City Set To Vote

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In 24 hours or so the voters of Greenville will make their decision on the future of the city for the coming years.

Voters will choose from 15 candidates to fill six City Council seats and the mayor's office and two proposed changes to the city charter.

Margaret Hardee, Pitt County elections supervisor, said the Board of Elections was wrapping up the last few loose ends in preparation for Tuesday's vote. "We do everything we can for (the voters), and all they have to do is get out and vote," Ms. Hardee said.

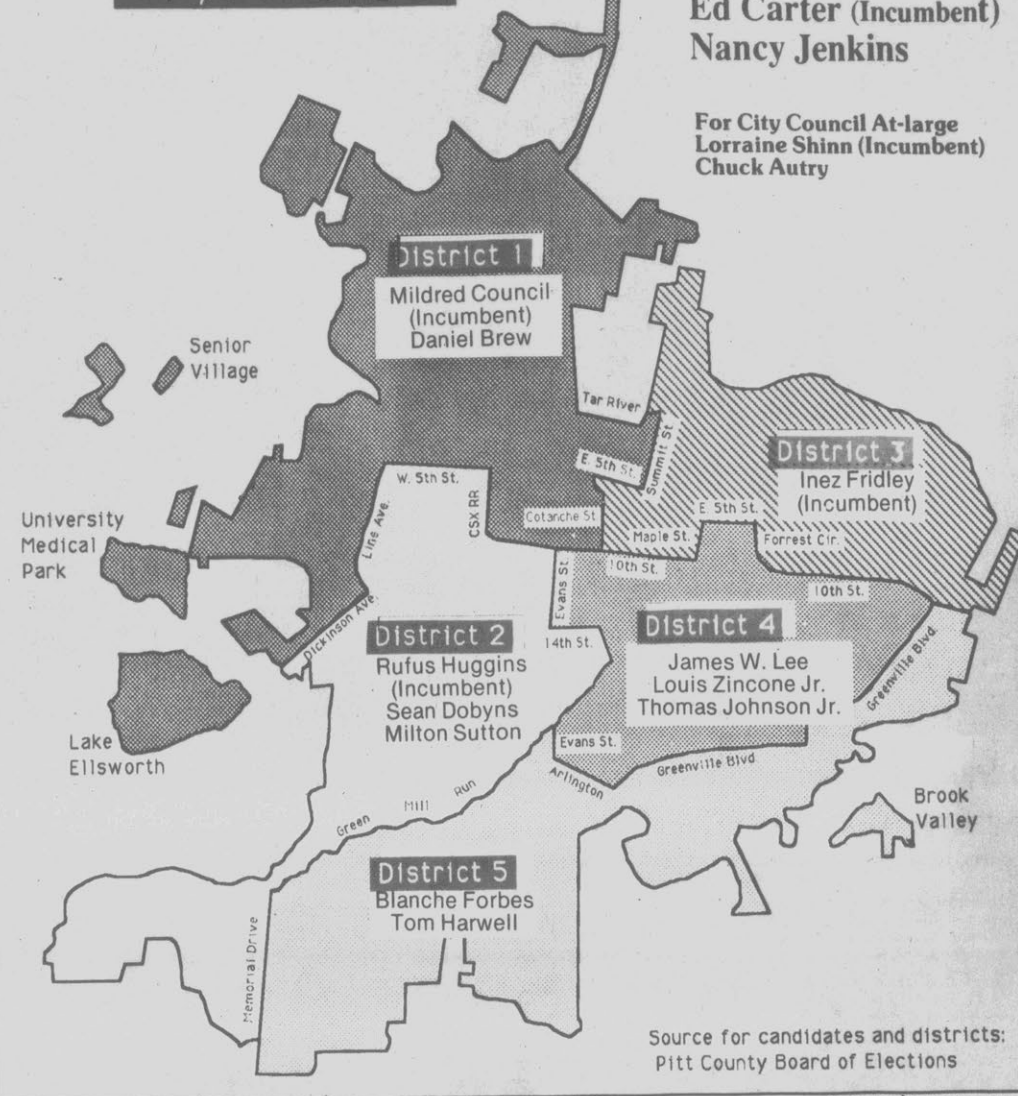

The polls open around the city Tuesday at 6:30 a.m. and will remain open until 7:30 p.m. The Board of Elections has notified voters of their precinct by mail, and voters should refer to that card to find their voting place.

The Board of Elections also provides "curbside voting" for the elderly or handicapped at all voting precincts. Officials from the precinct will take a voter's ballot from the car if the voter is unable to enter the voting place.

"We try to make it as convenient and simple as we possibly can so people will get out and vote," Ms. Hardee said.

E. German Tensions Build As Refugees Flee To West

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East Germany's Communist government today published the draft of a new law allowing citizens 30 days a year of free travel in the West after 19,000 East Germans joined the westward stampede over the weekend.

A Cabinet minister urged the Communist Party's ruling Politburo to resign, and activists planned to stage another pro-democracy rally in Leipzig tonight to maintain pressure on the government for reforms.

An opposition leader reacted coolly to the new travel proposal and said authorities will need to do more to gain public trust.

"Travel is not the primary problem in East Germany," said Sebastian Pflugbeil, a co-founder of New Forum, the largest opposition group. "Too many have left the country already."

"The leadership must make other steps to prove it is earnest in its reform efforts and to win the trust of the people," Pflugbeil said in an interview with West Berlin's RIAS radio station.

"The tension between the people and the party has never been so great as today," he said.

In an apparent bid to discourage further exodus to West Germany, where East Germans are automatically granted citizenship, the government promised to ease restrictions on foreign travel before the year is out.

Announcing the decision, Interior Minister Friedrich Dickel said on national television Sunday night: "We want to give the possibility to all citizens to travel wherever they want without any restrictions."

All East German citizens would be allowed to travel freely abroad up to 30 days a year, he said. The draft law will be discussed publicly until Nov. 30 and will then go to Parliament. It should take effect by year's end, he said.

In addition, passport applications will be handled within 30 days with urgent cases settled in three days or less, Dickel said. He indicated that illegal stays in the West would be decriminalized.

Only direct violations of the border will be punished, Dickel said, indicating this referred to escapes over the border with West Germany or the Berlin Wall.

Freedom of travel has been a major demand of East Germans who have taken to the streets by the hundreds of thousands over the past month to protest decades of authoritarian rule.

The only country East Germans can currently visit without exit visas is neighboring communist Czechoslovakia.

Students Fill In Sanford On School Needs

By Lane Dunn
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Area students played the role of the teacher Sunday as they lectured Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., on how to improve education.

Twenty-five high school students from Pitt County, Craven County, Kinston and Washington schools were part of the roundtable discussion group.

A student-written article published in a Raleigh newspaper spurred Sanford to participate in the discussion. The article said students are not asked for their ideas even though they are experts.

"We ought to be calling on people that are about as close to education as you can get — students," Sanford said.

Sanford acted as the moderator for the group, allowing students to provide the input. "I was impressed with the willingness to jump on people who didn't believe in fair play," Sanford said.

Hank Crapps, a D.H. Conley student, felt the meeting was productive.

"Any time you get a large group of students involved with the process, you improve the process," he said.

Talk of spending more time with average students ranked high in the conversation.

"We can raise standards by aiming at the midpoint," said Laura Guy of J.H. Rose. "We are treating high school as pre-college. We are overlooking the fact that a lot of students do not plan to go to college."

Students also said early education and improving literacy are the keys to successful education. Sanford said he was encouraged to hear those topics mentioned because they are some of the few that involve the federal government.

Members of the group also mentioned the need to get students and educators more involved with the function of the school systems. "Educators should have a bigger role, not just county board members," said Vicki Mercer, a Farmville Central student.

Kathy Zachman, a student at Washington High School, said she is the student representative to the Washington school board. Miss Zachman said she does not vote or sit in on executive session but gets a good response from board members.

"I've been pleased and surprised at how well the adults have listened to the opinions and ideas of students," she said.

No other schools represented had such a program.

Several students said low teacher pay hurts the quality of education. "We would get a lot better teachers if we would give them the money they deserve for the job they do," said Jonathan Lee, an Ayden-Grifton student.

Stewart King, of J.H. Rose, said some of the schools' money could be better spent. "We spend money on things like raised letterheads," he said. "Stationery is stationery."

Trish Flynn of Kinston High suggested schools send the bottom 10 percent of students to vocational schools.

But "Thomas Edison was in the bottom 10 percent of his class," said Jim Roberts of D.H. Conley. "If he had been trained in leather crafting, would we have the light bulb?"

The students agreed that many issues were not the schools' alone. "A lot of problems in our schools are society's problems being concentrated," Lee said.

King said schools need to reduce the number of white/non-white activities, such as white and non-white homecoming queens. "They are trying to integrate schools but at the same time they are trying to segregate us," King said.

Scholastic Aptitude Test scores seemed to be the most popular subject. Most agreed that SATs alone were not a good measure of a student's ability. But some said there is a need for the test.

Melvin Davis of Kinston said the scores are useful as a determining factor between two students who are identical in other areas.

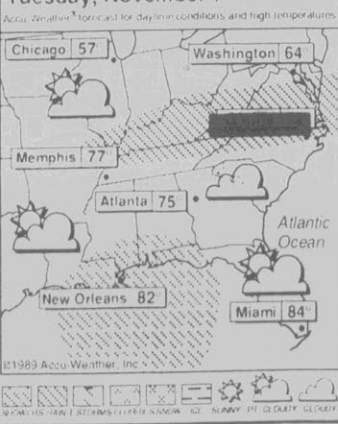

Mary Alice Yarbrough, coordinator of special projects for Pitt County schools, said Pitt County students who participated in the discussions were chosen from two programs — the mentor program and the honors med program, which allows students to work with professors at ECU Medical School.

She said three students were chosen from each high school in the county.

Nicaraguan Says Age No Factor For Sandinistas

By Frances Horton Arrington
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The war in Nicaragua has changed the lives of all the people there, but especially the lives of the children.

Many of them choose military service at an early age. Some are pressed into military service as young as age 14.

Age is no refuge in that country, according to Sandra Castillo, 33, a native Nicaraguan who talked about her country while visiting her brother, Javier, recently in Greenville.

Ms. Castillo is an architect, but she works with the United Nations Food Program helping dispense food to war-torn areas.

In Nicaragua, she said, it is not unusual for government-backed Sandinista troops to storm into movie theaters or schoolrooms, round up children and whisk them off to do battle.

"It happens — not as much now as before," Ms. Castillo said. "Sometimes, they go to movies, turn on the lights, and just take the children, everyone in the theater."

Before Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega suspended the draft earlier this year, children could be drafted legally at age 14. Ms. Castillo said. She said the draft has been suspended until the presidential elections scheduled for Feb. 25.

Those elections now stand in jeopardy, however, as Ortega ended a 19-month truce with opposing Contra forces last week and threatened to cancel the elections.

Teens, who are often forced to choose sides in the civil war between the Sandinistas and the Contras, struggle with mixed emotions about their country, Ms. Castillo said.

"There are young people who want to stay in Nicaragua, especially the ones who join the Sandinistas," she said. Even without the draft, she said, government troops have little trouble finding youngsters who want to join them.

"It's a matter of beliefs," Ms. Castillo said. "Most people in the country are in the military or have relatives in the military."

"If the parents are very concerned and want to get their child out of the country, it can be arranged," she said. "But, many of the parents are in favor of the military."

SANDRA CASTILLO

Ms. Castillo said she believes Ortega will win the upcoming presidential election without using illegal tactics. She said about half of the country's eligible voters are military personnel, which means they will likely vote for Ortega. The relatives of those in the military service will likely follow suit and vote for Ortega, she said, giving him the votes he will need to be re-elected.

Not only has the internal fighting confused young lives in Nicaragua, but it has disrupted the entire societal structure, said Javier Castillo.

He said Nicaraguans are struggling to adjust to a new way of life that began in 1979 when the government moved from a right-wing dictatorship to a stricter totalitarian doctrine.

"There is food rationing, gas rationing, a thriving black market," Javier Castillo said. "Nicaraguans are not used to making lines to get food and gas. Even our freedom of speech and travel have been curtailed."

He said the government had, at one point, required all citizens to carry passes when traveling from one city to another.

The war has caused shortages of food and medical supplies in many areas and Ms. Castillo said countries around the world have sent items to Nicaragua to aid the people.

"Always, there are people trying to give food to Nicaragua," Ms. Castillo said. "In the coming years, there will be a more serious shortage of food. We need some non-food items like hospital equipment, too, but most especially we need food."

Ms. Castillo said food is more plentiful now than it was earlier in the year.

"It is getting better. There's more food in the supermarket, but it's very expensive," she said. Nicaraguans who can afford it pay triple the grocery store prices for food, gas and other items in black market purchases, she said.

Ms. Castillo said Nicaraguans appreciate economic aid given to their country, but said she and others are leery of military assistance to the Contras or the Sandinistas coming from outside Nicaragua.

"Sometimes, I think maybe it would be better if everybody took care of their own problems," she said.

Despite the ongoing war, Ms. Castillo said she loves Nicaragua. She lives in Managua with her mother and is the only one of the four siblings who has not moved out of the country.

"I like Nicaragua. It's an undeveloped country with a lot of poverty, but the people are very friendly and very open," she said. "My city's not that nice, but Nicaragua has some beautiful landscape."

In addition to her brother, Javier, who is vice president at Lawrence Behr Associates Inc. in Greenville, Ms. Castillo has a sister who is a Miami attorney and a brother who is a medical doctor in Guatemala.

Sanford Praises Libraries

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In addition to asking students their views on education Sunday, U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., met the same day both with 20 Pitt County teachers and with Friends of the ECU Library.

As he had done with the students, Sanford asked the participants in the local Teacher Executive Institute to tell him what is needed to improve public education. At the end of the discussion, he asked that each teacher write him a letter expanding on his or her ideas about education.

In meeting with the library supporters, Sanford — former president of Duke University — praised libraries and the people who believe in them enough to support them. He said he believes the origins of American freedom can be traced to the invention of the printing press. And he quoted Henry David Thoreau saying that the written word is the choicest of relics.

He talked, too, about the advent of the computer and how it expands the good that libraries can do. He expressed his delight that he is now able to sit in his office and file a command on a computer that will bring up an index of the entire Library of Congress. He said he can file another command and request that the book of his choice be sent over to him.

The Teacher Executive Institute is a partnership among the Educational Foundation and six local industries. Its purpose is to allow the participants to spend one day a week learning the skills that industry teaches its executives.

SEN. TERRY SANFORD

The Friends of the ECU Library is an organization that exists solely to "assist in the development of the University Library by providing resources to supplement its programs and by fostering greater understanding of the University Library as a community resource."

The ECU Library Friends had Sanford speak during its 12th annual dinner meeting. During the meeting, recognition was given to those who have been especially contributory to the work of the campus library during the past year.

ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin reminded group members that they may be contacted by architects beginning plans for a new $24 million ECU library for their input on the project.

Farm Scene

By Phillip Rowan
PITT EXTENSION AGENT

There are about 100 species of nematodes that are known to feed on soybeans but only a few species are considered to be of major economic concern to the crop.

The ones that are most damaging to soybeans include: the root-knot nematodes, the soybean cyst nematode, the lance nematode, the reniform nematode and the sting nematode. Of these, the cyst nematode is the most economically important in soybean production. In Pitt County, the cyst nematode appears to be more damaging to our soybean crop each year.

Since cyst nematode populations become more active late in the growing season (October and November), now is the time to take soil samples for nematode assays. The North Carolina Department of Agriculture's Agronomic Division charges $2 for a routine nematode assay. Sampling procedures, plastic bags, boxes and information sheets for taking nematode samples can be picked up at the Agricultural Extension Office.

When a farmer has determined he has a cyst nematode problem, he can begin to take control measures. Even though chemical nematocides have proven to be effective in managing nematodes in soybeans, their expense is usually prohibitive. Rotation is the best means of controlling cyst nematodes in soybeans.

A recommended soybean rotation scheme for cyst nematode control is nonhost, nematode resistant soybean variety. The reason for planting a nematode susceptible variety is to keep selection on one race only so that types are in the field that can be controlled by resistance. Nonhost crops recommended include corn, small grains and cotton. In the event of severe soybean cyst nematode populations, a non-host crop should be grown for two years before resuming this program.

Late maturing soybean varieties often add to a soybean cyst nematode problem because nematodes are more active late in the season and reproduce faster on soybeans that have pods. For this reason, timely planting of early maturing (Group V) soybeans can aid in soybean cyst nematode control.

On a different subject relating to soybeans, growers interested in participating in the state yield contest should contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 830-6361. Area and state winners will be recognized and receive awards.

Forbes For District 5

The candidates for office in District 5 both see managing Greenville's growth as one of the city's top challenges into the 1990s. Blanche Forbes, a realtor, and Tom Harwell, an engineer, have stressed Greenville's traffic problems and emphasized the importance of zoning in their campaigns.

But Ms. Forbes has the better perspective from which to make decisions that address these concerns. Her stated positions attest to this. For example, she identifies the ECU Medical School as one of the community's top assets and suggests a non-profit organization should be formed to buy property in the medical arts district and develop it properly.

