Raising Fish Isn't All That Easy

By J.R. Williams
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Investors, extension agents, researchers, bankers and others gathered at the Ramada Inn on Wednesday and today to see the latest in business ventures: aquaculture.

And they soon were told that raising a bunch of fish is not as easy as it looks.

"It's not a get-rich-quick scheme," said Thomas Losordo, aquaculture specialist for the North Carolina State University Agriculture Extension Services. "It's very good for a family business but not good for people who are looking for a quick profit."

The second annual aquaculture conference informed 200 interested people on how to obtain the proper permits, marketing and processing their products, contracting and financing aquaculture farms.

Conference participants were scheduled to tour catfish farming operations in Pitt County this morning.

North Carolina is currently near the bottom of the production scale in the production of catfish, crawfish, and hybrid-striped bass, Losordo said.

"North Carolina has 800 acres of catfish farms as compared to 90,000 acres in Mississippi," Losordo said. Pitt County has 200 acres of catfish farms.

North Carolina has about 200 acres of crawfish farms and 80 acres of hybrid-striped bass farms, Losordo said. Louisiana has 115,000 acres of crawfish farms.

"Aquaculture is new to this state, and it's growing year by year," Losordo said.

He said because aquaculture is so expensive, farmers should start by using it as an alternative to their tobacco, soybeans and corn crops.

According to Losordo, it takes about $4,000 per acre to start aquaculture construction and production.

"Aquaculture is a great thing to get into if you have the water, finances and the proper site and market," he said.

Aquaculture farmers have a choice of selling their products to a processing company for distribution or market their fish or crawfish to businesses themselves.

Losordo said farmers receive about a 5- to 10-cent profit per pound if they sell to a middleman. The profit is higher if a farmer sells directly to buyers.

But the best thing North Carolina can do now is take its time in the aquaculture business and not flood the market, Losordo said.

New East Bank Opens Saturday

New East Bank of Greenville, the first bank chartered in Pitt County in 56 years, will open its doors for business Saturday in temporary facilities at 2310 Charles St.

Jerry Powell, New East president, said the bank will operate in the temporary quarters at the southeast corner of Charles Street and Red Banks Road until the permanent structure is built on the site, facing Red Banks Road.

Powell, who said that work on the new building is scheduled to begin in December, said New East Bank hopes to occupy the structure by next summer.

He said Saturday's opening will launch a weeklong celebration for the public to visit the bank, tour the facilities and meet the staff and directors.

New East Bank will top off the activities on Nov. 18 when members of the board of directors don aprons to serve up a Saturday brunch to the public from 9 a.m. until noon. A ribbon cutting is scheduled for 10 a.m. on Nov. 18.

Krenz Proposes Free Elections

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — East German leader Egon Krenz called for a law ensuring free and democratic elections, and a group of prominent Communists today said the Berlin Wall could soon become a relic of the past.

Communist leaders decided today to consider even more changes in the government hierarchy, which has been revamped in the face of growing public upheaval and the exodus of tens of thousands of East Germans to the West.

The Communist Party's Central Committee set a party conference for Dec. 15-17. A party conference, a forum for making major changes in party policy, was last held in 1956.

The official ADN news agency said the conference would discuss personnel changes in the 163-member Central Committee.

The decision to consider overhauling the policy-setting committee comes on the heels of the mass resignations of the Politburo and the Cabinet.

About 40,000 people demonstrated Wednesday night in Neubrandenburg and near Karl-Marx-Stadt for free elections and an end to authoritarian one-party rule.

Deng Gives Up Last Party Post

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Senior leader Deng Xiaoping today resigned from his last Communist Party post, as head of the powerful military commission, and cleared the way for his chosen successor to assume undisputed power.

Deng, 85, was replaced by the protégé, 63-year-old Communist Party chief Jiang Zemin as head of the Central Military Commission. The move was approved by the ruling party's Central Committee in a meeting that ended today.

The committee also issued a communique warning that China must go through at least two more years of economic austerity to overcome current problems of inflation, excessive growth and corruption.

The official Xinhua News Agency announced Deng's resignation.

The architect of Chinese policy for the past decade, Deng has been seeking to make way for a new generation of leaders centered around Jiang though apparently meeting some resistance from President Yang Shangkun and his allies.

Deng, who has served China's Communist cause for six decades, resigned from the party's ruling Politburo and other top party posts in 1987 but is still recognized as the ultimate source of power in the country.

In a Nov. 7 letter to the Politburo carried by Xinhua he said giving up the last post while still healthy was his "long-cherished desire."

In the letter, Deng expressed his confidence in the new party chief, saying party leaders had in June elected "a leading nucleus headed by Comrade Jiang Zemin and it is now already carrying out its work effectively."

He said he would now seek to resign from the less important government body whose functions parallel the party military commission, which sets policy for the armed forces.

President Yang, 82, was named the party military commission's first vice chairman, a job left vacant when former party chief Zhao Ziyang was stripped of all leadership posts for tolerating the pro-democracy movement.

The committee's communique did not mention Zhao, who has been under house arrest. There had been speculation that the plenum might recommend criminal charges against Zhao or remove Zhao supporters from their offices.

The changes for now end the power struggle diplomatic sources have reported between Yang, who had been the commission's vice chairman, and younger party leaders.

Yang's younger brother, Baibing, the political boss of the People's Liberation Army, was named secretary-general of the Central Military Commission.

Students Say They Will Seek ACLU's Help

By J.R. Williams
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Coming into Greenville via Bypass 264 East, motorists are greeted by a friendly water tower mural that reads, "Welcome to Greenville and ECU: Home of the Pirates."

But some East Carolina University students said they aren't feeling much like a part of Greenville's community now.

In addition to a planned march on

City Hall today to protest a noise ordinance, some students say they plan to submit a formal complaint to the American Civil Liberties Union, requesting its services for the Nov. 29 trial of 134 ECU students charged in the recent Halloween incident at Tar River Estates.

The complaint stems from the signatures of 13 persons who believe their rights were violated during their arrest Oct. 31. The students were arrested and charged with failure to disperse during a Halloween celebration on or near First Street.

Arnie Cullipher, organizer of the complaint, asked students Monday during a boycott rally to sign their name to a special petition. Students boycotted area businesses Monday in protest of recent changes to the city's noise ordinance.

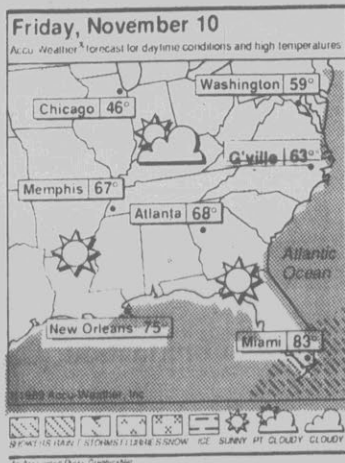

"Hopefully, we can hear a definite, concrete statement from them (ACLU) before the court date," Cullipher said. "I'm simply compiling a letter to see if it's worth their while."

Cullipher said he will send a letter to the ACLU on Friday with details of the noise ordinance and the names of those arrested and what happened on Oct. 31. He said he hopes to get a response by Monday.

"That's all I can hope for now is that they acknowledge that they received my letter," Cullipher said.

United Way Marks Successful Drive

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Leaders of the 1989 Pitt County United Way campaign gathered Wednesday at the Greenville Country Club to celebrate the achievement of exceeding this year's contribution goal of $1,258,341.

Campaign Chairman John J. West presented Ed Kirby, United Way president, a check for $1,317,418.19 raised in the 1989 effort. The amount, which represented a 14 percent increase over last year, was the largest sum ever raised by the Pitt County United Way in a single campaign, West said.

"We are delighted that our community came forward and accepted the challenge and again met our goal," West said. "The United Way reaches thousands of people throughout our county and throughout our city."

"We have been very fortunate in Pitt County in that in the last 10 years, our campaign goal has been met. The thing that is outstanding is the fact that we have never extended a campaign," he said.

Money raised during this year's campaign will go toward the operating budgets for 32 health and human care agencies in Pitt County. The agencies perform various services such as providing support for children with cancer and blood disease, addressing illiteracy in the community and helping to assist victims of domestic violence.

West, senior vice president and city executive for Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., attributed several factors to the success of this year's campaign, including the implementation of a Pacesetters Division.

The division, chaired by Dick Edwards, consisted of four campaigns which

A 22-year-old man was arrested today on charges that he fired a shotgun into a car on N.C. 11 in Bethel on Halloween night.

Buell, who said Perkins was placed under a $20,000 bond, said a .12 gauge shotgun was confiscated from Perkins' home.

According to the chief, Perkins was charged with firing a shotgun into the side of a car occupied by four adults and a child about 7:45 p.m. on Halloween.

No one was injured from the shooting, Buell said, but shot peppered the drivers' side door.

Man Arrested

Greenville police on Monday arrested Jefferey Lee Tyson, 28, of Farmville on a third armed robbery charge, said Detective W.A. Reid.

Japanese Visit

Japanese Educator Praises Pitt Public School System

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Japanese educator visiting Pitt County says he likes the way North Carolina's public school system works.

Dr. Shuzo Goto of the Naruto University of Teacher Education said Wednesday that he was pleased with the hard-working, dedicated teachers and creative teaching methods he saw in area schools.

Goto led a group of Japanese educators to Pitt County this week to learn more about education in the United States. Their visit is part of a project sponsored by the United States-Japan Foundation to teach residents of both countries about each other.

The educators toured six Pitt County schools Tuesday and Wednesday, visiting classrooms, talking to teachers and answering questions about the different approaches to education in Japan and the United States.

"I want to expose these social studies teachers to the reality of the United States," Goto said. The best way to do this is through personal experience, not through the media or other second-hand sources, he said.

On Wednesday, the educators visited Bethel School. As Principal Janie Manning led them on a tour, they poked into classrooms and frequently stopped to take pictures.

As they walked through the school, a student stopped to ask how they learned English.

"Because they study," Ms. Manning said.

Goto laughed and said, "We learned it in school."

The educational methods used in North Carolina are different from those in Japanese schools in many significant ways, Goto said. Unlike Japan, where teaching methods vary little from school to school, North Carolina's teachers are encouraged to be creative in their approach, he said.

"I like the system in North Carolina very much," he said. "Here, every teacher tries to give his own method of teaching and is very eager to teach."

Another advantage is the smaller class size and the use of teacher assistants, Goto said. "North Carolina teachers are very lucky to have assistant teachers and student assistants," he said. "In Japan, the public school teachers have 40 students in a class and only himself or herself."

This team approach works better, Goto said. "I think in that way you can produce high-quality teachers and high-quality students."

American students also seem happier, Goto said. In Japan, students are under strong pressure to do well because the system is very competitive, he said. In many cases, students will go to private "juko" schools on their free time for tutoring to help them gain admission to the most prestigious high schools or colleges, he said. This causes students to burn out, he said.

"It is very efficient to put in children's heads many difficult things, but it makes their bodies frail and vulnerable because they study too hard," he said.

The Japanese educators' visit is a sister project to the Southeast Program for Teaching about Japan, said Nancy Avery, a Pitt County school administrator who guided them on their tour. Ms. Avery was one of a group of educators from the United States who visited Japan in the summer of 1987 through the program.

During their four-day stay in Pitt County, the educators also visited area businesses and farms, she said.

Teachers Awarded

Four Pitt County teachers were among 32 teachers in the state who recently received a state award for excellence.

The Governor's Business Award in Education was given to Beverly P. Peaden, Harry A. Jones Jr., Constance R. Wallace and Ruby W. Jackson at a ceremony Oct. 26 in Charlotte.

Ms. Peaden and Ms. Wallace are teachers at Farmville Middle School. Ms. Jackson and Jones are teachers at D.H. Conley High School.

The Pitt County Educational Foundation and Burroughs Wellcome Co. also received the award for their support of education.

The award is given annually by the North Carolina Business Committee for Education, which is composed of executives from the state's top businesses and industries. Its members are appointed by the governor.

Special Olympics Funding Project

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Parks and Recreation Department has accepted a $1,000 grant from Special Olympics International and is seeking additional capital improvement money for lighting repairs at two facilities.

Boyd Lee, department executive director, told commissioners Wednesday that the $1,000 grant will be used to transport handicapped persons to activities at recreation sites in Greenville. The money will also be used to pay for bowling, picnic supplies and attendance of handicapped persons at special events such as East Carolina University football and basketball games.

Discussing a request submitted to the city on Oct. 31 for additional funds, Lee said that lighting at the Jaycee Park field and at the Elm Street tennis courts are in a state of disrepair that makes correction a critical need.

The department is asking the city for $26,019. Of that amount, $13,450 is needed to upgrade lights at Jaycee Park. Lee said that 48 of the 100 light fixtures at the field are inoperable, cannot be repaired and must be replaced.

Lee said that if money cannot be found, it will not be possible to play night games at Jaycee Park next year. This year 60 baseball and softball teams made use of the field.

At the Elm Street tennis courts, $18,569 is needed for repairs, Lee said. It was first thought that only the replacement of lights and fixtures was necessary at this time. However, it has been determined that old wiring, electrical equipment and rotten poles must also be replaced, he said.

The department has $6,000 earmarked for repairs at the Elm Street tennis courts, so an additional $12,569 is needed, Lee said.

Lee said that if the city cannot provide additional capital improvements funds, it might be necessary to use money earmarked for other projects and to defer those projects until a later date. Among these are projected improvements at Elm Street gymnasium and updating playground equipment.

The annual financial report for the Greenville Little League was presented. Bookkeeping for the league is in three accounts, all ending Sept. 30. The regular account had a beginning balance of $11,882, with an ending balance of $6,091. The special account showed a beginning balance of $34,903 and an ending balance of $29,724. The third account, the all star section, began with a balance of $3,991 and ended with $3,740. The league began with a fund balance of $50,776 and ended with a balance of $40,365.

The special account is being used for fencing work at the two Little League fields now under construction. The city provides field maintenance for the fields, with all other expenses borne by the league.

Commissioners discussed the provision of space at West Greenville for a mediation group to use. The group, being formed on lines similar to national mediation groups, will deal with certain categories of problems in an effort to keep them out of court. Commissioners asked City Council member Rufus Huggins, the city's liaison to the department, to stress that availability, if granted by the council, will be for an initial period of no more than one year.

Board members discussed a grant proposal of $150,000 being offered by the Albemarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study, with local in-kind funding of $59,342.

The proposal deals with the construction of an experimental water catch basin to be constructed at the site of the recreation area at Moyewood on Third Street north of Memorial Drive and adjacent to the Tar River. The site, Lee said, is no longer used as it has been vandalized extensively and is also near the Eppes Center recreation facilities.

The basin, if constructed, would catch run off water for a 200-acre area to be studied to determine the degree of drainage water pollution. The City Council is considering a contract for the project, but has made no final commitment.

BOYD LEE

Lee Wins Election To National Board

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, has been elected to the board of directors of the American Recreation and Parks Society.

Lee was one of eight members elected to a three-year term recently at the board's national meeting held in San Antonio, Texas.

"The national board, with headquarters in Washington, D.C., has the primary responsibility of setting policies at the national level on matters in all areas of recreation and parks," Lee said. "It represents 20,000 professionals across America."

Lee, currently chairman of the 10-state Southeastern Zone of the Recreation and Parks Association, was one of two individuals from the zone nominated for the national board position.

A New Mayor

New Opportunities For Mayor, Council

Nancy Jenkins will become Greenville's new mayor based on the unofficial returns from Tuesday's municipal election.

And future terms will be for two years in accordance with the voters' decision against four-year terms. The mayor will not have a vote other than in tie breaking situations, again a decision made by the voters on Tuesday.

The council sessions Mayor-elect Jenkins is to preside over will include familiar faces and a couple of new ones. Inez Fridley, Lorraine Shinn, Mildred Council and Rufus Huggins all were returned to the council by the voters of their respective districts. New members will be Blanche Forbes, who replaces Mrs. Jenkins in the fifth district, and Tom Johnson serving in the fourth district.

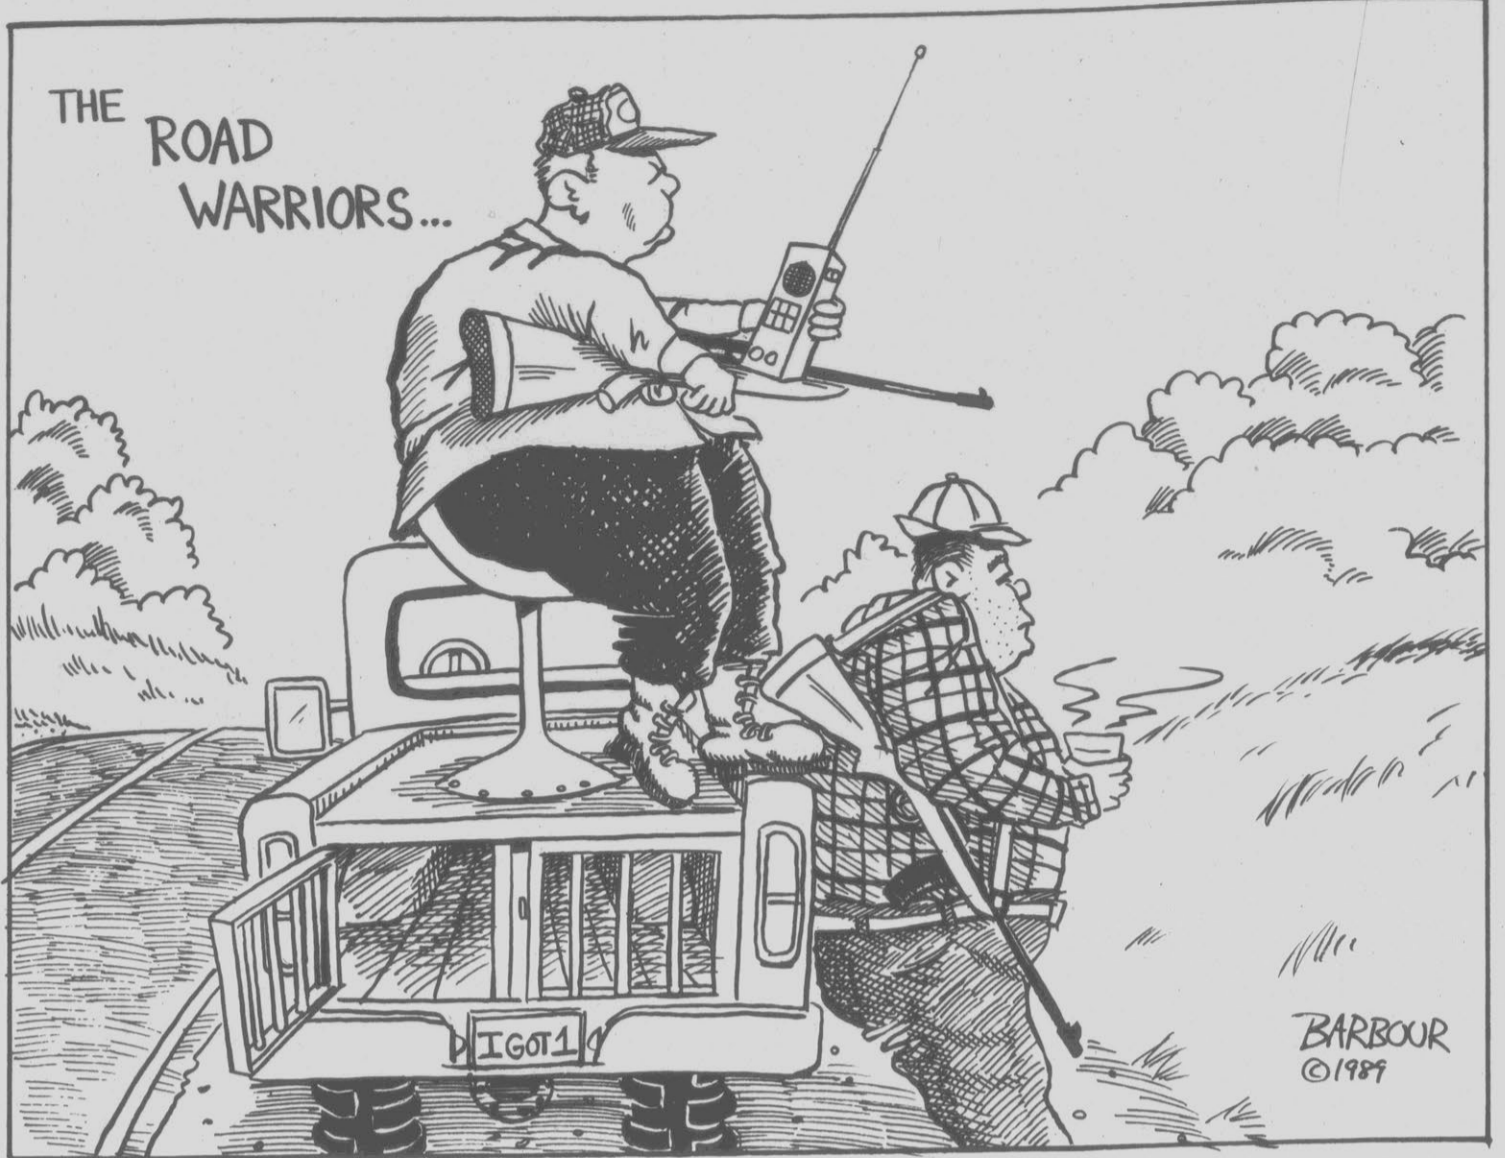

This can be a good and productive City Council. Its members must represent their districts but they also must consider the needs of the city as a whole. Our city needs the best from all its components if we are to be the best that is possible. Our best can be considerable. With outstanding medical, educational, industrial and business segments we have much with which to develop a strong economy and a quality of life that others will envy. With improving transportation, Greenville is in the position of developing in a way which will be beneficial to all our citizens.

New council members, and all of us, must put behind us any dissension. Every council and every administration has contributed something to the Greenville that we enjoy today. This newest council and administration must take the best of what has been passed on to them and build on it for future generations.

Considering the city's rapid development we have a new era every two years.

Nancy Jenkins has the opportunity to be a good mayor. She has considerable experience in public service, having served on the Greenville Board of Education and as its chair. She is completing her second term on the Greenville City Council. Her platform called for unity. She said her top priority would be to foster a spirit of cooperation and common purpose on the City Council.

