Snow Blankets Northeast U.S.

By David Briggs

Those dreaming of a white Thanksgiving got their wish in the East and South, while the needy were remembered in shelters and soup kitchens as Americans paused to ponder their blessings.

Giving thanks was on the minds of thousands of victims of Hurricane Hugo, northern California's earthquake and other natural disasters that jolted the nation this year.

"We are alive. We have more reasons to give thanks than we do to be sorry," said Mabel Martin, owner of a trailer park in Alorton in southern Illinois that was devastated by a Nov. 15 storm that caused an estimated $5.3 million in damage.

The snow that fell from Virginia to New England canceled high school football games in the Northeast, but neither a wascally wabbit who wouldn't waft nor a fallen Humpty Dumpty dampened the spirits of millions of parade watchers.

"This is the snowiest Thanksgiving Period," said meteorologist Harry Woodworth at the National Weather Service in Newark, N.J., where more than 5 inches of snow fell.

Up to 8 inches of snow fell in Massachusetts, and 5 inches was reported at Snowshoe ski resort near Marlinton, W.Va. Baltimore residents woke up to their first white Thanksgiving since 1971.

The first Thanksgiving snow in New York since 1938 grounded the Snoopy and Bugs Bunny balloons from the 63rd Annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, but an estimated 1.8 million people still lined the parade route.

"I would have come out here even if it was 20 degrees below freezing. It's a million times better live," said 32-year-old Mike Koleba, wrapped in an army jacket, two hats and a scarf.

The 70th annual Thanksgiving Day parade in Philadelphia survived a record snowfall, but the 55-foot Humpty Dumpty balloon had a great fall when it was punctured by a light standard.

Some 900,000 people braved temperatures in the 20s Thursday in Detroit to watch the 63rd Annual Michigan Thanksgiving Day Parade.

In an out-of-this-world meal, Discovery's astronauts celebrated in space with thermo-stabilized turkey, freeze-dried vegetables and cranberry sauce.

President Bush and his wife enjoyed a traditional Thanksgiving dinner that included roast turkey with stuffing and cranberry sauce, sweet potatoes topped with marshmallows, green beans, salad and pumpkin and pecan pies at the retreat in Camp David, Md.

Meanwhile, at a holiday feast at the Los Angeles Rescue Mission, actor Ben Vereen asked the president to do more for the homeless.

"I will not pray for you," he told the mission diners. "I will pray for

Cristiani Rejects Cease-Fire

By Richard Herzfelder
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — President Alfredo Cristiani said the assault by leftist rebels was a failure and he rejected their conditions for peace. His comments were punctuated by rebel bombs that exploded near his news conference.

The series of bombs exploded about five blocks from where Cristiani was speaking to reporters Thursday evening. Cristiani jumped, but kept talking, telling everyone "not to worry." No injuries were reported.

Cristiani termed "nonsense" the guerrillas' call for political negotiations leading to a cease-fire. The rightist government is demanding a truce first, then talks.

"Without a cease-fire the guerrillas will use the peace process for propaganda," said Cristiani.

Rebel leaders traveled to Caracas, Venezuela, on Thursday to meet with President Carlos Andres Perez. But Salvadoran government officials didn't plan to attend the meeting, dashing any hopes of talks.

Perez, however, said he was in touch with Cristiani's government.

"I will say the same things to the representatives of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front that I said to the ministers of the Cristiani government: We need to look for sincere solutions," Perez said.

Meanwhile, traffic moved normally in San Salvador for the first time since Nov. 11, when the offensive that killed more than 1,000 people was launched in the capital and several provinces. Many of the capital's 1 million residents tried to stock up on food, gas and other necessities.

"We've been cooking with wood," said truck driver Israel Herrera, standing in line for a fourth day at a natural gas distributorship with 50 other people.

"Since I don't have any fuel for the truck I'm spending my days in line."

At the Soyapango cemetery east of the city, gravediggers buried five bodies that had been left at the cemetry gates and said they expected more work.

Much of the city was blacked out after darkness, and an electric company spokesman said damage during the battles left a 70 percent power outage.

Cristiani said the Farabundo Mar-

Bush Welcomes Mrs. Thatcher

By Rita Beamish
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMP DAVID, Md. — President Bush today welcomed British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to the country presidential retreat for talks on changes in Eastern Europe, the strength of the NATO alliance "and everything else."

Mrs. Thatcher arrived by helicopter at the snowy hillside

Camp David complex where Bush and his family are spending the Thanksgiving holiday.

She stepped onto a red carpet rolled out in the snow and was greeted by Bush, clad in a sports jacket. First lady Barbara Bush, wearing a down jacket, and daughter Dorothy LeBlond, also greeted the prime minister.

Bush, escorting Mrs. Thatcher to a golf cart, said, "Let's go before we freeze." He said, "I'm so glad you're here. This is so timely," an apparent reference to the fact that Mrs. Thatcher's visit comes a week before Bush will hold a shipboard summit with Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Asked by reporters what they would discuss, Bush said before driving off in the golf cart, "I'm just interested in getting the views of the prime minister on the rapid changes in eastern Europe and the strength of the alliance and everything else. So we've got a good full agenda."

Asked if the two leaders had any disagreements on the strength of NATO, Mrs. Thatcher replied emphatically, "No. None." Mrs. Thatcher has been firm in her statements that the strength of NATO should not be lessened, despite overtures from the Soviet Union and moves toward political and economic reform in several eastern European countries.

In an NBC-TV "Today" interview earlier, she said that merely expressing a willingness for political reform is a lot different than actually achieving it.

She told CBS-TV's "This Morning" that she did not expect Gorbachev to have any "major surprises" at the summit.

"After all, look at the events which have happened. ... I think that he'll want to work towards much greater security and to try to bring about the economic reform," she said.

Bush in recent days has emphasized that he intends to consult fully with U.S. allies before meeting with Gorbachev and that he would spring "no surprises" on the NATO allies.

Mrs. Thatcher was to remain at Camp David for four hours before returning to Washington in the afternoon.

Mrs. Thatcher said on ABC's "Good Morning America" program today that she was "delighted" with Bush's speech in which he praised Gorbachev's reforms, and praised Bush's "measured response" to changes in Eastern Europe.

"It takes a long time to build democracy," she said. "It's not so long to have demonstrations and to

Judge Dismisses Iran-Contra Case

By Pete Yost
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A federal judge today threw out the Iran-Contra prosecutor's criminal case against a former CIA station chief who assisted Oliver North's secret Contra resupply operation.

U.S. District Court Judge Claude Hilton dismissed the case against Joseph Fernandez, saying that Attorney General Dick Thornburgh's affidavit barring disclosure of certain classified information made it impossible to give Fernandez a fair trial.

The office of independent counsel Lawrence Walsh said it would appeal.

The judge said that the information Thornburgh is blocking concerning CIA facilities and programs in Central America is essential for Fernandez "to receive a fair trial."

Because of this, said the judge, "the case will be dismissed." Fernandez, the former CIA station chief in Costa Rica, was charged with obstructing inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair by the CIA inspector general and the presidentially appointed Tower Commission.

Fernandez also was charged with two counts of making false statements in connection with his activities on behalf of North's network to arm the Nicaraguan rebels at a time when Congress had banned military aid to the Contras.

"We are troubled by the actions of the intelligence agencies and the attorney general, who have made bringing this case to trial extremely difficult," associate independent counsel Lawrence Shtasel said.

Hilton ruled last July that Fernandez must be able to disclose at trial details about the locations of CIA stations in El Salvador and Honduras, as well as details about CIA programs in Costa Rica.

"This is a significant Iran-Contra prosecution," Shtasel said. "We will now appeal Judge Hilton's rulings ... making every effort to bring the Fernandez case to trial."

Outside the courthouse, Fernandez said he was relieved that the "freight train (prosecution) of the independent counsel" is now blocked.

"What troubles me" about the independent counsel's case is that "the performance of legitimate duties" by CIA officers "could subject them to criminal prosecution," said Fernandez.

He was asked whether he and his attorney, Thomas Wilson, had engaged in graymail, the practice of trying to inject as much classified information as possible into a prosecution in order to torpedo the case.

"That is an onerous and unnecessary comment," replied Fernandez. The former CIA station chief said he needed to present such information in order to mount "an adequate defense."

Wilson told the judge that the information Thornburgh was barring from disclosure "is the guts of the defense's case."

In court, Shtasel asked the judge to give the government until next week to propose narrowing the charges against Fernandez so that the classified information at stake in the case would not have to be presented.

Temperatures Dip Into The 20s

By Jerry Raynor
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The first cold snap of the season has not triggered a stampede of calls for heating plant services and oil deliveries, according to several local companies.

Holiday temperature readings, however, registered below the freezing point.

The lowest temperature reading to date for November, at 22.4 degrees Fahrenheit, occurred between the hours of 4 a.m. and 6 a.m. this morning, according to water plant operator Randy Buck.

"This is fourth time this month we've had a reading of 32 and below," Buck said. Earlier this month, 32 degree and below readings were recorded Nov. 17, 19 and 22. "But this morning's reading was well below the 29 degrees recorded Nov. 22," he said.

Buck said that this morning's cold temperatures brought the first heavy frost of the season, but no major freezing.

Rainfall that began Thanksgiving eve and continued into Thursday morning resulted in a reading of .64 inches of rainfall by noon Thursday. The high temperature reading Thanksgiving Day was 45 degrees, with a low of 27 degrees during the day. The river level on Thursday was 4.82 feet above sea level, a normal reading for this time of year, he said.

Bus Crash Kills 78

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARARE, Zimbabwe — A passenger bus plunged 50 feet into a river from a bridge east of the capital, killing 78 people and injuring 26 in the nation's worst bus crash, police said today.

The bus apparently had a blowout on a front tire late Thursday and hurtled into the Chivake river near the town of Murehwa, 45 miles east of Harare, authorities said. It overturned in the water, crushing the roof.

Police said most of the passengers were crushed to death. There was no immediate word on how many passengers were riding in the bus, but officials said it was overcrowded. The bus was owned by the private Nhamuro Bus Service.

President Robert Mugabe declared the accident a national disaster. Mugabe, who visited the crash site, said the wreckage indicated the overcrowded bus was speeding when it plunged into the river bed. Home Affairs Minister Moven Mahachi, who also visited the scene, said 78 people were killed and 26 seriously injured, "and the death toll will probably increase."

Several passengers died on their way to hospital after being freed from the wreckage by firefighters with cutting torches, said the spokesman. Rescuers were working at the scene through the night.

First to the crash were local villagers, who used farm tools to free some people.

The country has suffered a record number of bus crashes this year. In August, 34 people died when their bus overturned and burst into flames about 10 miles north of Harare.

Since September, 17 bus accidents have been reported. Bus owners have said they cannot get hard currency to buy new tires or spares. In 1982, 61 farmers and their wives and children died when their bus crashed into the Dande river near the town of Guruvu, north of Harare.

Salvation Army Kettle Drive

Les Garner, left, chairman of the Salvation Army Kettle Drive Committee, places the first donation into the kettle this morning, beginning the organization's annual drive for donations, while Salvation Army Major Earl Woodard, center, and Harry Leslie of the Pitt Golden K Kiwanis Club look on. The goal for this year's drive is $75,000 with approximately $35,000 from the kettles in Pitt County. The donations will be used for toys for children, Christmas baskets and clothes for the needy.

In The Area

Thefts Reported

Three thefts, including an incident involving 10 bicycles, were reported to Greenville police Thursday. Officer E.A. Tyson said 10 bicycles were taken from the front of Rose's at The Plaza mall in an incident at 7:56 p.m. Tyson reported that a witness saw the bicycles placed in a green and brown truck, which had a vehicle with one passenger accompanying it. The store manager estimated the value of the bicycles at $1,000. Officer J.W. Corbett said a $250 stereo system, two $100 speakers, a $250 camera, $80 sunglasses and $80 worth of cassette tapes were taken from a vehicle at Wildwood Villa in an incident at 1:45 p.m. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $450. Officer E.R. Lavoie reported an undetermined amount of cigarettes was taken from the Trade Station at 912 W. Fifth St. in an incident at 4:22 a.m. An estimated $140 damage was done to the store in the incident.

p.m., with two firefighters and one rescue unit responding. Mills said the fire had spread from its apparent origin in a chimney to the attic by the time firefighters arrived. No injuries were reported in the incident. Mills said the amount of damage has not yet been estimated.

Christmas Parade

The Farmville Christmas Parade will be held Thursday at 4:30 p.m. on Main Street in Farmville. Over 100 professional and local units will participate. Santa Claus will usher in the 1989 Christmas Holiday Season. Special guests will be members of the 1989 Farmville Central High School basketball team which won the state basketball championship. Following the parade, there will be a tree-lighting ceremony and a carol sing at the Farmville Town Common.

Taft Appointed

Sen. Henson P. Barnes, president pro tempore of the North Carolina Senate, announced the appointment of Sen. Thomas F. Taft, D-Pitt, to Senate Legislative Research Commission posts. Barnes said Taft was appointed to the committees on Public Employees Benefits, Solid Waste Management and Water (Groundwater) Protection. Taft will serve as co-chairman of the Committee on Water Protection. "These committees have tremendous responsibilities in gathering and analyzing data, determining needs and drafting bills for the next session of the Legislature," Barnes said.

School Officers

The Student Government Association at Pactolus Elementary School recently elected officers for the 1989-90 school year. Elected were Alphonso Hart, president; Kristin Crandall, vice president; and Delmon Moore, secretary.

Guest Speaker

Michael Stanco III of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce recently visited third-grade students at Falkland Elementary School to talk about the Chamber's role in the community. The visit was part of the school's social studies program.

Woman Dies In Martin Wreck

A Williamston woman was killed in a one-car accident near Williamston Thursday night. According to a preliminary report by Trooper G.P. Raby, Doreen Lee Reynolds, 19, of 512 W. Main St., Williamston, died in a 7:45 p.m. accident on State Road 1128, 4.3 miles southwest of Williamston. Raby said Ms. Reynolds was a passenger in the rear seat of the vehicle which ran off the road then struck a tree. The name of the driver was not available this morning. An investigation of the accident is continuing, Raby said. According to the State Highway Patrol, at least four people have been killed on state roads so far this Thanksgiving weekend. The Carolina Motor Club projects 15 people will die in traffic accidents before the holiday is over. Evelyn Hunt Harrell, 79, of Atkinson, was killed at 8:15 p.m. Thursday when the car she was driving ran a stop sign and collided with another vehicle on U.S. 74 about six miles east of Bolton in Columbus County, the N.C. State Patrol reported. Crystal Maue Thurnau, 62, of Rocky Mount died Thursday at 1:05 p.m. when her car ran off the road and struck a tree on N.C. 97 west of Rocky Mount in Nash County. Michelle Rae Vanabel, 23, of Statesville, was killed about 1:15 a.m. Thursday on a state road about three miles northeast of Statesville when the car she was driving went out of control on a curve and slammed into a tree, troopers said. The deaths bring to 1,301 the number of people killed on state roads so far this year, compared to 1,401 on the same date in 1988. The official holiday weekend fatality count began at 6 p.m. Wednesday and will end midnight Sunday. Last year during the 102-hour period, there were 17 traffic fatalities and 1,310 injuries in wrecks on state roads, compared to 22 deaths in 1987.

Inmates Had Holiday Meal

Those persons at the city jail and Greenville Community Shelter enjoyed special holiday meals on Thursday. Inmates at the city jail were treated to a traditional Thanksgiving meal Thursday, according to Nancy Bell, a dispatcher at the jail. Bell said 106 inmates at the Greenville facility were served turkey with dressing, gravy, snap beans, cranberry sauce, sweet potato pie, chocolate cake and tea. At the Greenville Community Shelter, a spokesman said about 39 people showed up Thursday to eat leftovers from Wednesday's annual Thanksgiving dinner for the needy. "We had a house full," said Walter Drake, a spokesman at the shelter. "Everything went just fine." Drake said the number of people served at the center Thursday was down from about 50 served last Thanksgiving Day.

Slaves Had 'Strong Family Commitment'

By Joe Taylor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND — For the slaves who made iron at Buffalo Forge in mid-19th century Virginia, the message from the itinerant preachers brought in by their white owner came from Paul's admonition to servants: obey your master. But the slaves had their own prayer meetings "outside the master's eye," says historian Charles Dew, and the lessons there were on the brotherhood and sisterhood of people in bondage. "It was slave Christianity," said Dew, chairman of the history department at Williams College in Massachusetts. "The message was their worthiness. They were sinners, but people who had a place and would be recognized in the afterlife." Dew, who is spending a year at the University of Virginia's Carter G. Woodson Institute for Afro-

American and African Studies, is three months into a study of the slaves at Buffalo Forge, just south of Lexington in Rockbridge County. The study includes an examination of journals, diaries and business accounts kept by the owner of the slaves, William Weaver, as well as interviews with the slaves' and owner's descendants. The picture that has emerged so far, said Dew, is one of "stable families pulling together in a time of shared adversity." According to Dew, Weaver owned about 20 slaves who worked at the forge and about 50 more who were involved in farming. Weaver kept records of how much he paid the workers, who could earn money by exceeding their assigned tasks, Dew said. The records also showed how the slaves spent their money. "Those earnings show a strong family commitment," Dew said. "They bought presents for their wives, presents for their children, things to improve their living standard."

Dew said the records show that slaves purchased coffee, molasses, tobacco, furniture for their cabins and — in one case — a mirror. "That's quite remarkable, to be concerned about their appearance," he said. The slaves also sought to preserve their identities and the memories of their ancestors by passing on family names to children, he said. He cited the case of one family that used the name Mary for a girl born in each generation during the century.

'Aunt Bee' Still Hospitalized

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SILER CITY — Frances Bavier, 87, who is remembered by millions of fans as the devoted Aunt Bee on television's "The Andy Griffith Show," remains in the coronary care unit of a Siler City hospital, a spokeswoman said today. Ms. Bavier's condition was not released in respect of her wishes, said officials at Chatham Hospital, where she was admitted Wednesday. Ms. Bavier, born in New York City in December 1902, has lived in Siler City for several years. She has refused media requests for interviews for some time. "She's a very private person," said Roger Harrell, hospital administrator. Prior to her television role in the popular show starring Andy Griffith as a Southern sheriff, which she continued in the short-lived series "Mayberry RFD," Ms. Bavier appeared on Broadway in such productions as "Kiss and Tell," "Point of No Return," and "The Lady Says No."

Shooting Victim Returns Home
Dr. Mohammed Ahad, a local resident who was shot twice during a robbery in Brooklyn, N.Y., on Oct. 28, recently returned home to Greenville. Ahad, a nursing professor at East Carolina University, was interviewed by phone at his residence this morning. He said, "I am grateful to God to be home and recovering. I am also grateful for all my friends. I have many more than I knew I had before this happening." Ahad was released from Brooklyn Jewish Hospital of Interfaith Medical Center in Brooklyn Tuesday, and flew the same day to Greenville, accompanied by his son, Abdul Kamal Pasha. Dozens of well-wishers, including children in clown costumes, welcomed him at the Pitt-Greenville Airport with banners, he said.

Dog Show Winners

Several local residents and canines participated in two All-Breed Dog Shows and Obedience Trials on Saturday in Lumberton and Sunday in Fayetteville. In confirmation wins, Tony and Sharon Hinson with their Golden Retriever, "Carolina Orion Sam," won first place, puppy class, and reserve winners dog Saturday and second place, puppy class, Sunday; Tim Williams won Best of Breed with his Brittany Spaniel, "Maximum Motion," both Saturday and Sunday; Cathy Blackburn and her Belgian Tervuren, "Bonheur's Xplosive Moment," won Winners Dog and Best of Winners Sunday.

In obedience wins, Rodney and Patty Smith's Yellow Lab, "Jan's Stormy Day," placed third high in trial Saturday and qualified for a second leg Sunday; Kathleen A. Dunn and her Golden Retriever, "Sweet Masie," qualified in novice B obedience classes, and Milan Rowe and Carol Knock qualified 185.5 out of 200 points with their Belgian Malinois, "Tri Sorts Luzerne Bronze." All participants are students at the weekly obedience training classes sponsored by K-9 Specialist and the Pitt County Humane Society. For more information, call 756-1268 or 355-3218.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

But More For The Money

Taxpayers may get a bigger bill for government soon, but they may also get more for their money. Members of the United States House of Representatives voted themselves a $31,000-plus annual pay raise. The good news, however, is that congressmen will quit taking speaking fees from special interest groups.

That's a move that could dramatically improve the perspective of some lawmakers who depend heavily on big contributions for speech-making — and become quite amenable to the causes of the organizations that pay those fees.

The bill also increased the salaries of federal judges and top executive branch officials. That raise is overdue and is necessary — especially for judges — to keep salaries that attract top people.

Members of the U.S. Senate approved themselves a 10 percent pay raise, considerably less than their House counterparts.

Senators, however, will continue to accept money for the speeches they make. They would be wise to follow the lead of the house and clean up their act.

While a 30 percent raise is a big pill for taxpayers to swallow, it may be necessary if lawmakers are to do their jobs without outside money.

Analysts say under the separate formulas the House and Senate incomes will be about the same at something over $120,000 by 1991. To the taxpayer who makes $4 or $5 an hour, paying an elected official that much money may seem absurd.

And salary is just the start of what it costs to support a senator or a representative. If a lawmaker can stay in Congress long enough, the retirement plan is unsurpassed. Then there are fact finding trips abroad, plenty of office help, health clubs, gyms and other activities, as well as special dining and barber shop and beauty salon privileges.

But good government requires up front salaries for the people who serve. Better the taxpayers pay the cost of an investigative trip than a special interest group. After all, those elected officials are working for the public.

The House has voted to not accept the honoraria from speaking fees. The taxpayers should approve. The Senate should follow suit.

'Better the taxpayers pay the cost of an investigative trip than a special interest group.'

Mandela Still The Key

William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — "There is no alternative for South Africa but the road of reconciliation, of creating opportunities for all the people of this country in a way which is fair, just and equitable....For the white group, clinging to power means accepting the risk of a revolution."

It sounds like a warning and a demand for change from, say, the outlawed African National Congress. In fact, it is the statement of President F.W. de Klerk, who, last week, declared an end to racial segregation on the nation's beaches and promised that all public facilities would soon be desegregated.

The South African government clearly is moving toward negotiations with its nonwhite majority. Whether it is moving toward an end of racial strife — or even white domination — is a matter of interpretation.

Clearly Thursday's announcement represents a major step — and a major risk — for De Klerk, who has been in office only since August. The month before he succeeded P.W. Botha, police at the Strand, in the Capetown area, used whips to drive blacks and "coloreds" — mixed race South Africans — off the city beaches. Chris Hatching, mayor of the Strand, said he welcomed De Klerk's announcement, which came in a speech to the President's Council, a high-level advisory group.

But the chief spokesman for the country's conservatives saw the announcement as tantamount to treason and called for De Klerk's ouster. Desegregation of public facilities "is the beginning of the end of a separate white community life," said Koos van der Merwe. "Mr. De Klerk is placing South Africa on the road of a totally racially mixed South Africa, which will inevitably be governed by a black majority."

The ANC, the leading organized opposition to apartheid, doubts that the government has any such outcome in mind. In fact, Thabo Mbeki, director of the ANC's international department, recently predicted that De Klerk would move much as he did this week — not to end white domination but to preserve it.