District 5 includes some of the city's most affluent areas, many of which are pressured by urban growth. Ms. Forbes has shown she understands these concerns and can address them as a city council member for District 5.

The present method of electing mayor and city council members on the non-partisan "at large" basis has served Greenville well for many years, and I would favor continuing this method. Electing capable candidates to represent the entire city (rather than a specific section or ward) better assures that the general welfare of the city take precedent over sectional or vested interest. * b. Four-year staggered terms could be a feasible way to better ensure continuity. * Nancy Jenkins said on 10/19/89 at the League of Women Voters Forum: "I go on record, from the beginning supporting a two-year term."

2. For the referendum affecting the power of the Mayor and the accountability of Mayor and Council to you, the citizens.

This referendum will have far reaching consequences that every voter must consider.

The incumbent mayor is for extending the mayoral term to four years and the present mayor demands a vote on all issues, despite the city charter of 1981. (The city charter of 1981 establishes that the mayor's office and the city council are separate entities and that the mayor votes only in case of ties.)

Giving the mayor a vote increases the mayor's power by lowering the quorum number for council meetings. This would enable any mayor with only one-half of the council (3 members) present to exercise complete control.

Extending the terms of all members of the council and mayor from 2 to 4 years will mean four years of non-responsiveness and of little accountability of these people to you the voters. This type of long term control and non-accountability can spell disaster.

Mayoral candidate Nancy Jenkins supports the city charter of 1981 in which the mayor votes only in case of ties and Nancy Jenkins is for 2, NOT 4 year terms.

I think that every voter should consider the possible long term consequences of voting for this referendum. Too much power held for too long will bring irrevocable damage to our city.

Because of her dedicated leadership in the city and her strength in opposing these issues, NANCY JENKINS RECEIVES MY FULL ENDORSEMENT.

Sincerely,

Bill Hadden

Now The Vote

Municipal Elections Tomorrow

The debates and forums of the 1989 municipal elections are ended. Candidates can only do last minute campaigning today as they await the voters' decisions in tomorrow's voting.

Politicians have had their say and now comes the moment of truth ... when the voters cast the ballots which will choose those who will decide area municipalities' policies for the next couple of years.

Today all that counts is that registered voters cast their ballots on Tuesday — election day.

In Greenville a spirited campaign has been under way. There are registered citizens who are eligible to vote tomorrow. All of us pay taxes at the rate of 55.36 cents per $100 valuation. Thus all of us have an interest in who will oversee the $21,747,549 Greenville budget.

That makes participating in the election very personal. It is our tax money that will be appropriated and all should want it spent in a way that will best benefit the city as a whole.

Each must decide on the candidates who will best represent our interests. Then we must make a special effort to visit the polls on Tuesday to cast our ballots. It requires very little time in a municipal election because such a small percentage of those registered take the trouble to go to the polls.

If we base our prediction on past turnouts we can safely say that the number voting tomorrow will be disturbingly small as compared to a presidential election year. Citizens of Greenville can confound that prediction by turning out in record numbers.

By tonight local citizens will have received all the guidance they will ever get on the candidates in this year's races. Tomorrow no one can tell any of us how to vote once we enter the polling places. The hope now is for a record vote. Democracy works best when we all participate. Don't fail to use your voting privilege tomorrow.

Lighting Helps

Better Light Reduces Crime

Improved area lighting won't solve all the problems of nighttime crime. There is no question, though, that better lighting helps.

East Carolina University will spend $578,200 for safety-related lighting which will be placed in problem areas. Also some trees and shrubs will be pruned to provide better vision and reduced hiding places for would-be attackers.

It will be money well spent. There have been attacks on women in areas near the campus and such assaults are not rare on and around university campuses. Good lighting causes the potential attackers to think twice. They can be recognized and other persons can see an attack taking place and come to the victim's aid.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors approved $500,000 for the lighting project and an additional $78,200 came from parking revenues and other sources.

The increased lighting will be installed as quickly as possible in selected parking areas, around dorms and along certain walking paths.

The campus project is only part of what is needed. Students must frequently walk off campus to nearby apartments or to shop. The city should take a cue from the campus lighting projects and study the lighting on city streets in the campus vicinity. Carefully engineered lighting might deter some of the street attacks.

Street lighting won't do everything. Anyone out at night should exercise caution while walking or entering or leaving a car, but better lighting is one way to deter street attacks. The campus project is welcome.

Public Forum

To the editor:

As former ECU student and permanent Greenville resident, I have on more than one occasion participated in the downtown Halloween festivities. Living in the Tar River neighborhood provided me a first-hand look at the incident Tuesday night. As it has been reported, about 300 students were congregating on Oak Street. Forty police officers, mostly in riot gear, were on the scene. I don't think that the three Corrections Department buses and 40 officers in riot patrol were a brilliant response to 300 college students drinking beer. In case you missed the jest, "How many policemen does it take to arrest an ECU student?" One, except on Halloween night when 40 can dress up like welders and kick some real butt! Maybe next year they can dress up like G.I. Joe and drive tanks and stuff ... The man in Bethel wonders why no one responded when his car was riddled with bullets? It's because every Highway Patrolman in eastern North Carolina was on First Street.

Christopher Kidd
Greenville

To the editor:

Some students involved in the excessive noise and objections to disperse incident in the north Elm area Halloween night state that they were denied "rights" by the Greenville police who responded to neighboring complaints — and just where were the "rights" of those who had to listen to the display of noise and insubordination?!! And as to those who insist "I was innocent" — why were you still there when you'd been asked to leave?

If north Elm residents were to take up residence in the hometown of these involved in this fracas would they be allowed to do such? And how would the families of these "noise-makers" react to an evening of excessive noise?

May the Greenville Police Department continue to impress upon these "visitors" that living in Greenville means abiding by the same considerations and regulations as those of the communities from which they came.

And a great big "THANK YOU" to those students who are using their enthusiasm, time, energy, mental expertise and talents to keep Greenville a wonderful place to live.

I've walked the streets of the Tar River Estates since its beginning and have never ceased to marvel at the quietness — have never heard a radio, TV or stereo because such enjoyments were confined with in the apartment walls as should be. I certainly hope that such as the above mentioned is not be condoned by the management.

Hazel Riddle
Greenville

To the editor:

As a parent of an East Carolina University student, I resent the second-class citizen status the City of Greenville places upon my child. I live in Pitt County and have no representation on the City Council. I have had a young person in ECU for the last eight years, my daughter receiving her masters degree and my son presently a senior there. I certainly do not consider either of them anything but productive individuals.

I have seen the situation deteriorate to the present condition, whereby the council representing Greenville, consistently undermines any attempt to have good working relations with East Carolina University. These officials were elected to represent the people not to push through ordinances and resolutions to elevate their own ego. However, the city and City Council do not reject the dollars that the University pours into their economy.

Perhaps it would behoove the city government to take a look at how many of these students remain in our area after graduation. These same students become registered area voters, to voice their opinions in a voting booth. It is distressing and frustrating, but the situation can be remedied. We have to have competent, dedicated people to work the problems out for the betterment of all.

Carolyn S. Moore
Greenville

To The Editor:

It is with great concern that I address the issue of apathy and indifference that I have observed in relation to the City Council election. This attitude is very apparent by some of us in the minority population. Indignation and indifference will not bring about the change that is desired, only a commitment to support those who have, can, and will do this.

Recently, while in a local establishment which is patronized by minorities, I heard racial slurs used by those working there. Unfortunately, I was not surprised but acrimonious. I left after informing the appropriate personnel. This attitude is not only evident to me on a daily basis within the City, but the climate for this exists all over America. Ultimately, my decision to stop patronizing this business will not affect them; yet, it will give me the personal satisfaction to know that I refuse to be treated in any manner other than with the respect and dignity I know I deserve as a human being.

We must regain and maintain our momentum, abhor complacency, and support those who will consider the necessity of addressing the issues that affects each citizen in the City.

Superficial ideas have no place in a city with the potential of Greenville. The issue is not Halloween but housing, employment, orderly growth, and providing an environment that will generate positive results.

Thatcher Is Out of Touch With Britain

Michael Elliott

LONDON — Like political reporters everywhere, those who live in the press gallery of Britain's House of Commons are a cynical lot — and cynical, above all, about the Commons itself. It may proudly call itself the mother of Parliament, but usually the place is as ill-informed and predictable as you would expect when 650 politicians are gathered together. Only occasionally does the House live up to its billing — and it did so the afternoon of Halloween.

At 5:26, Nigel Lawson who, until five days before, had been Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's chancellor of the exchequer, (or chief finance minister) rose to tell his colleagues why he had resigned. Lawson is a proud, somewhat arrogant man — and not usually a good orator. But his 10-minute speech (heard, unusually for the Commons, in total silence) was delivered with none of the pompous attitudes he often adopts, and it was electrifying. For he did nothing less than explain why Thatcher's government may be falling apart at the seams.

Lawson had been chancellor since Mrs. Thatcher's second election victory in 1983 but he was much more than that. Almost alone among the entourage, he had the ability to make the intellectual case for Thatcherism with a politician's instinct for what would play in the British equivalent of Peoria. He had cut taxes, privatized industries and deregulated the economy.

From 1986 to 1988, when Britain grew faster than any other Western economy, Lawson presided over the closest thing to a boom the country had seen for 30 years. If anyone deserved Mrs. Thatcher's unstinting support, he did. But he did not get it. To understand why, you have to understand both Margaret Thatcher, and Britain's current economic difficulties.

Ten years of power have not diminished one of Mrs. Thatcher's central traits. She thinks of herself as an outsider, enjoying the advice and company of other outsiders.

She is one of those infuriating people who, when they find themselves in a minority of one, are convinced they are right.

Most of the British economic Establishment, and Nigel Lawson, think exchange-rate stability is a desirable goal in itself, and an invaluable weapon in the battle against inflation. They believe, moreover, that the best way for Britain to secure such stability would be for the pound to become a member of the European exchange-rate mechanism which, within narrow limits, sets rates for the currencies of members within the European community.

Since most Establishment economists think the exchange-rate mechanism is beneficial, it is not surprising that Mrs. Thatcher does not — even though she is nationally committed to joining it "when the time is right." She has long believed that attempts to manage the currency markets are futile; yet that was Lawson's policy. When currency dealers were selling the pound (which makes Britain's imports more expensive, and hence raises domestic inflation) he would raise interest rates to maintain the value of the currency. British rates are now at 15 percent. This, be it noted, is in a country where almost all home loans are floating-rate, which means that interest-rate hikes hurt — and since most home owners vote Conservative, it is Mrs. Thatcher's people who feel the pinch.

Hence the prime minister had some political grounds for feeling annoyed with Lawson, and she was much supported by the views of one of her unsmooth, provincial chums — Sir Alan Walters, a British economist who has long spent most of his time in America (at the World Bank or Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore). Walters has offered Mrs. Thatcher economic advice for most of the 1980s, and this year was scheduled to spend half his time in her employ. His views on exchange-rate management are robust: he thinks it stinks. The mechanism, he said in an article published only last week, is "half-baked." In Lawson's view, "No case can be made for seeming confusion or vacillation between the two positions"; Walters' article was "the tip of a singularly ill-concealed iceberg, with all the destructive potential that icebergs possess." When it became clear to Lawson that the prime minister would not settle the confusion by sacking Walters, he resigned. Walters himself followed suit.

In one interpretation, Lawson's going does no more than confirm that Mrs. Thatcher is autocratic, intensely loyal to supporters and incapable of admitting that she is wrong — characteristics we have all recognized for years. But there is far more to it than that.

For Margaret Thatcher, commitment to the Atlantic alliance is a deeply emotional thing, one that long predates her relationship with Ronald Reagan. America is steadfast, or at least, it always has been for her. Europeans, she thinks, are not to be trusted; they are devious when not woolly, but usually both.

No other prominent British politician thinks like that any more. They are fond of America, or most of them are, but they regard themselves as Europeans. Mrs. Thatcher's ministers find that more and more of their business — whether fighting terrorism, stopping drugs, cleaning up the environment or managing the economy — is easier done if done with their colleagues in European governments.

Nigel Lawson was, and is, firmly of that view. He is not a romantic dreaming about the United States of Europe, but he believes that Britain's destiny lies in a "Europe of nation states." If it did not join the exchange-rate mechanism, he said, Britain would find its influence in Europe sorely diminished.

Here lies the true significance of Lawson's departure. Even those calling themselves Thatcherites no longer follow her line in Europe. One young minister to whom she is quite close told me this week, "There simply are no votes to be won in being anti-European now." Yet given the chance to set her face against Europe — and mechanism is the most potent symbol of European cooperation — she took it.

If Mrs. Thatcher took it in the knowledge that Britain had somewhere to go other than Europe, her action would at least have been understandable.

Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Bill Was No Cure-All For Budgeting

Peter Osterlund

WASHINGTON — The government flirts with default. Billions of dollars are whacked from the budgets of hundreds of federal programs. Members of the two parties spit rhetorical venom at one another.

That has been the story from Washington during the last few weeks, as Congress and president fight over the federal purse. And it cannot get much worse than that, right? Then again, maybe not so right.

"It seems to get a little worse every time," says the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Democrat Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

Which is one reason why the budget process seems ripe for reform, again. Congress' most fundamental task is the one in which lawmakers decide how to spend the taxpayers' money. But the way they go about that, says Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., is "a disgrace."

And so, pending are some 100 bills that would alter the way Congress writes and lives with a budget. Many of them could have far-reaching implications for the way the federal government operates.

Some of the more popular notions envision Congress and the White House on a two-year budget cycle, if only to give everyone some time to breathe and reflect in the midst of an endeavor that has become the cause of year-round frenzy. Some lawmakers also envision tightening congressional accounting procedures, so that all may keep a sharper eye on the fiscal consequences of their budget decisions.

At least a handful of these ideas stand a good chance of adoption because many lawmakers, says Rep. William Frenzel, R-Minn., "are frankly sick and tired of the contortions we've all been through over the past few months."

Of course, lawmakers have expressed budgetary battle fatigue in the past and have responded with all manner of reforms to improve and otherwise fortify the budget process. Faced with the prospect of budget deficits "as far as the eye can see," Congress in 1985 adopted one of the most radical reforms in the history of the Republic — the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, which threatened automatic across-the-board budget cuts if lawmakers did not reduce the deficit by annual, specified installments.

Today, Gramm-Rudman is perceived as a mixed success at best. Since its enactment, the deficit has decreased as a percentage of the Gross National Product — down to 2.9 percent in 1989 from 5.4 percent in 1985. That, however, may be more of a testament to the vigor of the economy than to the efficacy of Gramm-Rudman.

Some former supporters consider the law to be an outright disaster. Hollings himself has told almost anyone who will listen that he wants "a divorce from Gramm-Rudman-Hollings." Senate Budget Committee chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., is a bit more circumspect but similarly unenthusiastic in his criticism.

"Gramm-Rudman, in my judgment, is teetering on the verge of becoming more a part of the problem than a part of the solution," says Sasser. Since Gramm-Rudman's enactment, he points out, the national debt has increased an average of $250 billion dollars a year. This week, lawmakers are supposed to endorse legislation increasing the federal government's borrowing limit to $3.1 trillion.

More damning, perhaps, is that the federal budget deficit has actually increased during the last two years — up $5 billion in fiscal 1988, and $6 billion, to $161 billion, in fiscal 1989. One could say such numbers still represent real progress, given the fact that lawmakers faced a $221 billion deficit when Gramm-Rudman was passed. But fully two-thirds of that $60 billion reduction resulted not from a Gramm-Rudman imposed exercise in fiscal parsimony, but from the torrential accumulation of funds in the Social Security account.

Given Gramm-Rudman's weak showing, the skepticism about process reform is not difficult to fathom. "The process isn't the problem," says former Congressional Budget Office director Rudolph Penner. "The problem is the problem."

Indeed, some lawmakers become apoplectic at the mere mention of the phrase "budget process reform" and go on to suggest that such talk is little more than a catharsis for lawmakers frustrated with the reality of modern day politics.

"It's just a lot of goo-goo ...," says Rep. David Obey, D-Wis. "When we don't have the guts to make decisions like adults, we talk about overhauling the process by which those decisions aren't made."

In theory, at least, the present system ought to work with civics class precision. The president submits his idea of a federal budget plan to Congress, which responds with a spending blueprint of its own. That blueprint provides an aerial view of federal spending, setting out the federal balance sheet in stark black-and-white.

Authorizing committees take that outline and decide what programs ought to be funded. Appropriations committees take the recommendations of the authorizing committees and write the spending bills that actually fund the programs. A deficit reduction bill is written to ensure that the difference between expenditures and revenues falls within Gramm-Rudman's strictures. The whole process begins in January and ends with the Oct. 1 start of the new fiscal year.

If the resulting budget deficit exceeds that year's Gramm-Rudman target, automatic budget cuts are supposed to bring the deficit into line two weeks later. By 1993, the federal budget is to be balanced.