The new mayor and new council have the opportunity to join together in doing what is best for all of Greenville's citizens. The next two years can be an unprecedented era.

Public Forum

To the editor:

As a former Greenville resident, who had a business connection downtown and also taught at East Carolina, I have viewed with concern and sadness the apparent disintegration of the relationship between the campus and Greenville city government. I have in mind the Halloween occurrences of the past two years. I would ask the university administration, student body, city government, and the citizens of Greenville to remember a few facts when transacting business.

East Carolina's campus is in the center of Greenville and the main support of downtown business and real estate owners. Students purchase most of the services offered and pay most of the rent there. A deterioration in the relationship between the students and the old downtown area can only hurt what remains of the business district and the landlords there.

Schools belonging to the university system and private schools are in cities throughout the state. One does not hear of the confrontation between students and the city government in such towns as Elizabeth City, Wilson, Fayetteville, Wilmington, Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill, Greensboro, Charlotte, or Winston-Salem. Certainly the students at East Carolina are no more rowdy or high spirited than the students attending the universities or colleges in the aforementioned towns. This would lead one to believe that there exists a problem in Greenville that should be addressed and solved.

So far as I know, this lamentable situation has come into existence only during the past few years. The voters of Greenville, the city council, the city agencies, the university and the student body should take a close look at the problem. Greenville enjoys too good a reputation as a cultural, shopping, recreational and educational center in eastern North Carolina to allow itself to gain the reputation of a town to be avoided.

To the editor:

I agree totally with the article in Sunday's paper by Richard Duncan when he took issue with your editorial for endorsing candidates — give your readers the pros and cons on issues of candidates and let them make their decisions. Of course, I know you will not print this letter until after the election, because I do not support Ms. Jenkins.

Ms. Jenkins says her leadership style will permit her to be a team builder which will unify the City Council. It seems that she wants to represent only one segment of the Greenville population. In the last few weeks, four Candidate Forums were held; two by the League of Women Voters and two by Sororities, Fraternities and WOOW Radio Station. Of the three I attended, Ms. Jenkins participated in only one, in fact, she did not participate in either of the two scheduled in the Black Community. As mayor, she would be representing the total community, not one segment. There were other candidates from districts that few Blacks could vote for, but they were there to let us know they wanted to represent the total population of Greenville. At the last Candidate Forum, I asked the Moderator, Jim Rouse if Ms. Jenkins had been invited, he assured us she had. I realize she doesn't need our votes, but she is saying one thing, (leadership, moderator, team builder) but not putting that into action.

Several years ago she was in favor of four year terms for the City Council and the Mayor. I wonder if the change is just another tactic to oppose Mayor Carter.

This Is Just The Beginning

BOSTON—After so many bitter losses, winning one tastes sweet. Winning two, even by an inch, can fuel a real certified sugar rush.

On Tuesday, those who support legal abortion got a taste of that high. In the first test of political power since the Webster decision came down from the Supreme Court, pro-choice voters in two gubernatorial races showed they were what they have claimed: the majority. They supplied a huge winning margin for James Florio in New Jersey and the razor-slim edge that has Douglas Wilder claiming victory in Virginia.

This was enough to make heads swivel. After all, for most of the Eighties, common political wisdom held that abortion was a losing issue. A candidate, the polls believed, was safer being pro-life than pro-choice. As of Tuesday, that's no longer true.

The pro-choice forces spent the decade fighting a rear-guard action in the courtrooms of America while the pro-life forces had been out organizing voters. Now, in the post-Webster world, they finally began playing on the same field. And the newcomers look strong.

But before anyone pops open the champagne bottles, a word of caution: This is just the beginning.

Abortion politics in America are as volatile as the stock market and as dizzying as a chemical roller coaster. The current ride began on a downhill run with the Supreme Court. Next it soared to pro-choice victories in the Florida legislature and in the Congress. These were followed by another duo of downers: two Bush vetoes in Washington, and the early success of a bill in Pennsylvania that could severely limit abortion.

Now, out of New Jersey and

Ellen Goodman

Virginia comes another upper. But if the pattern suggests anything, this isn't the last curve. In the end, winning can be as tough and as close as in Virginia.

Today, says Ethel Klein, a political scientist and marathon poll-watcher, "the politicians on the defensive are those who have taken the absolutist pro-life position — those who took that stand out of political opportunism. The tables have turned on them and they're trying to unshackle themselves."

On election morning, even George Bush seemed to be loosening the shackles on Republicans, saying that the party had room for diversity. "Is it (abortion) the most important issue for me?" he asked aloud. "Absolutely not."

But Americans remain ambivalent about this most personal of public questions. "It's important to remember that this country is pro-choice but not pro-abortion," warns Prof. Klein. "While society wants to keep abortion safe and legal, it also wants the number of abortions reduced. And it's willing to put guidelines around access."

The ride is not just going to go through high-profile gubernatorial races with their ads and accusations. It's going to pass through the state legislatures where those guidelines are written. It's going through arguments over the fine print of dozens of bills staking out a position on such issues as fetal viability testing, parental consent, and spousal consent.

The most intense struggles will not be about the victims of rape and incest, nor about the rights of minors. They will be about the fate of the majority of women who have abortions: adults making personal decisions. At what point in pregnancy for what reasons under what conditions will these women have access to abortion? As the pro-choice poster puts it, "Who decides?"

Tuesday's races, for all the last-minute waffling, were relatively clear battles between pro-choice and pro-life candidates. The next races may well get murkier.

Politicians will increasingly try to define themselves as speaking for that pro-choice anti-abortion majority. Among activists, says Frances Kissling, head of Catholics for a Free Choice, "the race is on to stake out what is moderate. Where is moderate on the spectrum and how does moderate fit with principles?"

The good news from Tuesday for abortion-rights supporters is that voters defined the pro-choice view as moderate. In Virginia, the first black apparently squeaked into the governor's office because of his white opponent's "radical" stand against abortion. During the New Jersey race, five state legislators saw the light glancing off the winner and gave back their Right-to-Life endorsements.

But these are still early laps, on a ride that will reach its peak in the 1990 elections. So a restrained celebration is in order. When it's over, pass up the sweets of victory and start carbo-loading for a long, long run.

Traffic Jams At The Border

WASHINGTON—Having been for decades indifferent to the masses, and having more recently been incompetent at addressing those aspirations, Communist nations have at least been free from the afflictions of consumer societies, such as traffic jams.

The first traffic jam in Soviet history occurred on Oct. 15, 1941, on roads leading east out of Moscow. Hitler, who 150 days earlier had been an ally, was approaching from the west and the Soviet elite was fleeing to Kuybyshev, 600 miles east.

Today, East Germany's Communist regime has managed to generate traffic jams at the border between Czechoslovakia and West Germany. East German citizens are fleeing with the entreaties of the political elite ringing in their ears.

We are witnessing perhaps the last distinctive feature of totalitarianism, the "suction effect." The nephew leaves, so the aunt does too. Three members of the amateur soccer club leave, so four more, sensing that even that fun is gone, leave too. Four members of a factory work-crew head west, so other members of the crew, facing longer hours and worse conditions, follow them.

Last August, the border between Austria and Hungary suddenly became the most important place on the planet. There, where the Iron Curtain became porous, the resulting suction began pulling down the Berlin Wall. A wall that you can, in effect, walk around is only an eyesore.

The Germans, said a wit who did not much care for them, are vigorously obedient. No more. The more the East German regime tries, in its sinister and transparently insincere way, to be mollifying, the more urgently more Germans feel the itch to flee.

The regime probably is incapable of understanding how it sounds when it offers to measure out more freedom with coffee spoons. The intended beneficiaries of this rationing are not reassured. All they hear is a thugocracy, one that has lied for 40 years and maintained the Wall for 28 years, asserting the right to ration freedom.

The regime says it will no longer be a crime for East Germans to flee the country (with about enough money to buy breakfast), but it will still be a crime to "directly violate the border." That murky distinction means: The Wall stays. And the barbed wire and attack dogs and machine-gun towers.

The regime might as well announce the obvious: Liberalization is a ploy, a tactic designed to slow the flow of emigrants by lulling them into the sense that things will be radically different. But the Wall will remain as the regime's insurance that liberty is revocable.

Last week, on the 472nd anniversary of Martin Luther's defiant act of nailing 95 theses to the door of the Wittenberg church in which he is buried, East German protesters nailed just seven demands. In 1517, the issues were many, theological and abstruse — transubstantiation versus consubstantiation, and all that. Today the issues are secular, simple and few.

The Communist ruling class, imbued with the categories of authoritarianism, if no longer the convictions of Marxism, is tone deaf to the Jeffersonian assumption of the masses who believe in natural and inalienable rights that exist independently of the will of the state.

Today there may be more Marxists on the Harvard faculty than in Eastern Europe. In one month, Hungary's Communist Party has lost more than 95 percent of its members. When it changed its name from Communist to Socialist, it asked its members to re-register. Big mistake. One party official, who understandably desires anonymity, says the problem is the policy of requiring members to take the affirmative step of exchanging membership cards: "We were overgenerous by making it possible for them to leave decently and with a clear conscience." Think about that.

Egon Krenz, he of the shark's smile, was until recently the enforcer, the keeper of the East German regime's truncheons. Today he is a born-again reformer, serving up such hash as: The regime will offer radical reforms but will "preserve socialism" and its "achievements." The Wall is the defining achievement of socialism.

Last year, while making a triumphant passage through chanting, swooning West Germans, Mikhail Gorbachev was asked when the Wall would come down. He said: When the conditions that made it "necessary" are gone. That repulsive thought did nothing to dampen enthusiasm for Gorbachev.

What made the Wall "necessary" was — is — the existence of an alternative — any alternative — to communism. That is why today there is under way the greatest movement of European people since the surge of refugees who headed west as the Red Army arrived 44 years ago.

Election Results Show Progress, But No Reason For Smugness

WASHINGTON—It was a very good day for Democrats in Tuesday's off-year elections and a very bad day for Republicans who espoused the rigid anti-abortion position that President Bush has defined as orthodox GOP doctrine.

But on the day when L. Douglas Wilder's narrow victory in the unofficial Virginia tally gave the nation its first black elected governor, while other blacks won mayoral contests for the first time in predominantly white cities from New York and New Haven to Seattle, it is the race-relations message in which Americans can take most satisfaction.

But there is no reason for smugness. Wilder and David Dinkins, the winner in New York City, had much closer calls than the pre-election polls indicated and both trailed badly behind their white ticket-mates. Although each apparently won about one-third of the white vote, two-thirds of the whites found reason to oppose these notably moderate, non-threatening candidates.

John Daniels, the new mayor of New Haven, and Norman Rice, the winner in Seattle, did better with their white constituencies. These barrier-breakers and others elected or re-elected as mayors in cities like Atlanta, Cleveland and Detroit join a growing battalion of black officials. The Joint Center for Political Studies (JCPS), a Washington research center on matters of special concern to blacks, counted 7,226 such elected blacks as of last Jan. 1, up almost 6 percent in a single year and almost 50 percent more than a decade earlier.

But Eddie N. Williams, the president of JCPS, cautioned in an interview and a recent speech at the University of Wisconsin-Madison that the progress in elective politics has to be seen in a context of "pervasive racism." Even as New York voters were choosing Dinkins, Williams noted, the city's police department reported a 200 percent increase in "bias-related crimes" between 1983 and 1988. The Urban League's annual report pointed out the irony that on "the 200th anniversary of the adoption of the U.S. Constitution that defined blacks as 'three-fifths' of other persons" for the purposes of apportionment, "black income is well below" three-fifths that of whites.

The black middle-class has increased significantly in size and increasingly shares neighborhoods and friendships with middle-class whites. But a black under-class has become the locus of the nation's worst crime and drug problems.

Even acknowledging the problems, Williams is right when he says that victories like those recorded Tuesday "are symbolically eloquent" of positive change in America. Defeated white opponents, he noted, "avoided any hard-core use of the race issue," and significant numbers of white voters "were ready to support black candidates and, by implication, some of the interests of black constituencies."

Jesse L. Jackson, who can rightly claim that his two presidential candidacies opened the eyes of many other black politicians to the possibility of their prevailing in their predominantly white constituencies, argued that Tuesday's voting was another sign that "we're changing the psyche of America."

Clearly it is important when Colin Powell becomes national security adviser to the President and, now, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. It is important when William H. Gray III becomes the majority whip of the House of Representative and when Ronald H. Brown becomes chairman of the Democratic Party. It is significant when Bill Cosby's television family becomes the model of endearing middle-class domesticity; when Bill White becomes president of the National League and Frank Robinson American League manager of the year; and when Oprah Winfrey is described by a news magazine as "the most powerful woman in America."

It raises the sights of blacks when they see other blacks succeeding on such a scale. And it changes whites' attitudes when we deal with blacks in such positions of such power and prestige.

But do not exaggerate the change. In the political world, blacks may now have one governor — of 50; 24 Representatives — of 435; there are still no black Senators. Williams is undoubtedly right when he says that expansion of political power will increasingly require coalition-building of the kind Dinkins and Wilder and the other Tuesday winners demonstrated, for the new black victories in the Nineties will come mainly in majority-white constituencies.

But the paths for progress are not a matter for easy agreement. Williams, in his Madison speech, urged that blacks seek "a more balanced partisan alignment" with Republicans, instead of their overwhelming attachment to the Democratic Party. Jackson saw Tuesday's victories being achieved by blacks who "clearly distinguished themselves from the Republican Party and its philosophy."

At Howard University this week, scores of scholars have been debating strategies for strengthening health, education, housing and economic development in the black community, aiming at a blueprint for progress. The way is not yet clear. But after Tuesday, a few less barriers remain.

A Vacuum

WASHINGTON—Charles Lewis' assertions that he had sold drugs to Mayor Marion Barry came as no surprise. It had been leaked some time ago that Lewis, a convicted drug dealer negotiating a plea bargain for additional drug offenses, would put the finger on Barry.

Still, his actual courtroom testimony — whether or not an indictment follows — is bound to have a major impact on Barry's campaign for re-election. The one person clearly in a position to know now says that he procured drugs for the mayor, and that the two of them smoked crack cocaine together in Lewis' hotel room here in Washington.

Barry's claim that he's "not worried at all" by the allegation has to be dismissed as bravado. Maybe he wouldn't be worried if the accusation had come from some street junkie seeking a lighter sentence. But Barry has to know that the circumstances linking him to Lewis give special weight to Lewis' testimony.

Here is Barry's problem. He has admitted to a half-dozen visits to Lewis' Ramada Inn room, which was already under surveillance by the police. (A hotel maid said Lewis had offered her cocaine.) A plan by undercover officers to attempt a "buy" from Lewis was called off after it was learned that the mayor was in Lewis' room. And now Lewis says the mayor was there to get some crack Lewis had procured for him, and that the two used drugs together.

Barry, for his part, offers no credible explanation for the repeated visits. It was "bad judgment," he says.

He said he was calling on an out-of-work and depressed friend. But the evidence of a friendship sufficiently close to warrant such visits is remarkably scarce. Lewis, a native of the Virgin Islands, once worked for the city government, but nowhere close to the mayor. Nor has anyone come forward to tell of Lewis and Barry being seen together socially or to offer any other evidence of close friendship.

It's one thing for Barry to accuse Lewis of lying in order to win a lighter sentence. It's another to explain what Barry was doing in the hotel room so many times. So far, Lewis' is the only explanation that makes sense. The mayor is stuck with an explanatory vacuum.

And into that vacuum flows doubts of the mayor's claim that he not only never used drugs but was never knowingly in the company of anyone who did.

Doubts alone do not constitute the basis for an indictment, of course. And the prosecutors reportedly are reluctant to seek an indictment based solely on circumstantial evidence. But according to the Post, investigators have located a number of witnesses who corroborate Lewis' statement that the mayor has used crack.

Is that enough for an indictment? And if the indictment is handed up, will it be enough for a conviction?

I don't know, and in some ways it doesn't matter. The more important question is not whether Barry goes to jail but whether he remains as mayor.

He has demeaned his office and embarrassed his constituents — yes, including me — not just by the Ramada Inn incident and the criminal conviction of a number of close government associates but also by a prolonged pattern of personal indiscretions that cannot be dismissed simply as "bad judgment."

Four Sites Chosen In Search For Waste Dump

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — With four sites selected as possible hosts for a dump for mildly radioactive garbage from eight Southeastern states, work now begins on trimming the list, officials said.

Chem-Nuclear Systems, Inc. announced the four sites at a meeting Wednesday of the N.C. Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority.

"The areas ... are in no way ranked," said Chem-Nuclear vice president David Ebenhack at the meeting attended by about 250 people. "There is no preference as far as we know."

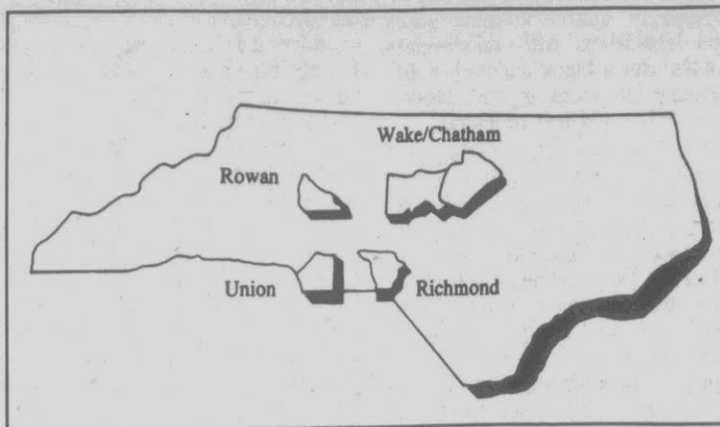

The sites still under consideration for the facility include a 750-acre site on the border of Wake and Chatham counties that includes part of the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant operated by Carolina Power & Light Co.

"We are aware that a significant part of the land in Wake County is owned by CP&L," said Ebenhack. But he did not say whether that would affect the eventual choice of a site.

The General Assembly has ordered the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority to give a priority to utility-owned property in selecting a site. Ebenhack said if the CP&L site meets the technical requirements, then the commission has the "discretionary authority" to make the final choice.

The other three areas still under consideration include a 2,000-acre site in Richmond County about two miles southeast of Hamlet near the Scotland County line; a 1,000-acre site in Rowan County about 11 miles southeast of Salisbury and one mile north of the Stanly County line; and a 1,000-acre area in Union County about seven miles south of Marshville and 11 miles southeast of Monroe.

Chem-Nuclear will do more detailed studies of the four sites over the next two to three months. The company then will recommend at least two sites to the authority for yearlong studies before the authority picks a site.

"Let me also say that these are favorable site areas, not sites," he said. "We have not drawn boundaries around the sites per se."

The company expects the disposal facility to use about 500 acres, he said, including a buffer zone around the site.

The waste that will be disposed includes protective clothing, machinery and residues from nuclear power plants; contaminated syringes, gloves and masks from hospitals; and various tools and equipment from industry.

The authority is required to have a disposal facility in operation by 1993 to handle radioactive wastes from eight Southeastern states for the next 20 years. The dump will open after the closing of a landfill in South Carolina, where the region's wastes have been buried.

There was little reaction from the crowd, which included a number of anti-nuclear protesters, as Ebenhack announced the four areas.

Ebenhack said areas that have been eliminated will not be brought back into the study, and problems can still develop with the four areas selected.

"We don't know if all four sites will survive (the next step)," he said. "It is possible one or more sites may fall out for technical reasons."

The search for a disposal site began more than a year ago. Preliminary studies completed before Chem-Nuclear was hired in July to build and operate the facility had narrowed the possible areas to about 100 square miles.

The early studies eliminated areas that had large bodies of surface water, a high water table, were within a 100-year floodplain, had a steep grade or contained churches, cemeteries, schools, hospitals or prisons.

Opponents Say They Will Keep Up Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Environmentalists said they would join with residents of areas chosen as possible places for the disposal of low-level nuclear trash to fight the state's effort to build the facility.

"I think everyone has learned in the last year that even if I'm not going to be affected personally, the people down the road are, that Grandma will be, and we need to work together," said Lisa Finaldi of the N.C. Clean Water Fund.

Speaking in front of about 50 protesters from a dozen counties, she said the state should be concentrating on reducing nuclear waste and storing it near its point of origin.

"Instead, the state is pursuing a policy which will send all the waste from the Southeast to someone in our neighborhood's backyard," she said. "This is an immoral policy."

The protesters, carrying banners reading "Dump the Dump" and "No Nukes," read a pledge in which members promise to help all "victim communities" in the state.

Chem-Nuclear Systems Inc. announced the selection of four possible host sites Wednesday. Three are in Richmond, Rowan, and Union counties with a fourth straddling the Wake-Chatham County line.

Local political leaders and residents reacted strongly to the news.

"We'll fight it with every drop of blood in our bodies," J. Newton Cohen, chairman of the Rowan County Board of Commissioners told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "It's a bad site and they haven't even walked on it yet. You would be amazed at the amount of human suffering that goes on in this kind of thing."

