Guatemalan Quake Death Toll At Least 8,000

By J. PAUL WYATT

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (UPI)—Aftershocks rumbling through this quake-devastated Central American nation leveled two villages west of Guatemala City, diplomatic sources said Saturday. The death toll rose to at least 8,000.

In the capital, still digging out from Wednesday's initial earthquake, looters roamed freely through the rubble, stealing clothing, electrical appliances and furniture.

"This is worse than a war," said Carlos Lemos, a taxi driver in the capital, Central America's largest city.

Foreign diplomatic sources, citing information compiled in flights over quake-stricken outlying areas, said the death toll had reached at least 8,000 with 12,000 others critically injured.

"It will take at least eight days to find all the bodies," said government spokesman Carlos Llamas. He said firemen from Guatemala's Central American neighbors were aiding in the recovery efforts.

A falling beam crushed the chest of a Mormon missionary, the only American known injured. The sources said he was flown of out of the country Friday on a military plane.

The U.S. Embassy sent a representative to Antigua, resort home of many Americans, but the road was blocked by rubble and it was not known if he reached the town.

About 10 miles west of the city, the villages of Mexico and San Lucas—left intact by Wednesday's quake—were destroyed Friday by aftershocks that registered 5.6 on the Richter scale, the sources said.

Wednesday's jolt measured 7.5 on the open-ended scale.

The new tremors cracked the walls of a military hospital, a hospital for the blind, a mental asylum and the Guatemala City jail, forcing their evacuation. The U.S. ambassador's house was wrecked.

Llamas, whose own home was picked clean by looters Friday night, said "many people have left their houses" fearing new earthquakes in the Pennsylvania-sized nation of 6 million.

Water was restored to 40 per cent of the capital but it was not chlorinated and the government recommended it be boiled. Many rural areas were still without water.

BADLY DAMAGED VILLAGE—In this aerial view of Patzicia, a town of 11,000 inhabitants north of Guatemala City, everything seems fairly intact until one notices that the roofs of many of the houses are lying on the ground. The scale of the damage is shown by the relative size of the man working on a fallen roof at upper middle of photograph. Many towns like Patzicia remain isolated on Friday. (AP WIREPHOTO)

Hua Kuo-feng Is Acting Premier

By CHARLES R. SMITH
UPI Senior Editor

HONG KONG (UPI) — In a surprise appointment, Hua Kuo-feng, a protege of Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, has been chosen acting successor to the late Premier Chou En-lai.

Hua's appointment was disclosed Saturday night by the New China News Agency in a routine dispatch from Peking that astonished China watchers.

"Hua Kuo-feng, acting premier of the State Council, met and had a cordial and friendly talk here this afternoon with Jose de Jesus Sanches Carrero, first ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Republic of Venezuela," the official Peking news agency said.

In the past, most acting appointments have become permanent, but diplomatic analysts cautioned that Hua may be an interim choice for the powerful post.

After Chou died of cancer last month, most China watchers predicted that Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping would take over as head of the Chinese government. Teng had performed most of the premier's duties since Chou was hospitalized in 1974.

Hua, who rose to prominence during the Cultural Revolution of the late 1960s, was one of 12 vice premiers elected by the 4th National People's Congress last year.

As minister of public security, Hua was also China's top policeman.

The initial reaction of some China analysts in Hong Kong and Peking was that Hua might have been a compromise candidate chosen after heated debate among party leaders.

Hua, in his mid-50's, was deputy governor of Mao's native province, Hunan, from 1958 until 1967. He also held party posts in the province before the Cultural Revolution.

He was elected to the party Central Committee at the 9th Party Congress in 1969 and was transferred to Peking at the end of 1971. His elevation to the party's powerful politburo came at the 10th Party Congress in August, 1973.

Since the Cultural Revolution, Hua has been considered a handpicked protege of Mao.

Fernando Puente

ECU Student Has No News From Guatemala

An ECU graduate student from Guatemala says he has no word yet on his friends and relatives in Guatemala City, which has suffered heavy earthquake damage recently, but he may try to contact them in a few days.

Fernando Puente said his parents are safe and sound in New Jersey but he has cousins, a grandmother and an uncle in Guatemala City. He also has many friends there with whom he went to grammar school.

Guatemala City has been one of the main sites of earthquake activity since a violent quake occurred in Central America and Mexico about 3 a.m. Wednesday. According to Associated Press reports, the United Nations Disaster Relief Organization estimated that nearly 8,000 persons were killed in Guatemala and about 40,000 were injured Wednesday. About 800 were reportedly killed and about 2,000 injured Wednesday in Guatemala City alone.

Puente said he had recently talked to his mother but she had received no word on their family and friends in Guatemala City.

"I have heard of a man in the Foreign Language Department at ECU who talks to people in other countries by radio," said Puente. "I may talk to him next week about trying to make contact."

He has lived in Greenville ten years and last visited Guatemala City in 1970 for three months.

Ten Men Indicted

RALEIGH (AP)—Ten men are facing indictments on charges of smuggling 22 tons of marijuana from Colombia into the fishing village of Mesic on the North Carolina coast last month.

A federal grand jury returned the indictments in Raleigh Friday.

The drugs were seized by federal and state law enforcement officers at a seafood processing plant in Pamlico County Jan.11. Officers said it was the largest drug shipment ever seized in North Carolina. The value was estimated at over $30 million.

Indicted were John D. Steele of Miami, Fla.; J. David Steele, 22, of Miami; George Brent Poppas; Daniel Edward Ingle, 26; Ernest Hugh Mayo, 52, of Mesic; his son Gary Stephen Mayo, 25, of Bayboro; Johnnie Bart Armstrong; Michael Wayne Rowe, 29, of Bayboro; Danny Robert Isenhart, 26, of Bayboro; and Graydon Louis Lupton, 35, of Bayboro.

Administration's First Strong Reaction

Attacks Natural Gas Price Control Bill

By EDWARD K. DeLONG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb launched a delayed attack Saturday against a House-passed bill to extend the scope of federal natural gas price controls, saying it is "clearly a step in the wrong direction."

It was the administration's first strong reaction to the measure, which the House adopted Thursday. Aides said Zarb held off until he could assess the bill's impact.

Zarb said the House measure would further decrease U.S. gas production, possibly forcing the United States to import an extra 5 million barrels of foreign oil a day by 1985, and would hurt consumers rather than help them.

"It is especially disappointing since the Senate already has passed a meaningful deregulation bill," Zarb said in a statement echoing earlier complaints by the petroleum industry.

"What the nation needs is natural gas deregulation, not the added regulation called for in this bill. The natural gas bill passed by the House ... is counterproductive and clearly a step in the wrong direction."

The House bill was a compromise that would free small producers from price controls but would continue the controls for the 25 or 30 largest producers and extend Federal Power Commission regulation from gas crossing state lines to gas used in the state where it is produced.

Differences between the House bill and the administration-approved Senate measure, which would gradually lift controls, must be resolved by a House-Senate conference committee. Zarb's attack appeared to be aimed at influencing that effort.

The administration has fought for removal of price controls from interstate gas sales, saying the resulting higher prices would stimulate production. Opponents waged a successful effort in the House, arguing higher prices would cripple economic recovery.

Zarb said gas production under the House bill by 1985 would at best only equal current production of about 20 trillion cubic feet a year and might fall as low as 2 trillion. By contrast, he said, production might grow to 23 trillion cubic feet under the bill passed by the Senate last October.

He said the potentially decreased or stagnated production, measured against projected growth in demand, would force added oil imports. "Instead of having consumers pay a little more for domestically produced gas, this bill will have them paying a lot more for insecure foreign oil," he said.

Predicts Shortfall Of State Revenues

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

North Carolina State officials are predicting a shortfall in revenues with which to fund the State's budget for the second half of the biennium, which runs from July 1, 1976 to June 30, 1977.

The big questions seem to be how short the projected revenue will be and where the cuts will be made to bring the income and expenditures in line to balance the budget.

Economists with the State's Fiscal Research Division report that the revenue shortfall may amount to $71 million, requiring a $42.5 million reduction in the $3.3 billion budget for next year.

But Pitt Rep. Sam Bundy said Friday no one really knows how short the income will be. "Some say $25 million, some say $40 million. It would appear we are going to have some shortfall."

Explaining, Bundy said, "Basically, it looks like we're not going to collect, in all forms of taxes, the amount of money we thought we would. The income for this fiscal year is about 3.5 per cent more than the previous year and the budget is based on about a nine per cent increase."

Bundy continued, "There is no question . . . there is going to be some shortfall. The question is, how much. I hope it won't be as bad as it looks now."

He said the only way to compensate for the shortfall is to "effectuate some savings out of this year's budget.

Lt. Gov. James Hunt and Speaker of the House James C. Green have named a special Appropriations Conference Committee—made up of top House and Senate budgetmakers—to "study all possible options" for reducing the 1975-76 budget. That committee will meet during the week of Feburary 16.

Sen. Ralph Scott (D-Alamance), one of the leaders in the Senate said of the revenue problem, "I do think it's very serious. There's no doubt about that. And I still believe the governor is looking at it through rose-colored glasses.

"You have to bear in mind," he continued, that Gov. Bob Scott's administration turned over a $250 million surplus to Gov. Holshouser's administration, "and Gov. Holshouser is not going to turn over anything to the next administration." (Former Gov. Scott is Sen. Scott's nephew.)

He noted that the special committee will "look over the appropriations the Legislature (the 1975 General Assembly) did make and see what can be done," but noted, he didn't think a special session will be called in March as some have predicted.

The Legislation is already scheduled to meet in May to review the budget. Scott said any action taken at that time

64 Arrested In Major Alamance County Raid

BURLINGTON, N. C. (AP) — A crackdown on illicit drugs, gambling and alcohol operations was carried out Friday night by law enforcement officers of Burlington, Alamance County and the state. Authorities described the crackdown as the largest operation of its type ever carried out in the county.

Police said the raid stemmed from an investigation that started Jan. 10. Officials said Friday night a total of 171 arrest warrants had been issued against 64 individuals, 32 search warrants had been issued and 11 vehicles had been seized in the raid.

Identities were not immediately availabe on those charged.

The crackdown began at 7:30 p.m. and involved officers of the Burlington Police Department, the Alamance County Sheriff's Department and state and county ABC officers.

In a news conference Friday night, Burlington Police Chief Paul O'Neal and Alamance County Sheriff John Stockard said the various law enforcement agencies formed a task force that worked as one unit for the past month.

The 171 warrants charge felonious sale of various drugs, gambling and the sale of both tax-paid and nontax-paid alcoholic beverages.

Water Permit Hearing Set

RALEIGH (AP)—The Environmental Management Commission will hold a hearing in March on the issuance of a water use permit to North Carolina Phosphate Co. for a mining operation near Aurora.

Commission officials said it had been decided to hold a hearing after Texasgulf Inc. objected to the issuance of the permit.

Texasgulf is mining phosphate in an area adjoining the site where North Carolina Phosphate plans to begin mining in two years.

Texasgulf says if North Carolina Phosphate gets the permit, it will hamper its operations. It is using 67 million gallons of water per day to keep its mining pit dry and for processing. The water is withdrawn from the same underground supply that North Carolina Phosphate wants to use.

Appeal For Joan Little Cites No Black Jurors

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Attorneys for Joan Little contend in an appeal to federal court that blacks were excluded from the jury which convicted her in 1974 of breaking and entering.

She is serving a 7-10 year sentence in women's prison.

Attorney Jerry Paul of Durham said Friday the appeal also contends she did not have adequate counsel when the case was tried, and that blacks were excluded from the grand jury which indicted her.

Paul filed an application for a writ of habeas corpus designed to get her appeal before the federal court. It was accompanied by a motion that she be allowed to appeal as an indigent and that she be released on bond pending the appeal.

Miss Little was defended by attorney Leroy Scott. The application for a writ of habeas corpus contended Scott did not know what she was charged with until jury selection had begun and that he had not discussed the case with Miss Little in advance. It also contended Scott did not ask for a continuance when he discovered the actual charge and that he did not object to the composition of the trial jury and the grand jury.

Paul said an examination of the Beaufort county jury pool revealed 17 per cent of the prospective jurors were black and that the popuation of the county was 30 per cent black.

In asking for permission for her to file as an indigdnt, Paul said all her legal battles had been on an indigent basis. He added that although about $310,000 had been raised to defend her in the murder case, the trial had cost $325,000. He added, "We are about $15,000 in debt."

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Two Charlotte brothers were given life sentences Friday for the armed robbery of a convenience store in October. A third man who police said was involved in the robbery was shot to death after the incident as he tried to evade officers.

Police testified that the Slade brothers and Aruther Lee Parks, 21, of Charlotte robbed a Li'l General Store Oct. 7. Police said an officer chased a car leaving the scene of the robbery.

Police said Parks was shot after he fired at an officer.

John Dewey Slade surrendered when the getaway car stopped near the store, and Douglas Slade was found hiding in bushes nearby.

The brothers will be eligible for parole in 20 years.

Seven Dead In Speeding Car Chase

PRICHARD, Ala. (UPI) — Four teen-agers, trying to outrun police in a speeding car, hit a vehicle carrying three adults Friday night, and all seven died in the wreckage.

An Alabama state trooper said the three adults "didn't have a chance" when the teen-agers' car, traveling at more than 100 miles an hour, crossed the center line and hit them headon.

The accident happened at Prichard, a suburb of Mobile.

Troopers Lyndon Johnson and Joe Mayes were operating a radar unit on I65 when a 1961 model car sped by. "We couldn't pick them up on the radar because of all the traffic, but I knew they were moving," Johnson said. He set out in pursuit.

"I got up behind them doing 115 miles an hour," he said, "and they still pulled away from me."

The youths left the interstate, turned onto a state highway, then onto narrow, winding Shelton Beach Road. The troopers were still in pursuit.

"The driver couldn't handle the curves on Shelton Beach and we caught up," Johnson said. "They were still doing over 100."

Just inside the city limits of Prichard, the teen-agers went around a corner and crashed headon into a second vehicle. Both cars were demolished.

"The Chevy (driven by the teen-agers') was completely on the wrong side of the road," Mayes said. "Those other folks didn't have a chance."

The four teen-agers were identified as James Grantham, 17, the driver of the fleeing car; Jeanette Whitehead, 15, Cynthia Lisenbra, 17, and Harry Kirk Lang, 17, all of the Mobile area.

The three adults in the second car were the driver, James J. Duncan, 54, a councilman in Satsuma, Ala.; his wife, Doris, 53, and Susan Duncan of Athens, Ala. Police did not know the exact age of Susan Duncan or her relationship to the other victims.

Two Attended LWV Conference

Rhea Resnik and Ann Frost, representing the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters (LWV), attended a litigation Conference at the Holdiay Inn in Greensboro, February 4.

Participants were made aware of the possibility of using litigation as a legitimate action tool along with other long-established techniques such as lobbying, testifying, and public-awareness campaigns.

N.C. court action cases in which local Leagues and the state League had participated were discussed, including such cases as the Horsepen Creek Interceptor Sewer Line Case in Greensboro and the Locklear Double-Voting Case in Robeson County.

Norman Smith, a practicing attorney from Greensboro, spoke about going to court in the public interest. He acquainted participants with the types of financial costs incurred in legal action and approaches to use in securing pro bono or reduced fee legal assistance.

RALEIGH (AP)—A federal housing official who was recently fired by President Ford sought a $15,000 private consulting contract with the Raleigh Housing Authority when he had before him a request from the city for $1 million in federal grants, city officials said Friday.

H.R. Crawford, the former assistant secretary of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is being investigated by the Justice Department for soliciting such contracts in several cities for a private consulting service he was planning to start after he retired in April.

Takes Credit For Unemployment Drop

Ford On Campaign Trail

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

NASHUA, N.H. (UPI) — Taking credit for a "marvelous" drop in unemployment, President Ford campaigned through snow-topped schoolhouses Saturday in the first round of his New Hampshire primary battle against Ronald Reagan.

Ford got a jovial "We Love Jerry" welcome from crowds at Manchester airport, then moved on to make fight speeches in school cafeterias and gymnasiums against the perils of big government and massive federal spending programs.

Talking to reporters in sunny, six-degree weather at the airport, he said he is "optimistic" he can beat Reagan in New Hampshire's first in the nation primary Feb. 24.

Reagan has campaigned extensively here and has some powerful local backers, including a newspaper publisher who printed a front page editorial Saturday calling Ford "stupid" and "underhanded."

Ford ignored the insult and stressed what he considers his strong point — the reviving economy — in his opening speech at a Concord junior high school, calling the record drop in December unemployment "a marvelous reduction."

Later, in a speech prepared for delivery at a Chamber of Commerce dinner in Nashua High School, Ford referred again to the 7.8-per-cent December jobless rate — a drop from 8.3 per cent in November.

"The economic discipline we have maintained is justified by this weekend's statistics," he said. "The unemployment rate just took the sharpest monthly drop in over 17 years."

In Nashua, Ford pursued his "new realism" campaign theme and portrayed himself as a candidate opposed to the growth of federal bureacracy and federal social spending — a position taken by Reagan as well.

"Freedom is today misinterpreted by too many to mean the instant equalization of everyone's social and economic situation, and at the public expense through the machinery of the federal government...," he said. "I will never promise more than I can deliver."

He said unemployment must be countered by stimulating the economy "without the strangulation of federal taxation and red tape."

He also cautioned against federal health insurance schemes: "We cannot realistically afford federally dictated national health insurance providing full coverage for all 215 million Americans."

Syrian Guarantee

By MICHAEL KEATS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syria will guarantee good relations between Lebanese and Palestinians as part of the peace settlement ending Lebanon's 10-month-long civil war, the government said Saturday.

The announcement came in a joint statement issued in Damascus and Beirut at the end of a one-day visit to Damascus by President Suleiman Franjieh.

"The two leaders reviewed the question of implementing the 1969 Cairo agreement concerning the Palestinian status in Lebanon," the communique said.

Syria declared that it "guarantees the implementation of this agreement, in letter and spirit, thus serving the common interest of Lebanon and the Palestine Liberation Organization."

Syria's President Hafez Assad expressed his "confidence and satisfaction with the foundations on which the settlement of the Lebanese crisis were based," the communique said.

It said the two presidents had studied methods of ensuring the continuation of peace and stability in Lebanon "particularly the steps to be taken with the aim of ensuring confidence, prosperity and progress for all."

Lebanese Premier Rushid Karami, in a separate statement, said the "hopes which were pinned" on Franjieh's visit to Damascus "have been realized."

Otherwise, the communique gave no specific details of the peace agreement — nor was there mention of the political, social and economic reforms demanded by Moslem leftists.

Quads Born

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)— Overwhelmed is a conservative expression for the way Kenneth William Thornton Jr., felt Saturday after his wife gave birth to quadruplets in the Medical University of South Carolina hospital late Friday night.

The Georgetown, S.C. attorney said Saturday that he and his wife were overwhelmed, happy, and thankful that the two girls and two boys were all right.

The boys were born first: John Blakely, four pounds, five ounces and Kenneth Clay, four pounds, nine and one-half ounces.

The girls followed: Olivia Lee, two pounds, 12 ounces and Kate Nelson, three pounds, 12 ounces.

Although Mrs. Thornton was not taking fertility pills, her husband said there are more than four sets of twins and triplets between both families.

Oklahoma Delegates Remain Uncommitted

By PAUL ENGLISH

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter battled former Sen. Fred R. Harris for delegates in Saturday's Democratic precinct caucuses, but the largest group of those chosen remained uncommitted at the urging of Gov. David Boren.

With 29 per cent of the delegates selected, 739 delegates, or 32.6 per cent of those chosen for the county conventions, were uncommitted to any presidential aspirant.

Curter had 476 or 21.0 per cent and Harris, former Democratic national chairman pinning his hopes on a solid showing in his home state, had 455 or 20.1 per cent. Alabama Gov. George Wallace drew 300 or 13.2 per cent and Sen. LLoyd M. Bentsen Jr., D-Tex. trailed with 11.7 per cent in his neighboring state.

Although considered the most liberal of the candidates, Harris was running best in populous, but conservative Tulsa and Oklahoma Counties while Carter showed strength in rural areas.

Boren was elected as a delegate in his home precinct in Seminole, which voted 20-0 for an uncommitted delegation.

"I appreciate the vote of confidence given me in my home precinct," Boren said. "A strong grassroots voice is what is needed to bring this country back to the people's wishes in this bicentennial year. This grassroot support can bring us Democratic leadership in the White House this year."

Yugoslav Diplomat Slain

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI)—A gunman firing five bullets killed a Yugoslav diplomat Saturday in what may have been an assassination by right-wing Croatian separatists.

Police arriving at the suburban home of Vice Consul Edwin Zdovc found the body of the 45-year-old veteran diplomat lying in a pool of blood in the garage.

According to witnesses, the assassin fled in a white automobile driven by another young man. Police sought two men aged 20 to 25.

"We are investigating the possibility it was a political murder," a Frankfurt police official said.

French Boy Freed

Nationalist guerrillas freed a 7-year-old French boy in Somalia Saturday in a postscript to the hijacking of a school bus in France's neighboring African territory of Afars and Issas.

A spokesman for the French Embassy in the Somali capital of Mogadishu said the guerrillas left young Frank Rutkowsky at the diplomatic mission during the morning.

To Be Paroled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dwight L. Chapin will be paroled April 2 after nearly eight months in prison for lying to the Watergate grand jury about his role in the dirty tricks of former President Richard M. Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

The U.S. Parole Board issued the order Friday after its customary closed-door meeting. The board gave no reason for its action.

Paid His Way

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner James A. Graham says he paid his way to and from a December meeting financed by a railroad firm and saw nothing wrong in accepting the food and lodging the firm provided.

Graham said his influence couldn't be bought "for a nice meal and a place to stay."

Last U.S. Cavalry Horse

Black Jack Is Dead

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Few who watched the mournful funeral procession of John F. Kennedy can erase the image of a gleaming dark horse with a white spot on the forehead, walking riderless behind the caisson.

The horse, Black Jack, is dead.

He was put to sleep Friday by Army veterinarians because the years had taken their toll. He had kidney failure and other complications of age.

Black Jack was 29. In human terms he was more than 100.

During his 20 years as a caparisoned horse — the riderless horse that is the symbol of the fallen warrior — Black Jack had graced hundreds of funerals.

He was used for the funerals of Presidents Hoover and Johnson, and for that of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. But he also performed his solemn duty for the less famous, men of all ranks who gave their lives for their country.

Since 1973 the horse had been in semi-retirement at Ft. Myer, Va., where he was stabled, close to Arlington National Cemetery. Thousands of school children visited him.

He was the last of the quartermaster-issued horses and the last to bear the famous U.S. brand.

Never was he more in the spotlight than on Nov. 24, 1963, when the body of the slain Kennedy was borne from the White House to the Capitol to lie in state.

Six gray horses in three pairs drew the caisson. A seventh horse led them.

And to one side and just behind was Black Jack. His saddle was empty and the stirrups bore reversed cavalry boots, symbolic of the absent rider. A saber in a silver scabbard swung from the saddle.

Revenues Shortfall Predicted.....

"will apply beginning July 1."

The senator theorized that if the lawmakers do cut the budget "the biggest cuts" will probably come out of the Department of Human Resources. The reason Scott said, "It's the biggest agency down there . . . they are getting more. It's hard to tell where other cuts will be made. All (agencies) are going to have to take some."

Scott said he is "in favor of taking enough to give a raise" to all state employees, but noted, "on the other hand, what job they've got is better than no job at all."

Asked if appropriations for the East Carolina University Medical School might be affected by the shortfall in revenue and any action taken by the General Assembly to bring the budget back in line, Scott replied, "I'm not in favor of it. I'm certainly against it. I think (the school) ought to move on schedule."

Pitt Rep. Horton Rountrée said he, too, would be opposed to any reduction in funds for the ECU medical program.

"In making up any deficit," Rountree said, "if they take the capital improvement budget, that leaves it to the 1977 General Assembly to come up with tax money to make it up. It's shifting the burden to the 1977 General Assembly."

The Pitt lawmaker said, "Nobody knows exactly what the April 15 tax returns are going to reflect," but he said revenue from income tax "is where the short fall is increasing."

Rountree said the "up and coming meeting of the economy committee . . . what they are going to try to do is shift funds or delete certain projects . . . trying to increase reversions." He said too, "I think this year's budget can be worked out by and through reversions."

The law-maker indicated it is better to deal directly with the shortfall now rather than saddling the 1977 Legislature with problems.

"We know at this time what the State has paid and about how much is left in the kitty . . . in banks to pay. Messing with next year's budget is a projection," he said.

Acquitted Of Rape

HILLSBOROUGH, N. C. (AP)—An Orange County Superior Court jury Friday acquitted Geary Blackwood on a rape charge.

Blackwood was charged with raping Mrs. Elizabeth Cates Cox, daughter of Hillsborough Mayor and Mrs. Fred S. Cates Jr.

A burst of cheers and applause from Blackwood's relatives and friends followed announcement of the verdict.

Blackwood testified Thursday that Mrs. Cox took the initiative in their sexual relations.

Mrs. Cox and her family were not in the courtroom when the verdict was announced. They left immediately after Judge Ronald Barbee completed his instructions to the jury and did not return.

With Mrs. Cox during the trial was her husband, Robert, from whom she was separated at the time of the alleged rape on Dec. 18, 1974.

The two were reconciled in January, 1975, and now live in California.

Blackwood has filed a $3 million dollar suit alleging false arrest and slander against Mrs. Cox, Mayor Cates and two Carrboro policemen.

EARTHQUAKE VICTIM—Villagers from the small village of San Pedro de Zacatepeque rush to help a man hurt during the two strong tremors which hit the already bad-damaged town Friday. Many persons were hit by falling debris when the aftershocks caught them in damaged buildings trying to salvage some of their belongings. The official death toll in the killer earthquake which hit Guatemala Wednesday now stands at 8,000 and is expected to rise as reports come in from outlying areas. (AP WIREPHOTO)

No Different

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — The only thing that seems to bother the Rev. Rufus Smithson about being blind is that people think he is helpless.

"A blind person is no different from a sighted person, and we don't want to be treated any differently," said the pastor of Fayetteville's Person Street United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Mr. Smithson has been blind 17 of his 41 years. When he lost his sight, he went to three doctors and none could tell him why. After that, it was just a matter of adjustment, he said.

The Rev. Smithson refuses to wear dark glasses to hide his sightless eyes, and with his stylish, double-knit suit and his swift, confident gait he bears little evidence of his handicap.

"I've noticed a lot of blind people slide their feet like crippled people," he said. "I just walk right ahead. I guess I'm too proud to use a cane."

The Rev. Smithson discounts the popularly held notion that the blind automatically develop sharper perception in their remaining senses.

"Nothing comes automatic to a blind person. You have to train yourself. I can see with my feet. You have to feel."

He suggests that sighted people try out blindness. "Get a friend to wrap gause over your eyes and leave it for 24 hours. You see with more than just your eyes."

The Rev. Mr. Smithson taught himself to read braille, although he doesn't use it much. Instead, he prefers recordings of written material available from the Library of Congress. His recording of the Kings James version of the Bible contains between 100 and 150 records, he estimates.

Probably Best Plan Available

After many hours of study, it appears that the city board of education is near final approval of a plan which calls for kindergarten through grade six in all elementary schools next year with attendance areas balanced as nearly as possible to obtain equal racial ratio.

The Alternative No. 1, as it is called, will likely be selected from several alternatives and after a number of workshop sessions where many citizens were heard.

It carried the recommendation of Supt. Glenn Cox, who commented, "This recommendation is on behalf of myself and reflects the majority opinion of the school staff and faculty."

Final action on the plan has not yet been taken but it was the consensus of the board at the last session that this was the best alternative available.

Under the plan the city schools would allow a seven percent variation figure insofar as racial balance is concerned.

The overall ratio is 47.5 percent black and 52.5 percent white for the city schools. Thus any individual school could range from 44 to 51 percent black and from 49 to 56 percent white.

The new plan is needed because shifting population has thrown the racial percentages out of balance in some schools since full integration was achieved. To meet the new guidelines, some 303 black students and 382 white students, or 685, would have to be reassigned for next fall. This would be done as nearly as possible by neighborhoods to make the transition as easy as possible.

The reassignments will be difficult for some families, but certainly not nearly as difficult as the original integration effort.

We think the city board of education has come up with the best plan possible under the circumstances. We can vouch for the fact that the school board and staff have spent many hours studying the matter meticulously. It will take the cooperation of everyone to carry out the plan smoothly.

Good Investment In Emergency Plans

A communications tower currently being erected at the new Pitt Memorial Hospital will provide contact with the various rescue squads of the county.

It will also allow rescue units from outside the county to communicate with Pitt Memorial as they head toward Greenville with patients perhaps in critical conditions.

The $50,629 which is being spent for the tower is a good investment since communications with the moving rescue units can be all-important in the life saving operations.

"Eat! Eat! Eat! Gotta keep up your strength . . . 'cause, remember I'll be running against you in November!"

Capitol Closed For Repairs

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—If you might be planning a visit to the North Carolina capital city some day soon, try not to. It's closed for repair.

The old Capitol building is being restored, and will not re-open until late June or July. Meanwhile, it's even difficult to get around the grounds, with trucks and construction equipment moving about.

Across the street, the most popular drawing card for kids and adults (it's the only place where you can see live snakes, after all) is the Museum of Natural History—which is undergoing extensive remodeling, and has been closed, but is now open. Officials say it may be closed again for a few weeks as the work progresses.

The governor's mansion has been closed all winter, with the Holshouser family in rented quarters. The mansion renovation is scheduled for completion later this month.

Meanwhile, downtown Raleigh is a motorist's (or pedestrian's) nightmare. Historic Fayetteville Street which runs through the heart of town is being torn out.

The blocks from the Capitol to Memorial Auditorium will be turned into a pedestrian mall, and destruction of that main street has thrown thousands of vehicles onto side streets hunting parking space or just a place to turn. If you're walking, you must pick you way past mounds of old trolly timbers and rails, brick paving, and dirt.

Couldn't Wait

A new rural health clinic was scheduled to open formally on a recent Monday, and any who might have wondered at the need were quickly satisifed.

At 2 a.m. Saturday before the opening, the Outer Banks Health Center welcomed a six-pound, 13-ounce baby boy. The mother, stopped by police while speeding toward the mainland, was rushed to the health center where Mrs. Jennifer Lang, family nurse practitioner, delivered the child, looked after the mother, and after telephoning the physician in Elizabeth City sent the new family back home. The doctor signed the birth certificate later.

And that was not the first case. On Thursday, before the new facility could even be dedicated, a youngster was treated for an earache, and a pregnant woman in danger of miscarriage received emergency care.

Fire "House"

Many fire stations are built in residential neighborhoods, and from time to time nearby residents who welcome the protection nonetheless complain at the intrustion of a fire house because the design clashes with the residential character of the area.

Mount Airy town officials found a simple solution.

The new North Main Street station, from the front, is a neat, middle-income brick home surrounded by lawn and trees.

Only an oversize garage at the rear gives it away; the doors are extra-high to admit the fire engines. The 3,250 square-foot structure cost $135,000, blends easily into the residential neighborhood, and Fire chief Bill Joe Woodruff says. "There is not another up-to-date fire station in the state that looks like this one."

Sunday Morning Notes

Utilities Director Charles Horne passed on this bit of poetry which he says was paraphrased a little by his wife, Dot.

A Just Reward

A utilities director knocked at the Pearly Gates:
His face was scarred and old;
He stood before the man of fate;
For admission to the fold.
What have you done, St. Peter asked,
To gain admission here?
I've been a Greenville Utilities director, sir, he said.
For many and many a year.
The Pearly Gates swung open wide,
St. Peter touched the bell;
Come in, he said and choose your harp,
You've had your taste of Hell.

Legion

We know of the problems of which the local utilities director speaks and we have the fullest sympathy for him. We couldn't help but think, though, that with a little more paraphrasing, the poem could apply to any electric customer these days.

Harold Harris of 100 Park Drive, said the newspaper carrier missed him recently.

One night the boy knocked on the door.

