STRIKE HALTS FLOW OF FOOD INTO NEW YORK

Acting Mayor Morris Plans Take Emergency Action

TRUCK DRIVERS HALT AT TUNNEL

Police Department Is Making Survey To Determine Extent Public Affected

New York, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Acting Mayor Newbold Morris said today that emergency action would be taken to insure the "uninterrupted shipment" of foodstuffs into the city as a three-day-old "outlaw" strike of truckmen halted hundreds of New Jersey trucks bringing food supplies through the Holland tunnel.

"The police department is losing no time making a survey of the entire situation to determine to what extent the public is, or may be, affected by the strike," Morris said.

Strike leaders insisted that all perishable foods were permitted to pass the picket line.

Earlier Abe Klein, chairman of a rank and file committee, had said that only food destined for hospitals, orphan asylums and persons on relief would be allowed to enter the city.

At least 100 large trucks loaded with supplies from the New Jersey farms which provide a large part of New York's fresh food were parked near the tunnel at 9 a. m. Hundreds of others returned to New Jersey.

Few drivers of incoming trucks refused to join the strike. Streets in a wide area in the vicinity of the tunnel were soon lined with abandoned trucks.

Traffic on Varick and Canal streets usually flowing arteries of commerce in the morning hours, was light.

Klien said 9,000 men were already affected by the "outlaw" strike, which developed over the union's demands for a five-day 40-hour week with a basic pay of $56.50 a week remaining unchanged. The men now work 47 hours.

Heavy Rain Falls Here Friday Night

Nearly four inches of rainfall were recorded in last night's downpour by two local official weather observers. Mrs. B. T. Clark, observer in one section of the city, recorded 3.94 inches of rainfall. J. A. Clark, airways observer stationed in another section of Greenville, recorded 3.51 inches of rainfall.

The severity of the rain was exhibited at the Quinn-Miller & Stroud furniture store on Cotanche street, now under construction. A brick retaining wall behind the building, which is separated from the building by a walkway, collapsed. Part of the water that had caused the foundation of the wall to crumble poured into the building but did little damage.

Charlottean Dies In 12 - Story Fall

Charlotte, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Chas. C. Hooks, 68, widely-known architect, fell from the twelfth floor window of an uptown office building today and was killed.

Detective Chief Frank Littlejohn and Dr. Fred Austin, coroner, expressed the belief the fall was accidental.

Hooks, who with his associates had designed some of the largest buildings in the southeast, went to a washroom near his office early in the morning.

Soon afterwards a worker in the building discovered the body on the roof of an adjoining five-story building.

There was a large hole in the head and the jaw was broken, Dr. Austin said.

An iron grating over a skylight in the lower building was badly bent and glass in the skylight was shattered.

The coroner quoted friends and relatives as saying Hooks had suffered for years from occasional spells of dizziness.

Citizens Asked To Help Select Building Sites

REVIEW GROUP NAMED BY AAA

Committee Selected To Hear Marketing Quota Kicks

Raleigh, Sept. 17.—Growers dissatisfied with their present cotton and flue-cured tobacco marketing quotas will be given a chance to carry their complaint before review committees just appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

E. Y. Floyd, AAA executive officer at State College, explained that each of the State's 100 counties will have one of these committees made up of men from that county. The committees named are composed of a chairman, a vice-chairman, one other member, and an alternate.

Such bodies were established in accordance with the marketing quota provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. It will be their duty to pass on applications for review of cotton and flue-cured tobacco marketing quotas, when properly presented. Should an error be found in the quota originally established for a farm, correction in accordance with the Act will be made immediately.

Floyd explained that when a grower feels his quota not equitable he can file a complaint in the county agent's office. When the local review committee is informed of the request for a review, it will set a time for the grower to appear and state his case.

The committee in Pitt County is composed of Lemuel Dawson, R 3 Snow Hill, chairman; H. M. Mallard, Trenton, vice chairman; Bunny J. Baker, R 3 Snow Hill, member; and R. L. Fordham, R 5 Kinston.

Jury Fails Agree In Trial On Friday

Judge J. Paul Frizzelle ordered a mistrial after the jury deliberated for over an hour early last night and failed to agree in the case of Kentucky Whip and Collar Company vs. H. L. Hodges and Company.

J. Frank Harrington, clerk of Superior Court, today said that the case has been shifted to another term of civil court set for Monday week, over which Judge J. Paul Frizzelle will preside.

A total of $230 is being asked by the Whip Company. This amount is allegedly for payment of goods sold to the former Warren Feed Company. It is charged that the goods were later sold to the H. L. Hodges Company. A violation of the bulk sales law is charged.

Board of Aldermen to Hold Public Meeting Monday Night

Citizens of Greenville will be given an opportunity to express their choice on the purchase of a lot or lots upon which to place the new municipal building and central fire station.

The Board of Aldermen, after opening bids on several sites last night, called a public meeting for Monday night at 8 o'clock. The meeting will be held at the city hall unless the crowd is so large to be accommodated, in which case it will be moved to the courthouse.

