FUND TO HELP COLLEGE GIRLS

Thirteen Tar Heel Students to Get Educational Loans

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Sept. 14—Mrs. Estelle T. Smith, district home agent at State College has announced that 13 North Carolina girls attending college this year will receive aid from the Jane S. McKimmon educational loan fund.

This aid will be extended to five girls who received loans last year and who are continuing their college work. Eight new girls have been granted loans, Mrs. Smith said.
The fund was established in 1927, she said, and since that time 31 girls in all have been beneficiaries.

Those who get the help are required to major in home economics but may attend any A-grade college of their choice.
Most of the girls who have graduated have gone into home economics teaching, and six of them, after getting experience as teachers, have become home demonstration agents for the State College Extension Service.

The fund, established in honor of the work of Dr. McKimmon has done with the rural women of North Carolina, is now valued at $1,239.71. Last year, home demonstration clubs in 70 counties contributed a total of $1,000.50 to the fund, and other gifts amounted to $1,069.90.

The fund is administered by representatives of the North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs and of the Home Agents Association.

Mrs. O. L. Ray, of Route 1, Raleigh is chairman of the loan fund committee.

forces, enrollees have performed heroic service in saving motorists, ranchers and livestock caught by snow storms in the west. They have participated in searches for lost airliners. In numerous cases they have given vitally important first aid and other help to motorists after accidents.
The aid given during the disastrous Mississippi-Ohio floods of January and February, 1937 marked the high point of all CCC emergency activities. At the height of that emergency, more than 22,000 enrollees, hundreds of reserve officers and technical personnel, and in excess of 2,000 trucks were engaged in relief, rescue and rehabilitation work under the supervision of the American Red Cross.

The Modern Minute Man

In a word, the corps, thanks to the wide distribution of its 1,500 camps, its well-trained organization, its strategically located supplies of foodstuffs, clothing and working tools and its will to serve, has become a highly important cog in the nation's emergency relief and rehabilitation machinery.
Indicative of the importance of the humanitarian activities of the corps are official figures disclosing that to date enrollees have expended more than 5,000,000 man-days on emergency activities such as floods, hurricanes, forest fires or accidents. Each year the 300,000 men of the corps spent more than a million man-days combating floods and forest fires, conducting rescue, relief and rehabilitation work, searching for lost children and answering other calls for aid.

The corps rendered valiant service during and after the Mississippi and Louisiana tornadoes in 1935; the severe eastern floods in 1935 and 1936; the Mississippi-Ohio river valley floods of 1937; the New London, Texas, school explosion in 1937 and the wreck of the Hindenburg the same year. Led by reserve officers and members of the camp supervisory expended on flood activities by the corps.

In its first five years, the corps spent more than 50,000 man-days searching for missing persons. On one occasion an 8-year-old girl became lost while picking huckleberries. Her father, assisted by the other berry pickers, searched for her for two hours and then called the CCC camp at Ukiah, Ore., to ask for help. Twenty-five enrollees went to the rescue. They found the little girl alive at the foot of a mountain some six miles from where she became lost.
The CCC camps in the vicinity of Fort Douglas, Utah, rescued 100 persons, cleared more than 1,100 miles of roads and saved the lives of 200,000 head of livestock during severe snow storms in the winter of 1936-37.

The articles will be called for. If any person has furnishings he would like to lend, instead of making a permanent donation, donation is asked to call Hazel the property will be labeled and returned on demand.

Hope was expressed that other troops will be organized, which can use and enjoy the Scout home.

Girl Scout Troop Asks For Donation

Girl Scouts of Troop 1 are planning to furnish quarters, which have been provided by the Greenville Rotary club. The club has donated the second floor of the building to provide space for games, a library, craft work and exhibits.
It was explained that since this is the only Girl Scout troop in the city, members of the troop have been compelled to solicit contributions. A Scout official said the group would be glad to have book shelves, book stands, game tables, and craft work. It is being hoped that a suitable table for ping pong will be contributed.

Other articles on the needed list are paint, paint brushes, stools, pictures, magazines, rugs, baskets, dishes and pans. The Scouts would also like to be on the receiving end of any materials which could be used after alterations for furnishing the Scout room or making hand-craft articles.
Any person interested in helping the girls and wishing to make any Brown Madry at 221-W after 6 o'clock.

LEISURE CAMP TAKING SHAPE

Second Recreational Zone Located In State Forest

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Sept. 14—A second recreational group camp within the large Sandhills State Forest and Game Refuge, the Millstone Creek camp, is being rapidly completed and will be ready for use next spring and summer. State Forester J. S. Holmes has just advised Director R. Bruce Etheridge of the Department of Conservation and Development.

This new camp, as well as the Indian Camp recreational area, was recently inspected by Holmes and two representatives of the planning section of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics in Washington, which is doing the development work within the area.

