PLANS TO ASK EXTENSION OF SECURITY ACT

Roosevelt Intends To Deliver Message to Congress

COUNCIL WOULD WIDEN COVERAGE

Special Message On National Defense as Congress Convenes Also Considered

Washington, Dec. 19.—(AP)—President Roosevelt intends to ask Congress in January to extend and strengthen the Social Security act.

White House officials said today the chief executive intended to send a special message "relative to the extension of coverage and the strengthening of provisions of the Social Security act."

Presumably the message will transmit to a congress a copy of the report carrying recommendations of the social advisory council.

The council made public Saturday suggestions that the insurance coverage be widely extended.

White House officials said possibly national defense also would be the subject for a special message that has not yet been determined.

Mr. Roosevelt called in a group of government officials today to discuss defense problems. Those on the list were Chairman Edward J. Noble and Robert Hinkley of the Civil Aeronautics authority; Louis Johnson, assistant Secretary of War and Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator.

There were indications that President Roosevelt would embrace railroad recommendations in his general message. The railroad situation also engaged his attention today in a conference with Carl Gray and George Harrison, members of a special board which is attempting to find some solution for the plight of the carriers.

Philip Musica, However, Called Arch-Swindler of Time

EXTEND INQUIRY IN BIG SHORTAGE

Investigate Possibility Political Protection Bought With Stolen Millions

New York, Dec. 19.—(AP)—The Federal government opened a co-ordinated inquiry today into a vast international arms smuggling plot which officials predicted would net co-conspirators "equally as important" as Philip Musica, arch-swindler of his time.

As authorities began an extended probe into the $18,000,000 shortage in the crude drug department of the McKesson and Robbins corporation which was "milked," they said, to provide funds for the smuggling enterprise, Musica himself lay in a Brooklyn morgue.

With his widow virtually the only mourner, he was buried in a guarded ceremony during the day in a cemetery in Queens, near his father, Antonio Musica, an immigrant Italian barber.

The distinguished looking 61-year old ex-convict who, as "P. Donald Coster," became head of the world's third largest drug firm and ended a life-long career in deception by blowing his brains out, remained in death the key enigma in a case of baffling complexities.

Although a number of other angles remained unexpected, acting U. S. Attorney Gregory Noonan said representatives of the six Federal agencies in the co-ordinated inquiry would lay "special emphasis" on the arms smuggling phase of the investigation.

Another lead of possible national repercussions was the theory held by most investigators that Musica's empire of swindle and his reported traffic in munitions were safeguarded by political protection bought with stolen millions.

Federal authorities disclosed that their chief clue in the arms smuggling inquiry was a recent letter to George Musica, alias George S. Dietrich, assistant treasurer of the drug company, ordering 250,000 rifles and 250,000 rounds of ammunition.

Investigators said they had not yet established the true identity of the men who wrote the letter.

SAYS GERMANY MUST BE TAKEN IN AS PARTNER

Declares Such Action Necessary to Insure Peace

NO INTENTIONS OF CEDING LAND

Prime Minister Also Declares There Is No Difference With the United States

London, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that Nazi Germany must be taken in as a "partner" to insure Europe's peace and progress.

In a vigorous defense of his foreign policy, the Prime Minister also declared that there was "no sort of difficulty or difference" between the United States and Britain "which gives us the slightest shade or cause of anxiety."

Chamberlain flatly denied reports that he intended to cede British Somaliland to Italy. He said "no such suggestion" had been made by Italy.

In face of a labor demands for a vote of censure on the government's post-Munich maneuvers, Chamberlain stuck to his guns.

He declared he never would take the responsibility for entering war "unless it is forced upon me by the madness of others" and defended his course of "appeasement" both before and after the Munich accord of September 29.

Of Germany he said "we have the firm conviction that unless this strong and virile nation can be induced in partnership with others to improve the general lot there will be neither peace nor progress in Europe in things which make life worth living."

But, he acknowledged, "it takes two to make an agreement and it takes two to make a war."

"I am still waiting for a sign from those who speak for the German people," he said, "that they share this desire and that they are willing to make their contribution for the peace which would help them as it would help us."

Pitt Cafe Ratings Are Released Here

Hotel, restaurant and cafe inspections in Greenville and Pitt county for the month of November today were released by the Pitt county health department.

The number of cafes included in the November report is much smaller than for October, for the reason that many cafes closed when the 1938 tobacco marketing season ended in Greenville.

In releasing the report, the health officer stated that even though the inspectors were becoming more rigid in enforcing the State cafe law, it was gratifying to know that operators were giving the inspectors full cooperation.

In rating an eating establishment, grade A ranges from 90 to 100; grade B, 80 to 90, and grade C, 70 to 80. If an eating place is found to have a rating of below 70, it is not allowed to operate.

Greenville inspections are as follows:

Blount-Harvey's Tea Room 96.0, Hill Home's Drug Store 94.5; Respass Barbecue 94.0; Busy Bee Cafe 93.0; Smitty's Place 91.5; Red Gables Cafe 91.0; Shep's Sandwich Shop 90.5; Dixie Gray Cafe 90.5; New Greenville 90.0; Carolina Grill 90.0; Steakhouse 90.0 Star Cafe 88.0; Dixie Lunch 87.5; Kares Bros. 87.5; Busy Bee (col.) 86.5; Bissette's 84.5; Carolina Grill (col.) 80.5; Wilson's Coffee 77 and Brown's Sandwich Shoppe 76.5.

