

Public-Service Jobs Bill Faces Presidential Veto

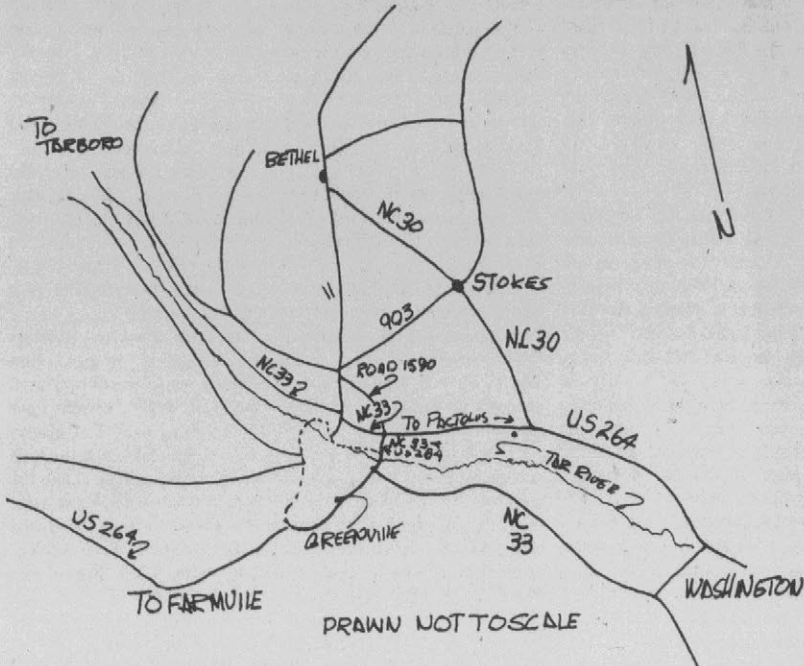

By PEGGY SIMPSON Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — A public-service jobs bill moving through Congress faces a presidential veto, and there is at least one sign that such a veto will be successful.

"People are on the brink of despair because they cannot find jobs," said Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., especially in the black community where jobless rates are far higher than for whites.

Industry is needed to "generate realistic, permanent fulfilling jobs" as opposed to government-sponsored programs.

depth of the recession last March, he said. Rep. Dominick V. Daniels, D-N.J., who handled the public service jobs bill on the floor, criticized the administration's intention to phase out public service jobs after this year.

joblessness, when it admits that over seven million Americans are still out of work," Daniels said. "Public service employment is the most effective emergency solution because it is direct. It hires people."

Area Highway Routes Changed

As part of a continuing program to upgrade the state's highways, division engineer C.W. Snell announced yesterday the following changes in area highway routes. U.S. 264 will be rerouted north across the Tar River to the Pactolus Highway and down the Pactolus Highway to Washington.

Highway 33 from Aurora through Chocowiny and Grimesland will also go north across the river and west by way of Penny Hill to junction with U.S. 64 in Edgecombe County. The number of the highway from Pactolus to N.C. 11 by way of Stokes has been changed to N.C. 30.

No Resistance To Advancing MPLA

By The Associated Press The Soviet-backed MPLA faction in Angola has announced the capture of the two ports at the Atlantic end of the railroad across the central part of the country, and British correspondents report the MPLA and Cuban forces are moving toward confrontation with the South African army.

that the MPLA (Popular Movement) announced its unopposed occupation Tuesday of Benguela, the coastal terminus of the Benguela Railroad, and Lobito, the country's chief port 20 miles to the north.

"resounding welcome," the Financial Times correspondent said. The broadcast "made clear the Luanda government has no intention of stopping its southern advance or of leaving the South African forces to continue their occupation of southern Angola," Miss Bergerol said.

Transit Planning Money

Greenville is one of several North Carolina cities receiving state grants for planning of mass transit programs, the N. C. Board of Transportation announced.

The board reported that Greenville will receive a state allocation of $3,200 which will be matched by $3,200 in local funds. The remaining 80 per cent or $25,600 will be provided through Federal funds to secure the total of $32,000 projected for development of a five-year transit program here.

This action marks the first that the board has approved state funds for local mass transit programs, it was pointed out.

The cities of Charlotte, High Point, Raleigh, Salisbury, Winston-Salem and Wilmington share in a total state allocation of $489,620 in capital grants while a smaller amount, $21,125, goes for planning mass transit programs in Greenville, Rocky Mount, Charlotte, Burlington and Wilson and Cabarrus and Gaston counties.

All mass transit funds approved come from the state's general fund and are not part of the highway fund, the board announced.

Board Chosen

During a final meeting held last week in Greenville, the second convener group (appointed by Governor Holshouser and charged with the establishment of a governing board for Health Services Area VI) adopted a permanent 53 man board to govern the Health Systems Agency in the 29 counties composing Area VI.

The new board includes five additional consumer members, bringing the membership up to the requirements set down by the federal law, (51 percent consumers; 49 percent providers; and 33 percent elected officials from the consumer, provider total).

Salary Increase Approved For Utilities Employees

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector Managing Editor Utilities commissioners Tuesday night approved a five percent cost of living salary increase for Utilities employees, with the exception of the director and department heads.

The increase is in line with a similar action taken by the City Council on behalf of city employees. The salary increase will be effective with the first pay period in February. Director Charles Horne said after the meeting that funds were budgeted in the fiscal year in anticipation of the increase. The increase will cost approximately $30,000 for the remaining five months of the fiscal year. The commission approved a price increase for propane gas to track increases from the suppliers. Cost of propane gas will go up by eight cents per 100 cubic feet, effective March 1.

After hearing an opinion from Utilities attorney Louis Singleton, the commission decided to follow the standard policy for water and sewer extension to the Fleming and Carroll subdivision. The question involved crossing N. C. 43 with the lines.

Commissioners also reviewed their water and sewer extension policies and tentatively agreed to delete the provision for the commission to share 25 percent of the cost of six inch water mains and eight inch sewer mains. The commission approved a recommendation from Director Horne that negotiations be carried on with Mrs. Vina Simmons for providing water and sewer to her property in exchange for electric transmission line easement across the property. The cost would be in line with similar easements obtained along the transmission route.

On a request from Welcome Wagon for a list of new service applications, Horne reported that legally the commission could not deny the information to those who seek it. He suggested that a daily log of cut-ons be kept to which Welcome Wagon or others would have access at the Utilities office. This was approved.

In other matters, Commissioners:

—Agreed that the possible use of a surplus van for an energy conservation display should be explored.

—Agreed to changing the Christmas holidays from three to two and providing two holidays on Thanksgiving.

—Deferred for further study a request for extension of sewer lines to Ina's House of Flowers on U.S. 13 north. —Deferred action on a request for extension of sewer to the Moye property on the Stantonsburg road near the new hospital site.

Farmers Are Plowing Under Part Of 1976 Wheat Crop

By DAVE BARTEL Associated Press Writer

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Wheat farmers in the Great Plains have begun plowing under part of their drought-shrivelled 1976 crop in a desperate effort to head off severe wind erosion that could affect millions of acres.

High winds this week in western Kansas and the Oklahoma and Texas panhandles kicked up dust storms reminiscent of Dust Bowl days.

"It was like the 'Dirty 30s' for awhile Monday," said Allan Bowman, district director in southwestern Kansas for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Drought already has cut expected wheat production in southwestern Kansas to about 50 per cent of the normal 30-bushel per acre yield, Bowman estimated, and many fields are being plowed to prevent soil from blowing away.

"There is considerable stripping being done now," he said, "and if the weather continues like this, the farmers will have to resort to total tillage in many fields. Of course, then they lose their wheat crop."

Lack of rainfall has plagued the wheat-growing region from Nebraska to Texas. Winter wheat, which makes up about three-fourths of all the nation's wheat production, has been drastically affected by the drought, agricultural officials reported.

"We're not just crying wolf to make the price of wheat go up," said Myron Krenzlin, administrator of the Kansas Wheat Commission. "It looks bad. If we don't get some rain soon and the winds keep up, we're really going to be hurting."

Mrs. Earl Hayes of Stafford, Kan., whose husband is president of the Kansas Association of Wheat Growers, said growers estimate they have lost at least 75 million to 100 million bushels, figures that translate into a loss of between $225 million and $300 million at current farm prices.

Although important as bread grain, wheat does not bear as heavily on consumer food prices as corn and other livestock feed grain used to produce the nation's meat, poultry and milk. But a skimpy wheat crop would probably fan prices of other grains upward and make it more expensive to feed livestock.

The federal Soil Conservation Service said 10.3 million acres of land from the Dakotas to Texas were open to severe wind erosion by the end of December and more than one million acres already had been damaged.

Farmers in Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas plowed up about 430,000 acres of cropland — much of it planted with winter wheat — in November and December because of the drought. Emergency tillage was accelerating in some areas as the dry weather continued.

The SCS figures will be updated at the end of this month, and Krenzlin and other wheat officials predict a substantial increase in damaged croplands and wheat acreage tilled to prevent erosion.

The problems in the wheat belt stem from an extremely dry autumn that has been followed by a mild, dry winter. Western Kansas has had only two major rains or snows since farmers seeded the 1976 crop last September, and similar conditions have prevailed in parts of Nebraska, Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas.

Grants Of Immunity To Three Witnesses Fail To Produce Testimony

By TONY LEDWELL Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Despite grants of immunity, three persons who reportedly saw a cheerful Patricia Hearst in a Symbionese Liberation Army hideout are battling to stay off the witness stand at her bank robbery trial.

The prosecution planned to call the three again today at Miss Hearst's trial. Its attempt to elicit testimony Tuesday was lost in a protracted legal wrangle.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning wants the witnesses to testify at a special evidentiary hearing outside the presence of the jury that Miss Hearst apparently stayed with the SLA of her own free will.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter signed a limited form of immunity for the three Tuesday, but the first witness called after Carter's action, Janelle Mumtaz of Oakland, promptly invoked 5th Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Attorneys for the other two witnesses, Ronald Tate and Retimah X, both of San Francisco, said each intended to plead the same constitutional right.

All three were called to testify as rebuttal witnesses to counter a move by defense attorney F. Lee Bailey to suppress as evidence a taped admission from Miss Hearst that she voluntarily joined the SLA in the April 15, 1974, bank robbery.

Bailey also does not want the jury to hear the testimony of Thomas Dean Matthews, a 19-year-old Los Angeles area man once held captive by Miss Hearst and SLA members William and Emily Harris.

Matthews testified at the hearing Tuesday that Miss Hearst told him she freely joined the SLA and showed skill and expertise with semi-automatic weapons.

Carter agreed to a form of immunity that does not prohibit prosecution in the future against the three who refused to testify but insures that their testimony at Miss Hearst's trial cannot be used against them.

It was learned the three were neighbors in the predominantly black section of San Francisco where the SLA hid for several months after kidnaping Miss Hearst on Feb. 4, 1974.

SLA leader Donald "Cinque" DeFreeze reportedly introduced them to Miss Hearst, and they said she proudly told them of her revolutionary exploits with the terrorist group.

Whipping Post?

GREENSBORO (AP)—A superior court judge has advocated restoration of the public whipping post to cope with the high increase in crime.

Judge William Z. Wood of Winston-Salem said Tuesday, "We talk about the high increase in crime and what to do about it. What we need to cure it is a whipping post on the courthouse square. Let everybody see it, and then see how many folks will try to go out and break the law."

Wood made his remarks in open court with specific reference to a 24-year-old Guilford County man, who had admitted slashing the face of a 17-year-old youth last Sept. 13.

Billy Eugene Lyles of Rt. 2, Brown's Summit, admitted pursuing 17-year-old Kevin Craig Bullis of Greensboro, bounding out of his car when the auto of Bullis was stopped for a traffic signal, breaking the car window and slashing Bullis across the face. Twenty-five stitches were required to close the wound.

While the motive for the attack appeared hazy, Judge Wood said he believed marijuana was a consideration since one of the witnesses had admitted using the drug.

The judge ordered Bullis examined by a probation officer who is to report before sentence is passed.

Scranton Said Ford's Choice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton reportedly is President Ford's first choice for ambassador to the United Nations, the Los Angeles Times said Wednesday.

The Times quoted a "high government official" in Washington who said a ranking State Department officer told him Ford wanted Scranton to assume the post as soon as resigning Ambassador Daniel P. Moynihan leaves at the end of the month.

Ford told reporters at a breakfast meeting Tuesday he had several nominees in mind but did not name them.

Reader Thinks Snooping Is Okay

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Why do you repeatedly tell women to stay out of their husbands' billfolds and drawers?

Why should a married man have something in his billfold and drawers that his wife shouldn't be able to see? Are you saying that if a man is carrying on a secret love affair with another woman, it's none of his wife's business?

Oftentimes, a wife discovers that her husband is committing adultery when she finds the evidence hidden in his billfold or drawer. Then, at least she has the choice of bringing the man to his senses through proper care and treatment or holding onto the evidence in case she decides to divorce him. Thank you.

BEEN ON BOTH SIDES

DEAR BEEN: Sorry, but I can't condone invasion of privacy for any reason.

P.S. If women can pry, why can't men also? Such snooping is dirty business.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 62-year-old, divorced woman in comfortable circumstances. I'm slim, attractive and stylish, and no one ever takes me for a day over 50.

Six months ago, I met a handsome, refined, very well-to-do gentleman who is 68. (I'll call him "Harry.") After a few dates, we enjoyed each other's company so much, neither of us wanted to date others.

I expected a proposal of marriage on New Year's, but instead Harry told me that even though he cared for me, he'd never marry again because he had had a prostate operation 10 years ago that left him impotent.

I told him that sex wasn't important to me, and it's not. But he insisted that even though I might say that now, once married, I'd soon feel cheated, and the marriage would blow up.

Harry's first wife died five years ago, and he married again. That lasted one year, and I understand Wife No. 2 took him to the cleaners.

Please tell me how to get Harry to marry me.

MARRIAGE-MINDED

DEAR MARRIAGE: If you're willing to sign a prenuptial agreement stating that if the marriage doesn't work out, you won't "take him to the cleaners," suggest it. If that doesn't work, face it. Harry isn't for marrying.

DEAR ABBY: You've received countless letters from people who complain because their spouse snores. Well, how's this for a switch?

My wife and I are chronic insomniacs. When we do fall asleep, we occasionally snore. Whenever I hear her snoring, it's like hearing heavenly chimes because I know that she has finally been able to fall asleep.