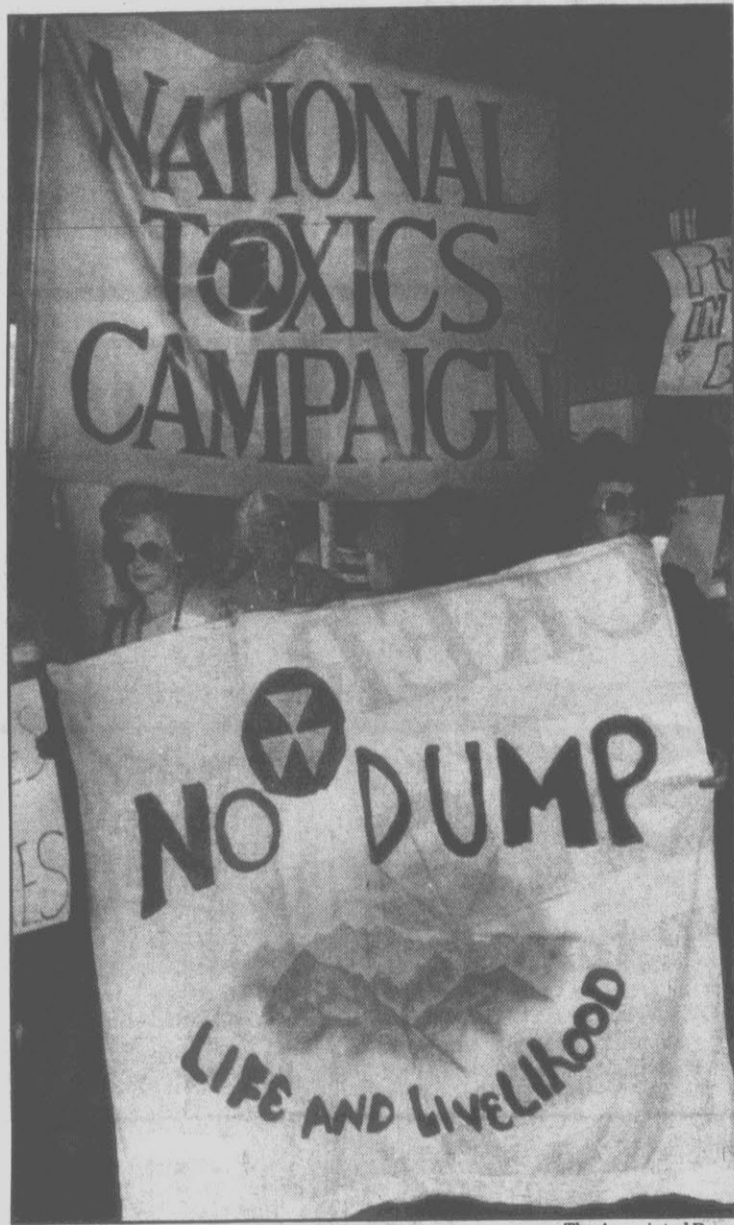

Asked what she and other Chatham County residents would do, Jane C. Teague said, "We're going to have a Boston Tea Party."

Wake commissioners, however, were more philosophical. "There will be considerable concern, but the fact is — there has got to be a low-level waste site," said M. Edmund Aycock, chairman of the Wake commissioners.

"I don't anticipate that our county board will make an effort to block it," he told the News and Observer. "But I do think they'll make an effort to make sure that all criteria are adhered to and met."

Authority members said the facility is necessary.

"Nobody wants to deal with this whole waste area, but we've got to," Libby Drury of Charlotte, one of 15 members on the authority, told The Charlotte Observer. "Safety is my main concern as a citizen."

Sludge Train Running Out Of Time

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — GSX Chemical Services is running out of options in its effort to avoid a fine of $2 million a day for leaving 5,000 tons of sewage sludge on a train in Mississippi, a company official says.

"They want us to get it out now, if not five days ago," GSX Vice President Roger Davis said in a telephone interview from his home Wednesday night. GSX is based in Columbia.

Mississippi on Tuesday ordered GSX to remove the 63 train cars carrying the sludge from Baltimore, or face a fine of $2 million a day that would be retroactive to Nov. 3.

"Mississippi is not a dumping ground for someone else's sewage, and this order should ensure that we get rid of it," Gov. Ray Mabus said in a statement announcing the order by the Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality.

The train, dubbed the "poo poo choo choo," arrived Friday in Moss Point, Miss., just outside Pascagoula on the Gulf Coast, after being driven out of Louisiana by residents who complained of its smell.

The gondola cars covered with plastic are loaded with non-hazardous, treated human waste.

Davis said his company has found people who want the sludge — which can be used as fertilizer — but the regulatory permitting process is so time-consuming that those options aren't practical.

"We've about exhausted all the alternatives we had available to us," Davis said. "It looks like the only recourse is to try to send it back to Baltimore."

The problem with returning the waste is that the railroad doesn't want to take it to Baltimore because that city doesn't want it, Davis said.

He has said GSX's contract with Metcalf and Eddy Service Inc. called for GSX to be able to return the waste to Baltimore if it was refused at the land farm in White Castle, La.

But he said the company in Baltimore hasn't wanted to take it back.

"We will ultimately go to court if we don't get some resolution of it," Davis said. "If we continue to run into obstacles to make any progress, we will have to resort to the courts to sort it all out."

Davis said he was uncertain just what type of court action GSX might have to take.

He added that GSX will argue at a Nov. 21 hearing that the fine isn't warranted.

GSX had contracted to take 12,000 tons of the sludge from Baltimore's municipal sewerage system. Davis said because of the problems, GSX probably won't take any more.

Layoffs

HAZELWOOD, N.C. (AP) — A lull in military boot contracts has forced Welco Enterprises to lay off 100 workers, 40 percent of the workforce at Haywood County's fourth-largest employer, officials said.

The Hazelwood bootmaker, one of two major suppliers to the Defense Department, made its most sizable cut last week, when 80 workers were released.

The layoffs come as Welco finishes two contracts awarded earlier this year.

Rural Crossroads Is 'Grand Central' For N.C. Prisoners

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANDY RIDGE, N.C. — This rural crossroads doesn't show up on most roadmaps, but for prisoners in North Carolina's correctional system, all roads eventually lead to Sandy Ridge and the depot nicknamed "Grand Central."

Every Tuesday and Thursday, 13 unmarked tan buses move from prison to prison around the state, picking up inmates to be transferred and mail destined for other units.

At about 11 a.m., the buses begin converging on a low, metal building surrounded by a chain-link fence and razor wire. A shotgun-toting guard watches as each bus pulls into the compound and unloads the inmates, their belongings and sacks of mail.

In less than two hours, the prisoners are fed, sorted onto the right buses with their belongings and moving toward their final destinations.

"No matter where you transfer in the state system, it's done in one day," said Lt. Richard Fuqua, who manages the depot. "If you're going from Craggy Prison (in Asheville) to Wilmington, you'll leave the mountains early in the morning, transfer here and be in Wilmington that night."

As each prisoner files into the depot, he is handed a bag lunch and sent into one of two long holding areas. Even though minimum security and medium security inmates ride together on the buses, they are held separately in the depot.

The bus system is not used for female inmates or prisoners in "close" custody because of security risks.

Shortly before 11 a.m., a few inmates from the early buses were scattered around the benches in the holding cells. An hour later, when most of the buses had arrived, each cell held a standing-room-only crowd.

"We'll average anywhere from 250 to 350 prisoners each day," Fuqua said. "Some days we'll get up as high as 400 men in here, which is pushing it a little. It's amazing how consistent it is, though."

While the prisoners eat lunch in the holding cells, the bus drivers sort out the paperwork that accompanies each inmate and the stacks of mail sent from one prison unit to another.

"There's no telling how many thousands of dollars taxpayers are saved just with the postage we save," Fuqua said. "And it gives us one-day delivery guaranteed."

The Associated Press

Gene Livengood sorts mail at Sandy Ridge depot for distribution to correctional facilities

There has never been an escape in the transit system, and problems, drivers say, are rare.

"Really, the men don't give you much trouble," said Gene Livengood, who has driven prison buses for 17 years. "That (AM-FM) radio there is the best thing they ever put on these buses. You just put on some music the men like and they'll sit back there and just listen and ride."

The tinted bus windows are covered on the outside with steel screens. The back door, the one used by inmates to enter and leave the bus, is locked. The two armed drivers assigned to the bus are separated from the inmates by steel screens and a locked door.

The bus is fitted with seats similar to those used on school buses, but several seats in the rear have been removed to make way for a chemical toilet.

"When you drive one of these, you're kind of limited to where you can stop," said Livengood.

Correction Department spokesman David Guth said he remembered only one attempted escape from a prison bus. An inmate forced open the rear door and jumped out while the bus was moving, but he was injured when he hit the road and could not flee.

Livengood said he keeps a close eye on what is happening around the bus when transporting inmates.

"I'm not too worried about the men, but you do worry that they might have friends out there who might try something," Livengood said. "When I'm driving, I keep my eyes on that sideview mirror all the time, just keeping an eye on the cars around me."

In addition to the Tuesday and Thursday runs through several counties around the depot, Livengood also drives shuttle buses that move prisoners from county jails to the prison system, a service for sheriffs the department started in 1987. On his off-time, he drives tour buses.

Drivers with the longest routes — up to 576 miles from the coast or the mountains — put in an 18-hour day every Tuesday and Thursday, leaving their home base as early as 3 a.m. and returning as late as 9 p.m.

A spare bus is kept at the depot in case of a breakdown on the route, and local prison units, in a pinch, can loan their work bus to keep the system going. Medical emergencies, too, can be handled at local prison units or a nurse at the depot.

Most days, Fuqua said, the men mill around quietly in the holding cells while they wait to board the bus. But at times, the atmosphere can get tense.

Once, when a bus lightly banged the bumper of a dump truck, Fuqua said, a few of the passengers complained loudly, long and unconvincingly about needing extensive medical treatment.

"We ended up having to separate the men (to avoid a fight) because some of the inmates on that bus were on their way to be paroled that afternoon," he said. "They sure didn't want to be stuck here waiting on these other guys. There was a lot of loud discussion, but we got it straightened out."

Then there was the time when a gang of prisoners on their way to trial were transferred the same day as other inmates who were scheduled to testify against them.

"They had gone to great lengths to separate these men in different units, but then, by accident, they ended up being transferred on the same day," Fuqua said. "Of course, they all ended up here together. Usually, in a situation like that, you transfer them on different days so they don't meet up."

"We made it through that day without any problems," he said. "but the men really, really had to keep a sharp eye on it."

As the last inmate heads for his bus, a group of trustees from the Sandy Ridge Correctional Center next door to the depot, swing through the holding cells, sweeping up the litter of lunch bags and bologna sandwich crusts that cover the floor.

Outside, the last bus pulls through the gate, stopping long enough for the drivers to reclaim their guns from the guard in the tower. Fuqua and his men return to their off-day duties in extradition and bloodhound searches for escapees.

And Grand Central goes back into hibernation.

IN THE STATE

Women In Combat

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Women are ready for combat roles, and guidelines that prevent female soldiers from filling them should be set aside because they keep women from advancing in the military, says an adviser to Defense Secretary Richard Cheney.

“Combat exclusion rules are holding women back more than anything else,” said Dr. Connie S. Lee, Cheney’s civilian adviser on women in the military.

Dr. Lee is chairman of the Defense Advisory Council on Women in the Services, which earlier this month asked the Army to set aside banning women from combat jobs on a trial basis. She spoke Wednesday to an audience of about 200 military women at a forum called “A Salute to Women in the Military: Past and Present.”

Reward Posted

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin announced Wednesday that the state is offering up to $5,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone responsible for the death of Fritz Theodora Lovins Jr. of Lenoir.

Lovins, 58, was found dead on Sept. 10 in an open field in Caldwell County beside the cab he drove for Howard’s Cab in Lenoir. Lovins had received two gunshot wounds to the head.

Employer Awards

RALEIGH (AP) — Eighty-three employers from North Carolina received the Job Service Employer Awards of 1989, sponsored by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina.

More than 100 employers were nominated by local Job Service Center offices and local Job Service Employer Committees.

Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner congratulated the winners at a luncheon, saying, “We are exceedingly proud of all of our state’s employers. Together, they keep North Carolina strong and prosperous.”

Blacks Encouraged By Virginia Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The apparent election of Douglas Wilder to the Virginia governorship is expected to boost the candidacies of other blacks seeking statewide offices, and one man considering a bid for the U.S. Senate seat held by Jesse Helms says the precedent encourages him.

“I’m awfully encouraged by Doug Wilder’s showing yesterday,” former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gant said in an interview published today. “It really confirms a gut feeling that I have deep down that voters in this region are voting for people on the basis of their perceptions of their qualifications. It is one of the reasons I am considering a statewide race.”

Gant said the media focus too much attention on a candidate’s race — at the expense of his positions, character, record and vision. But he acknowledges he probably will face the question as he ponders whether to enter the race for Helms’ seat.

Suspected Drug Gang Member Enters Plea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — A man federal officials described as a key member of a Colombian cocaine cartel made a brief appearance in a Greensboro courtroom after being secretly whisked into the city.

Freddy Aguilera-Quinjano, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration says, played a major role in a network that controlled five multimillion-dollar cocaine labs on the East Coast, including one near Gibsonville.

“He was the Colombian liaison in this country to set up the drug labs,” said Richard Carleton, a deputy U.S. Marshal in Winston-Salem. Aguilera-Quinjano worked for the Santacruz-Londono organization in Cali, Colombia, now known as the Cali cartel, Carleton said.

Aguilera-Quinjano, 44, was arrested in Miami two years ago, two years after his indictment in U.S. District Court in Greensboro. He is serving a 30-year sentence for cocaine charges in Miami and his role in a lab in Minden, N.Y.

Wednesday, he pleaded not guilty

Suit Filed

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A lawsuit has been filed against Mount Airy man whose dog is alleged to have attacked a boy in July 1987, seriously injuring the boy.

The suit was filed by the family of Christopher A. Martin, now 8, against a neighbor, David Tillotson, 45.

The suit seeks more than $10,000 in damages plus interest, court costs, attorneys fees and other relief.

The suit says the boy, then 5, was playing in the yard of his parents’ home when he was attacked and “severely bitten” by the dog, resulting in “permanent cosmetic disfigurement and permanent nerve damage.”

Loop Route

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Transportation picked a specific route Wednesday for the proposed Raleigh Outer Loop and decided to proceed with the $415 million project.

“This highway will become a reality,” State Highway Administrator George Wells said. “This is the state’s decision” to build it.

The 30-mile northern portion of the loop would run from U.S. 64 near Knightdale to N.C. 55 near Research Triangle Park. It would give travelers a bypass around the Capital City and ease traffic on Raleigh-area roads. Construction will begin in 1992, with completion well into the next century.

Gas Bills

RALEIGH (AP) — Natural gas users in central and western North Carolina will get a slight break in their monthly bills, just in time for cold weather.

The cost of natural gas fell Wednesday under a set of orders issued by the state Utilities Commission. Together, the orders will result in a 0.61 percent decrease in gas rates for residential customers of Public Service Co.

A typical residential customer who uses gas year-round would see monthly winter bills fall from $64.20 to $63.81, a saving of 39 cents.

Smoking Vote May Spur Anti-Leaf Drive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — A smoking ordinance approved by voters in the heart of tobacco country has given impetus to the anti-smoking movement, leaders of the movement and tobacco industry officials say.

The smoking ordinance referendum, which bans smoking in large Greensboro stores and requires smoking sections in almost all restaurants, passed by 173 votes Tuesday.

The ordinance is the toughest in any North Carolina city.

“This victory now provides an opportunity, to groups nationally, to point to the heartland of tobacco production and manufacturing and say, “See what we did here,” said John N. Parker, an assistant to the president of the N.C. Farm Bureau and an opponent of the referendum.

“Anything that happens in the heart of tobacco country, pro or con, especially if it is pro-health, is an indication that there is a growing sensitivity on the part of the people who live in those states about tobacco,” said Scott D. Ballin, a vice president of the American Heart Association in Washington.

“I think the trends that are happening in the rest of the country are now happening in ... tobacco states,” he said. “Somehow they’re trying to grapple with the balance between the needs of farmers and the needs to protect their own health.”

North Carolina has 14,000 tobacco farmers and produces 66 percent of the nation’s flue-cured tobacco, which is valued at $900 million annually. Flue-cure tobacco is used to manufacture cigarettes, and the state’s cigarette makers produce 56 percent of all domestic brands.

Alexander W. Spears, executive vice president at P. Lorillard Inc., a Greensboro cigarette manufacturer that employs 2,300, sees no short-term effect on tobacco manufacturing from the referendum, but he does see a long-term one.

Spears said the referendum was part of the anti-smoking group’s objective to enact as many restrictions as possible at local and state levels. The group’s overall objective, he said, is to make it impossible to find a place to smoke.

“I am sure they will try to use this as a political plum and a reason for other communities to follow suit and that sort of thing,” he said

Spears said he had spent most of Wednesday trying to calm irate employees who felt betrayed by voters in a city where the tobacco company has always worked hard to build a reputation as a good neighbor.

Study Scores Navy Reliance On IB

found the Navy relied partly on the advice of a technical representative for the International Business Machines Corp., when it drew up the requirements for contract bids on computer equipment for its civilian pay system.

"Although such vendor assistance, in and of itself, does not establish bias, we are concerned that IBM was the only vendor who provided such advice and assistance," the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, said in releasing its study Wednesday.

A second day of hearings with testimony from IBM officials was scheduled today.

The service, in awarding a $27 million contract, chose a data base management system, hardware and 10 processing sites for its pay system that required a computer equal to the IBM low-end mainframe.

"From what we could determine only IBM could fulfill this requirement because it was the only vendor that marketed a mainframe of this size," the GAO said.

Grant To AIDS Show Withheld

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The National Endowment for the Arts is refusing to pay $10,000 in previously promised support for a New York City gallery's AIDS art show on the ground that it might violate a new federal anti-obscenity law.

Artists Space, the private Manhattan arts institution that is sponsoring the exhibition, notified NEA chairman John E. Frohnmayer on Wednesday that its 23-member board had unanimously rejected his request to relinquish the tax-paid grant.

In response, Frohnmayer said the endowment will withhold the $10,000 in grant money pending a legal opinion from the Justice Department.

"We haven't paid out the funds, and we don't intend to do so," Frohnmayer said in a telephone interview.

He also moved to disassociate the NEA from the AIDS show. In a Nov. 3 letter to Susan Wyatt, executive director of Artists Space,

Frohnmayer asked the gallery to publish this disclaimer: "The National Endowment for the Arts has not supported this exhibition or its catalog."

Ms. Wyatt said the gallery board was "taking a stand against censorship and self-censorship" in refusing to relinquish the grant.

"All of the works in the show are valid artworks," she said in a telephone interview from New York. "We believe this is a show that should be funded by the endowment."

The gallery's application for an endowment grant for the $30,000 show was approved in May by the NEA, which notified the gallery of the award in July.

That was before Congress passed the anti-obscenity law last month at the urging of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. Helms and other congressional conservatives had protested two previous endowment grants totaling $45,000 for exhibitions of controversial art by photographer Robert Mapplethorpe and artist Andres Serrano.

Coleman calls for a recount in Virginia voting

Wilder Confident Recount Will Put Him In Statehouse

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND — L. Douglas Wilder says a recount sought by his Republican opponent in Virginia's closest governor's election in history will not change the outcome that he says dispels notions of lingering voter racism.

Wilder, claiming a victory that would make him the nation's first elected black governor, said Wednesday the vote was a rejection of negative campaign tactics used by former Attorney General J. Marshall Coleman and showed that Virginians want to advance the progress of the last two Democratic administrations.

Wilder said race was not a factor in the close contest, even though his running mates for lieutenant governor and attorney general won with substantial majorities.

"I'm saying it is not and was not a factor in the results because I was elected," he said.

In unofficial returns, Wilder, the state's lieutenant governor, led Coleman by about 5,500 votes out of almost 1.8 million votes cast on Tuesday.

Coleman said he would ask for a recount if those numbers hold when the votes are certified by the State Board of Elections on Nov. 27.

"The outcome, although still in doubt, has given me a responsibility, for plainly I am the trustee of the votes of more than 800,000 Virginians who supported me in this contest," Coleman said. "I have a responsibility to them and to all Virginians to ensure the person with the most votes is declared the winner."

"I congratulate Doug Wilder on a hard-fought campaign and if he is certified the winner, he will have my full support," Coleman said.

But he added, "For the good of the next governor, whoever he may be, and for the good of the commonwealth, it is essential that there be complete confidence in the integrity and accuracy of the results."

Wilder said the historical significance of what happened was beginning to take hold and that he was delighted to win by any margin.

"I said if I won by 50.1 percent of the vote, I'd be happy. That's why you see me happy," he said. The close total "doesn't bother me a bit."

Wilder also dismissed questions about whether people were saying one thing in pre-election polls and exit polls, all of which showed him well ahead, and then voted a different way.

The same polls showed Democrat Donald S. Beyer Jr. far behind his Republican opponent, Edwina P. "Eddy" Dalton, for lieutenant governor, Wilder said. But Beyer won 54 percent to 46 percent.

The polls more correctly predicted Democrat Mary Sue Terry's re-election as attorney general over Republican Joseph B. Benedetti, 63 percent to 37 percent.

Wilder said he intended to serve as a full-time governor rather than get involved in national Democratic politics as a potential black rival to Jesse Jackson.

"I don't think you're going to see me being in confrontation with anybody," Wilder said.

David Rubitsky displays some of his war memorabilia

Soldier May Get His World War II Medal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — A Jewish soldier who says he saved his battalion by singlehandedly shooting to death more than 500 Japanese soldiers may soon receive the Medal of Honor he believes was denied because of his religion.

Marshaling the support of a U.S. senator, an authenticated photograph taken from the body of a Japanese soldier, and affidavits from two former commanders, David S. Rubitsky thinks he has enough evidence to win official recognition 47 years after the deed.

Rubitsky, 72, believes he was nominated for a Medal of Honor during World War II but denied the award because of the actions of an anti-Semitic commander. He has vowed to keep fighting for the award.

"If I give up, I'm beaten and I'm a fighter," Rubitsky said in an interview last year. "If I lose, the Jewish people lose and then I'm going to let them down."

According to Rubitsky's story, the heroic deed took place Dec. 1-2, 1942, in a New Guinea swamp known as "The Triangle," during an attack by Japanese troops on Rubitsky's 128th Infantry unit.

The former communications sergeant jumped into a machine gun fortification after it was abandoned by other soldiers and fired nearly 3,500 rounds of ammunition on the Japanese during 21 hours.

Officials investigating Rubitsky's complaint said a photograph discovered this spring has brought strong credence to his claim. They officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

Rubitsky came across the photograph in March while visiting an Army companion in Mesa, Ariz. The photograph, reportedly taken from the pocket of a dead Japanese soldier, shows a group picture of a Japanese military unit.

A handwritten message in Japanese on the back said the picture's bearer had decided to commit suicide after he and other officers sent men into a battle in which "600 fine Japanese soldiers died because of a solitary American soldier."

Sen. Herbert Kohl, D-Wis., began working on Rubitsky's behalf in January and had the photograph examined this spring.

The Secret Service confirmed the photo was printed on paper from 1942 and the writing was from ink produced in 1942. The note on the back was interpreted by the Library of Congress.

"Based on my review of the evidence, as well as the contacts my office has had with Mr. Rubitsky, I have concluded that he earned the Medal of Honor," Kohl said.

Maj. Joe Padilla of the Army Awards Branch in Washington, D.C., said a review of Rubitsky's case began in January 1988 and a decision should be issued by the end of the year.