County inspections are as follows:

Farmville—Frozen Delight 90.5, Carolina Barbecue 90.5, Davis Hotel 90, City Cafe 90, Artis Cafe (col.) 73.0, Hollywood Cafe (col.) 72.

Ayden—Town Tavern 90.0, Mrs. Moyer's Dining Room 88.0, Bon Tom 75.

Winterville—Serve-U Cafe 82.5, Dixie Cafe 80.0.

Bethel—Blount's Hotel 90.0, Corner Plaza 81.5, Day-Nite 74.0.

Two Face Charges Of Drunken Driving

Warrants charging two Farmville men with driving while drunk were served today by Patrolman C. R. Williams following a wreck near Belvoir last night between a car operated by Jack Warren of Greenville and one driven by James Lewis or John Woody, both of Farmville.

Patrolman Williams said Woody and Lewis each claimed the other was driving and warrants were served on both of them.

No one was injured in the collision, but both cars were damaged. Both Lewis and Woody are under $100 bonds.

Attitude Of Farmers On Crop Control Beclouded

Marketing Quotas for Burley Tobacco Also Rejected

Washington, Dec. 19.—(AP)—The farmers' attitude toward the New Deal agricultural program appeared clouded today by rejection of tobacco marketing control shortly after quotas had been approved for cotton.

Administration critics argued that the crop control law had been repudiated by growers in 14 states who defeated marketing quotas Saturday for burley and dark type tobacco.

A majority was returned in behalf of the control, but the favorable vote of two-thirds of the participating farmers, as required by law, was lacking. Producers of flue-cured tobacco and rice previously had turned down quotas.

Administration supporters, lumping the votes in those four referenda with the recent cotton election, contended the total offered proof that participating farmers actually approved existing legislation.

Senator Borah (R.-Idaho) expressed the belief that the referendum helped end the New Deal argument that farm prosperity can best be maintained by governmental control of production and marketing.

On the other hand, Chairman Jones (D.-Tex.) of the House Agriculture Committee, and Representative Fulmer (D.-S. C.) declared they believed crop control policies would be retained by Congress.

Both said, however, it was quite probable changes would be made in order to eliminate growers' objections about administrative methods.

DEAL IN ARMS IS UNCOVERED

Boston Lawyer Tells Of Drawing Contract for Coster

New York, Dec. 19.—(AP)—A Boston lawyer swore today that he drafted, at the behest of P. Donald Coster-Philip Musica, contract for the purchase of Lee-Enfield rifles and Standard Oil of England.

The lawyer, Frederic Wingersky, made this statement to Assistant State Attorney General Semrose McCall, conducting an inquiry into the affairs of the $87,000,000 corporation. Coster-Musica committed suicide Friday after he had been exposed as a notorious swindler of a quarter century ago.

At the same time Brien McMahon, assistant U. S. Attorney General, arriving from Washington, described Coster-Musica as "probably the biggest illicit liquor dealer in the country."

PLEDGES HELP; EXPECTS SAME

Foreign Minister's Brief Declaration Results in Immediate Passage of Huge Budget Without Debate; Strange Bedfellows Oppose Any Territorial Concessions

Paris, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet told the Chamber of Deputies today that "in case of unprovoked aggression all the forces of France on land, sea, and in the air spontaneously and immediately would be utilized for the defense of Great Britain."

During a brief review of foreign affairs, Bonnet made plain that France at the same time expects Britain to do likewise for her.

"The foundation of our diplomatic actions remains the Franco-British entente," he said. "If one of the two nations should be the object of unprovoked aggression the other certainly would not hesitate to come to her aid."

"Now could it be otherwise when it is a question of two nations like France and Britain, whose relations following the expressive of Chamberlain are so close they simply super-judicial obligations because they are founded on an identity of interest."

The foreign minister's statement came as numerous French groups were organizing a "no surrender" bloc to fight what they feared was a plan to surrender part of all of French and British Somaliland to Italy.

"We believe that a war would end soon if foreign states left the Spanish alone, face to face," Bonnet told the deputies.

The minister's brief declaration resulted in immediate passage without debate of the budget for his ministry.

The "no surrender" bloc united strange bedfellows, "Communists, Royalists and Independent Centerists in opposition to cession of any East African colonies to Italy."

James Ward, Negro, is being held in the county jail here in connection with the shooting of Jim Pilgreen, another Negro, in Pactolus last night.

Pilgreen was said to have been critically, perhaps fatally wounded, when two loads of buckshot were fired at him one taking effect in the head and another in the stomach.

The Negro who was shot was said to have served a term in the penitentiary for having shot another Negro,

STOLE AN ENGINE And After Going Ten Miles Turned It Loose

About midnight Saturday night someone went to the yard of the Atlantic Coast Line at Washington and stole a railroad engine. When the culprit started out of town with the engine he threw the throttle wide open, turned on the whistle and raised such a racket as he sped away that alarmed everybody in the neighborhood.

The noise awoke the agent, and discovering what had taken place he began telephoning up the road in order to head off the runaway. No one was found awake except at Stokes station and orders were sent there to flag down the engine or ditch it.

The thief stopped at Pacolius, and after reversing the engine to let it go back wild, jumped off. Fortunately the steam was so near exhausted that the engine went back only about two miles when it ran down on the track. The officials are hunting for the engine robber.

LETTERS TO SANTA CLAUS

Winterville, N. C., Dec. 17.

