COLD WAVE HEADS TOWARD ATLANTIC COAST

REBELS FORCE SLOWLY AHEAD AGAINST FOES

Drive Spurred by Fear Government Counter Attacks

MOVE EASTWARD IN RUGGED AREA

Fifth Day of Insurgent Offensive Finds Casualties Each Side Well Over 10,000

Hendaye, France, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Powerful insurgent fighting columns, badgered everywhere by fear of Catalonian counter attacks, forged their way slowly eastward today over rugged territory toward the heart of the Government stronghold in northwestern Spain.

On the fifth day of insurgent General Franco's offensive, aimed ultimately at Barcelona, the Government capital, casualties on both sides were well above 10,000 of the 500,000 total of fighters.

An exact record of ground won by the drive was obscured by communications flatly contradicting each other.

In the north, however, Franco's resident mountain troops appeared to have taken a town at the end of an improved highway leading to Artesa, "the key to Catalonia."

In southern Lerida province, according to insurgent radio bulletins issued under strict censorship, the Franco command was said to have announced the capture of a village about 35 air miles from Tarragona.

This village, unimportant in itself, would give Franco a foothold on the broad national highway between Lerida and Tarragona, thereby disrupting government communications and supply lines.

Mrs. Utley Resigns From Local School

J. H. Rose, city school superintendent, today disclosed that Mrs. Herbert B. Utley had resigned from the mathematics department of Greenville high school.

Simultaneously, he announced that Miss Elizabeth England of Nashville, Tenn. would fill the vacancy created by Mrs. Utley when the schools open next Monday, January.

Expressing regrets in behalf of the school board and the town, Supt. Rose declared that Mrs. Utley has been outstanding as a teacher in the high school.

Miss England has been teaching mathematics in Central high school at Nashville for the past seven years. She has done much work in the George Peabody demonstration school and is therefore to become a member of the teachers-training staff of East Carolina Teachers College, a position held by every teacher in the high school. Miss England received her M. A. degree from George Peabody College.

Mrs. Utley was grad from Atlantic Christian college, where she received her A. B. degree. Her M. A. degree was obtained at the University of North Carolina. She has taught in the local high school for several years. She also has taught at Wilson Mills, N. C. before coming to Greenville.

ONLY ONE HURT IN ACCIDENTS

Few Traffic Mishaps Reported During Holidays

Only one person was known to have been seriously injured in traffic accidents in this vicinity during the Christmas holidays, and the various law enforcement officers reported an unusually small number of wrecks.

Lieut. Lester Jones, head of Troop A of the State Highway Patrol, said no serious or fatal accidents were reported in the entire division.

Bernice Tyson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom S. Tyson of near Greenville, is in Pitt General Hospital suffering a painful hip injury sustained Sunday night in an automobile accident on the New Bern highway while riding with her parents.

Tyson's automobile was involved in a collision with another motor vehicle operated by Vestis Hegan, of Maryland, who was lodged in the county jail by sheriff's officers, who investigated. County Jailor W. G. Leggett said the amount of the bond had not been determined.

Hegan's car plunged head-on into a ditch and Tyson's car landed upside down in a ditch on the opposite side of the road. Both cars were badly damaged. Neither of the several Negroes riding with Hegan were injured. Mrs. Tyson was injured, but not seriously.

William M. Coles, Jr., and Edward Fleming, both of Grifton route one, were arrested by Highway Patrolmen last night on a charge of being drunk on the highway after having been found in a car which had run off the highway into a ditch between Greenville and Stokes. Corporal L. L. Jackson of the patrol force, who made the investigation, declared that both men were in a drunken condition when he found them in the car. He said he denied having been driving. The car was said to have been registered in Cole's name, however.

Several other traffic accidents were investigated by members of the patrol, but none of them were considered serious, with no injuries and no arrests made.

It was decided not to hold any court this Tuesday because many of the lawyers would be out of the city.

No session of Municipal court was held yesterday.

STATE PROBES DRUG SCANDAL

Indicated One Firm Had Only Twenty-Five Customers

New York, Dec. 26.—(AP)—Assistant State Attorney General A. McCall indicated today that Girard and Company, the drug concern operated by the late F. Donald Coster-Musica before he got control of McKessons and Robbins, Inc., had only 25 customers.

McCall suggested this while questioning John H. McGloin of Fairfield, Conn., vice president in charge of accounting for McKessons and Robbins in the State's investigation of the financial affairs of the corporation.

Federal and New York county authorities also are investigating the corporation's affairs as a result of disclosures that about $18,000,000 in crude drug assets were missing or never existed.

Before he joined the giant drug corporation, McGloin said he was an accountant with Price-Waterhouse and Company, the firm which handled McKessons and Robbins' auditing. He met Coster-Musica in 1926 when he went over the books of the Girard company.

McCall expressed concern over the methods of auditing of Girard and Company, asserting that the accounts receivable represented more than one-third of the firm's $650,000 assets. The McGloin conceded the sum was "exceedingly large."

He said he could not recall how the "test-checked" the accounts receivable.

"It's true that Girard and Company had only 25 customers," asked McCall.

McGloin said he didn't know.

Shooting-Slashing Scrape Is Probed

Nashville, Dec. 27.—(AP)—John Davis, 30-year-old Nash county Negro, was in jail here today while officers investigated a cutting and shooting-scrape which claimed a Negro's life and resulted in serious injuries to another at Bailey Sunday night.