But reality, as recent experience demonstrates, is a different matter. Lawmakers ignore deadlines, budgetary estimates jitterbug about the ledger, some — sometimes all — of the thirteen spending bills that fund the government are thrown into a enormous take-it-or-leave-it hunk of legislation.

Even when Gramm-Rudman's cuts take effect, the resulting deficit reduction is never as meaningful as advertised. That is because the law's knife is wielded by the White House's budget office, whose economic assumptions are notoriously sunny.

Before the Gramm-Rudman cuts fell last Oct. 16, for example, the White House pegged the fiscal 1990 deficit at about $116 billion. The non-partisan CBO said that the deficit was more on the order of $141 billion. In 1993, when Gramm-Rudman says that the budget will be balanced, CBO estimates that the accumulated national debt will increase by $307 billion.

Even when those automatic cuts fall into place, Congress can reverse them by passing a deficit reduction bill. Lawmakers are trying right now to do just that, reversing $16.1 billion worth of cuts imposed Oct. 16. But the legislation pending is so full of accounting trickery that the Bush administration has demanded that Congress rewrite the bill, or face the prospect of leaving the reductions in place. Given the state of things, it is not surprising that a lawmaker's thoughts might turn to budget reform. A number of them would like the Gramm-Rudman cuts to be based on CBO, rather than White House, estimates, and to have the law's promise of a balanced budget deferred until 1997.

Several want to see the Social Security Trust Fund — its coffers swelling from the payroll tax — taken off the budget for the purposes of figuring the annual deficit. If that had been done for the current fiscal year, CBO calculates, the deficit would have weighed in at $206 billion, instead of $141 billion.

The White House, too, has gotten in the act, looking for ways to win for the president the right to veto individual parts of a spending bill, without rejecting the entire bill.

Will any of these changes make it easier for Washington to handle the conflicting priorities of American politics with more fiscal responsibility? Well, back in 1974, Congress overhauled the entire budget process, in hopes of bringing some discipline to the proceedings. The US had accumulated a $544 billion debt before those reforms; since then, it has added nearly $2.5 trillion to that figure.

"Until we stop promising the benefits of a high cost government at the price of a low cost government," said Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-NY, "these deficits will always be with us."

The Heirs Of John D. Have Sold Out

WASHINGTON — Her name was Rebecca C. Winters. The "C" stood for Cohen and she was my aunt. Once a year she would take my sister and me to see the wonders of Manhattan at Christmastime: department store displays, a visit to Santa at Macy's and, of course, the dazzling climax of the day — a visit to Rockefeller Center and its majestic tree. This December, the Japanese will host that Christmas.

Yes, Virginia, Mitsubishi has bought Rockefeller Center for $846 million. That means it has bought some evocative American landmarks including, of course, the homes of both NBC and the Associated Press. In the process, Mitsubishi has retired the name Rockefeller as a metaphor for durable wealth. The heirs of John D. have sold out.

If I am sad at this turn of events, it is not because the Japanese are now the custodians of my childhood Christmases. Like much else that the Japanese (or others) have bought in this country, Rockefeller Center cannot be disassembled and carted away. If anything, the Japanese will probably find and provide a better quality tree. It's their way.

Japan-bashing has always had an irrational and racist component to it. Paul Revere-like books have been published, warning "the Japanese are coming, the Japanese are coming" and, indeed, Japan now holds upwards of $7 billion worth of commercial real estate in New York alone. Recently, Columbia Pictures was bought by Sony. That deal was accompanied by almost hysterical warnings that we were about to lose our cultural patrimony.

The fear is laughable, made doubly so by Ronald Reagan's defense of the Columbia deal. Awaiting a $1 million Sony contribution to his presidential library, Reagan said maybe the Japanese will clean up Hollywood's act and make more morally uplifting movies. Nice of Reagan to have said that, but a peek at the newspapers would have told him that Sony is dickering with two Americans,

Peter Guber and Jon Peters, to run the studio. Among other things, their production company is responsible for the smirky "The Dating Game."

At any rate, the issue is not that the Japanese have bought Rockefeller Center, but that non-Americans have. After all, the Japanese are hardly unique. Brits, Canadians, the Dutch and, increasingly, the Germans have been on a buying spree here. These foreigners are simply investors and America is a wonderful place to do some investing. We are a stable democracy — and a rich one, to boot.

But there is no denying one fact: Increasingly Americans are not the ones doing the investing. It is significant that a major hunk of Manhattan real estate was sold to non-Americans. It is significant that when the land changed hands, as it had to, the question was not whether Japanese would buy it, but which Japanese. Japan, after all, is where the money is.

During the Reagan administration, the United States went from being a creditor to a debtor nation — from being owed money, to owing it. Individually, we save less money than do the Japanese. Corporately, our tax laws subsidize debt, even when that debt produces no new products and no new jobs — and, sometimes, only fees for Wall Street bankers. As for the government, it is under-funded. The word "deficit" is just another way of saying "debt." Yearly, the total debt grows, but read-my-lips George Bush will not raise taxes.

The sale of Rockefeller Center to foreign investors says that something is wrong with America. My aunt, were she still alive, could put that assessment in easily understood terms. She traveled occasionally to Europe and, to me, she was the personification of the awesome power of the American dollar. Europe seemed to be hers and only a certain solicitous feeling for the Brits — and a penchant to travel light — seemed to have stopped her from coming home with the Tower of London.

Now, of course, all that is changed. It's folly not to concede that the United States, as Paul Kennedy and others have argued, is in relative decline. The fear is that it might also become absolute — and directly attributable to the reluctance of Congress and, especially, the White House to change fiscal policy.

Extension Unit Faces New Trial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — With no settlement in sight, a discrimination suit against the N.C. Agriculture Extension Service that began in 1971 will be heard again before the same judge who rejected black agents' contentions that they were paid less and passed over for promotions in favor of white counterparts.

Eight years ago, at the first trial, U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. rejected the agents' claims of discrimination. The judge found entirely in favor of the state defendants — William Friday, then president of the University of North Carolina, and various officials of N.C. State University, which administers the extension service.

Philip Bazemore, 68, the lead plaintiff in Bazemore v. Friday, said the agents would settle for $1.6 million. But state officials have offered only $250,000 and that, the Monroe resident said, is an insult.

"We would be better off with zero," he said in an interview. "It isn't just money. You can't possibly compensate us for the racial atrocity that has been inflicted upon us. The hurt, the anger, is permanent. But to add insult to injury, you are prolonging the agony that is there."

State Attorney General Lacy Thornburg declines to confirm any settlement figures, but said, "We're certainly going to put forth every reasonable effort to settle it."

Bazemore, a member of the Monroe City Council, said he was rejected in 1976 for promotion to extension chairman in Union County in favor of a less-qualified white. He had worked 24 years with the service, compared with the white applicant's 12 or 13 years.

The broader issue of the suit is the agents' contention that racial disparities when the extension service ran two programs — one for blacks; one for whites — continued after the two branches merged in 1965. Both sides admit that black agents hired before 1965 continued to earn less than white agents after merger. An internal extension service memo, produced during the trial, pointed out that black agents were earning an average of $800 to $1,100 per year less than whites in 1970.

An expert hired by the plaintiffs found that in 1974, the average black worker earned $331 less per year than a white with the same job, education and tenure. In 1975, the difference was $395.

The U.S. Justice Department intervened in the suit in 1972, alleging that the extension service violated Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which bars race discrimination.

Attorney general since 1985, Thornburg said he is satisfied with the handling of the case by his office and by his three predecessors in whose jurisdiction the suit fell.

Video Laugh Mobile Gives A Pick-Me-Up To Cancer Patients

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Laughter may not pay medical bills, but cancer patients at Presbyterian Hospital are finding that sometimes, it can be the best medicine.

Filmed and videotaped exploits of such humorists as Eddie Murphy, Rodney Dangerfield and Garrison Keillor are included on the Laugh Mobile, a rolling yellow cart filled with movies, videotapes of TV sitcoms, books, games — even "Mr. Bubbles" and Slinky toys.

"It gives them some diversion while their in the hospital," said Sherry Bargoil, Presbyterian's cancer control program coordinator. "Medically speaking, we know there is some mind-body connection."

Every Monday and Friday, hospital volunteers wheel the 5-foot-tall Laugh Mobile around Presbyterian's seventh-floor cancer unit. The program was paid for with a $5,000 grant from the hospital's auxiliary.

"It's a real pick-me-up," said Wanda Mooers, who's been battling cancer of the lymph nodes for the past 14 months. "You can pick out things — even Play-Doh and crayons — to take your mind off your problems."

"I look forward to it," said the mother of two young sons. "When you're going through chemotherapy and radiation, you need to put yourself in a good state of mind, which is sometimes difficult to do."

In his book, "Anatomy of an Illness," author Norman Cousins explored the connection between laughter and illness.

"Even if we find that laughter produces no specific biochemical changes, it does accomplish one very essential purpose, it tends to help a person cope with apprehension and even panic that all too frequently accompany serious illness," he wrote.

Hospital officials got the idea after talking with patients. "Some of our younger leukemia patients who were staying with us for long periods began bringing in their own VCRs and renting tapes," Ms. Bargoil said. "We began to think, why can't we do something like this?"

The Laugh Mobile has about 35 videos, ranging from "National Lampoon's Animal House" to "The Three Stooges" to "The Groucho Marx Scrapbook" and "Revenge of the Nerds." There are also Mickey Mouse and Little Rascals tapes.

There are books by Woody Allen, Bill Cosby and others, as well as audio tapes by Garrison Keillor of "Lake Wobegon Days" fame and fellow humorist Lewis Grizzard.

"Many of our patients are here as long as six to eight weeks for therapy," Ms. Bargoil said. "They get sick of watching soap operas."

Martin Used State-Prepared Survey During His Campaign

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A campaign dossier Jim Martin had compiled at taxpayers' expense may not have been a telling factor in the 1988 gubernatorial race, but it shows the Republican governor's willingness to use his office to build the GOP, his Democratic opponent said.

"This probably more clearly shows they did spend taxpayers dollars for political purposes," former Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said. "While I doubt that would have changed the results of the campaign, it does further indicate that his administration has used the office to build the Republican party."

Research on the opposition is a traditional part of political campaigns and usually is carried on by a candidate's staff and paid for by political funds.

But in 1988, Martin had available to him research on his opponent done by a section of the governor's office with an annual budget of more than $200,000.

The governor's Research Office compiled a dossier on Jordan's record on some 70 issues. The research office also pointed out Jordan's potential vulnerabilities, noting instances in which the Democrat was said to be guilty of "double talk" or a "flip-flop."

The governor was provided with a printed copy of the research on his opponent's record. In addition, certain research was provided upon request to the governor's re-election campaign staff.

Martin, who had criticized his predecessor, Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, for using the state plane on campaign trips, denied any wrongdoing.

"It was a legitimate function of the administration to keep the governor informed and to have a source of information about the positions taken by the leader of the loyal opposition in the legislature," Martin said in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh. "That was begun at a time I didn't believe he'd run."

What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions?"

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?
A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?
A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?
A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Tammy Faye Calls For Money

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. — Tammy Faye Bakker urged worshippers to court God's favor by helping her storefront church out of a $400,000 debt, while the ministry's landlord vowed to go to court to throw it out.

Only by remaining "faithful in your fittings," Mrs. Bakker told about 100 followers, can God be expected to answer prayers for better jobs, pay raises or income tax refunds.

"That is what God can do for you if you are faithful to him," she said.

Also Sunday, Mrs. Bakker said next week's services might be held at the studio in the Shoppers World mall in southwest Orlando, even though mall owner Stewart Gilman threatened legal action if the ministry was not out by last Wednesday.

Sunday night, an angry Gilman said he probably will take legal action today, but declined to discuss details of his leasing arrangement with the ministry.

"I'm disgusted," he said. "You cannot have someone stay in a property indefinitely."

Tammy Bakker asked the congregation to help the ministry find a new site to lease — preferably for no more than $5 per square foot.

"We are going to try to move out of here as quickly as possible," she said. "But unless you hear differently, we'll be here next Sunday."

Sunday's 90-minute service was the second Mrs. Bakker has attended since her husband, Jim, was convicted Oct. 5 on fraud and conspiracy charges. He is serving a 45-year sentence at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn.

He could be free on bond in a matter of days, Mrs. Bakker said. He is challenging a decision to keep him in custody while he appeals his conviction. A ruling by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., is pending.

Mrs. Bakker also said the ministry now faces a $500 million lawsuit brought by former followers.

She said the suit was filed by a group that claimed to represent 190,000 former supporters, or "lifetime partners," in the PTL Ministry that her husband founded.

IN THE STATE

Medical Debate

GREENSBORO (AP) — Do doctors have the right to decide whether to honor a terminally ill patient's wish to "die with dignity?"

The N.C. Medical Society hopes to make this decision easier for physicians when it considers a resolution on the topic at the society's annual meeting later this week in Asheville.

The committee that drafted it expects heated debate over a proposed policy statement that seeks to balance three basic medical principles: preserve life, alleviate suffering and do no harm.

The Medical Society's resolution seeks to spotlight "dying with dignity" issues by drafting a policy that can serve as a model for doctors and hospitals.

Waste Site

GREENSBORO (AP) — Residents of 35 Piedmont counties will learn this week if their areas are still being considered for the radioactive-waste site North Carolina is obliged to open by 1993.

The North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority meets Wednesday to name up to 15 potential sites for the 500-acre facility. The plant would store contaminated material from utilities, industry, hospitals, research centers and others.

Duke Professor Pens Pencil Saga

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — The Duke University professor who penned the definitive history of the pencil says that while the topic hasn't gotten much ink, it is anything but pointless.

Drawing on two years of research, Henry Petroski, a Duke University professor, has written a 450-page book on the pencil that includes the following:

— You could probably draw a line 70 miles long with a single pencil.

— It would probably cost $50 for a person to make a 10-cent pencil.

— There are 2 billion pencils produced in the United States annually.

— The so-called lead in a pencil is actually graphite and clay. The more clay, the harder the point.

What he doesn't know is when the first pencil as we know it today was produced.

"People don't record the origins of such common things," Petroski said.

He does know that the first illustration of a pencil appeared in 1565, the date generally noted as its origin.

Petroski's book is called "The Pencil: A History of Design and Circumstance." To be released in January, the book details the various designs and uses of pencils over the years.

An engineering professor, Petroski didn't set out to be an acknowledged expert on such a simple device. He intended to write about the cultural role of engineering. The pencil was merely to serve as an introduction to some of his thoughts on engineering.

"I couldn't find much written on the pencil and soon realized there was no definitive history of it," Petroski said.

That led Petroski to do his own. He traces the development of the pencil through a series of anecdotes.

For example, erasers didn't appear on pencils until about 100 years ago.

"There was a great debate about whether children in schools should be given pencils with erasers," Petroski said. "People said if they had erasers, they would be encouraged to make mistakes."

As for why most pencils are yellow? Well, blame it on international racism.

Yellow pencils appeared in the middle of the 19th century, after a new source of graphite was discovered in Asian Siberia, Petroski said.

USAir Jetliner Diverted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — A Fayetteville-bound USAir jetliner carrying 37 passengers was diverted to Greensboro because of hydraulic problems, officials said.

The Charlotte to Fayetteville Flight 1749 was diverted Sunday and landed without incident about 4 p.m. at Piedmont Triad International Airport near Greensboro, said USAir spokesman Mike Clark.

As the F-28 jet approached Fayetteville, the pilot detected a problem with a hydraulic pump that affects nose-wheel steering, Clark said.

Passengers said the pilot told them over the plane's intercom that there were landing-gear problems and that the Greensboro airport was chosen because its runway is longer than Fayetteville's.

Passengers were transported by bus Sunday night from Greensboro to Fayetteville Regional Airport, arriving about 7:40 p.m.

Clark said the flight, with a crew of four, was diverted to Greensboro because USAir has better maintenance facilities there.

"The runway distance was not a factor," he said. "We just simply have a major maintenance facility at Greensboro and do not at Fayetteville."

"That's as serious as it could have gotten," Mr. Clark said. "The only reason it did not go to Fayetteville was because of the maintenance facility, and the airplane would have been out of commission considerably longer."

The plane circled the Fayetteville airport for about 30 minutes before flying to Greensboro, said Fayetteville City Councilman Joseph Pillow, who was aboard the flight.

Emergency vehicles lined the runway area, and passengers applauded when the plane landed, said Ken Cooke, another passenger.

After being told the plane was going to Greensboro, passengers started getting a little uneasy, Cooke said.

"We had the feeling they were going to belly-flop it into Greensboro," Cooke said.

Textile Industry Turning To Bush

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials in the textile industry are going straight to the top to find protective legislation against imports this year.

Last year, President Reagan vetoed textile-protection legislation and a vote in the House of Representatives to override the veto failed by 11 votes.

White House officials said then that the trade deficit for textiles and apparels fell in 1988 for the first time since 1979. Employment in the textile industry rose by 21,000 jobs the previous year and profits climbed for the fourth straight year.

So this year, the industry is going to George Bush's administration directly instead of dealing with congressmen.