Dear Santa Claus:

Ralph and myself are brother and sister. I am a little girl eight years old. I go to school every day. I haven't missed but one day. I am in the third grade. My teacher's name is Mrs. Stancil. She is very good to me. She gives us lots of parties and candy. I mind her the very best I can. So you see I am a good little girl. So please if you can, bring me a drinking and wetting doll. And a writing desk and a toy stove, and a trunk and a mantle set. So I am not going to ask you to bring me anything more, for I want other little children to get what they ask for. If I could I would make every little boy and girl happy Christmas morning. So good-bye. I hope to see you soon. If I can I will be down there Monday night. I hope you will be in the best of health. With lots of love from

About midnight Saturday night someone went to the yard of the Atlantic Coast Line at Washington and stole a railroad engine. When the culprit started out of town with the engine he threw the throttle wide open, turned on the whistle and raised such a racket as he sped away that alarmed everybody in the neighborhood.

The noise awoke the agent, and discovering what had taken place he began telephoning up the road in order to head off the runaway. No one was found awake except at Stokes station and orders were sent there to flag down the engine or ditch it.

The thief stopped at Pacolius, and after reversing the engine to let it go back wild, jumped off. Fortunately the steam was so near exhausted that the engine went back only about two miles when it ran down on the track. The officials are hunting for the engine robber.

NOTABLES TURN OUT FOR GRIDIRON DINNER

The nation's highest officials headed by President Roosevelt and out-standing men from all walks of life were guests at the gridiron club dinner, an event at which news paper correspondents poken fun at the administration. Shown in conversation as they arrived for dinner which was held in Washington, D. C. are, left to right: Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, Vice-President Garner and Justice Pierce Butler.

WHAT IT MEANS: Crop Control Elections

Washington—Many city people may be tempted to dismiss the crop control elections they've been reading about in the papers recently as nothing more than another way to throw money to the yelling farmers.

And, no doubt, some farmers may wink slyly and agree in private that they are merely new-fangled devices to get about half what's coming to them.

But serious students of the United States political system are suggesting these quota elections might turn out to be new and powerful instruments of government applicable to everybody—and almost everything.

Once a quota election is held, the decision of two-thirds of the farmers raising the affected crop is compulsory on all other raisers and compels the individual's freedom to plant and reap and sell his crop as he pleases.

Already Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace is claiming the cotton quota vote as a victory for the New Deal farm program and maybe the quota elections will become a habit, at least in rural districts. A good habit or a bad one, time alone will tell.

But the farmer is an individual, not a state. Heretofore he has had the individual's right to plant what he pleases on his land. And right there, the New Deal tried a new kink in the Democratic process in the United States, for better or for worse.

The farm control act of 1938 gives the farmer the privilege of voting in an election in his county on the question of Federal aid. If the surplus of an important crop—such as cotton—reaches the danger point.

Thus, with their eye on Federal aid, the cotton farmers voted to limit their production last spring. In return they received about $300,000,000 in Federal benefits and loans.

The loans helped keep the price of cotton up close to nine cents a pound. In at least one post-depres-

The Characters

Noel Marchand, a young actress without a play.
 Mrs. Marchand, an elderly woman, not related to Noel.
 Allan Collings, Mrs. Marchand's handsome son.
 David Norris, an older man who wants to marry Noel.

Yesterday Mrs. Marchand receives an avalanche of replies to her ad. Allan insists on having a detective investigate them.

Chapter Four

The Choice Is Made

"YOU'RE being terribly unfair," Noel flung at David Norris as they rode across town in the warm taxi.

Noel had loosened her black velvet cape and the lights from the swift-passing streets caught the glow of her white satin gown underneath.

David sank in his corner and grumbled an answer. They were silent for a moment until he said petulantly, "You talk of unfairness. You know how I counted on Christmas with you. We half-promised the Rowlands, and now you're rushing away to some God-forsaken country house to leave me miserably alone. How can you treat me like that, darling?"

David reached for her hand and she let hers lie lifeless in his.

"You won't understand, dear," hesitatingly giving stress to the word of endearment. "I don't want modernistic blue trees and silver globes of eggnog and a lot of people who'd forget me in twenty-four hours wishing me a Merry Christmas."

The man's hand crushed hers in his strong left palm. "Well, you say the word—and we'll find an old-fashioned Christmas. Or—eagerly he said it—"if you'll marry me first we'll go on a holiday cruise and pick our own poinsettias in some warm garden."

Noel's head shook vehemently. "I like you so much, David. That's what makes it difficult. But my life is too disrupted these days to make such an important decision. You promised you'd wait a while for my answer."

David sighed and let go her hand. In the silence of the next few minutes, she was already picking up pine cones in some white-carpeted woodland, and sitting around a table where families had sat for so many Christmases. Some place, over a snow-capped hill, a church bell would be ringing lovely Yuletide music solemnly.

"I'm going to Claiborne," she announced emphatically.

At the entrance to Noel's hotel they alighted and while she stopped for her key, David got her the morning papers. She carried them and the few enveloped messages to the elevator where David told her a reluctant goodnight.

Once in her room, Noel casually read over the telephone messages. She gasped with amazement at the second she read:

Mr. Collings wants you to call him.

What could he want at this late hour? Slowly picking up the register, she asked for the Lancaster Hotel and when she had been connected, she heard Allan's voice answering her sleepily.

"Did I waken you?" she asked remorsefully.