Harris told the carrier he had missed his paper a couple of nights that week.

The boy apologized. "I'll tell you what," the carrier offered. "I'll leave you three papers tomorrow."

ALVIN TAYLOR

It may be the first major Greenville, N.C.-Greenville, S.C. mixup of 1976.

On Feb. 3, staffer Jerry Raynor took a call from the local Western Union office.

"Can you give me some details about the appearance of Joanne Woodward at the Little Theatre here this week?" the lady asked. "I'm getting telegrams of well wishes from Los Angeles and other places for Miss Woodward."

Jerry explained that he recalled reading an article about the film actress currently appearing in a theatre production in Greenville, S.C. He suggested that the telegrams be referred on to the South Carolina Greenville.

A unique memento was given away to those who went to the open house for the new State Employees Credit Union building at First and Greene Streets last week.

Lapel pins depicting flags, Tar Heel foot prints and other designs were given to visitors. They were made from the copper which was removed from state capitol roof in recent reconstruction.

No, there aren't any left. We checked.

Per-Pupil Outlays

(Wilson Times)

You can see the political clouds gathering in the direction of the contest for the top position in public education, superintendent of the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction. There will be a contest for this position for it is generally expected that Ben F. Currin, superintendent of the Rocky Mount schools, will be running against A. Craig Phillips, who now holds the position.

A good campaign on the subject of the public schools could work to the benefit of all concerned. For there isn't a doubt as to the dissatisfaction among teachers, parents and school officials in all areas of public school education, because many children cannot read or write as they should, according to the grade they are in.

"The reason for this is not that the money is not spent, for if throwing money at problems would make them go away, then North Carolina public schools should have few problems," says Bill Noblitt of the Association of Afternoon Newspapers in one of his recent columns.

Money has not cured the problem for there is increased public concern over discipline in schools, widespread failure of children to learn to read and write properly, and this in the wake of per-pupil spending which has doubled in just five years.

Recent figures compiled by the management information system of the State Department of Public Instruction show per-pupil spending has risen from $588.29 in 1969-70 to $1,055.66 in 1974-75. These are average statewide figures. Local supplements in metropolitan counties make spending higher. It is lower in rural eastern or western sections.

Under Phillips' leadership there have been many innovations, teacher requirements, or lack of them, a big organization thrives in Raleigh, and still Johnnie cannot read. Currin's campaign, if he runs, is expected to center around public dissatisfaction. He would stress professionalism in teachers and increased emphasis on basic education, as the three fundamentals, reading, writing and arithmetic. Currin probably would also emphasize the child and teacher combination, an area many parents consider has been neglected.

Now you are reading of the pupil expenditure which doubled from 1969 to 1975. So money will not make the problems go away. The increased expenditure has not brought the results you have a right to expect.

A campaign between Phillips and Currin would be interesting and would be watched by parents and all who are interested in public school education, which is the backbone and foundation of all education.

Truth Of Guernica Unfolds

By GORDON THOMAS
For The Associated Press

GUERNICA, Spain (AP) — At 170 miles an hour the largest air force ever assembled thundered toward the town. The deep growl of engines shook the air, shook the ground — and continues to shake the world.

In three hours, on a pleasant, sunny afternoon nearly 39 years ago those aircraft destroyed most of Guernica, the ancient capital of Spain's Basques and one of the cradles of civilization.

Guernica, nestled in a broad valley near the Bay of Biscay in northern Spain, was, and is, the spiritual home of the Basque people, with its historic parliament building and the ancient oak tree in the parliament grounds, the very symbol of Basque culture and independence.

Japan intends to close the doors of China to America "even if war is necessary to accomplish it," Chairman Pittman (D-Nev.) of the Senate foreign relations committee, said today, advocating naval and air forces "sufficient to protect the United States right."

Hurling criticism at Japan's policy in a speech on the Senate floor, the prominent administration man spoke of treaties "openly and ruthlessly violated." He referred to what he called Japanese threats — "propoganda" and "arrogance."

"China is still an independent sovereign government at peace with the world and desirious of trading with us," he said, "and there is nothing that can legally or long physically interfere with such trade."

Because of his high post, Pittman's speech was regarded as certain to attract world-wide attention.

Ford's Illinois Waterloo?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

CHICAGO—Grass roots support for Ronald Reagan within the dwindling but ever more conservative Illinois Republican party threatens to make a Waterloo out of a state still regarded by President Ford's national strategists as total insurance against early reverses.

The Illinois primary March 16 has always been counted on in the Ford campaign for an overwhelming victory in a major industrialized state to negate possible earlier losses in less significant New Hampshire or Florida. But if Mr. Ford loses those primaries, at best he could hope for a narrow win in Illinois and at worst a shattering defeat—a Waterloo—which would conceivably bring an incredibly early end to the incumbent President's campaign for the nomination.

The problem in Illinois, as elsewhere, is that the regular Republican organization and its hierarchy constitutes a Potemkin Village without substance. Although Mr. Ford still leads in private Illinois polls, far greater Reagan intensity at the grass roots makes it unwise for the President to depend on this state to salvage his campaign.

This contrasts sharply with assurances given Republicans nationwide by Howard H. Callaway, the Ford campaign chairman. Scarcely three months ago, Callaway was privately predicting 90 per cent of the vote in the preferential primary (called the "beauty contest" here because it does not affect delegates) plus 100 out of 101 delegates (the only Reagan delegate being his state chairman, Rep. Philip Crane).

This nonsense has been counteracted by sober, confidential reports to the White House that Reagan could win a third of the delegates elected by district on March 16. But, seemingly bemused by presidential invincibility, even these Ford partisans assume a runaway in the beauty contest. Former Gov. Richard Ogilvie, Mr. Ford's state campaign chairman, publicly predicts 2-to-1 victory.

Such continuing unrealistic forecasts are based on a gross overestimate of what the President gained in enlisting almost the entire Republican hierarchy, headed by Ogilvie and Sen. Charles H. Percy. "You have to start by understanding this fact of life," one prominent pro-Ford Republican confided to us. "There is simply no party organization in Illinois today."

Thus, Ford endorsements by county chairmen have limited significance, particularly in downstate Illinois where Reagan is strongest and where the party's precinct committeemen are independently elected satraps. Intense Reagan support among Republican activists has caused some party leaders to abandon the Ford ship and head for the uncommitted lifeboats.

County chairman James Christopher of Peoria first endorsed the President but switched to uncommitted when shown a poll of his precinct committeemen backing Reagan. While 10 of 11 Republican Congressmen (all save Crane) support Mr. Ford, four are not running as Ford-pledged delegates—some because they fear rank-and-file reprisals.

What's more, the President himself averted one symbolic setback only by extraordinary effort. Rep. Ed Derwinski, whose credentials as an Illinois Bourbon antedate Crane's, endorsed the President in the early going but later announced he would run as an uncommitted delegate. It required a telephone call from his old congressional colleague, Jerry Ford, with less than 24 hours to spare, to hold Derwinski in line.

Other Illinois Bourbons are not so susceptible to leadership. Ogilvie, widely considered the greatest governor of Illinois in the post-war era, s still resented by grass roots Republican activists as a big tax, big government turncoat, his presence may hurt the President as much as it helps him. Sen. Percy is probably

Strength For Today

AGE DOESN'T MATTER

A remarkably large number of great achievements have been made by famous men early in life. Alexander the Great at 34 had taken Thebes and had crossed the Hellespont. Mark Anthony at 25 was the hero of Rome. Napoleon at 28 was the leader of France and at 35 was its emperor. Alexander Hamilton at 25 was a member of Congress. Henry Clay at 21 was a United States Senator. Jefferson at 33 drafted the Declaration of Independence.

There were brilliant young men in the arts as well as in political and military life. Beethoeven at 21 was a noted composer. Wagner at 23 had composed "Lohengrin." Browning at 23 had written "Paracelus."

The achievements of these young men do not mean that youth alone can administer the affairs of the world, but they do indicate that if a man has great ability, his unusual endowment is liable to manifest itself long before he reaches mature years.

It can also be shown that some of the greatest accomplishments in history have been made by men far advanced in years.

Recovery Seeing Weak Points

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You can hardly have a sustained economic recovery in the United States if constructior, especially housing construction, remains weak. Few economists will disagree with that statement.

Well, construction is relatively weak. Industry has shown little enthusiasm for capital spending projects, and the housing industry, especially the multifamily component, is operating far below desirable levels.

Now the good news: Several cost factors are developing that can only mean good news for builders and, as a consequence, for the myriad other industries whose fortunes are dependent upon construction.

Interest rates now are well below the extremely high levels that helped precipitate the construction nosedive. Money is plentiful. And, believe it or not, some materials prices are lower.

Advance Mortgage Corporation, the nation's second largest mortgage broker, reports apartment mortgage rates have fallen to the lowest figure in eight months and shopping center rates to the lowest in six months.

In just one month, it states, the rate on typical apartment house mortgages fell one-quarter to one-half a point, the steepest single-month decline in more than a year.

One month ago an apartment mortgage cost 10 to 10.25 per cent. At the end of January they averaged around 9.75 per cent. A month ago a shopping center mortgage cost 9.75 per cent. Now it costs nearer 9.5 per cent.

This type of construction came almost to a halt because of money. It became difficult to obtain, and when it was available, it came at rates that precluded a profit. The bottom line, as they say, was red.

Not all the money problems have been solved by any means, but with rates dropping builders reportedly are making plans again. The money is available; to some extent it is already a borrower's market.

In some areas, for example, lenders reportedly are willing to offer a premium rate to put their money to work sooner. Some lenders aren't waiting for the borrower to call; instead, they're knocking on the borrower's door.

There is more good news too. The big life insurance companies, who were reluctant to put money into mortgages when they could obtain higher rates in corporate bonds, are showing renewed interest in construction.

Savings and loan associations, which collectively make more home mortgage loans than any other group, are loaded with funds they must put to work. A year and a half ago they had little money to lend at any price.

During 1975 the S&Ls built up their lendable funds strongly, the result of a high consumer savings rate—at times more than 10 per cent of after-tax income—and a more competitive interest rate situation.

As a result, the associations became eager to lend. In fact, they loaned more than $50 billion last year, second highest in their history, but mainly on existing homes. There just weren't enough new homes built.

Observations From Editorial Columns

State Aid

Governor Holshouser, who says he sees nothing wrong with turning loose state accountants on Ronald Reagan's proposal to whack $90 billion out of the federal budget, plainly has failed to think the matter through. Even if he did think it through, he would be hard pressed to defend it.

The Governor, it has to be remembered, is Gerald Ford's Southern campaign manager. This circumstance inevitably suggests that, when he began wondering how the Reagan plan would affect North Carolina, Mr. Holshouser's curiosity was aroused by something other than the state budget.

When collared by the press, the Governor's lame excuse was that, well, none of the other presidential candidates had presented this kind of spectacular proposal, and so naturally it hadn't been necessary to subject their recommendations to the same kind of scrutiny. Of course, this is pure moonshine. President Ford, for one, has proposed spending no less than $100 billion on an energy development corporation, but we are not told that Governor Holshouser dashed off orders for state workers to find out how such lavish tomfoolery would affect the Tar Heel State.

Reagan staffers, seeing their man singled out for special treatment, are sore, and they have every right to be. For motives no more exalted than a desire to score one on the opposition, the Governor put state-paid employes to work on a blatantly partisan assignment, and the public is entitled to an assurance that he will not do so again. If the temptation to err is so great that the Governor cannot give such an assurance, then let him quit politics and content himself with the job to which he was elected.

The Greensboro Record

Several Vacancies

Edwin Gill, the treasurer of North Carolina, is not going to seek re-election this year, marking the first time this office has been seriously contested since 1953.

At the age of 76, Gill is stepping aside in favor of a younger man voters may choose. While politically, this opens a race wide, for many the impact of Gill's resignation is to focus attention on an unique public career. The news is what Gill has been able to accomplish outside of his significant success as treasurer.

He is a gifted writer; he is an authority on painting; he has served as a legislator; he has been private secretary to Gov. O. Max Gardner; he was commissioner of paroles and commissioner of revenue.

His long and valued service to the North Carolina Museum of Art may in years to come outweigh his knack in establishing our state's triple A credit rating among the bond market, as valuable as that is. The latter is a bit of accomplishment in a time when such places as New York City have fared otherwise.

The 48 years of public service of this erudite, honest and talented man have had an impact in not one, but varied facets of the state government. We are not worried about who will be treasurer, as several people might fill that job. It is all those extra jobs to which he brought perception and wisdom we worry about as he takes a well deserved slower pace.

The Ultimate Gag?

The so-called gag rule achieved the ultimate in petty spitefulness in Raleigh recently, when a Superior Court judge ordered the State Attorney General's office to hold its tongue about a case.

The case involves charges brought against the Bell Telephone System on counts of bribery and other corrupt practices. The Bell barristers have, apparently, convinced the judge the documents in the case contain names, the revelation of which would constitute, among other things, an invasion of privacy. Most of the documents to which they have reference were gathered by the Attorney General's Office in the investigation which provided a foundation for the charges in the first place.

Far be it from us to cast aspersions upon the objectivity of judicial decisions or utterances (WE don't want to be found in contempt), but it does seem as good a case (or better) could be made for muzzling some judges as for clamping the vocal cords of other court officials and associates.

Guernica....

German bombers on April 26, 1937, embodied the full horror of the Spanish civil war. Few episodes of any war attracted such a sustained outcry as that following the razing of Guernica. In terms of emotional aftershock, the bombing ranks for many with the devastation of Dresden, Hiroshima, and Nagasaki.

But the truth about the bombing has been blurred over the years by propaganda from all sides and by the skillful mixing of fact and fiction.

Even today, the new Spanish regime under King Juan Carlos maintains that the Basques, supporting the Republican army during the civil war, destroyed their own holy city and blamed the Nazis.

The Republicans, on the other hand, exaggerated the death toll to over 3,000 and said 10,000 were injured. Twenty-seven months of research into the destruction of Guernica, including interviews with 30 eyewitnesses of the bombing, show the death toll to have been under 500, the casualties 2,000 to 2,500.

Now, Guernica is occupied.

Since Good Friday, 1975, troops, civil guards and policemen have turned this rebuilt town of 15,000 into an armed fortress. Gen. Francisco Franco sent in the military to prevent the Basques from carrying out plans to make last Easter Sunday the biggest commemoration of the bombing ever held.

Franco's order prohibiting the commemoration resulted in bloodshed.

The Basques blew up a Franco monument in Guernica's graveyard and dynamited four shops belonging to known Franco supporters. Policemen were shot. Basque priests were arrested.

The 43 German bombers that helped make Guernica such a Basque focal point were part of the Condor Legion that Hitler had sent to Spain to support Franco.

All the available evidence — and there is a great deal — shows that Franco knew nothing about the raid until after it occurred.

The German military archives in Freiburg establish that the actual order for the attack on Guernica, a town of 7,200 in 1937, was issued by Colonel Wolfram von Richthofen, chief of staff of the Condor Legion.

The Republican government represented the raid as a war-crime against a totally defenseless town. But since the start of the civil war, Guernica had been a garrison town for Republican troops and there were 3,000 there the day of the air raid.

They fled when the attack began.

But research into the bombing, including access to von Richthofen's papers, establishes that at the time of the actual raid, von Richthofen and his Condor Legion did not know there were troops in the town, although the Legion was aware of enemy forces in the area.

Franco committed one of his rare blunders in the civil war. He ordered his propagandists to say that there was "no air attack ... that we have incontrovertible proof that the Republicans themselves dynamited Guernica as a last desperate effort to discredit" the forces of fascism.

With considerable force this line was offered as "a contribution to history." And the distortions began.

A Conservative View

Soporific Snake Oil Of Professor Commager

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBIE, Va.—The mail brings a letter and a handout from a public relations outfit in Philadelphia, promoting the Declaration of Interdependence recently composed by Professor Henry Steele Commager. The letter politely suggests that I might want to prepare a commentary on this thing.

Very well, I just might. The professor's pronunciamento, prepared for the World Affairs Council, is a bucket of mush. It is a mish-mash of reality and illusion, of good intentions and bad judgment. The dictionary defines the verb "to subvert" as "to undermine the morals, allegiance, or faith of; to currupt." This is a genuinely subversive document.

Commager borrows from Jefferson's Declaration of Independence. It is a bad loan. As a historian, the professor doubtless has learned a vast deal of the world as it was; he manifests a pathetic naivete about the world as it is.

"When in the course of history, the threat of extinction confronts mankind, it is necessary for the people of the United States to declare their interdependence with the people of all nations . . . Fiddlesticks. Catastrophe, yes; extinction, no. A little less hysteria might have provided a better beginning.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident," says the professor, "that all men are created equal." It is a palpable falsehood. The professor declares "that people everywhere are entitled to the blessings of life and liberty, peace and security and the realization of their full potential." Nonsense. How did people everywhere get so entitled? Who entitled them? The American tradition teaches us that people must work for these things, that nations preserve peace by constantly preparing for war, that realizing one's "full potential" is a personal struggle. It is not something to which one is "entitled."

The professor goes on to say that all the peoples and the nations of the globe should acknowledge their interdependence and free themselves from the "limitations of national prejudice." We must put aside "narrow notions of national sovereignty." We must rise above "the claims of chauvinistic nationalism."

"We affirm," says the professor, "that a world without law is a world without order, and we call upon all nations to strengthen and to sustain the United Nations and its specialized agencies, and other institutions of world order, and to broaden the jurisdiction of the World Court, that these may preside over a reign of law that will not only end wars but end as well that mindless violence which terrorizes our society even in times of peace."

Under this Declaration of Interdependence, the resources of Earth "are the heritage of no one nation or generation, but of all peoples, nations and posterity." The delcaration demands a "more equitable" sharing of these resources. "No one nation can any longer effectively maintain its processes of production and monetary systems without recognizing the necessity for collaborative regulations by international authorities."

Well, urk. The professor had the assistance of a committee of 56 philosophers in creating this work of banality. You wonder, reading it over, if the laws of gravity kept them from floating off on moon beams. What they are proposing, in essence, is to submerge those political and moral traditions that we call "Western civilization" in a barbarian sea of alien customs and ideologies. What becomes of personal freedom in a world order of one man, one vote? When all the free-loaders of the professor's world community start to vote, what "equitable" distribution of resources would result?

These babblers talk of a rule of law under the broadened jurisdiction of the World Court. Rule by whose law? Would they like the Soviet Union's law on private property? Would they prefer India's law on freedom of the press? Would they be pleased by a nice Brazilian view of habeas corpus?

To be sure, in many ways men and nations are indeed interdependent. Every idiot knows that. It goes without saying. But in many essential ways, we have been and must remain wholly independent. And it is to that proposition, if we are renewing declarations, that we ought again to pledge our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Frustrated Voters Are Quite Certain Federal Officials Ignore Them

By GEORGE BRYANT, JR.

Damning the government now enjoys a popularity once reserved for such things as baseball, monoply or, if you can remember back far enough, mahjong.

In a way, this rage is in keeping with the Bicentennial Spirit. Snap on the radio to catch up with the news and it's a good bet you will hear a denunciation of despotism. It may be an old quote, from a long-dead patriot, with the wrath aimed at London. More likely, though, it is the latest from a presidential candidate pulling down on the "faceless bureaucracy" of Washington.

In fact, the mood then and now has a common denominator. It is found in the spreading hostility toward a big, demanding government which many citizens feel is out of touch with the needs of the times. In recent years, polls have reflected a public feeling that the country is in deep trouble and that the government in Washington either can't, or won't, set things right.

The big worry is inflation. And there's growing recognition that this problem, which cramps most of the population, has its roots in sloppy government fiscal policy, with reliance on deficit financing. In other words, it bears a "made in Washington" label.

In damning Washington, the public holds the men who run government, especially elected officials, responsible for the mess. One poll shows that two out of three people take the attitude most politicians "don't care about me". Others show 68 per cent think our leaders lie to us, 58 per cent think both major political parties "favor business" over the average man, 49 per cent think people running government are a bit "crooked" and 58 per cent of people "with power" are out to take advantage.

After digging into polls and talking with pollsters, The Wall Street Journal introduced its findings this way: "The most important question of the campaign year may not be who will be elected President. It may be whether most people think it matters who wins." And the Journal found as of now, "huge numbers of people think it doesn't matter."

This raises a question which has intrigued students of politics for many elections. They see it as a key to the reason why so many voters pass up the ballot box on election day. These voters feel they have no real choice—that the winner, either Bill or Joe, will put his party's future ahead of the public interest. Thus, failure to vote is a form of protest.

Some analysts think this is a process which is gradually turning control of the ballot box over to the special interest activists. The man who has something directly at stake, money or a favor is much more likely to turn out on election day.

In fact, this has been given as a reason why we have had so much divided authority in Washington in recent times—the White House in Republican hands and the Congress in control of the Democrats. The "voter logic" here is that the Democrats in Congress will guarantee a free-spending government, with all of its goodies, while a Republican in the White House will provide a good climate for business.

This is a rather cynical approach to politics. It sets government up as nothing more than a giant pork barrel.

There's no question but what there's a lot of discontent about the land with things political. But it would be a mistake to read the findings of the polls as evidence of bleak despair. Rather, the polls reflect the great frustration of a harsh decade in which the business of living was sorely disrupted. Even today we have an uncertain economy, which threatens future plans.

First, there was Vietnam. It divided the nation and, as it turned out, for no purpose. Then, there was Watergate; which discredited the Nixon Administration. President Ford inherited a real mess, including an inflation-induced recession and an opposition Congress bent on discrediting his White House, no matter the cost.

The wonder of it all is that there is any confidence anywhere. Still, all the signs are that we are pulling out of the recession. Employment is rising, and so is pay, production and profits. Even the stock market has worked up to near where it was a decade ago.

So, while there's a lot of crying about the state of government, there's a lot of buying at the store. Those are good signs, too. It may be that the folks out yonder know something they haven't yet told the pollsters.

Evans-Novak....

the most popular politician in Illinois today, but he remains a liberal anathema to Bourbon Republicans; Reagan forces, consequently, rejoiced when the President listed Percy among his vice presidential prospects.

Moreover, the Ford campaign clearly dissipated its huge head start. Ford forces have just got around to appointing township coordinators in Chicago suburbs, a step taken weeks ago by State Rep. Don Totten, an organizational wizard running the Reagan campaign. One delegate candidate running uncommitted, contacted recently by Percy, told him this was the first call he had received in behalf of the President after literally hundreds from Reaganites.

One additional and highly emotional ingredient must be mixed in: militant anti-abortion forces in Illinois are all out for Reagan and are being integrated into his organization.

Consequently, the President's supporters rely on an Illinois pre-primary appearance on the President's limited campaign schedule. But what he needs more than visibility here is a threshold victory in New Hampshire or Florida. Otherwise, one of the President's biggest names in the state told us, "We'll have to start thinking about an alternative to Reagan."

THE 1970'S - - - ERA OF 'THE BIG MOUTH'!

By GAIL MICHAELS

The 'Total Woman' Is Missing The Real Life

According to every magazine I've read recently, your marriage is going nowhere unless you're a Total Woman. The Total Woman unselfishly caters to her husband's every whim, and in return she gets romance, excitement, devotion, a mink coat or two and the Mercedes Benz she's been drooling over.

Now, I certainly want romance in my marriage, and I need a new coat, so I decided to become a Total Woman. I followed all the rules laid down in the magazines. The first rule was to make sure that the husband's surroundings were conducive to romance.

So I dressed in a provocative manner. Unfortunately, I didn't have the baby doll nightie and the go-go boots that were suggested, so I had to settle for my fuzzy-wuzzy bedroom slippers and my Ayden Collard Festival t-shirt. And I didn't have any satin sheets, but I got the same effect by spraying my dacron sheets with furniture polish.

I was just putting the finishing touches on my budget version of the suggested gourmet meal - hamburger bourguignon - when I heard Phillip fumbling for his keys.

"Hello -o-o, darling," I chimed, rushing to the door. "Hi,sweetheart," he said, walking right past my provocative t-shirt and into the den. "How was your day?"

GAIL MICHAELS

I longed to tell him about the cat falling into the diaper pail, about the disposal eating my rubber glove, about his obvious need for new glasses. But the Total Woman does not burden her husband with household trivia. "Fine," I cooed through clamped teeth. "How was yours?"

"Taxing," he chortled.

I kept quiet. The Total Woman does not make snide comments about her husband's rotten puns.

"Where's the baby?" he asked.

"I put her to bed early so you could relax tonight," I answered in a low, husky, Total Woman voice.

"But I never get to see her! I look forward all day to coming home and playing with her, and you put her to bed!"

I was tempted to dump hamburger bourguignon in his ear, but the Total Woman avoids open confrontation. So I used the suggested alternative. "Ooooh, you meanie," I sniffled, beating lightly in a childlike, endearing manner on his chest. "Here I plan a lovely evening for the two of us, and you don't even notice me."

"Sure, I do, honey," he answered soothingly. "Did the baby spit up on your jeans?"

Even the Total Woman has a breaking point. "You don't love me any more!" I bawled. I try to be a Total Woman, and, as far as you're concerned, I never get farther than Sub-Total."

"Aw, Gail," Phillip said. "You don't have to do all these dumb things to make me love you. I love you because you're you. And you're strange enough as it is. So let's start over again. How was your day?"

"You wouldn't believe it," I sighed loudly, throwing myself on the sofa. "I was chasing the cat through the house after she fell into the diaper pail, and I almost caught her, but she was covered with Borateem, so she slipped out of my hands, and I ran into the stove instead, and that made the cake I was baking for tonight fall—and I resent you calling me strange—and then the baby . . ."

Health, Education Lead Public's Priorities

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The American people differ sharply from the Ford administration in their views on priorities for federal spending.

A study just released by Gallup International, based on a survey taken last June, shows the public's top priorities to be health care, public school education and law enforcement.

To determine the public's priorities, survey respondents were asked to state which of 11 areas they think should be given first consideration. Respondents were also asked for their second and third choices.

After the top three priorities the following are most frequently named: welfare and aid to the poor, public housing, pollution-conservation, and mass transit.

At the bottom of the list are military defense, agricultural aid, highway improvement, and foreign aid.

Following is the question asked:

"If and when more federal money from Washington is available, which one of the areas on this card do you think should be given first consideration when these funds are distributed? And which one of these areas do you think should be given second consideration? And which one of these areas do you think should be given third consideration?"

When the first, second and third choices are combined, the order of priorities is as follows:

Public's Top Priorities For Federal Spending (First, second, third choices combined)

1. Health Care	53%
2. Public school education	48
3. Law enforcement	41
4. Welfare and aid to poor	32
5. Public housing	26
6. Pollution, conservation	24
7. Mass transit (trains, buses)	19
8. Military defense	16
9. Agricultural aid	15
10. Highway improvement	13
11. Foreign aid	3
— No opinion	10

Results are based on in-person interviews with a total of 1,558 adults (18 and older), conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation. The survey was funded by the Ford Foundation.

Four City Librarians Named Voter Registrars

Something new has been added to the system of Pitt County Registration Commissioners — librarian personnel as registration commissioners. The four, who have been announced jointly by Elizabeth Copeland, city librarian, and Margaret Register, Executive Secretary, of the Pitt County Board of Elections, are:

June Parker, Sheppard Memorial Library; Willie Mae Gibbs, Carver Branch Library; Louise M. Wilkerson, East Branch Library; and Emma G. Malleary, the Pitt County Bookmobile.

The four were sworn in as Pitt County Registration Commissioners under the provisions of House Bill 170, ratified May 6, 1975. The bill, an amendment, provides for the designation of certain employees by the governing board of public libraries to be appointed by the County Board of Elections as special library registration deputies.

"We are happy to be able to provide this public service," Ms. Copeland commented. "Our people now have the necessary forms and information to register voters, and we hope the public will take advantage of this additional registration service."

Hours for the library registration commissioners are: East Branch and Carver Libraries, daily Monday through Friday from 1 to 6 p.m.; and the roving Bookmobile, daily Monday through Friday during operating hours until 5 p.m. Ms. Copeland explained that since Ms. Parker, the Sheppard registration commissioner works at different shifts, registration times at Sheppard would vary. Library opening hours there are 10:30 p.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and until 6 p.m. on Saturday. Interested persons should call in advance to determine whether Ms. Parker would be on hand at the time the person to register plans to come in.

Conservation Cost Shares Set By Development Group

The Pitt County Agricultural Conservation Development Group formulated the 1976 Agricultural Conservation Program and set cost-shares for the various practices at their Tuesday meeting.

Farmers who have conservation problems or need forestry improvements are urged by the local ASCS county committee to study these practices and to call on the ASCS Office for help in carrying out a conservation program on their farms.

The allocation of funds for 1976 under the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) are limited, therefore the ASCS County Committee will not act on any request for cost-sharing until the farmer indicates he is ready to begin carrying out the practice. Practices for 1976 are listed below: RE-1 Establishing Permanent Vegetative Cover, RE-2 Improving Permanent Vegetative Cover, RE-3 Planting Trees, RE-4 Improving A Stand Of Trees, RE-6 Stripcropping, RE-7 Constructing Terrace Systems, RE-8 Diversions, RE-9 Streambank Stabilization, RE-10 Permanent Wildlife Habitat, RE-11 Sediment Retention, Erosion or Water Control Structures, RE-12 Sediment, Chemical or Water Runoff Control Systems, RE-13 Windbreaks or Shelterbelts, SC-9 Permanent Open Ditch Drainage Systems, SC-10 Underground Drainage Systems, Sd-1 Interim Cover Crops, SI-1 Lagoons For Animal Wastes, and SB-5 Water Impounding Reservoirs.

Applications for new grower's tobacco, peanut, cotton and feed grain allotments for 1976 must be filed at the ASCS Office no later than February 15. Eligibility requirements for new allotments are available at the ASCS Office. Applicants cannot own or operate any other farm with such allotments for the current year.

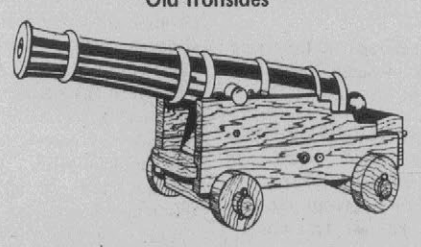

The maximum pounds of flue-cured tobacco that can be transferred to a farm by lease is determined by multiplying the farm yield by the acreage computed by subtracting the basic tobacco allotments from 50 per cent of the cropland. The limitation is not applicable when leases are filled after June 14.

The 1976 peanut allotments have been established and notices mailed to farm operators. The allotments in most cases are the same as the 1975 allotments. Farmers will be permitted to transfer by lease or sell peanut allotments in 1976 as in 1975. However, the parties involved in each transfer are being notified that in the event Congress changes the present law, the acreage may be different. April 1 is the deadline date to file peanut transfer agreements at the County ASCS Office.

All peanut producers are encouraged by the ASCS to use measurement service or to be sure that they do not overplant their allotment. There is no tolerance on peanuts, in all cases where the farm is measured and found to be overplanted by any amount.

The cost of Measurement Service is $1.00 per acre for all crops, plus $4.00 for each request filed. The minimum charge is $11.50 per farm.

Hearing Aids Wanted

Hearing Aid Clinic Is A Joint Project

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

A joint program to accelerate the already underway program of a training and assistance clinic for deaf people in the area served by Pitt County has been undertaken by the Pitt County Department of Social Services, the Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic (EN&T), and the East Carolina University Speech and Hearing Division.

Some of the persons actively engaged in this program are Charlotte Phelps and Debbie Ingram, both of the Department of Social Services at the old hospital building, 709 Johnson Street, and Mike Ernest of the Vocational-Rehabilitation Services for the Deaf located at 110 South Evans Street.

Ms. Ingram, speaking about the training program of which the Hearing Aid Loan Bank (HALB) is an integral part, explained that the first HALB Clinic was held in January and that it had been a successful start. It is hoped this can become an expanded and continuing training program for deaf persons and for those with hearing defects.

