ACTION AIMED AT OPPOSITION BY LITHUANIA

Nine Arrested Charged With Fomenting Disorders

RIGHTISTS BLOC ASKS DEMOCRACY

Government Opposition Advocates Abolition Present Semi-Dictatorship

Kaunas, Lithuania, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Nine persons were arrested today as the Lithuanian government moved energetically against opposition elements accused of fomenting disorders following the Nazi victory in Memel Diet elections Sunday.

An official announcement said considerable sums of money were found on two of those arrested.

While anti-Semites, spreading into Lithuania from the Memel territory, was being linked with anti-government demonstrations, it was rumored Germany was pressing the inclusion of former Premier Waldemar once leader of the Fascist "Iron Wolf" organization in the government.

Waldamara, considered pro-German and anti-Polish, was believed in France, where he went after his release from prison several years ago. (On June 13, 1934, a court martial at Kaunas found Waldamara guilty of an attempt to overthrow the government and sentenced him to 12 years at hard labor.) A Rightist bloc, which now is opposing the government, advocates a "return to democracy" through abolition of the present semi-dictatorship and a settlement with relations with the Vatican on terms acceptable to Catholics.

Scouters In Pitt To Hold Meeting

All Scouters in Pitt county, including Scoutmasters, assistants, troop committees and members of the executive board are urged to attend a meeting in the Woman's club building tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, at which time the annual Scouting meeting will be held. A "dutch treat" supper will be served.

Irving Morgan of Farmville, district Governor of Rotary, will be the principal speaker of the evening.

All Scouts who are to advance at the Court of Honor are requested to be present at 8 o'clock. A tenderfoot investiture ceremony will be conducted by T. A. Bryson, Scoutmaster of troop 30.

All persons planning to attend who have not already done so are urged to notify Sam Underwood by tomorrow morning. The dutch supper will be served at 80 cents a plate.

Two Negroes Brought Here in Robbery Case

Herbert Lee Brown, alleged accomplice of John Wilkins, both Negroes, in the recent robbery of the Haten department store, was brought here from Wilson yesterday afternoon and Chief of Police George Clark declared the two had confessed the robbery of a quantity of clothing from the store.

Also brought here from Wilson was Frank Austin, Negro, at whose home part of the stolen goods was said to have been found. Austin probably will be charged with aiding and abetting in the robbery or with concealing stolen property, knowing it to be stolen.

Waging Contest For Speakership

Raleigh, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Word reaching Raleigh from all sections of the state today indicated that a hot, down-the-stretch, three-cornered fight is being waged for the speakership of the 1939 House of Representatives.

Victor Bryant, veteran Durham legislator, started his campaign for the speakership post more than two years ago and for months was regarded as holding a head-start over D. L. Ward of New Bern and W. E. Penner of Rocky Mount.

Now, perhaps, word is that Fenner and Ward are gaining enough strength to force a real fight at the party caucus here January 3, when the Democrats will select their speaker.

In general, Bryant, Ward and Penner have all been administration supporters in and out of the legislature.

While the fight for the House leadership holds the attention of most political observers, it is understood that Senator W. E. Smith, of Albemarle is in the lead for the post of president pro tem of the senate.

SEES BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT FOR NEXT YEAR

Prediction Made By Noted Cleveland, O. Statistician

EXPECTS RISE IN NATION'L INCOME

Declares, However, That Pump Priming Must Be Supplanted by Long-Term Work

Cleveland, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Business will be better in 1939, Colonel Leonard Ayres predicted today.

But before prosperity can return "pump-priming recovery" must change into a "long-term recovery carried forward by business," he emphasized.

"The coming year now promises to be a period of better employment rising national income and increased volumes of industrial production," the Cleveland statistician said in his annual forecast.

Specifically he listed these "probable developments" for 1939.

Industrial production averaging higher than 1938, lower than 1937; national income above 1937; wholesale prices slowly advancing, but commodity prices not changing greatly; freight loadings up to 20 per cent from 1938; iron, steel, motors output up 30 to 50 per cent; most new construction since 1930; department stores nearer 1937 than 1938; merchandise imports greater than exports; stocks higher than 1938, lower than 1936; new high records in power, oil refining, tobacco products and average hourly factory wages.

Col Ayres prepared his predictions for a Cleveland Chamber of Commerce meeting.

Inspector Of Schools Spends Day in County

A. B. Combs, state inspector of high schools, was in Pitt county today making an inspection of the Arthur and Pactolus schools, only units in the county not on the accredited list.

Memory Addresses Teachers Of Pitt

The Pitt county unit of the North Carolina Education Association held its final meeting before the Christmas holidays, at Ayden last night, with the principal address delivered by J. L. Wemyer, education professor at Wake Forest College.

Following the teachers' meeting, A. B. Combs, state high school inspector, addressed the principals of the various Pitt schools.

Each of the various groups was addressed by a Pitt county teacher or principal specialized in the respective subjects. Refreshments were served by the Home Economics department of the Ayden school.

W. M. Jenkins, Ayden principal, was in charge of last night's program. He was assisted by Miss Velma Howard of Bethel.

C. D. Ward, Winterville principal, who recently was named on the board of directors of the North Carolina Educational Association, made several announcements regarding policies, etc., of the organization.

Three More Negroes Face Whiskey Counts

Three more Negroes were arrested last night on whiskey charges two in Greenville and one in Swift Creek township.

ABC officers and members of the sheriff's office last night arrested Leo Rouse after a foot chase which lasted for what officers said was an hour. Deputy Sheriff R. W. King estimated that E. G. McMullan, ABC officer, chased the Negro for two miles. About four and one-half gallons of bootleg whiskey was found about the Negro's home.

