House Gives Up Speech Pay, But Perks Remain

By Steven Komarow
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — In granting themselves a $31,000-plus pay raise, House members are agreeing to stop taking $2,000 a pop for speeches before interest groups and pocketing their campaign treasuries when they retire.

But with the other perquisites around Capitol Hill, taxpayers can be assured their representatives would not have suffered even if they had given up the speeches and political money pots without an offsetting raise.

The current salary of $89,500 goes pretty far when your haircuts, gymnasium, parking, travel, meals, mail, insurance, retirement and telephone bills are subsidized by the Treasury.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader — who believes members of Congress should be paid about the same as their constituents, instead of being in the top 1 percent income bracket — once portrayed the system as "imperial legislators with their self-contained court of favors."

With the pay raise, the House members beginning in 1991 will have to give up the most profitable of those favors, the speech honoraria.

Many senior lawmakers for years have been padding their incomes by up to 30 percent that way.

The Senate voted to give itself only a 10 percent pay raise, and to keep taking the speech money for now. The result is that the House and Senate incomes will remain roughly comparable, at more than $120,000 by 1991.

tor, salary is just part of the remuneration package.

The National Taxpayers Union says the new pay package means that more than half of the House will be "pension millionaires." That is, once the pay hikes take effect, they can be expected to collect more than $1 million in benefits during their lives.

could expect to receive a pension of $99,199 a year.

That's on top of whatever he may have put into the House 401K plan, a tax-deferred retirement system that many companies make available to employees in the private sector.

Bush Axes Abortion Bill, But Campaigns For Foes

By Christopher Connell
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — President Bush, with an early eye on the 1990 elections, went campaigning today in Illinois and Rhode Island for two Republican congresswomen who disagree with him on abortion.

The trip came one day after Bush cast his third abortion-related veto this fall, knocking back a $14.6 billion foreign operations bill because it included $15 million in aid for a United Nations population control agency that Bush blames for supporting forced abortions in China.

The president made no mention of abortion in remarks prepared for a fund-raising lunch here for Rep. Lynn Martin, who is challenging incumbent Democratic Sen. Paul Simon in next year's elections.

Instead, he made a pitch for cutting the capital gains tax and passing his anti-crime and clean air initiatives — all of which have been held up in the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Later, Bush was bound for Providence, R.I., to raise funds for Rep. Claudine Schneider, expected to mount a challenge next year to Sen. Claiborne Pell, a Democratic veteran of 29 years in the Senate.

He also was helping raise money for Gov. Edward DiPrete, who is seeking a fourth two-year term in 1990 as Rhode Island's chief executive.

Bush said Martin has been in his corner on the fight for a lower tax on capital gains, which are the profits on the sale of investments such as real estate or securities.

"The capital gains battle may be over for this year, but the fact is this: we've seen the votes — a majority in both the Senate and the House are on record in favor of cutting the capital gains rate," the president said.

"When Congress reconvenes in the new year, cutting capital gains is going to be one of the top items on my agenda. ... It's a fight we're going to win," he said.

On another topic, Bush said next month's shipboard meeting with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev off Malta "will occur because America has been resolute in defense of liberty."

The president also was taking time in Chicago to visit the Pickard Elementary School classroom of Ana Zamora, a fifth-grader who asked his help in ridding her neighborhood of drugs.

After Bush's address to school children in September, outlining a national anti-drug strategy, teachers at Pickard had their pupils write the president about how drugs affected their lives. A letter from Ana caught Bush's eye.

"I never go outside because my mom gets scared that I'll get hurt because of the gang fights," she wrote. "President Bush, I've heard that you're pushing for a war on drugs. Please help remove drugs from our neighborhood. I will do my part by saying no to drugs, and I hope you can do yours. I know this is hard, but you can do it."

Bush read her letter aloud to children at a White House anti-drug event on Oct. 31 and promised: "We will do our best. And if she keeps doing her part, and if all of you do the same, we're going to stop drugs and keep our schools and our neighborhoods safe."

Martin, Schneider and two other pro-choice GOP congresswomen, Olympia Snowe of Maine and Nancy Johnson of Connecticut, met with Bush last Tuesday to urge him to modify his hard-line stance against abortion funding.

Study Raps Bush For '30s-Style Economic Policies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is shackling itself to 1930s-era economic policies to fight overseas competition in the advanced communications and computer marketplaces, a private study says.

The Economic Policy Institute said the United States stands to lose 2 million jobs and suffer a $225 billion trade deficit by 2010 if the government fails to help American industry compete in high-definition television, semiconductors, computers and digital communications.

The study released today, written by Robert B. Cohen and Kenneth Donow, concludes that — unlike Japan and the European Community — the United States has failed to develop a system to achieve and maintain competitiveness in leading-edge communications technologies.

"U.S. policies currently emphasize customer and convenience services to the near-exclusion of developing domestically produced equipment and improving infrastructure," the report said. "Without revising the antiquated policy framework that is a product of the 1930s, the United States cannot meet the challenges even now emerging."

The institute cited recent news reports that the Bush administration has "reversed or undermined Cabinet-level support for aiding advanced imaging systems, semiconductors and other high-technology industries."

The institute also cited reports that the Defense Department, which has earmarked $30 million for research into advanced TV display technology, now is considering buying such equipment from Japan and withdrawing its support of U.S.-based HDTV-related work.

The institute also said the administration, among other things, was considering reduced funding for Sematech, the government-industry consortium that is developing new semiconductor process technologies.

"With these steps, the Bush administration will curtail the main technology initiatives that have been supported by industry and military leaders," the institute said. "The result of taking such steps could be a major deterioration in the U.S.'s ability to compete in world markets."

Congressional sources have said the White House is gun-shy about promoting policies that smack of the "industrial policy" tenets espoused by Bush's 1988 campaign opponent, Michael Dukakis.

The White House, the sources said, doesn't want to be in a position of picking winners and losers in any competition for government assistance.

Commerce Department officials have said the administration no longer plans to focus on HDTV as it tries to adopt a cohesive telecommunications policy, and that advanced television will be only a part of a broader consideration of a range of technological initiatives.

HDTV, which promises crystal-clear images for a wide range of military, educational, medical and entertainment applications, will rely heavily on sophisticated computer chips, and proponents argue it will be a "technology driver" to revitalize the U.S. electronics industry.

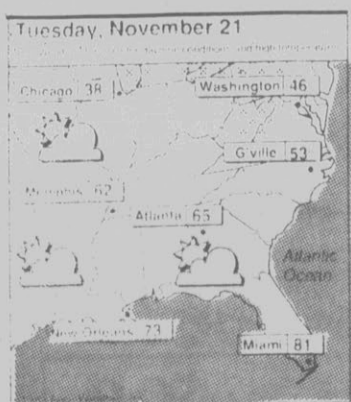

Bush has proposed that new technology be spurred by a reduction in the capital gains tax, a permanent research and development tax credit, and changes in antitrust laws to encourage joint research and development and production ventures.

The Economic Policy Institute describes itself as a nonpartisan Washington think tank supported by labor, business and individuals.

The institute said Cohen is a former consultant to the Commerce Department and the congressional Office of Technology Assessment. Donow, a former professor at Colgate University, Cornell University and the University of Virginia, is a telecommunications consultant, the institute said.

Consumer Panel Warns Some Toys Can Be Dangerous

By Denise Cabrera
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Shoppers in search of holiday gifts for little ones should be on guard because potentially dangerous toys and children's items are more readily available than ever, a consumer group said today.

There are so many hazardous products on the market for children that "toy safety has become a contradiction in terms," according to the 18th annual toy quality and safety report of the Consumer Affairs Committee of Americans for Democratic Action.

The committee said it was "inundated by potentially dangerous toys" and blamed "the pitiful ineptitude of the Consumer Product Safety Commission" for the availability of dangerous toys.

"In past years the commission only played dead. This year it was officially dead," said the report, citing the panel's lack of a quorum since January which makes it unable to take official actions.

Additionally, "bottom-line considerations have outdistanced safety considerations" by toy makers, said Ann Brown, committee chairwoman.

Dan Rumelt of the CPSC said agency officials were unable to comment on the criticisms because they had not seen the report.

The report, which previously focused on toys, this year includes infant and children's products because "they are inextricably linked and it just became too dangerous to ignore," said Brown.

The group recommends from among this year's heavily advertised toys 10

Pitt's grant award is the largest of those awarded. One of the other grants will go to the Edgecombe County Health Department and the other to the health department of Martin-Tyrrell-Washington counties.

The use of the grant money will be coordinated by the county health departments with the Regional Perinatal Center of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine, Monroe said. A full-time staff person to be employed in the Eastern Regional Division of Health Services Office in Greenville will be hired, possibly as early as January, Monroe said.

NASA Has Shaky Timetable For Space Station

By Harry F. Rosenthal
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — If all goes according to plan — and there's every likelihood that it won't — a space shuttle will leave its Florida launch pad in March 1995 carrying the first pieces of America's space station into orbit.

Ten flights and 28 months later, by the same shaky timetable, the parts flown up piece by piece will have been assembled into a place where men and women can live and work for months at a time, looking down at the Earth as they silently drift across the sky 250 miles high.

By August 1999, seven years late but just in time for the 21st Century, the space station will be finished, serving as a basic research laboratory for medicine, astronomy, space physics, and as a staging area for manned flights to the moon and beyond.

Mostly what stands in the way of this rosy scenario is money.

Space Station Freedom, as it is named, began as an $8 billion, 10-year project when President Reagan announced it in 1984. It has grown into a 15-year marathon likely to cost $19 billion or well over $30 billion, depending on whose figures you use.

From the start, the space station has had problems with money as well as with identity and purpose. Former Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin summed up the feelings of many in Congress when he called the space station "a project in search of a mission."

NASA administrator Richard Truly, a former astronaut, considers the space station "the cornerstone to our future in space," but admits the program has had a sputtering past.

"In the last five years, Space Station Freedom has undergone 11 major reviews, has faced nearly continual readjustments of its budget, has had a great deal of management turnover and has experienced several configuration and schedule changes," he says.

The management turnover reached its peak in May and June of this year when three top space station executives left NASA.

The budgeting process for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 — the year in which the design phase ends and cutting of metal begins — illustrates the station's travails.

President Bush proposed that NASA get $2.05 billion for the space station, but the House Appropriations Committee in July decided to chop off $400 million. With that prospect, the space agency made plans for a 20 percent reduction only to readjust when actual appropriations ended as $1.85 billion.

"The thing that's really tough is the funding instability in the program," says William T. Lenoir, the NASA associate administrator and former astronaut who reversed a trend and returned to the agency from private life this year to take charge of the space flight and space station programs.

"In June of every year we don't know what the hell we are going to get in October," he says. "This year, beginning in June, we slowed the progress of the space station down because if we had continued to build on schedule there was a real danger that we'd get to October and be firing contractors and laying off civil service (employees)."

The House Committee on Science and Technology authorized three-year funding for NASA to give space programs some stability. However, congressional appropriations committees who vote the actual money have not gone along.

So NASA has to live with the uncertainty.

"We are very much prejudiced to starting to construct the space station in March 1995," Lenoir says. The choices then boil down, he says, to "can we start either less of a station in March 1995, or can we start in 1995 and let it take longer (to complete)?" And last on our list is, "Okay, we can't start in 1995."

The station is America's big project for the next decade. Even President Bush's space goal for returning Americans to the moon and then pushing on to Mars requires that a space station be in place first.

When Reagan, in his 1984 State of the Union message, directed NASA to build the station within a decade, there were giddy plans for having it up and running in 1992 to celebrate the 500-year anniversary of Columbus' discovery of America.

To cut down on the spiraling cost, NASA a few years ago divided the station building program into two phases, intending to finish one before starting the other. Now nobody talks about the second block.

The latest plan envisions limiting crew size to four until the station is able to support a permanent crew of eight, planned for July 1997. There will be only 37.5 kilowatts of power available until that time, when it will be doubled. The smaller the amount of power, the fewer the experiments that can be run.

NASA had planned to develop a new high-pressure space suit at a cost of some $200 million. Instead, the existing shuttle space suit will be used for the space walks that will be required to assemble the station. NASA says it wants to reduce the need for space walks anyway.

One plan under consideration to save both money and time is to develop a so-called "Shuttle-C" that would substitute a cargo container for the shuttle orbiter and provide more than double the cargo-carrying capacity. Such a method could cut out up to seven of the 16 shuttle trips now planned to bring station parts into orbit.

What will the station look like? In the present configuration there would be a truss 508.5 feet long, constructed from long tubes made of a composite material with a protective coating and joined like a child's Tinker Toy set.

Two U.S. modules — the laboratory and the living quarters — would be attached to the truss. Each is 14.5 feet wide and 44 feet long. The Japanese and European modules are of similar size.

On each end of the truss would be attached two huge photovoltaic arrays, looking like giant windmill paddles, to gather power from the sun. Two smaller structures would radiate heat out of the modules. Another structure will be a telerobotic servicer, a sophisticated crane capable of performing precise manipulations in space.

The habitation module, divided into a quiet zone, a buffer zone and an active zone, is where the crew meets, eats, sleeps, exercises, has recreation and receives medical attention if needed.

Truly says that without the space station, "the future we dream of will never become the present we experience."

The working quarters of the space station will be five times the size of its Soviet counterpart, Mir. It will produce 10 times as much electrical power as Skylab, allowing experiments never before possible.

"An evolved space station," he says, "is the first essential step toward moving again beyond Earth orbit into the solar system." And from that will spring the return to the moon and journey to Mars.

"Each time we go to the frontier and beyond," says Truly, "we bring back more than we hoped for. This time we have the chance to bring back more than we can imagine."

Conferees To Seek New Accord On Medical Plan For Retirees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The embattled program of catastrophic medical insurance for retirees, which last week seemed doomed, has at least a spark of life remaining.

The Senate on Sunday rejected a bill to repeal the program — following the advice of the very negotiators who approved the bill a day earlier. That means Senate and House conferees will make a final effort to find an acceptable way of fixing the program without repeal.

"We ought to take another shot at it," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. He said he had reason to believe the House negotiators were preparing to make another offer — one that would kill the unpopular income surtax that finances the program but retain at least some coverage for catastrophic hospital expenses.

However, some House members who have worked most closely on the issue — including Reps. Brian Donnelly, D-Mass., and Bill Archer, R-Texas, who favor repeal, and Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who opposes repeal — said they knew of no new offer.

"While I personally have sought to achieve some reasonable compromise ... I am now of the opinion that no such compromise position exists," Archer told the House on Sunday night.

On a 349-57 vote, the House repeated its insistence that the program be repealed. But the Senate, under a prearranged procedure, rejected the agreement by voice vote and called for new negotiations.

The House and its negotiators have backed repeal for weeks. With Congress preparing to wrap up its 1989 session, Senate negotiators threw in the towel early Saturday and agreed reluctantly to support repeal.

But on Sunday, Bentsen said that Senate concession had served as a "shock treatment" for some House members and set in motion what he concluded was a new movement toward compromise.

GUILD OPTICIANS
YOUR EYEGLOSS PRESCRIPTION
What does the Federal Trade Commission say about "Eyeglass Prescriptions?"

Q. Can I charge my patients an extra fee for releasing the prescription?
A. No. The Rule makes it illegal for you to charge your patients any fee in excess of your normal examination fee as a charge for releasing the prescription. So if your normal examination fee is $30, you cannot add an extra $5 or $10 for releasing the prescription.

Q. When do I have to give out a prescription?
A. The prescription must be given to your patient immediately after you complete the eye examination. This means that you must give your patient his or her prescription before you begin your dispensing procedures (if you also dispense eyeglasses).

Q. What if my patient doesn't ask for the prescription? Do I still have to give it out to my patient?
A. Yes. The Rule requires that you prepare the prescription and physically offer it to the patient. Of course, you can't force the patient to take it, but you must offer him or her the written prescription. Simply asking your patients whether they want their prescription is not sufficient. We found that many consumers had never seen a prescription for corrective eyewear, and thus were unaware that they could take that piece of paper and use it to comparison shop.