"We have 12 referrals for the clinic at this point, but right now we can only train two monthly," Ms. Ingram noted. The cost for the clinic is substantially lower than if the same service was provided on a private basis. Total cost for the entire clinic, including use of a hearing aid, is $38.00. Of this amount, $10 goes to the Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic (a non-government private clinic); $10 to the ECU Speech and Hearing Division; and $18 to the hearing aid dealer providing the hearings aids used by each individual. The normal cost for this service would be about $65.00.

"Tentatively," Miss Ingram noted, "plans are for two HALB clients to receive the three phase assistance and training. The clinics now are scheduled for the first Thursday of each month."

Mike Ernest added that the $38.00 fee "includes all medical evaluations and the necessary ear mold impression." He added that one of the current drawbacks is not having enough hearing aids. "If we had more," Ernest said, "there's a good possibility we'd be holding the clinics more frequently. The major delay now is due to not having enough hearing aids."

Ernest and Ms. Ingram stressed that hearing aids that are not being used—due to replacement with a newer type or in cases where the original user is deceased—can be put to valuable use to others by donating them for the clinic.

These can be delivered to the Department of Social Services on Johnson Street or to the Vocational Rehabilitation Office on South Evans Street.

"We will also be most happy to accept calls from persons so that arrangements can be made for a pick up of any hearing aid to be donated," Ernest added.

Numbers to call for this purpose or for any information connected with the HALB program are: 758-2167 or 752-7107.

Soviets Say They Squeeze Hydrogen, Get A Metal

By BARRY JAMES

Akademgorodok, Moscow (UPI) — In a feat of technical alchemy, Soviet scientists have succeeded in turning the common gas hydrogen the lightest of the elements and basic ingredient of the universe — into metallic form.

So far they have been able to produce only minute amounts under enormous pressure, according to articles in scientific journals. And the metal turns back to gas once the pressure is released.

But Prof. Leonid F. Vereshchagin, director of the Institute of High Pressure Physics, said he is hopeful the metal can be stabilized by combining it with other substances.

He predicted the result might be the scientists' dream of an ideal superconductor — a material with little or virtually no resistance to electricity that could revolutionize industry.

The Soviet Union has emphasized research on superconductors because of its need to transport energy from remote Siberian and Central Asian powerplants over vast distances to populated regions.

At present, much of the energy is lost in transmission. There also is a limit on the load that existing materials can carry.

"It's far too early to say exactly where our researches will lead us, Vereshchagin said in an interview. "We have a saying in Russian, 'Don't divide up the bear until you've killed it.' But we have transformed hydrogen into a metallic state — not once but hundreds of times — and this in itself is a great achievement."

To further its investigations, the institute plans to inaugurate the world's largest hydraulic press devoted entirely to scientific research.

Vereshchagin said the 50,000-ton force of the press single cylinder will be concentrated on an area about the size of a thumbnail, producing pressure that in theory could go beyond 10 megabars, or 10 million times more than normal atmospheric pressure.

He said the institute produced metallic hydrogen at a pressure of three megabars on a 10,000-ton press.

The new press stands in its own 10-story building, half of which is underground, at this scientific township just ouside Moscow.

The creation of pressure vast enough to rearrange atoms is limited by the strength of the "anvil" against which it is applied.

The material used by the Russians — artificial diamond forged under pressure from common graphite — was developed by the institute and now has widespread industrial apppication, most notably in oil well drill bits.

The institute says the artificial diamond is as hard as the natural variety, but less brittle and much cheaper.

Vereshchagin said the principle used in the pressure experiments is that of a Russian "matryoshka" doll, or a Chinese box within boxes. The first chamber is made of artificial diamond, the second of diamond alloy, the third of carbon alloy, the fourth of strong steel and the last of ordinary steel.

This enables researchers to build up and maintain pressure greater than that in the center of the earth, Vereshchagin said. The process is valuable not only for its industrial spinoffs but also in geophysical and astrophysical research. For example, some scientists believe the planets Jupiter and Saturn have cores of metallic hydrogen formed by heat and pressure.

Asked to predict what results could be expected from the new hydraulic press, Vereshchagin mentioned super-hard steel and "perhaps materials which are still beyond our imagination."

He cited a theory which says all materials turn metallic under sufficient pressure and said the institute has even turned common ice into a metallic conductor of energy.

He pulled out a box full of black artificial diamonds which had been preshaped while still in the graphite stage. Some were perforated for extruding wire, others were nuts with microscopic threading.

Under a microscope, he showed single-crystal clear diamonds which he said had potential application as heat-resistant transistors. With another product of the institute, a lightweight diamond alloy which the Soviets call Almet, Vereshchagin gouged scratches across tough tungsten and carbon alloys.

In the institute's workshops, where practical applications are sought for new materials, a technician deftly polished a cylinder of hard steel to a mirror finish with a diamond-like substance called Borazon. Another cleanly and effortlessly sliced a pane of glass with a cutter of artificial diamond, then burnished a piece of tungsten steel with a diamond-equipped machine tool.

The institute even makes hydrocompressors for sale abroad to earn hard curcency with which to buy Western scientific equipment, such as Vereschchagin's American desktop computer.

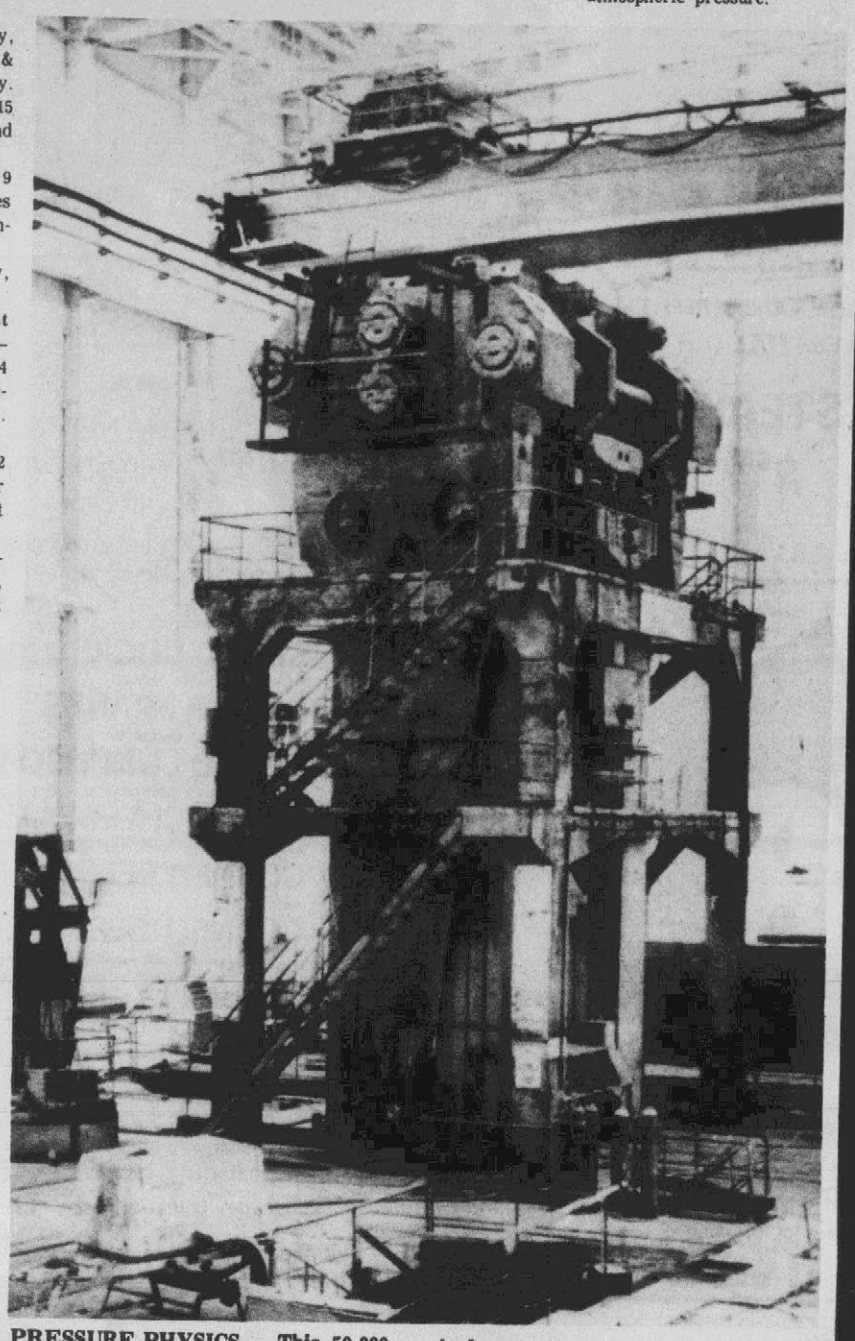

Vereshchagin set up a high pressure laboratory in Moscow in 1939 at the invitation at the Academy of Sciences, of which he is a member, after coming from Kharkov University to lecture on the subject. He has been director ever since, and Western experts said the institute is now probably preeminent in its field.

Impressive as the institute's achievements seem, isn't it far fetched to imagine metal emerging in industrial quantities from nature's simplest element?

"In 1885," Vereschchagin said by way of reply, "a French scientist called Charles Terier predicted it qould be impossible to produce industrial ammonia because the process irequired a pressure of 14 atmospheres. Now ammonia is a common product and we routinely produce a pressure of more than a million atmospheres."

PLAN YOUR HOME

TRADITIONAL LINES, COVERED PATIO BENEFIT PLAN

By Jerry Bishop

Graceful columns define the front porch and blend with shuttered small-paned windows to create a picturesque facade for the Edgarton, a three bedroom home.

Covering only 1300 square feet of living area, the plan nonetheless manages to fuse a traditionally appealing exterior with no-waste floor plan styled for family living. Besides three bedrooms and two full baths, the design shows an open family kitchen, substantial living room, and covered patio.

Entry is prefaced by the front porch, added to evoke a sense of the past but totally useful for enjoying the evening breezes. Meeting current standards of convenience, the floor plan includes a tiled, closeted foyer which allows ready access to the large living room.

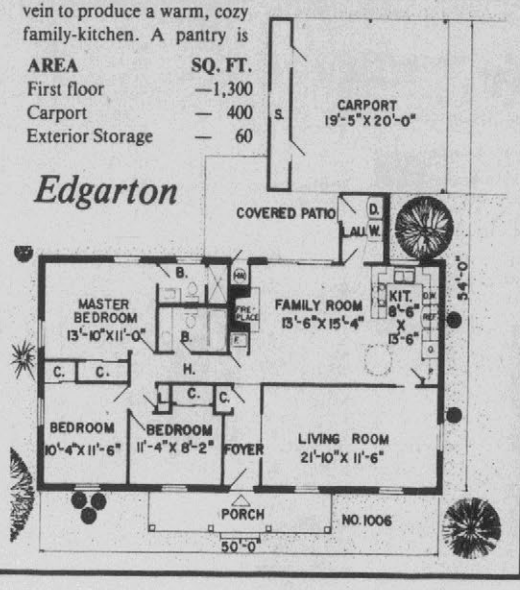

Beyond the living room is the family activity center, and open area that merges kitchen, dining area, and family room. Since the area is edged by a wood-burning fireplace, the room exhibits endless possibilities for decorating in an Early American vein to produce a warm, cozy family-kitchen. A pantry is included, and a convenient laundry room borders the area.

AREA	SQ. FT.
First floor	—1,300
Carport	— 400
Exterior Storage	— 60

Annexed by a set of sliding glass doors is the covered patio, a logical extension of the family room and a perfect spot for barbecues. The adjoining carport features an outdoor storage area with 60 square feet of space for hiding tools, toys and patio furniture.

Despite the modest size of the home, the bedrooms are more than adequate. Each features a sizable closet, and the master bedroom is indulged with a private bath with shower.

The Edgarton, a plan that merges traditional charm with up-to-date convenience, offers a solution for families serching for an economical, but warm and livable, home.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The top of a wooden table, especially one that falls into the dining or coffee category, is probably the most vulnerable portion of any piece of furniture in the house.

It has many enemies, including water, alcohol, gravy, hot dishes, too much or too little humidity, constant sunshine, hot ashes, neglect and children. The result of an indignity by one of these foes is some kind of blemish. When all or much of the finish is badly marred, there isn't much that can be done except to strip off the finish and apply a new one. But in most cases, the damaged area can be disguised well enough so that it won't be noticed.

Curiously, some of the products that can be used to make the repairs were never intended for that purpose, among them iodine, shoe polish, cigar ash, nut meat or even coloring crayons.

Minor scratches are the easiest to hide. One of the ways to tell which of the above household items will provide the best match for the surrounding surface is to test in some inconspicuous spot, preferably the underside of the table. While the underside may not be finished entirely, there is usually a small finished area just under the edges.

There are regular wax coloring sticks available in a number of tones, but you can also use a crayon from a child's crayon box if there is a suitable color. Iodine is also good, especially if the wood has a mahogany finish. Remember that iodine gets darker with age, so take this into consideration when you make the test. Brown shoe polish may do the job, with tan better for a lighter finish.

With any liquid scratch filler, use an artist's small brush. Wax may interfere with the coloring material, so remove it from the scratch with a solvent before applying the color. Oddly enough, paste wax itself may be used to hide a scratch if it is just on the surface. If hot ashes have caused the blemish, be sure first to scrape away any burned particles.

For more stubborn marks, you may have to use a regular oil stain of the proper color. Again, be sure to remove any wax first. If the stain you have or buy turns out to be a bit too dark, it can be lightened with turpentine. If you obtain a good match but find that the area doesn't have the gloss of the surrounding surface, you'll have to apply just a touch of shellac, let it dry for five or six hours, then rub with rottenstone and oil. Rub with a clean cloth in the direction of the grain.

When there is an alcohol stain on the finish, the rottenstone-oil treatment usually will do the trick. If the stain is from water and is whitish, try rubbing with camphorated oil or denatured alcohol. The latter usually will work with a lacquer or varnish finish, since it will remove the spot without affecting the finish. However, denatured alcohol is a solvent for shellac and will tend to take off part of the finish as well as the stain. But shellac is not likely to be the finish unless the furniture was made 50 years ago or more. To be sure, make the previously mentioned test to see whether the alcohol affects the finish.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — We soon will be having a house built on a piece of land we have owned for many years. The site of the house will be far from the roadway, so we will be able to place it on the lot infany direction we choose. It will be a contemporary house with large areas of glass. How can we decide what to do?

A. — You do not say whether you are using the services of an architect. If you are, he can advise you on orientation; that is, the relationship of the house to the site. If you do not have an architect, the builder may be able to advise you IF he has knowledge of such things. Theoretically, you should situate the house so that the large glass areas face the best view. But this doesn't always work out, because if the big windows face westward, sun control will be more difficult. If the glass faces to the south, roof overhangs and other shading devices can be more effectively utilized. There are still other factors to consider. Suppose you decide the house should be facing in a certain direction to take advantage of natural assets, but you discover that creating a driveway to your garage or carport will necessitate cutting down trees or taking other expensive land-clearing measures? Now you'll have to weigh your first choice against your budget. In short, you may have to compromise. First, however, have someone who has seen your property and knows the type of house you're building explain the choices.

Q. — Can you settle a dispute that occurred the other day when my husband and I were looking through the real estate section of a newspaper? I won't tell you which one of us took which side of the argument, but the question is this: are there more one or two-story houses built every year?

A. — One-story houses are the most popular. At least, they were in 1974, according to the latest figures available from the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. During that year, 66 per cent of all houses built were one-story structures. Twenty-five per cent were two-story designs. The rest were split levels or something close to them.

Q. — We bought an old bureau from a second-hand store. It is in good condition, but I don't like the dark color of the paint. I want to lighten it with enamel. The hardware store where I shop has enamel in gloss, semi-gloss and flat. Which is best? Also, do I have to remove the old finish or can I enamel right over it?

A. — Generally, high gloss enamel is more durable than the semi-gloss, which is more durable than flat. This durability is especially important when the object to be covered will be subjected to hard handling. If you object to the shine of the high gloss enamel, the semi-gloss will do a good job. As for removing the old finish, it is not necessary if there is no peeling or cracking. If there is, then a complete removal is in order.

Watch House-Swapping Angles

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Home exchange has become a way of life for many vacationers, says Wilma Ferguson of Winnetka, Ill., who has a service that helps link the people who want to swap homes.

"It's a way to have a rent-free vacation but houses are exchanged for many reasons by people attending universities, grandparents who may want to be near their children, but not underfoot, and by businessmen who want their families with them on their temporary assignments." House-swapping also gives people the opportunity to go abroad.

"And some people trade houses for security reasons. They want someone in the house while they are away. Not all house exchange is done by families. Lots of it is done by singles, divorcees, widowers. Retired people use house trading as a way to study different communities," says Mrs. Ferguson.

On a membership basis, Mrs. Ferguson provides a service, Adventures-In-Living, which is a directory of people who would like to exchange houses. Some photographs are included in the booklet. House swappers make their own arrangements using the advice Mrs. Ferguson provides.

"One must be sure to get all details of the house, apartment, condominium, the number of rooms and beds, kitchen facilities, recreation and so on," she says.

"And it is important to get business, personal and bank references and to check out everything. A security deposit should be given and I suggest that photographs of the family as well as the home should be exchanged."

The house swapper should also be sure her insurance covers the use of the house, car, boat or whatever by the other people. There should be agreement on phone calls, major appliances, special equipment. And one might want to store antiques, heirlooms and other valuables in a locked closet. Many traders leave everything as-is, the cleaning service, yard service, laundry pick-up and so on, making the deal even easier.

Mrs. Ferguson always advises her members to write to 10 or 15 house offerings before they make a decision, but other than that she doesn't actually get involved.

"The only complaints I've heard have been minor. When people exchange they usually take good care of the house because they know the other person is responsible for their dwelling. That's why a security deposit is a good idea," she says.

Preliminaries may seem a little time consuming, she admits, but many families continue to trade with the same people, so it could be a one-time experience.

Some listings are particularly tempting. One man sent a postcard from Greece with an X marking the spot of his house, just below the Acropolis ... an American actress wrote that she had a European villa and would "willingly trade her Mercedes for a like car." A color photograph of a chateau in France illustrated another good offering, but Mrs. Ferguson pointed out "these people would expect an elegant house in return." Sometimes, though, when the deal is not even-Steven, other arrangements are made. For example, one person may be permitted to have more time in a house than the other.

One offering stressed gold mining opportunities near Anchorage ... A Tokyo house was touted as being near a shrine ... A five-bedroom Paris home was offered by "two adults, two children, for exchange anywhere." One man wanted to trade a big cruiser for a house, another wanted to trade house and plane for house and plane elsewhere. The most easily traded house is a villa which "seems to be everyone's dream," Mrs. Ferguson said, "probably because it suggests a relaxed way of life." But many houses described and pictured in the directory are just average, comfortable-looking dwellings.

The most popular areas for trade are winter resorts and the south, but people go anywhere, she maintains. One Englishman traded a four-story London flat for a house near Chicago for six weeks.

Often a long-term business arrangement dictates where a man and his family must seek an exchange, perhaps in a small town or city. The trader may make an excellent deal for their own family-oriented home that the family seeks.

Mrs. Ferguson, who is in the real estate business, got the idea for her service because she had once wanted her own children to go to a farm for the summer and she would willingly have swapped her own city home. It didn't work out, but she thought of it through the years and five years ago she parlayed the idea into her present service. It isn't the only house swapping service, but it is the only one that provides books telling how to do it, she maintains.

Study Fuel Cost-Cutting

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP) — Portage County and Kent State University are combining efforts to determine whether windmills and solar energy collectors can cut fuel costs for low-income families.

Equipment is to be installed for one of the families the Portage County Community Action Commission represents, Kent State architecture teacher Jack Kremers said.

Kremers said 50 per cent is "a realistic figure" for the possible cost reduction the $7,300 study may produce.

"In this climate, you could never use solar heat 100 per cent," he said.

He and his junior and senior students are conducting the study at the commission's request. The commission and the Ohio Department of Economic and Community Development are providing the money.

Kremers said a windmill might produce electricity to power fans, blowers and pumps on regular furnaces. He said solar collectors could catch the sun's energy and store it in a tank for use as heat when needed.

Such apparatus is highly expensive initially, he said.

"Today you couldn't compete with the fossil fuels — oil, gas and coal — but you could in the future if prices of those fuels escalate," he added.

HOME SECURITY

CHICAGO (UPI) — Many new home security and horticultural products were introduced recently at the 64th annual National Housewares Exposition in Chicago. New items at the semiannual marketing show included an indoor vinyl water hose for plant tending. It connects to almost any indoor faucet and travels 50 feet from its water source.

The Garden Clinic

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Our garden club would like to observe Arbor Day by planting some trees. What is the date for Arbor Day in North Carolina? (Mrs. L.G., Marion)

A. This year it is Friday, March 19. Arbor Day in North Carolina is always the first Friday following the 15th of March. (Bill Stanton, extension forester)

Q. We have just planted eight climbing roses. Is it all right to let them bloom the first year? (N.E., Marston)

A. Little or no harm results from allowing climbers (or any other types of roses) to bloom the first year of growth. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. When is the best time to prune a dogwood tree? (C.G., Shelby)

A. February is an excellent month to do major pruning on dogwoods. Of course, you will remove some of the spring crop of flowers, but recovery will be rapid. If only minor pruning is needed to reshape the tree, wait until plant is in bloom. Cut back to shape as needed and use removed branches for indoor arrangements. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. When and how do you plant asparagus? (J.F., Carrboro)

A. Asparagus crowns (roots) are usually planted during February through April. Plant about a foot apart in furrows six inches deep. Mulch heavily with straw to control weeds. Begin harvesting the spears the second season. (Albert A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Private Postal Service Plans Gaining Momentum

By DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service, which is charging its customers more, pleasing them less and still losing nearly $4 million a day, may find itself thrown to the wolves of old-fashioned free enterprise.

Fast gaining momentum in Congress and elsewhere is a move to repeal the government's exclusive legal right to handle first-class mail, forcing the Postal Service to compete with private business for the job.

The critics ask this question: If the Postal Service cannot deliver the mail promptly at reasonable rates that will cover the costs, why not turn it over to someone who can?

Bipartisan legislation to do just that was defeated overwhelmingly in the House last year. Supporters blame the lack of an advance lobbying effort to "sell" the proposal to Congress.

It would have repealed the Private Express Statutes, which grant the Postal Service a total monopoly over first-class mail and bars competition from private firms, no matter how cheaply they can carry the mail.

The measure is back before the House, introduced by conservative Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., with 21 cosponsors. It has won the support of such liberals as Reps. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., and Parren Mitchell, D-Md.

In addition, the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability endorsed the idea earlier this month. It argued that private competition would "retard or reverse the upward rush of postal rates" and produce more efficient mail delivery.

President Ford told magazine publishers recently he thinks the Postal Service could do a better job. "We have to prod them, just as we are prodding New York City, to improve their efficiency and productivity," he said.

James Rademacher, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, says he is convinced the administration is ready to give private industry the job.

Ronald Reagan, challenging Ford for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination, advanced the idea in his controversial plan to reduce the federal budget by $90 billion.

Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar opposes repeal of the government's 200-year-old monopoly on first-class mail.

Bailar says postal revenues have suffered because mail volume is down, partly because the Postal Service is losing business to private competitors offering cheaper rates for delivering parcel post, mass advertising, utility bills and other non-first-class mail.

Even the U.S. Treasury has begun bypassing the Postal Service, depositing monthly Social Security checks directly into beneficiaries' bank accounts by electronic transfer. This will cost the Postal Service an estimated 18 million pieces of mail a month by 1980.

Bailar says the Postal Service is caught in a "vicious cycle" of raising rates to cover declining volume caused by rising rates. The solution, he told Congress, is to boost the government's current $1.6 billion postal subsidy by 10 per cent a year for the next three years.

But Congress is starting to balk.

Since 1971, average first-class postal rates have soared 63 per cent, outdistancing the 35 per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index for the same period. Postal officials say the new 13-cent postage stamp for a first-class letter will be only temporary.

Postal employe salaries and benefits, which now account for 85 per cent of the service's $14 billion budget, have risen 60 per cent since 1970. The average postal worker receives $13,400 a year, higher than the national average for policemen, firemen, and teachers.

Meanwhile, the deficits are mounting. Despite a general operating subsidy of $920 million a year in Treasury funds, plus a $700 million subsidy last year for second, third and fourth class mail, the Postal Service figures it will lose $1.4 billion this year. The deficit was only $13 million in 1973.

Postal officials argue that allowing business to compete for mail delivery would result in private carriers skimming off the most profitable types of mail, leaving the Postal Service with the more costly second, third and fourth class mail.

First-class mail pays more than half the cost of these other classes, which includes newspapers, magazines, books and bulk advertising.

Supporters of the repeal proposal say this is an open admission that some mail users are overcharged. Rep. Patricia Schroeder estimates that first-class mail customers are paying "a billion a year more than they should."

Bailar warns that repeal would force the Postal Service to switch to variable postal rates based on distances mailed. But his critics reply this is the way telephone companies, parcel firms, moving companies and many other businesses figure their rates, and that over-all costs would be lower than existing postal operations.

As postal rates continue to rise and the postal debt grows deeper, supporters of monopoly repeal are saying that at the very least, Congress should make a trial test of the proposal to determine whether private firms really can offer a cheaper and more efficient service.

Those Knights Just Seek To Escape 20th Century

By RAFAEL BERMUDEZ

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Every so often, Sir Jack Lord Nimble and his band of knights don suits of armor and take up wooden swords, foam rubber maces and lances to rescue ladies in distress and duel beneath huge oak trees along the Mississippi River.

Sir Jack — in real life a carpenter named Ronald Brown — and his followers are members of an organization called the society for Creative Anachronism.

Each member picks a medieval character whom he would like to be and assumes that character's identity. If no historical or literary characters are suitable, a member can invent his own.

The assumed personality is called the member's "persona."

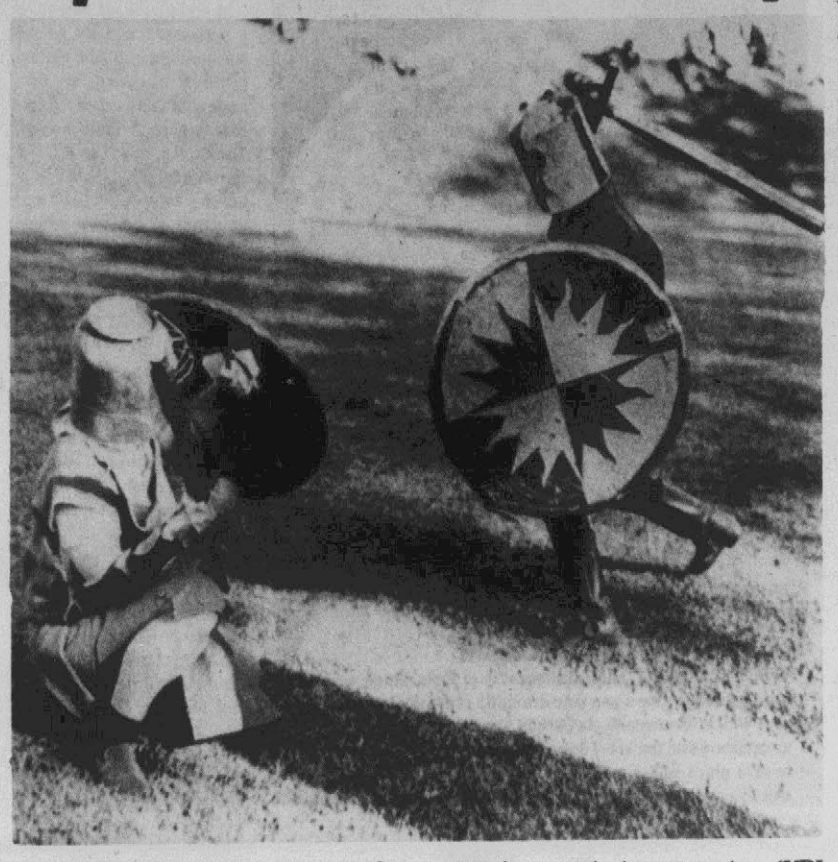

"I think it's a spirit which moves our people. We're actually creating a world. It's just as real as this world. But more than anything, it's a game," said Brown, who is fond of quoting lengthy verses of Chaucer.

"The rules of chivalry apply. What makes you tops is to be chivalrous, to pay honor to people."

Brown holds the title of "Shneschal" and is leader of the 30-member Baton Rouge group known as "The Barony of Draconia."

The society, which originated in Berkeley, Calif., in 1966, claims a nationwide membership of 10,000. The national organization is split into four regional "Kingdoms" which are subdivided into principalities and baronies.

The groups hold tournaments, revelries and other activities in which members, both men and women, wear costumes of the medieval period and address each other in chivalrous tones. The knights duel and rescue the ladies at the tournaments, and they all party at the revelries.

"We're just people who want to get away from the 20th Century, who just want to fantasize. It's a great way to get your frustrations out," said Scott Simoneaux, a Louisiana State University student, whose name in the society is Baron Francois Lord Duvant.

"It also allows for a second childhood. Let's get down to the nitty gritty, we never grew up."

Members adopt medieval mannerisms and language during events and are painstakingly meticulous in making their costumes and weapons conform with those of the period.

They follow strict rules of chivalry in their duels, never striking a challenger while he is down, turned away or at any other disadvantage. The knights make contact with their swords, lances and maces (spiked clubs) and the foam rubber paddings on the weapons usually — but not always — soften the blows.

Heavy helmets, fashioned from old freon tank caps, protect the knights' heads and they ward off blows to the body with shields made from tops of 55 gallon oil drums.

Members become versed in medieval history and learn crafts such as stained glass making, costuming, baking and embroidering. Those who achieve certain skills are knighted.

The society describes a knight as a "man of refinement who knows somewhat of dance and chess and literature, who knows how to take the hand of lady, and how to set an example to others."

Even a duel to the finish must be provoked with proper pomp and ceremony.

"I'm going to get into a fight with Harold. He called me a knave and pulled my beard," said Sir Jack, drawing his sword and whacking his adversary across the helmet.

ECU Faculty Show At Kate Lewis

THE 1976 ANNUAL exhibit of art by faculty-artists of the ECU School of Art is on view at Kate Lewis Gallery on campus this month (in Whichard Building at Wright Circle). Part of the exhibit, in which various media are represented, is shown in this photograph.

It could be that the splendor of last year's faculty show colors my perception, but the 1976 School of Art Faculty Show now on view at Kate Lewis Gallery doesn't seem quite up to last year's level of excitement.

All the media range is there — prints, sculpture, weaving, paintings, prints, drawings, etc. This year's show is rewarding where last year's had a special ambience very seldom found in a small show where numerous artists must be represented by one, or at most, two works each.

Statements such as these, are of course, no more than vague generalizations. To say something more specific about this current show (which will be up through February), the most accurate brief summation is to say it is an excellent show; a representative sampling of recent and almost recent examples of work by artists of the School of Art faculty; and finally, there are no happy surprises afforded by any of the works shown.

Faculty artists in this year's annual show (in alphabetical order) are: Joe Buskie, Charles Chamberlain, Wesley Crawley, Robert and Sara Edmisten; Michael Ehlbeck; Ray Ellmore, Tom Evans, Emily Farnham, Janet Fisher, Marilyn and Tran Gordley, Art Haney, Paul Hartley, William Holley, Norman Keller, Francis Neel, Betty Petteway, Bob Rasch, Ed Reep, Elizabeth Ross, Dorothy and John Satterfield, Don Sexauer, Terry Smith, Francis Speight, Mel Stanforth, Henry Stindt and Jeff Verheyen. One retired faculty member, Warren Chamberlain, is also represented.

Within the limitations imposed by the large number of artists showing in a limited space, this show has variety and vitality. There's much here to give pleasure to viewers of many differing tastes.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By ANNE NOBLE

Fourteen years old, loyal to the king, reluctant to fight - this is Alexander McLeod during the American Revolution in South Carolina. After witnessing the hanging of his patriot grandfather by those he thought to be his friends, he decides never to wear a red coat. Eight months later he is committed to the service of Francis Marion, the Swamp Fox. Alec's grandmother, called "witch" by some, has "seen" visions in the fire and has predicted certain things for Alec - dark water, danger, a high place, a gathering of horses. WHO COMES TO KING'S MOUNTAIN? by John and Patricia Beatty is an exciting and thoroughly researched novel of Alec McLeod's experience in the revolution - especially for teenagers but enjoyable for all ages.

