Nancy Jenkins Ousts Carter In Mayor's Race

Johnson, Forbes, Four Incumbents Win Seats On City Council

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville voters opted for a change in their mayoral leadership Tuesday, but shied away from wholesale changes in the make-up of the City Council.

In balloting for mayor, Nancy Jenkins ousted one-term incumbent Ed Carter by more than 1,700 votes, winning 5,305 to 3,601, according to unofficial returns tabulated by The Daily Reflector.

But voters returned all four of the six incumbents seeking re-election to the City Council.

Two council members, Ms. Jenkins and Bill Hadden, did not seek re-election to their posts on the governing board. Blanche Forbes won a close decision to fill Ms. Jenkins vacated District 5 seat, and voters chose Tom Johnson Jr. over two other candidates to replace Hadden in a tight race in District 4.

Ms. Jenkins attributed her success in the campaign to a "grass roots" effort on the part of her supporters.

"It was a very simple campaigned of many people encouraging me to do this and working very quietly for me," she said.

Ms. Jenkins said that she would make long-range planning and development one of her earliest and highest priorities as mayor. And, following on one of her campaign promises, she said she would work toward providing a more unified and open City Council.

The council under her leadership would also serve to steer the operations of the city government, Ms. Jenkins said.

Carter, reached at his Burroughs Wellcome office today, had little to say. "I feel The Daily Reflector has done enough in this election," Carter said. "I have no comment."

The majority of the council members will already have experience on the board with four incumbents returning.

In the at-large seat, Lorraine Shinn defeated Chuck Autry 5,161 to 3,48 to return to the post. Mildred Council easily retained her seat in a race against Daniel T. Brew, winning by an unofficial 1,170 to 183.

Rufus Huggins polled 1,703 votes in defeating two opponents in the District 2 race to return to the council. Running behind Huggins were Milton Sutton with 262 votes and Sean Dobbins with 130 votes.

And Inez Fridley, running unopposed in the election, will return to her District 3 seat after polling 662 votes.

Johnson, a Greenville attorney with Colombo & Kitchin, will serve his first term after defeating Louis H. "Buddy" Zincone by 176 votes, 876 to 700. Jimmie Lee trailed in the race for Hadden's vacant seat with 192 votes.

Blanche Forbes, a real estate broker, defeated Tom Harwell by 313 votes in the District 5 seat, winning 1,875 to 1,562.

Carter won the mayor's office two years ago in a close race with incumbent Les Garner. After serving on the City School Board and the City Council, Carter defeated Garner 3,441 to 3,145 in an election marred by charges of racism.

Ms. Jenkins, the widow of former East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins, said Tuesday night after the election she felt she could work with all segments of Greenville's population, black and white.

Hines Returns In Winterville

By Charles Hoskinson
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Winterville Mayor Edward C. Hines easily won re-election to a third term over two opponents Tuesday, despite his support of the town's embattled police chief.

Hines got 362 votes to 217 for challenger W. Ashley Dail. Mike Gillin was a distant third with 31 votes.

Winterville was one of seven Pitt County towns where voters went to the polls Tuesday to elect local officials.

At issue in the election was Hines' support of Police Chief Lester Smith, who was accused earlier this year of telling his officers not to give tickets to town officials.

Hines said today he was concerned the issue might hurt his chances for re-election when it came up during the campaign. "Evidently it didn't hurt as much as I thought it was going to," he said.

The election results show that a majority of the townspeople support Smith, Hines said. "When they elected me, they supported the whole town work force."

Hines called on townspeople to put the issue aside. "I feel like a majority of this town is behind me — a big majority," he said. "As long as we can work together as a group, I feel like this whole town can prosper."

William Clark won a five-way race for an open seat on the town Board of Aldermen, defeating Keith Manning, Frank H. Cash, T. Dawson Page Jr. and Don Rudd. Clark got 193 votes, Manning, 175; Cash, 169; Page, 64, and Rudd, 12.

In Ayden, incumbent Mayor Marvin C. "Bear" Baldree won re-election with 603 votes over 153 for challenger Aaron Hines.

The five candidates for Ayden town commissioner were all elected without opposition. They are: Carl L. Speight, Ward 1; Robert G. Harris, Ward 2; Susan W. Moody, Ward 3; Stuart Tripp, Ward 4, and J.J. Brown, Ward 5.

Frank W. Hemingway got 418 votes as the sole candidate for Bethel mayor. In the town commission race, seven people vied for five seats. Samuel T. Carson, Robert C. Young Jr., Delton E. Perry, Elvin D. Jones and Billy R. Peaden were elected over Bernice H. Cayton Jr. and Edward C. Stox.

Julian C. Gaynor got 115 votes to 27 for William R. Jones to win election as mayor of Fountain. Letha Jefferson, William W. Jessup Jr., Doug Strickland, Nat VanNortwick and James T. Willoughby Jr. were elected to the town commission. David M. Price fell 15 votes short in the six-way race, receiving 73 votes.

The sole candidate for Grifton mayor, Ralph L. Thaxton, was elected with 169 votes. J.B. "Gibb" Chauncey and William C. Smith were elected to the town commission without opposition.

In Grimesland, Joyce H. Blich, Dale Brooks, Eleanor H. Farr, Thyra "Stevie" Hinson and Danny P. Strickland were elected to the town board of aldermen without opposition.

Virginia S. Lupton, Brenda G. Hawkins and Clara Thompson were elected to the Simpson Village Council over Carlton Smith.

Voters Reject Charter Changes

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The voters of Greenville chose to stay the course in operating the city government by defeating two proposed changes to the city charter in Tuesday's election.

Voters rejected proposed changes to extend terms in office for City Council members and to give the mayor a vote on all matters before the council. The proposed mayor's vote followed closely along the line of voting in the mayor's race.

But the proposal to give council members four-year terms was soundly defeated.

Mayor-elect Nancy Jenkins, according to the unofficial vote count tallied by The Daily Reflector, throughout the campaign opposed the change to allow the mayor a vote. Incumbent Ed Carter lobbied hard for the change. And in the unofficial count, voters defeated the proposal in a count similar to the mayor's decision.

The present system, which allows the mayor to vote only in the case of a tie, will stand. The measure was defeated 5,130 to 3,564, a margin of 1,566 votes. Ms. Jenkins defeated Carter by 1,704 votes.

Ms. Jenkins said today she thought the vote might show similarities. But she said, "It was not a burning issue. It was (Carter's) issue."

She said today she felt giving the mayor a vote would put too much power in one post, and all council members needed to have an equal voice.

The terms in office will also remain the same.

Voters decided by a wide margin to keep the present system of two-year terms for council members, defeating the proposal 5,930 to 2,770.

Ms. Jenkins has favored the present system, and said the more frequent election would benefit both the citizens and the council.

"A two-year term would keep the folks closer to the people," Ms. Jenkins said. And the shorter terms allow for more citizen involvement in the council, she said.

McPherson Says He Will Surrender

Greenville lawyer Dallas McPherson said this morning that he and four others charged on a total of 731 counts of securities fraud plan to turn themselves in to local authorities "either today or tomorrow."

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said late this morning that warrants for the five were in the hands of a deputy. He declined to say when he expected them to be served. The magistrate's office reported that, as of 11:20 a.m., none of the five had been brought to a magistrate for bond-setting.

East Germany's Politburo Steps Down

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East Germany's ruling Politburo resigned today and the Communist Party replaced the aging leaders with reformers in a dramatic bid to gain control of a country convulsed by protests and the exodus of thousands of its people.

The action followed Tuesday's resignation of the entire Cabinet and another round of street demonstrations involving more than 100,000 people in four cities who demanded the right to choose their own government.

East Germans skeptical about the government's promises of reforms continued to flee their homeland today, with more than 50,000 people reaching West Germany since Saturday.

The entire 21-member Politburo resigned in a major leadership reshuffle, which opposition leaders and party members alike had been urging for days. It was new leader Egon Krenz's boldest move yet to get a grip on power.

The party's 163-member Central Committee then reaffirmed Krenz as party leader and voted in four new members to the Politburo, including Dresden party chief Hans Modrow, who have backed Soviet-style reforms.

Krenz and six other members who support his reforms were re-elected to the ruling body.

Modrow also was nominated for the post of premier, the state-run news agency ADN said. The Politburo is the country's most powerful decision-making body. The Central Committee approves leadership and major policy changes.

Today's action reduces the number of Politburo members from 21 to 11. In addition to Krenz and Modrow, the Central Committee re-elected to a Politburo seat Guenter Schabowski, who has also become a leading reform advocate.

The Central Committee also voted to appoint Johannes Chrenitzner as a non-voting member of the Politburo. Chrenitzner was the first high-ranking East German politician to suggest discussing the need for the Berlin Wall.

In a brief dispatch, the official ADN news agency said Krenz "suggested" the Politburo resign "so that the responsibility for the current situation can be made clear."

Many members of the outgoing Politburo are in their 60s and 70s and are closely associated with Krenz's mentor, former hard-line leader Erich Honecker. The aging leadership had increasingly lost credibility, especially in the face of massive defections to the West.

Krenz, in office just three weeks, faces great difficulties as he tries to assert authority in a country that exploded in unrest a month ago as it marked the 40th anniversary of its founding as a Communist state.

Krenz has indicated no intention of releasing the Communists' grip on power. He is under growing pressure at home and abroad to follow the lead of discredited Communist rulers in Poland and Hungary and share power.

Before the Politburo action, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany urged East German Communists to surrender their monopoly on power, approve free elections and clear the way for economic reforms.

"With this condition, I am also ready to discuss a new dimension in our economic aid," Kohl told Parliament in Bonn. West Germany has several times offered East Berlin substantial new financial aid if wide-ranging reforms are embraced.

On Tuesday, more than 100,000 people rallied in at least four East German cities after the resignation of the Cabinet, a 44-member body that has little power and implements policy made by the Politburo.

About 5,000 East Berliners marched past the party building to demand free elections and shouted, "Egon we are the competitors," and "We

La Grange Family Takes On Medicare And Its Rules

By Lynn Wooten
GOLDSBORO NEWS ARGUS

LA GRANGE, N.C. (AP) — Cancer. The thought of getting it strikes terror in the heart. Imagine having it and not being able to get the treatment that might save your life. It is happening to Rachel L. Sutton.

RACHEL SUTTON

Miss Sutton of La Grange has an especially dangerous form of breast cancer, and only one kind of medical treatment offers her any possible hope of a normal existence, according to her doctor, James Atkins of Goldsboro.

Midway through this treatment she learned some heart-stopping news: Medicare would not cover her remaining medical expenses.

Enter John Sutton, her brother, whose goal now is not only to raise the funds to treat Rachel, but to change the Medicare guidelines that have left her life, and, perhaps that of many others, in jeopardy.

It began in May when Miss Sutton, 59, discovered her breast cancer. She underwent a modified mastectomy, during which 19 of her 21 lymph nodes also were found to be cancerous and were removed.

Miss Sutton chose to undergo massive doses of chemotherapy combined with a new procedure known as "bone marrow harvest." The method offers her the only route possible to total destruction of her cancer cells, according to Atkins.

Yet bone marrow harvest is a technique that has been used only in the last 15 years or so. It involves removing the patient's bone marrow, storing it and reinfusing it in the body after the person has been bombarded with massive doses of chemotherapy.

About 10 to 15 percent of patients do not survive the procedure or could suffer damaged vital organs, according to Atkins.

However, she first asked her brother to contact Social Security and make sure Medicare would cover her medical expenses. An unmarried, retired nurse living on Social Security disability payments, Miss Sutton said the only health insurance she could afford was Medicare.

"We called the regional office of Social Security and described her condition and what her treatment would be," said John Sutton. "We were told Medicare would cover it."

On Oct. 3, Miss Sutton was scheduled to go to Duke Medical Center, the only hospital in North Carolina which offers this treatment, and begin the final phase, the bone marrow harvest.

Just prior to her leaving for Durham, the phone rang, and, according to Miss Sutton, Linda J. Bullock of Duke's business office said Medicare would not cover the bone marrow harvest part of her treatment. In addition, she was told that a deposit of $50,000 would be needed before she could continue, John Sutton said.

The deposit was required because Medicare would not cover the treatment and because of the cost of the treatment, said Edith Roberts, a spokeswoman for Duke.

This has left Miss Sutton in a "deeply depressed state," according to her brother, because the Suttons cannot afford the $50,000 deposit, let alone the estimated $120,000 to $140,000 total Atkins expects her medical expenses to reach.

"We were stunned," said John Sutton. "Medicare patients apparently are second class citizens."

On the recommendation of the Public Health Service in guidelines established in May 1988, Medicare found that bone marrow harvest in this type of situation was "not considered reasonable and necessary." This was the word from Kathleen A. Buto, acting director of the agency's Bureau of Policy Development, in a letter she wrote to Miss Sutton.

"But she has a cancer that needs aggressive therapy or it will recur and she'll die from it," Atkins said. "Medicare is a second-class, inferior insurance company because they refuse to pay for state-of-the-art treatments."

In response, a spokesman with the Department of Health and Human Services who asked that his name not be used, said: "The law imposes on Medicare a responsibility to comply with the law concerning the coverage of medical procedures that are reasonable and medically necessary. The Public Health Service performs research on procedures to determine whether they are effective and medically necessary."

"Medicare is fulfilling its responsibility under the law," he added. Unsure about how to overcome a seemingly impossible situation, Sutton, who left his job in Fayetteville and moved back home to care for his sister, went to Atkins for advice. He suggested the Suttons contact local officials and their congressmen in hopes of "applying a little muscle."

Sens. Terry Sanford and Jesse Helms, along with Rep. Martin Lancaster, were contacted about the situation. All three responded.

Helms got in touch with the Department of Health and Human Services on behalf of Miss Sutton, but its response was not positive.

"I regret that their findings are not more satisfactory to your interests," Helms wrote Miss Sutton.

The Suttons, along with members of their church, now are attempting not only to raise the necessary funds for Miss Sutton, but to change

Medicare's guidelines as well.

Today, Rachel Sutton is in Wayne Memorial Hospital, primarily for depression, according to John Sutton.

"She was not eating properly and was losing weight," he said. "She was not doing well at all."

She will continue on chemotherapy treatments until she can find a way to pay for the necessary bone marrow harvest, Atkins said.

Now, all she can do is hope for some much needed assistance.

Secord Pleads Guilty To Lying

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord pleaded guilty today to one count of lying to congressional investigators in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Secord had been scheduled to go on trial next Monday on 12 criminal charges, nine of them stemming from his testimony to Congress in 1987.

But at a pre-trial hearing, Iran-Contra prosecutor Reid Weingarten announced that the government and Secord's lawyers had negotiated a plea agreement. The 11 other criminal charges against Secord are being dismissed.

Secord agreed to "cooperate fully" with Iran-Contra prosecutors "by testifying truthfully at any trial ... to which he may be called," according to the plea agreement.

He could become a government witness against former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, whose criminal trial is scheduled to begin Jan. 22.

Secord admitted in U.S. District Court that he made a false statement when he told congressional investigators on June 10, 1987, that he had not been aware any money from his business dealings in the Iran-Contra affair went to White House aide Oliver North.

Secord told Judge Aubrey Robinson that he had paid for a $13,800 security fence at North's home. "I should have known that they were aiming at the fence," Secord said of the question by congressional investigators that led to his false statement. Secord said his answer was "a misguided effort to prevent further criticism," noting that there had "already been a firestorm in the press" about who paid for North's security fence.

Secord said "I was trying to shield both of us" when he lied about North's fence in his deposition to the congressional investigators.

Secord could be sentenced to up to five years in prison.

Secord's profits for his work on the administration's Iran arms sales and assisting the Contras "exceed $1.5 million," prosecutors said in a recent court filing. Secord had been called into both initiatives by North.

The government presented a document listing the evidence it would have presented at Secord's trial in support of the charge to which he pleaded guilty.

The document stated that in addition to Secord paying for the fence, there was an attempted cover-up of who paid for the fence through the use of back-dated documents.

Secord's attorney, Thomas Green, objected to that portion of the government's evidence, saying Secord had not been involved in a cover-up.

Bakker Denied Bond

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND — A federal appeals court today refused to free evangelist Jim Bakker while he appeals his 45-year prison sentence for fraud and conspiracy.

A three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a district judge's finding that Bakker should remain jailed because he might flee if released.

The court said it found no reason to reject prosecution evidence that "a great number of defendant's followers are prepared for whatever reason, to do anything for him."

Horowitz

His Talents May Never Be Replaced

Vladimir Horowitz was so great a pianist that some say he will never be replaced.

Fortunately for future generations his performances spanned an era from the earlier scratchy recordings to today's precise sound reproduction.

Horowitz died in New York over the weekend at the age of 85. His music will live on for future generations through his many recordings.

It is said that Horowitz was the last link with the 19th century masters, even though he was born in this century.

His remarkable life also spanned Czarist's Russia, the Communist Soviet Union and a brilliant career in the United States.

Horowitz left Russia in 1925 and came to the United States in 1928. He would not return to his native country until near the end of his career. He gave a momentous concert in Moscow in 1986, returning after a 61 year absence. Perhaps that visit foretold the vast changes that are sweeping the Soviet Union today.

The virtuoso imposed on himself several retirements but he performed in Europe as recently as 1987. His manager said Horowitz was active until his death.

It was an unpredictable path that brought Vladimir Horowitz to the United States. Perhaps his legendary skills would not have been so exalted if he had never left Russia. That we will never know. As it is, music lovers of our country were the beneficiaries, but so too was the world. And thanks to modern recording those who come after us will know the thrill of Horowitz's great talent.

Quayle Is In

He Could Be Around Until 1996, Longer

Great balls of fire!

Four more years of Dan Quayle, and we haven't even gotten through the first four years yet?

President Bush has flat out said so in a Texas interview.

The president said he intends to keep Quayle as a vice presidential running mate in 1992.

The president said he would do so because his vice president is doing an outstanding job. He said Quayle is "doing exactly what I want him to do and doing it because his heart is in it."

Those of us who have shuddered each time the vice president put his foot in his mouth and quaked at the thought of his waking up one morning as president could be shuddering for a long time.

Assuming George Bush does run for re-election in 1992 and carries out his vow to keep his vice president there are a lot of years of worrying ahead.

We are, after all, still in the first year of the Bush-Quayle first term. Vice President Quayle could potentially become president until 1996. Then he could even seek the presidency in his own right. Now we are looking into the 21st century which in politics is infinity.

Of course, let a negative poll appear in 1992 and look to President Bush to rethink his decision. And the Democrats will be looking to win some of those elections between now and the upcoming century.

Still based on the president's current thinking there can be a Quayle around for a long time. The thought is sobering.

Preyer Didn't Pull Punches

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Richardson Preyer didn't pull his punches in his opening address to the Task Force on Secondary Education.

Preyer, chairman of the group that will offer recommendations for improving high school curricula, and, it is hoped, for raising state Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, said parents must bear a considerable part of the blame for the performance of their children.

Preyer said that "too many (of North Carolina's top students) are taking the easy courses, and too many parents are satisfied with the A's and B's that come with these easy courses."

One surprising fact arose from the public anguish over North Carolina's last place finish on the SATs this year. North Carolina's best students do relatively worse on the test than do the state's weaker students.

the average for the top students nationally. One excuse annually repeated in reaction to North Carolina's previous poor SAT performances was that the state's top students did just as well as top students elsewhere.

A recent study which ranked the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill as one of the best schools in the nation and the best public university also found that its students had the lowest average SAT scores of the nation's top 25 schools. A North Carolina high school senior usually must rank in the top 8 percent of his or her class to gain admittance to UNC-CH these days, so that corroborates that weakness within the state's best.

Preyer said that North Carolina's best are not less intelligent than those from other states. Students and parents, he said, must reorder their priorities. "Studies first, sports and band practice second. School first, after-school jobs second."

At the same meeting, a number of highly successful high school seniors participated in a panel discussion. They were asked to name the most important factors in their scholastic success.

Some named an especially good teacher or principal. Some mentioned a desire to get the most out of life. All gave top credit, however, to their parents because those parents had ridden herd on them when they tried to get lazy and instilled in them the desire to get an education.

The task force will find considerable evidence that North Carolina's schools do not offer the coursework and laboratories offered in other states. Study in those advanced courses often spells the difference between excellent and just very good SAT scores.

But even if those courses are added, Preyer was saying, the state's parents must change their attitudes. "Make no mistake. Our greatest test is in motivating parents. The greatest force for mediocrity is the apathetic and unchallenged student, often reflecting apathetic parents who allow their children to put TV, cars, sports and jobs ahead of education."

Preyer won't score many points with the public, or with the political establishment, when he says such things. It's safer to blame teachers or even the legislature, for the failure of North Carolina's schools. Blaming parents, the people who vote, can be risky.

But before parents react indignantly to Preyer's words, they should ask if the words aren't true.

The task force will find considerable evidence that North Carolina's schools do not offer the coursework and laboratories offered in other states. Study in those advanced courses often spells the difference between excellent and just very good SAT scores.

Bush-Gorbachev Meet Not 'Timid'

WASHINGTON — President Bush is upset that David Hoffman of the Washington Post broke the news of the seaboard summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev 12 hours before Moscow and Washington had agreed to announce it. His pique is understandable: That's the kind of news any President likes to give out himself.

But the remarkable thing is that negotiations for the summit, which began last July, stayed secret so long, not only from the public but from 99 percent of the people involved with foreign policy in the Bush administration. Once again, this President has demonstrated his tendency to make his big decisions with only a handful of chosen advisers, and to spring the results without warning to the world at large or to the government he heads.

The announcement last week cut off another round of griping about what Bush's "timid" and grudging response to the emerging democratic forces in Poland, Hungary and East Germany. Lord knows, there's nothing timid about signing up for 48 hours of unstructured, "feet up" conversation with Gorbachev, unconstrained by any agenda and therefore unfettered by any pre-negotiated understandings.

This is exactly the kind of summit that foreign-policy traditionalists — of whom Bush was thought to be one — had always warned was to be avoided. The traditionalists' arguments were reinforced by the last such improvised U.S.-Soviet summit, the 1986 meeting of Gorbachev and President Reagan in Reykjavik. Reagan got so caught up in Iceland's camaraderie that he came within an inch of negotiating away the whole NATO nuclear deterrent.

Kenneth L. Adelman, then the head of Reagan's Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, has written in his lively memoir, "The Great Universal Embrace," that, "The discussions that afternoon (in Reykjavik) should never have happened. They showed gross ignorance of essentials of Western security by the guardians of that security, not just the President but a few of his top advisers as well."

It's worth remembering that Reykjavik, like the shipboard summit coming up Dec. 2 and 3, was described as a "non-summit summit," just a preparation for a formal negotiating session to be held a few months later. That fiction did not limit the risks in Reykjavik and it will not limit them in the Mediterranean either.

Gorbachev has to be regarded as a desperate man. His empire is breaking up faster than anyone could have imagined: Hungary is gone; Poland is going; and East Germany, hitherto the most economically successful and most politically reliable of the major Warsaw Pact countries, is wobbling badly. Meantime, economic conditions in the Soviet Union continue to stagnate, if not deteriorate. Gorbachev really needs a deal.

Against that tempting prospect, there is the chilling history of what has happened when other American Presidents have gone into summits early in their terms. The last elected President to meet the Soviet leader in his first year in office was John F. Kennedy. At his meeting in Vienna with Nikita Khrushchev, he conveyed such a sense of unreadiness that Khrushchev was tempted to erect the Berlin Wall and to try putting offensive missiles in Cuba.

These are different times, of course, and Bush is a different President, one with his own intriguing pattern of behavior. He appears most of the time to be a cautious, plodding, rather unimaginative fellow. But he clearly sees himself as capable of the bold, unexpected stroke.

He stunned his advisers with the choice of Dan Quayle for Vice President (and again by reiterating the choice, almost three years prematurely, for 1992, in his interview last week with the Dallas Morning News). He stunned NATO and most of those who manage foreign policy by his disarmament proposal last May. And he stunned the world (to say nothing of the senior bureaucracy of the State Department, the Pentagon and the National Security Council) by deciding on an open-ended meeting with Gorbachev a few weeks hence.

What happened back in May shows there can be a payoff for such bravado. For months, the young Bush administration had dawdled through a protracted foreign-policy review process, while the President and Secretary of State James A. Baker III said it was only prudent to proceed with great caution in assessing the seemingly dramatic changes taking place in the Soviet Union.

Then, after allowing allied leaders and congressional critics to fill the air with complaints about his dillydallying, a suddenly energized Bush came up with an arms-control proposal for the NATO summit in Brussels. In a single stroke, he solved a bitter dispute within the alliance and trumped the last offer Gorbachev had put on the table.

Bush, his intimates say, does not have a particularly long attention span. Caution and patient preparation may get boring for him, too. The idea of Bush as Secret Swinger takes some getting used to. But in diplomacy, for better or worse, that's what he wants to be.

Abortion Swings Against The GOP

Analysis

Donald M. Rothberg

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion, among the most troubling political issues of the decade for Democrats, turned against the Republicans on election day. The damage was particularly graphic in New Jersey and in the Old Dominion of Virginia.

Abortion "made a difference," a glum Lee Atwater acknowledged as the votes were being tallied Tuesday night.

The chairman of the Republican National Committee saw GOP candidates shut out in the day's main races. Underneath the marquee events, it may have been the election for lieutenant governor of Virginia that sent the most chilling message to Republicans on the political power of pro-choice forces.

Republican Edwina Dalton, widow of a popular former governor, was upset by car-dealer Democrat Donald S. Beyers. Dalton, well-known to oppose abortion, had aired an awkward campaign ad which attempted to soften her position.

It gained her nothing at the polls.

Rep. James Courter, Republican candidate for governor of New Jersey, also tried to moderate his anti-abortion stand. He was swamped by Democrat James Florio and Republicans lost their state Assembly majority in the landslide. Awkwardness on abortion also affected Republican Rudolph Giuliani, who lost a close contest for mayor of New York.

The campaign ad that provided a dramatic turning point in the abortion debate was aired by Democrat L. Douglas Wilder in Virginia. Wilder took a riverboat gamble and directly attacked his Republican opponent on the issue. Many Democrats, used to being beaten up over abortion, literally gasped.

"Marshall Coleman wants to take away your right to choose and give it to the politicians," said the Wilder ad.

Wilder claimed a narrow victory late Tuesday night and said, "No one can say a certain single issue dominated my election."

Democratic National Chairman Ronald Brown said Tuesday night that when abortion is approached as a question of a woman's right to make the decision, the pro-choice stand is attractive to mainstream voters, and "Doug handled it just right."

National Right to Life Committee spokeswoman Nancy Myers took comfort in the closeness of the race and said Coleman "could have handled the issue a lot better."

The turning point in the politics of abortion was a Supreme Court decision last July that paved the way for states to enact restrictions on abortion. The ruling activated a large pro-choice constituency that had been silent over the years, or at least silent as a single-issue voting bloc.

"We said on July 3 that politics in America would never be the same and we've proven it tonight in these important wins in New York, New Jersey and Virginia," said Kate Michelman of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

Dating back to 1978, a series of pro-choice Democrats were defeated by candidates who took a strong anti-abortion position. It was a key issue in 1980 when Republicans regained control of the Senate after a quarter-century.

Wilder's decision to make abortion a centerpiece of his campaign was a bold stroke that changed the dynamic of the contest. In her race, Mrs. Dalton ran a commercial that conceded the potency of the issue.

"I'm a woman first," she said in her ad which featured many of the catch-phrases of the pro-choice movement. She proclaimed she was for "choice," but only in cases of rape or incest.

The Dalton ad was an artful effort to diffuse the issue by moving away from a strong position opposed to abortion.

The danger is that such a tactic can serve to anger longstanding anti-abortion allies without impressing the pro-choice vote.

As the 1989 campaigns unfolded and the strength of the abortion issue became apparent, Atwater said his advice to GOP candidates was to say where they stood, say it quickly and concisely and try to move on.

Whether that strategy will work for Republicans in the 1990 elections is one of the major political questions for the upcoming year.

President Bush, an anti-abortion leader since joining the Reagan ticket in 1980, told an election day news conference, "I don't believe most voters are single-issue voters. There is no evidence to support that, none at all."

It is a declaration that will be put to the test again in 1990.