That, in turn, makes me feel so mellow and relaxed that I soon doze off, too.

My wife tells me that she is not bothered by my snoring for the same reason.

"H"

DEAR "H": Orchids to both of you. That's what I call love of the highest order. Your words are music to snore by.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

The marriage of Sybil Warren Braxton and Charlie Edward Beacham Jr. took place Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the Simpson Methodist Church parsonage.

The Rev. Richard Arno conducted the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are the late Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Warren of Rt. 1, Stokes, and Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Edward Beacham Sr. of Washington.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Jimmy A. Nelson.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride attended Stokes-Pactolus High School and Mitchell's Academy. She is employed by Furney's Beauty Shop, Rt. 3, Greenville. The bridegroom is associated with the Washington City Schools.

Virginia Graham Is On Tour In Her First Singing Role

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) Virginia Graham, known as a good talker — that's how she became a TV talk-show hostess and again how she started acting on stage — is out on her first theater tour of one, two and three-nighters. It's also her first singing role. She's viewing it all with her customary verve and optimism.

"If I were younger I couldn't do it," says Miss Graham, now 58, of the 38 cities in 60 January and February days in which she is playing the title role in "Irene."

She explains that when you're younger you're worried about a romance, or raising children, or your elderly parents, or things that turn out never to happen, or whether you're going to be a success.

"I have been driven by ambition. I am not driven by ambition now. I must be working; that is my nature. Now I'm just excited to be doing something I haven't done before."

The blonde talk-show hostess, popular lecturer to women's clubs and frequent charity telephone guest, who never took an acting lesson, also had never taken a singing lesson until preparations for "Irene." Her teacher, she said, was all prepared to show her how to "talk" her songs. "I'm going to be singing every line. If you can speak, you can sing."

Miss Graham has done summer stock — comedy roles — every summer since 1965, in such plays as "Barefoot in the Park" and "Butterflies Are Free." "It's one of the best-kept secrets in America, even after I took a full-page ad in Variety with my rave reviews." People still know her best from her "Girl Talk" show syndicated on TV in 188 cities from 1952-58, then "The Virginia Graham Show" for two more years.

Another series of Virginia Graham TV interviews titled "Famous Faces" is under consideration now. And Miss Graham would like sometime to do another series titled "Woman Talk."

She got into acting the same way she got into TV — somebody heard her talk and asked if she could do it. TV came first. Miss Graham, the wife of businessman Harry Guttenberg and mother of a little daughter who now has grown up and presented the Guttenbergs with two grandchildren, was living on Long Island and giving occasional after-luncheon talks at women's clubs. The wife of a TV executive heard her and raved to her husband. "Then he saw me on a television and called and asked if I could do a TV show. With a modesty never seen before in the 20th century, I said yes."

"Years later, a man I knew had a summer theater and he had a play that an idiot could have done and he asked if I'd like to do it." With the same modesty as the last time, Miss Graham said yes.

"It was hard for me to use somebody else's words at first because I'm an articulate person." But she got used to it and now finds it no problem. Stage fright never was a problem. She's never had any stage fright since her first cheerful venture onto a stage, at the Frances Parker School in her native Chicago at the age of 5.

She doesn't consider herself the typical actress personality. "I never had to escape from myself. Actors live somebody else's character. They're basically shy and insecure, only existing in the writing of someone else. They're bad ad libbers, too; they should never be allowed on talk shows."

In "Irene," Miss Graham says her costumes are a style which makes you wonder "what do you do after you wash the windows." However, she has a designer gown to slip into for taking bows.

And what happens after the bows will be the same as what she has done after the summer stock performances. There'll be a little talk by Virginia Graham, a sure-fire producer of a standing ovation.

She talks about the illnesses she has come through, Miss Graham explains, throws in a couple of wry realistic lines about getting older that always get a laugh and hits home with the main message — make the most of whatever age you are.

"I know my limitations and what I am. I call these the dividend years. I tell them if you only look back at the past, you're going to trip on an unknown object ahead of you."

Open Sesame! Yields Key To Flavor Treat

By TOM HOGE

AP Newsfeatures Writer

In Earth's treasure trove of spices, one of the oldest and most intriguing is sesame, the tiny grayish-white or black seeds with the sweet, nutty flavor.

Sesame is so old that, according to mythology, the gods of the ancient Assyrian culture refreshed themselves with sesame wine before they began the task of creating the world.

Sesame popped up more than once in ancient folklore. When Queen Scheherazade recounted the tale of Sinbad, the Sailor, she needed a password to open the robbers' treasure-filled cave and hit upon "Open Sesame!" The phrase was apparently inspired by the fact that sesame seeds pop from the hull as soon as they are ripe and scatter in all directions.

As proof of their age, a drawing in an ancient Egyptian tomb dating back 4,000 years, depicts a baker adding sesame seeds to his dough.

So high was sesame in protein that soldiers of ancient Greece carried a supply of the seeds as an extra ration.

Sesame was brought to the American southland by African slaves who called them " benne seeds," a name still used in the Deep South. Sesame is still popular in southern cooking, especially in cakes, cookies and pies. In fact, it is so popular throughout America that in 1974 we consumed around 60 million pounds, domestic and imported.

Toasted, the nutlike seeds can be used as a crunch garnish for appetizers and salads. Untoasted, they can be used in baked dishes, sprinkled over breads before baking or used instead of bread crumbs as a topping for casseroles. Toasted sesame seeds are also good combined with cheese and sweet sauces.

In the Middle East today, sesame seeds are crushed into a paste and spread on bread. That popular candy, Turkish halvah, is made primarily from sesame seeds.

Here's a recipe for a lemon pie made crunchy by the versatile seeds.

2 large lemons, unpeeled
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
2-3rds cup flaked coconut
1-3rd cup toasted sesame seed
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
Pastry for 2-crust
9-inch pie

Additional sesame seed
Slice lemons thin, removing pits. Place in medium-size bowl. Add sugar and mix well. Let stand 2 hours, blending occasionally. Beat eggs in small bowl. Stir in coconut, sesame seed and vanilla extract. Pour over lemon mixture and blend. On lightly floured board roll half the pastry 1/8 inch thick to fit pie pan. Spoon in lemon mixture. Roll remaining pastry to cover top of pie pan. Place over filling, trim and flute edges. Brush top of pastry with milk. Sprinkle with sesame seed. Make slits in top crust to let steam escape. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven 12 minutes. Reduce temperature to 350 degrees and bake till knife inserted in center of pie comes out clean; about 35 minutes. Cool and serve.

Women's Bar Opens In Tokyo

By NAOAKI USUI
TOKYO (AP) — A plush Tokyo department store has opened a bar exclusively for its women employees, where young salesgirls chat, dance and sometimes get high on discount drinks.

The company says the bar is to promote "better human relations." It is a place to relax after putting up with customers' nastiness, but moderation is maintained, since many Japanese fear that appearing to enjoy themselves too much with fellow workers indicates they are not very serious about their job.

This kind of bar for women is especially unusual in male-dominated Japan, although more and more girls go out drinking these days.

It was opened last year for the 2,200 women working at the Mitsukoshi Department Store in the downtown Nihonbashi District, which sells goods ranging from bread to Rolls Royce automobiles.

"We thought it was about time, and also fair, to have a bar for girls. So we arranged to use this place, which is run as a coffee shop for shoppers during the daytime," said Megumu Matsuzawa, a spokesman for the big department store. "After all, we already had two bars for men."

"We don't refuse boys when they are escorted by women, although the women are masters of the place," he added. "We don't want to offend women who bring boys in."

Yoko Nakazawa, an attractive 21-year-old who works in the men's wear department, drops into the bar twice a week.

"The last time we went skiing, we got a bit high in this women's bar and jumped on a skiing tour bus. The next morning, all of us had a hangover at the very foot of the ski grounds," she said.

"This place is cheap, easy to come in with colleagues and right next to my office," said Junko Hayashi, 21, a friend of Miss Nakazawa. "This evening, we are arranging our next skiing trip."

"After all," she added, "we girls make up half of the 4,500 persons working here, and we need relaxation. We are ordered to keep smiling and talking politely all day even to the nastiest, meanest customers."

"But I never come to this place with my steady boy friend, because everyone knows each other. I don't want to be embarrassed by showing my private life to other people," Miss Hayashi commented, with two friends at the same table agreeing emphatically.

For the many Japanese who steadily date office colleagues, the meeting place is generally fairly close to the office — since both probably live in far-out suburbs — but distant enough to escape other colleagues' curious eyes.

A bartender said there were two things he had never seen in this employees' bar — steady couples and guests who get drunk.

"It seems everyone is controlling herself or himself. Otherwise, their boss will know what embarrassing things they did last evening," he said.

The bar is open from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., and the number of guests each day has grown from about 40 to nearly 100, spokesman Matsuzawa said. The drinks and snacks all are sold at a discount of at least 20 per cent, he added, with beer costing 55 cents a bottle and good whisky $10 a bottle.

"We've broken even financially, though it is part of the company welfare program for our employees," he added.

Noriyuki Daira, the chief bartender, said, "Many of our regulars like sweet cocktails which cost up to 85 cents, while about 30 per cent are too shy to go for booze. They are just enjoying an adult women's atmosphere with glasses of soft drinks."

And one male employe commented, "That bar is a place for girls who believe they can drink. I'm not interested because I usually drink only with my male colleagues. Drinking is strictly a man's business in Japan."

Rural Background Is Advised

Three physicians, reporting in the Journal of the American Medical Association say that medical schools should enroll more students from small towns to solve the rural physician shortage.

Dr. Sam Cullison, Christopher Reid and Jack M. Colwill say a national survey indicates that medical schools should also offer more training programs for family physicians to improve medical care for rural areas.

The University of Missouri research team pointed out that 26 percent of our population lives in rural areas, but only 13 percent of the physicians practice there.

"Students with rural backgrounds are substantially underrepresented in the nation's medical schools," the report said, with only 17 percent of the entering medical students coming from non-metropolitan areas.

While it is true that percentage is due to a low application rate, the team says, "in order to increase the percentage of nonmetropolitan students, medical schools should consider both increasing the percentage of acceptance of qualified rural students and implementing programs of recruitment from rural areas."

The team said that in Missouri physicians with rural backgrounds are two to three times more likely to settle in rural areas for practice than are those with urban backgrounds. Likewise, those who choose family practice are three times more likely to settle in rural areas than physicians who specialize.

The report verifies for us what has long been common sense. It is entirely logical that it is easier for a physician to go to a rural or small town area if that is his background originally.

Thus it is clear that the nation's medical schools have a job to do in selecting applicants with rural backgrounds. This particularly applied to the developing ECU medical school, which will be serving a predominantly rural and small town population. The ECU school will be ideally located in a section where bright young people of rural backgrounds can be identified early and encouraged toward medical careers in rural areas.

A Re-Examination Is Suitable For All

The County Board of Education re-examined its policies concerning safety on school buses last week, and it is also a good time for all motorists to remember that care should be exercised when approaching buses loading or unloading.

The law requires vehicles to stop for school buses as they discharge or take on children and certainly this should be done.

Motorists should also remember, though, that even after a bus pulls off there is danger of a child darting across the road.

Motorists should always be on the look-out for youngsters whenever the school buses are on the move. A little caution can save a life.

Reform In Property Taxes

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Wheels are beginning to turn in governmental study groups and think-tank sessions which eventually will grind out some major reforms in North Carolina's local property tax system.

A comprehensive collection of suggested changes has been put together by the North Carolina Land Policy Council, a commission established by the General Assembly to develop recommendations for a land policy program for the state.

At a recent work session, the council got deeply into property taxes, and took some tentative stands on proposed reforms for inclusion in material to be taken to public hearings across the state beginning in March.

Final recommendations from the council are not expected until the 1977 session of the General Assembly, and even then, action is less than certain. Still, the suggested reforms already on paper indicate the directions being mulled in top governmental circles.

Top Leaders
Serving on the council are representatives of both city and county governments, the lieutenant governor, speaker of the house, other legislators, and several state department heads.

Two among the several suggested changes stand out: annual revaluation of property for tax purposes, rather than every eight years; and site valuation rather than use valuation.

Site valuation promises to be a volatile issue. Basically, a system of site value taxation shifts the tax burden from buildings and improvements onto the land itself.

Buildings and improvements currently form the foundation for tax valuation, and property owners are in effect penalized by increased taxes when they develop the property. Lying idle, the land generally receives a low tax value.

Particularly in urban areas, some land owners have preferred to let property deteriorate rather than invest in improvements which would raise taxes.

Under the site valuation system property taxes would be based on market value of the land, considering its location, permitted uses under zoning and land use regulations, and surrounding property.

The tax on the land would then be charged for the "highest and best use" of the land regardless of what is on the land. Investments in buildings and improvements would not be penalized, building maintenance and renewal would be encouraged, and land speculation and urban sprawl discouraged, the tax experts predict. Additionally, public investments in water and sewer lines, roads, and other services to vacant land would be returned by increased taxation whether the owner built on the land or not.

Study Proposed
The Land Policy Council has agreed to suggest a study commission of the General Assembly be established to consider this subject, but stopped short of endorsing the proposal itself.

Annual revaluation, the council agrees, would also help ease the problems of the system, rather than increasing the values every eight years. Mecklenburg County currently has annual appraisal machinery, and Forsyth is moving in that direction.

The idea is politically popular, since the result is that local governments do not have to raise taxes, they raise property values.

Once established and computerized, the system could use local staff in tax supervisors' offices to regularly feed in updated land value information and any improvements to the property to come up with new tax figures.

The eight-year gap is "horrendous," Lt. Gov. James B. Hunt said, and is the worst feature of the process at this time.

Local real estate taxes produce in the neighborhood of $550 million a year for North Carolina counties, towns, and special tax districts.

The system has been roundly criticized by local governmental officials who seek other sources of income from a General Assembly which traditionally has kept other sources for state purposes, rejecting suggestions including local income tax proposals.

Richardson To Stay On

WASHINGTON—The big news in Washington last week was not that Daniel Patrick Moynihan resigned, but that Elliot Richardson decided to stay on as secretary of commerce for the rest of the month of February.

As everyone knows, Mr. Richardson has not remained at one position in the government for too long. He has been secretary of health, education and welfare, secretary of defense, attorney general, ambassador to the Court of St. James and was sworn in last week as secretary of commerce.

