CLUE FOUND IN SOLON'S DEATH

Skeleton Found in Maryland Believed That of Tar Heel

Bakerstown, Md., Oct. 15—(AP)—Upon the results of a comparison of a dental x-ray with the teeth of the skeleton found near a railroad junction west of here hinged the possible solution today of the strange disappearance in 1932 of R. S. McCain, former North Carolina State Senator.

Workers prepared to probe a new into the grave in which the skeleton was buried after police chief Charles Cleary reported he believed it was that of McCain. The body was found about 22 miles from here at a railroad junction known as Shomo, near Martinsburg, West Va.

If the x-ray, taken three months before McCain disappeared, matches those of the skeleton a six-year-old anonymous explanation of the solon's death will be to a great extent corroborated.

Location of the burial place was (Continued on page six)

WORRIED OVER AGRICULTURAL EXPORT TRADE

Decline Complicates Efforts to Solve Major Problems

SURPLUS COTTON MOST PRESSING

Judge Stacy Hopes to Complete Argument in Railway Wage Dispute Monday

Washington, Oct. 15.—(AP)—Drastic decline in exports complicates, farm officials said today, the administration's efforts to solve agriculture's most pressing problem—the existence of price depressing cotton surpluses.

Official foreign trade reports show during August and September cotton exports totaled only 589,509 bales with $37,759 during the corresponding month last year. Sharp decline in European purchases were largely responsible for the slump. Domestic cotton consumption also declined. The census bureau said 1,095,000 bales were consumed in this country in August and September, compared with 1,204,922 in the comparable month last year.

Other developments included: It takes 53 less hours of labor to produce a cotton bale today than it did in 1911.

WPA research workers figured this out during a nation-wide survey of recent changes in the technology of American Agriculture. The investigators' report to Administrator Harry Hopkins said the average total labor per bale in the four years from 1933 to 1938 was 218 hours. A bale required 271 hours during the 1907 to 1911 period, the workers said.

The fact-finding board considering the proposed 15 per cent railway wage cut asked representatives of the railroads and labor to end their testimony today.

Judge Walter Stacy, chairman, said the board hoped that arguments would be started late this afternoon and be completed Monday.

The treasury announced award of a $39,939 contract for construction of a new postoffice at Weldon, N. C., to Jones Brothers and Company of Wilson, N. C.

Wildcat Division's Reunion Date Set

Charlotte, Oct. 15—The North Carolina State Reunion of Veterans of the 81st Division, better known as the Wildcat Division, will be held in Charlotte, November 11-13.

Committees are working on an elaborate program of entertainment for the hundreds of veterans and wives of veterans of the Wildcat Division who will attend the reunion where new friendships will be made and old acquaintances renewed. Reunion headquarters in the Hotel Charlotte already are making reservations for many early birds who have signified their intention of attending the big meeting. Those in charge of the elaborate celebration are confident the attendance will be the largest ever turned out for a similar reunion.

T. T. Patterson, chairman of the publicity committee, says: "When the Wildcats howl they really let you know something big is going on, and on November 11, 12, 13 they will have plenty to howl about in addition to celebrating the anniversary of the Armistice."

THREE NEW FRIENDS

Babson Says England Expecting Era of Great Prosperity

By ROGER W. BABSON London, England, Oct. 15—The great statesmen, bankers, industrialists, and economists of Great Britain unanimously agreed that we may now be entering a boom era exceeding in extent that of the twenties. You will recall that after the Armistice was signed we had a period of unprecedented business expansion. New all-time peaks for business activity were reached early in 1920.

Now, the "big business" men of England believe that the world may be facing a similar situation in the months ahead.