The Greenville Merchants Association suggested that the meeting be held to give everyone desiring to do so, an opportunity to be heard.

In opening last night's special meeting of the Board of Aldermen, Mayor M. K. Bloom stressed the importance of the problem for discussion and declared that each member of the board should inspect the sites before making up their minds.

Bids were received last night on the following property: Mrs. Bessie Williams property, on the southwest corner of Fourth and Greene streets, 150 x 100 ft. area; on Greene street and 125 feet and 10 inches on Park street, $15,000, offered by L. J. Smith, Agent.

Property on south side of Fifth Street, between Greene and Washington streets, 274 feet frontage on Fifth, with a depth of 45 feet on Greene and the same depth, 143 feet, on Washington street, and also an additional lot 42 feet deep which is located a two-story dwelling. For one-half the frontage on Fifth Street, adjacent to Washington street, approximately 125 by 139, $20,000; for corner lot with approximately the same measurements, 125 by 131, on Greene street, $18,000; for two lots, 175 by 278 feet, $35,000; for lot at corner of Fifth and Greene streets, measuring 125 by 39 feet, and in addition thereto, the house and lot to the rear thereof, facing Greene street, with a measurement of 43 by 124 feet, $25,000; for the entire property above described on Fifth, (Continued on page five)

Offerings in the east were chiefly common to good leaf and fair to good lugs with leaf grades predominant.

The best increases as compared with opening week last year in the middle belt, which handles type 11 (B) tobacco were on "common and low quality leaf and low quality lugs and primings."

The service said the bulk of tobacco sold at prices ranging from $19 to $29 a hundred pounds, with sales heavy and primings predominating though common to fair quality leaf was offered in fairly heavy volume.

FDR CANCELS TALK TO STUDY CZECH CRISIS

Close Contact on Situation Being Kept With Officials

NATION WATCHES ALL NEW ANGLES

White House Doors Thrown open to Hull and Other State Department Officials

Washington, Sept. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today cancelled a speaking engagement at Chattanooga, Tenn., next Tuesday in order to remain here in close touch with the delicate international situation.

Disclosing this, Stephen Early, White House secretary, told reporters the chief executive also had given Secretary Hull and other State Department officials a right-of-way into his office at any time.

State Department chiefs now are coming and going at the White House as they please, Early said, keeping the President advised regarding the latest international developments.

As further indication of the close watch Washington is keeping on Europe, Secretary of War Woodring cancelled his plans to attend the American Legion national convention in Los Angeles. The reason Woodring gave was "pressure of government business."

The chief executive had been scheduled to speak at a celebration commemorating the battle of Chickamauga near Chattanooga.

Previously he cancelled a scheduled appearance at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., today, also on account of the foreign situation.

The President criticized the "professional fear-mongers of 1938."

Speaking by radio from the oval diplomatic room at the White House in connection with the Constitution observance at Poughkeepsie, the chief executive asserted that "the patrons of ghosts and hobgoblins of the nation's early history would have little to learn from the present day 'fear-mongers.'"

Mr. Roosevelt declared that to be (Continued on Page Five)

Tobacco Reported 'Generally Higher'

Raleigh, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Tobacco sold in eastern North Carolina markets this week averaged "generally higher" than last week the state and federal marketing service reported today, while in the Middle Belt first week prices were "substantially higher" on lower grades than in the first week last year.

In the eastern houses were type 12 tobacco is sold, the service said, "the principal percentages of increase occurred in the leaf and smoking leaf groups and in most of the lower quality grades of all groups."

"Markets selling the bulk of tobacco in the type 12 area reported a general average for the week of $20.66 per hundred pounds. For the season to date sales averaged $20.67."

Offerings in the east were chiefly common to good leaf and fair to good lugs with leaf grades predominant.

The best increases as compared with opening week last year in the middle belt, which handles type 11 (B) tobacco were on "common and low quality leaf and low quality lugs and primings."

The service said the bulk of tobacco sold at prices ranging from $19 to $29 a hundred pounds, with sales heavy and primings predominating though common to fair quality leaf was offered in fairly heavy volume.

Purge Means Progress

Babson Says President Drags "Red Herring Across the Trail"

By ROGER W. BABSON Babson Park, Mass., Sept. 17.—If I were a Southerner, I would not like the sudden dubbing of my section as the country's "No. 1 Economic Problem." If this were 50 years ago, or even 20 years ago, such publicity would have been a big boon to the South. The plain unvarnished truth, however, is that the South is now no longer the nation's "No. 1 Economic Problem."