While most people send the President a letter when they resign and receive a letter from the President regretting their departure, Mr. Richardson turned the tables wrote the President saying he planned to remain at his post.

Here is the exchange of letters between the President and Secretary Richardson. "Dear Mr. President: I am happy to tell you that after a week as secretary of commerce I intend to stay. My reasons for this decision are personal. I need the job.

"You have always treated me fairly and supported me during these trying days when the Commerce Department has been under fire from all sides. I hope you are satisfied with the job I did during the last week and the decisions I made over the weekend. It has been a pleasure working in your Administration and with you personally.

"While my reasons for staying on are my own, I will be frank and say that I discussed them with my wife. She thought I might do some good in the private sector but urged me to stay on in my present position because of the security involved. My children also played a part in the decision. Every time they went to school and someone asked them what their father

Other Editors Say Ado About Concorde

(The Raleigh Times)

The din of criticism crashing around the head of Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman in the wake of his decision to allow the Concorde to fly daily into Kennedy and Dulles airports is undeserved.

Coleman is due some credit, not only for making it possible for this country to sample the supersonic flight service, but also for having the courage to make a decision that will bring to a head the controversy that has raged for years.

Even if New York denies admittance to the Concorde, two flights daily into Dulles will once and for all establish some kind of gauge on the environmental impact of the Concorde. Knowing the ferocity of the environmentalists, the Concorde, if it is damaging or its noise truly intolerable can and will be dislodged and sent on its speedy way back to Britain and France for good.

The American taxpayer public should be grateful we are only hosting the Concorde, not producing it. For its future does not, at this point, appear promising.

Price-tagged at $60 million per plane to begin with, the Concorde would have to be blessed with a thus far unenviable miracle to survive. Though it cuts flying time in half, the sleek, hook-nosed faster-than-a-bullet apparition of an aircraft holds only 100 passengers. And even with surcharges above that of ordinary air fare, Air France's $35,000 flights to Rio cannot possibly survive on passenger lists which thus far have been nearer 50 per cent capacity than 100.

It may well be that the Shah of Iran, who has expressed an interest in a couple of Concorde, may end up being the only one who can afford them, and that the fly-ins at Dulles, and possibly Kennedy, will amount to no more than bicentennial visitations.

The floundering airlines industry, not to mention the aircraft construction itself, can use a stimulant. The Concorde may not fill the bill but it has set the industry and the public on its ear and has established Coleman as a man who can make decisions in the face of opposition, some sincere, some political. That should count for something.

A Hot Wind From Panama

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON—An inexcusably vicious attack on the U.S. by the Panamanian ambassador to the usually soporific Organization of American States (OAS) is adding to President Ford's grave problems in arranging a new Panama Canal treaty and further embarrassing the U.S. throughout Latin America.

What makes this particularly significant is its coincidence with Washington's rising danger from the Communist political offensive in southern Africa, western Europe and Asia. Now, the hate-America campaign is exploding on Washington's back door.

The Jan. 23 attack accused the U.S. of a "policy of strangulation" of Panama, of "paternalism... colonialism... oppression." Panama's delegate, Ambassador Nader Pitty, told the shocked assembly he regards his mission in the OAS as "one of destroying the (U.S.) policy of arrogance" toward Panama—and by implication, all of Latin America.

Robert E. White, deputy chief of the U.S. delegation, coldly informed Pitty the U.S. could not acquiesce to such a misuse of the OAS forum to attack the U.S. He reminded Pitty that the U.S. and Panama are "reaching the final stages" of a new treaty. But that further infuriated Pitty, who then accused White of "blackmail."

Behind this tirade lie decades of grievances building in Panama against the U.S.-imposed canal treaty that gives the U.S. control of the canal "in perpetuity."

Pitty's brutal language particularly shocked members of the U.S. mission because of President Ford's effort to reach agreement on a new treaty more favorable to Panama.

Indeed, with elder statesman Ellsworth Bunker as his negotiator in Panama, Mr. Ford has provoked the outrage of the Republican right wing and endangered his nomination by tentatively agreeing to major treaty revisions.

With Secretary of State Henry Kissinger finally making his frequently postponed goodwill trip south of the border, the Panamanian attack seemed calculated to put this nation in the worst possible light at the worst possible time.

The possible explanation: a new U.S. demand for major changes in a proposed revision of the OAS charter, which Latin countries have been drafting the past three years with the U.S. sitting quietly on the sidelines. Pitty's explosion encapsulates anti-Washington emotions which more responsible OAS diplomats,

Double Helium Prices

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department is producing helium and selling it to other federal agencies at prices nearly double those of private industry, although the department has seven times as much helium as it is expected to need for the next 25 years.

Furthermore, the government is adding to the stockpile every year. The supplies, approximately 42.1 billion cubic feet, are stored in underground cliffside gas wells at Amarillo, Tex. It costs the Interior Department approximately $20 million a year in interest on debts for loans from the U.S. Treasury when the gas was purchased between 1962 and 1973.

The purchases stemmed from the Helium Act Amendments of 1960, passed to guarantee sufficient helium for defense and space purposes. The big helium stocks started piling up when demand failed to keep up with acquisition and production.

Helium is extracted from natural gas and can be used to supply pressure for rocket fuels, in welding, and as a deep-sea diving breathing mixture. It also floats balloons.

Under the law, federal agencies are prohibited from buying the inert, light-than-air gas on the open market and instead must turn to the Bureau of Mines in the Interior Department for supplies.

To build up its stockpile, the department was allowed to borrow from the U.S. Treasury. To help pay the debt, the department charges $35 per thousand cubic feet when it sells helium to other agencies, although helium is sold for $20 per thousand cubic feet on the commercial market.

"It is cheaper for the government to buy it at $35 than it is at $20," said Raymond Munerlyn, the bureau's helium division chief, because "we're talking about taking it out of one pocket and putting it in the other."

The government expects to need only six billion cubic feet for the next 25 years. It also is producing an additional 300 million cubic feet of helium annually at a plant in Keyes, Okla.

Establishment of a North Carolina branch of the American Farm Bureau Federation is expected following the meeting here yesterday of farmers where a resolution was passed instructing a committee to compare the merits of the Bureau with other farm organizations existing in various North Carolina counties.

The resolution does not specify what organization to establish, but does call for establishment of some form of union for the farmers.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau, was the principal speaker at the meeting yesterday and explained some of the work of his organization. In addition, a number of conferences were held throughout the day with leading farmers from the eastern section of the state.

A New Market For Home Buyers?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "It was like walking off a cliff," said the builder, describing how the depression in housing hit his company in 1974. "The sales were there one day, gone the next."

The speaker was Frank Mackle Jr., president of the Deltona Corp., which has erected and sold 30,000 housing units in communities it developed throughout Florida.

His experience was matched around the country by other builders, large and small, many of whom went bankrupt. Those who survived did so by analyzing their problems and adjusting to the new realities.

As a result, a promising new market may be developing for home buyers, despite high interest rates and a generally less than bullish outlook for the industry. The new market should be better attuned to demand.

"This recession has been extremely good for our future well being," said Mackle, speaking of the nation as well as his company, which tailed off after a deficit after many years of steadily rising sales and profits.

Although its income still hasn't fully recovered, Deltona last year sold 29 per cent more homes than in the previous year, a total of 678, an increase resulting almost entirely from the introduction of lower priced units.

Deltona's experience and its reaction to it was matched in smaller ways by other builders around the country, who now realize that housing prices must be returned to the pocketbook reality.

It might seem preposterous that builders would forget this principle of a free market, but they did. So did some car makers. While it is true that builders were presented with rising costs for land, labor and materials, they failed to make economies where economies could be made.

"We had been basic builders," said Mackle, "and then we went to building houses for $35,000 and up. We made a hell of a mistake." Buyers would have to have incomes of $20,000, but most of the potential buyers were retirees.

"We always used to give the buyer what he wanted," said Mackle. "Dad (Frank Mackle Sr., who began operation in Nashville 65 years ago) said, Don't build monuments to yourself, build what the public wants and can pay for."

When sales stopped in December 1974, Mackle executives searched for an explanation. In 1962, they recalled, Deltona sold a minimum house for $6,900. This was the basis for much of the company's enormous success in the 1960s.

Back to the drawing board they went, and soon came up with a basic, 650-foot, insulated, easily expandable house costing $17,800 for one bedroom and bath, air conditioning and heating, 7,500-foot lot included.

The story of how prices could be cut provides an example of what other builders around the country are attempting to do in order to restore the market, from which most Americans are excluded because of price.

Strength For Today

PRIVILEGE INVOLVES RESPONSIBILITY

Our Lord's invitation, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," is a gracious one indeed. But people very often fail to realize that the invitation has an obligation attached. The remainder of the declaration is, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

The Lord never promises

anyone that he will conduct that person through life on flowery beds of ease. Life is not laid out along such lines. It necessarily involves a tremendous amount of conflict, trouble, and burden-bearing. Our peace and spiritual rest come not by the removal of these burdens but by the flowing of a deep sense of adequacy into our lives in spite of these burdens.

Nowhere is it so true as in the spiritual world that privilege involves responsibility.

Secretary Downgrades Cruise-Missile

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Air Force Secretary Thomas Reed says the proposed U.S. cruise missile will be effective only against thinly defended targets in the Soviet Union but that he would be sorry to see the weapon bargained away in arms limitation agreements.

He appeared to downgrade the importance of the air-launched cruise missile, which the Russians have been trying to curb in nuclear arms limitations talks with the United States.

Reed contended the relatively slow moving cruise missile could not do the job that the piloted B1 bomber, with its sophisticated radar-jamming gear and supersonic short range missiles, could do against heavily defended "core" targets.

Meanwhile, President Ford signed a compromise $112.3-billion defense appropriation bill that includes funds for the B1 bomber and provides money for defense operations for the 15-month period ending Sept. 30. The bill contains $8.6 billion less than Ford originally requested.

Reed made his comments to reporters on Tuesday in reply to a Brookings Institution study that recommended against producing the B1, the costliest bomber in history at a projected price of $21.4 billion for 244 planes.

Reed said the cruise missile, essentially a pilotless jet drone which travels at subsonic speeds, would be "a rather dumb way to try to beat Russia's thickening air defenses because the weapon would not be equipped with electronic countermeasures equipment."
"Air-launched cruise missiles are useful for attacking peripheral value targets, but they are not useful in attacking core industrial targets," Reed added, indicating they would lack the accuracy of short range missiles that would be mounted on the B1.

Honor Lists Announced

The following students received honor roll and principal's list honors at A.G. Cox Grammar School for the third six weeks:

Honor Roll: Lisa Allen, Dallas Braxton, Amy Gibbs, Todd Hudson, Jane Melton, Ragan Spain, and David Webb.

Principal's List: Michael Allen, Cornelius Andrews, Elaine Barnes, William Bridgett, Kimberly Carraway, Lisa Coward, Michele Crawford, William Crowthier, Mary Rosetta Davis, Kathy Dunn, Susan Dunn, Beth Darden, Marion Ellis, Brandon Evans, Connie Evans, Kathy Falkner, Monty Garrish, Lawrence Green, Deborah Hall, Stacie Hobgood, Gene Jones, Janet Little, Chris McDaniel, David Miller, Kelly Moore, Carolyn Pearsall, Angela Phillips, Ellen Riggs, Lonnie Smith, Michael Smith, Henry Tate, Amy Tyson, Clara White, John Woodley, Angela Worthington, Gary Worthington, and Tony Worthington.

Although he gave the impression he is not too enthusiastic about the cruise missile, he said he would be "extremely sorry" to see it negotiated away in a new arms limitation agreement with Russia.

Cruise missiles, Reed said, would serve to increase Russia's air defense problems and permit aging B52 bombers to be useful until the end of this century as platforms for firing such weapons.

Reed voiced confidence that the B1 could penetrate improved Soviet air defenses in the 1980s and deliver accurate strikes with its supersonic short range attack missiles (SRAMs).

"We should proceed with the B1 as rapidly as possible," said Reed, adding that "I'm very impressed" with test results so far.

The Pentagon is due to make a production decision on the B1 next fall and, in anticipation of a probable go-ahead, has asked Congress for more than $1 billion to start manufacturing the bombers.

also angered at the sudden U.S. demands, have expressed with far more restraint.

Humphrey's Defense
A private letter from Sen. Hubert Humphrey to consumer advocate Ralph Nader not only emphasizes his sensitivity to charges of being old-hat but dispels any remaining doubt about Humphrey's eagerness for the Democratic presidential nomination should all contenders fail.

Nader, interviewed on NBC's "Today" program Jan. 19, gave a 43-word reply when asked his opinion of Humphrey. Describing him as "a fine, ebullient person" who "exudes compassion," Nader then expressed muted criticism. He doubted whether Humphrey has "had many new ideas recently" and added: "I think he's not close enough to the need for citizen action and citizen involvement in actual reality, but he's voted very well on labor and consumer issues."

That relatively innocuous criticism produced a 600-word letter from Humphrey on Jan. 21—a massive, detailed self-defense.

The reason: Nader's criticism fit a pattern that Humphrey's friends believe is intended to knock him out of the presidential picture. Nader's comments were followed by similar alarms from presidential hopeful Jimmy Carter, who referred to Humphrey's "reputation as a loser" and, more recently, Sen. Edmund Muskie (hand-picked by Humphrey as his 1968 running-mate) who talked of Humphrey's diminished leadership capability.

In his "Dear Ralph" letter, Humphrey told Nader his "evaluation of my legislative endeavors was something less than fair," then recited his record as an innovator since returning to the Senate in 1971: foreign aid, rural development, forest conservation, public facility financing, economic planning, Senate reform, campaign reform, food assistance, energy research, education aid, full employment, Federal Reserve reform, housing, tax reform.

The letter's peroration was vintage Hubert: "Just thought I'd pass along a few of the things that we've been doing. I don't believe you will find Hubert Humphrey a man of the past. I'll stand by my record, and I think it'll stand the test of critical examination."

A footnote: Ironically, shortly before Carter's attack on him, Humphrey in an intimate conversation with close supporters commented how favorably impressed he was with the campaign of the former governor of Georgia. Such pro-Carter comments have abruptly ended.

did for a living, they said they couldn't remember.

