Kissinger Ignores Defeat

Petition Seeks End Blue Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite overwhelming congressional votes to end U.S. aid in Angola, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger declines to concede defeat in the administration's efforts to convince Congress to send more military supplies to pro-Western forces there.

replied, "I'm not prepared to make this judgment." Kissinger said he will have a more detailed statement on Angolan aid when he testifies before a Senate committee Thursday.

Angola vote can be traced to a lingering fear of getting involved in another Vietnam." The cutoff was attached to a defense appropriations bill sent to Ford. There was no indication of whether Ford would veto the bill in an effort to force Congress to reconsider its cutoff.

The provision approved last month 54 to 22 by the Senate and then by the House Tuesday prohibits some $28 million earmarked for Angola in the $112.3-billion over-all defense appropriations bill.

Hearst Trial Judge Says Will Seat A Jury Today

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The judge in Patricia Hearst's trial for bank robbery says he's determined to seat a jury today.

friends or the attorneys for both sides or their families. After introducing the lawyers, he asked Miss Hearst to stand and face the prospective jurors. She rose quickly, placed her fingertips on the defense table and turned without smiling.

During the afternoon break, Miss Hearst and her mother chatted briefly and exchanged warm smiles. The defendant and her family, however, showed no emotion when Carter read the formal indictment: One charge of bank robbery and one charge of using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

"I expect to conclude the jury selection process by tomorrow," U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter said at the end of Tuesday's opening session, during which 40 prospective jurors were dismissed. Carter, asking about two dozen general questions, dismissed 36 potential jurors who pleaded hardship at home and four who admitted prejudice or inability to judge the newspaper heiress impartially.

"I intend to draw 36 prospective jurors whom I intend to question individually on a number of subjects," Carter said. Carter told opposing attorneys that his questioning would be "independent and detailed." Following standard federal procedure, the judge questions prospective jurors. During the first day of the long-awaited trial, the judge repeated at least a half-dozen times that Miss Hearst is presumed innocent until proven guilty.

Carter then asked Miss Hearst's family to stand. Her parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst, and her sisters, Anne and Vicki, stood from their front-row seats and turned around. Mrs. Hearst had a faint smile. The defendant was pale as usual but attentive during her first day on trial. She appeared solemn during the morning session but relaxed during the afternoon, smiling more frequently.

She is accused of robbing a San Francisco bank on April 15, 1974, with members of the Symbionese Liberation Army that had kidnaped her two months earlier. She said in a tape-recorded message shortly after the hold-up that she freely participated in the robbery. But since her arrest last Sept. 18, her defense team has maintained that she participated out of fear the SLA would kill her if she did not cooperate.

Senate Expected To Join House, Override $$$ Veto

Democrats were confident that the Senate today would follow the lead of the House in voting to override Ford's veto of a $45-billion appropriations bill to fund health, welfare and job programs.

When Ford vetoed the measure last month, he contended it exceeded his budget request for the Labor Department and Health, Education and Welfare by about $1 billion. He called it "a classic example of... unchecked spending."

The funds in the bill are for the current fiscal year, which already is more than half over, and for a transition three-month period before the new 1977 fiscal year begins on Oct. 1.

Albert said the veto evidently was imposed as a part of "Mr. Ford's quest for the Republican presidential nomination."

The House rejected the veto Tuesday on a vote of 310 to 113, or 28 more than the two-thirds margin required to override. The 310 votes came from 261 Democrats and 49 Republicans. There is considerable Re-

FINDS MARY H. OFFENSIVE

I want to complain about the show, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" being shown in this area. It's obscene and so available to children in that it comes on soon after school is out and before some parents are home from work. Mrs. T.B.

Hotline has had several calls similar to yours and WNCT, which carries the new Norman Lear soap opera spoof, says it is receiving calls and letters about the show every day now. "Some are saying they like the show," Ed Fields, program director, said, "but most do not." He invited viewers to address comments to him and promised that every one would be kept on file and answered.

"Mary Hartman" is a syndicated show and the local station has the option to drop the show or move it to another time slot, though it would, of course, lose money because several months-worth have been bought in advance.

Fields said a decision will be made in the coming weeks based on the comments received. He asked that those who write to him make it clear as to whether they'd like to see the show continued, taken off the air, or moved to a time not as "available" to children.

New Funds For PTL Accepted

New state monies were received and accepted by the Pitt Technical Institute Board of Trustees Monday night. The monies earmarked for programs for disadvantaged students and for new industry training are in the amounts of $2,227.00 and $3,360.00 respectively.

Dr. Fulford explained several new developments at Pitt Tech. The institute has requested a $250,000.00 grant from the Coastal Plains Regional Commission to help finance the building of a new vocational technical shop facility. Final approval of the grant has not been received by the state.

George Shoe, architect, told the board that the addition to the Administration Building is complete. He stated further that the official final inspection will be Tuesday, February 3 at 10:30 a.m.

Dr. Fulford also explained that repairs have been made as requested by the Pitt County Board of Education concerning the grounds next to the Robinson Union School in Winterville.

William E. Fulford, Jr., president of Pitt Tech, reported that the institute has received two gifts since the last meeting. The board formally acknowledged and accepted gifts of $100 from Mrs. Kay Whichard and a color television from Thomas Reese.

Enrollment at Pitt Tech for the winter quarter has been reported up 22 per cent over the winter quarter of last year. However, there is a decrease of 116 students compared to this fall quarter, Dr. Fulford reported.

Sammy D's In Dinkytown Rated As One Of Best

By RONALD E. COHEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Giovanna D'Agostino is as Italian as her name. So is her cooking. Mama D, as everyone calls her who has known her for six seconds, runs Sammy D's in the Dinkytown section of Minneapolis, recently rated by "Chef Institutional" magazine as one of the dozen best American restaurants.

Her simple philosophy of food: "an ordinary potato is gourmet cooking if it delights the palate."
"Mama D's Homestyle Italian Cookbook" (Golden Press) is chock-full of unusual ways to cook fairly standard Italian dishes. It is a menu rather than a recipe book, done in a breezy style that mirrors Mama D's garrulous, nonstop outlook on life.

The restaurant led to her cookbook. While she was helping her son in his sandwich shop near the University of Minnesota a few years ago, a student asked, "Why don't you make spaghetti?"
"Come back tomorrow," Mama D replied, and the next day spaghetti was on the menu.
Then another student asked, "Why don't you make lasagna?" and got the same answer. The menu mushroomed to include eggplant and veal parmigiana, fettucine, chicken cacciatore, and pretty soon they had to change the name from Sammy D's Sandwich Shop.

"I do all the cooking myself," she said in a telephone interview. "I use no additives, no preservatives, no junk."
"Love is still the main ingredient, in food and in life. I lead with my heart, and my favorite people are still the young college kids," said the round-faced, white-haired woman who looks like everyone's Italian grandmother.

Unlike most native Italians, her Calabrian mother wasn't much of a cook. After Mama D got married, she asked her husband how he liked her cooking.
"His words said good, but his

The exhibit, sponsored by the Edgecombe County Historical Society, will also include tables of original design made by Wright Horne of Tarboro, Horne, whose exhibit of handmade chairs drew a record crowd to the Pender Museum in January, will be present Sunday to show his work and answer questions.

The museum is located at 1000 St. Andrew St. and is open each Sunday from 2:30 till 5:00. The public is welcome and there is no admission charge.

Even Model May Try To Copy Another Face

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Even a beautiful model is not always content with her looks. In fact, she may try to look like somebody else.

"For years I was trying to look like Maude Adams," says beautiful Sunny Griffin, "and it didn't come off. So then I thought I'd like to look like Lauren Hutton. But Lauren said, 'Look, it is not going to work because I want to look like Karen Graham and Karen Graham wants to look like Maude Adams.' And that's whom I was trying to look like in the first place. Who does Evelyn (Kuhn) want to look like, we wondered. We decided, nobody."

"Nobody," says model agent Eileen Ford, with whom all the girls are registered, "because Evelyn has the prettiest white skin and violet eyes that look enormous because the whites are so white. She doesn't drink or smoke and always goes to bed early."

All the girls Sunny mentioned are top models who do television commercials as well as model for cosmetics companies. Sunny, a model for 13 years, was making the comparison to illustrate that models learn to make up by watching each other and that each person must find a look she likes by experimenting with her makeup until she is satisfied with her appearance.

It is a point Sunny makes when she is conducting beauty seminars for Avon, the cosmetics company that also has jewelry and apparel. She is its beauty editor, advising on fashion colors, and she makes television commercials and is also making a film for the company. She has been to 40 or 50 cities since she took the job a year ago and meets with team leaders and representatives. The company has more than 300,000 representatives in the United States.

"I've knocked on doors since I've been in training and I discovered that some people do slam doors. But most people are very nice. I went around with a representative who would introduce me and one woman froze for a minute, then ran into the house, grabbed her husband and brought a camera back so that she could take my picture."

At the seminars, Sunny removes all her makeup to illustrate how it all goes together, the model way. First she uses a moisturizer, then a foundation that exactly matches her skin color. She uses a lighter foundation around her eyes and on her cheek bones and spends a good deal of time telling the women how to use rouge.

"Most women do not know how to use rouge, but it can really give a flow to the face. You must use it on areas you want to recede. I put it just under my cheek bones," she advised.

As for her blue-gray eyes, she uses lavender eyeshadow at the inner corners and another shadow from the center of the lid out. "Lauren was using lavender shadow and I've been using it ever since," she said. She also likes to use creamy eyeshadow out of little tubes as an eyeliner. She puts it on with a little brush.

Sunny curls her eyelashes and powders them before applying mascara. The technique makes them appear thicker. At this point if her face looks at all greasy, shiny or sweaty — she doesn't want it to look shiny, but she also doesn't want it to look too powdery — she'll apply blush on cheeks, temples and chin, brushing it over her eyes, and this makes her face "look all together." She likes it to be one-tone, she said.

As for her nails, she keeps them from chipping, she says, by applying a two-coat base and three coats of polish with a clear polish on top. Then, she applies one coat every night and it will last two or three weeks without chipping.

In 1976 colors will be clean and primary with makeup designed to harmonize with reds, blues and white that will be used in fashion, she says.

"The new rich colors will go on sheer even though they may look heavy in the pot," she explained.

Sunny graduated from Hood College and attended Cornell for one semester to study speech and drama. She is married to network correspondent Richard Wagner and they have a 3-year-old daughter, Kelly.

SUNDAY SUPPER
Eggplant Casserole
Green Salad Bread Tray

Sweet Innocence
SWEET INNOCENCE
1/4 cup white, long-grained rice (not precooked)
4 cups whole milk
1/2 cup sugar, or to taste
2 tablespoons seedless raisins, soaked soft in water
1/4 teaspoon seeds of cardamom pods, crushed
2 teaspoons rose-water, optional

Wash the rice briefly. Soak it in 1/2 cup water for 30 minutes in a medium-size saucepan. Then boil in the same water until rice is tender and water completely evaporated. In a separate saucepan, heat the milk. Stir in the cooked rice. Simmer uncovered over very low heat for 1 1/2 hours. Stir occasionally, loosening the pudding from sides and bottom of the pan. Mash the rice with the stirring spoon. When the pudding is quite creamy, stir in the sugar. Continue stirring until it is dissolved and pudding is again creamy. Off heat, add all remaining ingredients. Serve hot or at room temperature in small individual bowls. Serves 4. (This dessert, much enjoyed at our house, comes from "Cooking of the Maharajas" by Shivaji Rao and Shalini Devi Holkar, published by Viking. — C.B.)

Place half the meat mixture in a greased loaf pan. Halve four hard-boiled eggs and arrange lengthwise down the center of the meat. Oil hands and cover eggs completely with the remaining meat.
Smooth meat with oiled hands. Bake one hour in preheated 375-degree oven.

Method Divised To Discourage Neighbor's Nipping

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a duplex apartment building. The lady who occupies the other apartment has access to mine. I gave her a key for security reasons because I work out of town.

She doesn't have a phone so I gave her permission to use mine. She does not abuse the privilege, but because she is in my apartment almost daily a problem has arisen.