Remember Peter Benchley, author of JAWS fame? Well, his father is trying to keep up with him. Nathaniel Benchley has written a book called BEYOND THE MISTS. It is the story of Gunnar, a young Dane, who is the sole survivor of a disastrous Viking raid in England. He wants to get rich and to see new places, so he ships out on a merchant vessel bound for Iceland. The boat wrecks, and Gunnar is forced to spend the winter in Norway. Here he meets Leif Eriksson, and this meeting leads to Gunnar's trip to a land he had not known existed. Benchley has written a fascinating account of the violent world when seagoing raiders were at their peak of power.

S. E. Hinton's new book deals with another violent world - that of street gangs. She is the popular author of THE OUTSIDERS and THAT WAS THEN, THIS IS NOW. Her latest is RUMBLE FISH. Rusty James is the number one tough guy among the kids who hang out in his territory. He wants to be cool and reserved like his brother, Motorcycle Boy. But Rusty James relies on his firsts more than his brains. Rusty's blind drive and lack of direction eat away at his world until it all comes apart. And this time Motorcycle Boy is not around to pick up the pieces.

DUST OF THE EARTH is the latest of the Cleaver creations (which include WHERE THE LILIES BLOOM and THE WHYS AND WHEREFORES OF LITTABELLE LEE). In DUST OF THE EARTH, fourteen year old Fern Drawn's family moves to Chokecherry, North Dakota, in the Badlands. Life is primitive and hard - even more difficult because the family is forever clashing. The word "love" is never spoken. Fern ends up dropping out of school to herd sheep. One by one, each of the Drawns is called upon to make sacrifices as they learn to triumph over the realities of life and the Badlands of North Dakota.

Show times are: Tuesday, 4 p.m., Carver Library; Thursday, 7:30 p.m., Sheppard Memorial Library; and Friday, 4 p.m. East Branch Library.

$64,800 Art Grant

The N. C. Arts Council has received a $64,800 federal grant to place professional artists in school programs across the state during the 1976-77 school year.

Council director Halsey North said the grant will be implemented by the Division of Cultural Arts of the N. C. Department of Public Instruction.

The general proposal for this "Artists-in-Schools" grant involves elementary and secondary school programs in dance, film, folk arts, poetry and the visual arts and crafts.

The grant was awarded by the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA), and is being matched by local funds and in-kind contributions.

This is the sixth year that the arts council has funded an Artists-in-Schools program. During the current school year, the council placed 37 artists in 108 schools serving 11,000 children in North Carolina.

NEA grants for the Artists-in-Schools program total nearly $3.7 million across the country for the upcoming school year. They will enable more than 2,000 artists to work with nearly 1 million young people in 7,500 schools.

'Tobacco Village' Project Takes Shape

ROCKY MOUNT—A $500,000 fund-raising program for the establishment and development of Tobacco Village USA has been begun, according to Joseph T. Summrell, the project's executive vice-president.

Tobacco Village USA, which will be located five miles east of Rocky Mount on Highway 43 South, will include a number of exhibits, museums and old time buildings dedicated to the historical development of the tobacco industry.

Tobacco Village USA was made possible by a 59-acre donation from Thomas F. Surles, according to Summrel. The farm was to be sold and proceeds used to help finance an agricultural museum. Some $33,000 was received for the farm and the seed was planted for Tobacco Village.

The West Edgecombe Ruritan Club has taken over sponsorship of Tobacco Village, Summrell said and is currently trying to raise money for its construction.

Funds are being raised in several ways. Memorial plaques, to be placed in a museum at Tobacco Village, are being sold for a $500 or more contribution. Memorial plaques can be purchased in the name of men or women involved in the tobacco industry.

A $250 contribution from business firms will entitle them to have their name and location engraved on a large plaque to be hung in the museum.

Individuals can have their names engraved on a large plaque in the museum for a $100 contribution.

Another medium of raising funds is by contributions of any amount from anyone interested in the project.

Among the facilities planned for Tobacco Village USA, Summrell said, are the museum, a working farm, a reproduction of Rocky Mount's first tobacco warehouse with animated characters, an exhibition hall, a theater, a country store, blacksmith shop and recreations of other old-time rural buildings.

"With each passing day, we see many scenes of the bygone era of agriculture passing us by," Summrell said. "We hope to capture some of the things and scenes of the past through the development of Tobacco Village and to preserve some of the nostalgia and history associated with the farming industry, especially tobacco.

A petting zoo, picnic area, lake, snack bars, and possibly a restaurant are among some additional facilities planned.

Tentative plans are to raise funds in 1976, start construction in 1977 and open Tobacco Village USA on July 4, 1978, according to Summrell.

Tobacco Village is a non-profit organization and will not charge an admission fee. Admission will be charged, however, for certain types of entertainment and rides with proceeds providing operating expenses.

Contributions are now being accepted in the categories mentioned. To make contributions, or get additional information, write Tobacco Village USA, Inc. P. O. Box 2136, Rocky Mount, N. C. 27801. Contributions are tax exempt.

ECU Workshop For Librarians

Twenty-four librarians from universities and public libraries across the state have completed a three-day workshop on non-print library materials at East Carolina University, Feb. 3-5.

Workshop coordinators were Lloyd Childers, LCSA federal program assistant, and Raleigh librarians Diana Young and Barry Mangum.

Purpose of the program was to acquaint participating librarians with such non-print library resources as recordings, art prints, sound and silent films, games, transparencies, posters, toys and the equipment necessary to use these items.

Among the workshop instructors were Dr. Budd Gambee, associate professor of library science at UNC-Chapel Hill; Trish Gwyn, project director for the Rockingham Public library in Eden; Patrice Gafney of the Forsyth County Library's audio-visual department; Dr. Robert Brown, professor of education at ECU; Walter McLendon, instructor of education at ECU; Tom Thuma, director of instructional resources for the ECU Division of Health Affairs, and Marietta Franklin, media coordinator for Ravenscroft School, Raleigh.

Athletes In Action Power Past Bucs, 88-72

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The East Carolina University Pep Band broke into the "Mickey Mouse Club" Song at one time last night. Whether it was a comment on their team's play or not is questionable.

But the play of the Bucs was not—it definitely was "Mickey Mouse," as they allowed the Athletes In Action to dominate them, 88-72 last night.

The Athletes, the basketball wing of the Campus Crusade for Christ, came into the game with only a 5-22 record, winning against some of the most obscure teams in the country—none of them Division I entries.

But against no one had they won so handily. It was almost a walkaway.

"I'm thoroughly embarrassed," Coach Dave Patton said after watching his Pirates in the contest. "I'm embarrassed for our fans, not for our players," he added. "They deserve a better team than this."

East Carolina shot 43.2 per cent from the floor, while the Athletes made 48.6. The AIA played a much tighter defense than did the Pirates, and that helped make the difference in the shooting.

The floor shooting was not the big thing in point total, however, as the Athletes made only four more field goals—eight points—than the Pirates. They made eight more at the line, getting 16 of 20 shots, while the Pirates had eight of 10. Only two more fouls were called on the Bucs, but most of the time, they were shooting fouls.

Turnovers played a role both ways. East Carolina suffered through 25 turnovers, while the AIA had 20. But the Athletes stole the ball seven times to the Pirates two for a 10 difference in losing the ball.

Amazingly, the two teams had the same rebound figures, 43 each. Wade Henkel had his best night on the boards, pulling down 15, while Larry Hunt had 11. Scott Magnuson led the AIA with 10.

East Carolina took the initial lead in the game, with Henkel hitting after 19 seconds. Hunt added a score in the same minute and two free throws by Earl Garner ran the lead to 6-0 before Keith Harris scored on a steal to put the first AIA points on the board.

The Pirates continued to lead, however, moving out to a six-point spread again, 12-6 with 14:09 left in the half.

But it was at that point that the Athletes caught fire. During the next few minutes then dominated play, taking the lead for good. Magnuson started things with a three-point play and two baskets by Harry Sheehy put them up, 13-12.

East Carolina regained the lead on a shot by Al Edwards, 14-13, but never held it again.

Sheehy regained the top, 15-14, for the AIA, and then never trailed again. Dan Carroll hit two free throws to run the lead to three, then Jim Hyder hit from underneath to raise it to five before the Pirates could hit.

After an exchange of points, baskets by Owen Long and Harris, both off the fast break ran the lead out to nine, 27-18.

The Bucs rallied for two baskets cutting it to five, but Sheehy led another pullaway. He hit first, then Danny Beard made a basket and two free throws to give the AIA an 11-point bulge, 35-24.

A three-point play by Garner cut it to eight and Hunt hit to trim it to six, and the Bucs trailed by that most of the rest of the way, falling off to 41-33 at halftime.

Early in the second half, the AIA moved back out by 10, but East Carolina rallied to within four after that. Louis Crosby hit first, then Buzzy Braman hit a shot. Hunt and Henkel both scored and with 15:48 left, the Pirates trailed only 45.41.

But during the next five minutes, the AIA regained control, running their lead out to 10 points at 63-43 with 10:33 left.

Sheehy hit two baskets and Magnuson got two baskets and a free throw to pace the string.

After that, it was just a question of what the final margin would be. It reached as much as 21, at 4:33 at 76-55.

Hunt led the Pirate scoring with 16 points, while Garner had 13, Henkel had 12 and Crosby had 12.

Magnuson led the AIA with 25, while Sheehy hit 23 and Harris had 12.

East Carolina returns to action next Saturday night, hosting Appalachian State University in a key Southern Conference game for the two teams, with fourth place and a home berth in the first round of the league tournament at stake.

Reggie Lee, a regular starter at guard, sat out the game with a sprained ankle.

Lucas Sparks Terps To 102-91 Victory Over Duke

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Coach Lefty Driesell wasn't too sure that his fifth-ranked Maryland basketball team would be mentally ready to face Duke on Saturday.

But the Terps, who had been mourning the sudden death of Owen Brown, a teammate from last year's team, overcame a five-point deficit in the second half and beat the Blue Devils 102-91 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

"I didn't know what to expect," Driesell said. "It's been pretty sad around here the past two days. We didn't think that much about basketball. But the team came out to play."

Seniors John Lucas and Mo Howard, who spoke at a memorial service for Brown on Friday at the university chapel, combined for 45 points as Maryland lifted its record to 17-3, including 4-3 in the ACC.

The Terps wore black bands on the shoulder straps of their uniform shirts in memory of Brown, who died of an apparent heart attack while playing in a pickup basketball game Wednesday night, and the capacity crowd of 14,500 stood for a minute of silence in his honor.

"We've dedicated the rest of the season to Owen," said Lucas, who scored eight of his 28 points during a 3½-minute span midway through the second half to spark the victory.

Tate Armstrong scored 37 points for Duke and Willie Hodge added 24, but Coach Bill Foster noted: "We didn't have any balance in scoring, and that hurt."

It was the 24th consecutive ACC road defeat for the Blue Devils over the past four years, and Foster says he's sure the streak is creating pressure although it's never discussed.

"Every time they get on a bus," he said wryly, "they must get the feeling they're going somewhere besides Cameron Indoor Stadium (Duke's home court)."

The 11-point loss was the largest in the ACC for Duke this season. Two previous defeats were by two-point margins, another by five points, and an overtime decision was lost by six points.

The Terps, favored by 12 points, trailed 66-65 when Lucas took charge following two missed free throws by Duke.

Lucas also assisted on the last basket during the spree, giving the Terps a 79-70 lead with 7:40 remaining.

Duke, 11-9, including 2-5 in league play, overcame an 11-point deficit in the first half and took a 62-57 lead with 14 minutes to play behind the hot shooting of guard Tate Armstrong.

Armstrong connected on 11 consecutive field goal attempts, the last eight in the second half, tying a Duke record. He finished with 37 points, while sinking 16 of 23 shots.

Maryland missed its first attempt from the foul line and then dropped in the 25, converting six consecutive one-and-one situations in the last eight minutes to keep the Blue Devils at bay.

Steve Sheppard scored 21 for the Terps, Mo Howard had 17, and Brad 16. Willie Hodge scored 22 for Duke.

Citadel Dumps Richmond—Again

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Guard Rodney McKeever poured in 29 points and center Richard Johnson added 18, rallying The Citadel Bulldogs past the Richmond Spiders 91-79 in a Southern Conference basketball game Saturday in Charleston.

McKeever hit a layup off the opening tip of the second half to pull the Bulldogs ahead 39-38, and they gradually expanded their margin to 74-60 before going into a delay game with seven minutes remaining.

Richmond led the cold Bulldogs 20-9 at the midpoint of the first half and held a 38-37 advantage at intermission.

For the game, McKeever hit 10 of 17 shots from the field and was credited with eight assists and nine steals. Johnson added 10 rebounds to an effort that included a perfect shooting game from the floor and free throw line.

Forward Craig Sullivan led Richmond with 20 points while center Mike Morton added 19. The hotly-contested game produced 51 personal fouls and three technicals.

The win was The Citadel's second of the season over Richmond, and prevented the Spiders from advancing to second place in conference standings. The Bulldogs are now 4-6 in the league and 7-14 overall. The Spiders are 7-4 and 10-9.

Pirates Take Three Firsts

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP)—Four records were broken and pole vaulter Keith Neff of Virginia Tech repeated as the outstanding field events performer Saturday night in the 25th annual VMI Winter Relays.

Neff broke the pole vault record for the second year in a row, upping it this time to 16 feet, 8½ inches—5½ inches above the mark he set last year.

Marvin Rankin of East Carolina, who took part in a number of relay events for the Pirates, was named the outstanding runner.

Rankin, however, was not a member of the East Carolina 440 relay team that lowered the mark in that event to 43.2 seconds. The runners were Donnie Mack, Carter Suggs, Maurice Huntley and Larry Austin.

Bob Medlin of North Carolina State upped the record in the shot put to 61-3½, beating out two Wolfpack teammates in the event.

The fourth mark was set by William Hoff of the Potomac Valley Track Club with a time of 4:52.0 in the masters' mile.

There were no double winners individually and no team won more than one relay event in the meet, in which team scores were not kept.

East Carolina's Tom Watson won the 35-pound weight throw with a heave of 47 feet, 7½ inches, giving the Bucs three first place finishes in the event.

Fouls Help Tech Upset N.C. State

By KEN ALYTA
AP Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Eleven-time loser Georgia Tech scored its last 23 points on free throws in the last five minutes to upset North Carolina State's 10th ranked basketball team, 78-67, Saturday night. Jim Wood led the Yellow Jackets with 25 points, including 13 out of 14 from the foul line.

Fourth-ranked North Carolina walloped Furman, 97-64, in the second game to give the top two Atlantic Coast Conference teams a split for the night against outsiders.

Georgia Tech, now 9-11, led virtually all the way in handing N. C. State its fourth loss in 20 starts. Tech led throughout the first half which ended 33-28 and twice in the early minutes of the second half N. C. State managed a one-point lead.

Mike Bottorff, Tech's leading scorer over the season, after going 28 minutes without a point, put the Engineers ahead to stay 43-42 with a basket at 11:30.

He followed with four more in the next five minutes and then added a pair of free throws for a 57-48 lead with 4:50 to play.

Tech never tried to shoot a basket thereafter, adding steadily to its lead by cashing in free throws as the desperate Wolfpack fouled repeatedly.

Ten times in the closing minutes Tech converted both ends of one-and-one foul chances.

N. C. State made seven more baskets tha Tech, shooting 53 per cent from the floor to Tech's 45 per cent but Tech cashed in 30 of 35 free throws against N. C. State's five out of six.

Top scorer for N. C. State was Kenny Carr with 15 points, about half his season average. He was one of four Wolfpack players to foul out.

N. C. State Coach Norman Sloan commented, "They simply outplayed us. I can't find a whole lot of good to say about the way we played.

Casper Birdies Past Nicklaus And Slips Into Hope Classic Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Flip Wilson did some clowning around—which almost proved costly for Jack Nicklaus—and then did a little crying Saturday in the fourth round of the $180,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

"The poor guy. I felt sorry for him," Nicklaus said. "He was standing there with tears in his eyes."

It took place on the 17th green at the Indian Wells Country Club, where Nicklaus eventually shot a three-under-par 69 and stayed within a shot of leading Billy Casper after four rounds of this unique, 90-hole tournament.

Flip, one of Nicklaus' three amateur partners, missed a short putt. He threw his hands in the air and then fell to his knees.

"He didn't mean to do it," Nicklaus said, "but when he fell, he jammed his putter in the ground, right in my line. His hand hit the cup and tore up the side of it. And then, when he was getting up, he stepped right in my line."

The mortified Wilson stood quietly by while an official repaired the cup. The spike marks and the putter marks were not repaired—and they were directly in the line of Nicklaus' three-foot, par-saving putt.

"I figured I'd better make it or he'd never play golf again," Jack said.

Nicklaus nursed the putt into the cup, the ball just catching the right edge and falling in.

It was just one of several incidents that marred play in the show-business, circus-type atmosphere of this tournament.

TV commentator Cary Middlecoff approached Nicklaus during the course of his round for a conversation—a violation of etiquette which prompted a call from Commissioner Deane Beman.

An illegal camera clicked when Johnny Miller was taking his club back, causing him to miss an 18 inch putt.

Bud Allin's score and position in the tournament was carried incorrectly on national television.

When the long, wet, cold, rain-delayed round was finally completed, Casper's birdie on the final hole proved decisive. It broke a tie with Nicklaus and staked the portly veteran to a one stroke lead.

But Casper, the 44-year-old winner of 51 tour titles, was making no victory predictions in this 90-hole, five-day, four-course event.

"It used to be that I could get it in a groove and keep it there," Casper said. "But now everything changes every day. All I can do is try to keep everything together and make some putts."

Casper, who played his fourth round at Indian Wells, had a 72-hole total of 279, nine under par after one round on each of the four desert courses used in this unique event.

He held a one-stroke lead over the threatening, formidable Nicklaus and Rik Massengale, tied at 280. Nicklaus shot a 69 in the company of the clowning Flip Wilson and host Bob Hope at Indian Wells, site of Sunday's fifth and final round. Massengale had a 68 at Bermuda Dunes.

Buddy Allin dropped out of the lead for the first time in the tournament after a 71 at La Quinta. He was two shots back at 281, seven under par—not six as television announced. He was tied with charging Johnny Miller, who had a 68 despite a pair of three-putt greens.

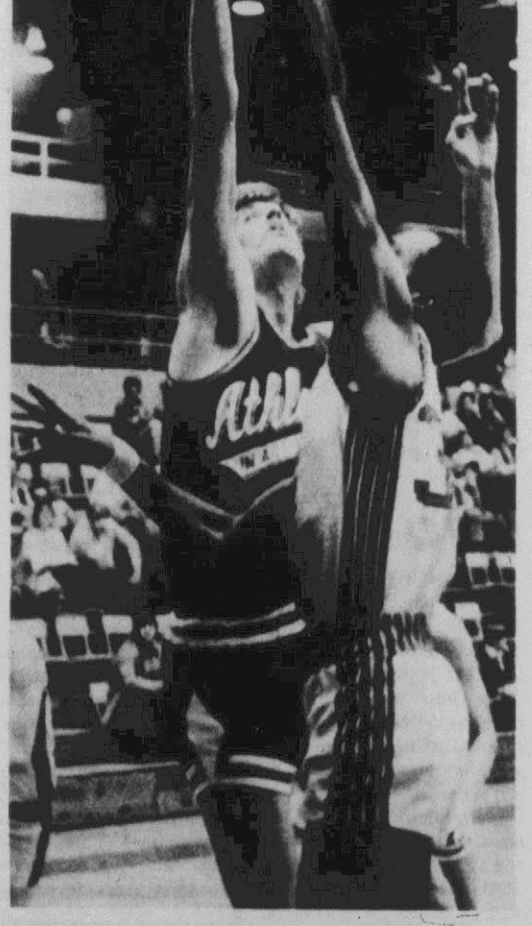

Dave Newquist shot a 71 at Bermuda Dunes and was next at 282, followed by Dwight Nevil and Lee Elder at 283. Nevil shot a 72, Elder 69.

The start of play was delayed from 30 minutes to an hour by a heavy, overnight rain that left the various courses dotted with pools and puddles of casual water and prohibited the national television cameras from showing the finish of the leaders.

Arnold Palmer, a five-time winner of this tournament and only four shots out of the lead after three rounds of play, withdrew because of the death of his father.

"I've missed only eight greens in the tournament and that's why I'm leading," Casper said. "I've had two rounds with 33 and 34 putts. I putted good the last nine holes Thursday and the first nine holes today—and that's it."

He dropped two of more than 30 feet on his front nine, holed another from 15 feet and wedged to within a foot for the birdie on the 18th that gave him the lead.

Northeastern Breezes Past Rampants

WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ELIZABETH CITY—Roderick Williams, a big 6-7 senior, came off the bench to spark Northeastern High School to a 77-63 victory over Rose High School Rampants Friday night.

The victory kept the Eagles atop the Division I standings with a perfect 5-0 mark. The Rampants are perfect, too, in their own way, owning an 0-5 record in the league, halfway through the slate. Northeastern is now 16-1 overall and Rose is now 2-12.

Williams saw only part-time duty in the game, but he made his presence felt when he came off the bench, clearing the boards, blocking shots, and sinking baskets. He hit 10 from the floor for 20 points, leading the Eagle attack.

Rose got some spark from its bench, in the form of Joe Godette, but by the time he got going, the result was no longer in doubt.

Northeastern took advantage of some hot shooting of its own in the opening half, hitting 20 of 35 shots, to build up a 43-25 lead. They coasted through the final half after that, allowing Rose a four-point edge in the last 16 minutes.

Rose, during that same period, hit only 11 of 33 shots, a poor 33 per cent. The Rampants increased that to 38.2 per cent by the end of the game, but it wasn't enough to overcome Northeastern's better job of 45.9 per cent.

The Eagles hit on 34 of 74 shots, while Rose hit on eight less on six less shots.

The rebounding was almost even, with Northeastern holding only a 49-46 edge. And turnovers didn't play that big a role, with Rose having 26 and Northeastern 22.

That high number did make for a sloppy game, however.

Northeastern took the initial lead and never were even tied in the game. Bobby Vaughan popped in the first basket, out of the corner, with 45 seconds gone, and Ray Scott hit a baseline jumper just over a minute later for a 4-0 lead. A free throw by Arthur Newby upped that to 5-0, before Rose finally broke the ice on a jumper by William Barnes with 4:16 left in the period.

Another free throw, this one by Vaughan, and the first basket by Willimas ran the lead out to 8-2.

Rose got a basket from Jeff Barber, but an Alley-Oop by Williams, off an assist by Scott, followed by a free throw by Arnette Skinner and a jumper by Scott upped the lead to 13-4.

Rose matched the Eagles for the next few minutes, but late in the period, Lee Pritchard hit to run the margin out to 11 at 19-8. Rose cut it back to 19-10 at the horn.

Rose could get no closer, however, and after both teams hit to open the second period, the Eagles ripped off a string of 12 straight points, mostly off turnovers by the Rampants. Pritchard hit two baskets in the string, while Williams got the final two, running the margin out to 33-12, a 21-point bulge with 4:16 left in the half.

Rose cut it back to 33-18, but got no closer, and trailed, 43-25 at halftime.

From there on, it was only a question of what the final margin would be, as the play got progressively worse by both teams. Northeastern ran its lead out to 22, at 62-40 on a tap by Williams with 52 seconds left in the third quarter, and the Eagles led, 62-42, at the end of the frame.

Behind Godette's scoring the Rampants cut it back to within 14, 66-50, but go no closer the rest of the evening.

In addition to Williams' 20 points, Vaughan hit 17 and Scott had 11.

William Barnes led Rose with 12, while Godette had 10.

Northeastern also took the junior varisty game, winning it in the final minutes of play, 54-53. The two teams were tied at the end of one period, 8-8 but Rose came back with a late surge to push ahead, 24-18, at the half.

Northeastern fought back and finally tied it up by the end of the third period, 39-39. Rose regained the lead, but couldn't hold it. Northeastern took a three-point lead in the final minute of play, and a basket at the horn cut it to the final one-point spread.

Paul Sylvester led Northeastern with 17, while Daryel Beasley had 15 and Reginald Johnson had 10. Greg Guthrie led Rose with 16, while Anthony Bryant had 10.

The Rampants play host to Rocky Mount on Tuesday.

Carolina Smashes Furman 97-64

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Walter Davis scored 18 points to lead third ranked North Carolina to an easy 97-64 victory over Furman Saturday night in the North-South doubleheader.

Furman moved out to a 6-2 lead but the Tar Heels took control and outscored the Furman 33-8 over the next 11 minutes and were never in trouble the rest of the night.

Tommy LaGarde scored 16 points for the Tar Heels while teammates Bruce Buckley added 12 and Tom Zaliagiris 10.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith subsituted freely throughout the game using 15 players with the starters leaving the game for good with about 12 minutes left to play.

Junior college transfer Ray Miller scored 16 points and Steve Whittington added 15 to pace the Paladins. John Cottingham added 12 for Furman now at 5-15 on the season.

North Carolina, 18-2 and leading the Atlantic Coast Conference standings, led 49-27 at the half.

Miller scored the first basket of the second half for Furman but North Carolina then scored 14 unanswered points over the next 4 minutes to out to a 63-29 lead.

North Carolina shot 55 per cent from the floor to Furman's 39 per cent but the Paladins held a 41-34 rebounding edge.

North Carolina center Mitch Kupchak was injured in Friday night's game against Georgia Tech and didn't play Saturday night. Coach Smith said the 6-10 senior has double vision problems but is expected to recover from the injury.

American League Bringing Baseball Back To Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — An agreement to buy an American League expansion franchise has been signed, bringing major league baseball back to this city after a seven-year absence, businessman Lester Smith and entertainer Danny Kaye said Saturday.

The two told a news conference that they will pay about $5.56 million for the franchise, which replaces the ill-fated Seattle Pilots.

A 20-year lease to the King County Domed Stadium will go along with the deal, though it has yet to be signed. A key feature of the lease will be a clause binding the franchise to stay in Seattle.

Still unsettled is the future of the area's lawsuit against the league, which seeks up to $32.5 million in damages for moving the last team, the Seattle Pilots. That franchise, bankrupt after its only season in 1969, was sold to a Milwaukee group in 1970.

Officials say the city, which spent $1.5 million in renovating Sicks Stadium for the Pilots, still is out about $600,000 and wants to recover that amount.

Smith told reporters that the cost of the franchise was very similar to the price Pacific Northwest Sports Inc. paid for the Pilots in 1968.

"We feel we've got a very good deal," Smith said.

He admitted the pressure of the lawsuit against the league was a factor in the league's decision to expand.

"If there wasn't a lawsuit, we'd probably wouldn't have baseball here," Smith said.

Kaye outlined the group's previous plans to secure an established team. The six businessmen in the group had tried to purchase the Chicago White Sox and, when that effort failed, the San Francisco Giants.

Skater's Mother Flying To Austria

By DIANE MINARCIN
Associated Press Writer

GUILFORD, Vt. (AP) — After a frantic, last-minute scramble to get her passport in order and make flight connections, the mother of Olympic ski silver medalist Bill Koch leaves for Innsbruck Monday to watch her son compete in the cross-country games.

"I wish I could be there for the 15-kilometer (on Sunday). That's his best race. But there's no way I could make it in time for it," said Koch's mother, Nancy Ragle.

When Mrs. Ragle, wife of the president of Marlboro College, learned Friday night that trustees had raised $900 for her to fly to Austria, she hurriedly began making plans to leave Saturday to watch the next day's event in person.

But her passport was out-of-date and in a bank that was closed for the weekend.

Bank officials unlocked the vault and the U.S. Immigration Service and State Department arranged to have her passport validated and ready for her. But Mrs. Ragle realized she would arrive in Innsbruck well after the Sunday race.

"At least I'll get to see Wednesday's relay. Bill always shines in that performance," she said.

"It's been hectic, but I'm just thrilled to death," she said.

When Koch, 20, took second place in Thursday's 30-kilometer cross-country race, it marked the first time the U.S. had won a Nordic medal in the Olympics.

"There was a lot of screaming and a lot of crying when we found out.

"The whole town is excited about it. The selectmen have even decided to hold a Bill Koch Day when he returns," Mrs. Ragle said.

But Bill is more excited about how the victory will publicize cross-country skiing than actually winning the silver medal, she said.

"In Scandinavia, a cross-country skier is a hero. Here, nobody knows very much about the sport; there's not that much interest."

"He really loves cross-country skiing. Actually, for Bill, it's competing with himself. It's a race against what he's done last, not against the other skiers," Mrs. Ragle said.

Pirates Limp To Eighth Win

RICHMOND, Va.—Despite nearly one-third of the East Carolina University swimming team being sick, Ray Scharf's Pirates took their eighth win of the season yesterday, 68-43 over Virginia Commonwealth University.

"I have to be real pleased with our team" said Scharf, "that they swam as well as they did. We left many people home sick and then had four top swimmers far below par that swam in the meet. Also, Virginia Commonwealth was definitely up for us, so I would say the results have to be pleasing."

Even with so many problems the Pirates still broke pool records and eight meet records. Stewart Mann and John McCauley led the assault with two wins each.

"I just hope we can regroup before we go to Duke on Tuesday."

The Pirates swim on Tuesday night at 7:00 at Duke.

USC Eases Past Temple

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Reserve forward Golie Augustus came in late in the contest to bucket five points within seconds to give South Carolina the lead and send it on to a 65-58 intersectional basketball victory over an inspired Temple team.

Augustus, a sophomore, who had a total of 10 points, came in with 11 minutes left and promptly made a three-point play on a rebound to give South Carolina a lead it never relinquished in the regionally televised game.

Junior Lou Cannelli, who shared game-high scoring honors with the Gamecocks' Alex English at 18, led a Temple charge that saw it leading by from two to three points through much of the first half. But South Carolina had a 33-29 edge at the intermission buzzer on a series of successful one-and-one free throws.

Indians Move Into First, 68-62

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—Ronnie Satterthwaite sent William and Mary ahead for good with a layup with 14:11 left Saturday night and the Indians took over first place in the Southern Conference basketball race with a 68-62 victory over Virginia Military's Keydets.

The triumph lifted the Indians to 6-2 in the league and 11-9 over-all and dropped VMI, which had been tied for the lead, to 5-3 in the conference and 12-9 against all opposition.

The Keydets, who had beaten the Indians earlier in the season, bolted to a 12-2 lead, but William and Mary gradually whittled down the deficit, went ahead for the first time with 4:56 left in the half and led 31-30 at intermission.

VMI, led mainly by Ron Carter, went back on top at 38-35 before a four-point run capped by Satterthwaite's layup sent the Indians in front to stay.

Satterthwaite had 16 points and John Lowenhaupt and Skip Parnell 10 each for the Indians. Carter finished with 20 and Will Bynum had 14 for the Keydets.

North Pitt Holds Onto First, 64-53

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL—Jesse Harris dumped in 20 points for North Pitt Friday night to lead the Panthers to a 64-53 win over D.H. Conley and help keep North Pitt's share of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The Panthers, now 13-1 overall and 7-1 in the ECC are tied with Ayden-Grifton which has a 7-1 record. The Panthers have a slight edge having handed A-G its only loss so far.

Not until the second period did the scoring open up. The game was tight through the first period with North Pitt taking a 17-16 lead with two seconds left in the period.

North Pitt continued to pull away in the next frame to a 36-27 lead and although they had as much as a 14-point lead at one point, the Panthers could not let up once.

The varsity game was one of two North Pitt won. The Big Orange moved into a tie for third place with Farmville Central with a 46-31 win over the Valkyries. Like the boys' team, the Pant-HERS had lost to Conley in their first meeting.

The first half of the girls game was a battle royale but with North Pitt's Kathi Manning hitting rain-makers, free throws and driving lay-ups, the Big Orange proceeded to blow the Valkyries out. Manning led the Pant-HERS with 26 points.