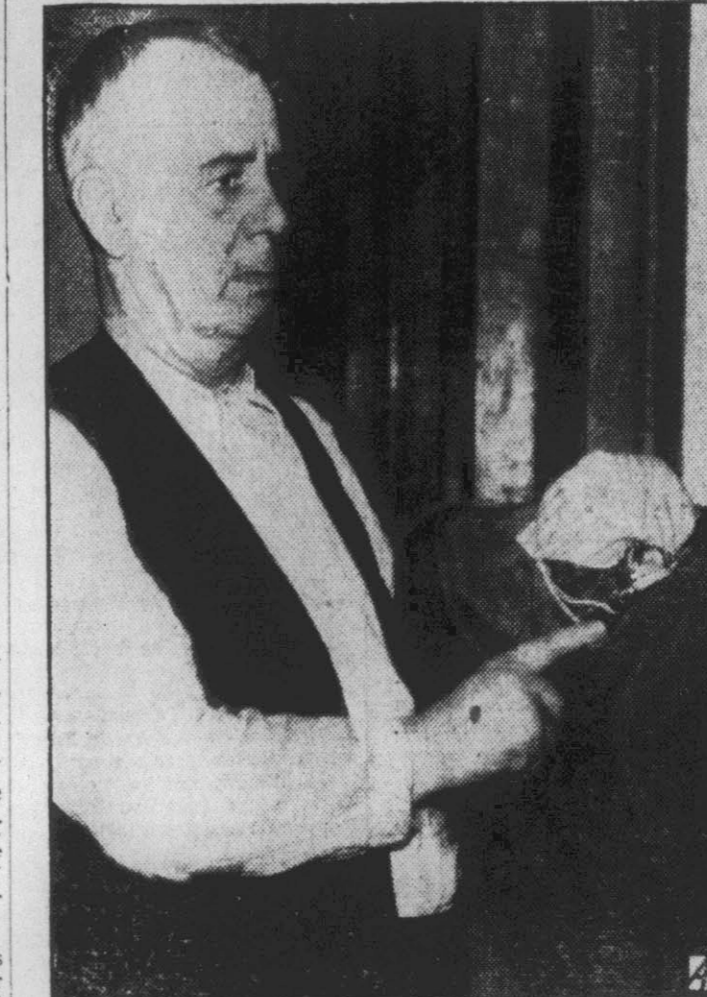

Why are they so optimistic? The answer is that they consider the Munich Conference in somewhat the same light as the Armistice. They feel that the partition of Czechoslovakia has removed a powder keg which could have exploded into a general war any time. Most students of history over here agree that the Treaty of Versailles is a ruthless and vindictive document. It set up artificial nations composed of an arbitrary combination of nationalities with boundaries drawn simply from the standpoint of military considerations. It also imposed terrific financial burdens upon Germany.

Treaty Scrapping Inevitable It was inevitable that some day the Reich would regain her strength and throw off the humiliating provisions of the peace treaty. Readers have watched Hitler do this in the last three years through rearmament, occupation of the Rhineland, and conquest of Austria. The next step was Czechoslovakia. All European statesmen knew that the "synthetic country" problem had to be solved sooner or later. The economic prosperity of Europe depended upon it. Fearing reactions, however, no statesman before Hitler had the courage to take this bull by the horns.

So the removal of this powder keg is the major reason for optimism (Continued on page three)

Record Established In Aircraft Illumination

Planes 24,000 Feet High Sighted By Searchlights

Fort Bragg, Oct. 15—(AP)—A record for high altitude illumination of aircraft by anti-aircraft artillery searchlights was claimed here today by army officers with the light-spotting of a D-17 flying fortress 24,000 feet above the ground.

The test was made late last night after conclusion of more than a week of extensive aerial maneuvers, to determine solely the maximum altitude at which an airplane can be illuminated under ideal conditions.

A week ago airplanes were illuminated here in preliminary runs up to 22,000 feet, but the more than four and a half miles up feat was not registered until last night.

The maximum altitude illumination was preceded by the illumination of bombers at various heights to determine the effectiveness of such lighting for pursuit airplane interception. Defense headquarters awaited today reports of the results from pursuit squadron commanders at widely scattered places.

The bombers had completed their mission and were returning to their base at Langley Field, Va., when Brigadier-General Fulton Gardner, defense commander from his post on Gaddy's mountain in the center of the defense zone of Eastern North Carolina, called unexpectedly for the 24,000-foot test.

CROSS MOTION FILED IN CASE

Burgin Counsel Seeks Dismissal of Petition of Board

Raleigh, Oct. 15—(AP)—Counsel for W. O. Burgin of Lexington filed in the State Supreme Court today a cross motion asking dismissal of the State Election Board's petition for an order directing Judge W. C. Harris to allow the certification of C. B. Deane of Rockingham as the eighth district Democratic congressional nominee.

Burgin's motion also asked that if the high tribunal "assumes jurisdiction" of the case, it issue a mandamus directing the Superior court to allow the certification of Burgin.

Today's action was filed by former Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, chief of defense counsel for Burgin in the long-fought contest for the eighth district nomination. Included was an 11-page answer to the State Board's motion filed yesterday by Attorney General Harry McMullan, which requested that Judge Harris be required to permit Deane's certification in accordance with an opinion of the Supreme court.

The court remanded the case to the Superior court to await "final" returns from Davidson and Richmond counties. The board's petition also charged that Judge Harris' threat of a jury trial was "improvident and based upon a misapprehension of misunderstanding by him of the opinion of this honorable court."

HUNGARY SAYS ARMY DOUBLED INSURE PEACE

Estimated 420,000 Men Mobilized By Czech Neighbor

200,000 YOUTHS ARE CALLED OUT

Czech Official Says His Country Would Resist Hungarians if Border Crossed

Budapest, Oct. 15.—(AP)—Hungary started doubling her army to an estimated 420,000 men today for what officials said was peace, not war.

The mobilization of five classes (age groups) totaling about 200,000 youths was called a measure necessary for Hungarian security, "endangered by the continued mobilization of the Czechoslovakia army" and the collapse of negotiations on Hungarian demands for parts of Czechoslovakia.

Surprise was occasioned by the disclosure that the Hungarian army numbered about 220,000 because the post-war Trianon treaty, declared abrogated just two months ago, limited the force to 35,000.

The official press declared Hungary was not alone in demanding Magyar-inhabited slices of her already dismembered neighbor. "We have powerful friends who fully support us," said a newspaper there.

The reference was perhaps to Germany and Italy, with whose heads two Hungarian envoys conferred yesterday.

Komarom, Hungary, Oct. 15 (AP)—A Czech office declared today his soldiers would resist occupation of frontier communities by Hungarian troops under any circumstance.

The captain who commands a regiment stationed on the Czech side of the Danube near here and who fought with the Czech legion with Russia during the World war added that "I think it will not be long until our soldiers try to take back territory already taken from them."

