SPECIAL EVENT #2 - 60
Danforth lecture - Chancellor John T. Caldwell

Roulston: From the campus of East Carolina College in Greenville, North Carolina we bring you - SPECIAL EVENT!

MUSIC: ALMA MATER (1:05)

ROULSTON: For the past two years at East Carolina College the Danforth Project has brought to the college a series of lectures by outstanding educators, legislators and citizens in order to broaden the scope of understanding of people in the eastern part of North Carolina who consider East Carolina College to be their cultural home. On April 5th and 6th Chancellor John T. Caldwell of North Carolina State College delivered lectures on education in connection with "our risks and responsibilities in a world of revolutionary changes" - the theme of the Danforth Lectures for 1959-1960. Dr. George A. Douglas of the college social studies department and director of the Danforth Project at the college, and Dr. Robert Holt, Dean of the College, introduce Chancellor Caldwell to the audience who came to hear his second lecture, concerned with "The Elusiveness of Certainty." (to 2:10)

DOUGLAS: (to 2:40)

HOLT: (to 5:55)

CALDWELL: (to 27:45) applause to 17:55)

Roulston: You have heard Chancellor John T. Caldwell deliver the second of two lectures on the campus of East Carolina College in Greenville, North Carolina. Dr. Caldwell was one of the Danforth lecturers at the college. The next and last in the series of lectures brought to the campus by the Danforth Project will be delivered by Dr. Frank Graham, consultant to the United Nations and a former president of the Greater University of North Carolina. You are invited to hear Dr. Graham on April 25th at 7:30 in the evening in Austin Auditorium on the college campus. For further information about special events at East Carolina College, please write to Campus Radio, East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina. (to 28:45)
