Students Rally, But Don't Buy March Planned On Thursday

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A crowd of East Carolina University students got loud Monday to show opposition to new noise restrictions in Greenville.

About 500 students, some wearing purple armbands and carrying signs, cheered speakers at a rally who called on the Greenville City Council to reconsider a change in the local noise ordinance that may mean the end to outdoor parties and concerts.

The rally on the ECU campus mall was part of "Purple Monday" activities designed to protest recent city actions which many students feel are unfair. Organizers of the event also called for a Monday boycott of city businesses.

"We are valuable citizens of the town of Greenville. We want to be a part and we want to help," Charlie T. "Tripp" Roakes III told the cheering crowd. "But some things have got to change."

Roakes, ECU Student Government Association president, said students want the council to reconsider its decision to abolish the permit system that allows groups to exceed allowable noise limits. The permits allowed student groups to have outdoor parties and concerts twice a year, he said.

"It's not a big thing to ask, people," Roakes said. "It's part of the social life of college."

The council voted 4-2 last month to abolish the permit system, despite the recommendation from a committee appointed to review the noise ordinance.

Rally organizers say they collected 1,000 signatures on petitions against the council's action. The petitions will be presented to city officials at a march Thursday from the campus to city hall, they said.

Some downtown merchants, who say they depend on students, said today that business was down at their stores as a result of the boycott.

"Normally Monday's sales were pretty darn good, but yesterday's sales were pretty darn bad," Barbara Lewis, manager of the New Deli restaurant, said.

"I think all-in-all our business yesterday was about 25 percent off," Don Edwards, manager of University Book Exchange, said.

Edwards said the boycott left him with mixed emotions — although he supports ECU and appreciates the student business, he said he feels that U.B.E. should not have been a target.

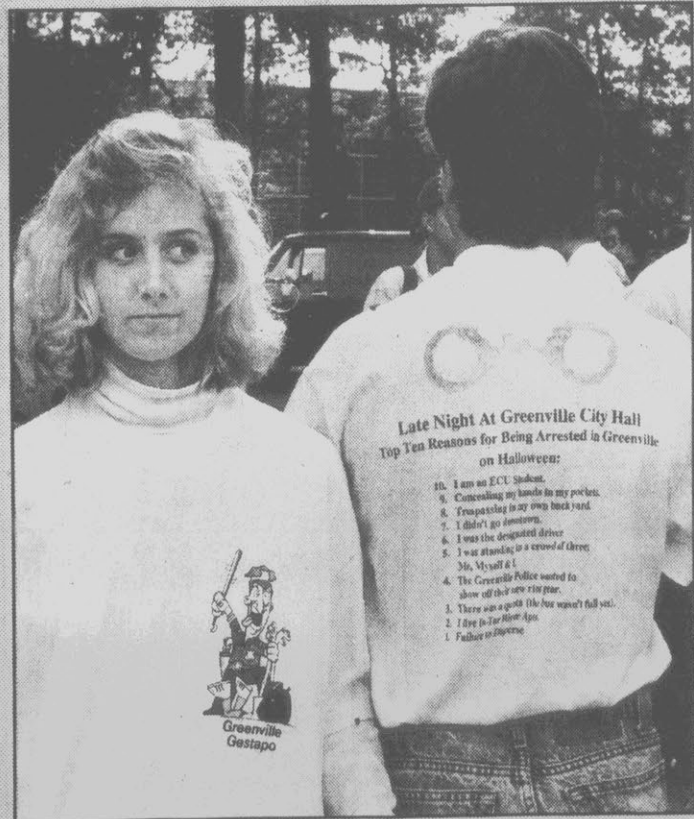

"We don't feel like we have a whole lot to do with the situation," he said.

But Edwards added that he feels students didn't have any other way to make their point.

"There needs to be more dialogue between the city and the university to improve relations," he said.

Others said the boycott didn't

Voting Light

Voter turnout in Greenville and Pitt County was relatively light this morning, but was expected to pick up later today, according to Margaret Hardee, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections.

"It's about what you would expect for a municipal election when we don't have that many issues or controversies on the ballot," Ms. Hardee said from her Second Street office this morning.

"It (voting) will usually pick up at lunch time and at 5 (p.m.). That's when we have a surge, when people who are working can get out and vote," Ms. Hardee said. "So you can't really get a good feel for how it's going until after that happens."

In addition to municipal balloting in Greenville, voters in seven other Pitt County towns were visiting the polls today.

Pitt Grand Jury Accuses Attorney, Four Other Men Of Securities Fraud

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville lawyer, Dallas McPherson, is one of five people from Pitt County that have been indicted by a Pitt County grand jury on multiple securities fraud charges as a result of an investigation by the N.C. Secretary of State's office.

Others indicted in connection with the sale of Interport Beverage Co. stock earlier this year to customers in Pitt, Wake, Wayne, Lenoir and Carteret counties, include O.J. Venter, Monte F. Little, Donald L. Baker and Don Davis. Addresses for the men were not available this morning.

Indictments were returned against Venter last month, District Attorney Tom Haigwood said this morning. The indictments against McPherson, Little, Baker and Davis were returned Monday in Pitt County, along with an indictment charging Venter with "unlawfully and willfully" failing to appear in court on Nov. 3 for a preliminary hearing on securities and worthless check charges.

Haigwood said Venter, originally from South Africa, was under a $50,000 bond, which the court ordered forfeited because he failed to show up for court.

According to the indictments, the securities fraud charges against the five include multiple counts of conspiracy to sell securities without the securities being registered with the secretary of state, conspiracy to sell without being a registered salesman or dealer, conspiracy to sell stating misleading facts, selling securities without the securities being registered, selling securities without being a registered salesman, and stating misleading facts to customers.

Government May Default On Thursday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congressional inaction on a bill raising the federal debt ceiling threatens the government with default on Thursday for the first time in its history.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said after closed-door meetings on Monday that leaders are hoping to pass a new debt ceiling in time for President Bush to sign it on Wednesday.

"We have decided to concentrate on extension of the debt ceiling while we are looking at other issues," Foley said after leaders tried to break the deadlock that has blocked passage of the higher debt ceiling and a big deficit-reduction bill.

At a news conference today, Bush said he is prepared to let automatic spending cuts triggered Oct. 16 remain in effect unless Congress approves a deficit-reduction bill to his liking. The automatic-cuts process "is not easy but its real deficit reduction," he said.

Bush said he would sign an unamended bill that produces deficit reduction in the $14 billion range, which is considerably more than Congress and he agreed on last spring. "If it's all loaded up with a lot of special projects, I won't sign it," he vowed.

The president said he is not about to give up on his cherished capital-gains tax cut, which is stalled in the Senate over the threat of a Democratic filibuster. "The votes are there. The House passed it. A majority of the Senate wants it," he said.

One effect of the stalemate over the debt limit came Monday when the Treasury postponed its weekly bill auction. Then, today, it announced the postponement of $40 billion in debt auctions this week.

"The postponement of these auctions is necessary because Congress has not completed action on legislation to increase the statutory debt limit," the Treasury said.

The latest postponement involved auctions of $10 billion in three-year notes today, $10 billion in 10-year notes on Wednesday and $10 billion in 30-year bonds on Thursday. In addition, the Treasury planned to sell $10 billion in 36-day cash management bills on Thursday.

The Treasury had planned to offer $16 billion in three- and six-month bills Monday, but postponed the sale "because Congress has not completed action on legislation to increase the statutory debt limit."

The Treasury lost further borrowing authority Oct. 31 when the debt limit reverted from $2.87 trillion to $2.8 trillion. Because it already has reached the lower limit, the government faces default on some of its debt as early as Thursday.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said last week that if Congress fails to increase the limit by

School Board OKs Plan For Spending

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Education took less than 30 minutes Monday to decide how it would spend $25.7 million.

By a unanimous vote, the board approved a spending plan for school improvements that includes $10 million to convert Greenville Middle School into a high school and $3 million for a new elementary school in the Stokes community.

The board is asking county voters to approve a bond issue to pay for the improvements in a Dec. 12 referendum. If the bond is not approved, the board says it will not be able to fund the plan.

Board members took only a few minutes to approve the spending plan without debate, in spite of opposition from a group of parents in the D.H. Conley attendance area which calls itself the Alliance of Parents for Quality and Stability.

In a statement read by group spokesman Michael Fredette, the parents asked the board to delay the bond referendum until after the area is represented on the school board.

None of the board's 12 members live in the D.H. Conley attendance area. Most of the area is in the election district represented by board members Frank Grooms and Chairman George E. Williams, who live in Greenville.

In the statement, the group asked Grooms and Williams to resign so that representatives from the Conley area can be elected to the board in 1990.

"We must have two persons on the board to represent our area just as the other outlying high school attendance areas have as well," Fredette read.

The group also asked the board to give assurances that the bond money will be spent as approved, and to explain why it will spend $10 million to replace J.H. Rose High School by converting Greenville Middle School.

"If the bond passes, as is, how

Artillery Blast Kills 2 At Yuma

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YUMA, Ariz. — An explosion during an artillery test killed two Israeli soldiers and injured two others at the Yuma Army Proving Ground, authorities said.

An Israeli team was conducting firing tests of an Israeli-modified M-109 howitzer at the desert facility when the accident occurred, Army Capt. Stephen McGeorge said late Monday.

"The actual projectile or bomb did not explode," he said. "It was the propelling charge that went off. We don't know why it did."

The injured were taken to Yuma Regional Medical Center, but hospital officials would not release any information. The Israeli Army said in a statement issued in Jerusalem that the two soldiers were not seriously hurt.

No Americans were involved in Monday afternoon's explosion, a Pentagon official said.

Shopper Withdraws Money At Gunpoint

The theft of $2,000 in cash from an Ayden woman who said the robbers kidnapped her at gunpoint was one of 11 thefts reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer R.C. Stroud said Flossie L. Hardy told investigators that two women approached her in a parking lot at Carolina East Mall about 3:25 p.m. She told police the women forced her, at gunpoint, to get into a car and travel to Ayden where she withdrew $2,000 from a savings bank and gave it to the kidnappers. She said they then drove her to a point near Pactolus, where she was put out of the car.

Stroud said Ms. Hardy caught a ride back to the mall where she reported the incident to mall security employees who, in turn, called city police.

Officer R.C. Broadway said 18 cartons of cigarettes were taken from Collins Grocery at 209 W. Ninth St. in an incident reported at 2:06 a.m., while Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said $210 in cash, $500 worth of radio equipment and $5,000 worth of assorted tools were taken from H&R Auto Service at 120 Ficklen St. in a break-in reported at 7:15 a.m.

Officer R.E. Jones said a scanner radio, a recorder and a radio-tape player, were taken from Building M at Physician's Quadrangle on West Sixth Street in a break-in reported at 7:17 a.m., while Officer L.E. White said a wooden sign valued at $20 was taken from 131 Oakmont Drive in an incident reported at 8:34 a.m.

Stroud said a 1987 car was taken from Bill Askew Motors on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 10:15 a.m., while Officer C.N. Gray said about $30 worth of jewelry was taken from the Dragon Lot at 203 E. Fifth St. in a break-in reported at 11:47 a.m., a bicycle was taken from an apartment at 405 E. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 1:01 p.m. and a purse containing a check for $175 was snatched from a woman — by a man riding a bicycle — on Fourth Street near the Pitt Street intersection about 1:36 p.m.

According to Officer L.E. White, a purse containing $425 in cash, was taken from a vehicle parked at Pitt Orthopedic Service at 117 Medical Drive in an incident reported at 12:42 p.m., while Officer C.A. Curtis said a video cassette recorder was taken from 702 E. Third St. in a break-in reported at 5:49 p.m.

American Eagle Schedules New Prop Jets

By Carol Tyer

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

New American Eagle prop jets of at least 19-seat capacity will fly passengers in and out of the Pitt-Greenville Airport by early next year, according to the president of Nashville Eagle.

Bill Wallace, who has his office in Nashville, Tenn., serves as the chief executive officer of the branch of American Airlines which serves this area with Raleigh as its hub.

Wallace was in Greenville on Monday talking about his company's plans to better serve the Greenville area.

He said the company plans to replace its 17-seat Metro 2 plane now in use with 25 19-seat Jet Stream Super 31s. The new planes, he said, will have many safety features that the old ones do not. They include collision-avoidance systems, being brought on line well before the FAA-required time of 1992. They will also have comfort features not found in the old planes, like stand-up aisles and lavatories.

Sitting in a conference room of the Pitt-Greenville Airport, which is now undergoing an extensive expansion, Wallace said he believes that Greenville will soon have sufficient traffic to warrant the use of at least one of 25 Saab 340B 34-seat planes on which his company has firm options to buy.

Wallace said said the planes will go into use at the Greenville airport as soon as there are enough flights booked consistently for any specific hour to make the service economically feasible. These will have attendants and meal and/or snack service, he said.

Though none are being used by Nashville Eagle as commuters yet, he said, the next step would be 46-50-seat prop jets for Greenville.

Wallace said that Nashville Eagle has hubs in three southeastern United States cities — Nashville, Raleigh and Miami. Greenville is one of 16 spoke cities for Raleigh. Nashville also has 16 spoke cities and Miami has eight. Wallace said he has ultimate responsibility for the work of 900 Nashville Eagle workers in these 40 cities.

The three hubs in the Nashville Eagle service area are among 32 hub airports in the lower 48 states of the United States. Greenville, Wallace said, is one of 548 commercial airports in the United States and one of 293 which has service to more than one hub. In addition to American Eagle service to Raleigh, Greenville has USAir service to a Charlotte hub.

He said his company strives to provide "seamless travel" for its customers. "We try to have customers perceive everything we do as impeccable and effortless," he said. "So we work very hard to eliminate hitches like lost luggage that would dispel this perception of seamlessness."

How can American Eagle passengers departing from Greenville have use of the new larger planes faster? "That's easy," he said. "Just fly from Greenville. Don't drive to another city and start a flight there. That's all it will take. We try very hard to make it appealing for people to fly from their own spoke city."

GHA Will Raise Maintenance Fees

By J. Ward Best

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Residents of Greenville Housing Authority projects will pay a higher price for maintenance and groundskeeping, and the agency's employees could soon receive higher wages for their labor.

The Housing Authority on Monday approved increases in the hourly wages for maintenance work done by authority workers, and the price of required groundskeeping will also increase following the board action.

The board increased the hourly wages for maintenance work from $8.25 and $12.35 for overtime to $9.50 and $14.25 for overtime. It also added one dollar to the cost of lawn mowing and roof cleaning to increase the prices to $9 and $5, respectively.

The authority only assesses maintenance charges for non-routine work done in the housing projects. Elderly and handicapped residents will continue to receive groundskeeping free of charge.

The board set in motion a comparison study of wages paid to employees by the authority, the city, Pitt County and authorities in other towns.

The agency approved a bid from Municipal Advisors Inc., a consultant firm out of Virginia Beach, Va., to study the wages paid by the authority to its employees.

MAI submitted the lowest bid for the job — $7,232 — and the company will look at wages, job descriptions, benefits and other relevant areas of the pay scale in the authority. Housing Authority Director Ken Noland said the group will begin work on the study within 14 days, and he expected the work to be completed by January.

