Knowles Agrees To Meet Students

ECU Group Stages March To City Hall

By Charles Hoskinson
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Waving signs and chanting "E-C-U," more than 1,500 people marched from East Carolina University to City Hall on Thursday to give city officials petitions protesting new noise restrictions.

The petitions ask the City Council to reconsider its decision to abolish a permit system that allows groups to exceed noise limits set by the city's noise-control ordinance.

The march and petition drive were organized by ECU students who claim the new restrictions could mean the end to outdoor parties and concerts. Students had protested the restrictions Monday with an on-campus rally and a one-day boycott of local businesses.

City officials are ready to meet with student leaders to discuss their concerns, City Manager Greg Knowles said after the march.

"We need to see what your problems are before they get too far down the line," Knowles told Charlie T. "Tripp" Roakes, ECU Student Government Association president, after the march.

"I'm ready to sit down right now," Roakes said today. He said he will contact Knowles by Monday to schedule a meeting.

An ECU official at the march said he supports the students' efforts to get the city to reconsider. "I feel that the city ought to reconsider its decision," Dr. Ronald P. Speier, assistant vice chancellor for student life, said.

Speier was one of the university representatives on a committee appointed to review the noise ordinance. The panel explored complaints that outdoor parties

E. Germany Opens The Wall

The Associated Press

BERLIN — East Germany began knocking huge holes in the Berlin Wall today after announcing that it was forever lifting all travel restrictions on its citizens.

The announcement caps one of the most dramatic shifts in post-war Europe, giving the once penned-up East German people full freedom of travel for the first time since the Berlin Wall was built in 1961.

Tens of thousands of East Germans streamed into West Berlin and other parts of West Germany today after a heady night of celebrating the opening of the Berlin Wall on Thursday.

"Last night, the Germans were the happiest people in the world," West Berlin Mayor Walter Momper said. The party continued today, as revelers popped champagne corks, lit sparklers and embraced on both sides of the border.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl cut short his visit to Poland to meet with his Cabinet and arrived in West Berlin. He hoped to talk with East German leader Egon Krenz.

Communist authorities opened East German borders Thursday in a desperate attempt to stem the flow of people fleeing to the West and quell the growing demonstrations that have spread to several cities.

The abrupt opening of the once heavily fortified borders was the breathtaking climax of a remarkable series of reforms that began three weeks ago in this once strictly controlled society.

"The Berlin Wall will come down, and Berlin will live," said former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, who was mayor of West Berlin when the 9-foot-high Berlin Wall went up in 1961.

Brandt later appeared on the Western side of the wall's Brandenburg Gate, where he was cheered by thousands of revelers, some of whom were dancing atop the wall.

Bulgaria's Leader Steps Down

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOFIA, Bulgaria — Todor Zhivkov, Eastern Europe's longest serving leader, resigned as Bulgarian communist party leader today at a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee. He was replaced by Foreign Minister Petar Mladenov, the official BTA news agency reported.

Zhivkov also resigned from the ruling Politburo, BTA said.

The brief dispatch said the policy-setting Central Committee formally thanked him for his "long selfless service to the party and the people."

Zhivkov was the longest serving leader in Eastern Europe, having held the post of party leader since 1954.

The Central Committee also proposed that Zhivkov be relieved of his post as state president.

It was the latest development to rock the East bloc during a tumultuous year of social and political change.

On Thursday, East German leader Egon Krenz opened the Berlin Wall and other Western borders in East Germany, the most breathtaking development in a three-week whirlwind of reform.

The move comes exactly one week after 9,000 demonstrators rallied in the capital, Sofia, in the first known pro-reform rally in postwar Bulgaria.

Bulgaria has long resisted the reforms introduced by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, but about a dozen small civil rights groups have formed in recent months.

Zhivkov and other senior officials had pledged to work toward separating party and state functions and introducing a measure of democracy by amending the constitution.

On Friday, a crowd estimated at up to 9,000 took part in a demonstration that coincided with the last day of a 35-nation conference on protection of the environment.

Farmville Bypass May Be Ready 8 Months Early

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The U.S. 264 bypass of Farmville could be completed by the end of 1991, some eight months earlier than originally scheduled, a local member of the state Board of Transportation said today.

Randy Doub of Greenville said a $4.25 million contract let in January 1988 for grading and structures on the 3.327 miles of the western section of the project was completed "right on schedule" last week.

Work on the 3.067 miles of the eastern portion of the bypass, which began in March under a $4.67 million contract, is scheduled for completion Nov. 1, 1990, Doub said.

The initial schedule called for paving of the bypass to be completed under two contracts, with final completion and opening of the road to traffic scheduled for mid- to late-1992.

Rather than let the final grading, base and paving bids for the two sections of the project separately, Doub, in a letter to State Highway Administrator George Wells last month, recommended that "the entire paving contract" be let to contract in April or May 1990.

Doub said this morning that he was notified last week that his suggestion to accelerate the project has been approved and that contracts for paving of the entire bypass should be let in May 1990.

"A ball game guess" on the cost of paving the 6.394-mile bypass is $6 million to $7 million, Doub said.

Under the new plan, Doub said paving on the western portion of the bypass could begin in June.

Doub said the new schedule might allow traffic to use the western portion of the bypass, from Greene County to U.S. 285 in Farmville, before work on the eastern section of the road is completed.

In a letter to Doub last week saying plans should be ready for a May 1990 letting of the paving contract, Larry Goode, manager of the Department of Transportation's program and policy branch, said, "We will be able to make funding available for this advanced construction and we are delighted to be able to move ahead with this important project."

Official Canvass Lowers Vote Total For Huggins

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An official canvass conducted Thursday revealed only one revision in the Greenville municipal election results published by The Daily Reflector.

Rufus Huggins, District 2 incumbent, retained his seat on the council Tuesday, but by 800 fewer votes in the Wintergreen precinct than was originally reported. The canvass placed Huggins' Wintergreen total at 83 votes rather than 883, giving him an overall count of 903 votes, not 1,703.

Milton Sutton followed Huggins with 262 votes, and Sean Casey Dobyns trailed with 130 votes.

The official canvass, conducted by the Pitt County Board of Elections, confirmed the published election results in all other Greenville races.

In the mayor's race, Nancy Jenkins beat incumbent Ed Carter by 1,704 votes. Ms. Jenkins received 5,305 votes to Carter's 3,601.

Tuesday's election saw a larger turnout than two years ago, with 8,906 votes cast in the mayor's race this year, up 2,159 votes from 1987's 6,747 total. And Carter actually received 160 more votes in losing to Jenkins this year than he did in defeating Les Garner and Will Stancil with 3,441 votes in 1987.

Mildred Council retained her District 1 seat, drawing 1,170 votes to challenger Daniel Brew's 183, according to the canvass.

Inez Fridley, running unopposed for the District 3 seat on the council, received 662 votes.

Tom Johnson Jr. won the closest race in Greenville to take the District 4 seat. The final tally showed that Johnson received 876 votes, Louis H. Zincone followed closely with 700, and Jimmie Lee received 192.

In District 5 Blanche Forbes garnered 1,875 votes, besting challenger Thomas Harwell, who received 1,562.

Lorraine Shinn will return to her at-large seat on the council. Ms. Shinn received 5,161 votes, while her challenger, Chuck

District Attorney Says Venter May Have Left United States

By Carol Tyer

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County district attorney says he has reason to believe that O.J. Venter, first arrested for securities fraud in August and indicted on more counts in the same case Monday, may have left the United States, possibly under an assumed name.

Venter and four other men, including three from Pitt County, were charged by the Pitt grand jury Monday with a total of 731 counts of securities fraud. They are accused of having improperly sold stock in a firm incorporated as Interport Beverage Co.

"O.J. was arrested in August in this Interport Beverage case, on two counts, I believe," District Attorney Tom Haigwood said today, "and at that time bond was set at $50,000 and he was required to turn his passport in to the clerk of court. We called for this restriction because we knew he was originally from South Africa and was used to traveling internationally."

"Some time later, we got a report that he had been spotted in London," Haigwood said. "In view of this information which we could not verify, we had the District Court judge revoke his bond. I have since also heard that he's been spotted in South Africa. We don't know where he is. We want to know and I know his bail bondsmen want to know, too."

Haigwood said it's likely that Venter is operating under an assumed name. This seems highly probable, he said, if Venter has left the United States, since his own passport is in the Pitt County clerk of court's office.

The district attorney said Venter, once a resident of the Holly Ridge subdivision near Grimesland, has been considered a fugitive since the bond was revoked. He did not appear in court Nov. 3 on the two counts of securities fraud and six worthless checks charges.

On Monday Venter was indicted on 186 counts of conspiracy to sell without securities being registered with the secretary of state, conspiracy to sell without being a registered salesman, conspiracy to sell stating misleading facts, and selling unregistered securities.

Don Davis, believed to be an Emerald Isle resident, also has not been arrested in the securities fraud case. Three other principals, Greenville lawyer Dallas McPherson, Greenville businessman Don Baker and Ayden businessman Monte Little surrendered to the Pitt County Sheriff's Department on Wednesday afternoon.

McPherson is charged with 63 violations, while Little and Baker are charged with 190 each. Davis is charged with 102 violations.

A spokesman for the Carteret County Sheriff Department said this morning that Davis has not been arrested by his department. Haigwood said "the usual procedure" would be for Carteret County to be requested to make his arrest.

The Pitt County Clerk of Court's office was closed today for Veteran's Day, so a check could not be made to determine who has the warrant for Davis' arrest.

Wise Choice

No Charter Changes For Greenville

Greenville's voters have earned a round of applause. On Tuesday's municipal election ballot, they were asked to decide whether two city charter changes were necessary. That was a choice between good government and bad government. By rejecting the changes, voters made a wise choice about their city's future.

The results of that decision will be a city council that can continue to respond to a fast-changing community and a balanced council led by persuasion, not force. Those points may sound inconsequential, but they represent sound government.

Greenville's voters rejected two key changes in the city's charter. First, they were asked their opinion on whether city council members and the mayor should serve two year or four year terms. Currently, they serve two-year terms. Second, voters were asked to decide whether the city's mayor should have a regular vote on all issues that come before the council. Currently, the mayor only votes in case of a tie.

Voters correctly rejected both adjustments, recognizing that two-year terms and not allowing the mayor to vote on council provide flexibility and balance that is necessary on a public board.

In rejecting the mayoral vote, citizens might have recalled a bit of history. Before 1981, Greenville's mayor had a vote on council. The system wasn't producing sound government because the mayor had too much power. The mayoral vote encouraged the city's top elected leader to hand pick candidates for council. Once these candidates reached office, the mayor had voting power plus control of the council. That's not balanced government.

In addition, a mayoral vote historically works against minority interests. Greenville worked very hard in 1985 to revise its districts and method of election to increase minority representation on city council. These changes have been effective. That progress rests, however, upon balance. A mayoral vote upsets that balance.

By saying no to longer terms of office, voters let their officials know the citizens of Greenville demand an accountable and responsive city council.

During periods of rapid growth, a city's leadership must be flexible. It must respond to change as quickly as change occurs. Long terms of office spell slow turnover in government and stagnation.

For Greenville, a community where change is an everyday occurrence, sluggish government won't provide the needed responsiveness to change. Quick-growing cities need government that can shift — at the ballot box — to reflect a changing population. Long terms would prevent such flexibility.

Voters deserve credit for recognizing the flaws of the two city charter changes on Tuesday's ballot. By rejecting them, they sent a message to their elected officials. "We want a balanced and flexible government," the message said. A wise choice.

Friendly Place

On a very dark night last week, I had the misfortune to have a flat tire at a very busy intersection. A Greenville police officer driving by, immediately saw my predicament and was able to assist me in getting my car out of the heavy flow of traffic. Then a young gentleman of college age, evidently seeing a senior citizen in trouble, pulled his car over and immediately proceeded to change my tire. I was on my way in less than 15 minutes.

It made me realize that even though Greenville has grown tremendously in the last twenty years, we still have a friendly, efficient police force and a group of young people who still believe in helping their neighbor. Greenville, in many ways, remains the same friendly place it always was.

Time Of Need

On behalf of the victims of Hurricane Hugo in the Charlotte, N.C. and Charleston, S.C. areas, we would like to thank those who so generously gave clothes, food, money, prayers, etc. during this time of need. All are to be commended for the tremendous support.

We would like to extend a special thanks to Mr. Gene Simmons who so willingly and freely transported the items given to the central location for further distribution to the needy areas.

Again thanks to those who gave and those who wanted to give but could not; the prayers and support are appreciated. Your support and efforts prove the love for our fellow man still exists.

Kindness, Generosity

We would like to publicly thank several people, in particular Mr. Marion Mills, who came to our rescue in a very dangerous situation on Oct. 22, 1989.

My wife and I and a friend, all elderly, were traveling through Greenville on our way to Newton Grove when the catalytic converter on our car caught fire. Several motorists, plus Red Oak Fire Department, helped us douse the fire. Mr. Mills, fire chief of the Red Oak Fire Department, helped us in so many ways. We will never forget him and his kindness. He replaced the battery in the car and even insisted we wait in his home. Afterward, he would not accept payment for his work or the car parts.

It is kindness and generosity such as this that makes the world a better place. We thank you again, Mr. Mills, for helping us in our time of need.

Clean, Involved

As a member of the Greenville Beautification Commission, I wish to thank those organizations and individuals who have made the implementation of the North Carolina's first and only "adopt-a-city street" program such a success in Greenville. Modeled after the state's own "adopt-a-highway" program, the Greenville Beautification Commission has approved, in three months, 24 applications for city street adoption and clean-up. We are extremely gratified that included in these applications are 13 student organizations from East Carolina University, as well as a Greenville high school, elementary school, and civic groups.

Such overwhelming community support of the efforts of all our citizens to keep Greenville clean and litter free is another positive indication of the excellent quality of life here.

The Prevention Is Worth More Than The Cure

STILLWATER — Oklahoma, like America generally, is spending a huge portion of its medical-care budget to treat critically ill newborns, when a fraction of the money spent on prenatal care might have prevented the problems in the first place.

Is it a question of being penny-wise and pound-foolish? Well, of course. But according to Michael Lapolla, director of the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation, it may be more critically a matter of flawed assumptions — specifically the assumption that any increase in prenatal care must be a permanent add-on to what is already being spent.

Everyone sees the wisdom of preventive care, Lapolla told a two-day meeting of the Oklahoma Academy for State Goals. Conservatives and liberals (though "for different political and emotional reasons") see the value of early and universal access to high-quality prenatal care, he said. There is no "ethical, clinical or economic rationale to allow impenetrable barriers to maternal and infant health care to continue to exist."

The problem, he said, is that "traditional approaches toward expanding access to this care always require ever-increasing amounts of money to be layered onto current expenditures. Even if we develop a desire to provide better access and quality of services, we naturally assume we cannot afford to do it as a society."

Lapolla thinks he sees a way out of the problem. "Instead of trying to improve each component of perinatal care — Title I, Title

William Raspberry

XIX, employer-paid premiums, Medicaid and the rest — we ought to look at all the dollars we are spending on perinatal care, divide it by the number of births we have in the state and reallocate that money toward early, universal prenatal care."

The result might not necessarily be a "radical savings," he said, because his "SoonerCare" proposal would seek to have some of the forgone outlays redirected for such things as nutrition and tort reform (to ease the malpractice insurance burden that is driving up the cost of medical care).

The Oklahoma Academy may be the ideal forum for Lapolla's idea. The five-year-old voluntary "think tank," sponsored by businesses in the state, has been unusually successful in getting its ideas transformed into legislation. Earlier annual meetings resulted in major educational reform, concrete plans for building a more competent work force and one of the finest economic-development plans in the country.

Lapolla, here as a member of a panel on health policy, admits that while his plan would be cost-neutral to Oklahoma, it would necessitate — temporarily — some increased federal Medicaid outlays. For example, he would raise eligibility for prenatal care under Medicaid to 185 percent (instead of the current 100 percent) of the poverty threshold.

"But it is axiomatic that if prenatal care is good, postnatal care will be less costly," he said.

One of the difficulties in getting the middle-class (whose medical bills are largely paid through group insurance) to accept the burden of universal access to prenatal care is the perception that it would simply transfer their money to the shiftless poor.

But as Lapolla points out, the middle-class are already paying, through their taxes, the cost of forgone prenatal care.

Lapolla's idea recalls Lester Thurow's comment on educational expenditures.

"I am willing to pay for, indeed insist upon, the education of my neighbors children," the dean of MIT's Sloan School of Business observed, "not because I am generous but because I cannot afford to live with them uneducated."

What Thurow said of education applies with equal force to the question of prenatal health care. Even the best after-the-fact care for infants born with preventable medical problems leaves youngsters with physical and developmental problems that result in school failure, poor job skills and welfare dependency — results America can no longer afford.

Open East Germany Gives Europe New Questions To Ponder

Tyler
Marshall

LONDON — Thursday's decision by a desperate East German government to throw open its long-locked borders constitutes the latest and most dramatic of a dizzying series of events that in a few months has transformed the political landscape of Europe.

For the continent as a whole, it effectively neutralizes the most horrific symbol of its 40 year division — the Berlin Wall.

Demands to tear down the wall that began with President Kennedy suddenly no longer apply.