"The right to choose has been proven to be a pivotal voting issue," said Michelman. "There is no question that in all of the races that the issue has dominated and that America's pro choice majority is energized."

...THE FLIP SIDE OF HUMANITY...

Helping Hands

Paul T. O'Connor

RALEIGH — The news that RJR-Nabisco will contribute $30 million to finance major changes in American public schools is only the latest in a recent series of business efforts to improve education.

RJR's offer serves as an exclamation point to a number of smaller local business initiatives that are being announced nearly every day in North Carolina. None are as dramatic as a $30 million benefaction, and some don't involve any money at all, but they could have a tremendous influence on community efforts to improve education.

RJR plans to provide grants to individual schools which want to pursue educational innovation. Educators often can't find the public funding for new efforts, and thus new ideas often go untried.

Under the School Reform Act passed by the General Assembly last August, schools which seek to be innovative will have greater leeway, if they can find the needed money.

But a business doesn't have to pledge huge amounts of money to help its local schools. At a conference on business-school partnerships recently held in Chapel Hill, a number of school districts reported on the help they are receiving from their business communities.

Wake County, which pioneered the business partnership idea a decade ago, is borrowing talent from the Triangle's many research companies. Scientists are spending time in Wake County schools, conducting experiments and, it is hoped, helping encourage students to become more interested in scientific study. Hundreds of scientists have volunteered their time, and the state is looking at the program for possible expansion.

The Craven County schools have a business partnership which last year helped finance an intensive preparation course for the Scholastic Aptitude Tests. Kathy Currin, director of the program, said during the conference that some teens saw their SAT scores rise by 200 to 300 points after taking the course.

Jan Allen, director of the Granville County program, told of the financial support her system received when it purchased a new computer instruction system. More than $300,000 was raised to get the program started, and now the schools are trying to raise $1 million.

But Granville businesses are being asked to do more than give money. They're being asked to promote education with their workers. A special Granville program asks businesses to sign a pledge to give priority in hiring to high school graduates, to limit student working hours, to monitor student performance in school and encourage student workers to do well in school. Ms. Allen says that on the program's first day, 14 businesses signed the pledge.

Granville County is also showing considerable political courage in this program. It pledges to publish the names of those firms which sign up for the program. Those which don't and which continue to employ students on late night shifts or for too many hours during the school week, will also have their names published.

In Rowan County, one of the state's largest employers of teens has launched a similar program. Food Lion is tying employment in their stores to performance in school. Kids who don't measure up at school are being told that they won't keep their jobs.

State businesses are showing that you don't need $30 million to help improve the schools.

YOUR EYEGGLASS PRESCRIPTION

What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions?"

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?

A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?

A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?

A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?

A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?

A. You can contact us directly in Washington, D.C. Our mailing address in Washington is: Eyeglasses TRR, Federal Trade Commission, Room 281, Washington, DC 20580

Myrick Holds Off Write-In Challenge To Win New Term

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A write-in candidate made a last-minute dash, but incumbent Republican Mayor Sue Myrick held off the challenge to retain her seat and promised to pursue the same agenda she has followed for two years.

Mrs. Myrick received 32,127 votes Tuesday, while write-in candidate Democrat Al Rousoo polled 25,868 and Democratic challenger Craig Midans finished third with 10,380.

"I just want to thank God and the people," Mrs. Myrick, who became the city's first woman mayor in 1987, said. "They made the decision."

Rousoo is a businessman who had dropped out of the Democratic primary and became the subject of a write-in campaign that started last week after the Myrick-Madans race turned bitter over talk of drugs and extramarital sex. Rousoo said Tuesday night he would back Myrick.

"I will support Mayor Myrick in any way I can," he said.

Asked about the near-success of Rousoo's write-in campaign, Mrs. Myrick said: "I have no comment on that. I'm just glad I won."

She said she plans "to continue to do all the same things I've been doing the last two years. I will deliver like I did the last time."

Meanwhile, Madans said he was not distressed by his last-place showing.

"It's not the end and it's not the beginning of the end," he said. "We have a race for governor coming and we have a full head of steam."

Madans said he called Mrs. Myrick and wished her well. "I took care of some of the situations between us," he said.

Early in the race, Mrs. Myrick attacked Madans for his acknowledged use of marijuana and cocaine while in college.

"I think it's very important that we be role models for children today," she said during her second debate with Madans on Oct. 22.

Later in the campaign, it was disclosed that Mrs. Myrick, an advertising executive, had an affair with her current husband, Ed, in 1973 when he was married to another woman.

In 1987, Mrs. Myrick unseated popular two-term incumbent Harvey Ganit by a 995-vote margin on a campaign pledge to improve Charlotte's clogged road system. Last year, she successfully led a campaign for a $100 million highway bond issue.

Deeply religious, Mrs. Myrick, 48, has said she makes political decisions by listening to "the will of God first, the will of the people second."

When she publicly acknowledged her affair, Mrs. Myrick characterized it as "a sin."

Madans, 37, a textile executive who has never held political office, criticized Myrick's handling of the Tropical Storm Hugo cleanup and her "lone wolf" style on some issues.

Durham Elects First Black Mayor

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two-term city councilman Chester Jenkins has been elected Durham's first black mayor, while Democrat Martha S. Wood became the first female mayor in Winston-Salem's history.

"Durham has a large population of black people who have achieved," Jenkins said Tuesday after defeating Nelson Strawbridge 19,381-17,118. "This is great for young black individuals who are looking for role models."

In taking the victory, Jenkins reversed the finish of the Oct. 10 primary, in which he had trailed Strawbridge by almost 3,000 votes. On Tuesday, he credited a coalition of groups made up of black and liberal white voters for helping make up the difference.

"I am very grateful for what they have done for me," said Jenkins, referring to a coalition of the Durham Committee on the Affairs of Black People, the Durham Voters Alliance and the People's Alliance, each of which had endorsed his candidacy. "I knew we would move things forward."

Strawbridge had been backed by Friends of Durham, a conservative group whose candidates won three council seats in Tuesday's voting.

Strawbridge called the race "a good clean fight" in conceding the election.

"(The voters) have decided that Chester Jenkins should be mayor, and that's the way it should be," he said.

Current Mayor Wib Gulley, who did not run for re-election, said he considered the results to be a commentary on his administration. Gulley, a coalition supporter, had been criticized by conservatives for pushing a gay rights ordinance and other issues.

Martha S. Wood was elected Winston-Salem's first female mayor, capping an expensive and contentious campaign that often pitted neighborhood and business interests against each other and was infused with allegations of racism.

Ms. Wood, a Democratic alderman since 1981, received 15,623, or 51.5 percent, of the vote, while her Republican opponent, Lenville M. Sale, received 14,723 votes, or 48.5 percent.

For the most part, local business leaders — Democrats and Republicans — rallied behind Sale, a political newcomer, after Wood defeated Dee Smith in a bitter runoff

Oct. 17 for the Democratic nomination.

Smith, president of 1st Home Federal of Greensboro, had been tapped by the business community as an alternative to Wood, who was perceived as pro-neighborhood and antagonistic toward local business interests.

Many Democrats, incensed that Wood's campaign portrayed Smith as a racist who allegedly had the backing of the Ku Klux Klan, said after the runoff that they would either vote for Sale or not vote at all.

In Board of Aldermen races, three Republicans were elected along with five Democrats. It is the first time since 1961 that the GOP has held three seats on the town board. Only one Republican has been on the board since 1981.

Greensboro Voters Approve Smoking Bans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Voters in Greensboro have narrowly approved mandatory smoking restrictions that will force restaurant owners in that city to set aside seats for non-smokers.

Final unofficial returns showed 14,991 voters approving the restrictions, while 14,818 opposed them.

"They outspent us, outmanned us 20-to-1 — we're all just real surprised," said David Hudgins, a leader of the anti-smoking group Greensboro to Alleviate Smoking Pollution.

Hudgins said his group won because "the citizens of Greensboro showed that they wanted this."

The ordinance would ban smoking in elevators and in retail stores employing more than 25 people or with a capacity of more than 200. The ordinance also would require restaurants seating more than 50 people to set aside a quarter of their seats for non-smokers.

"I am surprised that citizens are not more concerned about individual rights than they showed at the polls today," said Earl Jagers, president of the local Tobacco Workers Union at Lorillard Inc. "At this point, we don't know what we may do in the future, but this could have a snowball effect."

Lorillard, a major cigarette manufacturer, employs about 2,000 people in the Greensboro area.

Governors Expected To Discuss Spangler

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When the University of North Carolina Board of Governors meets Friday one of the topics of discussion is expected to be the performance of system President C.D. Spangler Jr. Some board members say a resolution of support for Spangler may be considered by the board.

In the past 10 days — since three board members said they believe Spangler should resign — the president and his performance have dominated the thinking of the 35-member board.

"It's my notion that the majority is not going to let the minority continue to go unanswered," said one member who declined to be named. "I'm not sure what will happen, but there's probably a good amount of frustration building."

Charles Evans, a board member from Manteo, agreed that Spangler would be one of the subjects at the meeting.

"I would expect that there would be a discussion of the situation and I would not be surprised to see a resolution of support for the president," said Charles Evans, a board member from Manteo.

Last month, board members William Johnson and Walter Davis said Spangler should resign because he mishandled the investigation of the N.C. State University men's basketball program and other matters.

A third member, John Jordan of Raleigh, also said he was dissatisfied with Spangler and questioned whether he could recover.

Jordan sees no need for a resolution.

"That expression is a waste of time," Jordan said. "The Board of Governors cannot build the public confidence in President Spangler. Only he can do that."

Spangler retains support from most of the 35 board members, other members say, including board Chairman Robert "Roddy" Jones of Raleigh.

Some are perturbed that their colleagues have decided to make their criticism public. And some question critics' motives.

Ruth Dial Woods of Pembroke believes some who criticize Spangler are upset because they don't wield as much influence as they did under his predecessor, William Friday, who retired in 1986.

When she came on the board in 1985, she says, "I would characterize that board as a 100 rubber-stamp board," with a handful of members who worked behind the scenes to mold policy for the state's 16 public universities.

But the board is more open now, Woods says, and board members have a more equal shot at shaping policy. "It's hard to undo old allegiances when you were with the guys in the back room and you're no longer in the back room."

Not everyone holds with Woods' assessment, but some board members privately agree.

Johnson, a former board chairman from Lillington, denies his dissatisfaction stems from having less influence. "For me it's not a management style. It's a matter of management substance."

Some members think Spangler took too long on the 6½-month investigation of N.C. State's men's basketball program. Some objected that the investigating commission reported orally — not in writing — to Spangler. They question whether they've been given all the facts.

UNOFFICIAL RESULTS COMPILED BY THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Justice Department Says President Can Circumvent International Law

By James Rowley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A Justice Department official told Congress today that the president has the power to violate international law by ordering the seizure of terrorists or drug traffickers without the consent of other nations.

Assistant Attorney General William P. Barr, who wrote a legal opinion giving the FBI authority to make such arrests, said such violations of international law would be justified to thwart terrorist attacks or capture drug dealers harbored by another country.

Abraham Sofaer, the State Department's chief legal adviser, endorsed Barr's legal reasoning but warned of the dangers of making such arrests because "all nations need to take into account the reactions of other nations to conduct which departs from accepted norms."

Barr and Sofaer told the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights that seizing terrorists or drug traffickers in violation of international law but in self-defense would be legally justifiable.

"In response to an actual or threatened terrorist attack, we would have good grounds under general principles of international law to justify extraterritorial law enforcement actions over a foreign sovereign's objections," Barr said.

"In appropriate circumstances we may have a sound basis under international law to take action against large-scale drug traffickers being given safe haven by a government acting in complicity with their criminal enterprise," he added.

Barr and Sofaer stressed that the legal opinion did not mean a change in government policy that requires cooperation with other nations before an arrest on foreign soil is made. Overseas arrests without a foreign government's consent would only be undertaken with approval of the president.

"It may well be that the president will choose to direct extraterritorial arrests only when he believes that he is justified in doing so as a matter of self-defense under international law," Barr

Blacks Win Top Races In Virginia, New York

By Donald M. Rothberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia, celebrating an off-year Democratic surge, claimed a razor-thin breakthrough today as the nation's first elected black governor. David Dinkins was elected New York City's first black mayor and said voters had responded "with the voice of hope, here and in Virginia."

The volatile politics of abortion hurt Republicans throughout the campaign and powered an election-day nightmare that extended to New Jersey, where Democratic Rep. James Florio reclaimed the governorship for his party and the Democrats also regained control of the Assembly.

Just as significant as the pro-choice political turnout was the extension of black political success in America's large city halls. Led by Dinkins, blacks also succeeded white mayors in Seattle, Cleveland, New Haven, Conn., and Durham, N.C.

The main event of the day was in Virginia, where Republican J. Marshall Coleman trailed Wilder by 7,700 votes of more than 1.7 million cast in the unofficial, final vote count. With all precincts counted, Wilder had 889,869 votes or 50 percent and Coleman had 882,137 votes or 50 percent.

Wilder claimed victory, telling jubilant supporters in the capital of the old Confederacy, "The people of Virginia have spoken." Coleman did not concede, saying, "The race is not yet over," and he would await a final, official count.

Both the Virginia and New York races were far closer than pre-election polls had indicated, in keeping with previous campaigns in which black politicians drew fewer votes than predicted by traditional polling methods.

Dinkins, like Wilder, waged a soft-spoken campaign that dwelled not at all on race. He replaces the often acerbic Ed Koch and will surely bring a new style of leadership to Gracie Mansion.

"This year voters rejected the calls of fear and voted with the voice

The Associated Press

Wilder flashes one-vote sign at polling place in Richmond of hope, here and in Virginia," Dinkins said in victory. "We passed another milestone on freedom's road."

With 99 percent of precincts counted, Dinkins had 898,534 votes or 50 percent, Giuliani had 856,448 votes or 48 percent, and two minor party candidates divided the remainder.

Republican Party chairman Lee Atwater offered the opposition a grudging tip of his hat.

"These were local contests in which the Democrats outperformed us and ran better campaigns," said Atwater. "My hat's off to them, but I don't think it makes much difference at all with regards to the 1990 campaign."

Democratic Party chairman

Ronald H. Brown saw things differently.

He called the results "a tremendously positive sign for us as we move into the '90s. It gives us tremendous momentum heading into 1990," when 36 governorships, 34 Senate seats and all 435 seats in the House are at stake.

A sweep of the governor's races in Virginia and New Jersey would give the Democrats 29 of the 50 governorships.

The contest to fill the U.S. House seat made vacant by the death of Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, in a plane crash in Ethiopia last summer was headed for a runoff between two Democrats, state Sen. Craig Washington and Houston City Councilman Anthony Hall.

Most of Tuesday's action was in the nation's cities.

Coleman Young, 71, won an unprecedented fifth term as mayor of Detroit, defeating 40-year-old Tom Barrow. Other mayors re-elected included Xavier Suarez of Miami who won a third term and Kathy Whitmire who coasted to a fourth in Houston.

Democrat John Daniels was elected mayor of New Haven, becoming the first black mayor of his majority-white city, while in Seattle, City Councilman Norm Rice defeated busing foe Doug Jewett to gain a similar distinction.

Ohio state Sen. Michael R. White defeated his old mentor, City Council President George Forbes, in a bitter contest between two black Democrats to succeed retiring Republican Mayor George Voinovich.

The nasty tone in Cleveland was all too typical of the year's campaigns.

Giuliani, a 45-year-old former U.S. attorney, was unrelenting in his attacks on Dinkins, calling the Manhattan borough president "unfit" for the office of mayor. But once the outcome was determined, Giuliani called on New Yorkers to unite behind the new mayor with "every prayer."

In New Jersey, Florio trounced Republican Rep. James Courter to win a governorship held by Republican Thomas Kean the past eight years. Courter never recovered from criticism suffered when he tried to moderate his strong anti-abortion position.

With 99 percent of the New Jersey precincts counted, Florio — who twice before lost gubernatorial races — had 1,356,957 or 62 percent. Rep. James Courter had 824,505 or 38 percent.

It was Florio's third try for the office and he defeated Courter by a margin of 500,000 votes out of about 3 million cast. The two candidates bombarded voters with negative commercials.

In his victory statement, Florio vowed to move quickly to repair the state's automobile insurance system, one of the most expensive in the nation. Courter bowed out with a pledge to "be back."

Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said Tuesday's results proved that the recent Supreme Court decision opening the way for states to restrict access to abortion had energized pro-choice voters and that "politics in America would never be the same."

She contended that in the Virginia governor's race "the issue of a woman's right to choose was so powerful it overcame all other issues."

Nancy E. Myers, spokeswoman for the National Right to Life Committee, criticized Republicans, like Courter and Coleman, who tried to temper their prior opposition to abortion.

"Courter turned off pro-life voters," she said.

As for Coleman, she said, "He probably could have handled the issue a lot better. He could have come out a lot earlier attacking Wilder."

Prominent black politicians hailed the results in Virginia and New York.

"If Wilder can win in Virginia, the cradle of the Confederacy, black and other candidates of a new breed can win in Georgia, in Mississippi, in Alabama and elsewhere in the South," said Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga.

Abortion Advocates Say Races Prove Issue Is Pivotal Factor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Abortion rights leaders say victories by their candidates in New Jersey and Virginia prove the power of their issue and that "George Bush should take heed."

A spokeswoman for abortion opponents voiced displeasure with the way anti-abortion Republican candidates ran their campaigns in Tuesday's off-year elections.

"The right to choose has been proven to be a pivotal voting issue," said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

The abortion rights group poured money into independent expenditure campaigns in the Virginia and New Jersey races for governor and was involved in selected legislative races in both states.

Abortion also became an issue in the Virginia lieutenant governor's race, where little-known Democratic nominee Don Beyer upset Republican Edwina "Eddy" Dalton, an opponent of abortion who had aired television ads highlighting the issue and seeming to soften her opposition.

Nancy E. Myers, spokeswoman for the National Right to Life Committee, the leading anti-abortion group, faulted Coleman's handling of the issue. "We're frustrated that Wilder was able to frame the debate" on abortion, she said.

She said her group did not work on behalf of Florio's Republican opponent James Courter, who sought to modify his opposition to abortion. She said the losses by Courter in New Jersey and Dalton in Virginia pointed up the risk of backing away from an anti-abortion position.

Voters Back Curbs On Smoking, Taxes To Combat Drugs

Voters said yes to smoking curbs in tobacco country, money to help Utah lure the Winter Olympics, higher taxes to fight drug wars in Kansas City, more prisons for Texas and a new government for New York City.

But they rejected a pay raise and bigger expense accounts for Texas lawmakers, tax money for schools in Michigan and Washington and a new baseball stadium for quake-weary San Francisco.

Gay rights also suffered setbacks Tuesday. In Irvine, Calif., voters reversed an ordinance protecting homosexuals against discrimination, and San Francisco voters rejected a proposal entitling homosexual couples who work for the city to the same funeral and sick benefits as married couples.

The Oakland suburb of Concord repealed an ordinance banning discrimination in housing and employment against AIDS victims. It was the first time a community held a referendum on ending discrimination against people with AIDS or the virus that causes it.

Irvine Mayor Larry Agron called the reversal on discrimination "mean-spirited." The vote was 53 percent to 47 percent.

But Michael Shea, a leader of the Irvine Values Coalition, said, "special protection for homosexuals is something we're not prepared to give at this point."

The "domestic partners" measure in San Francisco was defeated by 1,718 to 402 votes cast.

The stadium also was fiercely contested, falling 1,974 votes short out of 71,210 votes cast. Mayor Art Agnos conceded defeat because the remaining absentee ballots can't make up the difference.

A new $115 million downtown stadium was proposed to replace 29-year-old Candlestick Park, which survived the Oct. 17 earthquake with minimal damage. Opponents of the new stadium said the quake-ravaged city has too many drains on its resources.

Owner Bob Lurie had threatened to move the National League champions, possibly to San Jose or Sacramento, if the measure failed. But he said the Giants would play at Candlestick for at least another year.

The Giants didn't strike out completely. Voters in Scottsdale, Ariz., approved $8.4 million to build a new stadium and keep the Giants from moving their spring training site to Florida.

The new stadium will hold 7,000 fans, about 1,800 more than the current park holds. The Giants have trained there since 1982.

The closest vote involved limiting smoking in some public places in Greensboro, N.C., where the tobacco giant Lorillard Inc. employs 2,000 workers and more than half the city's registered voters smoke.

By only 173 of 29,809 votes cast, the electorate banned smoking in elevators and certain stores while requiring restaurants seating more than 50 people to set aside a quarter of their seats for non-smokers. The measure passed, 14,991 to 14,818.

"I don't think it's going to cost you any jobs," said David Hudgins, spokesman for Greensboro to Alleviate Smoking Pollution. "It's just going to give everybody a place of quiet enjoyment to go out and be happy together and get along."

In Texas, the proposal to triple the current $7,200 salary of state lawmakers to $23,300 went down by more than 2-to-1. A proposal to boost the expense allowance from $30 to $81 also was rejected.

Texas voters, who had 21 ballot proposals to determine, favored the dropping of a 113-year-old provision requiring state office-holders to swear they didn't bribe their way into their positions. The vote was 2-to-1 to drop it.

A $500 million water measure to bring running water and sewers to disease-ridden border towns was approved. So was a proposal to spend $400 million on new prisons to ease overcrowding.

Utah voters bucked a spendthrift trend by approving a plan to spend $56 million in tax revenues on the ski jumps, bobsled-luge runs and skating rinks that could win the 1998 Olympic Winter Games.

Kansas City, Mo., area voters approved a quarter-cent increase in the sales tax to raise $98 million during the next seven years to fight the war on drugs. The measure passed 60 percent to 40 percent.

Michigan voters gave thumbs down to tax hikes for education in Michigan and Washington. Michigan's electorate rejected two proposals to increase the state sales tax to generate $400 million for schools.

Washington state voters soundly rejected a "Children's Initiative" to hike the sales tax by nearly a penny per dollar to help raise at least $360 million a year for smaller school classes, early childhood education, child-abuse and child education. The measure failed by 70-30 percent.

Elsewhere, St. Louis voters rejected a four-cent property tax increase to subsidize the St. Louis Symphony.

New York City voters approved the most fundamental revision of the City Charter this century by passing a plan that gives the mayor more power, boosts the size of City Council from 35 to 51 members and abolishes the Board of Estimate. The measure passed 56 percent to 44 percent.

The city was under U.S. Supreme Court orders to make its legislature more democratic.

Maine voters endorsed a non-binding ban on the Navy's testing of Tomahawk cruise missiles over the state. The missiles are launched from submarines off the coast and fly as low as 500 feet off the ground.

Maine voters also approved a contingency contract to dispose of low-level nuclear wastes in Beatty, Nev.

Most Are Uninformed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Americans and Soviets have at least one thing in common — many don't know much geography and show "an astonishing lack of awareness of the world around them," a Gallup poll showed today.

The survey, the first of geographic knowledge conducted in the Soviet Union, was commissioned by the National Geographic Society to find how the United States compared with its neighbors and other industrialized nations.

The study found Soviets between ages 18 and 24 scored significantly higher than their American counterparts, but did not do well when compared with adults of all age groups in the 10 nations where the test was given.

"We believe the results from the survey point to a startling superpower comparison," said the Gallup organization, which called the international geography survey the largest of its kind. "Americans and Soviets have demonstrated an astonishing lack of awareness of the world around them."

Soviet respondents were, on average, able to identify only 7.4 of 10 places on a world map, compared to a score of 8.6 for Americans, 11.2 for the West Germans and 11.6 for Swedes, at the top of the list, the poll showed.

The other overall scores were Japan, 9.7; France, 9.3; Canada, 8.2; the United Kingdom, 8.5; Italy, 7.8; and Mexico, 7.4.

Thirteen percent of Soviet adults were unable to correctly identify the Soviet Union on a world map, while 41 percent of the Americans could not correctly identify the United States.

Among the 18- to 24-year-olds surveyed, the Soviet score of 9.3 put them in fourth place along with Canadians and Italians. Young American adults came in last with a 6.9 average.

About 1,500 Soviet adults were surveyed this spring in Moscow and Kursk, an industrial city of 425,000 people, 300 miles south of the capital.

Nearly 11,000 people in Canada, France, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Sweden, the United Kingdom, the United States, and West Germany were tested in the spring of 1988 and the results were announced last year.

Congress Raises Debt Cap, Eases Financial Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' passage of a bill raising the national debt ceiling to $3.1 trillion averts a government financial crisis, allowing the Treasury to quickly replenish its empty coffers and avoid default.

The action sets the stage for pressurized confrontations between the Democratic-controlled Congress and President Bush on a range of issues — such as how to stem the tide of red ink that's led to the nation's huge debt burden.

"It provides momentum," said House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif. Lawmakers will focus on wrapping up some long-contentious issues because "there really is a chance to conclude the Congress before Thanksgiving," he said.

The Senate, by voice vote, and then the House, by 269-99, sent the debt bill to President Bush Tuesday night. He was expected to sign it into law today, increasing the borrowing limit by $300 billion to finance government operations well into 1991.

Despite such highly touted efforts as the Gramm-Rudman law, government spending continues to outpace revenue, recently at a rate of $150 billion a year.

As a result, the government has been forced to borrow more and more money. The new statutory debt ceiling, an increase from the $2.8 trillion already borrowed, is more than three times what it was at the beginning of the 1980s.

The Treasury had said that unless they were allowed to issue new debt, the government would have been unable to pay its debts on Thursday. It would have been the first-ever default by the U.S. government, a calamity for the world financial markets and America's prestige.

The debt bill was passed following days of complex negotiations between the two parties on Capitol Hill and the president's representatives.

As a result of the talks, divisive issues such as Bush's capital gains tax cut and a move to repeal the Medicare catastrophic illness law were kept off the debt bill rather than risk default.

The debt bill did carry one legislative sweetener: repeal of a provision in the 1986 income tax law known as Section 89.

The provision prohibited employer-financed health insurance plans from discriminating against lower-paid workers. Business said it was an onerous burden, and its repeal was widely supported in both parties.

As part of the deal allowing the debt bill to speed through Tuesday night, the House was expected to pass for a second time a measure to repeal the catastrophic illness law.

The repeal was attached earlier this year in the House to a deficit-reduction bill that is still pending. The Senate countered with a plan to scale back, but not completely repeal the catastrophic law.

The White House and congressional leaders have now agreed to consider catastrophic separately from the deficit bill. That decision was made easier because the repeal would increase the deficit, at least in the short term.

Bush last week agreed to drop his push for a capital gains tax cut this year. He changed his focus to pressuring Congress to pass a strong deficit-reduction bill.

Under the Gramm-Rudman law, annual government spending in fiscal 1991 was automatically cut $16.1 billion dollars beginning Oct. 1. If a deficit reduction bill is passed and signed by the president, those cuts would be at least partially reversed.

The House and Senate are currently negotiating a package of cuts in entitlement spending and selected tax increases which would help meet the deficit-reduction goals.

Bush Scolds Congress For Blocking Clean Air, Drug Funding Proposals

By William J. Eaton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — In his sharpest criticism of Congress since taking office, President Bush Tuesday scolded the Democratic-controlled body for blocking his proposals on clean air legislation, drug funding and deficit reduction.

Leading Democrats countered that Bush was to blame for a budget-cutting impasse and denied any foot-dragging on a clean air bill or an anti-drug program that the president first requested only two months ago.

The crossfire indicated that the president's traditional first-year honeymoon was over, despite Bush's insistence that he wanted to hold out the hand of bipartisanship to the Democrats.

At a news conference marking the anniversary of his election, Bush vowed to "veto and exhort" Congress until he gets his programs approved.

The president and Democratic leaders clashed over whether the White House or Congress deserved greater blame for the deficit and the $3 trillion national debt.

"The American people know why this deficit isn't down," Bush said. "It isn't down because they see, 4 to 1, that the Congress is to blame."

Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., however, said that tax reductions, the defense buildup and economic slowdowns during the Reagan administration raised the deficit. He added: "Both the president and Congress must share responsibility, but the principal responsibility is the president's."

Bush implied that his controversial plan to reduce capital gains taxes was part of a White House budget summit agreement concluded with bipartisan Congressional leaders last April — a statement that was immediately disputed by Foley.