DUEL OF LINES TO HEAD SHOW

State and Wake Forest to Mix at Raleigh Saturday Night

Raleigh, Oct. 14.—Coach Herman Hickman, the former Wake Forest college line mentor who handles the same position at N. C. State College, is expecting one of the liveliest line duels of the year here on Saturday night when State's Ed (Ty) Coon and Wake Forest's Rupert Pate lead their brothers against each other in a southern conference football game.

While Coon was gaining national recognition for his great play against the vaunted University of Alabama team in Tuscaloosa, Ala., last Saturday, Coach Hickman put his expert scouting eye on Pate and the other Deacons at Columbia, S. C., where they engaged and defeated the University of South Carolina.

Big Ty was called "the best tackle I have seen this year", by Coach Frank Thomas of Alabama. Thomas is a nationally-known figure, who annually assists in selecting all-America material. And Coon really played himself a tall game down there in Alabama. It was the third week that he has starred. First it was against Davidson, in State's opener; then against North Carolina, and then against the powerful Tide.

Pate and Louis Trunzo are two of the best college linemen I ever saw," Hickman declared, adding "and while Coon and Pate play on opposite sides of the line, it will be interesting to see them in action in the same game."

Coon is a 202-pound junior from Watertown, Conn., who prepped at White Plains, N. Y., and who attracted State coaches last year with his fast charge. Handicapped by afternoon labs that prevented his giving much time for football, Coon excelled on defense. This year, with more time to practice, he has polished up his offensive play and is equally adept in that department of the game.

Pate is a junior weighing 190 pounds. He comes from Goldsboro and was on the Wake Forest team when Hickman coached there. Like Coon, he is six feet, on men tall. Pate is 20 years of age; Coon 23.

Man About Manhattan

New York—The recent crisis in Europe seemed to be a "brighter" for the communists in New York. People didn't go around taunting them while the USSR was closely allied with Britain and France in the Czech affair.

During this period of indecision abroad I had occasion to attend a Red meeting, and I was surprised to find them looking like anybody else. They wore suits of clothes, with ties and collars, and even shoes. Then a man with a sweater and a mass of wavy red hair got up and made a speech. I couldn't understand what he was talking about, but I did gather that the Fascists must be destroyed before the world revolution could successfully be brought about.

After the speech a motion picture was shown and it told a story of oppression in czarist days. The only trouble was that the grand dukes were such fine looking fellows that the poor oppressed underdog looked like a thug. Too he was a very bad actor, and the meeting wound up with everybody cheering for the grand dukes.

Later I attended a meeting for the Czechs in Madison Square Garden, and the thought occurred that if the Czechs had all these New York patriots at home they wouldn't need help from the Allies to fight their battles. There were many communists attending this meeting too, all cheering loudly for the little beleaguered state and casting dark looks in the direction of Yorkville, which is the German neighborhood in Manhattan. For a while I thought they might mistake East river for the Rhine, but after awhile everybody agreed that the Czechs should be helped, and amid much hissing for Herr Hitler, everybody went home.

On the way home I dropped by a nightclub in Greenwich Village just as a white-headed gentleman came in. He was an impressive figure, and by the way he took to the rumba music I recognized him instantly. By their hot-cha-ting ye shall know them, you know. It was former President Machado of Cuba, out for a little Latin exercising. The former executive, who was flushed from his capitol a few years back like a wild pigeon, is one of New York's foremost exponents of the tango and the rumba. He is a tireless dancer and can dance the night through (in fact, he frequently does) without sign of fatigue.

Which reminds me that probably the best informal dancer in New York is a former machine gunner in the German army. But he is an American citizen now and insists nothing could induce him to return to Europe. Why?

"I like this freedom over here," he says. "Never saw anything like it before."

Our ex-gunner now makes his living selling insurance, and he sells lots of it. He has never danced professionally and doesn't expect to, although he has had opportunities to go on the stage. "I dance for fun because I like it, and my wife, she is the best dancer, for me that I ever saw."

His wife is a petite American girl from Cleveland, with grey, laughing eyes and dark hair. The

North Carolina Praised Outside Of Her Borders

Raleigh, Oct. 15 — The unusual strides of North Carolina, during the past two years, indicate the great opportunities afforded American industries and manufacturers by the Southland, the greatest undeveloped untapped market in this country and the world.

No, the opening paragraph of this piece isn't this bureau's effort to do a bit of horn-blowing for this state. It is an extract from a double-leaded editorial in the Florence (Ala.) Times, headed "North Carolina as an Example to the Remainder of the South."

Progress of the Tar Heel state, it seems, has become known far beyond its boundaries.

The Florence paper outlines the recent report of J. T. Anderson, head of the division of Industry and Commerce, showing that nearly a hundred industries have located in North Carolina in the first eight months of this year. It adds: "We wonder if the fact that North Carolina has a Governor who has insisted upon law and order and the protection of the rights of industry, capital and property as well as the rights of labor, has not had to do with North Carolina's phenomenal progress in recent times? When capitalists, financiers and industrialists risk their money in private enterprises, one cannot blame them for seeking to place their investments where they will be given an opportunity to make a fair profit and where their property will not be subjected to damage by hoodlums and radicals."

