CAROLINA MOTOR CLUB BEGINS SEVENTEENTH YEAR

With an imposing list of accomplishments in both general and direct service fields, particularly in legislative and safety work the past 16 years, the Carolina Motor Club today begins its 17th year of service to car owners of North and South Carolina with a far reaching program, according to Mrs. N. C. Brooks, manager of the Greenville office. Mrs. Brooks has been with the Carolina Motor Club six of its 17 years.

The club was organized in Greenboro, Sept. 15, 1922, by a group of outstanding Carolinians and chartered as a non-profit, non-political, non-sectarian organization. Coleman W. Roberts, president of the club, has been the executive officer since the club's inception. Directors of the club serve without remuneration and several have been members of the board since 1922. In May, 1933, general headquarters were moved to Charlotte in order to be nearer the center of the Carolinas. The Carolina Motor Club, the largest American Automobile Association in the southeast and one of the largest in the nation, is the only A.A.A. club with a territory comprising the two states.

Legislative and safety activities of especial interest to motorists which were sponsored and supported by the Club include: Reduction in license plates, state driver's license, certificate of title law, standard hand signals, safety responsibility of city driver's license, uniform motor vehicle laws, reduction in theft insurance rate, reduction in liability insurance rate, repeal of N. C. rail-way stop law, elimination of mail-order arrests and speed traps, removal of federal excise, gasoline and oil taxes, quarterly reduction of license plate fees, standstill diversion of highway funds, opposed fee system for law enforcement officers, defeated $5 city license plate proposal, rear view mirrors for all vehicles, reasonable speed laws, Dyer anti-theft act, Federal Aid highway act, safety glass in all vehicles, establishment of state parks, $250,000 advertising campaign for North Carolina, markers for historic points and sites, reflectors on trucks and buses.

Direct services rendered Carolina Motor Club members since 1922 include: 1,458 cars recovered out of 1,511 stolen, a total of 97 per cent; thieves have been sentenced to an aggregate of 299 years; $164,592.04 paid in 1,464 claims under personal injury automobile accident insurance policy has been available 81 members have been killed outright. Bail bonds totalling $57,860 were posted by 268 members, club garages have answered 118,165 emergency road service calls, traveling a distance equal to about 20 trips around the earth; more than 1,976,334 maps, tour books and directories have been utilized in furnishing definite routings to 824,942 members. Nearly 1,000 school safety patrols have been organized, 10,000 patrolmen equipped over 700,000 pieces of safety literature distributed, and more than 1,000,000 addressed on safety. In North Carolina 4,932,871 license plates have been distributed.

Drivers Are Unhurt In Traffic Accident
Mrs. O. E. Brothers and Mrs. Jane R. Worsley were involved in a minor automobile collision on Dickinson avenue yesterday afternoon.

Only slight damage was done to the automobiles and neither of the drivers was injured. Motorcycle Officer H. E. Wooten investigated.

ECTC Eleven Hopefuls Are All Set For Practice

Alexander Designates Monday as Start-ing Date

With a grid contest on tap with Belmont Abbey College, October 1, Coach J. D. Alexander of East Carolina Teachers College Monday morning will begin the task of "whipping into shape" upward of 20 aspirants expected to be on hand for practice.

Experienced left-overs from last season are looking forward to getting into their football garments again. But the experienced fellows are not the only players anxious for action. There are newcomers who will be making an effort to obtain a laying berth on the first string.

Although some positions will have to be strengthened, Coach Alexander is expecting the competition to cause the players to try even harder to make a fine showing. By this route, he will be able to determine earlier, the playing technique of certain hopefuls.

Reviewing the backfield, one finds a certain amount of power prevailing. Lex Ridenhour, half-back Bill Shelton, the other half; Bill Dudash, quarterback, and Nello Perney, full back, will be on the firing line during the practice period and probably after the season begins. One of the prettiest plays in last year's football season was made possible by Bill Shelton. He took the ball on the five-yard line on the kick-off and trotted 95 yards for a touchdown.

Experience last year will likely enable Joe Hatem and Earl Smith to garner berths in the line. Smith is more experienced than Hatem, small and light, but he's a natural born scrapper. He's the kind of player that clicks with the coach when the "chopping" time comes. Irrespective of his early entrance in college football, Hatem was a varsity last season, and was envied by a number of players on opposing teams.