Thames Phillips and James Clemmons were the two Negroes arrested in Greenville.

O'Neal Defends Present Program

New Orleans, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Edward O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said in his annual address today the Agricultural Adjustment act of 1938, "coupled with the soil conservation act, the marketing agreements act and allied legislation, gives us the best all-round farm program we have ever had."

Farmers from throughout the nation assembled for the opening of the Federation's annual meeting after attending sectional discussions yesterday.

"Severe criticism has been directed at the farm program, principally on the grounds that cotton and wheat prices are distressingly low," O'Neal said.

"Such criticism is unfair because everybody knows that the law was passed too late for wheat growers to comply on their 1938 crop; and everybody knows, too, that the cotton surplus that holds the prices down was not produced in 1938—it was produced in 1937—when there was no control program in force."

ROGER BABSON STATES VIEWS

Discusses the Business Outlook For Ten Years Ahead

(Statement by Roger W. Babson at a meeting of Knoxville Rotary Club today)

My question today is not whether business will be good or bad in 1939. I believe that most business analysts are convinced that 1939, on the average, will be a year of activity—with higher prices for commodities, real estate and securities. At the year-end the press of this country will carry my definite forecast of wage, job, trade and living cost trends for 1939.

At home, our industrial and financial communities are distinctly encouraged by the results of last month's elections. They represent an apparent turn to the right. The swing means no new radical legislation in the next two years. Remember, however, that President Roosevelt still holds the veto power to block any strong conservative program.

"Third-term" possibilities may have been killed, although at present there is no assurance of a 1940 Republican victory. Abroad, the Munich pact, if honestly developed, still holds hope of international good-will.

What About Growth Line? There is, however, a question as to the long-term trend. Is it changing? There are no less than ten definite factors which raise the important question whether the U. S. Line of Normal growth may not now have changed its slope. Over the months ahead, watch the long-term growth line.

WAREHOUSE IN CITY IS SOLD

C. H. McGowan Purchases Johnston's; Price Unrevealed

Announcement was made today of the purchase of Johnston's tobacco auction warehouse, founded by the late F. V. Johnston, by C. H. McGowan, who with his son, Charles McGowan, will operate the house next season.

The purchase price was not revealed.

Mr. McGowan is well known in tobacco auction circles in Eastern North Carolina, having had 20 years' experience on the Greenville market operating warehouses. His son also has had considerable experience in the management of the Farmers warehouse, operated by the elder McGowan, for the past several years.

Mr. McGowan is known by and enjoys the patronage of a large number of farmers throughout this section. He declared he was not ready to announce his force at the newly purchased warehouse, but added he would maintain a competent force.

The Johnston warehouse, which was purchased from the heirs of the late F. V. Johnston, was operated for several seasons by his son, Jimmie Johnston.

New Appeasement Drive Inaugurated By Britain To End European Rows

Much Significance Attached to Prime Minister Chamberlain's Talk Before Foreign Press Association Late This Afternoon

New Supervisor

London, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A new 30-day whirlwind appeasement drive to settle Europe's outstanding differences took shape today, with Prime Minister Chamberlain in a key role and the possibility of German designs upon Lithuanian Memel one major problem.

His speech (at 4:40 p. m. EST) before the Foreign Press association tonight held the attention of the diplomatic world, which expected a complete outline of British foreign policy and an indication of what the Premier intended doing from today until January 14, when he ends a visit to Premier Mussolini in Rome.

The importance of the speech, on the occasion of the 50th anniversary, was indicated by the guest list, which included most of the British cabinet ministers, leading ambassadors and ministers and 150 foreign correspondents representing 35 countries.

Chamberlain was expected to enlarge upon the government's attitude toward Memel and may discuss the British position toward military assistance for France, political-economic agreement with Germany, and political understanding with Italy.

In the House of Commons yesterday the Premier spoke of French-British concern over the prospect of German gestures toward Memel, former German territory, but no political informant thought it likely British action now would go beyond the "concern" stage.

ANTI-LYNCHING BATTLE LOOMS FOR CONGRESS

Sen. Van Nuys Promises Revive Controversial Bill

SOUTHERN BLOC MAY FILIBUSTER

Anthony Eden's Visit to White House Most Outstanding News at Capital for Day

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Prospects for another Senate battle over an anti-lynching bill developed today with an announcement by Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind.) that the controversial measure would be revived.

Senator Van Nuys said he would confer soon with Senator Wagner (D-N.Y.) co-author of last session's bill which was shelved after a Southern filibuster.

There were indications that the Southern bloc would filibuster any motion to bring up the bill for consideration again.

Other developments: Anthony Eden, Britain's former Foreign Minister and President Roosevelt sat down together in the White House for an exchange of views.

When his visit was concluded Eden chatted with reporters for a few minutes, but all he would say was that he enjoyed his talk with the President.

Smartly dressed and smiling, Eden arrived promptly for his appointment in the company of Acting Secretary of State Welles.

The one-time British cabinet officer trooped past a line of admiring feminine government workers en route from the State Department into the chief executive's office.

The Wage-Hour law probably will run into court tests in New York and South Carolina in a few days, administrator Elmer Andrews said.

Andrews, declaring "we would like to have the answer on the constitutionality as soon as possible," added that "we have no doubt about it ourselves."

There are 3,000 complaints on file charging employers with violating the act's minimum wage and maximum hour provisions, he said, and investigators are checking reports of serious violations in several states, including North Carolina.

Unable to Produce Cotton At Profit

Raleigh, Dec. 13.—The North Carolina farmer who grew cotton in 1937 spent more to produce it than he could get for his lint on the open market, according to cost figures worked out by the North Carolina Crop Reporting Service, in which federal and state department of agriculture experts cooperate.