East Germans now can walk through it or around it.

Events in East Germany also raise more urgent questions about the prospects of German reunification, the pace of West European unity and the future of the two military alliances that preserved a 40-year status quo now crumbling.

Just as the wall evolved as a powerful symbol of division, so does its demise carry an equally strong message to all Europeans that, suddenly, almost anything is possible.

Those who dream of a continent undivided felt their goal a giant step closer to reality Thursday as they watched another major chunk of the Iron Curtain fall away.

The long-held belief that Moscow would never permit East Germany, the westernmost cornerstone of its empire, to spin out of its orbit seems as dated as the wall itself.

As millions of East Germans paraded through the streets demanding an end to Communist rule, the 350,000 Soviet troops stationed in the country were conspicuous only by their absence from sight.

Few European political analysts believe that Czechoslovakia can resist pressures for similar change much longer.

For East German leader Egon Krenz and the Communist leadership that clings to power in East Berlin, the provisional ruling to open the borders is more an act of despair than statesmanship.

It is a gamble that effectively gives East Germans their first free election. Theoretically at least, all 17 million are now free to vote with their feet as have thousands before them under far riskier circumstances.

In a very real way, the volume of those departing in the coming days will determine both the fate of Krenz and the viability of the country he leads.

Even before the hemorrhage of refugees began eight weeks ago, East Germany was a nation critically short of skilled manpower, saddled with an aging population and the world's lowest birthrate.

The 200,000 or so who have left so far may be only 1 percent of the population, but they are the young, the healthy, and the skilled who are critical to the country's future.

East Germany has long been the only country in the Soviet bloc that could boast of some economic success.

If large numbers of its citizens fail to heed pleas from both East and West German leaders to stay and help build a new society, this limited success would be seriously jeopardized.

Such a development would undoubtedly ripple through other hard-pressed Eastern European economies.

For West Germany, as for other members of the Atlantic alliance, events are moving at an unnerving, yet exhilarating pace. The Alliance's long-term planners suddenly stare at a set of conditions they believed only a short time ago would take at least another decade to arise.

In West Germany, a mixture of elation and disbelief swept the country Thursday evening as news broke of the new open-border policy.

The euphoria that an era of family divisions seemed at an end was tempered by fears that the action would trigger a new wave of refugees.

Before the recent flood of East Germans began, West Germany had absorbed nearly half a million settlers of German extraction from Eastern Europe as a result of relaxed emigration requirements.

While West Germany is the richest nation in the region, it has always been plagued with self-doubt about the fragility of its democracy and its ability to withstand political instability.

"It is in our interest that they stay (in East Germany)," West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl commented.

Thomas Kielinger, editor of the respected newspaper Rheinische Merkur, seemed to speak for many West Germans who see Thursday's decision as a potential watershed.

"We're hoping that this is the turning point that will give East Germans the incentive to stay and build their country," he said.

For those in Western Europe, Thursday's announcement, coupled with Krenz's call for free elections, raises other concerns.

It has brought the prospect of a new and closer relationship between the two German states one giant step closer to reality.

Kohl's words to the West German Parliament Wednesday that "we have less reason than ever to be resigned to the long-term division of Germany" seemed far truer 24 hours later.

For if the borders remain open and free elections result in a non-Communist government, the very existence of two separate German states comes into question.

Despite Kohl's protestation that no one need fear a united, democratic Germany, Europeans are unsettled about the possibility of such a powerful entity.

While French President Francois Mitterrand bravely reaffirmed his support for the German right to reunification, many other Europeans privately applaud the words of an earlier Frenchman who said he loved Germany so much that he was happy there were two of them.

Those nurturing the European Community's dream of economic and political unity worry about West Germany either becoming distracted by events in the East or placing a higher priority on its relations with East Germany than with the community.

Under a French lead, the European Community is already considering accelerating the pace of integration among its 12 member states in order to fill the political vacuum it sees developing in central Europe.

Obituary For Intolerance Premature

Lawrence
Bobo

Across the country, Tuesday's election results produced important "black firsts." At the top of the list stand David Dinkins' election as the first black mayor of New York City and the decision by Virginia voters to make Douglas Wilder the nation's first elected black governor.

Both victories can be read as triumphs for tolerance and racial harmony. These gains were especially striking since they took place during a period when racial polarization and conflict seem to be worsening.

But it is premature to write an obituary for the politics of intolerance. Dinkins and Wilder received large numbers of votes from whites, and their victories would have been impossible without that support. Yet race remained an important undercurrent in these contests.

This is suggested, first, by the narrowness of the victory margin for both men. (Indeed, we may see a recount in Virginia.) Lopsided Democratic registration in New York City did not carry over into an easy Dinkins victory. Wilder was outpolled by white Democrats running for lower statewide offices in Virginia.

Second, the polls seemed to have seriously, although not disastrously, misjudged the closeness of these contests. A difference between polling results and actual election outcomes is not uncommon, especially in contests when many people are making up their minds late in the campaign. Yet, it appears that even exit polls were less accurate than usual in several contests involving candidates of different races.

The level of prejudice confronted by black office-seekers may no longer be the deciding factor in political contests, but it appears still to play a part in how some fraction of the people will vote.

Why were these contests so close, and why was the closeness underestimated by the polls? The short answer involves a small but significant number of what I will call "racially ambivalent" Democrats and independents. Racially ambivalent voters are those who believe it is important to be nondiscriminatory in politics and other domains of life, but who are uncomfortable having blacks in leadership roles. That is, like most Americans, this group of voters thinks it is important to be racially egalitarian but still hold some stereotypes and negative expectations about blacks in general and black politicians in particular.

This type of ambivalence matters most among potential Democratic voters. Presumably, most Republicans were not going to cross over to vote for Democratic candidates. Hence, the closeness of the New York and Virginia races stems from Democrats and independents who chose not to vote for the black Democratic nominees.

Racial ambivalence may have several consequences among such white voters: a loss of interest in politics when a black is the party standard-bearer, reluctance actually to cast a ballot for a black once in the privacy of the voting booth, and a tendency to misrepresent voting intention to pollsters.

Of course, open expressions of racial discrimination in voting are relatively rare and are on the decline. While 63 percent of white Americans said they would not vote for a black candidate for president in 1958, no more than 10 to 15 percent of white voters say so today. However, a national telephone survey taken this summer by the Intersearch Organization asked people whether they thought "black politicians represent(ed) the whole community as well as white politicians." Among whites, 42 percent said "no," indicating that many whites have negative expectations of black political leaders.

Other results of polling research are worthy of attention. The first concerns the role of racial politeness. Many of the positive changes that have occurred in racial attitudes are recent accomplishments and often not yet deeply internalized. That is, many people feel it is important to be tolerant but still have some negative beliefs and feelings about blacks. The result is a polite response in any circumstance where there are explicit pressures to be nondiscriminatory. Racial politeness may occur in response to poll questions. Research shows that when whites are asked questions that have clear anti-black implications, they are much more likely to give liberal responses when interviewed by a black than when interviewed by a white.

This sort of racial politeness is probably influencing a number of racially ambivalent voters. For example, on the telephone survey question of whether black politicians represent the whole community as well as white politicians, whites responded much differently depending on the race of the interviewer. Only 56 percent of whites interviewed by whites said blacks could do as good a job, compared to 73 percent of whites interviewed by blacks. This difference increases from 17 percentage points to 29 percentage points when considering only the responses of white Democrats.

The crucial idea here is not so much that pollsters need to match carefully the race of interviewer and respondent (although it would surely help to do so), but rather to show that many white Democrats hold racially ambivalent views, at least in regard to black politicians. Importantly, whites who have negative expectations for black politicians are much less likely to express a willingness to vote for a black candidate. Just this sort of ambivalence — good basic intentions couple with continued negative stereotyping — probably explains why some white Democrats and independents tell pollsters one thing (that they intend to vote for a black candidate) and do another (not vote at all or vote for the white opponent).

The combined result, it seems to me, is tight contests when a black runs against a white and an underestimate of the closeness of such contests by pollsters.

One immediate implication of such a pattern is that survey analysts must now carefully assess the discrepancies between actual results and the immediate pre-election and exit polls. In the absence of such careful reflection, we may find more erroneous predictions of election outcomes (as did happen in Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley's first run for governor of California).

A larger issue is how "racial contests" will be handled in the future, given many racially ambivalent voters. Both Dinkins and Wilder ran as competent and moderate career politicians, more comfortable hammering out a compromise in a committee than igniting a protest rally. Both men also emphasized their intention to work for the whole community and downplayed special commitments to the black community. And non-racial issues such as abortion became large parts of the campaigns.

There are surely wise choices from the standpoint of courting and winning white votes. It is unclear whether enthusiastic support of black voters can long be counted on without more forceful commitment to addressing the acute problems faced by black communities. Yet it is transparently clear that without solid support in the black community, both Dinkins and Wilder would have lost. At some point, black voters will expect a return on their loyalty.

Furthermore, subtly racist campaigns did not emerge to a significant degree in these recent contests. However, as Willie Horton taught us in 1988, such efforts can be quite effective, and there remain politicians willing to exploit such tactics.

For the moment, both black and white Americans can take pride in the triumph of the politics of tolerance. Race does not overwhelm other candidate qualities and issue positions for most voters. Recent results also show us that prejudice is not invariably the margin of victory even in tight contests. Surely, its influence on politics is on the decline.

We must remain wary, however. The politics of intolerance is not yet a thing of the past, as the razor-thin victories of Dinkins in New York and Wilder in Virginia should remind us.

Your Take-Home Pay May Be Larger

RALEIGH (AP) — Most North Carolinians will see a boost in take-home pay as a result of a tax fairness bill that lowers the withholding tax, Revenue Department officials say.

New state tax withholding schedules were mailed about two weeks ago to employers across North Carolina.

"We're disseminating the information as rapidly as is possible and asking the employers to implement at the earliest possible date that is convenient for them," said department spokesman Doug Whitfield.

The bill's intent was to "take approximately 700,000 people off the tax rolls and distribute the equity of taxation to the higher paying brackets," Whitfield said.

The law also allows "piggybacking" — calculating state tax based on federal taxable income.

Whitfield said some employees will see the new withholding on this week's paychecks depending on how fast the employer implements the new schedule. He said the new tax schedule is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1989, and in most cases that means a total tax reduction.

"In some cases at least we think that the withholding will probably be greater under the old law and actually the liability in many cases will be less, creating a larger refund than would be normal," Whitfield said.

Revenue Department projections show a single taxpayer with one exemption and earning $24,000 a year had $112 taken from a paycheck per month under the old rate, Whitfield said. Under the new tax rate, the same person would have $101 a month deducted.

Using the same criteria for a taxpayer earning $36,000 a year, the monthly tax would drop from $182 to $171.61. For a person earning $48,000, the tax bite drops from $252 a month to $241.61 a month, Whitfield said, and for a $72,000 annual paycheck the tax per month decreases from $392 a month to $380 a month.

Whitfield said a state taxpayer would have to earn more than $100,000 a year to see an increase in state tax withholding.

Assistant Revenue Secretary Michael S. Hodges said the Tax Fairness Act of 1989, was designed "to enhance the simplicity and fairness of the state income tax."

"What it does is to adopt the federal taxable income as the starting point for a taxpayer to use in calculating his state income tax liability," he said.

"The taxpayer would first complete his federal return and using information from that return prepare his state income tax return, which should make it simpler and easier to prepare."

Dog Owner Faces Charge In Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — A Winston-Salem man who has been defending his two dogs against charges they killed a jogger has himself been charged in connection with the death.

Thomas E. Powell was charged with manslaughter Thursday in connection with the death of Hoke Lane Prevette who was killed by dogs Oct. 20 on a residential sidewalk in Winston-Salem, officials say.

Legal experts said they believed

Powell is the first person in North Carolina to be charged in connection to a death allegedly committed by pets.

"I don't know what will happen next, but we're going to put the thing through the process and see what shakes out," said Forsyth County District Attorney Warren Sparrow.

Prevette's body was found on a lawn after he failed to return from his regular exercise run the night of Oct. 20. The state medical examiner ruled he died of bites and puncture wounds caused by dogs.

Conviction

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Daniel Furman Richardson has been found guilty of rape and murder in the death of a 59-year-old Union Memorial Hospital housekeeper.

The jury found Richardson guilty Thursday of common-law robbery, first-degree rape and first-degree murder in the May 3 rape of Gladys Mae Byrum in the hospital's housekeeping department.

The verdict came in after two days and about seven hours of deliberation.

Departures

GREENSBORO (AP) — The president of Oak Ridge Military Academy and the chief Junior ROTC instructor at the private prep school have announced they will leave at the end of the school year.

The two, Col. William M. Crabbe Jr. and Sgt. Maj. Marvin Woodard, are at the center of a controversy that erupted last week after Crabbe, the academy's president, fired the school's popular commandant, who alleged financial misdeeds at the cadet store.

Both Crabbe and Woodard have denied any wrongdoing.

Tourism Up

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The fall colors haven't been as brilliant this year in the western North Carolina mountains, but that hasn't slowed down the flood of tourists, officials said.

The National Park Service estimated the number of visitors on the Blue Ridge Parkway in North Carolina last month was up 12.3 percent over the same period in 1988. That's an increase of 166,000 people based on a formula of 2½ people per car.

Park Service spokesman Jim Ryan said the increase in visitors in North Carolina was offset by a decline on the parkway's section in Virginia.

Gravel Suit

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Robinsville couple has filed a $400,000 claim against the Department of Transportation for allegedly leaving gravel on U.S. 19, causing their pickup truck to slide into a tractor-trailer rig and severely injuring members of their family.

The state tort claim, which in essence is a lawsuit against the state, was filed Thursday with the North Carolina Industrial Commission by Sylva attorney James Spiro.

According to the claim, Rita Eller and her two children, Dustin, 6, and Shelley, 12, were traveling south on U.S. 19 between Tipton and Andrews in a 1987 pickup truck about 6:20 p.m. on Oct. 7, 1988, when the accident took place.

Methodist Bishops

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — A worldwide council of Methodist bishops — including the head of East German church members — called for a "willingness of change" among eastern bloc leaders.

But the 100-member group stopped short of endorsing the western flight that escalated with Thursday's opening of all East German borders.

"We feel compassion with those who leave because we know there are reasons," Bishop Rudiger Minor, head of 26,000 United Methodist Church members in East Germany, said Thursday.

School Fleas

BURNSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fleas that tried to gobble up two Burnsville Elementary School classrooms in 1987 have reappeared in the same rooms. And school authorities are scratching their heads as to how and why.

"It's really a pretty strange thing down there," Yancey County Superintendent Vernon Chapman said. "For whatever reason, they've come back again."

Justices Uphold Court Districts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — In a setback for Gov. Jim Martin, the N.C. Supreme Court ruled that the General Assembly was within its authority when it redrew Superior Court districts to increase the number of black judges.

In an unanimous ruling, the court rejected Martin's challenge to key parts of the measure. The Republican governor had accused the Democratic-controlled legislature of finagling districts, elections and terms of office to benefit Democratic incumbents.

"The decision vindicates the legislature first of all in terms of its objectives and good-faith intentions," said assistant state attorney general James M. Wallace. "I think it's good for the judiciary, I think it's good for the electoral system, and it feels great."

Defending the action, the state Attorney General's Office contended that the legislature did not violate the state constitution, but that in any event, the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965 required the changes.

The legislative action, enacted in 1987, created 11 judgeships in non-white districts and settled a voting-rights suit in federal court. Until then, only two blacks had been elected to Superior Court judgeships in this century in North Carolina.

The justices sided with the legislature on every count, rejecting Martin's contention that legislators had violated the constitution by extending nine judges' terms, assigning judges to districts from which they had not been elected, dividing large counties into separate judicial districts and imposing residency requirements on candidates.

Panel Says AIDS Tests Will Continue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE — With an estimated 18,000 North Carolinians unaware they carry the AIDS virus, health officials have concluded that the best way to help stem the spread of the disease is to continue anonymous AIDS testing.

The state Health Service Commission on Thursday approved the continuation of the free anonymous testing for the AIDS virus at local health departments.

The commission, a rule-making body, sided unanimously with a string of health care professionals and AIDS activists who said that those at high risk of contracting the Human Immunodeficiency Virus which causes AIDS would not get tested if they had to give their names.

"It's critical to have a way to identify people early on, but many people are afraid to get HIV testing," said Dr. Darlyn Dealy, an Asheville physician who treats AIDS patients.

But representatives of the Gov. Jim Martin administration and some other state officials argued that the names of people infected with the deadly virus should be reported to state health officials.

George Rudy of the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources urged the commission to consider the intent of a new law which makes AIDS a disease that must be reported to the state.

Rudy said the law mandates confidential testing in which names of AIDS-infected people would be reported but kept secret.

"The legislature clearly understood and believed that HIV infection would become reportable at the same time as are all reportable communicable disease and conditions in North Carolina," Rudy read from a statement from Martin.

But commissioners argued that the law does not necessitate attaching names to numbers.

"Regardless of what the legislature's response or the governor's response will be, that has nothing to do with my voting my conscience as a health-care provider," said Dr. George Brown, a member of the commission and a family physician from Haywood County.