In a wide-ranging interview with reporters and editors of the Washington Post, Mbeki predicted the government would release Nelson Mandela, legalize black political activity and give up certain elements of apartheid. The objective: to "shift a line of defense they can no longer hold."

According to the Mbeki analysis, De Klerk is maneuvering to co-opt the ANC (which recently opened a Washington office) into joining negotiations based on group interests — including tribal elements. Rather than negotiating on behalf of all disfranchised elements of the society, he said, the nonwhite participants in the De Klerk-style negotiations would pit the various groups against each other, leaving the white minority in control.

In addition, he said, De Klerk's strategy would persuade the outside world of his good intentions and lead to demands that he "be given a chance."

As a counter to that ploy, Mbeki said the ANC would work to build "a broad, anti-apartheid, nonracial democratic coalition" which, by attracting large numbers of whites now loyal to the ruling National Party, would force De Klerk into abandoning his group-based approach.

He disputed last month's prediction by Assistant Secretary of State Herman J. Cohen that, by the end of the next parliamentary session, next June, South Africa will have abandoned virtually all of its apartheid legislation.

"It's not going to happen," said Mbeki, "because these are precisely the things that De Klerk would want to negotiate about."

In fact desegregation of the beaches and repeal of the Separate Amenities Act (which De Klerk also promised) would leave in place major chunks of the apartheid system, including segregated residential areas, medical care and schools, and, more importantly, it would continue the exclusion of non-whites from political participation. Still, the announced changes have to be viewed as important steps — and important political risks for De Klerk. Can the new president make enough concessions to bring blacks to the negotiating table without frightening the whites into tossing him out of office? Is he in fact ready to begin negotiations?

Not yet, says Mbeki. The real clue that De Klerk is ready to open negotiations will be the release of Mandela.

After that, negotiation toward an end of apartheid and toward some form of political participation by the black majority may be all but inevitable.

Farm & City

A Shared Past & A Shared Future

Special weeks come and go and, while most of them commemorate good causes, the public tends to become jaded to the obligatory proclamations.

One special week still has special meaning to Pitt and other area counties, and that's Farm-City week.

In Greenville it was celebrated in a big way with about 80 people gathered at a dinner. Our county's municipalities were once so tied to the farm economy that there was little difference in living in town or on the farm.

But thanks to the boom in higher education, medicine and industrial development, the county is far more cosmopolitan now than it once was. Still, agriculture is an important player in the community.

For one thing, many things we use and consume come from the farm.

For another, both urban and rural lifestyles are tied to the environment. Both share the environmental challenges of the coming decade. Waste management is an example. Rural and urban residents both produce the waste which go into the Tar River daily. Both produce too much trash, or solid waste, that must be landfilled.

The future of the farm side of the spectrum is less clear than the future of its city counterpart. One statistic cited at the meeting in Greenville was that the age of the average farmer today is 56 years old. Few young men and women are choosing farming as their vocation. No one knows who will replace today's farmers when they retire. Yet the need for farm products will always be there.

The issues and the statistics prove no lines can be drawn between farm and city life in the years ahead. The cities are dependent on farm products and farms are affected by metropolitan pollution.

The theme for this year's observance proclaimed "Revitalizing Rural North Carolina: A Farm and City Challenge." The point? A shared heritage means a shared future — and only that can solve the mutual problems.

Students Should Have A Voice

To the editor:

I am very concerned about the relationship between ECU students and the city of Greenville. I feel it is at an all time low. For many years the students have been a big part in the growth of our city. Why all of a sudden reject a noise ordinance?

If you give candy to a baby, then take it away, it is going to cry. We need to stop treating the students like 5-year-olds and start treating them like adults. I believe that the students feel that they are being treated like outsiders that are not welcome in our city.

ECU students are a great asset to our city. I am a small business owner and I am thankful every day for ECU students. There is more to life than an education. What more do we offer for the money they spend? They have no place to park and no place to congregate.

In my opinion, all the students that are eligible should register to vote and then they as citizens will have a voice in how their city will be controlled.

Jetty Not 'Worth The Risk'

To the editor:

Your editorial of Nov. 15 regarding the state's plans to construct jetties at Oregon Inlet is a disappointing display of rationalization of this issue. Had this subject been properly researched, you would have found that the proposal is neither "worth the risk" nor "a practical solution" as you state in your headline.

The project is inconsistent with North Carolina's Coastal Area Management Act of 1974 which clearly prohibits the reinforcement of the coast by hard structures. In granting the permits for construction, the state has violated the intent, if not the letter, of the law and severely weakened its ability to prevent the construction of similar projects by both public and private interests.

The Sierra Club and other organizations favor an alternative solution which could provide the bridge with long-term protection without adversely affecting the area. A plan for sand nourishment of the northern end of Pea Island could provide a million cubic yards of sand, more than twice that lost in last year's storms, within 30-45 days. By its own admission, the state cannot complete the jetty project until next year, leaving the bridge exposed to damage during the approaching winter storm season.

The proposed $20 million project would ostensibly protect the Bonner bridge from further erosion. However, research and history have shown that similar structures contribute to erosion and typically require increasing expenditures to fund modifications which never produce erosion control.

You are correct in asserting that the state's project is not perfect, but wrong in your assessment of its practicality. Alternatives exist which are less expensive, environmentally responsible and not in violation of the laws which protect our coastal resources. Ignoring these alternatives in favor of a political quick fix is not worth the risk of defeating sound coastal management practices.

Abstinence The Best Protection

To the editor:

This is in regard to a write-up in your paper on AIDS by Carol Tyer, dated Oct. 29.

It was a story of a Greenville man who seems to be conquering the disease. He says he is in better health now than he has ever been due in part, to a covenant he made with God, to help others. He is also attending church, and is looking for the "right" church for him.

There is just one thing about this story that concerns me, as much as I admire him for his spunk and commitment. While saying that everyone is vulnerable to the disease, he admits that he had to contact several women to tell them the sad news.

He says nothing about his lifestyle being the probable cause of his problem — only that he will be counseling young people in the importance of condoms. Nothing about abstinence or discipline.

I felt someone should write something to sort of balance things. How about a better lifestyle without condoms. He, perhaps, is not aware of abstinence, discipline, responsibility — these are tough words that some people don't want to hear about. But the people who have made these three words part of their lives, are not the ones in trouble today.

As for telling God this, and telling God that, perhaps he should be asking for forgiveness. Then God will surely listen.

As this young man is already counseling (re: covenant with God) it is only fair that he at least mention the good news of the better lifestyle: abstinence before marriage. In whatever church he decides to settle, I'm sure they will agree.

A Fact Of History: When Wars End, Governments Change

WASHINGTON — Republican euphoria at the prospect of a huge diplomatic victory for President Bush when he meets with Mikhail Gorbachev, the beleaguered master of the crumbling communist empire, is tempered by one historical fact. When wars end, governments change.

If the Bush-Gorbachev summit off Malta next month conveys the message that the Cold War is really over, the political environment here at home will be profoundly altered — and in ways that may not be conducive to continued Republican-conservative control.

As a teen-ager, I shared the shock most Americans felt when the British voters dumped Winston Churchill just as World War II was ending. It seemed — and probably was — rank ingratitude, but the British clearly felt they could dispense with their great leader.

Nor should we have been surprised. Two years after the end of the First World War, American voters pitched out the Democrats who had led the nation through that struggle. And they turned out to be as restless as the British after World War II. In the mid-term election of 1946, just 15 months after the Japanese surrender, our voters ended 14 years of Democratic control and elected a Republican Congress. They probably would have done the same thing with the White House in 1948, had not Thomas E. Dewey proved so easy a target for Harry Truman's populist rhetoric. As it worked out, the Republicans had to wait only until 1952 to get back the presidency with Dwight Eisenhower's time-for-a-change campaign.

These examples all deal with real wars, not a Cold War, and so, it may be argued, do not count as precedents for the current situation. But consider what contributed to the postwar political upheavals and the parallels become significant. One cause was exhaustion — the public's recognition that politically and intellectually, the people in power had run out of gas. They had expended so much of their energy in figuring out how to wage war that they just didn't have fresh resources to meet new challenges.

Unwittingly, that's exactly the signal Bush sent voters with his lackadaisical reaction to stunning scenes of the breaching of the Berlin Wall. On a reporting trip to the Midwest last week, that topic came up more than any other, with supporters and critics alike asking, "Why didn't Bush react?" It just might be that after a quarter-century in the trenches of the Cold War, Bush is intellectually tired.

He was a hawkish congressman in Vietnam days, a diplomat keeping tabs on communists at the United Nations and in China and a spymaster running the CIA. Then he was Ronald Reagan's lieutenant in the last big military buildup. Insiders say Bush is eager to start dealing with Gorbachev, but after what they have seen, the voters can be forgiven for thinking he may really have trouble readjusting his sights to a radically altered world.

The second reason for postwar political upheavals has been economic disruption. Typically, it's taken the form of a surge of inflation from pent-up consumer demand. Our economy seems relatively inflation-proof at the moment, but a sharp deceleration of military spending, now accepted as certain by everyone including Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, will have strong — and uneven — impacts here at home.

Already, politicians in states like Texas and California are beginning to worry about what may happen to communities dependent on military bases and production lines. Just as the Sunbelt benefited most from the Reagan-era military buildup, it will probably feel the sharpest effects of the Bush-Cheney slowdown. And the Sunbelt, as Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater never stops reminding Bush, has been the key to the Republicans' success in the 1980s. If Sunbelters have to start worrying about their economic future, the GOP has trouble.

The third and final element of past postwar political upheavals has been a shift of public focus from one set of challenges to another. That's already happening. A HotlineKRC poll last week reported that even though only one-third of its voters said they thought the Cold War is over, those same voters, by a 3-1 margin, said that they regarded economic competition with Japan as a greater threat to the United States than military competition with communism.

What is the Bush administration answer to this challenge, symbolized by the Japanese purchase of Rockefeller Center? Not to raise trade barriers, thank goodness. But if the United States is not to turn protectionist, then competing successfully in world markets almost certainly requires improving our education system, stepping up research and development, modernizing our transport network — the kind of activist-government investment policy Democrats find far easier to espouse than Republicans.

All this is suggestive of basic political change, not conclusive. Certainly one cannot argue that Republicans are doomed to defeat or Democrats fated for a comeback.

But one thing I would bet: The chances of such a turnaround are much higher if the Cold War really is over than they would be if Bush could soldier on in the familiar battle with communists for another seven years.

What Ends At Water's Edge?

Ronald Brownstein

In the international economic struggle against Japan, many U.S. politicians are depending on the wiles of entrepreneurs such as Apple Computer Co. founder Steven P. Jobs, whose latest company, NeXT Inc., just introduced a dazzling new computer.

But if NeXT stands as a symbol of U.S. potential in the technology line against the Japanese, it also demonstrates the increasing difficulty of mapping the border between the two economies. For NeXT's fortunes are intertwined with Japan's Canon Inc., which provides key technology for the computer, handles distribution in Asia and owns one-sixth of the company.

As the NeXT experience suggests, the rules in the economic conflict are rapidly changing — less dramatically, but perhaps no less profoundly than in the military competition with the Soviet Union. And just as with Eastern Europe, the U.S. political system appears unable to keep pace with events. "The events in the commercial world are running at 78 rpm while events in the political world are running at 33 if that," said GOP strategist Mitchell E. Daniels Jr., president of the Hudson Institute.

The key commercial event driving — and confounding — politics is the continuing integration of the U.S. and Japanese economies, as Japanese investment here rises, joint ventures proliferate, U.S. manufacturers grow increasingly dependent on Japanese components and Japanese manufacturers move more operations to the United States. This powerful trend is generating intense but contradictory political currents that baffle both parties.

On the one hand, the growing Japanese commercial presence has stirred public fears of U.S. economic decline — even economic "colonization" — and calls in Congress for renewed efforts to protect America's positions in key industries. But the very process of integration producing the unease complicates the task of developing policies that respond to it.

"It is making it harder to identify what an American firm is," said Jeff Faux, president of the Economic Policy Institute, a liberal think tank. "Is it one with 51 percent ownership by American individuals or institutions? Or is it a firm that operates in America and maybe is owned by somebody else? There is no legal answer to this, or a conceptual one either."

That blurring complicates the debate now heating up in Washington over how to defend U.S. competitiveness in cutting-edge technologies — such as advanced semiconductors, fiber optics and high-definition television, which some maintain could be the key consumer electronics product for decades to come. In a study released last week, Faux's institute warned that the failure to develop an American HDTV industry could cost 2 million jobs by the year 2010.

The Bush administration, though, has not only rejected calls for greater government spending on HDTV, it has reportedly prepared cuts in the existing research budget. Those cuts are part of a broader retrenchment in funding planned for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, which, through its interest in maintaining a U.S. industrial base, has improbably become the major source of government support for much critical commercial research. Worried legislators maintain that the administration is contemplating the elimination of DARPA support for Sematech, a consortium that blends public and private funds to conduct basic research in the semiconductor industry — and is viewed by many Democrats as the prototype for future government-industry partnerships.

Even as George Bush rejects such partnerships, support for them is moving toward the center of the Democratic economic appeal. That is the latest stop in the party's long search for a policy that would both coalesce and respond to the voters' persistent but vague unease about the nation's economic future. With both unemployment and inflation restrained since the first part of the decade, most Democrats have viewed those fears of national decline as their best — and perhaps only — opportunity to talk to voters about the economy.

But they have been unable to reach a consensus on a clear policy to take to the electorate. In the early 1980s, House Democrats twice pushed through "domestic content" legislation aimed at preventing U.S. auto manufacturers from moving jobs abroad; when that failed in the Senate, House Democrats proposed an industrial policy aimed at nurturing "sunrise" high technology industries. But that sank too, in interminable disagreements with Rustbelt Democrats over how much emphasis would instead be placed on reviving aging "sunset" manufacturing industries.

After that dead end, the House Democrats turned toward the tough trade legislation sponsored by Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., which imposed automatic sanctions on countries that ran large trade surpluses with the United States. Though the House approved the measure, it died in the Senate — to the relief of many Democrats who feared being labeled protectionist.

Still, Gephardt's tough talk on trade provided the foundation of his 1988 presidential campaign. Gephardt's "economic nationalism" struck sparks with voters, but he justifiably took enormous criticism for focusing too much blame for U.S. competitive woes on foreign trading partners and not enough on failures at home.

Since then, Gephardt and other House Democrats have shifted emphasis again. Without diminishing criticism of foreign partners for closing markets, they are now revisiting a form of industrial policy aimed at restoring U.S. capacities. A wide spectrum of liberal activists are calling for greater public investment in education and research and the creation of "industry-led" government partnerships, such as Sematech, to nourish U.S. companies in emerging industries. Most effort has gone into pushing such a program for HDTV.

At the same time, Gephardt, Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., and other House Democrats have stepped up efforts to prevent U.S. technology from being exported. Their fight with the Bush administration this spring over its deal to construct the FSX fighter plane with Japan ran on fears of providing critical technology that the Japanese could then use to challenge U.S. civilian aircraft manufacturers.

These proposals have enormous political appeal for Democrats, because they allow the party to patriotically stand up for U.S. interests on the battlefield that voters increasingly consider most important. But even as the Democrats sharpen their America-first program — and prepare for war with Bush over his retreat from the government's modest efforts to support emerging technologies — the ground may be shifting beneath them. While the political debate between the United States and Japan hardens into the language of conflict, much of the commercial dialogue is shifting toward the vocabulary of cooperation.

Camden Schools Excel Despite Adversity

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMDEN, N.C. — The Camden County school system has survived cramped quarters, escalating costs and dwindling resources and also serves as an example of how public schools can excel, educators say.

The system has become one of the best in the state.

"I wouldn't be surprised if they ranked in the top 10 of any ranking," said William Brown Jr., research and testing director for the state Department of Public Instruction.

The county's 1,100 students routinely score high in the state on a variety of tests, Brown said.

The district, the state's fourth smallest, has the fifth highest attendance rate and fourth lowest dropout rate in the state, said Camden County Superintendent Federick Denning.

It easily met the state's new, more rigorous accreditation standards last year. A preliminary review shows at least 16 and as many as 36 systems failed the standards, DPI officials said.

However, Camden's seniors performed poorly this year on the SAT, scoring an average 744 on the college entrance exam, 92 points below the state average, which was lowest in the nation.

District officials suspect the scores are low because low funding has narrowed the high school curriculum and teachers have neglected to teach students the deeper reasoning skills that the SAT measures.

But at 30-year-old Grandy Primary, the district's newest school, basics still dominate classes.

Teacher dedication and autonomy, parent involvement, the district's small size and a focus on the basics account for the county's good record card, educators say.

Like most small, rural schools, it sports no frills, no fancy archways, no sky-lit foyer with vaulted ceilings — just two long, low, lackluster brick buildings.

Teachers tend to get the most from the school's 322 children because they enjoy autonomy, deciding what and how their students will be taught, Principal Hilda Forehand said.

Camden has given its teachers control over instruction largely out of necessity, because its administrative staff is small. But in doing so, it has moved to the forefront of a nationwide movement to give teachers more authority.

Grandy Primary teachers say they refuse to let limited resources curb their high expectations for students. Nor do they expect less from pupils from poor homes.

"They still have to pay attention; they still have to learn," second-grade teacher Susan Overman said. "I'm sorry things are rough, but I can't do anything about it. But I can do something about teaching."

That attitude might help explain why Grandy Primary third-graders scored at the 83rd percentile on a national achievement test this year, higher than students in Wake County and well above the state average percentile score of 61 and the national average of 50.

First-grade teacher Margaret Britt sums up the reason for her school's success: "Work, work, work."

In her classroom, students work hard on the basics, coloring things that begin with C and circling plural words in sentences.

State Sees Increase In Killer Tornadoes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE — An increase in "killer" tornadoes in North Carolina has coincided with a decrease in the Midwest, says an atmospheric scientist.

"No one has a good explanation as to why these tornadoes are occurring, but we do know it coincides with a lack of these storms in the so-called Tornado Alley of the Great Plains," said Ed Brotak, who recently presented a paper on the phenomenon to the National Weather Association's annual meeting in Norman, Okla.

"The tornado chasers out there are complaining that they're not getting enough storms. But the opinion there is that things will switch back again," he said.

Eight class 4 tornadoes have touched down in North Carolina in the last six years, compared with only five during the 100 years from 1884 to 1984, said

"That's an amazing increase," said Brotak, who based the comparison on data from a 1985 national severe weather survey conducted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"Weaker tornadoes do kill people, but the majority of deaths are due to F-4 tornadoes, and these are the ones we're seeing more of," he said. An F-4 tornado on the Fujita scale is listed as "devastating," capable of leveling a well-constructed house.

In North Carolina on May 5, three F-4 tornadoes touched down, killing five people and leaving $100 million in damages.

Jim Gardner: Success Means Right Place And Right Time

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JIM GARDNER

RALEIGH — In business and in politics, Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner says, success or failure sometimes comes down to being in the right place at the right time. For Gardner, business success came in 1961 when a friend suggested they go talk to Wilber Hardee, who had opened a hamburger stand in Greenville.

"You just had to see the people lined up there to know he (Hardee) was doing something right," said Gardner, who at the time was selling the dairy products for his family's business in Rocky Mount.

"My interest at first was in selling him some mix for milkshakes that we were producing," Gardner says. "We went in at 11 o'clock in the morning and came out at 11 o'clock that night with a deal."

The deal, however, was not for milkshake mix. Instead, Gardner and his friend, Leonard Rawls, bought into the hamburger business and immediately began planning for expansion.

"We were young, energetic and not very bright," Gardner said. After opening a Hardee's in Rocky Mount, Rawls and Gardner wanted to put a third restaurant in Goldsboro.

"Wilber said, 'You boys are moving much too fast for me,'" Gardner said. "Wilber was the one who knew the food business, but we bought him out.

"Here we were with no experience, in what was then a new industry," Gardner said. "We made every mistake in the book, but we were the only guys on the block then."

At the same time he was starting Hardee's on its climb to the third-largest fast-food chain in the country, Gardner made a political decision that also returned big dividends.

A group of young, eastern businessmen, including Gardner and Rawls, switched their party registration from Democrat to Republican, a move influenced by the conservative positions of Arizona GOP Sen. Barry Goldwater and a belief the state needed a strong two-party system.

"I voted, but I really did not think much of the political arena or politicians," Gardner said. "As the business grew, I started becoming more aware of politics."

"I was a Nixon man (in 1960), but I really liked Kennedy's style," Gardner said. "I really got into it with Goldwater."

"I didn't know conservative from liberal, but I did know that most of what Barry Goldwater said was what I believed," he said.

In 1964, the same year Goldwater lost to Lyndon Johnson, Gardner ran for Congress against 31-year incumbent Harold Cooley, the state's senior congressman and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

"We just wanted to raise some issues," Gardner said of the young Republicans who worked in the campaign.

To everyone's surprise, Gardner got 48 percent of the vote. The General Assembly, dominated by Democrats and nervous about the closeness of the race, added Orange County to Cooley's congressional district, Gardner said.

Tammy Bakker Visits Husband For The Thanksgiving Holiday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Imprisoned former televangelist Jim Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, spent six hours together Thanksgiving in a common visiting area with about 70 other inmates and their guests.

"There were no disruptions at all. It went very well," said John Chreno, executive assistant to the warden at the Federal Medical Center.

Bakker was transferred to the center Nov. 3 to serve a 45-year sentence after being convicted of defrauding followers of the former PTL Club ministry.

The Bakkers weren't allowed to have Thanksgiving dinner together because visitors aren't allowed in the cafeteria and no food can be brought in, Chreno said.

Other visitors reported that the Bakkers socialized with other inmates and their visitors, had their pictures taken, signed autographs and were greeted by the prison chaplain staff.

Mrs. Bakker was accompanied by the couple's son, Jamie, and Jim Bakker's sister, Donna Puckett.

"We're very thankful we could be together on Thanksgiving. We had a nice visit," Mrs. Bakker said.

Asked how her husband was doing, she said: "As well as can be expected. He's a tough man."

Jamie Bakker said the visit with his father was positive. "He told me he loved me," he said.

The visit was the first for Mrs. Bakker, who lives in Orlando, Fla., since her husband was transferred to the Federal Medical Center.

Mrs. Bakker said she plans to stay in Rochester through Monday and then return to Orlando.

Mrs. Bakker, a native of International Falls who attended North Central Bible College in Minneapolis with her husband, was making her first visit to Minnesota in several years.

"I've forgotten how cold Minnesota was," she said of the 15-degree temperatures.

But she added that it was good to return to Minnesota. "It's home for me," she said.

Bakker is expected to serve most of his sentence at the medium-security prison, one of three medical centers for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. There are more than 600 inmates at Rochester, half of them in the nonmedical population.

Chreno said Bakker is still undergoing classification procedures at the prison and will not be assigned a permanent job for at least another week. He is helping with cleanup chores in the area where he shares a room with three other inmates. When he begins his permanent job, he will be paid 11 cents an hour.

Turkeys Honored At Holiday Feast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM, N.C. — Four turkeys were the center of attention at a Durham home and not for the way they tasted.

The turkeys were the guests of honor for a Thanksgiving vegetarian dinner as part of an animal-rights group's protest against farm practices.

"They're actually standing at the table," said Tom Giduz, who with about 40 other people gathered at the home of Dietrich von Haugwitz's for the dinner. "It's a blue table cloth, and the turkeys actually have red and white checkered napkins around their necks."

"They're adding cracked corn to the top of the lettuce and cranberries right now," Giduz said during the afternoon meal.