Noland also reported to the board the progress on the Dubber-Laney Woods 32-unit housing project on State Road 1204. The contractor has now roofed all but one of the five buildings in the development, and expected to complete that building today. Interior work has already begun on three of the buildings.

The contractor has a completion date of December to meet, but Noland said he expected the project would be finished in February.

Salley Streeter, director of resident affairs, said that the monthly rent in the seven authority projects averaged $131.04 in October. Ms. Streeter said average rents in the developments included: Meadowbrook, $124.58; Kearney Park, $133.15; Moyewood I, $140.95; Moyewood II, $139.60; Hopkins Park, $129.36; Newton, $111.56, and West Meadowbrook, $120.98.

County Board Schedules Session On Land Use Plan

By Stuart Savage

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Commissioners have scheduled a public hearing for Nov. 20 to give residents one last chance to comment on a proposed comprehensive land use plan before it is adopted.

The Pitt County Planning Board, in mid-October, gave its approval to the land use document and recommended that the board of commissioners adopt the plan.

County Planner Jeff Ulma suggested to commissioners Monday that once the land use plan is adopted, it would be practically useless unless zoning regulations are adopted to implement the plan's recommendations.

Ulma, who said the land use plan is designed to guide growth and development, said the five major categories outlined by the plan include municipal, preferred development, rural, resource conservation and agricultural preservation areas.

According to documents presented to the board, the municipal area — including towns and their extrajurisdictional jurisdiction area — account for about 92 square miles and are not addressed by the land use plan.

The preferred development area

— some 120 square miles or 18 percent of the area addressed by the plan — indicates where the most intensive residential, commercial and industrial development should occur in unincorporated Pitt County over the next 20 years.

The area designated as rural — totaling some 218 square miles — is the largest category in the plan, where uses such as low-density residential development, institutional, small subdivisions and mobile home parks, and wooded and undeveloped land should be maintained.

Resource conservation areas, which account for 158 square miles, include regulatory flood plains and in the future should include such uses as greenways and open space, agriculture and recreation.

Agricultural preservation districts — 67 square miles or 10 percent of the total county area — include those lands possessing prime agricultural soils which, the plan suggests, should be limited to agricultural operations and associated residential uses at very low densities.

The Nov. 20 meeting was scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Commissioners awarded contracts for administration and engineering work on the second phase of the Hanrahan revitalization project to The Wooten Co., which bid a cap of $58,937 for the administration and submitted what commissioners considered was the best and lowest bid for the engineering work on the second phase of the community development block grant program-funded project.

The board also appointed a water jurisdiction committee that would, among other things, work to prevent conflicts between public and private water systems in the county.

The members — appointed to three years terms — are Glenn Strickland, Glenn Hardee, Malcolm Green, Bruce Bland, Don Russell, Ralph Thaxton, Paul Majette, Alton Ray Hines, Bobby Thomas Manning, Bill Modlin and Phil Dickerson.

Dickerson, the county engineer, was named temporary chairman of the panel.

The board, in a closed-to-the-public private meeting, discussed the possibility of acquiring property — in an area generally bounded on three sides by North Greene Street, Belvoir Road and Old Creek Road — for a new jail.

The board is scheduled to meet in Farmville at 9 a.m. on Nov. 20.

Woman Gets Life In Carney Murder

By J.R. Williams

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A New Haven, Conn., woman was sentenced Monday to life in prison after pleading guilty to second-degree murder and armed robbery in the June 3 death of John Carney of Greenville.

Mary Jones Small, 34, also received a sentence of 40 years on the armed robbery charge. Superior Court Judge William Griffin stipulated that the 40-year sentence would begin at the end of the life sentence.

Ms. Small must serve at least 10 years in prison for the murder conviction before she is eligible for parole, Public Defender Robert Shoffner said after the trial.

"Then, if they parole her on the life sentence, she can begin serving the 40 years for armed robbery," said Shoffner, noting that there is no guarantee that Ms. Small will be paroled for the murder sentence.

But Shoffner said that if Ms. Small is paroled for the murder conviction, she would probably serve at least seven years of the armed robbery sentence before she would be eligible for parole on that conviction.

Ms. Small remained calm while the verdict was being read Monday. She smiled at friends before being taken out of the courtroom.

Ms. Small was charged initially with first-degree murder. The district attorney's office accepted the lesser charge in a plea bargain with Shoffner.

District Attorney Tom Haigwood said Carney, a man in his 90s, lived alone in a duplex on Third Street, next to the home of Ms. Small's mother.

Haigwood said Carney, well known in the neighborhood, closed his door at 6 p.m. June 3, an unusual occurrence because he sold refreshments to neighbors. When a few neighborhood women entered Carney's home to check on him, they discovered blood and quickly called police, according to Haigwood.

Police found Carney dead, his throat cut. About $1,000 had been taken from Carney's home, authorities said.

Ms. Small was arrested by Lake Mary, Fla., police and Seminole County, Fla., sheriff's officers at 3 p.m. June 9. She was later returned to Greenville.

"As a practical matter, she did get every day she could with the pleas that were entered," Shoffner said.

Although a date has not been set, Ms. Small will be transferred to the N.C. Department of Correction's Women's Prison in Raleigh.

Students are also angry about police actions during a Halloween night party in the Tar River Estates apartment complex in which 134 people, many of them ECU students, were arrested for failure to disperse.

Many people at the rally wore a T-shirt with the words "Greenville Gestapo" under a picture of a policeman on the front and the "Top 10 Reasons for Being Arrested in Greenville" on the back.

The list of reasons reasons ranged from No. 10 — "I am an ECU student," to No. 1 — "Failure to Disperse."

The T-shirts were designed by ECU students Heather McKissock, Mike Conley and Vern Sullivan who said they got the idea when Conley was among those arrested Tuesday.

"We're selling them to pay for the court fees (for those arrested)," Ms. McKissock said.

About 60 of the shirts have been sold at $10 each, she said. Another order of 100 shirts is already half-sold, she said.

Fraud

Another spokesman from the district attorney's office said more than $200,000 and more than 25 buyers are involved in the alleged fraud.

Richard Carlton, chief deputy secretary of state, said from his Raleigh office this morning, "I'm not going to comment on exactly what the situation was," regarding the alleged fraud. But he said, "They are very serious charges and a number of them."

"The investigation started in April," according to Carlton, who said the Pitt district attorney's office, the U.S. Customs Service, the Greenville Police Department and the Pitt County Sheriff's Department cooperated with the secretary of state's investigators and "they were all very very helpful."

Marshall Tutor, an investigator with the secretary of state's office who testified before the grand jury Monday, declined to comment on the case today.

The number of counts against each of the men as a result of the Pitt grand jury indictments include:

— Conspiracy to sell without the securities being registered with the secretary of state; McPherson 11, Venter 31, Little 32, Baker 32 and Davis 17.

— Conspiracy to sell without being a registered salesman; McPherson 11, Venter 31, Little 32, Baker 32 and Davis 17.

— Conspiracy to sell stating misleading facts; McPherson 11, Venter 31, Little 31, Baker 31 and Davis 17.

long will our children at D.H. Conley, North Pitt, Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central have to wait before their facilities could offer the same educational opportunities as Greenville Rose?" the group asked in its statement.

The board accepted the group's statement without comment.

School officials said the bond money will go for improvements that are desperately needed and will probably be spent quickly.

"We can spend the money as quickly as the local construction trade allows," Deputy Superintendent John McKnight said. He said he intends to prepare a proposed construction schedule in which the improvements will probably be completed over a two-year period.

"In practical terms, no future school board is going to be able to overturn what this school board has done," Joe Gantz, co-chairman of the bond campaign steering committee, said.

Barry Gaskins, a spokesman for the county school system, said today that the present Rose High School on Elm Street is too old and run-down to use. "The replacement of Rose High is the top priority of the school system at this time," he said.

In 1984, the Greenville and Pitt County school boards adopted a list of priority construction projects for both school systems as part of the merger process, Gaskins said. Last on the list of 14 projects was the replacement of Rose High School, he said.

Since the other 13 projects have either been funded or completed, the conversion of Greenville Middle School to Rose High School is the system's next priority, Gaskins said.

Cucumber It Was, But Cool It Wasn't

LONDON (AP) — A robber whose cucumber "gun" fooled cashiers into handing over more than $18,800 has been sentenced to seven years in prison.

Ernest Coveley, 37, wrapped the vegetable in a plastic bag and waved it like a sawed-off shotgun at cashiers in mortgage lending institutions known as building societies, a court was told. On two occasions, when he was unable to afford the price of a cucumber, he used an iron bar.

Defense lawyer Stephen Pownall said Coveley used a cucumber because it was the most innocuous thing he could think of.

But Circuit Judge Edwin, who sentenced Coveley on Monday, told the defendant he had frightened his victims.

"They were put in great fear, not to say terror by you," the judge said. "I have no doubt you used the cucumber so that if you were caught later in the street you would be able to point to the vegetable and deny any responsibility for what you had done."

Coveley pleaded guilty last month to eight robberies in east and northeast London between May and July, saying he used the money to buy drugs.

Nicaraguan Talks Will Open Thursday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Honduras will attend a meeting of Nicaraguan rebels and the Sandinista government at the United Nations this week, President Jose Azcona Hoyo announced today.

The decision removed the last obstacle to the talks scheduled Thursday and Friday. They will be the first between the rebels and government in more than a year.

In a letter to Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, Azcona Hoyo said Honduras would attend as an observer but "if the parties to the conflict agree, will be able to carry out a more relevant role" in the talks.

Ortega asked for the meeting to discuss demobilization of the U.S.-backed Contras. He proposed it when he announced an end to a 19-month cease-fire last week.

Honduras, which houses Contra rebel bases, initially refused Ortega's request that it attend the meeting, saying the rebels are "a Nicaraguan problem."

"Although Honduras is not part of the internal Nicaraguan conflict and has participated with good faith with the other Central American governments in providing a solution ... it will participate as an observer in the meeting that your government has asked for in New York," Azcona Hoyo said.

The Contra rebels are to disband and leave their Honduran camps voluntarily by the first few days of December under an agreement signed by Honduras, Nicaragua and three other Central American governments Aug. 7.

Also taking part in the talks at the United Nations will be the International Commission for Verification and Support, created under the peace plan to help in the demobilization. It includes one official each from the United Nations and Organization of American States.

Debt Inaction May Lead To Default

Tuesday, "the government will run out of cash and default on Nov. 9" when about $13.8 billion in Treasury bills mature.

"Each day that Congress fails to act, however, will cause additional disruption in our borrowing schedule, possibly resulting in higher interest costs to the taxpayer," Ryland bankers.

"To avoid these potential costs and the prospect of default, immediate congressional action is imperative."

Disagreement over several issues are holding up the legislation.

Foley indicated one major issue to be resolved is whether legislation repealing or scaling back catastrophic health coverage for retirees should be attached to the debt-ceiling bill or considered as part of the deficit-reduction package.

The House has passed a $3.1 trillion debt ceiling, but action was stalled in the Senate by Republican demands that it be accompanied by a capital gains tax cut, a top priority for Bush.

The White House abandoned that effort last week and Democratic and GOP Senate leaders were discussing legislation Monday to increase the limit. However, any bill approved by the Senate likely would differ from the House version and efforts to reach a compromise would require more time.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Premier Ruud Lubbers completed his third coalition government Monday, with the appointment of a Christian Democrat as traffic and waterways minister, Dutch Television reported.

Hanja Maij-Weggen, a member of the European Parliament, is the third woman in Lubbers' center-left cabinet, which has more female ministers than any previous Dutch government.

Carter Says Bush 'Delaying Too Long'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former President Carter says President Bush is "delaying too long" in responding to the initiatives of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the rebirth of democracy in Eastern Europe.

"We have got to get our act together," Carter said on Monday in the strongest criticism he has offered to date on Bush's performance in office.

Bush today dismissed such criticism, although he made no direct reference to Carter.

At a White House news conference, the president challenged critics to come up with specific ideas "other than triple the spending" on aid to Poland and Hungary.

Bush said, contrary to the basis of one question, that leaders in Western Europe "don't seem to agree" with some of the political criticism he gets in connection with his dealings with nations that have been in the Soviet sphere since World War II.

Carter, in Washington for a reunion with the people who staffed his campaigns and administration, told an audience there is "substantial proof" that at least in some areas Gorbachev is producing irreversible change in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

The response of the Bush administration "doesn't match what Gorbachev is doing," Carter said.

"I think we are delaying too long in responding effectively to this change that is occurring," Carter said during a seminar sponsored by the Center for National Policy on the subject of "waging peace."

WASECA, Minn. (AP) — A jail trusty with as many as seven car theft convictions signed out of jail to rent a video and was caught driving a stolen pickup truck, authorities said.

Jeffrey Sauffer, 28, had work release privileges at Waseca County Jail when he checked out Friday, to rent a movie downtown.

About three hours later, officials said, Sauffer was found in nearby Mankato in the pickup, which had been reported stolen from the parking lot of a hardware store.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

After Eveready

Industrial Recruitment A Necessity

No community can be happy when one of its oldest and respected industries makes the decision to cease operations.

That is how Greenville felt when Eveready Batteries announced that it would phase out operations here over the next 11 to 14 months.

Plant sales and closings are an unfortunate part of the times. This one, which will delete 270 jobs from the local economy, should force Greenville and Pitt County leaders to recognize that jobs are important and good jobs will come only if we aggressively seek them. It is a message that the community cannot afford to ignore, if we wish to keep our people fully employed in good times and bad.

Officials cited the changing nature of the battery business which now sees a preference for alkaline and carbon zinc batteries. The decision was made to close one plant and, unfortunately, the Greenville plant was the choice.

Thought should be given to the human side of this story. There are real people behind the numbers of those who will lose their jobs. The men and women who will be unemployed because of the closing represent real lives and real families who must deal with shattered security. For many, the change will come at the worst possible time of year — at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Those families will be wondering during the upcoming holidays just what the new year holds.

The Eveready name has its origins in Greenville during World War II when National Carbon began making war-related products in a plant on 14th Street. After the war the plant shifted to manufacturing dry cell batteries and later the plant was moved to a new building at Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street.

The parent company became Union Carbide and a series of efficiencies kept the plant operating profitably against rising foreign competition. Union Carbide sold its Eveready division to Ralston-Purina in 1986 and the local plant has operated under that ownership since.

About 45 of the plant's workers, mostly white collar employees, will be offered positions at other plants. For the remainder there will be retirement or vested pension benefits, severance packages and assistance in finding new employment. For all, there will be adjustment and uncertainty.

Again, the closing is evidence of the need for aggressive industrial recruitment to keep Pitt County's diverse economy strong — and to keep its workers working and its families solvent.

A Correction

An editorial Monday omitted the number of registered voters in Greenville. The figure is 19,278.

Parents Can Prepare Their Children For School

WASHINGTON — For too many children, school failure begins before they ever set foot inside a school.

You know it, if you've ever seen bright, eager youngsters who, nonetheless, never quite get the hang of school. Teachers know it, though they may not say so for fear of seeming to blame parents for their own shortcomings. Education policymakers know it, although they obscure their knowledge with talk of "cultural deprivation."

Fortunately, Dorothy Rich knows it, too. And for the past three years, she has been doing something about it.