"I have assured them that, at least until the election, they could say I was secretary of commerce. So, as you can see, my decision to remain in your Cabinet has not come about lightly. It was discussed at home and with close personal friends, and the conclusion was unanimous that I stay where I am.

"I want you to know, Mr. President, that although I will remain at my post as secretary of commerce, I will always be available for consultation and advice whenever you wish it. By staying in the government, I have not lost my interest in the affairs of state, and I hope you will call on me for future service to my country.

Elliot Richardson."

This was the President's reply.

"Dear Elliot: It was with extreme pleasure that I received your letter announcing your decision to remain as secretary of commerce. No one has done as much against such formidable odds as you have during your first week as a Cabinet officer. Your country owes you a debt of gratitude for the great service you have performed in one of the most difficult roles any American has been asked to undertake. Without you, the Commerce Department would have been a shambles.

"What I have admired about you, Elliot, is that you have always been a team player; and the last seven days have proved that once I give you the ball, you can run with it.

"Please accept all my good wishes for the future, and, in behalf of Betty and myself, the best of luck wherever your travels as secretary of commerce may take you.

Sincerely,
Gerald Ford
President of the United States"

Scout Gets Eagle Award

Larry Bordeaux, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bordeaux of Greenville, was presented his Eagle Scout Award on Sunday at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

LARRY BORDEAUX

Larry, who has been a member of Troop 30 sponsored by Jarvis Memorial for four years, has served as a patrol leader for several years and during his association with the troop has maintained perfect attendance on troop camping trips.

He attended the National Scout Jamboree at Moraine State Park in Pennsylvania in 1973 with other members of Troop 30.

In qualifying for his Eagle Award, Larry earned a total of 24 merit badges and participated in helping to organize the 1975 Diabetes Bike-a-thon.

The Eagle Scout, a ninth grader at E. B. Aycock, is a member of the Order of the Arrow and has earned the God and Country Award.

Taking part in the ceremonies Sunday were the Rev. Jim Bailey, Scout Master Gerald Crane, and Pitt Scout Executive Ken Davis.

Donate Hospital To Aid Victims

UNION, S.C. (AP)—A 200-bed portable hospital has been donated by the Union Disaster Preparedness Agency to aid earthquake-stricken Guatemala.

The Union agency is one of two in the state requested by the South Carolina Health Department to send emergency units to the disaster area.

According to Lucille Meador, assistant director of the Union agency, the 12-ton package includes 8,000 pieces of equipment with a complete operating room and emergency generator.

Hope For An Uncrowded Future Seen

By JOSEPH GALLOWAY
SINGAPORE (UPI) — A walk through the stinking Calcutta slums that millions call home can graphically illustrate where a world without population control is headed.

But buried in those same slums, Russell Peterson says, is evidence that an overcrowded world is not inevitable.

Peterson, chairman of the United States Council on Environmental Quality, has just completed a tour of India, Bangladesh, Thailand and Indonesia.

Peterson said expert studies previously indicated that birth control programs would not work for the poor illiterate masses in underdeveloped nations until economic and educational growth were underway.

"I think there are now enough statistics to show that if poor illiterate people have access to the knowledge and the means to limit their family size they will do so," Peterson said.

The former Delaware Governor and research chemist told UPI, "I went to a bustee (slum) in Calcutta which I was told — and from my own experience I agree — is probably the worst slum in the world."

In that slum in 1957 a U.S.-financed experimental birth control program was launched involving an area where 1,600 women of childbearing age lived.

"They visited every home and persuaded 900 of them to accept and use birth-control pills," Peterson said. "Five years later the program was stopped by a fund cutoff and 700 were still using the pill then."

"Women who had before had children nearly every year didn't have children for five years. After that they started having children again."

"The point I want to make is that there — in the worst living environment you can imagine — a very high percentage of the women elected to take birth control pills and persisted in taking them as long as they were available," Peterson said.

Peterson, who was a delegate to the World Population conference in Bucharest in 1974, said, "The whole flavor of that conference was that family planning had to be tied in to socio-economic improvements."

"When people have the freedom of choice and the means to fulfill it they will accept family planning and they do not have to be in any great socio-economic improvement curve."

"In fact, limiting the family size to two children is probably the best thing they can do to get on the socio-economic improvement curve," Peterson said.

"I don't think any parents anywhere want to raise children they cannot feed or children who will be mentally retarded because of malnourishment."

"That means we can solve the population problem if the leadership is committed, puts up the money and has the plan organized right down to the grassroots supplying the individual homes with contraceptive means."

He added that he found urgent new commitments to family planning by the leaders of India, Bangladesh and especially Indonesia.

"In the past some countries have put out a flurry of activity in some areas and then they quit or stock the contraceptives elsewhere and expect the mothers to ride a bullock cart or walk 10 or 15 miles to collect their supplies," Peterson said.

"In this part of the world where population growth has been particularly high even if you could work a miracle — getting every family beginning tomorrow morning to limit its size to two children — you are still going to have a doubling of the population."

"But the encouraging thing is that all these countries are taking a strong position now, including India, to demonstrate that their actions are in tune with their expressed programs."

He praised the Indonesian family planning program in particular — citing the island of Bali where a village-based program has resulted in over 33 per cent of Balinese women of childbearing age being fitted with IUD contraceptive devices.

Peterson said the program in Bali began when the average woman was giving birth to six children during her lifetime — and this has now been reduced to fewer than four births.

"They are optimistic and believe they can get this down to the replacement level of fertility by 1985 which means that each new mother would have fewer than two children."

Peterson said, however, that throughout the world population would increase markedly even after a two-child family level was reached.

He said in the United States, where the fertility rate is now well below the replacement level, the population was still growing because the many children born earlier were now reaching child-bearing age.

He said the U.S. population, now 215 million, should peak at 260 million early next century.

Early License Plates Varied

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Automobile license plates look pretty much alike all across U.S. these days, but it wasn't always so. In the early days each state came up with its own solution to the problem of license plates.

California, for instance, once attached shiny brass numbers to a steel plate. In Illinois, says the National Automobile Club, the numbers were literally cut out of the front license plate to allow a flow of air to the radiators. Also in Illinois, the plates were fashioned out of compressed paper made from soybeans.

Solar Heater For The Coffee

HONOLULU (AP) — A solar water heater was used to heat coffee for visitors at the groundbreaking ceremony for the Hawaiian Energy House, a University of Hawaii at Manoa Department of Architecture experimental dwelling.

Designed to use the sun and wind for more than 75 per cent of its power needs, the house is being built to take advantage of maximum natural ventilation and light while meeting the need for lower cost housing. Solar collectors, installed on the roof, will heat water. A wind generator outside the house will provide some of the electricity.

Massachusetts Can See A Day Of Reckoning

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts must borrow more than $1 billion by the end of the year. At the moment, nobody is willing to lend it.

The amount is more than any other state except New York must borrow in so short a time. So far, the commonwealth has avoided defaulting on its obligations through bookkeeping maneuvers which have only postponed the day of reckoning.

Actually there are eight days of reckoning in 1976. The first is March 11, when the next obligations, $221 million worth, must be either paid or renewed.

A high-powered advisory group attached to the new Office of Debt Management is trying to come up with measures that will preserve the state's credit and restore investors' confidence in Massachusetts' bonds and notes.

The bookkeeping maneuvers began in December when Treasurer Robert Q. Crane bought $65 million of 11-month notes — I.O.U.s sold in anticipation of revenues from the sale of bonds — of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority after the authority found it could sell only $25 million to the public. The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency — MHFA — and local housing authorities, which like the treasurer temporarily had extra cash on hand, also bought $20 million of the MBTA's notes.

In early January the MHFA found it could sell none of the $59.5 million in its own notes. In a complicated transaction, it swapped them for an equal amount of MBTA notes from the treasury. Those MHFA notes are due in March.

Such maneuvers are only temporary, for the treasurer and others need their own cash to pay bills in the course of the year.

"The only other way we could do it again is if we have a surplus which we don't anticipate or liquidate our investments," said Deputy Treasurer Patrick Sullivan.

"The market is frightened of Massachusetts," commented the head of the Boston office of a major investment banking firm.

"Notes are under particular scrutiny because New York City bonds were paid off," said the chief municipal bond trader of a large Wall Street brokerage and investment banking house.

His point was that New York City notes, unlike its bonds, were not paid off. Their holders recently had to accept either a three-year wait for the return of their principal, or conversion of their notes into 10-year bonds. Seventy per cent chose to wait.

Neither financier was willing to be identified by name or firm.

"You have to develop some credibility," the New Yorker said, noting the credibility problems of his own city administration.

He even speculated that the shock of a well-publicized renunciation of a major social program might be needed before note buyers — usually corporations and banks attracted by the tax-free interest — would take Massachusetts issues again.

The state's big banks say privately they hold so much Massachusetts debt they can't buy any more, especially after bad years such as 1975 with its falling profits and even losses for some banks. The state sold $540 million in notes in the first five months of the fiscal year, which began last July 1.

By coincidence, New York State will attempt to raise as much as $500 million to renew its own notes at about the same time as Massachusetts has to raise money. The New York trader said the two states will be tied together psychologically "and a lot depends on what happens to New York."

"You have to develop credibility," he said, echoing the Boston man who said: "No more shooting from the hip."

Developing credibility — or a credible plan for borrowing — is the task of the Advisory Committee on Debt Management.

Committee members have agreed not to talk to reporters. James Bailey, head of the new Office of Debt Management, declined to discuss what may be in the committee's plan, which he hopes to have ready soon.

But published reports and interviews with others give some idea of the ideas being tossed around.

A key part of any plan, financial and state government sources agree, will be the offering of long-term bonds to replace $136 million in notes of city and town housing authorities handled by the Department of Community Affairs. They are due in March.

One source said plans called for bonds to replace all the notes. But the bond market probably would be reluctant to take so much at once, the New York and Boston financiers agreed.

American Image Darkened By Grain Scandal

By EDWARD A. FULTON
DALLAS (UPI) — Five years of proven corruption in a major export industry — food — has blackened the good name of the American grain trade abroad.

The extent of the theft, bribery and fraud on mainly Gulf port waterfronts is still not known. New instances of faked documents resulting in shipments reaching other countries mislabeled, underweighed and infested with insects continue to come to light.

U.S. Department of Agriculture investigation reports and a growing file in the office of U. S. Attorney Gerald J. Gallinghouse in New Orleans point to wrongdoing and irregularities in the export grain business amounting to the largest agricultural scandal in decades.

Donald E. Wilkinson, administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Service, told a Kansas audience in January, "The integrity of our entire (grain) marketing system most regrettably is now questioned."

Agriculture Undersecretary John A. Knebel, appointed by Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to clean up the industry, says U. S. credibility as a supplier of high quality grain has been damaged.

Twenty-five per cent of the U. S. grain crop is exported. The nearly $22 billion in agricultural exports in 1975 was a chief factor in the year's $12 billion U. S. trade surplus.

Despite the volume and despite the political importance of grain sold to the Soviet Union, the USDA in Washington reports 26 countries — including Russia — have officially complained of U. S. grain purchases over the past four years.

American wheat, corn, soybeans, sorghum, oats, barley, rye, flaxwheat and mixed grains reached them, they said, contaminated with bugs and dirt or with tons of grain missing or misgraded.

For years there were rumors of bribery, shortweighting of grain loads and theft of grain by the bargeload in New Orleans and Houston.

Then last summer a federal grand jury in New Orleans indicted 10 grain dealers and federal inspectors, and the public learned the industry was under investigation.

Slowly the scope of the scandal became known. More investigators were called in. Agents of the USDA, FBI, General Accounting Office, Justice Department and IRS fanned out from New Orleans to Brownsville, Tex., looking for violations of the U.S. Grain Standards act, the half-century old law passed to create foreign confidence in U.S. grain.

At last count, federal prosecutors had won 55 indictments and 48 convictions against alleged grain swindlers.

It is apparent, according to even the most circumspect representative of the investigating agencies, that those indictments were only the first quarry from a larger hunt.

Gallinghouse, the U.S. attorney in New Orleans coordinating the investigations, told UPI:

"It's a massive, awesome undertaking going back five years. We have an active investigation. We would reasonably expect some (more) significant cases to develop."

The investigations have proceeded quietly — and thus with minimal publicity — and investigators avoid publicity.

Harry Harston, a USDA investigator, told a UPI reporter at the Corpus Christi, Tex., Grain Exchange:

"We are here. I'd be lying if I said we weren't here to look at some records."

Gallinghouse said the first violations might never have been exposed but for an accidentally overheard conversation on one of the one million boxcars, barges or trucks or 6,000 ocean vessels that carry U.S. grain.

"We had no idea of the magnitude of this thing," he said. "We were looking for pilferage. We had no idea they were taking the whole barge."

He said the break came by accident in March, 1974, aboard the grain ship Achilles while docked in New Orleans, the world's largest grain shipping port.

A marine surveyor told investigators he overheard the captain tell a boarding agent of a ship inspector who had demanded money in exchange for a certificate to clear the ship for loading grain.

The report led to a five-month grand jury investigation and resulted in the first string of indictments against six ship inspectors licensed by the USDA. They pleaded no contest and, in hopes of lighter sentences, offered information on a pervasive pattern of bribes, falsification of documents and wholesale grain thefts.

Federal authorities decided to enlarge the investigation.

Some indictments were larger than others:

— The giant Bunge Corp. of New York and 13 employees were charged with loading less grain on ships than was purchased. The company pleaded no contest. Eleven employees received terms of from 2-3 years in prison, most of which was probated. Bunge vice president Clayton E. Wilcox, 49, of Chicago pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and agreed to cooperate with investigators in return for dismissal of the felony counts.

— Four federally licensed inspectors and weighers, a barge company dispatcher and a tugboat captain and deckhand were charged with stealing 150,000 bushels of soybeans worth $500,000.

— The three owners of Le Trac Land, Inc., were charged with selling $63,000 worth of nonexistent soybeans to a grain company in Illinois.

— Five inspectors working for Houston Merchants Exchange were charged with accepting bribes totaling $5,350 from Victor Diaz, a ship's captain working for Maritime Overseas Corp. of New York to certify his ships clean and free of insects.

Gallinghouse said the system of bribery — $100 to $5,000 for clearing a ship for loading — was so accepted they were paid automatically. In other cases, inspectors allowed the same grain to be sold over and over. At times, inferior grain was exported as a high quality grain.