The event was part of a national Adopt-A-Turkey campaign coordinated by Farm Sanctuary, an organization dedicated to halting animal agricultural practices it believes are abusive.

Haugwitz is a member of both the Triangle Vegetarian Society and the North Carolina Network of Animals.

Both the turkeys and the vegetarians arrived to dine at the Haugwitz house Thursday. But Karin Yates of Chapel Hill is the birds' adoptive parent, he said.

The birds were rescued from factory farms and slaughterhouses and brought to the group's Delaware shelter for abused farm animals.

They and others were transported aboard a vehicle dubbed the Turkey Express to adoptive homes in several states where they will not end up in an oven.

Farm Sanctuary says 80 percent of commercial turkeys are raised in total confinement systems with thousands crammed into one building, where they are fed antibiotics and other drugs.

According to National Turkey Federation statistics, the average American consumed just over 12 pounds of turkey in 1985.

New Drug May Help Reduce N.C. Infant-Mortality Rate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — A new drug that helps premature newborns breathe may help reverse North Carolina's infant-mortality rate, which is one of the highest in the nation.

The drug is already being used experimentally at four medical centers and three hospitals in the state.

Dr. David Berry, an assistant professor of pediatrics at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, said, "We're very excited. We think it's helped the babies a lot."

The drug is a synthetic compound of a natural chemical in the lungs called surfactant that is lacking to some degree in babies born before the 34th week of pregnancy. A normal pregnancy runs 40 weeks.

One of the leading causes of death or illness in premature infants is a lung problem called respiratory distress syndrome, which Berry says should be called surfactant deficiency syndrome.

"Surfactant lines the air sacs of the lungs and allows the lungs to inflate easily and without effort," he said.

Berry said he has seen dramatic changes when synthetic surfactant is given to a premature infant.

The leading makers of surfactant are Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park and Ross Laboratories, a division of Abbott Laboratories.

Conservationists Urge Protection Of Maritime Forests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PINE KNOLL SHORES, N.C. — Conservationists are urging the state to protect its Outer Banks forests as the unique stands of oaks, loblolly pines and sweet bay magnolias dwindle.

"Most of the maritime forests are already gone," said biologist John O. Fussell III. "These kinds of areas are part of our heritage. Once they're gone, how many years is it going to take to re-create this? You might have something like this again in 300 years, but you probably never will."

A study last year by the Division of Coastal Management concluded that development would destroy or degrade most of the remaining forests within 10 years unless protective measures were taken.

The survey found only 24 forest tracts larger than 20 acres on the Outer Banks and other barrier islands, totaling about 12,000 acres. Of those tracts, 18 were partly or wholly in private ownership.

On Bogue Banks, for instance, the study found about 700 acres — including 290 acres in the Roosevelt Natural Area — remaining from forests that once virtually covered the 25-mile-long island.

Despite such concerns, the state panel charged with managing coastal development has been slow to respond.

The Coastal Resources Commission has been discussing ways to protect the remnant forests since last winter. But, under fire from developers and landowners, it has balked at adopting controls that would limit the cutting of forests.

"As a practical matter, if they delay much longer there won't be anything left," William E. Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of North Carolina, told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

CRC Chairman Daniel V. Besse, a New Bern lawyer, said the commission was moving as quickly as it could, considering the storm of protest from developers and landowners over possible regulations.

"Regulations are still an option," Besse said. "But we simply can't move state regulations fast enough to prevent damage."

Recently, the commission voted to set up a special committee to study possible regulatory controls, rank the remaining tracts according to their priority for protection and educate landowners about the importance of preserving the forests.

But the commission adopted a resolution stating it was not yet nominating any maritime forests as "Areas of Environmental Concern," a classification that would allow the commission to restrict development. And several members said they viewed the purchase of land for nature preserves as the only option for protecting the forests.

"I don't think that regulation is the answer to this issue," said commission member J. Tim Thornton, an Elizabeth City developer. "Acquisition is the only way to preserve these areas intact."

Although the commission has not proposed specific regulations, suggested controls would limit the density of development in the forests to levels ranging from one to two houses per acre.

Developers say such limits would amount to an unwarranted taking of land — land that commands steep prices on the barrier islands.

"We don't mind zoning," said Paxon M. Holz of McLean Real Estate in Cape Carteret. "But for someone to come in and say, 'Preserve this forest,' that's not reasonable. And that's not fair."

"If these areas are important enough to preserve for the people of North Carolina, then the people of North Carolina should own them. The people who own them now should not face regulation in a clear-cut attempt to stop development."

Virtually everyone agrees that acquisition is the best way to protect the forests.

Tammy Faye Look-Alike Is Popular On Party Circuit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME, Ga. — With batting eyelashes and smudged mascara, a north Georgia woman is a traffic-stopping look-alike of Tammy Faye Bakker, and is cashing in on it on the party circuit.

Teresa Martens of Rome said she jokingly told her daughter's modeling agent about the time she dressed up and was mistaken for the televangelist.

Now, "She's the hottest thing I've got," said Shirley Lowry, owner of Party People in Atlanta. Party People books celebrity look-alikes for special events in the Atlanta area.

"When I tell people my list of celebrity look-alikes, people laugh when I say Tammy Faye's name," Ms. Lowry said. "Tammy Faye Bakker is the most wanted look-alike."

Last month, a federal judge sentenced televangelist Jim Bakker, Mrs. Bakker's husband, to a 45-year prison term for fraud and conspiracy.

At one recent appearance at a business meeting, Mrs. Martens burst crying into the room.

"Look out or you'll be in jail yourself," she warned one executive.

"I've seen you down at the Cheetah," she said to another, referring to an Atlanta nude-dancing club.

Rates are $100 an hour or $500 a day.

Ms. Lowry said she sees potential to reach bigger markets.

"Teresa impresses me because she has not been in the theater," Ms. Lowry said. "She is a natural comedian. She sings, she acts, and she

The Associated Press

Ms. Martens goes into act as Tammy Fay Bakker look-alike can portray Tammy Faye Bakker so well."

Mrs. Martens, 42, said she had been mistaken for Mrs. Bakker before.

Once when her daughter was a baby, Mrs. Martens said two women kept looking at her during a layover in a Detroit airport.

"I thought, 'Oh no, baby burpie, blouse undone, zipper check,'" she said. "I mean, these women were staring."

The two have never met.

Because of the religious implications involved with her impersonation, Mrs. Martens said she tries to be sensitive to the fact that many people were victims in the downfall of the Bakker empire.

"I want to be very careful not to offend anyone," Mrs. Martens said. "I am having fun, and people come up to me and thank me for making them laugh."

"Tammy Faye Bakker does not seem to intimidate men or women," she added. "People want to talk to her. They feed me questions, and I answer them. A lot of people want to know how Jim is doing, so I answer how I think he is doing."

Spy Satellite Deployed By Discovery Astronauts

By Laura Tolley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Discovery's astronauts set their sights on a Sunday landing for a secret military space shuttle mission that sources said included deployment of a spy satellite.

Silence has surrounded most of the classified flight, but NASA did interrupt the quiet briefly on Thanksgiving Day to announce that the shuttle was scheduled to land at 7:02 p.m. PST Sunday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

"The crew is doing well and the orbiter continues to perform satisfactorily," Mission Control commentator Billie Deason said in the brief status report Thursday evening.

According to sources close to the project, a 2½-ton, $300 million payload was released from the shuttle's cargo bay early Thursday morning about 10 hours into the flight.

It was a satellite capable of monitoring Soviet missile tests and eavesdropping on military and diplomatic communications in the Soviet Union and other countries, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The satellite was to be maneuvered into a stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator, on a line of sight to the Soviet Union, China, the Middle East, Africa and all of Europe.

The sources were unable to provide information on how the satellite was operating. A similar satellite was launched by a shuttle crew in 1985.

They were expected to tend experiments for the "Star Wars" missile defense system and other military projects.

The Defense Department has said the news blackout is necessary to try to keep the Soviets from finding out about what the astronauts are doing.

Discovery is commanded by Air Force Col. Frederick D. Gregory. His four-person crew: Air Force Col. John Blaha, the pilot, and the three mission specialists, Navy Capt. Manley Carter Jr., F. Story Musgrave and Kathryn C. Thornton.

The flight, the fifth dedicated to the military, began Wednesday night with a spectacular nighttime liftoff that brightened the sky over the central Florida coast. The launch time was dictated by the secret cargo and its mission.

On Thanksgiving Day, the astronauts dined on irradiated turkey, freeze-dried vegetables and cranberry sauce.

Navy Ponders Anti-Drug Flotilla

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon says Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is considering a Navy proposal to aid the anti-drug war by posting a flotilla off Colombia's coast.

The proposal is among a range of ideas outlined by the heads of the various military branches, but Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Thursday no decisions have been made on whether to accept any of them.

In September, Cheney had asked the military leaders for ideas on how to take a more active role in the international drug battle.

The Los Angeles Times, citing anonymous sources, reported Thursday that Cheney was "pretty positive" toward a Navy proposal to put an aircraft carrier battle group or a marine amphibious task force off the Colombian coast. "It's a done deal," according to one administration official quoted by the newspaper.

But Williams, when asked about the report, said, "It's not a done deal."

Cheney this fall asked the military leaders to keep working on their proposals because of legal questions and issues of coordination among the different service branches, Williams said.

An administration official, who was asked about the scope of the flotilla proposal as outlined by the Times, said the report was "not out of the realm of the things the Navy has proposed."

Unmanned Barge Secured

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JUNEAU, Alaska — An unmanned barge carrying 5 million gallons of jet fuel drifted for more than a day near the site of the Exxon Valdez spill before a tug snagged the vessel today to hold it in place, the Coast Guard said.

At one point the 400-foot barge drifted within 1½ miles of a reef but did not run aground, Guard spokesman Ted French said.

The barge broke loose from a tug in rough weather Tuesday afternoon 20 miles south of Cape St. Elias in the Gulf of Alaska. A tug skipper reported the incident to the Coast Guard in Valdez, Guard spokesman Ed Moreth said.

The crew of a Coast Guard plane spotted the barge Wednesday, and a Guard helicopter dropped onto it a radio buoy with a strobe light, French said. By early today, the tug that reported the incident had the barge on a towline, French said.

At daylight, another tug was to take over and haul the barge to Whittier.

Earlier, officials considered bringing in an Army ordnance team to blow up the barge and burn off the fuel before it could run aground and spill its cargo.

The area where the barge went adrift is about 20 miles south of Prince William Sound, where the Exxon Valdez on March 24 hit a reef and lost nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil in the worst spill in U.S. history.

The barge is owned by Crowley Maritime Corp. of Seattle.

Man Convicted In Torture Murders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON, Del. — A jury that took five days to find a 32-year-old electrician guilty of the torture-killing of two women on Delaware highways will have the weekend off before deciding Monday whether he should be executed.

The 12-member jury, which returned guilty verdicts on two of three murder charges against Steven Pennell on Thursday, was allowed to go home after reaching its verdict. The panel must decide whether he should be sentenced to death or life in prison without parole.

Pennell was accused of killing three women in New Castle County between November 1987 and September 1988. The jury convicted Pennell of first-degree murder in the deaths of Shirley Ellis and Catherine DiMauro but could not come to a verdict in the case of Michelle Gordon.

Jurors initially told Superior Court

Judge Richard Gebelein they had been able to reach a verdict on only one count, but after deliberating for another 10 minutes came back with verdicts on two counts.

Pennell, who lived with his wife, stepdaughter, son and daughter in a trailer park, displayed no emotion when the verdicts were read.

Gebelein said he will declare a mistrial on the Gordon charge and order a new trial. If the jury imposes the death penalty, the case will be automatically appealed to the Delaware Supreme Court.

Bomb Found Aboard Jet In Pakistan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KARACHI, Pakistan — Police found a bomb in luggage taken from a Saudi Airlines jumbo jet, and only a loose wire stopped it from exploding over the Arabian Sea with 248 people aboard, airport sources said today.

Pakistani news reports earlier said a bomb threat against the Boeing 747 had turned out to be a hoax.

But sources in Karachi's Airport Security Force said the discovery, made Thursday night, was kept secret to help authorities investigate.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, declined to say if any group had claimed responsibility, or if they had arrested any suspects.

A taxi driver delivered an envelope to an Islamabad Airport security officer soon after Saudi flight 367 departed for Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, at about 6 p.m. Thursday, sources said.

It contained a note threatening to destroy the plane unless authorities paid $1.5 million, they said. The jet was over the sea when the Karachi control tower relayed the threat and called it back to land.

After the airliner was emptied of passengers and luggage, officers found an unclaimed school bag containing the explosive device, the sources said. It was set to go off at 7:20 p.m., when the aircraft was over the water, but a wire had come loose from a battery.

Fishing Fine Upheld

HALIFAX (AP) — Nova Scotia's highest court has upheld the largest fine ever imposed by a Canadian court on an American for illegally fishing in Canadian waters.

Manuel Augusto Vieira, 24, of New Bedford, Mass., was fined $200,000 earlier this year after pleading guilty to illegally fishing for scallops on the Canadian side of Georges Bank on June 21. He also admitted ignoring orders to stop his vessel and forfeited $16,000 worth of scallops.

Vieira appealed the fine, saying it was harsh and excessive.

Multivitamin Use Linked To Fewer Spinal Defects

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 CHICAGO — Mothers who take multiple vitamins containing folic acid early in pregnancy are significantly less likely to bear babies with spina bifida and other spinal column defects, a new study concludes.
 The birth defects were about one-fourth as common among babies whose mothers took the over-the-counter vitamins than among babies whose mothers didn't take vitamins, according to a report in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

 The apparent beneficial effect was limited to women who took the vitamins in the first six weeks of pregnancy, leading the researchers to suggest women begin taking vitamins with folic acid when they first start trying to conceive.
 The defects include spina bifida, in which incomplete closing of the bony casing around the spinal cord typically results in mild or severe paralysis. Another spinal column defect is anencephaly, in which major parts of the brain are lacking and death usually occurs within hours.

 Such defects occur in about 4,000 babies a year, or 1 to 2 in 1,000.
 The Boston University report was based on a three-year study of 22,776 women, about half of whom took multivitamins containing folic acid.
 The occurrence of spinal column defects was 0.9 per 1,000, among babies whose mothers took the vitamins, compared to 3.3 per 1,000 among infants born to women who didn't use supplements.

 The study was conducted by Dr. Aubrey Milunsky of the Center for Human Genetics at the Boston University School of Medicine and colleagues.
 "We believe that the combined data from this and other studies provide good evidence that folic acid-containing multivitamins taken during the first six weeks of pregnancy will prevent" spinal column defects, the authors wrote.

 The study doesn't prove folic acid prevents birth defects, said one expert, Dr. Lewis B. Holmes, a professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School.
 "Is it the vitamin itself... or are these women doing other things?" Holmes asked.
 Discussing the implications, Milunsky noted most pregnant women see their doctors for the first time 8 to 10 weeks after conception.
 "Almost all the fetal organs have been formed at that time," he said. "An opportunity for useful intervention would have been lost."
 The function of folic acid — found naturally in liver, leafy green vegetables, mushrooms, and lima and kidney beans — isn't really known, Milunsky said.
 Studies haven't ruled out the possibility that vitamins A, C, D or E — alone or with folic acid — protect against the defects, since all were contained in most of the multivitamins, the researchers noted.

The researchers also cautioned that excessive doses of multivitamins could be harmful.
 Researchers noted a "strikingly higher" prevalence of the defects — 13 per 1,000 — among infants of women with a family history of spinal conditions who didn't take supplements, compared to women with such histories who did — 3.5 per 1,000.
 The study group — mostly white and well-educated — wasn't statistically representative of the population.
 The frequency of spinal column defects is higher among poor whites and lower among blacks, Milunsky said.

Scientist Ends 21-Day Test In Module

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 ORACLE, Ariz. — A scientist emerged after spending three weeks alone in a sealed, self-contained world, hungry for companionship and Thanksgiving turkey.
 Biologist Linda Leigh ended the 21-day test Thursday, emerging after her record-breaking stay inside a sealed, greenhouse-like module that generates its own food, air and water. The device is part of a program to explore technologies for replicating Earth's environment in space.

Ms. Leigh, 39, emerged from the airtight, glass-and-steel module just in time for Thanksgiving dinner, and was hugged by Abigail Alling, director of the project's marine ecological system.
 "She was quite struck by the beauty of the system," Ms. Alling said in a telephone interview.
 Wearing a bright red jumpsuit, Ms. Leigh was greeted by co-workers, friends and reporters, but wasn't allowed to speak, before being whisked away for a medical exam like an astronaut back from space.

The structure is a test for Biosphere II, a $30 million module under construction on a ranch about 30 miles north of Tucson. Next September, four men and four women will enter the much larger module for two years to determine whether humans can duplicate Earth's life systems for use in space.

Extensive medical monitoring while she was inside found the confinement didn't seem to harm Ms. Leigh's health, doctors said.

Burglary Suspect Had Lot Of Nerve

OPELOUSAS, La. (AP) — A man wanted on burglary and attempted auto theft charges eluded police after officers spotted him, but later was caught when he went to the police station to recover the wallet he dropped while running away.
 "We nailed him when he came inquiring about his wallet," said city Deputy Marshal Paul Mouton. "I happened to be in the right place at the right time."

 Mouton said he was in the police station near the dispatcher's desk Tuesday when Jack Pleasant, 37, of Opelousas came in and inquired about his wallet.

Ms. Leigh entered the module Nov. 2 for the longest-ever stay inside an ecosystem entirely independent of Earth's, breaking Ms. Alling's mark of five days.

Santa Scholar Says Learning The Truth Harder On Parents

By Eyan Ramstad
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Kids give up Santa Claus more easily than their parents, says one Santa who ought to know.

For seven years, Carl Anderson has taken a break from his counseling practice to play Santa. And this Kriss Kringle earned a Ph.D. studying how children decide to stop believing in him.

Wide-eyed children this week watched as Anderson, 36, inspected the elaborate North Pole set at Dallas' NorthPark Center, where he will spend the next month.

Santa, he said, teaches children an early lesson about giving, even though they are the recipients.

But when it's time to give up the belief in a jolly old elf who travels to the North Pole in the world on one magic night, children usually are ready, he said.

Anderson said that more often they felt proud and happy and good, basically because they felt more adultlike," said Anderson, who in his research at the University of Texas three years ago interviewed 75 9- to 12-year-olds and their parents.

The parents react differently.

"They feel like their baby is growing up and it's all going by too fast," he said.

Children reported that, as early as age 5, they begin doubting Santa Claus, he said. By age 9, most have decided they don't believe in him.

Anderson reported at least going through two or three Christmases of increasing doubt before they decided for themselves to no longer believe," he said. "So the first time they heard on the schoolyard somebody say 'Santa's not real,' it didn't necessarily crush them at all."

The biggest surprise of his research, Anderson said, was that children understood Santa as "something that linked generations, something that you go through initially as a child and participate in one way and then later on you go through it again as a parent from the other side."

Older children often adopt a parental role by professing to believe in Santa to younger siblings, he said.

Anderson said there is no single way for children to learn Santa is a myth. He tells parents to try to find out what the child believes.

To children who declare Anderson is Santa, he gives a Santa Claus business card, a response that keeps him from having to tell a lie.

Days Off With Jackpot

— A retiree who borrowed $20 from his ex-wife to play a slot machine in the city's newest resort won a $4.6 million jackpot.

Elmer Sherwin, 76, of Las Vegas, hedged when a reporter asked him during a Thanksgiving Day news conference if his newfound fortune would reunite the couple.

"She won't have me," Sherwin said.

"He said that, not me," piped up his ex-wife, Florence, who said the two are "still buddies" 13 years after divorce ended their 25-year marriage.

Sherwin spent 90 minutes playing $80 of his own money Wednesday night at the new Mirage hotel-casino on the Las Vegas strip. Then, nine hours after the casino opened and shortly after borrowing the money, he hit the winner.

The jackpot — on the Megabucks system linking slot machines in dozens of casinos — was the largest payoff in Las Vegas history but didn't surpass the Nevada record of $6.8 million won in Reno.

Two Abortion Cases Before High Court

By Charles J. Gans
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The U.S. Supreme Court could still make significant changes in abortion law, despite the out-of-court settlement of one of three key abortion-rights cases on its docket this session.

The high court is scheduled to hear arguments Wednesday in cases from Ohio and Minnesota, both of which focus on state laws requiring that one or both parents be notified before a minor gets an abortion.

Those cases — and an Illinois dispute settled out of court earlier this week — were seen by those on both sides of the issue as likely vehicles for the Supreme Court to expand or modify its July ruling allowing states greater leeway to restrict abortion.

The Illinois case, over state regulation of abortion clinics, was the most likely of the three to result in changes to the court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling, said Jack Tunheim, chief deputy attorney general for Minnesota. The Illinois case affected all women, rather than just minors.

"I don't think the Illinois settlement will have any impact on our case," Tunheim said Thursday. "The Minnesota case and the Ohio case both involve what we view as a very, very different proposition — the issue of minors' abortions."

The settlement announced by Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan and officials of the Illinois American Civil Liberties Union would resolve a legal challenge to regulations requiring abortion clinics to be equipped and staffed like hospital operating rooms.

In the case, Ragsdale vs. Turnock,

Dr. Richard Ragsdale of Rockford contended that the state regulations would make it much more difficult and costly for women to obtain abortions.

Despite federal court rulings that the law unconstitutionally limited women's access to abortion, Illinois argued that the rules were necessary to protect women's health.

Anti-abortion activists wanted the Ragsdale case to go before the Supreme Court because a favorable ruling would have made it difficult for abortion clinics to operate, said Joseph Schiedler, director of the national Pro-Life Action League.

But either the Ohio or Minnesota case "could still serve as a catalyst for eroding Roe vs. Wade," he said.

"The court seems to be moving toward restricting abortions and they can do it with the cases they have left," Schiedler said Thursday.

The Ragsdale settlement still must be approved by a U.S. District Court judge in Chicago.

Attorneys for anti-abortion groups will try to scuttle the settlement in district court in hopes it could still go before the Supreme Court, Schiedler said.

Jay Miller, executive director of the ACLU in Illinois, said he thought the Ragsdale settlement indicated the tide was turning against efforts to undermine Roe vs. Wade.

"It's still a crap shoot, but I'm more optimistic," said Miller, referring to the two abortion cases pending before the Supreme Court.

The key vote in the upcoming cases is expected to be cast by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, Miller said.

In July, hers was the fifth and decisive vote in Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, in which the court allowed states greater leeway in regulating abortion.

Doctors Say Drug Spurs Colon Cancer Remission In Mice

By Ruth Rendon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A new drug derived from a Chinese tree has triggered remissions of colon cancer in laboratory mice, doctors said in a preliminary report.

"In 20 years in this lab, we've never seen anything like this. We have animals that are tumor-free," said Dr. John Stehlin, scientific director at the Stehlin Foundation for Cancer Research at Houston's St. Joseph Hospital.

During two years of experiments, researchers said they treated about 100 mice with three kinds of human colon cancer: slow-, medium- and fast-growing. Once the mice began developing tumors, they were divided into two groups: those receiving the new drug, 9-amino Camptothecin, or 9-AC; and those receiving no treatment.

Most mice showed no trace of residual cancer after being treated with 9-AC for several months, doctors said. The untreated mice died.

Some mice treated with 9-AC are still alive after surviving the equivalent, in human terms, of 20 years, Stehlin said at a briefing this week.

The findings were published today in the journal Science.