Seven People Die In Van

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYOSSET, N.Y. — A van carrying factory workers to their jobs skidded off a damp highway in heavy fog, crashed into a tree and exploded. Seven people died and eight others were injured, two critically.

Weather conditions may have contributed to the crash just before dawn Wednesday on the Northern State Parkway, said State Police investigator Dale Faro.

The van's occupants worked in several factories on Long Island and lived in the New York City borough of Brooklyn. They were Haitians who spoke little English, complicating the investigation, state police said.

Police said they were investigating whether the van, registered as a passenger vehicle, was being used illegally as an unregistered van for hire or as a car pool.

Police also were questioning the van's driver, who apparently did not have a valid New York state driver's license. The New York Times reported.

Five people were dead at the scene and two others died later of their injuries, authorities said. The dead included four men, two women and one person whose sex could not be determined.

Two of the injured were in critical condition and the other six were in fair to serious condition at area hospitals.

Kitty Dukakis Drank Rubbing Alcohol

BOSTON (AP) — Kitty Dukakis, struggling against alcoholism, was hospitalized for severe reactions to rubbing alcohol, which she drank while exhausted because of flu and depression, her doctor said.

The wife of Gov. Michael Dukakis had been taking anti-depressants prescribed by her psychiatrist, but tests showed the rubbing alcohol caused her hospitalization, said Dr. Gerald Plotkin, the family physician.

Some specialists in treating alcoholism characterized Mrs. Dukakis' action as a "desperate cry for help."

The Dukakis family removed all alcoholic beverages from their home after Mrs. Dukakis entered a treatment program for alcoholism last February, said Mindy Lubber, the governor's spokeswoman.

KITTY DUKAKIS

Plotkin did not comment Wednesday on whether Mrs. Dukakis had knowingly tried to hurt herself or was seeking the effects of alcohol when she drank a small amount of the poisonous substance Monday.

The former Democratic presidential candidate spent Monday and Tuesday at his wife's side, canceled all appointments, and refused to comment.

Mrs. Dukakis, who turns 53 next month, was taken by ambulance to the hospital on the eve of the first anniversary of her husband's presidential defeat.

"Autumn has been a particularly bad season for her," said Plotkin. "Kitty has suffered from chemical dependency and struggled with depression for many years. These two problems often are related."

She was admitted to the intensive care unit at Brigham and Women's Hospital complaining of what a spokeswoman said were "flu-like symptoms." On Wednesday, she was moved to a private room.

Lubber said Wednesday night she did not know how long Mrs. Dukakis would be hospitalized.

Rubbing alcohol is normally about 70 percent isopropyl alcohol, which is much more toxic than ethanol, or drinking liquor, said Alan Woolf, director of the Massachusetts Poison Center at Children's Hospital in Boston.

Isopropyl alcohol can damage the stomach and about 10 ounces of it could be lethal, Woolf said.

It is not uncommon for alcoholics to drink rubbing alcohol if nothing else is available, but specialists in alcoholism treatment said such behavior was more likely to be seen among impoverished street alcoholics than affluent drinkers.

Storms Sweep Across South

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tornadoes and torrential rain swept through the Deep South, damaging buildings and causing floods and at least two deaths, including a 3-year-old who was thrown 200 yards by a twister that blasted his family's mobile home.

Tornadoes touched down Wednesday evening in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, and rains continued in already flooded parts of Louisiana.

"If there was a Richter scale for floods, this would have topped it," said Mike Yenni, president of Jefferson Parish, La. A 2-year-old boy there died when he fell into a drainage canal earlier this week.

The 3-year-old and his parents were in a mobile home smashed by a tornado in Pineview, Ga., a town of 560 people.

"The child was found under a car 200 yards from the foundation of the trailer," said Deputy Sheriff Dianne Roberts. "Someone just happened to look under it and saw the baby." The child's name was unavailable.

His father, Billy West, was found lying in the road with a broken neck and was in critical condition early today, said Mandy Shackelford, a spokeswoman at the Medical Center of Central Georgia in Macon. The mother also was hurt.

The tornado damaged at least four other homes and caused three additional injuries, authorities said.

A tornado touched down near Stonewall, Miss., on Wednesday night, the National Weather Service said, but no details were available.

Two tornadoes hit two counties in southeast Alabama on Wednesday morning.

In Geneva County, a woman was hurt when her mobile home was tossed into a fish pond. Her husband paddled to the trailer in his boat to retrieve his wife and their daughter.

S.D. Town Faces Attack By Weeds

MOBRIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Tumbleweeds tossed by 50-mph winds buried houses in this Missouri River town, and residents struggled to dig out of the prickly problem.

The mayor warned residents who had tumbleweeds up to their chimneys to clear them to reduce the danger of fire.

The weeds had grown thick all summer along the banks of the drought-shrunken Oahe Reservoir in north-central South Dakota. Winds out of the west Tuesday evening sent the weeds rolling across the prairie.

"People in the west end of town as they were sitting in their homes ... heard what sounded like rocks being thrown against their houses," Larry Atkinson, publisher of The Mobridge Tribune, said Wednesday.

"They came out this morning to find out that a number of houses were buried, literally buried, with tumbleweeds. We had some homes with only the roof sticking out.

"We had people that could not get out of their driveways," Atkinson said. "We had streets that were blocked, literally invaded by tumbleweeds."

Mayor Darrell Bender urged residents to help clean up the mess. City crews cleared the brush from the streets so vehicles could pass. The cleanup was continuing today.

"It's developing into what could be a very dangerous situation," Bender said. "We need to use extreme caution. I'd like to tell people not to drive through those tumbleweeds. Those that have homes that are covered up to their chimneys, get those weeds cleared so they don't start a fire."

Bender said he had asked the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which manages the reservoir system, to help in the cleanup.

Congress Moving Toward Federal Controls On Airline Fares, Services

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Major airlines officials are raising strong objections to congressional moves to reimpose government control over their industry.

A Senate subcommittee heard testimony Wednesday on legislation that would alter several practices sponsors say have driven small airlines out of business and kept others from starting up.

Calling for even stronger action, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, introduced the Airline Reregulation Act that would allow the government once again to regulate fares, routes, and services. The industry was deregulated by Congress in 1978.

"I don't know if complete reregulation is the answer," Metzenbaum said. "But I do know it's time we owned up to the fact that airline deregulation was a mistake."

Metzenbaum appeared as a witness before the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation's aviation subcommittee, which was discussing an airline competition bill opponents said also would bring regulation back.

That legislation, sponsored by Sens. John Danforth, R-Mo., and John McCain, R-Ariz., would force big airlines to give up their computerized reservations systems, stop them from booking flights on smaller airlines as if they are their own, and the selling of slots at major airports and strengthen the government's ability to increase competition.

"Instead of a proliferation of choices, consumers are increasingly faced with little or no choice" in airline service, McCain said.

Robert L. Crandall, head of American Airlines, told the committee the proposals would "diminish, not enhance, competition."

He acknowledged that computer reservations systems give airlines who own them a competitive advantage, but he denied this was because of anything mechanically built into the systems, which are provided to travel agents for booking flights.

"Why should we be deprived of an advantage we have earned?" Crandall asked.

He said the government should concentrate on building more airports and other facilities to increase competition instead of restricting successful airlines.

"The message I hear is that we are free to be innovative, free to risk capital, free to compete, as long as we lose money," Crandall told the committee. "If we are successful, the rug is likely to be pulled out from under us."

James W. Callison, a senior vice president of Delta Air Lines, said forced divestiture of reservations systems would produce increased air fares.

Callison said a provision of the bill that would prevent airlines from linking up with small commuter airlines would punish airlines that have not taken over smaller carriers.

"Delta's connection carriers operate as independent companies, not owned by Delta, and are major examples of small business at its best," he said.

Edward R. Beauvais, chief executive of the small America West Airlines, indicated general support for the bill and suggested it also call for an Internal Revenue Service investigation of frequent flyer programs.

"These programs, although quite popular, are among the most antithetical to the spirit and goals of airline deregulation," Beauvais said.

He noted businesses often pay for the tickets, but employees can use the frequent flyer tickets without being taxed for the benefit.

"The programs do not promote new business, they simply allow airlines to charge higher prices for the business that they are already receiving," Beauvais said. Most U.S. airlines, including America West, award flights and other benefits for customers who regularly fly with them.

Beauvais also proposed that airlines be prohibited from paying extra commissions to travel agents who book a high number of passengers on carriers whose reservations systems they are using.

A woman sits among her possessions Wednesday night at Chicago's O'Hare Airport terminal

O'Hare Attempts To Clear Air Terminal Of Homeless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Complaints about homeless people at the nation's busiest airport have prompted a plan to move them to shelters. But advocates for the homeless are criticizing the idea.

The strategy, still in its formative stages, would clear out the homeless out of O'Hare International Airport through nightly sweeps.

"I wouldn't go," said a diminutive, white-haired woman, who gave her name as Jean. "It's no solution. It's too short-term because you're only there for a short time and then you're back on the street, and I know about these things."

One of about 200 who live at the airport, Jean said Wednesday night she hustles baggage carts to make money. She sneaks up behind airline passengers, waits for them to take the bags off their rented carts, then sneaks off to return the rental.

Each returned cart makes her 25 cents. Ten carts buy her a hot dog.

"See that guy? He's been doing it 11 years," she said, pointing out an older man who slipped into a side entrance of a terminal's cafeteria as the lights were turned off for the evening.

A Chicago policeman closed the door behind him.

"The city offers them free housing and programs downtown ... but they can make a ton of money out here" by returning carts, stealing luggage and recruiting passengers for limousine services, said the officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Milton Wilson, a 24-year-old former fast-food restaurant worker who began living at the airport two weeks ago when he lost his apartment, disagreed.

"There's a lot of people here who don't have a place to go," he said. "At least at a shelter they'll have a bed and a hot meal. I know I want to go somewhere, not just stay here."

Complaints provoked Chicago Aviation Commissioner Jay Franke to set aside $500,000 out of the $350 million annual airport operations budget to deal with the homeless problem.

Ideas include closing the airport for a short time in the early morning hours, rounding up those who appear to be homeless, and taking them to a shelter in the surrounding suburbs.

The O'Hare plan, endorsed by Mayor Richard M. Daley, needs City Council approval.

The American Civil Liberties Union, historically opposed to random sweeps of any kind, said it is monitoring the issue and would examine the plan's legality when it is proposed.

Democrats Attack Defense Cuts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Senate Democrats are attacking the Bush administration's willingness to accept automatic budget cuts that would force the Defense Department to reduce the nation's armed forces.

"It would be a disaster if Congress and the administration decide to go over the cliff," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Wednesday as Pentagon officials described the impact of automatic reductions on the four military branches.

The 2.1 million active duty armed forces would have to be reduced by about 229,000 in fiscal 1990 under the cuts, with the Air Force cut by 80,000, the Navy by 76,000, the Army by 62,000 and the Marine Corps by 11,000.

Military contracts for such big-ticket items as the multiple-warhead MX nuclear missile and the Advanced Tactical Fighter would also have to be renegotiated, the Pentagon said.

The automatic budget cuts are necessary because of Congress' failure to pass a deficit reconciliation bill aimed at complying with the budget-cutting requirements of the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

President Bush has said he would be willing to live with the cutbacks in fiscal 1990 rather than accept a budget reconciliation bill that does not result in real deficit reductions. The president is seeking $14 billion in cuts; Congress has indicated a $12 billion cut is possible.

House and Senate negotiators are still thrashing out reconciliation legislation.

Without the legislation, federal programs would suffer $16.1 billion in automatic cuts, with half targeting the Defense Department.

The Senate Armed Services Committee invited Pentagon officials to Capitol Hill to describe the impact of the automatic budget cuts. At the session, however, members of the panel fell into partisan bickering.

Sen. James Exon, D-Nebr., said he could not believe that Bush, "the great defender of America," would accept the defense reductions that would be "absolutely devastating" to the military.

"The effect of this decision would be to take us back to the readiness levels of the mid-1970s," said Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., who indicated that the "zillions of dollars" spent during the Reagan and Bush administrations on building up the nation's defense would be for naught.

began several weeks early in an effort to set a successful pace for the general drive.

Participating in the Pacesetters Division were Burroughs Wellcome Co., Eastern Radiologists, Wachovia and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Also helping the campaign reach this year's goal, West said, were Mac McCarty, who chaired Leadership Giving; Jim Phillips, who was in charge of training, and Jordan Whichard, who led the Loaned Executives Program.

Seven campaigns received special recognition for the 1989 campaign effort.

Burroughs Wellcome, led by campaign chief Earl Lee and co-chaired by Dick Whitener and Andrea Pinianski, recorded a 34 percent increase over last year.

Simpson Industries, led by Sandy Nobles, recorded a 77 percent increase over last year, while Empire Brush, led by Sue Haddock and committee, achieved a 18 percent increase over the 1988 effort.

Prepshirt's 1989 United Way campaign, led by Steve Murray, achieved 100 percent participation while recording a 56 percent increase over last year's donations.

Brown and Wood, led by campaign chairman Bill Brown, recorded a 120 percent increase over last year's donations, while Greenville Utilities' campaign, chaired by Janet Drinnon and Parker Ellison, achieved a 53 percent increase.

Meanwhile, Pitt County employees, led by John Bulow, donated 33 percent more than last year's effort.

West also honored the 1989 United Way Cabinet, whose members presented final reports on each division.

The Industrial Division, led by James Vincent, raised $493,043, 100.09 percent of goal, while the Service Division, led by Richard Lamm, raised $72,664, 104.85 percent of goal. The Commercial Division, led by Beth Nelson, raised $78,950, 104.57 percent of goal. And the Business Division, led by Brenda Newman, raised $24,595, 107.4 percent of goal.

The Public and Academic Division, led by John Ferren, raised $87,014, 103.71 percent of goal, while the State Employees Division, led by Stuart Sactor, raised $92,624, 100.04 percent of goal. The Special Gifts Division, led by Katherine Gray, raised $16,339, 101.48 percent of goal.

Meanwhile, the Physicians and Staff Division, led by Dr. Richard Crocker, raised $41,715, 109.49 percent of goal, and the Professional Division, led by Ryal Tayloe, raised $31,003, 107.65 percent of goal.

Also recognized at the event were United Way staff members Lou Folger, executive director; Camille Smith, communications coordinator; Pat Everett, administrative assistant, and Angie Hardee, secretary.

Sandy and Mike Steele were recognized as United Way stars for their participation in the local United Way video and Jake Postma for his involvement in the video's creation and production.

Prior to the program, those in attendance were entertained with singing and dancing by The Ovations, a high school drama group from Lenoir County.

U.S. Says Soviet Ship Aimed Lasers At American Jets, Injuring Airman

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A Soviet military ship is suspected of shooting lasers at four U.S. aircraft in the Pacific in recent weeks, resulting in damage to the eyesight of an Air Force crewman, Pentagon sources said today.

The actions occurred despite an agreement last summer by top U.S. and Soviet military officials designed to avoid such dangerous military encounters. Although the agreement is not due to go into effect until Jan. 1, U.S. officials said it was dispiriting that such incidents were continuing.

Pentagon officials are investigating the incidents, which occurred in waters off Hawaii over the past three weeks, and some expressed irritation.

"This really shows that these guys (Soviets) are up to something," said a senior Pentagon official who spoke about the incidents on condition of anonymity.

It has not been officially determined that lasers were used. The source said, however, that such activity is suspected because of past incidents and descriptions provided by the military personnel involved in the most recent cases.

The sources said they could not specifically identify the Soviet vessel, but said it was a military ship that was in the waters where Soviets have traditionally observed the splashdowns for their missile tests.

U.S. planes traditionally observed the movements of such Soviet ships, the sources said.

The afflicted U.S. crewman — a loadmaster aboard an HC-130 aircraft — suffered disruption of his color vision, headaches and other visual problems and is under medical evaluation, Pentagon sources said.

The crewman had been wearing "laser eye protection" gear at the time, and U.S. officials are also investigating why the damage could occur despite that equipment, the source said.

The Pentagon sources said that because no official determination has yet been made that lasers were involved — and since the new U.S.-Soviet agreement is not yet in effect — no protests have been filed old why he thought their bond ought to be reduced. As Little stood, Hassell characterized him as a lifelong citizen of Pitt County, father of two, husband of the same wife for 20 years, a churchgoer, and a man with "substantial connections" in the community.

Hassell said Little and Baker had known about the indictments for many months and could have run earlier if either were going to run.

Rountree said he would not entertain Hassell's plea to have bond reduced until after he could talk with District Attorney Tom Haigwood. Haigwood, who walked into the courtroom within five minutes, said he was the one who suggested the $50,000 bond figure for each man. He said that the magistrate, in view of the 190 different indictments each against Little and Baker, had been planning to make it $150,000 or more.

Rountree ruled that the amounts set by the magistrate, $50,000 for each of the three, was appropriate. None of the three was in jail this morning.

McPherson is charged with 63 violations, while Little and Baker are charged with 190 each. Davis is charged with with 102 violations and Venter with 186.

The N.C. Secretary of State Securities Division conducted an investigation in which the division's lawyer, Gene Cella, says he found 32 people in Pitt, Carteret, Lenoir, Wayne and Wake counties who bought Interport stock from one of the five men. The office alleges that the five sold stock in the company without being registered with the state as salesmen and without registering the stock with the state. They have also been charged with conspiracy and stating misleading facts.

Value of the alleged sales is between $400,000 and $500,000, Cella said.

According to its incorporation papers, Interport Beverages Co. was formed to engage in the import, export and sale of beverages as well as "goods and merchandise of every kind and description."

Davis reportedly is a salesman of warranties to car dealerships. Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning he has no warrant for Davis' arrest. The Carteret County Sheriff's Department also said Davis has not been arrested there.

Venter is at large and Sheriff Tyson said he has does not have a warrant for his arrest in the Interport scheme. Reportedly a South African citizen who has lived as a legal alien in Pitt County since December 1987, Venter failed to appear in court Friday on charges of six counts of worthless checks and two counts of selling unregistered securities. A Superior Court judge ordered his $50,000 bond forfeited and issued an order for his arrest.

Changes

In the first official Soviet comment since Krenz reshuffled the country's top leadership, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov told a news briefing in Moscow that it was clear East Germany was undertaking a "renewal of socialism."

"They're improving the situation in the sense that they're moving toward perestroika on their own terms," he told a news briefing, referring to the Kremlin's current program of reforms.

Soviet television on Wednesday night showed protesters in Berlin and the official news agency Tass today quoted Krenz's condemning the old Politburo's foot-dragging on reform.

Krenz touched on the volatile topic of multiparty elections in a speech to the Central Committee that was published today in state newspapers. He called for a "new election law that ensures free, democratic general elections with a secret ballot."

He proposed "public supervision in every stage of the balloting." Krenz did not say whether he was using a true multiparty system in East Germany. Officials already say elections are democratic.

Parking Brings Problems For Handicapped

Dear Abby: I am 26 years old and was diagnosed last year as having "myotonic dystrophy" — a form of muscular dystrophy. My doctor ordered a handicapped plate/card for my car to enable me to park in spaces for handicapped people.

Abby, I have had nothing but trouble since I've been using this placard. Everywhere I go — department store shopping, bank, grocery store, restaurant, etc. — people tell me to move my van out of the "reserved for handicapped" parking space because I do not look handicapped.

I have trouble walking distances, and on occasion must rely on my wheelchair. My legs get weak and give out on me. I am not crippled, nor am I confined to a wheelchair —

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

I just cannot trust my legs to walk long distances when I'm tired.

Last week, a man came over to my van as I was getting out, and angrily ordered me to move it out of the handicapped parking or he would! A woman demanded that I move my van or she would hit me! Another person asked to see my "permit" to verify if it was really my name and picture on it.

Why do people think handicapped people have to be deformed or paralyzed? Please publish this in support of me and others like me. — I Am Handicapped

Dear I.M.H.: I have dealt with this problem in my column before, but it deserves another mention.

There are many people with debilitating disorders (heart trouble, for example) who appear to be strong and healthy, but can't walk half a block without stopping to rest.

Of course there will always be a few chiselers who would steal a preferred parking space from a physically handicapped person; in a sense, they too are "handicapped" — they suffer from a character deficiency.

Dear Abby: I just returned from my sister-in-law's home and am quite upset.

She has an adorable little 2-year-old daughter who is a little spoiled and often throws temper tantrums in order to get her own way.

My sister-in-law told me that she asked the pediatrician what to do when her child had one of those temper tantrums, and he told her to splash cold water in her face to bring her out of it!

Abby, what do you think of such advice from a pediatrician? Don't you think my sister-in-law should get another opinion? — Outraged In Reno

Dear Outraged: I think your sister-in-law should get another pediatrician.

Officials Fear Spread Of Health Problems

By Suzanne Gamboa
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOCORRO, Texas — Three of Victoria Guillen's children have had hepatitis, one daughter has sores up and down her arms and legs and her husband suffers gastritis. She blames the lack of running water in her home.

Many health workers agree that lack of water is the direct cause of the Guillens' illnesses. They also blame a lack of public policy in the last decade for failure to find a remedy for her problems and those of thousands of other "colonia" residents living along the U.S.-Mexico border.

And they warn that the longer the colonias go without running water, the greater the threat to the health of the rest of the nation as people possibly carrying disease cross the border, many of them migrant workers who travel around the United States.

"What we've got is a Third World, part of which happens to be in the U.S.," said Dr. Herbert Ortega, chief of the Pan American Health Organization's El Paso office.

Consider: —El Paso County's tuberculosis rate is a little less than twice the national average, and 80 percent are traceable to a foreign country.

—Each day, 12 million gallons of raw sewage flow into the Tijuana River. Another 20 million and 22 million are dumped into the New River and Rio Grande, respectively, according to an American Medical Association report.

—Between 1980 and 1988, the population of Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, rose from 714,000 to 1.25 million; officials estimate anywhere from 83 million to 400 million border crossings each year.

—Twenty-five to 50 percent of border residents are living in poverty.

Despite these grim statistics, health officials, physicians and some politicians have been unable to turn the attention of Congress to the border and change the living conditions of Mrs. Guillen and other residents.

The Guillens have lived for 15 years in a trailer home in a subdivision east of El Paso. They had owned a home in El Paso, but sold it when they moved to California. When they returned they discovered they could buy a lot of land for less than it would cost them to rent a home. They were promised sewer and water hookups would arrive soon.