KILLS HIMSELF WITH SHOTGUN

Craven Citizen Blows Away Rear Half of Skull

Washington, N. C., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Acting Craven County Coroner U. W. Daugherty was advised in a telephone communication from New Bern today of the death of Karl Chadwick, 40, a woodworker and former Washington resident, who died instantly about 8:30 this morning when a blast from a single barrel shotgun tore away the rear half of his skull in what the coroner asserted "seems a plain case of suicide."

Dougherty said Chadwick, a native of Pollocksville, had been "dependent" for the "past 60 days", indicating the man's family and friends recently had expressed fear he might attempt to take his own life.

Survivors, in addition to his wife and a small son, Karl, Jr., about 7 years of age, are three sisters, Mrs. H. Askew of Pollocksville, Mrs. Geo. Taylor of Phoebus, Va., and Miss Nellie Chadwick of Tarboro; three brothers John Chadwick of La-Grange, Agnew and Walter Chadwick, both of Fort Bragg.

WHAT IT MEANS: TRADE WAR

By MORGAN M. BEATTY (AP Feature Service Writer) Washington.—The extension of new American credit to China and discussion of American loans for Latin American nations is evidence of a new phase in a ten-year-long world war over trade.

The battlefields are the ports of the world. Ammunition is the goods exchanged between them. The soldiers are the dollars, pounds, marks, francs and all other international units of money.

In a more or less free flow of trade and settlement of international accounts with gold. The United States, having a tremendous supply of gold, is the standard-bearer of this group.

Ranged against them are nations with so little gold they must control its flow out of the country.

Germany leads the column. Japan and Italy are close behind. They had led in setting up controls over foreign exchange (gold). They buy from nations willing to accept goods in payments. Germany, for in-

MUCH TRADING PREDICTED FOR NEW CONGRESS

Set-Up Betokens Session Filled With Compromises

PREDICT PEACE WITHIN PARTY

Sen. Wheeler Confers With Roosevelt On Findings by R. R. Rehabilitation Group

Washington, Dec. 27.—(AP)—The set-up of the new congress and its committees betokens a session filled with compromises.

At many turns toward expansion and bolstering of his problem, the President will run into a committee chairman or other influential senate or house Democrat whose views do not exactly agree with his own.

The power of these men, in the opinion of many returning legislators, has been augmented by the November election returns. The reinforced strength of the Republicans has given a new talking point to Democratic conservatives. Members say it tends to turn the mind of all Democrats, conservative and liberal, more sharply toward compromise than toward intra-party fights.

How soon a show-down will come scarcely can be estimated, but it probably will occur before the session is very old.

Other developments:

Chairman Wheeler (D-Mont) of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee said after a White House conference he believed that a report of the President's railroad rehabilitation committee would constitute a "working basis" for legislation.

Wheeler said he and Mr. Roosevelt discussed the committee's findings generally and further conferences would be held next week with Chairman Lee (D-Calif.) of the House Interstate Commerce Committee and others.

A non-partisan group of Senators and Representatives from agricultural states is being formed to sponsor a "cost of production" farm program in the new congress.

Senator Frazier (R-N.D.) said members had suggested that this group, including Democrats and Republicans, agree on a specific program and then confer with Secretary Wallace before offering the legislation.

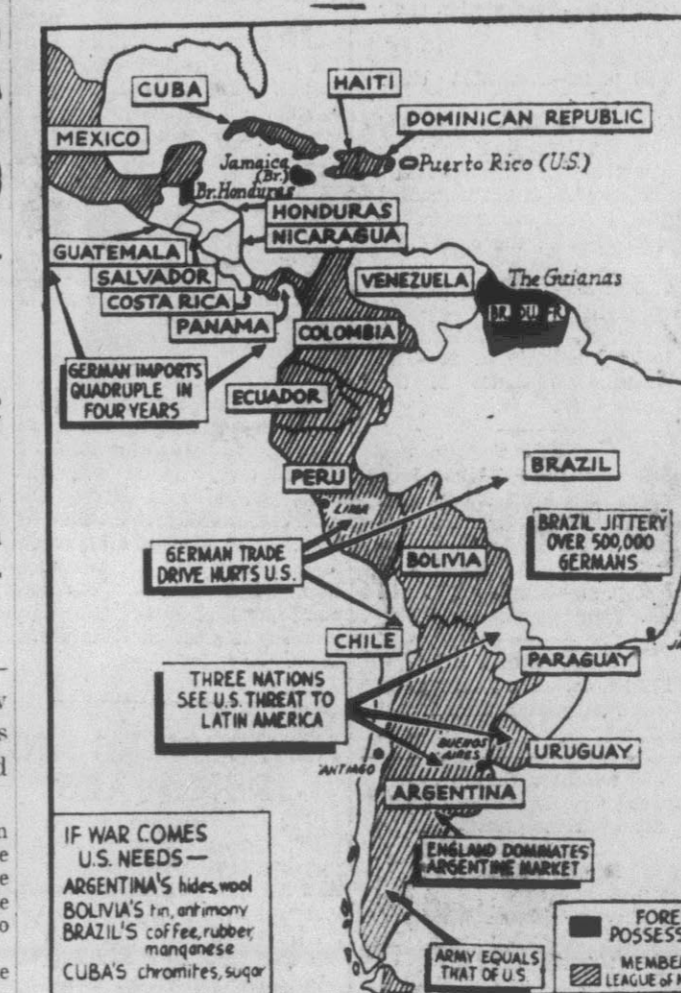

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, it was learned, is considering a nationality drive to put millions of unemployed men and women back to work in private industry.