"Absolutely incorrect!" Foley declared. "The president is misinformed." Foley said a cut in capital gains taxes was neither included nor excluded in an agreement to raise $5.3 billion in revenues to meet deficit reduction targets for this year.

As for the president's charge of delay on his clean air proposals, Foley said Congress would approve clean air legislation next year.

"If we hadn't been involved so long in the capital gains issue, we might have done it earlier," Foley added.

Bush apparently abandoned his efforts to get Congress to act this year on the issue when Senate Democratic Leader George J. Mitchell of Maine refused to allow a capital gains bill to come to a vote unless advocates first could muster 60 votes to shut off debate.

Former Bank Chief Links Senators To S&L 'Scheme'

By Nancy J. Schwerzler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Edwin J. Gray, former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, told a House panel Tuesday that four senators were involved in a "scheme" to aid the controversial Lincoln Savings and Loan and apparently were influenced by "substantial gifts" of political contributions from Lincoln officials.

Gray described an April 2, 1987 meeting with Sens. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., John Glenn, D-Ohio, Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and John McCain, R-Ariz., at which DeConcini led the discussion of Lincoln and its regulatory problems.

Gray said Mr. DeConcini suggested that the bank board withdraw a regulation, which was then under court challenge by Lincoln, that would limit risky investments by thrifts. Lincoln, in turn, would increase its home mortgage lending while decreasing its risky investment ventures that were being questioned by regulators.

"It sounded like a quid pro quo," Gray testified. "It was a quid pro quo... I told Sen. DeConcini I would not withdraw the regulation."

In letters and statements, all the senators at the meeting have disputed Gray's account and said that their chief concern was to ensure that Lincoln was being treated fairly in a lengthy review by San Francisco-based federal examiners.

Gray leveled most of his criticism at DeConcini, but he also accused Cranston of being "untruthful" in denying that a possible deal was discussed at the meeting. However, Gray said Tuesday that at the meeting, "Sen. Cranston didn't say very much; he spent most of his time listening."

Gray also described efforts by former secretary of the Treasury and White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan to force him out of his post or at the least install deregulation advocates, who were also sympathetic to Lincoln, on the bank board. He said Lee H. Henkel, Jr., a former business associate of Keating, was installed on the board in late 1986 at Mr. Regan's behest and with the support of the two Arizona Senators.

Gray contended that he was told by another former regulator, whom he did not name, that the appointment of Henkel was also part of a deal between DeConcini and Regan in which "the appointment was made in return for a vote by Sen. DeConcini on the Contra funding."

'Night Stalker' Vows Satan's Vengeance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The devil-worshipping "Night Stalker" who murdered 13 people during a summer-long rampage that terrorized California told the judge who sentenced him to death that Satan will avenge his execution.

Richard Ramirez, wearing his trademark black sunglasses, delivered a chilling recitation before Superior Court Judge Michael Tynan ordered death in the gas chamber at San Quentin.

"You don't understand me," the 29-year-old Ramirez told the crowded courtroom Tuesday. "You are not expected to... I am beyond your experience. I am beyond good and evil... I will be avenged. Lucifer dwells within us all."

A jury on Sept. 20 convicted him of 13 murders and 30 other felonies in the 1985 attacks. The panel later recommended the death sentence.

The sentence carries an automatic appeal. No executions have been held in California in almost 25 years.

Defense attorney Ray Clark said appeals courts would face a novel issue in the case: determining the impact of the slaying of one juror during deliberations. A juror was shot to death in August by her boyfriend, who later took his own life.

Ramirez burglarized homes late at night, often murdering men in their beds before attacking women and children. Satanic symbols were left at crime scenes and surviving victim testified of being forced to swear to Satan.

In one murder, a victim's eyes were gouged out. In another, a woman testified during the trial she was raped beside the body of her murdered husband.

Ramirez, a drifter from El Paso, Texas, was captured by an East Los Angeles mob on Aug. 31, 1985, a day after his picture appeared in newspapers and on television and he was identified as a suspect in the crime spree.

Jurors, some of whom said they felt the defendant tried to intimidate them during the trial by sneering at them, returned death penalty recommendations on each of 19 special circumstance counts.

"The jury has found death a fitting and just punishment and this court has ratified that judgment," Tynan said.

As the horrific case was brought to a close, Ramirez caused some spectators to gasp as he delivered a rambling statement.

"I don't believe in the hypocritical, moralistic dogma of this so-called civilized society," he said. "I need not look beyond this room to see all the liars, the haters, the killers, the crooks, the paranoid cowards. Truly the trematodes of the earth (a parasitic worm)..."

"You maggots make me sick, hypocrites one and all," Deputy District Attorney P. Philip Halpin dismissed Ramirez's words as "more baloney."

"I certainly wouldn't want anyone to listen to what he has to say because he is a pathetic human being who is grasping at some structure in his life," Halpin said.

New Cease-Fire Proposed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The Sandinista government said today it will propose a new cease-fire plan that calls for a temporary halt in Soviet arms shipments and the ouster of rebels from Nicaragua.

President Daniel Ortega outlined a 15-point plan that he will propose during a meeting with the Contras on Thursday at the United Nations in New York.

The plan includes a proposal that U.S. aid to the rebels be administered by the International Commission for Verification and Support, a U.N.-affiliated commission created to help demobilize the rebels under a Central American peaceplan.

The plan will include creation of routes within Nicaragua for the rebels to use to return to Honduras, where the commission would provide certificates for their repatriation or relocation in third countries, Ortega said.

He spoke at a news conference after the Nicaraguan delegation, headed by Assistant Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco, left for the talks in New York.

Once the agreement is signed, the Nicaraguan government would temporarily stop importing weapons until April 25, 1990, Ortega said. The Soviet Union supplies arms to the leftist government.

A general amnesty would be offered once at least 50 percent of the Contras have demobilized and the rebels free kidnapped people they hold, he said.

Ortega asked for the U.N. meeting to discuss demobilization of the Contras. He proposed it when he announced an end to a 19-month cease-fire last week.

The Contra rebels are to disband and leave their Honduran camps voluntarily by the first few days of December under an agreement signed by Honduras, Nicaragua and three other Central American governments Aug. 7.

are the people." The few police outside the party building did not intervene.

Border officials in West Germany said the number of refugees reaching Bavaria by way of Czechoslovakia since Saturday, when free exit through that country was first permitted, had reached more than 50,000.

Czechoslovakia is the only country to which East Germans can travel freely.

The escape route opened Saturday created the first free passage to the West since the Berlin Wall went up in 1961. Authorities have said the route will remain open until a new travel law takes effect, possibly before Christmas.

So far this year, more than 190,000 East Germans — more than 1 percent of the population of 16.6 million — have moved to West Germany by emigrating legally, escaping or failing to return from approved trips abroad.

West Germany gives them automatic citizenship and help in starting new lives.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Former President Reagan apologized to the entertainment industry for his recent criticism of American TV and movies but said Hollywood should forge a new code for self-censorship.

Reagan's speech to more than 1,000 members of the Hollywood Radio and Television Society was billed as an address on the "unfinished business" of his presidency, but he focused instead on his comments in Japan last month denigrating U.S. film and TV productions.

The former actor said Tuesday the industry should voluntarily police vulgarity and tastelessness to avoid government intervention.

"The federal government has tried to interfere too much and too often," said Reagan.

"Censorship or restriction should be within," he said, suggesting voluntary standards similar to the Hays Code, which held sway through the 1950s.

Reagan said he was appalled by what he sees in movies and on television.

"You can call me a blockhead or a prude if you want, but ... if I was offered a script and told I had to say those words I would have turned down the script," he said.

Reagan said in Japan that he supported Sony's $3.4 billion acquisition of Columbia Pictures Entertainment Corp.

"I'm not too proud of Hollywood these days with the immorality that is shown in pictures and the vulgarity," he said in a TV interview broadcast Oct. 25 in Japan.

"I just have a feeling that maybe Hollywood needs some outsiders to bring back decency and good taste to some of the pictures that are being made."

Reagan began his speech Tuesday with his apology.

"I'm sorry I was a little tardy in getting here today," he said. "You see, my dentist was running late. He had a little difficulty in removing from my mouth the last piece of shoe leather I acquired in Japan."

allegedly were made between February and April of this year.

A Pitt County Grand Jury handed down the indictments Monday.

McPherson is charged with 63 violations of state securities law. Monte F. Little of Ayden and his business partner, Donald Lee Baker of Greenville, are charged with 190 violations each. Don Davis, an Emerald Isle businessman, is charged with 102 counts and Grimesland resident O. Jacobus Venter has 186 charges against him.

N.C. Secretary of State, Securities Division, Investigators Gene Cella and Earl Manning reportedly have found 32 people in Pitt, Carteret, Lenoir, Wayne and Wake counties who bought Interport stock from one of the five men. The office alleges that the five sold stock in the company without being registered with the state as salesmen and without registering the stock with the state. They have also been charged with conspiracy and stating misleading facts.

Value of the alleged sales is between $400,000 and $500,000.

According to its incorporation papers, Interport Beverages Co. was formed to engage in the import, export and sale of beverages as well as "goods and merchandise of every kind and description."

Little, reached at his Landmark Trading office in Ayden this morning, said he and Baker were "sitting here waiting" for their lawyer(s) to arrive and let them know what time to turn themselves in at the courthouse.

Little said his lawyer was attempting to arrange details of the surrender with the Pitt County district attorney's office.

"I've never done this before," Little said. "So I don't know how it's all going to occur. But I want to get on over there and get it over with. I'm looking forward to proving my innocence in all this as soon as possible."

An Ayden native, Little was baseball coach for East Carolina University between 1977 and 1979.

Little and Baker operate Landmark Trading together. McPherson said he understands Little's and Baker's business is "an import-export" operation.

McPherson said Davis "sells warranties to car dealerships."

Venter is reportedly a South African citizen who has lived as a legal alien in Pitt County since December 1987. He failed to appear in court Friday on charges of six counts of worthless checks and two counts of selling unregistered securities. A Superior Court judge ordered his $50,000 bond forfeited and issued an order for his arrest. He was arrested on Aug. 8 for sale of unregistered securities.

McPherson was suspended from the practice of law for a year ending Jan. 17, 1984, said Root Edmonson, counsel for the state bar. He said McPherson's license was suspended because he used a no-longer-valid power of attorney of Greenville businessman M.K. Branch or Branch's Tar Heel Homes and Realty firm to transfer land in Greene County owned by Branch or his company to a realty firm which paid McPherson. Root said he understands this was done as a way for McPherson to collect on a debt owed him by Branch.

Fed Lowers Funds Rate, Easing Credit

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve, apparently worried about weakness in key manufacturing industries, has moved to ease credit slightly, government officials and analysts said Tuesday.

The key federal funds rate — the interest rate banks charge each other on overnight loans of reserves — moved down to 8.625 percent from 8.75 percent. The Fed can push the federal funds rate up or down by removing funds from the banking system or injecting funds into it.

In response to the latest move, traders said, the stock market pulled out of its recent dive. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 14.96 points to 2,597.13.

By itself, the small decline in the federal funds rate would have little effect on the economy, but most analysts expect rates to slip further in the weeks ahead.

"This is the typical Fed slow-motion easing, one tiny step at a time," said David Hale, chief economist at Kemper Financial Services in Chicago. "There is little doubt that (Fed Chairman Alan) Greenspan wants rates down a little more."

Although many economists had expected the Fed to postpone any further easing because of last week's stronger-than-expected report on new jobs, a Bush administration official said that top

Fed officials have expressed concern about the slump in such industries as automobiles, appliances and construction.

"Greenspan likes to dig into the numbers, and what he's seeing raises some warning signs," the official said.

The Fed does not comment publicly on such actions.

Until this spring, the Fed had been pushing up interest rates for about a year in an effort to slow the economy and curb inflationary pressures. Starting in June, the Fed allowed the federal funds rate to drop in a series of small steps from a peak of about 9.75 percent to about 9 percent.

After the sharp drop in the stock market on Oct. 13, the central bank injected additional funds into the banking system to help reduce the danger of a spreading panic, allowing the key rate to fall to 8.75 percent.

While most analysts believe that growth will continue at a relatively slow rate, there is recent evidence that makes some economists fear a recession might start this winter.

"We're seeing all kinds of signs that the economy is slowing and there is the danger of heading into a recession," said Lyle Gramley, a former Fed governor who is now chief economist at the Mortgage Bankers Association. "The Fed is behaving prudently by moving to reduce that risk."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose today, extending Tuesday's rally on signs of a new move toward a more stimulative Federal Reserve credit policy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 17.21 to 2,614.34 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 586 up, 247 down and 449 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 27.11 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Stocks turned upward Tuesday on evidence that the Federal Reserve was taking steps in the money markets to encourage interest rates to decline. News accounts this morning quoted unnamed government officials as saying that inference was correct.

Gainers among the blue chips included Philip Morris, up 1/2 at 41 3/8; General Electric, up 1/4 at 53 3/4; McDonald's, up 1/4 at 30 3/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/4 at 43 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 1.05 to 186.79. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .64 at 369.15.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 14.96 points to 2,597.13.

Withdraws

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — One of Union County's largest industries has withdrawn from the Monroe Union County Chamber of Commerce, criticizing the chamber's handling of a school bond referendum and other controversial community concerns.

Just one day before the chamber's annual planning conference, Cuddy Farms fired off a denunciation of the business group and withdrew its membership.

"We were disenchanted that it was business as usual at the chamber with the vote taken on the school bond issue and we feel it was handled poorly," said Vaughn Correll, executive vice-president-secretary-treasurer of Cuddy Foods.

Correll said the issue had been a discussion item at the last three planning conferences held by the chamber, and he felt stating a position two weeks before the vote was interpreted as doing a disservice to the membership.

Recession

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A recession may be on the way, but it's not likely to hurt consumers, according to First Union Corp.'s chief economist.

Instead, businesses will take the brunt of any downturn in the nation's economy, said David Orr, vice president for economic research in First Union's Funds Management Division in Charlotte. He spoke to about 200 people Monday at an economic briefing sponsored by the bank.

"What's important to remember is that if we have a recession next year, it will be very shallow," said Orr, echoing remarks he made last year during a similar briefing.

Earnings

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Wellco Enterprises Inc. on Tuesday reported net income of $493,000, or 57 cents per share and revenues of $7,132,000 for its first quarter ended Sept. 30.

Those figures compare with net income of $433,000 or 50 cents per share from revenues of $6.6 million in the same quarter in 1988.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 11 to 9 in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 813 issues up, 662 down and 496 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 163.00 million shares, up from 135.48 million in the previous session.

Hearings Focus On Navy's Buying Bias

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — During six days of hearings beginning Wednesday, government investigators plan to show that a pattern of bias in favor of IBM equipment exists at the highest levels of the Navy and that IBM, through its own behavior, contributed to the problem, sources say.

According to these sources, testimony will show that:

—Navy contracts are routinely written with specifications that favor IBM equipment.

—In at least one instance, Navy contracting officers tried to rectify this situation but were "shouted down" by senior officials.

—IBM may have extended gratuities to Navy personnel in connection with at least one contract.

—Only a "minuscule" number of Navy computer contracts are ever subjected to true competition despite rules that require full and open competition.

—The General Services Administration's oversight of computer procurements via the delegation of procurement authority process, an authority granted to agencies by GSA for making large computer procurements, has been lax at best.

Braniff Airlines To Stay On Ground

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. — Embattled Braniff Inc. closed its corporate offices and refused further comment after grounding its last 46 daily flights while it seeks investor cash or an outright buyer.

The abrupt schedule stoppage surprised and angered employees and left a few unsuspecting customers frustrated in Orlando, Kansas City, Dallas and other airports.

Braniff service counters were closed, and travelers with reservations were advised on a toll-free telephone line to check with other airlines "who may honor tickets in some cases."

"I don't expect any further announcements," airline spokeswoman Sandy Smith said Tuesday after the abrupt cancellation of Braniff's schedule at midnight Monday.

Chairman William G. McGee and other executives were busy arranging to mothball the carrier's fleet and notify most of its remaining 1,800 employees that they were without jobs.

Braniff will determine by Friday the exact size of its remaining work force, said Thomas Volz, senior vice president of marketing.

"It could be 150 to 250 or 300 people," Volz said.

In addition, Volz said, Braniff probably won't honor an agreement with John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. to extend employee health insurance coverage through November. If the airline fails to pay premiums to John Hancock this

Saturday Decision On QB Lewis Makes Moves To Shore Up Tailback Position

By Woody Peele

The Daily Reflector

David Daniels is moved to back-up role at tailback

East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis won't decide until Saturday who his starting quarterback will be. He's also made some moves to shore up the running back positions, and is trying to find ways to generate second-half offense.

The Pirates will be closing out their home schedule against Temple in a 1:30 p.m. game at Ficklen Stadium. They have two more road games remaining in the weeks ahead.

Saturday, Lewis started sophomore Jeff Blake at quarterback in place of regular Travis Hunter. Hunter, Lewis explained, was benched because he had broken a team rule.

Blake learned on Thursday that he would be the starter for the Miami game, a 40-10 loss at the hands of the nationally seventh-ranked Hurricanes.

At his weekly press conference Tuesday, Lewis said that both quarterbacks had performed well.

"We look at (the quarterback situation) as a positive," Lewis said. "We have two guys who have proven that they can play as winners. We were pleased with the way Jeff played in the first half (against Miami). And we were pleased with the way Travis played against Syracuse (the week before)."

Lewis said that in practice this week, the two will alternate working both with the first and second units.

"They will each take an equal number of snaps with the first and second teams, Lewis said. "Then, we'll decide on Saturday who will be the starting quarterback. This is as fair as we can be to them and to our football team."

Lewis added that the team has great faith in either of them.

"But we've got to get 60 minutes out of them — out of our whole team for that matter," he added.

The Pirates, since their game with Louisiana Tech, have not scored in the second half and have generated very little offense in those four games.

"This is as big a mystery to you as it is to us," Lewis said of the lack of second-half fireworks. "We've analyzed our calls in the first half and our calls in the second half to see if we're not coming back to things that worked for us. We've tried to analyze how the other teams have adjusted against us. We've tried to see if our game plan is too broad or too narrow."

Lewis said he has asked the scout team to try and give the varsity its best look at the opposition.

"And we've asked our players to be as intense as they can on the practice field, he said. "In a game, one team will make plays and the other won't. Whether it's in the final two minutes, as it was at Syracuse, or in the last 32 minutes, as it was at Miami, you have to continue to be intense throughout the game. We've just got to work on making those plays."

The Pirates will have to try and make them with at least one true freshman in the backfield. Saturday, Cedric Van Buren will draw the starting assignment at tailback.

"That's a lot of pressure to put on a 17-year-old freshman," Lewis said, "but I think he'll respond to it."

Backing up Van Buren will be David Daniels, who will continue to work at the number two fullback spot. Michael Rhett will line up at the starting fullback position. Sam Beverly has moved up from the scout team to number three tailback, while Victor McBryde will be the number three fullback.

The moves were caused by injuries to both the starter, Willie Lewis, and backup, Denell Harper, at tailback. Lewis suffered a knee injury against Miami and was to undergo surgery today. He is lost for the remainder of the season. Harper, out several weeks with rib cartilage damage, will be re-evaluated next week.

Others definitely out this week include wide receiver Clayton Driver, sidelined with a stress fracture in his leg; defensive back Donald Porch, also lost for the year and slated for knee surgery today; defensive end George Koonce, recovering from a broken wrist; offensive lineman Tod Creech, out with a knee strain, and running back Eric Booker, also out with a knee strain.

Lewis said there were several doubtful players, too. They include defensive back Ed Brogdon, with a kneecap injury; defensive tackle Ike Pullett, with a hip injury; and linebacker Compton McCurry, with an injury similar to Harper's.

In addition, wide receiver Walter Wilson, linebacker Jerry Dillon, offensive lineman Todd Drugac and center Chad Martin are all nursing injuries which will hamper them in practice, but they are expected to be ready to play on Saturday.

Kenan Somewhat Familiar To Jags They Met In Preseason Workout

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — It will be a slight case of deja-vu Friday when Farmville Central opens the state 2-A football playoffs at home against James Kenan.

The Jaguars, 10-0 and ranked second in the state, began the season with a victorious scrimmage over James Kenan in mid-August.

But Jaguar coach Dixon Sauls isn't putting too much stock in the early-season meeting between the two teams.

"They've made a great deal of improvement since then. They've got a new running back (Jeffrey Wilson)," Sauls said. "He's got outstanding speed and is a breakout threat and he has really made their offense."

Wilson came up from the JV team right before start of East Central 2-A Conference play, and in five games, has accumulated a team-high 516 yards.

"He was an awfully good rusher," James Kenan coach Billy Byrd said. "I tried to get him to come up the first of season. He preferred to stay down. Before we started our conference schedule, I talked to him about coming up and he agreed."

He has combined with quarterback Chuck Sutton, who has thrown for 854 yards and eight touchdowns, to give James Kenan a balanced offense.

Sutton's top receiver is Bernard Shaw who has 12 catches for 263 yards and one touchdown.

"They run and throw the ball well in a multiple formation," Sauls said. "It makes your preparation difficult. We still must execute our defense and tackle well."

The Tigers finished third in the ECC, suffering lopsided losses to both Wallace-Rose Hill and Clinton, two of the top-ranked 2-A teams in the state.

The ECC is traditionally one of the tougher conferences in the East, but will it help James Kenan?

"That's a good question," Byrd said. "Clinton and Wallace both kicked our butts pretty good. We do have a strong conference. Wallace has only lost one ball game and that was to Clinton."

Farmville, like James Kenan, has also added a new running back to its offense. Sauls brought senior fullback Lenwood Mercer, who is in his first year of high school football, along slowly this year.

He had 118 yards on only seven carries in the Jaguars' 28-0 win over Pamlico County last Friday. His emergence has allowed fullback Anthony Foreman to split time at

Defense Will Be Key To Winning As North Pitt, Northside Meet

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — Defense will be the key ingredient in a first round 2-A state football playoff matchup between North Pitt and Northside Friday night.

Both teams have relied on strong defensive efforts to get to the playoffs and will need more of the same if they have any intentions of advancing.

"There's no doubt about which side of the line of scrimmage wins," North Pitt coach Stuart Ennis said. "Defense is going to win for you. Friday night, defense is the key. Northside has scored a whole bunch of points and has not had many points scored against them."

Both teams use strong wishbone-oriented offenses, though North Pitt's is more power-oriented — led by fullback Malcolm Wiggins (709 yards rushing, seven touchdowns) and halfback Reggie Daniel (730 yards, 12 touchdowns).

The Panthers set the table with Wiggins' inside running, but can also bounce outside with Daniel.

"They've got a big strong fullback and that's going to be a key for us," Northside coach Walt Davis said. "We have to try tackling at the line of scrimmage. If he gets in the secondary he can cause us some problems."

Northside, which was consolidated from 1-A Bath and Belhaven this past year, also relies on its fullback to get things going offensively. And Jerome Bailey has come through for the Panthers.

"He's our fullback and we use him a lot and we do a lot of faking with him," Davis said. "Everything starts with him. He's made some good things happen for us the last few weeks."

For Ennis, getting to this stage has been a battle that is thankfully over.

"I don't know if there is any right way or wrong way to approach it," he said. "This is what you work all year for."

"We don't look at it as a pressure situation. The pressure situation comes in trying to get to the playoffs."

North Pitt won six of its last seven games to earn a second-place finish in the Eastern Plains Conference.

"We know they are a football team that has come on at end of season," Davis said. "They are probably playing their best football of the season going into the playoffs."

"We (also) feel like we're healthy and we have to feel like we're play-

Another Robinson At Navy

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

(Editor's note: This is the first of a series previews for the Colonial Athletic Association basketball teams.)

The days of David Robinson at the U.S. Naval Academy are over, but ... what's this ... another Robinson on the Midshipman roster?

That's right. There's another Robinson donning the navy blue and gold, David's little brother Chuck, a 6-5 freshman forward.

But Pete Herrmann isn't looking for him to fill his brother's big shoes. He just hopes that he can do half as well.

"He's a very good player to coach," Herrmann said. "He's an outstanding athlete and has a good touch. He will be his own Robinson."

When brother David first came to the Naval Academy, he was about the same size, but then blossomed into a 7-footer. Chuck, however, has shown no signs of doing that.

"I don't think he'll grow much," Herrmann said, also adding that Chuck shows no signs of being under any pressure from his brother's memory at the Naval Academy.

David, of course, went on to be not only the Rookie of the Year in the conference as a freshman, but the Player of the Year in the league the next three seasons. As a senior, he earned national Player of the Year honors, also.

Chuck Robinson averaged 22 points and 11 rebounds as a high school senior, and is expected to see plenty of action on a Navy team that is generally regarded as young.

Three starters return from last year's team, however, giving Herrmann a good nucleus to build around. They are 6-6 forward Eddie Reddick, 6-2 guard Joe Gottschalk and 6-8 forward/center Sam Cook.

Reddick was the premier player for the Middies last season, averaging 15.1 points and 8.0 rebounds a game. Gottschalk averaged 12.5 points a game while Cook had an 8.0 scoring mark and pulled 4.7 rebounds.

"We should be more stable this year," Herrmann said. "We have 40 points a game returning this year, where we only had five last year."

And while there are no seniors on the squad, Navy returns seven off last year's team and brings in nine freshmen.

The three starters will be joined by junior guard Erik Harris, 6-1, who scored 7.0 points per game last year, and drew a starting role at times.

Gottschalk is a three-point shooter — over half his field goals came from that range. He twice tied the single-game record for three-pointers in a game with six.

If Cook moves outside, sophomore Mick Marusich, 6-9, is a candidate for the center slot. He played in 21 games last year, averaging 1.4 points a game.

Other returning veterans include 6-2 guard Mel Davis, who averaged 1.2 points a game, and 6-6 forward Doug Fee, who averaged 1.5 two years ago. Fee sat out all of last season with an injury.

In addition to Robinson, the other freshmen are Chris Mang, 6-7, Keith O'Connell, 6-7, Larry Parker, 6-8, Paul Lancaster, 6-6, Robert Catten, 6-9, Lance Reinhard, 6-3, John Haase, 6-4 and Michael Burd, 6-3. All are expected to see action during the year.

Herrmann sees the biggest weakness as a lack of proven depth and size. How well the Middies perform will depend on how well the veterans perform and how quickly the freshman come on to give them the help they need.

Pirates Set Basketball Scrimmages

The East Carolina University men's basketball team will hold a pair of public scrimmages this week. The first will be tonight at 7 p.m. at North Pitt High School. A small admission charge will be made for this game. The second will be Saturday in Minges Coliseum approximately 20 minutes after the conclusion of the ECU-Temple football game in neighboring Ficklen Stadium. There will be no admission charge for this game. East Carolina will face the Red Star team of Yugoslavia on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Minges in its first game against another opponent. ## ECU Volleyball Falls To VCU Virginia Commonwealth won three out of four games to claim a collegiate volleyball win over East Carolina in Minges Coliseum Tuesday night. ECU won the first game, 15-12, but the Lady Pirates then dropped three games in a row, falling 15-13, 15-7 and 15-9. ECU falls to 16-13 to end the regular season. It was the first winning record for the squad since 1982. The Lady Pirates are seeded third in the Colonial Athletic Association Tournament to be held Friday and Saturday in Harrisonburg, Va. ECU opens against James Madison Friday at 11. An opening-round win would send ECU against American at 6 while a loss will pit the Lady Pirates against the loser of George Mason-UNC-Wilmington match for fifth place. In other ECU volleyball news, Debbie Pate, a senior from Arcadia, Fla., was named CAA Player of the Week for the week ending Nov. 6.

Triad Group Seeks Baseball Team

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A group of investors is trying to build support for a minor league baseball team that would represent all of the Triad area. But the organizer of the effort says they need more support from Forsyth County in order to be successful. "We're trying to expand the group to include a lot more people from Forsyth County because we're trying to make a Triad project out of it," said Robert C. Eubanks Jr., partner in the Greensboro investment company McMillion Eubanks. "This is exactly what we've been looking for in the Triad to bring these communities together so we can work together." Of the initial investors who have pledged $1 million to secure the rights to a franchise, just one is from Winston-Salem: John Turner, president of Forsyth Partners, a development company based in the Twin City. A list of potential Forsyth investors will be drawn up this week. Next Monday evening, that group — along with those already committed to the project from Greensboro, High Point and Burlington — will meet in Winston-Salem with officials from the new league.