Colleges Adopt Committee Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Members of the North Carolina Board of Community Colleges voted Thursday to form standing committees to oversee matters of finance, academic programs, legislation, and policy.

The decision to adopt a committee structure was urged by a 12-member task force that had spent five months studying the way the campuses are governed. The panel was composed equally of community college trustees, campus presidents, members of the state board, and representatives of the state Department of Community Colleges.

Among their conclusions, which were presented at Thursday's meeting of the state Board of Community Colleges, was that the board had delegated too much authority to its staff.

Currently, all 20 board members meet as one "committee of the whole" to vote on staff recommendations on matters of policy, programs and finances.

Proponents of the committee structure said it would strengthen the board's oversight of policy decisions by giving members an in-depth understanding of specific issues.

But others warned that dividing the board into committees might have the opposite effect and actually narrow board members' understanding of the full range of issues facing the campuses.

Nevertheless, the committee structure was approved with an understanding that the committees could be disbanded if they hadn't had the desired effect by November 1990.

Robert Scott, president of the community college system, said he had no objection to his board's desire to play a more active role in policy-making through a committee system.

War Tales Abound As Old Soldiers Relive The Past

By Kelly P. Kissel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BARBOURSVILLE, W.Va. — Old soldiers die, but they never fade away at the old soldiers' home, where they celebrate Veterans Day with memories of glory past and make no apologies for the place they live.

"This is my home and I'm proud of it," says Lawson G. Taylor, 71, a two-year resident of the Barbourville Veterans Home. "I won $3 in bingo last night."

Barbourville is one of many such homes in West Virginia where veterans, often rebuilding lives broken by injuries and rejection, try to put things back together and relive tales of old battles.

West Virginia sent more soldiers per capita to the Korean War than any other state and the state's casualty rate in Vietnam was the highest in the nation, 28.8 per 100,000 residents, according to federal statistics.

Some say the state's traditionally poor economy pushes more soldiers to war; others attribute the figures to a fighting spirit among people whose ancestors conquered rugged terrain and seceded from Virginia during the Civil War.

"West Virginia is a very patriotic state," Secretary of State Ken Hechler said. "We have a lot of hunters who are very good in the use of guns. A few of them join up because of the tough times at home."

West Virginia officials say the state hasn't received a fair return on its investment. While the state's residents paid $1.59 billion in federal taxes that went toward defense spending in 1987, only $322 million in defense-related work was funneled back to the state, according to a study by Employment Research Associates.

"West Virginia is first in war, first in peace and last in the hearts of the Pentagon," Hechler said.

But Barbourville residents say they aren't bitter, and draw from a healthy reservoir of patriotism even when it isn't Veterans Day, which will be observed on Saturday.

"If we ever have a war on our shores, the enemy will be in trouble," said David Hall, a 41-year-old Vietnam veteran and resident of the home. "If they got as far as West Virginia, they wouldn't get much farther."

"War was just something that had to be done. We had a man who told us what to do and we did it," said Taylor, a World War II veteran. "I've never talked to a West Virginian who came back and said he was sorry he went."

About 115 veterans live in the Barbourville home, a former state hospital that was renovated in 1975. The average stay is 16 months and residents double, triple- or quadruple-up in cramped quarters formerly used by mental patients.

The library is stocked with American history books and newspapers and the place is festooned with enough red, white and blue to look like victory for an enterprising flagmaker. Thick clouds of cigarette smoke seem to hang everywhere.

There's little anger toward those who fled to Canada to avoid the Vietnam draft and those who protested the war.

"My choice was to enlist and go to war," Hall said. "Those who left for other countries, they have to live with themselves."

But mention the flag — and burning it — and it sets off a torrent of comment about "kids" who don't know enough to respect it and the ideals it stands for.

"When you are in the services, when you see the flag go up the pole you get a feeling in your body. Chills go up your spine. You still get that feeling," said Jack Messenger, 58, a Korean War veteran who said he got tired of living alone and moved into the home a month ago.

Stewart Breeding, 56, said most people learn about war through pictures, movies and news accounts — not by living through it.

"If he goes to a war zone and sees what we went through, he wouldn't go to that," Breeding said of the flag burners.

"I don't believe in burning the flag, but I don't believe in beating the stuff out of a man on the steps of the Capitol," Hall said. "I'd want to prevent a man from burning the flag and prevent a man from getting beat up for burning it."

Philippine Bases

Under the pact, the United States maintains Clark Air Base, the Subic Bay Naval Base and four other smaller U.S. facilities in exchange for about $480 million in annual aid. The bases employ nearly 79,000 Filipinos who earn a total of $100 million a year.

The four other smaller U.S. facilities are:

■ Camp John Hay: Situated in Baguio City, 130 miles north of Manila, this garrison is used as a rest and recreation station for U.S. military and civilian employees in the Philippines.

■ San Miguel Communication Station: This facility in Zambales province is part of the Navy's world-wide operations monitoring Soviet satellite launches and naval activity.

■ Wallace Air Station: In La Union province of Luzon, the air station operates an air defense and radar surveillance network protecting the Philippines and U.S. garrisons from attack. It includes a Voice of America transmitter that relays broadcasts in East Asia.

TV Bomb Hurts Boys

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUFFALO, W.Va. — Two youths inspired by a television show created a bomb using a shotgun shell and a pipe, and both lost fingers when the device exploded in their hands, police said.

"They told us they'd watched that show 'MacGyver' recently and they wanted to try and build one like they'd seen on there and set it off in a field," state trooper S.A. Lawrence said.

Kenneth Price, 19, and Mark Paul, 11, were in fair condition at Charleston Area Medical Center's Women & Children's Hospital, nursing supervisor Darla Brumfield said Thursday. Price also received facial burns in Wednesday's accident.

Paul's father, Edward, drove the boys to the hospital, said Lawrence.

The youths removed the shell's pellets and powder and placed the material inside the pipe. They set off the explosion by drilling a hole in the pipe to try to make room for a fuse.

Bush Confident U.S. Will Keep Bases In Philippines

By Terence Hunt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Philippine President Corason Aquino is not dropping any clues about the fate of U.S. military bases in her country but President Bush says he's confident an agreement will be reached for a "long-term security partnership."

Bush was effusive in his praise for Mrs. Aquino during meetings at the White House on Thursday despite her reluctance to discuss continued U.S. access to Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base.

"From Main Street to Wall Street, America loves the Philippines. And America loves Cory Aquino," Bush said in welcoming remarks.

"You deserve our help and you will get it. I pledge our continuing assistance to your government, and that means security assistance as well as aid to economic development," Bush said. "And it means cooperating in your important debt-reduction programs."

The future of the two massive bases is the most important — and most controversial — issue on the U.S.-Philippine agenda.

Leases for the facilities expire in September 1991, and the United States regards them as a vital for projecting American military power throughout Southeast Asian sea lanes and for stability in the Pacific. They serve as a counterpoint to Soviet naval forces based in Vietnam.

Mrs. Aquino faces pressure at home to end the U.S. access. An influential minority of Filipinos view the continued U.S. military presence as an infringement on Philippine sovereignty and a vestige of the former U.S. colonial administration.

Before leaving Washington today, Mrs. Aquino planned to meet with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. Then, she was heading to Dallas to meet with officials of the large retailing chain, J.C. Penney, a major importer of Philippine products.

In a toast at a state dinner Thursday night, Bush lauded her "monumental" political and economic accomplishments and said her country's revolution had inspired "freedom-loving people everywhere."

Mrs. Aquino, in a poignant reply, said, "The Philippines is a small country and cannot claim to affect directly events beyond its borders; certainly not across half the world in Europe."

But, after reciting the "startling" changes underway in the East Bloc, she said: "Yet it is not too much to say that the images of heroism spawned by our people power revolution gave dominated peoples throughout the world a glimpse of certain possibilities that they are now exploring — the possibility, for example, that armor and infantry do not exhaust the varieties of power."

Evolutionists, Creationists Agree California Policy Is Falling Short

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Supporters of a new state policy to strengthen the teaching of evolution in the nation's largest public school system say it was diluted to please religious fundamentalists.

But a minister said the new science education guidelines' censored teaching of the biblical theory of the origin of life.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig, who helped write the guidelines, said Thursday they clearly say that evolution — not creationism — will be taught to Sacramento's 4.6 million public school students.

"This is a much stronger statement than was in place before," Honig said after the state Board of Education unanimously adopted the policy. "This now states for the first time evolution will be taught in its entirety and it's not controversial."

The Rev. Louis Sheldon of the Traditional Values Coalition, an opponent of the policy, said it censors creationism.

"It isn't the state's role to be hostile to religion," Sheldon said. "It is to be accommodating."

Sheldon cited as particularly offensive the sentence in the policy that says: "The particular case of 'creation science' or 'scientific creationism' has been thoroughly studied and rejected by the leading scientific societies as qualifying as a scientific explanation."

The Board of Education's 9-0 vote sets up the guidelines only as recommendations to local school boards, which mandate course content. But such standards historically have influenced the local panels and textbook publishers throughout the nation.

The vote climaxed months of dispute, the latest round in the long struggle between educators and civil libertarians over evolution vs. creation.

Honig maintained that the changes did not weaken the evolution language, but Michael Hudson of the civil libertarian group People for the American Way said the language "leaves the door open to controversy."

The policy "is a 90 percent victory for science," he said. "It is frustrating that the state Board of Education was compelled to weaken the evolution coverage to appease the religious right."

Firemen battle flames in Smyrna, Ga., apartments hit by a Navy jet fighter Thursday night

Navy Jet Crashes Into Apartments

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SMYRNA, Ga. — Searchers picked through the rubble of a suburban Atlanta apartment complex today, looking for three people still missing after a Navy jet fighter exploded and slammed into the buildings, setting off huge fires.

Four people were injured, including the pilot of the A-7E Corsair II who ejected just before the crash Thursday evening, and a woman and her 5-year-old child who were critically burned.

The search for victims was delayed by intense heat but everyone in the two most seriously damaged buildings was accounted for, and no bodies were found in nine of 12 other apartments in another building, said John Patterson, the Cobb County emergency management director.

Police officer Frank Durrance said this morning that three people were unaccounted for in what remained of the other three apartments of the Pine Village Apartment Complex. About 50 people were taking part in the search this morning, police said.

Two other people, originally listed as missing, turned up early this morning, Durrance said.

"My gut feeling is there might be some people in there," said Cobb County Medical Examiner Joe Burton. "If there are no fatalities, I'd call it somewhat of a miracle."

About 30 people were left homeless by the crash, which occurred about 6:30 p.m. It took firefighters two hours to extinguish the blaze.

"My first officer on the scene said he heard screams, but the building was engulfed in flames and he couldn't get in," said Smyrna Police Lt. J.L. Martin.

The unarmed A-7E Corsair II crashed 2.5 miles short of the runway at the Dobbins Air Force Base, 15 miles north of Atlanta, where the pilot was attempting to land, said Navy spokesman Kerry Honore.

The Navy today identified the pilot as reservist Lt. Cmdr. Robert M. Conlyn Jr. of Marietta, a veteran pilot both for the Naval Reserve and Delta Air Lines.

He was in critical condition after undergoing surgery late Thursday night at Kennestone Hospital, said hospital official Bill Ballew.

A witness, Terry Scott, said he saw the pilot's parachute deploy about 100 feet above the ground. The pilot plunged into a street, where he was given cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

"I saw the plane pop and all the lights go off," said Charles Feather, a maintenance supervisor at an adjacent apartment complex who said he helped a pregnant woman and her child escape the burning building.

"I found the baby girl, and she was burnt," he said. "Then I found the pregnant woman, and the paramedics showed up."

Navy Bombs Fell On Nevada

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RENO, Nev. — Navy pilots accidentally dropped hundreds of bombs for years outside a military bombing range in central Nevada, and state officials are angry they never were told about it.

Navy officials, in a sweep that began Oct. 30 and should be completed by mid-November, have found some bombs on public lands used by hunters, hikers and off-road-vehicle enthusiasts.

The Navy has recovered up to 2,000 live and dead bombs dropped outside the 22,000-acre bombing range at Fallon Naval Air Station.

"I'm just appalled this has occurred," Gov. Bob Miller said Thursday.

He called it the latest in a "string of broken promises from the Navy."

"There is absolutely no reason why we cannot expect them to stay within the boundaries that were given them," Miller said.

Miller ordered the closure of state

Route 839, an 18-mile road that parallels Navy bombing areas starting 60 miles east of Reno.

He also said the Bureau of Land Management agreed to his request to close 35,000 acres of public land surrounding the ranges until the Navy completes its cleanup.

Citizen Alert called for an indefinite halt to bombing at Fallon pending an investigation into why the bombs were allowed to fall outside the 22,000-acre range for years without public knowledge.

Democrats Eye Convention Site

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Five cities are making their pitches to host the 1992 Democratic National Convention and party chairman Ron Brown says the decision will be based on facilities, not electoral politics.

A selection committee of the Democratic National Committee was finishing a two-day meeting today to hear formal presentations from the five cities in the running.

They are Cleveland, with its suburb of Brook Park, Ohio;

Detroit; Houston; New Orleans; and New York.

The panel may pare the list to three or four and the members will visit those finalists.

But Brown said he would regard the committee's final choice only as a recommendation and that he will make the final decision.

"I want a city that has facilities that will allow us to have a first-class convention, that will be able to nominate the next president of the United States," Brown said. "It is principally what kind of facilities, what kind of financial package, the local support that we're going to have.

"There has been no decision made yet on where this convention is going to be," Brown told the committee. "It is truly an open process."

Seattle, Miami and Atlanta have withdrawn their bids. Several other major cities, including Los Angeles, San Francisco, Dallas and Chicago, declined to make a bid.

The Democrats met last year in Atlanta and the Republicans met in New Orleans.

Wall Stays Open

the wall," the crowd shouted, but the 75-year-old Brandt didn't oblige.

East and West Berliners joined in dancing atop the Berlin Wall during the celebrations that began Thursday night and lasted into today. More than 50,000 East Berliners crossed into West Berlin during the night, said the West German radio station Sender Fries Berlin. Only about 1,000 of them planned to stay, the radio said.

Today, lines of East Berliners waited at control points to enter West Berlin, and Communist border guards were rapidly handing out visas. The visas were required as of this morning for those wanting only to visit.

Most were obviously just visiting rather emigrating, exulting in their sudden new freedom to travel to the other side of the monolithic wall.

Border guards allowed many East Germans over the border after merely stamping their identity papers. Some didn't even require that, and guards from both countries stood together at the border.

"The sun is shining, and the people are in a good mood," said a smiling, husky East German guard today at the Invalidenstrasse crossing of the Berlin Wall.

Many people cried as they embraced relatives they hadn't seen in decades. Others rushed to West Berlin department stores to buy cosmetics and other goods scarce in the East bloc.

About 9,000 East Germans crossed into the West German states of Lower Saxony, Hesse and Schleswig-Holstein during the night, border police said today. Most of them as well planned to return.

West German television showed East Germans crossing this morning into Lower Saxony at the Duderstadt border control point.

"It was so simple to come over," one young East German said. "The feeling is just indescribable."

East Germany's sudden decision to open the borders came at a Central Committee meeting Thursday and followed a dizzying series of reforms announced by Krenz.

Guenther Schabowski, a member of the ruling Politburo, announced the borders were being opened until a law is passed allowing East Germans greater freedom of travel. He did not say when the law would be passed.

In Bonn, jubilant West German lawmakers, many shaking with emotion, spontaneously stood to sing the national anthem during a hastily called session of the lower house of Parliament.

East Berlin Native At ECU Finds Changes In E. Germany 'Exciting'

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Dr. Bodo Nischan, a native East Berliner who has lived in Greenville for 20 years, says he finds the dramatic day-by-day political developments in East Germany "exciting and emotional."

East German officials decided Thursday to let their citizens pass through the Berlin Wall in an attempt to stem the flow of people fleeing to the West.

Nischan, a professor of history at East Carolina University who teaches Renaissance, Reformation and intellectual history, lived in what is now East Berlin until he left at the age of 17.

Foremost, Nischan said, the exodus "confirms that people cannot be forever be suppressed, denied freedom. You can't keep people in prison forever. Sooner or later they will reassert themselves. That's happening now in East Germany."

Discussing the developments that might ensue after the present exultation gives way to realities and future solutions, Nischan said he feels that one basic issue, that of the unification of the two Germanys, "must be a well thought out, gradual process."

"I really don't think the immediate unification of the two Germanys is the basic issue at this moment. From my contacts with people in Germany, I am convinced that above all, East Germans and East Berliners want an opportunity to have a democratic, elected government, with the idea of reunification to come down the road."

As a longtime student of European and German history, Nischan said he feels caution is vital. "For one thing, I have real doubts as to whether other European nations want to face the prospect of a unified, powerful Germany in the immediate future. In fact, I'd say unification now would be unacceptable to both the East and the West."

Nischan said he thinks that "unification can only be realized in the context of a unified European community. For one thing, other Europeans remember what happened to them from a larger, more powerful Germany in World War I and World War II. These things are not easily forgotten."

Another factor, Nischan said, "is that I and many others are not sure West Germans and West Berliners want to accept unification too soon. After all, Germans in the western sectors have a very high standard of living. The post-World War II generation has grown up accustomed to things East Germans do not have, and I think they are not willing to make many sacrifices that would be involved in unification at an early date."