"I've been reading some drivel, waiting your call. The Star called Mother after dinner and wanted some information about the advertisement. Luckily I answered and told them we were acting for Mother party. I did everything but threaten their office with bombing if they didn't lay off. So we'll have to be especially careful, since you two are determined to go on with this mad scheme. I've decided we'd better work it through the man I got this afternoon to look up the applicants."

Better Than You Think

"YOU don't approve of our plans at all, do you, Allan?"

"What sane person would?" was Allan's retort. "But Mother's getting such a kick out of it, I suppose my protests are useless."

"It may turn out much better than you think," Noel lightened her voice with laughter.

"Did you have a good time at the dinner?" Allan asked, after a hesitant pause.

"It was nice."

"Just nice is hard on your David." Was there a satirical twist to the words? Noel couldn't be sure.

"He's not my David yet." She stung out the answer, as much to herself as to Allan on the other end.

"Well—" Was he saying "Goodnight"? Noel waited.

Noel Marchand! It sounds nice when I say it. Almost like a sister."

Noel grimaced. Sister indeed!

"Wouldn't it be step-sister?" she managed. "If I were that lucky?"

And then she said quickly before he could answer her. "Well, good-night, Allan; I'll see you tomorrow. We've those letters to answer and it won't be so easy."

"Goodnight Noel," Allan replied.

"Happy dreams," she whispered into the mouthpiece. "And do put some holly around them."

"Or maybe mistletoe in the offing?" His laughter came out of the night air. "Goodbye, till tomorrow." Then he was gone.

Shifting their preferences, making selections, then changing their minds occupied Mrs. Marchand and Noel through the hours when they were together during the next two days. True to his word Allan had engaged an investigator to follow up the applications. He blithely ignored his mother's caustic comment when she met the sleuth:

"He looks as though he ought to be investigated himself."

Later she reluctantly admitted the wisdom of her son's action when Detective McCarthy reported on the letter that was Mrs. Marchand's pet preference. It was written in old-fashioned script and signed by "Abigail Johnson." It seemed like a breath of lavender and conjured pictures of a fragile old lady sitting by an open fire, fingering her ecru fichu.

"Served two terms for shoplifting," McCarthy disgustedly announced.

Search into the past of the others selected proved less dismaying. One old maid was ruled out because McCarthy said he was "rich as old Croesus" and notoriously stingy.

With tearful protest, Mrs. Marchand would plead for each writer. She wanted them all. It broke her heart to disappoint one. But both Allan and Noel urged her to stick to the original size of the guest list and finally the choice was made and the invitations written.

Noel chose a struggling young designer named Elsie Grant who lived at the Weymouth Club for girls. Noel remembered the place well.

"When I was broke, four years ago, I spent Christmas in that place. It's cheap and respectable—that's all you can say for it. I'd hate to think of poor Elsie in her cubbyhole of a room there on Christmas Eve," she explained.

So Elsie headed the list.

Much as he'd held out against the plan, Allan had a guest of his own, too. Going through the avalanche of mail he'd come across one from an "Archibald Whitaker" and when he'd read through the letter, he exclaimed:

'Archie, The Mouse'

"WHAT do you know about that? Here's Archie, the Mouse." Then, as his mother looked askance, he explained, "He was one of the teachers at Stratton when I went there. A meek little fellow—but a decent sort as I remember. Good Lord, is Archie still in the land of the living?"

After that, Archibald must be included, and his name followed Elsie's. Next came the widow of a naval officer, Elizabeth Barton, whose son had died and whose daughter was married to a young Marine subaltern, in far-off Hawaii.

Tommy Sheldon who confessed he was a hopeful architect with nothing to build wrote in whimsical vein of seeing a real house, not one on white paper or in cold winter dreams. "Poor chap," Mrs. Marchand almost wept over his letter. So Tommy was in.

Detective McCarthy had something to do with the last one. He reported so sympathetically of one "Janet Smith" that she was accepted on McCarthy's recommendation. "Sweet young blonde kid from Iowa, pretty as a picture, looks as though her parents ought to be taking care of her. Says she's an artist, but sure needs the breaks."

There they were, the fortunately chosen, and over the letter that went out to each of them. Mrs. Marchand labored for hours. They were to come to her country home the morning before Christmas. She would send them their railroad tickets and they'd be met at the station.

"And Noel, darling, you'll have to come up long before that to help me with the plans," she went on, building her lovely dream Christmas and wafting her magic wand that would turn it into a reality.

Each day, Noel grew fonder of the delightful enthusiastic dowager who seemed lost when Noel was off on some other engagement. "I feel I've had you for years," she'd say with her arm around Noel. "You're such a comfort—and so beautiful to look at."

Walking briskly up the Avenue and over East to her hotel after she left them, Noel thought of these two newly made friends and how quickly they'd grown into her life. She adored Mrs. Marchand and she liked Allan, she knew. But she wasn't sure just how he regarded her.

The theater tonight with David didn't seem so alluring as it would have a week ago. Her mind was on the coming Christmas party.

It was while Noel was relaxing after her shower and before she put on her dinner gown that she saw it! In the afternoon paper. The gorgeously tall figure, all swathed in gables, alighting from the transcontinental plane at Newark Airport that morning. A coolly beautiful face, looking calmly superior as the cameraman snapped her. And, underneath, the caption:

The popular Elaine Corey Schuyler, back home from Reno with her freedom from the equally popular Vincent Schuyler.

And so, as the society reporter dramatically wrote, "endeth the story that started with their elopement last Christmas Eve."

Elaine—Christmas Eve—Elopement!