In the last decade, Dixie has thrown off her economic shackles. She is today the fastest-growing section, both in business and in population, of the United States. Her twin handicaps—the lack of industry and over-emphasis on cotton—have been unlocked. As a result, the South today is growing by leaps and bounds. There are limitless opportunities today in every state from Virginia to California. Groundwork for New Coup President Roosevelt and his advisers know this as well as I do. By their sudden emphasis on the "Southern problem," they are dragging the proverbial "red-herring across the trail." Actually, the snapping of the spotlight on the South is part of President Roosevelt's celebrated "purge." It is the groundwork for the shifting of the "ill-fed, ill-housed, and ill-clothed" voters of the South from the old-line Democratic party to the stream-line New Deal party.

Readers will recall that the increase in President Roosevelt's plurality in 1936 over 1932 was due in part to the switching of the Negro vote of the Northern States from the G.O.P. to the Democratic ranks. Now the New Deal strategists hope (Continued on page five)

WAGING PROBE OF ROBBERIES

Stores at Simpson and Pactolus Entered During Night

Sheriff's deputies, aided by city policemen, today were investigating two robberies in Pitt county last night, one at Pactolus and the other at Simpson.

J. Paul Davenport's store at Pactolus was robbed of $400 in cash, several shirts, shoes and a quantity of foodstuffs, some time this morning after 1 o'clock.

Investigating officers declared that the robber or robbers entered through a front window after cutting a screen. Neither the blind nor the window was locked, they declared. After entering the building the robber or robbers, opened the front door, presumably so they could make a quick exit, and then took $400 in cash from the safe, which was declared to have been unlocked.

The robbery occurred during a heavy rain and officers were unable to find any foot prints or automobile tracks.

H. H. Porter's store in Simpson was robbed of cigarettes, candy, watches, clocks, hose, shoes, underwear and possibly other merchandise valued by the owner at approximately $200. No money was taken, it was reported.

The robbery, too, was believed to have been committed during the heavy rain.

One week ago last night two stores in the Bell Arthur community were robbed of general merchandise.

German Jewish Doctors Called In Case of War

Indicates the Urgency With Which Nazis View Situation

Berlin, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Many Jewish physicians whose licenses had been ordered revoked have been notified exactly to which military unit they must report in case of war it was learned reliably today.

The report was taken to indicate the urgency which Nazis regard the present crisis arising from German and Czechoslovak differences over minority rights.

About 6,000 to 7,000 Jewish doctors in Germany were forbidden in a decree August 2 to practice after September 30. There were few exceptions to the ban which closed a chapter in a systematic drive against Jewish doctors which began December 29, 1937, when 3,000 were dropped from staffs of private hospitals.

While Hitler's newspaper mouthpiece stressed suggestions for a Czechoslovak plebiscite to settle the quarrel and repeated the chancellor's sharp words that "behind this warning stands a nation united in spirit and determined in will," Germany continued quietly to put the nation more and more on a war basis.

Hotels were combed for possible workers on the new system of fortifications on the western frontier across from France.

Foreign commercial attaches, bankers and economists, said they could not explain how Germany has financed her large-scale preparedness measure.

The proclamation accused President Benes of Czechoslovakia of turning loose upon Sudeten Germans "hate-filled Czech soldiery" and said that in forming the "free corps" the Sudetens "assume for ourselves emergency rights which nations have taken at all times."

Lieut. Jones said that Carman's automobile collided with another automobile also driven by a Negro. Both cars were damaged badly, but the occupants of both escaped unhurt.

FACE FACT OF WAR OR PEACE

Consultation Between French and British Statesmen Been Predicted in Effort Prepare United Approach to Chancellor Hitler

London, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Britain's full cabinet faced the stark facts of peace or war today in more than five hours of consultation with Prime Minister Chamberlain and placed her reliance in a swift called Sunday meeting of the British and French Premiers.

Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet were called urgently to London from Paris to join in the final decisions which Chamberlain will take back to determine Adolf Hitler in Germany.

These are the hard alternatives Chamberlain and Daladier faced: 1—Shall Hitler in one form or another annex the Sudeten lands of Czechoslovakia and perhaps guide the economic and political destinies of that unhappy democracy in an extension of Germany's power in central Europe.

2—Can a formula be found to give the German Fuehrer these things and still guarantee an honorable existence to the state of the Czechs and the Slovaks acceptable to the bold and desperate Prague government.

London, Sept. 17.—(AP)—French Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet have been invited to London to consult with the British cabinet over the Czechoslovak-German crisis, it was learned authoritatively today.

The French ministers will arrive in London tomorrow by airplane. At Paris sources close to the government said a cabinet meeting probably would be held Monday following the return of the Premier and Foreign Minister. Whether they would return to Paris Sunday evening or remain in London overnight was not disclosed.

Consultations between the French and British statesmen have been predicted several days in an effort to prepare a joint approach to Chancellor Adolf Hitler through Prime Minister Chamberlain next week at Godesberg, Germany.

The joint consultations were projected as the British cabinet met in its second session today to work out the government's policy in the Prague-Berlin quarrel, which threatened to send Europe into the trenches.

The invitation to Premier Daladier and Bonnet was believed by observers to foreshadow decisive Anglo-French action in the face of Hitler's aggressive stand against the Czechoslovakia government in its dispute with the Sudeten-German minority.