Mewin Frizzelle, who tips the scales at 155 pounds, is out for a guard position. He is exceedingly anxious to play football and will

SIX-MAN TEAM FOR FOOTBALL

Alexander and Gilbert of ECTC Advance Movement

J. D. Alexander, athletic director of East Carolina Teachers College, and Gordon B. Gilbert, assistant athletic director, will journey to Windsor tonight to hold a six-man football clinic and to organize a six-man football league.

A trip to Raleigh will be made tomorrow night, where they will attend another six-man football clinic and organize another six-man football league. The athletic directors have lantern slides and other material to familiarize the persons in Windsor and Raleigh with the new phase of football.

One of the decided advantages of six-man football is exhibited in the fact that a player has to be unusually swift and alert in order to play it. Not only does it prove to be an advantage on the six-man team, but it gives him an edge over a player when he is a member of a football squad composed of eleven men.

Six-man football is exceedingly young in North Carolina. Coaches in high schools and other pre-college educational institutions have been making a study of the modernistic sport. If six-man football is put into effect to any great extent, a certain possibility exists of greatly improving future college football teams.

New Bern Bears Win '38 Coastal Plain Loop Crown

Doc Smith's Boys Finish Title Business by Taking 4th Straight From Snow Hill

Snow Hill, Sept. 15.—New Bern won the Coastal Plain League championship by defeating Snow Hill 10-5, here Wednesday.

The Bears' victory climaxed an eight-game winning streak for the play-off series, the champs having swept the best four-out-of-seven semi-finals from Kinston and repeated the performance against the Billies in the finals. New Bern finished its regular league schedule in second place, two games behind Tarboro.

Doc Smith's club has two players to thank for yesterday's triumph—Lester Burge and Leonard (Bull Pen) Berry. Burge sparked the Bruin attack by batting in five runs with two homers. Berry, called on to relieve Doug Hautz in the fourth inning, did a nifty job—he protected New Bern's 3-run lead with a 3-hit performance.

Snow Hill was out front only once—in the second inning, 2 to 1. Joyner walked, and Soufas singled. Bistoff's double scored Joyner, and Rabb's centerfield fly tallied Soufas.

New Bern came back with three runs in the third and put the game on ice with a five-run fourth. Roth opened the fourth by hitting a homer over the right-field fence. Hautz walked and Mack doubled. Barnes' fly to right field scored Hautz. Mack stole third and came home when Bistoff threw wild on the play. Anderson walked and Burge hit a homer over the right-field barrier.

The Billies drove Hautz to cover in the home half of this inning. Rabb walked but was forced at second on Longest's infield out. Mewborn and Soufas walked and Ciceralo's single to deep center scored Mewborn and Stewart. That was all for Hautz. Berry then walked Maisano, but the next two batters fled out to end the inning. Cecil Longest, hero of three of the Billies' semifinal victories over Tarboro, pitched the route today. He yielded nine hits and issued

IF YOU LIVED ON THE CEILING, circulated heat alone would be all right...

Here's where heat goes! A circulating heater sends hot air to the ceiling, (see dotted lines) and it also helps warm adjoining rooms. The Superfex Heat-Director does this, too, but its Comfort-Controls also send warm, radiant heat into the "living zone" (see arrows). This radiant heat is like the heat from the sun, and can be directed down to the floor or straight into room.

BUT only the SUPERFEX oil heater directs heat to the "living zone" too...ends cold drafty floors...provides both circulated and radiant heat!

Now you don't have to put up with drudgery, ashes and soot. You can eliminate fuel odors and stoking...cold, drafty floors and chilly mornings. For the Superfex Heat-Director brings the finest type of oil heat to homes without central heating.

It burns a wide variety of inexpensive fuel oils, available everywhere. It operates hour after hour without any attention...gives continuous cozy warmth overnight.

You regulate the heat exactly to suit you by merely turning a dial! It costs so little, with easy payment plans, to enjoy the comfort and convenience of this finest of all heaters. Have one this winter in your home! There are sizes and prices to fill any heating demand...in beautiful porcelain enamel finishes. There are many beautiful new Superfex Radiant Heaters, also. probably display plenty of punch when practice begins.

One of the weak spots on the college's squad is at the center position. Peax Coet, who has earned in fine performances at this position in the past, has been lost through graduation. "Rock" Venters, who has never been known to go on a diet, may be shifted to center. "Big Bertha," as Rock is known to some grid spectators, played guard last season. If Rock can gather enough momentum there's no stopping him.