The words registered one by one on Noel's consciousness. She knew instinctively, though she couldn't tell why, that this was Allan's lost love, Elaine.

And Elaine was back in New York—free!

Chapter 13

POOR HULDA
 Night set in and the cold winds blew. But the mean Queen and her soldiers still sat outside the Toyshop not saying a word. The Queen scowled as though she wished she could pierce the walls of Toyland with her scowl. And the soldiers looked unhappy.

The witch was doing some thinking. When the moon came up she stood up on the Queen's fur cap and said, "Stay here. I think I can get rid from some of my friends to cut the ropes that bind your army." She flew off.

She flew into the big forest on the next hill and as she flew she kept looking for something. She came to a stony mountain and she flew around it until she saw an entrance in the rocks. Into that she flew along a narrow corridor and finally she came to a low room. There sat a huge rat on a couch nibbling away at an oak root.

"Ho, ho! It is, is it?" said the Queen. "Well, you'll go along with us. I suppose this queer size of yours is just another Toyland trick. But we'll take you along anyway."

So poor little Hulda was put into the Queen's big coat pocket and the Queen and her soldiers rode off across the hills.

"Hail, brother," said the witch. "Hail, and who brings you here?" asked the rat stroking his whiskers. "We have need of you and your strongest men," said the witch. "The mean Queen's army is tied up with the strongest ropes we ever saw. Could you come and nibble through them?"

At Your Service

"Madame, we are at your service," said the big rat solemnly. He stood up and squeaked very loudly until there appeared a whole army of gray rats. The first rat explained to the rest what the witch wanted and then they all started off, with the witch flying ahead.

When they came to the gentle hill in front of Toyland the first rat assigned two of his men to each of the mean Queen's soldiers and said "Quick about it now. Gnaw the ropes that bind those men. They must be free before dawn."

So the rats began to nibble, nibble. The rope was so strong that some of the rats broke their teeth. But they kept on. The moon saw what was happening and was quite disturbed. He tried to wake Santa by shining brightly into his bedroom window. But Santa slept on.

"Snap!" went the first rope that the rats broke. They had been worried that they might not be able to gnaw through the rope until then. But then "Snap!" went another rope. The rats little eyes sparkled as they saw the ropes break, and they nibbled all the harder.

Little by little the rope was chewed to bits. One by one all of the mean Queen's soldiers were freed. The Queen was so pleased that she took off a pearl necklace and handed it to the leader of the rats. He put it solemnly into his vest pocket and then led his people down the hill and away. But they made a little rustling "scurry, scurry," as they went. And guess who they woke up? The very person who should have stayed asleep! Hulda.

NEGRO SCHOOL IS CONSIDERED

Court Decision May Cause North Carolina to Act

Reflector Bureau
 Raleigh, Dec. 18.—The collection of a graduate school for Negroes in which courses in law and other professions will be available, as a branch of the North Carolina College at Durham is likely to result from the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme court that state may not exclude Negroes from state colleges unless similar courses are offered in Negro schools elsewhere within the state.

Governor Clyde R. Hoey has not commented extensively on the court's decision, but he looks on the proposal to establish graduate schools at Durham as the most economic solution of the problem presented by the decision.

He recognizes that it is now impossible to keep the question from becoming an issue except by making provision for Negroes to get professional courses at Negro colleges within North Carolina. Under the federal decision no proposal to pay expenses of Negroes at schools out of the state, nor proposals for general Southern states to establish joint schools will answer.

As a result, it seems certain that the General Assembly meeting next month will get the problem and that it will solve it by establishment of the graduate school at Durham.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington — Anthony Eden's visit in the United States is likely to have more effect in England than here.

In his first speech, the one before the Manufacturers Association, he insisted his visit was not connected in any way with public affairs, but diplomats and politicians do not expect to be taken seriously when they make such statements. His visit is interpreted in certain circles here as intended to bolster his position in England as the leader of the "younger" element who are plugging for international organization to keep the peace. When the League of Nations folded they began looking for cooperation of the United States to restore Britain to the balance of power in Europe she more had.

The story told here is that one of the internal conflicts which led up to the resignation of Eden last February as foreign minister in Chamberlain's cabinet was a conflict over what dependence could be placed upon the United States if needed in a pinch.

Chamberlain Had Doubts
Chamberlain, who remembered more clearly how this country reacted against the league, and again remembered the negative reaction to the President's "quarantine" speech, doubted whether the United States ever could be committed in advance to aid England. Eden evidently believed such commitments could be had, perhaps not in the form of a treaty approved by the Senate, but in the form of understandings between officials of the two countries. They broke when Chamberlain insisted on pursuing a policy of pacification independently both of the league and the United States.

Rebuffs came to England time after time under the Chamberlain policy, first from Mussolini and then from Hitler. It was Eden's view, as represented here, that such rebuffs would have been avoided and England's position made secure if she never had faltered in her earlier purpose of building up international organization through the league and through understandings with the United States.

Eden went out of the ministry immensely popular, and with a considerable following not only of the younger element but also of many old heads in the conservative party. One of these reputedly is former Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, who continues to be a powerful party figure behind the scenes.

One Man Good-Will Tour

Eden's trip to the United States from a British point of view then takes on the semblance of a one-man good-will junket whose most immediate purpose is to strengthen Eden and his following when the expected election rolls around, possibly within a year. If Eden should take advantage of his own trip to the United States, and the further good will built up by the visit of the King and Queen here next summer, to build up a semblance of an "inside understanding" between the United States and England, he would have a tremendous bargaining power with the electorate. In spite of much public acclaim, there is stout British opposition to the Chamberlain policy of pacification by negotiation and willingness to take rebuffs.