Q. What is the penalty for violating the Rule?
A. The penalty for violating the Rule is up to $10,000 per violation.

Q. How can I report violations of the Rule?

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Will It Work?

Only The Future Will Tell

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev may have been talking to the Communist hardliners when he said the revolution was not a mistake.

In a talk to a national students conference in Moscow, Gorbachev praised the ideology of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution. He condemned "people who are trying to find the roots of our troubles not in the distortions of socialism that took place, but in its very nature and principles."

Perhaps in a broad sense there are Russian descendants who are better off now than in pre-revolutionary times. President Gorbachev, however, has to live with a record by his predecessors of repression, outright murders of Soviet dissenters and domestic economic policies who are abject failures.

In other Communist societies, too, economic policies simply have not worked to the benefit of the public. And that, after all, was what Communism was supposed to be all about.

Recognizing that, the world must also recognize that Mikhail Gorbachev has done more to change things in the Soviet Union and other Communist countries than any Soviet leader since the revolution.

Generally the reforms that Gorbachev has set in motion have been applauded in western nations.

Only the future will tell whether Communism as a form of government will totally collapse. The world knows that the Soviet president has to deal with a powerful lobby of hard line Communists who bitterly resent the changes their nation is undergoing today. They have the potential power to bring down Gorbachev.

The world also now knows that unrest has been rising in the Soviet Union and elsewhere for some time. Thus President Gorbachev is wise to undertake the current reforms.

Democracy is already taking root in the Soviet Union and eastern European nations. The productivity problems will be solved only with some measure of private enterprise which will spark incentive. Getting that past the Soviet old guard will be difficult, but essential.

'The world knows that the Soviet president has to deal with a powerful lobby of hard line Communists who bitterly resent the changes ...'

"COULD YOU GUYS KEEP THE NOISE DOWN? ... WE'RE TRYING TO CELEBRATE THE TOTAL COLLAPSE OF WORLD COMMUNISM!"

Friends Or Enemies?

WASHINGTON — What's in an Arab's mind? Near East Report, the semi-official newsletter of the so-called "Israel lobby," tells us. In a cartoon of a hooknosed gentleman, we see the brain divided into compartments. They are labeled "vengeance," "world of fantasy," "fanaticism" and "double-talk." The cartoon is entitled "Reading the Arab Mind," but maybe the Jewish mind that published it is more of interest.

That mind used the cartoon to illustrate an article entitled "Arab States Seek Revenge." The article is labeled "analysis," but mostly it recounts a paper published in 1975 by a former State Department official, Harold Glidden. In it, Glidden appeared to put all Arabia on the couch and what he found was chilling: paranoia, conformity and "the emotional need for vengeance to eliminate the ego-destroying feeling of shame." From Morocco to the Persian Gulf, we have nothing but mental cases.

It goes without saying that had such a cartoon appeared in an Arab publication — as they sometimes do — Jews could justifiably yell "anti-Semitism." The drawing is an insulting caricature, but Near East Report (NER) is not some rag published by just any organization. It and the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) were founded by the same man, the late I.L. Kenen. As such, the nominally independent NER is thought to speak for the vaunted AIPAC; at least its 50,000 subscribers think it does. AIPAC's clout in Congress is considerable.

As bad as the cartoon is, the article is in some ways worse. It portrays Arabs — well over 100 million people — as emotionally unstable, a kind of camel-riding youth gang, all hung up on machismo and bent on revenge. Not a mention is made of Egypt, the most populous Arab nation, which has made peace with Israel.

No one could argue that Arabs don't comprise a culture. A predominate religion (Islam), a common language (Arabic) and a common 20th-century experience (one-time colonial status) may well have given many, if not most, Arabs a common political psyche. Neither can it be argued that Israel's enemies aren't Third World countries, with all the instability associated with that term.

Still, the Middle East is so vast, the ethnic groups so numerous, the religious differences so obvious that generalizations are foolhardy. Is Near East Report referring to Saudi Sunnis or Palestinian Christians? Does the unnamed author of this analysis have Lebanese Maronites in mind or Syrian Druze, Egyptian Copts or, say, the Christian who happens to be Iraq's foreign minister? We are not told. The word "Arab" embraces them all.

Such an "analysis" may be insulting to Arabs, but it is also perilous to Israel. The article suggests that the Arab case against Israel is an irrational one, that for emotional reasons Arabs simply cannot come to terms with the Jewish state. "Even 14 years after the article appeared, Glidden's observations warrant serious consideration lest policymakers undertake political options that fail to take into account the emotions of the parties," Near East Report says. "Such naivete would be a recipe for disaster."

Indeed. But the emotions of some Israel supporters are equally troubling. It hardly serves Israel's interests to portray Arabs as psychopaths. Their grievances against Israel are not only real, but — from their view — justifiable. Jews really do live in lands once occupied by Arabs. Jerusalem, a city holy to Islam, is now the capital of a Jewish state. If Arab or Palestinian irredentism is emotional, then what shall we call the thousand-year longing for Israel that was so much a part of Jewish life in the Diaspora?

The Middle East situation is indeed characterized by a fair amount of Arab emotionalism. But Jews are not always paragons of reason, either. Sometimes explicitly, sometimes only by suggestion, the Arab cause is equated with the Holocaust — a historic crime as irrational as it was awful. Not every quarrel with Jews has to have anti-Semitism at its roots.

The Arab quarrel with Israel is not primarily about race, genes or culture, but about land. A West Banker's hatred for Jewish Israelis is not the same as a Nazi's hate for European Jews. Certainly conventional anti-Semitism has infected the Arab cause and some Arabs no longer can distinguish between Israelis and Jews.

Given Near East Report's influence, given who it speaks for, it behooves both NER and AIPAC to limit its advocacy of Israel to uncontested facts, including, of course, Israel's virtues. If the pro-Israel argument has to be made through caricatures of Arabs and questions about their emotional stability, it's probably best that nothing be said. An Israeli looking at Near East Report might well ask the age-old question: With friends like this, who needs enemies?

A Red Light For The Experts

To the editor:

I read in your newspaper several months ago where the city of Greenville had hired a team of technicians to study and adjust our traffic light system to better increase the flow of traffic on our streets.

I don't know if or when this work was done, but assuming it was, these (technicians?) must have laughed themselves all the way to the bank because the traffic light system is the biggest joke I've seen lately. I even start laughing myself sometimes through the frustration I endure while sitting at some of these lights.

The next time the city hires experts at anything, maybe they should check their credentials or references more closely.

A Symptom Of Poverty

To the editor:

I was fortunate to attend the recent National Association of Community Health Center (NACHC) Conference of Health Care for the Homeless. The meeting, combined with the cool weather, prompted me to remind your readers of North Carolina's problem with the homeless.

This year's conference theme was "Who is Responsible?" for the homeless. Answered in terms of who will provide care, many hands have already been raised. An increasing number of North Carolinians have volunteered to shoulder a portion of the burden.

Almost all of North Carolina's major cities, and some of the smaller ones, have shelters and health services of the homeless. We can, however, ask another question. Who (or what) is responsible for the existence of the homeless?

According to most experts, the problem of homelessness is a symptom of poverty. It is a result of political philosophy that invests more in business and military capital than in human capital. As long as we as citizens consider "shelter" as appropriate housing for men, women, and children, we will support programs that are inconsequential to the needs of the homeless. We nurture poverty and its children — homelessness, drug abuse, delinquency, and crime — with our current overwhelming concerns with money, power, and war. Our representatives in Congress listen to their constituents when they have a strong grass roots concern. It is time we let them know we are not satisfied with being the most greedy, uneducated, indifferent society in history.

In conclusion let me ask that if the cold winds of winter remind you of the plight of the homeless, please volunteer to help your local effort to aid the homeless. If you care to do more, then call or write our local congressman and ask why such an embarrassing problem as homelessness still exists.

Dealer, Shuffle The Deck

To the editor:

There appeared an interesting front page article in Monday, Nov. 6th's, USA Today newspaper captioned "Parents as Teachers, How to help your child do well in school."

Such a national newspaper article makes me naturally wonder about the local comparison, especially when the concern is education. We already know how North Carolina stacks up on its SAT scores. Well, how about parent participation in school?

USA Today's article stated "Schools where children are failing improve dramatically when parents come to help." In contrast, a Greenville elementary school's principal, supported in her policy by the Pitt County schools administration, has limited a parent's observation of their child's classroom to 30 minutes to one hour a day once a week. You decide how this stacks up for education.

Parents need to be encouraged and allowed to participate in their child's education. As compelling as it is to urge that more resources be committed to public education, it becomes increasingly clear that more funding is not the whole answer.

School reform must include the introduction of parents and volunteers into the school setting. I suggest someone shuffle the deck again and call for a new dealer on this hand.

Is Education Keeping Up?

To the editor:

I am writing as a concerned parent on education. Americans, whether they are from China, Vietnam, Italy, Portugal, England, Africa, France, Norway, Ireland, Canada, Japan, India, Australia, etc., are all in the same educational boat. If we do not take education more seriously we are headed for a future decline with the Third World countries.

Here is an example of future education. I was having a one-sided dinner conversation the other day with a man who consults with NASA. He was discussing the advantages and disadvantages of making steel in space. He was saying that steel could be made more perfect in a non-gravitational environment. The steel would have less impurities in it, etc.

This country has this type of advanced educational jobs available to a population with 27 million people who can't read. These non-readers are a cross section of our society. Other countries will have the same types of educational challenges for their people. We are in the space age but is our educational system? The rest of the world is starting to reach for the stars also. We can not live on forefather's reputation forever.

The city I moved from had an Adopt-A-School program. Companies or individuals could adopt a school by helping them with different types of support projects. The school personnel and the children showed great enthusiasm and appreciation for their help. Maybe Greenville could start a program so that individuals could help whether they had children in school or not. The schools could sure use the help and the supporters would be securing their own future as well.

Choice Is A Right

To the editor:

The Pitt County Branch of the American Association of University Women is greatly concerned about activities which would limit family planning services and restrict access to abortion.

Choice, self determination, is the foundation of all civil rights. Among a woman's most basic rights is the freedom to make informed choices concerning her reproductive health within the dictates of her religious and moral beliefs. Her economic status should not restrict her ability to make that choice.

AAUW hopes that pregnancy prevention can become the new meeting ground for all those concerned about abortion. The association is greatly concerned about attacks on family planning and restrictions on access to abortion when it undermines a woman's right to decide when and whether to bear children.

We believe strongly in the protection of basic civil rights, including freedom of reproductive choice. We strongly support the recent rally in Washington, D.C. and are determined to protect a woman's right to reproductive choice.

Tobacco Industry Concerned About Consumer Trends

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Tobacco companies in North Carolina and across the nation appear to be less concerned about recent restrictions on smoking than they are about the trend those new rules and regulations may be starting.

"These kinds of things in the past, in my judgment, have not had any material effect on the industry," said Alexander Spears, vice president of Lorillard in charge of the company's Greensboro operation.

Philip Morris, the nation's largest cigarette manufacturer, and Loews, which owns Lorillard, are considered among the most desirable stocks on the market. And despite a drop in domestic cigarette consumption, tobacco production is up this year and exports of unmanufactured tobacco leaf are expected to increase slightly.

In North Carolina, the nation's largest tobacco-producing state, tobacco is still the No. 1 agricultural product. It accounts for $1 billion of the state's $4.3 billion annual agricultural income.

But there's no denying state and local governments are taking action in response to a growing public concern about the effects of smoking on non-smokers.

"There's no question that if they keep on it's going to cut the consumption," said Jim Graham, North Carolina's commissioner of agriculture. "I think this could be the beginning."

Consumption is dropping and has been since 1964. The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said cigarette smoking has declined about a half a percentage point a year.

Sensitive to the wishes of non-smokers, businesses and industries across the nation are restricting where smokers can light up. A growing number of employers are refusing to hire smokers altogether.

A smoking ban on domestic airline flights is awaiting President Bush's signature.

And this past week, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., proposed legislation that would give government more control on tobacco products and finance an anti-smoking campaign.

But industry officials are most frustrated with developments at home, where tobacco has been king.

Two dozen hospitals in North Carolina — including two of the state's major medical centers — have either severely restricted smoking or have restrictions under consideration.

Voters in Greensboro — home to cigarette-maker Lorillard Corp. — approved an anti-smoking referendum earlier this month that limits or bans smoking in large retail areas and most restaurants.

Besieged from all sides by politicians and anti-smoking crusaders, the powerful tobacco lobby appears powerless to halt a tide of anti-smoking regulations.

"It has a potential domino effect, I think," U.S. Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., told the Greensboro News & Record. "The tobacco forces have to see these people are serious about this."

The issue is emotional. The tobacco industry and its smoking comrades complain of discrimination and charge that anti-smoking zealots are bent on nothing short of smoking abolition. They insist anti-smokers are trampling on their right to enjoy a smoke in peace.

"I think we're building ourselves up to a tremendous backlash," warned Charles Harvey, executive vice president of the N.C. Tobacco Growers Association.

Tobacco foes argue that smoking is a privilege, not a right, and those who abuse it should lose it. They say smokers abuse their privilege when they force others to breathe potentially harmful smoke.

"I don't think we should take this," said Ahron Leichtman, Washington-based president of the national organization Citizens Against Tobacco Smoke. "This is not an issue of smokers versus non-smokers. This whole issue is health versus greed."

The role that smoking restrictions have played in a decline in consumption is unclear. Much of the drop stems from health concerns and higher prices.

But a report issued in September by the U.S. Department of Agriculture said cigarette use may drop 3.5 percent this year, and a department economist familiar with the report said restrictions as well as price increases have played a part.

Anti-tobacco forces say they are sensitive to the plight of farmers and have no desire to run them out of business. But they'd like to see farmers grow a product that's safer and just as profitable as tobacco.

"If there were other commodities they could grow that would pay them as much money as tobacco, they'd go to it in a heart beat," said Roger O'Quinn of Raleigh, executive vice president of the American Cancer Society's North Carolina division.

For the tobacco industry, though, not all the news has been negative. Tobacco officials are finding a corps of dedicated, vocal smokers who are tired enough of the mounting restrictions that they have banded together to present a unified front.

So far, for example, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of Winston-Salem has received 500,000 calls this year from smokers seeking information on ways they can stop the trend. That is 11 times what the company received this past year.

"We're seeing smokers' rights groups throughout the country," said Gary Miller, a spokesman for The Tobacco Institute. "They're saying 'We make up one-third of the population. We've got to make our feelings heard. We're tired of being pushed around.'"

Bald Head To Stabilize Beach Area

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALD HEAD ISLAND, N.C. — Bald Head Island's Village Council on Sunday acknowledged the results of the community's recent beach renourishment referendum and agreed to begin efforts to stabilize their beach.

Eighty-one percent of the island's property owners voted in the non-binding, mail-in referendum, which measured support for a two-year beach renourishment and erosion stabilization effort. The deadline for voting was last Wednesday, said council spokeswoman Margee Herring.

Erosion will continue, according to a study by Olsen Associates and R.W. Stevens & Associates, and the island could lose $24 million in damage over the next 25 years unless preventive measures are taken. Beach renourishment could prevent nearly $21 million of that damage, the report said.

The Property Owners' Association endorsed the proposal and sent it on to the Village Council after 51 percent of the votes showed strong support for the beach protection program. The council unanimously approved the measure.

Although the specifics haven't been outlined, property owners cast their ballots based on a two-year program that would place 300,000 cubic yards of sand along the island's shoreline, at an individual assessment based on the location of the property.

Beachfront residents would be assessed more than people who own property in the island's maritime forest, for example.

For the past several months, property owners have debated the merits of beach renourishment on the island, which has experienced erosion on about two miles of its 14 miles of beach.

State To Produce Record Turkey Crop Despite Setbacks From Hugo

Break-Ins

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Burglaries in North Carolina continue to grow at a faster pace than in the rest of the country, and so far this year, the break-ins are occurring 12 percent more frequently than in 1988.