"We are obviously as concerned about the problem as we ever were," said Carlos Moore, executive director of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute. "But we have learned that it is extremely difficult to override the president's veto."

Supporters of the industries argued that the slump in imports was an aberration, and that American clothing-makers were headed for extinction if the overall trend continued for another decade.

The industries may be right. Textile and apparel imports for the first eight months were the highest in history, with August alone showing a 20 percent increase, the American Textile Manufacturers Institute reported.

Bush's appointees at the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative "are saying they don't see the need of legislation," said an aide to Rep. Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., the chairman of the Congressional Textile Caucus. But she added: "I think the fact that there have been discussions show a change in attitude. Even though the crack in the door is small, we're pleased that they're talking. We just wish they were more forthcoming."

The chief textile negotiator is Ronald J. Sorini, who was the deputy textile negotiator in the Reagan administration. Sorini said that he wants to help the industries at the international bargaining table, not in Congress.

"It's fair to say that ... our goal and policy in trade is one primarily of opening markets — trade expansion rather than trade restriction," he told the Winston-Salem Journal. Although the administration's textile policy is still being developed, Sorini said, a key element is finding ways to increase exports by eliminating trade barriers.

The 1989 City Elections are near the end. Throughout my campaigning, I have been honest in my opinions. I am proud to live in a country where I could have the freedom to voice my own opinions. From the beginning I have let it be known that fighting drugs is my first priority. I truly believe that if all citizens do not join together in the war on drugs, nothing else will matter because our country will fall.

I will continue to do my small part in this war. I urge all citizens of Greenville to join in and do their part. I would appreciate your consideration to vote for me. I am an At Large candidate, which enables my supporters to vote for me regardless of where they live in our City.

Typhoon Gay, worst Thai storm in 30 years, destroyed this village in southern Thailand

Crewmen Rescued

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SONGKHLA, Thailand — The Thai navy today rescued two crewmen from an American oil drilling ship that capsized in a typhoon, but four other crewmen were found dead in the wreckage and 85 were missing, the company said.

Six crew members have been rescued from the 362-foot Seacrest since it overturned in the Gulf of Thailand early Saturday when Typhoon Gay swept through. Officials said searchers would keep working as long as there was hope of finding more survivors from the ship, owned by Unocal.

The American company's Thai subsidiary said two Thai crewmen were rescued in the gulf today and divers recovered four bodies from the wheelhouse area of the 5,373-ton vessel.

Two bodies were found by divers combing the ship on Sunday.

Unocal identified one of the dead recovered Sunday as Andrew Chalmers, a 28-year-old British field engineer. One of the four found today was identified as Kent Nolen, 27, an assistant driller from the United States.

Thai fishermen on Sunday rescued four crewmen, identified as an Indonesian and three Thais and reported in good condition.

Auction Delayed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Treasury Department postponed its scheduled weekly auction of three-month and six-month bills today because of Congress' failure to raise the debt limit.

It was uncertain whether the Treasury would be able to go ahead with its planned quarterly refunding later this week.

It tentatively had scheduled to auction $10 billion in three-year notes on Tuesday, $10 billion in 10-year notes on Wednesday and $10 billion in 30-year bonds on Thursday.

Democrats Show Confidence In Tuesday Elections

By Donald M. Rothberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Candidates are sticking to negative themes entering today's final day of the campaign for governor of Virginia and New Jersey and mayor of New York, with Democrats sounding confident the results will give them off-year political bragging rights.

The campaigns of Democrats L. Douglas Wilder and David Dinkins to score racial breakthroughs in Tuesday's elections are sharing attention with the changing impact of abortion as a political issue.

Bidding to become the first black elected governor of any state, Wilder is battling Republican J. Marshall Coleman in a Virginia contest in which race was rarely mentioned until the closing days.

Republican Rudolph Giuliani said

J. MARSHALL COLEMAN

Sunday that if he is elected mayor of New York he will order an investigation of Dinkins' finances. Dinkins, bidding to be the first black mayor of the nation's largest city, responded that former U.S. attorney Giuliani "just can't get the prosecutor out of himself."

The New Jersey governor's race looked like the safest bet for a Democratic victory as Rep. James Florio, buoyed by a poll putting his lead at 24 points, was trying to help fellow Democrats win state Assembly seats. Republican Rep. James Courter brushed aside the poll and described himself as a victim of "scurrilous ads."

The two races for governor and the New York mayoral contest are getting the most attention in a light political year being watched for political trends that might impact on the 1990 elections when 34 Senate seats, 36 governorships and 435 House seats are on the ballot.

In Houston, 11 candidates are vying to fill the House seat held by the Rep. Mickey Leland who was killed in a plane crash in Africa.

New York is only one of hundreds of cities holding elections around the country. In Detroit, 71-year-old Mayor Coleman Young is trying to fight off a spirited challenge from 40-year-old Tom Barrow, the man he beat easily four years ago.

Cleveland voters are choosing between Councilman George Forbes and state Sen. Michael R. White in a contest marked by nasty personal attacks from both sides.

Two cities — New Haven, Conn., and Seattle — are considered likely to elect their first black mayors. State Sen. John Daniels upset the Democratic establishment choice in his party's primary in New Haven, a city that is 30 percent black. Norm Rice is the favorite in Seattle where blacks are only a small percentage of the electorate.

The customary list of ballot propositions includes proposals to finance a new baseball park in San Francisco and to express opposition to cruise missile testing in Maine.

Faced with the possibility of losses in the three most visible 1989 races, Republican Party chairman Lee Atwater minimized the significance of this year's contests. "All politics is local," he said during an appearance Sunday on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

His Democratic counterpart, Ronald H. Brown, was on the same program and reflected his party's optimism when he said victories

Tuesday by Wilder, Florio and Dinkins would indicate that "clearly we're moving in a new direction."

The emotional question of legalized abortion showed the strongest potential for a political turnaround at the gateway to the 1990s. During the past decade opponents of legalization claimed credit for helping elect supporters of their view, including Republican presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush, and defeat several members of Congress who supported abortion rights. But last summer's Supreme Court decision opening the way for states to restrict access to abortions appeared to energize advocates of legalization.

Wilder ran television ads proclaiming his support for abortion rights while Coleman, Courter and Giuliani all found themselves trying to temper their opposition.

In an interview late last week, Brown said abortion has "had tremendous impact politically. I think the Democratic Party is on the right side of the issue."

"We're trying to be the majority party, and we're a big enough party to have differing viewpoints on all issues, and specifically, abortion," said Atwater, appearing to move his party away from a hard-line position opposed to abortion.

During their joint appearance on ABC, Brown and Atwater sparred on the subject of what to do about the negative tone of campaigns.

"I think there's too much of it on both sides," said Brown, urging Atwater to join an effort to curb the candidate's attacks. When asked about the discussion of new proposed laws, proposed by Bush and largely unacceptable to Democrats, Brown retorted, "This is really a case of changing the subject, isn't it? The subject is negative political party campaigning."

DEAR FRIENDS OF DISTRICT 4

During my 6 years as an elected official of City Government I had the opportunity to work closely with BUDDY ZINCONE.

His 6 years on the Library Board and 5 years on the Greenville Utilities Commission qualifies him to study with understanding the UTILITIES and CITY BUDGETS. It is FACT that because of this kind of budget understanding, during my term of office GUCO transferred monies to the City Budget that prevented the necessity of increasing property taxes to provide City services.

BUDDY ZINCONE already has the knowledge and experience to address the present needs and issues confronting us AND his work with the VISIONS 2007 COMMITTEE has prepared him to help direct our future.

When possible we need to elect people to public office who have experience that can only be gained by FORMER SERVICE on Appointed City Boards and Commissions. People we know who have already served our citizens' best interests.

YOUR VOTE for BUDDY ZINCONE COUNCILMAN -- DISTRICT 4 will be greatly appreciated.

Horowitz during rehearsal before Moscow concert in 1986

Pianist Horowitz Dies At Age 85

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Vladimir Horowitz, the legendary pianist who dazzled the world for 60 years, was mourned upon his death as the 20th century's titan of the keyboard whose passing created a void that can never be filled.

The Russian-born virtuoso, who brought "controlled thunder" to the piano and was a last link to the 19th century masters, died Sunday at his Upper East Side home. He was 85.

Horowitz left his native Russia in 1925 and came to the United States in 1928, playing his first American concert seven days later.

He was an instant success. "When he played, he'd turn on the current and it would hit sort of like a shockwave," said Morton Gould, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. "His performance had that unique electricity that was magical."

"He touched every musician who ever heard him," said pianist Murray Perahia, who was at the home when Horowitz died. "He knew all the repertory and could play pieces he hadn't done in 20 years."

Horowitz had been in good health and as recently as last week was recording in his living room, said his manager, Peter Gelb. Less than three weeks ago, hundreds of admirers filled a record store for an album-signing session.

His last performances were in 1987 in Berlin, Hamburg, West Germany, and Amsterdam, Netherlands, Gelb said. The year before, he had returned to Moscow for the first time in 61 years for an emotional concert shown on American television.

Voting Set Tuesday

The Board of Elections lists 18,749 registered voters in Greenville. But Ms. Hardee said she could not predict how many voters would cast a ballot Tuesday.

Off-year elections, when no state or national seats are decided, generally draw a smaller turnout at the polls, Ms. Hardee said. But Pitt County and Greenville residents generally show a strong interest in all elections, she said, and she hoped for a strong turnout.

Karen Lapicki, the Pitt-Greenville chapter president of the League of Women Voters, also is hoping for a strong turnout. Even without a state or national race, Ms. Lapicki said she hoped the mayor's race between incumbent Ed Carter and challenger Nancy Jenkins would spark voter interest.

The League of Women Voters sponsored two candidate forums and published a questionnaire from the candidates Sunday. Now the task falls to city residents to vote, Ms. Lapicki said.

Along with the mayor's race, voters will also decide on possible charter changes to lengthen terms in office for council members and to expand the mayor's right to vote. Council members now serve two-year terms and the mayor can only vote to break a tie. Greenville voters could choose to lengthen the terms to four years and give the mayor a vote in all matters.

Ms. Hardee said the election would be important to all Greenville residents. "It's like throwing a big party and nobody comes," she said. "You still have to pay for it."

Officials from each of the 10 precincts in the city will call in the final vote tally to The Daily Reflector, and the results will be posted in the main lobby of the newspaper office at 209 Cotanche St.

Ms. Hardee said the Board of Elections and election officials were ready for Tuesday's vote. "The main thing is that they get out and vote," she said.

S&Ls Stage Best Showing In Year Despite Losses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The nation's savings and loans lost at least $2.5 billion in the July-September quarter, a large loss but still likely the best performance in a year, a government economist said today.

James Barth, chief economist of the Office of Thrift Supervision, said preliminary figures indicate that S&L red ink will be at its lowest point since a $1.8 billion loss in the third quarter of 1988.

Thrifts last year lost a record $13.4

billion. Official figures for the July-September period of this year will not be released until next month, but if Barth's projection proves correct, losses for the first nine months of this year will total $9.7 billion, on track for a slight improvement for all of 1989.

Barth, speaking at the annual convention of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, said losses in the latest quarter were concentrated heavily in the approximately 260 institutions under government control, although the rest of the industry also lost money.

He attributed the reduction to government steps to close or rescue failed S&Ls and said he expected the decline in losses to continue.

"The fact that we've gotten rid of a lot of institutions ... suggests that the numbers should get smaller over time," Barth said.

In September, the industry continued to shed assets for the fourth consecutive month in an effort to meet new capital standards going into effect next month, Barth said. Institutions reduced their portfolios by about $15 billion, up from a record $13.4 billion shrinkage in August, he said.

Marine Charged

A Camp Lejeune Marine was arrested Sunday morning by Greenville police in connection with the alleged rape of an East Carolina University student, police said.

Lance Cpl. Michael A. Cardinale, 24, was charged with first-degree rape after the victim identified him as her attacker, Det. G. Wayne Williams said.

Williams said the victim called police shortly after 2 a.m. Sunday and said she had been raped. Police accompanied her to a residence, where the incident allegedly occurred, and arrested Cardinale, Williams said.

The victim told police she had met Cardinale earlier that night in a local bar, Williams said. She reported that Cardinale abducted her and forced her to go to the house where he was staying with other Marines, Williams said.

Cardinale had his first court appearance this morning. He was in jail under $20,000 bond.

Accent Personal Bankruptcy Is Now Booming Business

By Vivian Marino
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When Marguerite Kirk graduated from law school she got a typical job for rookie attorneys in 1967, counseling a small number of clients through the drudgery of personal bankruptcy.

At that time, the legal profession had bested bottom-of-the-barrel status on personal bankruptcy work because it was tedious and time-consuming.

"We used to meet in the basement of the courthouse," Kirk said, recalling those days when she was an inexperienced lawyer at a small firm in Augusta, Ga. "You'd look up and see the pipes uncovered or dripping. I knew I had to get my feet wet but this was ridiculous."

Today Kirk handles a booming bankruptcy business from an office in Fort Worth, Texas. She says the stigma once associated with such cases has diminished; largely because the number of people swamped in debt has soared and changes in federal laws have made bankruptcy filing easier.

More debt-swamped people have been turning to the courts for relief, ranging from poor dirt farmers to credit-card addicts to former tycoons such as the Hunt brothers and ex-Texas Gov. John B. Connally.

Between 1984 and the fiscal year ended June 30, personal bankruptcies more than doubled nationwide, to 580,459 from 282,105. Many attorneys say they expect to see a lot more bankruptcy court refugees.

That means more business for lawyers, who are among the first in line to get paid when a debtor's assets are sold to satisfy bills. But the personal bankruptcy explosion poses a threat to creditors, who stand to lose billions when unpaid bills are delayed or dismissed by bankruptcy courts.

In response, creditors have been aggressively going after assets of people whose bankruptcy filings they consider fraudulent or abusive.

Visa USA, the nation's largest credit card company, began a program earlier this year organizing banks to challenge bankruptcy petitions in court. The project began in Southern California — an area of frequent filings — and has expanded to eight other states. There's no word yet on its success.

The American Bankers Association, a trade organization for commercial banks, recently began a campaign to educate the public on the use of credit and steps to avoid bankruptcy.

The association emphasizes that a filing will damage a person's credit rating for years, which could mean big problems in getting loans or even another job.

"Some people are taking advantage of the system and it's hurting the industry," said Virginia Stafford, an ABA spokeswoman.

Kenneth R. Crone, head of Visa's Bankruptcy Recovery Program, said member banks lost $1.5 billion from personal bankruptcy filings last year, nearly half that from a tiny number of debtors who ran up bills they never meant to pay.

Crone said some bankruptcy filers deliberately hide assets or overstate expenses, while others may have the means to repay debts but decide to file for bankruptcy anyway, usually at a lawyer's urging.

Robert W. Johnson, director of Purdue University's Credit Research Center, said its most recent survey of 1,200 bankruptcy filers found half had no hope of repaying debts. But 20 percent could have repaid all non-mortgage debts within three years, and three-fifths doubled their net worth after filing. "We're by far the most lenient country in the world. In many countries your debt is never forgiven," said Johnson. "In fact, America was settled by people who, in many cases, were fleeing their creditors in Europe."

Many lawyers and financial planners argue that the vast number of personal bankruptcy filers are up against a financial wall, for reasons ranging from job loss to medical crisis to divorce.

They say banks should share blame for the high number of bankruptcy filings because they are often too lenient in issuing credit cards.

"While consumer spending may drive an economy, it also drives many onto very thin ice," said William Kennedy, a Fort Worth psychologist, whose clients include personal bankruptcy filers. "These artificial needs are driven up in us by all the advertising big business does."

Under federal laws, debtors can surrender some assets to repay part of their debt under a Chapter 7 petition, known as straight bankruptcy, or keep their assets and repay debt over a three- to five-year period under Chapter 13.

Many creditors prefer Chapter 13, but attorneys report that a far larger number of filings are made under Chapter 7 than 13. In Kirk's practice the ratio of 7s to 13s is 9-to-1.

The reason is that the majority who seek bankruptcy court have experienced a major financial blow and hold little prospect of making payments.

Even for those who got into trouble from other reasons, such as extravagant spending, it's quicker to file under Chapter 7 and the effect on credit ratings is the same, attorneys claim.

Some states have laws that prevent non-secured creditors, such as credit-card companies, from seizing personal assets under Chapter 7.

William G., a 44-year-old developer working in southwestern Florida, found the Chapter 7 petition he recently filed quickly solved his financial woes. The developer said he wanted to avoid legal wrangling and millions of dollars in liability over Texas property holdings that soured.

He said that by surrendering his interest in an investment partnership he removed himself from liability but didn't hurt his credit rating because he kept current on all other debts. The ability to isolate problem debts is another advantage of filing under Chapter 7, attorneys say.

Some creditors, seeking to avoid dealing with personal bankruptcies, have been relying on bankruptcy-prediction models provided by major credit-rating bureaus to screen potential borrowers.