"We wondered why the companies were not hiring their own private investigators to look into the grain losses until we realized that in most cases they were the prime beneficiaries," Gallinghouse said.

"Nobody was coming forth as a victim. The fraud was so pervasive it was tolerated. No one was unhappy. Everyone seemed comfortable with the system as long as their losses were passed on to someone else."

The someone else were the foreign buyers of U. S. grain who lodged hundreds of complaints with the USDA.

The inspection system designed to police the industry involves the uniquely American practice of using private inspectors rather than government officials.

An example of the process takes place at Goodpasture Inc., one of the five grain elevators at the Port of Houston, the nation's third largest.

Arriving grain is tested on assemblyline fashion for moisture, chaff and dirt, insects and quality. It is graded for quality on a scale from one to five.

The grain is then either stored in huge bins according to grade or loaded into 120-pound bags destined for ports, where ships are unloaded by hand.

Inspectors are on hand as ships are loaded, keeping a running quality check on the grade mix going into the holds.

Buying off inspectors to subvert the process lies at the heart of corruption in the industry.

The one solution the inspection industry fears most is a government takeover, a "nationalization" of their trade.

It is not an unfounded fear.

Tom Baize, staff consultant for the House Subcommittee on Livestock and Grain, one body looking into grain inspection reform, said:

"One opinion is that the federal government should merely increase its oversight and surveillance of private-state grain inspection. The other opinion, the opposite, is that the federal government should take over all the grain inspection with civil service employees.

"The feeling is that the law must be tightened up to give some credibility to our grain for the importers, so the importers would be more assured that what they are getting is what they bought."

Congress has shown itself confused on the subject.

In early December, the House Agriculture Committee supported a federal takeover of inspection. A few weeks later Rep. William Wampler, R-Va., led a move toward continued private inspection with a strong conflict of interest provision and authority for the federal government to make emergency inspections anywhere, anytime.

Then early this month, the committee toured the Port of

New Orleans where Gallinghouse scored heavily with claims the industry has not tried to reform itself.

Then the congressmen — including Wampler — announced they favored a federal takeover of inspection.

Inspectors are on hand as ships are loaded, keeping a running quality check on the grade mix going into the holds.

Buying off inspectors to subvert the process lies at the heart of corruption in the industry.

The one solution the inspection industry fears most is a government takeover, a "nationalization" of their trade.

It is not an unfounded fear.

Tom Baize, staff consultant for the House Subcommittee on Livestock and Grain, one body looking into grain inspection reform, said:

"One opinion is that the federal government should merely increase its oversight and surveillance of private-state grain inspection. The other opinion, the opposite, is that the federal government should take over all the grain inspection with civil service employees.

"The feeling is that the law must be tightened up to give some credibility to our grain for the importers, so the importers would be more assured that what they are getting is what they bought."

Congress has shown itself confused on the subject.

In early December, the House Agriculture Committee supported a federal takeover of inspection. A few weeks later Rep. William Wampler, R-Va., led a move toward continued private inspection with a strong conflict of interest provision and authority for the federal government to make emergency inspections anywhere, anytime.

Then early this month, the committee toured the Port of

Harrises Brand Patty's Version As 'Total Lies'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris say Patricia Hearst's testimony that she was coerced into joining the SLA and taking part in a bank robbery are "lies, total lies."

"We would imagine this kind of thing from her family," Emily Harris said in a tape recorded statement Tuesday. "We certainly would imagine this kind of thing from her lawyers."

"But we never imagined that she herself would get up on the stand and say that she'd been beaten, tortured and sexually assaulted because it's nothing but a series of lies. She was never harmed in any way."

Miss Hearst had testified that the Harrises were among her tormentors and that William Harris gave her black eyes on at least four occasions.

The Harrises, awaiting trial here on charges of robbery and kidnaping, were allowed by Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler to make the response to the testimony Miss Hearst made in her San Francisco trial. The tape recording was later played for newsmen by Leonard Weinglass, Emily Harris' attorney.

Brandler is hearing testimony on a defense motion to suppress evidence in the Harris' case on grounds it resulted from an illegal search and seizure. The hearing was scheduled to continue today.

Miss Hearst and the Harrises all were indicted on the robbery and kidnap charges stemming from a series of incidents here in May 1974.

Mrs. Harris said Miss Hearst was "never forced to do anything against her will after she said that she had joined the SLA."

"I think this is only obvious from the fact that she did not live with Bill or myself."

ElectriCities Protest Step

WASHINGTON (AP)—North Carolina municipal electric systems have protested to the Federal Power Commission a proposed new wholesale fuel clause, saying it is "an effort to evade the Federal Power Act" and would be "an unwarranted rate increase."

ElectriCities of North Carolina represented the municipalities in a petition filed with the FPC. It urged the federal agency to reject CP&L's proposed fuel clause and asked that a proper fuel clause be installed.

In a filing Jan. 15, the power company asked that the fuel clause be effective Jan. 1.

The ElectriCities petition said CP&L made "an unwarranted adjustment" in the proposed fuel clause which "results in a rate increase the company claims is $180,000 during 1976."

ElectriCities also told FPC the power company had begun billing the cities under the new fuel clause even though the FPC has not approved it. The agency said the power company had already added an adjustment to some cities' bills, which, if continued, would mean an increase of another $140,000 on service since late last year.

"This represents an effort to evade the retroactive rate prohibiting of the Federal Power Act," ElectriCities said.

Marshall Lancaster, ElectriCities executive director, said the its counsel is considering whether the municipal systems should withhold payment to CP&L of the portion of their bills which is retroactive.

Judges Take Uncle Sam To Court For Pay Raises

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-four of the nation's federal judges, complaining that they're being cheated by inflation, are taking Uncle Sam to court to get fatter paychecks. Those in the unusual reversal of roles from judge to plaintiff include Oliver J. Carter, currently presiding over the trial of Patricia Hearst in San Francisco. The suit was readied for filing today in the U.S. Court of Claims. A statement by the judges mentions that no judge of that court "is included as a plaintiff in the lawsuit" though any decision in favor of the plaintiffs presumably would favor all federal judges.

The judges base their suit, naming the United States as defendant, on a constitutional provision that pay for the lifetime-appointed judges "shall not be diminished."

They say that compensation "in its constitutional context does not mean salary but purchasing power." For their lawyer, the judges chose former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg.

Even before the suit was filed, some judges in different parts of the country distributed a "my dear editor" letter along with the petition and a separate statement. The letter said "we have been unfairly singled out and discriminated against."

The suit asks that the government reimburse the judges for a 34.5 per cent decrease in the value of their pay dollar in the period from March 15, 1969, to Oct. 1, 1975. During that period, federal district judges earned $40,000 a year and appeals court judges $42,500.

They claim that inflation reduced their spending power to about $26,200 a year for district judges and $27,800 for the appeals judges.

Temporarily Bars Lawyer-Advertising

RALEIGH (AP)—Superior Court Judge Henry McKinnon has issued a temporary order forbidding a Charlotte attorney from advertising his services in a newspaper in violation of the Code of Ethics of the N.C. State Bar.

McKinnon set a hearing for Feb. 20 in the case the State Bar brought against Ronald Williams, who last week began placing ads soliciting divorce cases in the Charlotte Observer.

The bar also said it would refer Williams' advertising to the bar Grievance Committee for possible initiation of disciplinary action.

The Code of Ethics prohibits any solicitation of business by a lawyer. It has the force of law in North Carolina.

The classified ad read "Uncontested DIVORCES; $100 plus $18 court costs. Contested property settlement, custody or support extra. Ron Williams, attorney-at-law, Appointment 9-9 Mon.,

Fri, Call before 5." It also gave Williams' telephone number.

In an interview Tuesday, Bar Secretary Bobby E. James said the advertisements by Williams were the first ever called to the organization's attention.

The bar is the disciplinary and licensing agency for lawyers in the state.

The bar told McKinnon advertising by Williams "adversely reflects on his fitness to practice law" and prejudices the administration of justice "as well as being illegal and improper."

Williams wrote a fellow lawyer, George Miller of Charlotte he believes the ban on advertising was a restraint of trade.

PTA MEETING
The PTA of South Greenville Elementary School will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. A program will be presented by the school's Physical Education Department.

An 'Exception' For Paraplegic

MIAMI (AP) — "It's about time something went right," legless paraplegic Jack Reese said after county commissioners voted to overlook zoning laws and let him continue to operate a produce stand.

The Thomasville, Ga., native is trying to be self-sufficient despite being paralyzed from the chest down.

He had his neck and back broken and his legs amputated in 1970 after his tractor-trailer catapulted off Interstate 95 near Fayetteville, N.C., and slammed into a freight train.

"He wants to work," Jerry Gorman told the commission Tuesday. "We have too few people today who want to work, who are willing to keep on trying. That's the thing — Jack Reese is trying."

vegetables from a panel truck last month. Impressed, Gorman offered to help Reese build a fruit stand next to his store.

But a building inspector ordered work on the half-completed stand stopped a week ago because they lacked a building permit. The two were told it would be April before they could get a hearing for a zoning variance that would let them complete the stand.

Gorman, reasoning that Reese would be on welfare by then, decided to appeal to the county commission.

Commissioner Sidney Levin, backing the request, told other commissioners, "Let's allow this man to make a living while the bureaucratic process goes on."

The ruling allows Reese, who gets around in a wheelchair, to continue his business until a zoning variance is approved or denied.

Fugitives Seek Haven In Strange Locations

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sgt. Richard T. Marks and the rest of the Baltimore Police Department's Escape and Apprehension Unit have probably seen the insides of more sofa beds than they'd care to count.

"We had one get away from us once," said Marks, head of the unit. "We heard later that while we were turning up the house, he was right there, folded up somehow inside the sofa. Now we always check."

The unit has just one job: To find and arrest the worst of the bad guys, escapers and people wanted for robbery and murder.

To carry out the task, the escape squad members have developed long memories, remembering what a suspect looks like, where he lives, who his friends are, things about his lifestyle.

"We find that most escapers have recognizable patterns," said Officer Leo Smith, a unit member. "Just like you and me, they do a lot of things exactly the same way every day without even thinking about it. Once we get that pattern, we've got them."

Through October, the unit had chalked up 319 arrests in 1975, including 204 escapers from Maryland jails and prisons. None of those arrested was injured and during the unit's four-year history only one suspect has been shot, quite a record considering the type of criminal the squad deals with.

"It is exclusively felons," Marks said. "We serve outstanding warrants for homicide and robbery, and escaping is also a felony. Some of these guys have got to figure they have nothing to lose."

The escape squad is generally considered the most dangerous job on the police force. And because of the danger, Marks explained, the unit takes special steps when making an arrest.

For example, seven men make up each arrest team. They have constant backup help from uniformed officers and carry enough weapons to start a small war.

"We don't take chances and we don't make mistakes. We can't afford to," the sergeant said.

Finding a suspect, or a "turn-up" as it's called, looks a lot like it does in the movies. Police quietly surround the house, turn on spotlights and invite the suspect to give himself up. If the suspect declines, the unit moves in.

"That's the hairy part,"

Marks said. "You never know what you will walk into."

Unit members search a house in pairs — one looking, the other covering him with a shotgun. "It's a deliberate show of force," Marks said. "We do our best to convince them there is no way they can fight. I guess we manage to do that."

Most of the suspects, he said, choose hiding over fighting. Fugitives have been found in chimneys, refrigerators, kitchen cabinets and air ducts, as well as the sofa bed the unit can't forget, Marks said.

Most, however, just hide in closets or under beds. Some pledge not to be taken alive, but Marks said virtually all surrender when they hear, "All right, killer, come out with your hands up."

VETERAN SURVIVOR—Christie Leivermann, 24, a nurse in Guatemala to set up an orphanage, is shown at home in Mendota Heights, Minn., in April 1975. Miss Leivermann has narrowly avoided serious injury in three separate incidents. In 1975 she was in the giant C5A jet that crashed near Saigon with a load of refugee children. She also survived the initial shock of the recent Guatemalan earthquake, and then again when an aftershock collapsed the hospital in which she was working. (AP Wirephoto)

New Test Of Marijuana Intoxication

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Scientists at University of California have developed a test to accurately determine the intoxication levels of marijuana users, and narcotics officers indicate it is badly needed.

A new state law, effective Jan. 1, made possession of an ounce or less of marijuana a misdemeanor instead of a felony. Citations, much like traffic tickets, are issued.

Driving under the influence of marijuana is a felony, but there are no standards at present to determine levels of impairment as is done when alcohol abuse is suspected.

Dr. James R. Soares, a research anatomist at UCLA, said the test for marijuana is just as accurate as the breathalyzer, blood or urine tests given for alcohol.

The test, called "radioimmuno assay," determines the amount of the intoxicating ingredient of marijuana, Tetrahydrocannabinol, called THC. It also can determine how long it had been since it entered the blood, Soares said.

At present there is no way to prove in a court of law use of marijuana impairment by a driver after a short time has passed unless suspects have a residue in the mouth or are in possession of marijuana, a narcotics officer said.

"If someone throws away the evidence, we can't prove it in court," Peter Barnard, watch commander of Administrative Narcotics Division, said.

"A marijuana user could kill someone with a car and there's a possibility we wouldn't be able to prove marijuana use in court."

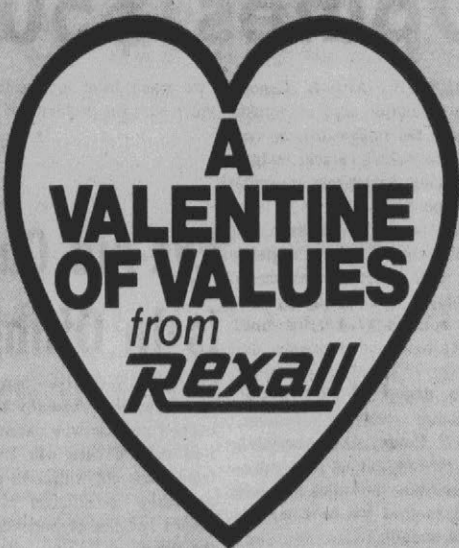

A test developed by the federal government in 1971 can prove use within two hours by swabbing the mouth for residue, Barnard said. It was developed for military investigators.

A spokesman for the Criminal Justice Department said a state law would be needed to make the test admissible in court.