Authorities blame the drastic increase on drugs.

Most types of crime, especially burglaries, are on the rise statewide, although the problem is apparently worse in urban areas.

Nationally, burglaries are down 1 percent this year compared with 1988, but in North Carolina, burglaries are up 9 percent over 1988, when 88,963 were reported, according to statistics from the Governor's Crime Commission.

For the last three years, North Carolina has outstripped the nation in increases in all types of reported crimes.

Base Prison

SEYMOUR JOHNSON AIR FORCE BASE, N.C. (AP) — About 300 minimum-security inmates are expected to move into a new $9 million prison complex at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in two years but, for now, about 147 of the non-violent inmates are on "weeds and seeds" duty.

"They do chores such as grounds maintenance, landscaping, cleanup and things like that," said Monica Wetzel, the prison camp's assistant superintendent. "Before, the military was using the airmen and other staff to do these outside tasks. It took them away from the work they were actually trained to do."

The Federal Bureau of Prisons opened the minimum security prison in March to house non-violent inmates serving short federal prison terms for white collar crimes such as wire fraud, bank fraud and income tax evasion. Some of the men in the prison camp are serving sentences for minor drug-related offenses.

Air Force personnel sign out prisoners five days a week for duties around the base and return them in the evening, Ms. Wetzel said.

Drug Fight

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Americans must be prepared to use serious, harsh measures to fight illegal drug use, drug czar William Bennett said.

"We need to do more, we need to do a better job educating young people about the problems of drug abuse," Bennett told about 100 people at Charlotte's Sharonview Country Club Saturday night.

Bennett, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, was in town to visit relatives over the Thanksgiving holiday. His wife, Elayne Glover Bennett, is a Charlotte native, and the dinner Saturday was in memory of her father, the late Clarence Glover.

Drug Charges

WILMINGTON (AP) — Vice agents have arrested two men, believed to be Burgaw's top cocaine dealers, on multiple drug trafficking charges during raids on two homes.

Twig Rollins of the Pender-Bladen Vice and Narcotics Task Force said Robert Earl Cox, 54, was charged with 23 counts of trafficking cocaine, and Harvey Lee Black, 56, was charged with 17 counts, Rollins said. Each was jailed under $250,000 bond after their arrests Friday.

The charges are based on undercover buys made by a State Bureau of Investigation agent, Rollins said.

Chase Death

RALEIGH (AP) — A North Carolina State University student died early Sunday when he ran into a brick wall during a high-speed police chase, officials say.

John Joseph Bonatti, 21, was pronounced dead on arrival at Wake Medical Center at 3:10 a.m.

Raleigh Police Lt. D.R. Turnage said the chase started at 2:20 a.m. when Bonatti failed to stop for a speeding violation in west Raleigh.

At one point, Bonatti made a U-turn and doubled back toward the N.C. State University campus, where he crashed into the wall at a primary entrance to the campus.

Fire Death

KING, N.C. (AP) — A 67-year-old woman died in a fire that may have been caused by a cigarette dropped on a couch, a fire marshal says.

Firefighters found Ellen W. Thomas dead on the floor of her bedroom late Saturday night, according to Arthur D. Scott, the fire marshal for Stokes County. A doctor determined through a blood sample that Ms. Thomas had inhaled a large amount of carbon monoxide in the smoke, Scott said.

MONROE, N.C. — A traditional Thanksgiving dinner may be a little less expensive this year after the nation's top turkey-producing state rebounded from Tropical Storm Hugo to produce a bumper crop of the bird.

Tom Turkey, the star of Thanksgiving feasts across America, will make a record showing in North Carolina this year, and North Carolina will produce more than 50 million birds.

The record production comes despite extensive damage from the Sept. 22 storm to many turkey operations in Union County and surrounding areas.

"It's a milestone," said Ed Woodhouse of the N.C. Turkey Federation. "It's never been done in any state in the union."

At the Circle S Ranch, Hugo killed 60,000 birds and damaged or destroyed 230 turkey houses.

"If old Hugo had puffed a little harder we might not be having Thanksgiving around here," said general manager Mitchell Deese.

The Circle S Ranch, located about 12 miles south of Monroe, produces about 3 million turkeys annually.

"Thanksgiving is still the godsend to the turkey industry and we're thankful for that," Deese said. "Ten years ago, 60 percent of the turkeys produced were eaten on Thanksgiving Day. Now it's about 20 to 25 percent, but we're producing a lot more birds."

Union County agriculture extension agent M.C. Howell estimated the long-term damage from Hugo in the county at $50 million.

Despite the local problems, more turkeys are available nationwide this Thanksgiving, driving prices at the supermarket down. Many stores were offering birds for 49 cents a pound or less this week.

That's good news for families across the nation who are getting ready to buy all the fixings for a traditional Thanksgiving dinner.

The U.S. Agriculture Department says the price of holiday turkeys will be down from a year ago, as fourth-quarter production nationwide is about 12 percent higher than the same time last year.

"The supply of turkeys is going to be quite bountiful," said Woodhouse.

With more and more Americans opting for fish and poultry, a large percentage of those 50 million turkeys produced in the Tar Heel state are eaten at other times of the year.

Turkeys are processed in a variety of ways as deli meats, ground turkey and turkey parts.

North Carolina became the No. 1 turkey state in large part due to its temperate climate. According to Deese, it simply costs less to produce turkeys in the south.

"In Minnesota it costs about $6 a square foot to build turkey houses," he said. "Here it's about $4. It doesn't get so hot or so cold to make the cost prohibitive."

To feed 3 million birds, the operators of the Circle S Ranch will go through 4.5 million bushels of grain and 50,000 tons of soybean meal.

Per capita consumption of turkey has skyrocketed in the last five years, as many Americans are turning to poultry as an alternative to red meat.

According to National Turkey Federation statistics, the average American consumed just over 12 pounds of turkey in 1985.

By now, turkey pastrami, turkey franks and turkey ham are staples in many households, with the average American projected to eat nearly 18 pounds of turkey in 1990.

"Americans are learning that turkey is a better quality product at a lower price (than red meat)," said Deese.

Woodhouse said a popular way to cook turkey is to grill marinated turkey breasts over an open flame.

"Ground turkey is being used in spaghetti and tacos," he added.

At last month's N.C. Turkey Cooking Contest in Raeford, a national pizza restaurant chain served pies with turkey topping, he said.

Turkeys are just part of North Carolina's $1 billion-plus poultry industry. The upswing in poultry sales shows that turkey is being eaten throughout the year.

Sam Starnes, one of the owners of the Circle S Ranch, said producers want to see turkey promoted even more than it is right now.

While chicken has made inroads at major fast-food chains like McDonald's, Burger King and Hardee's, turkey typically is not offered on the menu.

"We're on the brink of marketing it to the fast-food industry," Starnes said.

Users Will Pay Waste Dump Cost

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Although N.C. taxpayers' money is being used to get the work on a proposed radioactive waste storage plant started, state law requires facilities that generate the waste ultimately to pay for storing it.

That means the estimated $61 million cost to pick a site, license an operator and build a repository by 1993 must come from generators in eight Southeastern states, including North Carolina, that will use the regional repository.

"You are implementing a true user-pay system," said Mike Jones of Raleigh, a member of the N.C. Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority and chairman of its legal and finance committee.

The biggest users will be utilities with nuclear power plants, which generate 98 percent of the radioactivity in the waste. The utilities can be expected to pass along the costs of the N.C. repository to their customers, who will pay it in their monthly electric bills.

In North and South Carolina, that means nearly every household and business in the two states will share the cost, because all Carolinas utilities either operate nuclear power plants or buy nuclear-generated electricity.

Although disposal costs will be higher at the new N.C. repository, Duke Power Co. customers last year paid about 4 cents on every $100 worth of electricity sold to dispose of waste at Barnwell, S.C.

N.C. agencies are to recover any costs related to the repository, just as South Carolina does. South Carolina uses license fees to offset the cost of overseeing and inspecting the Barnwell repository.

While the N.C. legislature intended to keep the burden of the largely unwanted repository off the shoulders of taxpayers, critics say the scheme, nevertheless, puts taxpayers at risk.

Critics say the risk comes from a combination of the uncertainty of the future of interstate waste arrangements and the pay-as-you-go plan adopted to finance the repository.

Generators of waste won't provide money for construction of the repository until they begin to use it in 1993. That means that either the state, through bonds, or the proposed operator, Chem-Nuclear Systems Inc., through corporate financing, must come up with $26 million for construction. No decision on financing has been made.

Lisa Finaldi of the Clean Water Fund of North Carolina, a group critical of the regional approach, said the financing arrangement could fall apart should states pull out of the Southeast Compact for better deals elsewhere.

She argued that as the number of generators shrink, the chance that the state might fall back on tax money to make up the difference increases.

Two Men Injured As Plane Hits Barn

ELON COLLEGE, N.C. (AP) — Two men were injured — one seriously — when a single-engine plane crashed into the top of a barn in a neighborhood about two miles east of this college town Sunday morning, officials say.

The plane had just taken off from the Burlington Airport, about six miles away, when it crashed into the barn and landed upside down. Neighbors rescued one of the men who was trapped and suffocating in the crushed wreckage.

Neal Harris, 18, of Elon College, was listed in stable condition Sunday night at Alamance Memorial Hospital. Phil Driver, for whom authorities had no age or address, was listed in serious condition at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Rescuers believe Harris was the passenger and Driver was the pilot because of the positions they were in when they were taken from the plane.

Deputies said the plane crashed in a neighborhood off N.C. 87 about 11:30 a.m. Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration are expected to be at the crash site at 8 a.m. Monday to inspect the plane.

Ben Payne, who lives about 200 feet from the crash site, was working in his yard when he heard the plane.

Payne said the plane hit the edge of the barn, then crashed through the top of the building and bounced off the other side, before finally landing upside down.

Payne ran to the plane, where gasoline was gushing from the side. One passenger crawled out, and Payne went to the pilot's side where he found Driver jammed in.

"One of the building timbers had come through the cockpit and wedged him in," Payne said. "He was upside down, and his legs were pinned against the dash of the plane. I managed to get the timber out, and then I grabbed one of his legs to free it, and it felt splintered."

Payne hesitated to move the man because of his leg, but as the fuel continued to gush from the plane, the man gasped to Payne that he couldn't breathe.

As he worked to free Driver, other neighbors arrived and helped pull the man from the plane. Payne said the rescue took about five or 10 minutes and emergency rescue workers arrived a few minutes later.

Walesa Ends U.S. Tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TRENTON, N.J. — Lech Walesa completed his whirlwind U.S. tour with stops in the birthplace of American independence and at the home of heiness who has pledged millions to help save the site where Solidarity was born.

The Nobel Peace Prize laureate also made a visit to St. Hedwig's Roman Catholic Church in Trenton, where he laid a wreath Sunday night at a shrine for the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, the activist priest slain five years ago by Polish secret police.

Walesa was scheduled to complete his week-long tour of the United States, his first ever. He left New York today for Caracas, Venezuela.

The Solidarity leader's message of hope was cheered at every stop on his tour. The reception was particularly enthusiastic at St. Hedwig's, the center of Trenton's Polish community.

Admirers stood on pews to see him. Many shed tears as they sang the Polish national anthem.

"The whole world is looking at the United States as the leading force in the contemporary world," Walesa said.

"I am an example of the small person who can do great things," he said. "I am proof of the adage that faith can move mountains. I believe in freedom and liberty and in democracy and I didn't have an army."

Before visiting the church, Walesa was a guest at a private dinner at Jasna Polana, the Princeton estate of Barbara Piasecka Johnson. The Polish-born Mrs. Johnson, 52, inherited much of the Johnson & Johnson pharmaceutical fortune after the death of her husband, Seward Johnson.

In June, she announced that she would spend up to $100 million for a 55 percent interest in the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, where the Solidarity movement was first kindled by Walesa in 1980. The shipyard employs more than 10,000 workers, but Poland's communist government had planned on shutting it down because it was unprofitable.

Mrs. Johnson, who came to the United States in 1968, has been hailed as a hero in Poland.

Survivor Helm Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — The death of Buck Helm, who amazed rescuers by surviving four days beneath tons of concrete in a collapsed freeway, was a grim reminder of the destruction wrought by the Northern California earthquake.

Just 20 hours earlier, residents cheered the reopening of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge as a symbol of recovery from the Oct. 17 quake, which toppled a 50-foot section of the span, killed 67 people and caused $7 billion in damage.

"I'm sure this will hit a lot of people hard," said Steve Whipple, the State Department of Transportation engineer who found Helm in the early hours of Oct. 21.

"I was under the impression that he was going to make it," Whipple said. "It was just going to take a long while."

Helm, who turned 58 on Nov. 10, died of respiratory failure at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center on Saturday evening, 28 days after his rescue.

The rescue of the burly longshoreman's clerk buoyed spirits of rescuers depressed by the rising death toll in the collapse of Interstate 880 in Oakland — and cheered people across the country who watched the drama on television.

"I'm still glad we found him and gave him a better fighting chance than he would have had otherwise," Whipple added. "It picked our spirits up and made all our work worth it."

The 220-pound, 5-foot-10 Helm suffered a fractured skull, fractured neck, three broken ribs, nerve damage to his leg and kidney problems caused by dehydration. He also had diabetes and high blood pressure.

Others were rescued from the freeway immediately after the quake, but Helm was the only survivor to be pulled from the wreckage after crews began gingerly searching through rubble remaining on the teetering structure.

Helm worked on the docks in Oakland and commuted 250 miles to the small town of Weaverville on weekends to be with his family and friends.

His former wife, Lorrie Helm, said she acknowledged hearing his family read the cards and letters sent to him by well-wishers, although he couldn't speak or otherwise communicate.

Quasar May Be Most Distant Object Ever Seen

By Lee Siegel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Calif. — Scientists say they've spotted the farthest and oldest object ever seen, a quasar that gives a peek of the universe near the beginning of time and challenges a popular theory of how stars developed.

The star-like body, about 14 billion light years from Earth, possibly has illuminated like a flashlight in the fog the matter that spawned everything from galaxies to life itself, according to scientists.

"Astronomers have looked for more than 20 years for this primordial stuff of which galaxies, stars and then us were formed," said astrophysicist John Bahcall of the Institute for Advanced Study. "One possible interpretation is that it's been found."

The object was seen through the 200-inch Hale Telescope at Palomar Observatory, northeast of San Diego. The quasar is in the constellation Ursa Major just below the Big Dipper's bowl.

"We've found the most distant object on record," said astronomer Maarten Schmidt of the California Institute of Technology. "We are now seeing an object as it was a little over 1 billion years after the beginning of the universe."

Schmidt and astronomers James Gunn of Princeton University and Donald Schneider of the Institute for Advanced Study, an independent research center in Princeton, N.J., report the discovery in December's Astronomical Journal. The find was to be formally announced today.

Quasars, as large as our solar system, are the brightest objects in the universe. The brightest emits more light than 1,000 galaxies of 100 billion stars each.

Astronomers believe quasars form near black holes in the centers of galaxies. Black holes are so massive their gravity sucks in even light. But as matter is pulled in, intense bursts of light also are emitted. Scientists say a gigantic explosion, the "Big Bang," created the universe 10 billion to 20 billion years ago. They usually cite 15 billion years as the universe's age.

On that scale, the newly discovered quasar formed at least 14 billion years ago, meaning its distance from Earth is 14 billion light years, or 82 trillion billion miles. One light year equals 5.88 trillion miles, the distance light travels in one year.

If the universe is 20 billion years old, Schmidt said the quasar would be about 18.5 billion light years away, or 109 trillion billion miles from Earth.

The discovery is "striking, unexpected and very significant" because it suggests the first galaxies and stars developed much faster than can be explained by what is known as the "cold, dark matter" theory, said Bahcall.

The theory says that "cold, dark matter," or hydrogen gas, clumped together because of gravity to form stars and galaxies over several billion years, not merely 1 billion years, Bahcall said during a phone interview.