Manning hit the first North Pitt bucket but it was matched by Ella Fleming's shot from the baseline. Conley took the lead on a free throw by Annie Wooten and was able to hold it until the middle of the next period.

Baskets by Joy Forbes and Manning cut the gap to 11-10 and Manning dropped in two free shots tieing the game, 12-12. Donna Parker hit a free shot with 3:40 left in the half and North Pitt never trailed again.

North Pitt outhit Conley 9-3 in the remainder of the half for a 23-16 halftime lead.

The third quarter was slow as North Pitt took a 6-4 tally but Manning went bananas in the fourth period scoring 14 points, 12 of them on fast breaks.

Manning got 10 points worth of help from Joy Forbes. Fleming had 10 for Conley.

Back in January when the two teams met, Conley's boys came away with a 51-50 win on Rick Mobley's last-minute free throw. That time, the Panthers tried to bottle Mobley up and keep him from scoring. Friday night they used a different angle and let Mobley go. Instead, the Panthers elected to bottle everybody else up and let Mobley do his thing which he did to the tune of 25 points.

"We respect Mobley," said North Pitt's Cobby Deans. "We did better on (Johnny) Streeter than the last game. We didn't box-and-one. We decided to let him (Mobley) score and play decent defense and shut the others out.

"We had better team defense until the last. We didn't pressure our guards."

Deans said the Panthers tried to overload one side to get men open. They would do this, he said, by pulling Donnie Perkins to the top of the lane and slipping another player in under him. "We tried to do it when Perkins would come high and Roberson would go in."

Deans said it was a good game both ways. "The defensive rebounding wasn't what it should be." He also said that Jackie Best, Virgil Pilgreen and Kenneth Roberson played well for North Pitt.

Conley's Shelly Marsh, who spent most of the game standing up, said the key was turnovers. The Vikings committed over 20 and most of them came at very inopportune times. "North Pitt has a good team," he said. "They put pressure on us and did it effectively on our guards. Turnovers were a big factor. The play of our guards," he said was also a factor. The guards, he said, did not play well.

The Vikings tried to keep Perkins away from the basket but Perkins went over the Conley zone. When he cooled in the second quarter the Vikes went to a 1-2-2 but the other Panthers took up any slack.

"Best and Pilgreen really hurt us. They took the pressure off Harris and Perkins. They had good games," Marsh said.

Marsh's objective was to get Mobley to penetrate and draw fouls from Perkins and Harris. "He had a man on him all the time," Marsh said.

The Panther scored at a 48 percent clip from the floor. Conley hit 40 percent of its shots. The rebounding was close with North Pitt taking a 25-23 edge.

Neither team could hold the lead until Mobley canned six straight points giving the Vikings a 16-10 lead in the first period. North Pitt had been lightly pressing Conley most of the game and the six points were quickly made up as Roberson hit five and Harris hit two points to slip North Pitt on top, 17-16.

The Panthers never trailed again but very well could have. Conley fell back by eight in the first minute and a half of the second period but played as if on top by eight. Mobley's shot with 4:50 to go cut it to five, 26-21 but North moved back up to nine on a bucket by Harris.

It went to 11 as Perkins hit from outside but Mobley's two free throws made it 36-27 at halftime.

Mobley tried to get Conley back into the game in the third quarter scoring 10 points but North Pitt put up 16 in the period to add four points to its lead.

North Pitt's lead ran to 15, 56-41, in the fourth quarter but Conley battled back cutting it to nine, 60-51, on a bucket by Randolph King. That was as close as they got as the Panthers ran it back to 11, 64-53, at the horn.

Mobley's 25 led Conley while Harris's 20 paced North Pitt. Perkins had 13 and Best 12. North Pitt plays Greene Central Tuesday night away and Ayden-Grifton away Friday night. Conley is off Tuesday night, but hosts Farmville Central on Wednesday.

Jaguars Top Southern Nash

FARMVILLE—Farmville Central got back on the winning track Friday night, taking a 62-54 victory over Southern Nash. Southern took the girls game, 52-50, whie the Baby Firebirds won the junior varsity, 50-46.

In the girls' contest, Farmville inched out into a 9-7 lead after one period, but couldn't shake the lady Firebirds. The Lady Jaguars held on, however, to lead, 23-22, at the half.

Farmville Central pulled away in the third period with a 16-11 edge, and held a 39-33 edge. But they were unable to hold on, as Southern put on a 19-11 rally. Shirley Hall scored with about 30 seconds left to put Southern into the lead, and the Lady Jags missed on a couple of chances after that.

Miss Hall led Southern with 31 points, while Zulena Minga added 11. Wanda Phillips paced Farmville with 19, while Diane Barrett had 15.

In the boys' game, Farmville grabbed an early lead, moving out to a 12-8 margin at the end of the first period. The Jaguars continued to claw away from the Firebirds, and built up a 26-19 halftime lead.

The third period was about all Farmville needed to wrap it up, outhitting the Firebirds, 19-13, to run their lead to 45-32. Southern put on a 22-18 rally in the final period, but it was not nearly enough.

Keno Farrow paced the victory with 18 points, while Timmy Ward had 15 and Mitchell Foskey had 10. Walter Williams led Southern with 21 points, while Sherrod had 13.

Farmville travels on Conley on Wednesday.

Conley Matmen Nail Farmville

HOLLYWOOD—D. H. Conley finished up its regular season wrestling slate with a 43-15 victory over arch-rival Farmville Central Friday night.

The match was the last for the two teams prior to Wednesday's Eastern Carolina Conference tournament at Farmville Central.

Conley won nine of the weight classes, including five of them on pins. Farmville took four, with one forfeit, and three decisions.

One of the undefeated wrestlers bit the dust in the match, as Ronald Harris handed FC's Horace Williams his first defeat in 14 matches.

Conley's Floyd Crandell upped his record to 16-2-1, while Charles Hanson is now 17-2-1, Jesse Davis, 17-3, James Johnson, 17-0-1, and Lo Carmon, 17-1.

Farmville's Timmy Hall is now 14-0, while other Jaguar matmen include Charles Barfield, now 11-3, Willie White, 6-2, Anthony Gorham, 8-2, Robert Williams, 11-2, and Jerry Flanagan, 6-1.

Ayden-Grifton Pulls Out Slim Win, 46-45

LITTLEFIELD—Ayden-Grifton tenaciously held onto its share of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference Friday night, getting a last-second shot by Ogden Braxton to win the game, 46-45, over Greene Central.

The Chargers, down by as many as 10 points in the game, were in their fourth straight heartstopped—pulling out each of them.

The Ayden-Grifton girls rolled up a 66-32 victory in their game, while the junior varsity took a 46-45 overtime win.

Greene Central and Ayden-Grifton were throwing in basket-for-basket for a while, and were tied at 12-12 after one period. The Rams took command in the second period, however, 10-6, and held a 22-18 lead at intermission.

The Chargers inched back with an 11-10 advantage in the third, but still trailed, 32-29, as the final period began. Down by as much as 10, the Chargers rolled up a five point lead with just under two minutes left to play, then went into their stall. But the Rams chose to foul and it paid off as the Chargers missed on two straight one-and-one chances at the line. Greene Central converted that into two baskets, and then Melvin Darden hit for the Rams with 10 seconds left for a 45-44 GC lead.

The Chargers got it quickly down-court, and Braxton fired off a shot, but it missed. Dennis Moore got the rebound, but he too missed. Braxton was there for a third shot, and the horn went off just as the ball fell into the basket, giving the Chargers the victory.

Braxton led A-G with 16 points, while Willie Forbes had 15 and Paul Ricciarelli had 11. Marvin Rouse paced the Rams with 14, while Melvin Briggs had 11.

Ayden-Grifton's girls moved out to a 12-8 lead in the first period and increased that to 26-14 by the end of the half. The Chargerettes continued to pull away in the third frame, upping their lead to 46-20. Ayden-Grifton finished off the Ewes with a 20-12 final period margin.

Audrey McCarter led Ayden-Grifton with 26 points, while Theresa Whitley hit 12 to lead Greene Central.

The Chargers go into a key week Tuesday, traveling to North Lenoir. Then, on Friday, they host North Pitt in a game that could decide first place for the regular season.

Bear Grass In Overtime Win

CHOCOWINITY—Jerry Wynn hit a jumper with two seconds left to tie Chocowinity, 38-38, and Alton Cratt made a three-point play in overtime to give the Bear Grass Bears a 45-40 win over the Indians, Friday night.

The game was a non-conference contest.

Chocowinity took the night's other two games beating the Baby Bears, 47-37, and the Lady Bears, 37-31. Chocowinity's girls had to rally in the third period to take the lead.

After battling to an 8-8 tie in the first period, Bear Grass opened up an 11-10 lead at halftime.

Chocowinity slipped ahead by one, 24-23 in the third period and poured in 13 to BG's eight in the final frame for the win.

Patricia Taylor led Bear Grass with 16 and Angela Jones led Chocowinity with 10.

Bear Grass's boys fell behind, 9-6, in their first period but made up the three-point difference by halftime for a 30-30 tie.

Chocowinity regained the lead in the third period, 31-26, but Bear Brass rallied for 12 in the final period to tie the game, 38-all on Wynn's shot.

David Price put the Bears up by two starting the overtime but Windley retied the game for Chocowinity. Alton Cratt drew a foul and a resulting technical foul gave him three chances. Cratt made all three for a 43-40 lead and Price's two free throws iced the win.

Wynn led the Bears with 15. Freddy Smith had 15 for the Indians.

Last Basket Nips Bullets

JAMESVILLE—Gerald Harris tipped in a shot at the horn Friday night giving Belhaven a controversial win over Jamesville, 69-68. Belhaven took two other games from the Bullets as well.

Harris's tip-in was originally negated by one official but counted good by the second. After a few minutes of deliberation, the basket was ruled good.

Belhaven had earlier won the J.V. game, 53-46. The Bulldogs followed that with a 51-30 win over the Lady Bullets. Belhaven's girls took the lead in the first period and never trailed. They increased it to 22-12 at halftime.

The Lady Bulldogs continued to pull away in the third period, 36-21 and rolled in 15 points in the final frame to lock it up.

Linda Nelson led the winners with 15 and Martha Gibbs had 10.

Belhaven slipped in front of Jamesville's boys, 16-14, in the first quarter but Jamesville took the second period by two to tie the game, 33-33, at halftime. Jamesville shot into the lead in the third period, 24-16, for a 57-49 advantage but Belhaven caught up and took a 67-66 lead.

Rufus Simmons was fouled with 14 seconds left and he made both shots for a 68-67 Jamesville lead. Belhaven took the ball down and shot with two seconds left but missed. Harris tipped the ball in as the buzzer was going off. One off official signalled the basket was not good while the other said it was. Much to the dismay of the Bullets, the basket was finally ruled good.

Harris led Belhaven with 20, Milton Moore had 15 and Elvis Spencer 10. Jerry Ange and Ricky Whitehurst had 18 each for the Bullets, Eric Davis had 11 and Simmons 10.

Williamston Downs 'Skins

WILLIAMSTON—Williamston's girls ran their record to 15-0, the boys to 8-5 and the J.V.'s to 12-2 as each picked up a win over Roanoke Friday night.

The Baby Tigers dumped Roanoke, 67-47, in the preliminary. In the second game, Williamston's Lady Tigers clawed the Squaws, 46-21, but were slow getting started. The varsity Tigers downed Roanoke, 64-51.

Willisamston took a short 7-4 lead in the first period but erupted in the second for 17 for a 24-8 lead at intermission.

Williamston increased the margin by seven in the third period and finished Roanoke off with a 9-7 fourth period.

Sissy Taylor led the Lady Tigers with 14.

Williamston's boys put four players in double figures. The Tigers grabbed 12-7 lead in the first period and ran it up to 34-23 in the second frame with a 22-16 score.

The Tigers continued to pull away in the third period, 17-14, but Roanoke took the final period, 14-13.

Shumate Does Well As Brave

By The Associated Press

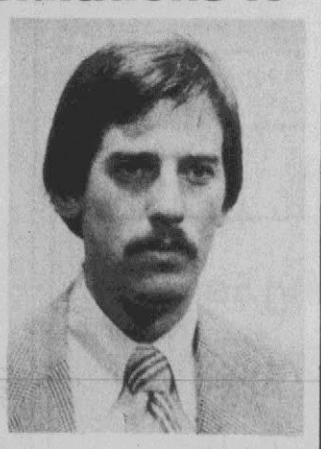

John Shumate was just getting used to National Basketball Association play. Now, he's got to get used to NBA wheeling and dealing.

A member of the Phoenix Suns last weekend, Shumate suddenly is playing for the Buffalo Braves—and playing quite well, judging by his first appearance.

"It's going to take a couple of games for me to get adjusted to a new offense," said the former Notre Dame All-American after helping the Braves beat the Milwaukee Bucks 109-104 Friday night. "I know I better get in better shape. I'm playing with a bunch of jackrabbits."

Shumate, who scored 16 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and handed out 10 assists.

SILVER FOR HER SKATES—Leah Poulos of the U.S. lead Ludmila Titova of the Soviet Union Saturday in the women's 1000-meter speed skating competition at the Innsbruck olympic ice rink. Miss Poulos 24, of Northbrook, Ill. won the silver medal for the event with a time of 1:28.57. The gold medal went to Tatiana Averina of the Soviet Union with a time of 1:28.43. Miss Titova finished seventh. (AP Wirephoto)

E. Germany Captures First Golds

INNSBRUCK (AP) — Sheila Young failed in her bid to become the winningest American athlete in the history of the Winter Olympics when she finished third to Russia's Tatiana Averina in the women's 1,000-meter speed skating race Saturday.

Miss Young, the multi-talented athlete from Detroit, earned her third medal by swirling around the slick course in 1 minute 29.14 seconds. But it wasn't enough.

Miss Averina, bronze medalist in the earlier 500 and 1,500-meter races, won the 1,000-meter event in Olympic record time of 1 minute 28.43 seconds, surpassing the mark of 1:31.40, set by Monika Holzner of West Germany in 1972.

Leah Poulos of Northbrook, Ill., who failed to crash the medal ceremony in two earlier events here, finished second in 1:28.57 to earn the silver medal.

The 25-year-old Miss Young had won the 500-meter speed skating race Friday in Olympic record time after striking silver Thursday in the 1,500-meter event.

The third-place finish ended Miss Young's Olympic career, which still rates near the top of all American competitors in the 48-year history of these prestigious Games.

Only two Americans, speed skaters John Shea and Irving Jaffee in the 1932 Games, ever have won twice at one Winter Olympics.

Seven athletes have won three gold medals in the same Winter Olympics, including Frenchman Jean-Claude Killy in Alpine skiing in 1968, Galina Kulakova of the Soviet Union in Nordic skiing in 1972 and Dutchman Ard Schenk in speed skating in 1972.

Miss Young, world cycling champion in 1973, still ranks as one of the sports world's most versatile athletes.

Miss Poulos, from the Chicago suburb that calls itself the ice skating capital of the world, ended a personal Olympic non-medal streak that included finishes of 17th and 24th in the 1972 Olympics and sixth in the 1,500 meters and fourth in the 500 meters earlier in these 12th Winter Games.

Miss Tatiana's victory gave the powerful Soviet Union team four gold medals. East Germany has two gold medals and Finland, Austria and the United States all have one.

East Germany, the emerging sports power which finished second in the 1972 Winter Olympics, won its first two gold medals of the 1976 Games Saturday when Margit Schumann won the women's luge and Detlef Guenther won the men's luge.

Finland, which didn't win a single gold medal in the 1972 Sapporo Games, won its first gold medal of these 12th Winter Games as Helena Takalo won the women's five-kilometer (3.1 miles) cross-country ski race in 15 minutes 48.69 seconds.

Miss Young's gold medal was the first for the underdog American team, which also showed earlier silver medals from Miss Young and cross country skier Bill Koch of Guilford, Vt.

The powerful Soviet Union team led the medal race after three days of competiton with three golds, including a first-place finish Friday by Nikolay Kruglov in the 20 kilometer (12.4 miles) biathlon, and four bronze.

The Russians, heavily favored and defending champions, also began their quest for the gold medal in hockey with a 6-2 victory over a stubborn team of American collegians.

Besides the 1,000-meter ski race, the gold medal rush got underway in earnest Saturday with five other final events.

The East Germans led both the men's and women's luge competition going into Saturday's fourth and final run. Detlef Guenther held a commanding lead over West German Josef Fendt and Margit Schumann had a slight lead over West Germany's Elisabeth Demleitner.

In the women's five kilometer (3.1 miles) cross-country race, Galina Kulakova, triple gold medal winner at the 1972 Sapporo Olympics, headed a field of 44 competitors, including America's top peformer, 31-year-old Martha Rockwell of West Lebanon, N.H.

Toni Innauer, the 17-year-old Austrian underkind, took the best jump of Friday's practice session into Saturday's 70-meter ski jump final. James Denny, 18, of Duluth, Minn., has been the most impressive American in the practice jumps.

Austrians Fritz Sperling and Andreas Schwab went into Saturday's second and final run of the two-man bobsled a scant .03 seconds ahead of the East German crew of Meinhard Nehmer and Bernhard Germeshausen.

And the Russian pair of Irina Rodnina and Alexander Zaitsev held a commanding lead as the figure skating competiton went into the freestyle segment, the last phase of the competition.

Miss Young, who Tuesday announced her plans to marry cyclist James Ochowicz of Milwaukee and to retire, reversed direction on the issue of retirement. The versatile performer, world cycle champion in 1973, said Friday: "I will not retire from speed skating and I will continue cycling, too."

But Saturday's 1,000 meters was to be her last Olympic performance and she was favored to go out in a blaze of glory. Her Friday victory was in a new Olympic record time of 42.76 seconds. Cathy Priestner of Canada was second and Tatiana Averina of the Soviet Union was third, .04 seconds ahead of Leah Poulos of Northbrook, Ill.

Rumors circulated here that Galina Stepanskaya of the Soviet Union, gold medal winner in Thursday's 1,500-meter speed skating event, had failed her drug test, which would have elevated Miss Young to another gold medal. But the rumors proved unfounded.

There was another controversy in speed skating Friday, when Dianne Holum, U.S. figure skating coach, said U.S. Olympic Committee President Phil Krumm had tampered with the team's selection of racers, charging that Krumm forced several selection committee members to vote against a skateoff following the Olympic trials.

Krumm denied the accusation, saying: "You can't hold trials after the Olympic trials."

The American ice hockey team performed admirably against the mighty Russians, who last month had beaten five of eight teams in the National Hockey League.

The Americans, who are still talking bronze medal, beat Russian standout goalie Vladislav Tretiak twice, on goals by John Taft and Steve Jensen, both from Minneapolis.

Austria's Brigitte Totschnig had the fastest time trial for Sunday's downhill ski race and America's top hope, Cindy Nelson, of Lutsen, Minn., turned in Friday's fourth fastest time.

State, Carolina Rip Furman, Georgia Tech

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Think the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams have been tough on each other this year? Look at what they've been doing to everyone else.

The ACC teams, who have knocked each other around with little regard to national or conference ranking, have a stunning won-lost record against outside opposition.

Fourth-ranked North Carolina and 10th-ranked North Carolina State improved that record to a dazzling 70-8 with victories Friday night. The Tar Heels beat Georgia Tech 79-74 and the Wolfpack routed Furman 102-76 in the annual North-South doubleheader at Charlotte.

"I enjoyed the game, but it probably wasn't very exciting for the fans," said North Carolina State Coach Norm Sloan, indicating relief from the tension of the mad ACC race.

Kenny Carr scored North Carolina State's first 16 points and wound up with 39 in the lopsided contest.

"He pushed himself and played real hard," Sloan said.

Phil Ford scored 20 points and North Carolina overcame the loss of center Mitch Kupchak with an eye injury to beat Georgia Tech.

"I was pleased by our performance and the way our team hung on to win," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "This was the kind of game you need to win. Maybe we weren't ready for Tech but that was my fault."

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 3 Nevada-Las Vegas was upset by Pepperdine 93-91 and No. 15 Princeton whipped Columbia 69-53.

Carr, a 6-foot-7 sophomore who led the ACC with a 29-point scoring average before the game, equalled that figure in the first half against Furman, hitting 13 of 16 shots. Most were layups or short jumpers as he hit eight times in less than eight minutes for a 16-10 Wolfpack lead over the Southern Conference team.

Carr finished with 15-of-24 shots from the field, 9-of-13 from the foul line and 20 rebounds as his team, 16-3, hit the century mark for the eighth time this season.

Kupchak, North Carolina's top rebounder and a 17.9 points-per-game scorer, was struck in his left eye in the fifth minute against Georgia Tech and never returned. He complained of double vision and was taken to a hospital for examination.

Without Kupchak to contend with, Georgia Tech, 8-11, ran up an early 24-10 lead. After North Carolina battled back with 10 straight points, the teams were tied at the half at 42. North Carolina took the lead for good at 65-63, then resorted to its four-corner spread offense over the last five minutes to stay in front.

Ollie Matson, Jr., hit a jump shot with five seconds left to give Pepperdine a shocking upset over prviously unbeaten Nevada-Las Vegas. It was the first loss in 23 games this season for Jerry Tarkanian's team, which had swamped Pepperdine 118-101 in their last meeting. Barnes Hauptfuhrer scored 19 points to lead Princeton past Columbia and boost the Tigers' Ivy League record to 5-0.

Third Medal Puts Her In Class By Herself

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

INNSBRUCK (AP) — Speed skater Sheila Young, on a collision course with history, missed her prime target but still came away with a bronze medal Saturday to wind up a sparkling Olympic career that ranks with the best in American history.

No other American has ever won three medals in one Winter Olympics.

Having gained the attention of the sports world, the former waitress from Detroit was attempting a unique triple play in the 12th Winter Games Saturday. First there was a silver medal in the 1,500-meter race, then a gold in the 500, and Saturday she was seeking immortality with the pursuit of a second Winter Games gold medal.

Had she flashed across the finish line with the fastest time Saturday, Miss Young, the 25-year-old speed skating sensation from the frozen ponds of Michigan, would have placed herself in the company of only two other Americans who have won double gold medals at a Winter Olympics.

And, with a silver medal added to her bounty, Miss Young's achievement would have surpassed John Shea and Irving Jaffee, who both won two gold medals when the United States swept the men's speed skating events in 1932.

But in the end, it was not to be as Miss Young failed in what she calls her best event, the 1,000 meters, losing to both Russia's Tatiana Averina and Leah Poulos of Northbrook, Ill.

"I'd rather have one gold than four silvers," Miss Young said.

Miss Young said that she would compete in the World Skating Championships later this year and then retire and marry her fiance, James Ochowitz of Milwaukee, an Olympic cyclist.

Racing in her third event in three days, Miss Young said, "my legs didn't feel good."

There was a false start in her race but she said that did not distract her. "Sometimes they help relieve the tension," she said. "But my start was not very good."

"You don't just press a computer button and have Sheila win the race even though you folks might want it to be that way," said her coach, Peter Schotting.

Miss Young won the silver medal in the 1,500 meters on Thursday and the gold medal in the 500 meters Friday.

In 1932, John Shea and Irving Jaffee each won two gold medals as the United States swept the men's speed skating events.

Seven Olympians have won three titles in one Olympics beginning with Thorleif Haug of Norway in the Nordic skiing events in 1924. It was another 32 years before the next triple winner, Austria's Anton Sailer in Alpine skiing. In 1964, Russians Lydia Skoblikova finished first in all three Alpine skiing events.

In 1972, Galina Kulakova of the Soviet Union was the queen of the Games with three gold medals in Nordic skiing and Dutchman Ard Schenk was king with three speed skating titles.

The multi-talented Miss Young, the 1973 world champion cyclist, comes from an athletic family. Her mother was the United States' national cycling champion in 1943 and her father was a state cycling champion.

Clair Young, who is here watching his daughter climb the ladder of Olympic greatness, gave Sheila skates 23 years ago then pushed her when three straight failures at making the world sprint team almost cracked the ice under his budding star.

"This is my life," said Clair Young. "And when she took the gold medal there were tears in my eyes."

Miss Young overcame her early failures, finally making the sprint team and winding up in the Sapporo Olympics in 1972, where she watched Americans Dianne Holum and Anne Henning taste the glory of Olympic victory. Miss Young finished fourth in the 500 meters that year, .08 seconds in back of the bronze medalist, and 17th in the 1,000 meters.

Saturday she stands tall as Olympic champion and world record holder in the same 500 meters. She set a world record of 40.91 last week in Davos, Switzerland, and streaked to the gold Friday with a Olympic record clocking of 42.76.

"When I found out I had won the gold medal," Miss Young said Friday, "a rush went through my whole body."

11 SUNDAY DATES

NEW YORK (AP) — Sunday thoroughbred racing in 1975 was an expensive experiment for the New York Racing Association. However, on 11 Sundays from May 16 through July 25, there will be Sunday racing at Belmont Park in 1976.

It is estimated by NYRA President Thomas FitzGerald that the Sunday racing experiment in 1975 cost the association $800,000, mainly because of increased labor costs. Union employes received double pay when they worked the tracks in 1975.

In tires, it's not the price you pay. It's how often you pay it.
This steel-belted Radial Tire carries the Michelin Warranty* for 40,000 miles on the original tread. (Many owners get much more.) Puncture resistant Michelins give precise steering, and smooth driving comfort. So stop in and start saving today.
40,000 MILE WARRANTY
*Michelin's Warranty for X Radial Highway Passenger Tire shown here covers tread life, normal road hazards (excluding repairable punctures) and defects in workmanship and materials for 40,000 miles, when tire is used on passenger vehicles in normal service in continental United States, except Alaska. Credit or refund (at Michelin's option) is equal to current actual selling price multiplied by percentage of warranted mileage not run on tire.

Think Radial... and Look to the Leader
MICHELIN
The Gas Savers
Because of the lower rolling resistance of Michelin "X" radials over conventional bias-ply tires, you might get as much as 10% savings over your present gas consumption. This means more miles per gallon of gas. It means extra dollars in your pocket.

He noted that home construction in Winterville continues with phase two in Robinson Heights and Shamrock Terrace Subdivision completed and phase three of Shamrock Terrace under construction with 50 homes planned during 1976.

New Times, But Drive-In Still Same

ESSEX, Md. (AP) — They have been coming to the Bird for 18 years now.

On weekend nights, especially in summer, the flow of growling motor machines is almost constant. They cruise in, circle the cinder-block building two or three times and then park for the night. You know the scene.

It's been happening here since 1957 when Mark Botsaris turned his Dairy Queen into a pop food paradise called the Thunderbird Drive-In.

Botsaris probably didn't know it at the time, but he was building a social and gastronomic mecca for generations of young people. Almost every town boasted a drive-in like the Thunderbird at one time or another.

There is an ambience about the place reminiscent of a less complicated past when the most important things in life were cars and girls and boys and double-decker hamburger sandwiches.

Judy Sanders knows the scene well. She was a car hop at the Thunderbird as a high school sophomore back in 1962. Thirteen years later she is married to John Sanders, the manger of the Thunderbird.

Judy, 29, and the mother of three, works as his assistant, taking food orders and supervising the car hops.

"At least once or twice a month," she says, "somebody will come up to the window and say, 'Wow, you're still here and the Thunderbird is still here.' It's amazing to them because everything has changed ... but the Thunderbird is still the same old place they remember as teen-agers.

"The teen-agers who came here years ago are in their 30s going on 40 now. The Thunderbird is the place they used to hang out; whether they went to the drive-in or wherever, everyone ended up at the Thunderbird."

A tall sign with two revolving neon birds, one red and the other blue, towers over the place. There are spaces for 42 cars, with speakers for customers to transmit their food orders over the "servus-fone" inside. The car hops, Maureen and Laura, deliver the orders on brown trays that attach to the car windows.

The ritual is the same every night.

"They usually collect around 10 o'clock and that's when the parking lot is full," said one regular. "They go around three times, first to check out who's here and then to find the best seats."

Owner Botsaris, who has seen the crowd change over the years, is worried about today's young people. The Thunderbird is still a "fun place," he says, but the teen-agers are not as "jovial" as they once were.

"In the '50s ... I could walk up to a carload of kids who were rowdy and just say to them, 'Cut it out,' and they would listen. Today's kids are more aggressive ... to be perfectly honest, I'm just afraid to pull the kids out of cars and call their parents," he said.

The Thunderbird is a type of restaurant rapidly disappearing in the Northeast, probably because of the cold weather that limits business in the winter.

Most remaining car hop locations are found in the South and West, according to William P. Fisher of the National Restaurant Association.

"As the public became more sophisticated in terms of its dining-out eating habits, they demanded a movement away from the girls on roller skates and the trays on the side of the cars," said Fisher in his Chicago office.

Botsaris acknowledges that his business is off 10 to 15 per cent from a decade ago, largely because of the emergence of fast food chains like McDonald's, Gino's and Burger Chef.

The Thunderbird actually loses money from December through February, he says, but sales skyrocket in summer.

On a good night, the drive-in will sell 400 of its most popular item, the Thunderburger — two three-ounce beef patties on a triple decker sesame roll with shredded lettuce, cheese and a thousand island sauce.

ELECTRONIC TAG

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A new means of catching shoplifters has been reported by the Bank of America.

It consists of an electronic tag on the merchandise which has to be deactivated by the sales clerk or else it will cause a loud alarm when the merchandise is carried out of the store.

GASKINS MARINA Washington, N.C.

We have an automobile that saves like an economy car and drives like a Mercedes-Benz. Experience it. The Mercedes-Benz 240D.

Most economy cars make you economize in areas where you don't want to cut corners. Areas like comfort. Or safety engineering. Or quality. We have an alternative. An automobile that solves your gasoline problems once and for all, but doesn't compromise other essentials in the process.

What is it? The Mercedes-Benz 240 Diesel. A car that uses economical Diesel fuel instead of gasoline. A car that burns each gallon of its fuel more completely than any gasoline engine. A car that never needs a conventional tune-up.

But outstanding running economy is just part of the story. The 240D has all of the safety design and engineering advancements that have made Mercedes-Benz automobiles a standard for the automotive world. On top of that, it has ample room for five adults and their luggage.

Sound too good to be true? See the 240D for yourself. Test drive it. Experience an automobile whose time has come.

See the Mercedes-Benz at TARHEEL TOYOTA

CAR OR TRUCK They're All Guaranteed For 100,000 MILES OR 3 YEARS

ONLY AT TARHEEL TOYOTA

So we guaranteed the motor, transmission and rear end for 12 months or 12,000 miles. This warranty applies to all cars selling for $1,000.00 or more on a 50/50 basis with all work being done in our shop. It doesn't apply to any sports cars, high performance engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). If you're in the market for BETTER USED CARS, COME OUT AND LOOK AT OURS. Fabric Designer Says Carpet Color Is To Soothing Neutrals

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

We'll get plenty of stimulus in our environmental pursuits in 1976. We don't need color in our homes to send us reeling with excitement at the end of the day. In fact, the opposite extreme will provide serenity and security, says the world-famous fabric designer, Jack Lenor Larsen. He was discussing the new soft look of carpets he has styled.

Muted colors — grays, alabasters, biscuit — will provide the gentle ambiance we need now.

"We are through with sour avocado, gold, ochre and some other muddy colors we've been stuck with for 15 years. The trend is away from yellow-cast colors that have dominated the home. We will go into neutrals and warm rosy tones. Gray will be high-fashion. Biscuit will be a warm, clean color, a contrast to formerly dirty colors."

Although he introduced his own carpets two years ago, Larsen's current collection was color-styled for Gulistan. Softly fused tweeds and iridescent colors combined cool and warm colors, even browns. He has also designed contract carpets — normally used in public buildings — for adolescent rooms "because they are made to take abuse."

Larsen has won gold medals for craftsmanship, textiles, design, prints. He has done handwoven fabric murals and his fabrics are in permanent collections of major museums over the world, including New York's Metropolitan, the Museum of Modern Art and the Cooper Hewitt, and museums in San Francisco, Chicago, Detroit.