The man who formerly directed the government's vast work relief program has discussed the possibilities of such a campaign with business leaders here and in New York.

The drive, according to reports in business and government circles, would be carried on by the Commerce Department in conjunction with the business advisory council and probably with other business organizations.

France To Demonstrate Her Tunisian Strength

Fears Italy May Attempt To Seize Djibouti by Force

Paris, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Dispatches from North Africa today reported that Italy was massing troops on the frontiers of French Somaliland.

French colonial officials expressed fears that this might be the start of a campaign to threaten Djibouti, French Somaliland port on the Red Sea, which is the only rail outlet for Italy's Ethiopian Empire.

Travelers reaching Egypt from Djibouti said dispatches to the French press, reported that the governor at Djibouti had demanded and obtained troops and naval reinforcement from France.

Foreign office officials said they were unable to confirm or deny these reports.

Paris, Dec. 27.—(AP)—French fears that Premier Mussolini may try to seize Djibouti by force were reported today to have inspired a plan to show the power of France's Tunisian forces.

The French general staff, informed of these reports, has arranged a powerful display of fast French motorized forces for an inspection trip next month by Premier Daladier in Tunisia, French North African protectorate.

These units, military sources said, would serve to remind Mussolini that he must count on the defense of Tripoli, capital of Italian Libya, should he threaten Djibouti, Red sea port in French Somaliland, and terminus of the railway to Italian Ethiopia.

A large part of the French Mediterranean fleet is scheduled to greet the premier when he goes to Corsica and Tunisia early in January.

Italians started agitation for Tunisia, Corsica, Nice and Savoy November 30.

Yesterday France told Italy she accepted an Italian note denouncing an Italian-French accord of 1935 regarding Italian rights in Tunisia, but that the accord must remain the basis for Italian-French negotiations.

Accident Is Fatal to Nashville Youth

Rocky Mount, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Philip Astor Hedgepeth, 17, of Nashville, died in a local hospital early today of injuries sustained in an automobile accident which claimed the life of his companion, Alton Strickland, 20, of Henderson, Saturday afternoon.

Sheriff C. V. Faulkner said Strickland was driver of the car which was in a head-on collision with a car driven by W. B. Taylor, Nashville farmer.

EXPECTED HIT ON SEABOARD IN FULL FORCE

Described as Most Severe Wave of This Season

FAIR AND COLD SEEN FOR N. C.

Bitter Weather Expected prevail Along Atlantic Seaboard for Several Days

Chicago, Dec. 27.—(AP)—The most severe cold wave of the season advanced across the northern half of the nation today.

Temperatures ranging to 10 below zero prevailed from the Pacific northwest to the Great Lakes region as the frigid blasts moved eastward.

Temperatures fell below freezing over a wide expanse of the continent after comparatively mild Christmas holidays.

Weather observers predicted the full force of the cold wave would reach the Atlantic seaboard tonight or tomorrow and that the bitter weather would stay for several days.

Snow and sleet accompanied the Arctic winds into the midwest and northwest. The cold dipped into Oklahoma and forecasters said it would be felt as far south as Florida.

Sub-zero weather plagued the Dakotas, Minnesota, Montana and Wyoming with lower temperatures in prospect. Snow, rain and stiff winds heralded the approach of the cold wave in the east.

Helena, Mont., shivered in 10 below zero weather and the same temperature was forecast for the entire state of Nebraska.

Several inches of snow fell in western North Carolina and Southwest Virginia. A heavy rain hit New York City, while up-state New York received a heavy fall of snow. Many fatal automobile accidents in Ohio were attributed to heavy, wet ground and rain.

Charlotte, Dec. 27.—(AP)—The U. S. Weather bureau here announced today it expected "much colder" weather tonight, with a cold wave and minimum temperatures of 20 degrees in this vicinity by tomorrow morning. The forecast was for generally fair weather.

Winston-Salem reported snow, the heaviest of the winter, blanketed the mountains of northwestern North Carolina.

The snow began falling yesterday and rains from several inches at North Wilkesboro, to nearly half a foot at Boone and West Jefferson.

Police Investigate Shooting Of Negro

Minnie Slade, Greenville Negro, was seriously injured Sunday afternoon around 6:30 o'clock when shot by an unknown assailant in Skinner's Ravine.

The Negro was said to have been sitting in a home with another Negro woman and child. The person doing the shooting fired through a window and made a hasty retreat.

The Negro woman is confined to Pitt General hospital, where she was taken after the city's only Christmas Day shooting affray. She has been given an even chance to recover, barring complications.

Officers H. E. Wooten and Herbert Harris investigated. Officer Wooten said the woman was shot in the back, and part of the charge penetrated to her lungs.

Randolph Brnett, Greenville Negro, is being held for investigation in connection with the shooting. Several suspects have been questioned, but blame has not been placed on any of them.

After a night of intermittent snatches of sleep she had come into Mrs. Marchand's bedroom, hoping the bracelet had been found.

"Are you certain you left it on the dressing-table?" Noel asked.

"I am, or I wouldn't have spoken about it. I took it out of the safe yesterday morning, intending to wear it at dinner. Annie saw it on the table. So did Jennie, who came up to make my bed. I didn't think I was ready to retire and I realized it was gone."

Noel walked to the window. A light snowfall during the night had made a fresh white carpet for the grounds. She was thinking that everyone of them—why, even she—was under suspicion.

"What do you intend to do?" she asked Mrs. Marchand.