I keep a bottle of whiskey in my kitchen cabinet for guests who drink. My neighbor nips a little, and during the last year my liquor supply has dwindled about two inches a week.

I have devised a method that should eliminate this problem. First, I make a pot of hot tea. To this I add a liberal amount of salt and add some lemon concentrate to lighten the color. Once in the bottle, the mixture resembles the original contents and surprisingly enough, it tastes like sour whiskey.

Do you consider my solution in bad taste? B.F.

DEAR B.F.: Not if you can get away with it.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I am nitpicking, but I just don't like to see an ex-serviceman make a fool of himself.

I refer to the gentleman who had been a high-ranking Army officer in World War II and insisted on wearing his uniform instead of a tuxedo to social functions.

I am sure there are many more like him who hate to give up the prestige they once had. On the other hand, I am glad to know that there are still men who are proud to have served their country.

However, it would be a kindness to let him know that unless he is on active duty, it is not improper to wear his uniform, it is against the law!

MIKE IN AURORA, ILL.

DEAR MIKE: Thanks for the info. I realize that for every regulation there's a reason, but I think that the ex-serviceman (or woman) who can still button his uniform from W.W. II should be allowed to wear it!

New Version Of Sicilian Eggplant Proves Popular

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Among the most popular recipes we have offered is one for Caponata that came from a good Italian home cook. Thus when we found another recipe for this antipasto in a small cookbook, published about a dozen years ago and compiled with the help of Alitalia Airlines personnel, we thought cooks who use our recipes might welcome a new version of this delicious Sicilian eggplant dish. Here is our adaptation of that recipe.

- 6-ounce can tomato paste
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- 1/4 cup pine nuts (pignolias) or 1 3/4-ounce package (1-3rd cup)
- 2 tablespoons drained capers
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper

In a 12-inch skillet (range-top or electric) heat 1/2 cup of the oil. Add the eggplant. Cook over medium heat, stirring often, until partly tender — 7 to 10 minutes. With a slotted spoon, remove eggplant.

Heat the remaining 1/4 cup oil in the skillet. Add onion and celery. Cook over medium heat, stirring often, until celery is tender-crisp — about 7 minutes. Add eggplant and the remaining ingredients. Heat to boiling, then simmer uncovered, stirring occasionally, until eggplant is completely tender but still holds its shape — about 20 minutes.

Store, covered, in the refrigerator where it may be held for up to 2 weeks. Before serving, bring to room temperature. Makes about 2 1/2 quarts.

Note: Caponata may be stored in the freezer for up to 1 month. To serve, thaw at room temperature and stir before serving.

- CAPONATA
- 3/4 cup olive oil
 - 2 medium eggplants (each about 1 pound) unpeeled and cubed (1/2 to 3/4-inch size) to make about 3 quarts
 - 2 medium onions, cut in thin strips to make about 1 1/2 cups
 - 3 ribs celery, diced into 1/4-inch pieces to make about 1 1/2 cups
 - 2 medium tomatoes, peeled and cubed (1/4-inch size) to make about 1 1/2 cups
 - 1 1/2 cups fairly thinly sliced pimiento-stuffed green olives
 - 1 cup water

Cure Needed, Not A Stop-Gap

If some of the thoughts expressed by Senator Edmund Muskie, responding to the State of the Union Message, represents the thinking of most voters, we've got trouble.

To deal with unemployment he would "create" at least 300,000 public service jobs and a public works program.

We'll give him high marks for having a heart in the right place; but as a problem-solver he offers a stop-gap measure, not a cure.

The United States needs employment in industry and business and agriculture. Their prosperity generates more governmental revenues as well as more jobs.

Trouble is, any tax-changing to encourage investments and expansion and productivity in the national economy are a no-no in eyes of those who want to make more government jobs.

Washington already has millions of people on its many payrolls; add them to state and municipal employees, and there's an awfully large percentage of the American population living off government jobs. We don't need more, we can't afford it. There's a limit as to how many people a handicapped private economy can support.

It would be more reasonable for government to help that goose that is laying our golden eggs.

By building reliance on federal job-making our problem-solvers are simultaneously deferring the kind of prosperity everybody wants.

People often forget unemployment reached its lowest marks at periods when we were involved in war or up to our necks in space shots... artificial stimulants to any economy, creating jobs that otherwise would not exist.

There's a lot to be said for calling a halt to tampering with the economy and letting it work its way to a natural level of normalcy.

Wallace Shows Continued Popularity

As the caucusing process continues in Mississippi it appears that Alabama Gov. George Wallace will have over half of the delegate votes.

In second place, but far behind Wallace, is a fellow southerner and former Georgia Governor, Jimmy Carter. Serpant Shriver, with heavy black support was running third.

The Mississippi results are an indication, that despite changing times, and despite Gov. Wallace's physical disability, he will still be highly popular in southern states.

Diversified Industry Mix

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Textile manufacturing is still king of the hill in North Carolina employment, but is gradually losing its dominance.

The state is shifting toward a more diverse, and stable, industrial mix. But because of the lead which textile manufacturing has in the state, it will continue to be the single most important employer for a lot of years to come.

In 1960, textiles employed 222,800 Tar Heels for a 43.7 per cent share of the manufacturing job market. By 1974, textiles had dropped to a 35.4 per cent share of total employment in the state, even though actual numbers of jobs in textiles increased to 281,200.

The nearest competitors for leadership are furniture where 79,900 are employed (10 per cent), and the apparel field where 81,800 workers make up 10.3 per cent of the state's total manufacturing employment.

More Jobs

Despite trends toward more white collar and service trades, manufacturing continues to be the state's single most important area of employment: 795,200 North Carolinians work at manufacturing jobs, from a total employment of 2.4 million.

Wholesale and retail trades make up the next largest group, with 376,100 employed, for a 15.6 per cent share of the total employment. Government is third, with 298,800 local, state, or federal governmental workers for a 12.4 per cent share of the market.

Other key employment categories are construction with 121,500 people; finance, insurance and real estate with 86,600; and services with 260,900 employed.

Agriculture continues to decline, with 118,200 people making up only 4.9 per cent of the total employment for the state.

Still, the most significant change in the state's industrial composition is the decline in textile employment, say the experts in the state's Department of Natural and Economic Resources.

Industry hunters are encouraged by a proportionate growth in industries such as electrical and other machinery, metal works, transportation equipment, rubber and plastics, chemicals, and printing.

Better Mix

The changes are creating diversification of the state's economy which not only results in economic stability, but also creates competition among industries for labor, ultimately meaning higher wages, say state officials.

Proof of need for further diversification of the industrial mix was the recent economic recession in which areas hardest hit by high unemployment were those dominated by single industries.

The diversification trend being pushed by industry hunters was illustrated recently by the announcement that Edward

A $394 Billion Question Four Seek 2 Offices

WASHINGTON—It's possible that one or two persons in this country are confused about President Ford's budget for 1977 so I will be happy to take questions.

"How much is $394 billion?"

"I'm sorry, I didn't understand the question."

"President Ford said the federal budget for next year would be $394 billion. How much is that in money?"

"I don't think you should think in terms of money. You should think of it in terms of services that your country will provide you in the future: better housing, health protection, employment opportunities, a stronger defense and a chance for your children to have a better life than you did. I would also like to point out to you that this budget provides for only a $43 billion deficit."

"How much is $43 billion in money?"

"I don't know how much it is in money, but it is $33 billion less than the deficit for 1976 which fiscally, as you know, was a bad year."

"Where is President Ford going to get the $394 billion?"

"He hopes to get it from you."

"I don't have $394 billion."

"I didn't mean you personally. I meant you as a taxpayer. If everyone pays his taxes and no one cheats, we will have $394 billion, minus, of course, the $43 billion which we'll have to borrow from the American people."

"I can't lend the government $43 billion. I would if I knew what it looked like."

"The government doesn't expect you to lend it $43 billion. Just lend it anything you can afford."

"After I pay my taxes, I won't have any money to loan the government."

"That's not true. The President has advocated a $10 billion tax but in addition to the one he has already given you, which comes to $28 billion. You can use some of that money to buy bonds which is a way of loaning the government money."

"How much is $28 billion?"

"I have no idea. I've never seen $28 billion. No one has ever seen $28 billion."

"Well, if no one has seen it how do we know it's there?"

"Because each family will share in the tax cut and you'll see your part of it."

"Okay, so I get my share of the $28 billion. What do I do next?"

"Well, it doesn't come out to $28 billion, because at the same time you get a tax cut you will also get a raise in Social Security which will be deducted from your paycheck."

"I knew the President wouldn't give me $28 billion. He was just playing with me 'because it was an election year.'"

"That's not true. Someday when you're old and gray you'll be glad the President took more money out of your paycheck."

"Ronald Reagan said he'd give me $90 billion."

"He did not. He said he would let you keep $90 billion that you now give the federal government for welfare programs that don't work. He feels you can spend it better than the bureaucrats in Washington."

"Has Ronald Reagan ever seen $90 billion?"

"I doubt it."

"Then how does he expect me to deal with it? I've got a very small house. I wouldn't know where to put it."

"It's obvious that you can't think in grand concepts about money."

"That's what my wife says. She says if I saw a billion dollars in the street I probably wouldn't even have the sense to pick it up."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, Robert C. Byrd, Henry M. Jackson and Rep. Morris K. Udall have something in common besides their desire to be the Democratic presidential nominee: all are up for re-election to Congress this year.

All have said they expect to seek re-election to their current seats should they fail to win the nomination. For some it may be more difficult than others.

Byrd, according to campaign aides, is even considering erecting split billboards in his home state of West Virginia — one side urging voters to return him to the Senate, the other urging them to send him to the White House.

And Bentsen spent several days last week traveling around his home state of Texas holding news conferences announcing his decision to seek re-election.

In both West Virginia and Texas, the presidential primary falls on the same day as the Senate primary (May 1 for Texas, May 11 for West Virginia).

INSIDE REPORT

Brezhnev's SALT Hunger

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although U.S. negotiators always seem the desperately anxious suitors, top Kremlinologists here believe Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev needs political help at home from a new arms limitation agreement far more than does President Ford.

The U.S. drive for agreement is based not only on defense budget pressures but also on Mr. Ford's quest for election-year accomplishment and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's desire to climax his detente diplomacy. But these factors, Kremlinologists believe, are dwarfed by Russian needs: economic crisis in the Soviet Union that may reduce present massive defense spending.

Soviet hunger for SALT (strategic arms limitation talks) puts an ironic cast on last week's talks in Moscow. Hard-liners in Congress and the Pentagon believe Dr. Kissinger arrived there with an official position that gave away too much and fear he went further in bargaining.

Brezhnev goes before the Communist party Congress Feb. 24 with the worst record of economic achievement since the early days of World War II, when German invaders ravaged the country. The five-year plan nearing its end is the first since the German invasion that has not met principal economic goals. The shortfall has been worst in grain production, forcing the Kremlin into the world grain market for unprecedented purchases from the capitalist West.

With the price of gold now $50 an ounce below the spectacular high of a year ago, the Soviet government is loath to raise money today by substantial sales from its hoard of gold.

That means insufficient feedgrains for promised fattening of beef cattle and other meat animals. Likewise, output of consumer goods is lagging far behind original schedules. Result: the long promised availability of consumer goods has once again proved illusory.

Thus, some Kremlinologists here are convinced the economic shortfall is about to trigger a major internal battle over the level of Soviet defense spending in the next five-year plan. Their conclusion: defense spending will be forced downward simply because financing at present levels will not be available, with money drying up because of foreign purchase

To the editor:

Bill Noblitt's column on January 14 is so filled with errors that it would take too much space to cite them all. His item, titled "An Exercise in Futility" cast all sorts of dark shadows on the Health Systems Agency legislation, primarily because it was "designed in Washington" and there is "controversy" and it's "unbelievably complex". The same could be said about mental health, public health, agricultural subsidies, etc. But Noblitt seems to be reflecting the frustrations of a state administration which has failed, in the East, to impose its will in an arena where local folk know more than they were assumed to know.