"We must remember, however, that North Carolina's gains have not been made without effort on her part and on the part of her people."

Three New Friends

(Continued from Page One) today in England. But the settlement of the Sudeten issue is of great importance for a longer period as well. Why? Because up until the present crisis, neither Hitler nor Mussolini had met Chamberlain. They had thought of England as a declining power and of the British Premier as a timid, narrow-minded business man. Naturally, such an attitude was not favorable to peace. But at Munich, Hitler and Mussolini found Chamberlain a strong, courageous man. He made a powerful impression upon them and the three have apparently become good personal friends. As a result, other cancerous problems, such as the Spanish and Chinese wars, may also be cleaned up.

That we may have world peace as long as these three statesmen live and control Europe. This will be especially so if President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull continue to help. Their strong appeals to world public opinion have already had a great effect. Moreover, our Reciprocal Trade Agreements are hitting at one of the basic causes of world unrest—economic distress. I cannot now venture any forecast that there will be no European war in 1939. There may be more war scares over the next few months—perhaps sooner than most people expect. However, the new understanding among Europe's three big men gives real hope that new difficulties can be solved without war.

Yet, the English are not banking on peace. They do not intend to stop rearming and be caught napping again. They realize how much they have had "to take" because they were not ready to fight Mussolini and Hitler. Continued war preparation is, therefore, another stimulant for the near-term outlook. The arms program will continue at a feverish pace for at least two years more. It requires the decentralization of munition and airplane plants. Most important of all, it means the armor-plating of the decks of battleships so that they cannot be sunk by bombing planes.

World Inflation Seems Inevitable

Another factor in the business outlook is the probability of inflation. The bankers with whom I talk seem resigned to the thought that the world is headed for inflation. They see no hope of any country going back to the gold basis. They feel the massive armament programs of all major powers require some form of currency tinkering to finance them. One of the most impressive thoughts driven home to me on this visit is that inflation is inevitable. It has started on the Continent; it is now spreading to England; and is sure to affect the United States and Canada.

MORE DANGER OF FIRE IN WINTER

A graph prepared by the National Board of Fire Underwriters shows that fire losses usually increase at an alarming rate from September to December. "The reason for this is obvious," states the Board. "People start their stoves and furnaces as soon as cool weather arrives; in many cases neglecting to check over their heating plants. As a result, there is an epidemic of serious fires from defective equipment."

Soot-loaded chimneys are a major hazard. It is important to check up on chimneys for crack and holes, and to clean the flues every year. Flue linings are essential for safety.

Also, sagging, rusted smoke pipes cause trouble. Sparks may fly out and start a fire. Don't take this chance! Install a new pipe a safe distance from combustibles.

Another cause is overheated stoves and furnaces, the result of poor maintenance and faulty operation. If you don't get as much warmth as you should, the heater is probably out of order. You should consult a heating expert. Never "force" the fire in cold weather. Keep your heating plant clean and in good repair. Use metal containers for hot ashes.

For safety's sake check your heating equipment now, before real cold weather sets in.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Oct. 15—One of North Carolina's weirdest murder cases in recent years will be heard by the Supreme Court next week when the Justices listen to oral argument of the appeal by Baxter Parnell, of Cabarrus county, from a death verdict for the "witch doctor" killing of young Janie Fink with an ice pick.

"They will hear of roots and herbs which made the defendant's mind 'come and go,' of charms which will make wishes come true of a man who without apparent rhyme or reason emaciated and mutilated himself ten years ago, of 'cat-eyed' women and of 'rattle-tongue'."

Actual facts are almost undisputed. Parnell went to his own home one Sunday night where Janie Fink and his wife were, asked them to pray with him over a "little argument" he had earlier with the younger woman. They knelt, one woman on either side of Parnell.

As they prayed and, so far as the record discloses, without any warning of any sort Parnell plunged an ice pick into Miss Fink's breast. She died a few moments after reaching her father's home nearby and begging him to get a doctor.

Parnell made no effort to escape, but went to the home of a preacher who lived in the neighborhood, told of the stabbing and asked to be taken to the Sheriff's office. After being locked up he told a deputy sheriff that he had that day been to a witch doctor who had given him some roots to chew and when he chewed one of them his mind would come and go. At the trial he disclaimed any recollection whatever of the whole affair. His plea then was insanity.

There was testimony that in 1928 Parnell deliberately, but for no understandable reason, emaciated himself. His mother said he had been abnormal all his life. But the jury convicted him of first degree murder.

The alleged "witch doctor" denied she had given the defendant anything on the day of the crime, though she had on other occasions.

In addition to the Parnell case one other capital conviction will be reviewed by the Supreme court next week. Ed Robinson, Negro, was convicted of rape upon a white woman in Tredegar county.

One thing that should be remembered in all talk of possible "compromise" of the Deane-Burgin case, is that there is not even a scintilla of legal right on the part of any group—Democratic committee or other—to nominate a third candidate unless and until both Deane and Burgin have affirmatively withdrawn as candidates.

The Congressional Committee can nominate only in cases where there is no party candidate. In the present case there is a candidate who has been legally nominated, although his identity has not yet been legally determined.

The legal Democratic candidate is, of course, either Deane or Burgin, and as long as either of them declines to relinquish his claim no other name can be printed on the official ballot as the Democratic nominee.