"These new carpets for Gulistan gave us the opportunity to practice what we learned in our pilot plan. New things can be done — there is an enormous affinity between furnishings,--fabrics and carpets, but the bulk of the home furnishings industry has not kept pace at a time when top fashion designers are working on affordable clothes and when the average American has become more sophisticated and no longer feels that she must die with the things she got when she was married."

Oddly enough, bedrooms may be educating Americans to better taste' he points out. Sheets and towels designed by top designers have given people a chance to be bolder. If they don't like something, they can afford to change it. It is not the same as making a big mistake with a sofa or draperies that might invite laughter, he maintains.

"When we were holding on to old furniture, colors and patterns, once in a lifetime furnishing, there was no opportunity to learn about new things and that there was such a thing as change. That's why people usually dress better than they furnish. They do it every day."

Larsen has worked in many countries but his Irish collection may have given him the greatest satisfaction because his assignment was to "make jobs to keep young Irishmen at home." He combined Irish wool and Irish cultural motifs — pre-Christian ornament, 18th-century Georgian, art and arc eologyn—in upholstery, casements and prints.

"Little mills have sprung up in small towns, an advantage over industrial slums, and it has started an industry for weaving cloth, not just heavy tweeds for which there is less and less market."

He works more at home now. It has become difficult to work in India because "they have their own sense of time," and as for Africa, "there are fewer weaving cultures that are prepared to work for the American market," he says.

"Black African ladies have given up their high heels and French clothes and are now back in native dress. Nationalism has given their craftsmanship prestige and a home market."

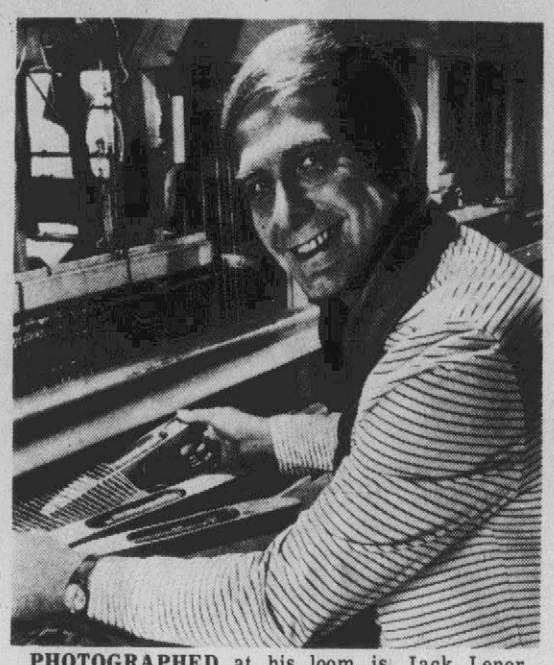

Larsen's fabrics are often framed for their beauty — for example, an Oriental one of clouds, trees, stones, pebbles, ponds, the horizon, is a tranquil effusion flowing in spiritual profundity.

Now he has brought forth a book (with Jeanne Weeks), "Fabrics for Interiors, a Guide for Architects, Designers and Consumers," that should have enormous appeal to home decorators.

It is all there — the how and why of fabric selection, the aesthetics of texture, color, pattern. The use of fabrics at windows for view control, light control, insulation and so on, is explained. There are descriptions of cloths, fibers, yarns, weaves, constructions, finishing, dyeing and printing.

One chapter, fabric costs and budgeting, may be an invaluable help to the home planner. She will learn how to get more for her money and how to make these important purchases last longer. The book is easy to read and there are a number of very good illustrations.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

According to her height and weight on the insurance charts, she should be a guard for the Lakers.

She had iron-starved blood, one shoulder is lower than the other, and she bites her fingernails.

She is the most beautiful woman I have ever seen. She should be. She's worked on that body and face for more than 60 years. The process for that kind of beauty can't be rushed.

The wrinkles in the face have been earned . . . one at a time. The stubborn one around the lips that has deepened with every "No!" The thin ones on the forehead that mysteriously appeared when the first child was born.

The eyes are protected by glass now, but you can still see the perma-crinkles around them. Young eyes are darting fleeting. These are mature eyes that reflect a lifetime. Eyes that have glistened with pride, filled with tears of sorrow, snapped in anger, and burned from loss of sleep. They are now direct and penetrating and look at you when you speak.

The bulges are classics. They developed slowly from babies too sleepy to walk who had to be carried home from Grandma's, grocery bags lugged from the car, ashes carried out of the basement while her husband was at war. Now, they are fed by a minimum of activity, a full refrigerator, and TV bends.

The extra chin is custom-grown and takes years to perfect. Sometimes you can only see it from the side but it's there. Pampered women don't have an extra chin. They cream them away or pat the muscles until they become firm. But this chin has always been there, supporting a nodding head that slept in a chair all night . . . bent over knitting . . . praying.

The legs are still shapely, but the step is slower. They ran too often for the bus, stood a little too long when she "clerked" in the department store, got beat up while teaching her daughter how to ride a two-wheeler. They're purple at the back of the knees.

The hands? They're small and veined and have been dunked, dipped, shook, patted, wrung, caught in doors, splintered, dyed, bitten and blistered, but you can't help but be impressed when you see the ring finger that has shrunk from years of wearing the same wedding ring. It takes time—and much more—to diminish a finger.

I looked at mother long and hard the other day and said, "Mom, I have never seen you so beautiful."

"I work at it," she snapped.

New Program Seeking College-Timid Women

PARKLAND, Wash. (AP) — Broom-closet scholars are being caught by Pacific Lutheran University through a program designed to cut red tape and footwork and get housewives into the classrooms.

Whether women enroll in the university or elect to pursue nonacademic goals, the PLU program is designed for women — usually those with grown children — who want to re-examine what they have done in life and where they want to go.

It is not a rarity to see older men or women on college campuses, but this program is aimed at finding women who would like to try it but are afraid.

"A lot of women who have never finished their college degree, or never attended college are saying, 'I want to go back to work and I want to do something as interesting as my husband's job or my children's schools,'" said Dianne Lee, coordinator of the program.

The university offers two programs, a three-week workshop for determining future goals, and an 11-week class introducing potential students to the major subjects taught.

"One woman in the workshop decided she liked traveling," said Ms. Lee, who prefers the feminist designation. "She had always liked it and had often planned trips for friends. In the back of her mind there was the dream of being a travel agent. We told her to go out and interview some agents to see what the job was like. She came back with two job offers and has been working ever since."

The 11-week course carries two semester credits. Classes meet once a week for three hours. A woman teaches it and each week two professors from campus appear to give a pitch about their specialty.

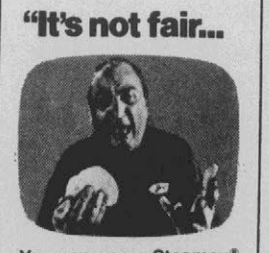

"The professors like it because they are talking to persons their own age, and it is a challenge to capsulize their specialty in an hour and a half," Ms. Lee said. "And the students are given reading assignments each week so they aren't entering the classes cold.

"They like to have adults in their classes because they are often more likely to talk and bring more experiences than the young."

Conversely, the women learn that they can ask intelligent questions and talk with professional scholars — the very persons they for years saw themselves completely removed from.

Couple Exchanges Vows Friday

Miss Donna Denise Worthington and Joseph Gordon Cash were married Friday night at 7:30 o'clock in a double ring ceremony at the Salvation Army Church.

The ceremony was performed by Lt. John Jones. A program of nuptial music was presented by Eddie Hobgood of Greenville, and soloist, David Miles of Greenville sang "A Time For Us" and "We've Only Just Begun." Mrs. Cindy Faulkner of Greenville sang "Because."

After speaking their vows, the couple removed two outside lighted tapers from a three branch brass candelabra and lighted the middle taper to symbolize the union of their marriage.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worthington and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Cash, all of Rt. 7, Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a white formal length gown of white organza over taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled with silk Venise flowers. The sheer yoke was outlined in the silk patterned lace. The full sheer bishop sleeves were encircled with lace. Lace also trimmed the full flared skirt and attached chapel length train.

She wore an elbow length illusion mantilla edged in a floral Venise lace, held in place by a Camelot headpiece trimmed in Venise lace beaded with pearls. She carried a nosegay of white and pink carnations centered with an orchid corsage.

Serving as matron of honor was Mrs. Connie Clark, sister-in-law of the bride, of Greenville and maid of honor was Miss Vickie Dunn, cousin of the bride, also of Greenville. They wore floor length gowns of mint green polyester with an A-line skirt. The gowns were complemented by a matching floral jacket styled with long fitted sleeves. They wore hats of green with matching streamers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Brenda Willet of Grafton, Va., cousin of the bride, Miss Terry Cash of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Frankie Cash and Miss Juanita Cash of Winterville, cousins of the bridegroom, and Miss Debbie Eastwood of Greenville. The bridesmaids wore gowns styled like the honor attendants in a pink polyester with a jacket of matching design. They wore pink hats with matching streamers.

Miss Rhonda Briley of Hampton, Va., was the miniature bride, cousin of the bride. She wore a white formal gown similar to the bride's and carried a miniature nosegay like the bride.

Miss Gayle Cash of Winterville, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl. She wore a formal length gown of pink and a matching hat like the honor attendants. She carried a basket of petals.

Joseph L. Cash served his son as best man. Ushers were William Covington of Winterville, Kenneth Mills, Bobby Padget, Jimmy Radford of Greenville and Marty Grier of Pink Hill. Ring bearer was Timmie Stancill of Rt. 4, Greenville. Steve Stocks of Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom, served as miniature groom.

The bride's mother selected a long gown of aqua polyester with a matching lace jacket. The bridegroom's mother wore a long gown of blue floral fashioned with long sheer sleeves and high neckline. Both were presented corsages by the bridal couple.

Mrs. Mary B. Jones of Rt. 4, Greenville, grandmother of the bride and Mrs. Gordon Lee of Smithfield, Va., and Mrs. Nita Cash of Kinston, grandmothers of the bridegroom, were presented corsages by the bridal couple.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. John Jones of Greenville.

The bridal couple, wedding party and out-of-town guests were entertained with an after-rehearsal party given by the bridegroom's parents.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall given by the parents' of the bride following the ceremony.

A floral arrangement and a portrait of the bride decorated the refreshment table.

The bridal couple cut the traditional first slice of cake and guests were served by Mrs. Rose Wilkinson. Refreshments were served served by Mrs. Lou Cash, Mrs. Rue Briley and friends of the bridal couple.

Mrs. Ann Worthington, aunt of the bride, presided at the register. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dunn, aunt and uncle of the bride, said the goodbyes.

Following the reception, the bride changed into a rust polyester pantsuit with a matching shirt and the orchid corsage lifted from her nosegay.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points the couple will reside at Rt. 4, Greenville.

The bridegroom is a senior at D. H. Conley High School and is employed at The Happy Store. The bride is a junior at North Pitt. She plans to further her education in a nursing career.

On Saturday night and Sunday evening the bridal couple was entertained by friends and some of the wedding attendants at a bachelor party and spinster party.

Family Creates Full House

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Wheeling the grocery buggy up to the checkout counter, Air Force Maj. Ralph Tosti began unloading it for the cashier:

Twenty-five half-gallons of milk, 16 loaves of bread, nine dozen eggs and 11 boxes of assorted cereals.

The second basket, guided by his wife, Gay, contained more of the same and so did the third.

Each Saturday the Tostis do their grocery shopping and hope they don't run short on any items until Tuesday, when they make their next trip to the market.

The Tostis are one of 25 military families in the San Antonio area involved with the Foster Parent Program. They have 10 children under their roof. Six are their own, four are foster children, given to them for care for an indefinite period.

Their home is not unlike any other where there are children except for a bicycle rack in the yard which contains 10 two-wheelers of various sizes and three tricycles.

Inside the four-bedroom house, located on Randolph Air Force Base, it is quieter than one would imagine for having 12 residents.

In the living room, peering at the 21-inch TV set, are 18 eyes belonging to nine youngsters age 4 through 16 sprawled on the floor. The youngest, eight months old, is asleep.

The Tosti family has hosted 11 foster children in all during the past two years. They realize the current four will be with them only for a short time until they are placed back in their natural homes or are adopted by some other family.

"We try to do everything for our foster children we would do for our own," Tosti said. "When they come into our home, they are coming to join our family as part of it. These kids need a mom and dad who understand and care.

"Some children come to us and other foster parents with emotional problems because they have been removed traumatically from their own environment. The tendency is to withdraw within themselves.

"Consequently, when we receive these children into our home, we are quick to notice abnormal behavior we don't see in our own children. This just emphasizes the need for more training for foster parents so they will be able to cope with these situations."

"Most foster children act quite naturally when they are introduced to their foster homes," Mrs. Tosti said. "After two or three months they start looking at us as if we were their natural parents. It's hard because I start looking at them as one of my own. At some point they start calling you Mom and Dad. I never say that I am their Mom, but I do say I am their foster parent and they will be living with us for a while."

The Tosti children have accepted sharing their home with others as a part of life. Robin, 14, said she thought the whole idea was "neat." The only thing she objects to is the baby sitting.

"When we have an infant, like we do now, it cuts in on my free time on the weekends. Except for that, I think it's great. Not too many of my friends at school understand about foster parents. When I explain it to them, they usually want to come over to the house after school and meet the kids. Often they try to persuade their own parents to join the foster parent program."

Mrs. Tosti said some neighbors ask her why she is so involved, having six children of her own. "Knowing you are needed is the real reason I suppose," is her answer.

Ultimately, the day comes when the Tosti have to give up their foster children to the social worker.

"That's what it's all about and we realize it," Tosti said. "That's one of the toughest parts of the program."

Husband's Free Time Tied Up By His Family

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is being used by his family, only he can't see it.

He works six days a week, and I like to plan something for us to do together on his day off.

Well, three weeks ago, his mother called on his day off and asked if he would take her shopping. He said yes, so there went our plans.

The next week, his sister called and asked if he would help her move on his day off. He said he would, so there went our plans for the day again.

Last week, his brother called and said he needed help to unload a truckload of wood, so my husband, the fool, spent his whole day off helping his brother.

I finally got mad and told him that he was putting his family before me, and he said, "Well, I've known them for 21 years, and I've known you only a year and a half."

When do you think he will start putting me ahead of them?

EVERYBODY BEFORE ME

DEAR EVERYBODY: According to the way your husband figures, it will take at least another 20 years.

DEAR ABBY: A man I had always thought was married asked me for a date. I turned him down, saying I do not date married men.

He then told me that he was not really "married" because he is a Catholic and he was married by a justice of the peace, so in the eyes of the Church he is single.

Is that right?

Please let me know because it's against my principles to go out with married men. Thank you.

PLAYING IT SAFE

DEAR PLAYING: Unless this man obtained a legal divorce, in the eyes of the LAW he is married.

DEAR ABBY: Clyde and I have been dating for eight months. We love each other very much and have talked about getting married.

We eat out on weekends and take turns paying for the meal. (We both have good jobs.) Here's the problem:

I am a very slow eater, and Clyde eats fast. While I'm eating my first course, Clyde eats his, plus his salad, and then he eats my salad, too.

When the main courses come, he devours his in no time, and then reaches over and starts in on mine. Before I've had three bites, Clyde has eaten everything on my plate!

I don't order dessert anymore because Clyde gobbles his up and mine, too.

What kind of husband do you think he'd make? His hoggishness is not only disgusting and embarrassing, it leaves me....

HUNGRY

DEAR HUNGRY: Clyde's hoggishness isn't your only problem. An appalling lack of communication between two people who "love each other" is just as serious.

What's wrong with telling Clyde how you feel about his eating habits? Do that, and then you'll know what kind of husband he'd make.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Card Party Scheduled For Late February

Mrs. Roy Thompson presided at the meeting and the opening prayer was given by Miss Ada Jones. The president introduced Velma Lowe and Loretta Collins and welcomed Kitty Twomey and Barbara Kozlowski.

It was announced that the next coffee and doughnut time will take place Sunday after both Masses and Friendship Sunday will be held Feb. 15.

Thank you notes were received from Father Maurice Spillane and the Pitt County Mental Health Association. It was announced that the Special Olympics will be held April 7 with a rain date of April 12. The club will provide refreshments for the event.

Father J. Paul Byron, moderator, was present during the evening.

Refreshments were served by Miss Jones, Miss Evelyn Beasley and Mrs. Whitley Miller.

Two Women Growing Worms For Fun And Profit

By DEBORAH FRAZIER

DENVER (UPI) — To Lori Savari and Gloria Parker, the sound of two million red worms munching contentedly on cow and rabbit manure is beautiful.

"When the lights are out, you can hear them eating," said Mrs. Savari, co-owner of Frontier Farms, 1305 W. 38th Ave. "It sounds like they are smacking their lips."

The worm farm, founded four years ago with a paltry $12 investment, has grown into a $150,000 per year business, supplying worms to bait stores, organic gardeners hatcheries and future entrepreneurs.

A recipe, she said, has even been developed for oatmeal red worm cookies.

In 1971 Mrs. Savari had to cancel a fishing trip because of a bait shortage. She checked into worm farming, purchased 5,000 for $12 and was on her way.

"I always wanted to farm and I raised rabbits in California," she said. "Worm farming was an immediate success, the first order cleaned me out."

The farm grew and she enlisted Mrs. Parker's aid. They now have a nine member staff, 260 worm sharecroppers and spend up to 60 hours a week each coordinating the wiggling supplies with a growing demand.

According to Mrs. Parker, bait stores and organic gardeners remain the major market although other uses are being developed, including livestock and human consumption.

"The worm has been around a long time and it's just now becoming a major business," she said. "The more people that get to understand worms, the more they will be used."

The women now start others on the road to worm prosperity. For $470, the hopeful farmer receives instructions, a 50,000 worm starter, expert advice and a contract from Frontier to purchase all the animals produced.

Mrs. Savari said that after a year, the return is about $1,600 a month. She said smaller quantities are available but no contract is offered because "5,000 is just a drop in the bucket."

Mrs. Parker said 99 out of every 100 sharecroppers stick with it and become major suppliers for Frontier, which in turn profits from eliminating expensive middleman costs. However, she said providing expert advice has caused problems.

"It's like taking home a new baby from the hospital and many of them panic," she said. "We had to get unlisted numbers because of the predawn and weekend calls.

"They'd ask how much the babies will weigh, how old the worms get, what to do if one escapes, all sorts of things."

Mrs. Savaria said red worms, which live 6 to 12 years in captivity and have five hearts and six kidneys, are perfectly designed for profit because they are each bisexual and double in number every 60 days.

"We still haven't figured out their orgies, though," she said. "Usually only two mate, but sometimes we find three and four all hooked together."

Care of worms is simple.

"Feed, water and let them mate," said Mrs. Parker.

The worms dine on cow and rabbit manure in plywood beds in groups of about 25,000. They are sold commercially in three sizes, depending on the intended use — large for bait, medium for garden use and small for fish and frog hatcheries.

Mrs. Parker said red worms were selected for the business becauue they are tolerant of temperature changes, hardy, have good dispositions and don't crawl out of their bedding area.

To meet the expanding demand, Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Savari plan to set up five branch offices across the country to move supplies closer to sharecroppers and the markets.

Neither of the businesswomen forsee any drop in the demand, which has grown yearly with the popularity of organic gardening and export of the animals to Japan to process wastes and to Israel for crops. However, worms will never be just a business to Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Savari.

"It's like a big executive sandbox," Mrs. Parker said. "We can't go in the back without putting our hands in the racks. We also pick up the ones that have fallen on the ground."

"They are living, producing beings, so it's common sense to pick them up," said Ors. Savari. "And it's also like picking up dollar signs."

More Than An Address-Change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Swapping an urban for a rural life-style involves more than just changing your address.

Many modern-day pioneers find their dreams of a better way of life change to disappointment and frustration.

That doesn't have to happen, according to the Rural Development of the U.S. Agriculture Department. Check on satisfactory employment, housing, transportation, medical services, schools, government services and local development trends.

Many prospective residents can write to mayors or chambers of commerce for information about communities in which they're interested.

The Barrett and Spell families wish to thank their many friends for their kindnesses rendered in their hour of sorrow. We thank each and every one of you for the many acts of kindness, food and the phone calls we received in the recent loss of our loved one, James Spell. We thank you, for it was each of you that helped to make our burden lighter. May God bless you one by one.

Wednesday Concert Set

The University Church of Christ will host Dave Scroggins, who will be in concert Wednesday. The service will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Scroggins has been in the field of music evangelism for the past eight years, during which time he has sung for audiences across America, in Israel and Jamaica.

He began his singing ministry in 1966 when he helped organize and sang bass for the Allegiant Quartet of Santa Cruz, Calif. In 1968 he moved to Southern California where he joined the Gospel Lads Quartet and continued to sing bass for them through the end of 1974. The Lads Quartet moved to Joplin, Mo., in 1971 to work with Revival Fires national television ministry.

Scroggins is presently appearing as a soloist and makes his home in Joplin, Mo., with his wife and two children.

The public is invited to attend this service.

Alleghany Lu Still Hopes To Find Gold

NEVADA CITY, Calif. (AP) — "It's right here, just a few feet away," said 67-year-old Alleghany Lu, uncorking a great whack at the mine rockwall with her rusty pick, still hunting the elusive El Dorado after 40 years.

The woman's eyes lit up in the shower of sparks that briefly brightened the gloomy tunnel. She sat down in the dust to study a chunk of yellow rock, shrugged, and tossed it away — just another yellow rock.

Alleghany Lu's real name is Luthena Caston. She's been working around the mines on the northern edge of the Mother Lode since she first came to California from Montana in the 1930s, hunting more of the $600 million in gold dug out by the '49ers.

"I'm going to hold on until they come up and hang me," Lu vowed recently. The years have whitened her hair but failed to cool the gold fever that hit her so long ago, and her faith is as strong as ever.

"The pitiful thing is just when I'm close to hittin' a big pocket of gold, I don't have the money to go on," she sighed.

Bob Clinch, who sells mining supplies and has known her for 30 years, said, "Lu's quite a lady. She used to be quite a looker in her day. She would come back from San Francisco wearing white gloves and all the trimmings of a San Francisco lady. She's got a kind of Diamond Lil complex, you know."

Lu, who got her nickname while working the Seven Aces Mine up by Alleghany elsewhere in the Sierra, named her current claim the San Francisco. It's a few hundred yards deep and was blasted out of the Sierra mountainside. She makes a daily round trip to the mine in an elderly pickup truck.

Olympic Commentators Are Skilled Experts

SOARING — through the air, an Olympic ski jumper backdropped by the Tyrolean Alps and the scenic city of Innsbruck, Austria, site for the 1976 Winter Games. This February 4 - 15 ABC Sports will be on hand to bring U.S. viewers 43½ hours of exclusive coverage of the 12th Winter Olympiad, only on ABC-TV.

For its exclusive U.S. television coverage of the 12th Winter Olympiad from Innsbruck, Austria, ABC Sports has assembled an outstanding roster of expert commentators, among them former U.S. ski team coach Bob Beattie, two-time Gold Medalist in figure skating Dick Button, five-time Olympian in ski jumping Art Devlin and 1972 Gold and Bronze Medalist in speed skating Anne Henning.

Bob Beattie is one of the best-known persons in international skiing, due in part to his many appearances as an expert commentator on "ABC's Wide World of Sports." A former coach of the U.S. ski team, he is credited with being one of the major factors in bringing American skiing to world prominence. Beattie has also been the guiding force behind the international professional skiing circuit. In 1972, he served as an expert commentator for ABC Sports' coverage of the Summer Olympic Games from Munich.

A champion from his youth, Dick Button won back-to-back Gold Medals in figure skating in the 1948 and 1952 Olympic Games. He is the only skater ever to make a clean sweep in one year: United States, North America, European, World and Olympic Champion (1948). Button is a frequent contributor to "Wide World" and has played an important role in bringing his sport to the level of popularity it has reached today, both as a spectator and a participant sport.

Skiing and ski jumping great Art Devlin has covered every Winter Olympiad since the 1960 Games at Squaw Valley, and has been associated with ABC sports since 1962. He has been a member of five U.S. Olympic teams and three World Championship teams and was the first American skier to break the 300 foot barrier in ski jumping. In addition to his work on the Olympics, Devlin has covered scores of ski jumping, ski flying and Nordic skiing events for "Wide World."

At the age of 16, Anne Henning had already achieved more major goals than many competitors with twice her age and experience, among them an Olympic Gold Medal in the 500 meter speed skating, an Olympic Bronze Medal in the 1,000 meters, and world records at both distances. Her Gold Medal was unique in that it involved a reskate, the only time such a second attempt has been granted in Olympic history. Ms. Henning retired from active competition following the 1972 Games at Sapporo, Japan, and this appearance will be her first working for ABC Sports.

'Sara' Premieres

Brenda Vaccaro will star as Sara Yarnell, a 19th-century frontier teacher who refuses to conform to the schoolmarm image, in "Sara," a new one-hour dramatic series premiering Friday, Feb. 13, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS Channel 9.

"Sara" is based on a novel by Marian Cockrell, in which an Eastern teacher seeks a new life in a frontier mining town. Contrary to everything the townspeople expect from their schoolmarm, she wages a continual personal battle to maintain her own independence while struggling to build a school in a town where education is considered a frill.

Miss Vaccaro was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., but soon moved to Dallas, Texas, where she grew up. She returned to New York nine years ago, and wasted no time proving her diverse talents on Broadway, being nominated for three prestigious Tony Awards in the next three years — for her performances in the comedy "Cactus Flower," the musical "How Now, Dow Jones," and the drama "The Goodbye People."

The attractive brunette has starred in a number of motion pictures, including "Where It's At," "Midnight Cowboy," "I Love My Wife," "Summertree" and "Going Home."

For television, Miss Vaccaro starred in the dramatic specials "Honor Thy Father," "Sunshine," and "The Rosenbergs," and won an Emmy Award for her 1974 appearance in the music-and-comedy revue "The Shape of Things."

Other regular members of the "Sara" cast include Albert Stratton, who plays the town's newspaper editor, Martin Pope; Mariclare Costello, who portrays Sara's friend, Julia Bailey; Louise Latham, who plays the opinionated woman with whom Sara boards; and Bert Kramer, William Phipps and William Wintersole, who co-star as the members of the Independence School Board.

SARA — Emmy Award-winning actress Brenda Vaccaro stars as Sara Yarnell, who has left a dreary and predictable existence in the east to become the school teacher for the 1870s frontier town of Independence, Colorado, in "Sara," new one-hour drama series that will premiere Friday, February 13 (8-9 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9.

CONDUCTING — Conductor Michael Tilson Thomas (center) conducts a New York Philharmonic Young People Concert to be presented on "The Festival of Lively Arts For Young People" series, Sunday, February 8 (4-5 p.m.) The program, "Music For Young Performers," features, clockwise from upper left, Gary Schocker (flute), Chan Hee Kim (piano), John Senior (harp), and Carlton Greene (tuba).

Traditions Broken

Over the past half-century, the New York Philharmonic Young People's Concerts have been helmed by the music director of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, starting with Ernest Schelling during the 1923-1924 season and continuing with Leonard Bernstein's tenure from 1957-1970. But with the latter's resignation as the Philharmonic's music director, and the naming of French conductor Pierre Boulez as successor, the tradition had of necessity to be broken.

When Michael Tilson Thomas gives the downbeat to the orchestra on the Young People's Concert "Music for Young Performers," the tradition continues to be broken. The special is to be broadcast on "The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People" series Sunday, Feb. 8, 4 to 5 p.m.

Boulez's commitments, aside from his Philharmonic stewardship, had precluded his handling the added responsibility of the Young People's Concert series, and guest conductors — among them Aaron Copeland, Yehudi Menuhin and Dean Dixon — have occupied the podium for these concerts since Bernstein stepped down. Now, Thomas, at age 30, a 'wunderkind' of American serious music, writes and conducts and narrates this series of award-winning concerts.

Thomas, who is music director of the Buffalo Philharmonic, is — in the considered opinion of composer Aaron Copeland — "another Bernstein — he has not only the talent, but also the same illectual curiosity, even outside music."

The resemblance between Thomas and Bernstein are striking. Both men are American, both are brilliant pianists, both are high-strung, both are intensely enthusiastic, and both share a love of theater and theatrical gesture.

Chinese Art Presented

The highly-acclaimed collection of archaeological discoveries spanning millennia of China's past, from Paleolithic times to the Yuan dynasty (A. D. 1271-1368) will be the subject of "The Red Flower and the Green Horse," a special CBS News cultural broadcast on Sunday, Feb. 8, 10 to 11 a.m.

The exhibition of 400 objects - from a selection of thousands - on loan from Peking has been exhibited in museums and galleries of Europe and the U.S. CBS News filmed the collection when it was on exhibition at the Nelson Gallery-Atkins Museum in Kansas City, Missouri.

The archaeological finds - representing a comprehensive selection from thousands excavated in China between 1949-1972 - have added immeasureably to scholarly understanding of China's long history.

Burr Is Another Attorney

Raymond Burr's first role as an attorney was in "Perry Mason," the popular TV series which won him Emmys in 1959 and 1960 as the 'Best Actor in a Leading Role.'

After his nine-year tenure as the hard-driving defense attorney, he became Chief Robert T. Ironsides in another hit series, "Ironsides." So well was his portrayal of the paraplegic chief that the series was telecast not only in the U.S., but in many other countries around the world during the eight years that it aired.

Now, after a year's absence, he's back in the starring role of attorney Arthur Mallory in "Mallory," a program development project to be colorcast as the "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie" Feb. 8, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channels 6-7. Mallory, a once successful attorney, was destroyed by public opinion but subsequently vindicated by the bar.

Raymond Burr, now 58-years-old, is a household word because of his distinguished theatrical career. He has starred in several Broadway plays, and his motion picture career encompasses 91 films, including roles in such classics as "A Place In The Sun" and Alfred Hitchcock's "Rear Window." He has also taught drama at Columbia University (New York City) and the Pasadena Playhouse (which later awarded him an honorary degree).

During his World War II service in the U.S. Navy, he developed an interest in the welfare of service personnel which led him to record more than 3,000 radio shows for troops. The U.S. Army credits Burr with originating the "handshake tours" of Southeast Asia later undertaken by many other major performers.

In addition to the Emmys he garnered as "Perry Mason," he also won the TV Guide Award as the most popular male personality in 1960 and 1961.

LEE MAJORS, as Steve Austin, persuades an old acquaintance, beautiful Trish Hollander, (played by guest star Farrah Fawcett Majors, real-life wife of Lee) to help him in retrieving a priceless statue, the Golden Pharaoh, which has been stolen from a small country in "The Golden Pharaoh," on ABC-TV's "The Six Million Dollar Man," Sunday, February 8 (8-9 p.m.). Trish, a tricky sort, agrees to help, but has plans of her own for the staute.

Jack Palance Stars As 'Bronk' Character

There's a lot of Jack Palance in Alex Bronkov, the character the actor portrays in his new series "Bronk," seen Sundays, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS Ch. 11.

Jack plays the harmonica So does Bronk.

Jack smokes a pipe. Ditto Bronk.

Even the old cars Bronk drives in the fast-paced series belong to Jack who owns 35 collectible cars including a 1938 Cadillac once owned by Al Capone.

At the outset, executive producer Bruce Geller suggested that the real palance be incorporated into the character of Det. Lt. Alex Bronkov — his soft manner of speech, his informal dress, his propensity for people-watching. Geller even designed the show's main title, starts with the camera scanning personal objects on a dresser top, to give further insight to Bronk as portrayed by Palance.

Jack agreed and went a step further. He used his own early environment and experiences to formulate Bronk.

Geller has sound reasons for developing this unusual rapport between the actor and the role he plays.

"Television audiences take a proprietary interest in the actors they bring into their living room with a flick of the dial," he says. "They feel they should know and like the people they watch as stars of a series."

There are other similarities between Bronk and Palance. Jack has an admirable collection of paintings. A few of them are used to dress Bronk's home in the series.

Bronk loves animals, as evidenced by his fondness for the long-haired white cat, Yankee, who makes him sneeze. Palance has dogs and cats on his working ranch near Tehachapi, Calif., where there also is a pet white turkey that constantly follows him.