JANUARY 1938

Business Slows Up At Home; War Worrries Mount Abroad

One way to help in ascertaining where we are is to look back on the road by which we have traveled.—Lord Grey.

In the year now nearly over, the world careened along a rough, bewildering road. Some folks goose-stepped; some did the Lambeth Walk. And here's a swing-time, month-by-month glance back. This is the first part, January. Tomorrow's chapter deals with February, and so on until the story ends.

By VOLTA TORREY

AP Feature Service Writer
There was a dearth of prophecy when the iron tongue of midnight tolled 1938's arrival. Jitterbugs shouted "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen," but outside the night clubs, business stagnated. "Nice work if you can get it" was a popular phrase.—Special Census-Taker John D. Biggers estimated 10,000,000 Americans were unemployed, and big business men went silently to Washington, in January, like small fry entering the woodshed with father.

Interior Secretary Ickes and Assistant Attorney General Jackson (who then was expected to run for Governor of New York) had been booting business "bourbons." Men of means fought NLRB and fumed about "that man in the White House." But before the month ended there was truce talk. And Economist Leonard P. Ayres foresaw an upswing by summer.

"Another year, another war?" Europe thought. Unusually bright Northern lights one January night made peasants think "Der Tag" had dawned. But Germany was jolted by the marriage of a carpenter's 28-year-old daughter to Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg, 59. Spanish Loyalists took Teruel, their first great victory for months. And Nippon nibbled on in China, but promised to be Uncle Sam's pal in 1938.

Taking The Long View
America prepared to build a bigger navy. "Our people believe," the President asserted, "that over the years democracies of the world will survive, and democracies will be restored or established in those nations which do not know it today."

The house of representatives buried the Ludlow war referendum plan, 209 to 188. The senate became entangled in an anti-lynching bill filibuster. The Supreme Court was kept in headlines by Associate Justice Sutherland's retirement, the appointment of Solicitor-General Stanley Reed to succeed him, and Justice Cardozo's illness.

Jersey City's Mayor Hague spurred a senate set to continue a war on "reds." Glenn Frank agreed to head the G. O. P. program committee. New York WPA actors presented "...one-third of a nation."

Heish, o, Heish, Ho...
Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs delighted most everybody. Stay-at-homes tumbled in on Toscanini or read "The Citadel," "The Arts" or "Northwest Passage." Idlers in corner drug stores discussed the 22-day fast of Dean Israel Harding Noe of Memphis, and Ely Culbertson's divorce. Barbara Stanwyck's scrap with Frank Fay over an adopted son, and the capture of Charles S. Ross of Chicago.

Seven died when Pan American Airways' Pilot Edwin C. Musick crashed near Pago Pago, American Samoa, and 10 died in an airliner's tailspin near Bozeman, Mont. But Il Duce's son, Bruno, led three trimotored bombers on a good will flight from Italy to South America.

Birth Of A Baby
A French cabinet crisis delayed the League of Nations council's 100th session. Anthony Eden still was flurried-skating for Great Britain. Kurt Schuschnigg was deaf to Italy's efforts to lure Austria out of the league. Both democratic and fascist missionaries bumbled through the Balkans—and Rumania's new pocket-premier, Octavian Goga, who died only four months later, made the Jews squirm. The U. S. R. 's new parliament met; the U. S. set cruiser and cruiser about a Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson whom the Russians had a jail.

And Jan 31 in Holland, a 51-gun salute announced the birth of Princess Juliana's baby, Beatrix Wilhelmina Armand, destined some day to rule 69,000,000 people.

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Dec. 19.—Faith in the absolute accuracy of statistics collected by the best-intentioned governmental agencies is slightly shattered by comparison of figures on the same subject as gathered by two independent divisions.

A day or so ago the Highway Safety Division gleefully announced that but 79 persons were killed in motor accidents during November.

Right on the heels of this announcement came release of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Board of Health. This report showed that during November 31 died in North Carolina from automobile accidents, primary; while two others were dead as the result of "automobile and train accidents," making a total of 33 for the month.

The Safety Division also announced 113 as the death toll in November, 1937, while the Vital statistics Bureau reported last November's automobile deaths as 95.

Both agencies gave out the best figures they could get. Both are confident they have an accurate system of check. There's no suspicion of bad faith on the part of either.

Yet they report different figures for the same thing.

Perhaps the horrible conditions revealed in the recent Forsyth "prison-torture" incident are at the bottom of the large number of escapes and attempted escapes reported from all over North Carolina.

Soon the state is likely to be cited, instead of Georgia, as the outstanding example of unbridled brutality in treatment of its convicts.

Last week there were slightly fewer driver license revocations than usual, with the total standing at 64 instead of the customary hundred or thereabout.

Drunken driving was the cause of 57 revocations, with hit and run accounting for 4, driving after license revoked for 2 and two offenses of reckless driving for the other.

Announcement that the Southern Oil Transportation Company will remove its headquarters from Wilmington may be something of a financial loss to that city-by-the-sea, but it will not hurt Mayor Thomas E. Cooper's political chances.

It is a matter of fact record—not guess or conjecture—that there wasn't even a motion toward violence in the Wilmington truck driver strike until Governor Clyde R. # HIGHWAYS NOW REPLACE RAILS

Supply Transportation Needs to Places Which Lost R.R.s

Raleigh, Dec. 17.—All-weather highways and improved motor vehicles supply all the transportation needs of Coastal North Carolina communities which have lost rail service, according to the findings of a survey made by the National Highway Users Conference which included the Tar Heel section in field investigations throughout ten widely scattered areas.