Of course the Congressional committee could "recommend" anyone it chooses to the voters. Even if it were determined that one or the other of the current contestants has been duly nominated, the committee could, if it wanted to, advise Democrats of the Eighth to vote for some other candidate whom it named, but it couldn't get the Deane or Burgin name off the ballot nor its choice thereon.

One good football forecaster frankly confesses himself stymied by tonight's Wake Forest-State College game. Your correspondent offered to bet Bob Thompson, Governor's secretary, 15 cents on the affair and let Robert take his own choice of teams. He turned down the proposition.

Washington Daybook

By Frances Crozer

Washington—From Spain, China, and the United States army it is possible now to assemble a good picture of what will be necessary to protect our big cities from air attack in the next war to the extent they can be protected.

The stage was set at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, for a sample demonstration of one of the most pre-tentious air shows the army ever prepared. At the fort were assembled all the anti-aircraft guns east of the Rocky Mountains (it is a tiny handful, if you want to know) Assembled also were fleets of bombers, fast pursuit and combat planes from all over the country.

Other observers reported the planes. This sometimes gave direction of attack, but not necessarily. Enemy planes may fly for a time at a tangent to the city, then swing around from another direction to line up bomb sights on the target.

Over a zone nearly 200 miles in all directions from the fort, observers were posted in church steeples, fire towers, on water tanks or other elevated points from which they scanned the skies for approaching planes. Every 8 miles there was such an observation post so that nearly half of North Carolina was checkerboarded with watching men.

Civilians Lend A Hand Two thousand civilians manned the observation posts. Each volunteered his services for the test, just as he might be called upon to do in time of war.

Each had a telephone connecting directly with the central control room of the defense center. Two miles outside the fort a ring of anti-aircraft batteries was stationed. The batteries were 2 1/2 miles apart so that a fleet of planes coming from any direction would be under fire of at least two batteries of six guns each. The guns can shoot high explosive shells six miles—30,000 feet—into the air.

Two ring of machine guns circled the fort, while batteries of search lights were spotted far enough away to illuminate the planes the moment they came within range.

Far out on the rim of lookout stations the observers reported the approach of bombing planes by telephone to central headquarters. Pursuit planes were ordered into the air, or, if already aloft, they were told where the planes had been sighted.

Fighters Follow Bombers Sometimes the bombers were accompanied by their own pursuit and combat planes. Some of these may engage the defense planes while others "hedge hop" close to the grounds to attack the anti-aircraft guns or disable search light batteries. To meet this low-flying attack is the job of the rings of machine guns. The defense would order a "black-out" to blanket all lights; but enemy planes would drop huge flares.

Experience in Spain and China has been that bombers once under anti-aircraft fire, usually let go their bombs and head for home, regardless of whether they are able to sight on their targets. Japanese ships lie safely at anchor within easy range of Chinese air fleets. Munitions factories both in Government and insurgent Spain continue to operate, protected by their ground and air weapons.

The whole defense plan depends on quick detection of the attack. If the bombers get within 100 miles of the target, less than a half hour is left to determine the direction of attack, their altitude, and to get pursuit planes into the air to stop them.

A problem not yet solved is how to set a defense net for sea coast cities. There aren't any water tanks, fire towers or tall trees in the ocean, and studding the sea for 200 miles out with ships would be quite a task.

And can observers spot planes 20,000 feet in the air, at night?

DON'T MARRY THE MAN

By Jesse Bowman

The Characters

Kathleen Gregory: peppery red-haired member of the Gregory clan, goes West incognito to seek a right-of-way for the Golden Girl mine.

Donald MacDonal: young owner of the Stubborn Boy mine, hates the Gregorys.

Bridget: Kathleen's companion.

Yesterday: The son of a farmer breaks his leg, the daughter is sick, Kathleen goes after the Gregory doctor, whose services are free only for mine accidents.

Chapter 15

Pent Up Wrath

JOHNNY was a good sport, though a very white lipped sport. He wished they'd let him remain where he was, or take him home.

Tears smarting her eyes, she went into the Gregory store for "Golden oranges." They didn't stock them, nobody ever bought citrus fruit, excepting lemons, in the winter. The MacDonald store had plenty. She had a basket filled with fruit, rode back to the mine with the doctor, picked up her car and drove back to the cot.

"These are for the little girl," she told the mother when she had brought her the sojourn news of Johnny's luck. "She seemed to like fairy stories of—"

"Where did you get them?" demanded the woman.

"At—" Kathleen hesitated. "I know!" The apathetic figure straightened and hatred blazed from her eyes. "You've been fine, but get that fruit out of my house. I'll not poison a child of mine with MacDonald truck!"

Kathleen stood appalled. This mother would let her child do without what she needed, sooner than accept anything purchased from her enemy. She had forgotten she had said she would sooner sleep in the street than spend another night in a MacDonald hotel. Her hatred was a vengeful; this woman's hatred had been ingrained through three generations.

"I'll drive into Carsted," she told the woman. "You'll accept fruit from there won't you? And I've other purchases I want to make."

"Would you—" the woman hesitated. "Would it be asking too much for you to take Grandmama MacBride with you? She's never been to Carsted."