Elsie and Janice had already gone back to town. She couldn't believe either of them had taken the bracelet. But then which among the others could be guilty? Surely not Mrs. Barton. Nor for that matter, Mr. Whittaker. Not even Tommy Sheldon who had seemed so contented making the snow buildings for little Jimmy.

And certainly not Jimmy's mother, so grateful for the holiday refuge.

"I want to speak to Allan before I do anything," Mrs. Marchand put down her cup. "It would be a horrible thing to ruin the visit for the innocent ones—they've seemed so happy here."

Noel felt somehow to blame. And wasn't it something like this Allan had suggested when he opposed their putting the advertisement in the paper?

A knock on the door interrupted their conversation. To Mrs. Marchand's "Come in," Allan entered the room. He was dressed in tweeds and his face had a fresh healthy look as though he'd been walking in the cold morning.

Allan kissed his mother and turning to their guest remarked, "Good morning, Noel; aren't you up rather early?"

"Evidently not as early as you," Noel responded with a forced smile. She started to leave the room. Mrs. Marchand halted her. "Wait, dear; we'd better tell Allan about it."

Allan glanced from one to the other. Reaching into his pocket, he said nonchalantly, "Oh, mother, I almost forgot. I picked this up on the floor yesterday and forgot to return it to you."

He handed his mother the glittering bracelet. "My shouldn't be so careless with your baubles."

"Foolish Suspicions" Mrs. MARCHAND cried out in surprised relief. "I thought someone had taken it! That's what Noel and I were talking about."

Turning to Noel: "I'm so sorry I was mistaken—and happy my foolish suspicions were wrong."

"Will you have some coffee?" she asked Allan, reaching for the silver bell.

"I had breakfast long ago," Allan explained and started for the door. To Noel he said, "Would you like to walk through the woods? It's a wonderful morning."

"I'd love it," Noel responded. "I'll get ready at once." She was watching Allan keenly and he, aware of her glance, turned away. As he opened the door he commented in his best off-hand voice: "Oh, by the way, young Sheldon went in on the early train. I gave him a letter to Bob Demarest and he seemed anxious to go to his office first thing this morning. He sent you his grateful appreciation, mother—and promised to write you."

Allan left them and Noel followed quickly. She dressed in her room, her mind a turmoil of thoughts that wouldn't straighten themselves out. Warmly clad in her green angora suit, she joined Allan in the hall and as they strode down the road, she waited for him to explain.

"You didn't tell the whole story," she said quietly.

"Tommy didn't mean to do it—and it was the first time," Allan said simply. Noel waited. "I had a long talk with him after I went up last night. Poor kid, he was des-

Then there is the all important item of military and political advantage. Germany, Italy—even Japan—are deficient in certain raw materials, particularly oil, wheat and cotton. In the event of war, the blockade, they would have to depend on stored supplies.

Therefore, they are trying to extend their domination of nearby states in order to guarantee those supplies. Germany is looking toward oil-filled Rumania, and the wheat-laden Ukraine. Italy is glancing toward Africa, and Japan is conquering China.

This is economic warfare turning into military war and threats of war. The question is, How long can the world stand the strain.

One control called for another. Now it would be quite imposable for any government to extricate itself. The countries of the world are like

Chapter 10 A Kiss Returned

"I DON'T want to believe that anyone in this house would take my bracelet—but where could it have gone?"

Mrs. Marchand sat in a window chair in her room with a breakfast tray before her. She poured Noel some coffee and sipped slowly from her own cup. Her face had a troubled look, her voice a worried tone. The sudden disappearance of the valuable jewelry was a disappointing aftermath to the successful Christmas house party.

"I still believe you'll find it," Noel suggested. She wasn't so sure.

After a night of intermittent snatches of sleep she had come into Mrs. Marchand's bedroom, hoping the bracelet had been found.

"Are you certain you left it on the dressing-table?" Noel asked.

And certainly not Jimmy's mother, so grateful for the holiday refuge.

"I want to speak to Allan before I do anything," Mrs. Marchand put down her cup. "It would be a horrible thing to ruin the visit for the innocent ones—they've seemed so happy here."

Noel felt somehow to blame. And wasn't it something like this Allan had suggested when he opposed their putting the advertisement in the paper?

A knock on the door interrupted their conversation. To Mrs. Marchand's "Come in," Allan entered the room. He was dressed in tweeds and his face had a fresh healthy look as though he'd been walking in the cold morning.

Allan kissed his mother and turning to their guest remarked, "Good morning, Noel; aren't you up rather early?"

"Evidently not as early as you," Noel responded with a forced smile. She started to leave the room. Mrs. Marchand halted her. "Wait, dear; we'd better tell Allan about it."

Allan glanced from one to the other. Reaching into his pocket, he said nonchalantly, "Oh, mother, I almost forgot. I picked this up on the floor yesterday and forgot to return it to you."

He handed his mother the glittering bracelet. "My shouldn't be so careless with your baubles."

"Foolish Suspicions" Mrs. MARCHAND cried out in surprised relief. "I thought someone had taken it! That's what Noel and I were talking about."

Turning to Noel: "I'm so sorry I was mistaken—and happy my foolish suspicions were wrong."

"Will you have some coffee?" she asked Allan, reaching for the silver bell.

"I had breakfast long ago," Allan explained and started for the door. To Noel he said, "Would you like to walk through the woods? It's a wonderful morning."