The cabinet session was the fourth of this week and closely followed a two-hour morning meeting at which the fate of Czechoslovakia and the momentous conversations between Prime Minister Chamberlain and Chancellor Hitler were considered.

The first meeting broke up at 1:30 p. m. with no announcement of Britain's attitude.

Vis-Cont Runciman, the British mediator in Prague, sat through part of the morning session and then went to Buckingham Palace to lunch with King George.

LEADER CALLS NAZI-SUDETENS

Proclaims Followers Organizing "Free Corps" on Border

Berlin, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Konrad Henlein today proclaimed that his Sudeten-German followers were "taking to arms and organizing a Sudeten 'free corps'" along the Czechoslovak-German border.

The proclamation spoke of "tens of thousands" who were "forced to flee" Czechoslovakia into Germany "in order to escape losing their lives or being taken away as defenseless hostages."

His order for formation of a "free corps" was issued under an Asch, Czechoslovakia, date line.

Whereabouts of Henlein, sought by Czechoslovak authorities on a charge of treason since his proclamation of Thursday calling for union with Germany, was not known. His party has been outlawed by the Czechoslovak government.

The proclamation accused President Benes of Czechoslovakia of turning loose upon Sudeten Germans "hate-filled Czech soldiery" and said that in forming the "free corps" the Sudetens "assume for ourselves emergency rights which nations have taken at all times."

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR Saturday, September 17, 1898 FIRE Not Large But an Exciting One.

About 11 o'clock Friday night Greenville had such an arousing as only a fire alarm can give the town. The ringing of bells, blowing of steam whistles, firing of pistols and shouts of fire brought people tumbling out of their homes. A bright light out towards the tobacco section told the tale. The kitchen to the residence for Mr. A. H. Critcher was on fire. It was burning fiercely when discovered, the flames coming all through the roof. The kitchen was adjoining the house and the flames quickly spread to the roof and end of the dining room. Men with buckets fought the fire and kept it confined to the kitchen.

In the meantime the firemen were almost killing themselves dragging the engine through the heavy streets. They finally reached the scene and it took them but a short while to put the fire out, though the kitchen was destroyed and the house considerably damaged.

HIGH TRIBUNAL TO TEST CASE

State's Maximum Hour Law is Now Being Studied

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Sept. 16—North Carolina's maximum hour law for men is headed for its Supreme court test to determine whether the limitation of work to 10 hours in any one day or 55 in any one week, when coupled with the multitudinous exceptions and provisions of the law, jibes with the Constitution of the state.

Apparently the only thing which can stop it from getting this test would be acquittal of the Question Manufacturing Company by Forsyth Superior court on trial of charges of violating the law.

In recorder's court the company was fined $10 for working a Negro night watchman 12 hours a day, seven days a week.

A. F. Aman, of the company, appealed and has indicated an intention to keep on appealing as long as there is any higher court left to which the case may be carried.

"If this law is carried out, I will pay a higher insurance rate, rather than hire two night watchmen," he was quoted as saying at time of the recorder's court trial.

L. P. Sorrell, just appointed assistant to Commissioner of Labor Ernest A. Shuford, is in Winston-Salem for trial of the case, which was worked up by him while he was one of the department's inspectors.

Interest in the matter rises from the very complicated structure of the state's maximum hour law. To begin with, many learned lawyers question its Constitutionality because of the clause which limits its application to those concerns which employ eight or more employees.

Then, too, there are so many excepted occupations as to give some grounds for contention that the act is discriminatory and therefore void. Since adoption of the law last year only two cases have been made by the Department for conviction. In one, the defendant paid the penalty and called quits.

High School Paper Gets More Honors

Edward Nell, executive secretary of Quill and Scroll, international honorary literary society, for high school journalists, has advised V. M. Mulholland, principal and journalism instructor of Greenville high school, that Green Lights, journal high school publication, won outstanding honors in the 1938 critical service.

"Judges of the services, under the auspices of the M. I. H. School of Journalism," Nell advised, "recognize your paper as one of outstanding achievements, and bestow upon it an international first place award."

Statistics on the publication printed out that the makeup was attractive and the front page was lively. News coverage was described as good and praise was given proof-reading, copyreading, and editing. Sports coverage was termed excellent and features were described as interesting.

Rotary Club Meet Set Monday Night

The program for the Greenville Rotary Club for next Monday evening is in charge of the Crippled Children's Clinic committee, composed of Dr. K. B. Pace, Dr. N. T. Bennett, Tommie Thomas, and Hugh Winslow.

This clinic is operated monthly by the State and local health departments, and is sponsored by the Greenville Rotary Club.

At Monday night's meeting, the clinic committee will show a number of cases which have been treated at the clinic here. The sponsorship of the crippled children's clinic represents the major welfare activity of the local Rotary club.

It was explained by a member of the committee that no program of the entire year excites more interest in the club than the crippled children's clinic report.