Prep Playoff Team Is Disqualified

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Magnolia High School, which had qualified for the state 1-A football playoffs, will not participate because the team used an ineligible player, the North Carolina High School Athletic Association announced Tuesday. Magnolia (6-4) will have to forfeit five games because of the ineligible player. Greg Locklear had failed to meet the academic requirements but played on those games. NCHSAA Executive Director Charlie Adams ruled Locklear ineligible after he learned football coach Robert Carr asked Lumberton High School art teacher Clyde Jacobs to change Locklear's grade from failing to passing so he would be eligible to play football after transferring to Magnolia last month. The changed grade gave Locklear five subjects passed his last semester instead of four. Five is the minimum number an athlete must pass per semester to remain eligible for competition. Littlefield High School of Lumberton (3-7) will assume the Lumber River Conference's No. 3 berth. Littlefield had finished just behind Magnolia in the conference standings this year. Littlefield will travel to North Moore, the Central Tar Heel Conference No. 1 representative, in the opening round. In addition to forfeiture of games, Magnolia faces a $300 fine for using an ineligible player.

Vikings To Practice In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings, who lead the NFC Central with a 6-3 record, will be using Charlotte's Memorial Stadium as their practice facility Nov. 15-18, Charlotte Hornets owner George Shinn announced Tuesday. The Vikings, who will play the Philadelphia Eagles in Veterans Stadium on Nov. 19, were invited by Shinn to practice and prepare for the Eagles in Charlotte. When Shinn met with Mike Lynn, the Vikings executive vice president and general manager, a few weeks ago in Minneapolis, he inquired about bringing a World American Football League team to Charlotte. Lynn accepted Shinn's invitation to bring his 45-member team, including recently acquired running back Herschel Walker, to Charlotte. The team will be Shinn's guests on Nov. 17 when the Hornets take on the Golden State Warriors. The Nov. 18 practice session will be open to the public.

Dooley Warns Of Balanced Tulsa Team

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — When Wake Forest meets Tulsa on Saturday, the Demon Deacons will face a doubly dangerous offense, coach Bill Dooley said Tuesday. "Tulsa has an experienced offense; they're mainly juniors and seniors," Dooley said at his weekly news conference. "They normally rush for 200 yards a game and pass for 200 yards a game. They mix it up. They have good balance." Dooley noted that Tulsa quarterback T.J. Rubley is completing more than 50 percent of his passes. "He makes the offense go," Dooley said. "Not only does Rubley have talent, but he's got a talented receiver in Dan Bitson. When you watch Bitson on film, you see that he has excellent hands and outstanding speed ... He jukes two to three tacklers and takes off down field. He averages 20 yards a catch; he makes things happen."

Brown Makes It Clear He's Unhappy

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina football coach Mack Brown didn't say he was unhappy with some calls made in last week's 35-3 loss to Clemson. But he made it clear he was less than pleased when he disclosed that he called Atlantic Coast Conference officials to complain. An ACC rule prohibits coaches from criticizing officials' calls. But he said in his weekly news conference Tuesday that Bradley Faircloth, assistant ACC commissioner in charge of football officials, came to Chapel Hill Monday to review the game film. Brown wouldn't say what he and Faircloth saw. Faircloth did not return phone calls. But the Tigers probably would have still won, regardless of whether the calls were correct, Brown said. Nevertheless, Brown said, the two plays in question were emotion drainers for the Tar Heels. The first came during the initial drive of the game. Facing a fourth-and-one from the Tar Heels' 22, the Tigers' Terry Allen was thrown for a 2-yard loss. The Tar Heels were whistled for lining up offside, however, and Clemson went on to score a touchdown to go ahead 7-0. The second came when North Carolina tailback Eric Blount broke free for a 97-yard touchdown that would have closed the gap to 14-10 just before the half. The Tar Heels were called for illegal procedure. The officials said wide receiver Joey Jauch lined up offside.

Clark Commits To Pirates

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Heath Clark undoubtedly will face some adjustments when he continues his baseball career at the college level. Homesickness, however, won't be one of them. Clark, a senior at J.H. Rose High School, recently announced his intentions to attend East Carolina and play for coach Gary Overton. The official signing period opens April 11. "I've always wanted to go to ECU because they have an up-and-coming program," Clark said. "They have a good team, a good future and I should have a chance to play there." Clark, a second baseman known for his dependable glove and hard-nosed play, also considered Virginia Commonwealth, N.C. State and UNC-Wilmington. But ECU never wavered from the top of his list. "East Carolina was No. 1," Clark said. "It's close to home and my parents wanted me to go there."

"I felt that East Carolina was a better choice because they have a better program. And it's in Greenville."

Clark becomes the second player from the Rose program to make a verbal commitment this fall. Shortstop Chris Christopher announced in October that he would attend Auburn University.

Announcing his college choice early should relieve the burden of having to produce in front of scouts during his senior season, Clark said. But that doesn't mean he will stop striving to improve.

"During the season I won't have to play under pressure, but I need to play well," Clark said. "Now that I've committed I can just go play like I did last year."

Clark, a two-year starter for Rose who has also played with Pitt County

Post 39 American Legion team, batted .395 with a pair of homers last season as the Rampants advanced to the Eastern semi-finals of the state 4-A playoffs. He hit around .350 his sophomore year when Rose lost in the state championship finals.

Clark was primarily a shortstop before joining the Rose program where he made the switch to second base. Since then, he and Christopher have developed into one of the top middle infield combinations in the state.

"These two guys are very good," Rampant coach Ronald Vincent said. "They both have good hands, good arms and are good fielders. What separates these guys from a lot of players is they work so hard."

"Every day in practice they're the last ones to leave. They're very coachable."

It's that work ethic and a willingness to listen and learn that have helped Clark develop into a college prospect.

"He plays baseball as it was meant to be played," Vincent said. "He dives, gets dirty."

"His physical size is not a limitation because of his work ethic. He's small, but he works hard in the weight room and works hard in the off-season."

Defensive is Clark's forte, though he swings an adequate bat.

"Defensively, he can play right now," Vincent said. "Offensively, there's that adjustment. The thing about baseball is you never know how a guy's going to hit at the next level."

Runnin' Rebels Race By Russians In 107-102 Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
LAS VEGAS — The preseason hype was that UNLV is so good this year it might as well mail in its reservations to the Final Four.

Larry Johnson and his teammates showed Tuesday night how such hype gets started.

Johnson dominated underneath despite a poor shooting night and Anderson Hunt scored 36 points as the highly regarded Runnin' Rebels scored a 107-102 win over a physical Soviet national team.

It was the third straight preseason victory for UNLV over the Soviets, who were opening a 10-game United States tour.

"They're a very good team, a very nice team," Soviet coach Vlas Garastas acknowledged afterward. "They're very quick, they rebound and they have good defense."

UNLV did nothing to harm its stock — some have picked the Rebels No. 1 — and the victory brought a smile to the face of Coach Jerry Tarkanian as his team moves into next week's National Invitational Tournament.

"You couldn't get a much better game this early in the season," Tarkanian said. "I thought we were going to blow them away in the second half, but they kept coming back."

Johnson, a junior college transfer who led the United States to a World University Games title over the Soviets in September, scored 29 points and grabbed 13 rebounds despite hitting only six of 16 shots, mostly only a few feet from the basket.

ing some of the better football of our season considering the start of the season and the fact that we're a new school."

Ennis would like to keep the ball out of the hands of Bailey and Co., and he hopes his offense is up to the challenge.

"I think it's going to be real important for us to control the ball offensively and keep their defense on the field as much as possible," Ennis said. "When you think about advantages and disadvantages, their football team is able to platoon. They don't have anybody going both ways. That could be a factor in the ball game. Hopefully our kids are in good enough shape that we'll be able to last all game."

Daniels leads the Jaguars with 644 yards rushing while Anthony Foreman has 608.

"We're doing several things well," Sauls said. "We're running the ball well inside. I think (Mercer) has added a whole new dimension to our team. Anthony Foreman has done an excellent job all year, but Lenwood Mercer is a more powerful inside runner."

They have combined to lend a nice complement to Farmville quarterback Morris Foreman, who has passed for 638 yards while also rushing for another 561.

"We have to stop the quarterback," Byrd said. "He's an awfully good football player. They're real big in the middle and they have good skill people."

"We're going to have to stay balanced. They have some good tailbacks and good fullbacks. The way offenses are now, you have to show different looks unless you have a lot of studs who can sit in there and play your schemes."

Devils' Hines Strives For The Perfect Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Clarkston Hines thinks of someday having that one faultless day that everybody dreams of, but it seems he's almost had the perfect career.

"You always strive for the perfect game," said Hines, who either owns outright or shares every career receiving mark in the Atlantic Coast Conference record book.

"Coach (Marvin) Brown, my position coach, says a lot of things, but certain things stand out in my mind," Hines said, grinning. "One, that you always strive for the perfect game. That you did your job, your assignment, that you did even more than that. That you made every block, that you caught every pass."

"After that game he said you should quit, because you'll never have another one like that. That's in the back of my mind. I guess you could say I'm a perfectionist. I strive to do the best, and I try to do everything I'm suppose to do."

"Two, he also stresses not to be complacent. Once you're satisfied with what you've done in the past, there's no future really."

Neither Hines nor his Duke teammates are satisfied yet. Duke, 6-3 overall and a surprising 4-1 in the ACC, closes out its home schedule on Saturday when it hosts North Carolina State.

The Blue Devils can move into a first-place tie with Virginia by beating the Wolfpack, and can sew up at least share of the title by beating North Carolina the following Saturday. A seventh victory would also put them in prime bowl consideration.

Hines, one of the 30 seniors who will play their final game in Wallace Wade Stadium, also has a personal score to settle with the Wolfpack. Duke has scored 88 points against N.C. State in the past two years, yet only has a loss and a tie.

The Wolfpack triumphed 47-45 two years ago at Durham and last year salvaged a 43-43 tie in Raleigh that deprived Duke of a bowl berth.

Two years ago, Hines caught season highs of 11 passes for 192 yards and three touchdowns, but left feeling like the goat.

"We had a chance to kick a field goal at the end and win the game, but I dropped a pass that was right in my hands," he recalled. "That will always be a downside to my career."

Hines didn't just pout over the drop. It spurred him to work that much harder.

"I think that drop really stood out in my mind the entire off-season," he said. "It made me work that much harder to improve myself as a receiver. It was a big motivation thing. Not only has it helped me try to improve as a receiver. I think about everything I could have or should have done instead of the success I've had."

Only three times in ACC history has a receiver topped the 1,000-yard mark. Hines has done it twice, and he's just 144 yards away from a third one. Twice he was an All-ACC selection and last year was named a first-team All-American, the first time in 11 years a Duke football player has received that recognition.

Hines is also averaging 18.2 yards on each of his 47 catches, 12 of which have gone for touchdowns. His next touchdown reception will tie the Duke season record set by Chris Castor in 1982 and the NCAA career mark of 34 set by Elmo Wright of Houston from 1968-70.

Unusually, Hines is already Duke's all-time leading scorer with 204 points. He ranks ninth on the NCAA's all-time receiving list with 3,025 yards on 175 receptions, which includes a red-shirt freshman year when he caught just three passes for nine yards after coming off major knee surgery.

"He does evrything," Duke head coach Steve Spurrier says. "What he does best is he competes. He's competitive and he's out there trying to help us win the game. He's not concerned about all those records."

Last Saturday at Wake Forest, Hines caught six passes for 251 yards, an incredible 41.8 yards average. Included were bombs of 76, 45 and 97 yards, the final one a record as the longest play in school history. The 251 yards represented the third highest total in ACC history.

Hines' reaction? "Right now there's only one record I'm concerned with, our worst record," he said.

Akron A Challenge For Vols?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The goal, Tennessee coach Johnny Majors said, is to play up to potential every week, whether the opponent be nationally ranked Alabama or lesser known Akron.

The No. 11 Volunteers, 6-1 and coming off a stretch of four Southeastern Conference games, will be in Neyland Stadium Saturday against the Akron Zips of Coach Gerry Faust.

Majors realizes Akron does not arouse the passion of fans, but he expects something else from his players.

"I think it's one of the big challenges you have in coaching and playing," Majors said Tuesday. "This is not a knock on anybody, but you don't get much help. If you're a normal person or even an abnormal person, you probably won't be too excited about us getting ready, but we've got to play it. I've never known too many easy ones."

Akron will take it seriously, Majors predicts.

"They have a winning record. They're coming off some confidence-building wins. They've played 10 games and this is the last one, so they'll let it all hang out and probably give us everything they've got in their books," he said.

Tennessee, off last week, used the time to rest some injured players and work on pass defense, which yielded more than 800 yards and seven touchdowns in the last two games, a loss to Alabama and a victory over Louisiana State. Majors said Keith Denson probably will see action at cornerback after missing four games with a shin injury. "And for goodness sakes, we need some help in that area," Majors said.

The Vols also have shifted wide receivers Carl Pickens and J.J. McCleskey to the defensive backfield to get more depth and speed.

"I think there's a good chance both will see action against Akron on defense," Majors said. "Both have picked up things rather well. I'm anxious to see how they perform."

The Zips are 6-3-1 in just their third year as a Division I-A team and are coming off two high-scoring victories — 51-0 over Cincinnati and 52-7 over Northern Arizona, a 1-AA team.

"We're approaching the Akron game as a game in which we have to continue to improve," Majors said. "Their record certainly says they've done some good things."

He said times have changed from the era of powerful teams pouncing a schedule of weak opponents.

"I'll tell you that coaches used to schedule three or four games a year they had a tough time with, and the other seven or eight they could line up and beat the hell out of them because they were a lot better and had more players," Majors said. "Those days are gone. We've got to have a healthy respect for them. I can tell you that. Any time you don't, you've got a problem."

The Zips are led by senior quarterback Mike Johnson, a left-hander who has completed 127 of 268 passes for 1,615 yards and eight touchdowns. He also has thrown nine interceptions and rushed for nearly 400 yards in the Zips' option offense.

"We haven't seen an option offense in a long time," Majors said.

Akron averages 28.7 points a game and last week scored four touchdowns with the offense on the sidelines. Jeff Sweitzer ran back two punts for scores and the defense returned two interceptions for touchdowns.

The Zips' defense has limited opponents to just 97 yards a game rushing.

Dick Schultz Sees Shorter Football, Cage Seasons

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Expect shorter college football and basketball seasons within the next few years, NCAA executive director Dick Schultz says.

Delegates at the convention in Dallas in January will likely shorten spring football practice and the number of regular-season basketball games in response to complaints by athletes who say they have little time for anything but their sport, Schultz said Tuesday.

He also believes legislation will be proposed during the 1991 convention that will further restrict the amount of time athletes are required to spend on their sports.

"I think that you are going to see legislation that's going to set limits on the amount of practice time you can have per week, and the amount of off-season conditioning that you can have," he said at the International Conference of Sports Business sponsored by the University of South Carolina. "It's a real concern of the athletes."

The proposals were made in October by the NCAA Presidents Commission.

"I think you'll see some reductions," said Schultz. "It may not end up exactly where they have it, but I think you're going to see some reductions in both of those. I think they probably would be willing to accept some reasonable compromise, but they don't want move off those numbers at the present time."

The Presidents Commission will sponsor legislation that calls for:

- Reducing the number of regular-season basketball games from 28 to 25.
- Delaying the start of the beginning of basketball practice from Oct. 15 to Nov. 1 and the opening of the season from the fourth Friday in November to Dec. 1.
- Cutting spring football practice in half to 10 practice sessions in 18 days and eliminating all contact. At present, coaches are allowed to have 15 contact practices in a 36-day span.

The proposals were an outgrowth of a massive study done for the commission released November

Salary System Change Proposed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — If Barry Rona has his way, there will be a new way of setting baseball salaries next year.

Rona, executive director of the owners' Player Relations Committee, is preparing management's opening proposal in the collective-bargaining negotiations with the Major League Baseball Players Association. It calls for a radically different system.

Baseball players currently are split into three groups. Those with less than three years service have no bargaining rights in salary negotiations, those with between three and six years are eligible for salary arbitration and those with six or more can become free agents.

Rona, speaking during the annual general managers' meetings, detailed parts of management's new plan.

"It starts with a definition of revenues," he said Tuesday. "After you define your revenues, you agree on the percentage that would be designated for the players to cover health-care costs, pension costs and salary costs. You would then define in collective bargaining what percentage of the player money would be designated for the zero-to-six group and what percentage would be guaranteed for the post-six group."

"Within the zero-to-six group, you would eliminate the clubs' right to unilaterally set the salaries for the zero-to-three players, and you would eliminate salary arbitration and substitute a ranking system based on two years of performance, very heavily weighted towards what we call a show-up factor."

He said the idea was based "on the theory that the best way to measure not only performance but other criteria that are less measurable — meaning on-the-field leadership, defensive skills — can best be measured by who the manager decides who deserves to play."

Rona and his staff, using computer projections, can show the effects of the proposal on the budgets of each club.

As for the present, Rona said the PRC was eliminating the free-agent information bank that operated dur-

Raiders, Cummings Riding 25-Game Winning Streaks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Eighteen North Carolina high school football teams head into Friday's first-round playoff games undefeated, including two top-ranked teams riding 25-game winning streaks.

Richmond County, which finished the 1989 regular season 10-0, was ranked the top 4-A team by The Associated Press all season. The defending champs received eight of a possible 10 first-place votes for 98 points in the final regular season poll as voted upon by a statewide panel of prep sportswriters.

Undefeated Asheville Reynolds received the other two top votes and placed second with 84 points.

Garner and Greensboro Page were tied for third after the Pirates knocked off previously unbeaten East Forsyth last Friday.

The rest of the 4-A poll included Northern Durham, West Forsyth — both undefeated — Fayetteville 71st, Jacksonville, East Forsyth and newcomer East Wake.

Burlington Cummings is in the same position as Richmond County — ranked No. 1 in the poll all season, undefeated and riding a 25-game winning streak.

The defending champion Cavaliers received seven of a possible nine first-place votes for 87 points.

Statesville and Lexington stayed in position 2-3, but South Iredell dropped from fourth to seventh after its first loss of the season.

Newcomer Tarboro was the only team ranked in the state's four classifications with four losses, but the 10th-ranked Vikings have won six in a row after opening the season with four straight losses.

Clinton in 2-A and Currituck in 1-A remained solid top picks in their respective classifications.

Starmount (9-1) cracked the 2-A rankings at No. 9.

The only major change in the 1-A poll saw Murphy (7-3) drop from fifth to seventh after its loss to second-ranked Swain County last Friday.

Following are The Associated Press high school football polls with team, first place votes in parenthesis, record, total points and poll position last week as voted upon by a panel North Carolina prep sportswriters:

Clinton Stays Atop 2-A Poll

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

On this, the final Daily Reflector high school rankings for the 1989 football season, three new leaders have come to the top of the heap.

Only the 2-A leader, Clinton, managed to hold to its position during the 11th and final week of the regular season.

Meanwhile Greensboro Page, Statesville and Bladenboro have taken over the top spots in the 4-A, 3-A and 1-A, respectively.

Rankings are based on a team's success against the strength of its schedule. A team playing a strong schedule might lose several games and still be ranked above a team going unbeaten and playing a weaker schedule.

Points are awarded for each game a team wins and for each game someone it has beaten wins a game. Fewer points are awarded for playing below a team's classification and more for playing above classification.

Page, 10-0, moved from a tie for fourth to first place in the 4-A ranks with a total of 89½ points. The Pirates defeated East Forsyth, another ranked team from last week, to earn a substantial number of points.

Richmond County, 10-0, moved from third to second with 87 points while Garner, last week's leader, also 10-0, slipped to third with 85.

One newcomer appeared in the 4-A ranks as Charlotte Independence moves in at number nine.

Statesville, 9-0, finished first in the 3-A ranks with 80 points, moving up one spot. Smoky Mountain, 10-0, slipped a notch to second with 79½ points. Burlington Cummings advanced from sixth to third with 75 points.

There is one newcomer in the 3-A list, Kannapolis, which comes in at sixth place.

Clinton, 10-0, held onto first place in the 2-A ranks with a considerable lead of 4½ points. The Dark Horses finished the regular season with 75 points, while runner-up Farmville Central had 70½. The Jaguars also were 10-0 on the year.

Third place is a tie between 10-0 Clayton and Newton-Conover, also 10-0. Both have 66 points.

There were no newcomers in the 2-A rankings.

Bladenboro, 9-0-1, moves from fourth to first in the 1-A category. The Bulldogs finish the year with 49 points, just inching out Rosewood, 9-1 and Swain, 8-2, which tied for second with 48 points.

Midway moves into the top 10, tying for the final position with Southwest Onslow.

Vote Close On Park

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The vote on San Francisco's proposed new baseball stadium will come down to a count every last ballot. With votes in from 88 percent of the 621 precincts, there were 73,761 in favor and 75,855 against Proposition P. That represented a 1 percent difference.

The proposal calls for construction of a ballpark in the China Basin section which would become the new home of the Giants. Candlestick Park, the team's home since 1960, would still be used by the San Francisco 49ers of the NFL.

Bufs Take Over First In Reflector Rankings

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Last week's leader in The Daily Reflector Collegiate Computer Rankings slipped one place to second as Colorado used its win over Nebraska to vault into first place.

Colorado, second last week, defeated number seven Nebraska to move past the Fighting Irish by 32 points. Notre Dame, 9-0, defeated Navy and got far fewer points than did 9-0 Colorado in its win over the Cornhuskers.

Through the 10th week of the college season, Colorado has 2,094 points while Notre Dame has 2,062.

Points are awarded for each game a team wins, with additional points awarded each time a team it has beaten wins, to the third level of competition.

Thus, the rankings are a measure of a team's success against the strength of its schedule — thus a team losing several games but beating tougher opponents than a team unbeaten against weaker opposition might rank higher.

A case in point would be the Miami Hurricanes, only 27th on this week's rankings.

The Hurricanes are 7-1 at this point of the season. But among their seven victims is only one team with a winning record — East Carolina. The Pirates are 4-3-1 after their loss to the Hurricanes this past weekend.

Two other teams, Michigan State and San Jose State are break-even teams with four wins and four losses. The remaining four, Wisconsin (2-6), California (3-6), Missouri (2-7) and Cincinnati (1-7-1) all have losing records.

Overall, Miami's victims are 20-

37-2. Clemson holds onto third place in this week's list with an 8-2 records and 1,784 points. Alabama also held to fourth at 8-0 and 1,660, while Florida State jumps from 11th to fifth with a 7-2 record and 1,648 points.

Making the biggest jump inside the Top 25 is Virginia, leaping from 15th to sixth. The biggest leap into the Top 25 was made by Brigham Young, coming from 41st to 22nd.

Following are the top 25 teams, East Carolina and its opponents, and the remaining Atlantic Coast Conference teams:

1. Colorado (9-0)	2,094
2. Notre Dame (9-0)	2,062
3. Clemson (8-2)	1,784

Seattle Cages Hornets; Johnsons, King Ejected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — Michael Cage is proving you don't have to be a 7-footer to be a good NBA center.

The 6-foot-9 pivot man scored 15 points on five-of-nine shooting from the field, and had 14 rebounds in Seattle's 128-88 romp Tuesday over the Charlotte Hornets.

"I like the movement of our offense, and I have discovered most of the centers are slower than me," Cage said.

He earned the center spot after 7-foot Alton Lister was traded to Golden State in the offseason.

Cage keyed a 13-0 Sonics run during a four-minute span of the first quarter, helping the Sonics break the game open early.

Kelly Tripucka's jump shot tied the game 6-6 with 8:21 in the first quarter. Cage's jumper put the Sonics ahead for good. He added a three-point play and another layup during the spurt.

"Michael's gone after the boards and has played very consistent," Sonics coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "We pass better and have more options with him in the middle.

He's playing well because he's used to the system."

The NBA's top rebounder two seasons ago, Cage is contributing as both as a rebounder and scorer in the pivot.

"I shot 200 jump shots a day this summer, and it's falling right now," he said.

Cage wasn't the only Sonic who shot the ball well. Seattle hit 49 of its 92 field goal attempts. Charlotte managed 32 of 85.

Xavier McDaniel and Dale Ellis scored 23 points each and Derrick McKey added 21.

With Cage leading the way, Seattle outrebounded Charlotte, 53-35.

The Hornets' highly touted J.R. Reid, a rookie from the University of North Carolina, was held scoreless, had one rebound and played only 10 minutes.

Reid chipped a tooth in a battle under the basket and was taken to a dentist in the second quarter. He will be available for duty Wednesday against Utah.

Charlotte coach Dick Harter said he was concerned about his team's performance that equaled the worst beating in the franchise's history.

Cleveland also beat Charlotte by 40 points, 133-93, on Nov. 4, 1988.

"I haven't been sleeping well the last three weeks," Harter said. "We have to think about making some changes. I can't keep playing guys who aren't going to play hard."

Rex Chapman led the Hornets with 19 points and reserve guard Dell Curry added 12.

Around The League

For one night, NBA stood for National Boxing Association.

The Los Angeles Lakers held off the Phoenix Suns 111-107 Tuesday night despite having Magic Johnson ejected, along with the Suns' Kevin Johnson, less than 3½ minutes into the game.

And Stacey King, Chicago's top draft pick, was thrown out in the fourth quarter of the Bulls' 117-114 victory over Detroit for throwing a punch at the Pistons' Scott Hastings.

As the Suns' Jeff Hornacek attempted to inbound the ball after a Lakers turnover, the two Johnsons shoved each other hard twice. Magic Johnson threw two punches that grazed Kevin Johnson before they were separated and ejected. Magic Johnson also was assessed a punching foul.

"We were both just trying to set the stage for our team," Magic Johnson said. "We just exchanged words and started pushing, but we were stunned when we got kicked out. To me, the officials should have seen a difference between pushing and fighting."

Elsewhere, it was Milwaukee 106, Boston 100; Washington 118, Atlanta 114; Houston 109, Portland 86; Golden State 118, Los Angeles Clippers 94; Sacramento 96, Dallas 94 and Miami 83, New Jersey 77.

The Lakers withstood a furious Phoenix comeback as James Worthy scored 35 points and Byron Scott added 20. Worthy missed two free throws and blew a chance to ice the contest with 48 seconds left and the Lakers leading 108-103.

"I took a pounding tonight and everyone was fatigued, but when Magic's out, someone has to assume the big responsibilities," Worthy said.

After a Phoenix timeout, Dan Majerle drove against Worthy but missed a 12-footer with five seconds to play.

The Lakers' largest lead was 68-50 after A.C. Green's three-point play with 9:53 remaining in the third period. With the score tied 97-97, Los Angeles outscored the Suns 5-0 over the next 1:06, capped by Scott's jumper with 3:56 left.

Chambers led the Suns with 30 points and Hornacek had 21.

Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons attributed the ejections to the NBA's heightened sensitivity to violence.

"The officials are on edge," he said. "We've seen Detroit get fined a lot and I think the officials have a quick trigger."

Bulls 117, Pistons 114

Michael Jordan's slam dunk broke a tie with 1:05 remaining and the Bulls beat the Pistons at Chicago for the first time since Jan. 16, 1988. Chicago had lost seven straight home games to the Pistons and seven in a row in regular-season play against Detroit since April 3, 1988.

Jordan had 40 points, with his key basket coming after Scottie Pippen snatched the ball from Isiah Thomas. Joe Dumars kept Detroit in the game with 19 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter, while Mark Aguirre had 22 and Thomas added 20.

The Bulls didn't think much of a magazine article in which the Pistons detailed how they stop Jordan.

"My teammates can read Sports Illustrated," Jordan said. "They're not dumb. Tonight I took one less dribble, stopped and put up the shot. If that's what they call the Jordan Rule, I guess we beat it."

Bucks 106, Celtics 100

Fred Roberts scored 26 points and Ricky Pierce had 14 of his 21 in the fourth quarter, including a key basket with 24 seconds remaining, as Milwaukee won its home opener.