Kathleen set out for the nearest town with two guests. In the tonneau sat Grandmother MacBride, nearly smothered in blankets, her toothless mouth, wide with a happy smile. Beside her brisk, alert and talkative was Grandmother Barkus, the other old woman's crown.

Carsted reached Kathleen spent half of her time shopping, the other half writing an air-mail letter to her father.

"I demand you have every roof in Gregory repaired before sunset. I demand you release Doctor Cleveland from that assinine limitation. Give written permission for him to attend all Gregory people free of charge. He's more than willing."

"This is enough for now. I'll tell you what else is needed in my next letter. The missive was hurled east by air."

Epidemic

IT WAS after dark when Kathleen returned to Neutrality. Depositing the old women at their respective cots, she stopped at the young MacBrides Doctor Cleveland was there. He drew Kathleen outside.

"You seem capable of getting what you wish," he began, "I wish you'd find a way to permit me to care for this child. She's going into pneumonia if she isn't taken out of that damp hole and given proper nursing."

"Bring her to my place." It answered Kathleen promptly. "It's as big as a barn, but it is dry and we've plenty of fuel. I'll take care of her."

An anxious Bridget, who had seen Kathleen back the car out of the barn and drive off, with the since received word of her dashing around Neutrality down to the Golden Girl, then setting forth to find her standing there, cheeks white, eyes black with determination.

Behind Kathleen stood a man, a child wrapped in blankets in his arms. Behind the man was a nurse. "I'll open the parlor," greeted Bridget with quick understanding. "A steady fire in the living room will keep it at the right temperature."

Laura MacBride was the first victim of the influenza epidemic which struck Neutrality, especially the Gregory side, only an isolated case or two reaching the MacDonalds.

Within four days the old Gregory house had been turned into a hospital. Bridget and Kathleen alternating shifts, each with a hospital nurse.

By silent mutual consent a barrier of silence was thrown about the activities and not until the fourth day did Kit-Smyth learn what was taking place.

On the evening of that day he drove up to the Old Gregory house. Kathleen met him at the door. Weary with long nights of nursing and vicarious suffering for her patients, she was ready to release her pent up wrath against the Gregorys.

"You can't turn this house into a hospital," Kit-Smyth said. "Oh, can't I?" retorted Kathleen. "You try to stop me."

"That's precisely what I intend to do. Get those people out of there or I'll—"

"You'll what?" flared Kathleen. "I'm not moving people too ill to be moved, and what's more, when others need to come in their're coming, and not you, nor your whole damned county is going to stop me."

"I know someone who can," yelled Kit-Smyth. "If you haven't cleared that house within twenty-four hours I'll call on the law."

"You call on the law and I'll call on the Gregorys," promised Kathleen. "I know they're a rotten lot. I've seen enough and heard enough since I've been here to gauge them pretty accurately. However, even a Gregory must have an ounce of humanity, somewhere. If they haven't, they have order. Let them back me and I'll write friends I have on the New York newspapers and they'll hound them with publicity until they wish they had given in. You start something and I leave for Carsted the moment I'm through with my shift. I'll call this Angus Gregory and tell him a few things."

"And I suppose you think the New York operator will fall over herself to give you the Gregorys' non-listed number," observed Kit-Smyth, sarcastically.

"Acting Like A Child" HAVE you ever tried to keep a non-listed number from a newspaperman?" retorted Kathleen. "I'll have it within half an hour after I call."

"I'll call first," threatened Kit-Smyth. "You do and you'll be the sorriest man on this continent. If I can't reach the Gregorys, personally, I know a New York publisher who can. And I don't think a going shirt front like Angus, is poised to like that, do you?"

"All right, all right," soothed Kit-Smyth. "Forget it. Forget the whole thing. Run your damned hospital, but I'm promising you this. You'll pay for every bit of damage done to that house."

"That's a bargain because there isn't going to be any damage. But just remember. Let one officer of the law step his foot on this place, or serve me with any papers and I'll make things so hot for the Gregorys they'll wish they'd never heard of you."

Kathleen gave a sudden happy laugh. "So, that's it," she said. "No, as long as you play ball, I won't mention our tenancy to the Gregorys."

Kit-Smyth departed and on the MacDonald side of the house a window closed softly.

"I told you, lad, she'd be needing no help," said the house-keeper.

MacDonald frowned. "Queer. I could have sworn she was Kathleen Gregory." He laughed. "She certainly hasn't any more use for them than I have, has she?"

Kathleen made an arching face at the closed MacDonald window and pranced back to the Gregory house in triumph.

"That will look him," she told Bridget, who was just retiring.

"Oh, Cleo, there's a letter on the desk for you. I didn't want to waken you. What a dear, has someone hurt you?"

Kathleen opened the letter, found an enclosure inside and opened that. She read the contents, then to Bridget's astonishment, threw herself on the bed and cried.

"Cleo, don't I've never seen you cry. What a dear, has someone hurt you?"

"Not me," the girl sobbed, "but exactly. They've been hurting other people. Oh I'm sick of being a Gregory."

Bridget opened the letter and read it. It was from Beatrice Gregory.

My dear Niece:
I told Angus he should have some responsible person accompanying him. You're acting like a child. The idea of worrying your father with demands like that is as though he wasn't having trouble enough with the mine. He's gone to Canada for a rest. Before he left he said to tell you, "I'll try to quote him, just as he spoke when he read your letter."