"It might be possible to use it now," Larry Briskin, legislative analyst, said. "But it could be challenged until its accuracy was determined. It could show what the level of THC in the blood is, but it would seem a stronger case if we had a presumption of intoxication as in the blood alcohol tests."

Impairment by alcohol is presumed if there is .10 per cent alcohol by volume in the blood.

Dr. Stanley J. Gross, professor of anatomy at UCLA, Soares and R.E. Schuster were the major researchers.

Opines $50 Million Can Be Cut

RALEIGH (AP)—A Lenoir County senator says he thinks at least $50 million can be cut from the state's current budget by digging deeper into unnecessary spending.
 Sen. Harold W. Hardison, D-Lenoir, one of several legislators interviewed by telephone Tuesday, said, "Everybody likes a nice guy, but we must be realistic and eliminate unnecessary spending where it can be done."
 Another veteran senator, John T. Henley, D-Cumberland, said, "We've got to face reality and bite the bullet. The law requires that we have a balanced budget."
 Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt and House Speaker James C. Green have summoned the Appropriations Conference Committee to come to Raleigh Monday prepared "to study all possible options" for reducing state expenditures.
 A gloomy revenue picture was given recently to the joint Committee on the Economy. Members were told that a revenue shortfall of about $71 million is expected at the end of this fiscal year June 30. Reversions or unspent funds of that amount will be needed to avoid a deficit.
 The committee also was told that the budget for next fiscal year may fall short by $42.5 million.
 By making budget reductions this fiscal year, Hardison said,

Eye-Aid Cut Is In Offing

RALEIGH (AP) — Some of North Carolina's visually handicapped persons who cannot afford private care will be cut from state aid within 10 days, according to officials of the state's Division of Services for the Blind.
 While officials have declined to estimate the number of people who will be affected, they say the move is aimed at keeping the division within its reduced budget.
 More than 43,000 persons depended on the agency last year for such services as glasses, medication and cataract surgery.
 Officials said that while the numbers were growing during the first six months of this fiscal year, the budget was cut by $330,000.
 The cutback will affect first those adults nearest the maximum allowable annual income, setting a new limit of $1,700 from the current $1,800.
 The cutback will affect only adults for the time being, a spokesman said. It was indicated that the curtailment might affect children by July 1.
 Just last Saturday, Dr. W. B. Walters, division director, said the budget deficit could force the agency to stop servicing all but emergency cases by March 1.

Teachers and State Employees

He added, "We first have to get this year's budget balanced and see if necessary funds can be obtained for the budget next fiscal year."
 "There is a feeling among a lot of people that we have too many employees in state government," said Scott. "But that's hard to pinpoint. I keep hearing that they are adding on new folks."
 Hardison, Henley and Rep. Henry Frye, D-Guilford, said they think state teachers and

Employes should be given a pay raise if funds can be found to provide it.

Henley said he feels that department and agency heads "have as much responsibility as he legislators" to see that savings can be made this fiscal year. "We should ask them first where cuts can be made."
 Rep. Thomas J. Baker, D-Duplin, said he had gotten the impression from other members of the economy committee that considerable savings can be made by tightening down on spending.

Mistaken Ban Said To Induce Unwanted Abortions

Italian Pressure Mounts For Probe Of Lockheed Scandal

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Rome's biggest newspaper joined the Italian Communist party today in demanding an official investigation of reports of payoffs by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency to Italian politicians.

The Communist party, which ran a close second to the Christian Democrats in elections last June, asked the president of the lower house of parliament to call a special session of the foreign relations commission "to probe the Lockheed affair ... and the inadmissible interference of the CIA."

A front-page editorial in Il Messaggero, Rome's biggest newspaper, cited investigations ordered in The Netherlands and Japan of alleged Lockheed payoffs there to get aircraft orders, "but from us? It's all silence."

"To remain silent or to pretend to knowing nothing is not only grotesque but, for the majority of citizens, it's immoral."

The new Lockheed scandal fell heavily on Premier-designate Aldo Moro, who was trying to put together another minority cabinet made up of Christian Democrats only. The political world and the public waited to see whether he would retain the interior minister in his last government, Luigi Gui, who two newspapers said was paid Lockheed money while he was defense minister in an earlier government.

Gui denied the accusation and filed a statement with the state prosecutor asking him to conduct an investigation.

Another former defense minister linked by the Italian press to Lockheed payoffs was Mario Tanassi, the secretary-general of the Democratic Socialist party. He said the allegation was "completely false" and threatened to sue the papers for libel.

A 1970 Lockheed memorandum released in Washington last week by a U.S. Senate subcommittee said the aircraft manufacturer paid $1.6 million to promote the sale of 14 C130 cargo planes to Italy. The memorandum did not contain any names.

The Italian left is also making hay with the earlier report from Washington that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the CIA earmarked $6 million for anti-Communist parties and politicians in Italy in an effort to reduce Communist election gains. One source in Washington said the money was to go to Christian Democrats and Democratic Socialists.

Both parties have denied receiving any CIA funds, and the Italian government has asked the U.S. government for an explanation of the report. But no Italian investigation has begun.

The safety commission urged pregnant women to contact their doctors or genetic specialists immediately after it announced the ban on the products.

But Robert M. Hehir, director of biomedical science for the commission, said the agency did not encourage any woman to have an abortion.

"It's very clear that the commission never advocated abortion," he said in an interview. "Clinical abortion was not exactly the thing that anyone should go out and do."

Apparently, the commission ban and public statements urging pregnant women to see their doctors worked, according to Hook's study.

"Many people just had the phones ringing off their desks," he said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "Others didn't have that reaction."

The 182 centers and specialists responding to Hook's survey reported at least 1,100 inquiries after the 1973 decision. More than 1,200 workdays were reported expended on processing the inquiries and the examinations and tests that followed on pregnant women. Three of the centers said eight women chose to have abortions because of their concern over exposure to spray adhesives, even though they had not had genetic tests to determine if there was damage.

Another 340 women reportedly had genetic tests, the study said. One center reported a ninth abortion involving a woman whose test showed possible genetic damage. There was no evidence the reported damage — which may itself have been caused by contamination of the test — was linked to spray adhesives, the study said.

"These data are the minimum estimates of the impact of this issue," Hook wrote in this week's issue of Science magazine.

The figures do not include women who consulted family doctors or obstetricians but not a genetic specialist.

Ratings Provide Cheer For ABC

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The faint huzzah heard on Sixth Avenue this week has been identified as coming from ABC's emporium. It seems they've done quite well in the Nielsen ratings with their prime time Olympics shows.

ABC, in past years the No. 3 network in the Nielsens, came out No. 1 last week for the fourth consecutive week, thanks to top ratings it got for four nights of Olympic games telecasts.

The Nielsen figures show the telecasts beat the competition on Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday nights, and tied a CBS movie, "The Getaway," for top ratings on Friday night.

The only ratings bummer for ABC's Olympics coverage was on Saturday night, when it came out third in its time period against an NBC movie and CBS' "Mary Tyler Moore," "Bob Newhart" and "Carol Burnett" shows.

It only was seen in about 11 million homes, compared with the peak night, Thursday, when ABC's taped Olympics package was seen in nearly 17.5 million homes, according to Nielsen estimates.

Over-all, the network's Olympics broadcasts from last Wednesday through Sunday nights were seen in an average of more than 15.6 million homes each night.

If this keeps up for the remaining five nights of Olympic telecasts, it might give ABC enough impetus to seriously challenge CBS for that network's 20-season title as No. 1 in the ratings.

According to Nielsen averages from the start of the season to Feb. 8, ABC already has moved into the No. 2 slot, leading NBC by a slight margin. It remains to be seen if this will continue.

But right now, this season, denounced as the worst ever by many critics, is proving the best in many moons for ABC.

City Counts 2 Accidents

An estimated $2,750 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 6:45 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 300 feet West of the Red Banks Road intersection involving cars driven by Teresa Knox of 26 Carriage House Apts. and Nancy Lou Buck of Route 1, Winterville.

Police, who reported Miss Buck was injured in the collision, estimated damage at $900 to the Knox car and $1,200 to the Buck auto.

No charges were reported.

Cars driven by Lillian Cox Singleton of Ayden and Thomas Wesley Dail of 1704 Rosewood Dr. collided about 11:05 a.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Reade Streets, according to investigators.

Officers, who made no charges, estimated damage at $475 to the Singleton car and $175 to the Dail auto.

ABC's victory in the Nielsen charts last week was due not only to its Olympics telecasts but also to the fact that eight of its entertainment shows were among the nation's 20 most-popular programs.

The week's highest-rated program was a special showing of a "Six Million Dollar Man" by ABC on Wednesday night, just before the network's coverage of the opening ceremonies at the Olympics.

The series also got top ratings in its regular Sunday slot. Of three new NBC series premiering last week, only "City of Angels" proved a hit. Rich Little's variety show had only a 27 per cent share of the audience, and "Jigsaw John" was 52nd in the ratings.

The top shows in the Nielsen findings last week were "Six Million Dollar Man" (ABC); "All in the Family" (CBS); "City of Angels" (NBC); "Laverne and Shirley" and "Six Million Dollar Man" (both ABC); "Police Woman" (NBC); "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Happy Days" and "Thursday Olympics" (all ABC); "Sonny and Cher" (CBS); "The Honeymooners," "Welcome Back, Kotter" and "Donny and Marie" (all ABC); "The Waltons" (CBS); "Sanford and Son" (NBC); "The Jeffersons" (CBS); "Sunday Olympics" and "Wednesday Olympics" (both ABC); "M-A-S-H" (CBS); and CBS' "The Getaway" and ABC's "Friday Olympics," which tied for 20th place in the ratings.

Ayden Real Estate Agency Being Sued

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An Ayden real estate agency — Tarheel Homes and Realty Co. — is facing a suit in Lenoir County Superior Court brought by more than 100 purchasers that charge the firm sold them land which it did not own.

The action was brought by Clyde Chapman of Route 2, Grifton on behalf of himself and about 100 other persons who say they purchased lots in the Urban Estates sub-division in Contentnea Neck Township of Lenoir County, from the Ayden firm.

Officers of Tarheel Homes and Realty include president M. Kenneth Chapman, vice-president Sue E. Branch and assistant secretary Mary B. Turnage.

Kinston attorney Lamar Jones who represents the plaintiffs in the case said the suit is "grounded" on the firm's "selling lots it did not own," and "accepting payments on lots after foreclosure."

He said "according to information we have, the agency took up to $100,000 from these people after it had no way of delivering these deeds. We're seeking treble damages," the attorney noted.

Tarheel Homes, the complaint alleges, developed a subdivision on property it held in 1969, and offered lots for sale on an installment basis. After a "substantial downpayment" was made, the complaint alleges, the remainder could be paid over a 36-month period at eight per cent interest.

The price of each lot ranged from $1,000 to $3,000, according to the complaint, which continued that when the purchase price was paid in full, the defendant was to convey the property, by deed, to the purchasers.

The suit alleges that in 1972, Tarheel Homes and Realty entered into an agreement with Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Kinston to pay a $95,000 debt it had incurred and in April 1975, the savings and loan group began foreclosure action against Tarheel Homes.

In December, when the foreclosure was completed, Home Federal Savings became the owner of the land the real estate agency had formerly owned.

The civil complaint alleged that during this period, the lot purchasers were "never advised that an encumbrance had been placed upon the property they contracted to purchase and for which they were making monthly payments."

The suit also alleges that by 1975, some purchasers had completed payment on their lots and demanded deeds, and, according to the complaint, "deeds were executed and delivered by the defendants even after foreclosure had been completed."

It was in December, when the savings and loan group assumed property rights to the land, that the plaintiffs discovered that the defendants no longer owned the property and "have been, since August 24, 1972, unable to convey the lots to the purchasers," the suit alleges.

The suit, calling the real estate agency "fraudulent and deceitful" and saying it "connived and schemed by fraudulent means and false representation to deceive the purchasers to pay money for land which the defendants knew they could not convey," asks that the executives of the agency be arrested and placed under a $300,000 bond, pending outcome of the case in court.

Under law, bond money posted in such a case serves as security to guarantee payment in case plaintiffs in a case receive the judgment.

Monday, the Pitt County Sheriff's Department served an order of attachment from the Lenoir County Superior Court, creating a lien on Tarheel Homes' 218 West Third St., Ayden Office, a house and lot at 500 College St., Ayden, and the firm's bank accounts at an Ayden Bank, pending a hearing on the case.

According to Jones "nobody that built a house" on lots purchased from Tarheel Homes in the Urban Estates subdivision was hurt. "Some built houses on these lots," he explained, "But these lots probably were released from the deed of trust."

He indicated, however, that some persons have placed mobile homes on lots they were purchasing from the Ayden firm.

Time Magazine Claims 'Illicit Sex' By Hargis

NEW YORK (AP)—Billy James Hargis, the fundamentalist evangelist, says "genes and chromosomes" drove him to illicit sexual relations with four of his male students and one coed, Time magazine reports.

The magazine said Hargis, married and the father of three daughters and a son, admitted his behavior in a meeting with officials of the college he founded. Several weeks later he severed ties with the Crusade for Christian Morality and the American Christian College in Tulsa, Okla., the magazine said.

Time quoted David Noebel, former vice president of the college and a Hargis aide for 12 years, as saying the sexual ac-ivities surfaced in October 1974, shortly after Hargis had performed a wedding ceremony.

On the honeymoon, Noebel said, the groom and his bride discovered they both had had sex with Hargis.

Noebel said that later three more male students told him they had had sexual relations with Hargis over a period of three years in his office, at his farm in the Ozarks and during tours with the college choir, "The All-American Kids."

Noebel was told that Hargis justified his homosexual acts by citing the Old Testament friendship between David and Jonathan, the magazine said.

Hargis, 50, has long railed against sexual sin and has spoken out as a defender of traditional virtues in a lax society. Time said that last month he mailed an appeal from the Crusade for Christian Morality, which he has rejoined, saying in part:

"Can you believe it: complete color films of sexual acts between women and men, including homosexual acts, using your children."

In Tulsa, Hargis was reportedly out of town and unavailable for comment. Craig Blackstock, an attorney who said he was authorized to speak for Hargis, said: "This attack is considered by him and us to be a legal matter. Dr. Hargis will not discuss the charges made at this time as improper publicity which could jeopardize possible future legal action to be taken by him."

Rocky Mount Adds Rampants To List

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
For a while, it looked like Buck Williams might beat Rose High School last night in a basketball game.