Pierce's biggest basket of the game was a jumper from the left side that gave Milwaukee a 103-100 lead. Larry Bird's two free throws and a turnaround jumper with 41 seconds left had brought Boston to within 101-100.

But after Pierce's basket extended Milwaukee's lead to three points, Bird missed a 3-point shot with 12 seconds to go and Roberts made a free throw one second later. Jay Humphries got a layup just before the buzzer for the Bucks' final points.

Bird and Kevin McHale each scored 18 points for the Celtics.

Bullets 118, Hawks 114

Bernard King scored 15 of his 19 points in the third quarter and grabbed a key offensive rebound with 12 seconds left. The Bullets led 115-114 with 12 seconds left when Washington's Mark Alarie missed a shot and King rebounded.

The Hawks had a chance with four seconds left trailing 116-114 but a corner jump shot by Cliff Levingston bounded off the rim.

Rockets 109, Trail Blazers 86

Mitchell Wiggins scored eight points in the third quarter, two less than the entire Portland team. Portland led 52-50 at halftime but Wiggins hit an 18-footer to tie the game and Houston went on to outscore the Trail Blazers 28-10 in the period.

It was the second-lowest scoring total for a quarter in Trail Blazers' history. They scored nine points in a quarter on Dec. 12, 1972 against the Milwaukee Bucks.

Buck Johnson led Houston with 18 points, and Wiggins and Otis Thorpe had 14 each. Akeem Olajuwon had 13 points and 20 rebounds as seven Houston players scored in double figures. Clyde Drexler led Portland with 20 points, while Jerome Kersey had 13.

Warriors 118, Clippers 94

Chris Mullin scored 32 points as the Warriors got their first victory of the season. Golden State took a 12-2 lead and was never headed.

After the Clippers closed to 30-24 in the second quarter on Reggie Williams' jumper, the Warriors scored 12 of the next 16 points and led by 10 or more the rest of the game.

Mitch Richmond scored 21 points and Sarunas Marciulionis 18 for the Warriors. Michael Young scored 24 points and had 14 rebounds for the Clippers.

Kings 96, Mavericks 94

Rodney McCray led a balanced Sacramento attack with 20 points, Kenny Smith added 17 and Wayman Tisdale, Ralph Sampson and Danny Ainge each had 16. Rolando Blackman led Dallas with 22.

The Mavericks took advantage of a 5½-minute stretch without a Sacramento field goal to build an 87-79 lead with 7:27 remaining. The Kings then ran off nine straight points in 2½ minutes to lead 89-87 with 4:59 left.

Heat 83, Nets 77

Kevin Edwards scored 15 points and Tellis Frank and Rony Seikaly each added 14 as Miami held off two late charges for its first victory of the season. The Heat, a second-year expansion team, dropped the first 17 games last year and the first two this season.

Miami led 73-61 midway through the fourth quarter when a free throw and two baskets by New Jersey's Chris Morris sparked an 11-1 spurt that cut the gap to 74-72. Miami sealed the victory by scoring the next six points as Edwards and rookie Glen Rice made baskets around two free throws by Rony Sparrow.

Dennis Hopson led the Nets with 17 points and Sam Bowie had 15.

Small Steps Lead O's Olson To AL Rookie Of The Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Gregg Olson's 1989 Rookie of the Year season was a series of small steps that led up to a final rush of success.

Olson did not win a spot on the Baltimore Orioles' Opening Day roster until the final weeks of spring training. He grew into the Orioles' closer over the first two months of the season.

And, as the Orioles battled to the final weekend for the American League East Division title, he finished with 21 consecutive scoreless appearances, a streak that clinched the award.

Staying in contention as long as we did, that made the whole season fun," Olson said by telephone from Louisville, Ky. "We had such a great season. I don't think those two games ... it wasn't like we choked up and gave away those games. We fought until the end."

Olson, who admits his unsuccessful outings stay with him longer, may remember one wild pitch he threw in his last game.

The Orioles went into Toronto for the final weekend trailing the Blue Jays by one game. In the opener, Baltimore led 1-0 in the eighth inning and was four outs away from a victory and a tie for first place. Olson threw a curve ball that bounced away from catcher Jamie Quirk and allowed the tying run to score with two outs.

"It was one of those things," Olson said. "Who's to say if I had made the pitch he wouldn't have hit it?"

The Blue Jays won the game in the 11th inning, then clinched the divi-cord, breaking the mark of 23 by Doug Corbett in 1980. The total was eight more than the rest of AL rookies combined this year. He is the first relief pitcher to win the AL honor.

Olson, the Orioles' first-round draft choice (fourth overall) in 1988, struck out 90 and walked 46 in 85 innings. He gave up 57 hits as opponents batted .188 against him, while left-handed hitters batted .135, the lowest in the majors.

After making an adjustment and mixing more fastballs with one of the sharpest breaking curve balls in the majors, Olson did not allow a run after July 31. In those 21 appearances, the right-hander gave up 11 hits and struck out 23 in 26 2-3 innings, getting 11 saves.

He also was the toughest major leaguer to hit a home run against. He faced 365 batters and allowed only one homer, to Dwight Evans in Boston on April 15.

Olson averaged 9½ strikeouts per nine innings. Only four other AL pitchers — Nolan Ryan, Tom Henke, Lee Smith and Bryan Harvey — had more strikeouts than hits allowed.

Only Todd Worrell, who saved 36 games in 1986, has had more saves as a rookie. Terry Forster, who saved 29 games in 1972 at age 20, is the only pitcher to get more saves at a younger age.

Still, Olson can list a few improvements he'd like to make next year.

"I got a couple of things I'd like to do," he said. "My holding on base runners is not the best, there are some little things I could do. I could be more steady out there. I could be more consistent."

Olson received 26 first-place votes and two seconds from a 28-member panel of the Baseball Writers Association of America for 136 points. Kansas City Royals pitcher Tom Gordon got one first, 19 seconds and five thirds for 67 points. Seattle Mariners outfielder Ken Griffey Jr. got one first, two seconds and 10 thirds for 21 points.

Baltimore third baseman Craig Worthington was fourth with 16 points, followed by California Angels pitcher Jim Abbott with 10 points and Texas Rangers pitcher Kevin Brown with two points.

"Gordon had a great year and you have to wonder what would have happened if Griffey hadn't gotten hurt," Olson said from Louisville, Ky. "The same with Junior Felix.

You can't expect something like that with all the guys around the league who had the years that they did. I didn't want to get my hopes up."

Olson could not have imagined at the season's beginning that he would become the sixth Baltimore player to be named Rookie of the Year.

"I didn't know if I was going to make the team at all coming out of spring training," he said.

NFLPA Surrenders Negotiating Power

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The NFL Players Association is giving up its right to negotiate a contract for the league's players.

It may not, however, give up representing the players.

Less than a week after an appeals court ruled against its antitrust suit filed at the end of the 24-day 1987 strike, the union informed management in a letter that it would seek decertification.

"The players association will no longer be asserting its rights under labor law as an exclusive bargaining agent, but that doesn't mean the players' legal challenge to management will be over," Doug Allen, the NFLPA's assistant executive director, said. "In fact, it will continue."

But at least one player felt the union was giving up on its membership.

"I think they're really kind of abandoning the players and trying to pass the buck onto the players and maybe not living up to their responsibilities," Vikings linebacker Scott Studwell told ABC Radio Sports-

"They feel like maybe they have jeopardized our position such that they might think we can handle it better."

"I think it's ludicrous to think individuals will be able to bargain a position with management as opposed to a solid foundation of players or a union or whatever you want to call it."

The move stems directly from last week's decision by the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, which ruled that NFL owners were not in violation of antitrust laws simply because of an impasse in negotiations between the union and management.

In effect, that 2-1 decision negated the union's antitrust suit against the league and upheld the NFL's free agency system. Allen said the union would appeal the decision.

The decision to decertify will have to be voted on by the players. It was unclear how long that would take. In the past, players have generally ratified decisions made by union leadership and the executive council.

In any case, that could mean there could be two court cases going at once. If the union votes to decertify, it would likely have to go to court again to challenge management's right to impose its rules.

"Until our appeal is heard on this ill-advised and very troublesome decision, the players have two choices — bargain for benefits collectively or bargain individually for compensation," Allen said. "The union will no longer be a shield behind which management can use to protect itself."

"This decision appears to say that as long as there is an ongoing relationship between the players (union) and the league, players can't challenge restrictions, as there was in the past," NFLPA counsel Dick Berthelsen said.

It remained unclear what decertification would mean.

Management, meanwhile, called for a resumption of negotiations and Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, expressed his regret in a letter to Gene Upshaw, the union's executive director.

"We continue to believe that a resumption of negotiations would best serve the players' interests," Donlan wrote.

De Klerk, Extremist To Meet

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk has agreed to hold talks with the leader of the country's largest white extremist group, the neo-Nazi Afrikaner Resistance Movement, his office says.

The meeting, to be held at an unspecified time this week, was requested by the movement's leader, Eugene TerreBlanche, and announced Tuesday.

TerreBlanche's organization espouses the creation of a whites-only nation in the northeastern third of South Africa.

Its members often wear khaki uniforms with swastika-like emblems, and TerreBlanche often ends his speeches with a Hitler-style salute.

TerreBlanche asked for the meeting after de Klerk, who took office in August, met with prominent black anti-apartheid activists and declared his willingness to confer with leaders across the political spectrum.

The Afrikaner Resistance Movement has denounced de Klerk's decision to ease restrictions on anti-apartheid protests and his pledge to extend political rights to blacks.

In July, TerreBlanche said de Klerk was "not man enough" to run against him for a parliamentary seat. But de Klerk had to quit Parliament to become president, and TerreBlanche decided not to run for office.

Cabinet ministers plan two other meetings this week related to ongoing political controversies.

Foreign Minister Pik Botha is to travel Thursday to the nominally independent black homeland of Transkei to confer with its military leader, Gen. Bantu Holomisa. The 33-year-old general last month announced he might allow the outlawed African National Congress to operate in Transkei and has suggested holding a referendum to see if homeland residents want to renounce their "independence," which is not recognized by any foreign country.

Development Minister Stoffel van der Merwe and Deputy Foreign Minister Leon Wessels were to meet today with the Rev. Frank Chikane, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, to discuss the alleged maltreatment of hundreds of blacks by authorities in Ciskei, another nominally independent homeland.

Chikane said Tuesday that Ciskei authorities had bulldozed the homes of more than 300 families who had sought to retain their South African citizenship after their community, Ngqonkweni, was incorporated into Ciskei.

Chikane demanded that the South African government reassert jurisdiction over the community, restore the demolished homes and compensate for damages.

More than 800 members of the community have taken refuge at a Catholic Church in King Williamstown, near the Ciskei border.

Long Lines At Polls Stalling Voters In Namibian Election

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINDHOEK, Namibia — Voters streamed to the polls today, many for a second day after being thwarted by long lines, to elect the assembly that is to write a constitution and declare Namibia independent from South Africa.

Many voters camped overnight in their places after standing in line Tuesday without reaching the polling booths. Others, after waiting all day, went home to sleep, and came back to try again today.

On Tuesday, several polling stations stayed open hours past closing time while others ran out of ballots and ink as they accommodated the crush of voters.

Today was the second of five days of U.N.-supervised balloting in the predominantly black territory for the 72-member assembly, which will be chosen according to the proportion of votes each of the 10 political parties receive.

The main election issue is whether the left-leaning South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), which fought a 23-year guerrilla war, will get the two-thirds of the seats necessary to write a charter without consulting any of the other parties.

Its main rival is the Democratic Turnhalle Alliance, a multiracial coalition that favors a capitalist economy and was part of a transitional government installed by South Africa.

Election officials estimated that 20 percent of the 701,483 registered voters cast their ballots Tuesday.

Gerhard Roux, spokesman for the territorial government, said, "The people of our country will forever remember ... the feeling of expectation and election fervor" of the day. Officials said the election could be extended to Sunday if necessary, but Roux predicted the voting would go smoother today because first-day glitches had been solved.

He said one cause of the long delays was the large number of people who arrived to vote without bringing identification or voter registration cards.

Some white South Africans, eligible to vote because they used to live in Namibia, flew on special chartered flights to vote at Windhoek's airport.

SWAPO supporters formed a long line at the airport polling booth, and some of the whites had to abandon plans to vote in order to catch their return flight to South Africa.

Territorial and U.N. officials have agreed that no voter will be turned away. Voters without identification were permitted to cast ballots to be placed in separate boxes so they can be counted later once the registration is confirmed. Election officials hope results will be available Nov. 15.

To reach some remote areas of the sparsely populated territory, helicopters were being used as mobile polling booths, flying to a different village each day.

On Tuesday, television news showed an elderly, one-legged man pulling himself across the dirt with his hands to reach a voting booth.

"Namibians went to the polls with an overwhelming enthusiasm," U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said Tuesday, adding that one polling station in the north used up 4,000 ballots — its allotment for the full five days — and several ran out of ballots and ink.

No serious political violence was reported despite lingering animosities from a 23-year civil war.

In Katutura, the main black neighborhood outside the capital of Windhoek, one line stretched for about a mile when polls opened.

U.N. Force Going To Central America

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — After a month of delay during which 2,000 Contras slipped into Nicaragua, the Security Council is taking the unprecedented step of sending peacekeepers to Central America to stop the border crossings.

Another mission for the 625-strong border patrol force will be to interdict shipments of Nicaraguan and Cuban weapons that the State Department says are being made to leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Sandinista officials are to meet Contra leaders in New York Thursday and Friday for talks mediated by a joint U.N.-Organization of American States commission. Honduran officials will sit in as observers.

The Contras are insisting on reinstatement of the 19-month cease-fire with the government. President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua suspended the unilateral truce last week, citing mounting rebel raids he said were aimed at disrupting national elections set for Feb. 25.

The Contra attacks violate an Aug. 7 agreement by five Central American presidents under which Ortega promised the free elections in exchange for the demobilization of the Contras by early December.

The State Department says about 2,000 Contras infiltrated Nicaragua in recent weeks, and that now about 4,000 are in Nicaragua and 10,000 remain in their bases in Honduras.

The United States ceased arming the Contras in February 1988 but the Bush administration has continued to supply them with non-lethal aid.

The border patrol force is the first U.N. peacekeeping force to be deployed in the Western Hemisphere, and U.S. acceptance of it marks a reverse by Washington.

Earlier this year, then-U.S. ambassador Vernon Walters said Washington opposed such a force and Jeane Kirkpatrick said when she was ambassador that U.N. peacekeepers would never have a role in Central America.

Deployment of the force had been delayed for weeks by the failure of the United States to adopt a clear policy.

A U.S. diplomat, speaking privately, said Ambassador Thomas Pickering had won political support for the force, but it took longer to persuade Capitol Hill that the $41 million cost for six months was worthwhile.

Other officials said there was a split in the Bush administration over whether the peacekeepers would interfere with U.S. support for the Contras camped in Honduras.

Canada, West Germany and Spain will provide the bulk of the U.N. soldiers, pilots and staff for the force, to be called ONUCA after the Spanish initials for U.N. Observer Group-Central America.

The force will also contain a Latin American contingent. Colombia and Venezuela have agreed in principle to provide troops.

ONUCA will be a highly mobile border patrol, equipped with jeeps, helicopters and speedboats.

It will have 260 military observers; 115 crew members for 12 helicopters and an airplane; 50 members for a naval unit consisting of speedboats and patrol boats; 14 medical workers; about 104 U.N. staffers for administration; and 82 locally recruited civilians.

Headquarters will be in Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

More Than 250 Are Dead At Chernobyl

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — More than 250 people who worked at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant during the 1986 accident or helped clean up after it have died, a newspaper reported today.

The toll reported by the weekly Moscow News was far higher than the official toll of 31 killed in the April 26, 1986, explosion and fire at the plant in the Soviet Ukraine.

A spokesman for the government agency that is responsible for the Chernobyl cleanup acknowledged the figure of 250 dead but said only the 31 could be traced directly to the disaster, the world's worst atomic accident.

"More than 250 people of those who were at work at the time of the explosion or worked on liquidating the consequences of the 20th century's greatest accident, have already died," Moscow News said.

Its article, on a new association of those concerned about the accident, did not say what the source of the figure was or provide any more details of it.

The government newspaper Izvestia also printed a report on the association, which calls itself simply "Chernobyl," but it did not use such a figure.

However, it did say that "many of those who worked for a long time in conditions that were dangerous for their health, need help today."

Alexander Karasyuk, an engineer and spokesman for the Kombinat organization that is handling the cleanup said in a telephone interview from Kiev: "We can't say that those 250 died directly from illnesses caused by radiation."

Karasyuk said he is a member of the Chernobyl association.

The register of the dead included some people who died of illnesses from which they suffered even before an explosion and fire ripped through Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor. More scientific study was needed, he said.

Further information on the figures could not be obtained immediately. Most offices in the Soviet Union were closed because today was taken as a holiday after the celebration of the 72nd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

The figure of 31 dead, which officials have used as the death toll since just months after the accident, includes 28 people who died of radiation sickness, two who died of burns and one who had a heart attack trying to put out the fire, Karasyuk said.

Officials say they give regular medical check-ups to thousands of people who were exposed to radiation in the accident. A radiation center in Kiev, about 80 miles south of the power plant, has files on about 600,000 people, the Kombinat spokesman said.

After the accident, which released a cloud of radioactive material that circled the world, Soviet officials evacuated thousands of people in an 18-mile zone around the plant.

Year-Round School Plans Find More Support

By Lori Dodge
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PETERS, Mo. — Jennifer Rainey's assessment of summer vacation used to be: three long months of boring.

That was before she transferred to Fairmount Elementary School, where students attend class year-round and summer break is replaced by four minivacations that fall just when a sixth-grader needs them.

"It gives you something to look forward to," said Jennifer, 11. "You think, 'Hey, a couple more weeks of this and then I get three off.' I like it this way because it seems like you get more time off."

Jennifer's is the nation's longest-running, year-round school. Francis Howell School District, just west of St. Louis, pioneered the concept in 1969 in an effort to solve overcrowding but today education reformers think the idea may be just what the country needs to improve its educational system.

"We're asking schools to do more and more, but we're keeping the clock and the calendar the same. You can't fit 10 gallons into a five-gallon can," said Ernie Boyer, former U.S. commissioner of education and now the head of The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching in Princeton, N.J.

Students spend the same number of days in class, but instead of a summer vacation they get shorter breaks throughout the year. More and more schools are scrapping traditional schedules in favor of the more efficient year-round ones, and no one seems to be complaining.

"I'm convinced that a longer school year is inevitable because of the need to ... meet the changing work and family patterns of the nation," Boyer said.

This year, an estimated 475,000 students in 19 states — less than 1 percent of the nation's students — attend year-round schools, said Charles Ballinger, executive director of the National Association for Year-Round Schooling.

But that's twice as many as five years ago, he said.

Ohio has the longest school year, with 182 days, and Minnesota has the shortest with 170, according to the Education Commission of the States. The Missouri Board of Education plans to ask the Legislature to increase its 174-day year — the nation's second-shortest — to 200 by the year 2000. Thirty-four states use 180-day school years.

Even if the school year isn't lengthened, many educators say a year-round schedule makes sense. Some say it improves learning. Others say it helps ease overcrowding and puts school buildings to work full time.

"The traditional, agricultural calendar has no value to us any longer," said Norman Brekke, superintendent of the K-8 Oxnard School District in Ventura County, Calif. "As a matter of fact, the nine-month calendar and the fact that schools are out for three months of the year is a costly extravagance, which I don't believe our society should accept."

Brekke said his district saved $16 million — the cost of two new schools — by converting to year-round classes in 1976, and test scores have improved.

Supporters of year-round schooling include the Missouri National Education Association, which recently issued a task force report recommending that all of the state's schools consider year-round programs.

In California, state law requires districts to file a feasibility study on year-round schools or have a program to be eligible for some building funds.

Utah also has provided incentives for consideration of year-round plans and some inner-city districts must have year-round schooling by the 1990-91 year.

However, some educators say that while they like the idea, it's not always workable.

In St. Louis, for example, Superintendent Jerome Jones said the buildings aren't equipped for year-round instruction; most aren't air-conditioned, and the district already is strapped for money to pay for paint and plaster.

"Personally, I think it's desirable," Jones said. "If it were possible, I would explore it."

Even the Francis Howell district has found it's not workable at the secondary level. An experiment with a junior high school failed because of the problems presented by extracurricular activities like sports.

Another group that's not exactly thrilled is the summer camp industry.

"People are very concerned about what could happen, but at the moment, the impact hasn't been significant," said Shirley Walch, who heads the American Camping Association's Southern California section. "Some of our camps can accommodate and adapt and then there are some that could be devastated by it."

Administrators at Fairmount say their system is supported by students, teachers and parents.

"It's a system that's worked very effectively," said Principal Larry Smith. "The burdensome part is developing the schedule, staffing the building and the movement of students and teachers in school."

Fairmount students are split into four cycles and attend class for nine weeks, followed by three weeks off. The start of each cycle is staggered, so that at any given time, three cycles are in session and one is off. Classrooms are always filled.

The system is not without some drawbacks, though. Teachers say the biggest headache is moving.

For working parents, the biggest concern is arranging for child care when their vacations don't coincide with their kids'. Some children use the time to visit grandparents or enroll in YMCA or other activities.

Whistling Ducks Put On Stamp

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A 25-year-old Minnesota wildlife artist is the winner of this year's government Duck Stamp competition, besting more than 600 other entrants for the award.

A panel of judges on Tuesday selected an acrylic painting of two black-bellied whistling ducks in flight by artist Jim Hautman of Plymouth, Minn., as its choice for the next Duck Stamp, covering the 1990-91 hunting season.

The federal stamps, which also are purchased widely by collectors, must be bought for licenses to hunt waterfowl.

The contest is perhaps the most prestigious in area of wildlife art. Hautman also could earn as much as $1 million from commercial printings and other royalties, although the government pays no money for use of the painting.

Five judges selected Hautman, who had entered the Duck Stamp competition four previous times, after they sifted through the works of 603 artists during two days of judging at the Interior Department's auditorium.

More than a million of the stamps with Hautman's design will be sold for the waterfowl hunting season, bringing $12.50 apiece to the government. Last year the Interior Department received more than $18 million from the sale of the stamps.

Although the government sold nearly 1.4 million stamps last year, the demand for the stamps has been declining in recent years. About 2.4 million stamps were sold annually in the early 1970s.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Oct. 27.

HOUSE

PREFERENTIAL FUNDING AT HUD — The House voted 250 for and 170 against in support of 41 specific community projects to be funded by the Department of Housing and Urban Development at a cost of at least $28 million. Most of the projects are for areas represented by lawmakers with considerable influence over the HUD budget. This vote during debate on a fiscal 1990 HUD appropriations bill (HR 2916) swept aside an attempt to make the ventures compete for limited community development funds.

Critics denounced the earmarked funding as "pork barrel" while supporters termed it necessary to meet pressing needs in their districts. The projects would be funded by an account that figures in charges of financial scandal at HUD during the Reagan Administration. Those charges are directed at former HUD official and consultants, not at members of Congress.

Bill Green, R-N.Y., whose district would benefit from the earmarked funding, said "I think it is wrong to describe these projects as scandals."

Steve Bartlett, R-Tex., said the arrangement "would start a whole new set of scandals, this time with the imprimatur of the House of Representatives."

Members voting yes supported the preferential funding arrangement at HUD.

Voting no: Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Not voting: None.

ABORTION — The House failed to override President Bush's veto of a fiscal 1990 Department of Health and Human Services appropriations bill (HR 2990) that eased restrictions on Medicaid abortions. The tally of 231 for and 191 against fell short of the two-thirds majority needed to defeat the veto. Bush objected to language permitting Medicaid abortions only when the mother's life is at stake.

The House's failure to overcome Bush's opposition made it unnecessary for the Senate to also take up the veto and thus the abortion issue. Nor did the Senate vote on the liberalized abortion language when it gave final approval of HR 2990 on Oct. 19.

Members voting yes supported the pro-abortion language and wanted to override the veto.

Voting yes: Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Ballenger, Clarke.

Voting no: Coble, McMillan.

Not voting: None.

PAYMENTS TO JAPANESE-AMERICANS — By a vote of 249 for and 166 against, the House amended an appropriations bill (HR 2991) to establish an entitlement program for Japanese-Americans who were interned in U.S. government camps during World War II. This insures that former internees who are still living, now counted at about 60,000 will receive a single reparations payment of $20,000 each. The money was authorized in a 1988 law but held back by congressional budget cutters. The entitlement approach guarantees payment beginning next October. HR 2991 was sent to the Senate for final congressional action.

Members voting yes supported the new entitlement program.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Rose.

Voting no: Neal, Coble, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Not voting: None.

EARTHQUAKE AID — By a vote of 303 for and 107 against, the House sent to President Bush a catchall spending bill providing disaster aid to California as well as money to run the government in these early weeks of fiscal 1990. The "continuing resolution" (HJ Res 423) is needed because Congress and President Bush have failed to enact most of the 13 regular appropriations bills for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The bill provides $1.1 billion for housing grants and other direct aid to victims of the Oct. 17 California earthquake, $1 billion to help California repair highways damaged by the quake and more than $1 billion in Small Business Administration loans to help businesses recover from the disaster. Some of the bill's emergency aid also may go to victims of the recent Hurricane Hugo.

The legislation drew opposition from members who criticized funding the government by continuing resolution, and who objected to raising the disaster aid by additional borrowing rather than program cuts or revenue hikes.

Members voting yes wanted to enact the continuing resolution including California disaster aid.

Voting yes: Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Not voting: Walter Jones.

SENATE

DEATH PENALTY — The Senate adopted, 79 for and 20 against, a bill legalizing a federal death penalty for those who murder Americans while committing acts of terrorism abroad. The capital punishment measure (S 1798) was sent to the House.

Senators voting yes supported a federal death penalty for terrorists convicted of killing Americans abroad. Senators voting no had earlier backed an alternative calling for life imprisonment without chance of parole for those terrorists.

Terry Sanford, D-N.C., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., both voted yes.

EASTERN AIRLINES — The Senate adopted, 65 for and 35 against, an amendment authored by the Democratic leadership to create a bi-partisan congressional commission to study the Eastern Airlines labor dispute and recommend ways of ending the strike. This took the teeth out of pending legislation (HR 1231) requiring striking employees to return to work while a presidential emergency board worked to end the dispute. The Senate then passed the softened bill.

Sanford voted yes, wanting a commission to study the Eastern Airlines strike. Helms voted no, opposing the idea.

Thorogood and his Destroyers stopped at ECU as part of their six-week U.S. tour

Thorogood Rocks The House Sunday Night At East Carolina

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

There's no fat in George Thorogood's music. Just lean and mean bad-to-the-bone rock and roll — guitar, bass and drums, with a little sax for flavor.

Thorogood and his Delaware Destroyers have taken that meal ticket and turned it into gold.

The band plays a blend of straight-up rock and roll and smoky blues reminiscent of a Saturday night in a roadhouse — something similar to the clubs where the Delaware natives used to play for a few dollars and all the beer they could drink.

Now the band is riding on a wave of popularity from its bad-boy image, projected in hits like "Bad to the Bone" and "Born to Be Bad."

With the slogan, "No Hall Too Small, No Bar Too Far," the Destroyers are back to their roots on a six-week U.S. tour that began Oct. 29 in Baltimore.

The tour stopped at East Carolina University's Mingos Coliseum on Sunday, where about 1,300 fans heard the band play its hits, and classics like Chuck Berry's "No Particular Place to Go."

Wearing a purple sweat shirt with the arms cut off, Thorogood wielded his guitar like a machine gun as bass player Bill Blough and drummer Jeff Simon laid down a beat so loud you could feel the floor shake.

As he played, Thorogood strutted across the stage lit from spotlights that cut through the smoky air. The odor of marijuana popped up from time to time in the press of bodies crowded against the stage or dancing wildly on the arena floor. It was just like a roadhouse — except for the beer.

The audience, mostly college students, but also older people and a few who could have been bikers, responded to Thorogood's every cue, whether he was calling for a scream, a laugh or a raised fist.

During the two-hour show Thorogood teased the crowd with references to Greenville and ECU. He encouraged ECU students to press the city of Greenville to allow downtown Halloween celebrations.