Whereas Noblitt reports the admission by state operatives that the state's real objection was not a board's size but the role of one citizen (Dr. Louis Smith, who could not be intimidated), still Noblitt lays the blame for our troubles on Smith.

The federal intent was for local authority and local decision-making. A Department of Human Resources memo of November 12 reveals the administration's desire to take authority away from locals, contrary to the federal law.

The Governor's handpicked man, Dr. Clem Lucas of Edenton, wrote HEW a letter of intent for agency funding, on behalf of the Governor's "new conveners" on November 26, about three weeks before that group ever met!

Dr. Smith has been criticized enough. If confusion reigns, state government can accept its share of responsibility for meddling in local affairs and creating confusion and ill will.

Pitt County farmers will get first hand information on what the substitute plan to succeed the agricultural adjustment Act will consist of Thursday night when J.E. Winslow, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Agriculture will address a meeting at the courthouse.

Winslow was called to Washington today to engage in discussion of the proposed bill by farm leaders throughout the country.

The meeting for Thursday night was called for farmers interested in forestry work with a discussion of a new farm plan as an added feature. With Winslow in Washington today to gather inside data on the new bill, the added attraction will probably take the spotlight from other matters.

SAVE IN HIS OWN COUNTRY

Why is it that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country and among his own people?

John Calvin once said that it was due to the natural slowness of men to believe great things of those with whom they have been familiar from childhood, and also from the jealousy which people often feel because of the distinction of their acquaintances.

The American poet, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, has expressed in a few lines one reason why at least some prophets are honored by those who know them best. He writes as follows:

Bonnet in hand, obsequious and discreet,

The butcher that served Shakespeare with his meat, Doubtless esteemed him little, as a man,

Who knew not how the market prices ran.

We tend to become indifferent to the value of things near at hand. The fields on the other side of the valley always look greener than ours.

Distortions In The Price Index

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Did the Consumer Price Index rise 9.1 per cent or just 7 per cent in 1975?

Although the difference is a great one, you'll find both figures being used, sometimes for political as well as economic reasons. Defenders of one figure sometimes angrily accuse the others of attempting to distort.

Here are the facts:

In 1974 the CPI closed at 147.7, meaning it was nearly 1 1/2 times the level of the base period, the year 1967. One year later it finished the year at 161.2. That's a 9.1 per cent increase.

But, if you measured the change in prices from December 1974 to December 1975 you'll get another answer. In 1975, the December index of 161.2 was just 7 points higher than the 154.2 of December 1974.

Distortions of this sort occur when you have a rising rate in one year and a falling rate in another, as indeed happened in 1974 and 1975, respectively.

If you average out all the monthly increases for 1975 you arrive at a 9.1 point increase, and that is the official figure that is now in the record books.

The situation might be illustrated with an unlikely example. Assume that in one year prices ascended, beginning with a rise of 1 per cent in January, 2 in February, and on to a final month reading of 12.

Add up the monthly figures. You'll find the total is 78, which you divide by 12, the number of months, to arrive at an average increase for the year of 6.5.

Now reverse the direction of the changes. Instead of a rising rate, as in 1974, assume a declining rate, as in 1975. Begin with a rate of 12 in January and work down to 1 in December. The average is, of course, the same.

But, if you measure the final monthly figures for each year — that is, measure the change from December to December — you find an entirely different figure.

In this extreme and unlikely example, one figure is 11, the other 6.5. In the real situation, as measured by the government, the figures are 9.1 and 7.

Which is the correct reading? Again, the official rate, the one that goes on the books, is 9.1 per cent. It provides the better comparison of prices that existed in each year, considering the year as a whole.

Many analysts, however, say the more significant rate is that for only the past 12 months. That, they say, provides the trend. It gives us a better indication of direction, a more up-to-date reading of current forces.

problem," said Bentsen press secretary Jack Devore. "It's been hard to get everything organized and to keep the campaigns separated."
A Federal Election Commission ruling requires candidates in such dual campaigns to set up separate finance committees and to maintain separate accounts.
"Sometimes, it's impossible to separate the two campaigns when he's physically in Texas campaigning," Devore conceded.
Bentsen has one Democratic opponent in his re-election bid, Texas A&M University economics professor Philip Gramm. As might be expected, Gramm has made the fact that Bentsen is campaigning for two offices at the same time a campaign issue.

More Ford Fumbling
Continuing failure of the White House to solve a special employment problem that is politically acute in Maine — that of former Gov. John Reed — now threatens the resignation of Harrison Richardson as chairman of the President Ford Committee in Maine.
Reed is being dropped as chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board in favor of Webster Todd, Jr., son of a longtime Republican power and present state chairman in New Jersey. Reed is widely regarded as competent, intelligent and industrious. What's more important politically, as the only prominent Maine Republican to hold a job in the Ford administration, he is a highly visible symbol to his party back home.
Hence, the bitterness of Richardson and other leading Maine Republicans, including state party chairman John Linnell. Richardson and Linnell have both warned Mr. Ford's national campaign chairman, Howard Callaway, of dire repercussions if no job is found for Reed.
This reflects the random impact of campaign politics at the Ford White House. While campaign considerations are clear in some nominations, the President seems oblivious of political reality in handling appointments from some battleground states — such as Maine, where he faces a battle in precinct caucuses beginning Feb. 1.

A footnote: Adding insult to injury was the decision two weeks ago by Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz to hire Maynard Dolloff, former Maine agriculture commissioner (and defeated gubernatorial opponent of Reed in 1962) as a top consultant. Dolloff is one of the state's leading Democrats.

Record Lottery Prize Awarded
MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — A 26-year-old hairstylist has won the largest prize ever offered in any state lottery — $1,776 a week for life.
Eric C. Leek of North Arlington was selected Tuesday at the final drawing of the "1776 Instant Lottery." If he lives to be 76, he will collect more than $4.5 million. If he doesn't, his heirs are guaranteed $1,847,040.
When the award was announced, Leek and his fiancée, bookkeeper Mathilde Caldas, ran up on stage. "Praise the Lord that this is all possible, and I hope I can help a lot of people with this money," Leek exclaimed.
Leek said he plans to fulfill a lifelong dream and open a youth center in his hometown. He also said he wants to make his honeymoon journey a trip around the world.

Byrd thus far has no primary opposition in his re-election bid, although the filing deadline for West Virginia is not until Feb. 7.
"We don't anticipate there will be any serious opposition," said Allen Montgomery, Byrd's presidential campaign coordinator. "And after all, Bob Byrd is a pretty popular candidate in West Virginia."
Neither Jackson nor Udall has to file for re-election until after the July Democratic primaries, although both have indicated they plan to seek re-election should they fail to win the presidential nomination.
"Right now Udall is running for the presidency and the presidency alone," said Udall aide Bob Neuman. "He thinks he'll win the nomination, and that will make the question moot." Udall is from Arizona.
A Jackson aide, however, said the Washington senator has given thought to his re-election campaign.
Washington has a state law prohibiting candidates from seeking two offices simultaneously, but this won't be a problem for Jackson, since the filing deadline for his Senate seat is July 30 and for the primary Sept. 21.
However, should Jackson win the Democratic nomination, he would be forced to resign his Senate seat — a provision that would not apply to Bentsen, Udall or Byrd.

Downtown Fire In Lincolnton

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — Five persons were injured and four businesses were gutted as fire swept through a block of downtown Lincolnton late Tuesday.

A cafe and a law office in a building adjacent to those engulfed in flames sustained smoke and water damage, firemen said.

There was no official estimate of damage. However, a spokesman for the Lincoln County sheriff's department said the figure would exceed $1 million.

An employe of a clothing store destroyed in the blaze estimated his company's loss at nearly $500,000.

The injured, including four firemen and a bystander, were treated for smoke inhalation and minor burns and released from the Lincoln County hospital, officials said.

Most were injured when an explosion occurred on the second floor of one of the buildings, which "blew them back down the stairwell," a fireman said.

Ray Small, chief of the Lincolnton Fire Department, said the blaze was believed to have originated in the Music Den, located across the street from the Lincoln County Courthouse. The fire, reported about 8:45 p.m., quickly spread to a furniture and appliance store, a loan company and a clothing store, all located in two adjoining buildings.

"By the time we came here everything was on fire," Small said.

The buildings also contained several professional offices and the local chapter of the Better Business Bureau.

Volunteer fire departments from surrounding Lincoln, Catawba and Gaston counties aided local firemen.

The fire was brought under control shortly after midnight and firemen began probing the ruins for clues to the origin.

One fireman speculated that a gas leak might have been responsible but the cause had not been officially determined.

Firemen also recovered a metal petty cash from the clothing store.

"It's only petty cash," said a man who identified himself as an employe of the store. "We wanted to get it out tonight because there might be people messing around here tomorrow. It's not much but when you've lost a half million dollars you take what you can get."

Some card combinations hold a built-in trap which is irresistible to even the most expert defender. West, a well-known player on the international bridge circuit, fell victim on this hand from the annual Bridge Festival in Marbella, Spain.

Competitive action by East and West propelled North-South into a highly speculative contract of four hearts. However, neither player can really be faulted. South was a little under strength when he bid hearts freely at the two level, and North, who felt he was too strong for a mere overcall, might have been content with a raise to only three hearts. Fortunately for North-South, declarer was Walter Avarelli of Italy, a many-time world champion.

West led the ace of clubs and continued on the right track when he shifted to a low spade, the only switch to cause declarer any problem. East's ten forced the ace, and declarer drew trumps in three rounds, ending in his hand. Now he led a low diamond.

To defeat the hand, West must rise with the ace of diamonds and lead a spade to his partner's king. East can then exit safely with a diamond or club, and the defenders will still have to come to another spade trick.

However, West thought that he might get two diamond tricks if he played low. He was lured into this error by the fact that dummy held the king-jack and so declarer might misguess—had the jack been a low card, West would almost certainly not have gone wrong. He got no second chance.

Since West was marked with the ace of diamonds for his opening bid, Avarelli called for dummy's king. Then he cashed the king of clubs, ruffed a club in his hand and exited with a diamond. The defenders were helpless.

Either defender could win the diamond but East would be on lead with the king of spades next. With only diamonds left in his hand, he would be forced to concede a ruff-and-sluff, allowing declarer to get rid of dummy's losing spade.

Downtown Fire In Lincolnton

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — Five persons were injured and four businesses were gutted as fire swept through a block of downtown Lincolnton late Tuesday.

A cafe and a law office in a building adjacent to those engulfed in flames sustained smoke and water damage, firemen said.

There was no official estimate of damage. However, a spokesman for the Lincoln County sheriff's department said the figure would exceed $1 million.

An employe of a clothing store destroyed in the blaze estimated his company's loss at nearly $500,000.

The injured, including four firemen and a bystander, were treated for smoke inhalation and minor burns and released from the Lincoln County hospital, officials said.

Most were injured when an explosion occurred on the second floor of one of the buildings, which "blew them back down the stairwell," a fireman said.

Ray Small, chief of the Lincolnton Fire Department, said the blaze was believed to have originated in the Music Den, located across the street from the Lincoln County Courthouse. The fire, reported about 8:45 p.m., quickly spread to a furniture and appliance store, a loan company and a clothing store, all located in two adjoining buildings.

"By the time we came here everything was on fire," Small said.

The buildings also contained several professional offices and the local chapter of the Better Business Bureau.

Volunteer fire departments from surrounding Lincoln, Catawba and Gaston counties aided local firemen.

The fire was brought under control shortly after midnight and firemen began probing the ruins for clues to the origin.

One fireman speculated that a gas leak might have been responsible but the cause had not been officially determined.

Firemen also recovered a metal petty cash from the clothing store.

"It's only petty cash," said a man who identified himself as an employe of the store. "We wanted to get it out tonight because there might be people messing around here tomorrow. It's not much but when you've lost a half million dollars you take what you can get."

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

Some card combinations hold a built-in trap which is irresistible to even the most expert defender. West, a well-known player on the international bridge circuit, fell victim on this hand from the annual Bridge Festival in Marbella, Spain.