Creditors also have been referring delinquent debtors to counseling, says Martin Neilson, a senior vice president at Seattle-First National Bank and a member of ABA's bankruptcy task force.

Donald L. Badders, president of the non-profit National Foundation for Consumer Credit, said 70 percent of those seeking help from its 400 counseling offices can be prevented from filing bankruptcy.

The counselors act as intermediaries between debtors and creditors, arranging small monthly repayments. Last year the foundation recovered $242 million for businesses.

Scott L. Shires, a Denver money manager, agrees that most clients with money problems can avoid bankruptcy if they follow a strict budget. But he says uncooperative creditors can unravel the best-laid plans.

That happened to Tom N., 41, who owned a truck-leasing business in Denver until rapid expansion kept him behind in his bills.

He said he reduced most of his $500,000 in debts after three years, but two impatient creditors forced him into bankruptcy court. He lost his business and his $250,000 home and was estranged from his family.

"I grew too fast," he said. "I didn't think it was greed. I was grabbing the silver spoon and using other people to do it."

Women Should Know About Benefits

Dear Abby: You had a letter in your column about a woman named Jane whose husband was killed in an accident and left her with two little boys. The letter said, "Jane has no intention of marrying again because she doesn't want to lose the $500 a month she gets from Social Security as a widow."

Abby, that is a very popular misconception held by many women. Jane gets $500 from Social Security because she has two underage sons — not "just because she's a widow." A widow has to be 60 years old to collect Social Security. I know because it happened to me!

I was 53 when my husband died suddenly. I went right down to the Social Security office to sign up for that nice Social Security check I thought I was entitled to. After all, my husband had worked steadily since he was 17, and he passed away at 55. Guess what? I found out I was entitled to a big fat zero! I went into shock.

Needless to say, I had to go to work at age 53. Thank God I found a pretty good job, and three years later I found a man who married me and I didn't need to work anymore.

Please let women know that Social Security does not give benefits to widows until they are 60 years old. — MRS. G.L.W., Tempe, Ariz.

Dear Abby

Dear Mrs. G.L.W.: Thanks for setting a lot of folks straight. Including me.

Dear Abby: This is in response to the letter from "Missing Out in St. Louis," the woman who complained that her husband always wants to leave early from ball games, the theater, etc. in order to save time getting out of the parking lot. Maybe this will change his mind.

Last year, my husband and I and our two children were lucky enough to get tickets for the first game of the '88 World Series between the L.A. Dodgers and the Oakland A's — for us, like many, a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. It was a fairly uneventful game and our team, the Dodgers, was losing. Since the stadium was packed, we decided to head out to the parking lot at the bottom of the ninth inning and avoid the rush. What a mistake!

Once outside, we heard the surprise announcement that Kirk Gibson was coming to bat. Well, of course the rest is history, and when Gibson hit that now very famous game-winning home run, we were on the freeway on-ramp, cleverly beating the crowds home. We had to wait for the evening news to see the home run. Now, whenever they show the replay of that "great moment in baseball history," we just cringe.

So, show this to your husband and tell him that Abby's right ... the best is often last, so stay put and let some other poor slob miss out! — Janet In Hacienda Heights

Dear Abby: Many of my friends and relatives of Scandinavian origin switch their v's and w's. For example, they say, "Wiolet vent to Wancowter to vork for vun veek in November."

This puzzles me. I have asked a few people who speak that way why they do it, but they just smile, which is no answer, so I don't mention it again for fear of hurting their feelings.

This seems to be a peculiarity common to Swedes, Danes and Norwegians. But the letter "w" doesn't even exist in their alphabet, so how does a "v" become a "w"?

Perhaps you, or someone in your reading audience, can explain it. — Vondering In Victoria

Dear Vondering: I, too, am "vondering." Perhaps some Northern European or a linguist (one proficient in languages) can provide an answer.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69400, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

States Win Takeover Challenge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today refused to block states from giving business managers broad power to block takeovers by other corporations.

The court, without comment, rejected a challenge to a Wisconsin anti-takeover law.

The law says bidders who buy up a company's shares must wait three years before taking full control if the target firm's board of directors opposes the deal.

The law was challenged by Amanda Acquisition Corp., described in court documents as a shell business backed by Berisford Capital, a British venture capital firm. Amanda is a subsidiary of High Voltage Engineering Corp. in Massachusetts. Amanda's $687 million tender offer for Universal Foods Corp. in Wisconsin was sidetracked by the state law.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in May that the law does not violate the Constitution or federal securities law.

"If our views of the wisdom of state law mattered, Wisconsin's takeover statute would not survive," the appeals court said. "Wisconsin's law may well be folly. We are confident that it is constitutional."

The appeals court said states are free to favor corporate managers over shareholders without necessarily running afoul of federal law or the Constitution.

If the law in the long run drives businesses that need to raise new capital away from Wisconsin, it is not the role of the federal courts to correct such flaws, the 7th Circuit court said.

Dalkon Shield Case Nearing Settlement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today removed the last major hurdle to carrying out a $2.5 billion settlement for victims of the Dalkon Shield birth-control device.

The court, over one dissenting vote, rejected a challenge by some 650 of the thousands of women likely to share in a trust fund established by A.H. Robins Co., manufacturer of the intrauterine device.

Justice Byron R. White voted to hear arguments in the case but four votes are needed to grant such review.

Marketed in the early 1970s, the device allegedly caused infertility, spontaneous abortions, pelvic inflammation or, in some cases, death.

Dalkon Shield sales ended in 1974 but the product was not actually recalled until 1984. A.H. Robins, based in Richmond, Va., created the trust fund as part of its 1985 reorganization under federal bankruptcy law.

The reorganization was sparked by thousands of lawsuits by women who had used the device.

The challenge acted on today contended that the settlement wrongly bars future lawsuits against A.H. Robins officials and others, and that $2.5 billion may not be enough money to compensate all victims.

Lawyers representing about 18,000 women who are to share in the settlement urged the justices to reject the challenge.

"Greater than the risk of a shortfall is the immediate risk — a near certainty — that if the plan of reorganization is disapproved or even delayed ... the plan will collapse," those lawyers said.

Tar Heels Get Nod In Preseason Poll

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GREENSBORO — North Carolina got the pre-season nod to win the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball title, but it could be one of the most wide-open races in quite a while.

"I think you could make a heck of a case for any six teams," new Wake Forest coach Dave Odom said. "I also don't think there are six teams, including Wake Forest, that can make a case for finishing last."

The eight ACC coaches gathered in Greensboro Sunday to meet the media and address the upcoming season.

North Carolina was the media's choice to finish first, followed by Duke, North Carolina State, Clemson, Georgia Tech, Wake Forest, Virginia and Maryland.

High predictions for the Tar Heels and the Blue Devils are nothing new. But Clemson and Wake Forest are expected to be two of the most improved squads in the league, while big things are also expected from Georgia Tech and freshman point guard Kenny Anderson.

Valvano Williams

Clemson, coming off a second-straight NCAA Tournament appearance, boasts one of the strongest front courts in the league with the 6-11 duo of Elden Campbell and Dale Davis.

"They scare me," Duke coach

Mike Krzyzewski said of the Tigers. "They're bigger. They're more athletic. Clemson hasn't been given much media attention, but they're good."

Clemson was 19-11 overall and 7-7 in the ACC a year ago. Campbell led the team in scoring at 17.5 points per game while Davis averaged 13.3. Both are big and mobile and present matchup problems for the opposition.

"They say it starts with the big men and we have them," Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said. "If we get the perimeter people to mesh well, we could be a good ball team."

One of those key perimeter people is point guard Tim Kincaid, who Ellis said had been reinstated after a brief suspension.

At Wake Forest, optimism is high for the Demon Deacons and Odom.

It's Odom's second go-round as a head coach. The ex-Virginia assistant was a head coach at East Carolina from 1978-82 where he compiled a 38-42 record.

"Wake Forest has an opportunity to make the biggest jump," N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said.

Odom takes over for Bob Staak, who was forced to resign last spring after a violation of NCAA rules.

Odom inherits a solid group of players led by Sam Ivy, Chris King, Derrick McQueen and Robert Siler. Add to that group 6-9 Anthony Tucker, a Georgetown transfer who is expected to lend immediate help.

The memory of his successes and failures at ECU will be a constant reminder to Odom, who is downplaying some of the pre-season speculation for a team that hasn't won in quite a while.

"The situations are very similar," Odom said. "They (ECU) were coming off three or four losing seasons. That first year we had a pretty pat hand from people coming back."

"Guys like Herb Krusen and Herb

Gray, they had been there a while, but they hadn't won. We were able to help those seniors feel good about themselves.

"In the third and fourth year, I probably put too much pressure on myself to continue to do the things we accomplished that first year. In that second year, I would hope (this time) I'd be more guarded. You have to look at a situation for what it's worth. I don't think I did that at ECU."

Even Maryland, which finished last in the ACC a year ago, is expected to be improved under new coach Gary Williams.

The Terps welcome back point guard Teyon McCoy after a year absence and add 6-9 widebody Rodney Walker.

"Of course, there's Carolina and Duke," Georgia Tech's Dennis Scott said. "Clemson didn't lose anybody and they have that unbelievable front line."

Victory At Last
Cowboys Stun 'Skins, 13-3

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — One victory does not a season make. But for Jimmy Johnson and the Dallas Cowboys, it's a start.

"I'm happy to get the win, but I'm realistic to know we have a lot of work to do," Johnson said Sunday night after his 0-for-the-NFL ordeal ended when the Cowboys beat Washington 13-3. "We've got a long way to go, though. The rocky days are not over for the Cowboys."

But the winless ones are. The Cowboys lost their first eight games under Johnson — the second-worst start in the franchise's 30-year history. Only the expansion Cowboys of 1960, who started 0-10 under Johnson's predecessor, Tom Landry, were worse.

"It's such a big weight lifted off our shoulders," said quarterback Steve Walsh, who played for Johnson at Miami of Florida and led the Hurricanes to the national championship in 1987. "This is something you can absolutely build on. We got past the first barrier of getting a win. Now you get a feeling of what it's like to win and what you need to do to win."

The victory was the Cowboys' second in their last 21 games. Both wins have come against the Redskins at RFK Stadium.

"This football team turned around today. There's confidence here now," said Dallas defensive tackle Dean Hamel, who was obtained from Washington during the preseason.

Another recent acquisition, running back Paul Palmer, did most of the damage offensively for Dallas. Palmer, picked up from Detroit after being cut in training camp by Kansas City, ran for 110 yards and the game's only touchdown.

"This is the best game I've had as a professional," said Palmer, who played high school football in the Washington area. "You dream of a situation like this."

Palmer also said the error-free victory — the Cowboys made no turnovers and took no penalties — should loosen things up.

"Everyone was so tight and tense. All we needed was a win to get us to relax and loosen up," he said. "Now that we've got that win, I think there's going to be a lot more confidence here."

Johnson agreed that getting win No. 2 may be easier than No. 1.

"It's been a frustrating year. You might say it's a relief, a good feeling, to get this win," Johnson said. "We're starting to come together, although we know we have a lot of hard work to do."

Bo Jackson made history again. The Minnesota Vikings did it for the first time.

Jackson, showing the same speed-and-strength ability that made him an All-Star in baseball, set a team-record with a 92-yard touchdown sprint and also scored on a 7-yard smash Sunday as the Los Angeles Raiders beat the Cincinnati Bengals 28-7.

"Today was just another day at the office," said Jackson, who set the Raiders' record last year with a 91-yard run against Seattle.

The Vikings never got the ball into the end zone against the Los Angeles Rams. But Rich Karlis tied a league record with seven field goals and Minnesota won 23-21 in overtime when Mike Merriweather blocked Dale Hatcher's punt through the end zone for a safety.

It was the first time a safety had ended an NFL sudden-death game.

"Our punt return was on. But our outside guys are pretty much free blitzers," said Merriweather, who almost recovered the ball for a touchdown but instead knocked it out of the end zone.

Monday Quarterback:

Saturday will be an end in some fashion for a number of East Carolina University football players. While there are still two games remaining on the season, both road affairs at Pittsburgh and Southern Mississippi, Saturday's game will be the finale for their Picklen Stadium careers.

When the Pirates host Temple University Saturday at 1:30 p.m., these young men will close out their playing days before the home-town fans. They have been through much adversity during their careers, but they still have a chance to go out with a winning season — although it will be difficult.

First up, however, lies the game with Temple, a team that is winless thus far this year. A win by the Owls would be a major upset and the Pirates must be on guard against it.

Unfortunately, ECU will go into the game with a number of injuries to key personnel, not the least of which is the loss of starting tailback Willie Lewis.

Perhaps the catalyst, however, has been Walter Wilson, the senior wide receiver who aggravated a shoulder injury again Saturday against Miami. When he's on the field, things seem to happen for the Pirates. When he's not, things seem to go bad.

Hopefully, he will be able to return to duty by Saturday. Wilson still has an excellent opportunity to become ECU's all-time pass receiving leader if he can remain healthy enough to play these final three games.

A win over Temple will ensure the Pirates of no worse than a break-even season, something none of the young men on this team have enjoyed. Then, a win in either of the final two games would give them a winning year.

At any rate, these young men can take pride in the fact that they are taking part in a season which appears to be turning the ECU fortunes around. Perhaps the 1990s will be the time when the Pirate football fortunes return to those thrilling days of yesteryear — the 1970s when ECU enjoyed its greatest decade.

The senior class consists of Mike Applewhite, a starting defensive lineman; Carl Carney, an offensive lineman out all year with an injury; BoJack Davenport, a receiver who missed this year with an injury and still could come back as a medical hardship next season; Todd Drugac, a starting offensive lineman; Charles Freeman, a back-up tight end; Denell Harper, a back-up tailback; Joe Holmes, a starting defensive linebacker; Travis Hunter, the starting quarterback; Willie Lewis, until injured, the starting tailback; Charlie Libretto, a former starting quarterback, now an integral part of the scout team; Grant Lowe, a starting offensive lineman; Compton McCurry, a reserve linebacker; Brian McPhatter, a starting defensive end; Junior Robinson, a starting defensive back; James Singletary, scheduled to be a starter at linebacker, he missed the year due to academics; Stewart Southall, a starting offensive lineman; Anthony Thompson, a starting defensive end; Ricky Torain, a starting defensive back; Brian Walsh, the deep snapper; Walter Wilson, a starting wide receiver, and Tim Wolter, a reserve defensive back out for the season with injuries.

As can be seen, a number of these men are starters, so voids will have to be filled. But Coach Bill Lewis and his staff are bringing others along.

Too, the Pirate coaches will be recruiting hard this year to come up with bigger, stronger and faster linemen, and, probably most especially, a strong kicker.

The future at this point would appear bright at East Carolina. Lewis and his staff appear to be doing the things needed to improve the team.

Bucs Catch Miami's Wrath
On The Field, In The Media

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

MIAMI, Fla. — In an attempt to carve its own little niche in big-time college football, East Carolina has taken some brutal beatings both on the field and in the media.

Some more salt was poured into the wounds over the weekend in Miami, Fla.

After struggling to a 24-10 halftime lead the seventh-ranked Hurricanes, on the warpath after a bitter loss to rival Florida State, tagged the Bucs with a 40-10 loss. Then the home-town media unleashed its wrath in Sunday's edition of The Miami Herald.

Apparently annoyed by a patsie schedule that has sent point spreads skyrocketing and crowds plummeting, columnist Bob Rubin explored why the Canes have scheduled so many mismatches.

True, East Carolina has not been a big draw the gate and has been less than competitive. In fact, Miami's smallest two home crowds the past three years have come when the Bucs were in town. Only 30,202 came to the Orange Bowl on Thanksgiving, 1986. Saturday's game drew only 35,159 fans.

The Orange Bowl seats 75,500. That prompted Rubin's headline to read: "East Cupcake doesn't pack them in."

In four home games this year, Miami has won by an average of 36.5 points with the "closest" call coming in a 31-3 win over California. Attendance has gradually dipped from 56,931 to Saturday's season-low of just over 35,000.

It's funny how soon they forget the ragged state the Miami program was in just over a decade ago.

East Carolina's offense, which has gone into hibernation the second half in each of the last four games, has the Pirate coaching staff collectively scratching their heads and searching for clues.

Breakdowns have been numerous

Richt

in that stretch. But the primary reason has been the defenses the Pirates have faced.

Still, quarterback coach Mark Richt bluntly stated it's a case of not buckling up the chin straps and going full-throttle for four quarters.

"I don't know if we're mentally tough enough to play a 60-minute ball game," Richt said. "We played a better football team than we are (Saturday), but I'm not sure we played as well as we can for 60 minutes. In spurts we've done some good things, but not consistently."

The drought began on a long Saturday afternoon back in October when the Pirates surged to a 14-3 lead at South Carolina, trailed 19-14 at the half and were outscored 28-0 the final two quarters.

Credit Gamecock quarterback Todd Ellis for that.

The next game, no second-half points again. This time, however, ECU managed to hold on to trim Virginia Tech 14-10, much to the delight of a homecoming crowd.

Chalk up one for the Pirate defense.