"It has been a long time, 15 years we have been waiting for water," she said. On the stove, a rusting metal bucket holds water for cooking, washing dishes and bathing.

Sometimes the family can get water from neighbors a block away with running water, but when they run out at odd hours they must use a backyard pump.

Mrs. Guillen fondly recalls when the family lived in El Paso.

"When my kids were very small, they would get full of dirt and I was used to letting my kids play, letting them get dirty and then bathing them. But not here. ... At times I don't even have water from the pump and the pipes get clogged up. ... We get very tense because there is not even water to fill the tub. You can imagine. With a big family and no water for the bathtub. What do we do? We have to put up with it."

Sometimes her husband cleans the pipes to the backyard pump and ends up covered with sand, Mrs. Guillen said. "We take a bath with sand. ... There are a lot of people who take a bath with sand."

Last year, three of her children got hepatitis. "Problems with water can cause people to have big infectious sores, that erupt inside your skin. ... Two of my daughters had that same infection years back."

One daughter's foot was so infected it swelled. The girl spent a summer with an aunt in El Paso "and believe it or not her (sores) got better, because she was taking a bath with city water."

Mrs. Guillen speaks reverently of the city water. "It is clean. Your body feels clean. But with the water she must use, "I'm not sure if I smell good because that water smells bad."

Health officials hope a recent conference sponsored by the Texas Medical Association and the recent meeting between President Bush and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gotari will bring some remedy to border living conditions.

"I don't know ultimately what will come of it, but there is greater awareness, more interest, more action. The Texas Medical Association, the American Medical Association are pushing the administration to respond," said Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas health commissioner.

Health officials would most like to see a joint U.S.-Mexico commission formed and given consistent funding to coordinate the work of many independent groups trying to alleviate the border conditions.

Texas voters will be asked Nov. 7 to approve a $500 million water bond package, which includes $100 million that could be used for subsidized loans and grants to provide water and sewage systems to colonias. The bonds would be guaranteed by local governments, water districts or water supply corporations.

But even if the money is approved, Comptroller Bob Bullock has said $100 million would not be enough to upgrade conditions in all the state's colonias.

Others see a solution through more involvement by the "maquiladora" — twin-plant — industries. These foreign-owned manufacturing centers along the border flourish with cheap Mexican labor and have drawn millions to the border, overwhelming municipal infrastructures.

About 90 percent of the 1,400 maquiladoras in operation are situated on the U.S.-Mexico border, with 500 plants along the Texas-Mexico border. Juarez alone has 249, according to the Pan American Health Organization.

"Some of these maquila plants throw their wastes directly into the sewage disposal system," PAHO reported in a recent newsletter. "Other maquilas sell tanks with toxic residues to questionable recycling companies."

"It has been found that these companies dispel these toxic tanks into the first dumping site found. The tank ends up sold to a third party who may use it to store water for their personal hygiene, and/or to cook or drink."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Guillen hopes to have running water by December.

That's what she's been told.

Tough Treatment Of Teens Being Investigated

By Mike Carter
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Matt Woolston's five weeks of drug treatment were spent mostly in a windowless room on a blue plastic chair.

"They wouldn't let you lean back. You had to sit forward with your back straight," often for up to 15 hours at a time, six days a week, and "rap" about personal problems, he said. He didn't see the sun for days at a time.

Woolston, 20, was held for 38 days after his parents placed him in KIDS of Greater Salt Lake, a drug and alcohol treatment program. He said he was coerced into going and was rescued only after friends followed a van heading to the "host home" where he was being held and called police.

Woolston's 19-year-old sister, Jennifer, has filed a $6.5 million lawsuit against KIDS, claiming she was held against her will. She says she escaped once by climbing down knotted bedsheets, was returned by her parents and a man with a badge who claimed to be a policeman, and broke an arm and a leg falling in a second attempt.

Police are investigating allegations of false imprisonment, unlawful detention and assault. The allegations are similar to those that closed KIDS of Southern California and KIDS of El Paso, Texas, early this year.

W. Kimball DeLaMare, director of the Utah KIDS, acknowledges that treatment can be severe. But so are the ravages of compulsive behaviors, he says.

"We're not in the business to make money. We invite people to come in here. Our motive is to help kids get straight and live successful lives and develop coping skills. ... We want to give kids back to their parents."

KIDS is the third Utah "tough love" program to be investigated in a year. State officials worry Utah is becoming a mecca for unorthodox treatment centers that prey on desperate parents and use poorly trained "peer counselors."

"The parents want an answer and prevention, even an inoculation for these behaviors," said Wayne Holland, a Division of Youth Corrections investigator who believes Utah's religious and cultural background "tend to allow these non-traditional groups to fill that need."

It isn't unusual for parents to place children in a long-term program, which may take 18 months or more, for smoking cigarettes or having sex. Without proper admitting procedures involving professionals, too often kids who don't really need the treatment end up there, Holland said.

"A lot of times these kinds of programs promise miracles, and when they can't deliver they turn abusive," said Patricia Kreher, director of licensing for the Department of Social Services.

Another group, the Challenger Foundation, is fighting for its license after 17-year-old Elizabeth Zasso claimed she was kidnapped into a 63-day wilderness experience aimed at character-building. A judge ruled that her constitutional rights were violated and she filed a $20 million lawsuit. The Garfield County Attorney has filed misdemeanor child abuse and witness-tampering charges.

And Proctor Advocate founder Layne Meacham faces charges he permitted the abuse of a 16-year-old girl by peer counselors. Meacham has testified he based his program partly on the teachings of the founder of KIDS.

KIDS in Utah is the non-profit progeny of KIDS of Bergen County, N.J., the subject of abuse allegations since it opened in 1984. KIDS now operates only in New Jersey, which has no licensing requirements, and Utah.

The 3-month-old Utah program's conditional license has been extended to Jan. 31, and the state is awaiting the outcome of Jennifer Woolston's lawsuit and others contemplated by former patients, said Social Services' Ken Stettler.

Jennifer and Matt Woolston were put into KIDS by their parents. Jennifer and her attorney, Mary Corpron, say the reasons for her placement are unknown. Matt was placed in the 18-month program for drug treatment.

Because of the litigation, Marilyn Woolston, their mother, had no other comment but: "We feel real positive about it, and feel it is very beneficial to the kids. Even Matt would tell you how he benefited."

DeLaMare said patients don't always know what's best and that parents have the right to intervene in a life out of control, even an adult child's. Adult patients sign a contract and can leave on 24 hours' written notice, he said.

Matt Woolston claims he was coerced into signing a contract, spent hours a day in "rap" sessions, slept on the floor of a locked room with five other patients, and was under constant surveillance.

DeLaMare said the first weeks are difficult. Newcomers are "belt-looped" — required to constantly lock fingers through the belt or belt loops of an older, experienced patient when moving about in the main compound.

They aren't allowed to go to school or to see or speak to anyone outside, except under the strictest supervision. It is a phase, he said, that can last for as long as the patient refuses to acknowledge a problem.

Jennifer contends she saw patients beaten. Matt never saw beatings, but said "restraining" — counselors holding his arms and legs while another sat on his chest — was common.

Recorder Is Comforting

Editor's Note: Erma Bombeck is on vacation for two weeks. This Best of Bombeck release originally appeared June 22, 1986.

About three years ago, my son, who lives in another state, got an answering machine. At first I resented it. I knew as sure as God made little green apples the kid was lying in bed with the machine turned on, listening to me having an anxiety attack and loving it.

But after a while, the machine began to take on a human quality. It had such fine manners. It would say softly, "Hi, I'm not here right now, but if you would leave your name and your phone number, I'll get back to you as soon as I can. At the sound of the beep, you have 10 seconds. Have a good day now." My son never would have said that!

Somehow I couldn't bring myself to say what I had called for. ("You bum! Is your arm broken? I have stretch marks around my knees and you don't have five minutes to talk to your mother!") So I ended up saying, "I know you're busy. I was just checking to see if you're alive. I hardly hurt at all today. You have a good day, too."

At Wits End

Throughout the years, the machine and I continued to communicate on a regular basis. As I told my husband, "I've never had a relationship that was so satisfying. That little monkey is always there for me when I need it. You know how you call some people and the phone rings and rings? Not this one. Why, even our son used to brush me off. Someone was always honking a horn, or a buzzer was going off, or his car was being stolen as we spoke. But not the machine."

On Christmas in '84 it actually played "Silent Night" for me, and before the beep wished me a Merry Christmas. It meant the world to me. It was such a sweet, simple thing to do. No whining around about how the gift was in the mail or how the airlines were booked and he couldn't get home, just a sincere little electronic Christmas card.

Then one day — I think it was the spring of '85 — I dialed the machine and heard it say, "You have reached 555-4455. I promise I'll return your call." (God, I love integrity!) "Got a little problem. The beep is broken, but if you'll just count to five and leave your name and number, I'll call you right back."

You'd have thought my son would have had the decency to tell me the recorder was sick. I know him. He had probably abused it in some way, like dropping it from the stove or cutting off its current. You know how kids are. They think only of themselves.

I called the recorder yesterday, and a voice said, "Yeah?" I said, "Who is this?" The voice said, "It's your son." (It had been three years since I had heard his voice.) "How's it goin'? Are you there, Mom?" I told him I was waiting for the beep. He said I just caught him on his way out.

I called the recorder a little later. We had a nice chat.

Fed Lowers Key Interest Rate

By Martin Crutsinger
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve, after weeks of complaints from the Bush administration about high interest rates, has nudged a key interest rate lower in a move analysts predicted would trigger widespread declines in a variety of consumer and business borrowing rates.

Economists were looking for commercial banks to cut by one-half percentage point their prime lending rate, which is used as a base to calculate more than one-third of their business and consumer loans.

One bank, Southwest Bank of St. Louis, said Wednesday that it was cutting its prime lending rate from 10.5 percent to 10 percent. While the move was not immediately followed by the country's largest banks, analysts predicted that it would be, perhaps later this week.

Many economists predicted that the easier Fed monetary policy would accelerate a move to lower mortgage rates.

Wall Street was buoyed by the Fed's actions with stock prices up sharply on investor optimism that the central bank was moving to keep the economy from slipping into a recession. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed with a gain of 26.23 points at 2,623.36.

As usual, the Fed made no announcement of its decision to move toward an easier monetary policy.

However, analysts said there was little doubt that such a decision had been made, given the fact that a bellwether interest rate, the federal funds rate, traded again Wednesday at 8.5 percent, down from 8.75 percent when the week began.

The federal funds rate is the interest that banks charge each other to make overnight loans. Because it is directly influenced by the Fed's decisions on the amount of cash to make available to the banking system, it considered the best gauge of Fed policy intentions.

"It is clear that the Fed has eased," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "The central bank is acting to prevent the economy from heading into a serious downturn."

Federal Reserve officials refused comment on a report in Wednesday's Washington Post that the decision to ease was made during a telephone conference call Monday among members of the Federal Open Market Committee, composed of Fed board members in Washington and presidents of five of the 12 regional Federal Reserve banks.

The FOMC, which gathers in Washington eight times a year to map monetary strategy, will meet Tuesday and some economists expressed surprise that the Fed took action this week instead of waiting for the regularly scheduled meeting.

The quarter-point drop in the federal funds rate this week is the fifth small decline that has occurred since late May when the central bank began to reverse a year-long effort to drive interest rates higher as a way to fight inflationary pressures.

President Bush and others in the administration have been complaining that the central bank has been moving too slowly to lower interest rates.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: The trend is 50 cents to $1.25 lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 44.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 43.75; Wilson 43.75. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 37.00; Wallace 38.00; Spivey's Corner 37.00; Rowland 37.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fib dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 54 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average of 48.78. The market is lower and the live supply is fully adequate for a light demand. Average weights heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,136,000, compared to 2,194,000 last Thursday.

HENS: Market higher. Supply barely adequate for a good demand. The undertone for next week's trading is weak. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 28 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady, 2.48-2.70 in East and mostly 2.63-2.73 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mixed at 5.57-5.82 in East and too few to report in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.64-3.78; new crop wheat 2.93-3.48; P.I.K. certificates steady to 1/2 percent lower and ranged from 98 to 99 1/2 percent of face value.

inflationary pressures would remain subdued enough to keep interest rates from rising significantly and allow for continued economic growth.

The Federal Reserve seemed to signal in advance its favorable view of the inflation outlook with a move this week to relax its credit policy slightly.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose slightly today in a generally positive response to the latest statistics on inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks edged up 2.87 to 2,626.23 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 486 up, 386 down and 562 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 21.08 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Labor Department reported this morning that the producer price index of finished goods rose 0.4 percent in October.

Excluding food and energy prices that are subject to large fluctuations from month to month, the increase was 0.1 percent.

Analysts said those figures provided fresh support for hopes that

Congress Approves Increase in Wages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Only President Bush's promised signature is needed for the first minimum wage increase in nearly a decade, following Congress' lopsided approval of a bill raising the rate to $4.25 by April 1991.

The measure — which includes a subminimum wage for teen-agers new to the job market — cleared the Senate on an 89-8 vote Wednesday, exactly a week after it passed the House by an equally overwhelming vote of 382-37.

Bush, who struck the compromise plan with congressional Democrats last week, is expected to sign the bill before Thanksgiving, perhaps as early as next week.

"The nine-year logjam on the minimum wage is finally broken," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said after the Senate vote. "The working poor are about to receive an increase, although it is not as much as they deserve."

Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, speaking for the Bush administration, said "the 3 million American workers currently on the minimum wage will benefit." But she said skills training was the best way to help the working poor and urged Congress to move ahead with legislation dealing with that issue.

"The minimum wage is not the pulley to pull people out of poverty," she said.

The compromise plan will push the minimum wage, $3.35 an hour since January 1981, to $3.80 on April 1 and to $4.25 a year later. At the same time, it will create a new, lower wage for 16- to 19-year-old workers who are new to the job market.

RJR Will Sell Foreign Units

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — RJR Nabisco Inc. says it will sell its Nabisco food businesses in Spain and Portugal to a Spanish concern for $77.5 million cash.

The deal will bring RJR Nabisco close to its goal of divesting $5.5 billion in assets to raise cash and reduce debt amassed in its $24.53 billion leveraged buyout by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., spokesman David Kalis said Wednesday.

Tabacalera SA, which administers Spain's tobacco monopoly, will buy RJR Nabisco's 50.5 percent interest in three Spanish food companies: Galletas Artiach SA; Marbu SA; and Nabisco Brands Espana SA.

NBC Gets Package For NBA

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — NBC, which lost its baseball package to CBS last year, took away the NBA from its rival to broadcast with a four-year, $600 million bid, NBC sources said.

The network, which hasn't broadcast the NBA since 1960, scheduled a 2:30 p.m. EST news conference to make the announcement.

The deal continued the vast escalation in prices for sports on TV and continued the breakup of the traditional alliances between leagues and networks.

Baseball, which had been on NBC since 1947, goes to CBS starting in 1990 under a four-year, $1.06 billion deal. The Olympics, once a domain of ABC, are on NBC and CBS through at least 1994.

CBS had broadcast the NBA since the 1973-74 season.

Under the new NBA deal, NBC will show 20 regular-season games. There will be a November Sunday broadcast, a Christmas telecast and a regular series of Sunday afternoon games beginning in January.

NBC will show up to 30 playoff games, all in the afternoon or prime time.

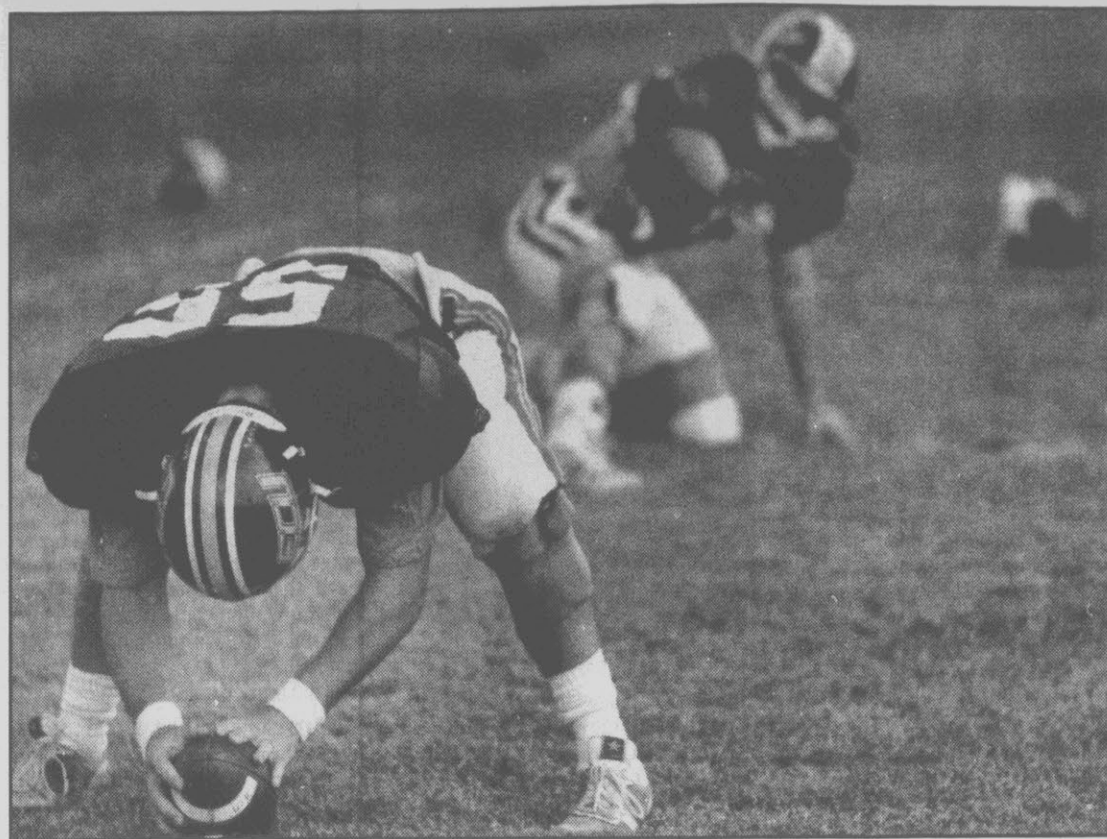

CBS, under its contract that expires at the end of the season, had shown games at 11:30 p.m. EST from the West Coast.

NBC, however, will have those games start during prime time in the East, so as not to interfere with the highly rated "Tonight Show."

The NBA's current contract with CBS was a four-year contract for $166 million, meaning a 375 percent increase per year on average.

The NBA, under Commissioner David Stern, has made a complete business turnaround during the 1980s.

The league's image, hurt by admissions of drug use in the late 1970s, improved with a drug agreement between the league and the NBA Players Association.

Life's A Snap For Walsh

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When East Carolina deep snapper Brian Walsh was named as a team captain prior to the Bowling Green game earlier this year, he was sure there must have been some kind of mistake.

After four years of being a forgotten number on the roster, Walsh, a walk-on from Rose, wasn't even sure the coaches, especially head coach Bill Lewis, knew his name.

Walsh

"He (Lewis) started talking about what it meant to be a captain," Walsh said. "I'm practically a nobody and he started talking about the snapping position and then he called my name. I was very surprised. Everybody said I was bright red. Literally, I couldn't speak. Of all the people it could have been?"

As the shock subsided and Walsh began breathing again, it dawned on him how far he had come.

After three years of holding blocking dummies and laboring in relative obscurity, he had been given the ultimate honor.

Later that night, Walsh called his brother Emmett, now the assistant baseball coach at East Forsyth, to give him the news.

"He was somebody I always tried to be like," he said about his older brother. "He had a big influence on me. He told me, 'Brian, I can't believe it. That's really something. You're going to be a captain for a Division I team. That's four years of hard work paying off.'

"When he said that, it really occurred to me that he was right. It really meant a lot to me."

Saturday, Walsh and the rest of the ECU seniors will play their final home game against Temple. Kickoff is at 1:30 p.m.

Winless Owls Come To Ficklen

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Temple University is one of four Division I-A teams in the country that is still looking for its first football victory of the season.

But East Carolina coach Bill Lewis, whose Pirates face the Owls Saturday in Ficklen Stadium at 1:30 p.m., isn't counting his birds before they hatch.

In other words, Lewis opines, the Pirates better give a hoot about their preparations for their last home game of the season.

"Everyone knows they are 0-9," Lewis said. "Why is the question?"

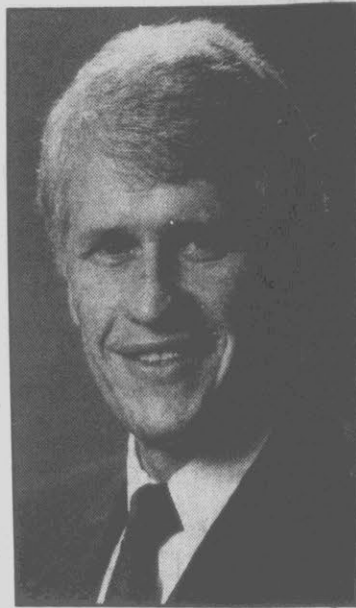

The Owls are — like East Carolina — in a transition year, with a first-year head coach. Temple's program was taken over by Jerry Berndt, an 11-year veteran, who — like ECU basketball coach Mike Steele — came through DePauw, where he was 9-9-1 in two seasons. After that he led the University of Pennsylvania to a 29-18-2 mark for five seasons. Then it was on to Rice — also the Owls — for three years and a 6-27 mark.

"(Being a new coach at a school) isn't easy, particularly when you take over a program that is struggling," Lewis said. "But Jerry is getting them pointed in the right direction."

And, the Pirate coach pointed out, eight of Temple's nine opponents thus far have winning seasons. "Six of them are potential bowl teams," he added.

The Owls opened the season with a 31-24 loss to Western Michigan, a game in which the Broncos scoring the winning touchdown on the final play of the game. That was followed by a 43-3 blistering at the hands of Syracuse — a team ECU lost to in the final seconds, 18-16.

Penn State then bombed the Owls, 42-3, and Virginia Tech took a 23-0 win over them. Tech later lost to ECU, 14-10. Houston, one of the most offensive teams in the country, rolled up a 65-7 win and Pittsburgh, a future ECU foe, beat them 27-3.