The Indian Camp has already been turned over to the Conservation Department for administration under a temporary lease and the Millstone Creek camp is expected to be turned over to it as soon as completed.

The cabins in this new group will be constructed in two groups, at the suggestion of Thomas W. Morse, state parks supervisor, so that one group may be occupied by boys and the other by girls. The lake at this new camp has been completed and a bathing beach will be built near to the camp. The entire project will be completed and fully equipped before it is turned over to the state for maintenance and administration, Holmes said.

Washington — Initiation of the Civilian Conservation Corps program has provided the nation with a brand new and extremely useful force for saving life and property in emergencies, such as floods, forest fires, hurricanes, severe storms and accidents.

Activities of this character, with the exception of forest fire fighting, were not included in the original program of work activities for the corps. However, the wide distribution of the CCC camps and the facility with which enrollee units could be mobilized for quick action made it inevitable that the CCC would be called upon for aid whenever communities adjacent to CCC camps urgently needed

MRS. HARRIETT BEATTY

This very petite, very pretty, very blonde wife of the famous Clyde, presents an act of her own creation—only one of its kind in the world—three natural jungle enemies, a lion, a tiger and an elephant, all working smoothly together in the big steel arena.

Famous Robbins Circus Showing Here Thursday

All wild animals fear fire, but a wisp of a woman, Harriett Beatty, has conquered the ferociousness of a lion and tiger and has taught them to jump through a hoop of flame.

Mrs. Beatty, the wife of Clyde Beatty, the greatest wild animal trainer of all time, has quickly won for herself recognition as the world's outstanding woman wild animal trainer. Both she and her fearless husband are featured by the famous Robbins circus, which will exhibit in Greenville afternoon and night next Tuesday, Sept. 20, at the old Fair grounds.

In the same great circular all-steel arena in which Clyde Beatty presents forty-three lions and tigers at one time, Harriett Beatty presents a huge Siamese elephant, a vicious Bengal tiger and a treacherous black-maned Nubian lion—three of nature's most deadly enemies. It is the only act of the kind in the world.

The unprecedented sight of these three ferocious enemies being mastered by a slightly built woman brings gasps of surprise daily from thousands of circus fans. The lion and the tiger, riding in a howdah on the elephant's back, is a presentation never before exhibited to circus audiences anywhere in the world.

Mrs. R. W. King and little Virginia King Perkins returned Tuesday from Danbury, Conn. Miss Jean Ann King accompanied them home for a visit.

Miss Hazel McGowan of Washington, D. C. is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cook on Pitt street.

Mrs. Beatty joined the circus as an aerialist, but the lure of the jungle soon turned her to training wild beasts. Clyde gave of his vast store of knowledge until Harriett achieved the peak, far ahead of all other women wild animal trainers.

The two thrilling animal displays are but two from among the scores and scores of spectacular displays featured by the famous Robbins circus this year. They include the world famous Behee Troupe of death-defying stars on the high trapeze; the Moreen Family, from the Argentine spring-board acrobats; and the world famous Hoot Gibson, cowboy movie star, and his vast assemblage of champion cowboys, cowgirls, and Rough Riders of the world.

All will be seen in the colorful street parade show day morning at 11 a. m., with bands, callioles, clowns, spangleland folk, and all else one would expect to see in a real, old fashioned circus parade will be seen in the colorful procession.

For the convenience of those wishing to purchase general admission and reserved seat tickets before going to the show grounds, a downtown ticket office will be open at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning at Hill Home's Drug store where tickets can be purchased at same prices as at grounds.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Sept. 14.—Your correspondent yesterday met for the first time Dr. H. Bernard, one-time representative from the Folger-ruled balliwick of Surry.

The fat, jovial M. D. is a staunch, sturdy Republican so it can be understood that his House service was before the days of the Folger ascendancy.

Meeting the doctor was quite a treat—he's one of those chaps who tells a good story with the best of them—though many of the yarns cannot be committed to type by reason of their—shall we say, piquancy or spice.

Dr. Bernard was in Raleigh with Charlie Jonas, G.O.P. senatorial candidate, and is doing everything possible to help out the Lincoln county former Congressman.

He is rather gleeful at the in-party fighting in Democratic ranks and gets a particular joy out of the shouts of Anti-New Dealers that Roosevelt and his followers are radical.

"I've been called a 'Damned Radical' all my life. I'm sick and tired of it and it does me good to hear them hollering it at somebody else," he chuckled.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT

Approximately 13,000 persons, enough to populate a small city, who would otherwise have died in auto accidents during 1938, will probably live to welcome the New Year next January thanks, largely, to the tireless efforts of such agencies as the National Institute for Traffic Safety, The National Safety Council, The Automotive Safety Foundation, thousands of newspaper editors, and the casualty insurance industry.