"I'd love it," Noel responded. "I'll get ready at once." She was watching Allan keenly and he, aware of her glance, turned away. As he opened the door he commented in his best off-hand voice: "Oh, by the way, young Sheldon went in on the early train. I gave him a letter to Bob Demarest and he seemed anxious to go to his office first thing this morning. He sent you his grateful appreciation, mother—and promised to write you."

Allan left them and Noel followed quickly. She dressed in her room, her mind a turmoil of thoughts that wouldn't straighten themselves out. Warmly clad in her green angora suit, she joined Allan in the hall and as they strode down the road, she waited for him to explain.

"You didn't tell the whole story," she said quietly.

"Tommy didn't mean to do it—and it was the first time," Allan said simply. Noel waited. "I had a long talk with him after I went up last night. Poor kid, he was desperate. I told him I thought we could help him. You see, he was broke—so was his spirit, almost. He needed twenty-five dollars to enter an architectural competition—didn't know where he'd get it. And while we were at church, he saw the bracelet. But last night he gave it back to me."

Noel turned toward him, stopped walking a moment. She gave him a serious look. "That must always be a secret between us, Allan. Your mother must never know."

"Of course!"

They continued their walk, aware that the confidence they shared drew them closer together.

"You're a grand person, Noel; but I've said that before." Suddenly Allan's admiration was important to Noel, more important than the altitude of most people she had met in her lifetime.

"Mother says you're staying with us a few days. I'm so glad."

Noel sighed. She'd like to stay here with the peace and serenity for a long time. But she explained, "It would be wonderful, Allan. But I've got to get back to New York. I'll never forget these heavenly days." Her voice sounded choked.

"You talk as though something had ended. You'd make mother sad if she heard you."

Noel reassured him and Allan followed her words with promises of his own. There was a friendship for all time. He said it simply, convincingly.

Sealing a Friendship "I FEEL as though we'd known each other for years," Allan went on. "You can't realize what it means to me—talking with you, walking like this. You give me a sense of beautiful permanence. I can't describe it."

Because her arm in his trembled, Noel paused in her steps. Allan was watching her closely. She was, at once, afraid of that scrutiny, fearful of her own tremulous reaction that speeded the best of her heart.

She moved forward, away from Allan, her eyes on the sky that broke down on the cleared path. And she would have fallen over a snow topped obstacle except that Allan in two strides was at her side, staying the fall. His arm was around her as he held her erect, his head bent down, eyes laughing. As quickly his manner was serious and while they stood there so closely, he kissed her.

The Characters Noel Marchand, a beautiful young actress. Allan Collins, a young man Noel likes. David Norris, Noel's wealthy suitor.

Yesterday: Noel Marchand, a beautiful young actress. Allan Collins, a young man Noel likes. Mrs. Marchand, Allan's mother, not related to Noel.

Yesterday: Mrs. Marchand's sapphiric bracelet is stolen.

Chapter 11 A Decision Made

"LET'S talk of something else, dear. I had a miserable trip and would rather not think of it again."

Noel, sitting with David at one of the corner tables in an exclusive restaurant, felt an angry flush rising in her cheeks. She was back in New York, with the pleasant days at Claiborne behind her and this was her first meeting with David since his return yesterday from Bermuda. He was different, somehow. She had a feeling he was blaming her for all the unpleasantness of his cruise. She felt, too, that he was being deliberately woeeful about the whole thing.

"Swanstrom expects the revised play script from Dixon on Monday," David said quietly.

Noel looked at him startled.

"I was going to call him this afternoon. How did you know? I should think he would have told me first."

"Well—" David's words came slowly. "I happened to be talking to him and he mentioned it."

That wasn't like Swanstrom. Noel realized. So instead of phoning her producer as soon as she left David she took a taxi to his office.

"I'll expect the world to come tumbling down on my shoulders if Dixon keeps his promise," Swanstrom told her when she arrived.

Noel thought he would offer her the contract then, hinted at such. Even suggesting that if he waited too long, some other producer might sign her.

"I'll take that chance," Swanstrom told her cynically. Both of them knew there was no other vehicle into which she might fit. But his mood changed quickly. He talked of her part, of how much he counted on a long run—of the other members of the cast.

David didn't call her but the next morning a huge box of flowers was delivered early with his neat writing inscribing the penitent message:

"Noel, my dear one, it's because I love you so much."

David, she decided, was over his peevish mood. When the mail was brought up she found a charming note from Mrs. Marchand:

"Allan and I are coming down to New York for New Year's Eve. I'll call you when I arrive," she wrote. Then she added, "I dread it so much, as the time for his going back to South America draws near."

Noel's spirits sank as she read that part of the letter. She, too, hated to think that in two weeks Allan would be going so far away.

There was nothing important on her list of engagements to make the day interesting. Then she made a sudden plan.

Using Her Head "IT SEEMED foolish all the way I down to the Pennsylvania Station, but she bought a round-trip ticket to Orson and learned she had only twenty minutes to wait for the train.

Sitting, staring out through the train window, past the towns and fields of New Jersey, she thought about the impulse that had driven her to this journey. She knew more than she cared to admit that another line in Mrs. Marchand's letter had something to do with it.

"Elaine seems to realize she made a mistake in not marrying Allan. I wish they'd decide one way or another. I want my boy to be happy."

Elaine, Noel thought bitterly, always had gotten what she wanted. And now obviously she wanted Allan again.

It was nearly three o'clock when she walked through the narrow, rough streets of Orson, familiar—yet so different. She stopped in front of one house, smaller and dingier than the rest. Almost before she had time to knock, the door opened, to see a familiar face at the window.

