

Moslems Call For 'Holy War' In Lebanon

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslems called for all-out holy war against the Christians in Lebanon today in the wake of Moslem Premier Rashid Karami's resignation. "Believers are called upon by their religious duty to rise in arms for jihad (holy war) to defend their attacked brethren," the muzeins shouted through bullhorns at dawn from their needle-shaped minarets. Loudspeaker vans toured Moslem quarters of Beirut repeating the call.

Fierce fighting between rightwing Christians and leftist Lebanese Moslems and Palestinians raged through the night in Beirut and areas outside the capital. Police reported 102 more persons killed in the city and its suburbs.

Karami resigned after the warring factions ignored another of his cease-fire calls. Local papers said President Suleiman Franjeh was planning to form a military government to replace Karami's six-man coalition of Christian and Moslems.

Franjeh installed a military government last May, a month after the civil war started, but pressure from most of the civilian politicians forced it to resign after three days. Another military government probably would run into the same opposition, particularly from the Moslems, since most of the officers are Christians.

Karami said in a broadcast he was passing responsibility for the country to the Christian president "to take whatever steps he thinks proper.

Karami, a 53-year-old millionaire, became premier in June with a pledge to end the civil war. He negotiated more than a dozen cease-fires, but all collapsed, and the nine-month death toll is now estimated at more than 8,500.

Police reported house-to-house fighting throughout the night in a fire-gutted Moslem pocket in eastern Beirut and a besieged Christian enclave in south Lebanon.

The whole of Beirut was illuminated during the night by huge fires in the Moslem slum area of Karantina, on the eastern edge of the city's harbor.

The district has been under attack by right-wing

Christian militiamen for more than 24 hours. The Christians said they captured it Sunday night, but the leftist forces said they launched a counterattack at dawn and "the rightist invaders are being pushed out."

The Christians attacked Karantina in retaliation for an assault by thousands of Palestinian guerrillas and Druze Moslems on four Christian villages about 15 miles south of Beirut. Among those under siege there was Interior Minister Camille Chamoun.

Temperatures In County Fall Below Freezing

By CAROL TYER

The weekend was icy for Pitt Counties. The temperature this morning at 8 o'clock was 11 degrees, according to the Greenville Utilities weather station.

In the previous 24 hours the high had been 28 degrees; the low, 13.

A little less than two inches of snow covered the ground by noon Saturday, according to the measurement of Mrs. Pattie Mizell, U. S. Weather Bureau rainfall record keeper for Greenville. Most of it remained until this morning because of the low temperatures. Mrs. Mizell's measurement of rain and melted snow for the weekend was 69 hundredths of an inch.

"We've still got some icy spots on the highways in shady places," Joe Mills of the Department of Highways Maintenance Department said, "but we're going to work on them some more today. We think we have most of it under control till it rains or snows some more and freezes again." He said highway maintenance crews were at work till 11:30 Saturday night and Sunday till 9:30 p.m. A mixture of salt and sand is used on the pavement, he said, except on bridges, where calcium chloride is used because it is less corrosive than salt.

Greenville Public Works

Director Mayo Allen said his men worked Saturday afternoon to place sand on bridges and at certain intersections. This morning they were working on sidewalks that were icy. They were on call Saturday night, he said, but no calls were received.

The Highway Patrol investigated some 20 accidents in the county Saturday and Sunday. On a usual weekend there will be no more than seven or eight accidents, Mrs. Paula Walker of the Highway Patrol office here said.

Mrs. Lawrence Jackson of the Greenville Police Records Division said there were nine accidents in Greenville Saturday and two Sunday that were attributed to icy streets.

Greenville Utilities reported no problems caused by the weather so far. "We may find a few frozen pipes when the thaw comes," George Reel said. Plumbers were kept busy over the weekend thawing and repairing frozen pipes, if the number of calls received by Keel's plumbers of Greenville and the Hardee Company of Pictolus is any indication.

City Schools Supt. Glenn Cox said attendance is off in the school. About 10 per cent of the elementary students and 15 per cent of the junior and senior high students are absent today, he said early surveys of the schools indicate.

No 'Doomsday' For Australia

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — It was a joke for most residents, but it caused hundreds of the less skeptical to flee to higher ground. In any case, 12:30 p.m. today failed to produce the doomsday earthquake and tidal wave housepainter John Nash predicted for Adelaide.

Nash, who claims to be clairvoyant, said on Nov. 3 that he had a vision of a newspaper front page reporting the disaster to the capital of the state of South Australia, a city of 800,000.

An astrologer in Sydney seconded the prophecy, and some residents of Adelaide reported snails climbing to the tops of houses and sheep acting queerly.

Despite Premier Don Dunstan's broadcast assertion that the prediction was silly, it disturbed the uneducated and the superstitious. A number of businesses were closed because employees took refuge at nearby Mt. Lofty or in trailer parks on higher ground. One secretary took a six-foot inflatable raft to work.

Surrounded by newsmen and skeptics holding "earthquake picnics," Dunstan stood on a jetty at Glenelg Beach at the predicted hour of catastrophe to demonstrate he had no fear of a tidal wave.

Expect Domestic Issues To Get Ford's Emphasis

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is expected to emphasize domestic issues, such as the battles against inflation and recession, when he reports to Congress tonight on the State of the Union this Bicentennial year.

The President will address a joint session of Congress and a national television audience at 9 p.m. EST.

Democratic leaders in Congress already have served notice that they have some basic disagreements with Ford over economic policy. Those policy disputes are expected to figure prominently in this year's election debates.

Ford worked during the weekend on his speech that is expected to propose a further cut in income taxes but a hike in Social Security taxes. The speech is said to be a broad overview of domestic and foreign affairs, with more details to be announced Wednesday in Ford's budget message.

Officials also describe tonight's speech as more upbeat than Ford's first State of the Union message a year ago when he said, "The State of the Union is not good," citing problems of unemployment and energy.

White House sources say this State of the Union message will call for holding the line on spending as a first step toward a balanced budget in three years. Ford's budget is expected to propose expenditures of $394 billion, including a $10-billion boost in defense spending, a $10-billion tax cut, a $4.2-billion hike in Social Security payments and a $42-billion federal deficit.

The proposed hike in Social Security taxes would boost the maximum for individuals to about $1,014 in 1977, up from $895 now. The Social Security tax rate would go up three-tenths of 1 per cent starting next Jan. 1, raising the total tax for both employees and employers to 6.15 per cent of a worker's salary, up from the 5.85 per cent now.

The proposed $42-billion federal deficit compares with a deficit of about $70 billion expected this year.

MINIMUM WAGE

Federal Wage and Hour Compliance Officer James E. Mangum offers the following information on the federal minimum wage increase which became effective Jan. 1, in answer to numerous inquiries he and Hotline have received:

Workers eligible for $2.30 an hour are those whose jobs are covered under the Fair Labor Standards Act before it was amended in 1966. This includes mostly workers in manufacturing plants, construction, and retail enterprises having more than $1 million a year business.

Workers covered by the FLSA in 1966 and later must be paid at least $2.20 an hour (formerly $2). This includes domestic workers and workers in educational institutions, hospitals, nursing homes, and retail enterprises with less than $1 million a year business.

Agricultural workers are to receive at least $2 an hour (formerly $1.80). This applies to those agricultural employers who had hired labor 500 man-days in any calendar quarter in the preceding calendar year.

Other work standards set by the FLSA are overtime pay, child labor, and record-keeping requirements.

Mangum says that the Labor Department has put him on a special assignment, so he is not in his office and is directing inquiries to the Raleigh Division Office, 755-4190. This is not a toll-free number.

ODD BILL

I have a dollar bill that is misprinted. What would it be worth to a collector? A. T.

George B. Fleming, a local numismatist, said if you can find someone who delights in owning oddities like this, you bill may be worth several dollars rather than one. He offered to take it to a coin auction he's going to soon, but you say you'll keep it and see if it might increase with age. The fact that your bill is new and in good condition will be in your favor he said. He told of a bill which is printed as $10 on one side and $1 on the other. "The owner was recently asking $8,000 in a numismatics magazine," he said. "I don't know whether he got it or not."

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Strategists for George Wallace's campaign in the March 23 North Carolina presidential primary aren't ready to discuss the specifics of the Alabama governor's race here.

But in recent interviews they keep repeating their thesis that the North Carolina effort won't be a question of winning, but one of how large their victory margin will be.

"Our approach is one of increasing our margin of victory — we know we're going to win," said campaign aide Jack Hatchett in a telephone interview from Wallace headquarters in Montgomery, Ala.

In 1972, when the state held its first presidential primary Wallace easily bested former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford in the Democratic balloting, winning by more than 100,000 votes.

And until recently, when former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter announced his intention to enter the race, this year's version of the primary seemed likely to be a repeat of four years ago.

According to the Wallace aide, the entrance of Carter, and possible entries by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., only make the picture look better for the Alabamian.

The entry of the other candidates "would definitely substantiate our victory," Hatchett said.

And senior Wallace aide Mickey Griffin added that the Wallace strategist are more than happy that this year won't be a rerun of 1972.

"We've always thought it was unfair for candidates from above the Mason-Dixon line to treat the South the way they have," Griffin said from Montgomery — an apparent reference to the reluctance of many candidates in recent elections to enter Southern primaries.

State Wallace chairman C.J. Hyatt said that the Wallace campaign in the Tar Heel state has a long head start on other campaigns — even that of Sanford.

"We started in the latter part of August to begin setting things up, and since then we have organized the whole state — basically through little meetings," Hyatt said in an interview last week.

Hyatt, a former vice chairman of the state Democratic party, is one of the few Wallace supporters in the state to have a background in traditional state politics.

But the Wallace folks figure they do much better with a person-to-person approach in attracting votes for their candidate than by relying on support from established political leaders.

"I was manning a booth at a shopping center back in October and I couldn't believe the response we were getting from people who wanted to help," said Wallace 9th Congressional District chairman Doris Nunn.

Mrs. Nunn said Sunday that the campaign's main concentration now is on getting potential Wallace voters registered in time for the primary. Registration closes a month beforehand.

Next Saturday, she said, the campaign will open a mobile campaign office in Charlotte that will be used as a traveling headquarters throughout the district.

Some political observers have recently speculated that the Wallace boom in North Carolina has gone bust, but the Wallace campaigners say they see the exact opposite happening.

Hyatt noted a visit to Raleigh by Wallace last Spring which is thought by many to have changed the state legislature's mind about cancelling the primary entirely.

And he said that Wallace got a very enthusiastic reception at a recent state Jaycee convention in Wilmington, even though the Jaycees are a diverse group politically.

"All of this makes my work a lot easier — we have organizations in all of the key counties and our support is increasing daily," Hyatt added.

In Montgomery, Hatchett said that Wallace will be making several visits to North Carolina in advance of the primary, but firm dates for those won't be set until after the first round of primaries in New Hampshire, Florida, and Massachusetts.

Results of those primaries will also determine how much money the Wallace campaign will spend in the Tar Heel state, though Hatchett said Wallace will probably rely more heavily on radio, television and newspaper advertising than in his past campaigns.

Mrs. Nunn said it is her understanding that the first Wallace visit here will be in mid-February, though no firm date has been set.

Griffin said the Wallace campaign in the state will not be aimed against Sanford, "though we expect to have Sanford take out after us."

Both Sanford and Carter have indicated they are mainly running to show that Wallace can be stopped on what he has considered his home turf.

But that type of campaign won't work, said Griffin.

Instead, he said, the Wallace campaign here will be an attempt to attract middle-class and working peoples' votes.

"The textile workers and the tobacco workers will be able to see through that kind of a campaign," Griffin said in reference to the other candidates' announced strategies.

Super Swindle For Fans Who 'Bought' A Tour

By CHRISTY BARBEE
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Up to 5,000 football fans sulked in hotel rooms or threw themselves at the mercy of scalpers after learning they had been swindled out of Super Bowl tickets in a "too-good-to-be-true" package tour to Florida, police say.

"I can't believe I came all the way from Toronto, Canada, to watch the game from a lousy hotel," Matt Crone said Sunday after watching the game on television. "It sounded too good to be true at the beginning — a guaranteed ticket to the game. I guess it was too good."

Police said the swindle may amount to $1.5 million and involved fans who paid $375 to $800 for package tours with promises of a ticket to the Super Bowl game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Dallas Cowboys.

But there were no tickets, and police said the tour company officials disappeared.

A group calling itself Super Tours International and claiming to be associated with the International Travel Bureau contacted travel agents in several states and offered the package deals, police said.

Officials of ITB could not be reached for comment.

The fans were booked into several luxury hotels in Fort Lauderdale, Miami and Hollywood. Most of them got their rooms and transportation, but at least one group could find no accommodations and camped outside a hotel, police said.

Tempers flared the most at the Fort Lauderdale Sheraton Hotel, where police had to quiet several hundred fans who learned shortly before the game that they had no tickets.

"I'm trying to celebrate the victory," a Steelers fan said later when Pittsburgh won 21-

17. "But it's hard after peering at a tube for the afternoon.

"I gotta say it's a letdown, since we were promised the tickets would be part of the package."

Angry and hounded travel agents from Pittsburgh, Dallas and other cities said they were misled by employees of STI, who promised plenty of tickets for the game.

James Udeschas, 44, part-owner of a Pittsburgh travel service, said he booked 298 of the persons taking the tour.

"I don't know what went wrong," he said, adding that he previously dealt with International Travel Bureau and had no reason to suspect anything was amiss.

An Ohio man said he wound up paying $40 above the $20 list price to a ticket scalper outside the Orange Bowl.

