HULL ADDRESS HIGHLIGHT OF TODAY'S MEET

Delegates to Pan-American Conference Await Talk

Foreign Ministers of Argentine and Peru Also Scheduled Appear on Program

Lima, Peru, Dec. 10. (AP)—The Pan-American conference looked to Secretary Cordell Hull and the foreign ministers of Argentina and Peru today for keynote speeches charting a course for the 21 republics of the Western Hemisphere.

Delegates throughout this hill-rimmed Peruvian capital evinced keen interest in the three speeches scheduled for a late afternoon session, which were expected not only to call for closer Pan-American cooperation, but perhaps to indicate how far their respective governments were willing to go in that direction.

With Secretary Hull on the second day's conference program were Foreign Minister Jose Marie Cantilo of Argentina and Dr. Carlos Concha, foreign minister of Peru. Peru's dynamic president, Oscar Benavides, opened the conference and colorful pageantry yesterday with the assertion that the Western Hemisphere "wishes to be strong in order to be respected."

Though stressing the community of ideals and interests that let American nations into American nations, he was careful to say such unity did not cut the Western Hemisphere off from the rest of the world.

Soon after the formal opening Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, Jr. told a radio audience that the United States was not seeking military alliances with the Latin-American republic.

Such a course was "out of the question," Berle asserted, denying rumors he said were current.

Rescue Americans Stranded in China

Shanghai, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Evacuation of 32 foreigners, about one-third of whom were Americans, from the former mountain resort of Kuling, was completed today.

Despite a raging storm, the party of men, women and children descended the winding 13-mile pass carved out of a mountainside and boarded a Japanese army transport at Kiating. They had been isolated in their refuge since last July 26.

Officers of the United States gunboat Monocacy reported the successful evacuation to the cruiser Augusta here.

The transport was expected to start for Shanghai as soon as the weather abated.

With the Kuling refugees evacuated, the work of United States gunboats in that region of the Yangtze river was considered to be virtually completed and the Monocacy was expected to start soon for Shanghai.

Farmville Woman Injured In Wreck

The first accident of the month investigated by local State highway patrolmen occurred about 7 o'clock last night on the Contentnea creek bridge between Greenville and Farmville. No one was seriously injured.

Investigating patrolmen declared that a truck owned by the Herman Spee construction company and driven by Ray Little and a passenger automobile driven by Mrs. Wyatt Holmes of Farmville collided on the creek bridge. Mrs. Holmes sustained an injury to her arm, but was not considered seriously injured.

Little was charged with operating an automobile with improper lights.

ARMY'S NEW RIFLE TRIPLES SPEED

Multiply the old speed by three to get the firing speed of the U. S. Army's new semi-automatic rifle being built at Springfield, Mass., where above welding is one phase of the intricate operations. The rifle, developed by John Garand, senior ordnance engineer, after 15 years of patient work, fires three times as fast as the Army's old Springfield rifle.

ITALIANS LOOK TO SUEZ CANAL

Authoritative Editor Demands Hand In Control

Rome, Dec. 10.—(AP)—The authoritative editor, Virginio Gayda, voiced an Italian demand today for a share in the control of the Suez canal after citing figures showing that Italian traffic through the Near East artery was second only to that of Great Britain.

"Administration of the Suez canal must no longer be composed of a private group of capitalists, but by representatives of all nations which make use of the canal in proportion to the extent of their traffic," Gayda said.

In most other means of expression Italian claims for gratification of her desires in French Tunisia subsided suddenly.

A small group of students marched again on the French embassy in Rome, but lost their enthusiasm for the demonstration when they encountered a heavy police guard.

Similar demonstrations occurred in Naples.

Lo Tribuna published a cartoon picturing Tasquale Paoli, was fought to free Corsica from French rule in 1795, rising from his grave the caption over the cartoon said "The Call of Mother Country," apparently meaning Italy.

Expect Large Vote on Quota Question

A large per cent of the approximately 8,000 Pitt county farmers eligible to vote in today's tobacco referendum trekked to the polls today and expressed themselves either for or against establishment of marketing quotas.

It was impossible to make any accurate estimate of the number participating in the referendum, but pollholders indicated that the vote would be heavy.

It was the general opinion that the required 75 per cent favorable vote would be cast in this county, but more serious opposition was reported by a number of the other tobacco-producing counties in Eastern North Carolina.

More than 98 per cent of the votes cast in the previous referendum were favorable. Even the most optimistic did not believe such a large favorable majority would be cast today.

THE POLITICAL PICTURE

Babson Sees President And New Congress Deadlocked

By ROGER W. BABSON Washington, D. C., Dec. 10.—A whole month has slipped by since the elections; Congress will convene in less than another month. Hence, this is an ideal time for readers to look both backward and forward. What happened at the polls last month was a tremendous surprise to many people. They had come to believe that Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal were something permanent. They felt that they were not subject to the same fundamental Law of Action and action that applies to all spheres of human activity. They were, therefore, astounded by the huge New Deal losses in November. The election can be explained this way: The American people have been sick for a number of years. F. D. Roosevelt has been the family doctor but he has refused to

New Supervisor

R. M. Garrett, president of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, today announced that R. C. Rankin, sales supervisor of the Lumberton market for a number of years, had been employed as supervisor of the Greenville market.

Mr. Rankin, who comes here highly recommended, will assume his duties February 1. Since he has been in Lumberton sales on that market have increased from 16,000,000 to 27,000,000 annually.

He will succeed K. W. Cobb who resigned after serving the market for 15 years.

LEAF FIGURES ARE REVEALED

Total of 484,406,530 Pounds Sold in N.C. To December 1

Raleigh, Dec. 10.—(AP)—North Carolina farmers through December 1 had sold 484,406,530 pounds of tobacco for an average of $23.15 per hundred pounds, compared with an average of $25.12 for 330,706,765 pounds marketed at the same time last year, the State Department of Agriculture reported today.

W. H. Rhodes, chief of the department's statistics division, said growers had marketed their crop more rapidly this season than last and a larger percentage of the crop had been sold by December 1 than had been disposed of by the same time in 1937.

Last year's crop brought North Carolina farmers $141,060,367.

During November producers' sales totaled $1,263,239 pounds for an average of $21.09, compared with 90,036,736 pounds sold in November, 1937, for an average of $23.65.

Last month producers' sales and averages were reported as follows by belts, with comparative figures for a year ago:

Old and Middle belts, 41,966,453 pounds for $21.36, compared with 52,200,789 pounds for $23.01; and New belt, 9,296,781 pounds for $19.82, compared with 37,855,947 pounds for $24.52.

China's first railway, 10 miles in length between Shanghai and Wusong, was built by foreign enterprise in 1876. After a farmer had been run over and killed, however, it was purchased by the Chinese Government and torn up.

consult another doctor when some of the family desired it. On November 8, the family decided to call in another doctor. They did not discharge Dr. Roosevelt but they voted not to leave things entirely up to him. They appreciate the various shots-in-the-arm which he has provided. Nevertheless, the American people are intelligent enough to know that the many brands of New Deal spendin-and-land therapy are not attacking the illness at its source.