The Berlin Wall, long the major symbol of a divided Germany, "will come down," Nischan said he believes. "Unless the situation is unexpectedly reversed and returns again to totalitarian dictates, there is no longer a need for the wall. However," he said, "I hope that part of the wall will remain as a commemoration, a reminder of the long years of depression of the cold war."

From a broader viewpoint, Nischan said "the Russians could not possibly accept at this time a united Germany allied with NATO. East Germany has been the linchpin in the Warsaw Pact. The loss of East Germany from the Warsaw Pact would create a chaotic atmosphere."

"Unification now would result in dramatic, even traumatic realignments of alliances, of military commitments not easily resolved. Faced with such sudden changes, there would naturally be frictions and possible widespread repercussions based on hasty, unwise decisions."

Nischan said he hopes that "the majority of East Germans will be willing to remain in the East. If too many leave, particularly people essential to any country's progress, such as teachers and doctors, East Germany can soon become destabilized, which will create a very bad situation."

"What many people may not realize," he said, "is that East Germans have the highest standard of living of any Eastern Bloc country. That could change quickly if too many leave."

Through the years, Nischan and his German-born wife, Gerda, a native of the Rhineland area of Germany, have visited Germany and have been in close touch with friends, relatives and professionals in their fields, he said.

Students March

and concerts went too late and lasted too long, he said.

But the committee agreed that university officials and city police were able to control problems with the permit system, and recommended only stricter enforcement of the existing ordinance, Speier said.

The City Council ignored that when it voted Oct. 23 to abolish the permits, he said. "They totally disregarded the committee's recommendations."

Mayor-elect Nancy M. Jenkins was not at the march and could not be reached for comment today. But in an interview Tuesday with The Daily Reflector, Ms. Jenkins said she wants the council to reconsider its decision to abolish the permits. "I would forcefully suggest to the council that we do this," she said.

The march began on schedule at 3:30 p.m. Members of the crowd began yelling loudly as they marched through the campus entrance onto Fifth Street. As they marched, they chanted "E-C-U" and waved their fists in the air.

Many marchers wore purple clothes or armbands. Others had shirts with the names of fraternities or sororities on them. Some of the signs they carried read, "Bill of Rights vs. Greenville City Council," and "Greenville without ECU is like Halloween without a party."

Almost 15 minutes after the march started, the marchers were still going through the gate. Police estimated the crowd at 1,500.

Roakes said the turnout was more than he expected, describing it as "absolutely fantastic."

A small crowd greeted the marchers as they came downtown, some of them students who waved signs and shouted. Greenville police officers watched silently at every intersection as they passed.

At city hall, Roakes gave Knowles the stack of petitions containing more than 1,600 signatures. He said many business owners and local residents had signed the petitions.

"Hopefully we can get noise permits back at ECU and Greenville," Roakes told the cheering crowd assembled in a parking lot beside City Hall.

Knowles told the crowd he was pleased by the orderly demonstration. "You have shown maturity and responsibility in your actions," he said. "I really appreciate that."

The petitions will be presented to the City Council on Monday, Knowles said. He said he expects it to be one of the first items the newly elected council will consider after taking office Dec. 14.

Votes

Atry, received 3,048 votes.

The official canvass also confirmed the published results of the two charter amendments on Tuesday's ballot. Both proposals were defeated.

The proposal to allow the mayor a vote on all issues before the council was defeated 5,130 to 2,561, according to the official count.

Voting by precincts on the proposal mirrored the results of the mayor's contest, with the precincts that supported Carter also giving the nod to the charter change.

Voters rejected the proposal to have council members four-year terms in office, voting 5,930 to 2,570 to keep the present system of two-year terms. The proposed change took a sound beating in all precincts, unlike the mayor's vote.

Facts About The

BIBLE

BY
LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

DAVID AND SAUL

SPEAKING FROM THE SAFETY OF A HIGH CLIFF, DAVID SHOWS KING SAUL HE COULD HAVE KILLED HIM DURING THE NIGHT AS HE SLEPT IN HIS CAMP...

FOR I AND MY SERVANT TOOK THY SPEAR AND BOTTLE FROM THY SIDE AS THOU DIDST LIE SLEEPING!

BLESSED BE THOU, MY SON DAVID, THOU SHALT DO GREAT THINGS AND SHALL PREVAIL!

AND AS DAVID WATCHES SAUL AND HIS TROOPS DEPART, HE DOES NOT KNOW THAT NEVER WILL HE SPEAK TO HIS KING OR SEE HIM ALIVE AGAIN, FOR SAUL AT LAST HAS ENDED HIS PURSUIT OF DAVID. ALL OF WHICH HAS BEEN RECORDED IN I SAMUEL CHAPTER 26

THE MEN DID NOT GUARD THEE WELL!

NOW, AS I TREATED THY LIFE, LET THOU, THEN, TREAT MY LIFE - AND CONTINUE NOT THIS PURSUIT TO KILL ME!

Next Week A NEW STORY!

Super Commuters Travel Long Distances To Work

By Jesus Sanchez
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Doug Watson was making good time on his morning commute. His bright red Subaru slipped its way like a speeding toboggan down the twisting mountain roads near his Lake Arrowhead, Calif., home.

But after Watson descended into the San Bernardino flatlands, the brilliant Alpine sunshine gave way to a dishwater-colored haze and a traffic jam on the transition to southbound U.S. 215. "The pretty part is over," said the 49-year-old Los Angeles police captain.

He was right. Unexpected knots of traffic that early September day would stretch Watson's already lengthy drive to his downtown Los Angeles office — a 92-mile, nearly two-hour trip that would make even the most traffic-hardened Southern Californian wince.

Frustrated by big city tensions and high costs, growing numbers of people living in major U.S. metropolitan areas appear to be chasing more affordable housing and less congested confines on the suburban frontier. In fact, a small but hardy breed of marathon motorists, dubbed "super commuters," have emerged who drive 100 or more miles to work.

By and large, long-distance commuters would gladly switch jobs to work closer to their homes in rustic or newly developed areas.

But jobs — particularly higher-paying professional and skilled positions — are not as plentiful as cheap housing in the far-flung suburbs. And employers, for their part, have seen their ranks of long-distance commuters swell and have begun to worry about these workers' well-being and on-the-job performance.

Driving to work in Los Angeles and Orange Counties from bedroom boom towns such as Lancaster in the high desert or Moreno Valley in Riverside County often means spending a minimum of two to three hours on the road a day under ideal conditions. Congestion, accidents and bad weather can easily add an hour or two to normal drive times — putting long-distance commuters behind the wheel for nearly one-third of their waking hours.

Elsewhere, "There are people who are moving to places like the Poconos out in Pennsylvania and commuting through the state of New Jersey to get to New York," said Martin Wachs, a University of California, Los Angeles, professor of urban planning.

The benefits of suburban living, however, may force motorists into stressful work commutes that take a toll on their personal health, family life and daily schedules.

"I would love to coach little league with my kids, but it's too dark by the time I get home," said Norm Gookins, who leaves his Palmdale, Calif., home at 5:30 a.m. and returns about 12 hours later from his job in El Segundo 75 miles away. "We still have the weekends. That's one thing that commuting does, it makes the weekends sacred."

Far-flung commuters dream about bullet trains between distant suburbs and clogged urban centers and eagerly await the creation of company van pools and car pools. But either by choice or circumstance, they continue to drive worn cars — packing away cookies to munch on and books-on-tape to pass the time — and endure daily journeys most people only make as weekend trips.

"I equate this drive to something like Road Warrior," said Steve Dreben of Del Mar, Calif., who drives 164 miles round-trip between his home and job at McDonnell Douglas in Huntington Beach.

"I've seen railroad tracks burning up," Dreben said. "I've seen people who tried to change their tires get killed. I see the Border Patrol chasing people through the Marine base."

However, traffic congestion — not distance — is the most likely factor to drive endurance commuters up the wall and off the freeway.

Nearly an hour had passed since Watson had begun his morning commute when he whizzed by a sign along the eastbound San Bernardino Freeway that read "Los Angeles 48 Miles."

The fast lane was clear and Watson's six-week-old Subaru — its odometer already reading more than 5,700 miles — raced through Fontana and Rancho Cucamonga where the skeletons of houses under construction dotted the landscape. The homes of future commuters.

Around Montclair, Watson suddenly hit the brakes and came to a dead stop. "This little jam up here is bad news," he said of the delay that eventually added 15 minutes to his morning drive.

Later on, Watson, would be mired in intermittent traffic jams near Pomona, West Covina, El Monte and Boyle Heights that would build up and disperse like thunder showers.

It is a stop-and-go pattern that Watson, whose erratic work schedule prevents him from car pooling, has become accustomed to during the past two years. The drive is pretty mundane with a few exceptions, he says. "Sometimes there will be snow on the ground (in Lake Arrowhead) and it will be 80 degrees in town," Watson said. "As you drive down you start to shed clothes, turn off the heater and turn on the air conditioner."

Driving into the San Gabriel Valley, Watson switched his car radio from a news program to classical music. The gentle strains of violins flowed from the speakers as the Subaru came to a halt in the fast lane in West Covina.

Traffic began moving again and Watson finally pulled into a parking space at police headquarters in downtown Los Angeles at 9:21 a.m. — 2 hours and 8 minutes after he pulled out of his garage. The drive usually takes 1 hour and 45 minutes.

But Watson finds it hard to complain.

"It's something you chose to do," he said of the journey linking his Lake Arrowhead dream home and lifelong career. "You can't bitch to your boss or co-workers on how hard your life is when you make it that way."

As crazy as these kinds of commutes may seem, they make economic sense. While housing costs have risen sharply, transportation costs have risen more slowly and account for only about 12 percent of the family budget, says Wachs at UCLA.

Furthermore, the newer suburbs seem distant from the congestion, crime and poor schools associated with the metropolitan area. "Those with families who worry about the quality of schools and neighborhoods are increasingly accepting longer commutes," said Wachs.

Wachs is troubled, however, by an element that might be driving residents farther out. "Among the things that are at work are racial and ethnic prejudices," Wachs said. "They don't want to be around people who they see as unattractive racial minorities."

Designers See Women In Soft Colors

By Sujata Banerjee
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

So, who is the woman of the '90s? She's into comfort, nostalgia and soft, pretty color. That's what American designers are banking on as they present the first collections for the new decade.

A heady, romantic feeling blows through spring fashion that's as soft as its fabrics: cotton, silk and organza. Designer Carolynne Roehm expresses the sentiment well, calling her collection of luxurious crepe dresses "the modern version of romance."

"Women are ready to look and feel pretty and feminine again," writes Roehm. But is romance appropriate in the office? This surely will concern women who want to wear fashion to work rather than moonlit verandas.

The good news is work-worthy fashion does exist in a softer form. Stodgy, structured business suits in power colors like red and navy and black are on the wane. Look for, instead, gently draped coats and short skirts in the hues of Jordan almonds. And on the weekend, look for well-loved sportswear shapes such as golf jackets and bermuda shorts reinterpreted in fabrics that are bliss to touch. When all's said and done, a little softness never hurt anybody. Here are some of the major trends for spring.

— Swing Time: Fluid trapeze and duster coats are the billowy, chic silhouette for spring. Oscar de la Renta's trapeze raincoat in apricot silk faille, and trapeze coats at Carolynne Roehm and Carolina Herrera prove that even ladies can be swingers.

— Frilled To Be Here: Lace is everywhere, from simple scallops at the edge of a suit to all-lace dresses and even lace jeans. Crocheted lace and Chantilly lace are lovely, as well as subtler French knotting on the plackets of shirts.

— Keep Your Shirt On: The news in jackets is they look like big guys' shirts. The backs of jackets at Rebecca Moses and Calvin Klein fall straight to the hip, like a tailored shirt. Newcomer Richard Mishaan presents light "shirt blazers" in cotton that looks crisp and comfortable.

— Sarong, So Right: Bill Blass wraps sarong shapes around pants, and others continue the draped and tied fashion for skirts. Some of the most innovative were presented by a husband-wife design team called Finis, who combined gingham and African graphics for their fun skirts.

— Shoulder To Shoulder: It's time to toss out the shoulder pads, as silhouettes go from boxy. Darts at the bust, back and hip come in flowery prints or feminine solid colors. Among the prettiest: Jennifer George's pale blue sheath, and Adrienne Vittadini's sexy version in white. The chemise dress shares the same retro-chic, but its roominess accommodates more figure types.

With cap or no sleeves at all, the chemise drops straight to just above the knee.

— Bosom Friends: The bust is receiving lavish attention, with drapey, low necklines on slip dresses at Shamask and sequined bra tops at Bob Mackie, to be worn with a matching slim mini skirt. Richard Mishaan, presenting his first collection, showed navy and white and orange and white striped cotton jumpsuits with bra cups on the outside. Laura Marolagos presents gorgeous, empire waist evening gowns that highlight the bosom, then flow gently to the floor in a cocoon shape.

— Love Triangles: The flared tunic cuts a timeless silhouette. The shape can be as eastern and elegant as a long, asymmetrical silk crepe tunic worn over a slim column skirt for evening by Oscar de la Renta, or as casual as a triangular big shirt from Michael Leva topping a flirty, flared, pleated mini.

— Holiday In Capri: Finally, a pant shape that does not overwhelm with yards and yards of fabric! Clinging legging style pants, slim linen trousers are all dandy, and three cheers for the slinky, calf-length to-reador pant by Jennifer George.

— Natural Beauty: The tranquil colors of spring are straight from the sky, seas and garden. Faded blue, off-green, vibrant orange, and soft apricot are the biggies, along with classic white, beige and khaki.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — As energy costs have risen, so have the number of American firms looking to generate their own power.

One such company is R.J. Reynolds whose utility plants provide electricity, steam, air conditioning and compressed air for its plants and offices.

It says that each day its utilities can produce:

— Enough electricity to provide total energy needs for 81,000 homes.

Grandmother Can't Accept Way Of Life

Dear Abby: I am a female graduate student at a large university. I share an apartment with a male law student. We are not sexually involved with each other; he has a girlfriend and I date a special fellow. Our apartment has two bedrooms, two baths and a spacious living room, dining room and kitchen. It's ideally located, and neither one of us could afford to pay the rent alone.

The problem is my grandmother. She thinks it's terrible that I am "living with" a man and she refuses to believe that we aren't sleeping together. I have told her there is nothing romantic going on between us, but she doesn't believe me. She's from the old country, and there's no changing her mind. Fortunately, my parents do not share her point of view.

Now, here's where you come in. "Granny" reads your column every day and thinks you have the wisdom of Solomon. She also credits you with helping her to read English. She says when she came to this country from Finland 21 years ago, she went to night school to learn English, and her teacher used your column as a teaching tool because it was easy to read and it also reflected the behavior of the American people.

So, Abby, maybe if Granny sees this letter in your column, she'll be more accepting of my lifestyle. Thank you. — Anonymous

Dear Anonymous: Here's your letter. I hope it helps.

Dear Abby: Last Friday night, my ex-wife informed our two daughters — ages 16 and 18 — that she needed to have her house to herself to do some entertaining, so they had to be out by 7:30 p.m.

The 18-year-old had to wait in a Burger King for an hour and a half before she could join a friend still at work to go on to a party.

The 16-year-old had two engagements that called for different types of clothing; finding the door locked at 9:30 p.m., she had to attend the second engagement inappropriately dressed and feeling very out of place. When she arrived home at midnight, she found doors still locked and had to climb in through a window!

Dear Abby

I live 1,500 miles away, so I wasn't able to come to the rescue. I am hoping your comments on my ex-wife's behavior might persuade her to think twice before she pulls such a stunt again. — Frank(ly) Ticked Off In California

Dear Frank(ly): Don't depend on a few lines in my column to change your ex-wife's behavior. A mother who would lock her children out of the house because she wanted to do some "entertaining" may not be an unfit mother, but she certainly behaved like one in this instance.

Perhaps a few words from your attorney reminding your "ex" of her custodial responsibilities might be more effective than anything I could say. It's worth a try.

Dear Abby: Right after I announced my engagement, the girls at the office gave me a shower, and someone gave me your book, "Dear Abby on Planning Your Wedding." I don't know what I would have done without it. It really helped me a lot. First, it encouraged me to have the kind of wedding I wanted — not the kind my mother or future mother-in-law thought I should have.

Surprise, surprise! When I told my future mother-in-law I wanted to get married in a suit, I thought she'd have a fit, but instead she said, "I wanted to get married in a suit, too, but my mother wouldn't let me!"

Thanks, Abby! — Love Heidi

Little Expected From Latest Debate On Capital Gains Tax

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Opponents of a capital gains tax reduction say new debate set in Congress is merely the "death throes" for the year for President Bush's tax cut proposal.

The House took the first step in the new round of debate Thursday, repassing without debate or dissent the same capital gains cut it had approved in September as part of a deficit-reduction bill.

But House and Senate leaders say the new debate will only put the issue to rest for the year.

"This is just part of the death throes of capital gains," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Only Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, spoke on the bill Thursday. "It removes this issue as an impediment to moving forward on budget reconciliation (deficit reduction) and other important matters," he said.