Boston College downed them 35-14 — the only Owl foe with a losing record to date. Northern Illinois took a 20-17 win and this past week Georgia rolled up a 37-10 victory.

Against Northern Illinois, Temple led until the final period and against Georgia the Owls were in the game until a quick flurry of points wiped them out. With just 1:40 left in the first half, Georgia had a 10-7 lead but Temple was on the Bulldog 31.

But Georgia then intercepted a Temple pass, threw a 72-yard touchdown strike of its own, recovered an Owl fumble and kicked a 49-yard field goal for a 20-7 halftime lead.

That's a scenario the Pirates can sympathize with, seeing a 14-10 Miami lead blossom to a 24-10 halftime edge in the final two minutes of the half.

Temple, however, hasn't been a total pushover. The Owls have fought hard in all their games but

Gold Prevails In Pirate Scrimmage

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

As games go, it wasn't much of one. The Gold team took an early lead, never relinquished it and rolled to a 58-34 victory over the Purple as East Carolina's basketball Pirates scrimmaged at North Pitt High School Wednesday night.

The Gold put four players in double figures, led by junior college transfer Darrell Overton's 13. Two other transfers, Tim Brown and Jeff Whitaker, added 12 each while veteran Stanley Love added 10.

The Purple was led by Gus Hill, who dumped in a game-high 18 points, including four three-point baskets.

"It's hard to say how it went," Pirate coach Mike Steele said following the game. "At a scrimmage, you never leave happy. Every time someone scores a basket, you wonder about the defense, and every time someone makes a good defensive play you worry about the offense. So it's hard to watch and evaluate."

Steele said that the most impressive thing he's seen thus far in the three and a half weeks since practice started is the work attitude of the players.

"I think our junior college people may be a little stronger physically than our newcomers," Steele said. "The Purple team had more freshmen on it and they appeared to tire first. We'll know more after we see the film." The game stayed fairly close through the first half, with the Gold holding a 28-21 lead at that point.

"In the second half, the Gold, particularly Reid (Lose), Darrell, Tim and Taro (Knight) played well. And I thought Whitaker did some good things," Steele said.

But he also noted that he thought the team was about a week behind where it wanted it to be at this time.

"It's because we've got so many new guys," he said.

East Carolina will face its first real test on Tuesday when the Pirates host to the Red Star team from Yugoslavia. That, Steele indicated, will tell him a lot.

Then, the Pirates open the regular season on Nov. 29 against Appalachian State. "The 29th is too soon," Steele said. "Right now, our staff has to sit down and decide what we need to eliminate or not put in by then. We've spent a lot of time with the basics and now we've got to get ready for a game. After the Yugoslavs, we've got Appalachian and they're coming off two good years."

East Carolina will hold another public scrimmage on Saturday in Minges Coliseum approximately 20 minutes after the conclusion of the ECU-Temple football game.

Vikings, Firebirds Will Grind It Out

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

There's no mystery in what D.H. Conley and Southern Nash will attempt to do on offense in their first-round, Class 3-A state football playoff game Friday night.

They will run left, run right and run up the middle. After that they will run some more.

Sounds simple enough, but few defenses have had success in putting the clamps on the two teams' running games this season. And that's where the difference comes in.

For the most part, both defensive units have slammed the door on opposing running games this season, although the Firebirds were manhandled by Wilson Beddingfield two weeks ago and West Craven's Lee Becton dented Conley for 233 yards last week.

Becton's performance helped the Eagles knock off Conley 28-6 for the Coastal Conference championship. Regrouping from that disheartening loss is a major concern of Viking head coach Steve Craft.

"Our biggest concern is the mental aspect," said Craft, whose team is 7-3 with all three losses coming at the hands of undefeated teams. "We had a heartbreaker last week. The kids realize we put all our eggs in one basket for the conference championship and now we have to come back and reload and get ready to play."

"I'm more concerned with our ballclub but I feel like if our kids play hard we have a good opportunity against Southern Nash."

The Firebirds, making their second straight playoff appearance, stand only 5-5, but three of their losses came to 4-A members Rocky Mount, Northern Nash and Wilson Hunt. They finished 5-1 in the new Triangle Conference, but drew the second seed by virtue of the loss to Beddingfield.

Southern advanced to postseason play last year with a 5-5 record, losing to Havelock in the opening round.

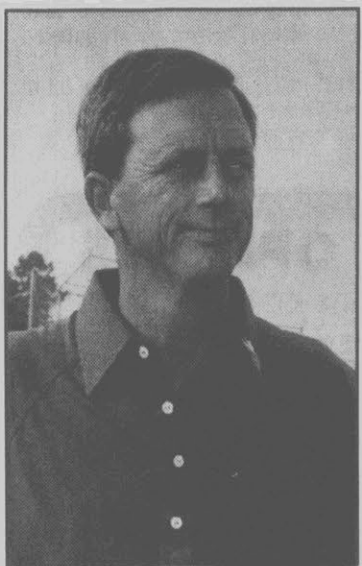

"We're real tickled about this," said Southern Nash coach Algie Faircloth, in his fourth season since leaving perennial power Forest Hills. "We set out with a goal to be in the playoffs. I'm really not surprised, even though we started out with some real young athletes."

Although both teams depend on the running game, they show some distinct differences. The Vikings rely more on finesse and speed from its I-formation set. The Firebirds' wishbone is a more power-oriented attack geared toward persistent ball control.

Faircloth has several backs at his disposal — senior Vincent Crooks and juniors Dennis Alston, Abe Jones and Lamont Avent. Sophomore quarterback Arthur Perry directs the offense.

"They are extremely deep, especially in the offensive line.

Rampants, Cards Cross Paths Again

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The paths of Rose and Jacksonville seem to intertwine when playoff time rolls around. That shouldn't come as a surprise considering the recent success of the two programs.

"They are usually in the playoffs, and of late, we've been fortunate enough to be in the playoffs," said Rose coach Chip Williams, whose Rampants open the state 4-A football playoffs at Jacksonville Friday at 8 p.m. "They are a good football team and I'd like to think we play pretty hard most of the time."

The two teams took different routes to get to their second meeting of the season. An injury-riddled Rose squad, 7-3 overall, had to scrap to land its third straight postseason berth, winning its final regular-season game at Rocky Mount and then getting help when Northern Nash knocked off Hunt.

The Cardinals, ranked eighth in the state in the latest Associated Press poll, were the cream of the crop in the lowly Mideastern Conference, finishing 9-1 overall. The one loss, however, came to Rose.

"When you think you're playing well, nine time out of 10 times you're going to be able to play well," Williams said. "We had a very competitive league and I think we're very fortunate to come out of it, with our injury situation, to be as successful as we are this year."

"I think the credit goes to the kids who have played every game and have worked hard and to those who have come back from injuries to contribute."

Williams and Jacksonville coach Chuck Martin are putting little stock in this year's first meeting. Rose has recently held the upper hand over Jacksonville in the regular season, but the Cards have ruled the last two playoff meetings. "Both teams are good football teams," Martin said. "If there is any edge it will be that we're playing at home."

Williams was more philosophical. "I think this time of year it all boils down to who wants to keep playing football and who doesn't," Williams said. "It's just like life. There are a lot of distractions in academics or in athletics. There are plenty of things to make you go away. If we don't concentrate fully and give our best effort we're not going to be playing much longer."

The Rampants were able to overcome an injury to starting tailback Maurice Hines on the opening play of this year's earlier meeting to edge Jacksonville 13-7.

Hines, whose shoulder separation reoccurred in a loss to Bertie, has not played in six games. He underwent surgery Friday and now has his sights set on rehabilitating for baseball.

Junior quarterback Columbus Grice has assumed much of the offensive burden, honing his passing

Bryant Leaves ECU Basketball Team

Brooks Bryant, a 6-9, 230-pound sophomore from Huntsville, Ala., has left the East Carolina University basketball team, Coach Mike Steele said Wednesday night.

Bryant, who played in 20 games last year, averaged 1.5 points and 1.0 rebound a game for East Carolina as a freshman. He scored a season high of eight points against American. He missed several games with a knee injury.

Steele said that Bryant had been struggling on the court this year after coming off his injury and has decided to concentrate on his academics for the remainder of the semester. At that time, Steele added, Bryant will re-evaluate his situation.

Pitt Community Opens Basketball Season

WINTERVILLE — Pitt Community College will open its 1989-90 basketball season tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the A.G. Cox gymnasium.

The Paladins will face Sampson Technical Institute in their opening game of the year.

Pitt has a 12-home game schedule, which includes the Edgar Boyd Classic tournament, which will be held on Dec. 1-2. The Paladins will also compete in tournaments in Petersburg, Va., Kinston, and Waleska, Ga.

After tonight's opener, Pitt travels to Chowan for its next outing on Tuesday. The next home game is Nov. 24 against Lawson State Community College.

Wake Officially Adds Owens

Wake Forest continued its quest to become an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball power by signing one of North Carolina's top big men during the first day of the national early-signing period for college recruits.

Bladenboro High School standout Trelonnie Owens, a 6-foot-8, 245-pounder, said Wednesday he chose Wake Forest over North Carolina, N.C. State and UNC-Charlotte.

Owens averaged 24.8 points, 12.9 rebounds and 4.2 blocked shots per game as a junior in leading Bladenboro to a 22-3 record and the Southern 8 1-A Conference championship.

In three years at Bladenboro, Owens has scored 1,439 points (19.7 per game) and has 843 rebounds (11.5) in 73 games.

Owens is the first player to commit to Wake Forest since the appointment of Coach Dave Odom in April. Odom, a former assistant at Virginia and Wake Forest, replaced Bob Staak.

Bob Gibbons of All-Star Sports Scouting Service in Lenoir, recognized as one of the premier scouts in the nation, had high praise for Owens.

"Owens is on the verge of becoming an impact player," said Gibbons. "He'll be a very valuable addition to Wake Forest and he's getting in to Wake Forest at a good time. He's just scratching the surface as far as his playing ability is concerned."

N.C. State also landed 6-6 Migjen Bakalli of Belmont South Point High School. Bakalli averaged 22.8 points, 9.4 rebounds and 5.5 assists last season.

He chose the Wolfpack over Richmond, Davidson, Clemson and William & Mary.

Laettner Leads Duke Scrimmage

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Sophomore Christian Laettner scored 20 points and added six assists Wednesday night to lead the White team over the Blue 71-59 in Duke's final intrasquad scrimmage.

Senior Robert Brickey added 18 points and seven rebounds for the White in the game played at E.E. Smith High School.

Brian Davis led the Blue with 18 points.

Duke will host AAU High Five America in an exhibition game Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Hinnant Paces Pack In Scrimmage

RALEIGH (AP) — Mickey Hinnant scored 22 points, hitting 10 of 12 field goals, as North Carolina State used a late first-half surge to run away from Venezuela 88-55 in an exhibition basketball game Wednesday night.

Venezuela scored seven straight points to tie the score at 18 with 9:49 left in the opening half, but the Wolfpack went on a 22-4 surge to take a commanding halftime lead.

Rodney Monroe added 17 points, while Tom Gugliotta had 11.

Allison Garcia led Venezuela with 16 points.

N.C. State will host Richmond one week from Wednesday in the Big Apple NIT.

Southern Wayne's Mitchell To Campbell

BUIES CREEK (AP) — Doug Mitchell, a 6-foot-7, 210-pound forward from Southern Wayne High School, signed a basketball letter-of-intent with Campbell on Wednesday, head coach Billy Lee said.

Mitchell averaged nine points, seven rebounds and three blocked shots last season as a junior in helping the Saints to the NCHSAA sectional finals and a 20-7 record.

Mitchell chose Campbell over North Carolina-Wilmington, North Carolina-Greensboro and Baptist, according to Southern Wayne head coach Randy Tilley.

Mitchell will be entering just his third year of organized basketball this season.

"Doug learned the game of basketball in sort of reverse order," Tilley said. "Some learn to score, then the intangibles. But Doug learned to play defense, rebound, set screens and other things before learning to score. Now he's a very good shooter and can step out to 3-point range."

Wednesday was the first day of the early signing period for prep players.

Bengals' Williams Wins Election

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals linebacker Reggie Williams, savoring his election to City Council, said Wednesday he's leaving the door open to a full-time career in politics when he retires from the NFL at the end of the season.

"The first reaction is that the fatigue can finally set in," said Williams, who went to a council meeting but didn't have to practice Wednesday because the Bengals don't play again until they face the Houston Oilers on Monday night.

"It's literally been months of continuous attention to detail ... addressing a number of different communities and being accessible, along with the rigors of an NFL season."

"But I'm extremely pleased and very satisfied about the accomplishment — a shared accomplishment with a great staff and hundreds of volunteers."

Williams finished fourth among the 20 City Council candidates, ahead of four veteran council members and a former U.S. district attorney. The top nine vote-getters got City Council seats.

Johnson 1 Of 5 Players To Be Fined

NEW YORK (AP) — Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers was among five players fined a total of $6,500 by the NBA for two incidents in games played Tuesday night.

Magic Johnson was fined $3,000 for hitting Kevin Johnson of the Phoenix Suns in the face with an open hand during the Lakers' 111-107 victory. Kevin Johnson was fined $1,000 for fighting and the Lakers' Byron Scott was fined $500 for pushing Kevin Johnson in the chest.

Detroit's Scott Hastings was fined $1,500 for instigating a fight with Chicago's Stacey King during the Bulls' 117-114 victory. King, who was ejected from the game, was fined $500 for throwing a retaliatory punch at Hastings.

Karlis, Taylor Get NFC Honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Rich Karlis of Minnesota, whose seven field goals against the Los Angeles Rams tied an NFL record, was named the NFC offensive player of the week, while Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants won defensive honors for the second time this year.

Karlis, signed as a free agent by the Vikings after being released by Denver, had field goals of 20, 24, 22, 25, 29, 26 and 40 yards, the last of which tied the game with eight seconds left.

Taylor, an All-Pro in all eight of his seasons, had three sacks in the Giants' 20-13 win over the Phoenix Cardinals, bringing his total for the year to 12, second in the league. He also won defensive honors the first week of the season.

Walton Named Top NL Rookie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Near-unanimous selection as the National League Rookie of the Year didn't make for a complete first major-league season for the Chicago Cubs' Jerome Walton.

"Nothing will make up for losing to San Francisco" in the NL playoffs, Walton said. "I wanted to get to the World Series in my first year."

The Cubs were beaten in five games by San Francisco, about the only setback Walton had to endure in a season that saw him vault from Class AA to major-league star in one year.

Walton was named first on 22 of the 24 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America to finish far ahead of teammate Dwight Smith, who got the other two first-place votes. On a 5-3-1 points basis, Walton had 116 points to 68 for Smith.

"I thought I had a great chance, but I was still hoping I'd get named," said Walton, who batted .293 and set a Cubs record with a 30-game hitting streak.

"I'm glad I won and I'm glad

Jerome Walton

Smitty was runnerup," Walton said. "We're real close friends and we helped pump each other up throughout the season."

Walton stole 24 bases, had five home runs and drove in 46 runs in helping the Cubs win the NL East title. Smith batted .324 with nine home runs and 52 RBIs.

It was the second time in NL history that players from the same team finished 1-2 in rookie voting. In 1957, pitcher Jack Sanford of Philadelphia was the winner, and first baseman Ed Bouchee second.

"The award means a lot to me," Walton said. "It's something I can always look back on. I'm in the record books and it's the biggest honor of my career."

Walton had no such lofty goals when he was invited to spring training after spending 1988 at Pittsfield.

"I was hoping I could make a good showing in spring training, get sent to Triple-A and come up with the Cubs in September," Walton said.

But the Cubs were desperate for a center fielder and when Walton heard that Manager Don Zimmer had said Walton could make the club if he hit .260, Walton said, "I can bunt .260."

He did far better.

His 30-game hitting streak from July 21 through Aug. 20 fell only four games short of the major-league record for rookies, set in 1987 by catcher Benito Santiago of the San Diego Padres.

"I think the hitting streak helped me win the award. It got me national attention," said Walton, whose goal next season is to hit .300 and "steal a lot more bases."

As well as he played, Walton got off to an embarrassing start. His first fielding chance in his first game was a fly ball off the bat of Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt.

Walton dropped the ball for an error. "You don't have to remind me," he said. "I'll never forget that."

He made only two more errors the rest of the season in shoring up Chicago's outfield defense.

Walton is the third Cub to win rookie honors. Billy Williams, who is in the Hall of Fame, won in 1961 and Ken Hubbs was the winner a year later.

Gregg Jefferies of the New York Mets, the early-season favorite, finished third behind Walton and Smith with 18 points.

Others receiving votes were Derek Lilliquist of Atlanta, six points; Andy Benes of San Diego and Charlie Hayes of Philadelphia, three each, and Greg Harris of San Diego, two.

Brown, Montgomery Slated To Start

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sophomore quarterback Dave Brown will start for the second straight week Saturday as the Duke Blue Devils try to keep their Atlantic Coast Conference title hopes alive in a key matchup against N.C. State.

"We haven't beaten N.C. State since I've been here," said Duke coach Steve Spurrier. "It's a big one for us. We know the consequences if we win or lose."

Duke (6-3, 4-1) remains a half game behind Virginia (7-2, 5-1) in its bid for its first conference title since 1965. The Cavaliers have never won the ACC.

Brown, who passed for 444 yards and four touchdowns in his first start in Duke's 52-35 victory last week over Wake Forest, will substitute again for the ailing Billy Ray.

"Billy's got a bad shoulder," Spurrier said. "We hope he's 90 to 95 percent ready by Saturday. He was not able to throw yesterday in practice."

The last two Duke-N.C. State games have been high-scoring affairs. Last year, they played to a 43-43 tie.

N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan is hoping his team can bounce back after a disappointing 20-9 loss Saturday to ACC leader Virginia. The loss dropped the Wolfpack to 4-2 in the ACC and 7-2 overall.

"It would be a lot more fun of we were the two teams left playing for the conference championship," Sheridan said about the Wolfpack-Blue Devils matchup.

N.C. State quarterback Shane Montgomery, who left the Virginia game with a concussion after being hit by defensive end Ray Savage, will start Saturday's game.

"It was a good clean tackle," Sheridan said. "It sort of snapped his head back. We feel fortunate Shane was not hurt worse."

Virginia has now beaten Sheridan's Wolfpack four straight times. Two of the losses ended N.C. State bids for league titles, and last Saturday's loss all but doused their chances to share ACC honors this year.

The only way N.C. State could share the title would be if they defeat Duke and Maryland (3-6, 2-4) pulls off an upset over Virginia next week.

A win over Maryland would clinch at least a tie for the ACC title for George Welsh's troops.

The Cavaliers host intrastate rival Virginia Tech this Saturday in a game that Welsh believes could have a bearing on bowl bids.

"This team has a chance to win 10 games for the first time in Virginia history," he said. "That could help when the bowl selections are made."

Welsh said the N.C. State game was an emotional victory for his players.

"It's been a long year for us," he said. "This is the 11th straight week with no time off. I'm concerned about the emotional condition of the team, but I hope we can get going again."

The N.C. State-Duke game is the only conference game this week. Maryland hosts Penn State at Baltimore, Tulsa is at Wake Forest (1-7-1, 1-5), and North Carolina (1-8, 0-6) hosts South Carolina. Clemson (8-2, 5-2) and Georgia Tech (4-4, 3-3) do not play this week.

Sportline

To The Sports Editor:

Mr. (Bob) Ruben's insulting "East Cupcake" article of Nov. 5 (in the Miami Herald) fails to take two important items into account.

First, put the blame for the crowd size at the ECU game squarely where it belongs — on a poor performance by the Canes in a loss to Florida State the week before, dimming hopes for a national championship; and the "fair weather" following that has characterized Miami football for years.

Why not credit those vocal fans who were there? Why not give credit to those wonderful Canes supporters who, unlike one of their local sportswriters, took a moment to be hospitable to us ECU visitors?

Second, shame on Mr. Ruben for such unkind remarks about young athletes who played their hearts out in a mismatch. And remember that it wasn't long ago that the Canes were considered a doormat. Why not a few comments on the steady improving quality of our football program, with athletes who actually graduate (the rate is 80%. What's the rate at UM)?

Sportswriters like Mr. Ruben are constantly chattering about the reasons why amateur sports have been turned into a scandalous nightmare. Then they write about WIN, WIN, WIN and BIG, BIG, BIG! He may need to look no farther than the likes of his own column. Ambitious sportswriters who will trample on anyone's reputation to build their own must surely be judged to be part of the problem along with disreputable coaches and boosters. And, if one needs an example of the influence of poor sports writing on fans, take a look at the letter in the same section of the Herald, where we are labeled East Carolina High School.

Miami is a great city, the Herald is a great newspaper, but leaves a lot to be desired in its sports section. Go get yourself some class, Miami!

Patil Working Toward A Goal

ECU Powerlifter Hoping To Qualify For World Meet

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In his quest to earn a world title, Amit Patil may give up a little bit socially, but he's not about to start looking back now.

Patil, a 20-year old sophomore at East Carolina, is fresh off a win in the 132-pound class at the Natural National Powerlifting Regionals in High Point. His totals were 413 pounds in the dead lift; 292 pounds on the bench and a 370-pound squat.

An accounting major, Patil finds enough time in the week for two things — school and weight lifting.

"That's all I do," he said. "Somebody asked me the other day in the gym, 'I never see you downtown. What is this, your life or something?' Yup. That's what it takes."

Patil, who earlier this summer won the Teen-age National Meet in Shawnee, Ok., is gearing up for the Natural National Regionals in Reno, Nev., in February. He'll need a total of better than 1,122 to qualify for the Junior World Championships to be held in Norway in September of 1990.

"The number-one junior total (in my weight class) is 1,199," Patil said. "The totals I had in the gym were close to that. I wanted to get 1,200 at the regionals. But what people want and what they get are a lot different."

"If I train hard up until September that should be no problem. But you never know."

He has totaled 1,170 while training at Champions in downtown Greenville.

Patil began lifting as an underclassman at Cary High to prepare for football, where he started for the Imps at safety and wide receiver.

But it wasn't until he got to ECU

Non-Revenue Report

in 1987 that his hobby for the iron became a passion.

Robert Washington, another area powerlifter, was putting together a team to take to a meet. He held tryouts and Patil fit the bill for the 123-pound class.

Patil's interest in the sport grew quickly.