"I hope next year we can come down here and enjoy Halloween with you and have a little fun," he said.

As the audience sang along to the song, "One Bourbon, One Scotch, One Beer," Thorogood stopped to preach. "Please don't drink and drive," he said. "Come back alive one day and hear the Destroyers play."

A couple of students, both girls, danced wildly and laughed while Thorogood sang "Move it on Over." After the song Thorogood went off the stage, returning to give the screaming crowd a rocked-up 10-minute version of "Willie and the Hand Jive."

By the time he was done, Thorogood looked like he was about to pass out, but returned for one last encore. As the lights came on, the crowd went home quietly, as if they were wrung out.

Sinfonia Gives First Concert Saturday Night

Soloists Are Paul Tardif, Brian Reagin

The New Carolina Sinfonia, under the direction of Hernan Murno, will perform its inaugural concert at 8 p.m. Saturday in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus in Greenville.

Information and season tickets can be obtained by calling 756-1036 in Greenville.

Burroughs Wellcome is sponsoring the concert, which is dedicated to the late Josef Totzauer, father of Terry Shank, the sonfonia's president.

Julie Dowell is general manager for the the choral society and the sinfonia.

This first concert features violin soloist Brian Reagin in a performance of Vivaldi's "Winter" Concerto. Reagin is concertmaster of the New Carolina Sinfonia as well as concertmaster with the North Carolina Symphony.

Another work on the program is Ernest Bloch's "Concerto Grosso No. 1," to be performed by pianist Paul Tardif of the ECU music faculty.

Other numbers to be performed will be the "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," of Mozart, and Peter Warlock's "Capriol Suite."

The group, recently formed in conjunction with the Greenville Choral Society, is composed of musicians from this area. Among them are four other concertmasters and six principals from other established orchestras.

Argentine-born conductor, Hernan Murno, two emigres from Communist countries, one doctor from ECU's medical faculty, two Middle Easterners and three Suzuki string teachers are also included in the group.

Their performing experience ranges among symphony orchestras from Turkey and Poland as well as Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Santa Barbara, Greensboro, Raleigh, Durham, Norfolk, Charleston and the Tar River area.

The ECU School of Music has contributed five faculty members and three graduates.

Principal cellist Selma Gokcen, for example, has been a soloist with the Houston Symphony, the North Carolina Symphony, and with L'Orchestre de la Suisse Romande. She has won numerous musical competitions and holds two degrees plus a doctorate of musical arts from Juilliard.

Many of the best music schools in the United States are represented, and within the group of 25 musicians, most have already performed together in other circumstances.

The second concert in the four-performance series is Dec. 9, when the sinfonia will perform with the Greenville Choral Society, its parent organization.

Patti Page Still Sings Country And Classics

By Rosalie Trotman
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Patti Page, whose popularity as a singer in the '50s and '60s earned her the name the Singing Rage, slipped in and out of La Grange several weeks ago with little fanfare.

She was the guest of Mae Allen of La Grange. Mrs. Allen is the mother of Ms. Page's close friend, the late Katie Filicetto.

"I haven't stopped working — so I'm not retired," Ms. Page said. "I average giving concerts approximately 25 weeks per year. Although I haven't had a recording released in three years, I have one ready."

She will perform in concerts in Nevada and California between now and Thanksgiving. She will entertain aboard a cruise ship starting Dec. 5, and on Dec. 17 she leaves for in Japan, Korea and possibly Hong Kong to give concerts.

"Most of my concerts are two hours long and include a medley of about 14 old songs," she said. "I pay tribute to Duke Ellington, and I also do some country selections."

Ms. Page's home is in northern San Diego County in California, near her two children and three grandchildren. "I have a little grandson and I am looking forward to seeing him when I get home — I love being a grandmother," she said.

"Every song I ever recorded made Billboard Magazine's listings. "Tennessee Waltz" was my biggest hit and was second in record sales to "White Christmas," she said. "I was paid for over eight million copies." "The recording of "Tennessee Waltz" was my dad's favorite song. My favorite was "Old Cape Cod." I had never visited there and now that I have, the song told the story," said Ms. Page. "Old Cape Cod" reached the No. 3 spot in 1957 and remained in the top 40 hits for 17 weeks.

During the '50s, Ms. Page was one of the most listened-to female entertainers on radio and she appeared regularly on "The Patti Page Show" on television. By the 1960s, she was one of the top 10 most popular female vocalists in the United States. "Hush, Hush Sweet Charlotte" was her last No. 1 hit in 1965.

Ms. Page has visited North Carolina several other times including a concert in Raleigh and another to Wilmington for an Azelea Festival "many years ago."

Ms. Page was entertained at a dinner party at the Greenville Country Club given by Mrs. Allen's niece and husband, Dr. and Mrs. Wes Gooding of Ayden, Lucile Oliver and Isobel Wilson.

Legendary Vladimir Horowitz Was A Unique Artist

By Martin Bernheimer
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Vladimir Horowitz, who died on Sunday one month after his 85th birthday, was — well — Vladimir Horowitz.

There was no other pianist like him. Chances are, there never will be.

He played by his own rules, even at his worst. At his best, he played magnificently. That puts it, as they say, mildly.

Once established and universally adulated, he played only when he pleased (in later years at the odd hour of 4:30 on Sunday afternoons). He played only where he pleased. He played only what he pleased. Legends can afford to be choosy.

No one played faster or slower, louder or softer, smoother or rougher than Horowitz. He respected no conventional limits.

No one played with such nonchalant virtuosity. No one played with such dazzling individuality. No one played with such uncanny accuracy. No one played with such abiding expressive allure.

Do not misunderstand. They still make great pianists — pianists who, like Horowitz, seem to command at least 40 fingers of flexible steel. However, they no longer make pianists with faces like Horowitz.

I am not referring, of course, to his actual physiognomy. His dapper hang-dog look exerted its undisputed appeal — the eyelids drooping soulfully, the mouth telegraphing charm in spite of itself, the noble, generous nose dominating everything else proudly. But Horowitz's artistic profile was the crucial image.

It was a profile predicated on inspired egocentricity. Horowitz may not have been a deep thinker. More important, he was a deep dreamer. Inhibition was not his forte.

He made the commonplace seem elegant, and the significant seem ethereal. When drama was called for, he thundered until the heavens rattled. When introspection was deemed appropriate, he melted into sighs and whispers that lent new meaning to the concept of delicacy. Most important, perhaps, he understood that dynamic extremes can make little impact without the logical reference of a sane and poised middle ground.

At his best, he sustained superhuman control even under unreasonable duress. He was a poet — and a sentimentalist — who could make a soggy ditty like Schumann's "Traumerei" sound like lofty poetry. He could make the sparklets of Moszkowski fly like exquisite missiles from another world.

He could almost make "The Stars and Stripes Forever!" — in his own bravura transcription, naturally — sound like music. He even could convince us that Bizet really intended the most seductive of Carmens to be not a mezzo-soprano vamp but a cheeky pianist.

Some of his playing may have been eccentric or misguided or even wrongheaded. During periods of fragile or declining health, his playing suffered obvious technical lapses. But Horowitz was never boring.

Everyone knows the lore about his foibles. He commanded, and blithely received, astronomical fees. He insisted on traveling — even to Russia — with his own entourage of sycophants and engineers, his own food and his own piano. Reliable sources insist that it was a carefully doctored instrument that helped manufacture the fabulous and possibly unnatural Horowitz tone.

Or you may order Kit No. K-110589 by sending a check or money order for $24.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in jade, lavender or natural.

Dear Pat: A couple of years ago you gave directions for working the Shaker Stitch. I carefully filled it away but now — when I would like to use it — I can't find it. Would it be possible for you to repeat these directions? — Martha Long, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Dear Martha: I'll be happy to do so, this is a very versatile pattern stitch. Perhaps one of the reasons for the popularity of this stitch is its thermal-like quality of giving added warmth without extra bulk. It also gives somewhat of a ribbed appearance without the body-hugging nature of ribbing, which makes it more comfortable to wear and more flattering to the less-than-perfect figure.

To work this simple, two-row pattern, cast on any even number of stitches and knit all stitches on every odd-numbered row.

The even-numbered, right-side rows are worked as follows: Step A: Knit 1. Step B: Insert the tip of your right-hand needle into the stitch below the next stitch and knit. Repeat Steps A and B across the row until two stitches remain. Knit these last two stitches. Repeat these two rows for desired length.

Because you knitted all stitches on the first row, you will have a row of purl "bumps" facing you when you turn to begin the second row. To knit into the stitch below, insert the needle tip just below the purl bump of the next stitch on the left needle and wrap the yarn around the needle just as you would have done if you had inserted the needle into a stitch on

This may sound complicated, but try it on a sample swatch and you will see that it is just as fast and easy as any knit stitch. I would suggest that you work two or three rows of stockinette or garter stitch before starting the pattern to make it easier for you to work the first repeat of Row 2.

Use larger than normal needles for your yarn type for best results. With worsted-weight yarn, for instance, move up to at least a size 10 needle to give you a 3-stitch-per-inch gauge. Because all stitches are knitted on both sides, the knitted fabric will have a compressed row gauge. In other words, you will have more rows per inch than you would have with stockinette stitch.

A common variation can be worked by simply changing Step A of the even-numbered rows to purl 1. Try this variation to decide which you prefer.

With scarves so popular this year, here's an idea for wonderful Christmas gifts. With size 8 needles and worsted-weight yarn — the brushed acrylic type is beautiful in this pattern — cast on 42 stitches. On each row, work as follows: Step A: Knit 2. Step B: Purl 1. Step C: Purl 2 together. Step D: Yarnover and knit 1. Repeat Steps B, C and D across to end of row.

That's all there is to it. Just repeat this single row until your scarf is the desired length. Bind off very loosely and fringe each end.

Too Late, 'Sorry,' You Blew It

Dear Abby: The man I started seeing three months ago broke up with me, and I would do anything in the world to get him back. Here's what happened: Phil and I met through an ad I had placed in a newspaper. In the ad I said I was divorced when, in fact, I am only separated.

We "clicked" the first time we met. When we got to know each other better, he said I was the answer to his prayers, and I knew he was the answer to mine.

Then, on the phone one night, I let it slip that I was not actually divorced — only separated. He became very angry, saying that our relationship had been based on deception; I was a liar, he detested liars, and he wanted nothing more to do with me. He said goodbye and hung up.

Abby, I've had nothing to do with my husband for five months, and I consider myself divorced, but I haven't filed yet.

I've called Phil, and he won't even talk to me. I've written him letters of apology, but he returns them unread.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

I realize I can't force him to talk to me or read my letters, but he won't even give me a chance to clear the air so we can pick up our relationship where we left off.

I am not a dishonest person. I didn't think it was all that important to tell him when we first met that I wasn't divorced, as I had indicated in my ad.

How can I get him to give me another chance? — Sorry, Sorry, Sorry

Dear Sorry: I'm sorry, too. You blew it. I see no way for you to get back into Phil's good graces. Chalk this up to "tuition in the school of experience," and learn from it.

Dear Abby: Although I have already celebrated my 80th birthday, I do not consider myself elderly. However, that's not my problem. It's the matter of Christmas gifts.

I was married at a very early age and promptly had babies — lots of them. They grew up and had babies. Their babies had babies, and now there are almost too many to count, and they are scattered to the far corners of the Earth!

I have given gifts to each and every one of them, even though I don't even know some of my "children-in-law" (if there is such a word), and I have never seen several of my great-grandchildren.

I would like to stop buying gifts. But how? Do I dare to stop — cold turkey?

How have others handled this awkward situation? I imagine some of those relatives would be just as happy not having to worry about what to get Grandma, or writing thank-you notes for gifts they weren't too crazy about to begin with. Thanks for your help, Abby. — GRANDMA

Dear Grandma: I have made this suggestion in previous years: Come Thanksgiving time, send notes saying: "I am thankful for family with whom I can be completely honest. I am not planning to send Christmas gifts this year — nor do I expect any — but please accept my love and best wishes for a healthy, happy, blessed holiday."

You'll be greatly relieved. And so will they. Trust me.

Confidential To Getting Even In Millbrae, Calif.: As the Duke of Norfolk said to the Duke of Buckingham in Shakespeare's "King Henry VIII": "Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot that it do singe yourself."

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

'The Pinch' May Aid Rebirth Of District

By Woody Baird
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — It was called "The Pinch" because of the pained expressions of hungry 19th century immigrants, but a deteriorating downtown district that was one of Memphis' first commercial centers may be on the verge of a new life as a party spot.

A 30-story pyramid housing a 20,000-seat arena, a rock 'n' roll restaurant and music museum is being built at the edge of the 12-block district, and that $80 million project is expected to cast a wide glow.

"(The Pinch) will become an entertainment area with a lot of music and a lot of places to eat. I think it has the chance of becoming the next New Orleans," said real estate developer Meredith McCullar, a partner in a $2 million restaurant and tavern project that is the first spinoff of The Great American Pyramid.

McCullar's prediction may be on the optimistic side, but downtown boosters say the pyramid, which is to open in 1991, will undoubtedly spur development in The Pinch, where Mississippi River flatboatmen slaked their thirst at the city's first barroom and where European immigrants anchored a bustling turn-of-the-century neighborhood.

"I don't think there's any question it will happen. It's already starting to happen," said Dexter Muller, the city's director of planning and urban development.

The district, which contains some 40 buildings primarily built between the mid-1800s and the early 1900s, is made up mostly of two- and three-story structures where merchants ran their shops downstairs and made their homes above.

According to local lore, the area got its name from "pinchgut," a term applied to survivors of the Irish potato famine who settled in the area in the 1820s. By the turn of the century The Pinch was a heavily residential neighborhood made up mostly of Jewish and Italian immigrants.

Now it is mostly small businesses like print shops and building supply companies, as well as warehouses and vacant buildings and lots.

Plans for downtown growth in the 1960s called for the city's main business district to end several blocks to the south at the Cook Convention Center and the cluster of federal, state and local office buildings at the north end of Mid-America Mall, Memphis' pedestrian main street.

But the pyramid project and scattered individual efforts at renovation farther north on Main Street have brought The Pinch squarely into focus for development, Muller said.

While most development in The Pinch will be private, the city is taking an inventory of needed public improvements like road repair, street lighting and parking, he said.

The pyramid, with an initial cost of $56 million is being built by city and county governments. But businessman Sidney Shlenker, a manager of the Houston Astrodome in the 1960s, will run the structure with an agreement to repay construction costs over 25 years. Shlenker and his financial backers, led by businessman John Tigrett, plan to spend $24 million developing tourist attractions in the pyramid.

The Caped Crusader Is A Flop With The Moviegoers Overseas

By Doug Melgren
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSLO, Norway — Holy box office! What's a caped crusader to do? After being the hit of the summer, he's the flop of the fall — in Norway, at least.

Despite an extensive promotional campaign here, the megabuck smash movie "Batman," has been upstaged at the box office by "Licence to Kill" and "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade."

In Norway, even Donald Duck has been more popular than the Batman comic for decades.

Inspired by its worldwide success — the movie has grossed more than $248 million at the U.S. box office alone, and has set all-time opening weekend records in Italy, Spain, Mexico, Portugal and Britain — the film's distributor hoped to trigger a little Batmania in Norway.

Warner Bros. Norge AS, the movie's distributor, wallpapered much of Norway with Batman posters and stickers, in its biggest promotion campaign ever in this small Scandinavian country.

"Batwho?" responded Norwegians.

Few had heard of Batman, even under his Norwegian comic book name, Lynvingen, or Lightning Wing. When the comic first appeared here in 1953, Lynvingen was the name chosen because Batman, literally translated, means something like the Fluttering Mouse Man.

Warner Bros. Norge kept the original title, "Batman," for the movie and set out to make it a household word with a promotion campaign that was unusually aggressive by Norwegian standards.

Newspapers widely reported the hubbub preceding the film, which inspired such inventions as Batdances and Batdrinks. Norwegians who were caught up in the fad bought Batman hats, T-shirts, posters, toys and trinkets, all emblazoned with the familiar winged silhouette.

But few bought tickets to the movie.

Batman got walloped at the box office during the first two weeks after the movie's opening Oct. 5. It drew 26,427 in Oslo, compared to 50,761 for the James Bond film "Licence to Kill" and 51,133 for "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," according to the Oslo Municipal Cinemas, which rated the sales as "not good."

When the blockbuster premiered in 36 Norwegian cities, many of the 40 theaters were less than one-third full.

"Batman" hasn't played to our expectations," said Lillemor Kosell, of Warner Bros. "Batman" is somewhat of an American phenomenon. People don't know him very well. This was by far the biggest promotion we ever attempted here." She refused to disclose the amount spent.

Brooks' current hit is 'If Tomorrow Never Comes'

Garth Brooks To Appear In Greenville

Singer Garth Brooks will be appearing in concert on Saturday at Hard Times in Greenville. Doors for the program will open at 8 p.m.

A native of Tulsa, Okla., Brooks attended Oklahoma State University on an athletic scholarship. He was a four-year letterman in track and field as a javelin thrower.

Like so many young aspiring singers, Brooks headed early to Nashville, Tenn. only to find the reality of trying to break in far different from the dream.

But he is back in Nashville now — with his wife and a dog — and is making records between being out on tour.

His debut single record, "Much Too Young (To Feel This Damn Old)," was a top 10 hit. A newer song, "If Tomorrow Never Comes" is currently out.

Yellowjackets Name Songs With Same Care They Use Writing Them

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Song titles can come from anywhere — newspaper clippings, billboards, figures of speech.

"The Spin," the title track of the Yellowjackets' eighth album, evolved from a conversation between bassist Jimmy Haslip and keyboardist Russell Ferrante.

In the beginning, it was just a word, one suggesting a web of meanings: records spinning, spinning your dance partner, the world spinning on its axis. "The Spin" soon had musical significance as well and was rewarded with a song of its own.

"We were working on this piece that the bass was in 3-4 and the rest of the band was in 4-4, and because of the motion of those two rhythms, it had kind of a spinning spiraling effect," Haslip said. "We all just decided to call it 'Spin.'"

"It's a metaphor for the Earth," Ferrante said. "This music has particularity grown out of a lot of our experiences touring the previous year, Europe and South America, and observing a lot of disturbing things."

For a group that calls one of its new songs "Enigma," labeling their music is another challenge, trickier than the most intricate rhythm.

Grammy voters have given them awards for rhythm and blues instrumental and jazz-fusion performance. The Yellowjackets reject both categories, especially fusion, which Haslip dismisses as outdated.

They're not straight jazz, either, much to the anger of purists such as trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, who has attacked groups that deviate from the New Orleans tradition of King Oliver and Louis Armstrong.

"The thinking is if it's not traditional, it's no good, even though you're being truthful about it," Haslip said. "I never understood the principle behind it. I look at art as an open field, let's go out and see what we can create here."

"World music" is more like it. They see "The Spin" as a reflection of sounds as well as sights from their travels over the past year.

"The globe is shrinking with the communication possibilities and technology," Ferrante said. "Every place we go, in the restaurants, everywhere, they're hearing Western music. It's becoming one community."

"The challenge is for everyone to see the world as one place. Not this person against that, this music against that. Just seeing ourselves as one entity."

Unity starts at home for the Yellowjackets, who have made just two changes in personnel since Ferrante, Haslip and drummer Ricky Lawson formed a backing group for guitarist Robben Ford in 1978.

Former Tower of Power saxophonist Marc Russo joined in 1985 and William Kennedy took over on drums the following year when Lawson left to record with Lionel Richie.

"William joined the band prior to the 'Four Corners' album," Haslip said. "This is when we changed directions. That year, we were traveling a lot, more than we had in the past. All that traveling and motion. So 'Four Corners,' like the four corners of the world came out."

A "trilogy" may sound too pretentious for the Yellowjackets, but "Four Corners," "Politics" and "Spin" are tied by the group's impressions of national and international events. "Politics," Haslip said, grew out of his frustration with the 1988 presidential election.

"For some reason that year opened up a can of worms about all political situations," he said. "It didn't just have to do with the elections. There's the business with the record label, the manager, other musicians. Everything has some political undertone."

"Spin came out from paying attention to what was happening to us as we traveled around the world — focusing in the lens a little more."

Time spent in South Africa also had an impact.

"To see the conditions there, just see how turned upside down everything has gotten, economically and environmentally," Ferrante said. "You can see things in news or on television, but when you stare in somebody's eyes, it's a pretty powerful thing. Just utter hopelessness."

Recorded in Norway, "Spin" combines emotions suggested by the colors on the album's cover: yellow, which Haslip noted is used in hospitals as a soothing effect; red, for anger; and blue, meaning sadness. The songs were written in the garage of Ferrante's California home.

Alley, Travolta, Willis Are Tops For 4th Weekend

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — "Look Who's Talking," the comedy about love and diapers, sold more than $11 million in tickets for the fourth consecutive weekend, becoming only the seventh movie since 1982 to do so.

"The Bear," the live-action drama about two bears being pursued by hunters, jumped to second place with $5.1 million in its second week of release.

"Look Who's Talking," starring Kirstie Alley, John Travolta and the voice of Bruce Willis, has now made nearly $60 million, according to figures released Monday by Entertainment Data Inc. and Exhibitor Relations Co.

During the past seven years, the only other movies to surpass $11 million each weekend for a month were "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial," "The Return of the Jedi," "Ghostbusters," "Beverly Hills Cop," "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" and "Batman," according to Entertainment Data.

In third place in box offices revenues for last weekend was director Wes Craven's "Shocker," a story about a murderer who more or less appeals his death sentence. "Shocker," falling 26 percent from the previous weekend, reported a gate of $3.4 million.

Woody Allen's melancholy comedy "Crimes and Misdemeanors" sold $2.7 million worth of tickets during a weekend of limited release to finish in fourth place and become the director's biggest hit since 1986's

"Hannah and Her Sisters." In fifth was the new comedy "Second Sight," with Bronson Pinchot and John Larroquette co-starring as psychics, with $2.2 million. In sixth was "Phantom of the Opera," starring Freddy Krueger veteran Robert Englund, which debuted with $2.1 million.

The Patrick Swayze adventure film "Next of Kin" was seventh, grossing $2 million. "Sea of Love," the romantic thriller pairing Al Pacino and Ellen Barkin, was eighth with $1.8 million. In ninth was the medical-school comedy "Gross Anatomy," which collected $1.7 million.

In 10th with $1.6 million was "The Fabulous Baker Boys," starring Jeff Bridges and Michelle Pfeiffer.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Entertainment Data and Exhibitor Relations.

Figures are based on a combination of actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures were not available.

1. "Look Who's Talking," Tri-Star, $11.5 million weekend gross, 1,638 screens, $6,995 per screen, $59.6 million total gross, four weeks in release.
2. "The Bear," Tri-Star, $5.1 million, 1,045 screens, $4,851 per screen, $9.9 million, two weeks.
3. "Shocker," Universal, $3.4 million, 1,795 screens, $1,870 per screen, $9.3 million, two weeks.
4. "Crimes and Misdemeanors," Orion, $2.7 million, 440 screens, $6,010 per screen, $6.2 million, four weeks.
5. "Second Sight," Warner Bros., $2.2 million, 815 screens, $2,646 per screen, $2.2 million, one week.

Mitchum Stars In Private Eye Spoof

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — You can tell the old, retired, slightly rundown gumshoe is back on the job. He offers his younger brother, an ex-cop, a pint of Levy's Select Irish Whiskey to help out. "House brand," he explains.

So it goes for Robert Mitchum in "Jake Spanner, Private Eye." But his new movie, airing Nov. 15 on the USA Network, is not the "Farewell My Lovely" or "The Big Sleep" kind of classic Mitchum detective movie.

"This is a complete charade," Mitchum says of this cable venture, which co-stars his brother, John, as the ex-cop; a son, Jim, as a cop, and Ernest Borgnine as retired mobster Sal "The Salami" Piccolo.

The film, he reports, includes one scene "with a bunch of naked girls around the pool. I think it's all done very discreetly."

Students of the cinema may consider "Spanner" close in spoof spirit to Mitchum's "His Kind of Woman." That 1951 epic makes one suspect that, during filming, the cast partook of strong drink and had fun.

"I don't remember what it was all about," Mitchum insists. He does recall the fun part. And that producer Howard Hughes made the cast film it twice, the idea being to make a good film a great one. That was no fun, he says.

Mitchum, whose more recent work includes the two ABC megaminiseries, "War and Remembrance" and "Winds of War," has a dry, sardonic sense of humor befitting a star who has logged 46 years in movies and TV movies.

Now 72, he has been around and about. His early days dossier includes ditch-digging; a shot at boxing; assistant to the astrologer Carroll Righter; the Long Beach Theatre Guild, and writing for radio.

New Bern Plans Tour

NEW BERN — A night on the town in New Bern is an opportunity to tour some of the historic community's structures.

This year's night on the town, "New Bern At Night," is Saturday. Five historic homes are included in the evening's tour.

Refreshments will be served during tour hours from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. at a circa 1915-16 dry goods store now a mini-mall, O. Marks Square.

An organ recital, starting at 8:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, circa 1819, will conclude the evening's entertainment.

A perennial attraction of New Bern at Night is the Attmore-Oliver House, a circa 1790 Greek Revival style and home of the walking tour's sponsor, the New Bern Historical Society.

Other homes open to the public will be the circa 1770 Coor-Gaston House notable for its Georgian woodwork, the gambrel-roofed Clark House dating from 1758, and two Colonial Revival style residences built on the same block — one in 1910, the other in 1925-26.

Tickets for New Bern At Night are $17.50 and are available from the New Bern Historical Society. For information, call 638-8558 by Friday.

Red Army Chorus Is Touring The United States

By Bob Baum
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — The audience rose to its feet as passionate Russian voices belted out "God Bless America." The Cold War seemed to thaw in the warmth of the accompanying balalaikas.

The Red Army has invaded the United States this year, but the weapons are song and dance. For the first time since it was formed 61 years ago, the Red Army Song and Dance Ensemble is performing for U.S. audiences.

"It took us too long to reach your country, a great country," said ballet dancer Nikita Tarasov, who recently performed with other members of her group at the Memorial Coliseum. "Our show will show you people that our two countries can cooperate — not just the Soviet people, but the Soviet army. We can show you people that we are peaceful, to say to Americans that nobody needs war."

The 200-member ensemble, known as the Red Army Chorus, includes Red Army members, former army members and some civilians.

The group's performance began with the 90-member male chorus, dressed in military uniforms, singing the national anthems of both countries. The orchestra included balalaikas and other traditional folk instruments.

What followed was a succession of folk songs, Russian classical music and colorful, energetic dance numbers. In "Cossacks Cavalry Dance," the performers waved sabers above their heads as they danced across the small stage. Later, they performed the spirited high leg kicks, spins and other gravity-defying moves associated with Russian folk dance.

Near the end, soloist Barseg Tumanyan sang, "I've Got Plenty of Nothin'" from "Porgy and Bess." In some of the more enthusiastic songs, a member of the chorus or the band broke out in a frenzied whistle that brought cheers from the audience.

"The language of music and ballet is universal," the ensemble's director, Col. Anatoly Maltzev, said through an interpreter in an interview.

"The people, the audiences, have been very warm," said Tumanyan, who was a member of the ensemble in 1984-85 and is performing on the U.S. tour as a guest. "The last concert (in Spokane, Wash.) was fantastic. You could feel it immediately."

Tumanyan, who has performed with several U.S. opera companies, said talented singers, dancers and musicians can perform in the ensemble instead of joining the regular army. In the Soviet Union, all men must serve two years in the armed forces.

"Of course this is the best place for them to serve," he said. "I don't know how to shoot a gun, so I served here. It was wonderful."

Although the ensemble has performed in 40 countries, political realities and international conflicts have prevented it from coming to the United States.

"We were going to come to the United States in 1939," Maltzev said. "The ensemble was already in London on the way to the United States, but the world war broke out."

After that, the tense relations between the two countries prevented a rescheduling of the visit. This is the first time a military band from the Soviet Union has come to the United States.

"The last year or two the relations between our countries have improved, and that's probably one of the reasons we're here," Maltzev said. "I would like to stress that it's not only relations between the two governments, but it is also at the military level."

"We played with a (U.S.) military band in Seattle and Spokane. That speaks for itself."