Police said that three men who said they were STI representatives met the travelers when they arrived Saturday but checked out of a Fort Lauderdale hotel that night.

Speak For Heart Ass'n

Mrs. Frank Layne of Greenville has been appointed chairman of the Speakers Bureau for the Pitt County Heart Association. Mrs. Layne and the volunteers who will work with her will be available to speak at any civic or social club who desires to learn more about cardiovascular diseases and the Heart Association.

Those who will be available for programs along with Mrs. Layne are Dr. A. H. Woodworth, Dr. Eric Fearrington, Dr. Dan Warren, Ed Harper, Mrs. Betty Fore, R.N. and Dr. Robert Thurber.

Filmstrips are available through the Speakers Bureau. Mrs. Layne hopes many will take advantage of the opportunity to learn more about the number one disease in our community and the nation.

For assistance in obtaining speakers for programs from the Heart Association Mrs. Layne may be contacted at 756-5083.

Exams Set For Feb. 21

Prospective teachers who plan to take the National Teacher Examinations of February 21, at East Carolina University have less than two weeks to register with Educational Testing Service (ETS) of Princeton, N.J.

According to John Childers, Director of Testing at ECU, registrations must be mailed in time to reach ETS no later than January 29. Registration forms and instructions may be obtained from the Testing Center, 204 Speight, ECU or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, ETS, Box 911, Princeton, N.J. 08540.

Once registered, each candidate will receive an admission ticket and notification of the exact location of the center to which he or she should report. Those taking the Common Examination will report at 8:30 a.m. on February 21 and finish at about 12:30. Specific Area Examinations are scheduled from 1:30 p.m. to about 4:15 p.m. the same day.

No Charges In Sunday Mishap

No charges were made following investigation of a 2:45 a.m. collision Sunday on Hooker Road, 600 feet North of the Manchester Street intersection.

Police reported a car driven by Jonathan David Williams of 111 Fairlane Rd. went out of control and ran into a roadside ditch causing an estimated $2,000 damage to the vehicle.

Investigators said the car skidded on ice on the roadway. Williams was reported injured in the mishap.

Theft Of Tires Charged Man

Melvin Curtis Parker of 400 Manhattan Ave. was arrested by Greenville Police early Sunday morning in connection with an incident at Powell's Auto Center at 1604 Dickinson Ave.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Parker was charged in connection with the theft of two tires from a car parked at the Powell firm.

Cannon said two tires, valued at $150, were taken from a vehicle. He noted that the tires were recovered at the time Parker was arrested.

LWV Meeting Tuesday Night

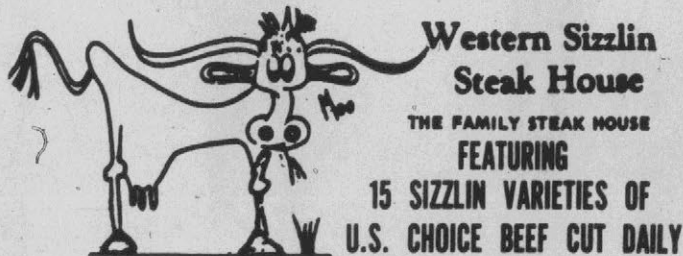

The League of Women Voters (LWV) of Greenville-Pitt County will meet at the First Presbyterian Church on Tuesday at 8 p.m.

At this general meeting members of the local LWV will decide what they would like the 1976-78 National Program to be: i.e., what issues at the national level they would like to work on for the 1976-78 biennium. All of the local and state Leagues in the country will meet separately to determine their own choices for the National Program. The final decision will be made in May when representatives from Leagues all over the United States come together for the National Convention.

The public is invited to attend the meeting.

ATTACK REPULSED — Pro-Western forces have reportedly repulsed an attack by forces led by Cuban troops and backed with Soviet tanks north of Luano in Angola Sunday. New Games Foundation Says: Winning Isn't All

By JOHN M. LEIGHTY
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Look out bicentennial America, the Earth Ball is coming.

From San Francisco's Golden Gate Park to the beaches of Cape Kennedy, thousands of fun-loving people are being turned on to non-competitive game playing.

The earth ball, a symbol of the San Francisco-based New Games Foundation, has even bounced to the delight of several foreign governments, and will entertain people in more exotic places during 1976.

"Winning isn't everything, it's nothing," explains play coordinator Pat Farrington. "If people center on the joy of playing, cooperating and trusting rather than striving to win, they become part of the process — not spectators."

Games that can be played by all ages is an underlying theme of the foundation and the non-profit group has found funds for the fun coming from state, federal and foreign governments.

Originally conceived by Stewart Brand (Whole Earth Catalog), the New Games began in 1973 with a field full of people at a well-organized free tournament.

Then the foundation was formed and the fun spread.

Participants at more than a hundred events staged by the foundation during the past year ranged from four persons at a neighborhood seminar to 10,000 at the Third Annual New Games Tournament held in Golden Gate Park.

All games are free to those attending and the group's play coordinators will travel just about anywhere to help others stage recreational activities.

During 1975, games were played in New York, Florida, Albuquerque, San Diego, Cape Kennedy, Dallas, and as the year turned, in Australia, where Ms. Farrington was invited for three months by the government.

Various tax-exempt grants and donations make the activities possible. For organizations wanting to put on games outside the San Francisco area, expenses of the coordinators must be paid by the sponsors.

Training others to put on games consists of simply playing and coming up with a lot of ideas and then incorporating them into a program, said Ms. Farrington, who directs the Foundation's activities from an office at the San Francisco Ecology Center.

"Different games are played all the time," she said. "Otherwise it would be boring."

One project the foundation was funded for was helping school children plan and build their own playground in San Francisco's Visitacion Valley.

Games that are played include bopping, with helmets and soft clubs; tug of war, with no emphasis on winning; forming circles and holding other people's hands, quite a jumble, and then unjamming; bouncing the huge, heavy earthball, which takes cooperation by a small army of people, and dances, pin-pon, and other pastimes.

"We try to create individual responsibility — helping people create their own games," said Ms. Farrington. "Getting people together is the main thing."

The robust, smiling director is constantly arranging new events, which she then coordinates with volunteers and a paid staff of six, all of whom will play a new game at the drop of a suggestion.

One of their big events planned for '76 is a sort of counter-olympics in Montreal, where they hope to draw thousands of people who will participate in game-playing in contrast to having to be spectators at the more publicized Olympic arena.

"We like to see voluntary situations where people come and enjoy themselves on an equal footing," Ms. Farrington said. "We're into cooperating rather than competing."

Recreational areas and parks, she said, have been turned back to the people because of the kind of programs the foundation encourages.

Even the Department of Interior has encouraged New Games, saying that what the group was providing was necessary.

"It really feels good," said Ms. Farrington.

Cooking School Is Challenge

By ALINE MOSBY
PARIS (UPI) — The latest sidewalk curiosity for Paris pedestrians is a new public cooking school. It is the first serious competition to the prestigious Cordon Bleu, until now the only real school passing on the heritage of French cuisine.

La Varenne is a bombshell in gourmet circles. Equally eyebrow-raising is its Anglo-American inspiration. Investors and consultants include two major American authors of French cookbooks, Julia Child and James Beard.

The director, Anne Willan, is an Englishwoman. The chef and principal teacher, Michel Marolleau, is French.

Mrs. Child, in Paris to visit the school, said: "Anne and I met in Cambridge (Massachusetts) where I live, because she is interested in cooking. She talked about running a school in Paris and told me the Cordon Bleu was for sale. I told her to buy it. But they asked three quarter of a million dollars."

Until now, a hopeful student of cooking had a choice chiefly between Cordon Bleu or private lessons. One small American college in Paris includes cooking in its curriculum, and Maxim's restaurant offers cooking lessons in its culture course for young ladies, along with trips to high fashion salons, wineries and crystal makers.

So Mrs. Willan decided to open a school herself. She remodeled a small restaurant on Rue Saint Dominique near the Invalides monument and named it La Varenne after a 17th century French chef who was the first to write a modern cookbook in France.

The ground floor contains a modern kitchen where students help with the cooking. Upstairs in another steel and formica kitchen Chef Michel gives group demonstrations. A large mirror above his preparation table enables everyone to watch.

"I studied at Cordon Bleu in 1950. They have marvelous chefs but no curriculum, no bilingual (French-English) lessons, no demonstration mirror as at La Varenne," said Mrs. Child.

"Cordon Bleu is also booked up for a year and offers no night lessons."

Mrs. Child reflected that it's up to foreigners now, largely Americans, to promote French cooking because "the average French woman is not interested in real French cuisine. Do you know any French girls who really know how to cook? Domestic servants used to cook for French families, and now they're disappearing, so women buy ready-made food or go to restaurants."

Turning to a French photographer taking her picture, she asked what his wife had cooked for dinner the night before. "Steak et pommesfrites (steak and fries)," he said. "See?" said Mrs. Child. "If anybody preserves the great French cooking it will be Americans. There is such a passionate interest in the States in French food, such as one Chicago woman coming all the way to Paris to study at La Varenne. A great many American men take up cooking as a hobby, too. Food is one of the arts, just as painting and music."

Most of the 15 students enrolled so far are American. The fees are 40 francs (about $9.75) for a single lesson or 4,240 francs (about $1,008) for a six week, 54-lesson course. The first group includes two French, a Vietnamese and an Austrian. One-fourth of the students are men.

In the downstairs kitchen a group of French journalists were taking sample lessons, that day's task being jambon aux endives (Belgian endive rolled in ham and baked in a white sauce).

Asked how the French felt about the school one French writer replied, "We're flattered that foreigners would take such an interest in our food."

Couple Weds In Candlelight Ceremony

Phyllis Williams Batchelor and Gerald C. Riggs, both of Rt. 3, Greenville, were united in marriage Friday, Jan. 9, in a double ring candlelight ceremony.

The service was performed at 7:30 p.m. in the Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. R. M. Stewart.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Williams of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Riggs, of Rt. 3, Greenville.

Mrs. Annie Laura Stewart, organist and soloist, provided a program of nuptial music, including "Whither Thou Goest" and "Wedding Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a light blue floor length gown with an empire waist, Elizabethan neckline with tucks across the front accented with eyelet lace, and short puffed sleeves trimmed also with eyelet lace.

Her headpiece was a double tiered veil of illusion silk, accented with silk bows and seed pearls. She carried an orchid bouquet with matching ribbon, attached to her Bible.

D. C. Smith and Lewis A. Williams, both of Rt. 3, Greenville, served as ushers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length champagne knit dress with a matching long lace jacket. She wore a pink carnation corsage. The mother of the bridegroom wore a silver-green dress with a matching short jacket and a white carnation corsage.

The wedding was directed with the assistance of Mrs. E. G. Clark Jr.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. It was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Clark Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Russel Spain Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lowther.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 3, Greenville.

The bridegroom is employed with Frankie Hardee Electrical Contractor of Greenville. He is a graduate of Chicod High School. The bride is employed with Carolina Sales Corp., Greenville. She is a graduate of Rose High School and attended Pitt Technical Institute.

Store Leftover Food Gifts In Freezer

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Too much gift food left over from the holidays? Freeze it, says Mrs. Ruth Buck, Extension foods and nutrition specialist at Penn State University.

Mrs. Buck said fancy breads and rolls should be enclosed in aluminum foil, plastic wrap or a polyethylene bag. Fruit cake keeps well in the refrigerator. For freezer storage, it should be wrapped tightly and put in a tightly closed metal container.

Cakes with soft frosting, boiled icing or custard fillings do not freeze successfully, she said.

Salted nuts will keep about six months in the freezer; unsalted nuts, nine to 12 months. Both kinds should be in moisture-vapor-proof freezer wrap or tightly closed metal cans.

Almost all candies keep fresh for a year or more when stored at zero degrees Fahrenheit. Spun candy chips, chocolate-covered nuts and candy with hard centers may crack or split, so Mrs. Buck advises using a good moisture-proof freezer wrap to prevent damage from condensing moisture when the candy thaws. Candy should be thawed in its freezer wrapping and unwrapped when it reaches room temperature, in four to eight hours.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women have played a major role in the American working force since colonial times, as textile mill workers, arsenal employees in time of war and more recently as members of their own trade unions.

Critical studies of their contribution have been spotty, however, and the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service is trying to remedy this with a pictorial exhibition titled, "Workers and Allies: Female Participation in the American Trade Union Movement, 1824-1976."

As one would expect, emphasis is placed on the more dramatic events in labor history.

They include the Homestead Strike of 1892, the Shirt Waist Fire of 1911, the Ludlow Massacre of 1914, the Chicago Massacre of 1937 and the foundation of the Coalition of Labor Union Women in 1974.

Five copies of the show will travel through the country for the next two years as an aid to local museums. SITES has been doing this kind of thing for 23 years, providing shows for educational, scientific, cultural and even commercial institutions. It now has some 100 displays circulating.

(Bookings available through the Bicentennial Office, Smithsonian Traveling Exhibition Service, Washington, D.C. 20506.)

A Stepmother Stays Away Because Of Natural Mother

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: There must be thousands of women in my position, so if you have an answer for me, please print it and help all of us.

I am married to a man who has children by a previous marriage. I love his children and they love me. The problem is their mother.

On occasions such as first communions, birthdays, weddings, etc., she makes it clear to me that I am not welcome, and that if I attend, she will leave.

Naturally, I stay away. When the children ask me why I didn't come, I say that I was "ill." I don't want to tell them the truth because it would only cause trouble.

Maybe lots of women will see themselves in this letter and decide to be big enough to let their husbands' present wives share in their children's celebrations. We love their children, too.

EXCLUDED

DEAR EXCLUDED: Here's your letter. I hope it helps.