What Can The New Doctor Do? Hence, another doctor on the job should have a good psychological effect, even though the second physician is probably not in a position now to prescribe any fundamentally different treatment. In fact, in my opinion, the Republicans in the recent campaign did not sufficiently

'BOOKMOBILE' NOW IN COUNTY

Itinerary Next Week Is Announced by Sponsors

The Bookmobile from the State Library Commission made its first trip according to schedule, this past week. The Bookmobile is cooperating with Sheppard Memorial Library in giving complete service to Pitt county.

On the day the Bookmobile started, there already was in circulation in the county more than a thousand books from the Sheppard Memorial Library, taken out over a period of time.

The book-truck fills in the gaps in the county service and brings books within the reach of many who cannot come at all, or at best infrequently, to the library in Greenville.

Interested crowds greeted the Bookmobile at its first stops. Eleven hundred and eighty-three books were loaned out free of charge the first five days to county residents.

Free books will be available to all residents of the various sections of the county during the demonstration of the next two months.

The books furnished by the Commission will be supplemented with books from the shelves of the local library. The Bookmobile will give special attention to the rural schools and isolated farms, and bring diversion and mental enrichment to farm women and their children.

Text week the following points will be visited by the Bookmobile:

Monday: Dec. 12, 26; Jan. 9 and 23 — 9:30 A. M., Stokes School; 11:10 A. M., Stokes postoffice; 1:00 P. M., Pactious School; 3:30 P. M., Fleming's Cross Roads.

Tuesday: Dec. 13, 27; Jan. 10 and 24 — 9:30 A. M., Leen's Cross Roads; 11:00 A. M., Bethel High School; 1:30 P. M., Bethel Grade School; 3:15 P. M., Bethel Railroad Street by Drug Store.

Wednesday: Dec. 14, 28; Jan. 11 and 25 — 9:15 A. M., Grimesland School; 11:45 A. M., Grimesland postoffice; 2:00 P. M., Simpson; 3:15 P. M., Shelmerville.

Thursday: Dec. 15, 29; Jan. 12 and 26 — 9:30 A. M., Bell Arthur School; 11:15 A. M., Ballard's Club building; 1:00 P. M., Red Oak club building; 3:15 P. M., Mrs. R. W. Bowling (on John Thorne farm).

Friday: Dec. 16, 30; Jan. 13 and 27 — 9:15 A. M., County Home; 10:15 A. M., Chieod School; 1:00 P. M., Black Jack Store; 2:20 P. M., Hugh Stokes' Store (Gardnersville).

President Roosevelt, in his Chapel Hill speech, referred several times to his illustrious kinsman, Theodore Roosevelt, always a friend of the public library. The following statement is taken from one of his public addresses: "After the church and the school, the free public library is the most effective influence for good in America. The moral, mental and material benefits to be derived from it are carefully selected collection of books, free for the use of all the people, can not be over-estimated. No community can afford to be without a free public library."

Invited To Class The Men's Bible class of Good Fellowship of the First Presbyterian church, has issued a general invitation to all men in the city to attend its Sunday morning meeting at 9:45 o'clock and hear A. E. Gibson.

During the World war the average number of letters censored in a day by the British was 375,517.

MANY CHANGES PROPOSED FOR SECURITY ACT

Council Recommends Broadening of Old-Age Insurance

WOULD PROVIDE FOR DEPENDENTS

Report Of Security Advisory Board Be Made Public Some Time Next Week

Washington, Dec. 10.—(AP)—The Social Security advisory council drafted today sweeping recommendations for broadening the government's old age insurance system.

While the council's official report will not be made public until some time next week, informed persons said, its principal recommendations would include:

- 1. Provisions for monthly payments to the widow and dependent children of workers covered by the Social Security act, and for $200 funeral expenses to the families of "covered" workers who die before reaching the age of 65.
2. Some provision for the wives and dependent children of those over 65 receiving monthly payments.
3. Move the date for beginning old age payments up from January 1, 1942, to January 1, 1940.
4. Broaden the act to include immediately 2,600,000 seamen and workers in banks, charitable and religious organizations.
5. Broaden the act later to include probably in 1941, an estimated 6,000,000 farm and domestic workers.
6. Provide that payments to married men over 65 to $10 more a month than those to single men.
Informed persons said expansion of aid to wives, widows and children would raise costs to such an extent that the government probably would have to put in funds from other sources, unless the Social Security tax system is revised.

Vote Of Confidence Given French Premier Daladier By Majority Of 75 Votes

GARNER'S DESK ALL A'CLUTTER

To get a headstart on the opening of Congress Jack Reeves of Conway, Ark., checks over some of the work already piled on the desk of Vice-President John N. Garner. A "Garner for President" boom was recently launched near Detroit, Texas.

WINS WITHOUT AID OF PARTY

Fragile Majority Enables Daladier Continue Program For Smashing of Strikes and Resisting Italy's Colonial Ambitions in French Protectorates

Paris, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Premier Daladier carved out a new, but fragile majority in the Chamber of Deputies today, enabling him to carry on his strike-smashing and his fight against Italy's colonial ambitions.

The "strong man" of France nevertheless appeared to be the political prisoner of his own divided Radical Socialist party.

In a session of the chamber which lasted until 2:25 a. m., the best Daladier could wring from the quarrelling, shouting deputies was a majority of 74 votes out of the chamber's 618.

The vote of confidence was 315 to 241.

His new majority was based on conservative support, ranging all the way from his own moderately conservative party to the extreme right French Social party.

The Socialists and communists who formally joined with the Radical Socialists to form the People's Front voted solidly against Daladier.

The Premier seemed to be faced with three possible roads, all fraught with danger:

- 1. He may continue with the present shaky majority.
2. He may ask President LeBrun and the senate to dissolve the chamber and go back to the people for new elections.
3. He may resign in the hope of forming a new government based on more solid ground.

The last two steps, however, would only be "last resorts," his associates indicated.

Virginia Trooper Shot, N. C. Escapee Suspected

Assailant Said To Be Man Involved in Burlington Slayings

Stuart, Va., Dec. 10.—(AP)—L. E. Thomas, a Virginia state trooper, was shot and critically wounded on a snow-covered mountain road near here early today by a man who, Thomas said he believed, was Roy Kelly, escaped North Carolina convict.

Kelly has been sought by police of two states in the killing of a sheriff and a police officer at Burlington, N. C., early Wednesday.

Patrick County, Commonwealth Attorney P. T. Burton, who was allowed a brief interview with Thomas at the hospital early today, said "he is convinced Kelly shot him."

Thomas, on the watch with other Virginia officers for Kelly, started pursuit of a sedan which sped through Stuart last night.

Near Lover's Leap, which stands 3,300 feet in the Blue Ridge near the headwaters of the Dan river, the trooper overtook and stopped the car. As he got out of his automobile, he told Burton, a man in the other car fired, the bullet striking him near the heart.

Though seriously wounded the trooper managed to get back into his own car and drive to the home of Henry Cassell, about two miles away in the mountainous country.

Weather For The Week South Atlantic states, showers at beginning of week and possibly again in latter part, colder about Tuesday, warmer Wednesday or Thursday and colder near end of the week.

J. H. Waldrop, president of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association, when seen today and asked how he felt about the praise of the association from Dr. McCain, said "Naturally, not only the president and officers of the association, but the Pitt county citizens at large were as much pleased of Dr. McCain's high regard for the tuberculosis control work being done in Pitt county through our association in cooperation with the Pitt County Health Department." He added: "We hope at some time in the future to get an additional unit of the N. C. State Sanatorium located in Pitt county."