CZECHS COUNT ON NATURE AS THEIR "NUMBER ONE" ALLY

(By The AP Feature Service)

If war comes, don't waste too much time pitying little Czechoslovakia. Weak as she may be (15,000,000 people) compared with Germany (75,000,000), she has nature on her side as well as carefully-laid war plans and smart, tough soldiers.

Nature has rimmed the country with formidable mountains and forests. The Czechs have improved on nature by fortifying the passes. Especially strong fortifications guard the Moravian Gateway and the Oder Gap. By using this natural path of conquest, Napoleon beat the allies at the famous battle of Austerlitz in 1805; and the Prussians in 1866 crushed Austria. Hostile armies forcing these passes now might catch the Czechs as in a pincers.

A radiating system of railroads and highways would hurry Czech armies to threatened borders. They would have the "inner line"—an advantage in warfare. Finally, while mountains obstruct the borders, the Czechs have a fine natural region for military airfields on the Bohemian plains. To make the most of all these advantages, Czechoslovakia's army of a million or more, including reserves, has been in rigorous training. Important disadvantages: Principal Czech industrial regions are in the west near the German border; war would cut off Czechoslovakia from the sea.

WILL THERE BE ANOTHER 'INCIDENT?' Things Like These Start Wars If One Side's Ready

SOUTH BOMBARDS FORT SUMTER

The South's bombardment of Fort Sumter, in the harbor of Charleston, S. C., led directly to civil conflict. One day after the fort surrendered, April 14, 1861, President Lincoln called for 75,000 men, and the war was on. But the bombardment of Sumter was only the climax of a long political struggle between the North and South over states' rights, slavery, and economic factors. A clash had been brewing for several decades.

BISMARCK RELEASES A TELEGRAM

One day, in 1870, Chancellor Bismarck of Germany received a telegram from his king. It announced that France's Napoleon III had demanded an apology from King William and a promise to keep a German prince from the throne of Spain. Bismarck made the telegram public. His prestige hurt, Napoleon declared war on Prussia. But the rise of Germany as a united power, and Napoleon's position in France, had long made such a war probable.

A STUDENT SHOOTS AT ARCHDUKE

Archduke Francis Ferdinand, nephew and heir of Austria's emperor, was assassinated with his wife at Sarajevo, Austria, June 28, 1914, by a Serb. One month later, Austria declared war on Serbia, and the World War was under way. That war had been brewing for half a century, however. European powers, heavily armed and divided into two major alliances, probably would have found some other excuse to fight had not the archduke been assassinated.

OUTPOSTS CLASH AT MIDNIGHT

First shots in the Chinese-Japanese war were fired at the Marco Polo bridge, near Peiping, at midnight, July 8, 1937. Each side blamed the other. Anyway, those shots led to war. But the conflict's real cause was far greater. China was growing stronger, was threatening Japan's dream of controlling the mainland. If Japan was to realize that dream, she had to strike quickly before China became too strong and too united to handle.

ORCHIDS FOR EPPES

A report from the state school commission yesterday was to the effect that Prof. C. M. Eppes, principal of the Negro schools of this city, has more than 60 years of teaching to his credit, the longest on record in this state.

Belonging to what might be termed those few remaining members of the "old school" of thought and ideals Eppes has labored in this community not only for the betterment of his own race, but always for that better understanding between the races.

Greenville citizens should be proud of the fact that they have in their midst one who has rendered such valuable service to the community.

Too often it is after one passes on into the "Great Unknown" before the realization of his or her worth dawns upon those with whom he or she has worked and served, but we believe that a better plan is "flowers for the living," so in the words of one of the well known columnists we wish to say "Orchids for Professor Charles M. Eppes."

SELECTION OF SITE IS IMPORTANT

The Board of Aldermen have called a special meeting for Monday night at which time the citizens will be given an opportunity to express their views on the proposed sites for the new city hall and the new fire station.

So far as the fire station is concerned, it has been our idea from the start that the station should be located somewhere outside the downtown congested area, while the city hall should be a part of the downtown section.

The new city hall is planned to take care of the city's needs for a number of years to come and the aldermen are anxious that no mistake be made in the location, but they do want to consider the wishes of the citizens in the matter. Mr. and Mrs. Citizen, it is your meeting Monday night and the time for you to express your views in this matter.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Sept. 17.—In the not-too-distant future mail trucks, regular postoffices on wheels, will be running regularly over the highways of North Carolina, Stanley Winborne, Utility Commissioner, predicts.

The advent of these motorized postal vehicles will soon be forced by abandonment of so many branch railroad lines, he believes. The Federal Postoffice Department will be practically compelled to start this sort of thing in order to prevent mail delivery from going back to the days of about 1860 and the pony express.

Commissioner Winborne says that in practically every instance there is community opposition to abandonment of rail passenger service, the chief argument of the opposition is that taking off the trains will cripple mail service.