The crop reporting service figures that it cost an average of $29.75 per acre to grow cotton in North Carolina last year, if there was no land rental to be considered. If rental costs are added, the average cost of raising cotton in North Carolina reached an average of $38.85 per acre.

On this average acre the farmer raised 352 pounds of lint—a figure obtained by dividing the production of lint in terms of 500 gross weight bales, by the acreage harvested.

At an average price of eight cents per pound (about what the lint brought in 1937) that 352 pounds yielded the farmer a return of $28.16 well below the cost of production even without considering rental of land.

In arriving at the cost of growing an acre of cotton the Crop Reporting Service used these figures: Labor the Power $22.90 made up as follows: Haul and spread manure $5.00, prepare ground and plant $4.75, $2.45, harvest $8.35, prepare and haul to market $1.75, other labor .70.

Christmas Party At College.

At the "Y Hut" last night on the college campus, the editorial staff, the business managers, the reporters, and the faculty advisors of the college newspaper, the Tece Echo, held a Christmas party, with a tree, gifts, and a cold-plate supper.

The hut was attractively decorated for the party. Names had been drawn, and under the tree was a gift for every person, many of them occasioning much laughter when they were opened.

Along with the cold plate was served a hot drink.

Billy Daniels, Wilmington, is the editor-in-chief of the paper, and Miss Mamie E. Jenkins and Dr. Beecher Flanagan are advisors. Last night Mr. Flanagan served in a double role, as he was also Santa Claus. Miss Lucile Johnson, Ayden, business manager, who had general charge of the program, was assisted by Miss Mary D. Horne, Greenville. Decorations were arranged by Miss Dorothy Holler, Greenville, and Lindsay Whitchard, Stokes.

Christian Science Church.

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches and societies on Sunday, Dec. 11.

The golden text was from Psalms 40:11. "Without not that thy tender mercies from me, O Lord; let thy lovingkindness and thy truth continually preserve me."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgments are a great deep; O Lord, thou preservest man and beast." (Ps. 36:6).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science & Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The standard of perfection was originally God and man. 'As God taken down His own standard, and has man fallen? God is the creator of man, and the divine Principle of man remaining perfect, the divine idea or reflection man, remains perfect. Man is the expression of God's being. If there ever was a moment when man did not express the divine perfection, then there was a moment when man did not express God, and consequently a time when Deity was unexpressed—that is, without entity. If man has not perfect perfection, then he has lost his perfect Principle, the divine Mind. If man ever existed without this perfect Principle or Mind, then man's existence was a myth. The relations of God and man, divine Principle and idea, are indestructible in Science; and Science knows no lapse from nor return to harmony, but holds the divine order or spiritual law, in which God and all that He creates are perfect and eternal, to have remained unchanged in its eternal history."

Literature Department Meets.

The Literature Department of the Women's Club held its regular Christmas meeting on Saturday at the home of Mrs. W. H. Woolard.

Mrs. K. T. Furell was in charge of the business meeting. Mrs. J. H. B. Moore told about the plans for the Christmas program and about the community Christmas tree she reviewed, rather briefly, the open meetings of the club and announced that the New Bern Women's Club will give a program for us on January sixth.

After the business meeting and announcements, Mrs. Furell recognized Mrs. Woolard who was in charge of the program. Mrs. Woolard then introduced Mrs. Charles Reynolds who very ably read for the club a Christmas story—"A Fool for Christmas." This was a story of a family as it prepared for the Christmas season. The funny incidents that came up added merriment for the listeners as each one thought back to her own childhood and the preparations that were made for Christmas.

Mrs. Knott Proctor added much to the holiday mood and to the pleasure of the listeners when she sang two Christmas carols—"Cantique De Noel" and "Away in a Manger."

Miss Mary Ann Cobb was welcomed as a new member of the club.

The club members were happy to have the following guests share with them the Christmas program—Mrs. E. P. Arnold and Mrs. Paul Brown of Raleigh, Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Little of Robertsonville, Mrs. Ives and Mrs. Stator of Belhel, and the following people from Greenville: Mrs. Herbert Waldrop, Mrs. Knott Proctor, Mrs. Bryce Sigmon, Mrs. Bill Bradsher, Miss Mary Coughney and Mrs. R. J. Slay.

Christmas Carol Service.

The always well attended Christmas Carol service of the Women's Chorus of the college was held last night from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, with numbers of visitors from the town in the audience.

As always in the programs of this chorus, the blending of voices and the tone quality were notable. "The Carol of the Russian Children" for example, ending with a sustained chord that seemed to fuse into a perfect whole, starting out at full volume and dying away slowly without change in quality of tone.

With the exception of three numbers, the whole program was given a capella, the low voices themselves really furnishing an accompaniment to the high ones.

After the audience was seated, the white-clad chorus and director, Miss Gussie Kuykendall, took their places on the platform; and they remained throughout the program waiting quietly on the dark stage after the last number, "Holy Night" had died away, until the audience had gone.

For the "Holy Night," the lights were turned off and the curtain was drawn back at the left to show a Madonna against its soft red folds, the light from a candle illuminating her face. Miss Dorothy Reed Miller of Wilmington, represented the Madonna.

Below is the program of the evening:

"O Come All Ye Faithful"—John Reading.

"Angels O'er the Fields Were Flying"—Old French Carol.

"Hark Now, O Shepherds"—Moravian Melody.

"While Shepherds Watched"—Michael Praetorius (1571-1621).

"Cantique De Noel"—Adolphe Adam—Maude Melvin and Chorus.

