Dale Carnegie Here Wednesday.

Having taught more than 30,000 men and women the art of effective speaking and personality development in the last 26 years, Dale Carnegie, the business and professional men's favorite speaker, should be an authority on his topic "How to Win Friends and Influence People." He will lecture at East Carolina Teachers College Wednesday night, December 7, at 8:30.

So valuable have his courses proved themselves in business relationships that such conservative organizations as the New York Telephone Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., have had Mr. Carnegie's course given on their premises for their own employees.

One of Dale Carnegie's books, "Public Speaking and Influencing Men in Business," is the official text of a number of study courses conducted by national organizations, among them the Y.M.C.A., the American Bankers Association and the National Credit Men's Association. And of course, everyone has heard of his book "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

It covers the topic Mr. Carnegie will discuss in his lecture Wednesday night.

Vesper Services.

The Rev. T. M. Grant, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, in a thought-provoking talk to the Y.W.C.A. vesper group on Sunday night at the college, attempted to answer the question "What is religion?"

"Suppose I ask you a question or two to begin with," said Mr. Grant. "Can you define for men the meaning of religion? What is religion?" He said that this answer may be found in one's attitude to life—that religion is a relationship.

Why is religion not popular with some people? He answered this question with a story of some young people who had come to him for advice about joining the church. They wanted to know what they would

Library News

The Bookmobile started out this morning.

This is a Works Progress Administration project sponsored by Sheppard Memorial Library. During the next few weeks the bookmobile carrying an attractive collection of books, will make two trips through Pitt county with definitely announced stops, at which interested people may call and take out books for reading. It is a kind of library on wheels. The government agency and the library both hope by this effort to encourage the use and demand for books in Pitt county. After the bookmobile service is ended those people who want to read are cordially invited to come into Sheppard Memorial Library, look around, and find just the best book for the "dog winter evenings now with us.

In preparing the family genealogy described in a Reflector item on Thursday, the compilers used a very rare historic document "A Brief and True Report of the New Found Land of Virginia," by Thomas Hariot. Collectors of rare English books always speak reverently and even mysteriously of the Quarto Hariot. This book, No. 296.

The stormy weather is making trouble for the telegraph wires. Today fusionism in Pitt county drops out of sight to come "no more." Pitt county is again in the hands of the Democrats. The new officers went in today. It was so stormy Sunday morning that the Baptist could not have Sunday school. The schools which met in the afternoon had better weather.

Social Security Will Be One Legislative Problem

Raleigh, Dec. 3.—Revision of the state's Social Security statutes will be among the live legislative issues of the 1939 General Assembly, although there is no clear indication at present that any drastic changes in the setup will be made.

From Mecklenburg comes word that Representative Marvin L. Ritch plans to introduce and fight for a bill making every person in North Carolina beneficiary of Old Age Assistance at the age of 65. His contention is that the present Social Security setup of North Carolina is nothing more or less than a "poor law" proposition. His contention is that need should not be made a requirement for assistance, but that every man and woman 65 and above should receive the benefits.

Ritch is not expected to have a great deal of influence in the Assembly—he has been too chameleon-like in changing his political colors—and it is not likely that his proposal will get more than passing consideration; especially in view of the fact that the state's revenues are lagging somewhat behind those of the previous fiscal year and the legislators are likely to assemble in a very "economical" frame of mind.

There may be more than a little support, however, for some plan to relieve the counties of the fourth they now pay toward the assistance and thereby secure uniform operation of the Social Security plan throughout the state, as well as relieve the hard pressed local units of the need for raising the revenue.

Statistics show that the average paid in Old Age Assistance and Aid to Dependent Children varies very widely in the various counties of the state.

Complete breakdown of statistics by counties are not available for any more recent month than December, 1937, but in that period there was a wide difference in the counties. In Old Age Assistance, for example, the average Buncombe county resident was paid $16. From that high the payments ran progressively down to the $5.30 paid in Yadkin. In four other counties the average per recipient ran less than $6.00. These were Allegheny $5.67; Hyde $5.55; Johnston $5.89, and Scotland $5.58.

At the upper end of the scale there were, beside Buncombe, sixteen counties paying an average of more than $10 per recipient. They were Alamance $12.52; Burke $11.12; Cabarrus $10.72; Cumberland $10.25; Duplin $10.08; Durham $13.29; Edgecombe $10.33; Forsyth $14.29; Gaston $10.71; Greene $10.25; Guilford $13.61; Haywood $10.45; Mecklenburg $12.31; New Hanover $12.63; Surry $10.02, and Wake $11.22.

For the entire state the 20,976 recipients received an average payment of $9.28 in December, 1937.

Since then the number of recipients has increased to almost 35,000 but the average amount is still less than $10, according to latest statistics.

At the end of 1937 North Carolina was one of six states paying less than $10 to the average recipient, with only Arkansas $9.15 and Mississippi's $4.52 below it. Among the 50 units (48 states, Alaska and the District of Columbia) the highest average per recipient payment was made in Colorado with $39.61. The average for all 50 was $18.35, almost double the North Carolina average payment.

The figures are from the Bureau Report No. 1 of the National Social Security Board Bureau of Research and Statistics. Despite these figures, every effort to raise the amount of payments in North Carolina is likely to break down on the rock of economy and lack of revenue, though it isn't a bad bet that there will be changes made in the direction of greater uniformity throughout the state.