"This is a preliminary report," he said. "Obviously, more work needs to be done with additional colon cancers and other forms of cancer that are not responsive to the standard anti-cancer agents."

Colon cancer is the third most common cancer in the United States with 147,000 new cases reported each year. The disease, most commonly treated by surgery, takes about 60,000 lives annually.

Beppino Giovannella, director of the St. Joseph Hospital Laboratory for Cancer Research, said all three tumors used in the experiments had not responded to major known anti-cancer drugs administered at maximum tolerable doses.

Giovannella also said two mice injected with lung cancer have shown a regression of their cancer after being treated with 9-AC.

Very little progress has been made in colon cancer treatment in the past 40 years, Stehlin said. Chemotherapy and immunotherapy have had little effect and the use of the drug levamisole with 5-fluorouracil improves the survival rate in about 15 percent of patients, he said.

Researchers said mice with the slow-growing cancer responded to 9-AC within 10 days and by 20 days were tumor-free.

The mice with the medium-growing cancer took about 10 days to start reacting and in about 25 days were in remission, according to researchers. Mice treated with the fast-growing cancer took 21 days before responding to 9-AC.

The 9-AC drug is a derivative of camptothecin, an alkaloid extracted from a Chinese tree. Dr. Monroe Wall of the Research Triangle Institute in North Carolina isolated camptothecin in the 1960s.

It was tested on humans but was soon discarded because of its excessive toxicity. Researchers are hoping to find out whether 9-AC is as toxic as its parent. If approved by the Food and Drug Administration, the researchers could start tests on humans as early as next year.

Doctors at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore have identified camptothecin as a potent inhibitor of topoisomerase I, an enzyme present in animal cells which controls cell division.

Snow Provides A White Thanksgiving

The administration to do something for you." A laid-off bank president was among those served at a Salvation Army center in Massachusetts, but it was the children who were among the victims of the state's slumping economy that most touched the hearts of volunteers.

"They often wonder why they are going to this strange place, but when they're eating good food there is a real warm feeling for the whole family to see," said Salvation Army spokesman Stephen Copaccio.

A man in Woonsocket, R.I., helped the needy revel in the kindness of others after his ministry received 450 donated turkeys. Last week Paul Dempster, director of Because He Lives Ministries, had only three turkeys and a guest list of about 70 people.

He called friends, newspapers and radio stations looking for more.

"I told them I needed help getting the word out," said Dempster. By Thursday morning he was inundated with 458 turkeys, he said.

In the San Francisco Bay area, many survivors of the Oct. 17 quake gave thanks by serving holiday meals to their less fortunate neighbors.

"Here we can really give thanks and be grateful that we are still here despite the destruction and death; this is a time when we can come together," said the Rev. Cecil Williams of Glide Memorial United Methodist Church, where 6,000 people were treated to dinner.

A killer tornado did not stop an Alabama couple from having their planned Thanksgiving wedding. Wayne Stinson of Huntsville said his wedding vows to Wanda Clark from a hospital bed, where he was recovering from storm injuries.

"It should be an easy anniversary date to remember," he said.

Three people rescued from a raft on 18-foot seas near Charleston, S.C., were thankful to be alive as they ate Thanksgiving Day dinner at the Coast Guard Air Station in Savannah, Ga.

The trio were tired but in good health after abandoning their floundering 43-foot boat and drifting in a raft for four hours Thursday about 35 miles southeast of Charleston, officials said.

Elsewhere, the chiefs of Virginia's eight Indian tribes were the guests of Gov. and Mrs. Gerald L. Baliles at a Thanksgiving feast in Richmond.

"A lot of Indians in Virginia have probably wanted to do something like this. I'd like to think that this is going to be continued," said Chief Raymond Adams of the Upper Mataponi tribe.

In Venice, Calif., a live turkey was the guest of honor at the California Vegetarian Association's Thanksgiving feast.

Some people had special reason to celebrate.

Yelena Gorovoy of Boston enjoyed her first Thanksgiving in the United States with her daughter and son-in-law, who recently emigrated from Moscow.

"For me, I think Thanksgiving is a day when I want always to thank America for everything," Mrs. Gorovoy said. "It is a day of appreciation."

Thatcher Arrives At Retreat For Talks

say that you want to tear down the system. It takes a much longer time to build up the new one."

Thatcher is effusive in her praise of Gorbachev — with whom she has met several times — lauding him as a reformer of courage and vision. But she is also cautious about his chances of completing the revolution he has unleashed.

Therefore, she continues to advocate a strong NATO and opposes any changes in the present lineup of NATO and Warsaw Pact forces, lest they become ammunition for Gorbachev's hard-line foes. Her legislative program for 1990 pledges Britain to uphold its NATO obligations and "sustain the United Kingdom's contribution to Western defense by maintaining adequate and effective nuclear and conventional forces."

The 64-year-old prime minister is facing political troubles at home. Resurgent inflation and criticism of her combative leadership style have helped push her behind the opposition Labor Party in opinion polls.

On Wednesday, rank-and-file lawmaker Sir Anthony Meyer announced plans to challenge Mrs. Thatcher for the leadership of the Conservative Party — a position that has gone to her as a matter of formality during her 10 years in office.

Meyer conceded he has no chance of success, but said he hoped to send the prime minister a message of disenchantment and possibly lure a major contender into the race if it should go to a second round of voting.

Mrs. Thatcher, in an interview published today, rebuffed the unprecedented challenge to her leadership, saying she is ready to fight two more general elections.

The Times of London quoted her as saying this week, "By popular acclaim (in the party) I am happy to carry on."

Cease-Fire Is Turned Down

National Liberation Front had used the negotiating process as a propaganda tool while it prepared the largest offensive of the rebels' 10-year-old war against U.S.-backed governments.

The guerrilla group has said it launched its offensive to prove that it cannot be defeated and that the country cannot have peace without accepting the rebels as a political factor.

The guerrillas tried to steal Cristiani's show by setting off at least five small bombs in a ravine about five blocks away. His news conference was interrupted shortly after he claimed the army controlled the city, but he said "anybody with a small group of people" could "launch terrorism."

Cristiani was surprised, but maintained his composure. The news conference was interrupted for 1 minute and 34 seconds, but then resumed even as helicopters roared overhead, dropping bombs and rocketing the slopes of a volcano where rebels were believed to be hiding.

Explosions continued to be heard just north of the city into the late evening.

The news conference was held in an open-air pavilion at military headquarters, which has been attacked numerous times during the war that has cost an estimated 71,000 lives.

There was little fighting elsewhere as the country experienced a second day of relative calm.

"They tried it and lost," said Cristiani of the rebel offensive. He said the guerrilla group must "come to its senses and stop its aggression against the people. Then we can sit down to look at the few things we can do to facilitate their incorporation into the democratic process."

Fighting in the city ended Wednesday morning after 12 U.S. Army

Green Berets evacuated a luxury hotel that had been seized by rebels.

The guerrillas renewed a cease-fire proposal made earlier, calling for a negotiations preceding a truce. The government maintains that a cease-fire should take place before substantive political and territorial discussions take place.

The guerrilla proposal included another clause rejected in the past that called for the armed forces to be represented at the talks; the guerrillas say that the army holds the real power.

Judge Drops Case

The attorney general filed an affidavit on Wednesday barring disclosure of the secrets and Shtasel said discussions have been underway with the CIA since then in an attempt to balance the national security concerns while preserving some of the criminal charges.

But Hilton refused to give the government more time, noting that his rulings on what information Fernandez needs to use were issued four months ago.

This is the first time that an attorney general has filed an affidavit barring disclosure of classified information in a criminal case and that a judge has dismissed the charges because of it.

Walsh said that Thornburgh should have filed his affidavit last July following Hilton's rulings. If that had been, said Walsh, "a proper appeal would have already been decided and the trial would have been concluded."

The independent counsel's office has called much of the classified information that the government is protecting in the Fernandez case "fictional secrets" that are already widely known to the public.

'Significant' Link

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The federal Centers for Disease Control said today a "statistically significant" link exists between the nutritional supplement L-tryptophan and a blood disorder now reported in 360 cases.

A 16-year-old New York woman died from the disorder. The death "emphasizes the potential severity of this condition," the CDC said, adding that more fatalities possibly linked to the product are under investigation.

The Atlanta-based CDC, in its weekly report, cited studies in New Mexico and Minnesota that "establish a statistically significant association" between the use of products containing L-tryptophan and the blood disorder, known as eosinophilia-myalgia syndrome.

In New Mexico, each of 12 blood-disorder patients studied from May 1 to Nov. 11 had used L-tryptophan. In Minnesota, another 12 cases were investigated, and again, all had used

L-tryptophan, the center reported.

The blood disorder brings an abnormally high number of white blood cells called eosinophils, and causes severe muscle pain, or myalgia.

L-tryptophan is an amino acid, a building block of protein, and is found naturally in many foods. Supplements containing L-tryptophan are taken by some people for insomnia, depression, premenstrual syndrome or weight control.

The Food and Drug Administration last week announced its intention to seek a nationwide recall of all L-tryptophan products in which the substance is the sole or major component. The FDA previously alerted the public to refrain from taking it.

Freezing

heating plants have had routine calls for such service for the past couple of days.

One company spokesman said that a serviceman on call worked all Thanksgiving Day and until 3 a.m. this morning responding to calls on an emergency basis.

Other firms indicated that the level of a few calls for emergency services was about on a par with such calls for any day.

The same normal situation existed relative to businesses delivering oil supplies to homes. All surveyed reported a normal level of delivery during the past few days, with no emergency calls handled on Thanksgiving day.

Groups Needing Each Other Makes For Success

By Catherine Dressler

PITTSBURGH — Ann Valletta was devastated when her husband died 15 years ago, but she began a new life as a "grandmother" to handicapped kids. "I came here and I found myself," she said during a break at the Rehabilitation Institute of Pittsburgh, where she works with children five days a week. "If I hadn't come to this place, I think I would have been in a sanitarium. I find peace here."

Mrs. Valletta, 77, is one of 20,000 foster grandparents across the nation and in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands helping kids with special needs in homes, schools, hospitals, day-care and detention centers and halfway houses.

The Foster Grandparents program was established by the government in 1965 to help low-income people over 60 remain active in community service by helping youngsters who are disabled, troubled, abused or neglected. It is successful because it "combines two groups of people who need each other, and it clicks," said Ray Tejada, national director.

"We tend to forget the contributions that elderly people can make," said former First Lady Nancy Reagan, who has supported Foster Grandparents since the late 1960s. "There are all kinds of things that come with age, such as more patience and more understanding, and this is the one program that helps both ends of the age spectrum: The young and the elderly.

"They have a special bond between each other."

Volunteers get a stipend of $44 a week for 20 hours of work. The federal government pays 90 percent of the program's costs and local agencies pay the rest. The program cost the federal government $57.4 million last year, a small amount compared to other federal programs, Tejada said.

The money is nothing compared to the joy Mrs. Valletta finds in being needed. "Sometimes I'm tired and I don't want to get up but they're waiting for me."

Lou, a 6-year-old boy with curvature of the spine and a learning disability that makes speaking and concentrating difficult, was waiting one recent morning.

"What is this letter?" Mrs. Valletta asked, holding up a large card.

Lou paused and slowly said, "Q."

"Good work," she said, patting his head and smiling at the pleased boy. At hospitals in New York City and Atlanta, foster grandparents care for infants who were abused, abandoned, born drug-addicted or infected with AIDS.

"They just rock and cuddle that child and feed him," said Marshall Neil, director of the program in Atlanta. "It's amazing what the grandparent can do to that little life."

In San Jose, Calif., foster grandparents at the Santa Clara County juvenile center teach crocheting and other crafts and advise youths.

"The kids really relate to these grandparents," said director Betty Manley. "Counselors often tell us that the grandparent was able to get through to the child when a counselor couldn't."

In Pittsburgh, foster grandparents help children "who fall through the cracks of social service agencies," said program director Jim Farwell. "Our grandparents are the least threatening of caseworkers. We go in there and try and help build, solidify that family."

"The kids get a lot of hope, a lot of love. And the grandparents get a lot of love back. They get the hugs, the kisses and the looks."

Many foster grandparents find a new sense of purpose through the children they "adopt" after their own have grown and their spouse has died.

For the past 11 years, widow Mary Bradley, 85, has left her home each morning for a bus ride across town to the Rehabilitation Institute.

"Those that can't help themselves, I help," she said. "I love the girls. I love them all. I learn something every day from the children."

Like any proud grandmother, 76-year-old Jean Carlino shows friends snapshots of her young companions at the institute and keeps an album of their photos in her dresser. "The kids always say, 'I love you' and we love them."

When 4-year-old Lance Long, who has cerebral palsy, moved into the center, he said, Mrs. Carlino and other foster grandparents helped him overcome his homesickness by

Family Is At Breaking Point

Dear Abby: I am a mother torn. Our 18-year-old daughter, "Kathy," was to be married last August to "John," her childhood sweetheart. (He's 19.) Just nine days before the wedding, our 15-year-old daughter (I'll call her Mary) told me that John had raped her. In Mary's words, "He took sexual advantage of me." She claimed it happened more than once — maybe six or seven times.

Kathy first accused her sister of lying. Then she said, "If John did have sex with Mary, it was Mary's fault because she's a flirt and a tease, and she's always had a crush on John." My husband believed Mary and had John arrested. (He is out on bail now.)

Naturally we called the wedding off, but Kathy says she is going to marry John — no matter what! To make matters worse, Kathy just told us that she is pregnant with John's baby. Unfortunately our priest is on an extended vacation in Ireland.

This mess has turned our whole family upside down. Mary was supposed to be in Kathy's wedding, but because of the accusations she made against John, Kathy wrote her out of the wedding.

Abby, if these girls were your daughters, what would you do? Please hurry your answer, as Kathy is beginning to show. — A Mess In Massachusetts

Dear Mess: I would put this wedding on "hold" until I found out who did what to whom. I urge your entire family to cooperate in family counseling — and include John.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

It is in Kathy's best interest to find out what kind of man John is. If she insists on marrying him — "no matter what" — you can't stop her because in your state, an 18-year-old girl does not need parental consent to marry. My heart goes out to all of you, Mother. I wish you well.

Dear Abby: I am sending this letter to you because of your wide readership, in the hope that a direct letter in your column will shake up the past to the surgeon general and the American Lung Association, all to no avail. It has to do with the annual Great American Smokeout.

Each year, I wonder anew why the Great American Smokeout is always held about one week before Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's celebrations begin — traditionally some of the most stress-filled days of the whole year! Does it make sense to try to have smokers quit just before a period of constant socializing, partying and traveling? To me, it seems as though their efforts will be doomed from the start.

I often wonder why it doesn't occur to either the surgeon general or to the American Lung Association that a far better time for a sincere anti-smoking campaign would be around Jan. 1, when people are in a resolution-making mood and when perhaps they've become sick of their and everyone else's smoke during the previous weeks.

I am a registered nurse and have never been a smoker. It truly bothers me to think that this whole campaign could and would almost certainly be so much more effective just by changing the time that it is held. — Frieda H. Kvam, R.N.

Dear Frieda: Trying to quit smoking would be a drag (no pun intended) any time of the year. However, you make an excellent point. The American Cancer Society has a good pamphlet titled "How to Stay Quit Over the Holidays." It's free. For a copy, write: The American Cancer Society, Dept. S, 1599 Clifton Road N.E., Atlanta, Ga. 30329. No SASE is required. You may also call the toll-free number, (800) ACS-2345, to order your free booklet or for any general information about how to quit smoking.

Dear Abby: The letter in your column about the importance of teaching children the proper way to answer a telephone brought back memories of a little lesson I taught my grandsons concerning telephone etiquette.

They used to call my home and say, "Grandma, is my mom there?" My stock reply was: "I'm fine, thank you. And how are you, dear?" — La Jolla Grandma

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69410, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Tensions Still Simmer After Student Movement

LANZHOU, China (AP) — The anonymous poster that went up at Lanzhou University in the first month of classes was defiant. The spring student-led democracy movement, it said, was not over.

Across China in Canton, a college student was caught stuffing leaflets in mailboxes and bicycle baskets, pledging a "struggle to the end."

Pamphlets written by extreme leftists, criticizing senior leader Deng Xiaoping as a capitalist, and by reformists, calling him senile, have appeared mysteriously in the mail of Chinese and foreigners in several cities.

Students in southwestern Sichuan province were stopped by soldiers from marching to Deng's home village and desecrating his ancestors' graves. Soldiers remain camped there to protect the graves.

In the northwestern city of Xian, local residents have taken to spitting when they see a woman who turned in her younger brother, a student activist on the government's most-wanted list. Sources said she has received anonymous threats.

Taken individually, small events. But together, they signal that the political tensions that produced the huge student-led marches of April and May and climaxed in June's bloody crackdown have not spent themselves.

Even as the Communist Party celebrates 40 years in power, a moment of eventual reckoning between it and China's 1.1 billion people seems inevitable.

"People are waiting for Deng to die, just as they waited for the emperors to die," said a Western scholar, speaking on condition of anonymity. Although the 85-year-old leader has appeared several times in public lately, he is believed to suffer from cancer.

"When Deng dies, we'll celebrate," said a college senior in Zhengzhou.

The Chinese have a saying: "Three men can create a tiger."

"One man can say he saw a tiger, and no one will believe him. But if three men say they saw it, people will believe," explained Wei Yang, a college student in this arid capital of Gansu province, two days' journey by train from Beijing.

Wei, like others, spoke on condition he be given a pseudonym.

He worries that with time and repetition, people will begin to believe the government's version of a tiger — its charge that counter-revolutionaries were behind the popular student-led democracy movement and that they and hoodlums caused more damage with rocks and bottles than soldiers did with tanks and guns.

In Beijing, the center of the storm, where more than one out of every 10 residents joined in the movement in some form, few people believe in the tiger despite months of intense education by the government.

To them, the students remain heroes who dared to say what no one else did: that the people's democratic dictatorship was only a dictatorship.

Generally, Beijing residents no more represent China than New Yorkers speak for all Americans. But two weeks of travel through provincial capitals found the same cynicism and anger in conversations with dozens of students, teachers and urban workers.

Only in the villages, about the only places where students and sympathizers did not march for reform, do ordinary people say with apparent sincerity that the government was right to set the army on protesters in Beijing. But they are ignorant of many details, even the government's admission that hundreds died.

Asked how the army ended the protests, Zhou Zhenchuan, a factory manager in Peaceful Village near Lanzhou, replied, "They used tear gas." Told that soldiers also fired guns, he said in disbelief, "I never heard that."

If ignorance has ensured peace in the countryside, fear serves the same purpose in the cities.

Although the government stopped announcing arrests of suspected dissidents in July, after more than 2,000 were publicized, Chinese and Western sources in Lanzhou and three other provincial capitals — Zhengzhou, Xian and Chengdu — said a new wave of interrogations and arrests began in September, when colleges reopened. No reliable figures were available.

Special investigation teams have been formed on each campus.

"They're going through the libraries on campus and taking books off the shelves and locking them up," said a foreign teacher who insisted on not being identified, even by the city where she lives.

Old files are being reopened, she said, and past writings and comments are being examined for signs of capitalist or Western sympathies as authorities seek not only to round up those connected with the protests but to stamp out liberal thought.

Police patrols of campuses have been increased. At one school, police stop at night at the room of a former student leader to ask, "Are you there?"

with or advised the students have been banned from teaching and remain in limbo in their campus housing, not daring to meet with friends for fear of harming them by association.

Wei said that after the lone "big character poster" went up at Lanzhou University, signed "the China Democratic League — Lanzhou Branch," officials brought in handwriting experts to examine it. Within days, seven students were arrested.

"We don't know if our dorms are bugged," he said. "One night a group of students debated among themselves. One group argued for putting down the turmoil, another opposed it. The next day, a teacher said, 'You students should talk less about it.'"

"How did he know?"

Lanzhou clings to the banks of the Yellow River 840 miles west of Beijing. For centuries it was the westernmost outpost of Chinese civilization before plunging into the thinly charted wilds of Mongolia and Xinjiang.

News from Beijing often arrives days late. By the time the impact of a government policy trickles down, a new policy often has taken its place, a government worker said.

But when Beijing students began a hunger strike in May to press their cause, more than 10,000 Lanzhou students and older intellectuals marched to show support.

Fashions Will Be More People-Oriented In The '90s

By Catherine Cook
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

All that excess and extravagance of the '80s has suddenly become very unfashionable.

As the '90s approach, the most stylish are talking instead about globalism, the ecosystem, the ozone layer, acid rain ... and the need for easy, unpretentious clothes.

The simple Gap T-shirt and J. Crew catalog are becoming symbols of the new comfortable chic, and the first lady is revered for her lack of affectation and unabashedly faux pearls.

The growing social consciousness of the fashion world was brought home during the recent spring fashion collections when designer Norma Kamali chose to stage her New York show not in the lavish hotel ballrooms preferred by many designers, but outside by the duck pond in Central Park. Her models carried signs that declared "Acid Rain Squad" and "Ozone Protection Agency."

Looking ahead to the '90s, Ms. Kamali says, "I feel strongly about the need to restrain ostentation or frivolous decoration because clearly the next years will be austere until we can resolve some of the serious problems we live with today."

Changes are already afoot, designer Michael Kors says. "The ostentation and overindulgence we saw in the '80s is already starting to wane. I think the '90s will be more people-oriented, more compassionate. I don't think people will feel the need to show off as much in very elaborate evening clothes."

The '80s was not a decade "for those who do their own thing," he says. "But I think the '90s will be more about personal expression. A lot of people who made their money in the '80s will be more comfortable with their money and position."

Bernie Ozer, who gives fashion advice to stores around the country on behalf of the Associated Merchandising Corp., predicts that no single look will dominate the '90s.

"Individual style will be important," he says.

Among the designers whose work shows the new easy spirit of the '90s, he says, are Karl Lagerfeld and Rifat Ozbek, who both scored hits for spring with striking soft, white silhouettes.

Also important he says is Ralph Lauren, who had particular success for spring with a series of woven stripes reminiscent of Navajo prints.

Rebecca Moses is a younger designer we're likely to hear more about in the '90s, he says. "She creates a special young mood that's sophisticated, full of spirit and individualized."

Ms. Moses believes women are ready to try out their own style.

"We've broken the parameters around career dressing," she says. "We don't have to wear gray flannel to work, and women are choosing more to create their own style."

Recently, she says, she has been seeing "more of a desire to break with what's expected, not to live as pretentiously. People don't want to spend an exorbitant amount of money on their clothes anymore. They have homes to spend their money on, families, trips and investment. There's more of a balance."

In the future, she says, "clothes will still have to be special, but understated, like I tried to do with my spring collection. The shapes are very American, but in special fabrics to feel rich. People don't want to feel contrived or tricky."

Charlotte Neville is another young designer we will hear more about in the next decade, according to Marjorie Deane, owner and publisher of the forecasting newsletter Tobe Report.

Ms. Neville describes her typical customer of the '90s as a "woman who wants her individuality to show, who doesn't want to blend into the crowd. She doesn't want a gaudy costume when she goes out, but she's sophisticated and wants to show her spirit and some sense of self."

Her cotton lace car coat, for instance, is casual enough for day, but the fabric makes it special enough to wear in the evening as well.

Gordon Henderson, who recently won the prestigious Young Designer of the Year award from the Council of American Fashion Designers, predicts the '90s will bring the kind of freedom for experimentation that was last seen in the '60s.