Incidentally, Venters has some competition at center. Bob James of Bethel is being eyed for the center position. James is inexperienced, and this may hinder his hopes, but he's anxious to play and there's no telling what the outcome will be.

Past experience will help the player gain a position. However, when the time comes to make selections for the first-stringers, the showing the newcomers have made during practice, will keep them from being ignored. The material which will show up for practice Monday looks good.

As a matter of reiteration, here's the schedule for the Pirates during the football season:

Oct. 1, Belmont Abbey College; here; Oct. 8, Campbell College, here; Oct. 15, open; Oct. 22, West Carolina Teachers College, Cullowhee; Oct. 29, High Point College, High Point, Nov. 5, Guilford College, Guilford; Nov. 11, William and Mary Norfolk Division, Norfolk; Nov. 19, Appalachian State Teachers, here, and Nov. 26 United States Naval Base.

As was hoped hereabouts, and as was expected, the President's "purge" in Georgia likewise backfired when his chosen candidate ran a poor third in yesterday's senatorial primary and Senator Walter George, described by President Roosevelt as "thinking in the past," led in the three-cornered race. Georgia voters, like those in Texas, South Carolina, Maryland and other states, let it be known that they desired to select their own national representatives without presidential interference.

The building program at the new Pitt County Fairgrounds is moving along rapidly and everything will be in readiness long before the opening date of the fair October 17. The Farmville and Pitt County Posts of the American Legion, fair sponsors, are making every effort to put on a good fair in this county, and they deserve the support of the people of the county. The more individuals who put on exhibits at the fair and the more merchants and citizens who support the fair, the better the fair will be. We urge our Pitt County people to give the fair their support.

SHORT SHOTS
By HENRY AVERILL

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Sept. 15.—Announcement by State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson this week that bonds which the State's sinking fund had bought for $236,000 had been sold for $263,578.70 was received with comparative calm in practically all circles here, despite the fact that this meant a nice fat profit to North Carolina of $25,578.70.

Reason for the relative lack of interest lies in the fact that the happening is getting to be something of a habit.

The Treasurer estimates that he annually sells about three-quarters of a million dollars worth of bonds from the sinking fund, on which the net profit will run something like seventy-five thousand a year.

That's because bonds are selling pretty well now and because North Carolina and its subdivisions enjoy pretty good credit ratings in the financial world.

But there was a time when it seemed the Sinking Fund might be completely out of luck on some of its investments. For example the batch just sold contained some Gastonia school bonds, some Goldsboro public improvements, some Raleigh township obligations, some McDowell county highway bonds, some Henderson street bonds, some Moore county school funding bonds, and some Pitt county road bonds. All were purchased at par (that's the Sinking Fund's habit—but at par) and every single one of them has seen periods in which it merged well below par.

There was, accordingly, nothing for the Sinking Fund guardians to do except sit steady in the boat and hope to goodness that some time the market would pick up and the bonds be worth what was paid for them.

And it came to pass, as witness this week's sale. At one stage, the Gastonia bonds in particular, looked exceedingly bilious, but refunding operations did a lot of good.

The State-Federal Crop Reporting Service estimates this year's apple crop in North Carolina at less than half of the 1937 yield—2,173,000 bushels to the 4,505,000 bushels of 1937. This includes all types of apples.

The commercial crop isn't quite so much off from 1937, though of this kind the 1938 estimate is 500,000 bushels against 1937's 875,000.

Estimated grape production is also off from 1937, but still considerably higher than the 1927-36 average, according to the service report. Last year North Carolina produced 1,100 tons of grapes. This year's crop is estimated at 6,900 tons, but the ten-year period average is only 5,654 tons.

North Carolina's Hospitality Committee has issued another of its mimeographed publications citing numerous active county chairmen and carrying numerous "Timely Tips" and the like. The committee reports it hears "Street cleanliness in our cities is nothing compared to that found in the New England states." It urges steps to remedy this condition.

RESULT OF SPECIAL BOND ELECTION

At a special bond election held September 12, 1938, 3,966 voters were registered and qualified to vote.