Competitive action by East and West propelled North-South into a highly speculative contract of four hearts. However, neither player can really be faulted. South was a little under strength when he bid hearts freely at the two level, and North, who felt he was too strong for a mere overall, might have been content with a raise to only three hearts. Fortunately for North-South, declarer was Walter Avarelli of Italy, a many-time world champion.

West led the ace of clubs and continued on the right track when he shifted to a low spade, the only switch to cause declarer any problem. East's ten forced the ace, and declarer drew trumps in three rounds, ending in his hand. Now he led a low diamond.

To defeat the hand, West must rise with the ace of diamonds and lead a spade to his partner's king. East can then exit safely with a diamond or club, and the defenders will still have to come to another spade trick.

However, West thought that he might get two diamond tricks if he played low. He was lured into this error by the fact that dummy held the king-jack and so declarer might misguess—had the jack been a low card, West would almost certainly not have gone wrong. He got no second chance.

Since West was marked with the ace of diamonds for his opening bid, Avarelli called for dummy's king. Then he cashed the king of clubs, ruffed a club in his hand and exited with a diamond. The defenders were helpless.

Either defender could win the diamond but East would be on lead with the king of spades next. With only diamonds left in his hand, he would be forced to concede a ruff-and-sluff, allowing declarer to get rid of dummy's losing spade.

Science Teaching Resource Co-Ops Is Announced By ECU

The Eastern North Carolina Science Teaching Resource Cooperative was formed this week, when representatives of 24 eastern N.C. high schools met with delegates from East Carolina University.

Purpose of the Cooperative is to advance and improve the teaching of sciences in high schools within its nine-county area. Its funding is derived from a $20,000 National Science Foundation grant as well as membership fees from member schools.

According to Dr. J. William Byrd of the ECU Department of Physics, who was elected to chair the Cooperative this year, the Cooperative will enhance school science programs through in-service teacher training loan of audio-visual aids and teaching equipment, and other resources designed to extend and improve instruction in the sciences.

The following teacher representatives were elected to the Cooperative's executive board:

Dr. Floyd Mattheis of the ECU Department of Science Education was also elected to the board, along with Dr. Byrd. According to Dr. Byrd, equipment purchased by the Cooperative for use in its member schools will be housed at ECU. Schools not represented at the Cooperative's organizational meeting may join the Cooperative by sending requests to "Eastern N.C. Science Teaching Resource Cooperative," in care of the ECU Department of Physics.

The Cooperative's area covers the following eastern N.C. counties: Wilson, Nash, Edgecombe, Martin, Washington, Beaufort, Wayne, Pitt and Craven.

Names of area representatives at the organizational meeting include:

Training Mission For Search, Rescue Team

A search and rescue team, composed of Greenville's Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club members and local Boy Scout Troop 452, conducted a training mission in the swamp area near Belvoir on Sunday.

The team was faced with the hypothetical situation involving the aftermath of a tornado which struck the northern area of the county, leaving three persons, dead, eight hospitalized and two hunters missing.

The "search" began for the two "missing" hunters at 3 p.m. with three BARC members searching the area from the air in a light aircraft and the remaining 18 radio club members and eight scouts combing the area in two-way radio-equipped vehicles. The ground team remained in contact with the aircraft by using amateur radio frequencies. Within an hour, a BARC spokesman reported, the hunters were spotted by the aircraft and the mobile units were directed to the "victims." The BARC members and Scouts concluded the search and rescue effort by bringing the "victims" out of the swamp and administering first aid. The local training was one of many sessions conducted across the state in an annual S.E.T. or Simulated Emergency Test sponsored by the American Radio Relay League. The test is designed to simulate realistic emergency conditions in order to enable amateur radio operators to gain experience in handling emergency communications. The local spokesman pointed out that at the same time the search and rescue was taking place near here, messages containing information on wind damage, casualties, emergency aid and other important matters were being relayed from Greenville to the Section Emergency Coordinator in Fayetteville by way of amateur radio.

Prosecutor Is Blind But Can Fill Job

By SHARON RUTENBERG CHICAGO (UPI) — Nick Pomaro isn't fooled by appearances.

Blind since the first grade, Pomaro, 38, has learned to develop his remaining senses to judge people.

Judging character is part of his job as an assistant state's attorney prosecuting criminal cases in Chicago's northwest suburbs.

"You compensate for what you don't have," he said. "I gain more from inflections from voices, what people say and the way people say it."

"I think I'm a pretty good judge of character ... picking out genuine people from the phonies. I may have a little better insight because I'm blind, because I don't have the visual things to distract me from making that determination."

Pomaro said he can do anything any other lawyer can do, "but maybe my way of doing it is a little different."

Like any other lawyer, Pomaro prepares notes to use in court — only his are in braille. "That's one method of adapting," he said.

Before handling a jury trial case, Pomaro learns the layout of the court room and tries to build up a rapport with the jurors so he will later feel confident standing before them.

"During jury selection — that's when I try to get them to know me and then I get to know them," he said. "I try to talk to them as people. Then I don't think they think of me as 'that blind person.' They think of me as a lawyer."

Pomaro's wife, Jean, helps out at their Arlington Heights home by reading him cases and law books. They have six children, ranging from 6 to 16.

The main problem Pomaro said he has encountered in life is "the reluctance of people to give you a chance in whatever way it may be."

"I had to fight to become a lawyer, I had to fight to get my job, I had to fight to get into court. Every step along the way, you have to prove yourself."

"What choice do I have? You keep going or you give up and fail. And I don't want to fail, so I just keep going."

"People, in their first encounter with me, they think of me as a blind person. After a while I like to think they forget about part of it, and think of me as a man — that's what I strive for in my personal relationships with people and with the jury."

Sees Savings For Industry

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Richard Schmidt, vice president and general manager of Ecodyne's industrial waste treatment division, told an editorial roundtable that recent developments in water pollution control technology could significantly cut the amount industry must spend on the environment.

Schmidt pointed to a Northeastern paper mill that saved a total of $50,000 on pollution control costs and more than $24,000 yearly on energy and other operating costs by incorporating recent innovations into its wastewater treatment system.

The impact of such capital and operating saving on the industrial economy should not be minimized, Schmidt said, quoting Council of Environmental Quality figures which indicate some industries will spend 10 to 20 per cent of their total plant and equipment investment on pollution controls to meet existing federal laws.

Wheels Mark The Country

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — America has turned into a nation on wheels around the house as well as on the road.

According to economists at Goodyear, the rubber industry will build seven million tires next year for yard tractors, cultivators, spreaders, wheel barrows, snow throwers, dune buggies, leafers, go-carts, trailers and other "miscellaneous" vehicles.

Because they aren't in constant use, many of the tires found on vehicles around the home never need replacing, Goodyear points out. So most of these sales are made to vehicle manufacturers instead of individuals.

Reagan's N.C. Blitz To Be Followed Up April 6

By MICHAEL J. HALL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, (AP) — Ronald Reagan used his 22-hour state blitz Tuesday and today to speak personally to more than 1,000 Republican voters and presumably to reach many more through wide television exposure.

He was to leave Charlotte today for his third visit to a different state in two days, this time to the cold of New Hampshire after arriving Tuesday from the warmth of Florida.

In his public appearances in Charlotte, Asheville, and Gastonia, Reagan dwelled heavily on his controversial $90 billion tax transfer proposal in speeches and at receptions for supporters.

He also attacked détente with the Soviet Union in his state appearances, and told a Charlotte reception he is a strong supporter of capital punishment.

But he did not respond to specific criticisms of the tax plan, which has been attacked by aides for his Republican opponent, President Ford, including Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Members of the former Carolina governor's staff often readily answered questions from the reporters covering the visit, or helped with equipment.

But there were almost no opportunities for quizzing Reagan about the plan's specifics.

and would probably also be used later in the campaign.

And while reporters did get in a chance to ask a very few questions, a Reagan aide told one local newsman "he's here to talk to the people and not to the press."

That comes in marked contrast to Reagan's two previous state visits since declaring for the GOP presidential nomination and saying he'll oppose Ford in the March 23 presidential primary.

With Reagan trailing Ford in some national polls, winning the lion's share of the state's 54 GOP convention delegates would be an undoubted shot in the arm for his campaign.

In his three appearances here Reagan has concentrated on the state's larger cities, where he must make a very respectable showing among Republicans if rural and more conservative counties are to put him over the top in the primary.

Another state visit is scheduled for Raleigh April 6. In contrast Ford has made only one appearance in the state since the Regan announcement last Nov.

During all three stops Tuesday Reagan's crowds were large and enthusiastic — exceeding the numbers organizers of the different events had said where expected — but it was impossible to get a Reagan from that on his primary chances.

In Gastonia, a well-heeled crowd of 360 persons who paid $25-a-plate to attend heard Reagan introduced by state campaign chairman U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms before Reagan launched into his attack on federal bureaucracies and détente.

In Asheville, more than 500 persons paid $5 each for a luncheon speeches, and invitation-only receptions prior to the lunch and later in Charlotte also drew well.

Reagan has been hoping to win big in early primaries, especially those in Florida and North Carolina, and this state's primary will be the second head-to-head clash between the two.

But Reagan needs to carry the Republican votes of heavy populated areas like Asheville, and the Charlotte-Gastonia area which have often been garnered by what observers have perceived as the more moderate GOP candidate in Republican primaries.

Reagan is hoping to show strong conservative credentials by early victories in the south, and the North Carolina primary comes only two weeks after Florida's, accounting for the big-city stress he has put on his North Carolina appearances so far.

In his speeches Reagan both defended his program transfer program and hit out at the Ford-Kissinger policy of détente with the Soviet Union.

Détente as it is currently being practiced is a "one-sided way through which the Soviet Union continues to forge ahead in nuclear and conventional weapons," he said to ringing applause.

On his tax proposal, Reagan

cited the example of his eight years as governor of California, claiming credit for reducing the state's welfare rolls and budget.

He said turning programs like medicare, welfare, food stamps, aid to education, and housing subsidized would not only save taxpayers money but would give them more control over those programs.

"For 40 years those in Washington have been talking about a reduction of federal power and de-centralization of government. Isn't it time to get on with it?" he asked rhetorically.

Suspended

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Donald H. Segretti, political trickster in the 1972 Nixon re-election campaign, has been suspended from the practice of law in California for two years.

The state Supreme Court order Tuesday called for a five-year suspension but was modified to place Segretti on probation for the final three years.

He claims the program would actually cut overall taxes by eliminating ungainly bureaucracies and give local states and communities control over a number of welfare and education programs now run by the federal government.

But he confined all comment on the proposal to stock speeches in Asheville and Gastonia which aides said had previously been given in Florida

Firemen Get More False Alarms Than Real Fires

By H.J. HELLER
United Press International
In subtle ways the clang of the alarm in a firehouse gears the firemen for the emergency ahead. Their metabolism quickens and the adrenalin flows more freely.
Reflexes, honed to a fine edge by years of training and experience, prepare them for the tasks ahead. They are "up" for any emergency.
The engines, sirens howling, hurtle through the streets often against the flow of traffic and in minutes arrive in the area of the "conflagration" indicated by the alarm.
Then the big let down — no fire and nobody at the scene to provide information.

This scenario is enacted hundreds of thousands of times throughout the country each year and the cost to taxpayers is in the millions of dollars.
In New York City alone, there were more than 200,000 malicious fire alarms (MFAs) in 1975. This figure is more than 50 per cent of all alarms turned in last year.
Victor A. Collymore, assistant fire commissioner in New York, said children are the prime offenders.
Collymore said that from a general discussion with youngsters he and others have concluded that young people turn in MFAs as "an outgrowth of boredom, a challenging of the system, to prove through some sort of machismo, that testing the establishment is the manly thing to do."

The highest rate of false alarms, he said "occur in the underprivileged areas of the city populated mainly by Hispanics and blacks."
In Chicago, another city where more than half the alarms turned in are false, the fire department has tried various methods of stopping them.
One unsuccessful attempt was the use of telephone box alarms instead of pull alarms. Fire officials thought voice contact with a dispatcher would reduce the incidence of MFAs but found that alarms from those boxes were 98 per cent false.