Rich's assault on pre-school academic failure goes back nearly a quarter of a century, which is approximately how long her Home and School Institute has been teaching low-income Washington parents how to get their children ready for learning. But three years ago, under a demonstration grant from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, she took her techniques nationwide.

Her emphasis is helping parents to teach their children what she calls "megaskills" — self-confidence, motivation, perseverance, teamwork, personal responsibility and problem-solving — the habits and attitudes that make school-learning possible.

She begins with the conviction that education is a community enterprise, not just the function of the schools. "Deep inside, too many people think if we can just fine-tune the schools, everything will be all right," she says. "We have to have a larger vision of what education is today."

Through partnerships with half a dozen major organizations, she is spreading that vision and enlisting hundreds of parents in helping to prepare youngsters for learning.

The American Postal Workers Union is sponsoring workshops in local schools in Denver, Atlanta and Detroit; the American Red Cross is using a bilingual approach to reach migrant workers in Florida; the American Library Association is making teaching materials available to parents; the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs is putting on a series of intergenerational workshops in which older women tutor children and train young mothers in Tuscaloosa; Parents Without Partners and the National Coalition of Title I Chapter I Parents has established a number of programs in Brooklyn, northern New Jersey and Detroit.

The program materials, of Rich's own creation, show parents how they can teach their children the confidence and love of learning that makes for academic success.

"It's no good saying that education is everybody's responsibility unless we also give them the tools to carry out that responsibility," she says. "We're helping people to help their own children and also, through their unions, churches and other associations, to help their neighbors."

Is it working? "I can't give you academic specifics," she says. "It's too early for that. But I know it's working when I hear children say it makes their parents have time for them, when I hear parents say how much better they feel to know that they have something to contribute to the education of their children, when I see participating organizations add new sites, or when I see a 75 percent retention rate for participants. We have trained 234 megaskill leaders in 124 cities in 34 states."

Most of the parents (the majority of them mothers) are high-school graduates who want their children to achieve more. But until Rich formed her New Partnerships for Student Achievement, nobody was showing them how.

Rich 1201 16th St. N.W.,

Washington, D.C. 20036) says her techniques work even for functionally illiterate parents.

"The whole idea," she says, "is to mobilize the community outside of school to help kids learn, to spread the word that education is everybody's job and to get parents in the habit of working with their children and feeling comfortable about it."

For now, much of the program's effort goes to help parents help children who are already failing in school. But Rich's dream is to reach parents of pre-schoolers to help them prevent failure in the first place.

If she can pull that off, she could wind up doing more for public education than all of the studies of what's wrong with the schools.

To the editor:

Tuesday was election day for the "Elite Citizens" of Pitt County who have registered to vote.

"Elite" is a very elevated word to describe citizens who exercise their rights under the U.S. Constitution to vote. Voter registration separates neighbors as to which fits into the "Elite" or "Not so Elite". The registered voter who votes is entitled legitimately to compliment or complain about elected officials. Those who are not registered to vote, and ultimately do not vote, have no right to credit for good or bad elected officials. Also they have wasted something very precious; i.e. their constitutional right to vote.

Our election Tuesday was very important to the effectiveness of our local governments. As usual, the "Elite Citizens" who are registered to vote, and who voted will determine the destiny of neighbors who are not so "Elite."

It is too late to register for Tuesday's election. However, in December, very important bond issues will come before the voters, and there will be many more elections to come. It is not too late to register for this election. Please citizens, become a part of the "Elite" in your community. Register to vote. You can bet your muskets that Thomas Jefferson and George Washington were among the "Elite."

To the editor:

This past week we heard several versions of what occurred during Halloween celebrations in Greenville. Without any attempt or reason to take sides with the serious issues involved, I would like to share a thought with the public.

Not everyone celebrates Halloween with alcoholic beverages and loud music. There were several groups from East Carolina University who took time to make sure that youngsters were enjoying a safe and happy experience. Almost 70 women from ECU sororities came to the Boys Club to provide a Halloween party for our club members. Large groups of Boys Club and Operation Sunshine members were also invited to attend several Halloween parties sponsored by sororities on campus and a group of East Carolina University volunteers named ECU Friends.

My guess is that the number of ECU students involved in providing a wholesome experience for Pitt County youth outnumbered those who were arrested for whatever reason.

Let's all be careful not to judge all ECU students by the actions of a few. My thanks to those students who care.

Bush Was Ahead Of The Game

Walter Mears

WASHINGTON (AP) — First by land, now by sea, President Bush has delivered a pair of summit surprises that countered critics of a foreign policy they term timid and he calls prudent. Each time, he said the complaints didn't bother him because he knew exactly what he was doing all along.

It's happened twice within six months, in May with his proposal to slash conventional arms in Europe, and now with his shipboard conference planned for December with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Each time, Bush said that prolonged public criticism didn't faze him because he knew what he wanted to do and how to do it. At one point, the president even claimed he was immune to political criticism.

If so, he's the first.

The two summit maneuvers, one West, one East, display the powers a president wields in matters diplomatic — although events can overrule him. Jimmy Carter, in town for a weekend reunion of his administration, can attest to that, 10 years after the Iranian embassy hostage seizure that dominated his final year and undermined his 1980 campaign.

Indeed, Bush has his own experience with presidential limits, in his attempt to force Manuel Noriega out of power in Panama. But in East-West diplomacy, he's succeeded in writing the agenda so far, and Democratic critics are relatively quiet, if not satisfied.

In the first months of the Bush administration, there were widespread complaints at home and among U.S. allies abroad at administration silence while Gorbachev was scoring public opinion points in western Europe with a series of arms control promises and offers. Bush had ordered a review of U.S. foreign and defense policies, and he waited it out without countering the Soviet leader's peace offensive.

Then, at the NATO summit in Brussels, he proposed swift and drastic cuts in Soviet and U.S. conventional weapons in Europe. Gorbachev had proposed reductions, too, over five or six years. Bush wanted a deal negotiated in six months or a year, with the actual reductions to follow in 1992 or 1993.

His time frame is slipping, although Bush said last week that the conventional arms negotiations are going "reasonably well."

"We have to keep driving ... to be sure that we can keep moving forward to meet a rather ambitious time frame," he said.

Back when he announced the conventional arms proposals, there was a told-you-so air to his comments about the critics. "I know that some voices were raised in Congress that we were going too slow," he said on May 29. "but we knew exactly what we were doing all along ..." That's almost exactly what he said on Oct. 31, announcing the meeting with Gorbachev.

In May and again in October, Bush said he had come under fire for being reluctant to move, that people kept saying do something, but that he insisted on taking his time and acting prudently.

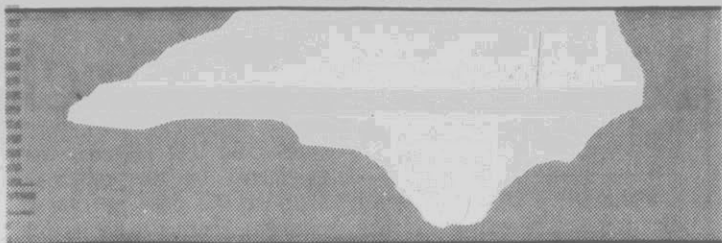

After Brussels and his midsummer trip to Poland and Hungary, criticism of the Bush pace picked up again. Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell said the administration seemed more comfortable with the certainties of the Cold War than with the challenges of change in the governments and economies of the once-solid communist bloc.

Bush had said his goal was to overcome the division of Europe and forge a new unity based on western values. The goal was applauded, but as events moved that way, some Democrats said Bush wasn't doing enough to support change.

They were dissatisfied with the economic aid package he recommended for Poland and Hungary, and Congress doubled it. They thought he should be more assertive in dealing with Gorbachev, and there were suggestions all summer that he ought to meet with the Soviet leader. In September, the two governments agreed to a summit meeting on strategic arms control in the United States next spring or summer.

The critics still deemed the president too passive. Then he sprang his second surprise, an informal, preview meeting with Gorbachev Dec. 2 and 3, aboard ships off Malta. Bush said he'd planned it since the middle of the summer, but kept it secret from all but the top echelons of the administration until the simultaneous Halloween announcements at the White House and the Kremlin.

Indecent Liberties

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The former chairman of the Haywood County Hospital Board of Trustees pleaded guilty in Haywood County Superior Court Monday to taking indecent liberties with children.

Harry Shiflet Holland of Canton, originally indicted on three counts of taking indecent liberties with children under age 16, agreed to the one felony plea in a plea bargain between his attorney Pat Smathers and District Attorney Roy Patton, while two charges were reduced to misdemeanor charges of assault on a child under 12 years of age.

Holland entered guilty pleas to both misdemeanor charges on condition the charges be consolidated for sentencing.

He faced a maximum 14 years imprisonment on the three charges.

Judge Shirley L. Fulton of Charlotte sentenced Holland to five years active prison term, suspended to five years supervised probation; 300 hours community service work; and a $1,500 fine for the felony charge, and two years active time suspended to five years supervised probation, 100 hours community service work and a $500 fine for the misdemeanor charges.

Fulton ordered Holland to submit to Smoky Mountain Mental Health for examination by a sex therapist and ordered him to follow the therapist's recommendations. He was also ordered not to reside with or be around children under the age of 18 without authorization from his probation officer and therapist.

Patton said the sentence is one of the toughest probationary sentences he has ever seen handed down.

Holland, 67, had been charged with two incidents allegedly occurring Aug. 14 and Sept. 7 and involving one girl, age 10. He was released on $6,000 unsecured bond. A third count involving a second girl, age 9, allegedly occurring Sept. 10, was added at the October indictment.

Hearing Postponed

LUMBERTON (AP) — The unexpected absence of the presiding judge postponed a hearing for Indian activist Eddie Hatcher, who was expected to request to be his own lawyer in his case against state charges.

The Robeson County Superior Court hearing had not been rescheduled although the county District Attorney Richard Townsend said it might be heard next week.

Judge Robert Farmer, who had ruled in September that he would "hear all Hatcher matters through January," did not appear Monday morning at the hearing.

Townsend said he had not heard from the judge.

Hatcher is charged by the State of North Carolina with 14 counts of second degree kidnapping in connection with the Feb. 1, 1988 armed takeover of The Robesonian newspaper.

Record Set

GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — October was a record-setting month at Grandfather Mountain, where 1,308 hikers trekked the trails along the Blue Ridge Parkway, U.S. 221 and N.C. 105 south of Boone.

The number of hikers last month was up 24 percent over the next busiest month, October 1987, when about 1,000 hikers and backpackers walked up from valley trails.

"Besides opening the new Profile Trail last year, which is designed for easy hiking, more and more people are discovering the mountain's wilderness preserve," said Randy Johnson, the mountain's trail manager. "Many hikers familiar with the Great Smokies and North Carolina's national forests have hiked in those areas for years and are open to new trail experiences."

Martin Sweetens Hazardous Waste Offer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — In a bid to convince four Southeastern states to let North Carolina join their regional waste-treatment pact, Gov. Jim Martin has sweetened the state's offer.

Martin described the new proposal after he gave a speech on hazardous waste to the Chemical Manufacturers Association's annual conference in Washington. The proposal was informal, made in private discussions with top officials from other states, the Winston-Salem Journal reported.

Martin proposed that North Carolina would build a waste incinerator 25 percent larger than one originally proposed.

There's no indication yet whether the new offer will persuade Alabama, South Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee to include North Carolina in their regional plans.

If the state cannot join the regional pact soon, it stands to lose, at least temporarily, millions of dollars in federal aid to clean up sites contaminated by toxic chemicals.

Also, in a speech to the chemical companies, Martin said two of those states were justified in attempting to ban toxic waste from North Carolina industries. He also endorsed the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's attempt to overturn a N.C. law restricting the construction of commercial hazardous-waste treatment plants.

The state's original hazardous-waste treatment offer, and its only formal one, was to build an incinerator that could burn 40,000 tons of toxic chemicals a year. Since then, Martin has offered to build a plant to recycle used solvents and a landfill to hold up to 10,000 tons of waste from the incinerator and the recycling plant.

The latest offer calls for an incinerator large enough to handle 50,000 tons of waste a year. With the larger incinerator, Martin said, the state would increase the region's capacity for treatment and disposal more than its industries increase the region's waste problem.

Martin has pledged to have the incinerator, recycling plant and landfill ready by the end of 1991, two years earlier than the original proposal. The other states did not want the construction to wait until after the next statewide elections in 1992, said Martin, who cannot run again.

If the other states accept Martin's proposal, it would have to be approved by the N.C. Legislature. The leaders of the state's House and Senate, who expressed reservations about the governor's last proposal, have not been consulted yet about the new offer, Martin said.

About 90 percent of North Carolina's hazardous waste is handled on-site by the industries that make it. Those that cannot treat their own waste rely on commercial waste plants in other states, primarily the landfills in South Carolina and Alabama, because there are no incinerators or landfills in North Carolina.

In his speech, Martin defended the attempts by South Carolina and Alabama to close their borders to waste from numerous states, including North Carolina.

"Earlier this year, both South Carolina and Alabama issued bans against accepting our waste until we showed a commitment to developing a responsible disposal plan of our own," he said. "They certainly feel justified, and I think they are."

Alabama is being sued over its attempt to restrict waste from other states. One of its congressmen, meanwhile, has introduced a bill that would allow the states, in regional pacts to turn away hazardous waste from any other states.

Task Force Unveils Injury Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State officials are hoping people will become more aware of the ways to prevent accidental injuries and have unveiled a program designed to reduce accidents.

"Injuries used to be called accidents, and people just don't think accidents are preventable," said Bill Cobey, secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources, Environment and Health.

The Governor's Task Force on Injury Prevention and Control unveiled a 20-point plan that calls for new laws and more tax dollars toward making North Carolinians less likely to lose limbs and lives out of carelessness.

The panel also recommended more educational programs, stronger building codes, stiffer penalties for occupational safety violations, equalized alcoholic beverage tax rates, tougher restrictions on the sale of firearms and a ban on all-terrain vehicles.

Reducing the risk of injuries also requires a new awareness that they impact the community as well as individuals, costing millions of dollars in emergency services, health care and other social resources, officials said.

The task force said by treating injuries like infectious disease, as preventable, the gains in protection for many people would outweigh the loss of freedom for the individual.

The far-reaching plan follows nearly a year of study and data collection and was released to coincide with the debut of two-day forum featuring injury experts from across the nation.

"We believe that injury prevention and control is a program whose time has come," task force chairman Thad Wester told a crowd of about 250.

Injury is the fourth leading cause of death and the number one killer in the first four decades of life in the United States and in North Carolina.

More than 4,000 North Carolinians die in fires, car collisions, shootings and other calamities each year, a figure that exceeds the national average despite a seat belt law and other safety measures already in place.

U.S. Will Return Frozen Assets To Iran

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The United States is returning $567 million in frozen assets to Iran but says the action is unrelated to the plight of eight Americans who are being held hostage in Lebanon.

The $567 million was being held in a fund to back up claims by American banks against Iran. Most of those claims were settled in the past few weeks.

As a result, U.S. officials said Monday night, the leftover assets will be returned to the Bank of Iran. Another $243 million will be transferred to a special fund to back up other American claims against the Persian Gulf country, U.S. officials said Monday night.