DEAR ABBY: You're wrong when you say that a person can't learn to love someone.

In the old country, the marriages were arranged by the parents or a matchmaker, and those marriages were more solid than our modern marriages are.

In China, Japan and India, marriages were arranged while the children were growing up. The couple learned to love each other, and you never heard of divorce.

Here, a couple of dizzy kids decide they're "in love," and before you know it, they're married. Then they have a baby or two, and discover that their "love" has worn off, so their parents have to help raise the babies while they get a divorce and start looking around for somebody else to fall in love with.

I'll bet that if we went back to the old system of arranged marriages, we'd have a lot fewer divorces.

And by the way, in case you think I'm an old fogey, I'm only 28.

SINGLE AND STRAIGHT

DEAR SINGLE: A return to "arranged marriages" as a move to reduce divorce is as plausible and logical as returning to mutilation and torture to cut back crime. Both are remnants of a grisly past, imperfectly remembered.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a good-natured mother-in-law who insists on cooking a large elaborate dinner on holidays for the same crowd year after year? I begged her to let me cook Thanksgiving dinner this year and she downright refused! I love to entertain and she knows it, but she gave me the excuse of "you don't have enough room" and "I have more time than you" (since I work).

She is the best mother-in-law a girl could ever ask for, in more ways than one, but I think this is going too far. I would love to give her a relaxing holiday just once so she could enjoy herself also. Maybe she does not think I could handle it (my husband and I have been married for one and a half years) but I've entertained as many as 25 before!

Abby, I know she reads your column faithfully so maybe you could suggest that enough is enough?

MOUSE

DEAR MOUSE: Your mother-in-law obviously "enjoys herself" being in command of the holiday feasts. Demonstrate your dinner skills for others and let your "good-natured" mother-in-law have a good time—her way.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

WALNUT CRUMB CRUST
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 1/4 cups fine graham-cracker crumbs
1 1/4 cups chopped (medium fine) walnuts

In a small saucepan over low heat melt the butter; remove from heat. Stir in the crumbs and walnuts. Press over bottom and sides of two 9-inch pie plates, having mixture come just to top of (not over) rims. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until lightly browned — 8 minutes. Cool before adding a chiffon filling of your choice. (This is our newest version of the crust we always use for pumpkin chiffon pies.)

Long Service To N.C. Ending

One of the real old time Democrats in state government is retiring. Edwin Gill who has been state treasurer since 1953, announced to newsmen last week that he would not seek reelection this year. At 76 years old, Gill has been ill recently, but he said his retirement is not for health reasons. Instead he said, "I have decided that the time has come for me to allow other hands to take the reins."

Gill expressed pride in the fact that the state bond ratings have been raised from AA to AAA, the top rating, during his tenure. He took some credit for this, but also credited the governors, Council of State, Legislatures and the public for supporting sound fiscal policies for the state.

Edwin Gill's service in state government goes back to 1931. Like him, we consider it highly significant that North Carolina has maintained sound fiscal policies over those years. At a time when many state and local governments find themselves in serious fiscal troubles, North Carolina's careful policies have given us an excellent bond rating. That looms as a towering financial achievement for our state as we come through a recessionary period.

At this point it appears that the state treasurer's office will be the only Council of State position in which the incumbent does not seek reelection. As such, it is certain there will be a number of aspirants who will be seeking the position.

All of them will do well to pledge continued support of the sound fiscal policies which are seeing our state government through some troubled times.

Who Indeed Could Take It Seriously?

Reporters wanted to know from Caroline Kennedy what she thought of being named the worst dressed woman of the year by Los Angeles fashion designer. Carolina was dressed like any typical teen-ager at the time in a long dark blue coat over blue jeans, a long blue scarf and a shoulder bag.

"How can anybody take it seriously?" she questioned. How, indeed.

THIS AFTERNOON

End-Of-Term Slump Ahead

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., has survived his mid-term doldrums, and is now in the end-of-term slump.

Looking ahead to his last 11 months in office, the governor says flatly he doesn't expect to put forth any "new or innovative" proposals. Economic hard-times and a General Assembly only in session for a hopefully brief time to handle money matters would sharply restrict any hopes for Holshouser to go out of office with a blaze of glory.

What are his priorities during the next 11 months? "Politics" is his blunt response to that: "working for the election of President Ford."

That, plus seeing to it that particular programs his administration worked on in the first two years in office are carried out.

No Vision? At a time early in his term as some of those around him pressed for an administration committed to revamping the state's programs for children—or some other suggested visionary program—Holshouser stuck to economy in government as his theme.

That accomplishment, he said often, would be contribution enough for the state's first Republican governor in this century.

Of course, his critics said, if such were truly possible. But they argued that government, unlike manufacturing, just won't bend into molds of efficiency—better to leave the day-to-day bureaucratic machinations to the bureaucrats while shooting for some distant star.

Holshouser did not choose to aim for a star. The recession hurt finances, and Democratic dominance of the General Assembly apparently looked too tough to breach.

The Holshouser administration pushed hard for the Coastal Land Use Management Act in the 1974 General Assembly; backed off the companion Mountain Area Management Act which never saw action in the 1975 session. That, says Holshouser, is one of his big disappointments.

Meanwhile, prisons filled to overflowing causing statewide alarm while his administration did nothing more than push for non-existing millions to build new prisons; storms swirled around the public schools with no comment from the governor except for establishing a series of task forces on reading; crime went on a statewide rampage proved by reliable statistics without a positive response from the administration.

Accomplishments Gov. Holshouser, at the end of his term, will no doubt compile a comprehensive listing of his accomplishments, as have others before him.

At this time, and on the spur of the moment, he puts action in health services and road building at the top.

More Tar Heel roads have been built or paved in his administration than "any other time in history" and his revamping of the political patronage system of making road decisions, in favor of short-and long-range planning under a seven-year program will serve as "a hallmark of state government for a long time," Holshouser says.

He hopes that a new administration will continue emphasis on planning for roads.

And the combination of rural health clinics and Area Health Education Centers received much attention from Holshouser during the past three years.

The clinics are located in rural areas in which people indicate support, and are staffed by physician extenders to provide immediate care and routine services, while physicians visit periodically and are in touch by telephone or radio.

The Area Health Education Centers were implemented as a system to get physicians in residency training into various communities of the state in hopes they would stay when setting up private practice.

'Team' Earns Reward

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — They say you can tell a lot about a preacher by studying his congregation. The same thing is true of gubernatorial candidates and their organizations.

The organization a candidate assembles to carry him through the primary is not the most important factor in determining how he will govern; but it is probably second, right after the individual's character.

This is the time of year when the organizations are taking shape. Unfortunately, the process takes place outside the glare of publicity that will later surround the race. This year, the near secrecy is accentuated by the imminence of the presidential primary.

The organizations will never encompass more than a small percentage of the more than two million voters in the state. But the people in them will wield a disproportionate influence.

They will be the ones who, in the main, give the money that fuels the campaigns. They are the ones who meet the traveling candidate at the airport in the morning, squire him through their town all day, and put him on the plane for the next town at night. They get out the vote and distribute bumper stickers.

There are those who think a candidate can win election with a small paid staff of image polishers, pollsters and enough money to appeal directly to the voters. They say an organization is not necessary any longer. Their thesis has not yet to be proven.

Every winning candidate in North Carolina's recent political history has assembled a competent organization. More often than not, the same people take part every year.

They are bankers and lawyers, housewives and businessmen. The rewards for "picking a winner" and getting in early enough to be named a county chairman can be lucrative.

It can mean a seat on the secondary roads council and a say in whose roads get paved. It can mean an appointment to the State Utilities Commission. Most of all, it can mean access to the governor for four years.

A governor, once in office, tends to respond most favorably to the individuals who put him there. The individuals who can elect a governor, conversely, tend to back people who reliably will carry out their idea of good government.

Political scientist V. C. Key put it this way when he wrote of Tar Heel politics in the late '40s:

"The ultimate political power of the state represented large business and financial interests... Campaign money is there for those whose views harmonize with the predilections of the suppliers of funds."

North Carolina politics have changed somewhat since Key's time. Blacks have begun to vote and new forces have gained admittance to the political process.

But still the group of people who form the gubernatorial organizations is relatively small and not representative of the social and economic status of most North Carolinians.

That is one of the key factors in the state's politics. There is no institutionalized way for the common people to take part in the organizational phase of gubernatorial elections.

A New Logo Is Designed

WASHINGTON—NBC came up with a new logo a few weeks ago after hiring a research company for what is reported to have been $750,000. It turned out to be the letter "N." Much to their horror and surprise the NBC big shots discovered that the Nebraska Educational Television Network was using the same N which they had developed for less than $100. The only difference in the design was that NBC's N was red and blue while Nebraska's was all red. Everyone was laughing at NBC, but it's not very funny. Selecting a new logo for anything is a very serious business as I discovered when I decided to change the one on this column.

I went to Cratcher &

Thumb, the industrial designers, and gave them the problem. "The logo on my column seems old-fashioned and not up to date. I would like you to design a new one which would look modern and catching to the eye."

Cratcher said, "We can do it, but it's not going to be cheap."

"Money is no object," I told him. "When someone changes his logo, he has to be prepared to pay for it."

Thumb said, "We may have to hire some outside help. We only have 100 industrial designers on the payroll."

"Leave it in your hands," I said. "After all, you know your business."

Four months later we had the big meeting.

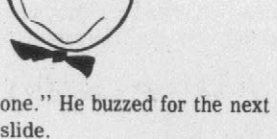

It was in Cratcher & Thumb's private screening room.

The lights were dimmed and the first slide was flashed on the screen.

It was a large A superimposed over a large B. "How do you like it?" Cratcher asked.

"It's not bad," I admitted, "but is this the image we want to give? It seems to me the B dominates the A. Don't you think both letters should be the same size?"

"Yes, we do," said Thumb. "That's why we threw that one out and came up with this

Other Editors Say Problems Everywhere

(Henderson Dispatch)

In Washington a Republican President and an overwhelmingly Democratic Congress fume over spending and policy in a wide area generally. In Raleigh the situation is similar. A Republican governor and a Democratic Legislature disagree on the state of the economy as to how much money will be available and how it will be applied. There are budget problems everywhere, in government and with individuals alike.

Governor Holshouser sticks to his theory that the end of the fiscal year June 30 will show a balanced budget, though with uncertainty as to providing a pay raise for State employees, including teachers. Everybody would like to see the increases granted, but as yet no one has found the money.

There could be several alternatives. One would be further reduction in spending, another the freezing of jobs, or still another raising taxes in some direction. Nobody wants to assess the people for more taxes, for they are facing the necessity for economizing the same as government. And they have no recourse as does government. The State Constitution requires a balanced budget, which is a wise policy.

In Washington there is some difference. The Federal establishment operates on a budget also, but Congress authorizes new spending nevertheless, and gets the money by borrowing and increasing the public debt. That's ridiculous policy, but it does not impress the honorables. They go along on their merry way.

Predicament of both the State and the Feds is similar. Both have appropriated money they did not have and now find themselves in a bind. The State has had surpluses, which Washington rarely or never has, and here the money was allocated for new ventures in so-called services. The surplus was not stashed away for a rainy day, and, financially, it is pouring.

The way out and around will be hard in both Raleigh and Washington, but it may have to be faced.

one." He buzzed for the next slide.

I studied it closely. Finally I said, "The A and the B are the same size, but they seem awfully small. There is so much white space around it. Editors hate white space of any kind. They're afraid someone in advertising might try to slip a classified ad into it."

"You're very observant," said Cratcher. "Thumb and I both caught that as soon as the artist showed it to us. So we came up with this radical idea which I'm sure will knock you dead."

The next slide just showed the letter B.

"Where's the A?" I asked.

"That's just it," Thumb said. "Everyone is going to say where's the A? It will call attention to the logo and you'll double your readership."

Cratcher said, "Look at NBC. They have only an N. One-letter logos are the wave of the future."

"Well, why can't it be an A then instead of a B?"

"It can," said Thumb, buzzing for the next slide. "Cratcher and I and the entire staff all decided last week it should be an A instead of B."

The A came on the screen.

INSIDE REPORT

Backlash In Rights Appeal

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—What began as a routine congressional hearing into the humdrum question of human rights violations in Indonesia suddenly erupted into an angry backlash when testimony of the key witness, a former British Communist lobbying against American aid for Jakarta, infuriated two House members.

The immediate and completely unplanned effect of the hearing was to shore up the Ford administration's case for increasing aid to anti-Communist Indonesia, despite new efforts to block U.S. arms for countries charged with a "consistent pattern" of gross violation of human rights.

Thus, the Dec. 18 hearing, unreported until now, ended in a surprising defeat for those in Congress using the human rights issue as another weapon to whittle down the administration's freedom to conduct foreign policy, and to expand congressional power.

The purpose of the hearing held by Democratic Rep. Donald Fraser of Minnesota, chairman of the House International Relations subcommittee, was to spread on the public record a vivid description of what has long been known about Indonesia and many other developing and developed countries: that human rights have been and are being systematically eroded and violated.

Partly due to Fraser's efforts, Congress easily adopted an amendment to the foreign aid bill last year "recommending" that President Ford take account of the human rights balance sheet in parceling out U.S. aid.

Upset that the President, despite that recommendation, is now asking quadrupled arms aid for

Indonesia—an obvious result of the American debacle in Vietnam and new Communist pressures in what remains of non-Communist Asia—Fraser started the Dec. 18 hearing by complaining that "these figures (for new aid) suggest that human rights did not have much impact, if any, in the decision-making process."