Republicans will offer their own version of a capital gains cut in the Senate and the issue will be debated for a day or two. There likely will be two efforts to shut off debate on the bill. Although Republicans say most senators favor a cut, it is generally agreed backers will be unable to muster the 60 votes required to force a final vote.

If, as expected, the second vote to limit debate fails, capital gains will be dead for the year. Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas told reporters he would not attempt to attach the amendment to any other bill this year.

Republicans agreed last week to stop trying to attach the reduction to debt-ceiling and deficit-reduction legislation. But they want to have next week's debate to keep the issue in the public eye in hopes of building support.

Asked what chance the bill has of becoming law this year, Rostenkowski told reporters, "None."

Republicans say a cut in the tax on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of investments, would spur investment and create jobs. Democrats call it a tax cut for the wealthy and cite estimates that 80 percent of the benefit from a reduction would go to those with incomes more than $200,000 a year.

The cut approved by the House on Thursday would exclude from taxation 30 percent of the gains on assets sold before Dec. 31, 1991. After that, only gains resulting solely from inflation would be excluded.

Present law fully taxes capital gains at the same rates applied to wages and other income.

The Senate Republican plan would allow an exclusion based on how long an asset was held. If property was owned for more than a year, 5 percent of the profit would be excluded from tax. The excluded portion would increase by 5 percentage points each year, up to a maximum of seven years. Thus, 35 percent of the profit from the sale of an asset owned more than seven years would escape taxation.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The start of trading was delayed for at least an hour today at the New York and American stock exchanges by a fire that prevented the use of a key computer system.

A spokeswoman at the American Stock Exchange said a fire at the Securities Industry Automation Corp. in lower Manhattan's financial district made it impossible to process information, delaying the usual 9:30 a.m. opening of stock trading.

The Securities Industry Automation Corp., which is housed in a two-tower building of lower Manhattan, process trades for the exchanges.

The NYSE said it planned to open at 10:30 a.m. EDT.

No injuries were reported in the blaze.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 19.67 to 2,603.69.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE, with 649 up, 807 down and 489 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 143.39 million shares, against 170.15 million in the previous session.

Court Says CP&L Costs Too High

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Supreme Court ruled Thursday that North Carolina regulators had erred in figuring costs of the Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant, raising the possibility of rate cuts for consumers.

The court, ruling on appeals from 1987 and 1988 rate cases, said that Carolina Power & Light Co. should not have been allowed to earn a profit on $389 million in facilities at the plant 15 miles southwest of Raleigh.

But the court said the utility acted prudently in building the $3.9 billion Harris plant and it should be allowed to recover at least its initial investment.

The court's decisions could result in rate cuts and refunds for CP&L customers, but the size of any possible savings was not immediately known. CP&L said the decision could result in a one-time write-off of about $60 million, or 75 cents per share.

The Supreme Court ordered the state Utilities Commission to remove $389 million of the cost of the Harris plant from the utility's rates.

CCAIR Expecting Loss For Quarter

CHARLOTTE (AP) — CCAIR Inc., doing business as USAir Express, announced the company expects a loss for its first quarter ended Sept. 30 due in part to an overall softening of the air traffic market.

Roy Hagerty, chairman of the board and president of the company, said the first quarter results were hurt by the present method used by the company and USAir in their division of joint fare revenues.

New AT&T Plant

GREENSBORO (AP) — AT&T will open a $7 million plant in western Guilford County next year, employing 250 people in the manufacturing of sophisticated equipment for United States defense.

Carl Ashby, operations vice president for AT&T, declined to identify what the plant would make except to call it "one-of-a-kind" equipment.

The plant will employ about 200 manufacturing workers and 50 professional and administrative workers.

Bush Will Push Housing Proposal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is pressing for a new initiative that administration officials say will address the plight of the nation's homeless and other problems families face in finding decent housing.

Bush was traveling to Dallas to day to speak about the housing crisis before the National Association of Realtors, the powerful lobby of real estate agents.

He also was attending a dinner to help Texas Gov. Bill Clements retire $2 million in debt from his 1986 campaign and helping dedicate a Texas memorial to Vietnam veterans before flying home Saturday.

Pirates Host Temple In Home Finale

East Carolina Seeks To Ensure Non-Losing Season Against Winless Owls

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Saturday, East Carolina University will entertain Temple University in Ficklen Stadium for a 1:30 p.m. football game.

The Pirates will be out to ensure a rarity for ECU in the 1980's, a non-losing season.

A victory against the winless Owls would mean that at worst — by losing their final two games on the road — the Pirates would be at least 5-5-1 for the year. That would snap a five-year string of losing seasons and give the Pirates a chance to have their first winning season since 1983. And that would be only their third in this decade.

But, first-year coach Bill Lewis warns, the Pirates cannot just go through the motions with the Owls, despite their 0-9 record.

"We're not in a position with our program to look at any team and feel that if we do not do our best we may not win," Lewis said. "We can't afford to approach any game at anything but our best."

While the Owls have not won, they have come close. They led Western Michigan until the final play of the game. They led Northern Illinois, a team that is on the ECU schedule next season, until late, and allowed Georgia to turn a couple of big plays into a game-breaking 1:30 at the end of the first half.

And that is something the Pirates can appreciate since they allowed the same thing by Miami last weekend also.

"Their defense has been victimized by the big play," Lewis said of Temple. "But no one has been able to keep a sustained drive going. But they have given up some big plays. Georgia, for instance, had a long punt return, a long kickoff return and a long touchdown pass against them."

Temple has been especially vulnerable to the long pass, allowing 16 touchdowns through the air.

On offense, the Owls have been the victims of their own mistakes.

They've turned the ball over 33 times — 16 interceptions and 17 lost fumbles. In the meantime, the Temple defense has recovered but one fumble and picked off but two interceptions. That's a deficit of 30 turnovers. Few teams can expect to have a ratio like that and win.

Still, Temple, which like ECU has a new head coach this season, has played hard right to the final gun. "They've played as hard as any team we've seen," Lewis said. "That's a compliment to Jerry (Berndt, the new coach). They play with enthusiasm and they get excited about big plays. They play exceptionally well on their special teams."

On offense, Lewis says Temple has two true all-America types, tight end Maurice Johnson and tailback Ventres Stevenson. "(Johnson) is a good blocker and their leading pass receiver. Stevenson needs only 108 yards to go over 1,000 yards. That's pretty good when you consider that our leading rusher Willie Lewis has less than 500. He's gotten yards against some outstanding defenses, too."

Temple's offensive line is impressive — one of the largest ECU has faced, averaging 280 pounds. "There is only one senior on their two-deep," Lewis said. "They've made a commitment to big players." Lewis said tackle Ray Haynes (6-4, 285) and guard Gary Thompson (6-4, 285) are the mainstays of the line.

Defensively, the Owls have also built up their size in the front five, averaging 268 pounds. "They are tremendously big and they have no seniors on their two-deep," Lewis said. "Again, they are looking for young, big players."

Tops among the front five is linebacker Loranzo Square (6-2, 230). "Grant Lowe (ECU offensive tackle) said that Square made every tackle last year. He had 23 against Georgia and 100 on the year."

Linebacker Manny Carlis (6-3, 235) is also a leader among the front four.

In the backfield, John Armstrong, nicknamed "The Eraser," is one of the most aggressive players Lewis says he's seen.

The Pirates, meanwhile, are battling injuries. Both starting tailback Willie Lewis and back-up Denell Harper are sidelined, the former for the remainder of the season. In their place, Lewis has moved up true freshman Cedric Van Buren to start and is using number two fullback David Daniels as the number two man here, too.

Lewis also has said that he will wait until Saturday to name his starting quarterback. Travis Hunter, who started the seven games this year, was benched last week for breaking a team rule and sophomore Jeff Blake got his first start instead. Hunter played in the second half, but Lewis said earlier this week that he would evaluate their performance in practice to see which would draw the starting role against the Owls.

Lewis, with 395 yards, is the leading rusher for the Pirates, while Van Buren is next with 208 yards. Fullback Michael Rhett has rushed for 196 yards while Hunter has 193. Harper has 144 and Daniels, 130.

Hunter has completed 62 of 128 passes for 860 yards, seven touchdowns and eight interceptions. Blake has hit on 33 of 65 for 405 yards, two scores and two interceptions.

Their top target has been split end Walter Wilson, who has had problems with a chronic shoulder injury. Wilson, however, has caught 24 passes for 441 yards and three touchdowns. Tight end Luke Fisher had 13 catches for 148 yards while wide receiver Charlie Tyson has caught 12 passes for 207 yards and three touchdowns.

A big threat for the Pirates is kick return specialist Junior Robinson.

Rose Failed To Report Winnings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose has no clue when a federal grand jury in Cincinnati will complete an investigation of his taxes.

However, Rose inadvertently gave a clue Thursday about one avenue for the investigation when he said that he never claimed his racetrack earnings on his taxes — a requirement under federal law. He said he never did so because he always lost money on his track betting in the long run, so he didn't feel obliged to report his winnings.

"I guarantee you that over the years, like most of us — I think the IRS knows this — I will lose more money than I win at the track," Rose told The Associated Press in an interview Thursday.

Rose also said during the hour-long interview that he's no longer interested in telling his side of the gambling scandal that led to his lifetime ban from baseball.

"It's over in my mind," he said. "And my life's going to go on."

The former Cincinnati Reds manager and baseball's career hit leader was banned by baseball on Aug. 24 for illegal betting. He announced this week that he's receiving treatment for a gambling disorder.

Although his baseball career is over for now, Rose still is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Cincinnati trying to determine whether he claimed all his income from memorabilia sales, autograph appearances and gambling.

Representatives of the U.S. Attorney's office and the Internal Revenue Service interviewed him several times earlier this year, he said.

Federal law requires that all gambling winnings must be reported as income, but can be offset by gambling losses up to the amount that a person won. Gamblers must provide proof, such as losing racetrack tickets, in the reporting.

Just because a gambler lost money overall doesn't excuse them from reporting their winnings under federal law.

Rose, who used to frequent racetracks in the offseason, said he didn't claim his winnings on his taxes because he didn't want to go through the bother and he ultimately lost money at the track anyway.

"I didn't approach the track as a business," he said. "I see guys go over there that don't have a job, and they collect every ticket and they stamp it to their program and stuff like that and they file at the end of the year (on their taxes)."

"It was entertainment for me. It wasn't a business. I don't want to sit down and start complicating my taxes with Daily Double tickets and Quinella tickets and stuff. I don't need all of that."

Rose added, "I'm not a bookkeeper. You just don't have time to do all that. If I thought there was going to be a problem because I won a hell of a lot more than I lost in a year, then I'd do something to have a record of it. But I think everybody involved knows through checking around and stuff that I lose more than I win. That's why you don't concern yourself."

Rose said he's not worried about the grand jury investigation because he doesn't think he's done anything wrong.

"You don't worry because you don't feel you did anything to worry about, as far as I'm concerned," Rose said.

At the height of baseball's investigation into Rose's gambling this summer, he promised to someday give his side of the story. He repeated his desire to do so during a news conference on the day he was banned by A. Bartlett Giamatti, the former commissioner who died eight days later.

Pete Rose

Rose said on Thursday that he has changed his mind.

"I think a lot of things I said at the press conference that day have really changed. My attitude has changed," he said. "Like I said I'll tell my story. I'm not really interested in telling my story, because it won't accomplish anything."

"It would just rehash everything all over again, and I just don't want to go through reading all the lies again, all the things that aren't true."

Bowl Situation Coming Into Focus Weeks Early

By Rick Warner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bowl bids won't be announced until Nov. 25, but the postseason picture is already coming into focus.

Pending the results of several games, here are the most likely matchups in the Jan. 1 bowls:

ORANGE — Colorado vs. Notre Dame.

SUGAR — Southeastern Conference champion vs. Miami.

COTTON — Southwest Conference champion vs. Nebraska, Michigan-Illinois loser or SEC runner-up.

ROSE — Pacific 10 champion vs. Big Ten champion.

FIESTA — Florida State vs. Nebraska, SEC runner-up, Penn State or Michigan.

CITRUS — Tennessee, Alabama or Virginia vs. Nebraska, Illinois or Penn State.

HALL OF FAME — Florida, Auburn, or Virginia vs. Penn State, West Virginia, Ohio State or Pittsburgh.

Top-ranked Notre Dame and No. 2 Colorado are almost certain to play in the Orange Bowl, with the national championship probably at stake. All Colorado has to do to lock up the Big Eight bid is beat Oklahoma State and Kansas State. Notre Dame has difficult games remaining against Penn State and Miami, but the Irish will probably go to the Orange even if they lose both.

Why? Because a loss to Penn State would still give Notre Dame an impressive 10-1 record heading into the Miami game. And that game won't be over until after the bids are announced.

Orange Bowl president Tom Wood admits that Notre Dame has the inside track.

"It's hard to go wrong with Notre Dame," he said. "They're the top draw in college football."

The Sugar Bowl is the only other bowl with a shot at a national title game. Here's the scenario: Miami beats Notre Dame, finishes 10-1 and plays undefeated Alabama in New Orleans. Notre Dame then beats undefeated Colorado in the Orange Bowl. In that case, the Sugar Bowl winner could be the national champion.

"That's certainly something we've talked about," said Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl. "It's a roll of the dice, but it's definitely a possibility."

Holmes also thinks there's still a chance for a Notre Dame-Alabama matchup in the Sugar. But that seems highly unlikely unless Colorado loses one of its final two games and drops out of the national title chase. To keep its title hopes alive, Alabama must beat Louisiana State, Southern Mississippi and Auburn.

"Colorado is two short straight puts away from a championship game," Holmes said. "Alabama not only has much longer puts, but two of them are sidehill with a couple of breaks."

The Fiesta, which has hosted national championship games two of the last three years, could have a rematch of its 1988 Florida State-Nebraska game. Also on the short list are Miami, Penn State, Alabama and Tennessee.

Another possibility is Michigan. Don Meyers, chairman of the Fiesta's selection committee, said the bowl may challenge a policy that prohibits Big Ten and Pac-10 teams from playing in the game. The conferences made the agreement because NBC's Fiesta telecast competes with ABC's Rose Bowl, which

Auctioneer Jimmy Hudson leads Thursday's DU fund-raiser

Ducks Unlimited Raises $25,000

Area sportsmen did their part to help restore waterfowl populations by raising about $25,000 at Thursday's 1989 dinner meeting of the Pitt-Greenville chapter of Ducks Unlimited.

Approximately 132 chapter members and guests gathered night at the Greenville Country Club to show their support of Ducks Unlimited, a national organization dedicated to preserving wetlands, waterfowl habitat and breeding grounds.

John Bo Farley, chairman of the local DU committee, said the money generated this year by the chapter included $16,400 in sponsor contributions. Farley said the local chapter has a roster of approximately 82 sponsors who contribute $200 or more annually toward the conservation effort.

Auctioneer Jimmy Hudson, who has become a fixture at Ducks Unlimited gatherings in Greenville and other eastern North Carolina towns, used his talents to generate another successful fund-raiser Thursday.

Farley presented Hudson a carved decoy from the local chapter for "a job well done" over the years in helping the organization raise money for waterfowl. The Pitt-Greenville chapter has been conducting fund-raising events for about 20 years.

Among the items purchased by sportsmen were duck hunts, shotguns, waterfowl prints, a Llewellyn puppy, a matched pair of locally handcrafted flyrods, basketball tickets, a one-of-a-kind acrylic painting by a Greenville artist, and a knife made and donated by a local resident.

Also featured were a 20-gauge DU sponsor gun, a DU putter, a medallion watch with the DU logo, a collection of federal duck stamp replicas, and "Solitary Snow Goose," the Ducks Unlimited print of the year.

Approximately 20 Greenwings, chapter members who are 17 years old and under, showed their support of the organization by attending the dinner.

Also on hand were Steve Thomas of New Bern, regional director in eastern North Carolina for Ducks Unlimited, and David Haire of New Bern, state sponsor chairman and president-elect of North Carolina DU.

Ducks Unlimited was incorporated by a group of conservationists in 1937 and has raised millions of dollars to help the cause of waterfowl conservation and preservation.

Hot Stove League Sets Banquet Date

The newly-formed Greenville Hot Stove League, organized a month ago, is making plans to hold its first banquet on Feb. 7, 1990.

The organization, similar to others like it in other areas, promotes local baseball efforts. The League will present several awards at its banquet, to which it hopes to attract a number of area coaches and players, from both the amateur and professional ranks.

The League hopes to attract some of baseball's top professionals, past and present, to be the featured speaker for the event.

The next meeting of the organization will be held on Jan. 3, 1990, at 7:30 p.m. at the Teen Center.

Aycock Loses Finale To Fike

Wilson Fike rallied to nip E.B. Aycock, 24-22, in ninth grade football action and won the Big East Conference championship Thursday.

Aycock scored in the first period to take the lead as Carlton Holden pulled in a 31-yard pass from Jermaine Reed. Reed ran over the PAT for a 8-0 lead.

In the second period, Reed scored on a 72-yard run and then passed to Dante Randolph for the conversion.

Aycock scored a third touchdown in the third period on a 30-yard run by Jeffrey Freeman.

Wilson, meanwhile, picked up one score in the second and another in the third and trailed 22-12 going into the final quarter. In that, however, Fike scored twice to pull out the win.