A current pilot program significantly reducing the number of false alarms in Chicago, is turning the alarm box toward the street instead of the sidewalk. It will then be in view of motorists, patrolling police, and residents of the opposite side of the street, thus increasing the visibility level of the perpetrator.
On the West Coast, San Francisco has an exceptionally high rate of false alarms.

During fiscal year 1974-75 the city had 15,069 box alarms of which 10,805 were false for a better than 70 per cent ratio.
Lt. James Muhoney of that city's fire department blamed the high incidence on what called "the complete lack of concern and respect for property. It runs through society. It is evidenced in all types of crime, such as purse snatchings where not only is the purse taken but the victim is beaten up."
St. Louis also suffered a greater than 50 per cent ratio of MFAs blamed for the most part on kids and drunks. A spokesman said enforcement of the law in these cases had a low priority because the police had better things to do.

The picture nationwide is not altogether bleak.
In Baltimore, for instance, there was a slight increase in MFAs but the ratio to total alarms was down.
Capt. John Frazier, head of a two-man fire department team that devotes its entire time investigating false alarms, said he attributed the drop to successful prosecutions and strict attention to alarms.
"Our calls are all tape recorded, and you get very few repeat offenders, because we investigate them all. If we can't get them into court, we're very successful in stopping them," he said.

The city experimented briefly last year with a phone-booth type of alarm box that would lock the person making the call inside. The city solicitor, however, ruled the booths unconstitutional.
Pittsburgh also showed a decrease in false fire alarms, the first since 1965. Fire Chief Thomas J. Kennelly said the problem is still grave because for every genuine alarm the fire department received last year they got one false alarm.
He attributed the decline to pushing of preventive programs especially in grade school.
"High school students have already reached the callous age where they're not impressed by firemen or the dangers which can result from false alarms," he said.
Kennelly also said federal summer employment for teenagers gave the youths "something better to do other than improvise amusing incidents like pulling alarms."
Washington, D.C. reported only a 34 per cent ratio of MFAs. Battalion Chief Joseph R. Jeffrey said the use of voice alarm boxes has cut the false alarm rate "by 60-70 per cent in high incidence areas."

Jeffrey said that "with the voice alarm boxes, they have to talk into them and many people hesitate to do it. It has a psychological effect."
In Dallas, where false alarms run only at about a 10 per cent rate, a fire department spokesman said officials try to catch offenders by running an immediate phone check when a caller reports a fire. The caller is asked the address and number of the phone he is using.
While the caller is still on the line, a call is placed to the number. If the line is busy, fire officials judge it as genuine. If it rings a false alarm is suspected.
In Philadelphia, Fire Capt. Charles Lewis of the fire marshal's office, said about 17 per cent of all alarms were false, a surprisingly low number for the city ranked fourth in population for the nation.
Capt. Lewis noted that there was a decrease of 627 in the number of false alarms in 1975 compared to 1974. He attributed this to the distribution of pamphlets in the communities where the alarms were pulled, a program begun in 1973.
"In this way possibly we might be handing a brochure to the one who pulled the box," he said.
In Atlanta, fire officials said false alarms were down about 0.7 per cent attributable to rearrangement and removal of some street fireboxes.
"We have put the boxes in better lighted positions so that anybody tampering with them would be more conspicuous," said Communications Chief M.H. Sullivan.
In Boston, Fire Department spokesman Capt. John Collins, said false alarms ran about 29 per cent. Collins feels the best way to deal with the problem is not to discuss it so much.
"Back in 1972 we had a concentrated drive calling attention to the problem," he said. "We had public announcements over the radio, donated advertising space, and had quite a concerted drive to cut down on false alarms."
"That year we had our greatest amount of false alarms — almost 34 percent. In 1973 we did just the opposite and showed a decrease. Frankly we haven't done much about it lately," he said.
Who turns in false alarms and why do they do it?
Accurate assessments are difficult because of the low rate of arrests. But there are certain common threads in opinions given by authorities.

As previously mentioned, Collymore in New York attributes the bulk of the false alarms to youngsters doing it out of boredom and to demonstrate their "machismo."
In St. Louis, the spokesman said "most of the false alarms are turned in by kids who like to see the fire engines come. Adults who turn in false alarms are either drunk or have something wrong with them."
Capt. Collins of Boston said it was done "probably for kicks. The thing goes pretty deep. I could see it once in a while — someone does it for kicks. But it keeps happening and that's pretty deep. Maybe a psychiatrist could tell."
There are many reasons, according to Capt. Lewis of Philadelphia.
"They may be pranksters or kids with mental disturbances or someone who wants to see action, who wants to see fire engines come. Another reason is some people just want to be caught," he said.
Lewis said in many cases the false alarm puller becomes the arsonist.
"We've found in our experience in a large number of cases when we grab someone for setting a fire, a lot of times we had them before for pulling a false alarm. They have graduated from misdemeanor to felony," he said.
Capt. Frazier of Baltimore advanced the theory that a lot of false alarms are the results of neighborhood feuds.
"A lot of people call them in because they want to get even with somebody. Most of the people involved are people who know each other. It's a form of harassment when the fire truck pulls up in front of someone's house."
Frazier said most of those calls in the false alarms were young people between 12 and 16, although the department had false alarms last year from persons aged four to 83.
In Pittsburgh, Chief Kennelly said "everybody is doing it. A lot of irresponsible older people who are usually eccentric in some manner or other, drunks. Teen-agers are probably our greatest contributors but we even get false alarms from small children who don't even go to school yet."
Kennelly perhaps holds a record of sorts for false fire alarm perpetrators. He reported a call was received from a preschooler who pulled the alarm by standing on a tricycle seat with a preschool friend holding the bike steady.
Perhaps the confusion was best summed up by communications Chief Sullivan in Atlanta who said "I was a fire investigator for 17 years and I was never able to get a satisfactory answer as to why they did it."

Incidence Of Lice, Scabies Said Growing

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A child hangs his overcoat on a hook next to a friend's coat at school. A few weeks later, his mother finds tiny white eggs on his hair. He has hair lice.
The Center for Disease Control here says lice — and scabies, a skin disease also caused by parasites — are more common in the United States now than at any time since World War II.
Neither is considered a public health problem, said Dr. Dennis Juranek, assistant chief of the CDC's parasitic disease branch. "They are just nuisances."
And where both once carried a social stigma and generally were associated with wartime conditions, poor hygiene and persons on a low socioeconomic level, Juranek said, today's rising incidence cuts across economic lines.
Persons in all social and economic levels are affected, he said.
Reports from 280 dermatologists indicated cases of both on the rise, Juranek said. For scabies alone, 249 doctors noted increasing numbers of patients with the parasite, a CDC report showed.
Nevertheless, he said, the CDC is making no great effort to determine why head lice and scabies are occurring across economic strata — "It doesn't make any difference as far as we can determine."
"The last big incidence of scabies was after World War II. We don't know why it — or head lice — are on the rise. There are a lot of theories — some people think they occur in 20-year cycles."
Lice do not jump from one child's head to another, the scientist said. They are very slow-moving, he said. They may be transmitted from one friend's coat to another, or by borrowing a friend's jacket.
"It's all a matter of degree of contact, such as children wrestling or playing with each other," he said.
The louse sucks its host's blood, then moves on to another victim. Scabies, a skin disease characterized by small pimples or blisters that itch, is caused by a parasite so minute it can be seen only with a microscope.
Scabies, he said, is transmitted by close physical contact — most often by sleeping in bed with an infested person.
The CDC has issued a pamphlet for state health officials, recommending that schools systematically check to determine which children have lice and treat them. Some schools have begun such programs.
"Blacks are rarely infested with head lice," Juranek said.

Millions Of Elms Lost

THIS IS ONE of the 140 Dutch Elms in London's Hyde Park scheduled to be chopped down and the roots dug up. (UPI Photo)

By GREGORY JENSEN LONDON (UPI) — Experts on two continents are totting up the effects of a disastrous year in which elm trees died by the million in "a terrible tree tragedy."

A United Press International survey of the ravages of Dutch Elm Disease revealed an ecological disaster, marching unstopably across North America and Europe.

The dollars-and-cents cost is enormous. But in addition, beauty is a major sufferer. Parks and avenues have been denuded of stately elms, and there may soon be no elms on Elm streets anywhere.

"This is a terrible tree tragedy," said Baroness Birk of England, hardest hit country of all. Southern England has lost 6.5 million elms, 1.9 million killed in the hot dry summer of 1975 alone.

In the United States — where one expert said 40 per cent of all elms from the Great Plains to the Atlantic have been wiped out already — the disease now reaches as far west as Idaho, Colorado and Texas.

An Italian official said "90 out of 100 elms are affected" in parts of Italy. Of 20,000 elms which helped beautify Paris 15,000 are dead already.

A Canadian expert, asked how the disease was being held back there, replied: "It is not being held at all."

"The disease is ravaging the Netherlands, Belgium and Germany and affecting most of the few elms in Austria and Scandinavia.

Dutch elm disease was first identified and studied in Holland some 50 years ago. An earlier epidemic died down after a quarter century. But in the late 1960s a new, more deadly strain appeared, though no one questioned in the UPI survey could say where it began. This new virulent form is doing the damage now.

The disease has two agents of death. A quarter-inch-long beetle — Latin name Scolytus Scolytus — burrows under an elm's bark, implanting a poisonous fungus as it goes. To fight the fungus, the elm produces an antibody.

This is fatal. The gummy antibody clogs a tree's sap passages, starving it of water and nutrient, and the elm commits suicide by self-strangulation. A tree which took a century to grow can choke itself to death in days.

Death strikes on a vast scale. A U.S. official said 400,000 American elms had died annually over the past few years, at a yearly cost of $100 million. He put the disease's cost so far in the United States alone at $1 billion.

"Right here outside our windows," said a forestry officer in Florence, Italy, "practically every elm tree is more or less badly affected — young trees and century-old ones."

Avenues of elms which lined Dutch canals, French country roads, Belgian river banks or park promenades in Italy and Germany—these have long since gone.

Paris' famed leafy Place des Voges will be virtually stripped bare, like the promenade of the Palais Royal. London's incomparably green parks show aching gaps, with perhaps 1,500 elms left of the 10,000 which grew two years ago.

"We must face up to the fact," said Baroness Birk, "that there may be no mature elms in any of the London Royal parks after next year."

Films are condemned to death," said Paris parks chief Maurice le Moan, "unless there is a miracle." A miracle seems unlikely. Scientists everywhere have tried everything to find a cure or a preventative, the survey showed. Nothing works.

The obvious first line of attack is to kill the poisonous fungus or to kill the beetle which spreads it. But how?

Spraying enough insecticide to protect millions of huge trees would kill too many things besides bark beetles. Fungicide is too costly to get inside a tree and seldom works.

"Chemical warfare is very expensive," a French expert said, "and in the end, not effective."

Desperate residents of Basildon, England, tried to fight nature with nature. They clubbed together and imported 5,000 special wasps which can kill a beetle under the bark.

But British experts said a million beetles can infest one single tree. Wasps would become a plague on their own long before they could dent the total beetle population.

U.S. forestry officials pin some hope on sex. A spokesman said a new chemical duplicates the female bark beetle's sex lure, and could be used to entice unwary males to destruction. But the chemical is still experimental and not cleared for use, the spokesman said.

Italian, French and Dutch officials, like some experts in Britain, Canada and elsewhere, are trying instead to find disease-resistant elm varieties.

Prof. Vladimir Vinogradov, claiming Russia's elm epidemic has come and gone, said Soviet scientists already have done this, "and efforts are now being concentrated on planting this immune tree."

But this cannot save existing trees.

In England especially, where elms have grown for 4,000 years, the rainless summer of 1975 only accelerated a disaster. Dead elms already felled have piled up "a timber mountain nobody can get rid of," a timber industry report said. There appears to be worse to come.

"By 1980," said Dr. Clive Brasier of the British Forestry Commission, "we must suppose that half the elms in the south (of England) will be dead."

That means 12 million dead trees.

Benefits From Selenium Trace

NEW YORK (UPI) — The trace element selenium found in some drinking waters may have anticarcinogenic properties, according to a report soon to be published.