444 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $206,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of constructing extensions to the existing water and light system of the Town, and a tax for said bonds, and 143 votes were cast against said ordinance, and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

445 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $6,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of installing a fire alarm system in said Town, and a tax for said bonds, and 138 votes were cast against said ordinance, and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

429 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $29,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of erecting and equipping a municipal building for a fire house and acquiring a site therefor, and a tax for said bonds, and 157 votes were cast against said ordinance, and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

396 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $80,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of erecting and equipping a municipal building to provide a court room, jail and offices for various Town departments and acquiring a site therefor, and a tax for said bonds, and 176 votes were cast against said ordinance, and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

378 votes were cast for the ordinance authorizing not exceeding $22,000 bonds of the Town of Greenville for paying a portion of the cost of erecting and equipping municipal buildings for the storage, repairing and maintenance of municipal vehicles and other municipal equipment and acquiring a site or sites therefor, and a tax for said bonds, and 194 votes were cast against said ordinance and said ordinance was thereby approved and is in force and effect.

This statement is given by order of the Board of Aldermen this 13th day of September, 1938.

THE balance gives an idea of how Germany's armaments would outweigh Czechoslovakia's if worse came to worse. But theirs probably would not be the only ones in the balance. Not indicated are armaments of such nations as Poland, Hungary, Rumania and Yugoslavia, all of which might be affected, nor economic factors, which often prove decisive in war. THE CLOUDED MOON

By MAX SALTmarsh

The Characters
Hugo Stern, handsome author, living on the French Riviera.
Arehie Lumsden, myself, his friend.
René Geiss, head of a murder conspiracy.

Yesterday: The judge acquits me of complicity in the crimes, and learns that I suspect Geiss. Fleuriot asks to talk to me.

Chapter 34
Mr. Noah More

FLEURIOT was waiting for me outside the police station in his small, battered Renault.

"May I return to the chalet," I asked him, "after I pick up my things at the hotel?"

"Assuredly," said he politely. "Although, in view of the valuable evidence you can give, I trust you are not thinking of leaving Cannes for the present?"

"Not until this business is finally cleared up," I assured him.

"Monsieur Lumsden, that last remark of yours appears to argue a special interest in the case—an interest that I cannot feel to be wholly impersonal."

"Perhaps you're right," I agreed reluctantly.

"You do not wish, perhaps, to discuss your reasons for such an interest? Well, I will respect your reticence. I will ask no questions—save this one, and here I speak not as a police official but as man to man. Monsieur Lumsden, ignoring the two earlier crimes and considering only this last one—if you were in my position, knowing what I know and nothing more—whom would you suspect of the murder of Monsieur Venner?"

"I think," I said slowly, "that I'd keep a pretty close eye on the chasseur."

He drew a deep breath. "I fancy," he commented dryly, "that the sooner we arrive at the Chateau la Vague, the better."

It was a bare minute later that we pulled up at the gates, but though it was not yet nine o'clock, the big house was completely dark. The man from Marseille strode to the office counter and rang the bell, and a moment later the housekeeper appeared.

"The chasseur mademoiselle," Fleuriot said abruptly. "Have the goodness to call him. I wish for a word with him."

She started at that. "I am sorry, but he is not here. With the guests gone, there was no more work for him. I paid him his wage and he left this evening."

"You let him go?" he echoed. "And where to, may one ask? What address did he leave with you?"

She shrugged expressively. "He left no address. Why should he, and why should I ask for one? He had only been here a day and the judge's instruction had already questioned him. He, and she flashed a vicious glance at me, "he was not suspect!"

"So he was not suspect?" Fleuriot snarled back at her. "That is enchanting! And you, one suspect either?" He swung round on me. "Monsieur Lumsden, I had intended to conduct you to the chalet, but I regret that is now impossible. I have too much to attend to."

"Don't worry about me," I told him. "I'll pack my bag and walk!" I did as I had said, but though it was a short enough way and the bag was light, I was uncommonly glad to see the chalet gates loom up beside me in the dusk. There was a family party assembled on the terrace, Ada and Dunning sitting side by side under the cork tree, and Hugo leaning over the balustrade.

The big dog, Lulu, lay at his feet, but at sight of me he rose and came across the terrace to meet me, wagging his tail, and as he did so Hugo hailed me with a joyful shout. Next minute they were all around me, welcoming, questioning, but after one look at me, Hugo caught me by the arm and dragged me to my room.

"It's bed for you, my lad," said he grimly, and shortly I was reclining comfortably on my narrow couch, a supper tray on my knees with Hugo and Dunning sitting on either side, and Ada, wide-eyed and breathless, leaning by the window while I told my story between mouthfuls.

The Belgian Yacht
"I'M STILL waiting to hear what's happened to both of you," I ended.

Hugo signed. "Nothing from my end," said he.