The move followed talks in The Hague last week between Abraham Sofaer, the State Department's legal adviser, and Iranian officials. A special tribunal set up in the Dutch capital in 1981 has been considering conflicting claims.

U.S. officials said the decision to return the assets through the Bank of Iran was unrelated to the eight Americans being held in Lebanon by a pro-Iranian faction.

Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani offered help last month in getting 18 Western hostages freed if the United States released billions of dollars in frozen assets or helped settle the cases of three Iranians captured by Christian Lebanese militiamen in 1982.

Bush administration officials immediately responded they would not engage in negotiations over the hostages and called on humanitarian grounds for the release of all the hostages.

Sondra McCarty, a State Department spokeswoman, said Sofaer's talks with Iranian officials in The Hague last Thursday and Friday concerned only claims matters. "We are making no deals with anyone about the hostages," she said.

About $800 million had been held in a special fund against claims of American banks. "Since most of the bank claims were settled over the last several months, $567 million could be returned to Iran and the remainder was transferred to a special security account to back up other claims," a U.S. official said.

That account is maintained at a minimum of $500 million, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The U.S.-Iranian claims commission was set up in 1981 as part of the arrangement that led to the release of American hostages held for 444 days in Tehran after seizure of the U.S. Embassy by militants.

There are several other claims issues outstanding, including Iran's demand for compensation for military equipment purchased before the 1979 Islamic revolution but never delivered.

The United States transferred $9.9 billion in frozen assets to the jurisdiction of the claims tribunal in 1981. Before the banks' settlement, some $3.8 billion had been transferred to Iran.

The $810 million involved in Monday's action had been reserved for U.S. bank claims against Iran.

Financial Dispute Could Halt Bailouts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The federal official in charge of bailing out the savings and loan industry says he'll soon have to call a halt to thrift institution rescues unless the administration and Congress swiftly resolve a politically touchy financing dispute.

Legislation enacted in August provides $50 billion for closing or rescuing S&Ls to a new agency, the Resolution Trust Corp. But Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman, who is in charge of the RTC, says it needs to temporarily borrow at least an additional $50 billion, which would be repaid as the agency sold loans and real estate acquired from failed S&Ls.

Without the temporary funds, the RTC could raise cash either by the quick sale of properties once owned by S&Ls — a move likely to unsettle already depressed real estate markets — or it will have to keep money-losing S&Ls open, adding to the burden on taxpayers, he said.

"We are very close to being out of funds to resolve institutions without additional funds. This is a matter of weeks, not months," Seidman said after delivering a speech Monday to the 97th annual convention of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

However, in Washington, Daniel P. Kearney, president of the administration board that oversees the RTC, contradicted Seidman. He told a House Banking panel that the initial $50 billion should last through next year.

The bailout agency has handled 33 thrift failures so far, has another 260 institutions under its control and expects to take over 200 to 300 more in coming months.

But it is caught in a dispute between the administration, which wants the additional borrowing kept out of the federal budget deficit, and congressional Democrats, who would swell the deficit by tens of billions of dollars, increasing pressure on President Bush to agree to a tax increase.

"That's obviously a hot political question. ... We're kind of caught in the middle," Seidman said.

The thrift office estimated that 800 of the nation's 2,600 solvent S&Ls, holding about 45 percent of the industry's $1.3 trillion in assets, fall nearly $20 billion short of the new capital standard.

The Duchess of York ended a five-day visit to Texas Monday with a visit to a Houston inner-city school, where she took part in a day filled with anti-drug messages. The 30-year-old former Sarah Ferguson later left on a flight to New York, where she was to meet with her publisher, Simon & Schuster.

Convicted Drug Dealer Claims He Gave DC Mayor Crack Cocaine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A convicted drug dealer's sworn testimony that he gave crack cocaine to Mayor Marion Barry several times is reviving questions about whether the mayor uses drugs.

Charles Lewis, 49, testified under oath in U.S. District Court on Monday that he gave Barry cocaine at least three times while Barry visited Lewis' room at a downtown Washington hotel late last year.

Despite many press accounts of investigations against the mayor, Lewis' statement was the first on record, under-oath accusation that Barry, the city's mayor since 1979, had been given drugs.

"I'm not worried at all about this," Barry, who has repeatedly denied ever using drugs, told reporters Monday. He described Lewis as a "convicted felon" and added, "He'll say anything in court ... trying to save his own hide."

The federal investigation began in December when city police called off an attempt to make an undercover drug buy from Lewis on discovering that the mayor was in Lewis' hotel room.

Barry, who has described Lewis as an old friend, acknowledged making at least six visits to Lewis' hotel during that period. But the mayor has steadfastly denied using, seeing or purchasing drugs during those trips.

The mayor's attorney, Kenneth Mundy, scoffed at the defendant's comments.

"We question the credibility of the source," Mundy said. "Charles Lewis is a besieged and beleaguered man who knows that his only salvation comes by not giving truthful statements about the mayor."

Rumors about Barry's alleged use of drugs have persisted for years. In 1984, Karen Johnson, a convicted drug dealer, went to prison on contempt of court charges after refusing to tell federal prosecutors whether she used cocaine with Barry or sold drugs to him and other top city officials.

Barry, who is married, admitted to having had an unspecified "personal relationship" with Johnson, but denied ever using drugs with her.

Lewis' statement came as Judge Stanley Sporkin was reviewing a plea bargain calling for Lewis to plead guilty to two counts of conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine.

The second count centered on Lewis' activities at the hotel last December, and made reference to Lewis distributing cocaine to one individual on at least three separate occasions.

"Because I don't want to look like a fool, was one of the individuals you gave cocaine to the mayor of this city?" Sporkin asked Lewis.

As the defendant was preparing to answer, Assistant U.S. Attorney Judith Retchin asked to discuss the matter privately with the judge.

Thousands Stage Separate Protest March As Soviets Mark Revolution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — At least 5,000 people today spurned official Red Square ceremonies to commemorate the Bolshevik Revolution and marched through Moscow to protest food shortages, pollution, Communist rule and the secret police.

In Moldavia, activists said police beat protesters who forced cancellation of the military part of the republic's parade. Striking miners in the Soviet Arctic joined a celebration with slogans urging the government to allow greater independence and improve living and working conditions.

The unprecedented alternative march wound through the capital as President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the Soviet leadership stood atop the Lenin Mausoleum and reviewed the traditional display of military hardware.

The official tolerance of a counter-demonstration on the hallowed national holiday showed how far the Soviet Union has come from the authoritarian rule of Gorbachev's predecessors.

So did the toned-down nature of the Red Square celebrations marking the 72nd anniversary of the revolution that brought the Communists to power in Russia. Not as much emphasis was placed on military might as in previous years.

"We're tired of 70 years of Communist power with nothing having changed for the better, and this is our protest," said marcher Taisya Shlyonova, a pensioner. The demonstrators represented a broad spectrum of unofficial groups.

"We don't want the people to be sheep that can be led as they have been led for 72 years," popular prosecutor Telman Gdlyan said. "Power must be taken away from the apparatus and given to the people."

Leaders of the independent event steered their marchers away from Red Square and a possible confrontation with authorities or with the thousands of marchers at the official ceremonies.

Responding to posters plastered around the city on the eve of Revolution Day, activists assembled near the Dynamo Metro station two hours before the start of official ceremonies.

Their route took them to a fork with one street leading toward Red Square, and some demonstrators initially headed that way. However, leaders made appeals from a sound truck and steered them instead to a route sanctioned by city officials.

Organizers said they had been told by authorities they would not be permitted to march through the square because they could not guarantee the march would remain orderly.

The marchers, many walking arm in arm, chanted slogans in support of maverick Communist Boris N. Yeltsin and other reformist members of the Congress of People's Deputies and shouted "Down with the KGB" secret police.

Some brandished posters scolding the 1917 Communist revolution glorified at the official ceremonies.

"Seventy-two years on the road to nowhere," said one poster. Others proclaimed, "Down With Ligachev," a reference to Yegor Ligachev, the hard-line Communist on the ruling Politburo who has come to symbolize resistance to economic and social reform.

The marchers represented a wide spectrum of interests, from environmental groups protesting construction of a nuclear power station to church groups demanding freedom of worship in the officially atheist Communist state.

Last year, such unofficial groups marched in some Soviet cities on Revolution Day, but this was the first time they took to the streets of Moscow on the holiday.

In the southern republic of Moldavia, police beat people in a crowd of thousands that gathered near a monument to national hero King Stephen the Great, Yuri Rozhgo, a spokesman for the Moldavian People's Front organization said in a telephone call from Kishinev, the republic's capital.

More were beaten when police dispersed a crowd of a couple hundred People's Front supporters on Lenin Prospekt a couple of hours later, he said.

Officials canceled the military part of the parade. Thousands of People's Front supporters marched the parade route with slogans condemning the police and the republic's leadership, Rozhgo said.

In Red Square, the traditional parade of tanks, troops, and banner-waving marchers selected by their workplaces passed through on schedule.

It was broadcast on state-run television, which made no reference to the unofficial march.

Gorbachev, acknowledging the country's troubles in an informal television interview during the ceremonies, said abandonment of the old system of central control without installing a new system has resulted in "a loss or weakening of control."

But to go back would be "the greatest mistake," he said, calling instead for faster movement toward a new economic order. He gave few details, but progressives have recently criticized the regime for half-measures that they say only make matters worse.

Bush Says He May Veto Aid Proposal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush said today he will veto a $14.4 billion foreign aid bill if Congress insists on including a provision authorizing a U.S. contribution to a United Nations' family planning agency.

"They are asking me to accept things I cannot accept," Bush said in response to a question at a White House news conference.

He said he could not approve the use of U.S. tax dollars for programs that require abortions in such overpopulated countries as China.

House and Senate negotiators, continuing work on a foreign aid bill, agreed Monday on the provision involving family planning efforts through the auspices of the U.N.

As they worked through a long list of disagreements, conferees for the two sides agreed to accept Senate language that would reverse a five-year policy and send $15 million to the U.N. Population Fund in fiscal 1990.

Bush, under pressure from anti-abortion groups, had said earlier that he would veto the bill if it included money for the Population Fund. The agency carries on programs in China, where its opponents say severe official restrictions on family size have led to forced abortions and sterilizations.

The House conferees voted 8-3 to accept the Senate-passed provision, sponsored by Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., that also stipulated none of the money could go directly into programs in China.

Administration officials said late Monday they believed the provision giving money to the U.N. agency still could be overturned when a compromise bill goes back to the House floor for final approval.

The negotiators hoped to complete work on the measure on Wednesday and send it back to both chambers for approval.

The aid for Eastern Europe included $200 million towards a $1 billion international fund to stabilize Poland's economy, and money to set up private sector development programs of $45 million in Poland and $5 million in Hungary.

A series of smaller initiatives would promote environmental cleanups in both countries, educational and cultural exchanges, Peace Corps activities and the efforts of union and other groups to promote democratic change.

In addition, the bill would make available $200 million to guarantee payment for U.S. exports to Poland and $40 million in risk insurance for U.S. commercial ventures through the Overseas Private Investment Corp. Because of questions about Poland's credit worthiness, it is unclear whether those funds will be tapped.

Both countries have been on the forefront of changes sweeping Eastern Europe, the result of failing economies under communism and of Moscow's looser grip. Poland this year elected its first non-communist government in four decades and Hungary has torn down border fences that form its part of the Iron Curtain.

The conference committee also agreed to put $125 million into new military, intelligence and law enforcement efforts in the war on drugs in Colombia, Peru and Bolivia.

BALTIMORE — Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk of Cincinnati, a social and theological moderate, was elected president today of the nation's Roman Catholic bishops.

Pilarczyk, vice president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops since 1986, was elected on the first ballot to succeed Archbishop John May of St. Louis, who also is considered a moderate. The vote came at the bishops' fall meeting.

The 55-year-old Pilarczyk enjoys support among both the liberal and conservative camps of the bishops' conference.

On Monday, the leaders of the 53 million-member church opened their meeting by plunging into the abortion debate and urging their flock to dig a little deeper to support church programs.

Archbishop May issued a rallying cry against abortion in his opening address, calling it an issue "where clear-cut moral principle stands tall above all else."

Church leaders were scheduled to vote today on a policy statement that says Catholics should "give urgent attention and priority to this issue" in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling giving states more authority to regulate abortion.

"In my judgment, we're at a turning point in the country," said Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, a member of the bishops' Committee for Pro-Life Activities.

The bishops today also were to vote on a proposal to have laymen lead Sunday services without priests. The measure was prompted by a severe shortage of clergy.

In electing Pilarczyk, the conference held to a tradition in which no vice president who has sought the top spot has been turned down.

Pilarczyk said in an interview that the most important social issues facing the church include the "life issue" of abortion and euthanasia and economic issues such as Third World debt and the rights of unions.

The new conference president also said there is room for flexibility in seeking legislation that does not entirely conform to church teaching.

"There is a difference between law and sin," he said. "Things which in law are tolerable may nevertheless be morally intolerable."

For example, he said if the question was whether he would support tolerating a law allowing abortion for rape and incest victims for the greater good of prohibiting other abortions, "the answer is probably yes."

Pilarczyk was appointed auxiliary bishop of Cincinnati in 1974 and archbishop in 1982 after Cardinal Joseph Bernardin left for the Archdiocese of Chicago.

With a study showing Catholics contribute 40 percent less of their income than members of other churches, the bishops on Monday also ordered work to begin on a pastoral letter on church giving.

Shuttle Mission Planned

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Discovery will lift off after dark Nov. 20 on a secret military mission, NASA announced today.

The space agency said after a two-day readiness review that launch would occur between 6:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m., the third night liftoff in 32 shuttle missions.

Because Discovery's payload is classified, the Pentagon and NASA will not announce the precise launch time until nine minutes before liftoff to make it harder for Soviet reconnaissance ships sitting offshore to track the shuttle.

Sources close to the project, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the payload is a $300 million, 2½-ton satellite for monitoring Soviet missile tests and eavesdropping on military and diplomatic communications. Discovery launched a similar satellite in 1985.

Field Worker Hits The Street To Find Homeless

By Valerie Meehan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Sixty-nine-year-old Jeannie sits in a corner of a public restroom where she spends her days, perched on a garbage bag of belongings. Today her concern is her towel. "I wasted two hours this morning looking for that towel. I looked through that bag 10 times."

"Did you look on the side? Sometimes things fall on the side and you can't see it," said Patricia Betch, kneeling on the cement floor.

Betch, a Social Security field representative, has been trying since spring to persuade the thin woman with fluffy white hair to apply for benefits.

Jeannie digresses, worried about the dead bird she found while sleeping in the doorway of Broadway Market in the historic Fells Point district.

"I think people leave their windows open a little bit. I think they fly into some people's windows at night to sleep," Jeannie said.

"That's what you'd like to do, isn't it Jeannie?" asked Kathy Lorenzo, a psychiatric outreach worker for Health Care for the Homeless and Betch's partner. "Why don't you let me find you a room?"

Jeannie refuses politely.

Lorenzo and Betch leave, and Jeannie shouts a thank you for the gifts she had avowed no need for: peanut butter-and-jelly sandwiches, shirts, a jacket.

"You have to work so hard with these people to win their trust. Jeannie is afraid she's signing admission papers" for a mental hospital, Betch said.