The Washington authorities have assured the Utility Commission, Winborne says, that the Postoffice Department will see to it that postal service does not take a step backward.

For the first time in the history of the state, North Carolina is this year cutting more than one million acres of hay, the State Department of Agriculture reports. Hay production in North Carolina has gone up some 75 per cent in the last decade.

Not that it was needed, but there was another proof of the complete democracy of Governor Clyde R. Hoey the other night. A local movie palace was showing an unusual drawing card, a long line of prospective customers ran from the box office far out onto Fayetteville street.

State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson will address the National Association of State Auditors, Comptrollers and Treasurers at their annual meeting at Biloxi, Mississippi, November 17, he says.

His subject will be "Methods used in North Carolina in Helping Local Governments to Get Out of Debt and Stay Out of Debt."

The State Department of Agriculture plans to ask the 1939 General Assembly to appropriate $30,000 to match dollar for dollar Federal funds to be used in combating Bang's disease among Tar Heel cattle, Commissioner W. Kerr Scott has revealed.

The commissioner looks upon Bang's disease as one of the main threats to North Carolina's dairy-farming industry.

The Characters
 Archie Lumsden, myself, visitor to the French Riviera.
 Otilie Wills, beautiful American actress.
 René Geiss, man behind a murder plot.

Chapter 36

Breaking And Entering

Otilie was supposed to meet us here at six-thirty. I told Dunning, "Do you realize it's almost seven thirty and that girl hasn't shown up yet?"

He groaned. "Let's call the hotel and see if they've any word of her there."

But when we got through to the Carlton, the reception clerk was politely definite. Miss Wills, he said, had not returned. Her uncle also had just gone out, but before he left he had been inquiring if anyone had seen his niece.

Dunning's face was grave as I told him the news. "I don't like it," said he, "not one little bit. If I knew the name of her friends at Monte Carlo, we could check up on when she left them, but we don't, so that's that. I've got a car here, and I'll drive out along the coast road and see if I can see anything of her. On the way I'll drop you at the Carlton and you can wait there till the old man gets back and let him to call up Monaco."

I could think of no better plan, and so we set out. "And what about tomorrow?" I asked.

"The old man doesn't rise till eight, and they're not likely to try to do him in his bed. You and Hugo be at the hotel by seven thirty, and at least we'll be wise to whatever's doing. I'll meet you in the lounge."

The reception clerk at the Carlton told me that Virgote Wills was still out, and I made my way back to the terrace to watch for the old man's return. Then I saw the uniformed figure of Cassandra Chubb threading her way toward me with small regard for the people whose elbows she joggled in passing.

"Mr. Lumsden," she began without preamble, "where's Otilie?"

"That's exactly what I want to know," I told her. "I'm waiting here for Mr. Wills, to get the name of the people at Monte Carlo she went to see."

She made a gesture of impatience. "I've already called the folks in Monte Carlo. She left there at five thirty!"

I whistled lugubriously. "Well," I said, "all the consolation we've got is that Mr. Dunning has decided to look for her. Look here, you're a sensible woman. Keep around here—don't go to bed until she comes back, and when she does, or if you get word from her ring up the Chalet d'Amour."

"I will," she said, and then, with a sort of moan of anguish: "Land sakes! What will her uncle say when he hears all this?"

"Let's hope he won't have to hear it," said I. "Keep your chin up, Miss Chubb. Otilie's the sort of girl who'll always land on her feet." And with that I made my way towards the ramp.

But I was not to effect an escape so easily, for just as I reached the bar, a gaunt, gauntly clad figure rose from a solitary table and laid a hand on my arm. "You are in a hurry, my young friend," said the voice of René Geiss.

A Mad Idea
 "GOOD Lord!" said I, staring at him. I had as nearly as possible asked him what he was doing there, when he should have been in Italy, but even as I caught the words back, he answered my unspoken question.

"I am spending a few days with a friend at San Lorenzo," he told me. "But I feel a sudden nostalgia for my pretty marmosettes here. I shall return in an hour to the peaceful peace of the Italian countryside. Meanwhile, will you not join me in a drink?"

"I'm sorry," I said, "but I'm clearing out to some place where there's a breath of fresher air. I don't like this wind."

He laughed gently. "Our mistral! Now me, I find it singularly invigorating. It even makes me feel a trifle light-headed."

"Why blame it on the wind?" I retorted, rudely and with a muttered goodby I pushed past him. A sudden mad idea had struck me. Geiss was on his own confession, going back to join Rakovsky. There would be no one in his villa and Dunning had said our one hope of catching him was to find the gun with which he had killed O'Donnell. I had done a lot of queer things in my time but housebreaking was not numbered among them. Still, there was no harm in trying, and no harm done either if I failed.

the headland, and as I did so, I cannoned into a man.
 "Good evening, Monsieur Lumsden," a voice said quietly, and I recognized Fleuriot.

"If you can call it a good evening," I retorted. "I find it a singularly unpleasant one myself." And I added, a trifle maliciously: "Have you got on the track of our friend the chasseur yet?"