The Bucs were not as fortunate in the Carrier Dome against Syracuse. A 16-9 halftime lead slowly dwindled away and finally vanished into an 18-16 defeat in the waning seconds.

Again on Saturday the Pirate offense started quick, scoring on its first two possessions to keep pace with a high-powered Miami attack. ECU trailed 14-10 with three minutes left in the half. It was 24-10 at the half.

The Canes turned it into a rout the second half.

Eight second-half possessions resulted in five punts, an interception, a fumble and a safety.

ECU coach Bill Lewis said the starting quarterback for Saturday's home game with winless Temple would not be decided until an evaluation of both senior Travis Hunter and sophomore Jeff Blake — the same procedure as for any other starting position.

Hunter started the first five games but was demoted to second team for "failure to uphold his responsibility to a very important team policy."

Blake performed admirably as a fill-in starter, hitting on 11 of 16 passes for 138 yards and one touchdown the first half. He finished 14 of 26 for 164 yards.

Blake graded his performance as "a 70 in the first half and about a 50 in the second half."

Richt was a tad more generous.

"I haven't looked at the films yet, but from what I can recall he played a pretty good football game," Richt said. "I'm pleased with the way he responded."

Lewis has stressed throughout the season that Hunter is his starting quarterback, but he has not hesitated to call on Blake.

Walter Wilson, who had five receptions for 105 yards and has emerged as ECU's most dangerous offensive weapon, said whoever starts under center is not a factor.

"They are both capable quarterbacks, that's why both of them are back there," Wilson said. "Some people say Travis is a better runner and Jeff is a better passer, but I don't see any difference. Whichever one is in there, I'm going to support him."

Pirates Advance Two To Quarterfinals

East Carolina's Sammy Tounsi and John McLamb registered three wins each to advance to the quarterfinals of the annual Pirate Fall Tennis Classic over the weekend.

Tounsi posted a 6-2, 6-3 win over Jamie Samuel of James Madison, defeated Mike Roberts of William & Mary 6-3, 6-0 and bested Paul Verone of American 6-1, 6-3 before being ousted by JMU's Matt Goetz 6-3, 6-1.

McLamb's route to the quarterfinals featured a 6-1, 7-6 over Chris Cagle of UNC-Wilmington, a 6-1, 6-3 win over Adam Petricross of American and a 7-6, 7-6 win over Kevin Wendleberg of William & Mary.

He was eliminated by Miles Nelson of American, 6-1, 6-1. JMU's Marc Brix captured the individual singles title with a 6-2, 6-2 win over teammate Dave Swartz.

Kelly Hunter of William & Mary outlasted Rob Goergen of Richmond 6-2, 4-6, 6-0 for the consolation singles title.

The doubles finals pitting Mike Scherer-Hunter of William & Mary against Brix-Steve Secord of JMU was not completed. It will be continued next weekend in Winston-Salem.

Jon McClendon-Jonas Cikotas of George Mason won the consolation doubles, defeating teammates Dan Greenhalgh-Brian Kim 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Tar Heels Ease Past Marathon Oil

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Scott Williams scored 23 points, Rick Fox had 19 and Kevin Madden added 16 points and 11 rebounds in North Carolina's 100-86 exhibition basketball victory over Marathon Oil Sunday night.

The Tar Heels forged a 47-42 halftime lead, outshooting Marathon Oil 59 percent to 46 percent from the field. North Carolina maintained the shooting advantage in the second half and outbounded their opponents 43-32 for the game.

George Lynch added 12 points for North Carolina. Jim Bullock paced Marathon Oil with 20 points and 14 rebounds, while Darrin Houston scored 22 points, Jerome Fitchett 17 and Eric Turner 16.

Wake Forest Captures ACC Soccer Tourney

DURHAM (AP) — Wake Forest and Duke battled through two overtimes to a 2-2 tie before Demon Deacon goalie Matthew Olson deflected a penalty shot to clinch Wake Forest's first Atlantic Coast Conference soccer title Sunday.

The game, which will go into the record books as a 2-2 tie despite the shootout that determined the title, left both coaches frustrated.

"The final score could have been 8-8 the way it appeared, but both keepers came up with some big saves," said Wake Forest coach Walt Chyzowych. "I felt the penalty kicks was not a good way of deciding a championship. Both teams deserve some kind of trophy because it was a dead-even game."

"Right now our players are feeling both frustration and a great amount of pride," said Duke coach John Rennie. "They put on a great show for both the Atlantic Coast Conference and the game of soccer."

Duke took a 2-0 lead on Clint Carnell's redirection goal at the 25:37 mark and Jason Hedges' score off a George Dunn assist early in the second half.

Neil Corvone fed Flemming Petersen, who beat the Duke goalie from 10 yards out to make it 2-1 at the 63:43 mark.

At 81:14, Craig Conger sent a long cross to the far post and Jeff Phillips headed the ball into the goal to make it 2-2.

After two scoreless overtimes, in which tournament most valuable player Cyvone went out with a knee injury, each team was given five penalty kicks with the shooter going one-on-one against the goalie.

Wake Forest's Craig Johnson scored a goal, as did Dunn for Duke. Phillips and Hedges converted and the contest remained deadlocked.

John Duguid scored for Wake Forest on the third kick, while Duke's Joey Valenti's shot was deflected by Olson. Petersen and Duke's Brian Donnelly both scored and John Stark's penalty kick into the left corner gave Wake Forest the title.

Cards, Tigers Top Picks In Metro

ATLANTA (AP) — Denny Crum says his Louisville Cardinals will be different this season.

"I don't think we'll be a better team than last year," Crum said Sunday at the annual Metro Conference preseason media day.

"We'll be a different style of team, more up-tempo and more offensive oriented, but maybe not as strong defensively," Crum said.

Coaches and members of the media who cover Metro basketball agreed on one thing — the Crum's Cardinals and Memphis State Tigers will stage a down-to-the-wire fight for the conference crown in 1990.

Crum said he thought there were four or five teams that could win the title.

In separate polls coaches and writers had identical results.

The coaches gave both Louisville and Memphis State four votes each for first place, with the Cardinals holding a 60-58 edge in total points. In the media poll, Louisville had 25 first place votes and 326 points, Memphis State 18 and 314.

Trailing the two leaders in order in each poll were defending champion Florida State, Southern Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia Tech, Cincinnati and Tulane.

"I think we're going to be able to score points," Crum said. "I'm not sure we're going to be able to guard anybody, unfortunately, in basketball you have to play both ends."

"It's going to be unpredictable," FSU coach Pat Kennedy said.

"This is a guard-laden league," Memphis State coach Larry Finch said.

"Everybody has tremendous guard play. If you want to be successful within this conference, you've got to have pretty good guard play."

The two favorites landed one player apiece on the preseason all-conference team chosen by the media — Elliott Perry of the Tigers and Bradford Smith of the Cardinals. Southern Mississippi placed two players on the first unit. Clarence Weatherspoon and Darrin Chancellor, and the other spot went to Virginia Tech's Bimbo Coles, who joined Perry in appearing on all 51 ballots.

The media also selected a second team that consisted of Louisville's Felton Spencer, FSU's Tharon Mayes and Irving Thomas, South Carolina's Barry Manning and Memphis State's Ernest Smith.

Notre Dame stayed on top but Colorado is No. 2 and gaining in the Associated Press Top Twenty Five college football poll released today.

The Fighting Irish, who crushed Navy 41-0, got 56 first-place votes and totaled 1,496 points. Colorado, boosted by its 27-21 victory over then-No. 3 Nebraska, received four first-place votes — two more than last week — and have 1,441 points.

Michigan, Alabama and Florida State all moved up one spot into the next three positions with victories. Nebraska fell to No. 6, followed by Miami, Illinois, Southern California and Arkansas.

Texas Tech, taking advantage of five additional teams in the rankings this season, made its first appearance in the poll since Nov. 14, 1977. The Red Raiders moved to No. 23 after beating No. 22 Texas 24-17, knocking the Longhorns out of the poll.

No other teams moved in or out of the rankings.

Virginia made the biggest advance, going from No. 24 to No. 18 with a 20-9 victory over then-No. 18

North Carolina State. The Wolfpack fell to No. 22 with the loss.

Arizona and West Virginia took the biggest tumbles. West Virginia slipped from No. 13 to No. 19 after losing to 16th-ranked Penn State 19-9 and Arizona dropped from No. 15 to No. 25 with a 29-28 loss to California.

Tennessee, which was idle, went from No. 10 to No. 11. Rounding out the Second Ten: Auburn, Penn St. Pittsburgh, Houston, Texas A&M, Clemson, Virginia, West Virginia and Florida.

Brigham Young is 21st, followed by North Carolina State, Texas Tech, Fresno State and Arizona.

Notre Dame and Colorado each are 9-0. The Fighting Irish play Southern Methodist this Saturday and the game figures to be such a mismatch that Notre Dame offered to call it off. Colorado may have a tougher time, playing at Oklahoma State.

Michigan, beat Purdue 42-27 and has won seven straight since an opening loss to Notre Dame. The Wolverines, who got 1,343 points in the poll, play this weekend at Illinois game that could decide the Big Ten title.

Becker Returns To Top

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Boris Becker says it's difficult to get to the top, but that it's even harder to get back there.

"People see me playing tennis and nobody knows the real cost of winning," Becker said. "Sometimes it is necessary to grow and learn as a human being. That's what I did in the past two years."

Becker, playing with increased confidence after struggling over the past two years, now looks like he's ready to stake his claim as the best tennis player in the world.

The 21-year-old West German beat Stefan Edberg and John McEnroe, the No. 3 and No. 4 ranked players in the world, in less than 24 hours to win the Paris Open, which attracted 17 of the top 20 players in the world.

Against a slightly off-form Edberg Sunday, Becker raced through the final in two hours for his fifth tournament title of the year and 24th of his career.

Becker, the U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion this year, has a good claim on the No. 1 ranking for the year, although he still trails Ivan Lendl in the computer rankings.

Because he had won two Wimbledon and advanced to the No. 2 ranking in the world by the time he was 18, Becker was expected to move into the top spot three years ago, especially when his victory at the 1986 Paris Open capped a three-week, three-tournament, three-continent victory march.

"I was playing great tennis in 1985 and 1986 but I didn't go through any difficult moments," Becker said. "In order to be the best, you have to go through those moments. That's what I did in '87 and the beginning of '88."

"All that helped me this year. That is the reason I am playing so well," Becker said.

Wallace Gets Costly Bump Opens Door For Elliott in Autoworks 500

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Rusty Wallace has a million reasons to wish Stan Barrett had been some other place, doing something else this weekend.

Wallace thought he was on the way to clinching the Winston Cup title and the $1 million that goes with it before he and Barrett had an unexpected meeting at Phoenix International Raceway.

Barrett, the former "rocket man," who set a land-speed record in a rocket-powered wheeled vehicle in 1979, rammed the rear of Wallace's Pontiac as the race leader drove past with 57 laps remaining in Sunday's Autoworks 500 NASCAR race.

"It was unreal," Wallace said. "Nothing comes easy."

Wallace spun and slammed into the first-turn wall on the one-mile oval, bringing a roar from the record Phoenix crowd of about 65,000 and giving new life to Martin Martin and Dale Earnhardt, the two men chasing Wallace for the rich Winston Cup championship.

The accident also opened the door for Bill Elliott, who overcame early handling problems and drove his Ford Thunderbird to a $57,900 victory in the 500-kilometer, 312-lap event.

Elliott

But the tightening championship fight, with only one round — the Atlanta Journal 500 on Nov. 19 — left in the 31-race season, drew the attention away from Elliott's third victory of the season and 32nd of his career.

He set a race record by averaging 105.683 mph as he beat Terry Labonte, runner-up for the second straight year, to the finish line by 0.47 seconds.

Martin, who started the day third in the Winston Cup race, 128 points behind Wallace, finished a solid third and vaulted past Earnhardt into second place in the season standings by one point. He trails Wallace by 78.

Earnhardt, who started the race 109 points behind Wallace, was sixth in the race. Wallace wound up a lap off the pace in 16th after four pit stops for extensive repairs.

"There's no use getting mad," Wallace said evenly. "I can't jump up and down and scream about it. You just shake your head and go on."

Still, he had some harsh words for Barrett, a Hollywood stuntman and sometime racer since 1980.

"The guy (Barrett) runs two or three (races) a year — I lapped him for about the tenth time — and he wrecks me. I don't believe it. I thought I was going to clinch it (the championship) here today."

"We'll just go to Atlanta and try to win it there. I've still got a good point lead."

Wallace, who had regained the lead from Darrell Waltrip moments before the accident, can win his first Winston Cup title, no matter what Martin and Earnhardt do, by finishing 18th or better at Atlanta International Raceway.

Barrett, who said he was having brake problems and was unable to avoid Wallace, had hit the wall once early in the race and was 14 laps behind when the second incident occurred.

"I wish it hadn't happened," Barrett said. "It was all my fault."

Ikangaa Sets NY Marathon Record

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania broke the course record in winning the New York City Marathon on Sunday.

Norway's Ingrid Kristiansen, the fastest women's marathoner in history, but just missed the course record by one second.

Ikangaa, 32, ran away from the pack between the 13-mile and 14-mile points, and never was seriously challenged, crossing the finish line in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 1 second, the 10th-fastest marathon ever.

The previous course record was 2:08:13, by Alberto Salazar in 1981. And in that race, the course later was measured about 100 meters short.

Ken Martin finished a surprising second in 2:09:38. It was the fastest American clocking since Salazar in 1983 and made Martin the No. 6 performer in history. The 1988 Olympic champion, Gelindo Bordin of Italy, was third in 2:08:40.

Kristiansen started fast, but slowed over the closing nine miles because of stomach problems and finished in 2:25:30. Allison Roe of New Zealand set the course record of 2:25:29 in 1981.

Kim Jones, finished second in 2:27:54, the seventh-fastest performance ever by an American. It also made Jones the No. 4 U.S. performer, behind 1984 Olympic gold medalist Joan Benoit Samuelson, Julie Brown and Patti Catalano.

Philadelphia 20-17, the New York Giants beat Phoenix 20-13, Atlanta got past Buffalo 30-28, Houston held off Detroit 35-31, Cleveland defeated Tampa Bay 42-31, Miami beat Indianapolis 19-13, the New York Jets stung New England 27-26 and Kansas City stopped Seattle 20-10.

Tonight, New Orleans plays at San Francisco.

Raiders 28, Bengals 7

Jackson gained 159 yards in 13 carries as the Raiders ran past visiting Cincinnati. He rushed for 144 yards last week and has three 100-yard games in his NFL career.

The Raiders (5-4) have won three of four games since Jackson ended his season with the Kansas City Royals and resumed his hobby. Los Angeles is 4-1 since Art Shell replaced Mike Shanahan as head coach.

"I've never seen a team play like this," nose tackle Bob Golic said. "We have so much confidence, we believe we can get the job done, and we do."

Especially Bo.

Jackson scored 3:38 into the game, bullying over safety Ricky Dixon for a 7-yard score. Then, late in the first quarter, Jackson turned the corner on a sweep to the left and was gone, covering 92 yards without being touched.

"The people responsible for my runs are really the linemen and my fullback," Jackson said. "I do what I can, I don't try to do things I know I can't do. I only do what I do because of all these other guys that help me."

Maybe, but Bo is the player everybody notices.

"Bo is as advertised. He is one of those rare ones that comes along only so often," Bengals coach Sam Wyche said. "I hope everyone enjoys watching him now because he will go down as one of the legends of the game."

Jay Schroeder's 25-yard touchdown pass to Vance Mueller made it 21-0 midway through the second quarter and his 84-yard TD pass to Gault made it 28-0 with 47 seconds left in the third quarter.

The defending AFC champion Bengals (5-4) lost for the third time in four games. They also lost quarterback Boomer Esiason and starting running backs James Brooks and Eric Ball, all of whom were injured in the first half.

Esiason sustained a bruised lung late in the first quarter on a hit by defensive end Mike Wise.

"I won't know until tomorrow just how bad it is," Esiason said. "Hopefully, I'll be able to go next week."

Vikings 23, Rams 21

Minnesota sent the game into overtime on Karlis' 40-yard field goal with eight seconds left in regulation and won it on Merriweather's first-ever blocked punt.

Karlis connected from 20, 22, 24, 25, 29 and 36 yards and tied the record set by Jim Bakken on Sept. 24, 1967. Karlis missed five of his first 10 attempts this season, although only one was inside 44 yards.

Wade Wilson, starting for the first time since breaking a finger on Oct. 1, completed 20 of 39 passes for 281 yards. Herschel Walker gained 206 total yards.

The host Vikings (6-3) lead the NFC Central. Los Angeles (5-4) lost its fourth straight game.

Greg Bell's 2-yard TD run put the Rams ahead 21-18 with 28 seconds left. Wilson's 43-yard pass to Hassan Jones set up Karlis' tying kick.

Los Angeles won the coin toss in overtime and elected to receive. After three plays, Hatcher's punt was blocked.