Dads Entertained By Stokes Youths

Members of the Future Farmers of America of the Stokes community last night entertained their fathers at the regular father-son banquet and a large number attended the dinner-meeting.

The various boys reviewed the achievements since the organization was established.

Pitt County members of the 1939 legislature were invited and Senator Arthur B. Cory and Representative John S. Moore made brief talks. Other special guests at the meeting included County School Superintendent D. H. Conley; C. D. Ward, principal of the Winterville school; J. H. Mobley, agricultural teacher at Winterville; and S. F. Peterson, agriculture teacher at the Ayden school.

Trace Automobile Used For Robbery

Shelby, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Sheriff Raymond Cline said today a man booked as Erwin Williams of Morganton had been taken into custody for questioning in connection with the $1,111 robbery of a bank at Fallston yesterday.

Cline said Williams was owner of an Oldsmobile coupe bearing Michigan license plates used in the robbery. It was understood yesterday the car had been reported stolen.

The sheriff said Williams "had a title to it in his pocket."

He said no formal charge had been brought against the man, pending investigation.

City and County Schools Close 16th

Announcements have been made that both the Pitt county and Greenville schools would begin the two weeks' Christmas holidays on next Friday afternoon, with work to be resumed on Monday morning, January 7.

D. H. Conley, county school superintendent, announced that work on the buses and buildings would be done during the two weeks.

With Christmas coming on Sunday, students and teachers will have one week holiday before and one week afterwards.

WHAT IT MEANS: THE FRENCH CRISIS

By MORGAN M. BEATTY (AP Feature Service Writer) Washington — You can spell out the persistent crisis in France with a four-letter word everybody knows—D-E-B-T!

If France could whip her debt problem, she could go a long way toward whipping her every other problem—internal and external.

For that reason Washington observers of the world scene are pricking up their ears over Premier Daladier's "three-year plan for economic mobilization of the nation." They think it is far more significant than the exciting strike news or the Italian hub-bub for colonies.

The experts read into M. Daladier's plan a scheme to entice cap-

Facts About Service League.

Do you know what the Service League of Greenville is? The Service League is a newly formed group in town which was organized in October along the lines of the Junior League found in larger cities. Like the Junior League, the local League is primarily interested in charity work, and will cooperate with the members of the Service League charitable organizations in town.

The charter members of the Service League are last year's Thrift Shop workers. The Thrift Shop is continuing its good work of last year and is now the main project of the Service League. But the League hopes to begin other projects in the future. The Thrift Shop and the Service League use a joint office located upstairs at the Dickinson avenue branch bank building—telephone 1009-J.

TEACHERS WIN 44-38 CONTEST

Shelton Scores Total of 26 Points to Lead Locals

East Carolina Teachers College triumphed 44-38 to put down a basketball revolt staged by Wake Forest's Rebels in an hour of severe fighting on home territory last night.

Bill Shelton surpassed other playing performances as he sank enough well-timed shots to garner a combined total of 26 points. In fact, most of the scoring of the contest was sandwiched around tallies by Shelton and Beamer Barnes, who was the next high scorer with 22 points.

During the first two minutes of play, Barnes got a basket and duplicated his feat shortly thereafter to give his colleagues an advantage. This didn't last but two minutes Shelton, by the distance-shot route racked up his mates first tally.

It was Milton Glass who created a deadlock early in the first half, and his feat was repeated by members of both teams nine times after that. There was so much seeing that neither team was able to build up a decided advantage during any part of the game, especially when Shelton began his victory march.

Spirited by a half-time rest, the Teachers came from behind an 18-17 lead held by the Rebels at intermission when Lester Ridenhour got a field goal within the first minute after the second half was started. From this stage of the game it was Shelton and Barnes.

Every member of Coach Gordon Gilbert's contingent played a good brand of ball against the swift Rebels. Never before have local fans seen any better distant shots than those executed last night by Bill Shelton.

Another Monday The Teachers will match their playing ability with that of the Williamston Martins here Monday night, and will likely have a tough battle on their hands.

During the present season, the Martins came about on the big end over two verdicts over Atlantic Christian College. In the 23 games played by the Martins last season, 912 points were recorded.

In Monday night's contest, the Martins' regulars of last season, Grant Jefferson, Glennwood, Arkansas High, and Sammie Taylor, former Campbell College player, both centers, will be on hand to participate in the game. Anderson, with 210 points, was high scorer for the Martins last season.

The Martins' biggest threat is Fenner Wallace, forward. If you remember, Wallace was an ace with the Bethel Red Raiders last season. The visiting contingent is one of the best independent teams in this section of the state.

Lineups and individual scoring: Rebels: Forwards — Barnes 22, Payne 8, center — Heisabek, 5, guards — Stainback 1, Evans 2. Teachers: Forwards — Smith 4, Glass 5, Martin; center — Shelton 26; guards — Ridenhour 6, Hinton 2, Ayers.

WILL IMPROVE TRUCK SERVICE

Operators of Petroleum Carrier Lines Making Plans

Raleigh, Dec. 9—Operators of petroleum truck lines in North Carolina, some fifty strong, met here Wednesday to "plan improved service for North Carolina," according to Miss Frances Johnson, executive secretary.

It was clearly indicated, though not announced by any officials of the meeting, that the meeting planned the legislative strategy to be followed by the petroleum truck interests during the coming session of the General Assembly.

So far there has been no indication of any determined or specific drive against the truckers, but in view of the everlasting hostility of the rail interests and the frequent clamor about the damage done to roads by the heavy gasoline and petroleum trucks, the industry is always on the lookout for hostile maneuvers.

Miss Johnson reported that the truckers aim to capitalize on the conceded advantages of economy and flexibility of service offered by trucks and, said that by constant efforts to improve the service, truck transportation of gasoline and petroleum products will soon be recognized as absolutely necessary.

The advantages of the service have already been clearly pointed out by such governmental agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission which has repeatedly pointed out advantages held by the trucks over the rails.

One of the most illuminating of these decisions, she said was handed down in granting an application for extension of service to one Moe Gollock, in which the Commission said: "Among reasons for the superiority of tank-truck service were the following:

Transporting in less-carload lots an advantage not obtained in rail service.

Price fluctuations make inadvisable the storage of gasoline, resulting in necessity for speed in service in cutting points.

Three grades of gasoline can be transported in applicant's equipment on the same trip.

MORAL: Little Worry Brings Bowl Bids

WALLACE WADE of Duke (left) had his anxious moments whenever someone threatened to score on his team this year, but he ended with a Rose Bowl invitation. T.C.U. Coach Dutch Meyer (extreme right with his star and chief assistant worrier, Davey O'Brien) looked like this as his Horned Frogs staged one of their 10 wins. Now they go to the Sugar Bowl.

HOWARD JONES of Southern California (left) is a grid worrier of long standing. Now he has a Rose Bowl invitation and a victory over Notre Dame. Bill Kern (right) of Carnegie Tech was especially worried as he protested, unavailingly, a decision in the Notre Dame game. (Elmer Layden, back to camera, dark suit). Carnegie Tech will meet T.C.U. in the Sugar Bowl.

Footballing in Pasadena Rose Bowl January 2. This despite that many are not sure as to presence there would climax the State's advertising program about which so much has been said and writt n.