The Social Security Administration has hit the streets in Baltimore, seeking homeless people in alleys, restrooms and parks under a new directive to reach out to the homeless. It's the only SSA office with such a program.

Lorenzo called Betch last spring to ask her to take an application from a homeless person who wouldn't go into a building. The two became a team, making their rounds each Wednesday, distributing sandwiches, clothing and friendship.

"I decided to go out there because the need was so great. Something had to be done here," Betch said, noting that 46 percent of Maryland's 4,220 homeless live in Baltimore. Statewide, 2,200 shelter and transitional housing beds are available, leaving half without a roof over their head at night.

"They're really afraid to go into any building. They've been out on the street so long that that's more relaxing to them."

Betch set up an advisory board of officials from 18 agencies, including shelters, soup kitchens, legal aid and the mayor's office. Office hours are at the Baltimore Rescue Mission on Wednesday evenings so people can find her.

Mayor Kurt Schmoke wants a state worker to accompany Lorenzo and Betch; many people who aren't eligible for Social Security will qualify for welfare.

If Lorenzo can persuade the homeless to visit her clinic and a psychiatrist judges them unable to hold a job for at least a year, they qualify for $368 in Supplemental Security Income, plus free medical care. Conditions that qualify include alcoholism, mental illness, drug addiction and physical disabilities.

"It's hard to prove a disability if you have no medical records," Betch said. "I'm not a (medical) professional but I can tell they're sick."

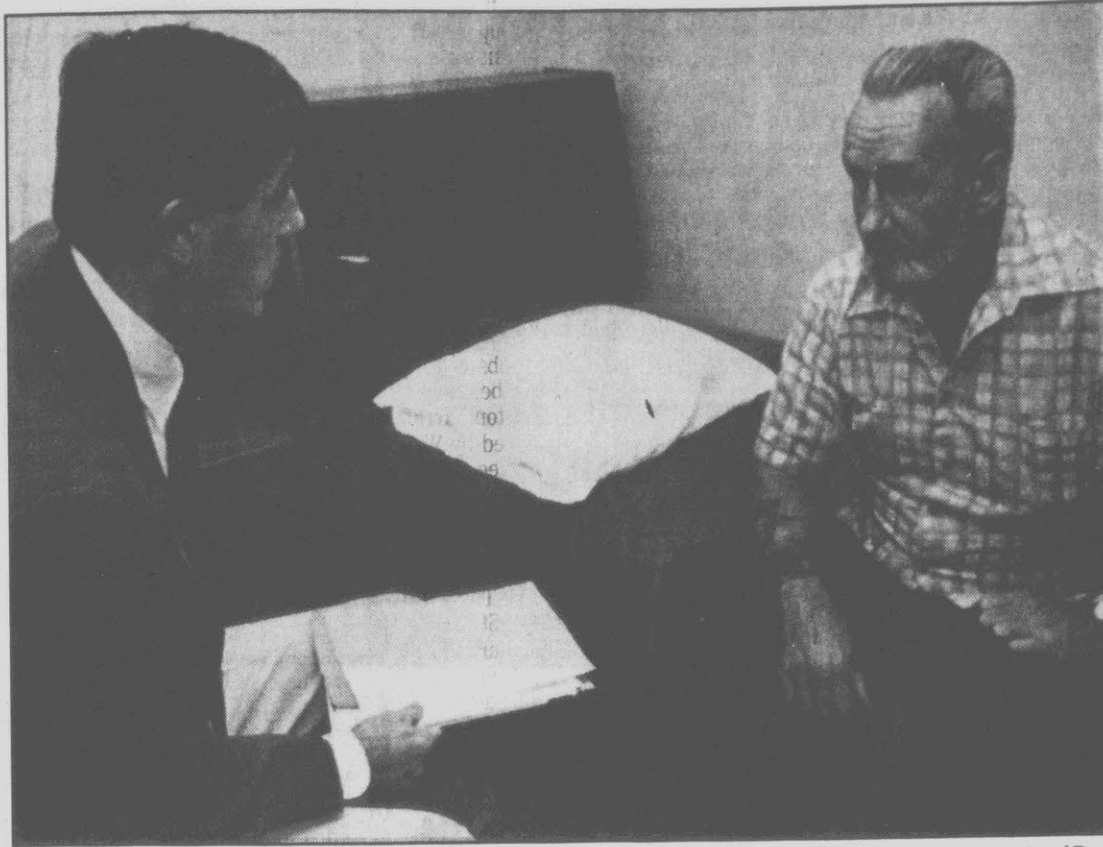

Many are old enough to get Social Security retirement benefits, requiring only proof of age and an address—but many refuse to apply.

Since April, Betch has persuaded nine people to apply for benefits, a figure she considers good. "They'll take a sandwich from you. They'll bid you good day, but until they know you ... they have to want to file."

Six were denied and must reapply, she said.

Walter is one of those Betch is trying to convince. A gentle man with bright brown eyes, at 62 he qualifies for retirement benefits. But he won't leave a square-block area that includes the Baltimore Rescue Mission and the park square where he and about 10 other men spend the day on benches.

Since they began making their rounds in April, Betch said, some shelters and soup kitchens have agreed to be mailing addresses.

The Associated Press

Social Security agent James Keeler discusses problems with Carl Hofmann

Many agencies don't want to attract hoodlums and drug addicts who prey on Social Security recipients and won't allow checks to be mailed to them. But with an address, a homeless person can receive the check and open a direct deposit account at a bank.

As they part for the day, Lorenzo is plotting where she can find a room for Jeannie for the winter. Betch says a congressional aide has Jean-nie's power of attorney; maybe the aide can sign the application form.

"I'd hate to find her frozen to death," Lorenzo said. "When you're out on the street, that's your last bid. You either go up, or you die."

Nobody Read Student's Signs

Dear Abby: Regarding the woman who had a scar on her wrist from having a ganglion tumor surgically removed: She became angry when, during a routine physical, a new doctor asked her if she had attempted suicide. Instead of being angry, she should have thanked that doctor for his loving concern.

During my entire junior year in high school, I had fresh gashes on my wrists. I was depressed over the loss of a friend and confused about my identity. Having been adopted, I wondered why my birth mother had thrown me away.

My band teacher, who positioned my hands on the flute, pretended not to notice the cuts on my wrists. My mother accused me of injecting drugs. My English teacher never asked me why all my compositions were about death and suicide. My chemistry teacher never noticed that I had lists of poisons on my notebooks.

Finally, some good, caring friends took me to a counselor who backed me into a corner and yelled, "What is wrong with you?"

To make a long story short, I was sent to an adolescent psychiatric facility, put in a padded cell and tested. They found that I had a biochemical imbalance. I was treated with anti-depressant drugs and psychotherapy, which partially solved my problem.

The point I really want to make is this: All the signs were there to read, but nobody wanted to read them.

Thanks, Abby, for letting me "talk" to you. I feel better now. Sign me ... Jane Doe

Dear Abby: I was very disappointed in your reply to "Cherie Morrison" regarding the benefits of moderate wine consumption. What you presented in your reply was not "the truth" (as you claimed), but rather a selected opinion of the results of some study.

For every expert opinion or study that you can cite to support your "truth," I can provide an opinion of a respected medical professional or a "study" asserting the opposite view.

The truth, Abby, is that there is substantial medical evidence that wine is healthful if taken in moderation. Even the most pessimistic interpretation of what is known about the consumption of wine would conclude that wine in moderation is not harmful to most individuals, and may indeed be beneficial.

You commit a grave journalistic sin, Miss Van Buren, when you confuse "opinion" with "the truth." — J.D. Kronman (Who Enjoys Wine With Dinner Every Day)

Dear Mr. Kronman: I have no problem with the consumption of wine if used in moderation. It's the abuse of wine I take exception to.

Dear Abby: Regarding the wishes of the woman who wanted to be buried next to her mother: She should put her wishes in writing in her will, so when the time comes, there will be no question about it. — Kate D.R. In St. Pete's Fla.

Dear Kate: Wills are almost always read after the funeral; instructions concerning one's burial should be given to family members well in advance of the funeral.

Her Time Slipped Away

Editor's Note: Erma Bombeck is on a two-week vacation. This Best of Bombeck release originally appeared Feb. 6, 1986.

You'll pardon me if I don't have a clever beginning to this column. I don't have time.

There are 24 hours in every day. I used to watch television six hours and 44 minutes a day, leaving me with 17 hours and 16 minutes.

After I scheduled seven hours and five minutes to sleep and two hours and 15 minutes to eat, I was left with only seven hours and 56 minutes to write.

Then we got cable television, and what with the news channel, first-run movies, MTV, country-Western, spiritual, entertainment and sports, my viewing cut into my workday. Then my husband said, "While you're watching that channel, you're missing a good show on the other channel," so we bought a VCR so we could tape one show and watch another.

But when do you watch the shows you've taped? So I took time away from my two hours and 15 minutes eating time and ate in front of the TV set.

Naturally, we began to buy cassettes to fit the VCR. I bought Jane Fonda so I could get my body in shape. However, I had to take time away from my seven hours and five minutes of sleeping time to do it.

At Wits End

On my birthday, a son rented two movies as a present. I panicked. They had to be viewed by 10 a.m. the next morning. Already I had a stack of taped shows that I hadn't had time to view. I put the movies ahead of the tapes, rescheduled Jane Fonda for 4 a.m., and watched "Terms of Endearment" and "Easy Money" at 5 and 7 a.m. It was close, but I made it.

Other scheduling problems were not so easily resolved. Before dinner one night, I approached the VCR with my Julia Child cassette. My husband was watching Dan Rather. When I asked him to watch Dan in the bedroom, he said it wouldn't do any good, as he was taping a "M A S H" rerun on the other channel. I went into the kitchen, turned on another set and watched "Wheel of Fortune." We didn't eat until 9:30 in front of "Hill Street Blues."

As the weeks go on, I feel the pressure more and more. With the VCR taping shows day and night, with my husband running from room to room, channel-searching to see what we're missing, with the new cassettes on everything from how to repair your plumbing to how to be more assertive, the new films and video music, we're falling behind.

We're beginning to cut corners. We've got "60 Minutes" down to 30, "20/20" down to 10/10, and anything on World War II we fast-forward because we know the ending.

The other morning my husband said, "You know, with a satellite dish, we could probably pull in another hundred or so channels."

Would you mind writing your own ending to this column? Mine isn't pretty.

Braniff Halts All Flights

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. — Cash-starved Braniff Inc. suspended all regular passenger flights overnight, jeopardizing some 1,800 jobs and angering employees who had stuck with the airline through two bankruptcy proceedings.

"These people that bought Braniff, they need to be put on trial by Braniff employees and taken out for a public flogging," Leo Bailey, a laid-off customer service agent, said when he heard the news in Kansas City, Mo.

In a statement issued at midnight, Braniff said the action was taken to preserve assets while a reorganization plan is developed and a sale of the airline is considered.

There were no immediate reports of passengers being stranded by the suspension of Braniff's 46 daily passenger flights.

The company advised ticketholders to check if other airlines would honor the tickets. People who bought tickets with a credit card were told to consult with the card company, and those who purchased tickets with cash or a check after Sept. 28 were given a toll-free number to call for a refund.

The suspension of flights after came as a surprise to many of the employees who remained with the airline after it filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code Sept. 28 for the second time.

Braniff didn't address the possibility of layoffs other than to say employees would be notified of their status, a prospect that left union officials frustrated.

BIA Acquisitions, an investor group formed by PaineWebber Inc., bought Braniff in June for about $100 million and became the airline's third owner since its 1982 bankruptcy reorganization.

CT&T Units Win Quality Awards

By Frances Horton Arrington
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two groups from the commercial department at Carolina Telephone's Greenville office won awards last week during the company's annual quality circle conference.

A quality circle called CATS received the Award of Excellence for troubleshooting done during the past year and a C.O.S.T. circle received an Outstanding Circle award for its efforts.

In the firm's eastern North Carolina offices, 102 quality circles consisting of about 10 employees each are given time and resources to identify, analyze and solve problems in their work areas, according to Gary Owens, assistant vice president of human resources at CT&T.

The groups were recognized in special ceremonies when about 1,400 company employees came to Greenville for the conference.

Two other groups — J.A.W.S. of the distribution department in the company's Jacksonville office and TTL Investigators of the network switching department in Clinton — also received Outstanding Circle designations.

Carolina Telephone makes cash contributions to noted causes on behalf of each of the winning circles. A $500 donation is given for the excellence award and $250 for each outstanding circle award.

Three quality circles were also recognized for exhibits members prepared on work-related problems that the groups had identified and solved during the past year.

The Washington (N.C.) Originals won first place, The Motivators of Tarboro earned second place and the A-Team, another Tarboro group, won third place in the exhibit competition in which 46 groups entered displays.

"Each of these projects shows how our employees participate in the day-to-day running of our business," said Wayne Peterson, president of Carolina Telephone. "Their focus is directly related to service, safety, cost reduction or increased profitability."

During the four-day conference, telephone employees met at Greenville's Hilton Inn daily for speeches and workshops on work-related topics such as priority management, positive attitudes and self-esteem.

"This was our seventh annual conference and it was the biggest and the best yet," Owens said from his Tarboro office Monday.

Owens said the telephone company's 1990 conference would likely be held in Greenville next October.

Auctions Postponed

WASHINGTON — The Treasury Department announced today it has postponed $40 billion in borrowing auctions this week because of congressional failure to raise the debt limit.

The postponement of these auctions is necessary because Congress has not completed action on legislation to increase the statutory debt limit.... the Treasury said.

The department lost its borrowing authority Oct. 31 when the debt limit fell from $2.87 trillion to $2.8 trillion.

NFLPA Reportedly Set To Disband

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — The head of the National Football League Players Association reportedly has informed team owners that the union will disband in order to take away one of the reasons cited by a court in denying a union antitrust suit against the NFL.

In a letter which The Boston Globe reported was sent to the NFL Management Council, NFLPA executive director Gene Upshaw wrote: "The NFLPA Executive Committee has voted to abandon bargaining rights and begin the decertification process. This action was made necessary by the Eighth Circuit's decision, which purports to extend the NFLPA's labor exemption to your illegal activities.

"We did not form our union to allow you to illegally restrain trade in the market for player services. The players would rather protect their rights as independent contractors than to subject themselves to the monopolistic whims of the NFL and its clubs."

Sitting in St. Louis, the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals last week ruled that NFL owners were not in violation of antitrust laws simply because of an impasse in negotiations between the union and management.

At that time, NFLPA counsel Dick Berthelsen suggested decertification, saying: "This decision appears to say that as long as there is an ongoing relationship between players and the league, players can't challenge restrictions, as there was in the past."

The owners had appealed another federal court ruling that stated there was an impasse between the players and owners and an early 1990 date was set for a full trial on the matter. The players association had argued that their five-year agreement with the owners expired in 1987 and therefore the free agency system employed by the league violated antitrust laws.

The players reportedly have to vote of the union's decertification, a process the newspaper said could take about three months. The union assumes, the Globe said, that once decertification is complete, every player would become a free agent at the end of his present contract, rendering as illegal the college draft, the waiver system and the Plan B form of free agency.

Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, said the owners would "have to wait to see how genuine" the decertification move is.