"Designers will still be extracting from the classics," he says, "but people will try colors more."

The waning years of the '80s have seen a renewed appreciation for American sportswear, and that trend is gathering momentum.

Ms. Moses predicts the '90s are "going to be a real American decade. In the '70s and '80s, attention went to Europe, but in the '90s American designers are going back to their roots where sportswear originated. Even in Europe designers will be adapting those ideas — the wonderful classic elements, jeans, blouson, trench coats, ideas from classic American sportswear designers like Claire McCardell."

All this ease and softness that's developing in fashion will also bring about new fabrics.

"I think there will be a swing back to synthetics, to get prices down and to cope with the new soft silhouette, and to make clothes easier to for care," Ms. Deane says.

Save Time, Buy Gifts Year-Round

NEW YORK (AP) — There are department stores, discount stores, specialty shops, boutiques, catalog mail-orders and toll-free telephones.

You can plunge head-on and plow through the list yourself, engage a personal shopper, hire a go-fer, send your secretary, rely on your spouse.

Lucky the shopper who culls from the mail-order catalogs — some 12.4 billion were mailed during the year, according to the Direct Marketing Association Inc. Because, according to a survey by Mastercard, American adults will spend an average of 14 hours over seven days picking gifts. And, according to a poll by AT&T Toll-Free 800 Directories, one in three expects to shop on Christmas Eve.

The excursions can elevate the spirits of careful planners with time to spare, but they can send the laggards to the depths of depression.

To avoid despair, shop year-round. Buy that perfect present when you see it and tuck it away until the holidays. It saves last-minute shopping and eases the year-end budget crunch.

Browse through holiday catalogs when they arrive in early autumn. Jot down gift ideas as they occur to you. You can be more relaxed — and creative — if you're not working against the clock.

Shop with your head, not over it. Before you begin your holiday shopping, make a firm budget of what you can afford to spend for each person on your list — and stick to it.

Keep a "gift profile." Begin your holiday shopping this year by setting up a page in a pocket-size notebook for each person on your gift list.

Write down their birth date, clothing sizes, color preferences, profession, hobbies and special interests. Afterwards, record the gift you purchased so you won't repeat gifts.

Make sure the gift will fit. If you want to buy apparel but are unsure of the size, select a shawl, a scarf, a wrap bathrobe, stretch gloves, a tie.

Avoid crowds. Shop early in the day, when the stores open, or mid-afternoon or late evening. Map your route in advance so you don't zigzag across town or through the shopping mall.

Wear comfortable shoes and clothing, and remember that many stores are overheated.

Shop alone. It's more efficient and you won't have to placate an impatient spouse, tired children or bored in-laws.

Crowded stores make you easy prey for pickpockets. If you have a credit card or bank card, plan to use it instead of cash. It's an easy way to keep track of your purchases. But remember your budget and don't abuse it.

Check the store's return policy before you buy.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, resuming the rally it began before the Thanksgiving holiday.

Trading was light. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, up 17.49 on Wednesday, climbed 21.76 points to 2,678.54 by noontime on Wall Street.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 834 up, 387 down and 488 unchanged.

Texas Instruments rose 1 1/2 to 38 in active trading. The stock has rallied sharply this week after the company was awarded a patent in Japan for integrated circuits.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines machinists were left alone on the picket lines after pilots and flight attendants abandoned their 8 1/2-month strike, but even for the unions that surrendered, labor peace remained elusive.

Eastern warned members of the Air Line Pilots Association and the attendants' Transport Workers Union they won't necessarily get their old jobs back.

"It is regrettable that they didn't come to this conclusion earlier," Eastern spokeswoman Karen Ceremak said Thursday. "They didn't, so we had to go out and hire permanent replacements."

The 2,200 striking pilots ended their strike Wednesday, after President Bush vetoed a bill to create a congressional advisory committee on Eastern, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization five days after the strike began March 4.

The 6,000-member flight attendants' union followed suit later that day. That left just the 8,500-member Machinists union, which began the bitter strike.

Union leaders contend that Eastern's bankruptcy, ordered by parent Texas Air Corp., was a tactic to break the unions.

On the picket lines in Atlanta, machinists said they felt abandoned, but were determined to continue what has at times taken on the look of a personal battle between unionists and Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo.

"Everybody out here is pretty much in shock," said Steve D. Mack, a striking ramp worker.

Tony Chapman, vice president of the Machinists' Atlanta branch, said his union wouldn't follow the pilots.

"We will continue," Chapman said. "We started this strike. The pilots acted on their own."

Members at the union local across the street from Eastern headquarters in Miami chanted, "Strike! Strike! Strike!" after receiving word of the settlements late Wednesday.

Eastern said it will fight to keep replacement workers hired during the strike. Pilots and flight attendants ready to return to work were asked to sign a recall list at Eastern, which said it would take them back as openings occurred.

Eastern doesn't have jobs for the 2,200 striking pilots, said Ms. Ceremak. She said Eastern has 1,850 pilots, including 850 union members who crossed picket lines, and there are already 100 union pilots on a recall list.

win back jobs, Ms. Currier said. "We don't agree with (Eastern's) position and our lawyers don't agree with their position," Ms. Currier said.

The strike began after 1 1/2 years of federally mediated talks between Eastern and the Machinists union stalemated over demands for $150 million in wage cuts and work-rule changes.

The other unions joined the strike, in part out of the suspicion that Texas Air, which bought Eastern in 1986, wanted only to bust the unions and milk cash from Eastern.

Texas Air, which broke strikes and unions at Continental Airlines in 1983, infuriated the Eastern unions by spinning Eastern's computer reservations system off into a subsidiary and selling its prized Northeast shuttle to Donald Trump.

Lorenzo and other Eastern executives said they had taken over a company with severe financial problems and unreasonable labor costs and had to make cuts with or without the unions.

Eastern, which operated nearly 1,100 daily flights before the strike, has said it is rebuilding into an efficient carrier that will be up to 90 percent of its pre-strike size when it emerges from Chapter 11 next year.

Toll Road Extension Plans In Jeopardy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEESBURG, Va. — A private company's proposal to extend the Dulles Toll Road to Leesburg is threatened by at least two landowners who refuse to donate their property for the road.

The Toll Road Corp. of Virginia is exploring several alternatives to move the project forward, but its efforts have fallen short. For the first time, corporation Chairman Ralph L. Stanley said he might "walk away" from the task if property owners don't cooperate.

Stanley's company is trying to build a 14-mile extension of the toll highway from Route 28 near Dulles Airport to the Route 7-15 bypass in Leesburg. In July, Stanley said he hoped to begin construction in December. Even if right-of-way problems were resolved immediately, the earliest Stanley could start now would be April, with completion in two years.

Stanley's firm selected the path of the road, the first private toll highway approved in Virginia since 1816. It would be the longest private toll road in the nation, The Washington Post reported in a story for today's editions.

The proposal for the private extension of the Dulles Toll Road has drawn national attention as a possible solution to the shrinking supply of highway dollars from federal, state and local taxes. Stanley has cultivated a reputation as a national leader in privatization, and he hopes to obtain additional toll projects, such as repairing bridges, for his firm.

Stanley's problems in Loudoun

County stem from the 1988 state law authorizing private, for-profit toll roads in Virginia. But unlike the state, private companies cannot take property for a right of way in return for fair compensation.

Stanley says his firm cannot afford to buy right of way and his company has been forced to rely on land donations from property owners, most of whom stand to gain because the highway will make their land more valuable for development. Some of the land already sells for about $50,000 an acre.

Report Cites Improved Trade

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA — Soviet bloc reform helped increase East-West trade this year and has set the stage for more economic integration in Europe, says a U.N. report released Thursday.

It also said structural problems and non-competitive industries made prospects uncertain for further export growth in Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

The report by the Economic Commission for Europe cited Hungary and Poland as examples in urging more foreign investment as a spur to economic liberalization. The commission is the only economic forum bringing together Eastern and Western Europe, the Soviet Union, United States and Canada.

In its assessment, the 34-nation commission predicted the Soviet bloc's debt to the West this year will remain at last year's level of about $99 billion, with Romania's repayment of foreign loans helping offset a predicted increase for the Soviet Union.

Growth in East European exports to Western market economies slowed to 4 percent in the first half of 1989 from 6 percent in 1988, slackening further as the year progressed, the report said.

By contrast, after three years of stagnation, the increase in imports by Eastern Europe shot up to 13 percent, mainly because of more purchases by East Germany, Poland and Hungary.

Despite increasing sales opportunities in the West, the report said, poor commodity structure and declining competitiveness of its manufactured goods made it uncertain whether Eastern Europe could expand exports in the future.

Detroit Newspapers Bargain With Unions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — The Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press, set to partially merge Monday, could be hit by strikes unless progress is made in contract talks over the weekend, union leaders warned.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Nov. 13 approved a merger of the daily newspapers' business, production and advertising staffs. The reporting and editing staffs are to remain separate.

More than 2,000 Free Press and News employees are to start working Monday for the Detroit Newspaper Agency, which will oversee the newspapers' joint operating agreement.

The change means the papers' 11 unions must negotiate new contracts with the agency and the papers. Those negotiations were scheduled to resume today after a Thanksgiving recess.

Leaders of six of the newspapers' 11 unions have agreed to bargain jointly. "If they intend to implement (the joint operating agreement) on Monday, we'll have a contract or be on strike," said Tom Brennan, president of Local 13N of the Graphic Communications International Union. The local represents press operators and paper handlers at both newspapers.

Free Press Publisher Robert Hall expressed optimism the talks would succeed.

"I'm still confident that we can get a contract by Sunday," Hall said. At least five of the unions scheduled weekend membership meetings, and members of three of those unions planned to take strike-authorization votes.

Under the joint operating agreement, the papers were expected to cut their joint payroll by about 450 employees. Most of the cuts were being made through buyouts or early retirement, but newspaper officials said as many as 30 employees could be involuntarily laid off.

Stormy Ride Is Nearly Finished For Pirate Quarterback Hunter

The Daily Reflector

Travis Hunter fires pass earlier in the season

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Travis Hunter took a moment earlier this week to reflect upon what has been a somewhat stormy ride through the East Carolina football program.

The moments of glory have been few. The hard times many.

There have been no major upsets of college football's heavyweights to celebrate — only a number of close calls. Not even a winning season.

That could change Saturday when ECU (5-4-1) takes on Southern Mississippi (4-6). But win or lose, the senior quarterback knows it will be the last time he dons the Pirate purple and gold.

"The Southern Miss game will be the final nail in the cross," Hunter said.

Hunter has run the gamut since coming to Greenville from Winter Garden, Fla. He's known life as a backup and as a starter. He's weathered a love-hate relationship with Pirate fans. And, in his final year, he has had to adapt to a new coaching staff — and philosophy.

But through all the trials and tribulations, Hunter has grown, matured and earned the respect of teammates and first-year head coach Bill Lewis. Consequently, he was recently selected the team's permanent captain.

"I think he's become a much more of a complete quarterback," Lewis said. "He's become a serious student of the game as any quarterback that any of (the coaching staff) have been around."

"I think it's been a lot of fun for (offensive coordinator and quarterback coach) Mark Richt to work with Travis day in and day out because of how serious he's been. I think it's a reflection of the tremendous vote of confidence that his teammates gave to him as electing him as their team captain."

Hunter has worked overtime to rid himself of the reputation of simply being a "running" quarterback. School records for career passing yards (3,662), career completions (260) and career total offensive yard (4,832) should speak for themselves.

This season, he finally looks comfortable dropping back in the pocket and has completed 90 of 181 passes for 1,212 yards with nine interceptions and 13 touchdowns. He has also rushed for 300 yards and four more TDs.

A veteran offensive line and a dynamic receiver like Walter Wilson have certainly helped.

"Travis' very obvious strength coming into this season was that he is in excellent runner when we're in the option part of our offense," Lewis said. "I think despite efforts of defenses to take that away from him, Travis each week finds a way to be effective in the running part of the game."

"The second thing, he is an outstanding play-action passing quarterback because it gives him a chance to throw on the move, get out on the perimeter with the ball.

"The part of Travis' game I think he's made the most improvement is the drop-back game. It was something not new to him but emphasized more with him being the focal point."

Hunter admits he was unsure if he could make the adjustment from Art Baker's run-and-shoot attack. He recalls speaking with Lewis before spring practice began and discussing a change of position.

Of course, that never materialized.

"At the beginning of the season I was kind of hesitant about playing quarterback," Hunter said. "I didn't know what kind of offense they would bring in, a BYU (Brigham Young) style of passing attack or what."

"Even though I have confidence in my ability to throw the ball I didn't

Ryan Wins But Gains An Enemy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas — Buddy Ryan has another victory and another NFL enemy.

The Philadelphia Eagles inflicted a 27-0 Thanksgiving Day flogging on the Dallas Cowboys and Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson claimed Ryan had a $200 bounty out to injure kicker Luis Zendejas and $500 on quarterback Troy Aikman.

Ryan got a belly-laugh over that charge, saying, "I don't have that kind of money. It's ridiculous."

"I didn't think a head football coach would stoop this low," Johnson said.

Philadelphia improved its record to 8-4 while Dallas dropped to 1-11.

Johnson, who shook Ryan's hand and joked with him before the game, had a change in mood after the Dallas' first Thanksgiving Day shutout loss.

"I have no respect for the way Philadelphia played the game," Johnson said. "An (Eagles) assistant coach told us last night and it was verified by two players today that there was a $200 bounty on Zendejas and $500 on Aikman. I will file a protest to the league office."

"I would have said something to Buddy but he wouldn't stand on the field long enough. He put his fat rear end into the dressing room."

Zendejas, who was cut by Ryan two weeks ago, was hit in the head by linebacker Jessie Small after the second-half kickoff.

"I got a call on Friday from a friend who said, 'They are coming after you,'" Zendejas said. "That just tells you what Buddy Ryan is. I saw Small coming and all I could do was duck because he was going for my legs. He just came straight at me."

"I told Zendejas it was no big deal

Pirates-Southern Miss Mix It Up In Final Game Of Year

Winning Season Rides On The Outcome For ECU

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Don't be surprised if the seniors and juniors on the East Carolina football team have a feeling of deja vu as they go into Hattiesburg, Miss., Saturday afternoon.

The Pirates will be closing out the 1989 season against the home-standing Southern Mississippi Golden Eagles, and a winning season is on the line for the Bucs.

Two years ago, East Carolina was in almost the same situation. That year, the 5-5 Pirates went in needing a victory to claim their first winning season since 1983. Southern had two punts returned for touchdowns in that game and claimed a 38-34 victory in the contest.

Now, the Pirates come in at 5-4-1. There will be no losing season, for sure. But Coach Bill Lewis says there's a big difference between a non-losing season and a winning season.

"The importance of a winning season is tremendous. One of our goals was to take this program to the next level and having a winning season would do that," Lewis said.

It would be a big finish for the senior class, Lewis added, being able to say that it helped to turn the program around.

And, it would be a help in recruiting when Lewis and his staff take to the road on Monday to begin the task of replacing those graduating seniors.

But, Southern Mississippi will certainly have something to say about it all.

"They are well-coached and sound fundamentally," Lewis said of his 3 p.m. foe. "They don't come at you with a lot of different things, but the things they do, they do well."

On defense, the Eagles have not been a big blitzing team. "They line up and show you the same defense over and over again. On offense, they tend to be multiple, but they have about four basic sets. The block well and are outstanding in their pass protection. They've given up few sacks."

Southern also has a strong kicking game, Lewis said. "It may be the best overall we've seen." Placekicker Chuck Davis is 21 of 22 on extra points. He's kicked only nine of 21 field goals, but he's four of four inside 30 and four of six inside 40. His longest has been 45 yards.

The punter, Scott Bryant, is averaging 42.1 yards a kick.

On punt returns, Tony Smith is bringing them back 10.5 yards a try while he carries a 29.6 yard per try kickoff return average.

"They're holding their opponents to just 7.2 yards a punt return and to only 18.6 yards in kickoff returns.

East Carolina, however, has some to counter that. Punter John Jett has a 39.9 average even though the majority of his kicks are over 40 yards.

The Pirates are average 9.7 yards on punt returns, led by Junior Robinson's 10.6 average, while holding opponents to 9.0 yards.

On kickoffs, Robinson is returning the ball 26.0 yards a try. (He's 12th in the country; Smith is second.) ECU is averaging 23.9 yards a kickoff return and holding opponents to 19.3.

On defense, Southern uses a basic 50 alignment. "You have to whip 'em in the line," Lewis said.

Linebacker William Kirksey is the leading tackler for the Eagles with 130, including two for losses and one sack. Defensive end Pat Jackson has five sacks and five other tackles for losses, leading the Eagles in both departments. Oddly enough, free safety Kerry Valrie is the second leading tackler on the team with 92.

East Carolina's defense is led by linebacker Robert Jones, who has 101 tackles, including one sack and four tackles for losses. Defensive end Anthony Thompson is next with 88 tackles. He leads the team with

Pirates Open Cage Year Against ASU

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Pirates open the 1989-90 basketball season Saturday night at a new time, hosting an old rival.

This year, East Carolina's home basketball games will begin at 7 p.m., a half-hour earlier than usual. Most road games will continue to start at 7:30 p.m., however.

The Pirates will be hosting Appalachian State in the opener, a team that used to be an in-state rival when the two were both in the Southern Conference. ECU left the league after the 1977 season while ASU continues to be a member.

The Pirates have had to replace three starters off last year's 15-14 squad, including Colonial Athletic Association Player of the Year Blue Edwards, now a starter with the Utah Jazz in the National Basketball Association. They also have replaced wing guard Kenny Murphy and point guard Jeff Kelly.

And while replacing Edwards may be a task that one person cannot accomplish this year, Steele has a fistful of newcomers who will try to bridge the gap. They include three freshmen and three junior college transfers.

Molding those six into the team, however, has put the Pirates somewhat behind and Steele has been glad that the week prior to the opener has been an off-week for school.

"We're a lot closer to where we want to be now," Steele said after a week of two-a-day practices. "It's really helped. We got a lot of things accomplished without having to hurry through it. During school, we have only a set amount of time we can spend in the gym (due to the demands on the facility). Just about the time we get one thing in, it's time to get out and we've still got an hour and a half of teaching we'd like to do."

With just over 24 hours left before the opener, Steele is still somewhat uncertain about his starting lineup, too. Four spots are pretty well set, but the other is up in the air.

"If we had to start right now, we'd go with Reed (Lose), Tim (Brown), Ike (Copeland) and Paul (Childress). And, I guess, either Stanley (Love), Darrell (Overton) or Gus (Hill)."

Lose and Hill are the only two seniors on the team. Lose, who will start at the two guard, has an 8.3 career average, but scored 15 points a game as a sophomore when he and Hill carried the load in Steele's first year. Last year, he averaged 7.7 points a game in mostly a reserve role.

Hill, meanwhile, never really found a spot on last year's team, playing only on occasion, but still averaging 10.7 points a game. As a sophomore, he scored 19.3 points a game.

Love, who was cast into a starting role as a center, despite the fact that he is only 6-5, has quietly gone about that job, averaging 4.7 rebounds a game for his career despite the fact that he's usually the shortest player under the boards. He has been a starter in each of his years on the team.

The other four possibilities are all newcomers to the Pirates. Brown, a 6-7 junior and Overton, a 6-6 junior, are both transfers while Copeland, 6-8, and Childress, 5-10, are both freshmen.

With Copeland and Brown, the Pirates have more inside strength than they've had during the previous two years of the Steele era. And, Steele believes, the Pirates have more depth than they've ever had before. "We've had to play three or four players 30 minutes a game or more in the past. You can't play the type of defense or run the floor like I want to when you're playing people like that. This year, we should be able to play more people."

The Pirates, too, should be able to go inside more this year, and Steele says that is a good adjustment for

Date and Time: Saturday, 7 p.m.
 Site: Minges Coliseum.
 Records: Appalachian State 0-0, East Carolina 0-0.
 Probable starters: ASU — unavailable; ECU — G Paul Childress; G Reed Lose; C Tim Brown; F Stanley Love; F Ike Copeland.
 Game notes: The game is the opener for both teams. ASU went 20-8 last year and returns four of the five starters off that team. East Carolina, in contrast, lost three of the five starters off its 1988-89 squad that went 15-14, the first winning season for the Pirates in six years. The contest is the first between the two since 1977 when the Mountaineers squeezed out a 63-60 win in Boone in their last meeting before East Carolina left the Southern Conference. East Carolina leads the series between the two teams, 29-19.

Lefty And Dean Renew Rivalry

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Their previous 41 confrontations were held amid the familiar trappings of Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

Meeting No. 42 for Dean Smith and Lefty Driesell takes place in an exotic locale as far from the East Coast as you can get and stay in the country.

But it's still Dean and Lefty, one of the premier college coaching rivalries of the 1970s and 80s.

Smith's seventh-ranked North Carolina Tar Heels play Driesell's James Madison Dukes on Friday in the opening round of the Maui Classic.

In other first-round games, No. 11 Missouri plays Evansville, No. 12 Louisville faces Chaminade and Villanova goes against San Diego State.

The Smith-Driesell meeting, the season debut for both teams, should draw most of the attention.

"People always try to build up that it's me versus Dean," Driesell said. "I never looked at it that way. I look at we're playing North Carolina. I never set up a defense to stop Dean Smith or set up an offense I thought would hurt Dean."

Smith leads Driesell 31-10 but there were so many great games, first when Driesell was at Davidson and later at Maryland.

Their first two encounters meant Final Four berths, in which Smith leads Driesell 7-0.

North Carolina beat Davidson 69-62 to win the 1968 East Regional and the next year, the Tar Heels edged the Wilcats 87-85 in the same situation. Ironically, that game was played at College Park, Md., where Lefty would reign for the next 17 seasons until he left shortly after the cocaine-related death of All-America Len Bias.

Driesell took a year off before taking over James Madison, an up-and-coming team which can't compare in depth and talent to North Carolina, even without center Scott Williams, who is recuperating from a Nov. 10 appendectomy.

"We have only one starter back from last year," Driesell said at a small media gathering, failing to mention that, actually, four starters are back from last season, but because of transfers becoming eligible, they now will come off the bench. "They weigh more than us and we'll try like to hell to hang in there."

Driesell's comments were made in a thick drawl which was accompanied by a hound dog look and were later challenged by Smith.

"Lefty said he has one starter back because he just doesn't want to play the others," Smith said. "We might be heavier but we're not playing football. I really am concerned about this game."

The banter continued when Smith jokingly said he had coached Evansville coach Jim Crews' father.

"You did," Driesell asked with a serious face?

"No. We're almost the same age," Smith shot back.

"Well, you look old enough," Driesell answered, laughing as hard as anyone in the room.

The rivalry always hasn't always been as friendly.

In 1982, Driesell sent a letter to Smith telling him not to shake his hand after a game again because of some comments made during a summer conference meeting.

Smith tried but was rebuffed, and the two were far from friends.

Driesell's most crushing loss to Smith may have been in 1985 when he had a chance to beat North Carolina for victory No. 500.

The Tar Heels led by seven with six minutes to play but Maryland scored eight straight points and appeared to have North Carolina on the ropes.

Driesell called a timeout — "I thought we were getting tired," he said then — and Maryland didn't score again. Lefty had to settle for a next-game victory over Towson State for his milestone win.

Southern Miss Plays For Pride

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Coaches Curley Hallman of Southern Mississippi and Bill Lewis of East Carolina agree that Saturday's season-ending showdown between the two teams has special significance for their programs and their seniors.