Advocates of the theory may "have to come up with (new) theories that make galaxies faster," he said.

Alternatively, light from the quasar may be partially blocked by clouds of gas, but not primordial gas, which was uniformly distributed in the young universe, Bahcall added.

Because the age of the universe is uncertain, scientists measure a quasar's absolute age and distance using a property called "red shift."

Just as a train whistle seems to shift to a lower pitch as a train moves away from a listener, light from distant quasars shifts toward the color red as they move away from Earth while the universe expands.

The newly found quasar has a red shift of 4.73, making it 7 percent older and more distant than the previous record holder, a quasar with a red shift of 4.43 whose discovery was announced in December 1987 by scientists in Arizona and England.

The quasar is so distant that its light is 400,000 times too faint to be seen by eye.

Schmidt devised the idea of using the Hale Telescope to search for distant quasars.

Students See Counselors At School Hit By Tornado

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWBURGH, N.Y. — The parking lot at the East Coldenham Elementary School was full today as parents took children to talk to counselors and see the cafeteria where seven of their classmates were killed during a tornado.

No classes were held and no one was allowed into the cafeteria, but people were encouraged to peer through a doorway into the room where a wall of concrete and glass shattered during lunchtime last Thursday.

"We want people to see that we're trying to get back into normal," said Horst Graefe, director of pupil personnel for the Valley Central School District. "We don't want it to be a fearful thing. The response has been extremely positive. People have come in, taken a look, gotten their questions answered and have had a chance to say hello to their friends again."

About two dozen mental health workers were at the school to speak to parents and children. Classes were to resume Tuesday.

Outside, dozens of flower arrangements stood in a cold rain against the boarded-up cafeteria wall.

On Sunday, Gov. Mario Cuomo told an estimated 3,000 people at a memorial service that "so great a grief cannot be borne without being shared."

"Today even amid our crushing, frightening pain we remember the blessing of these children, who were gems to everyone their lives touched," the governor said Sunday night at Valley Central High School.

Five funerals were scheduled for today; two were held Saturday. Two children remained in critical condition at St. Luke's Hospital in Newburgh. Sixteen others either have been treated or released or were listed in conditions ranging from good to satisfactory at five area hospitals.

On Sunday night, townspeople sang hymns, heard prayers and tried to make sense of the disaster. Sandy Griffin, who brought her three children to the memorial service, said it was important to be there even if she could only hear the words over a loudspeaker.

"It means a lot to know that everyone cares," Griffin said. "Everyone in this community is sticking together. You have to come out here because it could have been your kids. If it were my kids I would want my friends and family around me."

Vera DiBitto stroked the blond hair of her 5-year-old son, Michael. "Maybe it will make us all a little more thankful for what we have right now," she said. Hundreds of people — families of the dead, injured and those lucky enough to survive — have turned to psychologists and social workers in the wake of the tornado.

About 50 to 60 mental health workers were available for families at the district's schools all weekend.

Dozens made private pilgrimages to the school over the weekend, placing flowers in the shadow in the wall, now rebuilt in wood. "Pray for the children," was spray-painted on the wall.

Hundreds of residents have come to view the scene of the tragedy, said Nathalie Weeks, Orange County mental health commissioner.

"They've been fantastic," she said of Newburgh residents. "I think families have been so brave and brilliant about coming in and taking advantage of the counseling."

School social worker Lorraine Wernow said she asked an 8-year-old survivor to draw a picture to express his grief. The boy drew a school with a roof, floor and walls.

But, she said, he was afraid the walls would come tumbling down.

"I couldn't give him a full assurance, but I told him it was very unlikely it would happen again," Wernow said. "I don't like to lie to children. You can't lie to children."

Not just children and their parents are in need of help. Gus Quist, a Newburgh volunteer firefighter who helped pull children from the wreckage, said he's still shaken. "It helps to talk about it," he said.

Wernow said she spoke with a man who heard about the tornado and rushed to the school. He couldn't find his child, only learning after several agonizing minutes that his wife had taken the youngster home.

"He must have lost many years off his life in just those few short minutes," Wernow said.

Toy Warning Issued

products for the "toy box" and an equal number for the "trash box." The committee also cites 13 toys, a baker's "dirty dozen," of the most potentially dangerous toys from the 51 surveyed.

Bob Jacobs, president of Aqua Sling, whose water balloon slingshot is among the group's "dirty dozen," said most of the problems associated with the product were related to user responsibility.

"We haven't had anybody hurt by the product. Everybody that's had any problems with it has been with misuse of the product," said the California businessman. The report said hundreds of people had been injured after being struck by water balloons fired by the slingshots.

An executive at Lewis Galoob Toys, Inc., said the company was unaware of any safety concerns with its Bouncin' Babies Cuddly Baby doll that also was listed among 1989's worst toys. The ADA report said the toy has a pacifier with a stick that could poke a child's eye.

"It's a design that works and kids seem to enjoy it and it meets all safety regulations," said Stan Clutton, vice president for marketing at Lewis Galoob.

The committee said categories of potentially dangerous toys include: —Exploding items designed to make loud noises which can be damaging to ears or cause hearing loss.

—Projectiles, including a water balloon sling shot, that use guns or rubber devices to throw items a distance with force.

—Toys that invite eating because that's what young children will do "whether edible or not."

—Inexpensive toys with small parts hazardous to young children that are offered near the checkout counter to encourage impulse buying.

—Novelty items such as spray-can party string sold in toy stores "where unsuspecting kids and parents can buy them." Emergency rooms have reported skin irritation from party string.

—Toys with inadequate or misleading age labels. In some cases manufacturers label toys "not for children under 3" when they are intended to appeal to exactly that age group.

—Flammable items, including a stuffed doll, cuddling cushion and baby linen set that burns.

—Poorly made licensed items with familiar childhood and cartoon characters.

The report cites CPSC statistics that estimated there were 142,000 toy-related injuries in 1988, an increase of 11,000 incidents over 1987. Nursery product-related injuries to children under 5 totaled 72,000 in 1988, according to commission figures quoted in the report.

The ADA gives parents and child caregivers these safety tips for buying toys:

- Don't trust age recommendations on labeling and packaging.
- Safe and non-toxic are advertising terms that may be meaningless on toy packages.
- Never leave a child alone near water.
- Throw away infant pacifiers when the child outgrows them.
- Avoid excessively noisy toys.
- All toys with wheels require adult supervision.

comes, and taxpayers match the first 5 percent.

Members get health insurance like other federal employees, plus more personal and immediate attention if they so desire.

The Attending Physician's office provides doctors, nurses and technicians who can take x-rays, dispense drugs, give allergy and immunization shots and perform other services.

Staying in shape is convenient at the Senate Health Club and the House gymnasium. The Senate has an indoor tennis court; the House has a swimming pool, handball, volleyball and basketball court and a steam room.

Members pay half the cost of their $78,000 life insurance policies.

Lawmakers don't get Christmas bonuses, but they often take government or privately financed "fact-finding" trips during the holidays.

Those inclined toward helping the disadvantaged have visited desolate areas of Africa, sometimes with tragic results such as the death earlier this year of Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, on an airplane flight to a refugee camp.

Others have been less inclined to rough it. The Paris Air Show is one of the annual pilgrimages for many members of Congress.

Everything around the Capitol is geared toward making lawmakers feel like they own the place.

The subsidized barber shops and beauty salons cater to their needs at discount prices. There's a private movie theater, and gun enthusiasts have access to the Capitol Police firing range.

Asked why Bush would go there, given the security problems, Fitzwater said, "These are the countries involved in the drug war. It makes sense to go there."

Colombia has been wracked by drug-related violence, and the government there is under siege from cocaine barons who are trying to force an end to a crackdown against drugs.

On another subject, Fitzwater said the White House is considering Cartagena, Colombia, as the site for a multi-nation summit on the drug problem.

He said advance teams have been sent to Colombia to consider it as a possible location, but that no agreement has been reached with the other countries that would attend.

There will be ticketed admission for crowd control. The tickets are FREE. Ticket distribution will begin on Monday, November 20th. Tickets must be picked up. No phone reservations will be made.

Bush Plans TV Talk Wednesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush will make a nationally broadcast address Wednesday evening on events in Eastern Europe and next month's summit with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, it was announced today.

The speech, at 9 p.m. EST, will be broadcast from the presidential retreat at Camp David in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains, where Bush will be spending the Thanksgiving holidays.

It will be only the second time in his presidency that Bush has made a prime-time, televised address. The first was Sept. 5 when he announced details of an anti-drug program.

The White House also confirmed that the president will stop in Brussels, Belgium, after the superpower summit to brief the North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies on the talks.

Bush and Gorbachev are to meet Dec. 2 and 3 on U.S. and Soviet warships in the Mediterranean off the coast of Malta. The opening of the Berlin Wall and the spread of democratic reforms in Eastern Europe are expected to dominate the meeting.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, announcing Bush's speech, said, "He will be talking about the summit, events in Eastern Europe, but mostly about Thanksgiving."

On another subject, Fitzwater said the White House is considering Cartagena, Colombia, as the site for a multi-nation summit on the drug problem.

He said advance teams have been sent to Colombia to consider it as a possible location, but that no agreement has been reached with the other countries that would attend.

Adoption Week Acknowledges Joy And Sorrow

Dear Abby: The week of Nov. 19-25 is National Adoption Week. Because of the positive attitude you have expressed toward adoption, and your apparent understanding of both the joy and sorrow that adoption brings to those involved, you have the potential to influence the attitudes of millions of people.

Will you kindly publish a particularly meaningful letter concerning adoption? — Nedra Randolph, Adoption Counselor, Houston

Dear Nedra: With pleasure:
Dear Abby: My daughter just turned 10. On her birthday, I shed a few tears. I wish I could have held her and told her all the things a mother should tell her daughter when she turns 10. I wish I could have dressed her up and put ribbons

Dear Abby

in her hair, and ridden the merry-go-round with her until we both got sick, then laughed ourselves silly rolling down hills in the park.

I also said a little prayer of thanks for having made the decision 10 years ago to give her up for adoption. I was barely 16 and wanted my daughter to have a better life than I could have given her.

I feel confident that the parents who were blessed with her can give her what I could not and will love her as much as I do.

I pray my daughter realizes that it was not for lack of love that I gave her up, but because my love was brave and mature enough to let her go when I was but a child myself.

I pray that when she is 18, she will decide to look me up through an adoption search group and we will meet again. The last time I held her tiny hand, she was only 10 days old.

Until then, my thoughts and prayers are with her and her parents. — Hopeful In L.A.

Dear Hopeful: Are you aware that biological parents can register with International Soundex Reunion Registry, P.O. Box 2312, Carson City, Nev. 89702? Adopted children may also register, and when they become legal age, if both parties are registered and want to find each other, a match is made.

Send a long, stamped, self-adressed envelope to the above registry, requesting Soundex forms.

I have dealt with the people at the registry for many years and have found them to be efficient, honest and in total agreement with my feelings that neither the identity of the birth parents nor the adopted child shall be disclosed unless both parties are agreeable to a reunion.

Dear Abby: I will never forget a letter you had in your column from a young adopted girl who asked you how to go about finding her "real" parents.

I recall reacting very strongly to that letter because I was also adopted — a fact I had known all my life. I can't remember when I first found out because Mom and Dad told me as soon as I was able to understand what adoption meant. They told me I was a very special child — that they had their choice of babies, and I was the one they chose.

When I was a kid, I used to brag about it because I felt so "special." Now I realize that my parents may have gone overboard because they didn't want me to feel insecure or inferior to my friends who were being raised by their biological parents.

Because I've made no secret of the fact that I was adopted, I've had people ask me if I know who my "real" parents are. I simply reply, "I know who my real parents are. They are the people who fed me, clothed me and taught me right from wrong. They are the ones who sat up with me all night when I was sick and waited up for me when I stayed out later than I should have. They paid for my education and convinced me that I could be whatever I wanted to be. I owe them more than I can ever repay."

I'm married now and I have children of my own, which makes me appreciate my parents even more because I know how hard it is to be a parent. So why should I go searching for my "real" parents? I found them the day they found me. — Adopted In Illinois

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

MRS. MASSENGILL

Wedding Vows Spoken Saturday Morning

DUNN — The wedding ceremony of Elaine Huey Yancey and William Willard Massengill Jr. took place Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The Revs. Jack Hunter and Don Price conducted the double-ring ceremony in Divine Street United Methodist Church. Organist Andrew Wheeler of Benson and soloist Wanda Garrett of Greensboro presented music.

Daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Yancey of Raleigh, the bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Massengill Sr. of Route 3, Dunn.

Betty L. Yancey of Vernon Hills, Ill., was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids included Nancy Daid of Greenville, Tracie Joseph Johnson and Gail Adams of Dunn and Sandra McQuade of Buies Creek, sisters of the bridegroom. Ruth Taylor Stephenson of Benson was flower girl.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers included Jeffrey Stephenson of Benson, Edwin Yancey of Jacksonville, brother of the bride, Con Adams of Dunn and William McQuade of Buies Creek, both brothers-in-law of the bridegroom. Barnes Stephenson of Benson was ring bearer.

The bride wore a formal gown with a scalloped sabbina neckline and illusion yoke, illusion sleeves and sheath skirt. The bodice was enhanced by re-embroidered alencon lace, pearls and iridescents. The skirt and train were trimmed with lace inserts and edged in scalloped alencon lace. She wore a crown of beaded alencon lace accented by pearl droplets. Her pencil-edged veil extended from a double pouf on the crown. She carried a cascade bouquet of orchids, stephanotis and ivy.

The maid of honor wore a cranberry velvet tea-length gown with a sabbina neckline and carried a bouquet of pink, rose and cranberry flowers. Bridesmaids were dressed identically. The flower girl wore an empire-style European length velvet dress with capped sleeves.

A reception was held at Howard

House, and a rehearsal dinner was held at the Garland and Lola McLamb farm house. Other pre-nuptial parties given for the couple included a bridesmaids luncheon, several showers, brunch and for the bride, a lingerie shower.

The couple will live in Benson after a wedding trip to New York.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School in Greenville and East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from Campbell University and is a graduate student at ECU. She is a vice president with the State Employees Credit Union.

Sheraton, Westin Join Disney Hotels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — The latest hotel opening at Walt Disney World is the first phase of an unusual alliance among two big hotel chains and the entertainment giant.

The 758-room Swan, owned by Westin Hotels and Resorts, was scheduled to open today.

Together with Sheraton Corp.'s 1,509-room Dolphin, scheduled to open July Fourth, the Swan will anchor the nation's third-largest convention and resort complex.

The huge "fantasy resort" is being built on 150 acres in a tropical setting that includes a 50-acre man-made lake and 200,000 square feet of meeting and banquet space. Covered walkways connect the two hotels over a waterway which leads to Disney's theme parks.

Sheraton and Westin have eased their competitive fervor enough to get together to operate the properties as a joint enterprise under the wing of the Walt Disney Co.

"We cooperate in some things and compete in others," said Dolphin spokesman Bob Mervine. The com-

Stores Closing

NEW YORK (AP) — L.J. Hooker Corp., unable to find a buyer for its B. Altman department stores, said it would close six of the chain's seven branches.

Hooker said the move, which will include the company's flagship Manhattan store, was approved Friday by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court overseeing the company's reorganization. Hooker is owned by the Australian developer Hooker Corp., which has been unable to handle its massive debt load and been forced to liquidate itself.

Marketing Missteps Of The '80s New Coke, Home Banking, Miniskirts Missed The Boat

WASHINGTON — Walter Mondale, new Coke, Michael Dukakis, home banking, miniskirts and the Knoxville World's Fair were among the worst marketing mishaps of the 1980s, a business magazine reports.

"During a decade when knowing the customer became increasingly important, many companies — and even whole industries — failed to understand their markets," American Demographics magazine says in its December edition.

The staff of the magazine, published by Dow Jones & Co., combined to select the "10 blunders of the 1980s," ranging from "New" Coke to the decade's Democratic presidential contenders.