Actor Takes Pounding Role

JULIUS HARRIS (L.) is a trainer who sees championship material in Nick Nolte (R.) in Part III of the ABC-TV's "Rich Man, Poor Man" Monday, February 9 (10-11 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

Nick Nolte is, above all, a stickler for good sound physical conditioning. But for ABC-TV's "Rich Man, Poor Man," the actor had to voluntarily tax his body painfully to make his performance as Tom Jordache believable.

As Tom, Nolte had to go through a 35-pound appearance change, losing 20 pounds, gaining them back, then adding 15 more. Although a slight gain or loss in weight in not new in film work, the extent of Nolte's change during a six-month period was extraordinary.

"Playing young Tom Jordache was all right," says Nick. "He's 16, 17 years old, an athlete in high school — the epitome of youth."

But to make Tom "all right" for the screen, Nolte trimmed some 20 pounds off his frame to achieve a more youthful appearance.

"I was awfully lucky," says Nolte, "to have a boxing trainer-manager named Sonny Shields to give me a hand with my conditioning."

Shields also guided Nolte when it was time for the actor to turn boxer for the screen: "For that," says Nolte, "I had to go back to my original weight of 175 pounds, but during the time I was putting on the weight I was also learning to box, so my muscle structure was well-toned and without fat. I was up at 4 a.m. every morning, working out — running, working with barbells, shadow-boxing — before the day's filming. Boy, was I tired when I got home at night!"

Singing Out For 'Maude'

Would you buy Maude Findlay on a white horse as General George Washington, the Father of Our Country? Or, how about Maude, Carol and Vivian as "The Spirit of '76," singing "I Am Woman"?

Well, if you're ready for that, then you're ready for the Tuckahoe Bicentennial musical extravaganza, because the above-mentioned phenomena - and more - acutally do take place on the third annual musical "Maude," Monday, Feb. 9, 9:30 to 10 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

Additional mind-boggling situations include Mrs. Naugatuck as Betsy Ross and as a Revolutionary barmaid; Maude teaching Mrs. Naugatuck to sing like Brabra Streisand; and belting out her own block-busting version of "You're Gonna Hear From Me."

Taped two days before Christmas, the show is by far the most ambitious musical performed by the "Maude" cast, and particularly satisfying for the four ladies in the regular cast, since Beatrice Arthur, Adrienne Barbeau, Rue McClanahan and Hermione Badderley all have musical-theater backgrounds but have little or no chance to raise their voices in song in the regular format of the "Maude" show.

After her one-woman, tour-de-force episode earlier in the season, Beatrice Arthur would have been expected to breeze through the musical with no problems. Not so, says Miss Arthur.

"This show was every bit as tough as the 'analysis' show," she concedes, "but at least I wasn't out there all alone, so that made it almost bearable. Of course, the fact that we all had the flu and none of us had had time for Christmas shopping didn't make it easier.

"Other than that," she adds, "it was a fun show to do. But I'll tell you one thing. That's the first and last time you'll see me on a horse - white or any other color. The first person to suggest I do a Matt Dillon impression is not going to walk without pain for a week."

HER OWN VOICE

In the upcoming episode of "The Bionic Woman" you'll be hearing Lindsay Wagner doing her own singing. She sings so well that the producers decided not to 'dub' her voice with another one.

Actor Was An Autistic Child

A TIME OF RECOLLECTION— Joseph (Matthew Laborteaux) recalls happy days spent with his grandfather, Papa D'Amico (Joseph Mascolo), in "Papa and Me," a program in NBC TV's "Special Treat" series Tuesday, Feb. 10 (4-5 p.m.). In this scene, Joseph thinks back to the time he and Papa D'Amico filched some bread and fed it to their pigeons. The boy's recollections take place as his grandfather is dying.

Matthew Laborteaux, the "Me" in the "Special Treat" program "Papa and Me" Tuesday, Feb. 10, 4 to 5 p.m., is a bright, talented child who didn't talk until he was 3 and never spoke until the age of 4. His condition was correctly diagnosed as autistic.

To see Matthew performing today, at the age of 9, is to watch a miracle — or so his mother believes. She insists the 'miracle is the combination of diet, the patience of his teachers and doctors, and her and her husband's (Mr. and Mrs. Ronald C. Laborteaux) unwavering belief that Matthew could be cured.

Matthew was what is called an "unadoptable" child since it was thought that he was mentally regarded. Since the Laborteauxs had already adopted another such child — Patrick, who had been disgnosed as psychotic — and had had excellent results with him, they did not hesitate to take Matthews.

The first three years were terrible; Matthew refused to do any of the normal things children do, and the Laborteauxs were never totally sure he understood what they said to him.

Visits to doctors and psychiatrists were constant, but Mrs. Laborteaux felt they would solve the enigma. Because she is hypoglycemic and cannot eat sugar or carbohydrates, she became very interested in nutrition. As an experiment, with the approval of her doctors, she tried the same diet on Matthew and the change in his personality was startling. This his previous attitude toward people was of a violent nature, he became calmer.

At this point a young psychiatrist made a breakthrough with the boy when, in a private session, the child spoke to him.

"You son has a remarkable vocabulary," he told Mr. Laborteaux, who replied "how do you know? He's never spoken!"

"Oh yes, he speaks in long sentences and obviously is a gifted child," the psychiatrist said.

"It didn't really happen overnight," Mrs. Laborteaux says, "e-cept in certain areas. For instance, he never crawled or toddled. One day, when he was 3 years old, he got up and walked. Period."

Nor did his behavior change overnight. "You couldn't order him, or even suggest that he do something or he'd refuse flatly, climb under a table, throw something or hit somebody," his mother recalls. "But if you gave him a chance and said 'If you go in the road, a car will hit you and you'll be killed' and walked away, leaving the decision to him as to whether he'd do it or not, he always made the right choice. It was really rough."

When brother Patrick decided to become an actor, Mathew observed the hard work that went into the endeavor. One day his mother took a chance and asked a question: "Would you like to try acting?" He response was immediate and positive.

Trapper John Returns

When an actor bows out of a starring role in a successful television series there has to be a reason, and — when he returns to star in a brand - new series — there has to be an even better reason.

Wayne Rogers, who gave up the role of combat surgeon Trapper John in the "M-A-S-H" series after three seasons, has returned to television screens in the role of Jake Axminster, a free - wheeling private investigator in corruption - ridden Los Angeles of the 1930s, in "City of Angels," a one-hour drama series colorcast Tuesdays, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

Rogers said he returned because "this is the right time and I think we've finally found the right part. I wouldn't have come back to series television just to do a show. There have been many good projects offered since I left 'M-A-S-H.'"

One of the reasons he left that show was that the character, Trapper John, was a captive figure in a hopeless situation. "He was in the Army and he was in a field hospital in Korea and there was absolutely nothing he could do about it. He wasn't his own man," Rogers says.

Axminster, on the other hand, has more options, more freedom of movement, more opportunity for development.

"In my opinion, he's the ultimate individual. I think that's going to set him apart from all the other classic detectives of this era who have been done before. We're doing everything to show his ability to live his own life."

Rogers added that Axminster is no unblemished hero. He's too suspicious of others to fit the legendary or romantic mold. "I think he sums up his philosophy in the premiere episode when he says that everyone has an angle in the City of Angels. It's hard for him to accept others without looking for that angle, and usually he finds it."

Segal, Jackson Star In 'A Touch Of Class'

Academy Award - winning actress Glenda Jackson and George Segal star in "A Touch of Class," a sophisticated comedy about a divorcee and a married man who have an affair, on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" Feb. 12, 9 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 6-7.

Miss Jackson won her second Oscar as Best Actress for her performance in the Brut Production. (Her first was for "Women in Love" in 1970.) "A Touch of Class" was nominated for Academy Awards as Best Picture and for Best Story and Screenplay.

Critical acclaim for the film included: "The First - rate comedy belongs to Segal and Miss Jackson; and it is genuinely touched with class" — (Charles Champlin in The Los Angeles Times). ". . . A funny, touching and compassionate romantic comedy"— (Judith Crist in New York magazine).

Filmed on location in England and Spain, the story focuses on an affair that follows a chance meeting in a London Park between divorcee Vicki Allessio, a spunky and sophisticated fashion designer, and Steve Blackburn, a well-to-do American insurance adjuster.

At Vicki's insistence, they travel to Spain for a week. The affair takes on a less carefree air when they return to London and realize they have fallen in love.

HIGH CLASS AFFAIR — Glenda Jackson and George Segal. share a toast in "A Touch of Class," a comedy about a British divorcee and married American businessman who fall in love, on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" February 12 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

The Kid Is A 'Big Wheel'

Although Martin Sheen, Vic Morrow and Michelle Phillips are the stars of "The California Kid," the "CBS Late Movie" for Tuesday, Feb. 10, at 11:30 p.m., the title role belongs to a sleek black and flame - orange hot rod.

"We were looking for the good old-fashioned type of street hot rod for our film," says producer Howie Horwitz. "Not the kind you see on the drag strips, but one that had both the built - in - your garage look as well as photogenic qualities."

Horwitz put the Universal TV prop department to work to come up with such a beauty. They brought him a stack of photos and magazines dealing with the subject, and the third magazine in the stack was all the producer needed. There, on the cover, was a chopped - top 1934 three - window Ford.

A quick check on the inside pages, a couple of phone calls, and builder - owner Pete Chapouris of Temple City, a suburb of Los Angeles, was contacted and a deal was made for his car to debut in a movie for television — and in the title role, no less.

"The car is driven by Martin Sheen in the film," Horwitz said. "Our story takes place during the mid-1950s and involves a young man seeking to avenge the death of his brother at the hands of a psychotic sheriff during a chase through a small town speed trap.

"Sheen comes to the tiny burg and hopes to bait the sheriff into playing his deadly game with the California Kid — which is the name of the car."

Rebuilt by Chapouris in 1973 from a stock coupe and valued at $8,000, the car was the center of attraction during the entire location filming of the movie. Visitors to the Piru, Saugus and Soledad Canyon locales were as interested in the 'Kid' as they were in Sheen, Morrow and Miss Phillips. It also provided crew members with nostalgic memories. Three of them were former hot rod owners and - or racers in the '40s and '50s.

Nelson Helps Stars Dance

What do Barbara Eden, Sue Ann Langdon, Steve Lawrence and Eyde Gorme, Ingrid Bergman, Ann Miller, Lucille Ball, Dinah Shore and Angie Dickinson have in common? — they've all been taught to dance by the choreopgrapher Miriam Nelson.

Nelson is an unsung heroine behind the scenes; she helps stars look good dancing. A veteran choreographer, Miriam recently coached Angie Dickinson in a dance sequence for the "Generation of Evil" episode of "Police Woman," to be colorcast Tuesday, Feb. 10, 9 to 10 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7.

WHICH IS IT?

The Ringling Bros and Barnum & Bailey Circus Clown College has bestowed the first honorary doctorate in "Clown Humanities" to Carol Burnett. Is that Dr. Carol or Dr. Burnett?

Movie Is Lonely

Trish Van Devere plays Amy Brower, who faces an unwanted divorce from the man she has always loved, in "One Is A Lonely Number," compelling drama of a young woman forced to rediscover herself, to be presented on "The CBS Late Movie," Monday, Feb. 9, 11:30 p.m., on Channel 9-11. Also starring n the film are Monte Markham, Janet Leigh and Melvyn Douglas.

The Wolf Is Not A Wolf

MAWGLI — an abandoned native baby, who is "adopted" by wolves, is fondled by Baloo, the bear, in a scene from "Mowgli's Brothers," Rudyard Kipling's classic children's tale, to be broadcast as an animated special, Wednesday, February 11 (8:30-9 p.m.) On channel 11.

Actor Kidnapped

Samantha Eggar leaned against a tree on the bank of a stream in Lebanon, Tenn., some several thousand miles from her birthplace in England, and worried about ticks and chiggers. She also worried about hidden rocks, garter snakes and other surprises that might await her in a few minutes, when she would run splashing through that stream on the arm of Stacy Keach.

It was a long way from "The Collector," the dark and brooding film about a collector of butterflies who decides to add a real live girl to his collection - the 1965 film which made her a star.

But was the character she was not playing really all that far away?

In "the Collector" she was kidnapped by Terrence Stamp and locked into a hidden room as a specimen to be observed and respected. But not freed.

In "All the Kind Strangers," ABC-TV's "Wednesday Movie of the Week," which was being filmed for airing on Feb. 11, 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3W-5-12, she is kidnapped by a family of seven orphans who want to love her, respect her, and make her their mother. The only thing they won't do is free her.

When "The Collector" opened, critic Judith Crist said, "Samantha Eggar, a beautiful young woman, is superb in her portrayal of the temperament, the dignity and decency of a generous and vital girl driven to desperation but never to cruelty, a compassionate and understanding girl at bay before the blank wall of a twisted mind."

When you've seen one wolf, you have not necessarily seen them all — and that bit of nature ore created a special problem or animation director Chuck Jones.

Jones and his company produced the animated special, 'Mowgli's Brothers," based on he classic Rudyard Kipling tale f a native child who is raised to oung manhood by wolves in the ndian jungle, to be presented Wednesday, Feb. 11, 8:30 to 9 .m., on CBS Channel 11.

"To the technician, a wolf is a olf, anatomically the same as ny other wolf," says Jones. But Kipling didn't see it that ay. In his delightful animal dventures, each creature had a efinite character, a distinctive ersonality. That is fairly simple explain when one is required express those differences sually."

There are three leading wolf "actors" in "Mowgli's Brothers," the gentle mother wolf, the sturdy father wolf and the noble Akela, leader of the pack. To a mere man, they all look alike; but to Kipling and Mowgli, they are each unique. And no jungle native would mistake one for the other.

"We had just one major device with which to project this separation of character," Jones explains, "and that was movement. We expressed each wolf's personality and emotion in the way it moved, since we could not alter the configuration of the animal.

"Thus, the mother wolf walks with a sinuous, light - footed, feminine gait. Father wolf strides in a virile, protective manner. Akela, in his prime, moves with pride and authority, but as he grows old he slumps and totters. Their movements tell much of the story and set the mood in each scene."

Creates Realism

In five seasons of the "Emergency!" series (seen Saturdays, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7), film footage from an outside source — of a fire — has been used only once.

A recent comment in a Letters to the Editor column indicated that films from the Los Angeles County Fire Department were used whenever scripts called for spectacular fire scenes. Like a tiger defending its cubs, producer Robert A. Cinader shot off a letter to the paper, which corrected its story, pointing out that in 95 episodes of "Emergency!" the only borrowed footage, filmed during the Malibu Canyon brushfire, was included in "Brushfire" (telecast in January, 1972).

For the rest of the shows, the Universal Special Effects Department, particularly special effects specialist Davy Lopez, has created the fiery tenements, the explosions, the blazing overturned tanker trucks and hundreds of other conflagerations. The crew of "Emergency!" prides itself on the authenticity of the scenes.

One of the techniques also used by the "Emergency!" series, since it has the full cooperation of the Los Angeles County Fire Department, is to find a partially destroyed building where a fire has taken place. With the permission of the owners and the department, the crew sets a new fire in order to take advantage of the truly devastated locale.

MATERNAL ADVICE — Veteran comedienne Patsy Kelly is seen in the regular role of Officer Frank Murphy's mother in the NBC-TV comedy series "The Cop and the Kid" colorcast Thursdays (8-8:30 p.m.).

Patsy Goes From Friend To Mama

Everybody's girlfriend in the '40s is now everybody's mother in the '70s. Patsy Kelly, who was a pal of Jean Harlow, among others, in films, now finds herself with a mother image.

Kelly played an Irish mother in the recent Broadway revival of "Irene" and now appears as Brigid, the mother of Officer Frank Murphy (Charles Durning), in "The Cop and the Kid," Thursdays, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 7.

It's an easy transition, however for the veteran comedy actress as she has definite ideas about mothers.

"I can only go by expeience and I can say I had a great mother," says Kelly. "I've known a lot of mothers and I've watched families grow up.

"Listening, caring and loving are important to being a good mother. Spending time with your children is important and finding out what their aspirations are is also good.

"Learning their aspirations and then helping them to find out more about their career goals are what mothers should do to help their children become independent.

"But don't forget discipline, which I believe in," the actress advises. "I don't mean continually taking a strap to them, although sometimes they deserve it."

To Be Roasted

Three "Dean Martin Celebrity Roast" specials on NBC-TV will have Joe Garagiola, Muhammad Ali and Martin himself as "roastees."

Tapings will be done on location at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev.

Don Rickles will take Dean's place as host for the Martin roasting for which producer-director Greg Garrison has assembled such celebrities as John Wayne, Orson Welles, Bob Hope, Joe Namath, Jimmy Stewart, Senator Hubert Humphrey, Dan Rowan and Dick Martin, Howard Cosell, Senator Barry Goldwater and Rich Little.

Says Garrison of the selection of Martin as a roast subject, "We are delighted that Dean has agreed to do it.

Hudson In Film

Rock Hudson sars as a U.S. Army captain who, with a demolition crew, parachutes behind Nazi lines in northern Italy during World War II to blow up a strategically vital dam, in "Hornet's Nest" on "The CBS Late Movie," in color Thursday, Feb. 12, 11:30 p.m., on Channel 9-11. Sylvia Koscina co-stars in the film.

A group of Italian orphans, whose parents have just been massacred for refusing to betray the local partisans, comes to the aid of Captain Turner (Hudson) when his cohorts are shot down behind enemy lines.

HOLLYWOOD—Telly Savalas, who'll star in his own variety special on CBS on Feb. 18th and will include among his guests the actor's racing horse, Telly's Pop, celebrated his continuing success with the purchase of a new car. It's an imported Stutz, trimmed in gold with fur carpeting on its floorboard. The cost: $65,000.

A young man was arrested on suspicion of grand theft after he was reportedly seen trying to gain entrance into the Rolls Royce owned by Cher Bono Allman in the parking lot of CBS in Hollywood.

Michael Douglas of "The Streets of San Francisco" has decided to quit acting and concentrate on producing in the aftermath of his success with "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest." The film recently won three Golden Globe Awards and is considered a strong Oscar contender.

Jamie Farr of TV's "M-A-S-H" has purchased a small ranch on the outskirts of Los Angeles once owned by the late Ward Bond of "Wagon Train" fame.

Martin Sheen, who's gained critical acclaim and popularity through his roles in such TV movies as "The Missiles of October," "The California Kid," among others, says he has two more TV films for which he's committed and then he plans no more television work. He'll concentrate on theatrical films only.

The Captain & Tenille vocal duet will star in their own ABC variety series this coming summer. It'll be a replacement show, but it's too early to know what it'll replace since so many shows are shaky right now anyway!

Two of daytime TV's favorite actresses, Denise Alexander and Trish Stewart, will be seen far removed from their regular roles. Denise is featured in the Charles Lindburgh kidnapping movie for television, as the maid first accused of the kidnapping, and Trish co-stars in the film "Eyes of Doctor Chaney," a horror film with Richard Basehart, which will be released this spring.

'Babe' Honored

MGM-TV's "Babe" was honored recently at the American Cancer Society's national volunteer meeting in Houston, Texas. Susan Clark and Alex Karras, stars of the CBS movie special chronicling the life of Babe Didrickson Zaharias, were present to accept the award given to "MGM Television for dramatically illustrating the remarkable courage of Babe Didrikson Zaharias, not only in the world of sports but also in her personal struggle against cancer."

Film clips from "Babe" were shown to the 2,000 delegates, followed by an address from Ms. Clark.

"My reason for participating n the American Cancer Society's Houston meeting is rooted in a personal commitment far deeper than my role in 'Babe,'" related Ms. Clark. "My father died of cancer at the age of 51. It was a hideous, degrading, humiliating way to die. This year we celebrate the founding of this country 200 years ago. And 200 years from now people on this planet must celebrate 1976 as the year a cure for cancer was found.

Film Is Briskly Paced

The hijacking of a New York subway train with 17 passengers aboard and a ransom demand for $1 million prompt the continuously gripping action of "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three," a polished thriller airing on "The CBS Friday Night Movies," Feb. 13, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

Based on the best selling novel by John Godey, the film works its well - paced suspense and cynical comedy into the perfect cinematic equivalent of a pulp best - seller. What could have been played for sheer terror has been wisely laced with enough bawdy humor and exaggeration to prevent firmly realistic fear from getting in the way of a good time.

The action of the film takes place on several fronts. First, of course, is the subway itself, where four thinly disguised men, bearing thinly disguised submachine guns, board the train, commandeer the control booth, and ride off into the tunnel with a front carriage containing the passengers. Maintaining contact with transit authorities, they threaten to begin shooting one hostage per minute unless $1 million is brought to them within the hour. Their leader, Robert Shaw, makes it clear he means business. Also in the merry band are Martin Balsam, Hector Elizondo and Earl Hindman.

Things are lightened somewhat by the action above - ground where Walter Matthau, as head of the transit police, negotiates with the hijackers.

MR. GREEN— played by Martin Balsam (left), and "Mr. Blue," portrayed by Robert Shaw, stow away $1-million in ransom money, following the hijacking of a crowded subway train, in the World Television Premiere of "The Taking of Pelham One Two Three," on "The CBS Friday Night Movies," Friday, Feb. 13 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Swanson Stars In 'The Killer Bees'

Gloria Swanson stars in her first made-for-television movie, as an aging matriach dominating her family and terrorizing the town by her strange power to control a hive of murderous bees in "Killer Bees," a suspenseful drama airing on the "CBS Late Movie" Friday, Feb. 13, 11:30 p.m., on Channel 3N-9-11.

Also starring in the production, filmed entirely on location in California's Napa Valley, are Edward Albert, Kate Jackson (star of "The Rookies"), Roger Davis, Craig Stevens and Don McGovern. Albert and Davis portray Edward and Helmut Van Bohlen, the dowager's grandsons. Miss Jackson is Victoria, Edward's fiancee; Stevens is Rudolph, Madame Van Bohlen's son, and McGovern is Mathuas, another grandson.

The Van Bohlen family, after whom the town they reside in is named, has brought from Africa a rare bee used in harvesting the grapes for their wine-making.

Edward, who has been away at law school for four years, unwillingly brings Victoria home to meet his family at her insistence. The tightly-knit, insular family does not welcome strangers, and Victoria receives cool treatment. Victoria is frightened when the bees attack two men on the Van Bohlen property, causing their deaths. But the members of the family, with the exception of Edward, seem strangely unconcerned.

The menace of the bees, and Madame's total mastery of them as they cover her entire body, becomes increasingly evident, leading to a climax which changes Victoria's life forever.

Practice Makes Perfect Role

"I wasn't anywhere near ready to return to the grind of weekly television—not until I read this script," reported veteran entertainer Danny Thomas.

"When I left 'Make Room for Daddy' after 11 years to concentrate on producing shows, I gave myself the option to go back to a series if the right part came along," Thomas explained.

"This is the part," he said, referring to his role of Dr. Jules Bedford in "The Practice," a new half-hour comedy series seen Fridays, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on NBC Ch. 6-7.

Danny described Bedford as a "medical dinosaur," the disappearing or disappeared doctor, the sort of family physician everyone needs and without whom everyone is a little less.

"You can sum it up by saying he's the kind of doctor who might even make a house call," Thomas continued. "Can you remember the last time you saw a doctor making a house call?"

Award Winner

Mildred Dunnock, veteran Broadway and motion picture actress stars in "The Shopping Bag Lady," an award-winning film from the United States that will have its television premiere on "The CBS Children's Film Festival," Saturday, Feb. 14, 1 to 1:30 p.m., in color on CBS-TV.

"The Shopping Bag Lady," the third film from the United States to be presented on this series in its nine years on the Network, relates the story of Annie Lewis (Miss Dunnock), who lives in Central Park, carries her few precious belongings in old shoppings bags and depends on the discards of others for survival. Annie is a familiar sight to three teen-age girls who frequently visit the park; and, unfortunately, the old woman is also a target for their childish mischief. But one girl's cruelty turns to compassion, and Annie finally finds a friend to warm her empty existence.

"The Shopping Bag Lady" was produced and directed by Bert Salzman. The cast includes Julie Wakefield, Holly Scott, Eleanor Phelps, Justine Micelli, Bill Breasant, Debbie Howard and Laura Wilcox Whyte.

Burr Tillstrom's Kukla, Fran and Ollie with Fran Allison are hosts of "The CBS Children's Film Festival."

N.C. Wolfpack Meets Deacons

Wake Forest was given an outside shot at twenty victories at the beginning of the season. Even these twenty victories were conditional upon outstanding center play. At this point, twenty victories for Wake Forest appear to be a fast approaching reality. The Deacons have demonstrated they can stay on the court with anybody and are not to be taken lightly.

On Saturday, Feb. 14, at 2 p.m. on Channels 6-9-11, the Wolfpack of N. C. state will take on the Deacons of Wake Forest.

Although the home court offers many advantages in the ACC, this is little solace for the Wolfpack since the Deacons have already established the dact that they are pretty tough away from home.

Wake Forest's super guard Skip Brown, virtual prototype of the individual basketball player, appears to be headed for the throne that David Thompson so adequately occupied as the top talent in the ACC. Skip, like David, has that unique ablity to blow a game apart. This will be an obvious concern when State and Wake Forest collide. For 'Wake' still has Skip, and Davis is in the pros.

Monsters In Special

From flame-spitting dragons to bloodthirsty Dracula, the strange, hideous creatures that have frightened us throughout history will be revealed bn the CBS News Special "What Are the Loch Ness and Other Monsters All About!," Saturday, Feb. 14, 1:30 to 2 p.m.

CBS News Reporter Christopher Glenn and Reporters Trish Reilly and Joel Siegel of WCBS-TV, the CBS Owned television station in New York, will be reporting on monsters - movie monsters, mythical monsters and 'maybe' monsters. Reporters Reilly and Siegel will offer an alphabetized catalogue of monsters, from the Abominable Snowman to Zombies.

The broadcast will cover in some detail the mystery surrounding "Nessie," a creature or creatures reptredly existing for some 1,400 years in Scotland's Loch Ness.

Q. What team in the ABA had the most victories in one season.

UNC Tar Heels Meet Terrapins

Another Atlantic Coast Conference 'rim-burner' is on tap for sports fans as UNC invades College Park, Maryland, to meet the Terrapins of Maryland, on Wednesday, Feb. 11, at 8 p.m. on Channels 6-9.

Just 18 days ago — before a national television audience — these two teams played just another typical ACC basketball game filled with all the excitement, color, chaos and controversy that makes this the most exciting basketball conference in America.

It was UNC that emerged a victor when these two national powers slugged it out to a 95-93 overtime decision. After having 54 fouls called during the aggressively played contest, Maryland lost three starters and Carolina two.

"Mine weren't stupid fouls," said Tarheel senior center Mitch Kupchak: "I got called for a lot of things I don't usually get called for. It wasn't the roughest game inside this season, because the officials didn't let it get that way."

It was ironical that in a game with so many fouls, the controversy that would erupt and provoke that renowned temper of Md. coach Lefty Driesell would stem from the absence of a whistle in the final 20 seconds of the game.The Terps opened the second half with a 20 point lead and led throughout the game until just before the end of regulation play. It was with 3 minutes remaining when Mo Howard acquired his fifth foul and joined teammates Larry Gibson and Brad Davis who had already fouled out that the momentum started to swing in favor of Carolina. Tommy LaGarde's two straight baskets brought Carolina to 83-all. John Lucas and Walter Davis swapped field goals, and Phil Ford sunk two free throws to put the Tarheels up 87-85 with only 29 seconds remaining. Following up on a miss-shot, Steve Sheppard tied the game up with 7 seconds remaining.

Carolina took control in the overtime and established a 5 point lead with just a minute left. Fighting back, Steve Sheppard hit another field goal with 20 seconds left to bring the Terps within 2 points.

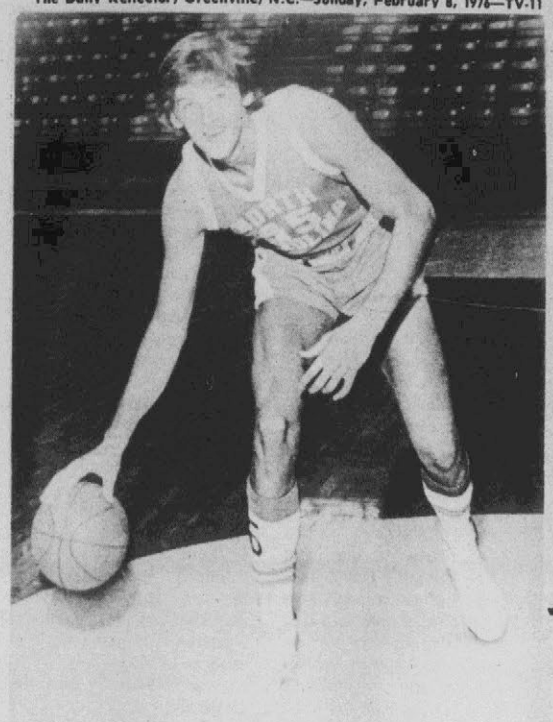

Trying to dribble out the clock, Carolina's Phil Ford was trapped near mid-court by three Terps and lost control of the ball. Maryland's John Lucas grabbed the loose ball and started driving the other way.

On his way to the basket, Lucas fell down and time ran out: thus giving North Carolina the victory. Driesell thought a foul should have been called on Ford, who appeared to have tripped Lucas. The foul — had it been called — would have put Lucas on the free throw line with a chance to send the game into a second overtime.

"Ford definitely tripped me," a disturbed Lucas said afterwards.

"I don't think I tripped him," Ford said. "I thought he just slipped on some sweat on the floor. Besides, I thought somebody 'got' me on my arm when I lost the ball."

It was just that kind of ball game, and you can be assured when these two powers clash again, it's going to be equally as thrilling.

UNC—Tommy Lagarde (6-10, 215) junior will be in action for the University of North Carolina when they visit the Maryland Terrapins on Wednesday, February 11 at 8 p.m. on Channel 3N-6-9.

Grandstand Returns

Pete Rose, Fred Lynn, Joe Morgan, Luis Tiant and umpire Larry Barnett — key figures in the 1975 World Series — will join "Grandstand" hosts Jack Buck and Bryant Gumbel, along with special host Joe Garagiola, in a look back at highlights of the '75 classic when "Grandstand" returns to NBC-TV, Sunday, Feb. 8, with a special three-hour telecast from 1 to 4 p.m.

For the first time since the World Series ended in victory for the Cincinnati Reds over the Boston Red Sox, Rose, Lynn, Morgan, Tiant and Barnett will be together to relive the unforgettable moments of each of the seven games.

The highlights selected from NBC's telecast of the World Series, along with the commentary of umpire Barnett and the Reds and Red Sox stars who played major roles, will be telecast within the body of "Grandstand," preceding coverage of the Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament at 4 p.m.

The World Series portion of this edition of "Grandstand," hosted by Garagiola with his Game - of - the - Week partner, Tony Kubek, will draw on the on - the - spot expertise of a line-up of Series stars with imposing credentials.

Young Wants Medals

Four years ago in Japan, the United States earned only sixth place with just three gold medals; considerably behind the Soviet Union, which placed first with eight gold medals. This time, hopes for America's strength, other than in speed skating, are not much higher.

America's big hope to bring home the gold medal rests with Sheila Young, a 25-year-old green-eyed, dark haired skater who is expected to pick up possibly two gold medals in races of 500 and 1000 meters. She is the second of four children, and started speed skating in Detroit at the age of 9. After failing to make the U.S. Sprint team as a speed skater three times, Sheila finally succeeded in 1971. She went on to finish fourth in the five-hundred meter race at the 1972 Winter Olympics.

"That's when the real work began," says Sheila. "It showed me how much more I'd have to put into the training."

Sheila dedicated herself to gruelling work under her coach, Peter Schotting. As a result of her dedication and perseverance, Sheila Young is the only American to have won the World Sprint championship twice. Her hours of dedication each day in an effort to shave just seconds off her time have won her 19 international medals.