He then introduced Mrs. Carmel Budiardjo, a British citizen and former member of the British Communist party. She said her husband, an Indonesian Communist in the regime of former President Sukarno, has been in jail almost the full ten years since the Communist party in Indonesia (PKI) attempted its coup d'etat in September 1965. The coup was drowned in a bloodbath.

Mrs. Budiardjo was not shy in instructing the U.S. Congress how to treat Indonesia today. "I believe that a clear case exists," she told the subcommittee, "for regarding Indonesia as a country that is grossly and persistently violating human rights. No aid should be allowed to flow until these violations end."

She then proposed that a "congressional mission" go to Indonesia "to make an independent investigation of the problem of political imprisonment."

That infuriated Rep. Leo Ryan, a California Democrat who, although not a subcommittee member, attended the hearing as a member of the full committee. Drawing from Mrs. Budiardjo the admission that before the PKI's effort to take power ten years ago, she had worked for both D.K. Aidet, former head of the now-outlawed Communist party, and foreign minister Subandrio—the two principal leaders in the attempted coup—Ryan exploded:

"I do believe that adherents of a government and a foreign Communist party that terrorized their own people and vilified the United States have their guts to appear before this body as defenders of human rights and as accusers of anyone." Ryan made no effort to pretend that human rights aren't still being violated in Indonesia. "I am not going to defend the Indonesian government nor do I wish to imply that I believe that government's record is without blemish in the field of

Strength For Today

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE IS DANGEROUS

We have all heard the statement that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. Thomas H. Huxley, a noted British scientist of the late nineteenth century, once wrote: "If a little knowledge is dangerous, where is the man who has so much as to be out of danger?"

The Bible makes it very plain that the reason why we should refrain from judging others is not because their actions are so upright as to preclude judgment, but because we know too little to judge anybody. One might know quite a few facts, but does anyone ever know them all? Full justice is never accorded any man. Therefore, in civil affairs, blame should not be assigned nor punishment inflicted until every fact is available and has been given thoughtful consideration.

And in the field of opinion as to what constitutes truth or error, we should certainly be reticent to speak. Huxley once said that it is the customary fate of new truths to begin as heresies and to end as superstitions.

Ford Can Claim Encouragement

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — We may never be sure whether it was by design or by accident, but the President's State of the Union Message coincides with a spate of encouraging news about the economy.

Over the past few months, conditions have been gradually improving, and the public is aware of it. Strong retail sales in December were to a great extent an expression of returning confidence.

Wholesale prices actually fell in December. The prime interest rate is falling. It is now under 7 per cent and headed downward. The rate of inflation has tended to slow. More people are at work in recent weeks.

Economists are inclined to say that this is just how things were planned. Government economists especially will be inclined to take credit, claiming this was their script for the past year or more.

And, indeed, it is true that if you look back at the forecasts made a year ago you will see that many of them were right on the mark. Then you may recall, however, how lamentably inaccurate was their record in prior years.

It remains a question, therefore, whether the President can convince the people that the economy is responding solely to the perception and shrewd guidance of the Ford administration.

Regardless, Ford certainly can enjoy the results. The economic condition is better than it was six months ago, and it does show some signs of further improvement. Things are breaking for the President.

The real test still is ahead, however, and that is to keep the recovery on track. Strong as those economic signals might seem, there are weaknesses present, there are obstacles on the track.

One of these weaknesses is unemployment, and that can cost Ford many votes. Even under the best of conditions foreseen, few economists expect the jobless rate to get under 7.5 per cent for 1976.

This also could be a poor year for labor-management relations. A panel of labor authorities assembled by the Conference Board, a non-profit research organization, foresees an increased number of strikes this year.

The inflation rate still is a danger. The Commerce Department expects prices to rise by about 6.5 per cent in 1976, compared with 7 per cent last year, and that is a rate not easily accepted by most people.

If we went through the worst decline in demand for products in many years and still didn't manage to overcome inflation, what will prices be like when demand increases, as we expect it? Flashing red light!

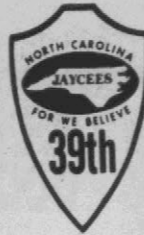

One of the biggest tests for the President, economically and politically, is expected to come in May. The President believes an additional $10-billion tax cut and a $395-billion budget is needed to keep the economy on track.

Many members of Congress, which is now required to adopt its own budget resolution, including spending and deficit targets, disagree. They want a bigger budget, a bigger battle could ensue that could have direct bearing on election results.

Meanwhile, the President can bask in some of the most encouraging economic news we've seen in a long time.

Standing For Anthem Is Fought By Movie-Goers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Fights between patrons who would stand for the National Anthem and those who would not have prompted theater managers here to quit playing The Star Spangled Banner before movies.

The idea was launched at 20 theaters here last summer by Ron Ellis, an advertising executive. Since then, several theaters in Florida and Georgia have adopted it.

However, Nashville theaters quit playing the anthem before movies on Jan. 1, when the contracts for its showing expired.

"It ended early in December at the Martin Theater in 100 Oaks," Ellis said. "They had two fights out there over someone entering the theater during the playing of the anthem and over someone else not standing."

The theater's manager, Mrs. Marcy Forrest, said she had one serious incident resulting in some shoving.

"But the other was caused by a customer who was a little tipsy and spilled a soft drink in the lady in front of him when he stood," she said. "The lady's escort assumed it was poured because the couple was not standing for the anthem."

Louis Rubenstein, manager of the Belcourt Cinema, said the reaction to the anthem was mixed, but some customers wanted to fight him because they didn't think it should be played.

"I told them I just play what the management tells me to play," Rubenstein said. "I didn't fight with anyone."

Ellis said most everyone stood for the anthem at theaters in the more affluent areas of the city while almost no one would stand at other movie houses.

"I guess the more affluent sections of town feel a little better about the country," he said. "Maybe, too many are out of work in the other parts to feel very good about it."

"It seems the deeper we go into the South, the better it is received. It's playing in several cities in Florida and Georgia now and will start in Atlanta on Feb. 1. The managers down there say almost everyone stands at every performance."

The advertising executive said his firm, Cinema Concepts, hopes to have a new version of the anthem ready for use next month.

"It will be a photo animation of scenes from the country's history with a pop-let's get into it—version of the anthem," he said. "Standing is optional, just like on home TV, but I don't think standing for 60 seconds or so is going to hurt anyone when they go to the movies."

Evans-Novak...

The only other Congressman present with Fraser was Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio, tough, irascible and a Democratic power in the House. Hays, also a full committee member, told Mrs. Budjardjo it was curious she has not complained about human rights violations during her work for Subandrio and Aidet. In those turbulent last days of Sukarno, he said, "every jail and prison camp in Indonesia (were) full of people."

When the witness replied, "That is absurd," Hays flared. "I resent the fact that you are a British Communist sitting here in front of this committee," he said.

That resentment, widely shared by all who have read the transcript of the Dec. 18 hearing, has now fortified the President's arms aid program for Indonesia.

But the Indonesian case is unique. Mr. Ford's plan to quadruple aid to the pro-Western Asian giant was safeguarded by coincidence: the backlash from testimony of a witness regarded by most Congressmen as unfit to instruct the U.S. on how to handle its foreign policy.

The larger question is very much alive. Stiffer controls over the President's power to use foreign aid to enlarge American influence abroad are now being pushed by Fraser, based on human rights violations. Their probable approval by Congress shows the unmistakable trend of the postwar Vietnam era: Setting general rules and standards for foreign policy that stymie imaginative diplomacy and build congressional power.

Age No Bar To Service For Mainland Chinese

By JOHN RODERICK Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — China may well have the liveliest functioning gerontocracy around, an inspiration to senior citizens anywhere. Among the Chinese, age is no bar to service. In fact it is a positive asset.

The death last week of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai at the age of 78 underscored this fact. He had been in active command to the age of 76, when cancer struck him down. Even from his hospital room he had, until only a few months ago, kept his hands on the government operation.

Communist Chairman Mao Tse-tung is 82 and though he isn't exactly jumping through hoops or even playing table tennis as he once did, those who meet him say his mind is still agile. And nothing much is done in China without his approval.

The average age of the 16 surviving members of the ruling Communist party Politburo is 66. The oldest member is Chu Teh, chairman of the National Peoples' Congress Standing Committee, who is 89.

The youngest, Wang Hung-wen, the onetime Shanghai factory worker and whiz kid of Chinese politics, is an almost boyish 39. Other youngsters include Chang Chun-chiao, a member of the Politburo Standing Committee, and Yao wenyuan, both in their 50's.

But they are the exceptions. Until recently five of the six men who counted most — Mao and the five partygen — were over 70. Kang Sheng, who died a few weeks ago, was 77. Defense Minister Yeh Chien-ying is 76 and first Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, likely to be the new premier, is close to 72. With Kang and Chou gone there are three vice chairmen left, one of them Wang Hung-wen.

It is not impossible that when the Central Committee meets Chu Teh may be named to fill one of the vacancies, with a younger man, probably Chang Chun-chiao, the other.

The death of Chou and of former acting president Tung Piu, 90, last April has left two holes in the nine-member lineup of the Politburo Standing Committee. Chu Teh already is on that body and it is not impossible that Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, 61, will move up along with her protegee, Yao Wen-yuan.

A Confucian respect for age and presumed wisdom is one of the reasons why the old are not only suffered but respected and used in the proletarian People's Republic.

Another is the fact that those in power are culminating lifetimes of revolution, some of them having fought the party's battles for as much as half a century.

In 1976, Mao's policy is to have the old, the middle-aged and the young in positions of power. But for a few years yet the old will continue to weigh heavily in the political scales.

Buchwald....

"Notice," said Thumb, "this isn't an ordinary A. The right leg is longer than the left leg."

"I think the left leg should be slightly longer than the right one. It gives me a running start," I said.

"So did we. It's amazing how our thinking runs along the same lines. Here is a left-legged A. We tested it in 2,000 supermarkets and everyone knew it was your right away."

"Gosh, you fellows did a great job. What do I owe you?"

Thumb said, "Six hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars, including the cost of the art materials."

"Why," I said surprised, "that's $100,000 less than NBC paid for its logo."

"That's because your name started with an A," Cratcher said. "The further along in the alphabet you go, the harder it is to design a letter."

Singapore Cuts Its Birth Rate

By KENNETH L. WHITING Associated Press Writer

SINGAPORE (AP) — The birth rate is slowing down in this tiny island-nation where the population density is 9,814 per square mile — 20 times that of India and 40 times that of China.

The government is in the midst of a campaign to encourage no more than two children per family. A newspaper advertisement shows two smiling children and says, "The more you have the less they get. Two is enough."

Singapore, 226 square miles in area, has 2.2 million people, about half of whom are under 21 years of age. Statistics show the median age is 27 for men and 23 for women.

Because of the youthful citizenry, it is expected to take another 50 years of the two-child family average to achieve zero population growth, or births equaling the number of deaths, according to Dr. Wan Fook Kee.

Dr. Wan, chairman of the Family Planning and Population Board, said last year's crude birth rate was 17.6 live births per 1,000 population. The Board's target was no more than 18 births per 1,000. Six years ago there were more than 22 births per 1,000 population.

Fewer than 40,000 babies were born in 1975, the final year of a five-year plan to restrict population growth. There were 46,000 births annually before 1971, when the plan was launched.

Dr. Wan estimated last year that almost 90 per cent of all married women between 15 and 44 used contraceptives or had been sterilized.

"Contraceptive practice has thus reached practically the saturation point," he said.

More than 50 clinics offer free birth control advice and dispense contraceptives at nominal prices. Abortions are available virtually on demand during the first 16 weeks of pregnancy. Children aged 11 and 12 are taught in their fifth and sixth grade classrooms the importance of small families.

"Disincentives" discourage large families. Tax concessions are available only to parents for their first three children. Maternity leave is granted civil servants and workers in private business only for their first two babies. Couples with no more than two kids get priority when they apply for public housing, an important consideration in a land where half the population lives in apartments provided by the government.

Delivery charges in government hospitals are increased for each additional child beyond the first.

Cigarette Van Seized

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cle-

land police said they arrested three men and a 16-year-old boy after stumbling on a van loaded with untaxed cigarettes worth up to $20,000.

Police said they were looking for a van believed used in the theft of citizen band radios Saturday when they moved in on the truck being unloaded at an East Side home.

Douglas Dorsett, 27, at whose home the cigarettes were being unloaded, was arrested, police said, along with Dorsett's father-in-law, Paul Palshook, 53, of Parma, and 40-year-old truck driver William Bartolotto of Brook Park.

The three were charged with possession of untaxed cigarettes, police said.

Detectives said Bartolotto transported the cigarettes from North Carolina, where because of low state taxes they were worth only $14,000 on the retail market.

The cigarettes apparently were being sold to small retailers who could profit by escaping the Ohio taxes, police said.

supply an entry for the common man, but there are few unions in North Carolina. It may be that organizations like the Political Action Committee for Education, which represents the state's teachers in political affairs, are the only means by which the average person can hope to have the disproportionate influence that organizational input into a gubernatorial campaign can bring.

Geologist Says Quake Warning Is Popycock

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—A California psychic's prediction of an earthquake for the Wilmington area has been termed "sheer poppycock" by a geology professor.

Dr. Victor Zullo of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington said he and another faculty member, Dr. William Harris, have "been studying this region and the area which is supposed to be earthquake prone. We have stated that there will be no earthquake in this region during this time... This is a very stable area."

Clarissa Bernhardt told an audience at Davidson College Jan. 10 that the most severe earthquake in the history of the East Coast would strike in the Wilmington area this year. She said the most likely date was Jan. 17—last Saturday—plus or minus three days.