"Because I was real light weight I though I could do good," he said. "I never thought I'd make it as far as having a chance to go to junior world's. But I thought I could make it at least close to state level."

He and workout partner Darren Broome got caught up in the competition rage right away, though Patil had an inauspicious beginning.

"The first meet I ever went to was in Hendersonville," Patil said. "It was a long drive and it took like nine hours to get there. I was all prepared and I went there and scratched on my bench."

"I was up too high. That was the worst feeling. I said, 'Man, I'm going to give this up. Forget this. Powerlifting isn't for me.'"

"Some guy, I don't know who he was told me I had to stick with it. I don't know who he was. I'd like to thank him."

Patil stayed with it and placed second at a state meet later that year in the 123-pound class. Things have progressed nicely from there.

He finished second at the Teen-age nationals in Houston, Tex., in early August of 1988. He actually tied for first, but in a tie the lighter competitor gets the title.

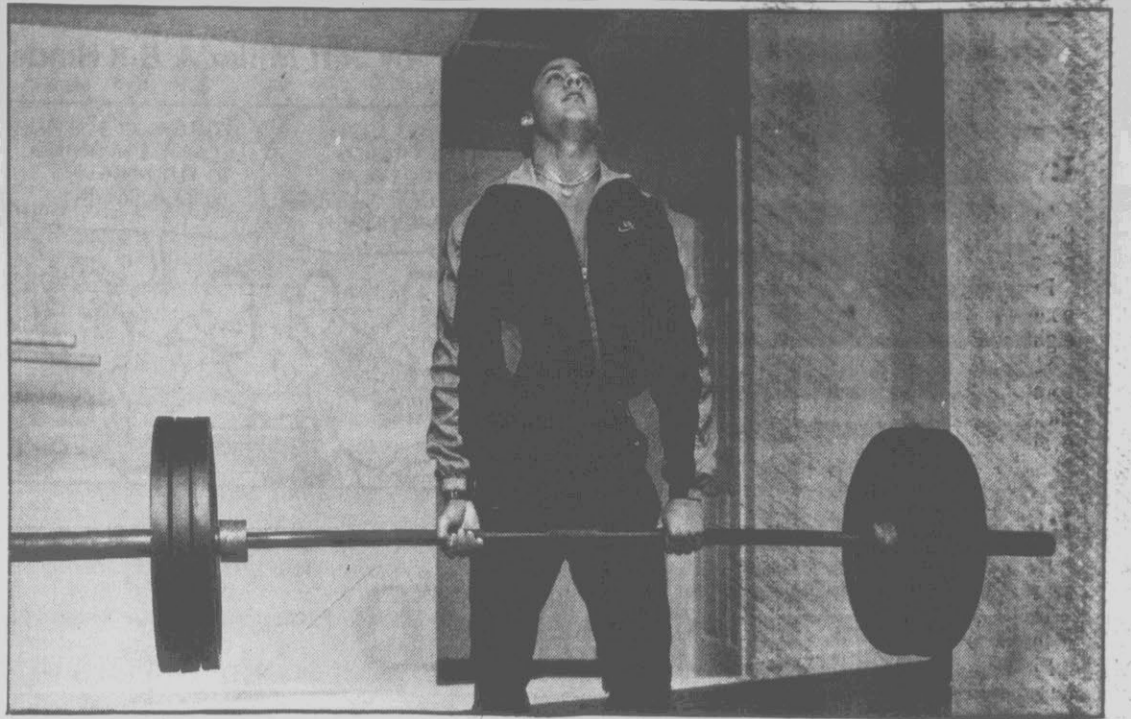

Patil came up against the same individual this past August in the 1989 teen-age Nationals in Shawnee.

"I said, 'It's over for him. He might as well pack his bags.' After the bench press, I knew I had beaten him," Patil said. "It was the best moment."

Though he competes in mostly drug-free meets, Patil has come up against competitors who use steroids, but he has resisted the temptation of get-big-quick drugs.

"I just look at myself now and I'm doing it naturally and if I can get to the world class level, there's no need to take them," he said. "There's always temptation. I don't think I could, though. When you take drugs you gain weight and I'm overweight as it is. It would be hard for me to take them."

And why tamper with success now. Patil has the satisfaction of doing it the old-fashioned way — with hard work.

Woods' Sympathy Goes Only So Far

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina coach Sparky Woods wishes his good friend Mack Brown all the best as he tries to right a struggling program at North Carolina.

But Woods will withhold his goodwill Saturday when the Gamecocks battle the Tar Heels in Chapel Hill, N.C.

"I feel sorry that he's struggling as he is," Woods said earlier this week. "I know they'll put it together against somebody. They've been very close to a lot of teams here the last month."

"I just want to make sure it's not our team."

Woods smiled. "I like Coach Brown. I like Coach Woods better, I guess," Woods said.

Brown had similar sentiments as he prepared his Tar Heels, 1-8, to face South Carolina, 5-3-1.

"The only time that you forget your friends on the other side is for that 3½ hours on Saturday afternoon," Brown said. "As far anything else, he's a tremendous friend and that friendship means a whole lot more than a football game."

Woods and Brown have known each other since 1979, when they both were at Iowa State. In 1983, Brown was selected as head coach at Appalachian State. Brown, in turn, chose Woods as the first assistant he hired.

The next year, Brown left to go to Tulane and recommended Woods for the job. Woods remained at the Boone, N.C., school until earlier this year when South Carolina hired him to replace Joe Morrison, who died in February.

Brown, who's in his second year at North Carolina, said Woods was "the closest thing in this business I've had to a brother" other than his blood brother, Watson, who is head coach at Vanderbilt.

"The tough thing about coaching against a friend is that you don't get to talk to him as much about schemes and people," Brown said. "That was a problem with Watson. It's a little tougher problem for Sparky and I now."

If the two coaches could talk this week, one sure topic of conversation would be their mutual quarterback woes. South Carolina will start junior Dickie DeMasi, who made his first start last week in a 35-10 loss to No. 5 Florida State.

DeMasi replaced four-year starter Todd Ellis, who suffered a college career-ending knee injury two weeks ago against North Carolina State. DeMasi's backup, Pat Turner, was recruited as a quarterback but had been playing linebacker until Ellis' injury brought him back under center.

DeMasi has completed 14 of 30 passes for 161 yards and one touchdown along with two interceptions.

North Carolina's quarterback plight is just as bad. The Tar Heels have started three players because of injuries and ineffectiveness. Sophomore Todd Burnett will start his second straight game this week for the Tar Heels, who have lost eight straight.

Burnett has hit 20 of 38 passes for 197 yards and has four passes picked off. He hasn't thrown a TD.

"I think they're problem has been that they've been young and they've had quarterback problems," Woods said.

Utah Scrambles To Keep Charlotte Winless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Jazz overcame a sluggish first half, stopped the Hornets with a scramble defense and posted their first 2-0 record in the franchise's 16-year history.

"We needed something to get us going, and I think it (the scramble defense) changed the momentum a little bit," Utah coach Jerry Sloan said following the 102-86 victory over Charlotte Wednesday night.

The scramble is a half-court trap in which the defenders constantly run at the player with the ball.

"We try to make them take bad shots, try to get a steal, try to make them erratic," said Darrell Griffith.

The teams battled to a 47-47 tie at halftime and Utah led 53-51 when Sloan went to the scramble following a Hornet basket by Rex Chapman.

The pressure defense helped the Jazz go on a 14-0 run over a three-minute stretch, with center Mark Eaton scoring six points, all on rebound baskets.

"The trap gave us trouble," said Charlotte coach Dick Harter. "We talked about it a lot. But we just didn't handle it."

Kelly Tripucka had 24 points, Jerry Sichting scored 12 points and Dell Curry 10 for Charlotte.

Griffith scored 12 points, 10 in the final period, and Stockton added 11. "The scramble really got us going," said Karl Malone, who led Utah with 26 points.

"It's amazing how fast we can put points on the scoreboard when we throw (the scramble on), rotate well and everybody's alive," points 15 and assists 10.

Orlando's Magic Continues The NBA champion Detroit Pistons played like an expansion team and the expansion Orlando Magic played like champions.

The Pistons were held to their second-lowest point total since the NBA went to the 24-second clock, losing to the Indiana Pacers 95-74. The Magic, meanwhile, posted a second consecutive victory over a playoff team, overcoming a 25-point deficit and outlasting the Cleveland Cavaliers 117-110 in overtime.

Coach Chuck Daly said the Pistons "were never really in the game" against Indiana. "They took our offensive game away from us and executed well."

The Pistons shot only 23 percent in the first half, making just 11 of 47 shots, and trailed 48-25. It was the worst half in their history, erasing the low of 32 points at Phoenix in 1970. The Pistons' low production for a game with a shot clock was an 81-71 loss at Atlanta on Jan. 5, 1988.

In other Wednesday night games, it was Chicago 96, Minnesota 84; Portland 108, San Antonio 104; Washington 112, Boston 103; Denver 102, Sacramento 84; Dallas 123, the Los Angeles Clippers 99 and Philadelphia 115, Miami 91.

Detlef Schrempf, starting in place of injured Chuck Person, scored 10 of his 21 points in the first quarter and the Pacers never trailed in winning their first three games for the first time since joining the NBA in 1976. Vern Fleming led Indiana with 22 points and Isiah Thomas had 17 for Detroit.

Although the season is less than a week old, the Pacers lead the Central Division for the first time in their history.

"We had a very hard training camp, and it has paid off," Schrempf said. "When we play together and get good contributions from everyone, we're going to have this type of success. Our defense tonight helped us really get things going."

Magic 117, Cavaliers 110 Sam Vincent and Reggie Theus scored six points apiece in overtime for Orlando, which beat the New York Knicks on Saturday night.

Orlando played most of the game without starting center Dave Corzine, who injured a knee in the first quarter. The Cavaliers, playing without injured starters Mark Price, Brad Daugherty and Larry Nance, are 0-3.

Cleveland didn't score from the field in overtime until Ron Harper made a layup with 1:14 left. The Magic made all 10 free throws in overtime.

After Cleveland built a 25-point lead midway through the second quarter, Theus scored 12 of his 28 points in the third quarter to help Orlando take a five-point lead. Vincent and Terry Catledge each scored 23 points for Orlando. Ron Harper led Cleveland with 26.

"I read in the paper that we were 18-point underdogs. Then we lost our big man. Who would have cared if we lost?" Theus said. "We could have folded our tent. But they're all going to have to be hard-earned."

Bulls 96, Timberwolves 84 Michael Jordan scored 13 of his 45 points in the final 4:18 as Chicago ruined expansion Minnesota's home opener. A league-record opening crowd of 35,427 was at the Metrodome for the first regular-season NBA game hosted by a Minnesota team since 1960, when the Lakers moved from Minneapolis to Los Angeles.

Minnesota took a 78-77 lead with 5:19 to play with a 14-4 surge, during which first-year Chicago coach Phil Jackson was ejected for arguing with the officials. Jordan's 3-point shot with 4:18 left put the Bulls ahead for good and triggered a 19-6 burst. Tony Campbell scored 31 points for Minnesota.

The Timberwolves saw enough of Jordan.

"I didn't really like the view," forward Tod Murphy said. "I caught the bottom of his shoes in the face a couple of times."

Trail Blazers 108, Spurs 104 Portland beat San Antonio for the 11th consecutive time as Terry Porter scored half of his 22 points in the fourth quarter.

Clyde Drexler added 19 for the Trail Blazers and rookie Cliff Robinson had 17. San Antonio, which had beaten the Los Angeles Lakers in their opener, was led by Terry Cummings' 21 points and 19 by rookie David Robinson, who also had 18 rebounds and eight blocked shots.

David Robinson's follow shot and free throw with 2:59 to play tied the game 97-97 but Portland scored six of the next eight points for a 103-99 lead with 1:17 remaining.

Bullets 112, Celtics 103 Bernard King scored 33 points, 12 in the fourth quarter. The game was tied 83-83 after three quarters but King scored five points in the first two minutes of the final period, keying a 9-2 burst.

Washington led by 13 points in the second period before Larry Bird keyed a rally that brought the Celtics to 61-58 at halftime. Boston took the lead at 6:59 of the third period when Bird blocked a shot and fed Robert Parish for a fastbreak dunk. The Celtics led 77-71 with 4:21 left in the period.

Jeff Malone and John L. Williams each had 20 points for the Bullets, who have beaten the Celtics in their last five games at the Capital Centre. Kevin McHale had 22, Bird 20 and Parish 19 for the Celtics.

Nuggets 102, Kings 84 Lafayette Lever had 20 points, 14 rebounds and 12 assists as Denver won for the 21st time in its last 22 home games dating back to last season. Lever reached double figures in the three offensive categories by the middle of the third period.

Denver led throughout and took advantage of a 53-43 rebounding edge and 32 Sacramento turnovers.

After trailing by 15 points early in the third quarter, the Kings got strong scoring from Kenny Smith and Wayne Tisdale to pull within 77-68 after three periods. Denver's Michael Adams, who missed his first 11 shots, made a 3-pointer to halt the rally.

Mavericks 123, Clippers 99 Roy Tarpley keyed a 41-point third quarter with 12 of his 20 points as Dallas won its first of the season. James Donaldson and Adrian Danfley each added 18 points for the Mavericks, who were held under 100 points in each of their first two games. The Clippers were paced by Ken Norman's 27 points.

76ers 115, Heat 91 Charles Barkley scored 27 points and Mike Gminski had 19 points, 12 rebounds and six blocked shots for Philadelphia. Ron Anderson hit eight of 10 shots and scored all 18 of his points in the first half to help the 76ers take a 61-44 halftime lead.

The Sixers led 36-19 after one period. After Miami got within 53-44 with 2:05 left in the second quarter, Philadelphia scored the last eight points of the half.

Rose, Cardinals...

(Continued from B-1) skills throughout the year as well as being a threat to run. Containing him is a primary concern, Martin said.

"I'm concerned about Columbus, getting him contained and trying to defend the pass," Martin said. "The second thing is stopping a fine running game. They are a better football team than we faced earlier this year."

A handful of backs have alternated in Hines' vacated spot at tailback, but no game-breaker has emerged although Jermaine Williams, elevated from the junior varsity, has flashed signs of brilliance.

Anthony Love and Andre Perkins have also seen time at tailback.

Felix Robinson gives the Ram-pants a big-play receiver.

Senior tailback Octavius James, an elusive 5-6, 135-pounder, and junior quarterback Corey Hatchell have been the catalysts in the Jacksonville offense.

James started slow, but has come on strong of late to finish with 758 yards and 14 touchdowns. He was limited to 14 yards on nine carries in the first meeting with Rose.

"James has come in at running back and done an outstanding job," Martin said.

Hatchell has rushed for 416 yards and passed for 351. His primary target has been Robert Burnette, who has 13 receptions for 253 yards.

Linebackers Terry Phillips and Brent Grass and down linemen Jerry Keller and Jonathan Gidrey spearhead a Cardinal defense that yields a mere 156 total yards per game. An all-junior secondary featuring Hatchell, Burnette, Shaun Shuler and Prince Kidd has defended the pass well — coming up with a whopping 19 interceptions — with the exception of last Friday when it was burned for 166 yards in the second half of a 34-14 win over New Bern.

Vikes, Firebirds...

(Continued from B-1) backfield," Craft said. "They are more power-oriented. We sort of try to structure ours so that if they load up on the run we can throw and if they load up on the throw we can run."

Conley possesses the capability to strike through the air but has preferred to play high-percentage football (run, run, run). Junior "flashbacks" Mike Clark and Kenny Haddock have shouldered the bulk of the offensive load.

The duo is far from imposing, but effective nonetheless, thanks to a sturdy and experienced front line.

Clark, a 5-7, 150-pounder, has rushed for a team-high 848 yards with six touchdowns. Haddock, a 5-9, 150-pounder, has rushed for 404 yards with five touchdowns, but is doubtful for Friday due to a sprained knee.

Sophomore Anthony Barrett, who sat out five games after being injured in the season-opener, and senior Terry Williams will likely see time in the backfield.

"Our main concern about Conley is they seem to have a lot of skill players overall," Faircloth said. "They are a running team. They like to settle in on the running game and then come back with play-action."

Special teams are likely to play a big role considering Conley has one of the state's premier place-kickers in senior Andy Fassett. But the Firebirds boast a dangerous return artist in Alston.

Alston returned five kickoffs for touchdowns this season and had one negated by a penalty. His feats spread quickly, though, and teams have been kicking away from him recently.

Look for Conley to do the same.

"The thing about it is you can win the offensive show and win the defensive show," Craft said. "And if you don't win the kicking game you can get whipped."

Fernando Now A Free Agent

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Fernando Valenzuela no longer is a Los Angeles Dodger and his lawyer is talking tough.

"Now the Dodgers are just one of 26 teams," Richard Moss said Wednesday after the left-hander filed for free agency. "I think they're trying to drive a hard bargain at this point. But if that's so, it may be time for Fernando to move."

Valenzuela, 128-103 with 1,644 strikeouts in his career, fell to 5-8 in 1988 and 10-13 last season as he lost velocity on his fastball and spin on his screwball.

He didn't get a victory in 19 starts between June 12, 1988, and June 7, 1989. He went on the disabled list for the first time in his career on July 31, 1988, and came off Sept. 26. He lost his final three decisions in 1988 and his first five in 1989, then rebounded to win 10 of his last 18 despite using a fastball that at times didn't reach 80 mph.

"Last year, Fernando was question mark. He was coming off an injury and there was questions about his health," said Moss, who represents Valenzuela along with agent Tony DeMarco. "I think the second half of last year resolved that question."

Minnesota Twins second baseman Wally Backman, Chicago Cubs right-hander Scott Sanderson, Philadelphia Phillies outfielder Bob Dernier and St. Louis Cardinals right-hander Danny Cox also filed Wednesday.

Eighty-three players have filed for free agency so far, six short of the record set in 1977. Twenty-nine more players are eligible to file for free agency before the Monday deadline.

Two players who had been eligible, Toronto pitcher Jim Aker and Chicago Cubs infielder Domingo Ramos, agreed to contracts Wednesday. Aker got a two-year deal for $1.75 million and Ramos got a one-year contract with an option for $346,000 guaranteed.

Fred Claire, the Dodgers general manager, was at Palm Springs, Calif., for the annual general managers meeting, and did not return telephone messages left by The Associated Press. Claire and lawyer Robert Walker have talked with DeMarco and Moss three times. According to DeMarco, the team made an offer at the first meeting and Valenzuela made a counterproposal at the second meeting.

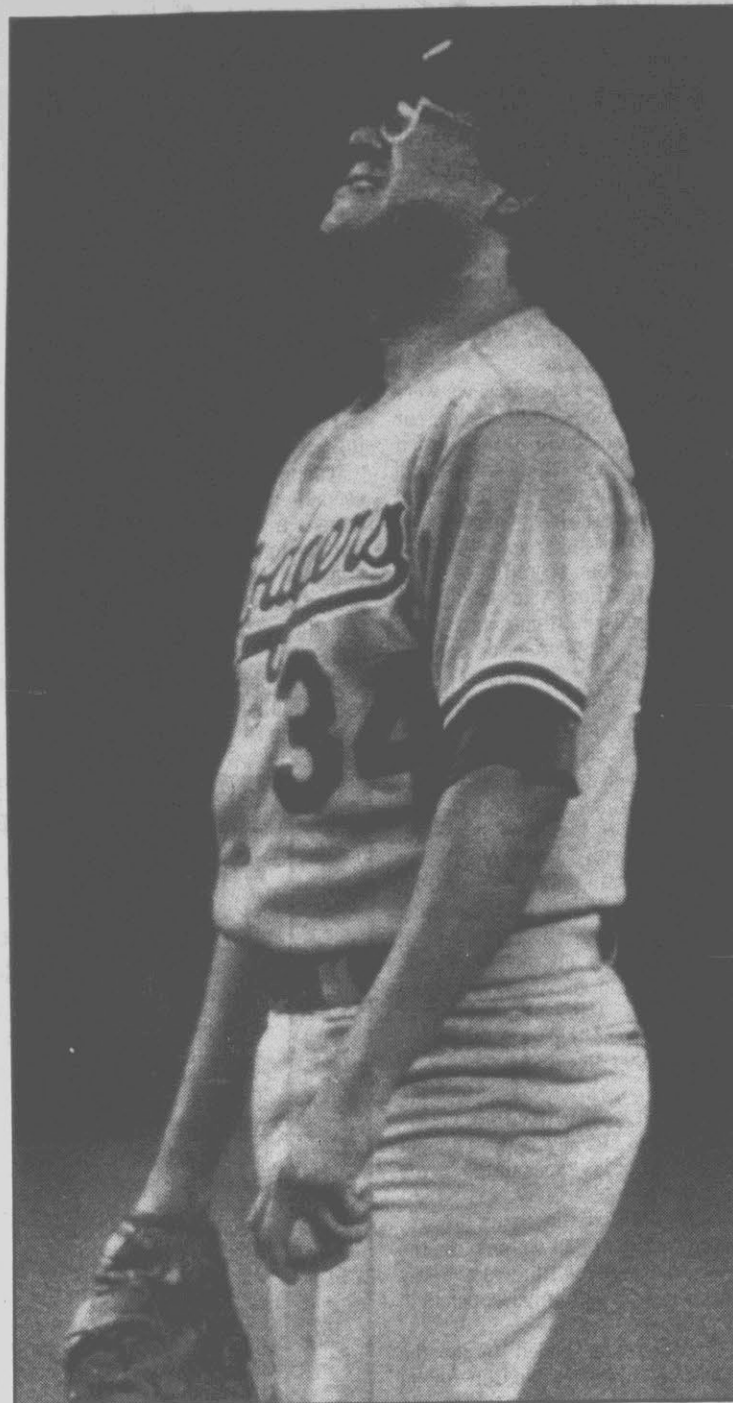

"At the third one, they came back with the same proposal they started out with," DeMarco said, "and then we realized we have some disagreements and were not close to something that was satisfactory. Therefore, being that the period for filing was coming to a close, Fernando declared free agency. But we both agreed to keep the lines of communication open."

DeMarco said he would meet with the Dodgers again this weekend. He said Valenzuela's first choice was to return to the Dodgers.

"He loves his fans. He loves the city. He loves the team and he has always said it," DeMarco said.