Aycock finishes the season with a 5-1 record.

Pitt Captures Opening Victory

WINTERVILLE — Pitt Community College won its opening basketball game of the season Thursday night, inching past Sampson Tech, 56-54.

The Paladins held a 56-45 lead in the game with 2:30 left and had to hang on to claim the victory.

In the first half, neither team was able to build more than a four-point lead. Pitt had that at 18-14, but Sampson came back to tie it up at 22-22. Finally, Jeff Eakes hit a basket with 14 seconds left to give the Paladins a 24-22 halftime lead.

In the second half, it stayed close until Pitt built its 11-point edge. But Sampson then put on a run to close within two at 56-54. Sampson had the ball out of bounds with eight seconds left, but Eakes took a charge from Chris Davis just before time ran out to clinch the victory.

Andre West led Pitt with 16 points while Shawn Crawford had 14 and Kyle Jarman had 10. Sampson was led by Chris Davis with 16 and Scott Lewis with 12.

"Our perimeter shooting was inconsistent," Coach Charles Coburn said. "We had too many turnovers (28), but it will take a little while because we have so many freshmen."

Pitt returns to action on Tuesday, traveling to Chowan.

Brook Valley Women Win In League Play

Several Brook Valley women were among the winners in this month's meeting of the Eastern Ladies Golf League, held at Rocky Mount's Northgreen Country Club Thursday.

They included Barbara Pardue, low gross in championship flight; Jean Broadbelt, low net in first flight; Missy Decker, low gross, Mary Bruton, low net and Fern Moroff, second low net in third flight; and May Haverty, low putts in fifth flight.

Lester's Status Is Still Up In The Air

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State's starting center will have to wait until school officials hear from NCAA officials on his status before he can play.

Avie Lester did not play in the Wolfpack's exhibition game against the Venezuelan National Team because of poor grades. The Wolfpack won 85-55.

Lester was benched by Coach Jim Valvano because of a unique academic eligibility policy adopted by the men's basketball team, said interim athletic director Harold Hopfenberg.

The rules, he added, are stricter than those of the Atlantic Coast Conference, the NCAA and the university.

Hopfenberg said it was uncertain whether Lester will play when the Wolfpack opens the regular season Nov. 15 against Richmond, but that something will be decided by then.

The situation requires consultation with the National Collegiate Athletic Association because of the basketball team's new academic policies and a mistake Hopfenberg said he made in letting Lester play an exhibition game Nov. 4.

If the NCAA rules that Lester can be redshirted this year despite playing in the team's first exhibition game, the 6-foot-9 senior from Roxboro will sit out the current season, Hopfenberg said.

If the association decides he cannot be redshirted, Lester might not play at all this season, meaning he would lose his final year of eligibility, Hopfenberg said.

The new academic policy was introduced by the Wolfpack players themselves this summer and is one of several self-imposed penalties that followed a probe of the basketball program.

But Valvano said that he and his players thought the new policy would take effect at the start of the spring semester.

"It was ambiguous," Valvano said. "Some people assumed that it the new policy was coming immediately. The intention of the team was in concept — they were supporting it in concept."

Hopfenberg said that while he did not order Valvano to bench Lester, the coach understood his position.

"I made it very, very clear for Mr. Valvano that I wanted to protect Avie's opportunities as a student and as an athlete," Hopfenberg said. "I believe what changed his mind is the possibility that Avie's interest might be best served by holding him out."

Neither man realized the player's eligibility might have already been jeopardized because of an earlier exhibition game until just before Wednesday's contest, Hopfenberg said.

By holding Lester out of the game Wednesday, the university's request to redshirt the senior would have more credibility, Hopfenberg said.

Estonian Nationals Roll By Campbell

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Margus Metstak scored 23 points and grabbed 15 rebounds to lead the Estonian Nationals to a 98-79 exhibition basketball victory over Campbell on Thursday night.

Metstak hit seven of 10 shots from the field and nine of 10 free throws.

The 6-foot-8 center scored 17 first-half points as the Estonians took a 50-34 lead at halftime. They stretched the margin to as many as 26 points with 8:32 remaining.

Sophomore guard Mark Mocnik led the Camels with 16 points, hitting just four of 18 shots from the field.

N.C. Charlotte Tops Venezuelan Nationals

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Henry Williams scored 23 points to lead five players in double figures as North Carolina-Charlotte downed the Venezuelan National team 97-87 in exhibition basketball action Thursday night.

The 49ers grabbed a 55-50 at halftime and gradually pulled away in the second period.

Cedrick Broadhurst added 19 points for the 49ers, while Kenneth Wylie had 18, Benny Moss 14 and Dan Banister 10.

Jaguars Finish Atop List

Unbeaten Farmville Team Leads Reflector's Top 12

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Farmville Central completed an undefeated regular season for the first time since 1979 and winds up atop the final Daily Reflector Top 12 prep football poll.

The Jaguars of head coach Dixon Sauls took over the top spot when Bertie fell to Tarboro six weeks ago and never relinquished it. Bertie, which finished fifth in the final poll, held first only one week.

Rocky Mount occupied the No. 1 spot the first three weeks, but plummeted after consecutive losses.

Following Farmville in the final poll are undefeated West Craven, surging Wilson Fike, unbeaten Northampton East, Bertie, Northern Nash, North Edgecombe, Rose, Tarboro, Havelock, D.H. Conley and Plymouth.

The poll ranks teams from the Big East, Coastal, Colonial, Eastern Plains, Northeastern and Tobacco Belt conferences.

The Top 12

• Farmville Central: Linwood Mercer rushed for 105 yards in the Jaguars' 28-0 blanking of Pamlico County. They open the playoffs at home against James Kenan.

• West Craven: Lee Becton rushed for 233 yards as the Eagles captured the Coastal Conference championship with a 28-6 win over Conley. They open the playoffs at home against Hertford County.

• Wilson Fike: The Golden Demons were crowned Big East Conference champions with a 17-14 win at Elizabeth City Northeastern. They open the playoffs at home against South View.

• Northampton East: David Perry was limited to a season-low 106 yards rushing but quarterback Jason Long passed for 165 yards as the Rams slipped past Roanoke Rapids 36-32. They open the playoffs at home against Greene Central.

• Bertie: The Falcons rushed for 324 yards, led by Tracy Leary's 167, and buried Northwest Halifax 48-0. They open postseason play at Triangle Conference champion Wilson Beddingfield.

• Northern Nash: Walter Vick scored five touchdowns as the Knights rocked Hunt 41-14 to improve to 8-2. They will not be going to the playoffs, however.

• North Edgecombe: The Warriors, sparked by three touchdown passes from Orlando Whitaker and a 356-yard rushing attack, exploded for 36 first-quarter points and routed Matamoras 56-0. They open the playoffs at home against Gates County.

• Rose: The Rampants took advantage of numerous Rocky Mount blunders to win 26-15 and advance to the playoffs. They open at Jacksonville.

• Tarboro: After winning six straight games to rule the Colonial Conference, the Vikings had an open date last week. They begin postseason play at home against Southern Durham.

• Havelock: Like Northern Nash, the Rams finished 8-2 after downing White Oak 26-7, but failed to make the playoffs.

• D.H. Conley: The Vikings were denied the Coastal Conference title but are playoff bound. They open the playoffs at home against Southern Nash.

• Plymouth: Andy Womble caught eight passes for a state-record 258 yards and three touchdowns as the Vikings rallied from a 26-0 deficit to down Northside 42-32. They open the playoffs at home against mighty Wallace-Rose Hill.

Hawaii Wants Recognition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Hawaii coach Bob Wagner wonders what it takes to earn the recognition he thinks his team deserves.

At 7-2, the Rainbows have clinched their second straight winning season and have a shot at bettering last year's 9-3 record. Hawaii crushed then-No. 18 Brigham Young 56-14 on Oct. 28, and have scored 60 or more points three times.

Yet, Wagner asks, where are the bowls, the rankings, the respect?

"It's disappointing because we won nine last year," Wagner said. "It's not like we're coming out of nowhere."

Depending on who you believe, Hawaii is either one of the nation's best-kept secrets or a better-than-average team taking advantage of a relatively easy schedule and more than its fair share of home games.

"We're a real good football team," Wagner said, citing statistics that rank Hawaii third in the nation in scoring (40.6 points a game) and 27th in total defense (317.6 yards a game).

"We're probably the biggest secret in the country right now," said defensive back Walter Briggs, who has nine interceptions this season. "We've won big. We've shut down nationally publicized individuals."

"We're just in a part of the country where we don't get the publicity," Briggs said.

Pirates...

He's averaging 24.6 yards on kickoff returns and 10.6 yards in punt returns, including one for a touchdown on the latter. He has been among the national leaders in both categories.

He also leads the team in interceptions with four, returning them 60 yards.

As a team, the Pirates are rushing for 171.6 yards a game and allowing 199.8. Through the air, ECU is gaining 177.9 and allowing 197.0 for a total of 349.5 on offense and 396.9 on defense.

Temple, meanwhile, is rushing for 132.0 and allowing 184.1 yards a game. The Owls have 128.4 yards passing and are giving up 208.3.

That gives them a total of 260.4 yards a game on offense, while allowing 392.4.

The game will be the final home game for 21 seniors, who will all serve as captains for the game.

ECU has two remaining games in which to try and earn a winning season. The Pirates travel to Pittsburgh on Nov. 18 and to Southern Mississippi on Nov. 25.

Catch-Up Time Running Out On The Panel

Woody Peele

While the high school regular season of football is completed, the college ranks still have several weeks to go before things wind down.

That gives us several chances to make some moves on leader Mike Grizzard, although he picked up another game on the rest of the pack last week.

Grizzard now holds down a four-game edge with an 86-30 record. Vickie Spivey and Tom Baines are tied for second place with 82-34 records.

Fourth is Greg Laudick with a 78-38 mark, followed by me at 77-39. Tom Morris brings up the rear with a 75-41 record.

Seven of our area high school football teams qualified for the state playoffs, which begin Friday night. The panel will look at the Rose-Jacksonville game, while I glance at the rest of the field. Hopefully, I'll come up with a better mark than last week's 4-4.

In the 3-A ranks, the only area team to make the field is D.H. Conley, the runner-up in the Coastal Conference. The Vikings will play host to Southern Nash of the Tri-angle Conference. The two played no common opponents. Both of them like the run and both have pretty good defenses. The key, of course, will be which makes the fewest mistakes. Conley has the home-field advantage and that may work for them. I'll go with the Vikings in this one, 21-14.

Two of the three Pitt County 2-A teams made the field in their classification, Farmville Central and North Pitt.

The Panthers take on the Panthers of newly-consolidated Northside, the joining of Belhaven and Bath. The Jaguars will meet Warsaw's James Kenan, from the strong East Central Conference.

Neither Farmville nor Kenan met a common opponent. The Jaguars, however, have performed well most of the time and well enough the rest of the time. Kenan, in losing only to strong Wallace-Rose Hill and Clinton, earned enough respect to gain a 10th place state ranking. Farmville, of course, is ranked second. If that's accurate, Farmville should win. My pick is the Jaguars in a tough 14-10 game.

Unlike the others, North Pitt and Northside did have a common opponent — Williamston. The Pitt Panthers took a 22-13 win over the Tigers, while the Beaufort-based Panthers slipped past them 19-7 a few weeks later. North Pitt, at that point of the season, had just come off losses to two ranked teams. In fact, three of North Pitt's losses came against teams ranked in the final AP poll. I'll call it a Panther victory, 20-13. OK, North Pitt's Panthers.

In the other area playoffs games, it will be Northampton East over Greene Central; Currituck over Chocowinity, and Roanoke over Manteo.

Season's record: 64-15.

Our panel looks at the other playoff game, Rose at Jacksonville. The Rampants struggled during the year but finally pulled out a second-place tie and the number two berth thanks to help from the team they beat out for the final spot, Northern Nash. Nash's victory over Wilson Hunt and Wilson Fike's win over Northeastern lifted Rose into the playoffs.

Jacksonville, which was not expected to make the field this year, surprised everyone by going 9-1. The lone loss, of course, came at the hands of the Rampants in the second game of the year.

Now anyone familiar with Rose football knows that the Rampants usually beat Jacksonville during the regular season, then lose to them in the playoffs. That goes to prove the old adage that it's tough to beat a team twice in the same year.

This year, the panel is split, dividing down the middle, three votes each way. My own pick is the Cardinals, taking a 13-7 victory — deja vu in reverse.

East Carolina closes out its home season against Temple University, a school still looking for its first win after nine losses. The Owls have come close and probably looks at this as their best chance for a victory.

But, in the opinion of the panel, it won't happen. The panel goes down the line with the Pirates, 6-0, and I look for a 28-7 victory by the Bucs.

In the other games this week, our consensus picks are: Duke over N.C. State, South Carolina over North Carolina; Tulsa and Wake Forest, a toss-up; Florida over Georgia; Michigan over Illinois; Penn State over Maryland; Virginia over Virginia Tech; Ohio State over Iowa; Air Force and Brigham Young, a toss-up, and Purdue over Northwestern.

Winner Between Duke-State Appears To Have A Bowl Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — As representatives from several bowls were expected to attend Saturday's game between Duke and North Carolina State, a newspaper reported that the two schools were close to an agreement that would send the winner to the All American Bowl.

The deal could be finalized today, sources told The Charlotte Observer. The sources told the newspaper that the arrangement was unofficially offered by officials with the bowl scheduled for Dec. 28 in Birmingham, Ala.

The sources said Duke officials intend to accept the offer and that N.C. State officials are exploring their options but will also accept unless they receive a similar guarantee from another bowl.

Representatives from the All American, Citrus, Copper, Independence, Liberty and Sun bowls are scheduled to scout Saturday's game in Wallace-Wade Stadium. The Aloha Bowl, which does not scout games, is also interested in both teams, the newspaper reported. It appears unlikely that another bowl can match the All American's offer.

N.C. State has been negotiating with the Sun Bowl, played Dec. 30 in El Paso, Texas, but Sun Bowl information director Marc Boehm said Wednesday night that its selection committee favors teams from the Big Ten and Southwest conferences and eastern independent schools. He called the Wolfpack "kind of secondary in our thinking right now."

Duke is interested in the Liberty (Dec. 29, Memphis, Tenn.) and Aloha (Dec. 25, Honolulu), but officials from both bowls say they won't make a deal before this weekend.

The Aloha has the lowest payoff of all bowls, about $500,000 per team, but would be attractive to Duke because the Blue Devils' basketball team plays in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu beginning Dec. 27.

Sources said N.C. State (7-2) could still get an invitation from some bowl if it lost to Duke, but that the Blue Devils (6-3) would be eliminated from all consideration if they lost.

Duke has a 4-1 ACC record and could still tie Virginia (5-1) for the league title or win it outright if the Cavaliers lose to Maryland.

A source said the games of Nov. 18 — Duke vs. North Carolina and N.C. State vs. Virginia Tech — would have no bearing on an agreement with the bowl.

The All American Bowl will be televised by ESPN beginning at 8 p.m. EST. It has a guaranteed payoff of approximately $600,000 per team, which makes it one of the lower paying bowls. However, officials in Birmingham say the figure could reach $800,000 if all 72,000 seats at Legion Field are sold.

Sources said Duke and N.C. State will guarantee to buy at least 10,000 tickets.

Possible opponents for the Blue Devils or Wolfpack are Georgia, Michigan State, Pittsburgh and Ohio State.

Mackovic Hopes Experience Will Help Against Michigan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Coach John Mackovic says Illinois is a year older and wiser than it was when knocked out of the Big Ten championship race last season by Michigan. Of course, Michigan has also improved.

"We're light years ahead of last year," Mackovic said of Illinois, which plays host to Michigan on Saturday in a game to determine the top spot in the Big Ten.

"We've worked hard to get into this position," Mackovic said. His team is 7-1 overall and 5-0 in the Big Ten and ranked eighth in the country.

Michigan presents an imposing barrier. The third-ranked Wolverines are also 7-1 and 5-0, and are separated from No. 1 in the nation by five points, the margin of a season-opening loss to top-ranked Notre Dame.

"They're not ranked No. 3 in the nation by mistake," said Mackovic. "They returned 18 starters from last year's team which won by 29 points and played in the Rose Bowl and won." The Wolverines beat Illinois 38-9 on the way to Pasadena a year ago.

"This game will go a long way in helping decide the Big Ten championship, but it certainly is not the end of the season," Mackovic said, reminding that each team has two more games to play after Saturday's clash at Memorial Stadium.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler said a victory would give the Wolverines "a great shot" at the Big Ten title, but that Illinois would be in even better shape with a victory because of the teams' remaining opponents.

Michigan still faces Minnesota (3-2) and Ohio State (4-1) in league games. Illinois must play Indiana (2-3) and Northwestern (0-5).

"I'd expect a hard-hitting game ... a lot of rock 'em, sock 'em football," Mackovic said.

Illinois is first and Michigan second in Big Ten defensive ratings, but Schembechler expects some scoring because the respective offensive units are just too good.

Illinois, which relies mostly on the passing of quarterback Jeff George, crushed Iowa 31-7 last week. Michigan, always a strong running team during Schembechler's 21 years in Ann Arbor, rolled over Purdue 42-27.