Some electric power failures in Wilmington Saturday morning put residents on edge.

Tommy Hale, a dispatcher for Carolina Power and Light Co., said the utility experienced three power failures in Wilmington during the day, caused by such things as trees falling on power lines. The largest failure affected about 75 or 80 customers, he said.

"I imagine every one of those 75 or 80 people called me at least once," Hale said. As to whether the customers thought the failures were caused by an earthquake, he said, "They hinted at it, but I don't think they really thought it was."

Mike Finley, operating manager for radio station WGNI in Wilmington, said that except for a number of persons who rushed to get earthquake insurance coverage, the majority of residents in the port city were not greatly concerned about the prediction.

David M. Stewart of the University of North Carolina's McCarthy Geophysics Laboratory in Chapel Hill has warned of earthquake dangers in the area for the past two years. His warning, backed by two other geologists, led to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's order that CP&L, which has a nuclear powered generating plant nearby, conduct studies to determine whether an earthquake is building in the area.

Stewart and the others based their warning on changing ground conditions that usually indicate an earthquake is building. They said, however, that further studies were needed before an accurate prediction could be made.

Non-Candidate Humphrey Steps Up Political Tempo

By MIKE MOORE
Associated Press Writer

Hubert H. Humphrey, a non-candidate who many observers see leading the crowded field of Democratic candidates seeking their party's presidential nomination, is stepping up his political tempo.

Humphrey drew record crowds on a weekend Missouri tour that comes on the threshold of Iowa's first steps to select delegates to the 1976 nominating conventions. That begins tonight; the first state primary will be New Hampshire's on Feb. 24.

Meanwhile, four announced hopefuls for the Democrats' top spot pointed to unemployment as a key issue to score with the voters. In a Sunday television appearance, the four called for guarantees of jobs for all.

And California was the major scene of the Republican battle, with the campaign managers for President Ford and challenger Ronald Reagan each predicting his man will triumph in the early primaries.

Humphrey, the man who isn't running but says he will accept the nomination if it is offered to him by the convention, took swipes at both Ford and Reagan during his Midwest swing.

The senator from Minnesota, appearing at an affair to honor retiring Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., in Columbia, Mo., Saturday, drew 1,800 faithful, which some claimed set a record for Democrats in the state.

The California Republican campaign was primarily waged in Sacramento by campaign managers addressing GOP volunteers. Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, who heads the Reagan effort, said there is "no major difference" in political philosophy between Ford and Reagan.

But Reagan has the unique ability to go over the heads of Democrats in control of Congress and use television to get his views to the public, Laxalt maintained.

Four announced Democrats met on NBC's "Meet the Press," where Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen declared, "I'd rather spend taxpayers' money for someone working than not working."

Echoing support for guaranteed jobs were Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona, former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford and Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

Sanford, in his first appearance since being hospitalized for chest pains last weekend, said his health is excellent following a week's rest. He called for action to improve neighborhoods through housing and rent subsidies.

Sanford said he feels detente should be a major issue, with the U.S. using its economic power to keep the Soviets out of Angola. He called for use of U.S. grain sales, technology exports and other economic tactics to squeeze the Russians out of the African state.

Udall said he would seek to bring the races together to work out a solution to school desegregation busing. He criticized Jackson's plan that three-judge panels be required before busing can be imposed, noting that all busing orders have been appealed to such panels and have been upheld.

The nation's political focus turns to Iowa tonight as 85,000 Democrats and Republicans start the task of choosing candidates for president. Caucuses — meetings in each of the state's 2,617 voting precincts — will be held for voters to make known their preferences.

State aides for all say that no clear-cut choice is likely to emerge. "Our telephone surveys are turning up a large uncommitted vote — 50 to 60 percent," said the Iowa leader for Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana.

If the polls and the political pundits are correct, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter and Bayh will gather the most support in the caucuses, with the other Democrats clustered in the "pack."

Carter, Bayh, Udall, Jackson, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma and Sargent Shriver of Maryland have expended a total of 80 days and about $125,000 stumping in Iowa in the last four months.

In Miami campaigning for the March 9 Florida primary, Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp sharply criticized Ford's proposal to raise Social Security taxes as a move that will "take billions of dollars" from working people and be a boon for the rich.

"The President doesn't seem to understand that almost all money taken from the pockets of low-income families is money withdrawn from the purchasing power and has immediate negative impact on the economy," the Democratic governor said.

An aide to Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, speaking of the March 23 North Carolina primary, said, "Our approach is one of increasing our margin of victory — we know we're going to win."

Williams Says 'No Justice'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A small crowd of about 50 heard black activist Robert Williams say Sunday that black people still can't get justice in North Carolina.

Kidnapping charges against the former head of the Union County N.A.A.C.P. were dropped last week, 14 years after Williams was first charged with kidnapping a white Union County couple.

"I didn't hear the government apologize. I didn't hear anybody talk about restitution. No, they expect me to apologize," Williams told the small group at West Charlotte High School.

During his hour-long speech at the school Williams again threatened to sue state officials for one-million-(m)-dollars for alleged violations of his civil rights since the 1960's.

But no such suit has yet been filed.

Saturday Williams told a Charlotte news conference that he didn't believe that the dropping of charges by Union County authorities represented a vindication of the American judicial system.

He said then that the trial would have given him a forum for his views and that he felt "cheated" by Dist. Atty. Carroll Lowder's decision to drop charges.

Williams fled the county to avoid prosecution on the 1961 kidnapping charges, spending time in Tanzania and China before returning to the United States in 1969. The Michigan state Supreme Court ordered his extradition to North Carolina last month.

Lowder said Friday that he dropped the charges largely because Mrs. Bruce G. Stegall — the star witness in the case — was too ill to testify.

Williams had been accused of kidnapping Mrs. Stegall and her late husband during racial troubles in the Union County town in 1961. Williams has repeatedly denied that he kidnapped the Stegalls, saying instead that he saved them from mob violence.

Single Item

Only one item is on the agenda for Tuesday night's meeting of the Public Transportation Commission at city hall.

The commission will discuss the final draft of the immediate transit needs report during the 8 p.m. session, to be held in the first floor conference room.

Revival Begins

On Wednesday

A revival will begin Wednesday night and continue through Sunday with services at 7:30 each evening at the United Church of God.

Gene Warren and The Glorylanders, from St. Louis, Mo. will be singing each night. The public is invited.

Scheduled For Tuesday Night

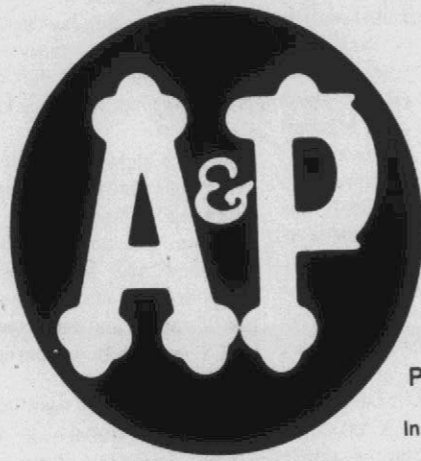

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (AP) — The oft-postponed rocket shot that would give the East Coast a colorful aerial display has been called off again — and rescheduled for Tuesday night.

Just minutes before Eunday night's scheduled launch, a "payload problem" developed, according to a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

There have been several postponements of the launch in the past week because of weather conditions. The rocket, when it goes up, will create white and blue-green chemical clouds to be used for weather research.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina hog market was 25 to one dollar higher, mostly 50-51.00, today. Wilson 50.00-51.00, High Falls 49.00-50.00, Rocky Mount 50.50-51.00, Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadburn, Ayden, Laurinburg, Benson, 51.50, Kinston 50.25-51.25, Tarboro and Bethel 47.50-48.00, Salisbury 48.00.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina FOB dock broiler market was steady today, with the market supplies adequate, demand good, weights mostly desirable.

The North Carolina dock weighted average price is 41.37 cents per pound this week for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers to be picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today is 1,131,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed today in the face of profit taking after its steep rise since the start of the new year.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 1.34 at 928.29. Gainers held onto a moderate lead over losers in the over-all tally at the New York Stock Exchange. Trading remained active.

Brokers listed several favorable elements in the economic news:

—The Federal Reserve's reduction of its discount rate, from 6 to 5.5 per cent, after the close on Friday. The discount rate is the interest charge imposed by the Fed on loans to its member commercial banks.

—The spread of a quarter-point prime rate cut to 6 1/2 per cent initiated by New York's First National City Bank Friday to some other major banks.

—A favorable forecast for the economy through 1976 from Arthur F. Burns, the Fed's chairman.

But despite those influences, the market had to struggle against more of the profit taking that appeared periodically last week.

Burroughs was up 1 1/2% at 98% in active trading following a sharp rise last week, when the company reported higher fourth-quarter earnings.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up .09 at 51.50 after the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index climbed .45 to 92.50.

Association Hears Talk

The Association of Retired Persons held its meeting Tuesday afternoon at First Federal. Ms. Sue Singleton was guest speaker.

Ms. Singleton showed slides and gave the activities of five counties of Region Q for the Mid-East Commission of which she is director. The speaker was introduced by President Katherine Cottle.

Dr. Mildred Southwick reported on the highlights of the workshop held recently in Raleigh. Mrs. Jessie Little, secretary, was asked to draw up a petition and signed by the members of the local chapter asking that the $5,000 personal property tax exemption be put back into effect and send it to James Long, chairman of the Legislative Committee.

Mrs. Eloise Gabbert was welcomed as a new member and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Batchelor of Farmville were guests.

Mrs. Cottle announced that Nathan Yelton will install officers in February.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ruth Harris and the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Lofquist.

Named To New Cancer Council

Dr. Simmons Patterson of Greenville, director of the Eastern Area Health Education Center here, has been appointed to a new 15-member Advisory Council to study the cause and control of cancer. The Council was created by Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty.

The Council, which includes mostly physicians from throughout the state, will monitor existing cancer program of the Human Resources Department that relate to the cause and control of the disease and identify duplicative efforts and services. It is directed to develop concepts for needed new programs and to make recommendations as to ways to further the Council's aims and objectives as the study progresses.

Dr. Patterson will serve a three-year term.

Church Services Begin Tonight

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — A 500-foot World War II Liberty ship, the Bmelguese, with no one aboard, is aground after breaking loose from the freighter towing her in heavy seas and winds which reached 65 knots.

She parted Saturday afternoon from the tug Taurus, which found itself in need of repairs and made for Norfolk, Va. There was no immediate indication when the tug would be able to resume pulling her to Brownsville, Tex. It was not learned why the Liberty ship was en route there.

The Coast Guard cutter Cherokee, out of Norfolk, is standing by the Bmelguese on the Outer Banks, 12 miles south of Oregon Inlet. The Cherokee will see that she doesn't move out to sea at high tide.

Organize Units For Oil Spills

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixteen oil companies are setting up an emergency unit to clean up oil spills in anticipation of exploration off the Mid-Atlantic coast.

Orval J. Shirley, chairman of the unit, called Clean Gulf Associates.

Book Says James Earl Ray Plotted One Year

NEW YORK (AP) — James Earl Ray plotted for a year to kill Martin Luther King Jr. and believed that King's death would help Alabama Gov. George Wallace, according to a book to be published this fall.

The book was written by George McMillan, who said he talked to members of Ray's family and to inmates who knew Ray when he was at the Missouri State Prison.

McMillan, a free-lance writer, said Monday that his book quotes members of Ray's family as discounting Ray's story that he was set up by a man called "Raoul," whom he met in Montreal.

Ray, who is serving a life sentence after pleading guilty to King's assassination, has been trying to win a new trial.

McMillan said Jerry Ray dismissed his brother James' story about meeting "Raoul" in Canada. He said "Jimmie" only went to Canada "to look the place over, to see how to get out of the country."

However, Time magazine said this week that one of its reporters later interviewed Jerry Ray and that he insisted that "Raoul" was behind everything and "set up" his brother.

Jerry Ray could not be reached today for comment.

Questions were raised about King's assassination during observances of his birthday last week, with his widow and several civil rights leaders calling for a new investigation of his Associates, said in an interview over the weekend that the companies were ordering a variety of equipment which would be available quickly to clean up any oil spilled from an offshore rig.

Spills in the Gulf of Mexico are already handled by a similar industry group there called

Clean Gulf Associates. There is no oil drilling yet along the Atlantic Coast, but the Interior Department has tentatively planned to auction leases off the middle and north Atlantic coasts. Shirley said that, if this leasing takes place on schedule, there could be four or five rigs drilling for oil off

New Jersey and Delaware by the end of this year. That prospect worries the governors and others in the Atlantic states, who fear that a major oil spill might blacken resort beaches and inflict heavy economic losses, especially if a spill came at the start of the summer tourist season.

Shirley, who is safety and environmental manager for Shell Oil Co., said there is little chance of a large oil spill reaching the Atlantic beaches. He pointed out that the closest oil rigs would be at least 50 miles from shore and that prevailing currents are usually pointed away from the beaches.

"But if oil were spilled from a drilling platform, Shirley said, the companies want to be ready to rush equipment to the scene to contain the oil and remove it, and — if necessary — clean up any oil that does reach land.

Shirley said a steering committee of Clean Atlantic Associates agreed last week to purchase some $1 million in clean-up equipment, including four "skimmers" used to pick up floating oil. In addition, the group has been taking an inventory of clean-up equipment and chemicals already stockpiled by individual companies in the area, he said.

He said standby materials would include chemicals to disperse oil or to coagulate it, and equipment for dispersing chemicals by helicopter.