"Latest work which has been performed in a number of laboratories does indeed show that reasonably physiological levels of selenium will reduce the incidence and severity of experimental tumors," Dr. Walter Mertz told the International Water Quality Symposium, whose proceedings will be published early in 1976.

Dr. Mertz is a special lecturer at George Washington School of Medicine and chairman of the Nutrition Institute, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground today amid more of the profit taking that dominated Tuesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 2 1/2 points in the early going, and losers took a 2-1 lead over gainers among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The pullback came despite the government's report that its index of leading economic indicators rose 4 per cent in December. The index is designed to point up developing economic trends.

Analysts said the urge to take profits was bound to be strong after a rise in prices as steep as the market has seen over the last several weeks.

Today's early prices included Polaroid, up 1/2 at 35; UAL, unchanged at 26; SS. Kresge, down 3/4 at 31, and El Paso Co., off 1/4 at 13.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average lost 3.70, to 957.81.

Losers slightly outnumbered gainers in the over-all tally of NYSE-listed issues, and the exchange's composite index dropped .29 to 52.55. Big Board volume came to 32.07 million shares.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .10 at 94.95.

Confirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today confirmed President Ford's nomination of Anne Armstrong to be the first woman U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

Mrs. Armstrong, former counselor to Presidents Nixon and Ford for consumer affairs, succeeds Elliot L. Richardson who has returned to the United States to be secretary of commerce.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It had to be a well-planned operation," said Police Sgt. Alan Varner after two men in business suits robbed a securities firm and fled with nearly $1.5 million in negotiable bonds.

An FBI spokesman in Washington said the robbery was one of the largest of its kind.

Varner said the men entered the Century City offices of the MuniCorp. of California Tuesday and said they were waiting to speak with someone about buying some bonds.

But a short time later they accosted an unarmed messenger bringing two bags of securities to the firm from a nearby bank, the policeman said. He said they apparently were aware of the messenger's schedule.

"The total time was about 10 or 15 minutes," said Varner. "The messenger was coming back, on foot, and they were waiting for him. As soon as he returned, it was over. They pushed him into a room and came out with the bags."

MuniCorp's president, Kenneth Rogers, said both men were armed with handguns.

"The men told the secretaries to shut up, then took the deliveryman into my office, told him to sit down, then took his bags from him," Rogers said. "They had their guns in his ribs all the time."

Varner said the two then made their getaway with the aid of an accomplice waiting nearby in a 1962-model van with out-of-state plates.

He said police were investigating the possibility that the two men were known to employees of the firm.

MuniCorp deals in municipal bonds, debt obligations issued by cities and other governmental agencies. Such securities are frequently issued in "bearer" form, meaning that whoever has physical possession can cash them.

However, both police and Rogers said the men will have difficulty selling the bonds.

Cmdr. Pete Hagan of the Los Angeles Police Department said any legitimate securities dealer would require identification and proof of ownership.

Rogers said, "I don't see where they're going to get a market because all the bonds are serially numbered and those numbers will be distributed. I don't see how they can move these bonds anywhere."

Most of the bonds taken were municipal, with the interest paid by clipping coupons, officials said. But they said the coupons have the same serial numbers as the bonds, making it a simple step to trace anyone trying to cash them.

The Tar River, which stood at 2.8 feet at 8 a.m. yesterday rose rapidly. The utilities weather station recorded the river level at 5.9 feet at midnight. At 8 a.m. today, the river had risen another 1.3

feet, reaching the 7.2 feet mark.

The National Weather Service forecast office in Raleigh said this morning that no forecast has been developed for the Tar, but that the river is not expected to reach flood stage and go over its banks.

Temperatures yesterday reached a high of 71 degrees while the low for the period was 48 degrees. At 8 a.m. today the temperature was 42 degrees.

Heavy Damage In Traffic Wreck

An estimated $2,550 property damage resulted from a 1:20 p.m. collision Monday at the intersection of Ninth and Cotanche Streets.

Police reported cars driven by Louise McAlister Oshea of 1123A Washington St. and Nancy Beryl Tunnell of 110B Baker St. collided, causing an estimated $2,300 damage to the Oshea car and $250 damage to the Tunnell auto.

No charges were made following investigation of the collision.

Petition...

initiated by his company.

Worthington said that he noticed at one point during the past weekend that there was a longer line at the petition table than at the cash register.

He said that he thinks shoppers have mixed emotions about the Blue Law, with some feeling that businesses should not be open on Sunday and others thinking they should.

The manager added that he suspected most people resent being told they can not purchase a particular item on Sunday and would rather have the choice of shopping if they want to.

A copy of the ordinance has been provided at Eckerd's for shoppers who want to take a look at the law, he said, but he finds that generally "most people don't understand" the ordinance.

The petition was also placed at Nichols Discount City, according to manager Ty Potter, who reported Tuesday that probably 900 people signed the form since Monday.

Potter said that from conversations he has had with customers, he feels the bulk of them regard the Blue Law as "ridiculous."

Clark's manager Jim Pruett noted the petition was placed at his firm late Friday and since that time an estimated 2,000 signatures have accumulated.

Pruett said that he finds that most people are in favor of abolishing the Blue Law and he estimated that the number of shoppers who are against the ordinance runs as high as 90 per cent.

He indicated that a copy of the ordinance is also available at Clark's.

Dudley said that in addition to Eckerd's, Clark's, Nichols, petitions were also placed at four or five other locations in town.

The City Council agreed at the November meeting to hold a workshop session to discuss revision of the ordinance and then to schedule a public hearing on the matter.

At the January Council session, it was decided that due to the hiring of a new city manager and his lack of familiarity with the ordinance, the hearing would be delayed until the March meeting.

The ordinance, which regulates business activity in Greenville on Sunday, was adopted here in 1966.

Two members of the East Carolina University library science faculty are in Chicago this week at the midwinter meeting of the American Library Association.

Earlier Time

Greenville citizens are reminded of tonight's meeting of the Greenville and Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commissions, set for 7:30 p.m. rather than the regular 8 p.m. hour.

The meeting will begin earlier than usual in order for the Army Corps of Engineers to present the Flood Hazard Information Report, scheduled as a regular agenda item for the joint board.

High Water...

recorded Monday a total of 3.29 inches of rain have fallen since noon Monday, when the rain began.

City officials said Greene Mill Run rose sharply yesterday afternoon, sending water across 14th Street near the Charles Street intersection, and across Deck Street. Water rose too, in the underpass on Dickinson Avenue, but the high water had receded by 9 p.m. or 10 o'clock, according to Mayo Allen, director of the Public Works Department.

Highway Commission employees said water rose up over the edges of some roads in the county, but the only damage reported was a wash-out on the Sharp Point Road—rural paved road 1250—northwest of Falkland.

The wash-out occurred when a pipe under the road became clogged and water eroded the roadway.

The Tar River, which stood at 2.8 feet at 8 a.m. yesterday rose rapidly. The utilities weather station recorded the river level at 5.9 feet at midnight. At 8 a.m. today, the river had risen another 1.3

Bucs Get No Reward At St. Peter's

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — East Carolina University's Pirates rode the yo-yo again last night, as they watched St. Peter's gain an 83-67 victory.

The win was a milestone for the Monarchs, giving the school its 500th basketball victory. For the Pirates, however, it was their 11th defeat of the season against only seven victories.

Typical of the yo-yo type games played by the Pirates, it saw a horrible first half, followed by a fairly decent second half. But by then, the damage had already been done. St. Peter's used some hot shooting to pull away to an early 15-point lead, and lead by as much as 19 later in the contest.

Overall, East Carolina hit 47.3 per cent from the floor, after a 65.4 percentage in the second half. St. Peter's hit 45.9 per cent for the game, but took a larger number of shots.

There were two reasons for this. First, they outrebounded the Bucs, 42-36, with big Bob Fazio leading the way with 17 grabs. Earl Garner led East Carolina with eight, while Ty Edwards, coming off a week's suspension, pulled off six.

The second reason was loss of possessions. The Bucs had 17 turnovers as compared to 11 for St. Peter's. The Monarchs also stole the ball 13 times, while ECU picked off the ball only twice.

East Carolina came back out and knocked four off that margin right away, 45-30. They cut it to 13 at 53-40 with 12:16 left in the game. But the closest they could come was with 5:26 to play, when it fell to 68-56.

At that point, the Pirates missed on four straight opportunities to score again — and the chance, in theory, to cut the lead to four. St. Peter's gained control of the game again after that, moving out to a 72-56 lead and they held on from there.

"It was like all year," Coach Dave Patton said. "If we had played the first half like we played the second, we could have beaten them. They threw up some ungodly shots, too. And this is typical of the way this year has gone. I don't think the officials helped either. They're not calling hand-checking up here like they do in the South, and our guards had hands all over them all night."

Then, he added, "we're still beating ourselves." Patton seemed pleased with the play of his two middle men, Larry Hunt, who scored 11 of his 13 points in the second half, and Edwards, who had one of his best games, despite scoring only four points. Garner led the East Carolina scoring with 16 points, while Al Edwards had 14 to go with Hunt's 13.

Fazio paced St. Peter's with 23, while Ken Slappy and Richardson each had 14 and Bennie Allen had 11. East Carolina returns to action on Saturday, traveling to meet the Davidson Wildcats in a Southern Conference game, their final league encounter on the road during regular season.

Cain Hints At Early Withdrawal From Southern By East Carolina

By WOODY PEELE, Reflector Sports Editor. Athletic Director Bill Cain hinted that East Carolina's days in the Southern Conference are limited—perhaps very limited—at the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

Cain spoke to the weekly meeting of the club, discussing the East Carolina athletic program and its future. "I would like to say that we are getting out of the conference tomorrow," Cain said. "But I can't. We currently are studying to see what direction we want the program to take. And I think I know what the answer to that will be."

The university currently has 20 intercollegiate sports, 12 for men and eight for women. Cain said that Title IX, the controversial "equal rights" bill that affects athletics, is a problem for East Carolina in some ways. "We have to prorate money to the women's sports in relation to the men's now. In effect, HEW is dictating to college programs what they can do. It's causing quite a problems with some of the budgets."

Cain feels that East Carolina needs to have a guideline on where its athletic program is going. "We have to build up our money sports. We have some sources of income, but the felling is that football has to be upgraded so that the others can also be built up by the additional income football will bring. We are working on a schedule where we will be proud of, one that will give us the money we need."

Blue Devils Dump Davidson

By The Associated Press. "Catching Maryland after their two straight losses makes the assignment that much tougher," says North Carolina State basketball coach Norm Sloan.

"Particularly since they whipped us so soundly (87-69) at our place. Their defeats to Clemson and North Carolina will have them smarting and fuming by the time we get up there. "I feel that we've improved quite a bit since we last played them," two weeks ago. "But they're such a fine club that we're going to need outstanding performances offensively and defensively to have a chance. We'll be the underdog, no question about that, but if we play with poise and relaxation, we'll be in the game."

The Atlantic Coast Conference game tonight will be regionally televised, beginning at 9 o'clock. Maryland is 13-3 and ranked No. 7 nationally. N.C. State is 13-2 and No. 8.

The Maryland Terrapins will start sophomore Lawrence Boston at Center for freshman Larry Gibson, who strained a tendon in his right knee in the 95-93 overtime loss to North Carolina last Sunday. The 6-10 Gibson is Maryland's leading rebounder. Boston is 6-8.

The big game for the N.C. State Wolfpack is Kenny Carr, the ACC's leading scorer with a 29.8 average. Only Duke of the seven ACC teams is idle tonight. The Duke Blue Devils whipped Davidson of the Southern Conference 94-79 at home Tuesday night. Tate Armstrong had 24 points as Duke won its 10th game against seven defeats.

Wake Forest, which won its first 10 but now has lost four straight and five of its last six, is home to fourth-ranked North Carolina, the ACC leader. The Tar Heels, 13-2 in all games and 5-1 in the conference, crushed the Wake Forest Deacons 99-74 two weeks ago. Phil Ford scored 30 points and center Mitch Kupchak grabbed 19 rebounds for North Carolina.