Julian Miller, chairman of the Governor's commission to study the state's educational setup now estimates that $1,000,000 annually will finance the additional cost of the program recommended by the commission.

WAGNER ACT champion Edwin S. Smith (above), member of the National Labor Relations board, said in Boston that proposed changes in the Wagner Act are not necessary.

SHORT SHOTS

Raleigh, Dec. 10—After reading the travel blurb just received from the Eastern Air Lines. Your correspondent is doubtful if this column will get done today. It seems that we here in Raleigh are but three hours away from Jacksonville and five from where stress in skimpy bath suits loll languidly on the golden sands of old Miami shore. Alas and alackaday: The blurb fails to take into consideration how far away we are from these paradises in terms of dollars and cents. So, after all, the column may get done. Apropos of travel to desirable places, Governor Clyde R. Hoey ought to have sort of medal for strength of will. He still declines to go west for the Duke-Southern Cal.

EXPERIMENT IN ROAD LIGHTING

First Impression of Highway Illumination Favorable

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Dec. 9—First reports and impressions seem unanimously favorable to North Carolina's experiment in highway illumination by means of reflectors which pick up the beams of automobile headlights and diffuse them over the roadway.

The experiments are being carried out by the State Highway and Public Works Commission. The reflectors have been erected along a stretch of highway between Raleigh and Garner on U. S. 70, for a distance of approximately four and a half miles. The reflectors are placed along the shoulders on both sides of the road approximately 100 feet apart on straight stretches and about 50 feet apart on curves.

A prism inside each reflector picks up the light from approaching automobiles and reflects and diffuses it across the highway at right angles to the approaching cars, illuminating the roadway almost as effectively as if each reflector contained an electric light.

"While these reflectors make night driving easier by providing better roadway illumination, our interest in them is primarily from the standpoint of safety, since they virtually eliminate headlight glare when cars pass," said W. Vance Baise, chief engineer for the highway commission.

"Other states which have experimented with these reflectors have found that they have caused a very sharp drop in night accidents by eliminating headlight glare in passing. One state (Michigan) which has a 65 mile stretch of highway equipped with the reflectors, has recorded a reduction of 79 per cent in night driving accidents within a period of four months after the reflectors were installed."

North Carolina's experiment has not lasted long enough to give any results as yet, but a careful check of all accidents on this stretch is being kept in order to determine the rate of accident reduction, if any, effected by the installation of the reflectors.

The 18 recommendations of Mr. Miller and his associates.

Petitions of the North Carolina Food Dealers Association, seeking the exemption of all food and fuel for home consumption from the sales tax are now on the counters of independent Raleigh grocery stores.

They seem to be attracting considerable attention and have been signed by many customers.

Henry M. London, Legislative Reference Librarian, hasn't completed his occupational analysis of the 1939 General Assembly, but he has gone far enough to say that lawyers will, as usual, be far in the lead over any other profession, calling, trade or business.

How's Your Health?

Edited for the New York Academy of Medicine

By Ingo Goldston, M.D.

When the lens of the eye loses its transparency and becomes clouded a cataract is said to have formed. This condition has long been surgically treated.

Garrison in his History of Medicine reports that primitive man employed sharp thorns to remove cataracts, and today the cataract is still chiefly treated by means of the surgeon's knife.

We commonly think of cataract as the unhappy result of senility. However, not all who live to a ripe old age develop cataracts, and the condition sometimes affects the eyes of youth.

The cause of cataract is still obscure but apparently the loss of transparency most frequently results from some derangement in the nutrition of the lens.

Sufferers from diabetes frequently shows clouding of the eye lens, and cataract formation is known to be associated with defects in calcium metabolism.

These known facts have naturally brought up the possibility of treating cataract medicinally rather than surgically. The predominant medical opinion at the present time is against the possibility of effectively treating senile cataract otherwise than by surgical means.

It is however recognized that in some instances haze in the eye lens may disappear spontaneously, and also that in diabetic cataract effective insulin therapy may result in clearing the eye lens.

Such is the conservative viewpoint among medical men who wait for convincing evidence from those who hold opposing views. The latter are continuing their research which is centered chiefly on the biochemical changes associated with the formation of cataracts.

The practical phase of this problem amounts to this. Many sufferers from cataract are eager to escape "operation." Unscrupulous nostrum vendors and irregular healers, take advantage of this fear of surgery to market such cataract sufferers. Their practices and their quack remedies are no part of the legitimate research on the medicinal treatment of cataract. Hence they should be avoided.

Through Looking Glass: Rockettes Are So Good Because They Keep Watching Themselves

By JACK STINNETT AP feature Service Writer

New York—Here's a deep, dark secret about the most famous chorus of precision dancers in the world. It's all done with mirrors.

"I have it straight from the men behind the Rockettes — Russell Markert, director of the chorus and now producer of Music Hall shows, and Gene Snyder, co-director.

Every rehearsal day the 35 girls line up before a wall of mirrors and kick and tap their routine until they can run it off a perfect unison.

"Rehearsing intricate precision routines before mirrors isn't the only factor, of course, but it's one of the most important," says Markert. "Letting the girls see themselves as others see them produces precision faster than any other training method.

"It's one thing to try to explain to a dancer how to correct an error in her routine; another to let her dance before a mirror with the rest of the chorus and actually get the feel of doing the step in perfect unison."

Wowed French Exposition

The Rockettes, whose fame as a precision chorus spread to two continents when they took French leave from the Music Hall last year and wowed the visitors at the Paris international exposition, had their modest beginning 13 years ago in St. Louis, Mo.

They are 48 in number now (ten of the girls get a week off out of each four). In 1925, they were only 16. Russell Markert, a youngster then and lately out of the chorus of Earl Carroll's Vanities, had been called to St. Louis to train a chorus for the Skouras Brothers' motion picture house. To his surprise he found just what he was looking for—16 attractive, capable young girls—in a St. Louis dancing school.

No mirrors available, Markert put the chorus to work in front of the glass doors in the lobby of the Missouri theatre.

"I didn't originate the precision chorus," says Markert, "nor the use of mirrors in training dancers—that had been a practice in ballet for years."

Instruction Selection Is Secret But any one discussing with the lean, blond, still-young dance director the history of the Rockettes will realize that it is a combination of instruction with selection which has produced such proficiency in one of the world's largest dance chorus units.

Rockettes are all the same height—the result of an optical illusion. The girls vary perhaps four inches from shortest to tallest; but being graduated, like a strand of pearls, from largest in the center to smallest on the ends, they appear, when lined up, to be almost identical in stature.

The important thing, says Markert, is that all of the girls are identical in figure.

"I realized from the first that long-legged, high-waisted girls were best for chorus work. A girl whose figure does not conform to those of the others in the chorus is bound to appear 'out of step' no matter how good her dancing.

"Another thing is that all Rockettes must have the proper point of view about their work. The Rockettes are absolutely anonymous. They must recognize immediately the necessity for team work. And any girl who considers herself a rugged individualist is out of place here."

It was on this basis that Markert formed the "Missouri Rockettes" and it was as a result of this that the 16-girl Missouri chorus attracted attention when brought to Broadway in a stage show.

During their run at the Roxy theatre, before the Music Hall was opened, the chorus was increased from 16 to 36 girls.