Shirley said the oil companies participating in the clean-up plan were: Amoco, Atlantic Richfield, British Petroleum, Cities Service, Chevron, Continental, Exxon, Gulf, Houston Oil and Minerals Corp., Mobil, Pennzoil, Shell, Skelly, Sun, Texaco and Marathon.

death. They claimed that recent revelations about FBI plots to discredit King raised new questions about whether he was killed as part of a conspiracy.

Time also said McMillan paid Ray's brothers, a sister and his mother a total of $3,850 for information.

McMillan said Monday that "actually, it was nearly $5,000, but you have to realize that this was in nickels and dimes over seven years. For instance, I would talk to Jerry Ray and give him $200 sometimes." He said he talked to Jerry Ray more than 100 times.

McMillan said he also spoke with inmates at the Missouri State Prison at Jefferson City. James Earl Ray escaped from that prison in April 1967, one year before King was shot to death in Memphis.

One inmate who was at the prison when James Earl Ray was there said there had been talk around the prison that some Mississippi businessmen would pay to have King killed, McMillan said. But the author said that did not necessarily mean that Ray heard the same rumor.

McMillan said an inmate told him that when Ray saw King on television, he would be galvanized by the sight and say "somebody's got to get him."

McMillan also said in his book that the day after Ray escaped from prison, he met his brothers Jerry and Jack in a Chicago hotel. McMillan's book quoted the brothers as saying "Jimmy" told them:

"I'm gonna kill that nigger King. That's something that's been on my mind."

McMillan said Jack's reaction was: "That's crazy! You can count me out of that. There ain't no money in killin' a nigger."

Jerry, a night watchman now living near Chicago, was quoted as saying James went to Birmingham to establish Alabama residency and hoped to kill King in that state, believing that if caught and convicted, he would eventually be pardoned by Wallace.

"He had it in his head that it would help Wallace if King wasn't around," Jerry was quoted as saying.

McMillan's book is to be published by Little, Brown & Co.

Still Investigating Robbery And Death

ORMONDSVILLE — The Greene County Sheriff's Department and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation are continuing their investigation of a Friday afternoon robbery-assault that resulted in the death of a rural store keeper.

Sheriff P. L. Barrow said that Tommy Bowen, who operated Red Lyon's Store on Highway 102 between Ormondsville and Scuffletown, died Saturday of injuries received in the robbery at the store which occurred between 4 p.m. and 4:15 p.m.

The sheriff noted that Bowen, 70, who was hit over the head during the incident, was able to get outside the store following the robbery and was discovered by someone passing by. According to Sheriff Barrow, some $100 in cash was taken from the store, which is located some three miles from the Pitt-Greene line.

Pitt County Coroner and Medical Examiner E. W. Harvey Jr. said today that Bowen died in Pitt Memorial Hospital as a result of brain injuries. He noted that an autopsy was performed to determine the cause of death.

Ford Favors Covert Role

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford has told Time magazine he "strongly" supports covert intelligence operations abroad and is ready to meet the challenge of Ronald Reagan in the presidential primaries.

In an interview in the magazine's current edition, Ford said he didn't know how a president could conduct effective foreign policy without some degree of covert actions but that Congress and the public should be wary of possible abuses.

He said no commitments would be made in his administration without consulting at least a sizable number of members of Congress.

Regarding Reagan, Ford was confident. "I like a good fight, and it will be a good one," Ford said. "I don't have any fear or apprehension. I sleep very well."

Asked if he thought he could eliminate Reagan from the race in the first two or three primaries, Ford replied: "I think we have got a chance. But even if we don't, we look at the rest of the states, either primaries or conventions, and I think we are in pretty good shape."

Ford said his principal differences with Reagan were their approach to the federal budget and Reagan's proposal to transfer billions of dollars worth of federal programs to the states.

"Since he laid the $90-billion budget reduction on the table, I have talked to approximately 20 governors — Democrats as well as Republicans — and they all throw their hands up," Ford told Time.

Only Two

By The Associated Press
Only two persons were killed in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend, the Highway Patrol reports.

The toll for the year rose to 45, but was 13 fewer than at the similar time last year. Darrell Bentley, 19, was fatally injured when a car in which he was riding ran over an embankment and overturned several times near his home seven miles east of Lenoir.

Records Fall As ECU Swimmers Top Md.

East Carolina University's swimming team captured one of its biggest wins in school history yesterday afternoon by downing the University of Maryland 77-36 in the Minges Pool.

"This has to stand as one of the greatest all-round performances of an East Carolina team ever in a dual meet," said an elated Ray Scharf, still wet from a post meet dip in the pool, courtesy of the Pirates. "It was just an outstanding team effort and a meet that would be very difficult for me to single out any individuals. In relationship to meet and varsity records, however, a number of individuals had an outstanding day.

"This is one of the most gratifying dual meet wins ever for me. I'm really proud of this team. This is what makes coaching worthwhile. All that hard work of two-a-day practices paid off."

The Pirates were devastating on the record book. A total of 12 records fell during the afternoon. Seven meet records were broken, four varsity records were broken and one Minges pool record was broken. Never before has East Carolina broken so many meet or varsity records in a dual meet.

Freshman Stewart Mann broke two varsity and meet records. The Charlotte native took the 200 individual medley in 1:58.81, bettering the varsity record of 2:00.98 and the meet record of 2:03.00. Mann also broke the 200 backstroke marks with a time of 1:59.35, topping the varsity record of 2:00.55 and the meet record of 2:02.70.

Ross Bohlken broke the oldest standing record on the books in the 200 freestyle. Bohlken had a 1:44.53, which bettered ECU's former World Class swimmer Jim Griffin's record of 1:45.20.

David Kirkman broke the 200 breaststroke varsity record with a 2:15.8. The old varsity record was 2:16.90.

John McCauley broke the ECU pool record in the 50 freestyle with a :21.51 time, bettering the old mark of :21.55.

It was obvious from the beginning that East Carolina was in for a tremendous day. The Pirates took the 400 medley relay and the 1000 freestyle in the two opening events of the day.

"After we won the 1000 freestyle I knew we had the meet won," explained Scharf. "It was a surprise to win the medley relay and that really go the ball rolling. We had expected Maryland to go 1-2 in the 1000, but instead, we went 1-2-3. At that point we had momentum and never lost it.

"You know, we've been swimming Maryland for eight years and this is our first win.

What a day it was." It was such a day that Scharf called off the Monday morning workout he had planned.

"We always go twice a day, but I just didn't have the heart to make them do it Monday after this win," said a smiling Scharf.

It was a 77-36 winning smile that will linger for some time to come.

The summary:
400 Medley Relay—ECU (Stewart Mann, David Kirkman, Keith Wade, Billy Thorne) 3:36.47.

1000 Freestyle—Doug Brindley (ECU) 10:10.68; Barry McCarthy (ECU) 10:14.61; Pyle (MD) 10:40.60.

Steeler Defense Takes Super Bowl Win By 21-17

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI (AP)—They sawed off the shotgun. They out-muscled the flex. They did everything that it takes to make for good, basic, dull football—and it was anything but dull.

The Pittsburgh Steelers, for the second straight year the greatest team in professional football, dealt the wild-card Cowboys of Dallas a fistful of fundamentals Sunday and came away with a 21-17 victory in what was easily the most thrilling Super Bowl game yet played.

And having carved an X on the bad rap these National Football League extravaganzas have carried since their inception, the Steelers immediately began thinking about carving a special niche of their own in the record books by winning a third title in a row.

The Cowboys, with quarterback Roger Staubach passing out of a deep-set shotgun offense and a "flex" defense designed to constrict Pittsburgh, had added a few new wrinkles to this game. But for all their efforts, all they got were furrowed brows. It was blocking and tackling—all there really is to football, when you get down to it—that made the difference.

"I'm a big deal today—but tomorrow we start working for Super Bowl XI," said Reggie Harrison, the bemused, almost embarrassed Steeler whose fourth-quarter blocked punt produced a safety and started Pittsburgh working in earnest toward the triumph in Super Bowl X.

"I think we'll be enjoying this one a lot more than the last one," added running back Franco Harris, a star in the Steelers'

Super Bowl IX victory over Minnesota but little more than a bit-part player in this one. "We're No. 1 two times in a row and there's not too many teams that can say that. Now it'll be nice to try for No. 3—and no team can say that yet."

Two was hard to come by. The game was a relatively even one statistically, but those are only cold numbers on a chart. On the field it was as uneven as a manic-depressive, first raising the Cowboys hopes, then dashing them, then doing the same to the Steelers' emotions.

The tempo crashed back and forth, bouncing as crazily as the football that careened into and out of the Dallas end zone after Harrison had collided with it in mid-air, jawbone to pigskin.

It was the Cowboys who got on the scoreboard first. They stamped into Pittsburgh punter Bobby Walden as he juggled the ball. In one play, a 29-yard touchdown pass from Roger Staubach to a shockingly wide-open Drew Pearson, Dallas bashed a gaping hole in the aura of Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain invincibility, becoming the first team all season to score a first-quarter touchdown against the Steelers.

Was this, then, to be the first tolling of the bell that would ring down that curtain?

It took Pittsburgh less than 4½ minutes to dispel those fears, tying the game on a touchdown pass from Terry Bradshaw to an equally wideopen Randy Grossman.

NCAA Expected Reorganize Divisions At 1977's Meeting

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP)—You might say that rarely have so many done so much to accomplish so little.

But when the National Collegiate Athletic Association convenes again in Hollywood, Fla., next January, things probably will be a little different.

A year from now, the NCAA is likely to reorganize from three to four divisions, topped by a so-called "super" conference of the biggest of the big-time football powers. Then, each division undoubtedly will vote on whether a prospect must show financial need in order to get an athletic scholarship and it probably will pass in all except the top division.

"Need seems to be just around the corner," said Boyd

McWhorter, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, which voted 9-1 against it. And Robert C. James of the Atlantic Coast Conference, chairman of the Collegiate Commissioners Association, said the need vote "surprised me. Going into the convention, need didn't seem to be the issue it turned out to be."

The major football schools, led by the SEC, Big Eight, Western Athletic, Southwest and Big Ten Conferences, plus independent powers such as Notre Dame and Penn State, were the ones who killed the threat of need this year by voting 58-20 against it. In the first NCAA roll-call vote in memory — "Stand up and be counted," said one need supporter — the proposal failed in Division I by only 120-112.

While most of the controversial legislation failed — need, reorganization, a major college football championship playoff and the sharing of television and bowl income among all NCAA members — the groundwork was laid for affirmative action in the near future.

"Some rather significant decisions made here may not surface immediately because some matters are a little laborious in getting to the main point," said Walter Byers, NCAA Executive Director. "But need has emerged as the major issue, and there are going to be a lot of decisions made in the next year at the highest level of each institution."

A record number of more than 1,000 delegates, including 548 eligible voters, retained the limits on the size of football and basketball coaching staffs adopted at last summer's special session on methods of saving money, but threw out the controversial home and travel squad-size limitations of 60-48 in football and 13-10 in basketball.

Legislation was retained limiting recruiters to three off-campus visits with a prospect, but the number of athletes who may visit each campus was raised from 75 to 95 in football and from 12 to 18 in basketball. The thorny issue of how much the NCAA should get involved in women's sports was referred back to the policy-making NCAA Council. Byers said that until the courts or the federal government rules otherwise, the NCAA probably will continue to apply its rules only to all-male teams and mixed squads.

ASHE ADVANCES

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Top-seeded Arthur Ashe advanced to the finals of the $64,000 World Championship Tennis Tournament Sunday against Vitas Gerulaitis by easily beating Ray Ruffels 6-1, 6-2.

Homer Rice Is Offered A Post

HOUSTON (AP)—The athletic director at the University of North Carolina, Homer Rice, reportedly can have the head football coaching job at Rice University in Houston if he wants it.
Rice was unavailable at Chapel Hill for comment on the report, which has been published in the Houston Post.
The job became vacant when Al Conover resigned Jan. 2.
Rice is a former head coach at Cincinnati. He has been an assistant coach at Kentuck and Oklahoma, and has been athletic director at North Carolina since 1969.

UNC Coach Is Angered By Television Time-Outs

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—The timing of television time outs contributed to North Carolina's one-point loss to arch-rival North Carolina State Sunday and hampered the Tar Heels Saturday when they barely squeezed by Duke, North Carolina basketball Coach Dean

Smith angrily charged. Talking to newsmen after Sunday's nationally televised 68-67 loss to N.C. State, Smith accused Atlantic Coast Conference official Skeeter Francis of stopping Tar Heel scoring runs by calling an official time out Saturday, in a regionally televised game, North Carolina nudged Duke, 89-87. "We have the worst guy in the world calling TV timeouts and his name is Skeeter Francis," Smith said. "We had an eight-point run over at Duke Saturday and then got a TV timeout. Today, we had a good stretch going and then got another TV timeout," he said. Francis, a former sports information director for Wake Forest, is an administrative assistant to ACC Commissioner Bob James and director of the ACC service bureau. During the two disputed games, Francis sat at the official scorekeeper's table and signaled the referees on the court when the television producer wanted an official time out for a commercial. "He (Francis) used to be affiliated with Wake Forest and always wanted to beat Carolina," Smith said.

Francis couldn't be reached for comment. James said he was shocked by the accusation and promised to review game films and time out sequences. "I have never heard this report from anybody before and I've never heard anyone complain about it being a disadvantage to any one team," he said. Smith said his complaint was an effort to blame the loss on television. "State beat us. They did a tremendous job on the backboards," he said.

With North Carolina's fall, there is not an undefeated team in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Wake Forest and Maryland joined Duke with victories Saturday.