George has completed 161 of 265 passes for 1,673 yards and 11 touchdowns, with nine interceptions. Mike Bellamy is the top receiver, with 38 catches for 537 yards and four touchdowns.

"He's a tough guy to corral," Schembechler said of George. "He can throw the ball 50 yards backing up. He knows how to beat you if you give him the opportunity."

Michael Taylor, who calls the signals for Michigan, has completed 35 of 52 passes for 512 yards and six touchdowns, while being intercepted once. He was hurt in the Notre Dame game and has been available again only in the last couple weeks.

"I have great respect for his accuracy," Mackovic said. "He gives Michigan a dimension on offense that makes them high-powered."

Tony Boles leads Michigan on the ground with 707 yards in 121 carries, with eight touchdowns. Leroy Hood has 102 carries for 455 yards and four scores.

Howard Griffith leads Illinois rushers with 550 yards in 114 carries. He has been getting help from freshmen backs Wagner Lester and Steve Feagin.

"We've got to get in there early and make things happen ... keep them off balance," Mackovic said.

Budd Wants Some Anonymity Autobiography Will Close Book On Stormy Career

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — For someone who has just written an autobiography of a life filled with athletic glory, international politics and personal trauma, Zola Budd has an unusual request.

She wants to be forgotten. "I see the book as the last of Zola Budd," she said Thursday. "I don't want to be remembered. I just want to tell my side of the story, then for things to die down and disappear. I want to live a normal life."

Normal is not a word to describe the 23-year-old Budd's life thus far. In her book, "Zola," which she is promoting in Britain this week, Budd tells of a life in which family members, coaches and advisers led her around like a lamb.

The decisions they made for her, she writes, included leaving her native South Africa for Britain so she could run internationally, taking some $140,000 from a British newspaper in the process, and placing her at the center of anti-apartheid protests.

"I couldn't say no to people," Budd said in an interview. "I am very easily influenced. I listened to my coaches and did what they wanted."

In the mid-1980s, Budd was arguably the best female athlete in the world. From Feb. 14, 1983, until the 3,000-meter heats of the Los Angeles Olympics on Aug. 8, 1984, Budd won every race she ran.

After colliding with American Mary Decker in the Olympic 3,000 final, a event that left her in tears and begging to return to South Africa, Budd went on to set a world record at 5,000 meters and win two world cross-country championships.

But the barefoot teen-ager from Blomfontein never was able to outrun her biggest foe — apartheid. Refusing to come out publicly against South Africa's racial-separation laws, Budd was hounded by anti-apartheid groups until she left Britain in June 1988, an emotional wreck quitting the sport that had made her rich and famous.

"It makes me sad to think that I had to give up my international career at an age when I normally would be in my prime," Budd said in the interview. "In 1985 and '86, I was at my best. Then all this happened."

Married since last April to a South African businessman, Budd said she knew her international career was over. But she is running again in South African meets and said she views the sport much differently now.

"There was a time when I really hated running. I saw it as the cause of all my problems," she said. "I think I enjoy it more now, because I don't have to do it to accomplish something. I don't really need it."

In the book, Budd questioned why she was the focus of anti-apartheid leaders, such as Archbishop Desmond Tutu and Sam Ramsamy, the head of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee.

She said in the interview that, despite issuing a long-awaited statement earlier this year against apartheid, she still felt it was wrong to ask an athlete to comment on political affairs.

"I didn't make the laws," Budd said. "I am from there, but I am just a runner, and running was the most important thing to me. Politics was not."

Budd said she had shared an airplane with Tutu once but never had spoken with him or other critics. She said she would jump at the chance to talk with them and explain herself.

"It wasn't personal, what I wrote about him in the book, but I was upset because I felt he was attacking me," she said. "I would like to sit down, person to person, and see what kind of a person he is."

In the meantime, Budd and her husband will spend time together. A self-described fan of literature, classical music and junk food, she wants to show him what she remembers of London and get reacquainted with some old haunts.

"It's been nice to be back without the pressures," Budd said. "I've been to the music and book shops, and I'll probably have to visit the Food Halls at Harrod's."

As Wall Cracks, Berliners Start The Party

By Alison Smale
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — It was, quite simply, the biggest party that fun-loving Berliners ever had.
Hours after East Germany opened the wall it built in 1961 to keep the two Berlins apart, thousands of East and West Berliners reunited in an outpouring of joy that lasted well into this morning.
Hordes of East Berliners poured across the Berlin Wall, crossing in their tiny Trabant cars, on foot, or on packed subways.

"Madness! Madness!" cried a 44-year-old East Berlin woman who gave her name as Inge. "To think that I'm seeing all this after 28 years."
She and her husband Werner were already in their nightclothes when they heard the border was open.
"We were up and dressed with our son in a second," her husband said. "But even we couldn't get across in the car, there were so many people. So we just left it there and pushed our way across."
At the Invalidenstrasse crossing to East Berlin, police appealed frantically to the crowd to clear the path for hundreds of East Berliners crossing to raucous cheers from the West.

"This is a historic day, and because it is such a historic moment we ask you to keep the crossing clear," a policeman repeatedly told the crowd.
Few listened.
"We were here when the Wall went up in 1961," beamed West Berliner Helga Zuballa, 53. "We're so happy. If it keeps on like this, we'll have nothing left to wish for."
Champagne corks popped, and some West Berlin bars — the only ones in Germany which never close — offered free beer to the arriving hordes of East Berliners. Other West Germans offered money to the newcomers.

West Berlin authorities ordered city subways to run all night to cope with the unprecedented mass of people moving around in the city.
"I promised him I'd take him across if they opened up the border," said Uwe Scheiderat as he and his 17-year-old son, Erich, gazed in wonder at the electronics on show in a display window on the Kurfuerstendamm, one of Europe's most elegant shopping streets.

World Leaders Praising Open Door In E. Germany

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — World leaders today praised East Germany's opening of its borders, with some predicting the eventual dismantling of the "hideous construction" — the Berlin Wall — and the reunification of Germany.
The United States, Britain and France offered their military camps in West Germany to handle the expected flood of emigres. Czechoslovakia, which had become the gathering point for East Germans fleeing West, breathed a sigh of relief.
Britain's prime minister, Margaret Thatcher, called it "a great day for freedom" and said Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the architect of East bloc reforms, had made it possible.
Willy Brandt, a former West German chancellor and the West Berlin mayor when the Berlin Wall went up in 1961, said he believed prospects for German unity had taken a major step forward.
"The Berlin Wall will come down, and Berlin will live," Brandt told The Associated Press.
"It seems appropriate that this hideous construction, which never should have been built, has now definitely lost its reason for being," said Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen of Denmark.
"It wasn't just the landscape of European politics which suddenly changed last night. It was the European cosmos," wrote political columnist Neal Ascherson in the London newspaper The Independent.
"For most West Europeans now alive, the world has always ended at the East German border and the (Berlin) Wall: beyond lay darkness and demons. The opening of the frontiers declares that the world has no edge any more. Europe is becoming once more round and whole," he wrote.
Austrian Chancellor Franz Vranitzky said the move was "one of the most memorable events in the political history of Europe." Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of Canada said it was "one of the most powerful statements" about the strength of democracy.
Not everyone was so impressed. Finnish Prime Minister Harri Holkeri told Finnish radio, "As far as I can see, the final outcome of World War II still stands and the situation will not change because of these developments."

The superpowers were relatively subdued.
President Bush said if East Germany makes good on its promise to allow free emigration, "This wall built in '61 will have very little relevance."
Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov praised East German reforms but said any speculation about a reunified Germany is "out of the question."
The U.S. ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, William H. Taft IV, agreed. He also told reporters in Portugal that the changes under way in Eastern Europe increase the risk of instability.
Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry spokesman Lubomir Marsik said the opening of the East German border "represents a positive solution." "The situation was getting difficult for everybody, including Czechoslovakia," he said, referring to the thousands of East Germans who previously were forced to go West via a third country, often Czechoslovakia.
In an interview on French radio, French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said the reforms will probably change "the global balance."
He tied them to rapid changes also sweeping Hungary and Poland. "We have the duty first of all to assume responsibilities in aiding these countries," he said.
The Times of London headlined its report: "The Iron Curtain Torn Open."
Mrs. Thatcher said: "We all hope this is only the prelude to the dismantling of the Berlin Wall" but added that the priority must be to see a "genuinely democratic" government in East Germany.
She, Bush and French Defense Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement offered the use of their countries' military camps in West Germany to temporarily house any flood of emigres.
Spain's foreign minister, Francisco Fernandez Ordonez, said the opening of the border was a "step full of hope" that will likely lead to further reforms.
In Japan, Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe told foreign journalists today: "The Berlin Wall has in substance been lifted, and it has great historical significance."
In South Korea, governing party spokesman Park Hui-Tae used the occasion to prod Communist North Korea.

Bush Orders Aid To West Germany

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, lauding East Germany's lifting of travel restrictions as a dramatic advance for freedom, is ordering "all possible assistance" to help West Germany cope with the flood of refugees from its communist sister state.
The border-opening decree by East German authorities on Thursday caught U.S. officials by surprise.
If East Germany fully implements the promise to open its borders, the president told reporters, "this (Berlin) Wall built in '61 will have very little relevance."
It was just 6½ months ago in a speech in Mainz, West Germany, that Bush added his voice to the chorus of U.S. presidents who have demanded that the Berlin Wall be torn down. He called it then a "brutal wall" that "stands as a monument to the failure of communism. It must come down!"
Former President Reagan said on the ABC television show "Prime Time Live" that "If the wall isn't torn down immediately, at least they could keep the gates open."
East Germany said it was opening its borders to the rest of the world and that its citizens may travel or emigrate anywhere, including through the 28-year-old Berlin Wall, erected at the height of the Cold War between East and West.
"It's a dramatic happening for East Germany and, of course, for freedom," Bush said.
The White House announced Thursday night that Bush had ordered U.S. military units and U.S. Ambassador Vernon Walters to give "all possible assistance" to the West German government struggling to cope with the flood of refugees. The Pentagon said it was making available housing for 980 people in three off-base installations.
Other U.S. leaders reacted with a mixture of joy and surprise.
Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine called it a "symbolic destruction of the Berlin Wall" and urged East Germany to "take the final step and tear that wall down."
"The events of today are truly remarkable," said Vice President Dan Quayle.
Bush, with Secretary of State James A. Baker III at his side and a map of Germany open on his desk, said, "We salute the people in East Germany, whose aspirations for freedom seem to be a little more down the road now."
Bush seemed subdued in an exchange with reporters summoned to the Oval Office to hear his reaction to the latest startling news from the East Bloc.
"I am not an emotional kind of guy," he explained. But he added, "I feel very good about it."
Bush said he was prepared to give "maximum help" to Bonn to cope with refugees. Some 200,000 East Germans have fled their country this year through Hungary, Czechoslovakia or other routes West.
But recalling his advice last spring to Poles to stay in their homeland to work for democratic reforms, Bush said:
"These are Germans. And Germans love their country. And at some point, I think a lot of Germans who have felt pent-in and unable to move are going to say, 'Look, we can move but wouldn't it be better to participate in the reforms that are taking place in our own country?'"

Wilder Planning Brief Vacation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND — Lt. Gov. L. Douglas Wilder will begin planning his administration following a brief vacation to unwind from his historic victory in the governor's race.

"He wants to take a few days off and relax," said B.J. Northington, deputy press secretary for Wilder's transition team.

She said Wilder, who was to begin his vacation today, will start working on appointments and other plans for his administration after his return next week, even though his Republican opponent, J. Marshall Coleman, has refused to concede the race.

Unofficial tallies show Wilder leading Coleman by about 6,500 votes out of 1.78 million cast Tuesday. If the official tally on Nov. 27 still shows Wilder winning by less than half a percent, Coleman plans to ask for a recount.

Wilder met Thursday with congressional leaders in Washington and reassured businessmen in New York that Virginia will stay prosperous.

Appearing with Gov. Gerald L. Baliles before the governor's luncheon for top business executives in New York, Wilder said an economic slowdown is likely in the 1990s.

"Fortunately, Virginia has put itself in a good position to take whatever comes. A decade of in-

Infant Involved In Shooting Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A boy born two months premature after his mother was fatally shot by a robber has died at the age of 2 weeks, officials said.

"It's a tragedy for a mother and a baby and it's a tragedy for all the families of innocent victims who have suffered violence in our society," Mayor Raymond Flynn said after Christopher Stuart's death Thursday afternoon at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Dr. Steven Ringer, head of the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, said the infant died of respiratory failure from his premature and traumatic birth.

The baby had been in intensive care since his delivery by emergency Caesarean section shortly after his mother, Carol Stuart, was shot Oct. 23.

Charles Stuart, 29, who was critically wounded in the attack, was brought by ambulance from Boston City Hospital to be at his son's bedside along with family members.

Mrs. Stuart, 30, who was seven months pregnant, was shot and killed by a gunman who held up the couple in their car after they left Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"Everybody in the city of Boston was really praying beyond hope that Christopher would make it," Flynn said.

But family members said the baby, who was delivered two months prematurely, may have suffered serious brain damage. He weighed 3 pounds, 13 ounces at birth and had neither grown nor gained weight.

The infant had been on a life-support system and suffered repeated convulsions since birth, family members said.

The assailant in the case is still at large.

S.C. Republican Who Hints He Would Bolt Party Wins Seat On House Panel

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A disgruntled House Republican from South Carolina is going to get a seat on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee after saying he could "just as easily be a Democrat."

Rep. Arthur Ravenel of South Carolina insisted he had not actually threatened to bolt his party. But GOP Chairman Lee Atwater and House Republican leaders got him on the panel anyway.

House Republican leaders Bob Michel of Illinois and Newt Gingrich of Georgia, after consulting with Atwater, hurriedly arranged Ravenel's appointment Thursday.

The behind-the-scenes jockeying took place after the State newspaper in Columbia, S.C., quoted unidentified sources as saying Ravenel felt out of step with his party and was considering crossing over to the Democrats.

But what had been irking Ravenel was his inability to get on the committee he called "extremely important to the health and wealth of the 1st Congressional District" of South Carolina.

Atwater is a native of South Carolina and congressional sources said Ravenel's defection could have proved embarrassing to him. GOP spokeswoman Leslie Goodman said the party chairman discussed the problem at breakfast Thursday with Ravenel and Gingrich.

Atwater, who has known Ravenel since he was a volunteer for Ravenel's mayoral candidacy in Charleston in 1970, said he spoke with Gingrich and Michel about the seat for Ravenel.

"It was those two who lobbied and got the votes on the committee," said Atwater, adding "it makes sense" to have a congressman from the coastal city of Charleston on the committee.

Earlier Thursday, Ravenel had dismissed speculation in his home state that he was prepared to leave the GOP.

"If I was going to switch parties, I would hold a press conference and I would tell the people at home I was switching parties and why," the lawmaker said. "I wouldn't make a switch unless I had a compelling reason."

In an interview earlier this week, Ravenel said he had been criticized by conservatives in South Carolina for his recent support of funding for abortion in cases of incest or rape and for backing some spending measures.

"I'm just not a right-winger. I'm a moderate, and it just drives some of the Republicans back home up the wall," Ravenel was quoted as saying. "I could just as easily be a Democrat as a Republican."

But Ravenel said Thursday those comments were nothing new and "that's a lot of old stuff I've been saying for a long time."

Michel and Gingrich had to lobby Rep. Don Young of Alaska, the senior Republican on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, to remove his objections to Ravenel's joining the panel.

Ravenel had said Young was blocking his appointment because he opposed Young's stance in favor of opening the Alaska National Wildlife Refuge to oil exploration.

C.J. Zane, Young's administrative assistant, confirmed that Young fought Ravenel's appointment because Ravenel refused to pledge to support Young's position on the Alaska National Wildlife Refuge issue.

Zane said Young "went along" with the requests of the party leadership to seat Ravenel out of concern for party unity.

"There was a big push from Michel and other Republicans, including Atwater, because they didn't want to deal with losing a guy to another party at this time," the aide said.

Contras Reject Proposal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — A Nicaraguan rebel leader spurned a government proposal for his forces to disband and instead vowed at the first peace talks in 16 months to "put an end" to the regime in Managua.

Talks between the U.S.-backed Contra rebels and the Sandinista government opened Thursday in New York. Nicaragua's foreign minister said before the talks that if the rebels agree to demobilize, his government would meet their demands for a truce and amnesty.

The Contras countered with a plan to restore the cease-fire with the government and discuss other conditions — such as demobilization — later.

Neither proposal was accepted, despite the urging of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to renew the cease-fire that President Daniel Ortega ended last week.

An estimated 12,000 people have been killed in the 8-year-old war.

Perez de Cuellar and his Organization of American States counterpart, Joao Clemente Baena Soares, turned the mediation effort over to aides.

An election campaign is under way in Nicaragua under a regional peace accord signed in August. The plan calls for free and fair elections.

Voting is set for Feb. 25, and U.N. observers say the campaign is proceeding smoothly.

Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto of Nicaragua said before the meeting that key Contra demands would be met if demobilization began by the end of November.

Documents obtained by The Associated Press showed the Contras' opening position calling for an immediate truce. The Sandinistas would then declare a amnesty for the rebels by Nov. 20.