In addition, the survey declares, presence of these roads and existence of these vehicles are direct aids to the railroads in getting authority to abandon unprofitable lines.

In all, ten studies were made in Arkansas, California, Colorado, Nebraska, North Carolina, Oregon, Tennessee, Vermont and West Virginia—all in areas where rail service has been discontinued.

In North Carolina the area studied is in Lenoir and Duplin counties on the Coastal Plain. This territory was formerly served by the Kinston Carolina Railroad Company 31.1 miles, constructed from Kinston to Pine Hill about 1900 and extended to Beulaville in 1917. Abandonment was permitted May 19, 1929.

Summarizing its survey of this area the survey said:

"North Carolina communities with highway transportation available were injured in no way by removal of the railroad. Highway transportation pays far more in taxes than did the railroad, created considerably more employment and provides improved service at lower cost."

The survey calls attention to the fact that more than one-third of the communities in North Carolina have no railroads or waterways and are solely dependent upon highways for transportation. "Due to the development of motor vehicles and of highways, these towns no longer are at a transportation disadvantage when compared with their sister cities on water or rails lines," it adds.

Specifically of the three communities—Deep Run, Pink Hill and Beulaville—the survey reported:

"The record shows that they are better off economically and have more convenient transportation service than before they lost their railroad service. Highway transporters provides faster and more frequent passenger service, cheaper and better freight transportation. Bus and truck concerns and roadside establishments employ many more people than the railroads did, while motor vehicles and related businesses provide far more local taxes."

The number of motor vehicles in Lenoir and Duplin counties reached a total of 9,200 in 1927 and 13,585 in 1937. While passenger cars increased moderately from 8,106 to 9,906, trucks showed an unanticipated increase from 1,095 to 3,685 or more than 230 per cent. In 1937 there were 2,450 taxed vehicles in the immediate area of the abandoned railroad.

Motor vehicles and the highway can take most of the credit for bringing new business houses and taxable buildings into these neighborhoods. Of the 50 filling stations, garages, refreshment stands and stores on the Kinston-Pink Hill-Beulaville highway, only six were in existence before the northern part of the road was paved. Sixteen had been built before the railroad withdrew, while three were constructed the same year, and thirty-one afterwards, according to statistics in the survey.

On the employment phase the report elicits figures to show that the number of persons in one way or another connected with highway transportation is about 75, or three times as many as were employed by the Kinston-Carolina Railroad in 1929.

The report contains tables which it declares show that motor service is faster and more adequate for both freight and passenger business than was the railroad.

"Bus popularity is obvious from the fact that it carried about 2,610 passengers in ten months of 1937 between Kinston and Pink Hill, while the railroad, which was ten miles longer, carried only 395 in the corresponding ten months of 1926," it said.

Taxes on transportation facilities have been of great importance both to local government units and to the state, the survey found.

"Kinston-Carolina Railroad during its last complete year of operation reported tax accruals amounting to $2,611.15. County tax records in Duplin and Lenoir counties reveal that the railroad paid $1,652.14 to Lenoir and $773.39 to Duplin, and $200 to the Kinston School District. The State franchise tax for that year should have amounted to $199.20. These are all the taxes contributed by Kinston-Carolina Railroad during one year."

"When highway transportation developed and finally replaced the railroad as the sole transportation medium, its contribution in taxes greatly exceeded that of the abandoned railroad," the report declared.

The state gasoline tax now paid to the state for the travel on the parallel highway amounts to $23,482.77, of which sum $7,141.79 is contributed by trucks and buses. In like manner, Federal gasoline tax equals $3,913.94. Of that, buses and trucks pay $1,190.30.

Registration fees paid by the owners of the 2,450 motor vehicles in the townships through which the railroad passed equal $33,301.90, of which trucks account for $10,893.50, and of the latter, for hire registrations contribute $1,747.50. The franchise tax contributed by bus service in this area gives $358.72. Personal property taxes on motor vehicles yield $5,253.17 a year. Finally, taxes on automotive establishments paralleling the abandoned railroad totals $1,245.58.

Thus the total paid in taxes by highway transportation and auxiliary establishments dependent on it, amounts to $67,600, or more than 28 times as much as the railroad tax contributed.

The survey concludes: "None of the communities has been injured. Business has increased in all the communities."

SCOUT COUNCIL MEETS JAN. 17

Program Director Of B. S. A. to Speak at Kinston

As usual, the Boy Scouts of the East Carolina Council will have an outstanding speaker for their annual Council meeting. This year is no exception. Scout Executive John J. Sigwald is enthused over the good news received today that E. Urner Goodman, Director of Program Division of the Boy Scouts of America, will be the speaker on Tuesday, January 17, when the annual council meeting will be held in Kinston.

The program will open at 1:30 when the executive board of the East Carolina Council will hold its business session to select officers for 1939. At 3:30 in the Methodist church, just across the street from the Hotel Kinston, where the banquet session will be held, all Scouters will gather for conference discussion groups, and will be led by Mr. Goodman at 5 o'clock in a mass discussion group.

At 7 o'clock, the banquet session will be held in the ballroom of the Hotel Kinston, at which time not only the Scouters who have been attending the various meetings throughout the afternoon, but their ladies will be in attendance.