Tarasov, who describes himself as "just a soldier," had never been to the United States before, but he speaks fluent English.

He has no doubt why the tour is finally taking place.

"It's because of perestroika, because of the home and foreign policy of (Soviet leader) Mikhail Gorbachev," Tarasov said. "It's a great thing."

Portland was the 15th stop on a 31-city North American tour. Most of the previous shows have been in Canada, although the ensemble performed in New York, Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis before coming to the Northwest.

Most of the grueling journey is being made by bus. The group performed on a Tuesday in Seattle, then traveled 280 miles across Washington for a show in Spokane on Wednesday night and 350 miles to Portland for a Thursday night performance.

"We are tired, all of us," Tarasov said. "It's too hard."

From Portland, the group headed across the Rockies to Colorado. From there, they go to Arizona and California before returning to the East for performances Nov. 16-19 at the Wang Center in Boston and Nov. 20-26 at the Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in Washington.

Critics have called the show old-fashioned. Some have said the dancers are far below the level of other Soviet performers, such as the Kirov Ballet and Bolshoi Ballet. But American audiences have loved what they've seen, giving the group standing ovations at every show.

The ensemble members say their trip to the United States is more than just another tour.

"We think that it's important not just for our two countries, but for the whole world," Maltzev said.

Troy Donahue Recounts Battle Out of the Bottle

By Jean Marbella
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — The actor sat in the dressing room, trying to sober up — ironically, so that he could play a drunk.

The movie was 1958's "The Voice in the Mirror," and Troy Donahue portrayed the first alcoholic treated by the two founders of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Life imitating art imitating life, or something like that.

Except that it took Donahue, now a gray-haired 52, decades to find his way to Alcoholics Anonymous and sobriety.

"Until 7½ years ago, I never appeared before an audience or a camera sober," said Donahue, one of the Hollywood golden boys in the 1950s and 1960s.

Speaking at a substance abuse seminar sponsored by Blue Cross and Blue Shield in Baltimore Monday, Donahue told of an alcohol- and drug-induced plummet that took him from starring in movies like "A Summer Place" and "Imitation of Life" and television series like "Surfside Six" and "Hawaiian Eye" to living homeless and penniless and at the beck of anyone who would give him another fix.

"I played the faded movie star to whoever would fix me, or let me sleep on their floor," he said in his keynote address to the seminar.

The former Merle Johnson, part of that era when actors were churned through the studio mills and emerged with names like Troy or Tab or Rock, said he began drinking as a seventh-grade student.

Seventh graders drink for the same reason adults drink, he said in an interview Sunday night. "We are afraid of reality," stated Donahue, who said his mother was alcoholic and his daughter also might be. "We can't accept ourselves."

By the time he started recovering from this near lifelong slide, he had trashed four marriages, a career and his entire bank account. He was homeless one summer and lived in a bush in Central Park. Another time, he sold his last piece of furniture for some cocaine.

He seems liberated today — from alcohol and drug abuse, of course, but also from the studio system that created a persona for him that he felt inadequate to live up to.

"When I was at the peak of my career, I didn't think I was that person that everyone thought I was," said Donahue, who still has the burnished and sculpted good looks of a Hollywood actor. "I felt I didn't deserve any of that, that someone was going to find me out and they were all going to stand up and point at me."

Now that his golden hair has grayed and receded and his blandly smooth face has earned lines and depth, he's free to play what he calls "slimy" characters and "total slob." One of those is a man who pushes cigarettes on high school students in John Waters' upcoming movie, "Cry-Baby," which was filmed in Baltimore and is expected to open next year.

It was his first time working with the Baltimore film maker, which surprises many who think he's been in other John Waters movies. That would be that other matinee idol, with whom he's often confused — Tab Hunter.

"And in the last shot of the film he did it — John called me 'Tab,'" Donahue recalled with a laugh during the interview.

"Everyone wants to do a John Waters," Donahue said. "That's when you know you've arrived."

He enjoyed being part of the eclectic cast — dining every night with the likes of former kidnappee Patty Hearst and former porn star Traci Lords — even as he acknowledges that the director often selects actors for their odd places in the popular culture.

"Life is a joke, so we better get it," concluded the actor whose studio-induced stardom spawned lyrics in the hit musical, "A Chorus Line": "If Troy Donahue can be a movie star, then I can be a movie star."

Other movies he's worked on recently are of the low-budget variety, the kind that go straight to videocassette without bowing first at theaters or even cable, Donahue said.

But it's his best work ever, he said, and he doesn't miss the marquee and the idolatry of his past acting career.

"I know that's a barometer of one's success," he said. "But as for me being personally happy, that's not what I need."

He hasn't made a career of being a celebrity alcoholic, and said he rarely speaks publicly about it.

But he's broken the anonymity that Alcoholics Anonymous requests of its members because he feels strongly that people need to know that there are free programs out there for the addict. And that the excuse, "I can't get into a treatment program," is just that — an excuse.

"Even those downtrodden people who would say, 'Be in my shoes on the street corner.' I've been there too," Donahue said. "Whether I was physically homeless, we're all homeless inside until we become who we are. We get that through support and being honest with ourselves. None of us are helpless."

He believes alcoholics suffer from both "an allergy of the body and an obsession of the mind."

"Definitely there are people who can have one or two drinks, or even leave half a drink (untouched)," he said, seemingly incredulous even now. "When I have a drink, it's the elixir of life. When normal people have a drink, it's just nice. ... For me, it wasn't just something that made me feel good. It was something that made me able to continue my life."

Going to his first AA meeting was the most important event of his life, Donahue told the seminar audience.

"I allowed loving people to give me support," he said. "It was all right for me to surrender. I was home. ... My life has become reasonably secure and productive, and I can say I'm very happy."

Book A Candid Look At Candid First Lady

By Christopher Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — She was 16 and home for the holidays from finishing school. He was 17 and an Andover senior decked out in a tux for the Christmas dance at a Greenwich, Conn., country club.

It was December 1941. Three weeks earlier, America had gone to war. George "Poppy" Bush already had decided to enlist as soon as he turned 18.

But on this evening, his attention was drawn to the tall, slender girl with wavy, reddish-brown hair, twirling around the dance floor in a green-and-red holiday dress with one of his tennis buddies.

The friend was happy to oblige Bush with an introduction to Barbara Pierce of nearby Rye, N.Y.

Before they reached the floor, the band switched from a Glenn Miller tune to a waltz that was beyond Bush's dancing ability. So the couple sat down and talked.

And talked.

A few nights later, on their first date, Bush borrowed his folks' big car — the one with the radio — to fill the air in case conversation faltered.

But, as writer Donnie Radcliffe recounts in a new biography of Barbara Bush, "he need not have bothered."

"Years later he would tease that she started talking that night and hadn't stopped since," writes Radcliffe in "Simply Barbara Bush: A Portrait of America's Candid First Lady."

The book follows the Bushes from their wartime marriage to the oil fields of Texas to the political career that led them from Congress to China and now, after 29 moves in 44 years of marriage, to the White House.

Radcliffe, who has covered first ladies and the East Wing of the White House for The Washington Post since 1969, recalls Bush saying on a campaign flight last fall that if he won, "there's one prediction I'll make ... America will fall in love with Barbara Bush."

"America did," adds Radcliffe. "In no time at all, her white hair, her wrinkles, her size-14 figure and her fake pearls became the new standards by which American women could measure themselves — and hope to measure up."

She clearly cuts a different figure than the petite ex-actress, Nancy Reagan, who last occupied 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

As Mrs. Bush quipped at a 1986 charity dinner: "As you know, we have a lot in common. ... She fights drugs; I fight illiteracy. She wears a size three — so's my leg."

Born in New York on June 8, 1925, she was the third of Marvin and Pauline Pierce's four children.

He was an engineer who turned to publishing. She was, in Barbara's memory, an "absolutely ravishing" woman with a green thumb, an inveterate joiner of civic causes and a spendthrift. The Pierces lived well, but beyond their means, in a five-bedroom brick home in upscale Rye.

When Barbara's older sister Martha went off to Smith College, Vogue immortalized her on its cover as "College Girl of the Year."

Back home, Barbara was a tomboy, 5-foot-8 and 148 pounds at age 12. She recalls looking "like Porky Pig."

At Ashley Hall, the finishing school in Charleston, S.C., she set school records at speed-knitting, swimming underwater (2½ times across the pool) and, according to Radcliffe, "eating the most hot, buttered biscuits in one meal without being caught."

After that holiday dance, the teen-age couple had a whirlwind, if long distance, romance, with the letters postmarked "ANDOVER" turning up almost daily in Barbara's school mailbox. He took her to his senior prom at the prestigious prep school outside Boston.

A few weeks later, Bush joined the Navy and began the training that would make him its youngest pilot.

After Barbara's graduation in 1943, she spent 17 days with Bush and his family at their oceanfront home in Maine, where she was a hit with Dorothy Walker Bush, the clan's tennis-playing matriarch.

Barbara dropped out of Smith College in 1944 after her freshman year, planning to marry Bush in December.

On Sept. 2, 1944, Bush's torpedo bomber, with "Barbara" painted on its side, was shot down by Japanese gunners during a raid on Chichi Jima.

Bush bailed out after dropping his four 500-pound bombs; the two crewman with him didn't make it. An American submarine rescued the flier, who returned home on Christmas Eve, with a Distinguished Flying Cross and 58 combat missions.

The wedding took place a few weeks late, on Jan. 6, 1945.

Bush was mustered out of the Navy in August and enrolled at Yale. Barbara worked part-time at the Yale Co-op and boasts that "by the time we moved from Yale, I knew how to wash diapers and cook dinner."

George Walker Bush, the first of their six kids, was born in July 1946.

Bush breezed through Yale in three years, making Phi Beta Kappa as an economics major, captain of the baseball team, president of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and member of Skull and Bones, the elite, secret student society.

They headed off to Odessa, Texas, to embark on a career in the oil fields.

Tragedy struck again in 1953, when doctors told the Bushes their 3-year-old daughter, Robin, was dying of leukemia. They took her to Sloan-Kettering Memorial Hospital

Her hair began going gray during Robin's illness. For years, at the suggestion of her mother-in-law, she dyed the gray away, but abandoned that in 1970, tired of the greenish hue her hair acquired whenever she swam in a pool.

Mrs. Bush was always a full-time mother, ferrying the children to Little League games and myriad other activities, packing them into the station wagon to drive to Kennebunkport each summer, and meeting out most of the discipline.

She said earlier this year that when the family nest finally empty, "I went through sort of a ... difficult time really because suddenly women's lib had made me feel that my life had been wasted."

The blues did not last long. She stepped up her volunteer activities and discovered a favorite cause: literacy.

"I once spent the summer thinking of all the things that bothered me — teen pregnancy, drugs, everything — and I realized everything would be better if more people could read and write," said Mrs. Bush, who also had experienced the difficulties of helping son Neil overcome dyslexia.

She is often credited as serving as a goad to her husband's social conscience.

At times she has made headlines, including her "rhymes with rich" crack about Geraldine Ferraro in 1984 and support for a ban on AK-47s after a man killed five children in a Stockton, Calif., schoolyard.

She has since tried to steer clear of public policy statements.

That "muzzle" is nothing new, she told reporters.

"I muzzled myself about 1967, when George went into the Congress," she said. "It's a decision I made many years ago that when I disagreed with George Bush, I tell him in private."

Opening lead: Ten of ♣ Don't look at a particular card combination in the abstract. Consider the whole hand. How you play one holding could be affected by what happens elsewhere, and vice versa. As an example, study this hand and decide what card you would lead from dummy at trick two after you win West's opening diamond lead.

No sooner had South opened the bidding than North decided to drive the hand to slam. However, there was no need to respond more than two diamonds and consume bidding space unnecessarily. We are surprised, though, at North's choice of final contract. With a balanced 21 count, we would have opted for 6 no trump.

Against six spades West led the ten of clubs. The minor suits were going to provide declarer with three discards, but declarer would still have to rely on a finesse to avoid a heart loser. Then there was the question of the trump suit. Have you decided what to do yet?

Take full credit if you elected to run the jack of hearts at the second trick. Why? Because you don't know how to play the trump suit until you know whether you have a heart loser!

Suppose the jack of heart loses to West's king. Now you cannot afford to surrender a trump trick as well. Your best shot, therefore, is to cash the king of trumps and then finesse the jack.

But when the jack of hearts wins, you can protect against the possibility of losing two trump tricks. Cash the ace of trumps and lead toward dummy, simply covering any card that West produces. As long as trumps are no worse than 4-1, you have limited your losers in the suit to one.

Homework

By Elaine Meadows

Sometimes just thinking about my homework assignments is enough to give me a headache. My forehead begins to tense up as I think about the 100 algebra equations and 50 civics study questions waiting for me at my desk. Pretty soon my whole head feels like a balloon filled with too much helium. Finger cramping is another problem caused by too many homework assignments. My knuckles and fingers turn white from clutching and I have a worn-away spot on my third finger. Homework takes a lot of time even if I'm not interrupted. I may spend two hours hunched over my desk working on these assignments and then I'll get a phone call or my little brother will come in crying because he broke his toy car. These types of interruptions really slow me down. Even though homework is a nuisance, I know I still need to do it to maintain good grades.

Elaine Meadows, 14, a student at Ayden Grifton High School wins this week's writing contest.

My Grandparents' House

By Jennifer Finnegan

Grandma and Grandpa's house has sand all around it. It is just grand. When I go, I love playing in the sand. My sister and I are all happy when we even think about it. There is a lake around it to fish for trout. We all get a dish of it before we go home. Sometimes I just roam around the house. One time, I thought I saw a mouse in the house. Then, I bought a few mousetraps and put them around the house. The next morning I found a mouse running around the house. Quickly, I ran and got a mousetrap out of the corner. I'll tell you that was a smart mouse. He ran straight through my legs and we really had a chase going on. I chased him everywhere—under the tables, chairs and all under the furniture. We sure did make a mess! But I finally caught him between the wall and a chair. Suddenly, I lost him.

"Why, no, Jennifer," Grandma said, "Well, she always—oh my, here she comes. Ashley, did you tell anybody that Mark was out of his cage?"

"No." "Why not?" "Because everyone is always sticking their nose in my business," Ashley said crying. Grandma and I just looked at each other in amazement. Ashley came out (still crying) and said, "I don't mean you two. I mean my classmates, my teacher, daddy and, of course, Samantha."

"I'm sorry, Ashley, that you have problems. Why don't you come here and we'll have a little talk," Grandma said.

Ashley and Grandma came back and Ashley said, "Sorry I was being so hard to get along with. I really do love you!" Then Ashley hugged everyone.

Jennifer Finnegan, 9, a student at Wintergreen Elementary School receives special mention.

My sister said, "Hey, don't mess with him, he's my pet mouse."

"Oh, now you tell me that your pet mouse got away. Do you know how much trouble that mouse has been?" I said.

"No, but right now all I care about is putting him in his case," my sister said and she went off muttering while she put the mouse in its cage.

"Grandma, did you know Ashley's mouse was loose?" I said.

Indian Heritage Week

By Rachel Purvis

In celebration of Indian Heritage Week, our class watched two movies about the American Indians. I hate the way the white people treated the Indians. I don't think it was fair! People still treat each other badly. I wish all people were kind and friendly to each other and everyone could live together peacefully.

Jordan

By Rima Kapitan

If you went to Jordan, you would see a lot of cats. In Jordan, they don't have any pet shops with cats. If you wanted a cat, you would just go and find one on the street.

At nine o'clock everyday, people are selling corn on the cob and they yell, "Corn! Corn!"

Most people in Jordan live in apartments. Each apartment is three floors up. People can walk on top of each apartment. Even people who live in houses can walk on their roofs. That is because they don't have slanted roofs.

In Jordan, there are a lot of hills. Children in Jordan love to build houses with rocks.

Jordan's capital is Amman. Its people are Arabs and most of them come from Palestine. Ninety percent of the people in Jordan are Muslims. The rest are Christians.

There are a lot of sheep. A lot of wheat and corn grows there.

Rima Kapitan, 8, a student at Eastern Elementary School receives special mention.

My Pumpkin

By Marcus Stanley

My pumpkin is so big and plump and fat. How ever could you get like that? You stem is brown, your face is a frown. My pumpkin, my pumpkin, don't ever let me down.

Marcus Stanley, 8, a student at Belvoir Elementary School receives special mention.

Halloween Pictures

By Kimberly Jones

People think ghosts are real but I don't. People think witches are real but I don't. I don't know why but I guess ghosts and witches are not my type. When we draw a Halloween picture, I draw pumpkins with faces, not mean faces but faces with a smile. The other kids draw witches and ghosts. I guess you can say I'm not in with the group but I don't care. As long as I do the picture, I feel happy if I don't draw witches, ghosts and spirits.

We drew a ghost in art today, she said if we wanted to we could draw a clown. So I did a clown. Sometimes I make jack-o-lanterns at home.

Kimberly Jones, 8, a student at Wintergreen School receives special mention.

By Jessica Newton

The witch is riding on her broom and the ghost is busy scaring people. The bad ghost scares everyone and the good ghost is the friendly one. I like the friendly one

Simply Squash

Time To Stock Up On Winter's Own Treat

By Minnie Bernardino
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Among the first vegetables cultivated by American Indians were those called "askutasquash" or "isquoutersquash." Thanks to the pilgrims, however, the word for this vegetable family now is simply "squash."

The native American gourd, which originally meant "eaten raw," has become a mainstay on our tables as both an edible menu item and as a table decoration.

This is the proper time of the year to rediscover the hard-shelled, summer-grown crops of the Cucurbita maxima family. In familiar language, they are known as winter squash, so-called because they store well for winter eating. So forget the canned substitutes, get the cleaver and mallet out and enjoy your share of these ever-appearing vegetables.

Blending with the brilliant colors of fall, the squash family includes pumpkins, in various shades of tangerine and now white and blue as well. Pumpkins range in size from a 641-pound mammoth (this year's record holder) to minuscule

3-inch Jack-Be-Littles. Common winter squash varieties include Acorn, Butternut, Hubbard and Buttercup, which come in many shapes, colors and stripings, displaying rugged to smooth exteriors.

Although the familiar pumpkin remains the unanimous choice for fall decorating, its eating quality is not that of its sister winter squashes. "Some (winter squashes) are so sweet that you don't need anything on them," said food consultant and stylist Marlene Brown, who devoted an informative chapter in her new book, "International Produce Cookbook and Guide" (HP Books; $12.95) to squash.

Consumer acceptance of squash improves each year, she said. "New varieties are being introduced, and people are becoming more aware that squashes are packed with nutrients, are high in fiber and are superb sources of Vitamin A — especially the orange-meat squashes." Brown suggests choosing a squash that's hard and solid and heavy for its size.

Another reason why winter squashes are gaining in popularity is that they are all microwaveable, said food consultant Cathi Hofstetter. "They keep their flavor and texture in the microwave," she explained. "It's so convenient and fast this way; it frees up the oven during the holidays and doesn't scare people into thinking that they have to spend so much time preparing squash the stove-top way."

Hofstetter also prefers baby squashes because they cook faster and are tasty plain or stuffed. Of the special varieties, she prefers White Acorn for baking and the long, slender Delicata for its corn-and-sweet-potato flavor.

To vary presentations and to make soup, rice or vegetable casseroles more appealing, a trend (borrowed from the early American Indians) is to use medium- to small-size precooked squashes as serving vessels.

Drawing from international cuisines, we have developed some interesting suggestions on how to use winter squash and pumpkin. For an all-American pumpkin pie, try Julia Child's Fluffy Pumpkin Pie from her latest cookbook, "Julia Child's The Way to Cook" (Alfred Knopf; $50). The filling is light and moist, the butter crust so flaky and rich, it melts in your mouth.

Pumpkin seeds have a unique application in the savory, pastel green sauce for orange Pumpkin Ravioli, a recipe from the new "Betty Crocker's Southwest Cookbook." There's also a brightly colored Squash Soup With Cranberry Dollop from Marlene Brown's produce cookbook.

Use your imagination. Substitute squash purees, chunks or slices for potato or sweet potato in recipes. Tempura or creme brulee? You'll be surprised that squash works in both applications.

Of course, it's hard to beat the delicate perfection of plain cooked squash, swathed in butter and accented with a sprinkling of fragrant herbs and spices.

It's In The Bag: Perfect Picnics Begin With Two P's

By Candy Thomson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

An acquaintance from my rustic New England years used to prepare for a trek in the great outdoors by tossing three Slim Jims, a small bag of Doritos and a Snickers in his backpack. "A real man's trail mix," he would say, throwing in a Yoo-Hoo to wash it all down.

Another friend, who considered the great outdoors to be the space between the car door and the restaurant door, had a far different approach. First she'd pack the portable grill. Then the briquettes. Marinated chicken. Pate. Salad. French bread. Peach cobbler. White wine. And don't forget the cooking and eating utensils, napkins, cups, cork screw, native gun bearer. You get the picture: an intimate dinner party for the immediate world.

Staggering under the weight of the load, this friend would make it to the edge of the state park parking area and collapse. "Go on without me," she'd say bravely. "I'll be OK."

Somewhere between Grizzly Adams and Call of the Mild is a picnic for those who want more than a peanut butter and jelly sandwich but don't want to hire Tensing Norkay and his Sherpa porters to haul their meal to the summit.

Jim Bildner has been catering to the picnic crowd for about five years from his green and white shops in Boston.

The J. Bildner & Sons shops sell gourmet goods and everyday items, fresh flowers and cleaning supplies, and they also whip up meals for those who hate to cook or don't have the time.

Bildner says the key to a successful picnic is simplicity.

"There's nothing worse than spending two days to prepare food for a two-hour picnic. You work and work and then, what if it rains?"

But, he says, simple food doesn't have to be bland. Mixing the right foods with a beautiful outdoor location can add up to a memorable occasion. Just remember the two "P's" — planning and packaging.

His suggested menu includes zesty variations on cold chicken, a picnic-proof potato salad, perhaps meat loaf sandwiches and some outrageously rich lunch box cookies.

All of these items have been tested by hundreds of no-fuss picnickers who have let Bildner's staff sweat the details.

When it comes to packing the food for hiking, you don't have to be a rocket scientist, but it is helpful if you've watched a grocery clerk or two.

"The picnic that gets botched," Bildner says, "is the picnic where the packaging was botched."

Wicker picnic baskets with oh-so-cute red checked napkins hanging over the edge may make dandy house-warming and wedding presents, but they are lousy food and beverage carriers. Ditto the two-handled coolers.

Switch to day packs and those little personal coolers, discard as many bottles and cans as you can in favor of plastic wrap, aluminum foil and plastic containers and pour homemade lemonade and ice tea in vacuum bottles.

Put the heavy items on the bottom on the day packs and wrap anything likely to produce condensation, like a wine bottle, in a towel, which you can use as a table cloth once you reach your destination.

To keep things organized, put a rubber band around plastic eating utensils and stuff paper napkins in a one-gallon plastic bag, which can double as a garbage bag after lunch. Snag some salt and pepper packets from a fast food restaurant. Ditto on some pre-moistened towels.

And remember to keep hot stuff hot and cold stuff cold.

Bildner's "Red Potato Salad" contains no mayonnaise, so heat can't possibly make it spoil:

RED POTATO SALAD

1 1/2 lbs. medium new red potatoes
1 shallot
2 tbsps. Dijon mustard
1 tbsp. coarse mustard (with seeds)
1/4 cup virgin olive oil
2 tbsps. red wine vinegar
2 tbsps. chopped fresh parsley
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Wash and boil the unpeeled potatoes about 20 minutes, until tender. Drain and cool completely. Cut into 1/2-inch slices. Place in large serving bowl and set aside.

Mince shallot finely. In a small bowl, combine mustards and olive oil. Add the red wine vinegar, minced shallot, chopped parsley, and salt and pepper. Mix to blend.

Pour mustard mixture over the sliced potatoes and toss to coat. Serve or keep covered in refrigerator. Return to room temperature before serving. Serves six.

BAJA CHICKEN

3 large chicken breasts
1 clove garlic
1 small bunch fresh coriander
1/4 cup olive oil
1 1/2 tsp. ground cumin
1 tbsp. chili powder
1 tbsp. sweet paprika
1/4 to 1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper
1 tsp. dried oregano
1 lime
1/2 cup lime juice
Preheat oven to 375°.

Mince garlic. Remove and discard stems from coriander leaves. Chop coriander leaves and combine with garlic in small bowl. Add olive oil and mix well.

Mix cumin, chili powder, paprika, pepper and oregano in a separate small bowl.

Cut lime into six slices and set aside.

Place chicken breasts on a large flat baking sheet. Brush chicken breasts with olive oil mixture. Sprinkle spice mixture over chicken. The coating will be thick.

Place lime slices on chicken breasts and pour lime juice over all. Bake for 30 to 40 minutes, until coating is crunchy but not burned and chicken is cooked through.

Cook and serve.

CHIPPED CHICKEN WINGS

1 cup sour cream
1/2 cup chopped fresh chives
1/4 tsp. salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
17-oz. bag of potato chips
12 chicken wings
1 tbsp. butter for pan

Preheat oven to 375°.

In a small bowl, mix together the sour cream, chives, salt and pepper.

Using either your hands or a rolling pin, crush potato chips well. Place crushed chips in a large bowl. Cut off and discard wing tips from chicken wings. Lightly butter a jelly roll pan or baking sheet.

Using a pastry brush, brush a layer of sour cream mixture on both sides of the chicken wings. Roll the wings in the crushed potato chips and place them in a single layer on the buttered pan.

Place pan in oven and bake wings until crispy and golden, about 45 minutes.

THE RICHEST LUNCH BOX COOKIES EVER

2 (3 1/2 oz.) bars of caramel-filled Swiss chocolate, such as Lindt
2 oz. bittersweet or semi-sweet chocolate
2 oz. white chocolate
1 cup pecan halves

1 cup butter, softened

A Guide To The Culinary Virtues

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Every winter squash boasts its own culinary virtues. In fact some of the newer orange pumpkin varieties have been improved for better eating quality.

Here are some delicious examples and their characteristics:

WINTER SQUASH VARIETIES

salad with vinaigrette-herb dressing. A lighter yellow skin indicates a sweeter pulp.

Australian Blue: Medium to large newer variety with pale bluish gray skin, sometimes with a partial shade of peach, this squash is nicely scalloped. Beneath its very tough heavy skin, is a brilliant orange meat with smooth texture. Flavor is excellent, hearty and delicious for all-purpose puree or plain baked.

Sweet Dumpling: Scalloped, this small slightly squatty, round squash has a cream-colored shell with indented dark green striping. Deep yellow in color when cooked, the meaty flesh has smooth, dense texture with a pleasingly sweet flavor similar to sweet potato. Makes a beautiful natural vessel with cap sliced off and cavity filled with stuffing or sweet cream or melted butter. Use within two to three weeks; it doesn't store as well as other varieties.

Delicata: Similar in texture, color and taste (however not as sweet) to Sweet Dumpling with just a hint of corn flavor. Also with deep-green vertical striping on its whitish shell (sometimes with orange streaks), this six- to nine-inch long, slender squash is torpedo-shaped. Squash is particularly pretty when peeled with green ribs left on; cut in scalloped circles if desired.

Gold Nugget: Small one- to two-serving orange-skinned globe with smooth, velvety meat with a deep orange color but milder flavor. Great for stuffing or pureeing for sauces and custard.

Butternut: Slightly softer rind than the average winter squash, this tan-colored, elongated gourd has a bulbous end that contains the seed cavity. Fine flavor, delicately sweet, moist pulp with yellow color. A lot of solid meat in elongated part. Butternut keeps well and sweetens with time.

Acorn, golden, white and green: Outstanding for baking. All oval-shaped with deep ridges. White variety has a delicate, blander taste, creamy color, fluffier texture than

Science Finds A Way To Test For A Sweeter Melon

Dear Readers: Last summer I was at a roadside stand selecting a Bogue Sound watermelon. Another Greenville resident drove up and asked me to select one for her. I guess she thought I'd have a special talent to pick out a sweet one.

In truth, I've never had a Bogue Sound watermelon that did not taste good, so there's no trick to picking out a good one. However, I read the other day that all our little tricks of thumping and sniffing watermelons are being replaced. A new instrument can tell if a watermelon is sweet.