"That's what you came from—that's what you'll go back to if you don't use your head," she whispered vehemently to herself. And knew that using her head didn't mean depending on the whims of playwrights like Dixon, nor the uncertain calls from producers' offices.

In a shabby old taxi she went out to the flowers carrying the white winter flannels she'd bought at the only florist shop she could find. While the driver waited outside the gates, Noel laid the blossoms on two mounds near a weatherbeaten fence. Tears filled her eyes, and flowed down her cheeks as she spoke to herself.

"Mother, darling, can you hear me? You told me to watch out for myself," she punctuated her spoken thoughts, "and I will! Look what love got you!"

Riding back to the train, Noel's eyes passed what she remembered as the town's most imposing residence. It looked shabby now and much smaller. Once it had seemed like a mansion. There was no one in Orson Noel wanted to see.

While she waited in Philadelphia for the New York express, Noel sent a wire to David to meet her at the station. And on the train she tried to eat the chicken sandwich she ordered with a pot of hot tea. The first bite made a lump in her throat. She knew her decision was made!

She should be so happy! But the darkness outside her window was a winter bleakness—comfortless, a little frightening.

David, worried, rushed toward her at the head of the steps in the big station rotunda.

"Where have you been, darling?" David took her arm solicitously, waiting for her answer.

"I went to see my old home," Noel's voice sounded tired. "I needed to, David." She was asking his understanding, without further question.

In the cab that took them into the brightly lighted Manhattan streets, Noel turned to David sitting quietly beside her. She let her hand slide into his and marveled at his eager acceptance of her gesture.

"You're sweet to care about me, David; maybe I don't deserve it."

Encouraged by her attitude he put his arm protectively about her shoulder. She drew away slowly and said with regretful apology: "I'm so tired, David. There's been so much I had to think about."

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—In the background of the current trust-busting suit against the American Medical Association and its Washington affiliate is a common human problem, long disregarded in the main.
It is the desire of Mr. Average John Jupes to be able to:

Have daughter Martha's eyes examined and fitted with glasses.
Find out for sure the meaning of that pain in his side.
Look for the next baby with love instead of dread.

To have all this without fear of punishing doctor bills.

The medical profession in recent years has made progress toward this with group hospitalization and various semi-charitable clinics to which low income groups have access.

But average John Jupes came in between. He was not rich enough to laugh at doctor bills, not poor enough to feel comfortable about going to public clinics.

In Washington, leaders in the profession recognized this gap and recommended that their fellows work out a pooling or pre-payment system for middle and low income groups which would give them a more comfortable feeling about medical bills.

Medical Leaders Stuck Back Medical leaders here were re-sistent on two fronts. They had been "scooped" by a non-professional group. And they could only blame the rank and file of their own profession for not supporting their own plan earlier.
They began fighting back, against the Group Health Association, and bestirring their laggard associates.

Group Health Association, supported by an HOLS grant of $40-000, opened its own clinic early in 1937, hired its own physicians, began collecting monthly dues, and promised full medical and clinical services, including surgery, for subscribers. Its ranks of a few hundred swelled to thousands of Federal employes, and outsiders looked on enviously.

The principal medical men of Washington, largely members of the American Medical Association, pressed their own laggard members to work out a plan.

A.M.A. members in Washington, assisted by the national organization and its major executive, Dr.
Morris Fishbein of Chicago, attacked the Group Health proposition as dangerous to the health of the country.

Twenty-One Indicted
But it was next step attributed to the medical fraternity here which became the basis for the grand jury indictments of 16 Washington physicians and five A.M.A. leaders in other cities, including Dr. Fishbein.

The indictment charged that A.M.A. physicians conspired to deny use of Washington hospitals to Group Health members or their patients.

Meanwhile there is evidence that average John Jupes will get at least part of his dream, even while the doctors battle. Shortly before the Federal indictment was issued in Washington, the Washington
A.M.A. branch got its own plan in order and announced it. Fees were roughly comparable to the $3 a month charged by Group Health.

This Washington A.M.A. plan, with modifications, likely will be pushed in other cities.

SHORT SHOTS

By Henry Averill

Raleigh, Dec. 26—The House which assembles January 4 for opening session of the 1939 General Assembly will contain 43 who are repeaters from the 1937 session.
Many of the outstanding figures of two years ago will be among the missing, but many others will return. Here are a few impressions of some of the repeaters.

Fred R. Seelye of Carteret, rather fat and genuinely friendly, didn't look as if he were on the floor

What Is Your News I. Q. For 1938?

These questions are not easy—and some of them are a little tricky. But if you've followed your newspaper during 1938 you should be able to answer half of them. Each counts 10; each part of a two-part question 5. A score of 50 is fair, 70 good, 80 very good. Answers at end—don't peek.

1. Who lost his job because he wouldn't obey the President, and what did Congress do about it?

5. Identify this youth who came into the news because he fired a "shot heard round the world."

9. What two curtsies causes a storm of protest among society people in two nations?

13. Listen to Off the legislative stage it's worth real money to get him into conversation about this lumber industry. He can tell you just what ails it in North Carolina.

14. John Fernando White, Chowan's dyed-in-the-wool anti-prohibitionist, engineered the legislative junket to Edenton two years ago. Everybody who went had a good time. Maybe John can get 'em down there again.