Two freshmen, one on either team, were outstanding in the 86-81 victory of the Clemson Tigers over Wake Forest on the Deacons' court. Greg Coles of Clemson came off the bench to score 10 of his 18 points in the final five and one-half minutes. He tied the game at 76-all on a long shot with 2:48 left, and then sent the Tigers ahead with another bomb from the right side at 2:13. Then he fed John Franken for a fast-break layup.

"I wasn't trying to take charge; it just seemed like the shots were there," said Coles, who had been averaging 6.8 points.

Lady Pirates Dropped Pair

CHAPEL HILL — The East Carolinas University women's basketball team dropped a pair of games here this weekend to Big Four opponents.

The Lady Pirates carried the N. C. State women into overtime Saturday before losing 84-83 and yesterday, the host University of North Carolina squad turned back ECU 69-51.

Debbie Freeman topped the ECU scoring in the Saturday loss with 34 points and shared team honors in the Carolina game with Rosie Thompson, each with 12 points. Christie Earnhardt's 28 points led State on Saturday while Cathy Shoemaker was high UNC scorer on Sunday with 21 points.

The ECU ladies will travel to Duke University on Tuesday for a 7 p.m. game and then return home to host Madison College this Saturday at 5 p.m. in the first game of a basketball doubleheader. The Pirates face VMI at 7:30 p.m. in the nightcap.

Six-foot-11 Larry Harrison started his first game for Wake Forest drew the defensive assignment against 7-1 Tree Rollins and held the ACC's leading rebounder without a retrieve in the first half.

Harrison showed a good touch from the key and outscored Rollins 13-8 in the opening half. Harrison also grabbed eight rebounds during that time.

However, he fouled out with 9:25 to play, and for the game Rollins had 16 points and eight rebounds. Rollins had been averaging 13 rebounds. Harrison did not score in the second half.

Maryland had six players in double figures in defeating Navy 87-69 at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. Steve Sheppard, who sat on the bench most of the first half because of foul trouble, scored 13 of his 20 points in the first six and one-half minutes of the second half for the Terps.

ACC teams are in two games tonight. Virginia is at William and Mary and Duke plays Virginia Tech in the Greensboro Coliseum. Tuesday is an open date. On Wednesday, Clemson is at Maryland, Wake Forest at Duke and Virginia is home to Pittsburgh.

Virginia is home to Delaware on Thursday. There are no games Friday. On Saturday, Duke will be at North Carolina State in a televised game, Virginia at Clemson, and Wake Forest will be home to Illinois State.

Super Bowl Victory . . .

From then until the fourth minute of the fourth period, it was a war of attrition, a series of missed opportunities. Toni Fritsch kicked a 36-yard field goal 15 seconds into the second period, putting Dallas on top again 10-7. He might have had a shot at another three-pointer later in the period if Pittsburgh's defense hadn't flexed its own muscles, turning a second-and-10 situation on the Pittsburgh 23 into a fourth-and-35 by creaming Staubach on successive pass attempts.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh was blowing some chances of its own, but doing it more blatantly, compliments of place-kicker Roy Gerela's inaccurate right foot. He lined a 36-yard try of his own to the left of the luminescent yellow-green uprights in the final minute of the second period, then repeated his act of futility about a third of the way into the third quarter by hooking a 33-yarder.

He had a pretty good excuse, though, for his lack of marksmanship. It seems he was nursing a broken rib. He busted it on the first play of the game by knocking Dallas' Tom Henderson out of bounds, preventing the razzle-dazzle reverse run-back from the Super Bowl's first kickoff returned for a touchdown.

So into the fourth quarter these two teams went, the Steelers pounding away at Dallas and coming up empty; the Cowboys cracking away at Pittsburgh and holding, ever so tenuously, their three-point lead.

Something had to give. Something did. It was, of all things, the Cowboys' punting unit. And what had been an intense, fierce, frustrating game of near-misses became a roller-coaster of scoring, changing the numbers on the scoreboard almost as quickly as the numbers on the big board in the stock exchange.

Harrison, a 1974 midseason acquisition by Pittsburgh after the St. Louis Cardinals cut him adrift, came through the line like a locomotive at full throttle and met the football face first, an instant after punter Mitch Hoopes' foot hit the ball.

"I think I got it with my mouth," he said later, impishly displaying a tongue with a gash up the middle. "I thought I had it with my arm, but after the block I turned around and spat and got nothing but blood, so I guess I took it in the face."

It seemed impossible to front that Harrison wouldn't know where he'd been hit. It was even more incredible that he didn't know how much impact his play had. In fact, it wasn't until he was in the locker room that he found out he'd drawn Pittsburgh within one point of a tie.

He didn't think much about the block itself, either. Both coaches — Chuck Noll of Pittsburgh and Tom Landry of Dallas — and plenty of players on both sides said it was the turning point, the instant the Steelers began smelling blood.

But Harrison brushed it off. "I don't think it was so important. Heck, there were some really big plays," he said, referring to a Mike Wagner interception that helped the Steelers pad their lead and a 64-yard Lynn Swann touchdown catch that put the game away.

"Those were the big ones. Mine was just lucky. I'd never take credit for winning the game, for doing something as big as that."

DIRECT BLOCK — Ball goes through the arms of Pittsburgh Steelers Reggie Harrison and hits him in the nose guard as he blocks punt by Dallas Cowboys Mitch Hoopes (9) during fourth quarter of Super Bowl game in Miami Sunday. BATTERED BRADSHAW — Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw holds an icepack to his head in the trainer's room after Super Bowl X. Bradshaw was shaken up when he was sacked in the fourth quarter. (AP Wirephoto)

But it was big. Hoopes' subsequent free kick travelled 50 yards and came back 25 after Mike Collier caught it. Harris, who finished with 82 yards rushing this time compared to last year's record 158, took turns with Rocky Bleir punching out short gains until it was fourth-and-one at the Dallas 20.

With Gerela's track record, it seemed certain Noll would opt for a shot at a first down. He didn't. He gave Gerela a chance to redeem himself. Gerela did with perfect 36-yard field goal that put the Steelers ahead for the first time.

Barely two minutes later, Gerela made another three points, inching the Steelers' lead out to 15-10 with a chip-shot 18-yarder. After the 36-yard kick, Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach, whose success with the shotgun had been minimal, went to the air immediately — and Wagner went for the jugular.

The Steeler safety stepped in front of wide receiver Drew Pearson, grabbed the pass as though it had been meant for him all the time and streaked 19 yards to the Dallas seven. Only a Harris fumble — and his own recovery — at the one-yard line a few plays later forced Gerela to kick a field goal instead of an extra point.

He got that extra-point chance about 3 1/2 minutes later, with barely three minutes to play.

The Cowboys went nowhere and punted, then the Steelers went for the winner. Swann had already made two dazzling catches despite cornerback Mark Washington's coverage. He'd made a leaping, fingertip, 32-yard grab in the first period to set up Grossman's TD reception, then had made an even more mind-boggling, mid-air, juggling catch that went for 53 yards — and went for nought when Gerela missed his second-quarter field goal.

This time Swann beat Washington flat out. He flew down the right side and gained a step on the Dallas defender.

Most N.C. Legislators Use Ethics Law Loophole

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—Of North Carolina's 170 legislators, only 37 filed a financial disclosure statement last week. Most of the others took advantage of a loophole in the new legislative ethics law.

The ethics law was adopted by the 1975 General Assembly and requires all lawmakers to reveal their business interests, large debts and major holdings in stocks, bonds and real estate.

Under the law, legislators must file a report in the January following their election. Another report must be filed the following January to update the first statement.

Since the law was enacted only last year and no first report was filed, Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten said there was no need for anyone to file this time.

That opinion was noted by a number of lawmakers who filed. Several said they were filing to show their support for the concept of financial disclosure.

Sen. J. Russell Kirby, D-Wilson, was chairman of the ethics committee and said he filed just because he figured someone would ask him about it. He's not seeking reelection because he will challenge 2nd District Congressman L.H. Fountain in the August Democratic primary.

Gov. Jim Hunt also filed, making the total number of reports 38. When the attorney general's opinion came out, Hunt said the lawmakers should file despite the loophole because the law was intended to apply this year.

The reports on file vary from containing virtually no useful information to long lists of property and stock holdings. Also, the law doesn't require legislators to reveal their income or value of stocks and land, but some supplied that information anyway.

One problem faced by those submitting reports was the lack of a standard form for filing. The Legislative Ethics Commission still hasn't adopted a form but most of those filing used a proposed form that had been mimeographed.

The 16 senators who filed reports were: Jack Childers, D-Davidson; Bobby Lee Combs, D-Catawba; Melvin Roy Dan-ielis Jr., D-Pasquotank; E. Lawrence Davis, D-Forsyth; J.J. Harrington, D-Bertie; John T. Henley, D-Cumberland; Cecil S. Hill, D-Transylvania; Donald R. Kincaid, R-Caldwell; Kirby; Edd Nye, D-Bladen.

Also, Edward Renfrow, D-Johnston; Lynwood Smith and McNeill Smith, both D-Guilford; D. Livingstone Stallings, D-Craven; Thomas E. Strickland, D-Wayne; Carl D. Thercrow, D-Forsyth; and John W. Winters, D-Wake.

The 21 members of the House who filed were: Richard Lane Brown III, D-Stanly; Sam Bundy, D-Pitt; Hensen P. Barnes and Mrs. John Chase, both D-Wayne; Ruth Cook, D-Wake; Judson D. DeRamus Jr., D-Forsyth; David Hunter Diamond, D-Surry; Richard C. Erwin, D-Forsyth; Thomas Odell Gilmore, D-Guilford.

Also, House Speaker Jimmy Green of Bladen County; W.S. Harris, D-Alamance; Leo Heer, D-Guilford; Bertha Holt; Joy Johnson, D-Robeson; John M. Jordan, D-Alamance; William H. McMillan, D-Iredell; H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham; David R. Parnell, D-Robeson; Ned R. Smith, D-Forsyth; John S. Stevens, D-Buncombe, and

Margaret Tennille, D-Forsyth. One of the main values of the reports is to reveal a possible conflict of interest when the lawmakers are considering legislation. For example, if a bill that would aid bankers is under consideration, it would be useful to know if those promoting the measure own stock in banks.

The 38 reports on file show considerable holdings by some of the legislators. For example, many of them own stock in North Carolina banks, textile firms, utilities and insurance companies.

Apartments and large land holdings are also common. Green, for instance, listed full or partial ownership of 42 pieces of property totaling more than 3,100 acres. Winters listed ownership of 29 pieces of property and partial ownership of two others.

Some legislators have no significant holdings. Mrs. Cook, a widow, listed her legislative salary as her income and DeRamus, an attorney, listed no major holdings.

In random calls to legislators who did not file reports, most of them explained they didn't because it wasn't necessary.

Sen. Glenn Jernigan, D-Cumberland, however, will file his late. A death in the family last week prevented his completing the report, he said, adding that he wants to file because "I really think it's a good faith thing."

Rep. Larry Eagles, D-Edgecombe, said, "I don't believe in any of it. I fought it hard..." He said such laws keep some good candidates from seeking public office.

Rep. Wade Smith, D-Wake, a strong supporter of the ethics law, said he just forgot and will file his report late.

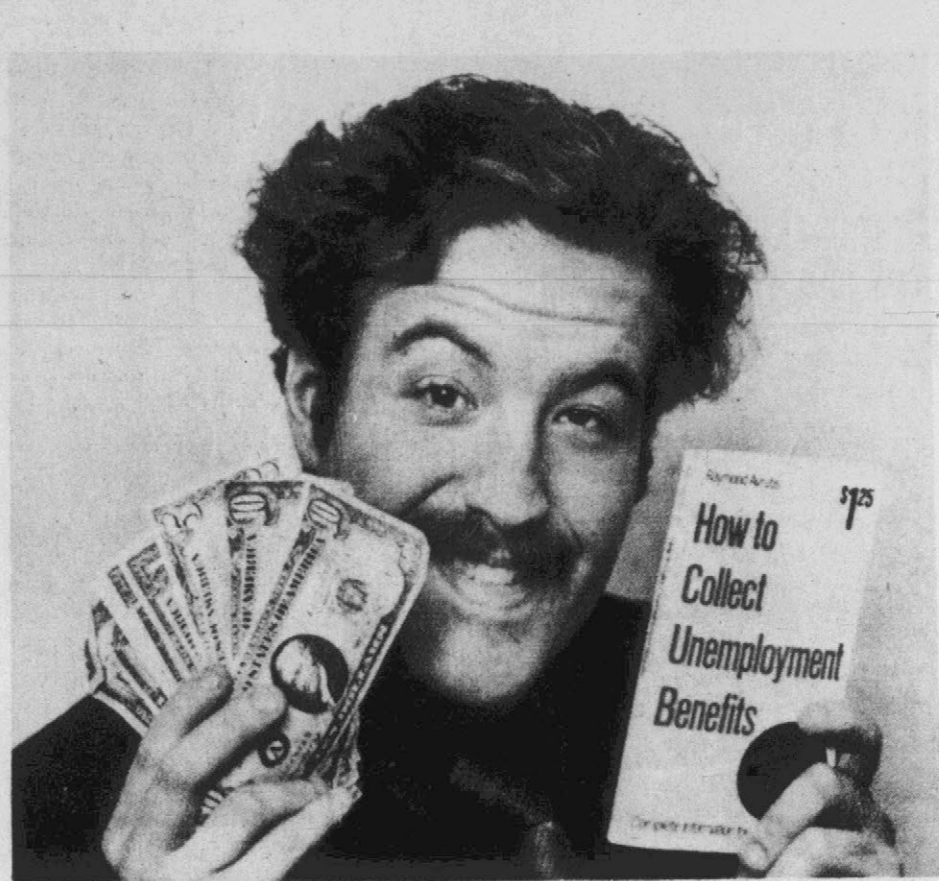

Rep. Ronald Earl Mason, D-Carteret, said he supported the bill but didn't file because he saw no need to. After Edmisten's opinion, "I thought nothing more about it," he said.