Packers 14, Bears 13

Don Majkowski's 14-yard, fourth-down touchdown pass with 32 seconds remaining at first was disallowed by the officials, then allowed when the replay official reversed the call as Green Bay won at home.

The field officials ruled that Majkowski crossed the line of scrimmage at the 14 before passing to Sterling Sharpe. The replay, however, showed Majkowski released the ball at the 15.

The Packers ended an eight-game losing streak to Chicago with their first victory over the Bears since 1984. Both teams are 5-4.

Falcons 30, Bills 28

Paul McFadden kicked a 50-yard field goal with two seconds left as Atlanta seasawed past visiting Buffalo. The lead changed hands three times in the last 82 seconds before the Falcons won.

Atlanta (3-6) took a 27-21 with 1:22 left on Keith Jones' 3-yard touchdown run. Don Beebe returned the ensuing kickoff 85 yards, setting up Larry Kinnebrew's 1-yard run with 29 seconds to go that put the Bills ahead 28-27.

The Falcons came back when Chris Miller's 41-yard pass to Stacey Bailey moved the ball to the Buffalo 33, and McFadden connected.

Jim Kelly returned to quarterback for the Bills (6-3). They are 3-3 with Kelly and 3-0 under his replacement, Frank Reich.

Jets 27, Patriots 26

Pat Leahy kicked a 23-yard field goal on the last play of the game as New York rallied to end a five-game losing streak.

Marc Wilson, playing for the first time in almost two years, threw a 65-yard touchdown pass to Cedric Jones with 11:59 remaining and an 11-yarder to Hart Lee Dykes with 1:03 left that gave New England (3-6) a 26-24 lead.

Leahy's winner came after Ken O'Brien's 36-yard pass to backup tight end Greg Werner moved the ball to the New England 6. O'Brien completed 22 of 29 passes for 386 yards for the visiting Jets (2-7).

Oilers 35, Lions 31

Warren Moon threw two touchdown passes and ran for another as Houston came back to beat Detroit at the Astrodome.

The Oilers (5-4) trailed by 10 points in the third quarter before Moon threw a 6-yard TD pass to Ernest Givens and a 7-yard score to Drew Hill. Moon's 2-yard run made it 35-24 with 3:15 remaining.

The Lions (1-8) scored with 1:41 left on 14-run by Barry Sanders. Houston recovered the onside kick, but fumbled three plays later.

Three plays after that, Rodney Peete's pass was intercepted by Tracy Easton. It was originally ruled an incompletion, but the replay official reversed the call.

Browns 42, Buccaneers 31

Bernie Kosar outplayed Vinny Testaverde in the duel of former University of Miami quarterbacks as Cleveland won at Tampa Bay.

The Browns intercepted Testaverde four times, including consecutive passes that were returned for touchdowns in the second quarter. Felix Wright scored on a 27-yarder and Thane Gash picked off Testaverde's next attempt and brought it back 15 yards.

Cleveland's Keith Jones (26) lunges for extra yards

Kosar threw three touchdown passes as Cleveland (6-3) won its third straight game. The Buccaneers (3-6) have lost four in a row.

Dolphins 19, Colts 13

Rookie Sammie Smith ran for 123 yards on 25 carries, Miami's first 100-yard rushing day since 1987, as the host Dolphins won for the fourth time in five games.

Miami (5-4) has won just two of its last 14 against AFC East teams. Indianapolis fell to 4-5.

The Colts played without Eric Dickerson, who missed the game because of a nagging injury to his right hamstring. His replacement, Albert Bentley, carried 21 times for 73 yards.

Chiefs 20, Seahawks 10

Christian Okoye, the NFL's leading rusher, gained 126 yards and increased his season total to 933 as Kansas City won at home.

The Chiefs (4-5) completed their first sweep against Seattle since 1981. Quarterback Steve Pelluer scrambled for 69 yards and scored a touchdown.

Seahawks quarterback Dave Krieg fumbled in the fourth quarter and Kansas City recovered, setting up a 33-yard field goal by Nick Lowery with 5:37 left for a 10-point lead.

Seattle lost four of eight fumbles. The Chiefs lost two of three.

Giants 20, Cardinals 13

Jeff Hostetler, replacing the injured Phil Simms, passed for 177 yards and one touchdown and ran for two more scores as New York won in Phoenix.

The Giants won their fourth straight game and are 8-1, their best start since 1930. The Cardinals are 4-5.

Hostetler, making the second start of his six-year NFL career, completed 12 of 24 passes, rushed for 47 yards on 5 carries and scored on runs of 19 and 3 yards.

Phoenix closed to 20-13 on Al Del Greco's 46-yard field goal with 5:43 left. The Cardinals drove to the Giants 46 at the two-minute warning, but Pepper Johnson intercepted Gary Hogeboom's pass.

Chargers 20, Eagles 17

Chris Bahr, helped by a penalty against his own team, kicked a 49-yard field goal with four seconds left and San Diego upset visiting Philadelphia.

The Chargers (3-6) ended a four-game losing streak. The Eagles (6-3) had won four straight.

Bahr apparently missed from 44 yards, but got another chance because the play was blown dead when offensive lineman James FitzPatrick was called for illegal motion prior to the snap.

San Diego moved from its own 9 with 1:48 left to get the winning field goal. Jim McMahon, who passed for 264 yards and two touchdowns to Anthony Miller, hit Wayne Walker for a 49-yard gain to the Eagles 27.

Broncos 34, Steelers 7

John Elway, overcoming two early interceptions, passed for one touchdown and ran for another score in the second half, leading Denver over visiting Pittsburgh.

The Broncos (7-2) held Pittsburgh (4-5) to 170 yards on offense. The Steelers did not get a first down on their opening three possessions.

Denver led 13-7 at halftime. In the second half, Vance Johnson caught a 44-yard pass from Elway for a touchdown and Bobby Humphrey ran 12 yards for a score.

Montana And Lott Return For 49ers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — They haven't won on their home field, their offensive line and special-teams play has been worrisome and the second-half schedule looks daunting.

Pity the poor, injury-riddled San Francisco 49ers.

Somehow, the 49ers bring the NFL's second-best record (7-1) into tonight's game against the New Orleans Saints at Candlestick Park. And with Joe Montana and Ronnie Lott returning from injuries, their woes can't exactly be put on a par with those of, say, the Detroit Lions or Jim and Tammy Bakker.

"People criticize us, but we're still winning," said linebacker Michael Walter. "A lot of teams are doing certain things better, but they don't have the record. They'd trade places with us any day."

Among those clubs are the Saints (4-4). Lott says no team is playing better right now, but a loss will effectively eliminate them from contention in the NFC West. They've already lost once to the 49ers — 24-10 in New Orleans on three second-half touchdown passes by Montana.

"We played great the first half and pretty well the second half, but now we're putting four quarters together," said cornerback Toi Cook of New Orleans, which has won three straight. "We're on a roll now. We can beat them if we play to our capability."

The 49ers don't think they've played up to par, and a close examination of their season bears that out. Only Green Bay has faced opponents with a worse combined record than the 49ers' foes (26-38) in the first half, and the New York Giants, Los Angeles Rams, Buffalo and Chicago all lie in wait in the second half. But achieving a lead of 2½ games over the Rams in the NFC West is still no small feat.

"I think the most important thing is now we're kind of in the driver's seat," Walter said. "It's obvious we haven't played the perfect game or as well as we'd like to. But we've only lost one game and managed to win seven."

The 49ers are more strangers to Candlestick Park this fall than they are hometown bums, playing there only once and losing 13-12 to the Rams.

But there's something familiar about that 0-1 record, not counting a victory over New England in a game moved to Stanford because of the Oct. 17 earthquake. En route to the championship last year, the 49ers were 5-4 in San Francisco and 8-2 elsewhere, continuing a decade-long trend.

Since winning their first Super Bowl title eight years ago, they are a respectable 33-21 (.611) in regular-season home games and a remarkable 45-12-1 (.789) on the road.

"It's something that started when Bill (Walsh) was here," said 49ers center Jesse Sapolu, a fourth-year veteran. "When people start calling us nobodies, that's when we thrive on it."

"I feel a lot less pressure on the road, to tell you the truth. It's easier to keep your composure."

Montana, again the league's top-rated quarterback, has recovered enough to start after missing a game and a half with a bruised left knee. Lott, out five weeks with a sprained right ankle, is listed as probable and should bolster the injury-weakened secondary.

But the Saints think they outplayed the 49ers last month, particularly in limiting them to 76 yards rushing, and have played even better since.

Cowboys End...

By winning, Johnson averted the embarrassment of losing as many games in consecutive weeks in the NFL as he did in five years at Miami.

The victory spoiled the return of Washington quarterback Doug Williams, who played for the first time since undergoing back surgery in August. Williams, the hero of the Redskins' Super Bowl victory in January, 1988, stepped in for Mark Rypien but showed the effects of the long layoff. He completed 28 of 52 passes for 296 yards but was intercepted twice and was unable to get the NFL's top-rated attack into the end zone.

"Doug was off tonight," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said. "But I still feel good about my decision to start him, and he wasn't the only one who was a bit off."

"I don't think I was out of sync,"

Williams said. "I felt myself throwing off the wrong foot at times, but overall I felt pretty good after getting hit a few times. I didn't play well, but as a whole, we didn't play well."

Dallas broke a 3-3 tie late in the third quarter when Palmer, following a block by guard Crawford Ker, burst through the middle for a 47-yard gain to the Washington 6. Two plays later, Palmer went over the top of the pile for a 2-yard score.

It was the Cowboys' second touchdown in the third quarter this season. Entering the contest, Dallas had been outscored 50-7 in the third period.

"I felt we could win when it was 3-3 in the third quarter," Johnson said. "I just didn't want us to turn the ball over. We have a young team and we've had a problem with turnovers."

Porter Helps Blazers Get Past Timberwolves

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — Terry Porter had a word to describe the Portland Trail Blazers' 93-83 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

"Ugly," he said. "It wasn't pretty, but at least we won."

Porter scored 21 points and the Blazers pulled away from the NBA expansion club in the fourth quarter Sunday night to stretch their record to 2-0.

The methodical Timberwolves stayed close through three periods, much as they had in their season opener Friday night in Seattle.

"We played hard," Minnesota coach Bill Musselman said. "Portland has a lot of choices, but if our guys get contained, our offense tends to struggle."

The Trail Blazers were without star guard Clyde Drexler, who sat out with a bruised right elbow. Portland's offense struggled in his absence.

Minnesota used its ball-control offense to take a 25-22 lead at the end of the first quarter, a period that ended ingloriously when Jerome Kersey's desperation hook shot sailed over the basket and into the lap of Paul Allen, spilling the Blazer owner's entire box of popcorn.

Portland led 43-42 at halftime and was ahead only 65-61 early in the fourth quarter when Blazer forward Buck Williams was called for two technical fouls and ejected by referee Mike Mathis.

"I thought I got fouled," Williams said, "and I gave Mike a stare. He told me not to stare at him, and I said, 'This is a free country, I can look where I want to.' Then he gave me my first technical."

On the next play, Williams argued with Minnesota's Scott Roth.

"I was talking with Roth and Mike comes over and gives me another 'T,'" Williams said. "He couldn't have thought I was talking to him, and I didn't curse. It's kind of strange to get tossed out in a situation like that."

Wayne Cooper, who hadn't played all night, replaced Williams and gave the Blazers a lift, hitting two field goals and blocking two Minnesota shots.

"Coop came in and won the game for us," Portland coach Rick Adelman said.

The Timberwolves missed 17 of their first 18 shots in the fourth quarter and hit only 33 percent from the field for the game.

Robinson At The Center Of New-Look Spurs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Maurice Cheeks and Michael Cooper, both 11-year NBA veterans, know something about big men.

Cooper played alongside Kareem Abdul-Jabbar with the Los Angeles Lakers for his entire career until this season and won five NBA titles with him.

Cheeks was the point guard for Moses Malone for four years on the Philadelphia 76ers. Each was instrumental in the Sixers' 1983 championship.

On Saturday night, Cheeks and Cooper witnessed David Robinson's successful debut with the San Antonio Spurs. Both came away impressed.

"I was talking to Michael at the free throw line and he walked up to me with a grin on his face," Cheeks said. "He said, 'Isn't it great to have a big man?' I just grinned back at him."

Robinson, despite a jittery stomach, had 23 points and 17 rebounds as the new-look Spurs — with four players in a San Antonio uniform for the first time playing key roles — beat the Los Angeles Lakers 106-98.

"David is still learning but he is going to be a great one," said Terry Cummings, an All-Star with Milwaukee last season, who finished with 22 points and 12 rebounds.

"I haven't seen a guy that big move like he does. He's definitely going to be a good one."

Robinson, who spent two years on active duty in the Navy after the Spurs made him the first pick in the 1987 college draft, played 16 of his 34 minutes in the first half despite a nervous stomach. He still had 10 points and 10 rebounds by halftime.

"My stomach was churning," Robinson said. "Maybe it was just jitters. I calmed down as the game went on."

Robinson said he was happy with his offensive performance, but felt he could have done better defensively.

"I wasn't as dominant down the stretch as I want to be," he said. "The lane is mine and I need to treat it like that. I can't let people come in the paint with impunity."

A reporter suggested that Robinson might be the first NBA rookie to use the word 'impunity.'

"It's nice to get in the record books any way I can," Robinson deadpanned.

Robinson said the 82-game NBA schedule would tell him whether he would enjoy the pro game more than college ball, which he dominated for his last two years at the Naval Academy.

"There's 81 games to go and that's a lot," he said. "But I know the pro game will be more challenging. There are good, strong players to face every night. That's not true of college ball."

Sean Elliott, the No. 3 pick in this year's draft, scored 16 points for the Spurs, while Cheeks had 14 and Willie Anderson, runnerup for Rookie of the Year last season, had 12.

Robinson wasn't the only player with a nervous stomach as a sellout crowd of 15,868 and the presence of the charismatic Lakers brought a playoff atmosphere to the game.

"The kids played well although I think Sean, Willie and Vernon Maxwell were petrified," Spurs coach Larry Brown said.

The veteran calm of Cummings and Cheeks, however, helped settle down the team when the Lakers made several comeback bids in the second half.

"Terry was a big help," said Maxwell, a second-year guard. "He rebounded well and scored some big buckets. He also kept us focused and that is one thing we need. He was always telling us, 'Come on baby.

Don't let up.' We didn't have a leader like him last year."

But Cummings said the success of the team depends as much on the young players as the veterans.

"I don't have to do everything," he said. "I can give the ball up and know something good is going to happen — not just David, but our whole team. But David is going to be something special."

Holyfield Eyes Tyson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — They call Evander Holyfield the "Real Deal," and that's exactly what he's after.

Holyfield wants a deal with Mike Tyson, the undisputed heavyweight champion. He'll get it soon, possibly by next June.

"I'm thinking about two things," Holyfield said as he left the Convention Center after stopping Alex Stewart in the eighth round Saturday night. "A rest. And Mike Tyson."

Holyfield had earned his shot at the title long before meeting Stewart. None of the boxers Tyson has annihilated recently are in Holyfield's class.

But the 1984 Olympic bronze medalist and former junior heavyweight and cruiserweight champion has had to watch Tyson fight Carl Williams and make plans for Razor Ruddock and Buster Douglas.

After his performance against the previously unbeaten Stewart, Holyfield finally heard the reaction he wanted from Tyson's promoter, Don King.

"We're thinking about Holyfield for 1990," King said. "We're thinking about June or the early fall. It's a fight that has to happen."

Holyfield will believe it when he steps into the ring. Then he'll know the deal is real.

As for Stewart, he didn't prove much about his record string of 24 knockouts at the start of a career. Holyfield, though bothered by a cold that limited his stamina and agility, was much tougher than anyone Stewart had fought.

Peele Column...

The schedule continues to be more realistic in the future, too. Next year, the Pirates have home dates with Louisiana Tech, Virginia Tech, Southern Mississippi, Cincinnati and Northern Illinois. None of these could be called patsties, but in each instance, the Pirates have the opportunity to win.

On the road, ECU will face Florida State, Southwestern Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, Temple and Memphis State. There are the heavyweights in FSU and Georgia, but certainly the remaining teams are again teams that the Pirates would have a realistic chance to beat.

Future schedules, too, look the same way. There are several heavyweights, like Illinois, Syracuse, Pittsburgh and West Virginia — teams that could be upset, while the remainder are tests but still games the Pirates should have a chance to win.

The seniors of today have laid the groundwork. It's up to the seniors of tomorrow to see it through.

Writer-Singer Barry Sadler Of 'Green Beret' Fame Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. — Barry Sadler, who co-wrote and sang the hit Vietnam War-era "Ballad of the Green Berets," died 14 months after being shot in Guatemala, where he reportedly was training anti-communist Contra fighters.

He was 49. Sadler, who suffered brain damage in the mysterious Sept. 7, 1988, shooting, died Sunday at the Veterans Administration's Alvin C. York Medical Center, hospital spokesman Albert Archie said. A cause of death wasn't given and an autopsy will be performed, he said.