Turned out that he needed a little help, however. His teammates chipped in enough for the Gryphons of Rocky Mount to take a 68-53 win.

Williams tossed in 27 points, and at one point in the third period, he had more points than did the Rampants. With 5:54 left in that frame, Rose had just 20 points—Williams had 21.

It was another night of frustration for the Rampants, who saw their 13th loss go on the books as against only two wins. The loss was the ninth in a row. Rose shot poorly most of the night. A good fourth period pulled them up to only 34.5 percent, as they made eight of 12 in that period. Going into the final frame, Rose was hitting only 26.1 percent of its shots.

In comparison, Rocky Mount shot very well. They had five less shots than did Rose, but made good on six more for 49.1 percent. For them, the fourth period was a comedown. They were hitting 57.9 percent going into that frame.

Rocky Mount also outrebounded the Rampants by a good margin, 45-35, with Williams doing most of the work. He was unofficially recorded getting 19 rebounds.

The game was not well played by either team, as 59 turnovers were recorded. Rose committed 28, Rocky Mount, 31.

Only in the opening minutes of the game were the Rampants in the running. Sidney Armstrong hit the first Rocky Mount basket, but a shot by Derek Brewington tied it up, 2-2.

Ken Bulluck followed with a steal with 6:12 left for a 4-2 lead, and Rocky Mount began to pull away. Williams was awarded his first basket on a goal-tending call, and after Rose cut it to 6-4, the Gryphons ran off six in a row, with Williams getting four to up the lead to 12-4. Rose got one more basket before six more Rocky Mount points upped it to 18-6 with 36 seconds left. A pair of free throws by Curtis Keys cut it to 18-8 at the end of the period.

Rose hit only three of 20 shots in the period.

Rocky Mount was hot, however, hitting eight of 10 second period shots to continue to pull away. The Gryphons hit the first six points of the frame, running their lead to 24-8 before Rose finally connected. A four-point play by Williams, scoring two free throws after being undercut on a layup, upped the lead to 28-10. Then, a minute later, he tapped in another shot, and added a free throw for a 32-12 margin.

Late in the period, the margin climbed to 22 at 36-14. Rose cut it back to 38-20 at the end of the period.

Rocky Mount continued to pull away in the third period, as Williams continued to star. The margin climbed to as much as 30 just before the end of the period, 56-26. Rose got the last basket to cut it back to 28.

The Rampants, pressing in the final period, were able to put on somewhat of a comeback, trimming the lead from 28 down to the final 15-point margin.

North Lenoir Hands Upset To Chargers

NORTH LENOIR—Ayden-Grifton, involved in fifth straight hair-raiser, missed out on the chance to move into sole possession of first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference last night. Instead, the Chargers bowed to North Lenoir, 61-60.

North Lenoir swept the trio of games, gaining a 50-38 decision in the girls' contest, and a 66-50 win in the junior varsity game.

The loss was only the second of the year for the Ayden-Grifton boys. Coupled with a loss by North Pitt to Greene Central, the two remained in a tie for first in the league with 7-2 league records.

Both teams tossed in 12 points in the first period, but North Lenoir inched out in the second period to take a 33-30 halftime edge.

The Chargers fought back, outscoring the Hawks, 20-14, to move ahead, 50-47, as the last period began. North Lenoir edged back out in front, but the Chargers got it back, trailing 61-60, with 20 seconds left. They worked for the shot, and took it with eight seconds left, but missed and North Lenoir controlled the boards and ran out the clock for the win.

North Lenoir's board effort was the telling note, as they held a 30-23 rebounding edge.

Roger Jones paced the Hawk JV—North Lenoir 66, Ayden-Grifton 50.

Ayden-Grifton's girls held a 10-8 lead after one period, but North Lenoir came back to push into a 24-19 halftime lead. They boosted that to 38-30 after the third and outthit A-G, 12-8, in the final period.

Vickie Vail led North Lenoir with 18, while Denise Beacham had 12 and Beverly Faison had 10. Audrey McCarter and Cindy Potter led the Chargers with nine each.

BATH—Bear Grass High School took a pair of victories from Bath last night in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference. The boys gained a 63-53 victory, while the girls came out on top of a 32-30 decision.

Bath took the junior varsity game, 52-46, to salvage the evening.

Bath slipped onto a 7-6 lead after the first period of the girls' game, then pulled out to a 17-10 halftime lead. Bear Grass began to rally in the third period, however, 10-5, and cut the lead to 22-20. The Bears then outthit Bath, 12-8, in the final period, moving ahead and holding off a late Bath rally.

Lou Rawls led Bear Grass with 13 points, while Patricia Taylor had 10. Betsy Oden led Bath with 10.

The Bear boys rushed away to a 22-6 lead in the first quarter and rode that lead to victory. Bear Grass upped that to 38-20 at the half.

Pirates Dunk Duke Swimmers

DURHAM — The Pirate swimming team of East Carolina University stroked to another win over ACC competition here last night, downing Duke University 70-43.

The meet was the first ever for East Carolina against Duke. This was the final meet of the regular season, leaving the Pirates with a 9-2 overall record, 4-0 in the Southern Conference.

"I was very pleased," said coach Ray Scharf. "Duke swam a fine meet but our guys just swam a better one. I don't want to single anyone out because everyone on the team swam well."

"We had a few who were still sick but they were showing signs of coming back. A certain few did swim despite being rather weak."

The Pirates won 10 to 13 first places, with John McCauley and Stewart Mann each winning two events.

East Carolina will return to action in the Southern Conference Championships Feb. 19-21, at the University of Richmond. The Pirates will be defending the ten consecutive titles they have won in the conference.

This Friday afternoon at 3:30, the ECU junior varsity team will swim Calvert Hall of Maryland, and also, Walt Whitman High School of Maryland.

Bucettes Rally To Stop Elon

ELON COLLEGE—East Carolina University's women scrambled back from as far down as 24 points to pull out a 91-86 victory over Elon College last night.

The victory was the sixth straight for the Lady Pirates, who are now 6-3 on the year.

Elon jumped off to an early lead in the game, moving out by the 24-point margin during the first half. East Carolina battled back, however, and cut the margin to 48-34 by the end of the period.

In the second half, East Carolina continued to fight back against the Christians, and finally took the lead late in the game. They led by no more than five, their final margin.

"I'm real proud of our girls," Coach Katherine Bolton said afterwards. "They showed a lot of courage and determination." Rosie Thompson led the East Carolina scoring with 32 points, while Debbie Freeman, the state's leading scorer, hit 19.

The 91 points surpassed the ECU single game record, just set a few days back against UNC-Greensboro.

East Carolina travels to Rock Hill, S.C., to take part in the Winthrop Invitational Tournament this weekend. The Bucettes face the University of Georgia in the first round at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

Lou Holtz' acceptance of a professional head football job is not really all that surprising. While Holtz has been more than successful at N.C. State, most observers have seen him glancing in other directions.

Most, however, thought that he really had his eye on the head job at Ohio State when the great Sphinx (Woody Hayes) retired.

But Hayes recently said he didn't plan on retiring at 65, some two years away. Instead, he wants to stay on until he reaches 70. That could have prompted Lou to look for other nests to feather in the meanwhile.

History could be against Holtz, however. In recent years, very few men have gone from successful tenures in the college ranks and been equally successful in the pro ranks. There are exceptions, and we hope that Lou is going to be one of these.

It will be interesting to see what he brings to pro ball. Holtz likes the veer, but no one has tried it yet with the pros. He may be the first.

While much of N.C. State's recruiting is probably completed, there could be some changes in store. Some recruits, who have signed grants, but not the binding letter of intent, may begin to look elsewhere. Others may be content to wait and see, while there are a number who would go on to State regardless. Undoubtedly, some who have already signed are going to get some more visits from schools outside the ACC and Southeastern (the two have a mutual hands-off policy after the grant is signed but the field is wide open to others).

State must also move quickly to name a new coach. It is almost time for spring drills, and unless State names an "acting coach" as it did several years ago, prior to Holtz' hiring, the Wolfpack must hurry.

And one wonders if the ACC will again go to their proving ground, the Southern Conference. The field there would seem to be limited, however, since most do not have the credentials. Only Jim Brakefield of ASU and East Carolina's Pat Dye come to immediate mind, and we would hope Dye would not be looking for that move.

Another possibility might be former ECU and Virginia Coach Sonny Randle.

At any rate, action should come quickly, one way or the other. State cannot afford to have a bad year, either in recruiting or on the field. Their past successes have made their fans look for wins over almost everyone. Unless those wins continue, there will be grumbles a plenty.

It will be interesting to see what happens in Carter Stadium come September 18, when the Pirates come to town.

East Carolina, by the way, opens its spring drills on March 11, unless Coach Dye changes his current plans.

First Round Play Continues

First round play in the Adult Basketball League's second season continued last night with six games.

In the opener at South Greenville, Davis Wildcats rolled to a 70-31 win over Man's Room, building up a 32-15 halftime lead.

Larry Bradley led the Wildcats with 15 points, while Larry Worthington had 13 and William Hardison had 12. No one hit double figures for Man's Room.

Allen Dean nipped Wachovia, 53-51, in the second game. Wachovia held a 20-19 halftime lead. Donald White led Allen Dean with 20, while Frank Lgon had 14 and Charles Wynne had 12. For Wachovia, C. Ball and Johnson each had 12.

In the final game, Pitt Tech romped to a 112-85 win over the Moose, leading 51-31 at the half. A. J. Tyson led Pitt Tech with 35 points, while Danny Nelson had 34, Ronnie Taylor had 18, Harold Stevenson, 15, and Steve Wishol, 10. For the Moose, Bobby Parker had 32, James Parker had 19, and Ricky Eason and Ed Coburn, 14 each.

The first game at Elm Street saw Union Carbide take a 65-53 win over State Highway. The Highwaymen held a 28-25 lead at the half. Garland Warren led UC with 22 points, while Tommy Roach had 21. Fred Mills led the Highwaymen with 17, while Smith Worthington hit 15 and Norman Hill had 10.

Greenville Utilities downed the Henrahan Hawks, 59-56. The Hawks led at the half, 29-18, but couldn't hold on. Thomas Mullins led GUCo with 26, while James Clemons and Alton Howard each had 10. Bill Edwards, Phil Duffy and Jesse Smith each had 12 for the Hawks.

In the final game, Darryl's downed Big Value Drugs, 75-57. Darryl's led at the half, 30-28. Linwood Staton led Darryl's with 24, while George King had 16 and Bruce Bullock had 14. Mike Hooks led BVD with 18, and John Taylor added 13.

State Begins Coach Search

RALEIGH (AP)—N.C. State University has set up a committee to seek a successor to Lou Holtz as its head football coach even while officials and players expressed regret he is leaving to join the New York Jets.

Chancellor Joab L. Thomas appointed the search committee after saying he was "very disappointed" Holtz, who had compiled a 33-12-3 record in four years, was leaving State.

"Coach Holtz brought a winning tradition to North Carolina State and a sense of vitality to the football program," Thomas continued.

Thomas said he assumed the position with the Jets was a fine opportunity and "in that respect I'm happy for him." Athletic Director Willis R.

Casey said while State regretted losing Holtz, "the financial opportunity with the New York Jets was such that that he could not turn it down."

"He made a tremendous contribution to athletics in general and football in particular at North Carolina State University," Casey added.

Don Buckley, talented senior wide receiver at State, said Holtz had told him recently he would not leave N.C. State for another college coaching job.

"I gathered from that if and when he did leave State it would be for a pro job," Buckley said. "I'm happy for him though. I have no doubt that wherever he goes he'll be a success. It's really tough on the younger guys. I know because some of them came to State because of Lou Holtz."

Greene Central Surprises Panthers

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Nelson Edwards and Marvin Rouse scored 46 points between them last night to lead the Greene Central Rams to a surprising 72-64 upset win over North Pitt.

The Panthers ran into a brick wall at the GC gym in the Rams. North Pitt had been tied for the Eastern Carolina league lead with Ayden-Grifton going into the game. A-G was playing North Lenoir and had a chance to move into first place by itself but the Chargers lost and the two remain tied.

North Pitt did win two other games. The Panthers took the J.V. game, 49-45, and the North Pitt girls had to rally to take a 38-30 win over the Ewes.

The boys game was tight in the first half of the opening frame with the teams swapping buckets up to a 6-6 tie. Greene Central came out in a 2-3 zone defense and stayed with it all night and only a handful of times were the Panthers able to get inside.

Having to shoot over the zone caused the Panthers to fall behind in the second quarter but they did hit 44 percent of their shots. Greene Central was hotter, though, sinking 58 percent.

North Pitt was without the services of playmaker Jesse Harris who was out sick. And without Harris to start the play, Donnie Perkins and the other Panthers were hampered.

North Pitt was also outrebounded, 26-23, Perkins pulled down 12 and Virgil Pilgreen 10 for the Panthers while Melvin Briggs had eight for the Rams.

Both teams sank 28 field goals but Greene Central's winning margin came at the free throw line where the Rams dropped in 16 of 24 tosses while North Pitt sank only eight of 11. North Pitt committed 17 fouls, GC 13.

The Panthers rallied in the last of the first period to go ahead, 12-9, but Greene Central cut it to 14-12 at the end of the frame.

North Pitt ran its lead back to three, 18-15, on a tap by Perkins but as he tapped the ball in he also tripped the lid on the basket.

The Panthers were unable to score from the floor again for the next four minutes.

In the meantime, the Rams were beginning to roll as they scored 14 straight points catching, passing and roaring away from the Panthers, 29-19.

Perkins canned a three-point play to end the drought and the Panthers cut it down to five at 31-26 but it went to 33-26 at halftime.

Rouse hit the first two buckets of the second half giving GC a 13-point margin, 39-26. North Pitt fell further behind in the frame as Greene Central totaled 20 points to North Pitt's 16. Perkins tried to keep the Panthers in the game scoring eight and assisting on two more.

He kept trying to get the Panthers back in it in the final period as he dumped in 12 more. The Panthers cut the lead to eleven on a Perkins bucket from the lane with 2:04 left and Pilgreen added a field goal for a 69-60 difference.

But the Panther got no closer. Perkins hit at the buzzer to make the final margin eight.

Perkins had his best night scoring 34 points although it was in the Panthers' second loss of the season. Pilgreen added 10. Rouse had his best night, also, scoring 26. Edwards added 20 and Lawrence Edwards scored 10.