"Carol of the Russian Children"—From White Russia.

"Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming"—16th Century Melody.

"A Virgin's Lullaby"—Peery.

"A Joyous Christmas Song"—Gevaert.

"Glory To God in the Highest"—Pergolesi (1710-1736).

"Silent Night"—Michael Haydn.

Highs Open Cage Season With Winterville Here

Game Scheduled To Start 8:15 O'clock Tonight

By "SMUT" BURKS

With two weeks of preliminary preparation behind them the G. H. S. basketball five is all set to initiate the 1938 high school cage season by clashing with the Winterville high school quint. The game will be played in the high school gymnasium tonight and will start at 8:15. There will be a preliminary game starting at 7:15 with the G. H. S. Lassies playing their first game also against Winterville.

The Greenies, coached this year by Bo Farley, are hard hit by last year's graduation but the addition of several of junior high stars of 1937 to the squad has offset the vacancies of the varsity slightly.

Coach Farley is relying mainly this year on John Lautares, guard, and George Sakas, forward of last year's varsity. Both of these have had much experience on the court and are expected to lead the way during the coming season.

Also showing up good in practices are Aracy Jordan forward and Ford McGowan, guard. Larry James, John Collins and Burney, junior high stars of last year, are the most promising newcomers to the Green squad. James, a shifty center, has shown great ability at the pivot post and will probably be one of tonight's starters. Martin Stokes has been alternating at the forward posts of the first team and will likely cement action against Winterville.

The Winterville five is reputed to have a very strong team this year. They have already opened their cage season with a victory over the Bethel high school team. Hobgood, aggressive forward, is the star of the Winterville outfit and is expected to give the locals trouble in tonight's contest.

A large crowd of townspeople is expected to turn out tonight to see how the 1938 edition of G. H. S. varsity basketball will function. Much interest in high school basketball has been shown by local citizens during the past years and everyone hopes this interest will continue through the present season. So come out tonight and boost the Greenies to victory in their initial contest. Remember, the starting time is sharp.

Release Facts On How Funds Spent

In connection with the Christmas Seal Sale campaign, Miss Eliza both Skinner, publicity chairman, released the following facts today.

With reference to the proportion of the funds retained locally and the ways in which these funds are used in the control of tuberculosis, she calls attention to the fact that not only 75 per cent of the actual funds raised is retained locally, but a large part of the funds sent to the state and national tuberculosis association is returned to the community in the form of seals, Seal Sale supplies and annual tuberculosis clinics. These clinics are held every spring in Greenville, Farmville and Ayden and are conducted by a state specialist in tuberculosis at no cost to the community. This means that practically 85 cents out of every dollar raised is used at home in the control of tuberculosis.

She also revealed some of the ways in which the money is used in Pitt county. Among these ways are: Providing milk for all cases of tuberculosis who are unable to do so themselves. Providing milk, especially for

AT LAST! FILMING OF 'GONE WITH THE WIND' STARTS

The movie version of Margaret Mitchell's celebrated book, "Gone With the Wind," finally went into production at Hollywood when Selznick studios set fire to a number of old sets on its lot to make room for the new epic. The fire, shown here, will appear in the finished picture as the burning of 81 box cars loaded with ammunition by the Confederates in Atlanta, Ga., to keep them from falling into the hands of General Sherman.

MARTINS EASY FOR ETC FIVE

Bill Shelton Leads Locals to 45 to 30 Victory

Bill Shelton went on another scoring spree last night as East Carolina Teachers College came out on the big end of a 45-30 verdict over the Williamston Martins.

Earl Smith made good a pair of charity tosses to rack up Teachers' first points. During the entire game only nine of the locals' points came by the gift route.

That fellow Shelton, a mainstay of last season who paced other players in North Carolina collegiate basketball competition, seemed to be rather insistent about his scoring. He had garnered 14 points as half-time rolled around.

The intermission gave the visitors an overdose of vitality, in that they began making their scoring efforts count shortly after this period of the game got under way. However, the Teachers also showed new spirit and not once did they get into the danger zone.

Pacing the Martins in point-making was Sam Martin, former star of Mansfield Teachers College of Pennsylvania. Sam got 14 points. This was many more than his colleagues were able to garner. His nearest opponent scored 5 points.

Earl Smith was in the second bracket in the Teachers' scoring with a total of ten points. The substitutes used by Coach Gordon Gilbert played only a small portion of the contest.

The Williamston "B's" did somewhat better than their big brothers by overpowering the Teachers' outlaws 30-22 in the preliminary feature. They were ahead 18-13 at intermission. Clarence Roper, as usual, bested the subs for the locals. Manning and Cobb, with 10 points apiece, took honors for the visitors.

Lineup and individual scoring: Martins: forwards—Wallace 5, Edwards 14; centers—Grant 4, Cowan; guards—Taylor, Anderson 2, Manning 5, Cook.

Teachers: forwards—Smith 10, Shelton 20; centers—Brook 8, Martin 2; guards—Ridenhour 3, G. Clark; center—T. Forman; Guards: A. Smith, F. D. Jones. Many of the substitutes will see service in this game. The new players who are booked for service are: Girls—Mary Moore, Ollie Dyer, Etta Gorham. Boys—Wilks, J. Godettes, R. Teele.

NEGROES PLAY FRIDAY NIGHT

Farmville to be Foes of Locals in Cur-tain-Raiser

The local Negro high school basketball team will entertain Farmville here Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in their curtain-raiser.

The locals are setting their stakes high this season. The girls' squad this season is 25 members strong, the largest number that ever reported for this sport. The local boys' team is composed of mostly experienced players left over from last term.