The Rockettes are from 17 to 28 years old; average about five-feet-five in height; make $2,470 a year; get two weeks' vacation in summer in addition to one week off out of four. Most vacancies in the chorus are created by girls leaving to get married; a few by those "graduated" to Hollywood, the stage and night clubs.

ANOTHER MILESTONE

The Reflector as a daily publication today begins its forty-fifth year of existence, the first issue as a daily having appeared on December 10, 1894. In reality, however, The Reflector is nearing the end of its fifty-seventh year of continuous service to this county, having operated as a weekly, semi-weekly and tri-weekly for practically thirteen years before becoming a daily.

Nearly three score years of continuous operation is a long time in the life of any business, especially a small city newspaper, but The Reflector is proud of the fact that it has weathered the storms of all these years and continues to serve the people of this community. During its existence there are few movements for the public good in Pitt County in which The Reflector has not had its part, but all that we have meant to the community we owe to the good people of this county who have shown their appreciation by their patronage of the paper.

We could recount many worthwhile instances and movements that have taken place during these fifty-seven years, but history is worthless unless from it we have learned a lesson that will help us to a bigger and better future, so on this our birthday and the beginning of a new year of our existence, we again resolve that we will strive to do all in our power to aid in each and every movement to make Greenville and Pitt County a better place in which to live.

FISH OIL FOR LIGHT

DEADLY POISON!

BEWARE OF THE DESTROYING ANGEL

THE HISTORIC OLD CAPE HENRY LIGHTHOUSE, still standing like a sentinel at the entrance to Chesapeake Bay, illustrates graphically the march of progress! Built in 1792, this was the first lighthouse to be erected after the formation of the new republic. In the beginning, fish oil was used for illumination. Then followed whale oil, colza oil, lard oil, kerosene, gas and electricity.

The DESTROYING ANGEL, which grows in widely separated sections of the South, has probably caused more deaths in this country than any other mushroom. There is no known antidote for its deadly poison. It is a large, white innocent looking mushroom, and in the button stage, may easily be confused by the amateur with the common edible meadow mushroom. No one should ever eat a wild mushroom or toadstool which is unknown to them as it is decidedly dangerous.

POLITICS WILL HURT PATROL

Increase in Number of Officers To Meet Opposition

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Dec. 9.—When a proposal is made in the 1939 General Assembly, as it will be, that the State Highway Patrol personnel be increased to about 300, it is going to bump squarely into the fact that Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell is generally considered a candidate for governor in the 1940 primary.

It follows, just as certain as night follows day, that there is going to be more than formal and "on principle" opposition to the proposed increase. It will be contended with a great show of righteous indignation that the increase is being urged in the interests of Mr. Maxwell's political ambition. It will be asserted with great heat that to increase the patrol is simply to give the Commissioner of Revenue a larger mobile force of political henchmen.

All of which arguments will be advanced by legislators who do not favor the Commissioner; but who would rather see some other in the chair now occupied by Shelby's silver-tongued statesman, Clyde R. Hoey. There will be some who honestly fear misuse of the patrol in the interests of Mr. Maxwell, but most of it will be unadulterated buncombe.

Be it said in behalf of the incumbent Commissioner that there has been practically no intimation that the patrol has engaged in political intrigue under his administration. Even during the heated gubernatorial primary of 1936 when Maxwell was admittedly using his every power to aid Governor Hoey, then just a candidate, there was hardly a chirp of criticism directed at the patrol members.

There are few, indeed, who honestly believe there is grave danger of Maxwellian malfeasance with regard to the patrol; but those who oppose him and who, for other reasons, don't want to see a larger patrol on the roads, are going to talk much about it.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—At times the ways of diplomacy are as clear as crystal if the right lights is turned on them, and that is the case with the outbursts of Italian demands for certain parts of French territory.

No Italian in his right mind expects to get Tunisia, which is a very rich piece of French Africa bordering on the Mediterranean. Nor does the right-minded Italian expect to get the Mediterranean island of Corsica or Savoy on the Italian border. But competent opinion here is that the shrewd Italians who staged all this maverick business do expect to get Djibouti.

Your memory has to be two years long if you remember Djibouti. It is the little mud-flat city on the east coast of Africa washed by the Red Sea. It is the entry port for Ethiopia. Italy wants it because it needs a port of outlet and inlet for Ethiopia.

Most of the shouting, it is true, has been for Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy. But the use of shouting for one thing while wanting another is as old as the hills and works as well as more complicated maneuvers. Djibouti is an extremely important strategic point for Italy in developing Ethiopia.

England May Be Generous

However its location is also important in England's empire considerations. But England always has evidenced a disposition to give away territory belonging to other nations. She might let France give up Djibouti even though it gives the Italians a dangerous outpost on the British-empire life line through the Mediterranean and Red Sea.

There is historical background for Italy's demands. France got Savoy from an Italian principality before Italy had become a unified nation. She got Corsica in much the same way, and she seized Tunisia, although Italy long had coveted it. So long have they been parts of France that they now are almost as French as Paris.

England would not be too pleased if Djibouti were to be surrendered to Italy to keep the peace. It is right opposite the British outpost of Aden, on the Arabian coast. With a friendly France in possession of Djibouti, the two outposts facing each other across a narrow neck of Red Sea complemented each other. With Italy in possession of Djibouti, Aden will be a nonentity. Of course its importance has been much lessened these days long range airplanes. Operating from an Ethiopian base, Italy can close the Red Sea passage at will.

Used German Strategy

Incidentally, it is noticeable that Italy copied Germany in selecting the time for the big move. Germany has made all her grabs in moments when France was having a new domestic crisis. Italy suddenly made its demonstration when France was in the midst of a threatened general strike. Doubtless France would not surrender Djibouti without getting something in return. The something might be an Italian promise to respect present French-Italian frontiers and perhaps concede something of her expected control in Spain. A promise to respect French frontiers was made by Germany in return for Czechoslovakia.

"It is always pretty difficult to make out what the critics want of Hamlet, even when they express lucidly what views they have on the subject. . . . One actor doesn't satisfy them because, though they agree he handles the role with sure intelligence, he neglects to sacrifice his intellectual conception of the role of some other actor's emotional conception. Another actor displeases them because he does the opposite, and still another gets their bad notices because he dovetails the two. As my old editorial partner used to say, no wonder Hamlet is crazy."—George Jean Nathan.

He possessed many diamond rings, a dozen handsomely engraved watches, and half a score of gold and platinum match-boxes set with diamonds and other precious stones. He changed his jewelry several times daily, and never wore the same suit, though he owned 40, two days in succession."—Herbert Asbury.

"I was once at a luncheon where the table napkins were double-sided yellow satin damask about twelve inches square, almost as thick as they were large, with the result that the butlers spent most of their time picking them up from the floor to which they fell like lead. The idea of wiping egg on one's mouth with satin is rather like scraping a flower-pot with a lump of sugar—which I believe is the standard way of setting teeth on edge."—Mrs. Charles Latgholn.

"He reached in, surrounded the pack of cigarettes with his hand, slapped two fingers of his left hand on top of the pack (noisily and much harder than necessary) until two cigarettes popped up. Enough smoke to fill a bicycle tire came out of his mouth and he blew out the match. THE ARMY POST MURDERS

By Virginia Hanou

The Characters

Katherine Cornish, myself, visiting Elizabeth on a mid-western Army post.
Elizabeth, Colonel Wright's daughter.
Adam Drew, acting commanding officer.