But the two coaches have different reasons for placing special emphasis on the game, to be played at 2 p.m. (CST) at M.M. Roberts Stadium in Hattiesburg.

A victory by East Carolina would give the Pirates, now 5-4-1, a winning record for the first time since 1983. For Hallman's 4-6 Golden Eagles, it boils down to a matter of pride, building for the future and winning at home.

"We're down to where we've got one game that separates us from a break-even season and a winning season," Lewis said. "There are a couple of things that are so important about that."

"For the football program, the importance of a winning season is tremendous. To be able to say we were able to take the program to the next level, a winning season would be evidence that we made some progress."

"Second, we've got a senior class playing their last game. They have been one heck of a group. They've made a tremendous contribution. For them to go and say our last year we were winners, that is something our seniors will forever cherish," Lewis said.

Hallman, whose team defeated nationally ranked Florida State in their opener but lost to such powers as Auburn, Texas A&M and Alabama in a disappointing season, said the important thing now is to re-establish a winning attitude.

"Our players know they can't have a winning year but we can't deal with the past, we've got to think about now and the future," Hallman said. "We have sought this week to make sure our players understand the importance of this game."

"We'll be starting off-season with second semester and we need to start everything back on a positive note. And it is important that we win at home, where we had two losses this season, because we start next season right here," he said.

Southern Mississippi, which leads the series 11-3, has won the last five meetings between the two schools.

East Carolina is coming off a 47-42 loss to Pittsburgh while Southern Mississippi fell to Alabama, 37-14.

The Golden Eagles are led by quarterback Brett Favre, who has passed for 2,302 yards and 11 touchdowns this season.

"We've saved the best for last when it comes to quarterbacks we've seen," Lewis said. "He is a physical quarterback. He is capable of scrambling. He is capable of throwing on the run."

Hallman said East Carolina would bring a well-coached, experienced team into Hattiesburg.

"Coach Lewis had a lot of guys coming back and he has molded them into a good football team," he said. "I know they will be well prepared."

Hallman said senior quarterback Travis Hunter had repeatedly demonstrated his ability to run the Pirate offense and they have "Walter Wilson, an outstanding wide receiver who has picked up 700 yards in 10 ballgames and eight TDs."

As for his team, Hallman said the Eagles had turned in good practice sessions during the week and "I have nothing but praise for these young men."

Hornets Waive Dozier, Re-Sign Turner

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets have waived free-agent rookie guard Terry Dozier and have re-signed free-agent point guard Andre Turner, officials announced Thursday.

Turner, who was the final cut for Charlotte on Oct. 31, averaged 4.6 points and 5.3 assists during the eight preseason games and had a team high 15 assists in a 141-114 preseason victory over Miami.

"He will improve our depth at point guard, which is our biggest need with the injuries suffered at that position," said Carl Scheer, Hornets president and general manager.

Turner was signed as a free agent by the Los Angeles Clippers after clearing waivers from Charlotte. He averaged 1.3 points and one assist in 10.3 minutes before being waived on Nov. 14.

Dozier averaged 2.4 points and 1.7 rebounds in 10.2 minutes played in nine games for Charlotte and was the only rookie free agent to make the roster this season.

"He is young and his hustle and determination was a great asset to us and it will continue to help him throughout his career," said Hornets coach Dick Harter.

Stacy Will Pay Speeding Fine Before Game

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Siran Stacy, fourth-ranked Alabama's star tailback, intends to pay off his fine for speeding and driving with a suspended license before the Dec. 2 showdown with No. 10 Auburn, a school spokesman said.

A North Courtland traffic court judge who issued an arrest warrant for Stacy said he talked with the running back and would give him extra time to complete payment on a $192 fine.

"He said he had misunderstood his instructions," said Judge Rod Alexander, who spoke with Stacy by phone on Wednesday. "I told him to call our court clerk and work out the details and he could reschedule payment of the fine."

Stacy was ticketed earlier this fall in north Alabama for speeding and driving with a suspended license. He pleaded guilty to the charges at an Oct. 17 hearing and made partial payment on a $192 fine, with instructions to pay the balance by Tuesday.

When payment was not received and Stacy did not appear in court, Alexander routinely issued the arrest warrant.

The judge said he would order Stacy's arrest if the running back doesn't make full payment by the date that has been set, which was not revealed.

"We have this situation often, and this is not special treatment for him," Alexander said of Stacy. "If he doesn't uphold his part of the agreement, we'll then serve him with the warrant."

A spokesman with the Alabama athletic department said Stacy intends to resolve the situation by Monday. The Crimson Tide makes its first trip to Auburn's Jordan-Hare Stadium the following Saturday.

NCAA rules prohibit the university from helping Stacy in any way. "It's all up to him, and there's nothing we can do," the spokesman said. "I can assure you he is taking care of the matter."

Stacy, who has already set a school record for touchdowns in a season with 18, was not available for comment. He left Tuscaloosa Wednesday night to go home to Geneva for Thanksgiving.

Alaska Shootout Ready To Begin

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Comebacks by injured and academically ineligible players and the debut of highly touted prospects highlight today's opening of the 12th Great Alaska Shootout.

Nearly every team is counting on the return of a key player or the arrival of a new one to bolster their chances in a field lacking a ranked team for the first time.

Michigan State has all five starters back, but it is hoping 6-foot-10 Mike Peplowski will help the Spartans improve on an 18-15 mark last season.

Peplowski hurt his knee his senior year in high school and sat out last season to recuperate. The Spartans are counting on his size to battle burly Big 10 opponents.

Michigan State opens against Auburn, coming off a 9-19 season. The Tigers were counting on newcomers to lift them from the cellar of the Southeastern Conference, but lost two to academics.

Kansas State wants junior college transfer Jean Derouillere to take some of the scoring burden off 6-1 point guard Steve Henson, one of the nation's best free-throw shooters.

Kansas State, 19-11 last season and picked to finish in the middle of the Big Eight, opens against Florida State. The Seminoles need help from Michael Polite if they are to match their 22-8 record of a year ago. Polite played only six games and lost 25 pounds because of a nerve disorder.

Texas A&M won eight of its last 10 to finish 16-14, but needs strong inside play from 6-10 newcomers Chris Finley and David Harris if Shelby Metcalf's 27th season at the Southwest Conference school is to be more successful.

The Aggies, making a fourth Shootout appearance, open against Connecticut, 18-13 last season. The Huskies hope freshman Scott Burrell's jump shot is as good as his 90-plus mph fastball. Burrell turned down a major league baseball bonus to play for UConn in the Big East.

Chris Gaines brings back 17 points a game to Hawaii's attack after sitting out the last half of the season because of academic woes.

The Rainbows finished 17-13 and are considered a team on the rise in the Western Athletic Conference. They take on host Alaska-Anchorage.

The Seawolves welcome the return of 6-4 Vern Robateau, a frequent starter before being redshirted for injuries last season. The Division II team was 21-9 last season, and already is 4-0 this year.

think that would fit my style of play. I actually talked to Coach Lewis before spring ball even started about changing to wide receiver or defensive back or another position, but he told me to just stay at quarterback."

And stay he has, starting all but the Miami (Fla.) game when he was demoted to second team for violating a team rule.

That was another episode that he chalked up to a learning experience. And, he adds, although he and Lewis may not have seen eye-to-eye in their only season together, they earned one another's respect.

"Coach Lewis is a great person and I like his style," Hunter said. "He has a never-say-die attitude and installed that in the players. He's a hard worker and I think he's fair."

"At first he was kind of tough on us and he still demands a lot, but I really respect him a lot."

Hunter learned early in his career that fans and the media can be demanding, heartless and sometimes even cruel. He has been adorned by cheers as well as bombarded with boos.

Those boos on a Saturday afternoon two years ago in Ficklen Stadium have not been forgotten. But Hunter realized then he could not be consumed by the feeling of failure and has consistently remained positive.

"You have a lot of different type of people out there in the world and you just have to try to adapt to them and keep your composure and don't let a lot of negativism get to you," Hunter said. "At the same time you don't try to do or say anything that may make you look bad."

"You can't say it doesn't bother you because everybody has feelings. You just try to shake it off and go on about your business. It's going to be there and you can't let it get you down and keep you down."

Hunter has also seen his name tossed about in the papers. First, came the controversy earlier in his career involving whether he or Charlie Libretto would start under center.

The questions again arose this season when Jeff Blake was inserted into a couple of games and then got the start at Miami.

Hunter said it was the media's job to explore such issues, but added there is a tendency to carry things to an extreme.

"That's part of the ball game," Hunter said. "It's always going to be there. I guess it's the media's job to stir up things. Everybody likes to read the paper and see some interesting things developing."

"Things shouldn't get blown out of proportion, but that's the life of a college athlete — especially a quarterback. They have to try to prepare for things like that and accept it for what it's worth."

Still, one has to wonder has it been worth it?

Hunter, pausing for a second, says it has.

"I think it's been worth it," Hunter said. "I've gone through a lot of ups and downs, good times and bad. I think it's made me a stronger person."

"If I had to do it again I would like to think I would take the same route because, even though we didn't win that many games, I've learned a lot about life here and come across some great people and made some great friends."

And how would Travis Hunter like to be remembered?

"That I never gave up, never quit," he said. "I always believed in my ability to get the job done. Even though we didn't win half as many games as I would have liked to, I always kept striving to be the best that I could be."

Chase Time Is Running Out On Us

Woody Peele

With the 1989 football season virtually over this weekend, our panel looks up to Mike Grizzard and wonders, "Can he be caught?"

Grizzard, 104-35, has a five-game lead over the rest of the pack. It's possible to catch him, but you're probably going to have to go out on a limb this week and during the bowl season. We've still got in the neighborhood over 25-30 games left, so there's the chance.

Tom Baines is in second place in this final weekend of the regular season, having posted a 99-40 record. Vickie Spivey and Greg Laudick are tied for third with 96-43 marks with Tom Morris next at 94-45. I bring up the rest at 92-47.

Not much hope of my seeing Grizzard up close, but maybe I can pull out of the basement. Especially before someone wants to know if I'm really Joe Jenkins in disguise.

There are two of our area high school football teams still remaining in the playoffs, Farmville Central and Roanoke.

Roanoke will have the home-field advantage as the Redskins play host to Southwest Onslow tonight. It will be a question of which defense can do the better job as both have power-oriented offenses.

This should be quite a battle, but I'm going to go with the Redskins in a close 21-20 victory.

The panel takes a look at the Farmville-Clinton game.

Clinton brings in the state's No. one ranking while Farmville finished the regular season ranked No. 2. For Farmville, it's been a question of playing well enough to win and not totally dominating anyone.

For Clinton, it's been a case of dominating just about everyone the Dark Horses have played. It's time for the real one to stand up.

The panel is split, 3-3, between the two. My vote goes with Clinton, taking a 25-14 win.

East Carolina travels to Southern Mississippi, seeking to record its first winning season since 1983. Southern Mississippi has been a thorn in the Pirate side for some years now. Not since 1983 have the Pirates beaten the Eagles. The last three years have been particularly stressful to the Pirates. Three years back, Southern won by getting away with breaking the rules. Two years ago, the Eagles used two punts returned for touchdowns to do it. Last year year, they won in the final 12 seconds of the game.

The panel, here, is split again, 3-3. I say, Enough is enough. It's time for the Pirates to win one, 21-17.

Our other consensus picks of the week: Georgia Tech over Boston College; Ole Miss over Mississippi State; Notre Dame over Miami, Penn State over Pitt; Indiana over Purdue; Arizona and Arizona State, a toss-up; Texas over Baylor; Iowa over Minnesota; Hawaii over Oregon State and Utah State over Long Beach State.

Backcourt Holds The Key To Clemson Cage Success

By Tom Morris

Clemson
Last year: Overall 18-11; ACC 7-7.
Coach: Cliff Ellis (14 years, 264-144)
Mascot: Tigers
Losses: F Jerry Pryor
Starters back: C Elden Campbell (17.5 ppg, 7.7 rpg), F Dale Davis (13.3 ppg, 8.9 rpg), G Derrick Forrest (12.5), G Tim Kincaid (6.7 ppg)
Key newcomers/reserves: G Marion Cash, G Kirkland Howling, F Sean Tyson, F Wayne Buckingham Predicted finish: Fourth.

Cliff Ellis sees the difference between success and failure for his Clemson basketball team resting squarely on the performance of his backcourt.

With the 6-11 tandem of Elden Campbell and Dale Davis returning up front, Ellis has few worries inside. Getting them the ball and keeping defenses from sagging in on the two, though, will be a different matter.

"If we play mediocre basketball in the backcourt, we'll be so-so," Ellis said. "They say it starts with big guys and we have them. If we can get the perimeter people to mesh, we could be a good ball team." The Tigers will have a lot of options this year, beginning with the two big men inside.

Campbell, a 6-11 finesse player, averaged 17.5 points and 7.7 rebounds a game last year. Davis, a 6-11, 225-pound junior, is more of a banger. Last year, he averaged 13.3 points and 8.9 rebounds a game while hitting on 67 percent of his shots.

"He and Campbell have helped us make strides in our program," Ellis said. "They helped start an era in Clemson basketball that has not been there before."

Last year, Clemson went 19-11 and advanced to the second round of the NCAA Tournament in the West Regional.

For a return trip, the Tigers are going to need consistent play from their guards.

Seniors Marion Cash and Tim Kincaid will again split time at point guard.

"Last year we platooned," Ellis said. "I don't like to do that. But we had the type of situation where we had two different kind of players. Marion Cash is more of a transition-type player, a very aggressive-type player. The question mark is the outside shot, which Tim Kincaid has. We have role players. It's conducive to who we're playing. Both will see playing time."

Kincaid is back from an early-semester suspension for violation of team policy, but Ellis said the matter is resolved.

"He wouldn't be back if I was not satisfied," Ellis said. "We'll let bygones be bygones." The two-guard figures to be Derrick Forrest, a 6-3 senior who averaged 12.5 points per game last season. Another possibility is 6-4 Kirkland Howling, who was having a strong season last year until sidelined by a knee injury.

Sean Tyson will see time at small forward, though Forrest can swing down and spell him. If Ellis wants a big lineup, he can insert 6-9 freshman Wayne Buckingham.

"It's looking pretty good so far," Campbell said. "Derrick has played well. Marion is doing well."

"They're all taking care of the ball better, not having as many turnovers. It won't be just me and Dale. It will be five of us."

Lions Prove To Be No Turkey

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Cleveland Browns brought their Dawgs across Lake Erie with them, but they couldn't catch Barry Sanders.

Sanders ran for 145 yards in 28 carries, pushing his season total to over 1,000 yards, to lead the Detroit Lions to a 13-10 Thanksgiving Day upset over the Browns.

"We haven't been able to win much, but we've been very competitive," Sanders said. "Hopefully, we showed the rest of the country that we're not a bad team. People can say we're 3-9, but we're not a bad team."

It was almost like a home game for the Browns as orange-clad Cleveland fans and banners clearly outnumbered Lions boosters. The game drew 65,624 in the 80,494-seat Silverdome.

The Lions are averaging 52,881 fans after six home games, but the two biggest crowds have shown up for the Chicago Bears (71,418) and Cleveland. In both cases, the fans — many unable to get tickets in their own town — have a relatively short journey to the Silverdome where tickets are plentiful.

"It was as tough a loss as I've ever been a part of," Cleveland coach Bud Carson said. "Detroit was ready. We have no excuses. We would have liked to have played better, but we didn't play that bad."

It was a costly loss for Cleveland (7-4-1), dropping the Browns to second place in the AFC Central Division behind the Houston Oilers and snapping their unbeaten streak at five.

"No matter what, we still have to go out and win the rest of our football games," Browns rookie Eric Metcalf said. "We still control our own destiny."

Sanders, who now has 1,016 yards for the season, is the first Lion to gain 1,000 yards since Billy Sims ran for 1,040 yards in 1983. Sanders is only the third Detroit player ever to crack the 1,000-yard mark.

The other two also were Heisman Trophy winners. Sims did it three times and Steve Owens did it once.

"The nature of that (run-and-shoot) offense spreads the field and gives Sanders a lot of open field," Cleveland linebacker Clay Matthews said. "Today, he took advantage of it. He's impressive."

It was the first time a back had run for 100 yards this season against the Browns, whose rushing defense ranked second in the AFC.

Eddie Murray kicked field goals of 39 and 35 yards, the latter proving to be the game-winner with 3:43 left in the third quarter. Bob Gagliano, subbing for the injured Rodney Peete, completed nine of 19 passes for 143 yards, including a 27-yard touchdown strike to Richard Johnson.

"I wanted to stay away from making the big mistakes," Gagliano said. "Since I hadn't played a lot, I just wanted to take it one play at a time and not think about much else."

The Lions defense, perhaps still feeling the sting of an embarrassing 42-7 loss at Cincinnati last Sunday, kept good pressure on Bernie Kosar all day and held the Browns to just 70 yards rushing.

"We played our best game, defensively, of the year," Detroit linebacker Chris Spielman said. "Everybody was writing us off."

Kosar completed 28 of 38 passes for 296 yards, but the Browns' only touchdown came on a 38-yard run by Barry Redden.

"Not taking anything away from Detroit's defense, but we thought we would be able to put some points on the board," Kosar said. "But when it got down to the tough situations, we stopped ourselves."

Cleveland's Webster Slaughter had five catches for 60 yards, leaving him 32 yards shy of becoming the Browns' first 1,000-yard wide receiver since Paul Warfield in 1968.

"These last two games didn't turn out," Slaughter said. "It's going to be a tough last four games, but it's still up to us."

Detroit coach Wayne Fontes, calling it one of the Lions' best games, said holding Kosar in check was the key.

"We played the run very well. We put heat on Kosar," Fontes said. "Cleveland was not flat. We were good. We played a good football game."

seven sacks and 13 tackles for losses. Safeties Derrick Fields (out with an injury) and Robinson both have 70 tackles.

The big man on offense for the Eagles is junior quarterback Brett Favre, who already has set every passing record in the Southern Mississippi record book. The first yard he gains Saturday will move him past Reggie Collier into first place in career total offense.

Thus far this year, he's completed 180 of 346 passes for 2,302 yards. He's thrown 11 touchdowns and just nine interceptions.

And he's used a number of receivers. Four of them have 20 or more catches and eight have 12 or more.

Only East Carolina's Walter Wilson can compare. He's caught 37 passes for 688 yards. Tight end Luke Fisher has 18 for 225, wide receiver Charlie Tyson has 15 for 236 and fullback/tailback David Daniels had 15 for 113.

Southern is rushing for 117.5 yards a game while allowing 191.9. The Pirates have rushed for 167.12 per game while allowing 206.2.

Through the air, Southern has through for 230.2 and giving up 203.7.

ECU has thrown for 187.9 and allowed 214.4.

Overall, that adds up to 347.7 total yards for Southern, while its opponents have combined for 395.6. East Carolina has picked up 355.0 per game while giving up 420.6.

and I was just doing my job," Small said. "Coach Ryan is a good honest coach and he doesn't pay anybody for that."

Aikman was nonplussed and said, "I think as a quarterback there's always a quarter hanging over your head. I have no idea if it's true. I didn't feel any of the hits were unusual."

Randall Cunningham hit Cris Carter with two touchdown passes and the Eagles forced five turnovers in Dallas' worst Thanksgiving Day loss. The previous high margin was San Francisco's 31-10 victory in 1972.

Cunningham ignored the bounty furor and talked about Carter.

"I have a lot of confidence in Cris because he has great leaping ability," Cunningham said. "They can try to stop him but it's mighty hard to do."

Dallas guard Nate Newton also dismissed the bounty talk.

"He just plays physical football and that's what happened out there," Newton said of Ryan.

Earlier this season, the Chicago Bears and Phoenix Cardinals claimed Ryan paid bounties.

"That's not what you want to have in football no matter what level you are playing at," Johnson said.

Dallas plays the Eagles again in two weeks at Philadelphia.

"Our day will come," Johnson said.

No Doubt Stewart Back As Tiger Coach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Sneaking a peak at a Missouri practice proved that Norm Stewart was back as head coach of the Tigers.

He raised his voice when needed. He ran plays from a certain position to get a point across. He yelled encouragement and showed enthusiasm, something you would expect from a man starting his 29th season as a head college basketball coach.

It isn't, however, something you would expect from a man who had a brush with death just last February. Stewart, overcome with severe stomach pain, was rushed from the team's plane as it landed in Oklahoma. It was discovered he had a number of ulcers and surgery had to be performed when cancer was found.

He missed the last 14 games of the season and many thought a comeback would be out of the question for the 54-year-old Stewart.

Sneaking a listen to Stewart at an informal media gathering this week for the Maui Classic proved he was all the way back.

"Don't tell me I look good," Stewart said as an old friend greeted him. "I went out and bought a mirror. I know how good I look."

The quick sense of humor was evident, a sure sign that Stewart was back.

"All these other coaches are talking about how glad they are to be here on Maui," Stewart said. "I'm glad to be anywhere on this side of the soil."

The 11th-ranked Tigers face Evansville in today's first round and a victory would put them in the semifinals against the winner of the game between No. 12 Louisville and host Chaminade.

The other bracket's first-round games have No. 7 North Carolina against James Madison and Villanova facing San Diego State. Stewart has been at Missouri for 22 years — the third-longest stint in Big Eight history, behind only Phog Allen at Kansas and Henry Iba at Oklahoma State. He has won 526 games, seventh among active coaches. His 11 20-victory seasons are the only ones in Missouri history, as are his six Big Eight titles.

Still, Stewart doesn't have a smooth road in his comeback.

The program is under NCAA investigation and the Tigers' top recruit, Daniel Lyton of Detroit, changed his mind at the last minute and not only didn't attend Missouri, but he charged the program with further improprieties.

But the smile appears quickly on Stewart's face when he is asked about returning to the bench.

"It really felt exciting, different, to play that first ballgame, more than any other," he said of the Tigers' exhibition victory over a team from Brazil. "I was as excited for that game as the first one I ever coached as a head coach at Northern Iowa. I never looked forward to something as much as I did to that ballgame."

"I didn't feel as if that much had passed by, it being just a half a season I missed. I wondered how it would feel. It was different. It was fun."

Stewart's ready to have some more fun with the current crop of Tigers.

"We've always been a fundamental team but we have some pretty good quickness and we're just looking for the right combination, as everyone else is," he said. "I know our experienced players can play and we'll just have to see how far the freshmen push them. I'll tell you, they have a ready."

"These are a great bunch of kids. I really like them. They give me it all in practice and we may have a lot of work ahead of us but we'll find out early in a tournament like this."

The national champion has played in the Maui Classic the last two seasons and three of the teams in this field were ranked high in the preseason poll and have to be given a legitimate shot at an impressive postseason showing.

"I think any ballclub that wins two games here will be ranked all season long," Stewart said. "If you win one you've done very well. If you win two you're in great shape and, of course, if you win the tournament you know that you really can look forward to a great year and build on that."

Norm Stewart has a lot to look forward to, whether it be the next practice, game, tournament or season.

"Damn, it's good to be back. The exhibition game was great and I'm really looking forward to every game this season."

Hogs Have Tough Road To Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Ninth-ranked Arkansas must overcome one of the toughest home crowds in the Southwest Conference today in a place where they haven't won since 1981 if they expect to repeat as champions.

The 14th-ranked Texas A&M Aggies provide the opposition in Kyle Field where they haven't lost an SWC game since 1984.

"The main thing I always remember about A&M is the noise of their crowd," Arkansas flanker Derek Russell said.