As usual, the large American flag will be represented to the district having the largest number of points accumulated by multiplying the number in attendance from that district by the number of miles traveled.

Last year the Rocky Mount district was the winner.

E. Urner Goodman, Director of Program Division, Boy Scouts of America, who will speak at the banquet and give leadership to the mass discussion group period, has been connected with Scouting from its beginning, first as a volunteer, and later in its professional ranks. In 1915 he became Director of Treasure Island, the Philadelphia Boy Scout camp. Then followed a professional career and for ten years he was executive in Philadelphia and later in Chicago. In 1931, Mr. Goodman has been a member of the National office staff as Director of the Program Division.

Mr. Goodman was born in Philadelphia in 1891. It was soon after entering the teaching profession that he took up Scouting professionally, and was the first to make a survey of boy life in Philadelphia.

The East Carolina Council is especially fortunate in securing Mr. Goodman and it is certain that attendance at the annual meeting in Greenville will be increased, knowing the calibre of its annual meeting speaker.

40,000 Christmas Trees. Denver.—(AP)—Forests of the Rocky Mountain region will supply approximately 40,000 Christmas trees for the United States trade this season, forest service officials estimate.

VETERINARIAN GIVES WARNING

Farmers Cautioned Against Unwise Hog Vaccinating

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Dec. 19—Dr. William Moore, Chief of the State Department of Agriculture's veterinary division, has issued an urgent warning to farmers of the state against the "promiscuous use of hog virus" and the indiscriminate vaccinating of swine by untrained men.

The Moore warning was issued in connection with the Department of Agriculture's swine sanitation program which will be launched with great vigor next month in an effort to protect the state's rapidly-growing hog industry.

Of vaccination, Dr. Moore said that in the case of healthy hogs immunity to cholera is assured by vaccination, but he added that great care should be taken in any vaccination.

"For twenty years, farmers have been told that vaccination is a simple and effective cholera-prevention measure, but facts reveal that the use of cholera virus can do more harm than good in the hands of unqualified administrators.

"Instead of preventing hog cholera by vaccinating unthrifty and parasitic swine, many outbreaks of cholera have been started. Healthy hogs can withstand vaccination and in practically every instance permanent immunity from the disease is established. The obvious conclusion from the survey is that there is too much indiscriminate vaccinating by untrained men."

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 19—(AP)—Cotton futures opened two lower to one higher. Disappointing Liverpool cables were partly offset by trade buying.

March sold off from 8.20 to 8.17 and was quoted at 8.18 shortly after the first half hour, when the list was net unchanged to three points lower.

Prices remained heavy later in the morning owing to scattered selling, which held March down to 8.17 by midday, when the list was net unchanged to four points lower.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Dec. 19—(AP)—Aircrafts swung upward to new highs for the year in today's stock market with gains running to two or more points.

Steels, rails and specialties trailed the flying squadron, while utilities, coppers and oils shuffled over a narrow route. Dealings, lively in the opening period, slowed later and top marks were chipped down in many instances near the fourth hour.

Hope of heavy armament spending, continuance of the general cheerful outlook, drying up of the year-end tax selling and lessening of worries over foreign happenings helped attract fresh buying in selected groups, brokers said.

Bonds followed stocks at a more leisurely pace. European securities markets did better. Commodities were moderately mixed.

HIGHWAY FUND BATTLE WAGES

Banning of Road Appropriation in State Being Argued

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Dec. 19—The battle over a Constitutional amendment banning diversion of highway funds in North Carolina is featuring the rather unusual picture of both sides using the same undisputed facts and figures as the basis for their arguments pro and con.

This is particularly true of the $4,000,000 in gasoline tax revenue which it is admitted on all sides has been diverted by the state to other purposes than construction and maintenance of highways.

Opponents of the amendment are citing it as almost insignificant in comparison with the highway revenue which might have been made the subject of diversion. They contend that the fact only $4,000,000 has ever been diverted proves that the amendment is not needed to protect North Carolina's highway revenues.

On the other hand, proponents of the amendment, point out that 4,000,000 would have built or maintained a long stretch of highway; while they further declare that if one million, or two million, or four million can be diverted in one year—as has been the case—it is quite possible for any legislature to divert any amount it happens to see fit.

In a recent address in favor of the amendment, Harry Tucker, director of Highway Engineering at State College and chairman of the North Carolina Highway Users Conference told a Burlington civic club: "Four million will surface 1,600 miles of road at a cost of $2,500 per mile. It is well to think what this expenditure on dusty and friable roads would have meant to users.

"And if one million can be diverted in one year, it is possible to divert any amount. It is quite conceivable that under the multitudinous demands now being made upon government for funds, the legislature will need the strength of a constitutional amendment to preserve intact the highway funds."

Slaughter House Survey Completed

Warren H. Booker, director of the department of engineering of the State Board of Health, has recently completed inspections and made recommendations for sanitary improvements at the slaughter house operated here by J. N. and J. L. Williams.

According to Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, county health officer, the joint operators of the abattoir requested that the inspections be made so they could comply with the regulations of the State Board of Health governing the operation of slaughter houses.

Until recently all North Carolina slaughter houses had been under the supervision of the Department of Agriculture. The operations of slaughter houses in the State are now under the health department.

The health officer explained that a sewage main had been laid near the abattoir. It will be connected as soon as the city is ready to make the connection.

Dr. Ennett expressed much appreciation for the cooperation shown by the city and operators of the abattoir. The local slaughter house is the only one in Greenville and Pitt county.