Yesterday: Charlie's gun is taken from my suitcase.

Chapter 33

Just A Chance

"LOOK, Adam. I've been thinking about that notebook and the two attacks on Barney and the possibility that the shot that killed Anne might have been intended for him. And the repeated theme of—the family skeleton in what he wrote about everyone. And I can see only one explanation that fits it all—and that's blackmail."

In silence Adam digested that unpalatable word. Then he shook his head.

"A blackmail is a peculiarly nasty vermin. I won't believe it of a brother officer. I have my own curiosity about people, but I don't trade on it. I prefer to think Barney is that way."

"Then why the notebook?" I asked. "And what was he doing with it tonight?"

"What do Elizabeth and Annie know about Anne that they aren't telling?" he countered. "And what was that poor devil of a sentry trying to tell me? And what about those stones?"

His voice trailed off and he stared straight through me, his eyes the unearthly, dazzling blue of the sparks thrown off by an acetylene torch.

"What is it?" I cried, my pulses beginning to pound.

He shook his head as if I were a buzzing fly.

"I've got to think," he muttered. "I let him think. Presently he seized the brown notebook, leafed through it, found something and grew more excited as he read. He leaped to his feet and raced around the small room while I watched him in painful suspense."

"But how can I prove it?" he demanded of me suddenly; but when I snatched at the chance to ply him with questions his only answer was a vacant stare.

"I'm only trying to help you," I cried at last in exasperation.

"Oh, yes, yes! Thank you very much..."

He was the soul of courtesy, but he was gone from me. I retired into a sulky silence and tried to figure it out for myself.

I was getting exactly nowhere when the telephone rang. It startled Adam out of his somnambulism, but he was so long coming back to reality that it rang a second time before he remembered to answer it.

"Yes... Yes..." A long pause. "Are you sure that's all she said? All right, Doc. I'll be right over."

He listened a moment longer, cradled the instrument carefully.

"Is there an extension telephone in this house?"

I nodded.

"Where?"

"Upstairs hall. Not far from my room. Why?"

"Someone was listening in on that conversation, I heard the click..."

Touch And Go

HE RELEASED the telephone again, quietly, and asked for the Officers' Club.

"Charlie? Adam speaking. Is Barney asleep? ... You're sure he's all right then? ... Very well. I want you two to meet me at the hospital in ten minutes. ... I don't care whose car you take, but your orders are the same as before—you're to stay with Barney every minute. I don't want any more of these mysterious attacks. I'm holding you personally responsible for him. ... Ten minutes then."

He put the instrument back, shoved it away from him.

"What has happened?"

"Anne is conscious, asking for Barney. Want to come along?"

"Yes! You think she may tell him something?"

Adam shrugged. "She may be delicious—she may lapse and never come out of it. It's touch and go. Doc says they have her in an oxygen tent."

He motioned me to silence, and together we tiptoed out into the hall.

The upper landing was lighted and Elizabeth was standing there, fully dressed, gazing down at us.

"It's Anne!" she said accusingly. "Why wasn't I told?"

Adam said, "Sorry, explain later."

"Annie and I are coming," she stated and was answered by a wall from the shadows.

"He's fast!" said Lou Orpington's voice. "Wait for me!"

Adam hurried me out of the house.

Doc Moore, his half mussed and new lines in his face, stood in the door of the waiting room.

"She's got a wonderful constitution," he said. "Wonderful. There's a chance—just a chance..."

"Her mother and father here?"

"Yes, been here for hours, waiting. When she finally opened her eyes I called them. I think she recognized them, but she kept whispering, 'Barney! There may be something she doesn't want them to know. The old lady went to pieces—had to give her a sedative, put her in one of the other beds.'"

"Annie still conscious?"

"Fittingly. She dozes, wakes, asks for Barney."

He turned, looked down the hall. "Here they come. I'll see if she's awake."

He was gone, with light, noiseless steps.

Barney and Charlie came in, ignoring me, fastening their gaze on Adam. They were hollow eyed, unshaven, but they had taken time to don day uniforms. They were in olive-drab slacks, fresh khaki shirts, and they carried their campaign hats.

"What's happened?" asked Barney evenly. "Except for an unhealthy palor he seemed to have recovered from his mysterious attack."

"Annie is alive—she's been asking for you," Adam said gently.

Dazed Eyes

I HEARD the faint whistle of Charlie's in-drawn breath. I saw Barney's sudden rigidity, the quiver of emotion on his face that for a moment broke up his iron control.

"Where is she?" he asked in a high, unnatural voice. He turned, was on his way.

"Just a minute—Doc will let you know. She may be asleep. You'd better wait here."

Barney stumbled back into the room.

"Why wasn't I told of this before?" His dazed eyes were fixed on Adam.

"The chance was too slim. I thought you'd rather not be kept in suspense."

Charlie broke in eagerly. "Then—then she's going to get well?"

He was trembling uncontrollably, and he did not seem to know that I was there.

"It's still in the lap of the gods," said Adam.

Suddenly they were all there—Annie with her hair in wisps under the belligerent black affair. Lou Orpington with excited eyes darting from face to face, Elizabeth calm, contained, radiating strength.

She went at once to Barney, put her hand on his arm, murmured that she was glad; but I thought he scarcely heard her.

And then my eyes leaped to the doorway again and I wondered if the strains had been too much for me. Was I imagining things, or did I really see Mrs. Flower?

She came at once to me and I saw that her husband was behind her.

"It's Anne, isn't it?" she asked brightly, cheerfully, in that nerve-shattered room. "I just told Flower that's what it was. You see, there weren't any lights at the Carew's, and the doctor being gone all evening and all, and cars coming and going all the time—you can see the hospital from our quarters. So I just told Flower, 'Anne's alive,' and we came to see if I was right—and to see if we can do anything, of course."

She smiled confidently. "You see, Gilly woke up when we came in, and it's so near morning of course he wouldn't be able to sleep any more, so Flower and I didn't bother to go to bed. For while Gilly's always very good with Nurse, he's always very full of spirits in the morning, and even if one could, I don't believe in suppressing a child."

I said, "Oh! rather inadequately. Then, to my surprise, Adam took her off my hands."

He drew her into a corner, spoke a few words unobtrusively and drifted away. I was just beginning to feel that he had withdrawn his confidence from me when he paused beside me.

"Keep your eye on Annie," he said in a voice that was little more than a breath.

I must have shown that I was startled, for before I could frame a question he answered it.

"Nothing is going to happen if I can prevent it, but I can't take any chances. If—if Anne knows anything there may be an attempt to silence her—the murderer may show a hand..."

Monday: The trap.

SANTA AND THE LOST PRINCESS

The story so far: Princess Huldah has run away from her cruel stepmother, the Queen. A witch, who is somebody's evil spirit is after Huldah.

Chapter Six

The Trap

When the first long finger of moonlight reached through the Toyshop window that night Huldah tiptoed to the door and slipped outside so quietly that no one heard her. There sat the whole ermine family on the doorstep, all of them with their paws to their mouths saying, "Sh-sh."