"We weren't interested in poor products, but rather in missing the market. Most of these were really quality products, but the industry didn't understand its consumers," explained Judith Waldrop, research editor for the magazine, which concentrates on business-related population studies.

Waldrop said she started the project a couple of years ago after hearing a discussion about the influence of marketing research versus business instincts in product decisions.

"Coke was the first thing that came to mind," she said of the 1985 decision by the Coca-Cola Co. to abandon its traditional soft drink in favor of a new formula.

"But Coke forgot about the giant generation that controls much of American business — the baby boom," the magazine reported.

The millions of Americans in that post-World War II generation grew up with traditional Coke and reacted angrily to the change, eventually forcing the company to bring back the original product as Coke Classic.

Today, American Demographics reports, Classic has 20.1 percent of the soft drink market while the costly campaign to sell new Coke resulted in only a 1.4 percent share for that brand.

Another blunder was the 1987 effort by designers to sell miniskirts to women.

"I thought this was ridiculous," said Waldrop, "I just don't want to look like this in the job situation." Miniskirts were fun 20 years ago, she explained, but most women no longer find that hemline appropriate.

Boeing Strike Nearing End

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — Boeing machinists tonight will approve an agreement to end a strike that has virtually shut down production at the world's largest maker of commercial aircraft, a key union leader predicted.

A tentative contract, which affects more than 57,000 workers in nine states and was expected to set a standard for other aircraft manufacturers, was agreed upon early Sunday.

The agreement culminated 14 hours of talks during which a federal mediator took the unusual step of presenting his own proposal. It was accepted by a 3-2 vote among negotiators for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

The 48-day strike — longest against The Boeing Co. in 41 years — has delayed deliveries of jets to airlines at a time of growing passenger loads and rising concern over the nation's aging commerial airline fleets.

Tom Baker, president of Machinists District Lodge 751, praised the three-year pact as a substantial improvement over two earlier Boeing offers.

"I feel it will be ratified overwhelmingly," he said.

But Justin Ostro, an international vice president who coordinates aerospace industry negotiations for the Machinists, had harsh words for the agreement and the way it was reached.

"There's a great deal of sacrifice on the part of these members," Ostro said. "They were entitled to a great deal more."

Union members meet at Seattle's Kingdome at 8 p.m. PST to vote after hearing an explanation and arguments about the contract. Meetings also are set for 5 p.m. CST in Wichita, Kan., and 8 p.m. in Portland, Ore.

Strikers picketing outside Boeing plants Sunday were happy to hear about the agreement.

"I'm pretty sure everybody will go for it. We're tired of standing around in the rain," said Elaine Campbell, who was doing just that outside a Boeing jet plant in suburban Renton.

Outside corporate headquarters, picket Dave McMurrin said people were starting to feel the pinch of being on strike. "If they put the last contract offer in front of members, I think it would have passed," he said.

Boeing chief negotiator Larry McKean said if the pact is approved, strikers could return to work Wednesday. "At this point we're looking forward to a favorable vote on this contract and a return to normal operations," he said.

Analysts have said a settlement with the Boeing Machinists traditionally sets the pattern for other aerospace companies, especially Lockheed and McDonnell Douglas, as well as for other unions at Boeing.

Pirates' String Of Near Misses Continues

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — East Carolina's recent football history against teams ranked in the Top 20 reads like a war novel of battles fought but never won.

There's chapter upon chapter of gallant efforts by an often over-matched army, whose plight seems hopeless but manages to mount a challenge only to be suppressed.

The goal is victories. The reward is respect.

Enough respect, already. Proving you are worthy to be on the field with the big boys is no longer satisfactory.

That was evident in the voice of Bill Lewis, the tears of senior split end Walter Wilson and the eerie hush that enveloped the entire Pirate locker room after ECU fell 47-42 at 19th-ranked Pittsburgh Saturday afternoon.

This was one victory Lewis' troops desperately wanted — one that would have clinched an ever-elusive winning season.

The final chance comes next week at Southern Miss. A loss would leave the Pirates 5-5-1 — a non-losing season.

Doesn't sound quite as nice, does it?

Pittsburgh coach Mike Gottfried, after breathing a sigh of relief, said he needed no proof that the Pirates were a formidable opponent. He knew it all along.

"They wanted to prove that they were a good football team," Gottfried said. "They didn't have to prove anything to me. I knew it coming in. I think they've had a great year."

"As I've said before, I think Billy Lewis is an up-and-coming coach. I think he's done a tremendous job in a short time."

It will be interesting to see how Lewis handles Wilson's choice to exercise his constitutional right of free speech to the Pittsburgh media prior to Saturday's game.

A confident Wilson blasted Pitt's secondary and predicted an ECU win — offering a 17-14 score no less.

Wilson was off target on that by a long shot, but missed nothing thrown his way, snaring seven passes from quarterbacks Travis Hunter and Jeff Blake for 172 yards and four touchdowns and setting four school records in the process.

That he proved he could play as well as he could talk didn't appease Lewis. Such comments might be expected from the Brian Bozworths of the football world but from Wilson, who was Walter Who? to all of Pittsburgh before his comments appeared in Friday's Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Lewis said he didn't condone statements of that nature from anyone, much less someone from his team. He took no action prior to the game, but assured it would be addressed this week.

Good luck, Walter.

"I didn't like what he said because I believe it has no place in college football," Lewis said. "He will know about it this week, that's for sure."

Despite setting himself up for possible humiliation, Wilson earned the respect of the Panthers by back-

Monday Quarterback

As we are seeing more and more these days, winning on the football field isn't everything, but once in a while, to put one of the big guys down would be nice. Twice this year, East Carolina has come within a hair of doing it.

But as we've seen over the past decade, East Carolina has done this time and again. The great year of 1983 saw three games just like this, where one play could have made the difference.

Even so, this year's version of the Pirates has to be congratulated for the effort they have made. Saturday, they will have one more opportunity to come away with a winning season in the 1980s as they travel to Southern Mississippi.

But regardless of the outcome, the young men of the 1989 Pirates have certainly set a tone for the '90s.

A lot of times when someone speaks out like Walter Wilson did last week to the Pittsburgh press, it becomes fodder for the dressing room bulletin board.

Certainly the defensive secondary heard of Wilson's feelings that the Panthers couldn't stop him.

That usually ends up with the one who did the talking shaking his head in wonder as his world collapses around him on the football field.

Wilson, however, not only proved himself, he did so in record-breaking fashion. Wilson has surpassed the career records for most passes caught, most yards receiving and most touchdowns caught. And he's hot on the trail of some others and will have a shot at them Saturday against Southern Mississippi.

Nearly overlooked, however, was the performance of the man who got the ball to him, Travis Hunter. His four touchdown passes tied the single-game record set by Dick Cherry against Appalachian State back on Oct. 31, 1953 — over 35 years ago.

Wilson's four touchdowns also ties him with three other Pirates who got four. Dave Alexander (Howard, Nov. 20, 1965), Kenny Strayhorn (Dayton, Oct. 26, 1974) and James Speight (Newport News Apprentice, Nov. 14, 1959). They all got theirs on the ground, however.

Et Carolina's basketball season is set to open this weekend, and coach Mike Steele has to be anxious to get things off the ground.

The Pirates did well in their exhibition game against the Yugoslavian Red Star team, but that was entirely different from any game they'll play the rest of the year.

Appalachian State should offer more of a test for the Pirates in their debut Saturday night.

Meanwhile, East Carolina's Lady Pirates will open their season in a tough road game against Georgia Southern. ECU could be improved this year, but plays a rugged schedule, which includes a home date against N.C. State.

This marks the first time in several years that the Lady Wolfpack has been on the schedule and the first time in even more years that they've appeared in Minges Coliseum.

ECU's first home date, however, is the annual Lady Pirate Classic which brings in Coastal Carolina, Howard and Fairleigh Dickinson in addition to ECU. That's slated for Dec. 1-2 in Minges.

Wallace Avoids Woes, Claims Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Ga. — Rusty Wallace was locked in a living nightmare.

The prestige and $1 million payoff that accompany the Winston Cup driving championship seemed to be slipping away. He lost one lap to the leaders, then a second and, finally, a third with an ill-timed pit stop, a flat tire and some loose lug nuts.

"I kept saying, 'This can't be happening,'" Wallace said. "It was scary and hair-raising to keep thinking I could lose it."

Wallace

But the 33-year-old charger from St. Louis didn't lose it. While buddy Dale Earnhardt outclassed the field and ran away to victory in Sunday's season-ending Atlanta Journal 500, Wallace was "racing my guts out" to finish 15th and beat Earnhardt for the NASCAR stock car title — his first — by 12 points.

The final count after 29 races and 11,113 miles of competition was 4,176 points for Wallace, 4,164 for three-time Winston Cup champion Earnhardt, who earned $81,700 for winning the race and $330,000 for second place in the season standings.

That is the second-closest finish in NASCAR history. Richard Petty was an 11-point winner over Darrell Waltrip in 1979.

"I knew I had to win it," Wallace said with a shake of his head. "I knew it wasn't going to be easy. ... I can't believe I only won by 12 points."

Earnhardt began the 328-lap, 500-mile race third in the standings, one point behind Mark Martin and 79 behind Wallace, knowing that Wallace needed only to finish 18th or better to clinch the title.

Martin, who started 20th, never was a factor. He did run in the top 10 for quite a while, but went out with his car in flames after a blown engine on lap 225, finishing 30th and falling to third in the final standings, 122 points behind Wallace.

Earnhardt just came up short.

"I just drove it with all my heart," he said. "I didn't quit on the car a lap. I stayed after the race car all day and I made it do what I wanted it to do. I didn't give it a rest."

"I can think of a million reasons I'm not happy about finishing second — and Rusty's got all of 'em," Earnhardt said with a smile. "We did all we could do."

The race was marred by the fatal crash of Grant Adcox, a 39-year-old driver from Chattanooga, Tenn., who was a part-timer on the Winston Cup circuit.

Adcox spun and hit the wall hard in turn one on lap 202. His car burst into flames and skidded to a stop at the bottom of the banked track. It took rescue workers about 10 minutes to remove the unconscious driver from the car and he was pronounced dead after being airlifted to Georgia Baptist Hospital in Atlanta.

Adcox is the first driver killed in Winston Cup racing since Terry Schoonover died here in November 1984.

There were only six caution flags in the race and no other serious accidents or injuries.

Earnhardt averaged 140.229 mph on the way to his fifth victory of the year and 39th of his career, all but one of coming during the 1980s.

Wallace, who celebrated his championship by caving in the roof and hood of his car with victory leaps before jumping joyously to the ground, was booed by many in the record sellout crowd of 80,000.

He drew the ire of many Georgians a year ago when he criticized Bill Elliott for stroking — driving very conservatively — after the Dawsonville, Ga., driver beat him for the championship by 24 points by finishing 11th as Wallace ran away with the win, much as Earnhardt did Sunday.

"I wouldn't call him (Wallace) a stroker," Earnhardt said. "I don't think he came down here to stroke. Circumstances just got him today, and he had some little problems."

Adcox Is Killed In 1-Car Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Ga. — Grant Adcox was killed Sunday in a one-car crash during the Atlanta Journal 500 NASCAR stock car race at Atlanta International Raceway.

The 39-year-old driver from Chattanooga, Tenn., was pronounced dead of massive head and chest injuries at 4:10 p.m. EST after being airlifted to Georgia Baptist Hospital in Atlanta.

The crash came in turn one on lap 202 of Sunday's 328-lap, 500-mile race, with Adcox's Oldsmobile Cutlass slamming into the concrete wall. The car slid down the banked track with flames coming from underneath.

It took track safety workers about 10 minutes to remove the unconscious driver from the battered car.

Adcox, a regular in the Automobile Racing Club of America late model stock car series, has been a part-time performer on NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit.

He drove in 14 Winston Cup events in 1978 and his best NASCAR finish came in that year's Talladega 500 in which he was fifth.

Green Bay Upsets 49ers, 21-17

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Don Majkowski scooted eight yards on a quarterback draw for the go-ahead score with 11:55 to play, his second touchdown run, as the Green Bay Packers shocked error-plagued San Francisco 21-17 Sunday and stopped the 49ers' six-game winning streak.

Majkowski, who also threw for a touchdown for the 13th consecutive game, slipped up the middle almost untouched on a third-and-3 play as Green Bay picked up a game on both Minnesota and Chicago in the NFC Central. The surprising Packers (6-5) can move into a tie for the lead by beating the first-place Vikings in Milwaukee next Sunday.

The 49ers, whose second-half scoring was limited to Mike Cofer's 44-yard field goal with 7:43 left, lost the ball four times on turnovers in easily their worst game of the year.

The 49ers were called for three penalties totaling 35 yards on Green Bay's game-winning drive, including an offside on defensive end Daniel Stubbs that wiped out a 96-yard interception return by Chet Brooks. San Francisco finished with a season-high nine penalties.

San Francisco drove to the Green Bay 29 in the final three minutes, but was stopped by Robert Brown's sack of Joe Montana and another penalty. The loss left the 49ers (9-2) tied with the New York Giants for the league's best record — they play each other next Monday night in San Francisco — and still two games ahead of the Los Angeles Rams in the NFC West.

Until the go-ahead drive, it had appeared to be a day of missed opportunities for Green Bay, paying its first visit to Candlestick Park in 15 years.

The Packers recovered three fumbles and intercepted a pass in the game's first 33 minutes — the first three turnovers in San Francisco territory — but could only parlay them into seven points.

Green Bay twice led by a touchdown in the first half on another fine game by Majkowski, who came in as the NFL leader in passing yardage and touchdown passes.

Majkowski, who didn't practice for most of the week because of a hyperextended right knee, fooled everybody by tucking the ball on his right hip and jogging around right end on a 2-yard bootleg to make it 7-0.

After a second-quarter interception by Chuck Cecil, Montana's first in 150 passes, Majkowski hit Sterling Sharpe cutting across the middle of the end zone on a 4-yard play to make it 14-7.

But the 49ers, who had scored on Montana's four-yard flip to Roger Craig, tied it 14-14 on a 98-yard march just before halftime. Montana, who completed 10 of 11 passes to five different receivers on the drive, found Jerry Rice all alone in the back of the end zone with nine seconds left in the half.

Majkowski completed 18 of 30 passes for 153 yards. Montana, the league's top-rated quarterback, was 30-for-42 for 325 yards.

Bad Memory Lingers

Elway Putting Past Behind Him

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — He still thinks about it every now and then, but Denver quarterback John Elway has pushed the embarrassment of the 1988 Super Bowl toward the back of his mind.

After throwing three interceptions in a 14-for-38 passing performance against Washington, it would seem only natural that revenge would be Elway's incentive tonight when the Broncos face the Redskins in what is being billed as a rematch of the 1988 Super Bowl.

Forget the past, Elway said.

"This is a big game because we're fighting to have the best record in the AFC," Elway said. "What happened two years ago has nothing to do with it. We're a totally different team right now, so we're not looking at this as a rematch."

Indeed, the Broncos hardly resemble the team against which the Redskins set 19 Super Bowl records and tied 10 others in a 42-10 victory. After an 8-8 season a year ago, Denver has used a ball-control offense and a simplified, attacking defense to take a commanding lead in the AFC West.

With a victory tonight, Denver would improve to 9-2 — a mark shared by the New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers for the best in the NFL — and hold a 1½-game lead over Cleveland in the battle for home-field advantage throughout the AFC playoffs.

Washington has also changed quite a bit since that Super Bowl, mostly for the worst. Since their third Super Bowl appearance of the 1980s, the Redskins have a 12-14 record, including 5-5 this season.

It has been a nightmare of a year for Washington. Injuries, close losses and the departure of two starters because of drug use has left Coach Joe Gibbs wondering what can possibly happen next.

"I can't remember a season like this one," Gibbs said. "If it isn't one thing it's another. All we can do is keep trying, and maybe something good will happen because, believe me, I don't know if things can get any worse."