The coaches will start two veteran teams against the visitors. Probable line-up for girls—Forwards, M. Daniel, D. Morris, W. Godettes; Guards, C. Wilks, B. Whitfield, M. Dupree. Boys—Forwards, G. May, Wm. Clark; Center, T. Forman; Guards: A. Smith, F. D. Jones. Many of the substitutes will see service in this game. The new players who are booked for service are: Girls—Mary Moore, Ollie Dyer, Etta Gorham. Boys—Wilks, J. Godettes, R. Teele.

A SPORTING PROPOSITION

"Driving on the public highway will become a sporting proposition as much as deer hunting is today, when every instructed hunter enters the woods under a code which takes into consideration his fellow hunters," said William J. Cameron of the Ford Motor Company recently, in addressing a safety conference.

Driver, pedestrian, manufacturer and roadbuilder are the links in the safety chain. A weakness in any link imperils the entire chain. The attainment of safety requires the fullest cooperation on the part of all concerned. And so far, the driver and the pedestrian have failed to extend that cooperation to the extent they should.

Safety has long been the guiding motto of the automobile engineer. Bodies, brakes, lights, steering, tires—all have been immensely improved to reduce hazards of motoring. The road builder has similar achievements to his credit, with improved non-skid surfaces and highway designs that separate lanes of cars traveling in opposite directions, eliminate crossings, and otherwise lower the chance of an accident to the minimum.

The casualty insurance companies were pioneers in automobile driver and pedestrian safety education work and the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives has been outstanding in its efforts along these lines.

In spite of all efforts to save him from harm, however, the pedestrian continues to jaywalk—and the motorist continues to "give her the gun" and commit those other motoring errors which killed 39,500 people last year. But this year the toll has been somewhat reduced, due to the efforts of safety groups which are attempting to instill a sense of personal responsibility for individual safety, in every citizen. It remains to be seen whether the public wants safety—or wants our streets and highways to remain a shambles. —(Industrial News Review).

WHAT ITALY WANTS FROM FRANCE

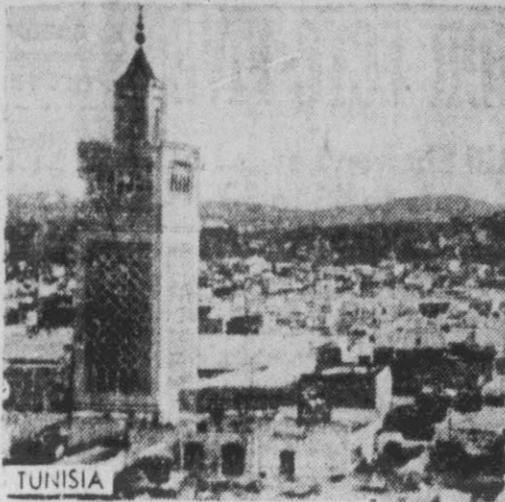

(By The AP Feature Service)

When Italian deputies, fascist party members, and newspapers clamor for Tunisia, Djibouti, Corsica, Savoy and Nice, they are demanding territories that never have been a part of modern Italy.

France grabbed most of the territories in good imperial fashion before a unified Italy emerged from a bunch of principalities in 1860. She snatched control of Tunisia not from Italy but from a native Bey—got Djibouti by signing a treaty with illiterate Somali sultans—received an exhausted Corsica from a Genoese government that wanted to spite Great Britain—and won Savoy and Nice in a political horse-trade.

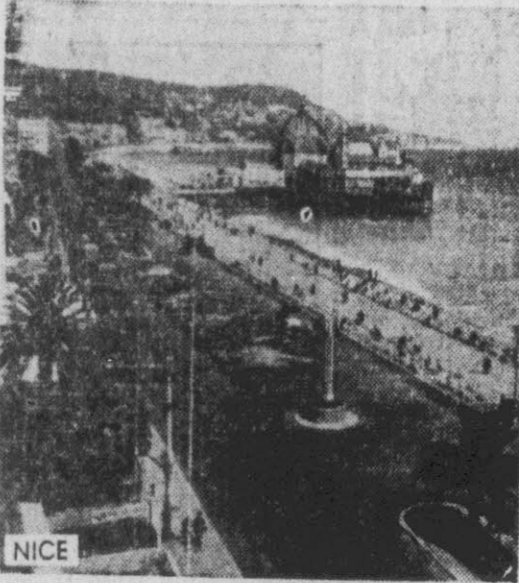

Thus there is some historical basis for some of the Italian claims—which have been voiced only informally—but all the territories have long been French.

Geographically, Tunisia juts out from African mainland toward Italy—Djibouti, in French Somaliland, is 2,000 miles from Italy and France—the island Corsica lies near Italy—Nice and Savoy, in France proper, border on Italy. Take a closer look at the five.

General view of Tunis

Tunisia, once the hang-out of Barbary pirates, was seized by France in 1881. Raiding French troops forced the native Bey to accept France's "protection." At the time, Italians were colonizing Tunisia and thought France was sympathetic. The country is fairly rich agriculturally. There are as many Italian residents there as French—about 100,000 of each.

Selling bread at the station Djibouti, capital of French Somaliland, is built on mud-flats facing the Red Sea. As France's only port on the Suez Canal route, it is strategically valuable.

As terminus of the only railway to Addis Ababa, capital of Italian-conquered Ethiopia, it is attractive to Italy. France got Somaliland between 1883-87 by treaties with native chiefs, fixed its boundaries by treaties with Britain and Italy.