"They beckoned to Huldah to follow and then they crept quietly down the hill to a big holly bush where they sat down in a circle on the snow. Huldah piled up spriggy pine branches and sat on them.

"Now," said the biggest ermine. "Now what?" asked Huldah.

"Did you bring your magic needle?" said the ermine. Huldah reached inside her coat and held the needle out in the moonlight.

"Good," said the ermine. "We're going to make a net to catch that witch. You are, I mean. Then we'll throw it over the chimney stacks and in the morning there she'll be if she comes around, caught in the net."

"But what will we make it with?" said Huldah.

"Ha!" said the ermine. "We're getting help from a very fine spider who spins very tough webs. He'll be along shortly."

And sure enough over the snow came a big, gray spider, winking his left eye wisely. He was pleased to help catch the witch because because witches were always brushing down his cobwebs when they flew by on their brooms.

All Eight Legs "Good evening and good luck," he said as he came up. He bowed with all eight of his legs. "Good evening," said Huldah and all the ermine family.

"Let's hurry," said the spider. "Witches always start to fly when the moon tops that tallest pine tree. I'll just start spinning, and you, lady, if you will, you can start sewing."

He crouched down and started spinning a fine thread. Huldah took it and threaded her needle, and although she had never made a spider web, the needle seemed to know what to do. It went in and out and knotted, and in and out and knotted.

For an hour everyone sat silently while Huldah and the spider worked. The web grew big as a handkerchief, and then as big as a sheet, and then big as ten sheets, and then finally big as your backyard. It was thick and fine and it shimmered in the moonlight. Finally the spider broke off the thread, and drew a long breath.

"Whee-ee," he said. "I've never worked that hard."

Huldah tied the last knot, pinned the magic needle in her dress and stretched. "I never have either," she said. "But now how can we get this web up over the chimney? The moon is getting high."

wondering, "What can the ermine be planning?"

Chapter Five

The Ermine's Plan

That night after the witch had visited the Toyshop there was little sleeping. The tin soldiers stayed up all night guarding the fireplace. Santa and Mrs. Santa dozed in a big chair until dawn, and then they both went out to the kitchen to prepare an early breakfast.

"Ho, hum," said Santa as he pushed his chair back from the breakfast table. "We may as well get to work early. Tell you what we'll do. Let's hurry. Then we can go sleigh-riding this afternoon."

"Hooray!" shouted the toys, "we'll be very good." So they all rushed to their shelves and sat very quietly out of the way. The fairies sewed dolls' dresses, painted tops and cut paper dolls. The gnomes worked so hard sawing wooden wagons, putting together roller skates, and testing whistles and horns, that the Toyshop quivered with the noise.

Santa sat at his work bench putting together a big doll house and Mrs. Santa sat next to him sewing curtains for the house. That gave Huldah, the little lost Princess, an idea. She said, "I could sew, too."

She held out her gold needle which the ermine had given her.

"So you can," said Mrs. Santa. "Would you like to try making some white fur caps?" So that's what Huldah did. But you remember her gold needle was a magic one. It skipped in and out of the white fur so fast that she had a dozen made in as many minutes. Then she had two dozen. Then three dozen.

They All Worked Hard

"Good gracious, look at the child," said Mrs. Santa. She picked up one cap and examined it. "What fine stitches."

"Why?" said one of the fairies. "This needle must be magic, Huldah."

"I think it is," said Huldah. "It was given me."

Santa smiled at that and patted her golden curls. "I fit was given you, it must have been for some kind deed. We're glad you have it. You've done good work."

They all worked very hard until the sun began to slip down the sky to the West. Then Santa put down his hammer and stretched.

"Now let's go sleighing," he shouted. Every one dropped work, pulled on coats and caps, and dashed for the wide, gentle hill outside the Toyshop. There were tiny sleds for the baby dolls, long sleds that seated a dozen tin soldiers at a time, racers for the fairies. Santa had a big racer for himself, and Mrs. Santa had a sleigh pulled by a reindeer.

Huldah chose a pretty, white one with a cozy, padded seat on the back.

In a jiffy the hill was covered with flying specks of color as the sleighs raced to the bottom. Some spilled, some collided, but most of them wound up at the bottom skimming right over the second hill and she found herself all alone. When her sleigh stopped she got out, picked up the sled rope and started back to the others. Just as she started off there was a little scurry of snow at her feet, a tiny tail whisked about and there, sitting in front of her, was her friend the ermine. He said, "Here I am again."

When The Moon Comes Out

"Hello, Hello," said Huldah. "I'm glad to see you. You must have followed me down here."

"Yes," said the ermine. "We heard about that witch last night and we think you can catch her with your magic needle. But we didn't want anyone else to know because she might hear and we're afraid of her."

"Oh, I'd love to catch her," said Huldah, jumping up and down on one foot. "Tell me how."

"I can't now," said the ermine. "But when the moon comes out we'll be waiting for you outside the Toyshop door."

"I'll slip out," said Huldah. "Now run back to the Toyshop or they'll think you're lost," said the ermine.

Huldah stopped to stroke the little fellow's head and said, "Thank you." Then she ran to join the others. She to back just in time to have a ride with Santa. She kept hold up to the voters the real dangers of the New Deal remedies. Because I have from time to time been a critic of certain Roosevelt policies, I am not blind to the fact that the Republicans, to date, have little better to offer.

It is sheer guess work now to speculate on the outcome of the 1940 elections. I am a statistician, not a political soothsayer. Hence, I am not now making any guesses, but I will say this:

If the Republicans are victorious in 1940 it is quite possible that they will be fired out in 1944.

Why? Because there is nothing in sight to solve our major problems. It is true that we are now seeing better business—much better business than a year ago. Moreover, I am optimistic on the outlook for 1939 in all major lines. Better business, however, will not solve our problems. It will not solve the farm problem. It is clear to me that the Republicans, like Secretary Wallace, have no solution of the farm issue, except to give bigger and wider handouts to the farmers.

Can GOP End Unemployment?
Furthermore, I am tremendously concerned over the too rapidly growing menace of technological unemployment. The last few years have seen amazing strides in labor-saving machinery and improved industrial processes. Where a decade ago we were worried over what seemed to be a permanent jobless total of three million, today we see little chance of this figure dropping below five million. The WPA has been fighting a losing battle against our scientists and inventors. How are the Republicans going to work out this riddle?

Turning now to the incoming Congress, I believe that it will accomplish little or nothing constructive. The spend-and-lead program will go forward in a new phase. This time it will be an armament schedule which will mortgage our future to the tune of more billions. I call this a "pump-priming" of the heavy industries. Apart from this, however, a do-nothing session is inevitable. The Republicans and Conservative Democrats can spike any further New Deal experiments. To this extent the outlook is favorable. It means that this will be a breathing spell from reforms and legislative rabbits-from-a-hat during 1939.

President Retains Veto.
On the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt's veto power gives him the whip-hand over any anti-New Deal legislation which might be enacted. He can always count on at least one-third of the membership in both branches as dyed-in-the-wool New Dealers. Hence, it will be impossible to pass a bill over his veto. There will, therefore, be little chance of any repeal or major amendments to the body of New Deal legislation now on the statute books. For example, despite the rising tide of feeling against the Wagner Act, there is little chance of any major change in this measure at the next session unless Mr. Roosevelt agrees to change it.