The estimated 12,000 Contras camped in Honduras would then move into Nicaragua, with their weapons, to join their comrades there in secure zones.

Diplomats said this would remove the pressure placed on Honduras under the Central American peace plan to shut down the Contra camps by Dec. 5.

Only after these steps had been completed would discussion of disbanding the Contras begin, under the rebel proposal.

Friends comfort parents of Susan Westcott after she was sentenced to prison for terrorism

Three Whites Sentenced To Prison For Terrorism

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three whites who proudly admitted to being guerrillas of the African National Congress were sentenced on terrorism charges today to prison terms of up to 25 years.

Supporters in the courtroom threw yellow daisies at the defendants when the sentence was announced. One defendant, Iain Robertson, yelled, "Long Live The ANC!" as police pulled him away.

The two men and one woman acknowledged they were from the military wing of the predominantly black movement, which has waged a bombing and sabotage campaign since 1961 to end white rule and apartheid.

They were arrested in May 1988 at a farmhouse outside Johannesburg where police seized a large cache of Soviet-made weapons. It included a SAM-7 missile, hand grenades, mortar bombs, assault rifles and pistols, and was described as one of the largest caches ever seized in South Africa.

Damian de Lange, 31, a former journalist and leader of the cell, was sentenced today to 25 years in prison. Robertson, 35, received a 20-year sentence and Susan Westcott, 25, a native of Swaziland whose parents are British, was sentenced to 18 years.

Magistrate W.J. van den Bergh, in issuing the sentences, said the defendants "were indifferent to loss of life."

"They are entitled to their own political views and beliefs. It is their transgressions of the law that must be punished," he said.

The Human Rights Commission, an independent anti-apartheid monitoring group, condemned the sentences as harsh and said apartheid was to blame for the ANC's decision to use violence.

David Soggott, the defense attorney, said an appeal might be filed.

Ms. Westcott's mother, Margaret Westcott, said afterwards: "We stand by our daughter — she's done a very brave thing for this country."

The chief prosecutor, Frans Roets, had asked for sentences of 125 years for de Lange, 110 years for Robertson and 90 years for Ms. Westcott.

"They wanted to intimidate the population with cowardly attacks," Roets said in his summary earlier this week in Pretoria Regional Court.

Prosecutors said de Lange detonated a bomb last year that damaged a bus carrying military personnel to work. No one on the bus was seriously hurt.

The three were held in solitary confinement for seven months after their arrest. They first appeared in court in January, and all three pleaded guilty to terrorism charges in June.

Throughout the sentencing procedures, the courtroom gallery was packed with African National Congress supporters. Many wore the gold, green and black colors of the guerrilla movement.

One session was attended by Walter Sisulu and three other ANC leaders who were freed on Oct. 15 after 26 years in prison.

Game Show Host Loses His Election Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRASILIA, Brazil — A popular TV game show host who appeared tied for the lead in Brazil's presidential race lost his chance when an electoral court ruled he violated election guidelines and could not be on the ballot.

The decision Thursday by the Supreme Electoral Tribunal ended the nine-day candidacy of Silvio Santos, whose late entry into the race rocked Brazil's first free presidential vote since 1960.

It came the same day a Gallup poll was published showing Santos virtually tied for the lead with center-rightist candidate Fernando Collor de Mello. The poll showed Santos had 21.6 percent of the vote.

News reports speculated that President Jose Sarney engineered Santos' entry into the race to undermine Collor de Mello, who has tried to distance himself from the highly unpopular government and create an image as a fighter of corruption.

Santos, who is not a candidate in the Wednesday's election, denied it. All seven members of the electoral court ruled Santos was ineligible to run because he violated a 1970 election law requiring each candidate to leave the directorship of a government-licensed business — such as TV stations and networks — three months before the election.

Santos' lawyers contended he merely owned controlling stock in the SBT television network. But the court decided Santos actively ran the nation's second-largest network. The court also unanimously ruled Santos' tiny Municipalist Party did not fulfill election registration guidelines requiring at least nine state conventions, and declared the tiny party defunct.

Santos can appeal the decision to the Supreme Court, said the court president, Jose Francisco Rezak.

Santos, 58, refused comment on the ruling Thursday night.

"Mr. Santos told me to tell all of you reporters that he had a headache and went to bed," said his maid, Narelia Lopes.

The TV entertainer, who is popular among Brazil's poor, had been widely criticized by other presidential candidates since he declared his candidacy.

Santos, born Senor Abravanel of Greek immigrant parents, rose from selling wallets on streetcorners 35 years ago to become a multimillionaire executive and owner of more than 30 businesses. Most candidates welcomed the court's decision.

"Santos' campaign was doomed from the start," said Luis Inacio Lula da Silva of the Marxist-oriented Workers' Party.

"Now the campaign can get back to normal," said Sen. Mario Covas of the left-center Brazilian Social Democracy Party. "Now all of those votes will come back to the true candidates of the campaign."

Fundamentalists Gain Advantage In Jordan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMMAN, Jordan — Moslem fundamentalists, many of them campaigning under the slogan "Islam is the solution," won the biggest bloc of seats in Parliament during this kingdom's first general election in 22 years.

The result was an apparent setback for King Hussein, who urged voters not to mix religion with politics in Wednesday's vote.

Fundamentalist candidates captured 34 of the 80 seats in Parliament, according to results announced Thursday.

About 20 seats were won by pro-government candidates, while leftists, Arab nationalists, tribal leaders and others took the rest. The breakdown gave opposition forces a clear majority over strict loyalists.

For the first time, women were allowed to vote and seek office, but none of the 12 females among the 647 candidates won a seat.

"The people want Islam, and it is not strange for our country and our people to have such a large number of Moslem candidates winning," said Ziad Abu Ghanimeh, a spokesman for the Moslem Brotherhood, the largest Islamic organization.

The Brotherhood called for more social welfare programs to help the poor and for a Palestinian state on Israeli territory.

Declarer did well to recover from a bad trump break on this hand from a rubber bridge game in Florida. But all that work would have been unnecessary had declarer taken a basic precaution in the first place.

This was a typical rubber-bridge power auction. It had the virtues of simplicity, speed and accuracy. North's jump raise was forcing, but had his hand included the queen of trumps rather than the queen of clubs, a grand slam would have been an excellent contract.

Declarer won the diamond opening in hand and led a trump to the ace. When East showed out, declarer faced an uphill battle to avoid two trump losers. Fortunately, he guessed the distribution.

The remaining high diamond was cashed, followed by a diamond ruff with the deuce. Three rounds of clubs were taken, declarer discarding a heart from hand, followed by two rounds of hearts ending in dummy as West followed helplessly. Now declarer divined to ruff a club, then exit with a low trump. West had to win and lead away from his remaining trump honor into declarer's tenace, enabling South to score the last two tricks.

The easy way to make the contract came at the second trick. Since declarer was solid in the side suits, the only possible problem was to avoid losing two trump tricks. So at trick two declarer should have led a low trump and simply covered any card West produces. If East can win the trick, it means that trumps are no worse than 3-1. Thereafter, the ace-king will draw the outstanding fangs and the contract is home for the loss of only a trump trick.

'Polly' Brings Refreshing Return To TV 'Innocence'

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — This is ratings "sweeps" time, and you face considerable Nielsen-boosting sex, violence, and bad manners on TV. But there are occasional respites, and a nice one for the family lies ahead on NBC Sunday night.

It's "Polly," an updated adaptation, with music and a black cast, of "Pollyanna," the 1960 Disney movie that was so goshdarn positive it made the Up With People singers seem the Grumble Chorus.

This two-hour TV version, which dips into "The Cosby Show" cast for its button-cute star, Keshia Knight Pulliam as Polly, and Phylicia Rashad as her stern spinster aunt, suffers from a similar case of sugary.

Still, it's oddly refreshing to see such unabashed innocence and good will on prime-time TV, if only as an antidote to all the "fact-based" TV movies that air later and are mostly routine salutes to grim.

This "Polly," written by William Blinn and directed and choreographed by Debbie Allen, former colleagues in TV's "Fame," is a gentle tale that through its young star slips in a plea for racial harmony.

Set in 1955, in times of racial segregation, it takes place in the mythical, tidy, all-black Alabama town of Harrington, a hamlet run and virtually owned by Polly's lovely, no-nonsense aunt.

The aunt played by Rashad — who in real life is Allen's sister — believes that life is a very serious matter. Woe betide anyone, even the town preacher (Larry Riley), heard making a joyful noise.

All this starts changing when young Polly, left an orphan by a car crash that killed her parents, arrives from Detroit to live with her aunt, and quickly becomes best friends with a local orphan boy (Brandon Adams).

Young Polly is a small ray of sunshine whose faith in humanity, regardless of race, is unshakeable. She brings out the good in everyone.

But of course that proves a turning point when she befriends a rich, frowny old white woman (Celeste Holm) who, as the Caucasian counterpart of Polly's aunt, runs and virtually owns a nearby all-white town.

Such predictability can be overcome with a good script. Problem is, Blinn, normally a fine writer, has sort of a tame teleplay here.

Instead of showing the world through the child's shiny brown eyes, the script is littered with distracting subplots, including the love of a young music professor (Dorian Harewood) for Polly's aunt.

Worse, a supposedly mean old man (Brock Peters) the kids encounter has a kindly twinkle in his eyes. A mean old man isn't supposed to have such a twinkle, only a soul of garlic.

A little more grittiness, less pasteurization, and more sharply drawn characters would have greatly helped this show. But it's enjoyable, anyway, for two reasons.

One is the fine cast, most of whose members have stage backgrounds. You only wish the script had offered them more.

The other is the music, particularly Harold Wheeler's tasty orchestrations of the gentle ballads or rollicking gospel songs. With two first-rate dance numbers as part of the show, the tunes help propel "Polly."

They also make you wish this were a full-fledged musical, not a story with music. It's a little frustrating. As in "Tap," which had the potential to be a great dance movie, most musical numbers in "Polly" end too quickly and seem unwisely abbreviated.

Bridges Case Ends In Mistrial

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — A mistrial was declared Thursday on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon filed against actor Todd Bridges, after jurors said they were hopelessly deadlocked 8-4 in favor of acquittal.

Bridges, 24, who appeared on the "Diff'rent Strokes" television series, was acquitted earlier this week of attempted murder and attempted voluntary manslaughter charges in the Feb. 2 shooting of a convicted Texas drug dealer.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Lorna Parnell reduced bail for Bridges from $1 million to $25,000 after conferring with the commissioner who heard the trial.

In the trial, Bridges testified that he was so intoxicated after a four-day cocaine binge that he could not remember if he shot Kenneth "Tex" Clay, 25, at a "rock house" in South-Central Los Angeles. "I don't think I did. I didn't know who did," he told the jury. He said he was using about 14 grams of cocaine a day at the time and was "based out."

'Sesame Street' Is Turning 21 With New Look At Geography

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The majority of Americans couldn't find Great Britain or Japan on a map; 23 percent failed to locate the Pacific Ocean; and the youngest American adults surveyed placed a thudding last in a nine-country geographical literacy poll commissioned last summer.

But because most of us know how to get to "Sesame Street" — the year-round electronic head-start program for preschoolers that turns 21 Monday — maybe we can lean on Big Bird, Bert and Ernie and their pals to try to correct future generations' woeful ignorance of the world we live in.

As a direct result of that jolting Gallop Organization-National Geographic Society survey last summer, the Children's Television Workshop, which produces "Sesame Street," applied its research and mounted goals accordingly. Among the curriculum goals set for the season, as this most tested and researched of all television programs comes of age, are geography and ecology.

The films that veteran "Sesame Street" animator Bruce Cayard will contribute this year will show chain reactions, how even the lowliest of nature's rung is necessary for trees to live, and what happens when no rain falls. Young viewers will be immersed in Alaska with its Eskimo children, rivers and mountains, sections of maps and pieces of continents, advocacies for recycling and against littering that Children's Television Workshop's educator-researchers hope will color future generations.

"The geographical stress is a direct outgrowth of those tests that showed people didn't know where places were," said "Sesame Street's" research director, Valeria Lovelace. The first question for her and her staff was whether the problem could be addressed from a preschool perspective.

They spent months researching, talking to children and looking at their school curriculum and reading their literature and decided it could. Head writer Norman Stiles said that if 3-, 4- and 5-year-olds could be taught letters and numbers, that he could also teach them the shapes of continents, states and countries. Not only could they learn it, they could remember it, tests proved.

"We found dramatic changes in children's abilities to recognize the shapes of continents," Lovelace said. "We found that if they were shown a plain video of a map and we pointed at it and said, "This is Africa," that 3-, 4- and 5-year-olds could recognize Africa when we put its shape in among three other shapes. Five out of 30 children got the correct response before, but among the children who saw the video, 20 of them made the connection."

After this season of "Sesame Street," said Lovelace, "children will be able to identify the outline maps of seven continents. It's a good beginning."

Alzheimer's Disease More Widespread Than Believed

By Brenda C. Coleman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Four million Americans may have Alzheimer's disease — 1.5 million more than had been thought — according to findings that suggest the disease and its treatment will "weigh heavily on our future."

A study of 3,623 elderly people in Boston indicates one in 10 of them probably had Alzheimer's disease, which robs people of their memories and their ability to function, researchers said.

The rates of Alzheimer's grew rapidly higher with advancing age, as nearly half of those older than 85 suffer from it, said the researchers, led by Dr. Denis A. Evans of Harvard Medical School.

Based on the study's results, the National Institute on Aging revised its estimate of how many people in geriatrics chief at Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago.

The U.S. Census Bureau has estimated that from 1980 to the year 2000, the number of people 90 years old and up will increase 236 percent, to 1.9 million, Naughton said.

The Harvard study consisted of giving brief memory tests to 81 percent of the 65-and-older population of east Boston beginning in 1982, and conducting more extensive psychiatric and laboratory testing on 467 of the individuals.

Of people 65 to 74 years old, 3 percent had "probable" Alzheimer's disease, compared with 18.7 percent of those 75 to 84 years old and 47.2 percent of those over 85, said the study.

"Everyone in our study, whether they had Alzheimer's disease or not, was living in the community, not in institutions," Evans noted in a telephone interview. "They may have had impaired function, far from perfect function, but they were able to live in the community."

Victims of Alzheimer's disease of ten end up in nursing homes, but Evans called for finding ways to allow Alzheimer's sufferers to stay in the community with their families.

Alzheimer's disease is a degenerative illness of the brain and nervous system with no known cause, no cure and no effective treatment, save medication to treat the depression that sometimes accompanies it.

The disease usually is fatal within 5 to 10 years, according to Naughton, who said its first symptom is typically memory loss, followed by speech difficulties and a tendency to lose one's way even in familiar surroundings.

Alzheimer's later robs people of their ability to cook and care for themselves, as well as exaggerating their personality traits — such as hot-temperament or passivity. The illness eventually confines victims to bed and renders them unable to respond to their environment, Naughton said.

The Harvard study "points out the need for further research, because the problem is greater than formerly recognized," said Creighton Phelps, vice president of medical and scientific affairs for the Chicago-based Alzheimer's Association, a research and family-support group.

Naughton said Alzheimer's research is relatively well funded compared with financial support for training physicians to care for Alzheimer's victims.

"We're very poorly prepared in the medical profession to deal with chronic care," he said.

Prevalence of Alzheimer's Disease

the United States suffer from Alzheimer's from 2.5 million to 4 million.

The institute issued a statement saying the study is unique because it involved large numbers of people, including those living in their own homes or with their families, and it included people with few or no memory problems.

"As a result, these estimates might lay the groundwork for developing the most accurate picture of Alzheimer's disease in the U.S. population to date," said Dr. Zaven Khachaturian, NIA associate director for neuroscience and neuropsychology of aging.

Results of the study, partly financed by NIA, were published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"People that I see do not realize that this is an extremely prevalent condition, that it is an epidemic that is going to weigh heavily on our future," said Dr. Bruce Naughton,

Battle Expected Over Child Care

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House and Senate Democrats, with the help of a maverick Republican senator, are setting the stage for a new showdown with President Bush over child care subsidies.

Negotiators from the two congressional bodies reached agreement Thursday night on legislation that would increase direct federal child care subsidies to low- and moderate-income families by $1.2 billion in 1990 and by up to $8.5 billion over the next five years.

The accord was struck after Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, dropped his demand that states be allowed to issue vouchers for a new $300 million program to pay for keeping schools open longer hours to provide day care and establish a new education-driven program for pre-school tots.

"At least we have a running shot now with a bill that the president might not veto," said Hatch, who angered the administration, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole and conservative groups by joining with liberal Democrats last spring in putting together the basic package.

In exchange, House Democrats agreed to allow more of the money to go to rural areas at governors' discretion and let states issue vouchers that parents could use to pay for day care services provided by churches.

A separate group of House and Senate negotiators still must reach accord on another provision included in the child care package that would increase tax credits for poor families with children by $500 to $750 a year.

But House and Senate Democratic leaders instructed the chairmen of their tax-writing committees Thursday to try to settle differences over that portion by Monday night in a drive to get a House vote by the end of next week.

"We're going to move on the child care bill as a separate item ... and we hope to see an early enactment of it," said House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.