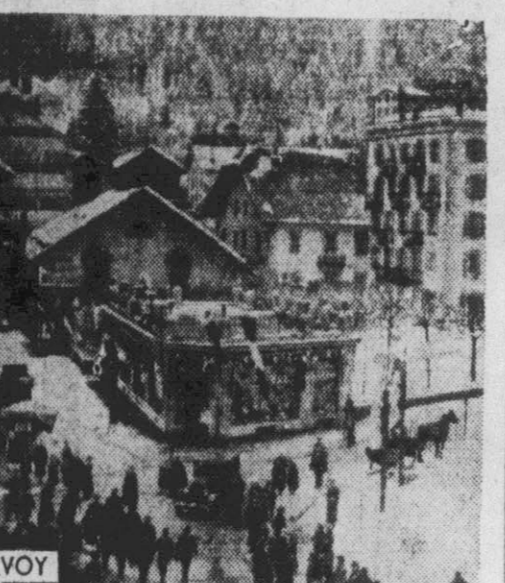

Waterfront at Calvi

Until Corsica fell into French hands a century ago, it was one of the world's most fought-over pieces of land. Genoa signed a treaty in 1768 selling it to France; twice later Britain grabbed the island, which finally became France's in 1815. It is 114 miles long, 60 miles wide. Largely agricultural, it is best known as the birthplace of Napoleon, and for its blood feuds.

Promenade Des Anglais

Italians have never forgotten that their King Victor Emanuel's House of Savoy got its name from the same Duchy of Savoy that was given to France as part of a deal in 1860. Savoy and Nice were parts of the constitutional state, Sardinia-Piedmont, that was fighting to unify all Italy by driving out Austrians and local princes. That state could do this only with the help of some other strong nation—and Napoleon III of France volunteered. His reward was two pieces of land on his border, Savoy and Nice. Savoy, now covered by two French departments, is located in the Alps, is noted for its wine and dairy products. Nice—a county in 1860—is now capital of the Alpes Maritime province. It is famed for its mild climate, its resorts, its perfume factories.

Winter scene at Chamonix

Incidentally, one of the Speaker candidates, Nash county's Bill Fenner, has been one of the most prominent advocates of compulsory control of tobacco production. Defeat of the project, however, is not likely to have any decided effect on Bill's chances to be the House's presiding officer, come January.

Last Christmas, Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell presented each news man who covers his office, with a necktie—after having remarked on the frayed condition of the neckwear several of the reporters wore.

Within the next few days, if some of the schemes now being hatched mature, the Commissioner is going to be startled by the sight of reporters, barefooted or perhaps "sans culotte."

U. S. Again The Goat
Besides calling attention to such maneuvers, Ambassador Wilson also protested in a series of notes against the German practice of assuming responsibility for Austria's debts to other nations but refusing to accept responsibility for Austria's debts to the United States.

The German answer was that she had a balance of trade with other nations which left her with spare exchange to pay on bonds. With the U. S. however, the balance of trade is the other way, so there are no spare dollars to pay off German dollar bonds. Ambassador Wilson didn't think that sounded so good, not while Germany was able to get money to buy bonds at cut rates but could not find money to pay for them at an honest dollar for dollar.

Incidentally, a couple of South American countries have played the same trick in the United States. Chile is going about it systematically, with a regular government fund. Certain Brazilian states did it also, buying up bonds which had slumped when interest payments stopped. Lately Brazil has backed away from it.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Dec. 13—Defeat of the control program for flue-cured tobacco (though a majority favored it) and approval of the continuation of cotton control were to most political observers something like the Kayo of Joe Louis by Max Schmeling in their first bout and the revenge of the Brown Bomber in their return match—which is to say, both were upsets of the prime sort.

The commentators, including this corner, are still trying to fathom why those who grow a crop which has tumbled to its lowest estate in years under control should vote to continue such a policy, while those whose crop has brought unusually good prices under control should choose to kick this protection out of the window.

Governor Clyde R. Hoey celebrated his 61st birthday Sunday, without beating drums or clashing of cymbals, but if he was listening in Sunday night he must be needing a bigger hat than usual if he paid any attention to the honey-sweet eulogy paid him by Carl Goerch over the airways—that is, if he believed what Carl had to say about him.

While North Carolina might unite in backing the Governor as a "favorite son" for the presidential nomination, as suggested by Mr. Goerch, this corner is sure that not even Carl really believes that the Governor is in any sense of the word a candidate behind whom the Roosevelt type of Liberals could or would rally.

It all depends on the way you look at it whether it is to be considered a compliment or a reproach, but Clyde R. Hoey is as innately conservative as Josiah W. Bailey or Herbert Hoover ever thought of being.

Those who have been used to some of the nooks and crannies into which they have heretofore been crammed and who are now being transferred to the swank new offices in the beautiful Mr. Alry Granite State office building are likely to get as puffed up with pride and vainglory as the queen whom "you can't even approach," if you know what I mean.

Charlotte papers indicate that the Mecklenburg delegation may split three ways on the House Speakership.

Which indicates there will be only three representatives from that county, as the unit usually goes just as many different ways as it has members.

Incidentally, one of the Speaker candidates, Nash county's Bill Fenner, has been one of the most prominent advocates of compulsory control of tobacco production. Defeat of the project, however, is not likely to have any decided effect on Bill's chances to be the House's presiding officer, come January.

Last Christmas, Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell presented each news man who covers his office, with a necktie—after having remarked on the frayed condition of the neckwear several of the reporters wore.

Washington—Freshly called home from Germany, Ambassador Hugh Wilson at once put his finger on a choice little piece of international sleight of hand by which Germany is wiping out much of her foreign debt—at the expense of Yankee investors.