"Are they saying this is some new kind of strategy, or do they really mean it?" Donlan said. "Either way, we will find a way to deal with it."

"None of us would like to see the union go out of business," Donlan said. "They certainly wouldn't be doing what is right for their players, who would lose all of their benefits."

If the union folds, the newspaper said, the players would lose about $50,000 a year in health and life insurance and pension benefits.

Moseby Joins Free Agents

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Some players file for free agency to enhance their negotiating position with their own teams. Lloyd Moseby filed because he may want to leave the Toronto Blue Jays.

Moseby, Toronto's starting center fielder since 1980, has been told to check the market. Pat Gillick, the Blue Jays' vice president for baseball operations, made his position clear.

"They've told us if he does come back, it could be for left field, right field or DH, but it wouldn't be in center," Moseby's agent, Jim Neader, said.

Moseby made $1.375 million in 1989, batting .221 with 11 homers, 43 runs batted in and 24 stolen bases. He was hitting just .199 at the All-Star break.

"Lloyd Moseby sells himself," Neader said. "Everyone knows what he can do, even though he didn't have a banner year this year. He's a well-respected player, both on and off the field, by people in major league baseball. He's a tremendous asset to the game and he's just turned 30."

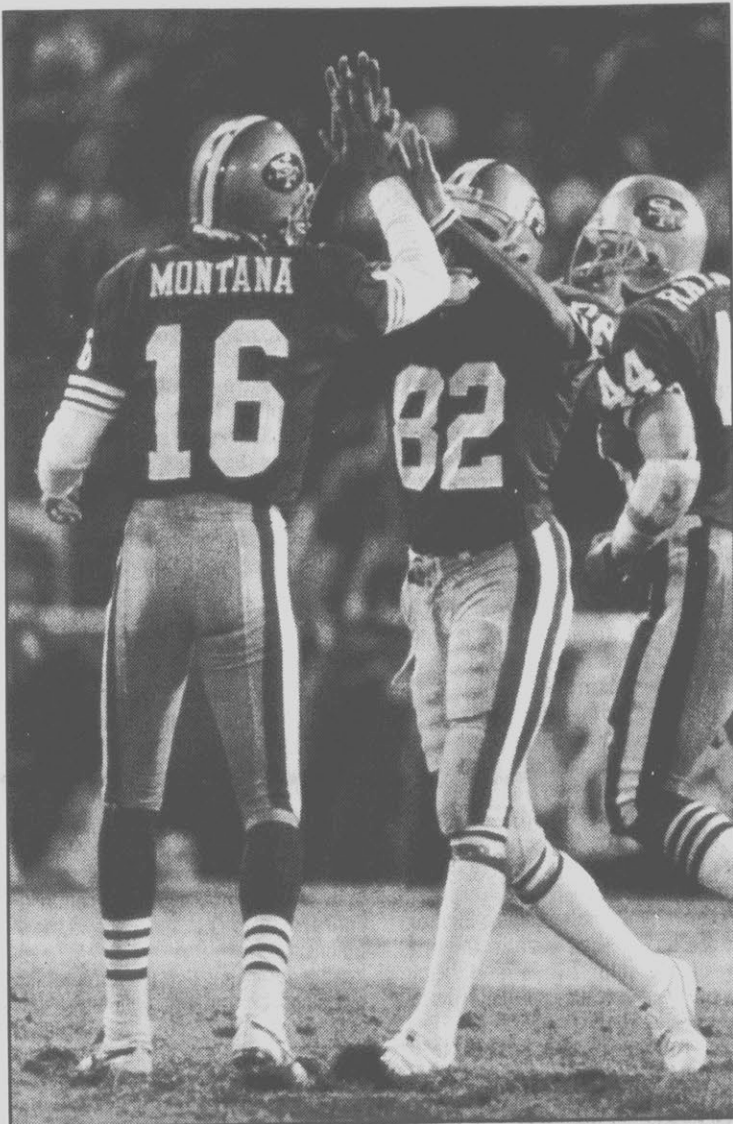

Neader said that if Moseby leaves Toronto, he would like to sign with a team that plays in a stadium with grass. The agent said that "Oakland isn't likely" but that the Los Angeles Dodgers were "a possibility."

"We won't be doing anything for a couple of weeks," Neader said. "We're going to see who calls. We're not making the calls."

Neader said Moseby hasn't ruled out playing in Japan. Moseby's friend and former teammate, Willie Upshaw, played in Japan this year.

Also filing for free agency on Monday were California right-hander Dan Petry, Detroit outfielder Fred Lynn, Cincinnati catcher Bo Diaz, Montreal second baseman Damaso Garcia, and left-hander Bob Knepper and third baseman Ken Oberkell of the National League champion San Francisco Giants.

Seventy-five players have filed and approximately three dozen more are eligible to file before the Nov. 13 deadline. Knepper and Oberkell increased to nine the number of free agents from the Giants, the most from any team. The World Series champion Oakland Athletics, the Boston Red Sox and the Houston Astros are next with six each.

Joe Montana and John Taylor celebrate a touchdown

49ers Pound New Orleans

Win Takes Guess Work Out Of NFC West Title Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — After two months of grumbling about sloppy victories, the perfection-minded San Francisco 49ers finally got one that both team and fans could enjoy.

Now the team of the '80s may have to wait until the '90s — playoff time — for its next truly meaningful game. A Joe Montana-led 31-13 pummeling of New Orleans Monday night turned the Saints and the rest of the NFC West into also-rans with seven games remaining.

"We feel particularly good about this game," George Seifert said after winning his first game at Candlestick Park as the 49ers' coach. "I would think that up to this point it's our best game of the season."

It couldn't have come at a worse time for the Saints (4-5), who were riding a three-game winning streak and harbored hopes of getting back into the divisional race. Now they're still a game behind the second-place Los Angeles Rams and in increasing trouble in the jostling for a wild-card berth, too.

"That was a pretty good butt-kicking tonight," New Orleans coach Jim Mora said. "It was a combination of them being on their game and us not playing well at all."

"We didn't cover. We didn't tackle. We looked like we were in a daze on defense."

San Francisco's performance tackled a few of its season-long concerns head-on.

The inconsistent offensive line played its best game of the year. The puzzling home-field "disadvantage" — the 49ers have been better on the road than at home every year but one (1986) in the last eight — never materialized. Most of all, Montana passed and scrambled like anything but a 33-year-old quarterback recovering from a left knee sprain and an injured elbow.

The last time he played, he left the field on a stretcher during an Oct. 22 victory over New England at Stanford. This time he left the Saints' defense staggering, picking it apart with mostly short passes as he completed his first 11 throws in a 223-yard, three-touchdown first half.

Former 49ers receiver and close friend Dwight Clark said later that Montana is still hurting but has decided to keep his ailments to himself so he can play. Some of his teammates, however, aren't fooled.

"Joe was playing with a sore knee," running back Roger Craig said. "It's not the first time he's played hurt. He's like a Green Beret out there. He'll do whatever it takes to win."

Montana found a familiar target, Jerry Rice, for touchdown passes of 32 and two yards and John Taylor for 45 yards to make it 21-10 with 1:32 left in the first half. He barreled around the right side and dove into the end zone for the 3-yard clincher in the fourth period, spiking the ball jubilantly.

He even managed to escape unscathed from the Saints' aggressive defense, which had recorded 17 sacks in three weeks since last losing on Oct. 8, when Montana's three three touchdown passes. New Orleans was burned by big plays in that game, and this time Montana threw underneath the soft coverage instead of going deep.

"Joe knows his first, second and third receivers," Saints linebacker Sam Mills said. "It's almost impossible to put pressure on him."

Because of all his injuries, Montana hasn't gone a season without missing at least one start since 1983. But he still frets about layoffs, especially knowing that the capable Steve Young is trying to take his job.

"I told (wife) Jennifer it scared me having a week off," Montana said. "Practice is so different than any type of game situation you can be in. She was more confident than I was."

Sheppard Endures Lost Year To Get To Clemson

By Tom Morris

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Everything seemed to be going according to plan for Ashley Sheppard in the late summer of 1988.

He had completed high school at North Pitt and was looking forward to playing football at Clemson that fall. In late July, he joined fellow Clemson signee Chester McGlockton at the East-West All-Star game and led a dominating defense that helped the East to a 32-3 win over the West.

Then came the bad news. Sheppard had not qualified academically, and Clemson's administration decided the school would not accept partial academic qualifiers. So instead, Sheppard ended up at Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia in a change of plans that wasn't quite what he had in mind.

"No it wasn't, but it paid off,"

Sheppard said after helping the Tigers roll over North Carolina, 35-3, Saturday. "I'm glad I had that opportunity. I wouldn't trade it for anything in the world. It helped me get to Clemson."

And now that he's there, Sheppard is trying to make the most of it.

He is a second-team outside linebacker behind Levon Kirkland, but has also been a key part of the Tigers' special teams and some of their situation defenses.

During his high school days, he was a four-year starter for North Pitt at tight end and linebacker, leading his team to three straight playoff berths.

Sitting out is about the only road-block Sheppard ever faced that slowed him down. But, he endured the extra year of college preparatory work.

His sister, Virginia Ellison, kept him going when times got tough.

Bobbie Garrenton, a North Pitt teacher, also was there for Sheppard. She made the long trip to Fork Union more than a few times last fall.

"They stuck behind me and gave me a lot of support," Sheppard said.

He also got an earful from McGlockton and some of the other Clemson players he had met during his visits to the Tigers' campus.

"They told me, 'Just do well and get those scores in, we want you down here in the program.' That's what I did," he said. "It's going well now, but there's a lot of room for improvement, as usual."

Sheppard wasn't alone in his plight, though. Fellow Clemson signee Tyrone Simpson, a defensive lineman from Rock Hill who is now Sheppard's roommate, was in the same situation and joined him at Fork Union.

Without the benefit of a spring practice, Sheppard has moved steadily up the depth chart to compete for playing time with veterans like Kirkland, John Johnson and Wayne Simmons.

"He's doing well," Clemson assistant coach Les Herrin said. "He's going to be a very good football player. The thing right now is it takes some time to catch up with the schemes."

"There are certain things you have to do at outside linebacker where you have to be able to rush the passer and drop back in coverage. He's just got to learn those things. We think big things are in store for him. He's tough and hard-nosed. He'll knock your head off."

That's always been a trademark of Sheppard's.

As a high school senior, Sheppard was 6-4, about 215 pounds and lethal to most of the people he played against.

He's grown to 6-5 and 240 pounds

now. At one point this past summer, there was talk of playing him in the defensive line when his weight moved above 250. But Sheppard dieted and is back at the position he'd rather play.

Still, with a program as deep as Clemson's, the competition for playing time has been tough.

"I kind of knew what I was getting myself into," Sheppard said. "Levon, Wayne and John are great players. I figure I can learn from them. When they leave I can play."

Clemson is 8-2 overall and 5-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Two early losses spoiled the Tigers' chances for a fourth straight ACC title, leaving them only dim hopes of being co-champs if Maryland upsets Virginia.

But they are still in the thick of the bowl picture.

Steele, Pirates Battling Perceptions

Recruiting Has Been A Battle To Change Attitudes

By Tom Morris

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Recruiting basketball players at East Carolina has been a battle of perceptions for Pirate coach Mike Steele.

He has had to fight the image of East Carolina as a football-first school. And that's not easy in a state that's basketball crazy.

"The biggest surprise for me was the attitude or perception of East Carolina and East Carolina basketball in this part of the state," Steele said. "I was really surprised. It was very negative. I don't know all the reasons why. It doesn't make any difference."

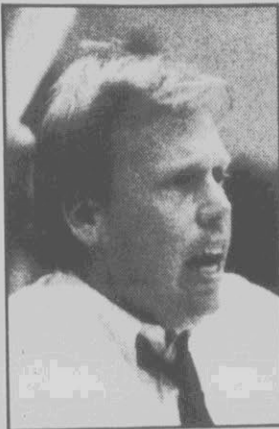

The early signing period begins Wednesday and lasts through Nov. 15. After that, coaches have to wait until early spring (—) to sign more players.

Steele's task has been complicated by losing his top assistant coach after one season and a restructuring of his staff.

But even the best staff could have trouble recruiting high school basketball players to ECU who have grown up in a state where basketball is synonymous with the Atlantic Coast Conference.

There are also improving Division I programs at UNC-Charlotte, UNC-Wilmington, Appalachian State, Western Carolina and Campbell.

"I just don't think there was many times when we were recruiting somebody a year ago in this part in this state where they were saying, 'You're going to go to East Carolina? Boy, that would be a great place to go play basketball,'" Steele said.

Mike Steele

"That's really hurt us and it's something we've really had to work to overcome. I don't think we're there yet."

Steele obviously hopes success will build success. The Pirates have had little basketball success in the past and, as a result, little or no history to build upon.

From his original recruiting class, Steele has only 6-5 center Stanley Love still on the roster.

But the program has made strides. Following an 8-20 mark that first year, ECU rebounded with 15-14 record last season, thanks in large part to the efforts of Blue Edwards, now a rookie with the Utah Jazz.

"Because we had a winning season and because of Blue being on TV and getting drafted, it's much more positive," Steele said.

ECU had its strongest recruiting class of Steele's tenure last year, despite losing two players, junior college transfer Jon Hardin and freshman D.J. Morgan to grade problems.

ECU signed a center in 6-8 Ike Copeland, along with 6-7 forward Tim Brown, 6-6 forward Darrell Overton and guards Jeff Whitaker (6-3), Taro Knight (6-3), Paul Childress (5-9) and Steve Richardson (6-3).

"It's unfortunate for us that D.J. Morgan didn't make it academically," Steele said. "That would have given us four freshmen in four different spots, all four good kids. You need to have that kind of class two or three years in a row."

Hardin's problems with the books were evident right away, and ECU recognized that soon enough to land Brown.

Morgan's difficulties were unexpected. He had missed some time early in his high school career due to an illness, and his academic shortcomings didn't come through until late this summer.

Another ECU recruiting target last year was Tim Shaw, a 6-5 swingman from Fayetteville South View.

Shaw was reportedly set to sign with Wake Forest until the resignation of

(See STEELE, B-3)

The following is a list of ECU basketball coach Mike Steele's three recruiting classes and the status of those players now.

First Class:
•Stanley Love, a 6-5 center, is the only player left from the initial recruiting class. He has started on and off at center since his freshman year.
•Kenny Murphy, a 6-3 walk-on, should also be included in this class. He joined the program that first season and was a starter from the first game on. He is now a graduate assistant with the program.
•Dominique Martin, a junior college transfer, left with academic problems after one season.

•Mark Lacy, a 6-5 freshman, transferred to Alabama-Huntsville.
•Tehern Harvey, a 6-3 freshman, tried to transfer to Middle Tennessee State.
•Ronnie Gibbs, a 6-3 freshman, transferred to Howard.

•Jimmy Hinton, a 5-5 freshman, stayed on the squad his freshman year, splitting time as the starting point guard with Jeff Kelly. He left the team in December of 1988 over a difference in philosophy with the coaching staff.
•David Simmons, a 5-11 walk-on, didn't return to the team and is now playing at Pembroke State.

Second Class

•Brooks Bryant, a 6-9 center, played sparingly as a freshman and has been plagued by knee problems.