"Repair those cots and let those damned MacDonalds, think they'd scared me into it. I won't put a penny in them if they all cave in."

And now my dear child, about the physician. After all we pay the regular wage scale, if the mine aren't thrifty enough to save their money and have a rainy day fund for illness, that is their fault.

Please let us hear no more about this. Your work is to obtain the right-of-way.
Lovingly,
Beatrice Gregory

Are Pretty Girls America's Best Salesmen?

By The AP Feature Service
MAYBE some of the country's salesmen still are men. But to judge from these pictures—representative of scores sent out every year—a good many people with something to sell are convinced that it takes a girl to do it.

BIG IDEA she's trying to sell is that this field is a good site for a corn-husking championship.

FOOTBALL TEAM at University of Miami is boosted by these punting coeds.

EXPOSITION of photographs is ballyhooed by a girl decorated with snapshots. (The snapshots really weren't necessary.)

CIGAR INDUSTRY presents a talking point in cigar-covered beauty.

CANADIAN DERNNESS a sportsman finds this (from Massachusetts) a good sport.

SEES PELLAGRA AS A DISGRACE Durham, Oct. 14.—The common southern disease of pellagra was described as "little short of a national disgrace," by Dr. William Henry Sebrell of Washington, D. C. addressing the symposium on medical problems at Duke university this morning. The noted speaker, an authority on dietary deficiency diseases, is surgeon in charge of field investigation of nutrition in the U. S. Public Health Service.

Declared National Shame by Symposium Speaker Dr. Sebrell's address followed a paper on a related topic, read by Dr. George Hoyt Whipple, dean of the school of medicine, University of Rochester. Dr. Whipple's subject was "Anemia and the Building of Hemoglobin in the Body." His paper was a technical discussion of experiments in the building up of red cells in the blood, while Dr. Sebrell gave a more popular interpretation.

THIS morning's session, one of six on the symposium program, was attended by more than 500 physicians from a wide area. Dr. William D. B. MacNider, dean of the school of bone or muscle structures of the back proper but which arise from derangement in other and sometimes remote organs and structures in the body. Displacement or inflammation of the pelvic organs in women, diseases of the kidney, falling of the longitudinal and transverse arches of the feet, are some of the conditions which may give rise to pains in the lower back.

Incidentally it is worth noting that pain in the lower back is less frequently due to disease of the kidneys than is commonly supposed. The treatment of pain in the lower back includes a variety of procedures, such as a reduction of weight, correction of postural faults, rest, corrective exercises and at times surgery.

Pain in the lower back should not be neglected. The prospects of an effective and easy correction of the condition are best when the required treatment is administered early. Be particularly alert to check back pains complained of by young children and adolescents.

Don't Yawn In Sleep! Asheville, O.—(AP)—Joseph Harvey, 25 yawned and stretched in his bed at 5 a. m., and poked a hand through a nearby window. Three stitches closed the wound.

From all indications, Mr. Thorne said, "there is a possibility of Congress doing something when it convenes to provide a subsidy payment to the farmer on the 1938 cotton crop. Senator Smith and other southern senators have expressed themselves as feeling that in the face of the short cotton crop in the southeast something must be done to help increase the cotton farmer's income and they are working for some provision whereby the Government can lend a helping hand."

Mr. Thorne urged farmers of this section to deliver their cotton to the association and there take either the Government loan or the association's liberal advance and hold their cotton for a price rise.

The association is holding all Government notes in such a way that the producer can get them back at any time without delay or red tape." Mr. Thorne said, pointing out that the association does not do like many other lending agencies and send the notes to Charlotte or Washington, but instead that it will hold them in Raleigh until the cotton is actually taken over by the government and that even then complete records will be made so that if later on the farmer wants to claim a subsidy he can do so without any trouble.

"This is highly important," he said, "in view of the fact that the government may do something to make available additional payments to the farmer. Too, if cotton goes up the farmer who gets his loan through the association will be in position to sell his cotton and take advantage of the rise.

Mr. Thorne said that deliveries to the cotton association "are most encouraging" and they are running ahead of 1936 when the crop was approximately 40 per cent larger than it is this year.

PREMIUM LINT GROWN IN N. C.

Nine Out of Every 10 Bales Staple 15-16 or Better

Farmville, Oct. 14.—Nine out of every ten of the 75,000 bales of cotton sinned in North Carolina up to October 1 stapled 15-16 or better and as such were entitled to a staple premium under the Government loan plan. John T. Thorne, member of the board of directors of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association, said here today.

Mr. Thorne, who has just returned from the October meeting of the board of directors of the association, said that with the North Carolina cotton crop this year only a little more than one-half of what it was last year is up to the farmer to handle his cotton in such a way as to get the highest possible dollar from it.

SEES PELLAGRA AS A DISGRACE

Declared National Shame by Symposium Speaker

Durham, Oct. 14.—The common southern disease of pellagra was described as "little short of a national disgrace," by Dr. William Henry Sebrell of Washington, D. C. addressing the symposium on medical problems at Duke university this morning. The noted speaker, an authority on dietary deficiency diseases, is surgeon in charge of field investigation of nutrition in the U. S. Public Health Service.