German financiers have invented more new financial tricks than the world has ever known in order to put herself in fighting trim, but her methods of ducking international debts are not new in any sense. From time to time such tactics have

THE ARMY POST MURDERS

By Virginia Hanson

The Characters

Katherine Cornish, myself, visiting Elizabeth on a mid-western Army post.
Elizabeth, Colonel Wright's daughter.
Adam Drew, acting commanding officer.

Yesterday: When the light beside Anne's hospital bed goes out Annie rushes forward, but nothing is proved.

Chapter 34

The Sound Of Shots

THE roar drowned further speech as the big army plane swooped down, touched earth and taxied toward us.

Colonel Wright does not need the eagles on his shoulders to make him a commanding figure. Well over six feet, craggy faced, impeccably military, in his presence Adam alone did not suffer by comparison.

He put an arm protectively around Elizabeth and let his eagle eyes sweep the group.

"You're alone, girl?" Adam ventured in a parade-ground bellow.

Colonel Wright seemed able to make himself heard even against the crescendo of the impatient plane.

"Yes. Pilot's going right back," he said crisply. "Got tired waiting for the Department of Justice man—let him find his own transportation." He turned, waved a casual dismissal to the pilot. "Well, got your man?"

Adam said cautiously, "I'll have some information for you when we get back to quarters."

"Let's get there then," said the older man and set out across the field toward the rank of cars.

Adam already had the motor going when Elizabeth appeared at his side of the car, looking rather frightened.

"Major Drew—I can't find Annie. And my car's gone—"

Her father came up behind her. I got out quickly.

"You ride with Adam, Colonel Wright. Elizabeth and I will sit behind."

"What on earth do you suppose?" Elizabeth asked as we swung around the curve onto the main road through the post.

"My fault, I'm afraid," I said dimly. "I was supposed to watch her."

Her surprise was certainly genuine. "Watch Annie? But—but why? Adam surely can't think—"

She had called him Adam. One part of my mind registered the fact, but it gave me no pleasure. Her voice trailed off. We were shooting at a terrific pace along the indifferently surfaced road.

We clung to the sides of the car. Speech was no longer comfortable. As we roared down Nonesuch Row I glimpsed a car ahead of us, traveling very fast.

"Look—is that it?"

And then I saw it was not—it was a roadster.

Down the long row of officers' quarters it kept well ahead of us. Suddenly, at the far end of the post, I saw Elizabeth's little car take a drunken corner and careen on its way.

"He's Dead"

LOOK—she's not stopping at the house," Elizabeth shouted at me. She was right. Her car had slackened speed, was weaving back and forth along the road that led to the gate of the post, where a row of trees swallowed it from sight. The second car had gained on it, and as we swooped around a corner and approached the commanding officer's quarters I saw that the second car was Charlie's.

The brakes squealed as Adam drew up in front of the house. He was out of the car almost instantly.

"Out, girls, quickly!" he ordered crisply, giving us each a hand. "Get into the house—this won't be pretty. Hi, Sentry! On the running board. And you, sir?"

"Drive on," said Colonel Wright. Elizabeth and I stood on the sidewalk staring after them in dumb amazement as the car lunged away. And then, for no reason that I'll ever know, the hair rose on my head in a terror I had never felt before.

A man's voice was bellowing, "Corporal of the Guard, Post Number One!"

Then the sound of shots—four or five in rapid succession, followed by the unmistakable, metallic reading of a car smash. Only a heartbeat of silence, while the whole post seemed to echo that cry:

I stopped, found a handkerchief in my dress pocket and mopped my eyes. Elizabeth had passed me. I saw Adam just outside the gate, wrenching open the door of Elizabeth's car, now a crumpled toy listing against a tree by the side of the highway. Colonel Wright was with him, and the two sentries. I did not see Charlie.

Then from the little knot Annie detached herself, ran to Elizabeth and wound her arms around her in a gesture both restraining and cherishing.

"Don't look," she was saying compassionately as I came up with them. "He's dead—put a bullet through his head. I seen him make off with the little car and I did me best to catch him. But there—I'm no driver. Ah, Elizabeth, the poor little car!"

Elizabeth looked past her with death in her eyes.

"I can get another car," she said and, turning, stumbled back toward home.

Annie went after her and I stood there alone, hanging to the fence, staring out through the closed bars, whispering, "Not Charlie."

On the plain behind me the cannon boomed once for reveille, or for requiem. Then cars came, and the ambulance. And they were lifting him out—a fair-haired man in olive-drab slacks and a khaki shirt; and I saw what I had been waiting to see and remembered Elizabeth stumbling toward home.

Not Charlie, Barney, the handsome Norse giant, with a bullet through his head.

"Eleven O'Clock"

ANNIE and I sat in Elizabeth's living room and talked, trying not to think of the girl upstairs who had asked to be left alone. There were questions in my mind and I asked them, and Annie told me what she knew.

Hours before, the sentries had been ordered to let no one leave the post without a written pass from Adam. Barney must have known of the order, or suspected it, when he chose Elizabeth's car in which to make his getaway.

The sentry had seen it coming weaving uncertainly along thearrison road, and had thought Miss Wright was at the wheel. He had challenged, standing in the middle of the road until an instant more would have encompassed his destruction. Then, from the side of the road where he had leaped, he saw the driver's face and realized that he had been hoaxed.

He had fired at the tires of the accelerating car, seen it crash into the tree; and before he could reach it Barney had shot himself with his own gun. Why he had lost his nerve and fled she did not know—unless there were things that Anne could tell.

Remembering that struggle beside Anne's bed, my cheeks burned. I asked Annie's pardon and she asked mine.