•Robin House, a 6-1 guard, joined the squad as a walk-on and earned a scholarship. A former Greenville Christian standout, House figures to see more playing time this season.

•Casey Mote, a 6-7 forward, was intended to be a redshirt candidate his freshman season, but depth problems ended that plan. At 180 pounds, Mote lacked the strength and bulk to compete as a freshman, but started a few games. He has added strength in the off-season and figures to see more playing time.

•Jeff Perlich, a 6-2 guard, played very little as a freshman, but shoots well from the outside and could have more of an impact this season.

•Jay Scherer, a 6-3 guard, came on strong down the stretch last season and played significantly during the CAA Tournament. He transferred to Northeastern (La.) State after the season where he is reunited with former ECU assistant Dan Bell, now the head coach there.

•Kevin Staples, a 6-5 junior college transfer, was just starting to have an impact with the team when he was removed from the team for disciplinary reasons following the alleged thefts of textbooks from a dorm room at Scott Hall. He had only one year of eligibility with the Pirates.

Third Class

•Steve Richardson, a 6-3 swingman, is an incoming freshman from Terre Haute, Ind., where he averaged 19.5 points per game for a 24-2 Terre Haute South High School team.

•Darrell Overton, a 6-6 junior college forward, comes to ECU from Craven Community College where he averaged 14 points and 12 rebounds for a 19-8 squad.

•Tim Brown, a 6-7 junior college forward, averaged 17 points and nine rebounds for Lousburg Junior College last year.

•Paul Childress, a 5-10 freshman guard from Albemarle, played and started in the East-West All-Star game after starting for three years for Albemarle.

•Ike Copeland, a 6-8 freshman center from Rocky Mount, averaged 14.5 points and 11 rebounds during his senior season.

•Taro Knight, a 6-3 junior college transfer, started for Chowan at point guard last year, averaging 7.4 points and 6.1 assists.

•Jeff Whitaker, a 6-3 guard, was a reserve at Chowan last year, averaging just under four points a game.

Overton Captures Football Contest

Buddy Overton of 1805 Drewry Lane, Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Overton correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 31 games listed on last week's contest pages. One listed game was in error and was not counted in grading the contest.

Second place went to Jay Smith of Box 936, Bethel, who picked the winners in 25 of the games. His win came on the basis of his point total guess. His guess of 89 was closest to the actual total of 91 scored in Wyoming's 56-35 win over Colorado State.

Three others also had 25 correct games. They were: Jeffrey Davis, Carriage House #6, Greenville (78); Matt Parker, 95 Bayswater Road, Winterville (77), and Katherine Wetherington, 2102 Tiffany Drive, Greenville (71).

The final contest in this year's series appears in today's edition.

ECU Teams Seventh In CAA Run

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina's cross country teams both finished seventh in the Colonial Athletic Association championship meet held this past weekend at William & Mary.

Navy captured its seventh CAA title, while ECU finished seventh for the second straight season.

ECU was led by senior Matt Schweitzer, who bettered in 1988 time but slipped from 27th to 30th place at 26 minutes, 51 seconds. James Madison's Pete Weilenmann was the individual champion in a time of 25:15, winning for the third straight year.

ECU's women were disappointed in their seventh-place finish, dropping two spots from last year. Sophomore Ann Marie Welch moved from 13th to ninth this year in 19:01.

George Mason's Lauretta Miller won the meet in 17:18, leading her team to the championship. William & Mary was the defending champion, but it was the third straight year a Mason runner had won the event.

Men's team finish and ECU individuals: 1) Navy 26; 2) William & Mary 47; 3) UNC-Wilmington 83; 4) James Madison 86; 5) Richmond 155; 6) American 183; 7) East Carolina 185; 8) George Mason 187. $230,000 Collected For Mullins

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — More than $230,000 has been collected to pay for a health care plan for University of Mississippi football player Roy Lee "Chuckie" Mullins, who was paralyzed during an Oct. 28 game against Vanderbilt, school officials announced Sunday night.

Don Fruge, vice chancellor for university affairs, said the grand total is $231,563, with $53,395 mailed in and $178,168 plus some uncounted coins donated by fans at the LSU-Mississippi game Saturday at Oxford.

Robinson, Zimmer Honored By TSN

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Frank Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles and Don Zimmer of the Chicago Cubs on Monday were named major league managers of the year by The Sporting News.

Robinson received nine of 13 votes cast by participating American League managers, the St. Louis-based publication said. Oakland's Tony LaRussa was the runner-up with three votes and Doug Rader of California received one.

Zimmer received 10 of 11 votes cast by National League managers. St. Louis' Whitey Herzog received one vote; one manager abstained.

Under Robinson's leadership, the Orioles rebounded from a club-record 107 losses last year to an 87-75 finish this season. The team's improvement of 33 more victories was the third best turnaround in league history since 1900.

Zimmer made a number of changes in his roster and in his own style of managing during the season, leading the Cubs to 93 victories and the NL East title.

Brister: Worley Needs More Carries

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

You've got to hand it to Tim Worley.

But the Pittsburgh Steelers aren't, and that makes quarterback Bobby Brister wonder why.

Worley, the Steelers' No. 1 draft pick, was held to 12 carries for 75 yards in Sunday's 34-7 loss in Denver — not by an injury, not by the Broncos' defense, but by Coach Chuck Noll.

With the Steelers trailing 13-7 early in the second half, Worley ran for 28 yards on his first three carries, then got the ball only three more times as Noll turned to fullback Merrill Hoge, who managed 17 yards on 11 carries.

Worley was the chief second-guesser three weeks ago when he got just three second-half carries after rushing for 65 first-half yards against Cincinnati, but this time Brister took the offensive in defense of Worley.

"I think he should be carrying the ball 20, 25 times a game and (I'm) sure everybody else does," Brister said. "I don't know if they're bringing him along slow. I really don't know what the deal is. Ask the coaches. I don't know."

That's exactly what reporters did Monday at Noll's weekly news conference: ask how Worley can produce the yards expected of a $3 million back when he spends so much time on the bench.

"We had 26 runs and 25 passes and that's not much offense," said Noll, whose Steelers had seven first downs to Denver's 22. "When you're not making first downs, you don't have many offensive attempts, you don't get the ball much to anybody."

Asked why Hoge, who is averaging just three yards a carry, got the ball as much as Worley, Noll said, "Statistics can give you a distorted picture. Timmy had the best game he's had all year, and we've got to keep that going ... but we've got to get everything going to make an offense click."

Worley complained after not getting the ball much against Cincinnati, but was more diplomatic Sunday.

"I can't sit here and be mad because they're not calling my number," Worley said. "I'm a team player. Obviously, Chuck knows what he's doing. He's got four Super Bowl rings and I don't."

Mack Released

Cleveland Browns running back Kevin Mack was granted probation today, permitting his release after serving one month of a six-month prison term for using cocaine.

Mack, 27, was arrested June 28 after police investigating drug activity checked a car Mack had been driving.

He was initially charged with cocaine possession, aggravated drug trafficking and possession of criminal tools. But the charges were reduced to a single count of cocaine use. Mack pleaded guilty on Aug. 30.

The maximum sentence was 18 months in prison and a $2,500 fine. On Oct. 3, McMonagle sentenced Mack to six months in prison. The sentence came as a surprise to many, including Browns officials who had just placed Mack on the team's active roster despite knee surgery Sept. 25.

McMonagle had ordered Mack to serve at the Ohio State Reformatory in Mansfield. Because of the knee surgery, Mack spent his time at the Frazer Health Center at the Orient Correctional Facility near Columbus.

Miami's Kumerow Arrested

Miami Dolphins defensive end Eric Kumerow and his sister were charged with two felony counts each of assaulting a police officer in a melee outside a sports bar, police said today.

Kumerow, sister Cheryl and a friend were arrested Sunday night after police were called following a fight inside Koz's bar, said police, who initially misidentified Cheryl Kumerow as Eric Kumerow's wife. The Kumerows, also charged with trespassing, were released Sunday night after posting bond.

The felony of assaulting a police officer carries a possible maximum sentence of five years' imprisonment with conviction.

Officials of the National Football League club, which made Kumerow a first-round draft choice from Ohio State in 1988, weren't immediately available for comment.

Police who found the group outside the bar "described them all as being drunk," said Fort Lauderdale Police spokesman Ott Cefkin. The 6-foot-7, 268-pound Kumerow punched one officer twice, Cefkin said.

The Kumerows reportedly were asked to leave Koz's after a fight and were in the parking lot at about 10:40 p.m. EST when police arrived and found them "highly agitated," Cefkin said. The bar's namesake is former Dolphins' safety Mike Kozlowski.

Their friend, Robert Sean Skelton, 24, of Chicago, had been in the middle of the fight inside and began kicking one of the police officers, Cefkin said.

The Kumerows also battled the officers, Cefkin said. Kumerow was hit with a nightstick but wasn't badly hurt, he said.

The officers "were banged-up some" but didn't require hospital treatment, Cefkin said. The arrests were made after more officers arrived, police said.

Another Duke-State Air Show Expected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When Duke takes on North Carolina State on Saturday the Blue Devils say they want to maintain their ability to run up the score against the Wolfpack. But they hope this time they'll win the game.

In the past two seasons Duke has been unable to score a victory, even with a combined 88 points against N.C. State.

Last year the Wolfpack took advantage of a controversial penalty to kick a field goal on the last play of a 43-43 game. In 1987, N.C. State rallied from a 17-point deficit for a 47-45 victory, the margin again coming on a last-minute field goal.

Spurrier said he was not sure if quarterback Billy Ray would be available to play Saturday.

"Billy Ray has still got a bum shoulder. I'm hoping he'll be 90 percent by the weekend. We'll just have to wait and see," he said.

If Ray is unable to play, Spurrier will once again hand the reins to sophomore quarterback David Brown. Against Wake Forest, Brown completed 24 of 36 passes for 444 yards and four touchdowns.

Sheridan Wants QB Back

Expecting an air attack when they face Duke on Saturday, North Carolina State coach Dick Sheridan is hopeful his artilleryman is back on the field for the contest.

Sheridan said quarterback Shane Montgomery, who suffered a slight concussion during the first drive in the Wolfpack's 20-9 loss to No. 18 Virginia last week.

Sheridan said Montgomery is considered "hopefully probable" for the Duke game.

"He was feeling pretty good last night," Sheridan said Monday during his weekly news conference. "There is a better-than-average chance he'll play."

Both teams have high hopes riding on Saturday's game. A victory over the Wolfpack would ensure at least a tie for the conference title for Duke and high chances for a bowl bid.

Sheridan said the Wolfpack's goal of winning the league crown has been altered because of the loss to Virginia, but the Wolfpack still looks for a bowl invitation.

"All our concentration was on trying to win the conference championship," Sheridan said, but a bowl bid is "really the only goal we have left."

Rest Time For Tigers

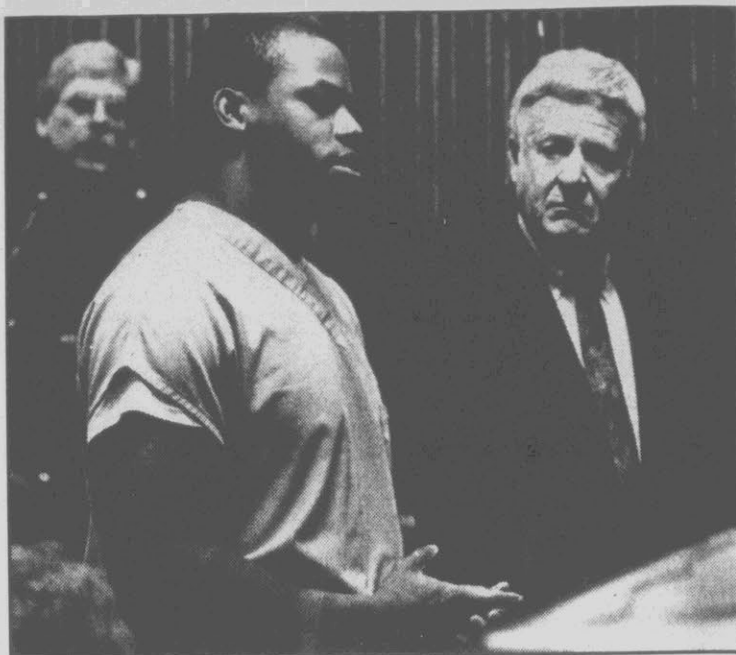

With an open date this week, coach Danny Ford has given the 17th-ranked Tigers three days off to relax and recuperate from the bumps and bruises of 10 straight weeks of games, which were preceded by four weeks of preseason practice.

Clemson is coming off a 35-3 victory over North Carolina in Chapel Hill on Saturday, in which the Tigers came away with one newly injured starter. Fullback Wesley McFadden hurt his knee and underwent arthroscopic surgery Sunday at Oconee Memorial Hospital. Surgeon Dr. Larry Bowman said he found no ligament damage.

McFadden, a senior, had started all 10 games for the Tigers at fullback. His status for the Nov. 18 game against South Carolina will be determined Wednesday, officials said.

Lion Uses Racial Slur

Houston Oilers defensive end Sean Jones said Detroit guard Eric Andolsek made a racial remark toward him during the fourth quarter of Sunday's 35-31 Houston victory at the Astrodome.

"In the fourth quarter, he called me a nigger," Jones said. "He said, 'Come on you ... nigger.' I've been called everything in the book since I've been playing football, but nobody's ever called me that."

"There are Westmorelands all over the place."

Jones was referring to a racial slur made by Houston City Councilman Jim Westmoreland, who drew criticism for his recent comments about renaming Intercontinental Airport "Nigger International," a job at proponents of a name change to honor the late Rep. Mickey Leland.

"Yeah, I called him that, but it's not a racial remark," said Andolsek, who is white. "You get upset out there, and words come out of your mouth you don't really mean to say. I have nothing against the opposite race. You know, any color. I guess he took it the wrong way."

When informed that Andolsek acknowledged making the remark, Jones said, "That just shows how ignorant he is."

Added Jones, "I've played against rednecks before, but nobody's ever called me that. You know, I don't even know the guy's name, just his number. After doing something like that, he doesn't even deserve to have a name."

Andolsek said Jones was overreacting.

"Stuff happens, you know. That's just the first thing that came out of my mouth," Andolsek said.

O'Brien-Eason In News

Lately, Ken O'Brien has been asked more questions about another quarterback, his pal Tony Eason, than about himself.

Until Sunday's 27-26 victory over the New England Patriots, who cut Eason last week before he was claimed by the Jets, O'Brien didn't seem to belong in the spotlight, anyway.

But the end of a five-game slide is just where O'Brien would like the focus to be. Forget about Eason, who hasn't reported to the Jets because, he says, he values his friendship with O'Brien too much to be placed in competition with him. O'Brien wants questions about his best game of the season — indeed, one of his few good performances of 1989.

"It's about time we won," said O'Brien, who completed 22 of 29 passes for 386 yards and two touchdowns, was not intercepted and sacked just twice. "It's a lot nicer than the last few weeks."

"You have to see the good things you did and then you know what you're talking about as far as the things we were not doing. You see it in action and it confirms that you can still get the job done."

"What we can't afford to do is get up in the clouds about this. This is part of the answer. It doesn't mean anything if we don't play well the rest of the year."