The men and women who are directly responsible for saving these 13,000 human lives will receive little or no recognition for their tireless services. Their only solace will be found in dry statistics. They will not even receive the gratitude they so justly deserve from those very lives they have saved, because providence never labels its victims in advance.

In the first six months of 1938, highway fatalities decreased 22 per cent compared to 1937. And as the New York Times has observed: "Such progress is especially cheering in view of the enormity of the problem." The United States has what has been described as "the most enormous transportation system in the world, with 3,000,000 miles of rights of way, 30,000,000 pieces of rolling stock and an average of 80,000,000 passengers daily."

There are two things that you can and should do to promote safety on our highways. Observe every safety precaution yourself and encourage others to do the same. Incidentally, next January if you are fortunate enough to be among those present, you might send up a silent prayer of thanks to the nation's traffic safety workers—you just possibly are one of the lucky thirteen thousand. — (Industrial News Review).

Seriously, Dr. Bernard declared that members of his profession are, taken as a whole, overwhelmingly Anti-New Deal. This he attributes quite largely to the proposal he said Roosevelt sponsors for socialized end state medical aid.

"We doctors are quite naturally against state medicine. We do not want private initiative taken out of the profession."

As for the Folgers, he left no doubt of his position.

"Any time you want to write anything, just say whatever bad you can about the 'dynasty' and quote me as saying it," he said.

The Department of Conservation and Development continues to turn out fish stories from all sections.

From Canton comes the report that brook trout, six inches and over are being planted in Pigeon river by the Pisgah Ranger Service.

Approximately 65,000 rainbow and brook trout are to go into the Mills river in the section.

Morehead reports the capture of the second sailfish ever landed in that sector last week—caught by Russell D. Britt of Ayden.

All the big fish didn't get away from Chief John D. Poole of the Salisbury police department on a recent trip to Hatteras. With a group of friends he snagged a haul of amberjacks, a sweet tasting fish usually found in the Gulf of Mexico. They are seldom caught in North Carolina waters. The chief pulled the "jacks" from the Gulf Stream, the largest weighing forty pounds.

Postmaster L. T. Yaskell of Southport, recently broke all records for that section, landing an 8-pound freshwater bass from Pump Pond. Some of the best big mouth bass fishing in the state seems to be available in that section.

RESULT OF SPECIAL BOND ELECTION

At a special bond election held September 12, 1938, 3,966 voters were registered and qualified to vote. 444 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $206,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of constructing extensions to the existing water and light system of the Town, and a tax for said bonds, and 143 votes were cast against said ordinance, and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

444 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $60,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of erecting and equipping a municipal building for a fire house and acquiring a site therefor, and a tax for said bonds, and 157 votes were cast against said ordinance, and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

396 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $80,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of erecting and equipping a municipal building to provide a court room, jail and offices for various Town departments and acquiring a site therefor, and a tax for said bonds, and 176 votes were cast against said ordinance, and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

378 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $22,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of erecting and equipping municipal buildings for the storage, repairing and maintenance of municipal vehicles and other municipal equipment and acquiring a site or sites therefor, and a tax for said bonds, and 194 votes were cast against said ordinance and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

THE UNSHORN TRUTH

The Characters Hugo Stern, handsome author, living on the French Riviera. Archie Lumsden, mystic, Hugo's friend. René Geiss, head of a murder conspiracy.

Yesterday I'm suspected of Yenner's murder.

Chapter 33 The Unshorn Truth

TWICE during Wednesday I was haled again to the death-chamber and put through my paces, but by now I was wary. I had told my story, and was sticking to it.

Three times the next day I made the trip to the police station, sat for half an hour in a small, stuffy room, and submitted to a quick-fire battery of questions from a succession of plain-clothes men.

Dusk was falling as the car deposited me at the gates of the Chateau for the third time, and I was brain- and body-weary. The hall was empty and shadowed, but as I turned towards the lounge, a movement behind the office counter halted me, and I saw the chasseur eyeing me from behind it, his eyes pale, luminous slits in the gloom.

At sight of him all the repressed irritation, the nerve strain of the last two days, suddenly came to a head. The thought of the brutal, bestial crime he had committed cracked my self-control. I took a stride across to the counter and saw him flinch at my approach.

"You here?" I said, in no very gentle voice. "I thought you'd have cleared out long ago. Surely you left Prague a trifle more hurriedly after the opera-house shooting?"

I could have bitten out my tongue next minute, but the mischief was done. He sprang back, his hand flew to his trouser-pocket, and next instant I found myself staring into the muzzle of an ugly-looking gun.

"Put it down!" I said sharply, but even as I spoke, a tall, angular whirlwind swept out from the office beside us. It was the house-keeper, her round, puckered face contorted with rage. "Are you mad?" she said sharply to the chasseur. "Put that thing away!" And as he obeyed sulkily, she swung round on me.