To sum up: I believe the election results will be a strong psychological aid to business during 1939, and perhaps in 1940. By the latter time, however, unless the United States turns to the Right and unless the Four Power Pact prevents a European explosion, I believe we will be in for real trouble. Another four years of Roosevelt might well ruin the United States for one or two generations. Our problem is not one of politics. It is not one of economics. It is a spiritual issue. The American people can be saved only by a revival of the Golden Rule and the Ten Commandments!

Birds Get Fish Food.
Pueblo, Colo.—(AP)—Forest officials had forgotten about ducks when they planted several tons of moss, shrimp and other aquatic life as food for fish in Lake Isabel. Migratory flocks came along soon after the planting and cleaned up all the food. Now the fish are hungry.

In its wild state the plumage of the catbird is olive-green, or greenish-yellow, tinged with brown.

WHAT IT MEANS

term solution of the financial problem created by a series of post-war drains.

The experts cite you Charles Rist, the noted French economist, who insists some such financial facing of the facts as Daladier's three-year plan must be attempted if France is to avoid internal disaster. Internal disaster might invite aggressive dictators to dismember the French colonial empire while the mother country is busy at home.

Situation Getting Worse
France is spending each year on government one-third more money than she collects in taxes, and the spread is increasing all the time. She has often resorted to inflation, including the big inflation of 1928, without pulling herself out of the hole.

The depression brought the attention of the world to the persistent state of French financial crisis. In 1931 it became apparent that France was on a financial toboggan, despite her then heavy reserves of gold.

In that year, the national income of 250 billion francs hit the skids. It has melted persistently despite watering of national money. Now it stands at 190 billions.

Tax collections fell off with income. The deficit was 4 billion francs in 1934. In 1938 it was double that. Gold moved out, French government borrowed money in the open market, until interest rates got too high for comfort.

Economist's Explanation
Let Economist Rist explain it: "... Everyone knows that while the government spends more money than it receives, and while the French money market is unable to extend loans ... to meet the difference, the government must borrow from the Bank of France ... They also know this must ... result in new devaluation.

"The fears which spring from this fact effect all classes of French society. Irrespective of political philosophy, and irrespectively whatever Frenchmen of all classes agree in wanting to put their money in a safe place ... There is not a single Frenchman who has funds which he cannot immediately use who does not reflect whether it might not be safer to send them abroad than to keep them at home.

That's what the economists call the flight of capital. Meanwhile, almost every happening—internal and external—affecting France since the World War has conspired to make matters worse.

One Thing After Another
Here's the sad story in brief review:

1. Post-war reconstruction—This process cost France billions of francs and piled up deficits despite heavy German payments. These deficits brought Poincare's "save the franc" cabinet in 1928. He devalued the franc from twenty cents to four cents, almost balanced the budget, and stemmed the flight of capital.

2. The world-wide depression—When national income began to slough off, tax collections dropped. Deficit again mounted. A new flight of capital developed. The franc, inflated several times, finally was cut loose from gold entirely last year.

3. The rise of Hitler—Because of German rearmament under the Nazi leader, France doubled national defense costs between 1934 and 1938. She now devotes one-third of her annual spending for armaments, one-third to debt costs and public works, and the remaining third to running the regular government establishment.

4. The upheaval of the radicals—Industrial unrest increased during the depression years, and French workers voted in an extremely liberal "populist front" government in 1936 which gave workers the 40-hour week, vacations with pay and protected their organization.

Industrial production costs went up, output fell off, further frightened capital. No government seemed able to guarantee a period of stability.

Money for investment was scarce and industrial stagnation developed. That's what Daladier is trying to overcome. He's preaching "economic mobilization," not so much because he wants to penalize French workers, but more because he wants to lure money back to France and pump it into the nation's industrial bloodstream, thence to the Bank of France.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Stocks dug in for a modest rally today with market leaders retrieving fractions to a point or so of recent losses.

Activity picked up a bit on the comeback, although the pace never inconvenienced the ticker tape.

Transfers were around 450,000 shares for the two hours.

There was little change in the business picture which continued moderately cheerful for the long term, but foreign tension seemed to have lessened a bit as a market brake and the notable drying up of tax selling in the past several sessions was thought to have attracted some traders to the buying side.

Steels, aircrafts, motors, mail orders and specialties were favored the greater part of the time, although none stepped very far out in front. Rails and utilities hugged a slim groove. There were a few fair-sized losers in evidence at the close.

Automobile shares were aided by comments of General Motors officials that this concern probably would maintain its November production rate of 200,000 units throughout December. This would represent the second largest December output in the history of the corporation.

CARE URGED IN CUTTING HOLLY

Supply of Berry-Bearing Trees Rapidly Diminishing
Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Dec. 10.—Careful cutting of holly by landowners and conservative use of it by the public was urged today by State Forester J. S. Holmes of the Department of Conservation and Development. Mr. Holmes pointed out that the supply of berry-bearing holly trees is steadily diminishing as a result of the careless cutting or downright slaughter of these trees in the past. If any appreciable amount of holly is to be preserved for use in future years, the attitude of the public as well as of the farmers and landowners, must undergo a decided change, according to Mr. Holmes.

"One thing that needs improvement is the attitude of many people towards holly and other greens growing along the highways," Mr. Holmes said. "They must get over the old idea that anything that grows in the woods or along the roadsides is public property of free plunder. I think there has been marked improvement here in North Carolina the last few years. But there are still entirely too many people who think nothing of going into the woods, without the permission of the owner, to help themselves to holly, mistletoe and other Christmas greens. They often cut down entire holly trees or uproot young trees, not content to take only a few branches from younger trees."

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened unchanged to six points higher, reflecting improved Liverpool cables. The trade purchased near positions. October advanced on Bombay buying.

March recovered from 8.14 to 8.22 shortly after the first half hour, when the list was one to 10 points net higher.

Futures closed six to 12 points higher. Spot nominal, middling 8.68.

Christmas Exhibit Shown At College

The Home Economics Club followed its program, given Thursday night at 6:30, by a display of unusual but inexpensive Christmas decorations and wrappings which had been worked out by various home economic classes.

Over a hundred and fifty people visited the exhibit Thursday night, and others dropped in the following day, as the department was left open Friday for any guests who wished to see the display.

Pine was mingled with holly for the green background.

The class which has recently been studying national and historical costume showed miniature scenes representing the celebration of Christmas in other lands, with such typical details as the little wooden shoes of Holland with a top or two in them to suggest their Christmas use.

Unusual suggestions for Christmas decorations, cards, and packages were demonstrated by the Home Furnishing group and original wrappings for packages and household gifts were suggested by the Clothing Class, one notable example being the use of colored rubber bands instead of ribbon, with cellophane wrappings.

The Home Nursing Class took the problem of making Christmas cheerful for the invalid and worked out the sickroom scene and the type of gift that would be most acceptable.

This was the last meeting of the club for the fall term.

HOMeward, heads William H. Dillingham, Jr., 9, who flew alone from Ecuador, South America, to his home in Washington, D. C., in order to spend Christmas with his mother. He'd been gold-mining with his father at Puyo on the Napo river.

APPOINTEE to the Securities and Exchange Commission, Rep. Edward C. Eicher (above), Iowa Democrat who was not a candidate for re-election in November, was recently named to the SEC post by President Roosevelt. He'll succeed John Hanes.