Dr. Sebrell's address followed a paper on a related topic, read by Dr. George Hoyt Whipple, dean of the school of medicine, University of Rochester. Dr. Whipple's subject was "Anemia and the Building of Hemoglobin in the Body." His paper was a technical discussion of experiments in the building up of red cells in the blood, while Dr. Sebrell gave a more popular interpretation.

This morning's session, one of six on the symposium program, was attended by more than 500 physicians from a wide area. Dr. William D. B. MacNider, dean of the school of ROBERT TOOMBS, brilliant orator, senator, brigadier-general and Confederate Secretary of State, was never pardoned! After Appomattox, Toombs went into exile abroad for two years, and upon returning home, he chose to forego national honors rather than renew allegiance to the Federal government. He was a native of Washington, Georgia.

A MOLLUSK WITH EYES, THE LOWLY SCALLOP CAN ACTUALLY SEE!

Contrary to general belief, the SCALLOP can see! Under the outer fringe of its mantle are located little eyes that gleam from between the long tentacles of its lower mantle-border. They are usually deeply colored, either indigo-blue or green, and appear to be endowed with optical powers of a fairly high order.

Hoco's Your Health?

LOW BACK PAIN

With much poetic license but with justification, one may say that the price for man's upright position is a pain in his lower back.

Man has probably walked erect for millions of years and yet his constitution has not developed to a point where his skeletal and muscular structures operate with the highest degree of efficiency.

He is subject to round shoulders, to exaggerated curvatures in the spinal column, to painful complications at the keystone-like juncture between the lower portion of his spine and his pelvic bones and to a variety of bone and muscle disturbances affecting his feet.

The lower back is a particularly vulnerable region. The entire weight of the upper body structure is transmitted to the pelvis and legs through the joint formed between the lower portion of the spinal column (the sacrum) and the pelvic bones.

Many conditions may contribute to the development of weakness and pain in this region: bad posture, overweight, injury, occupational strains, and a variety of diseases, notably arthritis. Again, the anatomical structure of the lower back may be inherently weak.

Mention must also be made of the back pains which are not due to organic or functional defects in the

STATE PATROL WINS PRAISES

Hailed for Work At Fair and Football Activities

Raleigh, Oct. 15—The State Highway Patrol has recently been receiving verbal bouquets for two of its activities of this fall—handling of traffic for the State Fair, in progress here this week, and keeping traffic orderly at football games played at Chapel Hill, Durham, Raleigh and Wake Forest.

This correspondent has heard literally scores of people declare that but for the patrolmen, traffic to and from the Fair Grounds this week would be hopelessly snarled.

As it is, patrolmen have been on duty near each auto gate to the grounds and along the main highways for some distance on both sides, with the result that even on such "big" days as the Lucky Teeter performance Wednesday and the State Employees' holiday today, there has been no real jam at any time.

While some criticism of the patrol's football game activities has been heard on the general theory that they could better be engaged somewhere else, the overwhelming consensus of motorists undoubtedly favors the plan which the Patrol command has adopted of patrolling all roads within several miles of each Saturday's big game and stationing patrolmen at strategic intersections for many miles around.

Those who used to attend games before the patrol took the situation in hand point to the fact that whereas it was once a tremendous job to get to games, there is now virtually no confusion.

They contend, too, that accidents on football days are now decided rarities, while afortime there wasn't a Saturday without its toll of dead or seriously injured.

Alaska is soon to receive the United States government's attention in the establishment of defense works on its Pacific coast as a precaution against attack from Asia.

CROP OUTLOOK REPORTS GOOD

Prospect Still Somewhat Uncertain As Yet, However

Raleigh, Oct. 15—Crop prospects in North Carolina are still somewhat uncertain and estimates of yields difficult to make, according to the monthly crop estimate of the crop reporting service of the North Carolina and United States Departments of Agriculture, reporting on the outlook as of October 1.

"The 1938 season has been filled with variable and uncertain weather, labor and other planting problems. Thus it has been difficult to forecast crops with the usual reliability," the report says.

A glance through the list shows that the estimated yields are smaller in most cases than the actual 1937 yields, though there are exceptions to this rule.

A standpoint case is that of hay, which will set a new all-time record for North Carolina, according to the report.

"1938 has been one of the best hay yielding years on record in North Carolina. This was true for spring, summer and fall hays. The present estimate of 972,000 tons in prospect this year is an improvement over the estimate of a month ago and is 18 per cent more than was harvested in the state last year. It is the heaviest hay crop on record in North Carolina," the report declares.

Sharpest drop of all is recorded in the prospective apple crop which is estimated as of October 1, at 2,014,000 bushels as compared with an actual yield of 4,505,000 bushels last year. The crop is put at only 38 per cent of a "full" one.

Other fruits are not so badly off from average harvests. Dry conditions in the Piedmont and mountain areas were reported as responsible for the decline in fruit prospects, while pecan growers in the eastern counties reported favorable weather conditions.

Corn yields are reported slightly above the ten-year average. Peanut prospects are slightly below a year ago. The late Irish potato crop in the mountain areas experienced favorable growing conditions. Both yield and quality are regarded good for this area. Vine growth for sweet potatoes has been excellent and the expected yield indicates favorable weather conditions.