"I haven't broken such a lot of ice either," said Dunning. "Beyond seeing that our three love birds, Geiss, Stahl and Rakovsky haven't been up to any tricks. I've done nothing. Stahl has spent his time drinking on the Carlton terrace; Rakovsky hasn't stirred a foot outside his villa garden; and Geiss this morning moved over bag and baggage to join him. Apart from your valuable efforts any credit for recent sleuthing goes to our young friend Jean Francois First and foremost, he has located the yacht."

I exclaimed at that. "The deuce he has!" and he nodded solemnly. "She arrived in the harbor late last night, a seagoing boat by name the Rendezvous, sailing under the Belgian flag and carrying a crew of six, and her owner, strangely enough, is the harpy ma'ner Baron Stahl. But the boy did more than locate her. He discovered that she was short of a cabin steward, and he got himself signed on the job. The engineer has orders to keep stern up, and the la' tells me the staterooms are all ready for occupation and there are sufficient victuals for a longish voyage."

I whistled. "Planning a getaway, in case things go wrong?" I suggested, and he nodded.

"Precisely," said he, "but with Jean-Francois aboard, we shall get full and due warning. The boy has maintained contact with his friends at Geiss's—or rather did until last night."

He broke off to chuckle. "What happened was partly my fault," he confessed, "I sent a man along to make a few inquiries at the villa. My man represented himself to be a traveling salesman for sewing-machines, but unluckily at one period in his career he had been an agent of the Sûreté, and the precious pair recognized him on their tracks again, and last night they folded their tents like the Arabs and silently stole away, so that our dear friend René is now without a domestic staff, which is, I take it, why he has shifted himself across the frontier."

"A pity," I said.

"A pity in one way," he agreed, "but in another not without its brighter side, for the villa is now untenanted, and we'll never succeed in pinning the gull on Mr. René Geiss until we've located the gun with which he shot poor Pat."

As they were leaving, Hugo said "Stay where you are until you've rested. Tomorrow I'm going to try and find that Amourie, whatever it may be."

Ride In A Bus
ALL next day I followed Hugo's advice and dozed comfortably at suppertime, Hugo telephoned. "No one seems to have heard of Amourie," he said, "and I've been over the coast with a fine tooth comb. If you take a bus down at nine thirty, I'll meet you for a drink at that big café in the Allées de la Liberté."

At ten minute past nine I was on the corner of the road halting a passing bus. It was packed to the brim. I climbed the little step wedged myself inside, and felt the door graze my back as it shut to. Next minute we were off again on a wildly zigzagging course along the narrow road, I held my breath and hung to the brass rail behind the driver, as we swerved perilously round corner after corner, and then, suddenly, something happened.

We were cascading down a narrow, cobble street, when a man behind me pushed me rudely to one side, caught the door-lever and threw it over, and at the same moment I felt an almighty shove like the thrust of someone's knee in the small of my back. We were shooting round a house with an angle as sharp as a knife-edge, and even as I pitched forward and outward, I seemed to hear the crack my head would give as it hit the wall, but as I fell, someone caught me by the leather belt about my middle and dragged me back in the very nick of time, and at the same moment the bus pulled up with a screaming of brakes.

The driver thrust his head round a couple of passengers and let out a very pretty flood of profanity. "Where is the madman who did that?"

I turned, for I had an even greater curiosity to see the individual who had so nearly precipitated me into eternity and found myself staring into a vacant, dust-colored face.

"Well," I said bitterly, "you nearly pulled it off that time Mr. Noah More!" and saw his eyes travel slowly round to me, as if he found it difficult to focus them.

"You know me?" he said. "That is, of course, not my real name—but it is strange, all the same, that you should know it."

"His gaze wandered, and he brought it back to my face with a visible effort. "I am sorry this has happened," he said vaguely. "I assure you it was not intentional on my part—I merely wished to get out."

Next minute he was in the roadway, bargaining with his queue shuffling friend, up a side street. The driver swung the door to and tapped his forehead significantly. "Imbecile!" said he and put down his foot on the gas, but as he did so, a voice spoke from behind me. "Not an imbecile!" it said, speaking in English, but with the gentle singsong of the Levant.

I turned and saw standing just behind me, one of the innumerable Arab carpet-sellers of the Riviera—a dark-skinned, gentle creature, in crimson fez and flowing drapery, his curly merchandise piled on one arm.

"Was it you who pulled me back?" I asked, conscience-stricken because, in the flurry of the moment, I had forgotten to look for the man who had undoubtedly saved my life.