Then-Army Staff Sgt. Sadler helped write the ballad while recuperating from a leg wound he suffered while serving as a medic in Vietnam. The song, the No. 1 hit in the country for five weeks in 1966, glorified the fighting men of the Special Forces during the early days of America's involvement in Vietnam.

He went on to write 20 adventure books featuring a mercenary named Casca, but never repeated the musical success of the ballad, which sold 9 million singles and albums. His other efforts included producing and writing a bicentennial year album called "Of Thee I Sing."

"He was a very loyal person with old-fashioned principles," said a friend, Bill Parrish of Nashville. "He was a soldier. That was his job. He talked of caring for people and had established a trust fund for orphans in Vietnam."

In recent years, he spent time in Central America.

Sadler was shot in the head as he got into a taxi in what authorities said was apparently a robbery attempt. The crime remains unsolved.

According to one friend, Duke Faglier, Sadler helped with firearms training for the U.S.-backed Contras in their fight to overthrow the Nicaragua's leftist government.

After Sadler was shot in Guatemala City, Faglier recounted death threats Sadler had received during five years living in Guatemala.

"I'm sure it made us less than popular," Faglier said of the training, without saying who financed the effort.

Faglier said he shared quarters with Sadler in Central America.

But another friend, Col. Lew Millet of Idyllwild, Calif., discounted Sadler's soldier of fortune image. He said his friend went to Central America as a soldier and medic.

CNN Expands Its Global Audience

By Marc Rice
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Cable News Network, which never has been short on ambition, is getting the global audience it wants by finding room at the inns.

While the Atlanta-based news channel now is seen in 84 countries, the best chance of catching CNN overseas is in a hotel room. It still is rarity to see CNN in an average person's home outside the United States.

Transmitting CNN around the world was one of Ted Turner's goals when his Turner Broadcasting System Inc. launched the 24-hour cable network in 1980. The network has gradually increased its audience potential and made its latest stride over the summer when it arranged to use a Soviet satellite for transmissions in that corner of the world.

CNN is available in about 600 hotels — more than 1 million rooms — worldwide. Other major international clients for CNN include embassies, government offices, foreign news services and, to a lesser extent, local cable television systems. CNN programming also is shown on eight airlines, which excerpt segments to show passengers on intercontinental flights.

Network officials add that CNN is widely pirated and overall is available to about 200 million people around the world.

"All of the populated areas of the world have the capability of getting CNN," said Bob Ross, managing director of CNN International Sales Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of TBS based in London.

"With the exception of Antarctica and the western tip of Australia ... the whole world gets it," Ross said.

Though CNN is available domestically in 51.1 million U.S. households, the target audience overseas is not the average TV viewer, Ross said in a recent interview.

Instead, CNN wants to be seen overseas by the wealthy and the powerful — heads of government, business leaders, Americans who are traveling and other assorted VIPs, he said.

"What we're doing is making CNN the first global real-time news medium, which will make CNN the network of record for major decision-makers all over the world," Ross said. "We will become a primary news source for the world's decision-makers."

There are numerous obstacles to getting CNN to the world's masses, Ross said. Most international transmissions are in English, the necessary satellite reception equipment is too expensive for many people, and in many places the government doesn't want its people to have easy access to Western news reporting.

"We're not a mass entertainment network," Ross said. "We don't expect to be watched by a welder who is only fluent in his native language."

It's easy to imagine, though, that Turner, a globe-trotting champion of peace among nations, would want ultimately to make his programming available to the widest audience possible.

"I think that's Ted's goal, to get CNN to everyone," said Russ Barry, the Los Angeles-based president of Turner Program Services, TBS' syndication arm.

Barry said TBS is getting inquiries from areas that receive CNN which also are interested in receiving other Turner programming, such as the shows on the TBS "SuperStation" and Turner Network Television's all-day schedule of vintage movies.

"The international market is quite active," he said.

WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠QJ6 ♥Q65 ♦Q962 ♣J72
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—If there is a worse eight-point hand around, we haven't seen it! Even if partner has a maximum 18, we doubt whether he'll be able to come to nine tricks opposite this collection, which might not furnish more than one entry. Pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q73 ♥9872 ♦J8652 ♣5
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—At no trump, your hand might not take even a single trick. It will surely play better in a suit contract, where you can at least pick up a couple of ruffs. Bid two clubs, asking for a major suit, and pass whatever partner responds. At the very worst, you'll have a seven-card fit, and on a lucky day it will be better than that.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K5 ♥A103 ♣AQ9842 ♣K8
 What is your opening bid?
A.—Suppose you were to open one diamond and partner were to respond one spade; what would you do then? There is no satisfactory action. Simply pretend that your low diamond is a low club and get the hand off your chest with a descriptive bid of one no trump.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q106 ♥J752 ♦K10 ♣K984
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—With nine points and a ruffing value, you are worth a move. But don't invite game by bidding two no trump. Look for a 4-4 heart fit by bidding two clubs. If partner should respond two hearts, your hand responds to 11 points and becomes worth a jump to game. If he bids anything else, be content with two no trump.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ7632 ♥J ♦KQ43 ♣A7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What do you bid now?
A.—The way most experts treat this sequence, you would rebid two spades with a six-card suit and a minimum, but show a four-card minor if the hand is better-than-minimum. Since you would open this hand even without the king of diamonds, you should, therefore, rebid two diamonds.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠876432 ♥AK103 ♦A74 ♣Void
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What action do you take?
A.—Unlike a minor, you should not suppress a four-card major—especially a very good one. Therefore, rebid two hearts regardless of the strength of your hand.

Bush Says He'll Keep Quayle In '92

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle says he's happy that President Bush is keeping him on the 1992 ticket, but says it's too early to talk of having any presidential ambitions of his own.

Bush, in an interview published Sunday by the Dallas Morning News, said Quayle "absolutely" will be his running mate again. His comment appeared to be an off-handed way of acknowledging his own hat will be in the ring for a second term — something the first-year president has not said publicly before.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, asked Sunday if Bush had meant to end any suspense about his own intentions, said, "I think they've been thinking in terms of an eight-year team all along. I hope that's not a surprise to anybody."

Sununu, speaking with reporters on the tarmac at Westchester County Airport in White Plains, N.Y., added with a laugh, "I need the job."

Quayle, appearing on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press," said, "I am very pleased that the president is pleased with the job that I am doing." Asked whether he had thought about running for president himself, he said, "What has crossed my mind is just doing a good job right now."

Bush visited his mother, Dorothy Walker Bush, at her home in Greenwich, Conn., on Sunday after participating in a convocation at his prep school, Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass.

Mrs. Bush, 88, hospitalized for a week in September with pneumonia, was well enough to take part in a presidential photo opportunity outside her front door before her son departed.

"I want you to see how well my Ma looked," Bush told reporters as he and older brother Prescott Jr. helped her outside.

At Andover, the Class of '42 graduate told the crowd of 2,500 assembled on the school's Great Lawn, "I loved those years. They did indeed teach 'the great end and real business of living' — a phrase from the constitution of the school founded in 1778.

"Even now its lessons of honesty, selflessness, faith in God ... enrich every day of our lives," said Bush.

In Bush's day there were no girls and only two black or Hispanic students at Phillips, also called Andover. Today girls comprise almost half the 1,217 students, and there are 156 black or Latin students.

The convocation marked the 200th anniversary of the visit of another president, George Washington, two of whose grandnephews later enrolled in the young, rigorous academy.

They proved no match for the curriculum or the New England weather and had to withdraw.

The school also draws pupils from dozens of foreign lands, and it paraded its diversity with a procession of flag-bearing students, as well as Bible readings in several languages.

Bush, a star athlete and student leader who went directly from Andover to become a Navy combat pilot in World War II, said he was taught that "we were put on earth to help others."

"Back in the early '40s, this formed the essence and character of Phillips Academy, and you can still feel its power today," he said.

Bush made the nostalgic visit without his wife, Barbara, who returned to the White House directly from Camp David because of a stomach ailment.

Once-Scorned, Old Signs Of Bigotry Now Sought After

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Mementos of white bigotry from yesteryear — Little Black Sambo dolls, "Colored Only" signs, figurines of grinning, watermelon-eating urchins — are becoming hot collectors' items among American blacks who once scorned them as hated symbols of humiliation.

The booming market for "black collectibles" has attracted such celebrities as Bill Cosby, Oprah Winfrey, Whoopi Goldberg and heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson, who reportedly collects African slave chains and shackles.

"Black people buy these items for the very same reason that Jewish people research the Holocaust," says Jeanette B. Carson, a prominent figure in the black memorabilia business. "The black experience, during and after slavery, was a Holocaust we must never forget."

Ms. Carson, 56, a retired State Department specialist in African affairs, began collecting black artifacts about seven years ago. The 600 items that fill her home near Washington, D.C., range from quilted dolls hand-sewn by former slaves to a mirrored mahogany hat rack, valued at $800 to $900, which prize fighter Joe Louis once kept in his dressing room.

Ms. Carson's home-based firm, Ethnic Treasures Inc., sponsors dealer shows and auctions from New York to Atlanta. She also publishes "Black Ethnic Collectibles," a bimonthly magazine with 8,000 subscribers, and heads the National Association of Black Memorabilia Collectors, with more than 500 members nationwide.

Ms. Carson says the business has grown from about 50 dealers in 1983 to more than 500 this year, with an estimated $500,000 in annual sales. The number of collectors — like dealers, once mostly white but now predominantly black — has soared from about 10,000 to more than 35,000 in the past six years, she says.

Her personal collection includes 100 hand-fashioned dolls and other objects presenting a positive image of blacks, including commemorative stamps and coins, historical photographs and newspapers, and record albums, paintings and sculptures by black artists.

No less valuable, she says, are the racist artifacts that older black customers find highly offensive. Like souvenir placemats from a 1940s chain of restaurants in the Western states called "Cooon Chicken Inns," whose logo was a winking, smiling black face. Or the framed sign reading "Colored Seated in Rear," dating from 1929. Or the original 1897 sheet music for a Negro dialect song titled "Ma Curly-Heady Babby."

Drug Tax Vote Set

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kansas City area voters, faced with one of the nation's worst drug problems, will decide Tuesday whether to raise taxes by $14 million a year to fight back.

"We're doing everything we can right now with the money we have," Jackson County prosecutor Albert Riederer told a church group last week. The additional money, he said, would be used for more police, prosecutors, courts and drug treatment programs.

But some community leaders don't like the way the money from the proposed one-quarter-cent county sales tax would be divided. Some say 30 percent of the additional money isn't enough for treatment programs that have six-week to six-month waiting lists for poor addicts.

"If you can pay your own way it's no trouble," said Dianne Cleaver, who runs the mental health department at Swope Parkway Health Services. "But if you can't, we can't help you. It's criminal to keep these people out when they want help."

Other groups complain officials aren't using the crime-fighting resources they already have.

Clearing The Way

The 75-year-old Occidental Building crumbles as it is imploded in downtown Indianapolis Sunday to make way for the $970 million Circle Center retail mall. The building was brought down by 361 explosive charges in only 7 1/2 seconds.

Memorial Is Dedicated To Civil Rights Martyrs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Most people remember Martin Luther King Jr. and the ultimate price he paid in the struggle for racial equality. But few know of William Moore and his one-man march against segregation. Or Emmett Till, who was shot, mutilated and dumped in a river for speaking to a white woman.

The creators of the nation's first monument to the martyrs of the civil rights movement hope to change that, preserving the memories of fallen heroes and inspiring young people to carry on their work.

The stark black Civil Rights Memorial was dedicated Sunday in Montgomery, the "Cradle of the Confederacy" and the city where King began the national movement for racial justice with a boycott of buses in 1955 and 1956.

"I'm really thankful that he's there," said Mary Moore Birchard of Birchardville, Pa., Moore's wife when he was gunned down near Atlanta in 1963. "This is the first recognition Bill has received in 26 1/2 years."

"I was just overwhelmed," said Mamie Till Mobley of Chicago, whose 14-year-old son was slain during a visit to Money, Miss., in 1955. "I knew it would be moving, but something where you can't anticipate how you will feel."

Sri Lankan troops stop for fuel for their tanks as they move into Kandy to restore order today

Tamil Raiders Leave 47 Dead In Attack On Rivals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — A leading Tamil rebel group raided camps of rival factions in an eastern district, leaving 47 dead in the first major inter-Tamil clash since Indian peacekeeping forces withdrew, military officials said today.

Two supporters of the rebel group that launched the attack were publicly executed in retaliation, area residents said.

One Tamil activist warned of a "bloodbath" now that the Indians are gone from the area.

Sunday's fighting took place at Tampiluvil and Tamputte villages 20 miles southeast of Ampara town.

Military officials, who cannot be identified under briefing rules, said about 250 members of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam raided two military camps run by rivals and killed 41 men. At least six Tigers also were killed in the fighting, they said.

The Tigers are the largest and most militant of the minority Tamil groups fighting a 6-year-old separatist war with the government.

Angered by Sunday's attack, members of the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front publicly executed two Tiger supporters in neighboring Akkaraipattu, according to residents contacted by telephone.

Residents, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the two were shot.

The camps raided by the Tigers apparently are run by a shadowy group known as the Tamil National Army, a militia organized by former rebel groups to keep order in the area.

A Tiger leader in Colombo, who confirmed the attack, said, "Action has been taken to dismantle the illegal Tamil National Army." He spoke on condition of anonymity and did not elaborate.

Military officials said 140 members of the Civilian Volunteer Force and Tamil National Army were either captured by the Tigers or surrendered during the attack. The Tigers also drove away two tractor loads of weapons, including 100 rifles, they said.

Greece's Political Crisis Deepens After Elections

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Greece — Greece's political crisis deepened again today after the conservative New Democrats, for the second time in five months, narrowly missed achieving a parliamentary majority in national elections.

A tough period of bargaining was expected to begin shortly on forming a new government, with the country's three major parties widely divided over economic policy and the presence of U.S. military bases.

The result of Sunday's election could be another life for Andreas Papandreou's Socialists, who were felled in June's vote due in part to a banking scandal that has led to the former prime minister being indicted.

A government dominated by the Socialists would almost certainly include Communists.

With 98 percent of the vote counted, New Democracy, led by Constantine Mitsotakis, had 46.3 percent for 148 seats in the 300-seat Parliament.

That was three more than it won in June but three short of the number needed to control the government after eight years of Socialist rule and a brief coalition administration.

Papandreou's Panhellenic Socialist Movement, or PASOK, won 40.7 percent of the vote for 128 seats, a gain of three. The Communist-led Coalition of the Left and Progress got 10.8 percent of the vote and 21 seats, a loss of seven.

The other three seats went to independents — a leftist backed jointly by PASOK and the Coalition, a Greek-Moslem and an environmentalist for the first time in Greece's political history.

"Without a doubt, our political life is entering a difficult phase," Mitsotakis told a news conference on Sunday. He was expected to receive a presidential mandate within 48 hours to try forming a new government.

After the June election, his party joined with the Communist-led Coalition of the Left and Progress in an unusual alliance to launch investigations of scandals under Papandreou.

That administration resigned last month after Parliament indicted Papandreou on charges of involvement in the multimillion-dollar banking scandal and of ordering wiretapping of the telephones of his friends and foes.

Papandreou has denied the charges.

"It gives us special satisfaction that after the June elections, we have had such a significant rise ... despite the unbelievable barrage of attacks against us and despite the fact that we were out of the government," he told reporters on Sunday.

The leftist Coalition's loss of seven seats in Sunday's poll suggested their supporters were unhappy about the alliance with conservatives.

The Communists vowed before the election that they would not work with the conservatives again. However, they also said they would not support the Socialists with Papandreou as leader.

After the Socialists' strong showing, it seemed certain that they would insist on keeping Papandreou in place.

The Athens Stock Exchange today reflected disappointment in the election results.

Average Soviet Earned $8,850

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The CIA says the average Soviet citizen earned the equivalent of $8,850 last year, less than half the average American's earnings of $19,970.

The Central Intelligence Agency's "Handbook of Economic Statistics 1989" shows the U.S. figure was higher than that of other major non-communist countries, with the average Japanese shown as earning $14,340 and the average West German $14,260.

Earnings of the average American grew by 2.9 percent in 1988; the average Soviet citizen enjoyed an increase of only 0.5 percent.

The handbook's 1988 edition did not include a figure for the Soviet Union, though other statistics indicate the average citizen's earnings there was $8,363 in 1987, compared with $18,200 for the average American.

The CIA makes these comparisons on a "purchasing power" basis. That means it does not translate foreign earnings into dollars at prevailing exchange rates, but at theoretical rates that would equalize the cost of a basket of goods and services in the two countries being compared. The document did not say what those theoretical rates were.

A few other comparisons were given for 1988: life expectancy was 69 years for the Soviet Union, 75 years for the United States and 78 years for Japan. The average American used up energy equal to burning 56 barrels of oil, while the average Soviet consumed only 35 barrels worth.

There were a few more cars than one for every two Americans — 572 per thousand — and only one for every 24 Soviets — 42 per thousand, according to the CIA. The Soviet figure came from 1986 and may have grown some by 1988.