15. D. Lacy McBryde of Cumberland is one of the most earnest, sincere and boring speakers to be heard in the land. House tabled many measures in 1937, but D. Lacy was the only speaker so treated. Just the same he'll be in there "pitching" again. He is an honest advocate of liberalism and it's perhaps too bad he just won't get anywhere with
it.

16. The Forsyth delegation—Rex
Gass, Virgil A. Wilson and T. S.
Thornton—differ considerably in type and political philosophy, but its members usually get together and preserve the outward aspects of harmony.

17. The Guilford trio—Joe T. Carruthers, Jr., John Caffey and Rupert T. Pickens—comprises perhaps as much talent as any group in the House. Two years ago the High Point contribution (Mr. Pickens) rather antagonized a large percentage of the membership by his frequent address in the manner of pedagogue to pupil but before the end of the session his genuine ability began to show through the veil of verbosity behind which he hid
it.

18. B. H. Underwood of Hertford never rose to his feet in the 1937 session except to "Move you, Mr.
Speaker, that the bill and all amendments do lie upon the table." He thereby contributed more, probably than almost any other member to wise law making.

19. J. M. Bailey, Jr., Madison's preocious young Republican, drew upon his head the lasting enmity of the tremendous Democratic majority by introducing a resolution "applauding" Senator Josiah Bailey's opposition to the Supreme Court reorganization bill. This young man would be among the really influential members if his party label wasn't what it is.

20. C. C. Abernathy of Nash, was spreadeagle oratory last time and with the Bertie man over in the Senate this session, Claude ought to take the championship almost without a struggle.

Duke Has Kicking Ace In Eric 'Red' Tipton; Greenville Lansdell Star Of Trojan Attack

"Antelope Al" Krueger, Southern California's sophomore left end sensation, promises to be a standout among a rare collection of fine wingmen when Howard Jones sent his Trojans against Duke in the Rose Bowl. Krueger was the boy who reaped most of the praise when the Trojans defeated mighty Notre Dame.

This boy (from nearby Antelope Valley), charged, drifted, faced, dived and cut up all manner of gridiron maneuvers. He was a thorn in the Irish running attack, and against the Notre Dame passing he was also a headache. The final figures showed Notre Dame completed but two out of 12 passes attempted.

It was Krueger who dashed down under Oliver Day's lofty pass, gathered it in some 30 yards away from the Irish 8-yard stripe, and scored.

Acclaimed by many as the best blocking back on the Pacific coast, Bob Hoffman will be called on for heroic duty against Duke.

Blocking Bob is the 200-pound 6-foot junior who proved a standout as a sophomore and added to his pace this year.

He can snare a pass on occasion and run like an elephant on the loose, but his main value lies in blocking and blocking up the line. A smart football player, he can "smell out" a play and be there when it reaches the line of scrimmage.

This ability to gope out a play, whether it's a pass or a running attempt, makes him one of the most important links in Howard Jones' system. There is a good replacement back of Hoffman in Joe Shell, but Shell lacks the intuitive instincts of a burly Bob.

Hoffman lives in nearby Montebello.

"Fog Over Pasadena." That is what his teammates call Greenville (Granny) Lansdell, Southern California's spectacular triple-threat quarterback.

Lansdell, a Pasadena junior, seems to drift around in a fog when away from the actual grid battleground, but he's far from fog-bound. He's probably thinking up some form of devilry to harass rivals.

One day at practice a ball hit Coach Howard Jones on the head.

"Hey, Coachie," yelled the cocky Lansdell, while the rest of the squad listened in amazement. "better look out. We might need you this season."

Lansdell carried Troy to two of its biggest triumphs. He took a kickoff, ran it 83 yards for a touchdown, and Troy beat Ohio State. Lansdell ran and passed the then undefeated California Bears silly.

Howard Jones has a couple of records to protect in the Rose Bowl against Duke—his own and Southern California's.

A Jones-coached team never has lost a bowl game.

Southern California never has lost a bowl game.

Southern California beat Penn State in 1933, Pittsburgh in 1930 and 1933 and Tulane in 1932. Jones was Trojan coach in the last three appearances.

Jones, a quiet chap, won't say that his team is the best he has had at Troy but he does say that he thinks it is as strong as any he has sent into the Rose Bowl. Jones' team have had lean seasons in recent years but this year's successes have cemented his position at Troy.

Jones' coaching opponent, Wallace Wade, also never has lost a Rose Bowl game. When Wade coached at Alabama his teams won two games and tied another.

"Irish" Bob O'Mara this mother was an O'Kelly is one Duke plunger that Southern California's strong forwards may have trouble stopping.

O'Mara is 6-foot-2, weighs 190 pounds and plays fullback. He was the leading ground-gainer in Duke's regular season running attack and most of his 685 yards were picked up the hard way—over guard and tackle. He runs with his knees high and they say it's all the same with him whether an opponent gets in his way or not.

O'Mara is the chap who carried on when injuries laid up McAfee, Tipton and Spangler. His runs set up Duke's lone touchdowns against Colgate and Georgia Tech.

"Demon Dan, the Tiger Man" leads Duke's Blue Devils into the Rose Bowl.

Dan Hill, Duke's co-captain, ranked as one of the best centers in the country last season and was named on the AP second All-America team.

This flaming-haired, flaming-spirited grizzer was given a big hunk of credit for Duke's unbeaten, untied, unscorred-on record. It was Hill who made most of the tackles in every game. He had an uncanny sense of defense against passes. Sometimes he called the signals.

Hill is as accurate a snapperbacker as the South has ever seen and he is so fast that Coach Wade allows him to go down under punts.