He looked at me oddly, falling into step beside me. "Not yet," he admitted. "I had hoped that you might have some suggestion to make as to his whereabouts."

"What a hope!" I retorted bitterly. "If the police can't find him how can I?" And then, on a sudden impulse, I put a question in my turn. "I suppose," I said essentially, "you don't happen to know what the word 'Amour' means?"

He pursed his lips, frowning thoughtfully. "Amour. That sounds like old French. To me it is not a name, and I do not think it has to do with 'amour.' It is more likely an ancient form of 'armurier,' an armorer, and it may well be the name of some street where such a trade was once done. That would mean it is in an old town not here, for a hundred years ago Cannes was but a fishing village Monaco, perhaps, or Antibes."

"Man," I said admiringly almost wishing that, in spite of Dunning's advice, I had taken him into our confidence, "you've got a head or your shoulders. If there is such a street, do you think you can find it?"

"Naturally," he retorted, and then added, looking at me keenly: "But if I succeed, what is my reward? Have you, on your side, no information you would like to give me?"

"Listen," I said, "if you can tell me what that word means—I phone message to the Chalet d'Amour will always reach me, I, on my side, will meet you this time tomorrow night and tell you everything I know."

He gave a funny, formal little bow. "It is a bargain," he acknowledged.

"It's a bargain," I echoed, and halted in my tracks. "This is where I turn off," and shaking him warmly by the hand, I swung off into the rue du Dragon.

Strange Wilderness
 I PAUSED, hesitating outside the villa gate. I had already ruled out the railings as unscalable but there still remained the alley at the side of the house. I turned quickly up the narrow passage.

It was not so dark here for the night sky was clear overhead and a faint glow showed where the moon would shortly rise. I crept down the lane, scanning the wall for some possible foothold and presently I found it—a hole, about a yard from the ground, where a great sliver of flint had been recently dislodged.

I set my foot in it, gripped the top of the wall, and painfully hoisted myself to the top, and now I saw that the moon had already risen, for a great, low-sided amber soup-plate hung low over the house-top.

I swung both legs over the wall and dropped on all fours on a patch of rough gravel.

It was a strange wilderness of a place that I landed in, a place of pearly half-light and menacing shadows of dim tree-trunks that loomed suddenly up at one of one from the shade of some overgrown palm.

For the first time, I had a clear view of the facade of the house—a two-storied structure, with a loggia over the porch supported on either side by monstrous cupids. I liked the look of that loggia, and I liked still more the look of the sturdy, century-old wisteria that covered the wall below it for the rugged stem, as thick around as a man's calf, looked as if it would stand a ton weight.

I gave it an experimental tug found it as immovable as a rock and set my foot on the lowest fork. In another minute I had hooked one leg over the railing of the loggia and was peering across it through the open windows of a darkened room. There were long chairs on the loggia and a soft thick matting underfoot and my rose-soled espadrilles made no sound as I tiptoed forward.

As my foot touched the sill I stopped short, every nerve in my body tingling, for from within the room had come a frightened gasp. I stood there rooted to the spot, dimly conscious that to anyone inside the room, I must be clearly silhouetted against the night sky. And then, with a flooding relief that was almost ludicrous, I heard my name whispered and the voice that spoke it was the voice of Otilie Wills.

"Archie," she breathed. "Archie Lumsden!"

Next minute she was beside me, clutching my arm, and even in the dim light I could see that she was badly scared.

"Archie!" she said again. "Oh thank heaven you've come!"

"And how the deuce did you get here?" I asked inwardly, raging, for it was one thing to conduct a single-handed search of the house and quite another to have a half-hysterical girl tagging at one's heels.

"By the same way as you did, I guess." She broke off, glancing fearfully over her shoulder. "But for mercy's sake be careful! He's in the house!"

"Who?" I almost shouted, and she flung a slim hand over my mouth.

"Haven't you got any sense? Ceiss, of course."

 they can perform a similar feat of magic by winning the vote of the white lower classes away from the George-Garner-Harrison-Smith Democratic faction.

Purge May Give New Line-Up
 I do not want readers to misunderstand me. I believe that the President's "purge" is a progressive step. As Mr. Roosevelt has said, the language spoken by his New Deal Democrats is not the same language that conservative Democrats, such as Senator George, speak. If Senator George and President Roosevelt are "at opposite ends of the poles," then I firmly believe they should not be labeled under the same political brand. That is not fair to the nation.

One reason why we have not had better statesmanship at Washington in the last forty years has been the unfortunate composition of the two major parties. There has not been a clean-cut line-up of Conservatives and Liberals. The Southern conservative has been a Democrat. The Northern conservative

JEAN DORROW

One of America's Greatest Lady Riders

has been a Republican. The editor in a Georgia town speaks the same language as the editor in a Massachusetts community. The Southern lawyer and the Northern doctor see eye to eye economically.