O'Brien hasn't played well most of the year. Throughout his seven-year career, he has been a safe passer, rarely being picked off. Only when he has slumped, particularly late in seasons when he is banged up, do the interceptions come.

touchdowns, was chosen receiver of the week. Hines had a 76-yard touchdown reception on the first play of Duke's 52-35 ACC victory over Wake Forest on Saturday and was later involved in a completion that was 97 yards long — the longest play from scrimmage in the school's history.

Senior Blue Devil tackle Chris Port was chosen offensive lineman for grading out at 92 percent and giving up no sacks. It was the ninth straight week Port was over 90 percent in his grade.

Duke sophomore quarterback Dave Brown was pressed into a starting role because of an injury to Billy Ray, and Brown completed 24 of 36 passes for 444 yards and four touchdowns. Brown also ran for a touchdown and led the Blue Devil offense to its highest point total since 1954, including the 97-yarder to Hines.

Inside linebacker Eric Thomas led the Yellow Jacket defensive charge against Western Carolina, limiting the Catamounts to 51 yards rushing and 223 yards of total offense. The senior led Tech tacklers with 14 hits, including six solo stops in three quarters of playing time.

DUNKEL INDEX

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

READING THE CARDS

similar are the tasks that face a declarer and a detective. Each must ferret out the clues that lead to the solution of the problem at hand.

Which reminds me of this hand I played a couple of years ago at the annual tournament in Crans-sur-Sierre. My team was leading the competition and it came up halfway through a match against our closest challengers. My partner's passed-hand raise to four spades was a trifle aggressive, but then you know that Paul Chemla is never shy in the bidding.

West led a diamond, East won the ace and returned the queen. My problem was to avoid losing three club tricks. I drew trumps in two rounds and, since even a winning finesse in hearts would not provide a solution, I eliminated hearts by ruffing the third round.

I now knew East had started with ace-queen of diamonds and queen of hearts. Had he held the ace of clubs as well, he would surely have opened the bidding. I was about to lead a low club to the jack when it dawned on me that there was something unusual about the defense. If East held nothing in clubs, why didn't he shift to that suit at trick two? Ergo, he had to have a holding that made a club lead unattractive—the queen.

So I led a low club from hand and ducked! I did not mind who won. Actually, East won the nine and returned the ten, but I had no problem in letting that run to the jack and thereby hold my club losses to two tricks.

As ever,
Omar

U.S., Japan Stand Alone On Capping Emissions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NOORDWIJK, Netherlands — More than 60 nations today prepared a resolution calling for capping emissions of gases blamed for global warming by the year 2000, despite opposition from the United States and Japan.

Many participants at the 68-nation conference on global warming lamented the U.S. position. Some scientists fear the phenomenon, known as the "greenhouse effect," could flood coastal areas and expand deserts.

Klaus Toepfer, the West German environment minister, said failure to reach agreement on stabilizing carbon dioxide emissions would be "a very bad sign to the world outside."

Carbon dioxide is a major contributor to the "greenhouse effect." In 1988, the United States accounted for nearly 24 percent of total world emissions of the gas, according to the Dutch Environment Ministry.

The proposed resolution also calls for stabilizing emissions of chlorofluorocarbons, methane, and nitrous oxides.

Japan and the United States said Monday they would not endorse a commitment to stabilize emissions by the year 2000. William K. Reilly, head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said the proposal "goes too far."

Today, conference participants planned to issue a final declaration saying that "in the view of most industrialized nations, such stabilization should be achieved as a first step at the latest by the year 2000."

The draft also called for a study of the feasibility of a 20 percent reduction of carbon dioxide emissions by 2005.

A West German diplomat said the clause "most nations" acknowledged the disagreement of the United States and Japan, the lone dissenters.

"All others, including the United Kingdom, are subscribing to the year 2000 as the deadline," the diplomat said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Earlier, the British delegation had objected to mentioning a deadline, according to conference sources. The sources said the Soviet Union had also expressed strong reservations about the wording of the final communiqué.

The Dutch, hosts of the two-day ministerial meeting, had hoped to align all the participating nations unanimously behind a commitment to stabilize emissions by the end of the century and to begin reducing them in 2005.

Most countries, including France, West Germany, and Canada, said they were willing to go along, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

No American comment was immediately available on today's proposal.

On Monday, Reilly said, "We believe in a reduction of carbon dioxide. But we're not prepared to say by what time and by what level."

Reilly said the countries should wait for completion of studies by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, a forum trying to find ways of reducing global warming.

The forum has scheduled a plenary meeting for February in Washington.

The attitude of the United States, Japan, Britain and the Soviet Union drew criticism from other participants and environmentalists.

Alden Meyer, an official of the Washington-based Union of Concerned Scientists, accused the Bush administration of having a "stealth climate policy — there's little to be seen at high cost."

Emissions of carbon dioxide, chlorofluorocarbons, methane, and nitrous oxides are believed by some experts to have caused a 1½-degree rise in the average global temperature.

Scientists say if emissions of those gases continue unabated, that increase might accelerate four to sevenfold over the next century, according to a recent paper by the Worldwatch Institute, a U.S. environmental think tank.

Some scientists fear the increase could turn fertile land into deserts and cause the seas to rise and flood populated coastal areas.

Reilly, the head of the U.S. delegation to the conference, said the United States would "withhold judgment on any specific measures until the research work (on climate change) has been completed."

"We take this conference very seriously ... but we don't want to commit ourselves to measures we can't follow through," he said.

The conference's final communiqué was expected to contain strong recommendations on reforestation programs in developing nations.

Many experts believe the destruction of tropical rain forest contributes to the "greenhouse effect."

The draft communiqué, a copy of which was circulated, urged a 30 million-acre area be annually rehabilitated by the start of the next century.

Fishermen Rescue Typhoon Victims

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SONGKHLA, Thailand — Thai fishermen have rescued three dozen people caught in a typhoon that ravaged the Gulf of Thailand and the mainland four days ago and have discovered more bodies, the navy said today.

It was unclear whether any of the dead or rescued were from a U.S.-owned drilling ship that capsized Saturday with 97 crewmen aboard after being caught in the typhoon. Six crewmen have been rescued and seven bodies found.

According to press reports, some 400 Thai fishermen were missing. The navy report said at least 63 fishing boats sank in the storm and another nine were missing. The government death toll on land was 31, but one local official put the number at more than 70.

A navy ship found 17 bodies in the sea since beginning a search in the gulf east of Songkhla late Monday, navy spokesman Capt. Suravut Mahom said. Another 30 were found on an island in Chumphon province.

In addition, fisherman rescued 35 more people caught in Typhoon Gay, the navy said. It did not give details.

The search for 84 crewmen missing from the 5,373-ton Seacrest continued today.

The Seacrest capsized Saturday in the gulf during the worst storm to hit Thailand in three decades.

"All I remember is the sound of swirling wind. The darkness, the rain, the waves. And every now and then, the screams for help," Chalit Duangpakdee, a Seacrest survivor, said in an interview published by the English-language Bangkok Post today.

Namibia Votes On Independence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINDHOEK, Namibia — Voters stood in lines more than a mile long today as balloting began in an election that is to lead to independence for Africa's last colony.

Authorities reported violations of election rules and at least one attempt to distribute bogus pamphlets but said there had been no major disturbances by mid-afternoon.

"After all the years of waiting, the people of Namibia themselves, and no one else, will have their say in free and fair elections," the U.N. special representative, Martti Ahtisaari, said in a radio broadcast as five days of voting began. The U.N.-monitored elections are for a 72-member assembly that is to meet a week after the results are final and write a constitution. Namibia, ruled by South Africa for 74 years, is expected to become independent early next year.

"Election fever was running high among voters waiting to cast their ballots," said the South-West Africa Broadcasting Corp., which broadcast last-minute instructions for the 701,483 registered voters, 60 percent of whom are illiterate.

The key issue in the elections is whether the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), favored to win the most votes, will capture the two-thirds majority it needs to write a constitution without consulting any of the other nine parties.

East Germans Flee By The Thousands, Protest At Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East Germans fleeing their homeland crossed into Bavaria today at the rate of about 120 an hour after more than half a million of their compatriots took to the streets back home in another round of protests.

West German federal border police said 28,000 refugees had arrived by late this morning in the latest surge, which began early Saturday when East Germany's Communist leaders began allowing free exit via Czechoslovakia.

Police spokesman Karl Heinz Hornsdach said the East Germans were being taken to 56 temporary shelters nationwide.

In East Berlin, the Communist Party's 21-member ruling Politburo met today amid growing calls from within party ranks for the resignation of the entire leadership. The party's governing Central Committee was to meet Wednesday.

"The outcome of the consultations is being anxiously awaited," said

West Germany's ARD television network. "Observers think it's possible that the entire government will resign in the next few days."

New Communist Party leader Egon Krenz has said five elderly members closely associated with former leader Erich Honecker will be replaced by the end of the week. Two other Politburo members lost their jobs Oct. 18.

The East Berlin newspaper Junge Welt, organ of the country's Communist Youth organization, said today the leaders "should resign without any delay" to make way for a new Politburo and a new Cabinet that will implement reforms.

Dresden's Communist Mayor Wolfgang Berghofer also urged the resignations of the Politburo and the 44-member Cabinet.

The three small parties that have been allied with the Communists but have been expressing more independence in recent weeks also asked the leadership to resign.

About 500,000 people demonstrated in Leipzig on Monday night in what has become a weekly ritual, and more than 200,000 others took part in street protests in at least six other cities.

The marchers demanded free elections and the legalization of opposition groups, challenging the Communist Party's political monopoly.

They also ridiculed a new draft law published earlier in the day that envisages 30 days a year of foreign travel for each East German.

Communist leaders have proposed the law to stem a tide of refugees from their country, but people are demanding the right to unlimited foreign travel.

So far this year, more than 175,000 East Germans — more than 1 percent of the population of 16.6 million — have moved to West Germany by emigrating legally, escaping or failing to return from approved trips abroad. West Germany gives them automatic citizenship and help in starting new lives.

The unexpected decision to let the refugees out through Czechoslovakia created the first free route to the West since the Berlin Wall went up.

Amanda Blake's Death Now Called AIDS-Related

By Kathleen Grubb
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The death of Amanda Blake, Miss Kitty in television's "Gunsmoke," wasn't due to cancer as a hospital and friends first reported, but from AIDS-related complications, her doctor said.

Dr. Lou Nishimura, a Sacramento internist, said Monday that Miss Blake had throat cancer, but added, "That wasn't the reason that she died."

Miss Blake, a longtime resident of the Sacramento area, had AIDS symptoms for about one year, Nishimura said. He said he didn't know how she contracted the disease.

Miss Blake's fifth husband, Mark Spaeth, a developer and city councilman in Austin, Texas, died of pneumonia in 1985 at age 45. They married in April 1984, and divorced a short time later.

Nishimura was interviewed following a report on Sacramento television station KRBK that quoted friends of Miss Blake as saying her death was AIDS-related.

After Miss Blake died Aug. 16 at Mercy General Hospital, a joint statement by the hospital and her friends reported the cause of death as cancer.

Miss Blake's death certificate, however, listed the immediate cause of death as cardiopulmonary arrest due to liver failure and CMV hepatitis. CMV or cytomegalovirus hepatitis is AIDS-related, said Nishimura, who treated Miss Blake in her last year and signed her death certificate.

Acquired immunodeficiency syndrome and cancer were listed on the certificate as contributing causes of death.

AIDS is caused by a virus that attacks the body's immune system. It is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from pregnant women to their offspring.

Once a two-pack-a-day smoker, Miss Blake underwent surgery for oral cancer in 1977 and afterward made appearances on behalf of the American Cancer Society.

Jerri Ewen, a Mercy General spokeswoman, said she previously reported cancer as the cause of death at the request of Miss Blake's close friends. "When somebody dies, you go by what the wishes of the family are. In this case, the friends were the family," Ewen said.

"They have the right to say whatever they want to say."

Ewen said she never saw the death certificate.

She said the hospital reported the death to the federal Centers for Disease Control, which monitors AIDS and other contagious diseases.

Miss Blake reigned as Miss Kitty, queen of Dodge City's Long Branch Saloon, for 19 years in "Gunsmoke." Set in the lawless cattle town of Dodge City, Kan., in the late 1800s, "Gunsmoke" was one of television's original "adult westerns" in the mid-1950s.

Women's Group Criticizes TV

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — TV viewers can find women panting over "hunks" or pairing up with unlikely male love interests but they won't find any strong female role models among 26 new network shows this year, a women's group says.

Nor will they find any breakthroughs in portraying minorities or find more women behind the cameras, the National Commission on Working Women of Wider Opportunities for Women said Monday.

Unlike years past, "No strong female leads emerge. No workplace dramas or comedies either break new ground or provide compelling role models," the group said after surveying the 26 new 1989 primetime TV shows. "At best, the status quo prevailed; at worst, backward steps were taken."

Male-female relationships on CBS' "Major Dad" and ABC's "Chicken Soup" are "straining viewer credibility," the group said.

"Major Dad" involves a crusty Marine and his forgiving young wife, while "Chicken Soup" stars comic Jackie Mason in a Catholic-Jewish matchup that "resorts to flat stereotypes and unbelievable characters," the group said.

NBC's "Baywatch" shows scantily clad female lifeguards or women sunning in bikinis or "scampering on the beach," the group said.

One episode of "Doogie Howser, M.D.," an ABC show about a 16-year-old doctor, has a "brilliant (female) radiologist" asking Doogie to father her child.

Daughters Left Out Of Actress' Will

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Actress Bette Davis left most of her nearly $1 million estate to her son and a close friend but nothing to her daughters — one of whom wrote about being raised by a "hateful mother."

Also left out of the will were Davis' two grandsons.

The 10-page will was filed Monday for probate in Manhattan.

"I declare that I have intentionally and with full knowledge omitted to provide herein for my daughter, Margot, and my daughter, Barbara, and/or my grandsons, Ashley Hyman and Justin Hyman," Davis said in the will dated Sept. 2, 1987.

Davis, who died of cancer at age 81 on Oct. 6, had been estranged from her daughter, Barbara Davis Hyman of Charlottesville, Va., since Hyman's 1985 book, "My Mother's Keeper."

Hyman wrote that Davis had been "an abusive, domineering and hateful mother," and "a grotesque alcoholic" largely responsible for her own mistreatment by some of her three husbands.

Davis replied in a 1987 book, "This 'n' That," that she had been victimized by a "lying and ungrateful child." She also admitted she was "pained" by the estrangement.

Hyman's two sons, Ashley and Justin, also received no bequest. The actress' lawyer, Harold Schiff, explained: "Unfortunately, their mother chose to have them follow her rather than their hearts."

"Down the road they'll be sorry," Schiff said. "Twenty years from now they'll say, 'That was our grandmother; why didn't we know her.'"

Manhattan Surrogate Court Judge Renee Roth directed Hyman to notify the court by Dec. 5 if she plans to contest the will.

Davis' adopted daughter, Margot Mosher Merrill of Geneva, N.Y., was diagnosed as mentally retarded at age 3 and has been in special schools and institutions since.

The will did not specify how Margot Merrill would be provided for, or how she has been supported in the past.