Rising Demand, Prices For Timber Anticipated

ATLANTA (AP)—Forestry officials say a recent Alaskan court decision banning clear-cutting timber in national parks could vastly increase the demand and price of lumber throughout the South in 1976.

"If the national forests are locked up, this will definitely have an impact on the South," said Benton H. Box, executive director of the Southern Forest Institute in Atlanta.

The Alaskan decision Dec. 29, 1975 granted a permanent injunction for the rest of the contract between the Tongass National Forest and Ketchikan Pulp Co. barring cutting of trees other than those matured or dead and requiring such trees to be marked prior to their harvest.

Box predicted demand for lumber coupled with shrinking production could be a major factor in prices for wood needed for paper and materials for 1.5 million new housing starts forecast in 1976.

"Some companies are bidding $300 to $350 per thousand board feet of lumber from our national forests out West," he said. Box added that these prices are more than a third higher than a year ago.

A Southern Forest Institute survey indicates the South's pulp and paper industry payroll totaled $1.5 billion in 1974, and another $1.5 billion was used to purchase pulpwood in 13 Southern states.

Industry officials have reported an upturn in lumber production after a low point last April. "I think it's going to be a gradual recovery," said Harold Joiner, executive director of the Georgia Forestry Association. "Most of the mills' procurement people have more inventory than they need, but it's better to have too much than not enough."

Joiner said some of the 13 pulp and paper mills in Georgia, which produces more pulpwood than any other state, were operating at about 70 per cent capacity during 1975 and several are returning to full production now.

The state has the most commercial forest land in the South at 24.8 million acres.

Harry Roller, an official of International Paper Co. in Mobile, Ala., said production was down during 1975. Last week, International showed an improvement in fourth quarter earnings, but Roller said net earnings for 1975 were still down about 17 per cent compared to $262.6 million in net income the previous year.

The industry also is losing timberland to other agricultural enterprises and land and road development.

Forestry associations estimated in the late 1960s that the South would lose about 10 million acres of forest land to other uses by the year 2000. At that time, the region registered 198 million acres of timberland but the total was expected to drop to 188 million acres by the end of the century.

"We went back and found we've already lost 7 1/2 million acres to other uses," said Box.

Freeze Fails Deter Crowd

COWPENS, S.C. (AP)—Subfreezing temperatures failed to keep away the people as thousands lined the streets for the bicentennial parade marking the 195th anniversary of the Battle of Cowpens.

Officials claimed the parade and reenactment of the battle attracted more people to this small community than the real clash between the poorly equipped, ill-clad militiamen led by Gen. Daniel Morgan and the crack British troops of Lt. Col. Banastre Tarleton.

Viewers began lining the streets two hours before the 10 a.m. parade was scheduled to begin Saturday. By starting time, they were three or four deep to see the parade and its grand marshal, retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland, former commander of American forces in Vietnam.

During the afternoon the scene shifted from downtown to the battle site a few miles west of the parade route.

Outfitted in authentic-looking uniforms, militiamen fired flintlock rifles and rebuilt cannons at each other in a small clearing to portray the Jan. 17, 1781 Battle of Cowpens.

The conflict came to be regarded as one of the major turning points of the American Revolution.

Sanford On Road Again

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford has returned to the presidential campaign trial after a hospital stay for observation of chest pains.

Sanford, who is leave of absence as president of Duke University, has been given a clean bill of health by doctors at the Duke University Medical Center. He spent last week at a hospital in Salem, Mass. and at the Duke Center after becoming ill while campaigning in New England.

But he appeared on the "Meet the Press" television program Sunday. He said his health is excellent. He plans to go to New Hampshire for more campaigning and possibly some skiing.

Also on "Meet the Press" were three other seekers of the Democratic presidential nomination: Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Arizona Congressman Morris Udall, and Washington Sen. Henry Jackson.

The four advocated a government guarantee of a job to every American. Each indicated that unemployment will be a major campaign issue. Sanford added that he also would seek action to improve neighborhoods through housing and rent subsidies.

Lawyers Honor Judge Hobgood

RALEIGH (AP)—Superior Court Judge Hamilton Hobgood has been honored by a group of attorneys for "highest excellence in the administration of justice."

The North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers Friday cited Hobgood in a special award.

Hobgood presided over the widely publicized Joan Little trial here last summer. In the trial, Miss Little was acquitted of murder in the icepick slaying of a Clarence Allgood, a Beaufort County jailer she accused of sexually assaulting her.

KARATE IN THE MALL

Thuds, grunts, sweat, fierce feats of strength and steely sinews—not part of your normal, tranquil Saturday afternoon amble through the local shopping mall. But here at Boca Raton Mall, Boca Raton, Fla., karate demonstrations draw crowds in their hundreds to each of three Saturday shows. The demonstrations, about half an hour long each, are performed by karate teacher Don Willis, native of Canton, Ohio, and some of his students. They were hired by the mall's owners to perk up business, and they enjoy the chance to spread the word about karate—to say nothing of basking in all that open-mouthed admiration.

Less Money Given Civil Rights

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — The civil rights movement is now barely paying its way in America after a decade flushed with success.

And some black leaders say that all funds should be raised from black communities because the support of affluent whites can no longer be relied upon.

"The white liberals are giving their money to their favorite presidential candidates, not the civil rights movement," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of Chicago-based Operation PUSH. "And the Jewish middle class is contributing all their spare cash to the state of Israel these days. With the tightened economy, more and more people are concentrating on their own special interests."

The money crunch had hurt most civil rights organizations, some more seriously than others. The North Carolina branch of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference suspended operations in October because of a $17,000 debt, and the state leader moved to Delaware to work with a group of ministers.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization, is reportedly $250,000 in debt, and the deficit "is reaching a point where it could imperil critical programs that are the lifeblood of the organization, including its foremost thrust in school desegregation," according to one official.

The only civil rights organization holding its own seems to be the National Urban League "which had a very good year last year, well over our projection," said William Sims, director of the organization's fund department. The Urban League's advantage over the other non-profit civil rights organizations is that it has the direct support of American industry in its programs to integrate work forces.

But even the Urban League is getting the message that there is a diminishing interest in the civil rights movement in America.

"A white corporation executive told me recently 'civil rights is no longer popular,'" Sims said.

Other black leaders blame President Nixon and President Ford for taking the emphasis off equal employment and other civil rights issues.

"Just because black communities are quiet does not mean that we have made enough progress," said Ed Reed, an executive assistant in the Boston chapter of the NAACP. "Reports of such progress are misleading and blacks are liable to be on the streets again when they realize how poorly they are faring economically."

The 66-year-old NAACP reportedly has had trouble meeting its payroll in the New York headquarters "but we are nowhere near the spot where we might go under," an official said.

The association has 1,400 chapters and a membership of around 450,000, and some sources see renewed fund raising vigor when the respected, but aging association head, Roy Wilkins, retires later this year.

The Rev. Jackson of PUSH says that the depressed economy and the diminishing interest in civil rights "has given the black community its biggest challenge yet."

Jackson says that the black middle class must now assume responsibility for the financing of the black struggle.

"We have had some black representation in the past — lawyers, doctors, preachers. But as our new fund raising base we need support from the new generation of moneyed blacks, the black executives, the black athletes. They are all successful as a direct result of the civil rights struggle. Yet eight out of 10 black athletes don't financially help the civil rights movement." Jackson said.

PUSH was $400,000 in debt a few months ago, but two public benefits raised half that amount.

Some officials within the NAACP say their base membership fee of $4 should be raised to cover increased expenses.

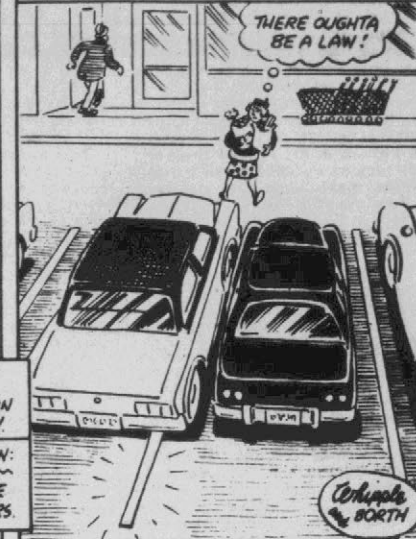

The Rev. Jackson says the only hope for black organizations is to totally take over their financing and administration.

"Just as the Jews fully support B'Nai B'Rith, and Catholics Rome, so too must we run our own organizations," Jackson said.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ1095 ♥KQJ76 ♦8 ♣AA
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 1NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—With two strong suits, you have the playing strength to insist on game. However, you cannot be sure that the hand should play in one of your suits—if partner has substantial holdings in the minors and no length in either major, three no trump might be your best contract. Therefore, we suggest a forcing rebid of three hearts.

Q.2—North-South, vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q9854 ♥A106 ♦83 ♣K76
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—Two hearts. Your hand is a whit short of two forward-going bids, so our choice is the bid which is most likely to encourage partner. If he makes another bid, we will press on to game, since we are at the top of our raise to two hearts.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠107 ♥AK986 ♦K83 ♣J65
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1♥ 1♦
1NT Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Three no trump. Partner's free bid of one no trump shows a good opening bid—with a minimum he should pass to see if you could take further action. You have 11 HCP and a good five-card suit, so there is a reasonable expectancy that the combined holdings will produce game.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K972 ♥AK6 ♦J87 ♣AQ8
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

A.—If you have available a bid which describes your hand exactly, you should employ it. A jump to three no trump shows a perfectly balanced hand (4-3-3-3) with a point count of 16-18—exactly what you hold.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ ♦AQ9872 ♣KQJ73
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 1♦ Pass
2♦ Pass 3♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Five clubs. It is almost impossible to probe accurately in an attempt to find out partner's exact holding. This hand rates to make game, so you should just up and bid it—partner is still allowed to bid a slam if he thinks he has the right hand. We would have taken more vigorous action had we not been void in partner's suit.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♥AKQ7 ♦106 ♣J7542
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Pass 1♦ Pass
2 ♣ Dble. Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid four hearts. Partner is showing a good hand with length in both red suits. He could not double at his first turn because he was short in spades, and he could not overcall one heart because his suit was too weak. If he bid only three hearts, he is almost certain to pass because he fears too many trump losers.

Q.7—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q98743 ♥A82 ♦A ♣AQ6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 2♦ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 3♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Bid three no trump. Though partner has indicated that he does not hold a particularly strong hand and a long diamond suit, he should have something like six diamonds to the K-Q-J and an outside king to justify his two-over-one response. If he does, your chances for game are good.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ5 ♥K98 ♦107 ♣AQ76
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1NT Pass Pass Dble.
Pass 2♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—Pass. By removing your double of one no trump to two diamonds, partner has shown a weak hand with a long diamond suit. With some values, he would certainly have passed. You have nowhere to go—and any attempt to improve the contract could result in disaster.

Arness Returns To The Frontier

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — James Arness, who for 20 years rode the TV range as Marshal Dillon in "Gunsmoke," returns to the tube tonight as a buckskin-clad frontiersman in a 2½-hour ABC movie, "The Macahans."

But when it ends it won't be the last of the Macahans. ABC says the show may be a series next fall. It says the show is based on the movie, "How the West Was Won," and may bear that title as a series.

If tonight's effort bears any resemblance to "How the West Was Won," I'll do a fan dance in Macy's window at high noon. But I digress.

This long, lumbering saga has Big Jim cast as Zeb Macahan, a Virginian who has been out West scouting, trapping and all that for 10 years. The plot centers on his efforts to help his brother (Richard Kiley) and brother's wife (Eva Marie Saint) to move their family West from their home near Bull Run, Va., just before the start of the Civil War.

But just before the trek begins, Easterners and Midwesterners will see something completely different — President Ford's State of the Union message, which the networks are carrying live at 9 p.m. EST.

ABC will stop "The Macahans" for Ford's speech and ensuing analyses of it, then resume the proceedings.

The show begins in March 1861 with Big Jim and an Indian lad he befriended a few years earlier riding through Western woods identified as the "Hunkapa Sioux Territory."

They see a fellow scout, played by Gene Evans, set upon by Indians who are fixing to skin him alive. Zeb intervenes and gets them to hand him over, explaining that the Army wants Evans for hanging purposes, as he has fomented Indian uprisings that have cost lives.

He turns the baddie in to Fort Laramie authorities, then says he's going back to Virginia to visit the Macahans who stayed there. Cut to "North-eastern Virginia, April, 1861" and his arrival there.

Miss Saint, who in the show has four teen-agers — two boys and two girls — distrusts Zeb, calling him "a drifter, a gambler and a pagan." But Civil War clouds are looming, her husband wants to try his luck out West anyway, and off they go, Zeb having reluctantly agreed to escort them.

The journey is long and arduous, but nowhere as long and arduous as the rest of the show, which gets Zeb & Co. only as far as temporary quarters in Nebraska — a sod hut — before grinding to a halt.

This Civil War-era show could be called "Davey Crockett and The Waltons Set up a Little House on the Prairie Under a Grant Made Possible by Lee." It certainly has lots of story angles for a series. But I wish they hadn't tried to squeeze all of them into tonight's program. It makes the thing a 2½-hour epic in bloom.