Must Cut Old Party Lines
 On the other hand, Western liberals are usually found in the Republican ranks while most Northern liberals have been parading under the Democratic banner. Hence, if we can get the conservatives and liberals of both parties grouped together, then we are making real progress toward solving our troubles. Big vital national issues should be debated, legislated, administered, and amended by a frank line-up of Liberals vs. Conservatives, not by the hodge-podge set-up that both major parties have represented for years.

But instead of reading the Conservative wing out of the Democratic party, Mr. Roosevelt may be "purging" himself out of that party. He may follow the same course that his cousin, Republican Theodore Roosevelt, followed 26 years ago. Readers will recall that "Teddy," unable to name the candidate of the Republican party in 1912, put together a third party with himself as the standard-bearer. He took millions of votes away from the "regular" Republican candidate. As a result, Democrat Woodrow Wilson easily rode into the White House with only 40 per cent of the popular vote.

New Deal To Be Third Party?
 Thus far the 1938 "party purge" has back-fired. Consequently, Mr. Roosevelt may not be able to control the Democratic Convention in 1940. If the President seeks a third term himself, or if he insists on naming his successor, there is a strong possibility that Garner, Harrison, and others of the conservative faction can stop him. In this event, the New Deal group might split off from the regular Democrats and run Franklin D. Roosevelt as a third party candidate.

The Conservatives' chance of getting into the saddle in 1940 could then be assured through Coalition. Democratic Senator George of Georgia and Republican Senator Davis of Pennsylvania "speak the same language." It is foolish for such men to oppose each other while a combination of the old-age pensioners and "reliefers" squeeze in between them.

Coalition Could Win Easily
 My belief, therefore, is that the Republicans should not hold their 1940 Convention until the Democratic Convention is over. If there is a split between the New Deal and Conservative wings of the Democratic party, the Republicans, at their Convention, should nominate the same candidate that the Conservative Democrats have chosen. Then we could have an honest vote along Liberal-Conservative lines. This is the only way we can clean up the present mess.

It is not often that I write about politics. However, I have read so much about President Roosevelt's "purge" and his attempt to dictate who shall be in Congress and who shall not, that I wanted to unburden myself. The thought that I want to leave with readers is that voters should not condemn President Roosevelt for his attempted "purge." They should respect him for his courage and be thankful that he is trying to produce a new, and far more beneficial, political set-up!

Famous Robbins Circus Will Show Here Tuesday

Jean Dorrow, a beautiful woman, and "Jet," a beautiful horse, typically more than words could ever do, the Spirit of the Circus.

They are coming with the Famous Robbins Circus, which will exhibit in Greenville next Tuesday, September 20, at the Old Fair Grounds with hundreds upon hundreds of wonders and breath-taking spectacles.

One of the largest and most valuable assemblages of thoroughbred horses in the world, more than 300 in all, are included among the upwards of 1,000 animals under the Big Show's canvas. They travel aboard special trains with more than 700 persons and mountains of canvas and tons upon tons of paraphernalia needed to present one of the world's largest circuses.

Thrills galore abound in the Famous Robbins Circus this year. Clyde Beatty, the greatest wild animal trainer the world has ever known, who amazes with his breath-taking display of forty-three jungle-bred lions and tigers in the high circular all-steel arena at the same time; the world famous Behee Troop, sensational stars on the lumpy trapeze; Hoot Gibson and his vast assemblage of Rough Riders of the World; and huge companies of other thrillers are under the famous Robbins' banner this year.

In addition, the double-menagerie—one of the largest traveling collections of wild animals on tour, will be on display for one hour before both the 2 and 8 P. M. performances.

A gorgeous street parade, said to be more than a mile in length, will be the inaugural event of circus day. With bands, calliopes, scores of open dens and cages filled with wild jungle beasts; long lines of mounted circus stars; tableaux wagons and floats; clown carts and tongas—all will be seen in the colorful procession.

After opening of the bids, Mayor Blount asked if anyone wished to discuss his bid. Mr. Flanagan, declaring he would like to say a word in regard to his offer, stated that he believed the site offered had several advantages and was as large as was required for the municipal building. He declared he was offering the site at a "very reasonable" price. He pointed out that if the site is decided upon it would price of $100 per front foot, offer with the court house and post office, thereby making it convenient for the public.

Property on Cotanche street, just south of Fifth street and adjoining the old model school property, frontage on Cotanche of 85 and one half feet, with a depth of 235 feet, offered for $6,000 by W. M. (Sallie) Jones.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 17—(AP)—Stocks tumbled back to the mid-week lows today under a wave of selling by traders who were unwilling to hold over the week-end in face of European war threats.

After the remaining gains from Thursday's broad rally had been swept away, good buying support entered the market for leading shares and early losses ranging to two or three points in outstanding issues were reduced.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 17—(AP)—Cotton futures opened quiet, one higher to one lower, with operations largely of a trade character. Futures closed eight to 11 lower. Spot nominal, middling 8.25.