UNC Wins 4th Consecutive Soccer Title

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Senior Shannon Higgins scored one of top-ranked North Carolina's goals and assisted on the other as the Tar Heels won their fourth consecutive NCAA Division I women's soccer championship with a 2-0 victory over Colorado College on Sunday.

The Tar Heels have won seven national championships and are now unbeaten in 95 games dating back to the 1986 season. They came into Sunday's game with a record of 24-0-1. Colorado College, ranked No. 2, finished with a record of 16-4.

Tar Heels Claim Field Hockey Title

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — North Carolina goalie Evelien Spee scored on a penalty shot in overtime on Sunday to give the Tar Heels a 2-1 victory over top-seeded Old Dominion and a national field hockey championship.

North Carolina finished the season at 20-2, while the defending NCAA champion Lady Monarchs closed the year at 24-2. Both Old Dominion losses were to the Tar Heels.

Next season's tournament returns North Carolina as host team, and will showcase Houston, Iowa State and a team that will be announced at a later date.

Sanderson, S. Iredell, Mooresville Win

RALEIGH (AP) — Adam Stone scored the game-winning goal and assisted on two other goals as Raleigh Sanderson won the 4A state soccer championship on Saturday night with a 3-2 victory over Greensboro Grimsley.

It was the 10th state soccer championship, which finished the season with a 23-1 record, including 19 consecutive victories.

Grimsley, which lost its second state championship game in the past three years, finished at 21-2-3.

Stone, a junior forward who played on the junior varsity team last season, was selected the game's most valuable player.

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Jeff Cummings scored two goals and David Deese added another as South Iredell won the state 3A soccer championship 3-0 over Hibriten on Saturday night.

South Iredell finished the season at 19-2-1, while Hibriten is 23-2-1.

MOORESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Matt Touchton scored his 44th goal of the season 14 minutes into match to lead Mooresville to the 1A-2A state soccer championship with a 2-0 victory over Swansboro on Saturday night.

Mooresville (17-2-2) pressures Swansboro's defense with a relentless offense, outshooting the Pirates 17-10.

Swansboro finished the season at 22-4.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Julio Cesar Chavez successfully defended his World Boxing Council super lightweight title Saturday when the fight was stopped after the 10th round with a half-blinded Sammy Fuentes sitting on his stool.

Chavez had battered Fuentes the previous round and the challenger's right eye was swollen shut when referee Carlos Padilla took the advice of ringside physician Flip Homansky and halted the scheduled 12-round bout.

Irish Remain No. 1; Fresno St. Drops Out

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Notre Dame remained No. 1 in The Associated Press college football poll today for the 12th week in a row while Fresno State dropped out of the rankings and Michigan State returned after a five-week absence.

However, Notre Dame could face its toughest game in its battle to repeat as national champion in next Saturday's visit to No. 7 Miami.

The Irish, who flattened Penn State 34-23, received 57 of 60 first-place votes and 1,497 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Colorado, a 59-11 winner over Kansas State, received the other three first-place votes and 1,439 points after completing an 11-0 regular season. The points for Notre Dame and Colorado were the same as last week.

Michigan held onto third place with 1,359 points after trouncing Minnesota 49-15. No. 4 Alabama received 1,319 points by trimming Southern Mississippi 37-14. No. 5 Florida State crushed Memphis State 57-20 and received 1,244 points. No. 6 Nebraska earned 1,200 points by downing Oklahoma 42-25 and Miami totaled 1,169 for a 42-6 rout of San Diego State.

However, Southern Cal was held to a 10-10 tie by UCLA, dropping the Trojans from eighth to 12th. Tennessee, a 33-21 winner over Mississippi, moved up from ninth to eighth with 1,065 points, idle Arkansas rose from 10th to ninth with 988 and Auburn from 11th to 10th with 925 by defeating Georgia 20-3.

The rest of the Top 25 consists of Illinois, Southern Cal, Houston, Texas A&M, Clemson, Virginia, West Virginia, Texas Tech, Pittsburgh, Ohio State, Brigham Young, Penn State, Duke, Hawaii and Michigan State.

Last week, it was Auburn, Illinois, Houston, Texas A&M, Clemson, Virginia, Penn State, West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Texas Tech, Brigham Young, Ohio State, Fresno State, Hawaii and Duke.

Michigan State moved back in by crushing Northwestern 76-14 for its fourth consecutive victory. Previously unbeaten Fresno State lost to New Mexico 45-22 and dropped out after a two-week stay.

Divac Adjusts To NBA Offenses

Playing Defense, Though, Is Still Quite A Mystery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Lakers rookie Vlade Divac has definitely found his strength and weakness.

"For now, I'm playing defense very bad," the Yugoslav said. "I had a lot of fun with the ball."

In 17 minutes of playing time Sunday night Divac scored 17 points, had six rebounds and keyed rallies in the second and fourth quarters to help the Lakers beat the Washington Bullets 120-115.

Magic Johnson had 25 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds as the Lakers won their seventh straight game.

"Offensively, he is a great surprise," Johnson said of Divac. "He has the moves, a great touch and he's a good rebounder. He just knows how to play the game."

"Vlade has come along much faster than I ever thought," Johnson said.

Vlade Divac

The Heat, loser of four consecutive games, was led by reserve forward Billy Thompson with 21 points.

With 7:39 left in the first quarter, Wiggins hit a 15-foot jump shot to give the Rockets the lead for good. Akeem Olatunji, Buck Johnson and Floyd scored eight points apiece as Houston built a 36-24 first-quarter lead.

Around The League

Houston point guard Sleepy Floyd did not start in the Rockets' 132-94 defeat of Miami, but ended up scoring 23 points.

"I'm not too thrilled with the move, I just did what I had to tonight," Floyd said.

Floyd did not score in the Rockets' 141-111 loss at Denver on Saturday.

"This is my lineup for a while. I'm looking for the type of consistency that will help us win," Houston coach Don Chaney said.

Non-Scoring Starters

Miami's starting five of Grant Long, Glen Rice, Rony Seikaly, Kevin Edwards and Rory Sparrow scored just 28 points in 104 minutes.

shooting 11 of 37 (.297) from the field. The Heat lost to Houston 132-94. By contrast, the Rockets' starters scored 72 points in 121 minutes, shooting 31 of 48, a .646 percentage.

Catledge Out

Orlando forward Terry Catledge, averaging 20.6 points and 10.2 rebounds per game, will be out at least two weeks with a fractured left thumb sustained Saturday night in the Magic's 116-103 victory over Philadelphia.

Orlando has now lost two-thirds of its starting frontcourt to injury. Center Dave Corzine was lost for the season with a knee injury in a game at Cleveland on Nov. 8.

"This is definitely a key loss for us," Magic general manager Pat Williams said Sunday.

Road Woes:

Washington's 120-115 loss at Los Angeles was Washington's fifth straight on the road, ending a 1-5 road trip. But the Bullets have three road wins — more than any other team — and don't have a road trip of more than three games the rest of the season.

Douglas Makes His Case

Miami rookie point guard Sherman Douglas had 13 points and 10 assists Sunday in the Heat's 132-94 loss at Houston. Douglas, the Heat's second-round pick, is averaging 9.4 points and 5.2 assists per game, shooting .475 from the field. Rory Sparrow, Miami's starting point guard, is averaging 5.2 ppg, 4.0 assists and is shooting just 37 percent from the floor.

U.S. Endures For Big Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — Everything was against them. They were playing two thousand miles from home in front of 35,000 frenzied fans. They needed a victory, nothing less. They hadn't scored in 208 minutes. They hadn't won a road game of this magnitude since 1968.

No way, almost everybody said. Trinidad and Tobago was going through, riding a red sea of fans all the way to Italy.

Well, they were all wrong.

Paul Caligiuri, a 25-year-old out of UCLA with one goal in 23 previous international games, scored in the 30th minute Sunday. The United States' 1-0 victory advanced the American to their first World Cup game in 40 years.

The United States is going to Italy, and the players were stunned.

"Today was our destiny, our dream," Caligiuri said.

"It hasn't sunk in yet," said goalkeeper Tony Meola, who got his fourth straight shutout. "Maybe it will in a couple of hours."

The players jumped up and down, poured champagne over each other and sang. They had felt a burden not only of winning the game, but of trying to establish the world's sport in the United States.

"We feel the pressure and the monkey are off our back," defender Brian Bliss said.

For two weeks, Trinidad had built up the match, turning the rainy season into a mini-Carnaval. Everyone on the island seemed to be wearing red, the team color. Calypso bands wrote songs about the players. All through town, people were yelling, "We Going" and "We Italy Bound."

Fans arrived at National Stadium 5 1/2 hours before the game. It was filled three hours before the game as fans without tickets and with counterfeiters sneaked in. Troops turned away many people, some of whom had tickets.

Call once. And for all.

ing up his talk with a superb performance.

"He told us when he came here what he was going to do to us and he did it," Gottfried said. "He might be the best receiver we've played this season and that includes the kid from West Virginia (Reggie Rember) and Syracuse's Rob Moore."

"He's got excellent speed, catches the ball and runs excellent routes. It would not surprise me if he's drafted in the first round."

Bucs Help Loosen Bears' NFC Central Hold

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — It's truly a new era in the NFC Central. The Bears used to put lumps on Tampa Bay. Now, the Buccaneers can boast of sweeping their first two-game season series from Chicago after a 32-31 victory on Sunday.

"It's a great win for us to be the first Tampa Bay team to beat the Bears twice in a year," Buccaneers coach Ray Perkins said. "But more important than that, it was a win that we needed at this point — on a five-game losing streak."

The Buccaneers, 4-7, hadn't won since beating the Bears 42-35 on Oct. 8. That first game was also a turning point for the Bears, who were 4-0 going in and are 2-5 since.

The second loss to Tampa Bay, only the sixth Chicago defeat in 24 meetings with the Bucs, prevented a tie with Minnesota for the Central Division lead. The Vikings were beaten 10-9 by Philadelphia.

The Bears instead dropped into a second-place tie with Green Bay, a 21-17 winner over San Francisco.

Tampa's winning score was Donald Igwebuike's fourth field goal of the game, a 28-yarder as time expired. It capped an exciting fourth quarter during which the teams combined to score 40 points.

"As far as an exciting fourth quarter, if I was a fan I think I would have liked it. But I'm not a fan," Perkins said. "I still liked it anyway because we came out on top."

Quarterback Mike Tomczak came off the bench to spark the Bears' dazzling comeback from a 23-10 deficit. He threw three touchdown bombs in the final 4:27 to give Chicago a 31-29 lead before Tampa Bay's final possession.

"He responded well. The receivers caught the ball and the line blocked well," said Chicago coach Mike Ditka, whose team lost on a last-minute touchdown two weeks ago at Green Bay.

Tampa Bay had scored 20 points on turnovers, including three interceptions off starting quarterback Jim Harbaugh.

"We kept taking ourselves out of drives with turnovers and penalties," said Harbaugh, who completed 12 of 24 passes for 126 yards. "I blame myself. The mistakes we made early were too much to overcome."

In the last five minutes, Tomczak threw a 58-yard touchdown pass to Ron Morris but that was offset by a 78-yard scoring pass from Vinnie Testaverde to Mark Carrier. Tomczak then hit Wendell Davis with touchdown passes of 26 and 52 yards.

"Watching the game the last 2½ weeks from the sidelines I had the opportunity to make adjustments," said Tomczak, who was replaced by Harbaugh midway through a 20-10 victory over the Los Angeles Rams on Oct. 29.

Tomczak completed six of seven passes for 156 yards. "I hate to lose but what happened in the last quarter is promising," Tomczak said. "I hate Tampa Bay. I don't want to give them much credit, but the scoreboard tells the story."

Testaverde brought the Buccaneers back on a final drive, completing four passes for 60 yards to set up Igwebuike's winning field goal.

"It's an extra boost when you beat the Bears twice," said Testaverde, who completed 19 of 42 passes for 288 yards and no interceptions, "especially when people said the first game was a fluke. Our offense knew what it had to do to get the ball downfield on that final drive."

Carrier was Testaverde's favorite target, catching six passes for 164 yards and a touchdown.

"I'll never forget this," Carrier said. "We just have to show ourselves that we can get away from mistakes. We went out, played hard and won the game."

Interceptions and mistakes plagued the Bears. Reuben Davis picked off a deflected pass in the first quarter and returned it 13 yards for a touchdown.

A fumbled punt by Glen Kozlowski led to a 22-yard Igwebuike field goal, an interception by Harry Hamilton set up a 15-yard touchdown run by Lars Tate and an interception by Mark Robinson led to a 29-yard field goal and a 23-10 lead.

Lost in the shuffle was Kevin Butler's 40-yard field goal for the Bears' only points in the first half. It was the 23rd straight for Butler, tying the NFL record set by Mark Moseley of Washington in 1981-82.

Most of Butler's field goals have come in Soldier Field where a lot of kickers, including Igwebuike, don't like to work.

"It's not my favorite place to kick, it's the last place I like to kick, but I'll take that last field goal," Igwebuike said. "All that matters to me is winning."

Burns' Call Comes Up Short For Minnesota

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

You make the call.

The Minnesota Vikings, trailing 10-9 with a minute left in Philadelphia, have a first down at the Eagles' 36.

Try for 10 more yards on a safe pass to Anthony Carter? Try a draw play to Herschel Walker to get closer to a field goal?

Nope. The Vikings, criticized by their fans for poor play-calling all season, threw three straight medium-range passes, all incomplete.

Now what? Try a 53-yard field goal by Rich Karlis, whose career longest is 51 yards, or go for it? You make the call.

Minnesota coach Jerry Burns gambled, sending Leo Lewis long. He was open, but Wade Wilson barely overthrew him near the goal line, and the final score stayed 10-9.

"It was a discouraging loss," Burns said after Minnesota had 10 penalties for 74 yards and lost the ball four times. "We jump offense, get called for pass interference and turn the ball over. We didn't ever make a big play all day except for Walker's touchdown run."

The teams are 7-4. The Vikings still lead the NFC Central by one game over Chicago and Green Bay, while the Eagles stayed two games behind New York in the NFC East.

In other games, Green Bay surprised San Francisco 21-17, Tampa Bay stopped Chicago 32-31, Cleveland and Kansas City tied 10-10, the New York Giants topped Seattle 15-3, Cincinnati routed Detroit 42-7, Miami downed Dallas 17-14, New Orleans defeated Atlanta 26-17, Pittsburgh beat San Diego 20-17, the Los Angeles Rams roughed up Phoenix 37-14, Houston defeated the Los Angeles Raiders 23-7 and Indianapolis took the New York Jets 27-10.

Denver is at Washington tonight.

The Vikings-Eagles game began with instant excitement when Walker returned the opening kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown. But Karlis missed his first extra-point try in 16 attempts this season, starting off a long day for the kickers.

Steve DeLine made a 34-yard field goal for Philadelphia, but missed three others. Karlis, who two weeks ago set an NFL record with seven field goals in a game, was 1-for-2.

Philadelphia went ahead 10-9 on Randall Cunningham's 3-yard touchdown pass to Cris Carter with 2:32 left in the fourth quarter. The score was set up by Walker's fumble, which was picked up by Byron Evans. He lateraled to Eric Allen on a play that carried 24 yards to the Minnesota 20.

"I think I was changing the ball from one hand to the other while making a cut," Walker said. "I don't know what happened, whether somebody got a hand in there."

Six plays later, Cunningham's pass was tipped by defender Carl Lee and caught by Carter for the Eagles' first touchdown in eight quarters. DeLine's kick just made it over the crossbar for the go-ahead extra point.

"It was a line drive, shaky. Everything was shaky today. It was just a bad day," DeLine said.

Eagles coach Buddy Ryan isn't usually tolerant of erratic kickers and won't be this time, either.

"I'm not impatient with anybody when I've got time to be patient. But time is of the essence," Ryan said. "If he's not the answer we'll find someone who is. We don't have taxi squads for kickers."

Chiefs 10, Browns 10

Kansas City's Nick Lowery, who began the season as the NFL's second-most accurate kicker in history, missed twice in the final four seconds of regulation and missed again with three seconds left in overtime, resulting in the first tie of the year.