Eric Tipton's kicking kept Pittsburgh in difficulty all afternoon and Southern California may also find him the chief trouble-maker from Duke.

This veteran 181-pound triple-threat gained 500 yards, completed 22 of 51 passes for 269 yards and had a punting average of 40.3 yards during the season.

Dixie has seldom seen a booter of Tipton's caliber. Against Pittsburgh he kicked 20 times. Fifteen of those kicks stopped inside Pitt's 20-yard line and seven were inside the 10-yard stripe.

In addition to his ability as a runner and kicker, Tipton is one of Duke's best blockers and a crack defensive player, particularly against passes.

An opportunist is Willard (Bolo) Perdue.

He has acquired the habit of making and crashing in on the "breaks." And it was the speed, courage and alertness of this sturdy end that enabled Duke to score its lone, winning touchdown against Pittsburgh. Perdue blocked a Pitt kick and grabbed the ball across the goal for a tally.

Until this season Perdue was a blocking back but a scarcity of flankers caused Coach Wade to shift him to the wing.

Faced by the Trojans' strong forewall, Duke may elect to gamble its chances of victory on a passing offensive and if that's the case Perdue may give the westerners headaches.

Many Cage Contests Are On Schedule At College

There's plenty of basketball on tap this week at East Carolina Teachers College.

Kinston's Key Cagers, one of the best semi-pro teams in this section, will collide with the locals Wednesday night. Several members of the Williamston Light Infantry contingent, previously booked for the Wednesday game, decided to witness the Rose Bowl classic and withdrew their schedule with the Pirates.

The Kinston team boasts several outstanding players and will present a strong and aggressive team. With only three days of practice behind them since the Christmas holidays, the Pirate team will be forced to the limit if their overcome the veteran Kinston team.

The E. C. T. C. starting lineup will be Shelton and Smith at Forwards; Brock at center; Ridenhour and Hinton at guards; the Pirate reserves will be strengthened considerably by the enrollment of Tom (Parson) Parrish, former Greenville high school luminary at the guard position.

Coach Gordon Gilbert's fast-stepping "X" team will furnish the opposition here Friday night. Preliminary entertainment will be provided by the Greenville Independent girls and Winterville high's sextet.

To top off the athletic entertainment, two thrillers have been scheduled for Saturday night. Stokes high school will battle the undefeated Jamesville high school team.

Stokes high has one of the best high school teams in this section. Erwin's Red Birds, who defeated the locals earlier in the season, will contest the locals in the tier tilt. Erwin is a semi-pro aggregation.

Preliminary games will get under way at 7:30 o'clock. Tip-off time for the regular contests is 8:30 o'clock.

Prizes Are Awarded In Bowling Contests

A. B. Cooper's bowling alley was formally opened in Greenville last night. The opening was highlighted by a bowling contest.

Winner's in last night bowling doings were Woodrow W. Corbett, with 182, to take first-place honors among the men. He won 10 free games for high score.

A duck pin contest is on tap for this week. High scorers, both men and women, will be awarded $5 each.

Cooper, the local bowling alley operator, also operated a bowling alley at Atlantic Beach.

ANNEXATION IS LIVELIEST ISSUE

Federal Census Of 1940 To Create Problems

Reflector Bureau
Raleigh, Dec. 26—The Federal census to be taken in 1940 is quite likely to give great impetus to one sort of legislation in the 1939 General Assembly, while putting an absolute quietus on one problem which has vexed the law makers ever since 1930.

Annexation of suburban areas will prove one of the liveliest issues, in all likelihood; while on the other hand there is hardly a chance to even a feeble "peep" out of the hoary reappointment question.

The United States Bureau of Census has warned that all cities and towns should be prepared to notify the bureau of annexations not later than July 1, 1939, which means that those desiring to make annexations will have to get the approval of the Assembly which meets next month.

At the present time the only method for extending city limits in North Carolina is by a special act of the Legislature. This question is a vexing and heated one in several cities, among which can be listed Raleigh and Wilmington—and there are probably many others.

Naturally there will be more local than general fighting in the Assembly over these annexation questions, but there will be some rumormongers locally trying to get enough legislative help to win anyhow.

As for reappointment, it seems quite likely that a measure which has been defeated four times in a row will even be raised now that it could affect the membership of only one future Assembly. The contention has been that representation should have been reappointed in the basis of the 1930 census, but only the 1941 Assembly remains to be elected before there will be new census figures for consideration.

Officers Get Man After Chase Here

Pitt County ABC officers Saturday night arrested "Big Will" Clark, Negro, on charges of transporting illegal liquor for sale and also on a charge of driving careless and reckless, following a chase through Greenville and across the river.

The officers started chasing Clark on Tenth street and followed him down Evans to Fourth, thence down Washington to First street to Greene street and across the river. They caught him on the Bethel highway between Pactolus road and House station.

The officers reported that Clark had poured out the whiskey in the car, but indicated they had sufficient evidence to secure a conviction on both the charges of hauling illegal whiskey and driving careless and reckless.

Clark is being held under $500 bond.

Craven Negro Nabbed By Greenville Police

NEW FIRE BOMB EXTRA LIGHT
London (AP)—Another possible war horror was revealed by A. R. Asbury, "ARP" technical adviser of the home office.

He told a meeting of a new and highly potent incendiary bomb so light that one airplane can carry 2,000.

It is known as the "Kilo-Electron" bomb, and one large bomber could drop 10 to 20 at a time. "The bombs spread out as they fall," said Asbury.