The Clemson Tigers, 13-4, are home to state rival Furman, 4-11. Ray Miller of Furman leads the Southern Conference in scoring with a 21-point average. Virginia, 11-5, which won 69-62 at Clemson last Saturday, is at West Virginia tonight.

"I feel that we've improved quite a bit since we last played them," two weeks ago. "But they're such a fine club that we're going to need outstanding performances offensively and defensively to have a chance. We'll be the underdog, no question about that, but if we play with poise and relaxation, we'll be in the game."

The Atlantic Coast Conference game tonight will be regionally televised, beginning at 9 o'clock. Maryland is 13-3 and ranked No. 7 nationally. N.C. State is 13-2 and No. 8.

The Maryland Terrapins will start sophomore Lawrence Boston at Center for freshman Larry Gibson, who strained a tendon in his right knee in the 95-93 overtime loss to North Carolina last Sunday. The 6-10 Gibson is Maryland's leading rebounder. Boston is 6-8.

The big game for the N.C. State Wolfpack is Kenny Carr, the ACC's leading scorer with a 29.8 average. Only Duke of the seven ACC teams is idle tonight. The Duke Blue Devils whipped Davidson of the Southern Conference 94-79 at home Tuesday night. Tate Armstrong had 24 points as Duke won its 10th game against seven defeats.

Wake Forest, which won its first 10 but now has lost four straight and five of its last six, is home to fourth-ranked North Carolina, the ACC leader. The Tar Heels, 13-2 in all games and 5-1 in the conference, crushed the Wake Forest Deacons 99-74 two weeks ago. Phil Ford scored 30 points and center Mitch Kupchak grabbed 19 rebounds for North Carolina.

The Clemson Tigers, 13-4, are home to state rival Furman, 4-11. Ray Miller of Furman leads the Southern Conference in scoring with a 21-point average. Virginia, 11-5, which won 69-62 at Clemson last Saturday, is at West Virginia tonight.

Review Conflicts In Testimony On Chilean Funds

By DAVID C. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Jus-

Jack Ford Is Starting Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack Ford begins work today with a firm specializing in youth and convention travel.

The President's 23-year-old son will work out of Washington as director of youth marketing and special programs for a New York-based travel firm.

Press Secretary Sheila Widenfeld said young Ford will be involved in developing programs for student travel and will coordinate production of a student guidebook to the United States.

Young Ford is a graduate of Utah State University, where he studied forestry.

His salary? That's "between Jack and his employer."

Department lawyers are scrutinizing the testimony of ITT Chairman Harold Geneen and others about the firm's role in Chile because of apparent conflicts between that testimony and evidence taken by the Senate intelligence committee.

Geneen testified under oath before the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations in 1973 that ITT did not supply money to block the election of Marxist Salvador Allende. But last December, the Senate intelligence committee staff reported that, with CIA knowledge and advice, ITT passed $350,000 to Allende's main opponent in Chile's 1970 election.

The Senate intelligence committee staff report said its findings were based on the record of the multinationals subcommittee plus "new information," including CIA documents.

Meantime, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation has begun a separate review of ITT efforts to keep Allende from becoming Chile's president. The federally financed corporation paid $95 million in insurance to ITT after Chile's government confiscated ITT property.

The multinationals panel alerted the Justice Department to its record of testimony when its hearings ended, because chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, thought someone had lied to the subcommittee.

One informed source said Tuesday that as recently as last month Justice Department lawyers were still interviewing persons to determine "whether there was any reason to believe the testimony of Geneen and all the other witnesses was not accurate." The interviews roughly coincided with release of the new information by the Senate intelligence committee staff.

In sworn testimony in April 1973 before the multinationals panel, Geneen denied ITT contributed "money to any person or to any agency of any government to block the election of Dr. Allende."

Last December, the in-

Convicted In Shooting Death

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Charles R. Hodges, 42, of Dunn, N.C., was convicted Tuesday of involuntary manslaughter in the shotgun death of Mrs. Barbara Jean Messer.

She was shot to death Oct. 22, 1975, in the garage of her sister's rural St. Clair County home.

A jury here deliberated for three hours, after a two day trial.

The prosecution contended that Hodges shot Mrs. Messer in an argument about car keys. Hodges testified that the weapon discharged accidentally in a struggle with Mrs. Messer.

telligence committee, which is also headed by Church, reported, "During the period prior to the September (1970 Chilean) election, ITT representatives met frequently with CIA representatives both in Chile and in the United States and CIA advised ITT as to ways in which it might safely channel funds both to the Alessandri campaign and to the National Party. CIA was kept informed of the extent and the mechanism of the funding. Eventually at least $350,000 was passed by ITT to this campaign."

Jorge Alessandri was Allende's chief opponent. The National Party was a conservative group opposed to Allende.

Jerome Levinson, counsel for the multinationals panel, said Tuesday the Justice Department asked for and was given access to panel files. "They asked for everything and we gave them everything," he said.

A spokesman for OPIC said

Tuesday lawyers for the federally financed organization are re-examining the $95 million insurance settlement arising from the 1971 expropriation of ITT holdings in Chile.

The OPIC spokesman called the review a "standard procedure" initiated whenever new information is disclosed.

The Senate confirmed by more than a 2 to 1 margin the nomination of George Bush to succeed William E. Colby as head of the CIA.

Former CIA director Richard M. Helms told a Senate committee that sometimes members of Congress did not want to know about the agency's "dirty tricks" for fear of political embarrassment.

The House intelligence committee approved a recommendation that each intelligence agency make public its over-all spending figure.

Bush was confirmed by a vote of 64 to 27. Several Democrats argued that his political past as Republican National Committee chairman should disqualify him from so sensitive a post as CIA director.

Bush is expected to be sworn in later this week. Until then, deputy CIA director Vernon Walters will be acting head of the agency, a CIA spokesman said. Colby "picked up his pencils and went home" as soon as the Senate vote became official, the spokesman added.

Helms, under investigation by the Justice Department for possible perjury in connection with congressional testimony on Chile, told the Senate Government Operations Committee that "on occasion (members of Congress) didn't want to know all that much about (a covert operation) because it could be embarrassing to them politically."

The House panel's proposal to reveal lump sum spending figures for intelligence agencies was approved by a 9 to 4 vote. The Ford administration has rejected past calls for disclosure of intelligence budgets, saying that would aid rival intelligence services.

A draft of the House panel's final report says the U.S. spends $10 billion a year on intelligence.

Voted 'No' On Confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Both senators from North Carolina, Republican Jesse Helms and Democrat Robert Morgan, voted Tuesday against approval of the nomination of George Bush for director of central intelligence.

However, the Senate approved the nomination, 64-27.

The chain stitch single-thread sewing machine was invented by James Edward Allen Gibbs of Mill Point, Va.

How Tar Heel Senators And Congressmen Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes between Jan. 19, when the Second Session of the 94th Congress began, and Jan. 21. There were no record votes in the Senate during that period.
REFUGEE AID Adopted, 235 for and 143 against, an amendment greatly reducing proposed federal payments to help local school districts absorb Indo-Chinese refugee pupils. About 43,500 such students, aged five through 17, are enrolled in an estimated 1,400 districts nationwide.

 The amendment was attached to HR 7897, later passed and sent to conference with the Senate. HR 7897 had originally authorized about $60 million to refugee-impacted districts in fiscal 1976 and 1977. The amendment scuttled a much higher per-pupil aid figure favored by a majority of the Education and Labor Committee.

 Rep. Albert Que (R-Minn.), the sponsor, estimated the total cost of his amendment at about $20 million. He said advocates of the higher figure had overestimated the impact of the refugee students because "... in the typical situation a classroom has had the addition of perhaps one refugee child."

One opponent, Rep. Carl Perkins (D-Ky.), said the committee version averaged out to a per-refugee expenditure that was far less than the national per-pupil average expenditure of about $1,400. He said: "Special education problems, bilingual problems, special counseling problems... add tremendous burdens to the cost of educating these children."
 Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain, (D-2), David Henderson, (D-3), Stephen Neal

(D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), W. G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "yea."
 Rep. Charles Rose (D-7) voted "nay."
 Rep. Ike Andrews (D-4) did not vote.
COAL MINING Adopted, 370 for and 37 against, an amendment to prohibit coal mining in the National Park System, National Wild and Scenic Rivers System and all other federal conservation areas where mining is not already prohibited. The measure would broaden existing prohibitions against the leasing of federal coal reserves in most national park and monument lands. It was attached to the 1975 Federal Coal Leasing Amendments Act (HR 6712) and later passed (see below) and sent to conference with the Senate.

 Rep. Ken Hechler (D-W. Va.), the sponsor, said there is no foreseeable threat to such lands, but that the measure is needed "because pressures could build up in the future for the leasing for coal mining in these areas..."
 One opponent, Rep. Joe Skubitz (R-Kan.), said he did not oppose the objective of the amendment. But he expressed concern that it duplicated similar prohibitions being developed elsewhere in the House. He said: "... It ill behooves this body to take this position when the Subcommittee on National Parks is handling this legislation."

 Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."
COAL MINING Passed, 344 for and 51 against, the 1975 Federal Coal Leasing Amendments Act (HR 6712), designed to diminish dependence on foreign energy sources by increasing production of federally-owned coal reserves. The bill was sent to conference with the Senate.
 Federal coal reserves, located in the West, constitute an estimated 50 per cent of the nation's unmined coal. Private firms, including many large oil and mining companies, hold leases to mine the coal. This bill in large part reflects congressional and Administration concern that lease-holders in search of higher prices are holding back production at a time of increasing domestic demand for coal. It amends the 1920 and 1947 mineral leasing acts.

 Among its many provisions, the bill would terminate leases which have gone ten years without producing commercial quantities of coal, limit the acreage a single corporate entity could control, increase the federal and state shares of revenue from coal sales, require maximum recovery of coal within a given tract, and set tougher environmental standards.
 Rep. Andrew Young (D-Ga.) said the bill would counter a practice whereby oil and mining companies and other holders of federal leases have for speculative reasons "sat on large supplies of coal in a period when the consuming public is told that we have an energy shortage."
 One opponent, Rep. James Quillen (R-Tenn.), said the "true intent" of the bill was to provide a vehicle for gaining passage of strip mining legislation that President Ford successfully vetoed last year. Quillen added that some provisions of the bill "would mean higher costs and a loss of some coal production, which is precisely what we cannot tolerate in our national coal leasing policy."
 Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Ski Tracks For Tourists Listed

FREIBURG, West Germany (UPI) — The Fremdenverkehrs Verband Schwarzwald (Black Forest Touring Office) has come up with a catalogue listing 132 tracks for long-distance ski-running enthusiasts in 52 towns and villages of the scenic Black Forest region in South Germany.
 The prospectus, among others, lists the tracks' lengths, the grade of difficulty, and hotels located near the various tracks.

Taxes Soar By 100 Per Cent

NEW YORK (UPI) — State and local taxes per resident have soared more than 100 per cent in every state but Utah in the 10-year period from 1964. The Utah rise barely missed inclusion; it was 99 per cent. The state with the greatest percentage jump was Virginia, up to $510 from $174 for an increase of 193 per cent.

Success Hasn't Seen Change In Jerry's Outlook

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Success hasn't changed Jerry Clower, a former fertilizer salesman who has ridden a crest of laughter to become one of America's best-loved humorists.

He owns the same home, drives a pickup truck to some personal appearances and eats crackets he finds in his motel rooms. Just five years ago, he was selling fertilizer in Mississippi. Now he's a member of the Grand Ole Opry, been named country comedian of the year by three publications and been called "The Will Rogers of the New South."

"I've been successful because I haven't changed," he said before an appearance on the Grand Ole Opry. "I still eat baked coon with good folks."

"The greatest compliment I've ever been paid was when some reporter asked my neighbor if I've changed and he said, 'Well, he's got more pictures hangin' on the wall.'"

"One thing I have changed is my title at the First Baptist Church. That's a beautiful change."

Simplicity and sincerity have made him successful, he said. "I keep my stories simple. My pet peeve is taking something simple and making it complicated. We've got a lot of people workin' hard at that.

