure and other general health factors. They also were questioned about relevant life-style factors such as smoking as well as family history of heart disease.

Even when all other data were factored in, the more active groups had lower death rates, the authors said.

Among men who were the least fit, the death rate was 64 per 10,000 person-years compared with 16.6 deaths among the most fit group. A person-year equals the number of people studied multiplied by the number of years they were followed.

Among women, deaths dropped from 39.5 per 10,000 person-years to 8.5 per 10,000.

Heart-disease death rates among men fell from 24.6 among the least fit to 3.1 for those in the two most fit groups. For women, heart-disease death rates dropped from 7.4 to 0.8.

Death rates from cancer among men fell from 20.3 to 4.7, and among women dropped from 16.3 to 1.0.

"Approximately 30 percent of U.S. adults are quite sedentary, and the prevalence of low fitness levels is correspondingly high," the authors wrote. "A brisk walk of 30 to 60 minutes each day will be sufficient" to achieve fitness and reduce the risk of death from heart disease and cancer.

An accompanying editorial by Dr. Jeffrey Koplan and others at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta urged schools and doctors to encourage Americans to become more active.

Government Tightens Rules For Radioactive Releases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government is imposing tighter standards for radioactive releases from hospitals, nuclear power plants and other facilities, but some environmentalists say the rules don't go far enough.

Hospitals, research labs and atomic power plants already meet the new requirements set by the Environmental Protection Agency, officials said Wednesday.

Some environmentalists complained the new regulations do not go far enough and allow too high a cancer risk for residents living near such facilities.

The Environmental Protection Agency said the tighter standards aim at reducing the cancer risk from industrial radioactive releases to no greater than 1 in 10,000 over a lifetime for persons living near the facility causing the pollution. Today, those risks are from two to 12 times as great near some of the facilities, the EPA said.

"The rules will protect public health from the risks of industrial radioactivity," said William Rosenberg, the EPA's assistant administrator for air and radiation.

But some environmentalists said even tighter controls are needed on industrial radionuclide emissions, which are a byproduct of many nuclear processes used in industry and medicine. They maintain that a minimum risk level of 1 cancer in 1 million over a lifetime is justified for even persons living near the facilities.

"We in the environmental community are not prepared to call 1 in 10,000 a safe level of exposure," said David Doniger, an attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council.

Rosenberg said the risk level sought by the environmentalists would be counterproductive because it would result in "significant reductions" in the amount of radioactive therapy for cancer. The National Institutes of Health maintained in comments to the EPA that tighter controls might result in the added loss of life because it could hamper some cancer treatments.

The new EPA regulations were issued 10 years after the federal Clean Air Act called on the agency to establish emission standards for radioactive byproducts. A lawsuit by environmentalists directed that the EPA produce the new standards.

The new emissions requirements cover nearly 7,000 facilities including hospitals, research laboratories, pharmaceutical plants, atomic waste storage plants and electric utility generating plants as well as uranium mines.

Richard Guimond, director of the EPA's office of radiation, said most of the facilities already meet the new standard.

Nevertheless, he estimated that currently as many as 10,000 people may live in areas where exposure to radioactive pollution poses a cancer risk greater than the 1 in 10,000 required by the new regulation.

Among those facilities that, according to the EPA, will have to curb radioactive emissions to come into compliance with the new requirements are:

—Seven of the country's 15 underground uranium mines at a cost to the industry of $400,000 a year. As many as five of the mines may choose instead to shut down, officials said.

—A number of Energy Department sites where excessive radon is released from radioactive wastes, some dating back to the early days of the nuclear program in the 1940s and 1950s.

—Some of the country's five operating elemental phosphorous plants where health risks to nearby residents exceed EPA standards. A phosphorous plant in Pocatello, Idaho, likely will have to install a $2.4 million scrubber to reduce emissions because radioactive pollution there poses an estimated cancer risk 12 times as great as the 1 in 10,000 standard allowed, according to the EPA.

ANDERSEN WINDOWS

THE BEAUTIFUL WAY

HOME BUILDERS SUPPLY, INC.

Come home to quality.
Andersen.