Valenzuela is asking for a three-year contract but DeMarco said the Dodgers were offering only a one-year deal. He said they were apart on money, too, but would not go into details.

"Fernando prefers to remain a Dodger," DeMarco said. "But now, actually, he's available to talk to anybody and everybody."

SMU Had Chance To Not Play Irish

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Attention, cynics. If you don't believe Southern Methodist has gone straight, consider this: The school actually TURNED DOWN an offer to get out of Saturday's game against top-ranked Notre Dame.

Remember, this is the school that had to drop football for two years because it cheated so much. Winning wasn't everything at SMU, it was the only thing.

But things have changed. Now the university has a president who has threatened to shut down the football program for good if the rules are broken again. And an athletic director who thinks competing against a respected team like Notre Dame is a good thing, even if it's a guaranteed loss.

"Notre Dame is the kind of institution we want to emulate," AD Doug Single said. "We think the game will be good for our program. Notre Dame sets an example we can look up to."

Last year, Notre Dame athletic director Dick Rosenthal gave Single a chance to pull out of the game. Single declined.

"We appreciated the offer, but we didn't see any reason not to play them," Single said. "We think it will be a great experience for our players."

After Houston humiliated SMU 95-21 last month, Coach Forrest Gregg and his players accused the Cougars of running up the score. Single said he doesn't expect a similar problem at Notre Dame, which is favored to beat the outclassed Mustangs by 54 points.

"Notre Dame has always run a classy program," he said. "There's a way to control the game so things don't get out of hand, and I'm sure that's what Lou Holtz will do."

Double Threats Abound

Only three Division I players have ever run for 1,000 yards and passed for 1,000 yards in the same season — Drake's Johnny Bright in 1950, Southern Mississippi's Reggie Collier in 1981 and Air Force's Bart Weiss in 1985.

But the exclusive club is about to expand. Gerry Gdowski of Nebraska, Darian Hagan of Colorado, Dee Dowis of Air Force and Brian Mitchell of Southwestern Louisiana are on pace to reach the double-1,000 mark this season. And several other players have an outside shot to join the exclusive club.

"In this year of passing insanity, there's still a lot of good running quarterbacks," Jim Van Valkenburg, the NCAA's director of statistics, said.

With three games still to play, Dowis has rushed for 1,010 yards and passed for 851. Gdowski, Hagan and Mitchell only have two games left, but they also are well within reach of the double-1,000. Gdowski needs only four more passing yards and 172 rushing; while Hagan needs 185 passing and 206 rushing. Mitchell has already passed for 1,649 yards and is only 135 short in rushing.

Others with a chance for the double-1,000 are Stacey Robinson of Northern Illinois (1,030 rushing, 649 passing); Major Harris of West Virginia (1,618 passing, 661 rushing), and Tony Rice of Notre Dame (886 passing, 653 rushing).

Notre Dame has three games left, West Virginia and Northern Illinois have two.

New Promotional Pitch

Edinboro University has come up with an unusual gimmick to promote running back Elbert Cole for the Harlon Hill Award, Division II's version of the Heisman Trophy.

The small school near Erie, Pa., is sending voters small pieces of coal along with a picture of the player standing on a coal pile wearing a miner's helmet. The caption reads, "Pennsylvania's Greatest Natural Resource."

"We needed a gimmick to get attention, so we decided to have some fun with his name," Todd Jay, the school's sports information director, said.

Cole rushed for 220 yards and scored six touchdowns Saturday against Slippery Rock, raising his season totals to 1,311 yards and 21 touchdowns. But he'll have a hard time beating out Texas A&I tailback Johnny Bailey for the Hill trophy. Bailey, who broke Tony Dorsett's NCAA career rushing record last month, is expected to win the award for the third straight year.

Rose Focusing On Rehabilitation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose will spend the winter golfing instead of gambling, focusing more on personal rehabilitation than on baseball reinstatement in the coming months.

Rose revealed Wednesday that he's seeing a prominent Cincinnati psychiatrist for what has been diagnosed as a gambling disorder. He said he realized after he was banned from baseball for illegal gambling Aug. 24 that he had a problem.

"I just did something that risked (his baseball career) and I did something that really I did too much in the offseason," Rose said in an interview Wednesday with The Associated Press. "Now I have to eliminate it completely. And I'm doing pretty good, but I have to keep on it."

That means no more gambling, and no more trips to one of his favorite places — the racetrack. Rose said it had been a little less than a month since he placed his last bet.

"I think it's difficult, but I have to work hard to overcome it because I just don't want to take a chance of bottoming out the other way," Rose said. "I guess you could look at me as sort of a guy that got a warning by having a heart attack and got better, hopefully, not the type of guy who had a heart attack and didn't wake up. It's a warning sign out there."

Instead of going to the track, he plans to haul his new golf clubs to Plant City, Fla., for the winter, where he'll work on his putting and spend time with his family. Rose had a home built there when he was manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who train in Plant City.

"I think golf will be good because I've really taken a liking to it," he said. "Plus I think if you play golf all day, you'll be tired at night, which you are."

"I think I'm going to enjoy watching my kids grow up — something I wasn't able to do my first time around because of my obsession with the game of baseball. I was either at the park, going to the park or, in the offseason, selling the game of baseball."

Baseball seems to be a lesser concern for him now than on Aug. 24, when Rose accepted a lifetime ban for his illegal wagering, with a chance to apply for reinstatement after a year. At his news conference following the banishment, Rose said he expected to be back in baseball as soon as possible.

He said during the interview Wednesday that he's not sure whether he'll apply for reinstatement as soon as he's allowed because he'd rather not speculate on the future. But he made it clear he eventually wants back into the game in which he stands as the most prolific hitter.

"All I can do is try to convince the commissioner (Fay Vincent) or prove to the commissioner that I'm not a bad guy, which I don't think I am, that I've kicked the gambling habit, which I will, and that I'm not the type of guy that's going to kick it until I'm reinstated and then go back and do it again," Rose said.

He hopes the gambling treatment helps his chances.

"I think the lords of baseball are very intelligent, very understanding and very fair," Rose said. "And all you can do is hope they will continue to be so."

"They have never said what to do but I think if they were going to, that (treatment) would be the first thing they'd probably say to do."

Rich Levin, a spokesman for major league baseball, said Vincent would have no comment on Rose's statements. Throughout the summer, Rose had insisted he had no gambling problem and needed no treatment. He admitted to baseball investigator John M. Dowd that he had bet with bookmakers, but he denies ever betting on baseball.

He said friends talked to him about his gambling after the banishment and suggested he submit to an evaluation. Dr. James Randolph Hillard, chairman of the psychiatry department at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, has met with Rose for about 14 hours over the last month.

Hillard said in a statement Wednesday that Rose has "a clinically significant gambling disorder," that he's powerless before gambling, and that he can never gamble again on anything.

"Pete has not been a typical baseball player and he has not been a typical problem gambler either," Hillard said. "Like all problem gamblers, however, he has for a long time denied to himself that he has a problem. He was only awakened to the problem by traumatic recent events."

Temple...

have had a terrible turnover ratio.

In their nine games, Temple has lost 17 fumbles and 16 interceptions — a total of 33 turnovers. In return, they've recovered only one fumble and intercepted two passes — giving them a minus 30 net.

The leading rusher for the Owls is Ventres Stevenson, who has 841 yards — more than any three ECU runners combined. But only one other runner, Efrain Cabrera has at least 100 yards, 125 to be exact. Stevenson is the starting tailback.

At quarterback, the Owls have used two different players, Victor Lay and Anthony Richardson. The latter has started the last two games and is scheduled to start this Saturday.

Richardson had competed 33 of 65 attempts for 321 yards. He's had five picked off. Lay has hit on 73 of 167 for 684 yards with 11 interceptions. Temple has not yet thrown for a touchdown.

The leading receiver is tight end Maurice Johnson with 25 catches for 245 yards. Split end Rich Drayton has 23 for 289 yards while flanker Kevin McCoy has 17 grabs for 224 yards.

The leading tackler on defense is linebacker Loranzo Square with 100 tackles, including four for losses and four quarterback sacks. Linebacker Manny Carlis had 65 tackles and also had four quarterback sacks.

East Carolina, Lewis said, must approach the game quite seriously. "We're not in a position with our program to look at any team and feel that if we're not at our best we won't have a chance to win," he said. "Temple will look at us as a good chance for them to win. We can't afford to approach the game at anything but at our best."

Walsh Wanted To Contribute...

"It was a worm burner, but he got it off," Walsh said.

"The year before I had traveled and never got in. I stayed up all night watching movies at the hotel. I didn't think I'd get in, then all of sudden they told me, and I was like, 'Holy cow.'"

Things have gone much smoother this year. Now a senior, Walsh has easily handled every long snap for ECU this year.

"That's the only thing I do is snap," he said. "I work on it in practice. I used to worry about it, but coach Bob McCarthy has really given me the confidence."

"Coaches here in the past, they didn't really give me any confidence. They didn't think I could do the job."

Least among his supporters was special teams coach Donnie Thompson, who left midway through the spring to take a job at North Carolina.

"He was asking everybody he could at the beginning of spring to learn how to long snap," Walsh said. "It was the happiest day of my life when he took the job at Carolina."

A two-year starter at center for Rose, Walsh, 5-11 and just over 200 pounds as a senior, wasn't recruited out of high school.

He considered going to play at Gardner-Webb, but decided instead to walk on at ECU in the fall of 1986.

"I had sort of heard what it was going to be like from my position coach in high school, John Leich," Walsh said. "He told me it would be carrying bags and being a human hitting dummy, and it was."

"Most guys hated practice. I loved it, putting on the equipment and going out there. It was ECU, college football, Division I. It was something I always wanted to do."

Unlike many walk-ons, Walsh joined the program for only one reason — to play football. He never harbored any hope of earning a scholarship. He just wanted a chance to contribute.

"Everybody always asks, 'Are you on scholarship?' But it was never about that with me," he said. "My parents had enough money to send me to school. I just wanted to play."

"I've seen a lot of guys walk on, play, and then quit after a year because they didn't get a scholarship. I always thought that was wrong."

Walsh plans to graduate next December with a degree in commercial and community recreation. After waiting his turn for three years, he wishes he had been given the chance to redshirt earlier in his career so that he might have one more season to play.

But Walsh closes out his career with few regrets.

"I'm happy with what I got, because I never thought I'd get here," he said.

Dennis Weaver Returns To TV As McCloud, But As A Senator

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Sam McCloud is back. He's now a U.S. senator, but he still has a knack for getting into trouble.

After an absence of 12 years, Dennis Weaver is reprising his role in a "McCloud" movie for CBS.

Weaver played the deputy marshal from Taos, N.M., for seven years in the 1970s. McCloud was on temporary duty with the New York City police and he drove them batty with his unorthodox ways.

"We'd been talking about a 'McCloud' movie for three or four years," Weaver said. "I was doing a new series, 'Buck James,' and we couldn't find a story that appealed to me. It had to have relevance to today. McCloud couldn't still be in an exchange program.

"We made him a senator from New Mexico. I wanted something to parallel my own growth and that's with the environment. McCloud's pushing an ecology bill. If people don't see any other part of the picture I hope they see this. It's a speech I wrote myself. Of course, I want people to see the rest of the show. It has all of the 'McCloud' ingredients."

J.D. Cannon, Terry Carter and Diana Muldaur are all back in "The Return of Sam McCloud," which CBS will telecast on Sunday. It was filmed on location in England. Guest stars include Patrick McNeen, David McCallum and Roger Rees.

Muldaur plays McCloud's girlfriend and in the movie they move a little closer to the altar.

"In the first script we get married," said Weaver. "But that was kind of stuck on the end with nothing leading up to it. I said, 'Let's keep this string going.' Just from a practical standpoint, if the show gets a good rating, I'd like to have the freedom to do more."

What brings McCloud to London is the murder of his niece, who had been working for a chemical company.

"All the old instincts come back," Weaver said. "I go for the funeral. We think at first it (the death) is an accident. So McCloud starts to investigate and he learns certain people are willing to sacrifice lives for profit. What happened was my niece had stumbled upon something and was murdered. Then the chief suspect is murdered and McCloud becomes a suspect in his killing."

Glenn Close Changes Film Roles

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — After two Academy Award-nominated portrayals of vindictive women, versatile Glenn Close returns in another guise: as a married woman seeking to adopt the baby of an unwed teenager.

"Immediate Family" is the apt title of the Columbia Pictures release in which Ms. Close and James Woods play a childless couple who seek the child of young Mary Stuart Masterson and her leather-jacketed boyfriend, Kevin Dillon.

"It's a phenomenon in this country called 'open adoption,'" explained Ms. Close. "Instead of there being a big mystery about who the parents are and where they came from — they used to seal the files, especially from the child — as a reaction to that, it's open who the parents are. The adoptive parents and the birth parents, as they're called, get together. It really is the decision of the birth mother as to who she going to give the child to."

What happens if the birth mother changes her mind later?

"It's very difficult after all the legal procedures to get a child back," she said. "There is that horrible period between when you're given the child and everything is taken care of legally when the mother can change her mind, and many women do. I think. That's the terrible emotional minefield."

"Once the (legalities) are done, it's hard to reverse it. I don't know the statistics on how often that happens. I know people who send Christmas cards to the birth mother, and people who correspond more than that. I would think that the child would want to know who the mother is, have pictures of her and maybe even meet her. He would consider adoptive parents as parents, what they really are. That's the world that he knows."

"Immediate Family" follows two stunning portrayals for Ms. Close: as the murderous career woman in "Fatal Attraction" and the scheming Marquise de Merteuil in "Dangerous Liaisons." In both films she wreaked dire revenge on men who had spurned her, but she doesn't consider the women evil.

"A tragic victim ... out of control," is her assessment of the "Fatal Attraction" protagonist.

"And I think ultimately the Marquise de Merteuil is a victim of her society," she added. "That's my subjective viewpoint. Yeah, they were dangerous people. But they were also trying to survive."

Is it possible to play a role without feeling any sympathy for the character?

"I don't think it is. Whenever I approach a role, there always has to be a place where I can identify with her humanity, and basically love them."

Close and actor James Woods in 'Immediate Family'

Ms. Close gives dimension to her role as the barren Linda Spector in "Immediate Family." What helped with Barbara Benedek's script, she said, "was its wonderful sense of humor. For all the pain that Linda and Michael are going through, they also have a sense of humor about themselves, and about life. It helps to get through the hard times."

She found close parallels between Glenn and Linda, though their histories are different. After two childless marriages and two divorces, she gave birth to Annie Maude seven weeks before starting "Dangerous Liaisons." She lives with the father, producer John Starke.

Glenn (named after her god-mother) Ms. Close was born May 19, 1947, in Greenwich, Conn., the mid-

"When I was really little, the golden age of Walt Disney made a huge impression on me," she recalled. "The Littlest Outlaw," "Old Yeller," "The Vanishing Prairie," "The Living Desert" ... vivid movies for a child, wonderful, wonderful movies.

"That had a lot to do with my fantasy life of wanting to be an actor, to be in movies like that. I grew up in the country, and my parents were quite — actually antisocial. We had a great upbringing; we could have been in Iowa. We were very near to New York, but we only went in to see 'The Nutcracker Suite' and the Barnum and Bailey circus and to have our eyes examined."

She admitted that her parents were concerned when she left home to pursue an acting career in New York: "I come from a very Yankee family with Yankee values. I was quite an elusive child. I had a very active imagination. I was a bookworm and a tomboy and very shy. My parents didn't know what acting would elicit from me. But I've proven to them that it's fine for my character."

McCallum Son Found Dead

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Jason David McCallum — the son of actor David McCallum and actress Jill Ireland — whose troubled life and battles against drugs and alcohol were a focus of Ireland's recently published book, "Life Lines," was found dead in his apartment here, police said Wednesday.

The body of the 27-year-old McCallum was found by his girlfriend, Tracy Medina, on the bathroom floor of his rented apartment early Tuesday evening, Los Angeles police spokeswoman Margie Reid said.

Cause of death was unknown, she said, adding that "there were no signs of foul play, no obvious signs of trauma to the body."

Reid would not comment on whether drugs were involved.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles County coroner said that an autopsy would be performed Thursday, but the results of toxicological tests would not be known for a week to 10 days.

 Some people dread a two-way finesse, claiming they always go wrong. The expert loves it, because by the time he commits himself it is no longer a pure guess!
 South's sequence showed a balanced hand of 23-24 points—he added a point for all four aces. After an initial waiting response with a good hand, North bid its full value as soon as he learned what partner held.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and, since he could count 12 tricks if the king of clubs were on-side, immediately ran the queen of clubs. West took the king and persevered with diamonds. Now declarer's 12th trick would have to come from spades, and there are those who would peer at the heavens for inspiration before closing their eyes and taking the finesse one way or the other.

If the odds held true, exactly half of them would guess right. The other 50 percent would blame their horoscopes for being out of kilter.

The expert sets out to learn as much as possible about the hand. Declarer cashes out all the winners in the three non-vital suits. In the process South learns that West started with six diamonds, two clubs and no hearts. Therefore, West has five spades and East only two. The odds have increased dramatically from 50 percent—West suddenly has become a 5-to-2 favorite to hold the queen.

So declarer leads a spade to the ten and, when that holds, he claims his slam. Declarer has simply heeded two key principles: Do not commit yourself to a line earlier than necessary; and count the enemy distribution to find a clue about how to tackle the crucial suit.

Amnesty Says Sandinistas Executed Unarmed Peasants In Contra Sweeps

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Amnesty International said today that Nicaraguan troops have summarily executed dozens of unarmed peasants during operations against the Contras while abuses by the U.S.-backed rebels against civilians have dropped.

The international human rights group said in a report that the Sandinista government has imprisoned some soldiers for unlawful killings of civilians; pledged to investigate other such killings; improved legal protection for detainees; and freed more than 2,000 political prisoners since 1986.

It also said, however, that since an April 1988 cease-fire there has been no sign of a decline in non-combat killings and "disappearances" of civilians blamed on security forces.

President Daniel Ortega suspended the 19-month-old truce last week, but government and Contra delegations were to begin meeting today in New York for the first direct peace talks since June 1988 on ending the 8-year-old conflict.

The Contras are supposed to disband and leave their Honduran camps voluntarily by early December under an Aug. 7 agreement signed by Nicaragua and four other Central American governments. The rebels were not a party to the agreement, and so far most have shown no inclination to lay down their weapons and return home.

Amnesty said the fate or whereabouts of scores of civilians who disappeared after being arrested still have not been clarified.

Army units allegedly have killed dozens of unarmed civilians in provinces bordering Honduras and Costa Rica and in Indian-dominated regions on the Atlantic coast where fighting against the Contras once was intense, the report said.

In many cases, the victims allegedly were singled out "in punishment or reprisal for no other reason than their suspected sympathy or support for the insurgent forces," it said.

Witnesses also have alleged that unarmed peasants have been shot to death while fleeing army patrols seeking to enforce military conscription, it said.

"It appears that, following the withdrawal of Contra forces, some military units ... are resorting to killings during operations to identify or neutralize networks of suspected Contra supporters and sympathizers," the report said.

"Punitive action by the government, while indicating that it does not condone such abuses, has so far been insufficient to halt them," it added.

It said the precise circumstances of the killings are often difficult or impossible to establish because there are no independent witnesses.

The authorities contend that in some cases soldiers acted in self-defense because victims were suspected of being armed, hostile or dangerous. Military investigations have suggested other killings were criminal acts involving "personal quarrels, or the reckless firing of weapons by drunken soldiers."

Amnesty said reports persist of forced recruitment, torture and executions of civilians by the U.S.-backed rebels, but said such abuses have dropped significantly in the past year.

"Preventive measures reportedly adopted by these forces to improve the conduct of their troops appear to have had little effect," the report said, but the number of reported abuses "has declined significantly since the winding down of military activity in 1988 and 1989."

The report documents 56 cases of unlawful executions by Nicaraguan troops between 1987 and 1989.

In three separate cases in which 10 civilians were killed, the government sentenced 17 military and police personnel to prison terms ranging from six years to the maximum 30 years, the report said.

Aquino To Talk Trade With Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philippines President Corason Aquino meets with President Bush at a time of growing uncertainty over future military ties and other key aspects of the relationship between the two longtime allies.

Mrs. Aquino had a meeting scheduled with Bush today, followed by a State Department luncheon hosted by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and meetings with House and Senate leaders. She is the guest of honor at a White House state dinner tonight.

The two main themes during her visit, which ends Saturday night, will be trade and investment. U.S. support for Mrs. Aquino remains strong, but she is not expected to match the tumultuous reception she had in 1986 when she visited seven months after leading the successful fight to depose President Ferdinand Marcos.

She so charmed Congress that lawmakers rammed through a $200 million aid package for the Philippines in record time.

Since then, the mutual confidence of the two countries has been shaken somewhat by acrimonious negotiations last year over the terms for the continued U.S. military presence in the Philippines.

Also contributing to the sense of unease is Mrs. Aquino's refusal to rule out the possibility that she might ask United States soldiers to leave once the existing agreement on U.S. military bases expires in 1991.

Mrs. Aquino's ambivalence reflects the existence of an influential minority in the Philippines which believes the continued U.S. presence at the bases infringes on Filipino sovereignty.

Talks on a new base agreement open next month and U.S. officials believe that, after considerable wrangling, they will conclude with agreement that the bases remain.

Tobacco Firm's Role Protested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A consumer health group today asked Congress to revoke an agreement between a cigarette manufacturer and the National Archives which the group says "smears the Bill of Rights with the blood of all Americans killed as a result of smoking."

The August agreement makes Philip Morris Companies Inc. part of an Archives campaign to commemorate the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights.

A nationally televised public service announcement that is a part of the campaign includes the voices of President Kennedy and Martin Luther King over images of the Bill of Rights and scenes from civil rights demonstrations. The announcement identifies Philip Morris as the sponsor.

"This joint venture smears the Bill of Rights with the blood of all Americans killed as a result of smoking Marlboro and other Philip Morris cigarettes," said Sidney Wolfe, director of Public Citizen Health Research Group, in a letter to Sen. Jeff Bingaman.

Bingaman, a New Mexico Democrat, heads the Government Affairs Committee's subcommittee on government information which has jurisdiction over the archives. He could not be reached for comment Wednesday evening.

Efforts to reach national archivist Don Wilson and Philip Morris executives by telephone also were unsuccessful.