"And sincerity makes a difference. I sincerely want to tell my stories and that's half the battle." At just the slightest suggestion, he repeats his stories for interviewers.

He's proud that his stories are for the whole family.

"I was told that I'd have to be vulgar for my first album to sell. But I've sold more albums than all those vulgar types. I'm one of the few standup humorists who can entertain a family."

Clower, 49, does the same show everywhere.

"Maybe you've been someplace shakin' hands with someone when he spots somebody a little more important across the room and leaves to go to him. Well, I'm not that type storyteller. I put on the same show anywhere."

He's not searching for new stories, but gets them from real happenings.

"I'm not really looking for material, but things just happen as long as I'm with people. The funniest stories I tell really happened, although I embellish them."

Joining the Grand Ole Opry was one of the biggest moments of his life, he said.

"There's nothing I praise the Lord more for than my induction into the Opry," he said. "A 'chillburnin' runs up and down my back everytime I go on the show. The adrenalin gets flowing and I feel like I could jump over a nestory building."

Old Windmill Still Serving

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — Visitors to the Nottinghamshire village of North Leventon can see an ancient windmill that still grinds out flour, thanks to the work of the villagers in preserving the ancient monument.

Half of a $2,100 loan from local authorities and the gift of another $2,100 helped them to repair the mill after it was struck by lightning. The sails alone cost about $1,890 to replace. Visitors are welcome at any time and can always buy a bag of flour to help in preserving the monument to the past.

Canaries Please Senior Citizens

VIENNA (AP) — Christmas was made especially joyful for many inhabitants of senior citizens' homes in Vienna who received small but lively gifts from the Vienna Society for the Breeding of Canaries.

Realizing that many old people are lonely and want very much to have a pet despite confined surroundings, the society donated a great number of the little warblers as a special holiday remembrance.

Doctor Advises Steps Averting Aortic Rupture

CHICAGO (AP) — Survival should be the rule rather than the exception when the aortic artery wall weakens and threatens to burst, Dr. Constantine E. Anagnostopoulos, University of Chicago heart surgeon, believes.

Rupture of the aorta is the most common cause of death in such cases, he says. But early and correct diagnosis and treatment can sometimes prevent death.

Dr. Anagnostopoulos has written a book, "Acute Aortic Dissections," reviewing the literature on the subject, the records of 36 patients with the condition whom he has followed during the past seven years and the experience of surgeons with 549 cases.

Of 969 patients who received no medical or surgical treatment for the condition, 90 percent died within a year.

Barber Shop Changed By Long Hair

By THOMAS L. MCGANN
CHICAGO (UPI) — If you ask Harold Hoegh what happened to his other barber chair, he'll tell you: "I sold it to a hippie."

The truth is, he traded it in on a coles.

Hoegh has been a barber since 1947 and a horticultural merchandiser for the last 10 years. The sign on his shop in a Northside Chicago neighborhood used to say "Harold's Barber Shop." Now it reads in big bold letters "Tropical Plants."

Hoegh went into barbering after World War II and for 15 years he had a going trade with another barber working for him.

"Why, on a Saturday, you couldn't get into this place," he said. "In those days, getting your hair cut every two weeks was a tradition. A guy just didn't go around without a haircut."

But then "along came the Beatles," he said. "From then on the barber business went just one way — out."

"Guys that used to come in every two-three weeks started coming in every two, three months."

Hoegh is quick to say he does not blame the Beatles for the decline of the haircut. He just points out that long hair became popular at the same time they did.

But so did house plants. And like many old time barber shops, Harold's shop had a display of potted plants in the window.

"I had some rubber trees in the window, and a beautiful, deep red coles," he said. "Oh, how people loved that coles."

"Plants were always my hobby, and customers often asked for cuttings from that coles. One day, a little old lady came in off the street and asked me for a piece of my coles. You know, I was a little upset. I thought if this keeps up, the whole doggone coles is going to go. But I gave her a cutting. I broke off a piece."

Then Hoegh recognized the Green Revolution was under way. As the little old lady went down the street with a piece of the coles, it dawned on him haircuts were not the only thing he could sell.

The next time someone asked for a cutting from his coles plant, he sold a coles instead.

It wasn't long before the name of the shop changed to "Harold's Barber Shop and Flower Store."

The plants began to proliferate in the small shop. Within a few years, Hoegh was renting the empty shop next door for storage space.

One day a bearded young man really did come in and ask Harold if he wanted to sell his second, and by now, unused barber chair.

"I not only sold it to him, I helped him pull it up and carry it out," he said. "Matter of fact, I needed the space for my plants."

Five years ago the name of the shop became simply "Tropical Plants."

But below the plant sign, the red and blue barber pole spins on. And Hoegh is still the old-time neighborhood barber — even if his shop does resemble a jungle glade, dripping with stands of schefflera plants, ferns, piggy-backs, philodendron, goldfish plants, rubber trees and mother-in-law tongues.

He has a small greenhouse back of his home these days to keep up with the plant demand and buys some plants from wholesalers as well. But he said Harold's is going to remain a one-man haircutting and plant establishment.

"I could have expanded the plant business eight, 10 years ago," he said. "But I would have to hire people to help me. And who needs that headache?"

"I wouldn't be able to close the doors at night and forget about it. I don't want to be a plant tycoon."

"The plant thing is a fad, just a fad. The plant thing comes and goes every 10 or 20 years."

But with Harold Hoegh it's more than a fad. Most people are in the plant business to make money. Not Hoegh.

"I'm attached to the plants," he said. "Lot's of times I hate to see them go."

Fire Fears Multiply In Tokyo Malls

By NAOAKI USUI
TOKYO (AP) — Despite sophisticated warning systems, authorities fear tens of thousands of people would panic and many could die in smoke and darkness if a major fire started in one of the sprawling underground malls in Japan.

This country has developed 64 underground malls in major cities in the last 17 years in what was dubbed "the most effective way to use limited land with an overcrowded population." In Tokyo and Osaka alone, 20 "cities beneath cities" cover more than 76.4 acres.

"But once a fire starts, we will have to face a tremendous loss of human lives," warned Fire Commander Takeshi Ikari of the Metropolitan Fire Department's inspection division. He is in charge of fire protection in Tokyo's 10 underground shopping centers.

"I say this because human effort and concern about such a once-in-a-lifetime disaster have not been improved as our fire fighting technology has," Ikari added in an interview. "And it is this human factor that counts when a fire occurs."

The Yaesu Mall under the Tokyo Central Railway Station is one of the world's largest. It spreads over 11 acres and handles up to 1.1 million daily visitors, or at least 40,000 people at a time during the morning and evening rush hours.

Like many other underground centers, it is closely connected to subways and other train services, an attraction for busy commuters who want to do some quick shopping on their way home.

All of its 450 shops — as varied as posh kimono stores, Western fast food stands, a bathhouse and even a government unemployment office — are equipped with water sprinklers, hydrants, fire resistant shutters, heat and smoke sensors and other devices.

These devices are linked to an antidisaster center, where officials can broadcast warnings to evacuate under instructions of shop clerks. Clerks are urged by fire authorities to undergo monthly lectures and training on safety, Ikari said.

The shops operate under strict safety precautions. None is allowed to use open fire. All have to have emergency aisles reserved for evacuation, and personnel must admonish persons who smoke in prohibited areas. But Ikari asked what might happen if a cigarette discarded carelessly started a blaze.

"Once a fire starts, a virtual blackout follows," he said. "And most of the shoppers are ignorant not only in how to cope with the fire but also about the geography of the mall. They would start running around and mobbing the nearest exit."

Then comes the problem of smoke and gas inhalation, Ikari continued. Although much construction is of fire resistant materials, huge bulks of merchandise would easily attract flames and produce deadly gases.

"The fire could spread into the neighboring stations and paralyze all traffic, a calamity to the entire city," Ikari said. "Only when we could stop a fire soon enough, could we seal the station off with fire resistant shutters."

"We have been extremely lucky that we have had only 16 actual fires throughout the country in the underground malls in the last 17 years," he said, and only one person was injured.

Technology and equipment to fight underground fires have been improved and all centers now are equipped with underground water hydrants, automatic fire and smoke sensors, and pavement marked to guide persons to exits, he said.

The Osaka Fire Department has purchased two $40,000 electrically powered vehicles that can travel down a 30-degree slope, sense and remove obstacles, save stranded people and then climb up to safety. Tokyo officials are training special squads of 260 firemen to move into burning underground areas with heavy equipment to save people, Ikari said.

"But the deeper we go into underground, the more dangerous it becomes," he said. "From an economic viewpoint it may be wise to profit from small land by making such malls, but from a firefighter viewpoint, it's like spitting into heaven. But of course, it's a moral question and not that of a fireman."

Bring Suit Against Election Bd. Ban

RALEIGH (AP)—A suit challenging the Wake County Election Board's refusal to register a 17-year-old to vote is to be filed in Superior Court by the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union.
Tuesday, the board upheld a county registrar who refused to register John F. Pearce of Raleigh. He is 17 now but will be 18 before the general election in November. Pearce's attorney, Deborah G. Mailman, said she has 10 days to file the appeal.
The state constitution sets the voting age at 18 but state law allows those who are 17 at the time of a state primary to vote if they will be 18 before the general election. The state Board of Elections ruled on Dec. 10 that the early registration and voting principle does not apply to the presidential primary.

Atty. Gen. Rufus L. Edmisten issued an opinion last week that the law would apply just as much to the presidential primary if a person is 17 at the time of the presidential primary and will be 18 before the general election. Tuesday, Edmisten said the law may violate the constitutional requirement that a voter be 18 years old. "The primary issue is whether the constitution means what it says," he said.
On Monday Edmisten refused a request by the state elections board that he advise the panel on whether the law violates the state constitution. Edmisten said he refused because his policy is to let the courts decide constitutional questions.

Socialite Told To Pay Alimony

MIAMI (AP)—Socialite Dorothy White Wynne has been ordered to pay $800-a-month alimony to her former husband, Joseph J. Wynne, who she said married her for her money.
She is 84, he is 78.
Mrs. White called the alimony award unfair and said she would appeal.
She accused Wynne in a court deposition of being "cold as a crocodile." He insisted on separate bedrooms, she said, and "in seven years of married life I never even got a friendly pat from him."

Mexico Pays Dearly In Battling Its Inflation

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY, Mexico (AP)—The Mexican government appears to have trimmed the growth of inflation, but by paying dearly for it with a recession, high unemployment and fears by private business that the country is going further to the left.

Estimates that inflation grew at a rate of 16.3 per cent in 1975, compared to 24 per cent in the year before that. The 1975 inflation rate in the United States was 7 per cent.

President Luis Echeverria's administration achieved the partial success in the fight against inflation principally by raising taxes in fiscal reform measures approved in late 1974.

The Echeverria government raised the cost of gasoline — premium went from 66 cents a gallon to 96 cents — invoked a 15 per cent restaurant and bar tax, a 10 per cent luxury tax, a new car tax that ranged from 1 to 30 per cent and other tariffs. The average price for a gallon of premium gasoline in the United States is 64 cents.

Private banks also were required to keep up to 50 per cent of the deposits with the central bank, the Bank of Mexico. That left little money for banks to loan to businesses for expansion and investment, and little to loan to individuals for cars, television sets and other popular consumer items.

The theory of limiting the money supply and thereby cutting demand in order to reduce inflation was only a qualified success, however.

The gross domestic product, the measurement of the nation's production of goods services, grew only an estimated 3.5 to 4.5 per cent last year, compared to the golden era of up to 7 per cent plus during the last six years.

Mexico, with a 3.6 per cent birth rate, among the highest in the world, has thousands of new workers thrown into the job market every day. With fewer new factories opening, many workers are walking the streets looking for any kind of work.

The government keeps no unemployment figures, but the head of the country's central labor union claims that the jobless rate in this country of about 60 million people is running about 25 per cent. The current unemployment rate in the United States is 8.3 per cent.

The attitude of fear and distrust by private enterprise for the Mexican government is the result of the soak-the-rich fiscal reform that hit the middle and upper classes hardest and of an increasing tend of the government to take over private businesses.