THE GLASS THAT MAKES WINDOWS ACT LIKE INSULATION.

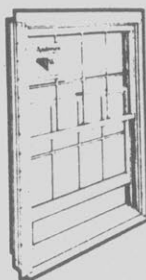

Andersen High-Performance insulating glass helps control radiant heat to your best advantage, whatever the weather.

Andersen® High-Performance windows help keep heat inside when you want it there, outside when you don't.

The secret? A special transparent coating permanently bonded to the glass, reducing the amount of radiant heat that can pass through. That means less work for air conditioners and furnaces. And lower energy bills—whatever the climate.

For the ultimate in energy efficiency, get the Andersen High-Performance window.

SEE THE HIGH-PERFORMANCE PATIO DOOR.

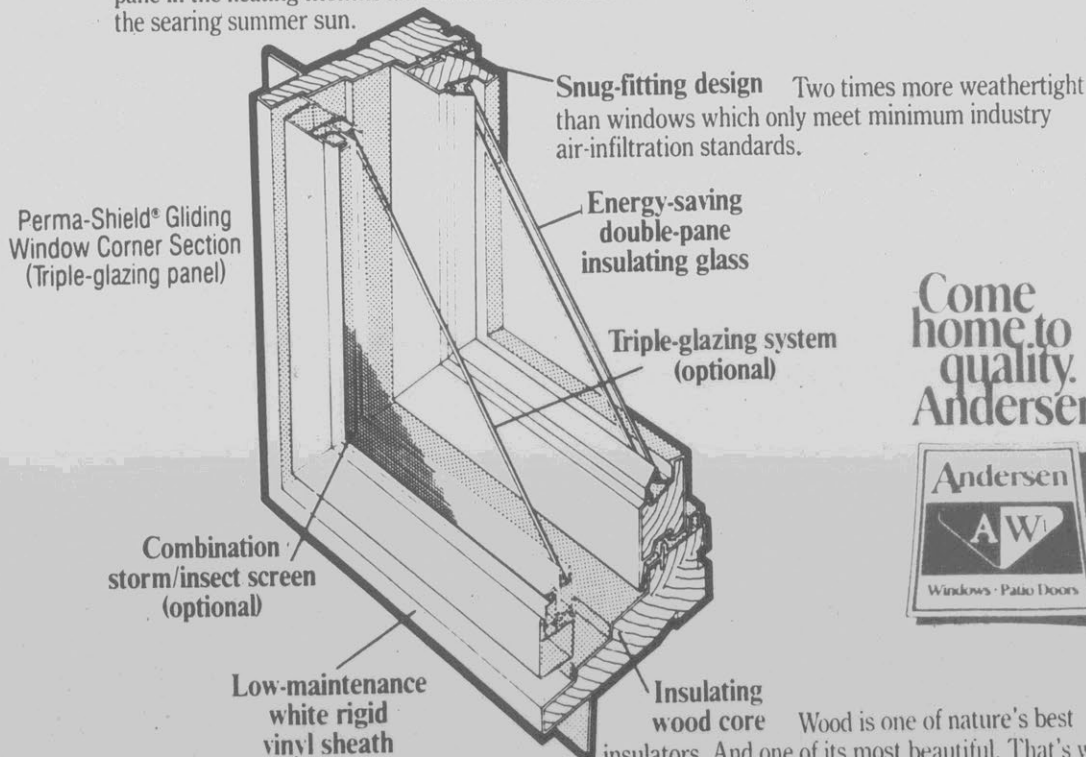

It's the Andersen® Perma-Shield® patio door with High-Performance insulating glass. This glazing has a transparent coating that keeps radiant heat in during cold weather, out during warm weather. Reduces heating and cooling costs. Come see our display and let us show you the many other quality features of the High-Performance patio door.

ANDERSEN® HIGH-PERFORMANCE WINDOWS

Energy-saving, High Performance insulating glass. 42% more energy-efficient than ordinary double-pane in the heating months and 20% more efficient in the searing summer sun.

Snap-out grilles (optional) for easy cleaning. Tough, durable Andersen® Perma-Fit® grilles come in white or Terratone® on both interior and exterior surfaces. Also available in white or Terratone exteriors with beige Tycote™ finish interior which can be left natural, stained or painted.