USDA scientist have found a way to measure sweetness of a watermelon by shining an infrared light into the top of the melon and measuring the light that comes out of the other side. Soluble solids, mostly sugar, absorb light. Therefore, the darker the melon (on the other side) the sweeter the fruit.

I don't know what that instrument costs but we have a near infrared machine that measure body fat and it costs $2,000. So, maybe the thumping won't be replaced for a while.

Q: Our family has heart disease on both sides, so we've started following a low fat diet, but the kids need some snacks. Can you recommend any? — M.W. Ayden.

A: I've had several people ask that question and my first reply is low fat cookies. Some of the lower fat store-bought brands are: Archway date filled oatmeal, Archway molasses, Fig Newtons, Honey Maid Cinnamon or Raisin Graham, Frookies, Sunshine Golden Fruit Raisin Biscuit.

Some of which are slightly high in fat are: Kiebler Cinnamon Crisp Graham, Nabisco Old Fashioned Ginger Snaps, Nabisco Nilla Wafers and Sunshine Honey Graham. The favorite Oreo cookie has 16 grams of fat in about 3 cookies (about 39 percent of that cookie's calories come from fat).

Keep watching the cookies since Archway, Nabisco, Pepperidge Farms and General Mills are all working to remove tropical oils and other saturated fats. Remember, that for most of our children who have their weight in control, sugar is an OK ingredient in their snack foods — as long as it doesn't kill their appetite for foods that give them nutrients.

Each Variety Of Winter Squash Has Its Own Culinary Virtues

the sweeter golden and green acorns, which both have golden thick meat. Award-winning golden acorn has best flavor. Traditional green-skinned (Table Ace and Table King) are most popular.

Calabaza or West Indian Pumpkin: Large, bright yellow to orange squash with fine-grained, moist but not watery flesh. Usually sold in pieces. Adapts well to other foods when cut in chunks for vegetable casseroles. Also delicious with fresh cream. Large seeds take well to toasting.

Kabocha: Drum-shaped flattened on top with deep-green rind that's mottled, this Japanese Butternut strain averages two to three pounds. Flesh cooks to bright yellow-orange and is mildly sweet and mealy.

Sweet Mama: Award-winning dark green squash with golden yellow flesh — a sweeter version of kabocha squash. In general, butternut varieties have similar dark green shells with light grayish green streaks. They are all excellent for an all-purpose golden puree.

Baby Blue Hubbard: More practical for eating than the larger Hubbard. This round dull-blue squash has a large cavity, and is rich and flavorful with a dense, deep-yellow orange pulp.

Boston Marrow: Shaped like a Hubbard, this hybrid has a bright deep-orange skin coloring with rugged texture. Size can go up to 15 pounds or more. Great for decoration and keeps well for several months.

Turk's Turban: Although edible, this distinctively shaped gourd is grown more for its ornamental uses for Halloween and Thanksgiving. Bright brick red with streaks of green and white, it has a three-knob cap that sits on its rounded squatty base.

Banana Squash: This oversize pale yellow squash with yellow meat is often sold in cut-up pieces; convenient for slicing into chunks. Original shape is elongated with large fibrous center. Flavor is hearty and mildly sweet.

WINTER SQUASH BASICS

Buying guide: A hard tough skin (except for butternut) indicates full maturity. Look for squash that's heavy for its size; lightweight ones will not have as much edible meaty flesh. Avoid squash with soft sunken or moldy spots, those with cuts, punctures and stems removed.

Storage: To preserve sweetness and avoid chilling injuries, do not refrigerate unless opened. Keep in cool, well ventilated dry place for one to three months, on the average and up to six months for some. Cooked pureed squash can be frozen up to six months.

Cutting: Chunks and slices may require cutting and peeling before cooking. For purees, cut in half or quarter (or leave whole if small and bake unpeeled). For large, thick-skinned squash, use a giant knife or cleaver, a wooden mallet, a good wooden board, and a little patience (pretending it's an orange may help).

The most difficult part is in the beginning: you cut straight across stem end, then bottom end. Use a mallet to gently hammer the top edge of the knife to ease it through the squash. Cut in half and scoop out strings and seeds with spoon. Then following the curve of the squash, slide knife under the skin and peel from top to bottom.

Smaller and softer-shelled squash may just be cut in halves with extra sharp or good serrated knife and then cleaned and baked, flesh side down on baking dish or pan. Peeled squash may also be shredded (like carrots) for breads, cakes, meat loaves, salads and soups.

Cooking: In general, baking or microwaving are the preferred methods to obtain the best flavor and texture in a squash. Boiling tends to produce watery consistency. Wrapped in foil, halves or quarters may be cooked on the barbecue grill.

Thinly sliced dry and dense-textured squash may be fried for tempura. Aside from baked desserts and souffles, mashed or pureed squash may be used for thickening sauces and soups. For starchier squash, adapt recipes for potatoes or sweet potatoes.

To microwave: Microwave small squash whole and half or quarter larger squash; pierce skins in several places. Cook on HIGH six to eight minutes for one pound, seven to nine minutes for two pounds with five minutes standing time. Placed on dish and lightly covered, unpeeled halved Acorn, Butternut and Spaghetti squash may be microwaved without water for 10 to 12 minutes. Small, pierced whole squash may take eight to 10 minutes.

To bake: Place whole squash in baking pan and bake at 400 degrees 30 minutes to 1 1/4 hours, depending on size. Check for tenderness by piercing with fork. Cut squash may require one-third less the time and may be placed in pan with an inch of water to keep moist.

To steam or boil: Quarters or rings require 25 to 35 minutes, smaller pieces about 10 to 15 minutes. Spaghetti squash may be boiled in large kettle of boiling water for about 30 minutes or more (steaming takes longer).

To pressure-cook: Halved, unpeeled medium squash takes 6 to 7 minutes after reaching high pressure; sliced or diced squash, 3 to 4 minutes. Follow manufacturer's directions for pressure cooking squash.

To stuff: Cut off top and core center. Slightly trim bottom so squash sits evenly. Stuff and replace top, securing with wood picks. When stuffed with meats that require an hour cooking, squash may be stuffed raw and baked at 375 degrees 1 hour; otherwise bake unstuffed squash, stuff and reheat 10 to 15 minutes.

Roasting Pumpkin Seeds: Place washed and dried seeds on baking sheet and bake at 325 degrees 20 minutes.

Yield: One to 1 1/2 pounds squash will yield three servings; one pound makes 1 2-3 to two cups cooked mashed squash.

Squash: Winter's Treat

- 1 cup cubed okra
- 1 tbsp. dry Sherry
- Salt, pepper
- 1 lb. large shrimp, shelled and deveined
- 10 to 12 mussels

Heat oil in large saucepan over medium high heat. Sauté ginger and garlic until tender. Add coconut milk and slowly bring to boil. Add squash. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Add okra, sherry and salt and pepper to taste. Cook until vegetables are almost tender, about 10 minutes.

Add shrimp and mussels and cook, covered, about 5 minutes or just until done. Do not overcook. Serve with steamed rice or French bread if desired. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

VERDE PORK TENDERLOINS WITH SPAGHETTI SQUASH

- 1 (2 1/2-lb.) spaghetti squash, halved
- 1/2 cup whipping cream
- 2 long green chiles, broiled, peeled, seeded and chopped
- 1 cup clear chicken broth
- 12 slices pork tenderloin
- 2 tsps. minced garlic
- Salt, white pepper
- 2 tbsps. butter or margarine
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 cups sliced spinach leaves
- Juice of 1/2 lime

Cook spaghetti squash in boiling water 25 minutes (or microwave on HIGH 15 minutes) or until strands separate from rind. Remove strands from squash with fork. Puree half of squash strands in blender with whipping cream, chiles and 1/2 cup chicken broth until smooth. Place mixture in large saucepan.

Rub pork pieces with 2 teaspoons minced garlic and season to taste with salt and white pepper. Brown on hot grill pan. Add pork and drippings to mixture in saucepan. Simmer, covered, 10 to 15 minutes, or until pork is tender and done. Keep warm.

Melt butter in skillet. Add remaining minced garlic cloves and cook until tender. Stir in spinach and season to taste with salt and pepper. Cook briefly to wilt. Sprinkle with lime juice. Drain spinach and set aside. Add remaining spaghetti squash strands to skillet and heat through. Season if desired. Serve pork tenderloins on bed of cooked spinach and surround with sauce and spaghetti squash. Garnish with red pepper strips if desired. Makes 6 servings.

PUMPKIN-APPLE NUT CAKE

- 1 3/4 cups sifted cake flour
- 2 tsps. baking powder
- 2 tsps. ground cinnamon
- 1/2 tsp. ground allspice
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup brown sugar, packed
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2 tsps. vanilla
- 1 1/2 cups pureed cooked or canned pumpkin puree
- 1 cups diced peeled apple
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts

Sift together cake flour, baking powder, cinnamon and allspice. Set aside. Cream butter with brown and granulated sugars until light. Add eggs, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Continue beating until mixture is smooth.

Alternately stir in pumpkin puree and sifted dry ingredients. Fold in apple and walnuts. Turn into greased and floured 10-inch Bundt pan. Bake at 350 degrees 45 to 55 minutes. Cool on rack. Unmold and serve with whipped cream, vanilla ice cream or custard sauce if desired. Makes 10 servings.

PUMPKIN RAVIOLI

- 1 cup ricotta cheese
- 1/2 cup pureed cooked or canned pumpkin or other winter squash
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. ground nutmeg
- 2 cups flour
- 1/4 cup tomato paste
- 1 tsp. olive or vegetable oil
- 2 eggs
- Water
- Pumpkin Seed Sauce

Mix ricotta cheese, pumpkin, 1/2 teaspoon salt and nutmeg. Reserve.

Mix flour and remaining 1/2 teaspoon salt in large bowl. Make a well in center. Beat tomato paste, oil and eggs until well blended. Pour into well. Stir with fork, gradually bringing flour mixture into center, until dough forms a ball. If dough is too dry, mix in up to 2 tablespoons water. Knead on lightly floured cloth-covered surface, adding flour if dough is sticky, until smooth and elastic, about 5 minutes. Cover and let rest 5 minutes.

Divide dough into 4 equal parts. Roll dough, one part at a time, into rectangle, about 12 by 10 inches (keep remaining dough covered). Drop pumpkin mixture by 2 level teaspoons onto half of rectangle about 1 1/2 inches apart in 2 rows of 4 mounds each. Moisten edges of dough and dough between rows of pumpkin mixture with water.

Fold other half of dough up over pumpkin mixture, pressing dough down around mixture. Trim edges with pastry wheel or knife. Cut between rows of filling to make ravioli. Press edges with fork to seal. Repeat with remaining dough and pumpkin mixture. Place ravioli on towel. Let stand, turning once until dry, about 30 minutes.

Prepare Pumpkin Seed Sauce. Heat until hot and keep warm. Cook ravioli in 4 quarts boiling salted water until tender, 10 to 15 minutes. Drain carefully. Serve with sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Pumpkin Seed Sauce

- 1 cup shelled pumpkin seeds
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 slice white bread, torn into small pieces
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 2 tbsps. oil
- 2 tbsps. canned chopped green chiles
- 1 (14-oz.) can clear chicken broth
- 1/2 cup whipping cream
- Dash salt

Cook pumpkin seeds, onion, bread and garlic in oil, stirring frequently until bread is golden brown. Stir in chiles.

Place mixture in food processor bowl fitted with steel blade. Cover and process until smooth. Stir in broth, whipping cream and salt. Makes about 3 cups sauce.

Blender Method: Place pumpkin seed mixture and about half of broth in blender container. Cover and blend until smooth. Stir in remaining broth, whipping cream and salt.

Two Methods Standard For Making Yeast Bread

By Joan Drake

Basics

There are several ways of making yeast bread, the most standard of which is called the conventional or straight-dough method.

Active dry yeast is most often used in today's recipes for bread made by the conventional method. However, yeast — the one-celled plant that makes these breads rise — comes in three forms.

Compressed yeast, also called cake yeast, must be stored under refrigeration and has a maximum shelf life of about two weeks. It may also be frozen for up to two months, then defrosted overnight in the refrigerator before using.

When fresh, compressed yeast is light grayish-tan in color and crumbles easily. It should be dissolved in water or milk between 80 degrees and 90 degrees before being combined with the other recipe ingredients.

Active dry yeast is usually preferred over compressed yeast because it has a longer shelf life. The dry yeast granules are packaged in air-tight moisture-proof packages, so they may be stored for six months at room temperature and even longer under refrigeration (The expiration date stamped on the package is based on storing the yeast at room temperature).

One package of active dry yeast contains a scant tablespoon of granules. This amount is equal to a 0.6-ounce cake of compressed yeast.

Active dry yeast, usually referred to simply as dry yeast, is activated by water with a temperature between 105 degrees and 115 degrees (Step 1). To dissolve the yeast, sprinkle the granules on the surface of the water (Step 2). It should dissolve in three to five minutes. Stir (Step 3) before combining with the other recipe ingredients.

Step 1: Use water warmed between 105-115 degrees to activate the granules of dry yeast when making conventional or straight-dough bread.

Step 2: To dissolve yeast, gently sprinkle the granules over the surface of the warmed water.

Step 3: Stir the yeast granules and water before combining it with other ingredients for bread.

Step 4: Additional flour is stirred in, by hand or by strong electric mixer, to create a soft dough.

When using the mixer method of making yeast bread, the yeast is combined with other dry ingredients before being dissolved. To activate the yeast, the water temperature must be higher—between 120 and 130 degrees.

Quick-rise, active dry yeast is a highly active strain of dry yeast that makes bread doughs rise 50 percent faster than regular yeast. Although it may be dissolved in liquid, its fast-rising properties work best when added directly to the dry ingredients, as in the mixer method just described.

In the conventional method, once the yeast is dissolved, it is combined with other lukewarm liquids, fat, sugar and eggs. Then the flour is stirred in, and the batter is beaten vigorously to begin developing the gluten in the flour.

Additional flour is stirred in to create a soft dough that can be kneaded without becoming too sticky. Although this is traditionally done by hand, a strong electric mixer may also be used (Step 4).

Broccoli-Cheese Stuffed Shells Perfect For Family Or Guests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
NEW YORK — Herbs and spices sprinkled on your favorite pasta dishes provide delicious flavor without added sodium, fat or calories.
 Pasta dishes made with vegetable oils are healthier than butter-topped dishes. Adding fresh vegetables and legumes to pasta meals provides added fiber and vitamins.

Broccoli-Cheese Stuffed Shells is an elegant, flavorful dish that's ideal for family dinners and guests.

BROCCOLI-CHEESE STUFFED BAKED SHELLS
 6 oz. jumbo macaroni shells (24 shells)

3 qts. boiling water
 One 10-oz. package frozen chopped broccoli, thawed (2 cups)
 1 cup part-skim milk ricotta cheese
 1/2 cup shredded Swiss cheese
 1 tsp. shredded onion
 3 cups canned stewed tomatoes

Gradually add shells to rapidly boiling water so that the water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander and rinse with cold water.

While shells are cooking, combine broccoli, ricotta cheese, Swiss cheese and onion. Stir until well blended. Pour about 1 cup of the tomatoes over the bottom of a 13-by-9-by-2 1/2-inch baking pan, breaking up the tomatoes with a fork. Spoon about 1 round teaspoon of cheese mixture into each shell and place, open-side up, in an even layer in the pan. Pour the remaining 2 cups tomatoes over and around shells. Cover pan with foil. Bake in a 375° oven about 25 minutes or until heated through. Makes 6 servings.

EGG NOODLE VEGETABLE CHOWDER
 1 cup cut green beans
 1 1/2 cups shredded zucchini
 1 cup thinly sliced onion

1 cup diagonally sliced carrots
 3 cups skim milk
 Two 13 3/4-oz. cans chicken broth
 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
 1/8 tsp. pepper
 8 oz. fine egg noodles (about 4 cups)
 3 qts. boiling water

In large pot, combine vegetables, milk, chicken broth, cheese and pepper. Cover; bring to a boil.

Lower heat and simmer for 15 minutes.
 While vegetables are simmering, gradually add noodles to rapidly boiling water so that the water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Add noodles to vegetable mixture. Cook 2 to 3 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Quick Dish Is Balance Of Flavors

By Charlyne Varkonyi
 LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

These days everyone seems to have transformed into a fastlane cook. The mere thought of spending more than 30 minutes over the stove is enough to send most working people into hysteria. Too many other things are competing for our time — from movies on the VCR to exercise classes and the kids' soccer games.

More and more people are proud to share their own versions of quick meals. But one of the best examples of a good fastlane cook is my friend Donna, who says she has been throwing quick meals together for the past 15 years, "ever since I stopped serving steak and salad."

When she cut down on huge portions of meat because of her new health-consciousness, she was forced to find other ways to stretch meals with larger amounts of vegetables. She usually starts by sauteing onions and garlic in some extra virgin olive oil. Then she adds plenty of fresh vegetables and a smaller quantity of either meat or fish. The one-dish meal is finished by serving it over rice or pasta. Often the meals are created by throwing things together that she already has in the house — an experiment in innovative combinations of foods she already likes.

"I think I ended up being resourceful because I had limited time and because I was not one to follow recipes," she says. "It's fun to challenge yourself to see what you can make out of a can of tuna or clams, onions and pasta."

Her recipe for linguine with clam sauce and marinated artichoke hearts is an unusual balance of flavors, with extra zest added by the artichoke hearts and the fennel. The optional hot pepper makes a fiery statement and should be avoided by those with tender palates. Serve it with a mixed green salad and dressing and Italian bread.

Items you should have in your pantry include: extra virgin olive oil, garlic, yellow onion, balsamic vinegar, Dijon mustard, dry red hot pepper, assorted salad greens and salad dressing.

LINGUINE WITH CLAMS AND MARINATED ARTICHOKE HEARTS

2 tbsps. extra virgin olive oil
 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
 1 medium yellow onion, sliced
 1 red bell pepper, sliced into thin strips
 6 shitake mushrooms, sliced
 1 small zucchini, sliced into thin coins
 1 stalk fresh fennel, sliced (see note)
 1 small jar of marinated artichoke hearts (6 oz.), drained
 1 large can of baby clams (10 1/2 oz.), drained
 12 black olives, pitted and sliced
 2 tbsps. balsamic vinegar
 1 additional tsp. virgin olive oil
 2 tps. Dijon mustard
 1 small dry hot red pepper, crushed (or use 1 tsp. red pepper flakes), optional
 9 oz. fresh linguine
 Fennel leaves, for garnish

In a frying pan, heat olive oil on medium high heat. Saute garlic, onion and red peppers until soft, about 6 minutes. Add mushrooms and stir-fry for 2 minutes. Add the zucchini and fennel and continue to stir-fry for another 2 minutes.

Drain marinated artichoke hearts and baby clams and add to sauteed vegetables. Turn heat to medium low and add the olives, balsamic vinegar, olive oil, mustard and optional red pepper. (If you don't like hot food, omit the red pepper and substitute freshly ground black pepper.) Simmer for 5 minutes. Meanwhile, boil linguine, drain. Toss and add fennel leaves for garnish. Serves three.

Note: If you cannot find fresh fennel, substitute 1 teaspoon of fennel seed for flavor.

Perfect Picnics Begin With Two P's: Planning And Packaging

1 1/2 cups brown sugar, lightly packed
 1/2 tsp. salt
 2 tps. vanilla
 2 eggs
 1 1/2 cups flour
 1/2 tsp. baking powder
 1/2 tsp. baking soda

1/2 lb. ground pork
 1 1/2 tps. ground cumin
 1 1/2 tps. ground coriander
 2 tps. dried oregano (or 1/4 cup chopped fresh)
 1 tsp. dried thyme (or 2 tps. chopped fresh)
 1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper

1 1/2 tsp. salt
 1/2 tsp. freshly ground pepper
 1/2 tsp. red pepper flakes (optional)
 2 large eggs
 1 cup unseasoned bread crumbs
 1/2 cup milk
 1/4 cup chutney, such as Major

Grey's
 Preheat oven to 425°.
 Chop celery and onion into 1/2-inch dice. Mince garlic cloves finely. Place the celery, onion and garlic in a large bowl.
 Add the ground beef and pork to the celery mixture and mix well.

Sprinkle cumin, coriander, oregano, thyme, cayenne pepper, salt and black pepper over the meat and mix well. Add the red pepper flakes, if desired. Add the eggs, bread crumbs and milk and mix everything together thoroughly, using your hands.

Place the meat mixture in a 9-by-5-inch loaf pan. Score the top of the meatloaf with a fork and spread the chutney evenly over the meat.
 Bake until loaf is firm and the juices are bubbling, about 45 minutes.
 Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Preheat oven to 350°.
 Break caramel bars into natural sections. Cut the sections into small chunks with a sharp knife. You can chill the bars first to keep filling from oozing out. Set chunks aside.
 Grate bittersweet or semi-sweet chocolate and the white chocolate.
 Chop the pecans.
 Place 1/2 cup of the oatmeal in a blender and blend at high speed until oatmeal turns to powder.
 In a large bowl, beat the butter with the sugar, salt and vanilla until creamy. Add the eggs and beat well. Stir in the flour, powdered oatmeal, remaining oatmeal, baking powder and baking soda. Add the caramel chunks, both grated chocolates and pecans and mix just to combine.
 Using two spoons or your hands, form balls the size of large walnuts. Place them in rows about three inches apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake for 10 to 15 minutes until golden brown. Remove cookies from sheet and cool on rack. When cool, store cookies in an airtight container.
 Makes about four dozen cookies.

A Scratch Cake Can Be Simple

By Nancy Byal
 BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Baking a scratch cake is a cinch, thanks to our test kitchen's revolutionary new method. Measure all ingredients into one bowl and mix with a standard or portable mixer. Fast and easy, with a divine homemade flavor and texture. Top it with a fudgy no-cook frosting.

EASY ONE-LAYER CHOCOLATE CAKE

1 cup all-purpose flour
 1 cup sugar
 1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
 1 tsp. baking powder
 1/4 tsp. baking soda
 1/4 tsp. salt
 3/4 cup milk
 1/4 cup shortening
 1/2 tsp. vanilla
 1 egg
 No-Cook Fudge Frosting (recipe follows)

In a large mixer bowl combine flour, sugar, cocoa powder, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add milk, shortening and vanilla. Beat the mixture with an electric mixer on low speed until combined. Beat on medium speed for 2 minutes. Add egg and beat for 2 minutes more. Pour into a greased and floured 9-by-1 1/2-inch round baking pan.

Bake in a 350° oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until a toothpick inserted near the center comes out clean. Cool on a wire rack for 10 minutes. Remove the cake from the pan. Cool thoroughly on the rack. Frost with No-Cook Fudge Frosting. Makes 8 servings.

No-Cook Fudge Frosting:

In a bowl mix 1 pound sifted powdered sugar (4 3/4 cups) and 1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder. Add 1/2 cup margarine or butter, softened, 1/2 cup boiling water and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat with an electric mixer on low speed until combined. Beat for 1 minute on medium speed. Cool for 20 to 30 minutes or until spreading consistency.

Use half of the frosting to frost the cake layer. Store the remaining frosting, covered, in the refrigerator up to 2 weeks for another use. Before using, let stand at room temperature about 3 hours or until spreadable. Or, place in moisture- and vapor-proof container; seal, label and freeze up to 3 months. Before using, thaw and let stand as suggested above.

Inexpensive Appetizers Look Like Costly Gems

By Rose Dosti
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Who would know better than caterers how to dazzle guests with appetizers that have a luxury look but are actually cost- and labor-effective? These high-style, show-off appetizers aim to impress, yet in reality they are simple enough for a home cook to tackle. We asked several of Los Angeles' top caterers to share with us their favorite faux luxury appetizer.

Caterer Mary Micucci of Along Came Mary created an appetizer made with foie gras and blackberries. Foie gras need not necessarily be expensive; brands are available in a varying price range.

High style is the luxurious basis for coulibiac, a Russian pastry filled with salmon and rice. Shared by the firm Just Off Melrose, the coulibiac is shaped into a loaf and served in slices with cucumber dill sauce. Randy Fuhrman of Creative Concepts created tasty filo dough nests filled with brie and truffles. Simple, glamorous and to the point. Easy, too.

A caviar torte created by Darlene Miller of Savoir-Faire layers six ingredients (eggs, green onions,

ALONG CAME MARY FOIE GRAS WITH BLACKBERRIES

- 1 1/2 cups fresh or frozen blackberries, thawed and drained if frozen
- 1 1/2 lbs. foie gras, chilled
- Salt, black pepper
- 2 tbsps. unsalted butter
- 2 tbsps. black currant or raspberry vinegar
- 1/2 cup creme de Cassis

Mash berries, reserving a few for garnish. Cut foie gras into 1/4-inch slices. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Melt butter in skillet over medium heat. Add foie gras and saute quickly until browned on both sides. Remove and keep warm. Do not overcook or foie gras will melt and fall apart.

Remove all but 1 tablespoon fat from skillet. Stir mashed blackberries, vinegar and creme de Cassis into remaining fat in skillet. Add pepper to taste. Cook, stirring constantly until smooth and somewhat thickened and syrupy.

Pour sauce over foie gras. Garnish with whole berries. Serve at once as first course. Makes 12 servings.

JUST OFF MELROSE COULIBIAC

- 2 (12- by 15-inch) sheets puff pastry, about 2 lbs.
- Rice Filling, chilled
- Mushroom-Spinach Filling, chilled
- 1 1/2 lbs. poached salmon, boned and flaked, chilled
- 1 egg
- 2 tpsps. half-and-half
- 2 (10- by 4-inch) sheets puff pastry for garnish
- Cucumber Dill Sauce

Place 12- by 15-inch sheets puff pastry side by side on floured board. For each puff pastry, spoon half Rice Filling evenly over center of each pastry. Add the Mushroom-Spinach Filling evenly on top of rice mixture. Spread flaked salmon evenly over mushroom mixture. Top with remaining rice mixture.

Beat egg with half-and-half in small bowl to make egg wash. Brush edges of pastry with egg wash. Fold pastry lengthwise, overlapping edges. Tuck ends to seal. Turn over, seam side down, onto greased cookie sheet. Make cutouts, using pastry cutters, into desired shapes. Apply to top and sides of pastry roll. Make vent in center of roll and brush entire surface and cutouts with egg mixture. Bake at 350 degrees 45 minutes, or until golden brown. Remove and allow to cool 10 minutes. Slices may be served hot or at room temperature with Cucumber Dill Sauce. Makes 12 servings.

Rice Filling

- 2 tpsps. butter
- 1/2 cup chopped shallots
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 cups cooked rice
- 1 bunch fresh dill, chopped

Melt butter and add shallots and garlic. Saute until shallots are tender. Add rice and dill and mix well.

Mushroom-Spinach Filling

- 1/4 cup butter
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1/2 lb. mushrooms, sliced 1/4-inch thick
- 1 (10-oz.) package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and squeezed dry
- Salt, pepper

Melt butter in small skillet. Add onion and saute until tender, about 1 minute. Add mushrooms and spinach and cook 3 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Cucumber Dill Sauce

- 2 tpsps. butter
- 1/4 cup minced shallots
- 1 1/2 tpsps. flour
- 1 cup half-and-half
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh dill
- Salt, pepper
- 1/4 cup cucumber, grated

Melt butter in small skillet and add shallots. Saute until shallots are transparent. Stir in flour and cook, stirring constantly, 1 minute. Whisk in half and half. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 1 minute. Stir in sour cream, dill, and salt and pepper to taste. Heat through, but do not boil. Add cucumber just before serving. Makes 2 1/2 cups sauce.

TRUFFLES A LA FROMAGE

- 2 sheets filo dough
  - Melted butter
  - 18 (1-inch) cubes of brie, shredded
  - 1 jar truffles or fresh truffles
  - Fresh rosemary, thyme and chive sprigs
- Place 2 sheets filo on flat surface. Brush with butter and cut into eighths. Gather dough into ruffled mound about 2 inches in diameter. Make indentation in center. Bake at 350 degrees 6 to 8 minutes or until browned. Fill cavity with grated cheese. Return to oven until cheese melts. Garnish with truffle shavings and fresh herbs as desired. Makes 8 servings.