AFC Central-leading Cleveland (7-3-1) got its first tie since 1973. The Chiefs (4-6-1) played a tie last season. The game turned into a grudge match as former Browns coach Marty Schottenheimer, now in Kansas City, returned to Cleveland.

Lowery kicked a 41-yard field goal with 3:48 left in the fourth quarter. He missed a 45-yarder with four seconds remaining, but an offside call gave him another chance, which he missed from 39 yards. The Chiefs got the only scoring chance in overtime, and Lowery missed from 47 yards.

The Bills' Ray Bentley plants Cedric Jones upside down

Giants 15, Seahawks 3

Phil Simms connected with Howard Cross for a 16-yard touchdown pass on the game's first series and that was enough for New York to win at the Meadowlands.

Rookie Bjorn Nittmo, playing for injured Raul Allegre, kicked two 32-yard field goals and defensive end Leonard Marshall had a safety for the Giants (9-2). Seattle (4-7) lost its third straight as Kelly Stouffer, replacing quarterback Dave Krieg, did not help.

Rams 37, Cardinals 14

Jim Everett passed for 308 yards and threw two touchdowns to Henry Ellard as Los Angeles trounced visiting Phoenix.

The Rams intercepted four passes, including Michael Stewart's 41-yard return for a touchdown on the third play from scrimmage.

Los Angeles (7-4) led 24-0 at halftime and pulled within two games of San Francisco in the NFC West. The Cardinals are 5-6.

Bengals 42, Lions 7

Barney Bussey recovered a blocked punt in the end zone, the first time Cincinnati has scored on a blocked kick in 11 years, as the Bengals scored 28 points in the second quarter.

Cincinnati (6-5) won for just the second time in six games and Detroit (2-9) lost again on the road.

Boomer Esiason threw three touchdown passes. He completed 30 of 39 attempts for 399 yards and Tim McGee caught a regular-season team-record 11 for 194 yards.

The Lions, the most error-prone team in the NFL, fumbled five times in the first half and lost another fumble and had two passes intercepted in the second half.

Dolphins 17, Cowboys 14

Dan Marino completed another "Hail Mary" pass for a touchdown as Miami (7-4) won at Dallas. Luis Zendejas missed a 53-yard field goal attempt on the final play of the game for the Cowboys (1-10).

Sammy Smith's 1-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter helped the Dolphins overcome a 14-10 deficit.

On the last play of the first half, Marino lofted a 48-yard pass into the end zone and Andre Brown out-jumped five defenders. Marino, who completed a similar 43-yard pass to end the first half on Oct. 8, moved into ninth place on the career touchdown pass list with 213, one ahead of Terry Bradshaw and Y.A. Tittle.

Oilers 23, Raiders 7

Houston had three interceptions, recovered two fumbles and held Bo Jackson to 54 yards. Warren Moon threw two touchdown passes as the Oilers (7-4) won their third straight game, their longest winning streak since 1985.

The Raiders dropped to 5-6. Jackson, who had rushed over 100 yards in his last three games, gained just four yards on two tries in the second half.

Saints 26, Falcons 17

Buford Jordan scored on two short runs in the fourth quarter and, with Dalton Hilliard gaining a career-high 158 yards, New Orleans won in Atlanta.

Jordan's 2-yard touchdown run with 9:20 left and his 1-yard burst with 2:38 remaining sent the Saints (6-5) to their fifth victory in six games. New Orleans has won six straight against the Falcons (3-8).

Patriots 33, Bills 24

Maurice Hurst put New England ahead with a 16-yard interception return for a touchdown with 2:49 left as the Patriots rallied for 20 points in the last eight minutes.

Jason Staurovsky's third field goal, a 34-yarder, cut Buffalo's lead to 24-23 with 3:06 to go. Hurst intercepted a pass by Jim Kelly on the next play.

Buffalo (7-4) made a final drive to the New England 31, but Kelly fumbled on fourth down and Staurovsky's 38-yard field goal with 13 seconds left sealed it for the Patriots (4-7).

Steelers 20, Chargers 17

In a game between the NFL's two worst offenses, Pittsburgh drove 91 yards to score on Merrill Hoge's 1-yard run with 6:17 remaining as the Steelers won at home.

Rod Woodson also scored on an 84-yard kickoff return for the Steelers (5-6), whose offense hadn't scored in nine quarters. Jim McMahon threw two touchdown passes to Anthony Miller for San Diego (4-7).

Colts 27, Jets 10

At Indianapolis, Jack Trudeau passed for 255 yards and a touchdown and Eric Dickerson became the first runner this season to gain more than 100 yards against the Jets.

Dickerson, bothered most of the season by a sore hamstring, rushed for 131 yards and a touchdown, his second-highest rushing total of the season.

Trudeau, who missed the last game with a broken finger, topped his previous season high of 247 yards as the Colts moved to 5-6. The Jets are 2-9, matching their worst start since 1980.

Manley Is Keeping A Low Profile

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Dexter Manley's lawyer has asked his client to keep a low profile over the next few days, hoping that Manley will fully absorb the ramifications of banishment from the NFL before speaking out on the subject.

It's a tough request, considering that Manley built a reputation for being boisterous on and off the football field.

Manley, the Washington Redskins' career leader in sacks, has been banned from the league for violating the NFL's substance-abuse policy for a third time. He has not taken the news well.

"He's still very emotional about it," Bob Woolf, Manley's lawyer, said Sunday. "It's a traumatic shock for him. One minute he's a Washington Redskin, the next he's banned."

Woolf said he wants Manley to avoid any contact with the media until he has completely weighed his options. Those options include taking the league to court or simply waiting a year before applying for reinstatement, an option for third-time offenders under the NFL policy.

"It's up to him," Woolf said. "I'd like him to look at all the alternatives, weigh the pros and cons, and make a wise decision before sounding off."

Manley hasn't accepted the suspension, contending that he didn't take drugs this season, a source said. NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue stood by the test and suggested that Manley could be back in uniform in a year if he proves that he has put his problems behind him.

Tagliabue, speaking Sunday on NBC-TV about possible reinstatement for the eight-year veteran, said, "First of all, Dexter Manley would have to stay away from drugs and other abusive substances. ... He's achieved a lot, has been a leader in things such as special education, and that would be a factor that I would take into account."

The Redskins were hoping that Manley could overcome his addiction to drugs, but the revelation that he had tested positive for cocaine hardly came as a surprise. Like bettors who wager on a longshot, Washington coaches took a chance that the stellar defensive end would break a losing pattern and come up a winner.

It is the opinion of former Redskins general manager Bobby Beathard that it was only a matter of time before Manley — a human time-bomb — exploded.

"I'm not surprised and I don't think the people at Redskin Park were surprised," Beathard said Sunday on NBC's "NFL Live." "I think it wasn't if this happened to Dexter, it was just when it was going to happen to Dexter."

Beathard, who resigned from the Redskins earlier this year, said team officials were becoming fed up with Manley's off-the-field antics.

And, although Manley had a team-high nine sacks this season, Beathard said the Washington hierarchy had somewhat soured on his play of late.

"For the last couple of seasons, they haven't been happy with Dexter, from either a player's standpoint or a personal standpoint," Beathard said. "His erratic behavior has even led a lot of people at Redskin Park to say, 'How can we get rid of Dexter, we've got to trade him, get somebody to take his place.'"

"His play has been declining. After 10 games this year, the guy has 12 tackles," Beathard said. "From a football standpoint, I think the Redskins are better off without Dexter Manley."

While Manley has remained quiet since word of his suspension leaked out on Thursday, in past years he was always saying something outlandish to draw attention.

Since joining the Redskins in 1981, his mouth has drawn him as many headlines as his sacks. But the biggest headlines came in 1987, when he entered a drug-rehabilitation clinic, and in 1988, when he received a 30-day suspension for cocaine use.

Months ago, Manley and cornerback Barry Wilburn, who was suspended this month, already were being eyed by Washington coach Joe Gibbs, who was well aware of the problems both faced because of drugs.

"I kind of knew when we were coming into the season," Gibbs said. "I knew that there was a potential and I knew where the problems could be and maybe we've lived with it for a while."

Graf Hods Off Navratilova To Claim Virginia Slims Event

And in the latter two, it was Navratilova she defeated in the final. But Graf came into this 16-woman tournament after severely twisting her right ankle. Navratilova also was subpar, with a pulled right hamstring. She sustained the injury while teaming with Pam Shriver to win the doubles title on Saturday. And it wasn't easy. In a magnificent duel with thrusts and parries, attacks and counterattacks, full of aggression from the baseline to the net, Graf was triumphant. Not an inch of the court was unused in the battle. The 20-year-old West German dominated — just barely — in every facet as she erased any doubts, if there were any, as to who was No. 1 in women's tennis. "For me to win the tournament is amazing," Graf said. "It's the best tournament I could have won. This. The others were the Australian Open, Wimbledon and U.S. Open. One I didn't expect it at all. The others I did."

McRaney Finds His New Image As Dad, Officer In Marines

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Gerald McRaney thought it was time to get into uniform after seven years as laid-back detective Rick Simon on "Simon & Simon."

"I'd wanted to do a show about somebody in the service to show the human side," says McRaney, who stars in the new CBS comedy "Major Dad."

"I'd gotten fed up with people in the service being portrayed as bumbling fools or Rambo. I have a lot of friends and relatives in the service. They're just ordinary people. I wanted to do a sitcom. I couldn't face the rigorous schedule of doing another hour show."

McRaney plays Marine Maj. John D. MacGillis in "Major Dad," which opens CBS' Monday night comedy block. His new bride, Delta Burke, is one of the stars of "Designing Women," which follows later in the evening.

Unlike Rick Simon, MacGillis is ramrod straight, neat from his pressed uniform to his polished boots and has his receding hair cut so short he almost looks bald.

MacGillis, a conservative career officer, marries a liberal newspaper reporter who is a widow with three daughters. The longtime bachelor, a man long used to an environment of men, suddenly finds himself surrounded by women. The major's wife, Polly, is played by Shanna Reed.

"Polly may be liberal, but she's steeped in a lot of old-fashioned ideals," McRaney says. "Rearing her children has top priority with her. But the show's about more than just a nuclear family. Most of the stories take place in the home."

"You knew that Ozzie Nelson was a band leader from the radio show but on television you never knew what he did for a living. Here, you see Mac at work. Some of it takes place at his office, and the Marine Corps is a family, too."

MacGillis is a hardnose, which is the nature of the business, but he's also very good at what he does. McRaney portrays him as a man who's dedicated and cares about his job and the people he works with. He sees the major as a man whose skills would allow him to take a much higher-paying civilian job. He remains in the Marine corps out of patriotism and a sense of duty.

On "Simon & Simon," televised by CBS from 1981-88, McRaney played the offbeat, casually dressed half of the brother-detective team. In fact, Rick Simon almost reached the point of being lazy. He rode around in an old pickup truck and lived on a houseboat. A.J. Simon, played by Jameson Parker, was conservative, clean-cut and aggressive.

"I have mixed emotions about 'Simon & Simon' ending," he says. "It's time was due, but I miss working with the people. Well, most of the crew's on 'Major Dad.' I miss working with Jameson. I'm thinking of having him come in the show as my liberal brother-in-law. Maybe an attorney for the ACLU."

McRaney says if he had to define himself he would say he's a conservative. "I'm a registered Democrat," he says, "but I'm a conservative in that I believe in conserving ideals and values that have proven correct. Some people say that's rigid, but there's a big difference."

McRaney was born in Mississippi and began working as an actor in New Orleans before moving to Los Angeles. His first job here was on an episode of "Night Gallery." After that came roles on "The Rockford Files" and "Gunsmoke" before landing a starring role on "Simon & Simon."

He met Delta Burke when he did a guest role on an episode of "Designing Women." He played Dash Goff, one of the former husbands of her character, Suzanne Sugarbaker.

"I don't see how I could go back (on 'Designing Women') again with both of us working," he says. "I told them the only way I could go back as Dash with this Marine haircut was that I could explain he's taking chemotherapy."

"Besides, Delta and I have been busy getting married and honeymooning. We bought a place in Pasadena. We're still thinking about buying a house in the South since we're both from the South."

They are developing a television movie called "Love and Curses," in which they would play a couple in the manner of "The Thin Man."

The idea for "Major Dad" came up when McRaney was still on "Simon & Simon."

"We went through a lot of proposals," McRaney says. "He was going to be the widowed father of three. We decided that was a bummer. Then we decided he should marry a widow of three. That's less depressing."

C-SPAN To Do Live Show From Parliament Tuesday

By Jay Sharbutt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Cable television's C-SPAN, which has shown live proceedings of the U.S. House of Representatives since 1979, on Tuesday will do likewise from a somewhat older place — Britain's House of Commons.

On that day, which starts with an address by Queen Elizabeth II to the new session of Parliament that C-SPAN will carry live at 5:30 a.m. EST, the occasionally raucous Commons will open its proceedings to television.

That starts at 9 a.m. EST in what is a test run. The experiment will last until at least next July, after which the legislators in the 650-seat Commons will vote on whether to make TV permanent.

"It's unlikely that they won't continue it unless there's a major row," C-SPAN chairman Brian Lamb predicted in a phone interview from London, where he's overseeing a series of live telecasts slated for this week.

C-SPAN last week dispatched a staff to London for a week of preliminary interviews, including call-ins from American viewers. Among those fielding questions today is John Grist, who oversees the Commons' eight-camera TV system.

For C-SPAN, a non-profit industry-supported cooperative that says it is seen in 46.8 million homes and offices, Tuesday may prove a legislative tale of two cities, one that enables viewers to see differences in at least the oratory of lawmakers in London and Washington.

If the American House still is in session Tuesday, a C-SPAN spokesman says, "we will go live to the U.S. House and air that in its entirety, then pick up the British House in progress. Then, that evening, we'll air the British House (proceedings) in its entirety."

No video bundle from Britain is scheduled for Wednesday. But on Thanksgiving day, at 9:30 a.m. EST, C-SPAN will air, live, another Commons session in its entirety.

"It might go eight or ten hours," Lamb says. "It's a good chance for people who are busy on Tuesday to just tune in, just look at it."

On Sunday, C-SPAN will show taped highlights of the week.

The real action — C-SPAN hopes to show it live — will come on Nov. 28 at 10:15 a.m. EST, when Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher faces opposition Labor leader Neil Kinnock for a 15-minute "question time" session.

Such sessions, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, are rarely sedate and usually rife with riposte. Unlike the comparatively tame give and take of the U.S. House, question time in the Commons "is meant to be confrontational," Lamb notes.

"They stand literally eight feet apart, looking each other in the eye, both the Prime Minister and the leader of the Labor Party... it's electric. And there's a lot of hooting and howling in the chamber..."

"They do it partly to throw everybody off guard."

Alas, as in the American House, the British House has strict rules about what TV can and cannot show.

Harrison Play Opens

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Rex Harrison said when he steps onstage tonight for the Broadway opening of "The Circle," the Somerset Maugham comedy of manners, he expects to have butterflies in his stomach.

The 81-year-old Sir Rex said he still suffers from stage fright.

"Every night," he said in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times. "I suppose if you don't have stage fright you go on like a flat pancake."

In his first stage appearance 63 years ago, when he played an anguished young father in a Liverpool Repertory Company production, he fumbled his only line: "It's a doctor," he recalled. "Fetch a baby."

"The Circle" also stars Glynis Johns and Stewart Granger at the Ambassador Theater. Harrison, who was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II earlier this year in recognition of his contribution to the arts, said it may be his final play.

Pauley Family Has A Problem

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Jane Pauley's departure from the "Today" show means she'll be home for breakfast — and the family is worried.

Her husband, "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau, has been responsible for getting their three children, 5-year-old twins and a 3-year-old son, up and ready for the day.

In the December issue of Life, Trudeau recalled one recent morning when Ms. Pauley stayed home and almost everything appalled her:

"You're not letting her wear her hair like that! ... Why are they wearing their school clothes before breakfast? ... You let her eat that?"