"Kyle Field is the worst place to play for an opposing team," cornerback Anthony Cooney said. "Their fans are loud but you can't get caught up watching the fans. A&M will do a lot of things to distract you."

Odds makers taking note of the homefield advantage have made the Aggies three-point favorites.

The Hogs would only have weak Southern Methodist left on their schedule to clinch a New Year's Day date in the Cotton Bowl against the Southeastern Conference runner-up, probably Tennessee.

If the Aggies beat Arkansas, they would still have to beat Texas Dec. 2 to clinch a trip to Dallas.

Texas Tech and Texas would still be in the picture for at least a day. Texas would have to defeat Baylor and Tech would have to upset Houston on Saturday to stay in the race.

"This is what I thought about all summer," Arkansas offensive tackle Jim Mabry said. "The conference title coming down between us and A&M. It's the loudest place to play in the conference and it's tough to go down there and win."

The Aggies have won 19 consecutive SWC home games in Kyle Field.

"Our kids have never seen us lose a conference game here," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "They've walked back into the locker room as winners."

The Hogs (8-1) and the 14th-ranked Aggies (7-2) are both well rested. Arkansas had a week off and A&M has had two consecutive open dates. Each has a 5-1 league record.

"We've had a chance to study defenses so both teams should be better offensively," Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield said. "I think it could be a good offensive game. A&M has had a lot of time off to put in some new plays against us."

While Hatfield welcomed a week off, Slocum said dealing with two weeks off was unsettling.

"I don't think we'll be rusty," Slocum said. "We've had live scrimmages trying to keep sharp. It was like waiting for Christmas to come."

Slocum said Arkansas is a dangerous offensive team because of quarterback Quinn Grovey, who has rushed for 468 yards and passed for 914.

Harris Makes Claim For Heisman

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — West Virginia quarterback Major Harris talked about his Heisman Trophy aspirations after leading the 17th-ranked Mountaineers to a 24-17 victory over Syracuse.

But the statement Harris made on the field was more persuasive.

The junior became the first player in NCAA history to total more than 2,000 yards rushing and 5,000 yards passing in a career while ending Syracuse's four-game winning streak.

"I don't have a vote on it ... but I feel I can do it all. I can drop back and throw. I can run. I can do everything," he said after pushing his career rushing total to 2,144 yards with 95 yards Thursday and adding 182 yards passing for a three-year total of 5,054.

"He's the best we've faced," said defensive tackle George Rooks, one of those repeatedly left grasping at air while chasing after Harris.

"He's mobile. He runs. He can throw. He can throw in any position," Rooks said.

"He's just unbelievable, that's why he should win the Heisman," said linebacker David Bavaro, who provided the only blemish on Harris' night by intercepting one of his passes late in the game.

"I think that ought to get him the Heisman," said West Virginia coach Don Nehlen, who watched Harris convert seven of nine third downs with his running ability. "I thought he played awfully well."

Harris and the two others in West Virginia's starting backfield — tailback Eugene Napoleon and fullback Rico Tyler — scored on 1-yard touchdowns runs to fuel West Virginia's season-ending victory.

The victory gives West Virginia an 8-2-1 record as it heads to the Gator Bowl to play Clemson later this month. Syracuse, which lost for the fourth time in four tries against a Top 25 team, slipped to 6-4. Syracuse, which finishes its regular season next weekend in Tokyo against Louisville, is expected to receive a bid to the Peach Bowl to play Georgia.

Bowl representatives will be out en masse this weekend to officially issue the invitations that were really handed out over the past few weeks. The Orange Bowl is in the unusual position of having to root against seventh-ranked Miami, the team that calls the Orange Bowl home, while the Sugar Bowl will be pulling equally hard for the Hurricanes.

Miami, you see, entertains No. 1-ranked Notre Dame on Saturday night and a victory by the Irish would set up a 1-2 Orange Bowl showdown with second-ranked Colorado. A Miami victory, however, probably would give Colorado the No. 1 ranking but also would make the Sugar Bowl more attractive, especially if No. 4 Alabama — unbeaten, untied and idle this weekend — beats Auburn on Dec. 2. Regardless, the Crimson Tide will meet Miami in New Orleans.

West Virginia's Tyler scored the tie-breaking touchdown in the third quarter to cap a 13-play, 46-yard drive that followed a fumble by Syracuse's Michael Owens.

Cornerback Preston Waters preserved the Mountaineers' victory by intercepting a fourth-down desperation pass at the West Virginia 3 in the final minute.

West Virginia, which limited Syracuse to just seven plays in the third period while scoring 10 points to erase a 17-14 halftime deficit, had tied the contest at 17 on Brad Carroll's 19-yard field goal five minutes into the second half.

The Orangemen surged into the lead with 19 seconds remaining in the first half when quarterback Mark McDonald lofted a 31-yard touchdown pass to Rob Moore. The junior wide receiver caught six passes for 123 yards to become Syracuse's all-time single season reception (50) and reception yardage leader (993).

McDonald was 12 of 20 for 158 yards after taking over in the second quarter for starter Bill Scharr, who sprained the thumb on his throwing hand.

The teams exchanged the lead four times in the first half after John Biskup gave Syracuse a 3-0 lead with a 24-yard field goal on the opening drive of the game.

Harris put the Mountaineers ahead 7-3 with his touchdown run in the first quarter, but Syracuse took the lead back in the second on a 9-yard touchdown run by Owens.

Napoleon's scoring run made it 14-10 with three minutes to play in the half.

Syracuse had an opportunity to tie the game early in the fourth period after driving to the West Virginia 12, but the Mountaineers' defense held and cornerback Darren Fulton forced an incompletion when McDonald tried to pass on a fake field goal on fourth down.

The game began a weekend featuring four other contests between ranked teams — No. 20 Ohio State at No. 3 Michigan, which needs only a tie to return to the Rose Bowl; No. 9 Arkansas at No. 14 Texas A&M today, with the winner almost certainly going to the Cotton Bowl; No. 18 Texas Tech at No. 13 Houston and No. 22 Penn State at No. 19 Pitt.

Elsewhere, No. 8 Tennessee is at Kentucky, No. 11 Illinois at Northwestern, No. 21 Brigham Young at San Diego State, No. 24 Oregon State at Hawaii and No. 25 Michigan State at Wisconsin.

Colorado is idle, along with Alabama, No. 5 Florida State, No. 6 Nebraska, No. 10 Auburn, No. 12 Southern California, No. 15 Clemson, No. 16 Virginia and No. 23 Duke.

But the Notre Dame-Miami game is the centerpiece of all the action.

Last year, Notre Dame ended Miami's 36-game regular-season winning streak 31-30 and cost the Hurricanes a shot at the national championship. Miami will try to return the compliment against a Notre Dame team that has won a school-record 23 straight games.

"We are a tired team," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "It's been a long year. But we're a team that loves football, and that's our saving grace."

Holtz said Miami was the best team the Irish played a year ago and "certainly the best I'll see this year. They are very impressive."

Last Saturday, the Irish ended a streak that had seen them lose at Penn State in 1981, 1983, 1985 and 1987. They also have lost at Miami in each of those years, including a 58-7 embarrassment in 1985 in the final game for Coach Gerry Faust and a 24-0 loss two years later.

Although the rivalry is one of the fiercest in college football, something will be missing because Jimmy Johnson, the man Notre Dame fans loved to hate, is no longer Miami's coach.

Holtz has quipped that Notre Dame fans who also pull for Dallas have a tough time maintaining their rooting interest because Johnson now coaches the Cowboys.

"People have been talking about this game since last year, and it's good it's finally here," said Dennis Erickson, who succeeded Johnson as Miami's coach. "Our players are relieved. This is our biggest game of the season regardless of what happens."

Both Michigan and Ohio State have tailbacks with injured right knees and Michigan's Tony Boles won't play. Ohio State's Carlos Snow was unable to practice early in the week and is unlikely to start.

If Ohio State wins and Illinois beats winless Northwestern, the Big Ten race would end in a three-way tie and Illinois would go to the Rose Bowl.

Kansas Looking Like A Winner Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Now that they have something to play for, the Kansas Jayhawks are looking like the savvy team that won the 1988 NCAA championship.

Kansas, ineligible for the NCAA Tournament last season because of rules infractions, was unranked in the preseason and was picked to finish as low as eighth in the Big Eight.

But after three games, the Jayhawks already have beaten No. 2 LSU and No. 1 UNLV in consecutive games to reach tonight's final of the preseason NIT against No. 25 St. John's.

"The game at Baton Rouge and playing UNLV were the most emotional regular-season games I've ever been in," said guard Kevin Pritchard, a veteran of the 1988 championship team. "We are trying to prove again that we can compete. Not seeing the carrot ahead of us took a lot away from last season."

The Jayhawks made 60.7 percent of their field-goal attempts Wednesday night in beating UNLV 91-77.

Kansas executed its offense beautifully, using a 34-16 surge in the second half to turn a two-point game into an 83-63 advantage.

"I never thought we could be up 20 points on UNLV, but it came from executing our offense," Pritchard said.

Mark Randall scored 10 of his 16 points and Mike Maddox eight of his 17 during the 13-minute run. Many of the baskets were easy layups as Randall and Maddox broke away from teammates' screens.

Center Pekka Markkanen of Finland, who "When we make backdoor cuts for easy layups, it tends to frustrate the other team," Maddox said.

"We had some breakdowns on defense and they made us pay for it," UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian said.

St. John's won the postseason NIT last spring after a disappointing regular season.

The Redmen are back this season with 5-foot-11 guard Boo Harvey, who missed all of 1988-89 because of academic problems.

Playing his second game of the season in the semifinals against DePaul, Harvey scored 14 of his 16 points in the second half, including a dash through the Blue Demons defense for the winning shot at the buzzer of a 53-52 game.

"I've been waiting a long time for this moment after waiting a year without playing," Harvey said. "I've solved my grade problems and I'm just happy to be back."

St. John's appeared on the way to defeat in the final seconds as DePaul — with a 52-51 lead — ran time off the clock. Finally, just before he was fouled, Melvon Foster shuffled his feet and was called for traveling with just 5.7 seconds left.

After a timeout, Harvey took the inbound pass and drove three-quarters of the length of the court for the winning jumper.

"I knew I could get a shot or get fouled in less than six seconds unless they double-teamed me," Harvey said.

"It was only five seconds left, no time to really have a play," St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca said. "We just got the ball into Boo Harvey's hands. It was the creativity and ingenuity of Boo Harvey that won it."

UNLV was playing without starting center David Butler and reserve Moses Scurry, both academically ineligible. They are expected to return next month.

"I wouldn't have picked us No. 1 even with Butler and Scurry," Tarkanian said. "Without them we don't have much depth. But we have a chance to be a very good team after Dec. 17."

EC Basketball...

the team. "In the past, for instance, we had the lob pass (inside) as an option. But we just mentioned it in practice. Now, we're practicing it because we have people who can go up and get it."

Appalachian will bring in a formidable opponent, a team that returns four of its five starters off last year's squad that won 20 games. "They're good," Steele said. "Griff (assistant Griff Mills) saw them (against Venezuela) and said they were in mid-season form because of all the experience they have back. They are as good as anyone in our conference was last year."

Obviously, Steele would like to come away with a victory in the opener, but he's also looking for combinations that click.

"In practice, it's obvious that Reed is still our best wing and Tim Brown is the most productive at the four position (power forward). If we put Ike in the middle, then what do we do with Gus, Stanley and Darrell."

"What we really need is for Reed to be at the two-guard, and Brown at the three spot. But we need the bigger lineup and the production they have. We don't really have a two-guard who's athletic and can guard guys. (Freshman Steve) Richardson has made a lot of progress there in the last 10 days, but he's still not ready," Steele said.

Richardson missed a good deal of the early preseason due to a bout with mononucleosis.

The game Saturday is the first of three late November contests. ECU will host N.C. Wesleyan on Monday and travels to UNC-Greensboro on Wednesday.

MIAMI — Tony Rice thinks people who think he should pass more are funny.

"I just laugh at them," the Notre Dame quarterback said. "A lot of people have said we can't win without passing. We haven't passed that much, and we're still winning, and they're still complaining. It's weird."

So don't tell Rice that some people — including Coach Lou Holtz — think he'll need to pass more if the top-ranked Fighting Irish (11-0) are to win Saturday night's showdown at Miami. The seventh-ranked Hurricanes (9-1) have allowed just 62 yards rushing per game, second-best in the nation.

"If you go against a defensive line with size and mobility like Miami has, you can't go into a game expecting to run the ball," Holtz said.

Then again...

"I think we can run the ball against anybody," Rice said.

The Hurricanes tend to agree with Holtz, but then they'd much rather have to stop Rice's passes than the option attack he directs. The Fighting Irish this season have 42 touchdowns rushing and two passing.

"They're going to have to mix it up," Miami safety Charles Pharms said. "We've shown we can stop the run. I don't think Notre Dame can expect to win by just bloodying our noses and shoving the ball down our throats."

One reason Rice would prefer to run on Saturday is Miami's pass rush, which has 49 sacks. The Hurricanes are eager to employ it.

"I really don't think Notre Dame does enough pass blocking to where they'd be good at it," Pharms said. "I think our defensive line will get a lot of pressure on Tony Rice."

In last year's game, Miami contained Notre Dame's running game and pressured Rice when he tried to throw. But he still hit eight of 16 passes for 195 yards, and the Fighting Irish won 31-30 to end the Hurricanes' 36-game regular-season winning streak.

"We connected on some passes we really needed, and they took their toll," Rice said. "But people still say Tony Rice can't pass."

Coach Dennis Erickson doesn't say that. His Miami quarterbacks have passed for 3,196 yards, Rice for 1,016. Still, Erickson called Rice the best player in college football. "Don't worry about his stats," the coach said. "He puts points on the board and wins games."

Notre Dame has won 23 in a row with Rice at quarterback. The Hurricanes, meanwhile, have won 31 in a row at the Orange Bowl and have outscored the Irish 102-7 in the last three meetings at Miami.

Because Notre Dame and Miami finished ranked 1-2 last season, Saturday's game is being billed as the Hurricanes' chance for revenge. The game also is Rice's last chance to win Heisman Trophy votes.

"I wouldn't mind that, but that comes later," he said. "I just want to win the game first."

Children gather on Wenceslas Square in Prague to put down candles for democracy

Prague Party Leaders Meet To Consider Ruling Changes

By Hanns Neuerbourg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Communist Party leaders met in emergency session today to consider major leadership changes in response to the burgeoning pro-democracy movement. There were strong signs of a power struggle.

In a major break with the national leadership, the influential Communist Party in the city of Prague called for more democracy and changes in the ruling Politburo as "the only way out of the present situation."

Today's Central Committee meeting came one day after the biggest rallies in the nation's history. Hundreds of thousands of protesters marched nationwide demanding democratic reforms.

Party general secretary Milos Jakes, who has resisted reforms demanded by increasingly restive citizenry, was the first official to speak at today's meeting, the official news agency CTK said without giving further details.

The demonstrators seek the resignation of Jakes, President Gustav Husak and other leaders associated with the hard-line policies pursued since Warsaw Pact tanks snuffed out Communist reforms in 1968.

Premier Ladislav Adamec, seen as a moderate member of the 13-man party Politburo, broke with years of policy this week by receiving a delegation that included prominent dissidents leading the demands for reform.

Jakes has paid lip service to reform and adopted some cautious economic changes since replacing Husak as party leader in December 1987.

But he and other hard-line members of his Politburo have refused to join in the kind of political reform launched by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev that has produced radical changes in Poland, Hungary and East Germany.

The strongest hint of an impending leadership shuffle came Thursday from Prague Communist Party Chief Miroslav Stepan, a member of the ruling Politburo.

Stepan said today's Central Committee session would "deal with personnel issues" that might affect officials in "the highest positions," the state news agency CTK reported.

The Prague party leadership reiterated Stepan's words in a separate statement published early today that called for "fundamental cadre changes" in the Politburo.

The statement talked of the need to restore confidence in the party's policy by allowing much more democracy within Communist ranks.

It also called for genuine dialogue, which it termed "a fundamental norm of political life in the process of democratization."

Today's meeting came one day after hundreds of thousands of people crowded into Prague's Wenceslas Square and urged party hard-liners to relinquish power. The rally Thursday drew at least 300,000 people, the biggest ever in Czechoslovakia.

The masses shouted "Shame" and "Resign."

"We will never return to the old system of totalitarian rule," playwright Vaclav Havel, the country's best known dissident, told the crowd.

"We shall see whether our country will reach democracy in a political way or whether an isolated group of sadists will prevail, who want, at any cost, to hide their power and privileges by empty words about reform," he said.

At another rally that drew tens of thousands of people in Bratislava, ousted leader Alexander Dubcek, whose own attempts at reform were crushed 20 years ago, endorsed the demands for change but warned of "tragic consequences" if protesters press too hard.

Dubcek, who headed the Communist "Prague Spring" reforms that were crushed by the Soviet-led invasion of 1968, made his first public speech Thursday since he was expelled from the party in the purge of reformers that put Jakes and the rest of the current leadership in power.

In addition to Prague and Bratislava, state media said thousands of people attended anti-government protests Thursday in the cities of Usci Nad Labem, Plzen, Hradec Kralove, Ostrava and Ean-ska Eystrica.

The rallies were the culmination of six days of protests that began on Nov. 17, when a peaceful demonstration in Prague was brutally dispersed by police.

Havel called on the nation's military and police forces "to stand by the people for the first time."

But military leaders issued an ominous message.

In a statement carried by CTK, it said: "We reject the anarchy spread by anti-socialist forces from within and abroad. We actively support the efforts of the Central Committee, the federal government and the majority of our working people."

It added that the military was "prepared to defend the achievements of socialism."

The statement was issued after senior officers heard a speech by Defense Minister Milan Vaclavik.

Later, however, Vaclavik went on television to say that the army "has never acted against the people."

Meanwhile, preparations continued for a two-hour nationwide strike on Monday. Civic Forum leaders said Thursday that 500 businesses have expressed support for the anti-government work stoppage.

Krenz Says He Favors Abolishing Communist Party Power Guarantee

By Nesha Starcevic
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST BERLIN — East German leader Egon Krenz said in an interview published today that he favors abolishing the Communist Party's constitutional claim to total power, making yet another concession to the pro-democracy movement.

But while explicitly advocating the removal of the constitutional provision guaranteeing the party a monopoly on power — a key demand of demonstrators advocating reform — he made it clear he expects the party to remain a leading force.

On Thursday, the embattled party announced it had opened a probe against ousted leader Erich Honecker and expelled the former economy chief from the party, blaming them for the crisis gripping the country.

Krenz, a former Honecker disciple now trying to distance himself from his old mentor, also said in a television interview Thursday that he would step down if the party asked to leave during a party congress next month.

The party also revoked the membership of Honecker's former economic czar, who had been thrown out of the ruling Politburo in the purge last month that launched a wave of reform and opened up the Berlin Wall.

The moves reflected the party's desperate attempts to restore its sinking credibility and authority.

Meanwhile, pro-democracy demonstrations continued with about 10,000 protesters rallying in the city of Erfurt on Thursday night, said East Germany's ADN news agency.

The protesters demanded an end to the Communist Party's dominant role in the government and the legalization of pro-democracy opposition groups, ADN said.

In the interview published today by the Communist party daily Neues Deutschland, Krenz called for major constitutional changes to separate the party, state and economy.

Asked by the interviewer about the country's deep political crisis, Krenz mentioned the constitutional provision guaranteeing Communist authority and said, "We are in favor of abolishing it."

"How a party proceeds with the development of society is not put forth through laws or declarations but can only result from work, performance and its attitude," he told the newspaper.

But when asked about demands by pro-democracy demonstrators for curbing party "interference" in all aspects of life, Krenz replied: "One has to say very clearly that we will interfere with all our energy. Not least because we represent a considerable part of the population, particularly the working class."

He added, "We are not a corrupt party."

Krenz said hard-line policies of the past decades caused "many basic mistakes, ultimately the crisis of our society."

The disciplinary investigation against the ailing Honecker, former economy czar Guenter Mittag and two other former officials was based on "grave abuses" of the party statute and "responsibility for the current situation in the party and the country," ADN said without elaborating Thursday.

ADN also said that Mittag was expelled from the party.

The party's probe of Honecker and other former senior officials could result in various sanctions ranging from an official rebuke to expulsion from the party.

Krenz replaced Honecker on Oct. 18. Honecker led the country for 18 years, staunchly resisting the kind of reforms launched by Gorbachev nearly five years ago.

Since taking over, Krenz has embraced a whirlwind program of reforms and concessions to opposition demands, including the long-denied freedom to travel, the promise of free elections, and sweeping changes in the economy.

But the dramatic changes have failed to shore up the party's standing and Krenz's own credibility among the citizenry, which has staged massive demonstrations to press demands for more democracy.

Krenz, 52, long viewed as a hard-liner, said in an interview with West Germany's ARD television network Thursday that he had been "inspired by the new thinking of Gorbachev."

Bomb Placed At Doctor's Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Authorities found a bomb today outside the home of a doctor who transplanted the heart of a slain Israeli soldier into a Palestinian, police said. An underground Jewish group said it placed the device.

Police found a similar crude bomb at the home of a professor who invited a Palestinian activist to speak at Hebrew University in Jerusalem, police spokesman Uzi Sandori said.

An anonymous caller telephoned the Israeli dailies Yediot Ahronot and Maariv early today and claimed a group called the Sicarites placed the bombs at the two homes.

"If they do not leave the country within a week, we will wait for them in a dark corner with a machine gun," Maariv quoted the caller as saying.

The Sicarites, named after first century Jewish zealots who battled the Romans, have claimed responsibility for at least nine attacks on Arabs and liberal Jews, including the machine gun slaying of an Arab outside Jerusalem's Old City on April 10.

No arrests were ever made in that slaying, and Sandori said no suspects have been detained in connection with the bombs found today.

Sandori described the device found outside the West Jerusalem home of Dr. Dov Shimon as a glass seltzer bottle rigged with gunpowder and a candle. He said the candle was apparently meant to set off an explosion, but both devices were found before exploding.

Japan's Recruit Trial Gets Started With Denials

By Tetsuo Jimbo
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — The first trial in the scandal that felled a government and reshaped Japan's political landscape opened today with two defendants denying bribery charges.

The scandal is the most widespread ever in Japan, and the trials are expected to delve deeply into issues involving the structure of Japanese society.

Five separate trials are starting between today and Dec. 15 on charges against two leading politicians, six bureaucrats and four executives of the Recruit Co., an information services conglomerate.

The company is accused of trying to win favors and exert influence by showering huge donations and stock bargains on the elite of Japanese government and business.

At today's opening session, 59-year-old Takashi Kato, a former vice minister of labor, denied doing favors for Recruit in exchange for shares in a subsidiary of the conglomerate. But he acknowledged netting a $49,000 profit on shares bought cheaply from Recruit.

"I have considerably damaged the credibility of the labor administration and ... I deeply regret it," Kato said in Tokyo District Court, where Judge Taketaka Nakagawa presided at the two-hour, 20-minute session.

His co-defendant, 47-year-old Masao Tatsumi, a former Recruit executive, denied playing any role as an intermediary between Kato and Recruit's founder and former chairman, Hiromasa Ezoe.

Ezoe is to be tried starting Dec. 15 on seven counts of bribery. The scandal centers on Ezoe, an ambitious entrepreneur who bombarded senior politicians and bureaucrats with huge donations and discounted shares in a Recruit subsidiary.