Smooth, easy operation. Solid, stable window materials, finely tooled hardware and Andersen's 80+ years of expertise create windows and patio doors that operate smoothly, quietly—almost without effort.

PUT ANDERSEN® BETWEEN YOUR KITCHEN AND THE COLD.

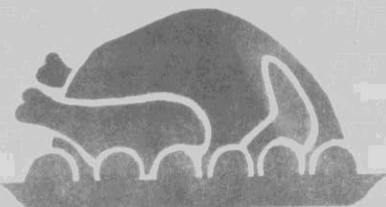

Tired of chilly, drafty kitchen windows? Then remodel or build with Andersen® Perma-Shield® casement windows.

- Double-pane insulating glass.
- Snug-fitting, weather-tight design.
- Full weatherstripping.
- Insulating wood core.
- Virtually maintenance free vinyl exterior.

LEARN TO DO IT YOURSELF

With top-quality windows and patio doors from Andersen®, installation comes easy. Afterward, smooth operation is an open-and-shut case.

Remodeling. Whether you're adding on to your home, or just replacing worn-out windows, don't make the same mistake twice. This time, don't settle for less than Andersen® brand windows.

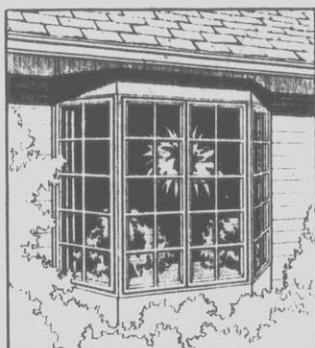

Low-maintenance vinyl exterior. Durable rigid vinyl exterior* doesn't need painting. Is designed not to chip, flake, blister or peel. Won't rust, pit or corrode.

Energy-saving. Energy conservation is a fact of life. But thanks to beautiful Andersen® windows and patio doors, it's something you can live with in comfort and style.

Beauty. One look at Andersen® windows and patio doors, and you'll see how they set the standards for beauty. Clean, simple lines that enhance any architectural style. Large glass areas that let in more light, open up your view.

INSULATE YOUR ANDERSEN® WINDOWS EVEN MORE.

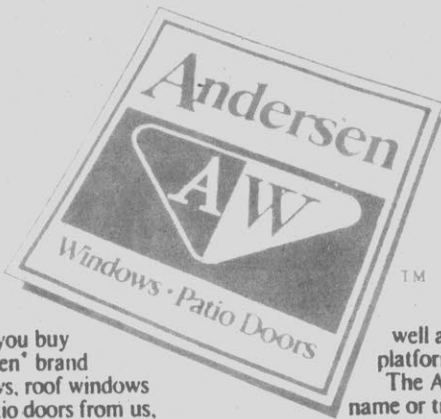

Add a third pane of glass (Removable Glazing Panel) and make your Andersen® windows even better insulators than they already are.

Just look at these triple-glazing features:

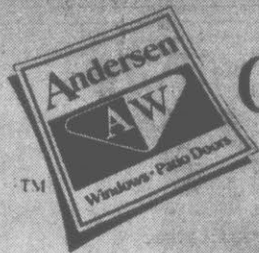

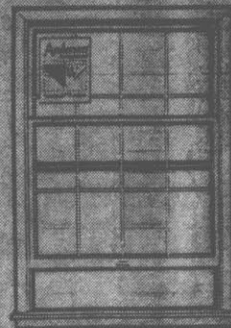

- Cuts window heat loss
- Keeps you more comfortable
- 10°F warmer inside glass surface
- Easy do-it-yourself installation

ACCEPT NO SUBSTITUTES FOR ANDERSEN QUALITY.

When you buy Andersen® brand windows, roof windows and patio doors from us, everything you get is 100% Andersen. That includes such accessories as insect screens, extension jambs, and—for bay and bow units—head and seatboards as well as plywood platforms. The Andersen® name or trademark on these items is a sure sign of top quality. Genuine Andersen quality. We won't settle for any substitutions. And neither should you.