He nodded slowly and raised his lips to my ear. "Monsieur Dunning will be glad to hear it," he whispered with the ghost of a smile, and next moment with a fine flourish we pulled up at the terminus by the town hall. As I scrambled out, I paused to look for him, but all I saw was a flutter of white draperies disappearing under the shadowy lime trees, and I turned my steps rather thoughtfully towards the Allées de la Liberté.

Noted Clowns Now With Famous Robbins Circus

A merry congress of the world's greatest and best known fun-makers are coming to Greenville.

They will be with the famous Robbins circus which will exhibit its myriad of wonders afternoon and night next Tuesday, Sept. 20 at the old Fair grounds.

The half a hundred and more clowns in the world and are headed by Otto Greibling, producing clown, known for the side-splitting antics and diodes he invents and perfects.

Then there will be "Kinko," and Happy Kellums, George Reid and Leo Kerns, Stanley White, Bob Marks and Joe Consolvo, and dozens of others, not forgetting, of course, the clown band, of which there is no equal.

Clowns are an indispensable part of every circus, but they find one part of the circus audience to be indispensable to them—the children. It is from the kids that the clowns get their best clowning ideas, and that is why you'll always see them chatting in friendly manner with the youngsters. The children give them valuable hints leading to hilarious capers which they can use between thrilling acts under the big boat to shore.

Most of that ended with repair but ships still blunder into rocks in fog. Schooners loaded with fish break propellers and have to be towed to safety. Fishermen mangled in winches must be speeded to hospitals ashore. Private yachts and small boats are forever getting lost. And during the spring months, icebergs must be spotted to prevent tragedies such as the Titanic disaster.

its raw lines are hidden. Occasionally a long string of regularly spaced lights show where a "through" highway parallels the coast. Small boats, their side lights glowing, skim along just outside the shoals. Out to sea a freighter

All these things are seen from the ship's bridge where throughout the night an officer is on duty, checking the course almost mile by mile. A hospital quiet prevails on the bridge at night. No light burns except a dim one over the compass and the one occasionally flashed on the navigation chart while the course is checked. It is easier to see from a darkened bridge.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, Sept. 15—(AP)—Returning hope for European peace, soothing the war-fevered stock market today restoring part of the paper value that vanished in a two-day selling rout in fear the Nazi-Czech struggle would become a general conflict.

Joining European market in a rebound on the news Prime Minister Chamberlain would have a face to face talk with Hitler, stocks jerked upward in a powerful opening rally. Many shares started two to four points higher. Transactions approximated 1-200,000 shares.

TWO ARE GIVEN LEASE ON LIFE

Hackendorn Sentence Commuted; Forsyth Negro Rerieved

Raleigh, Sept. 15—(AP)—Governor Hoey announced today he had commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence imposed on D. J. Hackendorn in Sampson county for arson and would reeve John Ernest Howie, Forsyth Negro, sentenced to be executed tomorrow for rape.

No final announcement was ready in the case of Melvin Petree, Forsyth Negro, also sentenced to die tomorrow for murder. Parole Commissioner Edwin Gill said a decision would be made during the day.

Howie was rerieved to allow further study of his case. Gill said the stay probably would be 60 days. Hackendorn's death date was September 23. He was convicted in August.

The quick decision in his case, even while Hackendorn's lawyers were "attempting an appeal to the supreme court," the order said, was unusual but was made "because of the fact that the trial judge brought the case before the clemency office through "a voluntary judicial petition."

NOVELIST DIES AT BALTIMORE

Thomas Wolfe, Native Tar Heel, Was Famed Author

Baltimore, Sept. 15—(AP)—Thomas Wolfe, American novelist, died today at 5:30 a. m. EST, of an "acute cerebral infection."

The 37-year-old author of "Look Homeward Angel," underwent two operations at Johns Hopkins Hospital after his arrival Saturday. He fell ill of pneumonia in July, but was recovering in Seattle when infection began to spread to his kidneys and heart. He was brought here to be under the care of Hopkins specialists.

With him last night, when his condition was described as "very grave," were his mother, Mrs. Julia Wolfe, and his brother, Fred, both of Asheville, N. C.

Wolfe was instructor of English at New York University when "Look Homeward Angel" was published in 1929. The book, as long as four ordinary novels, described Asheville, where Wolfe was born in 1900. The publication made him a distinguished figure among the younger American novelists.