In addition to speed skating, Sheila is a world class bicyclist. In 1973, in Spain, she won the woman's world Sprint cycling championship. Cycling since she was 12-years-old, Sheila feels it helps her stay in shape for for skating, and she regards it as a separate amateur sport.

The 1976 Winter Olympic Games have represented the single most important aspect of Sheila's life. In fact, she has kept putting off most major decisions for her life until after the games. The road to Innsbruck has been a long, hard struggle for Sheila. She works as a waitress and a clerk in a book store, in addition to relying heavily on her family for financial support. Although she does have a boyfriend, she trains six hours a day and thinks of little else but skating.

"I think about it from the time I wake up," she says. "I plan my whole day around the skating. And afterward, I think about how the workout went."

After having made 11 trips overseas - 8 for skating, 3 for cycling - since 1970, Sheila is grateful for a life full of travel and the thrill of competing in amateur international sports.

"I do the sports only secondarily for my own personal satisfaction," says Sheila. "The main reason is the traveling and coming in contact with different people all over the world. It'll be hard to give it up."

Sheila does not like to confuse the Olympics with politics and skating. "I'm proud to be an American, but I don't see the games as 'nationalistic.' It's governments, not people, that fight each other, says Sheila.

Old Yeller On TV

In what has become one of Walt Disney's classic motion pictures, "Old Yeller," the master showman brought to life one of America's finest regional novels, written by Fred Gipson, who also did the screenplay in collaboration with Bull Tunberg.

The film comes to television fo rthe first time on NBC's three-hour "All-Disney Saturday Night at the Movies," Feb. 14, 8 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7.

This is the action-packed story of a pioneer family and a dog in Texas of the 1860's — Jim Coates, his wife and two young sons, and Old Yeller himself, a great battle-scarred mongrel that happens along just as the father is preparing to leave on a time-consuming cattle drive.

Old Yeller elects to stick around and everyone, the boys in particular, soon find themselves more than happy about it. Because Old Yeller can handle slashing, charging wild hogs, and marauding wolves, better by far than any of his human owners.

The conflict between dog and the wild country, between the two boys over both the dog and their own duties, and the worries of the mother, played beautifully by Dorothy McGuire, represent a very high point in the Disney motion picture production.

"Old Yeller" tells more than a story of a dog and a family. It reveals an understanding of life itself.

"Old Yeller" stars Miss McGuire and Fess Parker, with Tommy Kirk, Jeff York, Kevin Corcoran, Chuck Connors and Beverly Washburn.

TV MOVIE BEING FILMED IN ARIZONA

Kurt Russell, Tim Matheson and Brian Keith will star in "The Quest," a two-hour World Premiere Western movie which will air on NBC-TV.

The movie, filmed entirely on location near Tucson, Ariz. deals with the adventures of two young brothers who are searching for their younger sister, a captive of Indians for more than four years.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SEN. JESSE HELMS (R-N.C.)

Is it true that many Congressmen vote to spend tax money without knowing—or caring—how many millions of dollars are involved?—A. Kravitz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● Yes. The Senate recently approved a record-breaking budget for operating Congress. But the closest estimate of the figure that any of my colleagues came up with was low by $200 million! Government has grown so enormous and Congress is so flooded with expensive legislation that many Congressmen get frustrated. Instead of trying to keep up with legislation, they often cast their votes on a "party line" basis. That's why the federal debt is in excess of a half-trillion dollars, and still rising. It's a lousy way to legislate, but it's a fact of life.

FOR GENE SARAZEN, former golf champion

Has golf changed much since you started out?—B.L., Santa Monica, Calif.

● It sure has! Now golf balls and clubs are made to perfection, and the courses are watered and manicured. In the early days, rough grass was like pasture, and greens were as hard as pavement. You were compelled to pitch and run. Today, because of the heavy watering, golfers can play the ball right to the pin. But that takes a lot of skill out of the game. Now it's power golf–and putting.

FOR MORLEY SAFER, co-host of "60 Minutes"

Could you please quote Mrs. Ford's answer to your question about abortion?—J.B., Amherst, N.Y.

● Her exact answer was: "You have to be honest exactly how you feel, and I feel very strongly that it was the best thing in the world when the Supreme Court voted to legalize abortion and, in my words, bring it out of the backwoods and put it in the hospitals where it belonged. I thought it was a great, great decision."

FOR ROBERT MITCHUM, star of "Farewell, My Lovely"

Of all your films, which one is your favorite?—E.D.B., Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

● "The Last Time I Saw Archie," because I got $100,000 for it. It was the first time I ever made that kind of money. Although I liked my salary, I didn't like my role, nor the way I played it. But since the checks didn't bounce, I guess someone thought I was doing a good job.

FOR NANCY WALKER of TV's "Rhoda"

Your daughter is an only child. Do you believe in small families?—M.W., Vancouver, Wash.

● Before Miranda was born, I was praying for a girl. David and I soon realized she was the most marvelous child in the whole world and everything we could have wished for. When she arrived, our family was complete and perfect. Perfection can't be improved on, and it's silly to try. Yes, I do believe in small families–for me.

FOR DONNA THEODORE, star of Broadway's "Shenandoah"

I just made my first trip to New York and saw "Shenandoah." Are you the same Donna Theodore that I keep seeing on TV? You look different.—H.C., Miami Beach, Fla.

● Yes, they're both me. On TV I go in for the low-cut dresses and sexy hairdos (that's the "real me"). In "Shenandoah" I'm the reverse–a pioneer housewife, living off the land during the Civil War.

FOR ADM. WILLIAM M. LUKASH, M.D., Physician to the President

When the President gets sick, what kind of a patient is he? —S.S., Willoughby, Ohio

● An ideal one, because he realizes the importance of maintaining good health. President Ford has a very high regard for the medical profession, and all he asks is a simple explanation of his illness and treatment. Then he follows the doctor's advice to the letter.

FOR REP. PETER RODINO (D-N.J.)

Why can't we make it unlawful for employers to knowingly hire illegal aliens?—A.K., Anderson, S.C.

● We're trying to. The Judiciary Committee has held numerous hearings on the problem over the last four years, and the Committee has approved legislation that would hold employers responsible. It is the belief of the Committee that employers should make reasonable inquiries as to the eligibility of their employees to seek employment in the U.S.

FOR JULIA CHILD

Is there any way to get children to eat their vegetables? —Mrs. Russell Lewis, Dubuque, Iowa

● Take them grocery-shopping, let them help pick out the vegetables (as well as other foods), then let them help in the preparation and cooking. And to help make eating an adventure, explain to the children how and where each vegetable grows. You might even make some new discoveries and broaden your own horizons!

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

It seems the romance has gone out of romance today. Does anyone agree?—S.P., Corpus Christi, Texas

● John Wayne said: "There's still puppy love, where boy gets girl (and vice versa for Women's Lib). I don't think anything will kill romance except one of the two human beings involved." Art Buchwald reported: "Soft lights and sweet music are not gone forever. Everything comes back eventually. Now kids are dancing the way we did in the forties. They're finding it's fun to hold each other." Lawrence Welk sighed: "Romance has taken on a different form. We've gotten away from God's laws. Sexual, not spiritual, desires have become fashionable. I think the old-fashioned way was better." Harold Robbins said: "Romance as it used to be is dead. But if people can truly fall in love at a supermarket instead of under the stars, what's wrong with that?"

More cigarette vs. your cigarette.

1. Is your cigarette as long and as lean as our cigarette for more pleasure, more style?
2. Does your cigarette draw as easy as our cigarette for more tobacco enjoyment?
3. Does your cigarette smoke slower than a 100 mm cigarette for more smoking time?
4. Does your cigarette come in a burnished brown wrap so it looks as good as it smokes?
5. Does your cigarette sit neat in your hand like it was made for it and fit your face like it found a home?
6. Does your cigarette give you all this yet cost no more than a 100 mm cigarette (which means more for your money)?

If the answer to all these questions is yes, your cigarette is probably More. Because there's only one cigarette that's so much more. More.

The first 120mm cigarette.

By Larry Bortstein
FAMILY WEEKLY Contributing Editor

Most men in the National Basketball Association can shoot the ball into the basket with great regularity. But there are shooters and there are shooters. FAMILY WEEKLY decided to find out which shooters come through best in the clutch, and to do so we consulted a panel of seven men closely associated with the NBA. Five are currently active stars in the league, one is a coach, and the other, Jerry West, who played 14 years with the Los Angeles Lakers, is almost universally regarded as the top clutch shooter the game has ever known.

Each member of the panel was asked: In the closing seconds of a game, with the score tied, or with one team one or two points ahead, which player would be most effective in pulling out the victory for his team? Here's the way the panelists responded:

RICK BARRY

Rick Barry was the key man in the surprising four-game sweep by the Golden State Warriors in last spring's NBA championship series over the Washington Bullets. He was named the Most Valuable Player of the playoffs.

"As far as I'm concerned, the opponent I'd least like to see have the ball in the last few seconds of a close game is the guy who creates opportunities. To me, the best guy in this category is Walt Frazier. There's no way of playing him exactly right in a situation like that. You can't play him to take the jump shot, because he'll drive around you. He's going to do something with the ball, you know that—but it could be one of three things, and that's what makes him so dangerous. He'll either take the shot himself, set up a teammate or drive into somebody and draw a foul. Sometimes he'll get a three-point play out of it.

"Guys like Walt, and John Havlicek of Boston, and Nate Archibald of Kansas City, who can do so many things—these are the guys who get the ball at the end of the game because they're the people who will do something constructive to try to win the game for their clubs. They're just as dangerous shooting or not shooting.

"But I think you have to talk about foul shots, too. There's no such thing as a cheap free throw. You either make it or you don't. Frankly, I think I'm the best foul shooter around, and the averages seem to bear this out. There are other good free-throw shooters, too, like Mike Newlin and Calvin Murphy of Houston and Jack Marin of Chicago. I think the main problem a good foul shooter has late in a game is getting tired after playing hard for four periods. In my case, I take a couple of extra seconds before I shoot a free throw late in a game. It's not because I'm more nervous about it, but because I want to take a deep breath."

WALT FRAZIER

A perennial All-NBA selection at guard, Walt "Clyde" Frazier of the New York Knicks has averaged better than 20 points per game in each of the last six seasons.

"The last couple of years with the Knicks have been the toughest for me since I came to the NBA. When we won the championship in 1970 and 1973, we had a lot of stars in the lineup. But it's been different now. Now I'm their top star. When you're the star, you're the guy who's going to get the ball for the last shot—and the guy the other team is going to double-team to get you to cough up the ball. Talk about pressure. Wow! Every night has pressure for me.

"A lot of this is pressure I've put on myself. When you're the veteran, the other guys need your help and leadership. The Warriors won the championship last year because even though they had a young team that wasn't expected to do well, they also had Rick Barry, who's a great clutch player. Rick once said he didn't consider himself a great shooter but a great scorer. There is a difference. He may not be able to stay outside and pop jumpers all night like a Bob McAdoo or a Phil Chenier can, but Rick can kill you in so many different ways, setting up his teammates as well as getting many of his own points.

"People are always saying that the best players are those who can perform in the last quarter the way they perform during the other quarters. In other words, consistency is everything. That's not always true. You have to feel some pressure in the last period that you don't feel early in the game. I guess the difference is that some guys don't show it. I know my facial expression doesn't change during a game very much, so people assume that nothing bothers me. That's partly how I got a nickname like 'Cool Clyde.' But inside, you have to react to what the game situation is or you're not human."

BOB McADOO

The Buffalo Braves' 6-foot-10 center, Bob McAdoo, has led the NBA in scoring average the past two seasons and was elected the league's Most Valuable Player for the 1974-75 campaign.

"It's in the jump shooting. There are lots of great jump shooters in our league—guys like Elvin Hayes and Phil Chenier of Washington, and Walt Frazier of New York. They can hit the jumper better than 50 percent of the time. That's the kind of guy I'd want taking the last shot in a close game.

"A lot of times the last shot of a game comes down to one thing: Who's been having a good shooting night? On a team like ours, which is one of the better shooting teams in the NBA, that's how we generally look at it. If I happen to be hitting that night, I might get the ball at the end, but if Jim McMillian or Ernie DiGregorio has been hitting, we'll try to work a play for one of them.

"When I'm on defense, the guys I worry about most are Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles and Bob Lanier of Detroit. It's almost impossible to keep Kareem from getting the ball when he wants it. And when he gets off his skyhook, it's impossible to stop him. He has great accuracy with that shot, so the Bucks would often go to him when the game was on the line. Lanier is an excellent shooter and also very strong. He can outmuscle you underneath the basket to go in for a good shot, and he can also beat you from outside."

GENE SHUE

Gene Shue is in his third year as coach of the Philadelphia 76ers. Before that, he was coach of the Baltimore Bullets for nearly seven years.

"I have to think about clutch situations all the time as a coach—both when we need a shot to win and when we have to stop the other team from making its shot to win. First, the guy I want taking the last shot for me is a guy I know can get a good shot on his own. There are many outstanding shooters in the NBA, but there are different kinds of shooters.

SPECIAL 2 for $9.

No words or pictures can possibly do justice to these superb golden rings. You will agree that seeing is believing. That's why we invite you to examine them in your own home. Test them. Wear them without risking a penny! See for yourself the fine, jeweler's natural goldtone finish . . . the artistic workmanship. See how every ring has at least a grand total of 100 points of KRYSTAGEMS — the amazing man-made stones that rival nature-made diamonds costing $1250 or even more!

AMAZE YOUR FRIENDS

Take your pick, then clip the pictures of the rings you want on no-risk home trial. We'll gladly rush them to your door, but please do us a favor. When they arrive, let your friends look. See how surprised they are and maybe a little envious too! Almost everybody seeing Krystagems wishes he could afford one too! Little do they know they aren't genuine diamonds. That's because Krystagems are quite different from cheap, phoney-looking plastic stones. Prove the big difference for yourself! Make the easy test that follows:

(A) Drop Krystagem and a plastic stone in acetone. (B) Next day remove both stones. The fake plastic diamond is mushy and useless. But Krystagem comes out unharmed. (C) Notice how precisely the Krystagem facets are cut — virtually like costliest diamonds! Krystagems are so hard, so dense, so dazzling — they even sparkle in dim moonlight! You'll love them!

NOW LESS THAN 1¢ ON DOLLAR!

Because Krystagems cost only $5 — don't mistake them for dull, plastic fakes. Of course, a Krystagem is different from a nature-made diamond. But the nicest difference is that you can get it for $5 — not $1250 or more!

WHY DO MILLIONAIRES WEAR SIMULATED DIAMONDS?

Wise millionaires and Movie Stars keep costly jewels in bank vaults to escape burglaries. They secretly wear simulated diamonds at parties. By making special tests, diamond experts can tell the difference. So what? Do as millionaires do! Wear simulations and invest the savings!

NBA's "Mr. Clutch"

Continued

Bill Bradley of the Knicks, for example, is maybe the most deadly shooter when he's open, but for him to get open you have to set up a complicated play that may take several passes before the ball gets to him. If you only have a few seconds, that would be difficult to do. Also, the defense would be able to cover him more easily by double-teaming than they could cover a guy like Walt Frazier or Earl Monroe or Pete Maravich of New Orleans. Those men go out and make their plays, and it's more difficult to defend against them in those clutch situations.

"To me a guy who was really tough with the ball at the end of a game was Chet Walker of the Chicago Bulls. He was in the league 14 years, and at 6-foot-7 he was not the biggest or the strongest forward around. But he had a great ability to get fouled when he was going one-on-one, even when the defender knew Chet was going to have the ball at the end."

RUDY TOMJANOVICH

One of the top forwards in the NBA, 6-foot-8 Rudy Tomjanovich averaged 20.7 points per game last year for the Houston Rockets.

"I've seen Walt Frazier make so many pressure shots, it's amazing. He's a real clutch shooter from the field and from the foul line. He must have nerves of steel. And he's so darned good at drawing a foul when the Knicks might need a three-point play to get back into a game or win it. He causes the defense to make switches, and that usually leaves someone open that Frazier can pass to if he doesn't have a shot himself.

"A lot goes into being a clutch player. I consider myself one of the top shooters around. But when the game is up for grabs, a one-on-one player has the best chance to help the team out because he can do a lot of things. I'm not a good one-on-one player. Billy Cunningham of Philadelphia is the kind of forward that is excellent one-on-one. He's so intelligent and has such great moves that he forces a defensive player into a mistake and draws a foul. This gives him many three-point plays."

WES UNSELD

Wes Unseld, center for the Washington Bullets, made a remarkable comeback from several knee operations and led the league in rebounding last year.

"This may surprise you, but to me the best clutch shooter in the NBA is Earl Monroe of the Knicks. Walt Frazier is great, sure, but in my mind Earl is the only guy who can get off a shot anytime he wants. We were teammates on the Bullets for three seasons, and Earl hit the big shots for us night after night. When he had the ball and started spinning toward the hoop with all those moves he has, you just knew he'd take his man all the way in and get off a shot.

"The guys who have shot the best under pressure since I came into the NBA in 1968 have been Earl, Frazier, John Havlicek and Rick Barry. What it comes down to is their versatility. You can shut off a pure shooter, make sure he can't get to the ball or that he doesn't get into position if he does get the ball. But these guys create their own opportunities, and that makes them very tough to stop.

"After a while, an experienced player can see which guys don't like the ball in the closing seconds of a close game. I've tried to help our younger players each year by letting them know which guys on the other clubs are the least likely to have the ball for a last shot. This way, a young player can learn which guys he can lay back from on defense when a situation like that arises. Then we can go double-team that clutch player till the final buzzer."

JERRY WEST

When Jerry West came to the NBA in 1960, someone wrote that his scrawny 6-foot-3 frame would never last five seasons in the pros. Despite having his nose broken nine times, West became one of the game's all-time superstars.

"My pet peeve in pro basketball is the excess publicity given to guys who just score points. Every year guys come up who score 20 points per game but really aren't all that talented overall, and people call them 'stars.' It's just not so.

"There are lots of guys who can score points in the NBA who would be the last guys you'd want to have handling the ball at the end of a tight game. Actually I always found it easier to score in clutch situations. Many players are afraid to be aggressive on defense in those situations because they don't want a foul.

"The guys I'd most want to see with the ball if my team needed a big play to win a game in the last few seconds would be John Havlicek, Rick Barry and Walt Frazier. Havlicek didn't have a real great year last season, but he's still capable of making the big play. Frazier and Barry are guys you can't defend against because they can shoot and pass so well. That's what I mean about guys who not only can score but can do other things, too."

Report from Philip Morris

Tar/Taste Theory Exploded.

New 9 mg. tar MERIT with 'Enriched Flavor' proves taste no longer depends on amount of tar.

Until now, cigarette flavor pretty much depended on the amount of tar that went along with it.

Regardless of "low tar, good taste" claims, regardless of fancy-filters and "space-age" filtering systems—you couldn't get high taste without high tar.

Nor low tar without low taste.

That was the theory.

Until now.

By isolating certain "key" ingredients of tobacco in cigarette smoke, ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar, researchers at Philip Morris have developed an 'Enriched Flavor' process so successful at boosting flavor, the resulting cigarette actually delivers as much—or more—taste than brands having more tar.

Up to 60% more tar.

The cigarette is 9 mg. tar MERIT. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

If you smoke—you'll be interested.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL

9 mg. "tar" 0.7 mg. nicotine

Taste-Tested By People Like You

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself—all tested at home.*

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar than MERIT, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly, too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette. MERIT. Unprecedented flavor at 9 mg. tar. From Philip Morris.

BAKED SMOKED HAM TRUMAN STYLE

Variation of Callaway County Country Ham

1 fully cooked smoked ham*
½ cup prepared mustard
2 cups fine dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon ground cloves
2 cups pineapple juice

1. Preheat oven to 325°F. Place ham, fat side up, on a rack in a shallow roasting pan.
2. Insert meat thermometer so that tip is in thickest part of meat and does not touch bone or fat.
3. Roast ham 10 to 15 minutes per lb., or until meat thermometer reads 130°F.
4. Remove ham from oven 30 minutes before it is done. Pour off drippings and skin ham, using sharp knife and scissors.
5. Combine mustard, 1 cup bread crumbs, cinnamon, ginger and cloves. Using spatula spread all over ham. Then sprinkle with remaining cup of crumbs.
6. Return ham to oven and continue baking for 30 minutes. Baste every 5 minutes very gently with pineapple juice, taking care to leave crust intact.

A Celebrity Cooks

Jimmy Stewart:
Delicious Spareribs from a Lean, Spare Eater

The James Stewarts as hostess and host.

By Jimmy Stewart
In Conversation with Helen Dorsey

I normally only pass through the kitchen on my way to the garage! I've never been a huge eater. Early in my life, I used to try to find ways to keep from being skinny. Hank Fonda has always had much the same problem. We used to try everything to gain weight. One time somebody told us a wonderful way to put on weight was to drink a huge malted milk mixed with two eggs in the morning. To give us an appetite for it, we were told to spike it with a little brandy. But we noticed the malted milks kept getting darker. We didn't gain very much weight, but by midmorning we were in "fine shape." So we had to cut that out!

Gloria and I are not big party givers. We like small dinners for six or eight people; and then it's always something simple like barbecued spareribs. Everyone helps himself from the sideboard, and it's comfortable and relaxed.

SPARERIBS STEWART

9-10 lbs. spareribs, cut into 2-rib pieces
Salt
Dash freshly ground pepper
1 large onion, chopped
Barbecue Sauce (see recipe below)

1. Have butcher cut spareribs for you.
2. Preheat oven to 350°F. Arrange spareribs in shallow baking pan and sprinkle liberally with salt and pepper. Place a slice of lemon on each piece, then top with chopped onion.
3. Bake for about 45 minutes, basting occasionally with Barbecue Sauce. Turn meat several times so it cooks evenly.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

Barbecue Sauce

1 yellow onion, grated
1 small clove garlic, pressed (optional)
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
½ teaspoon celery seed
½ cup brown sugar
⅓ cup vinegar
1 cup chili sauce
1 cup ketchup
2 cups water
Few drops Tabasco Sauce

1. Sauté onion and garlic in butter.
2. Add remaining ingredients and simmer slowly for 30 minutes, stirring often. Serve along with spareribs.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

That Strange Breed We Call "Phonies"

True or False? Women are better at spotting phonies than men are. (See number 5.)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Phonies come in all shapes, sizes and varieties.

2. It's not hard to spot a phony if you know what to look for.

3. Phonies frequently use laughter as a cover-up strategy, laughing when nothing is funny.

4. Being a phony can be dangerous to your health.

5. Women are better at spotting phonies than men are.

6. There's virtually no way to get a dyed-in-the-wool phony to straighten out and fly right.

ANSWERS

1. True. Their various specialties may include freeloading, gate-crashing, name- or place-dropping merely to impress the impressionable, as special routines designed to soften up acquaintances for loans, etc. And there are some who operate just for the kicks, as a sort of ego trip.

2. True. All you need is a telltale clue. For example, if he's the place-dropping, been-everywhere, knows-everybody type of phony, throw him a subtle curve by asking him if that quaint bistro, "The Purple Onion," around the corner from Madame Marchand's place is still popular with the jet set. If he replies yes, you've got him cold! For, of course, you've made up the place. You can use a similar technique if he begins telling you of the famous authors among his personal acquaintances. To check him out fast, give him the non-book treatment. Say to him, "You must have read the new book [think up an imposing title] that's creating such a stir in literary circles." If he's a phony, he's likely to reply with a sage nod that "It's a remarkable work," or some such "safe" comment. If he's really in form, he may even volunteer that the publisher sent him advance proofs. Anyway, you've got his number.

3. True. As psychological studies have demonstrated, the person who is playing a spurious role frequently uses laughter as a smoke screen to mask the nervousness and anxiety that every pretender feels now and then. When asked pointed questions which he feels may come close to exposing him as a fraud, he will simply laugh and then change the subject. Such people, as one authority has pointed out in summing up his findings, "have come to use laughter chronically as a substitute for the expression of genuine feelings and thoughts." And it's pointed out that mirthless laughter—when it occurs repeatedly—is frequently a tip-off of attempts to conceal the truth.

4. True. Physical and emotional tensions produced by the practice of deceit can seriously interfere with the proper functions of vital organs, according to studies. In addition to affecting our bodily well-being, deceiving others produces inner conflicts that can seriously affect mental health. And, as studies of accident proneness have shown, the worry, anxiety and cumulative guilt feelings resulting from a lifestyle of pretense tend to make such people accident and illness prone.

5. True. Studies show that women are better socially oriented than men, quicker to sense a false note in another's speech or demeanor. Women also tend to make fuller use of their intuitional faculties, which enable them to "see through" the spurious façade that a person may use to conceal his real motives. A wife may typically remark to her husband, "I can't explain why I feel that way, but I don't quite trust that man. There's something about him that doesn't ring true." And human behavior specialists have found that, more often than not, such an impression is quite valid.

6. True. To most phonies, spurious behavior is a way of life. That's why there are virtually no ex-phonies. For, as one psychologist has observed, they derive a kind of perverse satisfaction from trying to convince others, as well as themselves, that they really are what they pretend to be.

Tony Orlando:

What My Retarded Sister Taught Me About Life

"She reacted to the warmth of another human being. She laughed when held. She returned love by laughing when you entered a room—by trying to touch your hand with hers."

By Alan Ebert

It's tough for a little boy to have a retarded baby sister who is constantly left in his care. But Tony Orlando credits who and what he is to Rhonda Marie, the sister for whom he cared until her death last year at 21.

Tony's education never progressed beyond the eighth grade since he was needed at home to care for his sister. And her development never progressed beyond that of an eight-month-old child because of the retardation and palsy that crippled her for life. Yet Tony learned much from her about compassion and about some of the harsh facts of life.

To care for his sister, he spent much of his time indoors. The family, unable to hire outside help and reluctant to put Rhonda Marie in a home for the retarded, undertook the continuous care she needed. "Until the day she died, Rhonda could only eat strained foods," Tony remembers. "She always wore Pampers. It wouldn't be true if I claimed her presence didn't negatively affect the family. My mother was totally dedicated to her care, but it took a tremendous toll. Since she refused to give up Rhonda, her job was a 24-hour-a-day involvement. As mine often was. There was little time left for what others consider a normal family life. But my mother wouldn't have it any other way, and I wouldn't be the same person the public seems to have accepted if it weren't for my experience with Rhonda Marie. I'll tell you why.

"Rhonda couldn't speak. Nor could she reason. She could just react. When she was sad, she cried. And when she was happy, she laughed. She never learned, as we all do, to build up defenses. In other words, everything about Rhonda's reactions was real. There was no guile or pretense. I couldn't fake emotions with her. She couldn't be fooled. I either gave her what I was feeling or I gave nothing. It's the same thing you do with your audiences. You can't try to be what you're not. So what you see on TV is what you get if you meet me on the street.

"Rhonda also taught lessons in being observant—in being sensitive to the moods and feelings of others. Because of Rhonda, I can now look at an audience, see how they're sitting, and know if I'm reaching them."

Perhaps most important, Tony says Rhonda Marie taught him about love and what it is. "And how basic it is to survival," he says. "Rhonda was fed, sheltered and clothed, but she reacted to the warmth of another human being. She laughed when held. She returned love by laughing when you entered a room—by trying to touch your hand with hers. It was beautiful. It was also beautiful when I learned that love—real love—is wanting nothing back in return. We loved Rhonda Marie and did what we could for her, knowing the best she could return was a smile. And that was quite enough. It's a pity that we lose the simplicity of love as we mature."

Tony credits his performing ability to his day-to-day involvement with his sister. When he discovered she would kick her feet in time to the music on the radio, he began singing to her. When that wore thin, he learned to play the guitar. Then a few dance steps completed his "act."

Says Tony: "When I was faking it—just trying to pass the time for Rhonda—she would turn away. I could never give less than 100 percent; she knew when I did. To reach Rhonda, I had to dredge up something—no matter how I felt, good or bad.

"My need as a performer," continues Tony, "is to reach people. I've been accused of being corny and sloppily sentimental, but I want to touch people. My need is to reach in and share who and what I am and have it received. What I want in return is what I got from Rhonda . . . a smile. If I can't achieve that with an audience, I'm cheating them in some way. I'm being cheap with Tony Orlando, not really sharing him, and the audience senses it."

Tony seems to be a happy man. "I have never done anything I haven't wanted to, and I do everything today that I want to do. I always try to please me because if I'm pleased, I can be pleasing to others."

The others who are very important in his life are his wife, Elaine, and his sons, Jon and Kenny. "I thank God every day that my own kids were born healthy."

Mental Retardation: Tony Orlando Tells What to Do

Tony is actively engaged in the fight against mental retardation. He cites staggering figures. "There are six and a half million mentally retarded in the U.S. with another 126,000 born yearly. There is no cure because mental retardation is not a disease. But there is a preventive and few people are aware of it. Malnutrition—poor diet—is one of the major causes of retardation. We must educate people to that fact. Poor people are most likely to produce mentally retarded children because expectant mothers can't get good nourishment. But even affluent people aren't immune. Women who live on junk food can give birth to a mentally retarded child no matter how much money they have.

"Most of us love children," says Tony, "and most who marry want a family. Why is it we take so few precautionary measures to prevent giving birth to retarded babies? Very few people know that there are over 200 conditions leading to mental retardation, many of which can be determined through simple tests in a doctor's office—and then corrected if they exist!"

WALTER AND BETSY CRONKITE
"We've been lucky"

Betsy Cronkite on life with Walter: "It was love at first sight for both of us, although I must admit that Walter is much better-looking today. He used to be such a string bean that my mother insisted on having us over for dinner all the time to fatten him up. Also, for many years he wore his hair slicked back, as was the fashion—but it wasn't extremely flattering. We've been happily married for 35 years, but if I hadn't been trained as a journalist as well, we might not have made it. All the stories you hear about life with a newsman are true—chasing fire trucks, crazy hours and company they keep, all for the sake of getting the whole story. During our first years of marriage, we were apart more than we were together. Money was hard to come by, too. Walter earned $25 a week working the night desk and I had a day job. Certainly it helped that we had no social ambitions. Walter's been known to drive the tackiest car on the block. Quite happily. Neither one of us thinks much of 'working' on a marriage. That sounds so dreary. I pretty much go along with what Walter decides, and he never questions my running of the household or the way I spend money. We've been very lucky."

SENATOR HENRY JACKSON
"Never a little kid"

An old sweetheart of Scoop Jackson's recalls the Senator as a young man: "Scoop and I went out for nine years many years ago. Our values matched in that I didn't have to go to expensive restaurants. Scoop would talk of his Norwegian thriftiness. He's a poor boy from a small town, and I don't know if he'll ever get over it. One reason we got along was that I could tell him off. He respects people who'll stand up to him. But he's a perennial boss. He always wants to take charge. He doesn't have much of a sense of humor. He was never very good at letting loose. I had a feeling he was never a little kid. He's like an elephant: he never forgets. He's also stubborn. If he believed something, he'd stick with it. He was a good listener and a good country boy." From "Scoop: The Life and Politics of Henry M. Jackson," by Peter J. Ognibene (Stein and Day $8.95).

BALLERINA BROOKS
She never gave up hope

A near-fatal auto accident two years ago left Jacqueline Brooks with one leg an inch-and-a-half shorter than the other. This was particularly tragic because she had dreams of a career with the Royal Ballet. Said her mother of Jacqueline's boundless optimism and courage: "Dancing is my daughter's life, so she couldn't give up hope. An orthopedic surgeon operated, twice broke and reset her injured leg. Many a night my husband and I sat up with her because the pain was so bad. But she's not a quitter." Today, Jacqueline is dancing again and has been accepted as a student at the Royal Academy of Dancing.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

COLD WAVE

Of all our doors, none irks me more
Than our refrigerator door.
You see, I open it to peer
In search of something, say a beer,
A piece of cheese, leftover meat—
Whatever I would drink or eat.
But as I look and as I probe
With patience somewhat less than Job's,
A blast of cold air hits my face,
A chill that's costly to replace.
I hurry, and yet feel defeated
To know what's cold is being heated....
Indeed, as I feel coolness pass,
I'd like a see-through door of glass.