Trudeau said he and the children finally rebelled:

"Yo, Mom! We're doing fine for five years. Nobody's got scurvy, and we're all wearing clean underwear. Where's the problem?"

He said he thinks things will settle down once Ms. Pauley gets "integrated into the morning."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠72 ♥AK2 ♦AQJ983 ♣63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—A borderline hand. We would be inclined to take a slightly conservative action and rebid only two diamonds, but with so many playing tricks we won't quibble with a jump to three diamonds. Switch our major-suit holdings and we'd definitely jump.
Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q104 ♥1073 ♦KQ876 ♣K5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 1 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—This depends on your no trump range. If you are playing 15-17 point no trumps, inviting game is fraught with danger—opposite a minimum, you could be too high. If your range is 16-18, you are just worth a move, and the only bid to consider is a raise to two no-trump.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠943 ♥AKJ ♦J109 ♣9843
 Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
 A.—In these days of convenient minor-suit opening bids, you should try to avoid raising partner's minor unless you have five-card support. Here, both your strength and distribution can be played to partner with a one no-trump response.
Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠QJ103 ♥AK ♦AKQ32 ♣K8
 What is your opening bid?
 A.—You're not quite good enough for a demand bid in a suit, but too strong for one diamond. The solution is to open two no trump if your range is 23-24 (the good diamond suit is surely worth an extra point), or two clubs followed by two no trump if that's the way you show a 23-24 HCP hand.
Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J7 ♥KQJ763 ♦K108 ♣Q3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Another close decision between an invitational jump to three hearts or going all the way to game. We would upgrade the queen in partner's suit and, since North has at least two hearts on this auction, bid an aggressive four hearts. Three no trump is a close second choice, but the possible spade weakness makes the suit contract preferable.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK6 ♥10 ♦K93 ♣QJ9643
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Take away one of your spade honors and you would not have opened the bidding. Therefore, there is no need for any drastic action at this stage. Just prefer to two spades. If your combined holding is enough for game, partner must have the values for another bid.

Czech Protesters Take To Streets

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Students today began a sit-in strike at Prague universities to protest police attacks on demonstrators, and a Communist leader for the first time condemned the bloody crackdown.

Hundreds took to the streets of Prague again today to demand more freedom from hard-line Communist rulers. And banned playwright and prominent activist Vaclav Havel canceled a trip to Sweden in protest of the beatings.

Sit-in strikes began in most of Prague's universities, student sources said.

According to unofficial reports, strike committees were negotiating with university authorities at the Technical University in Prague and the downtown Film Faculty.

At least three official Prague theaters went on a de facto strike, refusing to put on shows and terminating cooperation with official media, actors told The Associated Press by telephone. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

A statement of the official Socialist Union of Youth called Friday night's police crackdown on student demonstrators "politically irresponsible."

The communique was endorsed by Vasil Mohorita, the union's chairman and Communist Party central committee secretary. It was the first time a Communist official publicly condemned such police action.

Many people were injured Friday in clashes with the police, who used truncheons, tear gas and attack dogs to disperse the largest demonstration in 20 years. Hospital officials said 100 people required treatment.

The march was to commemorate student Jan Opletal, killed by the Nazis 50 years ago. It was the largest demonstration in Czechoslovakia since August 1969.

Krenz Asks For Public Support

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST BERLIN — On a night tens of thousands of protesters braved icy winds to demand a leader they can trust, new Communist chief Egon Krenz declared via national television that he serves at the will of the people.

The East German leader made his latest bid for popular support Sunday in an unprecedented open exchange with East German television from his modest new home.

"There will be no going back to the old conditions," he promised during the prime-time interview. "The opening of the borders was the best proof of our sincerity about reforms."

But many of the estimated 100,000 people who rallied in several cities on Sunday to keep up pressure for free elections and other democratic reforms insisted on new leaders, on an end to Communist dominance of the government.

At an East Berlin demonstration, most signs denounced Communist rule and expressed popular distrust of Krenz, the party's chief of security before being elevated to general secretary on Oct. 18.

In the rally at Alexanderplatz, art historian and activist Ralf Bartholomaeus said Krenz "did not have the confidence of the majority of the people."

"The people will not believe in the promised reforms as long as they are being proclaimed by an untrustworthy leader," he proclaimed.

Combined with a mass exodus of East Germans to the West via other East bloc countries, the protests prompted Authorities opened East Germany's borders to the West on Nov. 9 in a bid to gain the trust of a populace demanding democratic change and to try to end an exodus that was sapping the country of young skilled workers.

The official East German ADN news agency said 50,000 protesters turned out in Dresden on Sunday to denounce the country's leadership. They declared, "We won't let ourselves be blinded by the open borders."

On the second weekend of free travel, nearly 3 million East Germans crossed into West Berlin and West Germany between Friday and Sunday, West German border police said. The vast majority have been returning to their homeland.

Ferry service across the Elbe River, which forms part of the border, resumed Sunday at Hitzacker, about 80 miles southeast of Hamburg, for the first time since 1945.

ADN reported pro-democracy rallies Sunday by 20,000 people in Erfurt, 10,000 in Meiningen, 10,000 in Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, 3,000 in Schwedt and 2,000 in Neustrelitz. It said "thousands" protested in Karl-Marx-Stadt, but did not give a precise crowd estimate for the march there or in East Berlin.

The agency said about 30,000 Communist Party backers demonstrated in Potsdam to show support for the government.

Bulgarians Join Crowds In Pro-Democracy Drive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOFIA, Bulgaria — Speakers told a rally the day after the largest pro-democracy protest ever held in Communist Bulgaria that their new leader deserves praise for allowing such unprecedented freedom of speech.

But they also expressed fears that the new Communist Party chief, Petar Mladenov, would show a limited tolerance for dissent and not grant Bulgarians the freedoms they demand.

About 2,000 people rallied Sunday to demand more democracy, condemn the ruling Communists and praise the ouster earlier this month of longtime hard-line leader Todor Zhivkov.

The protest, organized by independent human rights and ecology groups, was held in South Park in Sofia, the capital. Such a protest would certainly have been suppressed by police only weeks ago.

"There will be no democracy in Bulgaria unless we introduce free elections with candidates from different groups and not only from the Communist Party," said one speaker.

On Saturday, more than 50,000 people gathered on the Alexander Nevski Square in downtown Sofia to demand more democracy, free elections, respect of human rights and an end to the 45 years of police repression that began after Soviet tanks rolled in.

Police did not intervene in either protest, despite unprecedented harsh criticism of Bulgarian official policy voiced by many speakers. Parliament on Friday scrapped a law against dissent.

The latest protests follow the political downfall Nov. 10 of Zhivkov. His successor, Petar Mladenov, who is considered more moderate.

"For years we have been promised radical changes in our society, but it always turned out to be a carnival in which only masks were changed but the policy remained the same," Radoi Ralin, a leading Bulgarian dissident writer, said in an interview.

"That is why we should not be too enthusiastic about the latest changes. We have to see what the new leaders have to offer us soon."

Earthquake Kills 3 People In Iran

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — A strong earthquake jolted southeastern Iran early today, killing at least three people and injuring 45 as it toppled homes, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The agency said the quake measured 6 on the Richter scale and shook the entire province of Kerman, home to more than 1 million people.

IRNA quoted officials in Kerman as saying that casualty reports were still being assessed. Hardest hit were the cities of Golbad and Shahdad, east of the provincial capital, Kerman, IRNA said.

An earthquake measuring 6.9 on the Richter Scale devastated a number of villages in the same region in July 1981, killing 1,200 persons and injuring 1,400.

Kerman, and neighboring Fars province to the west, are frequently hit by earthquakes. Seven villages were severely damaged and four people hurt in an earthquake that shook Fars in May.

Some 300 earthquakes, measuring up to 4.6 on the Richter scale, were registered in a month in Fars earlier this year.

The open-ended Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one number means the ground motion is 10 times greater.

A quake registering 6 on the scale can cause severe damage.

Rebels Pull Back From Salvadoran Capital

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — As leftist rebels withdrew from around the capital, the country's Catholic leader predicted a backlash of "revenge, repression and witch-hunting" and was himself threatened with assassination.

After the fiercest offensive of their 10-year-old insurgency, the guerrillas on Sunday pulled out of most areas of the capital they seized nine days ago, returning to mountain strongholds.

Army patrols moved through streets strewn with the rubble of fighting. On some, several burned bodies could be seen.

People began returning to their homes, or what was left of them, but thousands remained in shelters. The warfare had forced about 40,000 of the capital's 1 million people to evacuate homes in now-ravaged neighborhoods.

About 800 mourners attended the funeral of six Jesuit priests, their cook and her teen-age daughter, who were slain and mutilated early Thursday in an attack widely blamed on right-wing death squads.

The United States has pressed rightist President Alfredo Cristiani for a full investigation. In Washington, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., warned Sunday that U.S. aid could be curtailed if Cristiani cannot stop such killings.

The rebels said they launched the offensive in response to a resurgence of death squad activity and many people think Cristiani has lost control over the military and extremists in his party, the Republican Nationalist Alliance.

Many opposition politicians, labor leaders, religious and human rights activists are now in hiding or have left the country because of threats or arrests followed by deportation orders.

Archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas, the Catholic leader, warned in his homily Sunday that "a dreadful wave of revenge, repression and witch hunting may follow" the guerrilla withdrawal.

He called the rebel offensive "useless and unjustifiable," but said the military response had been "excessive."

Rivera Damas said before Sunday's funeral that "there exists the vehement presumption" that the six Jesuits were killed by "members of the armed forces or people in intimate connivance with them."

The archbishop, whose predecessor Oscar Romero was slain in 1980 by a right-wing death squad, has been urged to leave the country by Attorney General Mauricio Colorado.

Colorado told a news conference Sunday that the unnamed "church dignitaries" he had in a letter asked Pope John Paul II to withdraw were Rivera Damas and Auxiliary Bishop Gregorio Rosa Chavez, whom he accused of fomenting leftist violence.

He claimed he had information that both have been targeted for assassination.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending Nov. 10.

HOUSE
TO RAISE DEBT CEILING — By a vote of 269 for and 99 against, the House gave final congressional approval of legislation (HJ Res 280) raising the public debt limit from $2.8 trillion to $3.12 trillion. The new ceiling is expected to hold until October 1990, when the government likely will need additional borrowing authority to avoid default. The bill also repealed the disputed "Section 89" tax provision that has kept employers from deducting fringe benefits that are provided only to selected employees.

Supporter Bill Archer, R-Tex., said, "As unpalatable as raising the debt limit might be, the financial security of the nation must override our reluctance" to do so.

No member spoke against the resolution during brief floor debate.

Members voting yes wanted to raise the public debt ceiling.

North Carolina members voting yes: Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Howard Coble, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Stephen Neal, D-5.
 Not voting: Walter Jones, D-1.

TO APPROVE DEFENSE BUDGET — By a vote of 236 for and 172 against, the House approved the conference report on the fiscal 1990 defense budget of $305 billion. The bill (HR 2461) makes 1990 the fifth straight year in which the Pentagon budget adjusted for inflation has declined. The Senate was expected to send the legislation to President Bush.

The bill drew an ideological mixture of opponents. Conservatives disliked it because it cut too deeply into the "Star Wars" Strategic Defense Initiative and ignored many of President Bush's weapons priorities, while liberals said it kept defense spending too high at a time of improving relations with the Soviet Union and insoluble budget problems at home.

In part, the bill funds construction of two B-2 Stealth bombers at a cost of at least $500 million each, includes money for both the rail-based Minuteman and truck-borne Midgetman missile systems, requires the Pentagon to purchase against its wishes a number of V-22 Osprey and F-14D aircraft at a cost of several hundred million dollars, and cuts SDI spending to $3.8 billion or $300 million under the previous year's level.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

Voting yes: Jones, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Voting no: Valentine.
 Not voting: None.

OIL SPILL LIABILITY — By a vote of 279 for and 143 against, the House adopted an amendment enabling states to set oil spill liability standards that exceeded federal standards. The amendment was attached to a bill (HR 1465) establishing a uniform federal system of liability and compensation for spills in navigable waters. The bill is a response to last March's Exxon Valdez disaster in Alaska. It was sent to conference with the House.

The vote kept HR 1465 from preempting the ability of states to go beyond federal ceilings set in the bill and impose unlimited liability on oil companies and shippers responsible for spills.

Sponsor George Millee, D-Calif., said his amendment affirms "a fundamental right of the states" to protect their environments.

Opponent John Hammerschmidt, R-Ark., said federal pre-emption solves the problem of "a patchwork or overlapping and conflicting (state) laws which may actually impede prompt payment of justifiable claims."

Members voting yes wanted to preserve state authority to set unlimited oil spill liability standards.

Voting yes: Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Clarke.

Voting no: Jones, Coble, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger.
 Not voting: None.

SENATE
TO RAISE THE MINIMUM WAGE — By a vote of 89 for and 8 against, the Senate sent to President Bush legislation (HR 2710) raising the minimum wage for the first time since 1981.

The new minimum wage will rise from the current $3.35 an hour to $3.80 next April 1 and peak at $4.25 on April 1, 1991. It will be accompanied by a new subminimum or "training wage" for youths aged 16-19 who are new to the work force.

The subminimum is set at $3.23 next April and $3.61 a year later, and would be paid for the first three months of employment and three more months if the youth receives certified training.

Supporter Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called the bill "a modest victory for the working poor."

Opponent Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said the bill "will shut the door of opportunity to entry level jobs for those at the very bottom of the economic ladder."

Terry Sanford, D-N.C., voted yes to raise the minimum wage. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., voted no.

MIGRANT WORKER ISSUE — By a vote of 63 for and 35 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an attempt to enable certain agricultural employers to pay the subminimum "training" wage to seasonal and migrant farm workers aged 16-to-19. This left intact a requirement in HR 2710 (above) that the estimated 25 percent of farmers and ranchers covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act pay the full minimum wage to these youths.

Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., voted to kill the amendment, saying it would hurt workers "who are probably the most exploited group in the labor force."

Phil Gramm, R-Tex., who sponsored the amendment, complained that HR 2710 applied the training wage to youths in all seasonal jobs except migrant farm work.

Sanford voted yes, favoring the full minimum wage for seasonal farm workers aged 16-to-19 whose employers are covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act. Helms voted no.

TO ELIMINATE MASS MAILINGS — By a vote of 66 for and 29 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to put an end to unsolicited mass mailings back home by members of Congress and transfer the money saved to drug treatment programs.

The vote occurred as the Senate sent to President Bush the fiscal 1990 legislative branch appropriations bill (HR 3014). The bill restricts lawmakers to three newsletters mailings a year but puts no limits on other mass mailings that have drawn criticisms as politicking at taxpayers' expense.

Sanford voted yes, to kill the amendment banning mass mailings by lawmakers. Helms voted no.

Barges Jam Mississippi River Lock

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALTON, Ill. — Barges were backed up for more than 40 miles today waiting to pass through a lock at this Mississippi River town. Workers said the 1,000-barge backup was a record.

The congestion began when workers shut down Alton's Lock and Dam 26 on Wednesday and Thursday to repair a worn gate, said Ken Kruchowski, a spokesman for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The lock has since reopened, but the backup has still become particularly bad because river traffic is heavy this time of year as barges carry grain shipments to New Orleans for export, officials said.

"We've got 113 tows waiting to lock and 1,000 barges down here," said Jim Perry, shift leader at the Alton lock. "For every one or two we send we get two or three coming in."

Although the new gate was in place by Friday, boats that arrived Wednesday evening didn't make it through the lock until late Sunday, Perry said.

Traffic was proceeding through the lock at the normal rate of about 1½ hours for a typical load of 15 barges and one towboat, Perry said. "We're getting them through here pretty good. We're back to normal operation. The only abnormal thing is we've got a hell of a lot of boats."

Barges arriving this morning will probably wait six days to pass through the lock, said Billie Sanna, a Corps of Engineers worker at Alton.

Both Perry and Sanna said the jam was a record.