"This is too much!" she said furiously. "How dare you threaten my servants? I will not have it, do you hear? You, a criminal, a suspected murderer! I shall report you to the police."

"Report away, woman," I advised her. "It may be the last chance you have!" and I turned on my heel and stalked away.

I could have kicked myself for my stupidity, but I was too tired to do it. Body and mind alike were exhausted, and the one thing I craved for was food and bed. But as I turned to mount the stairs I noticed in the angle of the balustrade, a set of bookshelves, crammed with aged and tattered volumes.

A curtain was hanging behind them, concealing, I imagined, some wall cupboard, and I gave in to idle tude to it.

It was no cupboard, but a small alcove, backed with a white-washed door on which a notice was roughly tacked, and as I read it, every atom of fatigue dropped from me. It ran: "THE INKKEEPERS OF FRANCE CLUB DES BANS CLUBS"

It might be the merest coincidence, for, after all, Hugo had said that there was a highly respectable club of that name but I printed up the stairs, two at a time, and rang for Amédée.

"Listen, friend," I said, when he appeared on the door. "That alcove behind the curtain in the lower hall—where does it lead?"

"Monsieur," he said, "it leads, you believe, to the cellars, but these many years the door has not been opened."

"What cellars?" I cut in sharply. "Under the house?" But he shook his head.

"Under the terrace. There is another door in the lower garden out that, too, has never been opened to my knowledge."

I was immensely elated for it seemed that, after weary hours of action, I had stumbled on something big—the second meeting-place of that ill-omened club.

Confession ONCE again that night, I was taken to the police station. There were six men waiting for me in the stuffy little upper room, and I noted that there was no sign of the huge commissaire or Fleuriot. The fellow in charge motioned me to sit down opposite him at a big desk on which were displayed a water-carafe and glass, a medicine-bottle, and a couple of loof-handles.

With a sinking heart, I guessed what was before me, and guessed only too well. For the next hour and a half I sat there, while first one, then another, then a third took it in turn to question me, whispering, shouting, cajoling, accusing. I sat there, my brain dizzy and reeling, in that small, stifling place, with the unshaded lamp on the table glaring straight in my face.

At last the climax came. All six got to their feet, standing in a circle looking down at me, like a ring of accusing fates. Their leader pointed to the table, on which lay a sheet of white paper, a pen, and an ink-well. "In one hour," said he, "we shall return to find your confession written there!" and one by one, silently and inexorably, they filed from the room.

I sat there holding my head, conscious only that the spinning world was slowly steadying on its axis, and little by little I came to the realization that I was alone in an empty room, with the paper spread invitingly before me, and the pen lying ready to my hand.

For a moment a mad impulse seized me to give without reflection of another sort: "I, René Geiss, do hereby confess that I instigated the killing of Eve Monet; that I myself shot down in cold blood the American O'Donnell; that I personally instructed the chasseur to kill Mr. Venner."

I picked up the pen, dipped it in the ink, and drew a flourish on the paper. It was a queer-looking flourish, uncommonly like the horn of a goat, and almost without realizing that I was doing it I added a second line and then another and yet another; and slowly, as I drew, found something growing under my inexperienced fingers.

New Bern Needs Only One More Triumph To Cop Title in the Coastal Plain Loop

COASTAL PLAIN LEAGUE (Championship Series)

W. L. Pct. New Bern 3 0 1.000 Snow Hill 0 3 .000

TODAY'S GAME At Snow Hill, 3:30 o'clock.

New Bern, Sept. 14.—New Bern yesterday scored its seventh consecutive win in the Coastal Plain playoffs by turning back Snow Hill, 5-3, here. It was the third win over the Billies in the best-of-seven finals. The Bears swept the semi-final program over Kinston's Eagles.

Doc Smith's Bears left their slugging clothes behind yesterday, but they made seven hits talk to gain their triumph.

Durden Archer whitewashed the Billies until a three-run rally in the eighth inning.

The Bears started to victory by scoring twice in the second. Wayne Harper opened the inning with a long single to right. He stole second and went to third when Bistrot overthrew second. Norwood walked and stolen second. Archer then singled to score Harper, and Norwood came home on the play when Pitcher Lou Cicereale cut off the throw-in and tried to catch Archer off first.

The Bears clinched the win with a brace of runs in the third. Successive doubles by Barnes and Anderson netted one tally. Anderson stole third, and came in on Wayne Harper's outfield fly.

Tony Maisano's single started the Billies' rally in the eighth. Joyner, doubled, sent Maisano to third. Soufas' single brought in Maisano, and Joyner tallied when in Maisano, and Joyner tallied when to second on the play, advancing to third on Bistrot's single, and scored on Cicereale's infield out.

Harry Soufas of Snow Hill had a perfect day at bat, with three singles. Archer with two for three was the Bears' hitmaker.