Neither of today's defendants lodged a formal plea, which is not the procedure in Japanese courts.

The prosecution alleges that Kato influenced Labor Ministry regulations in a way that benefited Recruit's booming business of publishing employment magazines.

As the trials started, Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu renewed his pledge of political reform.

"This is an incident that should never be repeated," Kaifu was quoting as saying by the Kyodo News Service and Japan Broadcasting Corp.

Kaifu said his governing Liberal Democratic Party is following new guidelines curbing political donations from corporations.

"I think we have to work hard on political reform," he was quoted as saying.

In August, Kaifu became the third prime minister in less than a year after the scandal forced Noboru Takeshita to step down, in June. Takeshita's successor, Sousei Uno, resigned after the Liberal Democrats suffered a crushing setback in July elections for the upper house of Parliament.

Takeshita himself was found to have accepted $1.4 million in legal donations.

Now, before elections for the more powerful lower house expected early next year, the new trials risk bringing out more damaging disclosures.

In trying the defendants, prosecutors must show when a gift becomes a bribe. The determination by the court could become a severe test of the close links between business and government in Japan.

The answers won't be known in full for years, given the slow pace of justice in Japan.

"The Recruit case is not just another political corruption trial, but it is a challenge to the way Japan Inc. is set up today," said Hiroshi Itakura, professor of criminal law at Nippon University. Japan Inc. is a term that refers to the relationship between government and business.

"For those implicated in the case, it is almost as if they were doing what everyone else was doing, and one day they woke up and found themselves being criminal defendants in one of the largest bribery cases in history," he said.

Bribery carries a maximum five-year prison sentence.

Defendants whose trials start later include Takao Fujinami, a former chief Cabinet secretary; and Hisashi Shinto, ex-chairman of Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corp., Japan's largest company. The scandals drove dozens of powerful men from their positions.

Red Square Pilot Accused In Stabbing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Mathias Rust, the young West German who landed his single-engine plane in Moscow's Red Square, has been accused of stabbing a nurse who resisted when he tried to kiss her, authorities said.

Rust, who spent more than a year imprisoned in the Soviet Union after he flew his plane past Soviet air defenses, turned himself in Thursday two hours after fleeing a Hamburg-area hospital, police said.

The 21-year-old was working there as an orderly under the federal Civilian Service, a pacifist alternative to compulsory military service in West Germany, police said.

Newspapers reported today that the teen-ager underwent surgery and described her condition as serious.

Copter Crash Kills Marines From Ky., Ill.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Marine investigators are seeking the cause of a helicopter crash that killed the craft's pilot and co-pilot this week during carrier-based exercises in the Mediterranean Sea.

The two crew members were declared dead Thursday following a 20-hour search by the Navy and Marine Corps, officials said.

The AH-1T Cobra helicopter crashed and sank in the Mediterranean during a night exercise. The search for the helicopter and its pilot and co-pilot was called off at 10 a.m. EST Thursday, said Capt. Elizabeth Kerstens, a Marine Corps spokeswoman.

"They had been searching for almost a day at that point and decided there was no hope of finding them," Capt. Kerstens said. "The pilots have been declared dead and their remains are unrecovered."

The aircraft was operating from the helicopter carrier USS Iwo Jima in the western Mediterranean off the coast of Spain when the crash occurred at 2:21 p.m. EST Wednesday, according to the Marine Corps.

Capt. Kerstens said the cause of the crash was not immediately known but that an investigation has been started.

The pilot was identified as Capt. Todd O. Travis, 29, of Glasgow, Ky.; and the co-pilot-gunner as Capt. Michael W. Vidusek, 28, of Naperville, Ill. Travis had been in the Marine Corps five years and 10 months and Vidusek and been in the service six and one-half years.

The two officers were participating in a night carrier qualification and instrument refresher training exercise when the helicopter went down within sight of the ship, Capt. Kerstens said.

She said Travis and Vidusek were not using night vision goggles as a part of the exercise. Alleged defects in night vision goggles and a high rate of military helicopter accidents involving their use have prompted several recent congressional inquiries and hearings.

Capt. Kerstens said both pilots and the Iwo Jima had participated in a 48-hour Navy "safety stand-down" two weeks ago, during which almost all routine training was suspended for reviews of safety procedures.

Students Charged

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The government has charged 21 students with arson in connection with a series of fires set during nationwide student protests in May.

The students had been detained without charge since the protests, which left 43 people dead.

The 21 defendants, who were charged Thursday, pleaded innocent and were granted bail. They each could face seven years in prison if convicted.

The government alleges they were caught setting fire to private homes and government property in a Lagos suburb during the protests.

Fairy Tales Can Come True

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Rebecca Harrell reads fairy tales. She knows they're not true, of course, because at 9 years old, Rebecca's too sophisticated for that. It's the feeling that counts, though — how they make you believe something wonderful and unexpected can happen.

Like magic. Starring in her first feature film was like magic, too. It was a real-life fantasy with an agent as fairy godmother.

The Hinesburg, Vt., resident was in a party with her best friend, Katie Reed, whose father, a Broadway singing coach, suggested that Rebecca get an agent in New York. She did, and quickly made a successful audition for Orion Pictures' "Prancer," portraying Jessica Riggs, who befriends one of Santa's reindeer and establishes a lasting bond with her moody, temperamental father (Sam Elliott). Rebecca will tell you the movie is just a movie, only pretend. She'll also say there's magic in the message.

"Fairy tales aren't true, but they can be," she said, choosing her words carefully in a recent interview. "A man has married his wife and finds a pot of gold, that's possible. There are pots and some gold, and there can be gold in a pot. Those things can actually happen."

"Getting to make 'Prancer' was more luck than magic. But luck is kind of like magic."

Academy Award-winning actress Faye Dunaway once said children were well suited to act because they were so natural in real life. Acting is play, she noted, and requires spontaneity and openness, qualities few children are without.

But making "Prancer" was work. Rebecca noted she appears in 95 of the 98 scenes. Filming, schoolwork and meals gave her little free time.

Luckily, she said, feeling comfortable with her part was easy because she and Jessica had so much in common.

She listed four traits she shares with her character — dramatic, sad, happy and alone — and saw nothing unusual about having all those feelings at the same time.

"I am so similar to that character and, it was funny, when I came home I was more of a Jessica Riggs than a Rebecca Harrell, but nobody knew I had changed except for my mom. By talking to me now, that let's you know what Jessica was like."

She had never heard of most of her co-stars, who include Elliott ("Mask"), and veteran TV actors Abe Vigoda and Michael Constantine. She did know of Cloris Leachman, who portrays Jessica's eccentric neighbor. Rebecca has never seen her old TV sitcoms, "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" or "Phyllis," but is a fan of her recent series, "Facts of Life."

Anchorman Breaks Ground In Japan's Television News

By Janice Fuhrman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — For 20 million Japanese, Hiroshi Kume is an anchor in the stormy seas of modern life.

The 45-year-old, boyish-looking newscaster on TV Asahi's "News Station" program anchors one of the nation's most popular news show, drawing viewers with his pioneering, opinionated 80-minute look at the day's events.

In a culture that usually leans more to cooperation than criticism, Kume has become a working man's hero for many. Admirers claim he has the "common man's touch," fearlessly criticizing the powers that be in a Japan wracked by government scandals, international criticism and new riches.

With the irreverent style of a quiz show host — his former occupation — he has revolutionized Japanese TV news and set off the so-called "News Wars" in which competing networks imitated his style.

Critics and competitors claim he's biased, brash and — perhaps worst of all — not a real journalist.

Part Howard Cosell, part Willard Scott, and in no way a Peter Jennings, a Tom Brokaw or a Dan Rather, Kume rebuffs both the pans and the praise.

He avoids including himself in the legions of middle-class, loyal "salary men" who glue this country together. He points out that anyone who earns a TV anchor's salary — about $700,000 annually, TV insiders say — can hardly be considered one of the trampled masses.

One television critic, Sadanobu Aoki, says Kume's support comes from viewers who, desiring political reforms but not revolution, applaud the unprecedented way he speaks out.

"He criticizes authority without hesitating, but he also balances his criticism. People like to think they see a little of themselves on the screen when they watch him," says Aoki.

For some Japanese, Kume is an independent voice, the kind of voice silenced in pre-war Japan by fealty to the emperor and muted in postwar Japan by subservience to Japanese business.

Kume delights in pointing to his ratings — a 20 percent share of the viewing public — when confronted with claims he doesn't measure up to the staid, detached delivery of Japan's other talking heads.

Four years ago, TV Asahi brought Kume on from competitor Tokyo Broadcasting System, where he hosted quiz shows, cooking programs and musicals. It then forged a format incorporating Kume's views of the news.

The move prompted loud criticism from media watchers about Kume's lack of journalism experience. But his outspoken delivery quickly attracted viewers. What followed was a cavalcade of imitations in the same late evening time slot.

Kume admits to being worried by the only copycat show that has survived. The encroaching ratings of public broadcaster NHK's "News Today" makes him think he should run a tighter ship, and "move from a news show to real news."

Zsa Zsa Goes Turkey Shopping For Needy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Zsa Zsa Gabor left her Bel-Air estate to go on a supermarket shopping spree to buy 100 turkeys for the disadvantaged.

The one-time Hungarian beauty queen, facing three days in jail for slapping a Beverly Hills police officer, shivered in the frozen food section Wednesday.

"Where are our turkeys? I'm getting cold. This place is freezing. Where's the manager?" the actress said.

The turkeys were delivered to a Venice shelter that helps poor, elderly and homeless people. Miss Gabor also donated 120 sweaters and $200.

Miss Gabor is appealing her conviction. As part of her sentence, she must spend 120 hours performing community service work at the center. But the shopping spree was not part of her court-mandated charity work.

The actress said she people who work with the homeless at the center "are some of the most wonderful, warm people I have ever met in my entire life."

Miss Gabor also bought a stuffed orangutan doll, which she promptly named Paul Kramer, after the policeman she slapped during a traffic stop June 14.

Soviet Union Still Facing Shortage Of Medicines

By Carey Goldberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I said, 'Fine, where do I get it?'" she told the group. "She told me, 'That's your problem.'"

Around the small circle, heads nodded in empathy.

Elvira Gustova, mother of a 15-year-old diabetic, said that in five years she has been able to buy only 50 strips used for the blood-sugar tests that are supposed to be taken daily.

Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, reported recently that President Gorbachev had told a meeting of the party's ruling Politburo the medicine shortage was so severe it had become a political problem that should be taken under "tough party control."

He had previously denounced what he called the mismanagement that fuels shortages of pharmaceuticals and equipment. He also singled out by name the officials he said ordered millions of disposable syringes without ensuring there would be needles to go with them. Babies and children in several Soviet hospitals have contracted AIDS from unsterilized needles.

The government recently pledged an additional $781 million to buy imported medications. In all, the Soviet Union expects to spend about $3.2 billion from its precious hard-currency reserves to import medicines this year, but Pravda said the situation still is not improving.

Speakers at the Politburo meeting blamed the Soviet pharmaceutical industry for the shortage, as well as the refusal of several localities to allow new chemical factories to be built within them.

Alexei Moskvichev, head of Moscow's health services, estimated that only 400 of the 2,800 permissible medications are in short supply in the Soviet Union and said he knew of no deaths brought on by the lack of a particular medication.

"If I knew it was needed, it would be obtained somehow, whether by plane from Europe or otherwise," he said in an interview.

But the Soviet press imparts a bleaker picture.

A recent article headlined "Why are children dying?" in the newspaper Sovetskaya Kultura described how the lack of proper medicine in Soviet drugstores led to a rise in infant mortality.

The government newspaper Izevestia advised in a headline, "You're sick? Breathe deeper!"

The labor newspaper Trud titled a story "The shortage that costs lives."

"We can get along without meat and sausage," retiree S. Katayev wrote in a letter to Pravda. "And we can even live with just 1.5 kilograms (3 pounds) of sugar a month — we won't die from that. But we can't get along without medical help."

The longest line at the biggest pharmacy in the Soviet Union leads to the information booth where people try to find out where they can get the medicine they need — if they can get it at all.

On a recent afternoon in Pharmacy No. 1, Anfisa Kremlyova, a retired doctor, came away from the information window empty-handed. She had been told no drugstore in the district had the anti-coagulant or sedative she needed. "I'll just have to search some more," she said.

"Sometimes there are scenes," said Tamara Pogromova, assistant director of the pharmacy a short walk from Red Square. "After all, people have to get cured."

This past spring, recalled Rima Goffman, whose grandson has diabetes, there was an insulin panic, and calls started pouring in saying supplies of top-grade imported insulin were getting dangerously low.

Members of the Moscow Diabetes Association appealed to Moscow's Communist Party committee. The party chiefs pressured the Health Ministry, and within two weeks supplies improved.

That was a battle won, "but it cost health and tears and nerves," Goffman said.

In some ways, things are better now. If not for Gorbachev's reforms, the Moscow Diabetes Association would never have been allowed to form, gain official recognition and push its own interests.

But the Gorbachev years have also witnessed a drop in reserves of hard currency and dwindling supplies of everything from soap to socks, with medicine increasingly hard to get, especially imported medicine.

Diabetes Association members took turns telling tales of woe for more than two hours at their meeting.

They complained that there are virtually no blood-sugar measuring devices in Soviet hospitals; that there is a shortage of specialists and most of those who do practice are poorly trained; that it is difficult to get the kinds of food diabetics need; that when diabetics are hospitalized, they often get hepatitis from contaminated needles or suffer more due to the poor diet.

Igor Rivkin, whose son has diabetes, said Gorbachev's reforms eventually may improve conditions, "but the problems are so deep they can't be solved right away. And you can't conserve the patient until they improve. Every day, every hour, the disease does its work."

Driftnet Fishing Accord Endorsed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — Representatives from 20 South Pacific nations today endorsed a pact aimed at banning the huge, 60-mile-long drift nets that environmentalists say are robbing the ocean of marine life.

The Japanese government and the Taiwanese fishing industry, main users of the fishing technique, will be asked on Monday to accept the convention, which bans driftnet fishing across large areas of the Pacific.

Delegates attending a week-long meeting in Wellington pledged to work to eliminate drift net fishing from the region.

Most governments in the area already have barred drift net boats from their waters.

The area covered by the convention stretches from the Marshall Islands in the north, French Polynesia in the east, New Zealand in the south and Australia in the west.

But the regional governments do not have the power to force the driftnetters from international waters, where they string their nets across the tuna migration paths.

Philipp Muller, chairman of the Pacific Forum Fisheries Agency, told reporters there had been "signs of co-operation" from Japan and Taiwan but added: "They will want to take the protocols back home and there will be long discussions."

Japanese diplomats are attending the conference and a delegation from the Taiwan Deepsea Tuna Fishing Boat Owners and Exporters Association is due to arrive on Monday.

Countries represented at the conference are to sign the convention at government level within the next few weeks, binding themselves to taking action if they have not already done so.

The regional governments fear the driftnetters will seriously deplete albacore tuna stocks within two years, endangering the fragile economies of island states which depend on fishing.

A U.S. Senate move Wednesday and a Taiwanese pledge to cut its South Pacific fleet have raised hopes the technique could be outlawed or discouraged.

The Senate has voted to bar imports of tuna caught by the drift net fishing, which is known as "wall of death" fishing because the 60-mile nets entrap and suffocate virtually everything in their path.

The bill is aimed mainly at tuna imported from Japan and Taiwan, worth about $250 million last year.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Nov. 25

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Accept newcomers from a foreign country as a charming addition to your social circle. A younger person will bring you a new type of financial opportunity.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If allowed by you, an emotional friend can cause you much concern. Don't let a highly subjected and sensitive family member make you unhappy.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't fight with your best friend over selection of recreations. Restrain that temptation to be moody with your attachment.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Accept the invitation for a party given by a charming lady. A business partner will show you how to make more money.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Don't get involved in an argument between the family and an outsider. A younger person will lend a hand on some duties at home.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Curb that temptation to spend or commit yourself to more than you can afford. You can now plan an addition to your home.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): A trip with your mate could be exciting at this time. Invite friends with whom you have practical activities into your home.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): The best money and business ideas now come to you from other persons. Take some short trips to visit friends who are nearby.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): A practical man will give you deep insight into financial matters. Arguing with attachment over friends is not good for either of you.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Make private plans with experts now to increase your business success. Be your most expressive with your loved one now.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Friends from a distance are best for you to entertain now at your home. Romantic pleasures are yours in being alone with your attachment.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Try to get off on a trip with a member of your family. Avoid a harsh disagreement with a financial person over an obligation.

 "Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:
 "My clients, Mr. East and Mrs.

West, are each claiming damages in the sum of $30 from South. This arises from a game of rubber bridge at the defendant's country club.

"After a weak jump overall by my client, North-South arrived at a contract of three no trump. Mrs. West led the jack of hearts, which declarer won. After a club to the queen, declarer led a club from dummy and, when Mr. East produced the eight, South inserted the nine. This unnatural play resulted in an overtrick, whereas the normal play with eight cards of rising with an honor, would have resulted in at least a one-trick set. It is our contention that somehow South must have known the distribution, either by peeking or other means, and that, therefore, my clients should prevail."

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am not sure whether my learned opponent suffers most from lack of brevity or of bridge ability! My client, Mr. South, made a perfectly normal, everyday rubber bridge play.

"He had eight tricks in high cards, and needed to set up one more club for his contract. Also, he could not afford to lose a trick to West, who could not attack hearts profitably, but not to East. Therefore, the play of the nine of clubs was nothing more than a safety play which guaranteed the contract regardless of whether it won or lost. Under the circumstances, I request the jury to find my client not guilty. I also request that you congratulate Mr. East on not splitting his club honors—a play that would have made my client's life easy."

Second Day Of India Election Sees Increased Security

By Earleen Fisher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — Security was stepped up today for the second day of a parliamentary election that has already left 52 people dead as India decides whether to return Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to power.

The chief opposition leader, Vishwanath Pratap Singh, arrived in his constituency of Fatehpur to watch the voting as his Janata Dal party and Gandhi's Congress Party traded charges of widespread fraud and intimidation.

Gandhi, meanwhile, headed to Punjab state for a last campaign swing. Punjab, where Sikh separatists have killed about 1,640 people so far this year, votes Sunday, the last day of the election.

Although vote counting for Wednesday's and today's balloting is to begin Sunday morning, no results will be announced until Sunday night after the last polls close. In the first hours of voting today, clashes between Congress Party and Janata Dal supporters were reported in Calcutta and eastern Orissa state, but there were no immediate reports of deaths.

In Bihar, one of India's poorest and most lawless states, unidentified men armed with revolvers and knives stormed five voting stations in the state capital of Patna and stole the ballots, United News of India reported.

Press Trust of India reported ballot thefts and an explosion in Munger, another Bihar town, but did not identify the perpetrators.

A total of 96 people have been killed in campaign-related violence since Oct. 17, when elections were announced.

Wednesday's voting in Gandhi's own constituency of Amethi was marred by shoot-outs — including the wounding of a prominent local Janata Dal leader in a confrontation with Congress Party activists.

Gandhi, whose Congress Party has governed India for all but 29 months in the 42 years since independence from Britain, is facing the most cohesive and determined challenge ever mounted by the country's usually splintered opposition parties.

Few real issues are at stake in the campaign, apart from Gandhi himself, who has been dogged for half of his five-year term by allegations of corruption in high government circles.

The National Front, an opposition coalition spearheaded by Singh's Janata Dal party, has promised to provide clean government. Gandhi has told voters that the only party capable of governing is his Congress Party, whose most famous leaders were his grandfather and mother, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Gandhi swept into office on a wave of sympathy after his mother's assassination in 1984, winning 415 of Parliament's 543 seats. But this year, polls say he could lose the election or be forced into an unwieldy coalition with smaller parties.

Vigilance was heightened today in Fatehpur, where Singh had anticipated an easy victory over the Congress Party candidate, Hari Krishan Shastri, son of the late Congress Party Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri.

At least 4,000 police and paramilitary troops stood guard outside polling stations in the Fatehpur district, where the voter turnout was moderate in the cool morning hours.

Amethi is about 55 miles northwest of Fatehpur. Both districts are in the northern state of Uttar Pradesh, where voting was spread over two days in order to deploy maximum security.

Tension had already been high in Fatehpur because of Hindu-Moslem unrest that culminated in the slaying of a local Hindu fundamentalist leader last week.

Gandhi had been expected to win re-election easily to his Parliament seat from Amethi.

Speaker Tries To Convene Session To Pick Leader

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Parliament speaker tried to gather enough lawmakers today to convene a special session and elect a successor to President Rene Mouawad, who was killed by a bomb blast after just 17 days in office.

Speaker Husseini Husseini was awaiting the arrival of some of the Lebanese deputies living abroad to decide whether he has the necessary quorum to convene an election session for today, aides said.

A Middle East Airlines jetliner was waiting at Beirut International Airport to transport the bodies of Mouawad and seven bodyguards to the slain leader's hometown of Zgor-ta, in Syrian-policed north Lebanon. The funeral was set for Saturday.

Mouawad, 64, and 23 other people were killed in a roadside bomb explosion in Moslem west Beirut on Wednesday, 17 days after his election to the top post. The body has been lying in the morgue of the American University hospital.

Mouawad's election had ended 14 months of political vacuum after former president Amin Gemayel's term expired with Parliament unable to gather the necessary quorum for an election session.

The political turmoil triggered one of the country's bloodiest rounds of violence, pitting the Christian army troops Gen. Michel Aoun against Syrian and Lebanese Moslem forces. Arab League intervention halted the fighting on Sept. 22.

The Arab League later brokered a Christian-Moslem peace pact which Mouawad was supposed to implement to end 14 years of civil war. He was trying to form a government of national reconciliation when he was killed.

The pact was approved by Parli-gian Christians led by Aoun, rejected the plan because it does not provide a timetable for the withdrawal of Syrian troops.

He had called Mouawad a Syrian puppet for being elected as one step in the plan.

An aide to Husseini, a Shiite Moslem, said the Parliament speaker was waiting to see how many of the 19 deputies living abroad would respond to his call for their immediate return to Lebanon for an election session.

"The speaker is trying to convene Parliament to elect a new president before Mouawad's funeral" and "will announce the final date for the session once he is sure that a quorum is guaranteed," the aide said.

Four-three parliamentarians are in Lebanon, 39 of them already gathered in the eastern town of Chtaura, under Syrian control. The needed quorum for an election session is 48, or two-thirds of the surviving 72 deputies of the 99-seat house.

The location of the session has not been set for security considerations.

But the aide, who refused to be named, said the meeting would either be held at Park Hotel in Chtaura or in the Kleiat airbase, where Mouawad was elected on Nov. 5 after Aoun threatened to shell the Parliament building in Beirut.

Among the leading candidates, the aide said, are deputies Butros Harb, Fuad Naffaa and Pierre Helou.

All are Maronite Christians, as Lebanese presidents have been since independence from France in 1943. Under terms of an unwritten covenant, the president is Maronite, the prime minister Sunni Moslem and the Parliament speaker a Shiite Moslem.

Harb leads a powerful Maronite clan, Naffaa is a former foreign minister and Helou is a businessman. They have good relations with Lebanese Moslems and with Syria, the country's main power broker.

Political sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a tougher candidate such as former President Suleiman Franjeh would be more likely if there were plans to move against Aoun, who controls about 20,000 troops entrenched in east Beirut and the Christian heartland to the north.