"Sure and it was all I could think of they could do to her, caged up there—put poison in her glass or change the medicines. So I says to myself, 'There'll be none of that.' And then, when I saw it was you, I could hardly believe me eyes. For I said to meself, why would she be killing the child? Not on account of her young man, for wasn't Anne decided to marry the other one?"

"Motive," I said. "That's what I couldn't figure about you. But what earthly motive did Barney have? I thought he was in love with her."

Annie's face grew grimmer. "Maybe he was, to begin with. Maybe he was all the time. He was a queer one—no making him out. I told Elizabeth he was a wrong 'un, him throwin' cigarette butts in me clean sink—no bringin' up, I said; and her well rid of him. But there, the poor lass had her heart set on him—it was to meet him for the last time that she came back to the house tonight. And me own fool fault that she didn't have the alibi he'd planned for her, what with me coming up the front row and seeing the car and thinking she'd left it home after all and deciding I'd have one turn around the post in it."

"Then it was you drove past the club?"

"Who else? You didn't think Elizabeth would lie to you? And of course Barney had counted on me being in by eleven as I always am. She told me about it while we were lying awake in the dark up there awhile ago. 'Eleven o'clock,' he wrote on a scrap of paper and left it in the chair where her evening bag was while she was dancing, for Anne wasn't letting him get a word with her all evening."

"But why? Are you trying to tell me that Barney was in love with Elizabeth and was going to marry Anne?"

"I can't answer for who he loved. I'm thinkin' he took that secret with him. But it was Elizabeth he wanted to marry—maybe it was for love, maybe he had his own reasons."

"Then what happened?"

admired meanness in the witch. At the crash she looked up. "Get down here, sop that!" she shouted. Then she smiled. "Sweet temper you're in. What happened?"

The witch hopped down onto the Queen's hand and told her what had happened. But she kept one secret: she didn't tell the Queen she had seen the Princess Hulda. She felt grateful for the little dress Hulda had made her. She wound up her story with: "And if I didn't have the power to change myself into smoke, there I'd be yet in the hamper."

"I'll Get My Army"

"Humph!" said the Queen. "Leave it to you to get out." Then she looked very harsh. "But nobody is going to interfere with my plans. Where is this place? I'll get my army out."

"Well, it's rather far," said the witch.

"Never mind that, we're going there," said the Queen. So she issued orders to her general, and in half an hour the courtyard was bustling with soldiers preparing for a long march. The polished their spears and tied on breast plates and combed out their long hair and their fierce looking mustaches. And then they all passed around a hand mirror to see how fine they looked.

The Queen put on a riding habit, tugged on leather boots and gauntlets and pulled a fur cap down over her gray hair. Then she strode into

SHORT COURSE DATES ARE SET

Third Annual Tobacco Study Scheduled for Jan. 10-13

Raleigh, Dec. 12—Dan M. Paul, director of agricultural short courses at State College, today announced dates and a preliminary program for the third annual Tobacco Short Course to be held here. The course will open with registration between 9 and 10:30 a. m. on Tuesday, January 10, 1939 and will continue through the noon hour the following Friday, January 13.

The course, designed to instruct tobacco growers above the age of 16, consists of lectures and discussions supplemented by laboratory practice and demonstrations in grading and sorting tobacco. Tuition is free, but a charge of $1.00 is made for registration and a certificate of attendance, which goes to persons attending all sessions. Limited lodging facilities are available on the college campus at a nominal charge.

Morning sessions will be devoted to lectures and open discussions by prominent farm leaders, including E. Y. Floyd, tobacco specialist of the State College Extension Service; State College; E. G. Mose, senior agronomist and assistant director in charge of the Oxford Tobacco Station; Dr. R. F. Poole, professor of Plant Pathology at State College; J. O. Rowell, extension entomologist; K. J. Shaw, agent of the Division of Tobacco and Peanut Nutrition, U. S. D. A.; Dr. Luther Shaw, extension plant pathologist; H. W. Taylor, marketing specialist of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics; and L. T. Weeks, assistant extension tobacco specialist.

Demonstrations will be held in the afternoons. Col. John W. Harrelson can act as demonstrator, and Dr. I. O. Schaub, dean of agriculture and director of the Extension Service, will welcome those attending the short course.

the courtyard and mounted her coal black horse.

"All right," she shouted. But just then her saddle came loose and she plumped right down on the cobblestones. Her fur cap slipped over her eyes and her gray hair tumbled down. She scrambled to her feet screaming with anger: "String him up. Who saddled my horse? String him up."

But nobody answered her. All her soldiers looked down at their toes. The witch sat on her shoulder and cackled. "Heh, heh, you certainly look funny."

"Shut up," said the Queen to the witch. "Well which one was it?" to the soldiers.

In a Meek Voice.

The General stepped forward still keeping his eyes on his toes and said in a meek voice, "If it please your majesty, you saddled that horse when you went for a ride this morning."

The Queen blushed. Then she snapped, "Well, don't stand there like a bump on a log. Forward. We ride 30 miles today." She refastened her saddle, mounted her horse and galloped off at the head of her troops. They made a thundering sound that rippled through the air, and warned all the little woods fairies around that something was up. Several came winging through the forest and peered out from behind big oak leaves at the mean Queen going by.

"Why, she's headed for Toyland," whispered several. "We must warn Santa." So they floated up into the air like a flock of birds. There were so many of the little wind fairies that they caused quite a rumpus. They bent trees as they went by, and stirred up dust on the roads they crossed, and bowed the wheat on the farm lands, and blew off people's hats in the city streets. People looked up and shook their heads, saying, "Hm-m, quite a storm." Wouldn't they have been surprised if they had known it was a flock of wind fairies flying to Toyland?