North Pitt's girls put together a furious rally in the final period of their game to pull out their win. Trailing 30-25 with 7:06 left, Ellen Dixon started it off with a free throw. Kathi Manning scored on a steal, Joy Forbes another free shot and Manning a jumper from outside putting North Pitt ahead for the second time, 31-30. Forbes, Dixon and Manning each sank free shots as the quarter wound down to the 1:00 mark for a 35-30 lead and three more free shots made the final score.

But the free throws had not fallen so easily earlier. Knox led Wilson with 24 points, while Tucker had 16 and Thompson had 13. Curtis Little led Aycock with 24, while Ronnie Chapman had 18 and Calvin Paige had 11.

The loss left Aycock with a 6-4 record.

Aycock won the junior varsity game, 52-44. Andre Bell led Aycock with 20 points, while Anthony Sheppard had 13. Ben Howell led Wilson with 22.

Aycock's JV is now 2-7. Aycock travels to Kinston on Friday. E. B. Aycock 12 9 20 22 2—65 Wilson 13 19 15 16 4—67

North Pitt took the initial lead on a bucket by Forbes but their lead was slim through the first period, 9-8. Theresa Whitley and Vanessa Hooker hit for the Ewes to put them ahead, 12-9 and more buckets by them and one by Marolyn Yelverton gave Green Central a 18-12 halftime lead.

North Pitt began a rally in the third period closing the gap to one at 22-21, 24-23 and 26-25 but the Pant-HERS could never squeeze ahead.

Whitley hit the last Ewe field goal with 7:41 left to play for a 28-25 lead. But North Pitt reeled off six points to go ahead and seven more to stay ahead.

WILSON — Wilson Coon Junior High School gained a 67-65 overtime victory over E. B. Aycock Junior High yesterday.

Wilson eased out to a 13-12 lead in the first period, then outthit the Jaguars, 19-9, in the second frame. Aycock rallied to cut the lead to 47-41 in the third period, then finally knotted the score at 53-53 at the end of regulation time.

But Wilson outthit Aycock, 4-3, in the overtime to pull out the win.

Knox led Wilson with 24 points, while Tucker had 16 and Thompson had 13. Curtis Little led Aycock with 24, while Ronnie Chapman had 18 and Calvin Paige had 11.

The loss left Aycock with a 6-4 record. Aycock won the junior varsity game, 52-44. Andre Bell led Aycock with 20 points, while Anthony Sheppard had 13. Ben Howell led Wilson with 22.

Aycock's JV is now 2-7. Aycock travels to Kinston on Friday. E. B. Aycock 12 9 20 22 2—65 Wilson 13 19 15 16 4—67

North Pitt meets Ayden-Grifton at A-G this Friday night in a game that could decide the eventual conference champion.

Williamston Gains Victory

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston gained a 67-61 victory over Roanoke Rapids in the Northeastern Conference last night.

Roanoke Rapids won the junior varsity preliminary, 60-53. The two schools' girls teams meet tonight in Roanoke Rapids.

Williamston raced away to a 17-8 lead in the opening period of the game and were never caught. Roanoke Rapids outscored the Tigers, 20-18 in the second period, but still trailed, 35-28, at the half.

Williamston came back with a 17-13 advantage in the third period, building its lead to 52-41. Roanoke Rapids rallied, 20-15, in the last period, but couldn't catch up. Dawyne Bell led Williamston with 20 points, while Barry Wallace had 16. Jimmy Pierce led Roanoke Rapids with a game high 26, and David Butts added 12.

Williamston travels to Washington on Friday.

JV—Roanoke Rapids 60, Williamston 53. # U.S. String Is All But Ended

By WICK TEMPLE
AP Sports Editor

INNSBRUCK (AP) — The American rush for medals came to a temporary halt despite some impressive individual performances, West German ski ace Rosi Mittermaier collected her second gold medal and Norway and Finland picked up a gold apiece today at the 12th Winter Olympics.

The U.S. team, not expected to do well on today's Olympic program, saw its string of winning at least one medal a day all but ended. The Americans were blanked through the day's first three final events with only the men's figure skating yet to be decided. The U.S. was not expected to win a medal in that competition which was scheduled for late this afternoon.

There were some bright spots, however. —The U.S. ski team placed three women—Lindy Cochran, who was a remarkable sixth, Mary Seaton who was 10th, and Cindy Nelson, 13th—in the top 13 in the slalom.

—Bill Koch, the 20-year-old Vermontor who won a surprise silver last Thursday in cross country skiing, led the U.S. to a sixth-place finish—its best ever—in the 40-kilometer (24.8-mile) ski relay.

—Dan Carroll, the veteran speed skater from St. Louis, came in sixth in the 5,000-meter race, not one of the otherwise strong U.S. skating team's better events.

Later in the day, Dorothy Hamill of Riverside, Conn., was scheduled to compete in the short program of the women's figure skating. Miss Hamill stood second in the competition which ends Friday.

With just the men's figure skating to be decided, The Soviet Union maintained first place in the medal standings with 10 golds and a total of 21 medals out of 24 events. East Germany was second with six golds and 13 total. The U.S., with its eight medals, was third over-all, but dropped to fifth in the standings on the basis of golds. West Germany and Finland have two golds apiece while the U.S. has one—courtesy of speed skater Sheila Young.

Miss Mittermaier, the personable veteran of the European ski wars, clocked 1:30.54 minutes for her two runs down the icy Patscherkofel slope. Miss Mittermaier, the current leader in World Cup standings, was timed in 46.77 seconds for her first run and 43.77 for her second.

"I concentrated just perfectly," said Miss Mittermaier, who won the downhill Sunday and can become the first woman Alpine triple winner in Olympic history with a victory in the giant slalom Friday.

She said she liked her downhill medal better "because it came as a surprise. The slalom gold was not so much of a surprise because I have won many slalom races. Nevertheless,

Olympic slalom gold is of course more than a first-place in another slalom race."

Claudia Giordani of Italy took the silver medal with a combined time of 1:30.87, and Hanny Wenzel of tiny Liechtenstein won the bronze in 1:32.20.

Miss Cochran, the 22-year-old from Richmond, Vt., whose sister, Barbara, won a gold in this event four years ago at Sapporo, surprised the experts with her stunning sixth-place finish. She flashed down the course in runs of 47.96 and 45.28 seconds for a combined 1:33.24. Miss Seaton, 19, from Hancock, Mich., got the 10th spot with runs of 49.04 and 46.83 for 1:35.87.

Miss Nelson, 20, from Lutsen, Minn., was 13th in 1:37.33 after runs of 49.52 and 47.81. Miss Nelson, bronze medalist in the downhill, almost fell on her first run.

"I made a mistake in the first part of the course and I tried to push hard to make it up," she said. "But I was coming down too fast and I nearly fell out on the icy slope. I was lucky to stay on my feet and finish the race."

The quartet of Matti Pitkanen, Juhani Mieto, Pertti Teura-jaervi and Arto Koivisto gave Finland its second gold medal of the Games, touring the 40-kilometer cross country course in two hours, seven minutes, 59.72 seconds. Norway won the silver medal in 2:09:58.36 and the Soviet Union took the bronze in 2:10:51.46.

The United States team of Koch, from Guilford, Vt., Doug Peterson of Minneapolis, Tim Caldwell of Putney, Vt., and anchorman Ron Yeager of Durango, Colo., was clocked in 2:11:41.35. The Americans actually moved into third place following a strong third leg by Koch, who earned a silver medal last Thursday in the 30-kilometer (18.6 miles) cross country event.

Rocky Mount...

(Continued From Page 15) Reggie Barrett had 12. Rose was led by Brewington with 16. Rocky Mount also won the junior varsity game, rolling to an easy 87-59 win. The Baby Gryphons built up a 19-12 lead after one period and held a 44-31 halftime margin. They ran that out to 65-45 after the third, and outthit Rose, 22-14, in the last period.

Terry McKnight led Rocky Mount with 22, while Ben Pope had 19, Vincent Gray had 14 and Greg Lucas had 10. Greg Guthrie led Rose with 18 and Anthony Bryant had 17.

MOTORIST TORTURED ON HIGHWAY

N.C. Reform School Efforts Are Dated To 1890

By DR. H. G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection
Written for the AP
CHAPEL HILL (AP) — In 1890, James P. Cook, editor of the Concord Standard, saw a 15-year-old orphan boy convicted and sentenced to three-and-a-half years on the county chain gang. The offense was the theft of $1,230.

The campaign for North Carolina's first reform school for white boys may be dated from that miscarriage of justice.

Winston-Salem Pay-TV Slated

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Pay television is to start in the Winston-Salem area April 9. Summit Cable Services, which already which already operates cable TV in the area, will install a special channel for customers who want to pay an extra monthly fee for programs of Home Box Office of New York.
Summit also will add pay TV to its system serving Thomasville and Lexington. And it plans to add it to its Statesville system, which becomes operational in late summer.

Still, it may have been an appeal to Confederate veterans in the General Assembly which provided the victory margin for an act creating the institution in 1907. The bill's sponsors wisely offered to name it the "Stonewall Jackson Manual Training and Industrial School."

There were other strange bedfellows among the supporters of the movement that Editor Cook had begun. Among them were the North Carolina branch of the King's Daughters and Sons, the North Carolina Teachers Assembly, the Farmers Alliance, the Western North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the State Board of Charities.

A survey by the state agency in 1892 showed 71 persons under 20 years of age serving time in county jails and at least 500 "subject to prison influences, either awaiting trial or undergoing sentence."

By coincidence, in 1902 during the convention of the King's Daughters in Raleigh, two boys arrived in town for committal to the State Prison. The women became so incensed that they adopted as their "united work" the passage of legislation to provide for a training school for juvenile boys.

They presented petitions to the legislatures of 1903 and 1905 and offered the state fifty acres of land in Moore County for the location of a school, plus $1,000 for a carpenter shop. The ladies were heard politely, but their petitions were quietly laid aside. There wasn't any money to be spent on "sorry boys."
Determined to be brushed off no more, the King's Daughters in 1906 submitted another petition. This one stating that "children and youths should not be sent to the penitentiary, and are not fit to attend the public schools; so the philanthropic and public-spirited men, pledged to the cause of education, should provide for them an intermediate state, where they may be prepared for a life of usefulness to their fellow-men, instead of sending them to complete a criminal education in jails, chaingangs, and the penitentiary."

Among the sponsors of the original bill were Representative E. R. Preston of Mecklenburg and Representative M. B. Stokely and Senator W. R. Odell of Cabarrus, Col. M. F. Wood of Randolph County introduced a substitute bill which eliminated several objectionable features, and it was passed with an appropriation of $10,000.

Only Two Voted With Majority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only two of North Carolina's 11 congressmen voted with the 239-154 House majority which passed a bill Tuesday designed to create or maintain 600,000 jobs. They were Reps. L. Richardson Preyer and Ike Andrews.
Voting against the bill were their fellow Democrats, Reps. Fountain, Hefner, Henderson, Jones, Neal, Rose and Taylor, and Republicans Broyhill and Martin.

side the town, and this property was deeded to the state for the location of the school.
However, the funds appropriated by the state were insufficient, and without additional money the necessary facilities could not be built.
Again the King's Daughters came to the rescue by raising,

Agenda Set

Three items are on the agenda for the Greenville Recreation Commission, which meets tonight at 8 p.m. in the office of Recreation Director Boyd Lee at Elm Street Gymnasium.
Under old business, a progress report will be given on the purchase of the Eppes School property from the Greenville City School Board.
New business items are the waiver of user fees and presentation of annual report.

with assistance of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs, the sum of $5,000. The citizens of Concord raised money for and donated most of the required furnishings and equipment to enable the school to open on January 12, 1909, with a Burlington boy as the first pupil.

The objectives of the institution were crudely but effectively described in one of its early annual reports:

"The work of the Jackson Training School is to take this lazy, worthless bunch of boys, many of them steeped in the poison of nicotine from cigarettes, untrustworthy, untruthful, still more of them ignorant, dirty and neglected, and to help them catch a vision of what they can become. Its work is to teach them to be decent in person, speech and act. To teach them to speak the truth, to be industrious, to obey God and be a man."
That was a large order for the state's first effort to provide humanitarian rehabilitation for its problem children.

Using Goats To Combat Fires

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — The National Forest Service is using domestic goats to maintain firebreaks in the brushlands of southern California's national forests. The goats are expected to provide an inexpensive and efficient way to prevent the spread of fires.
Goats were chosen, according to the National Automobile Club, because they eat brush not eaten by other livestock and because they crop it off close to the ground, clearing the areas in which they graze of the dried bushes and grass that provide fuel for fires.
To ensure that the goats clear only the areas set aside for firebreaks, they are penned at night and closely herded during the day.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Jan. 29 through Feb. 4.

NATURAL GAS—Approved, 230 for and 184 against, a parliamentary breakthrough sought by proponents of de-regulating natural gas prices. With this vote, the House accepted a rule for debating the bill of Rep. Robert Krueger (D-Tex.) to remove—upon enactment—the 22-year-old federal controls on the wellhead price of onshore natural gas moved in interstate commerce.

Most of those voting "yea" favored de-regulation and most of those voting "nay" opposed the Krueger bill. The vote was the first floor test of sentiment on the issue, and the surprisingly wide margin heartened advocates of de-regulation. Final passage of a bill lifting Federal Power Commission price controls was thus expected within a few days. The Senate has already passed a de-regulation measure.

Supporters favored calling the Krueger bill to the floor and thus circumventing the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, whose Democratic majority had gone slow on reporting de-regulation measures to the floor. The committee leaders were "frustrating the chance for the House to work its will" and de-regulate gas prices, said Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R-Ohio).

Opponents of the rule argued that the Rules Committee, biased in favor of de-regulation, had wrongly given the Krueger bill priority over bills in the Commerce Committee. Rep. Richard Ottinger (D-N.Y.) called this "an outrageous abuse of power" by the traffic-cop Rules Committee, a bad precedent threatening every standing committee's jurisdiction.

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L.H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Charles Rose (D-6), W.G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Raylor (D-11) voted "yea."

Rep. Ike Andrews (D-4) did not vote.

CIA REPORT—Adopted, 246 for and 124 against, an amendment to H Res. 982 barring the House Select Committee on Intelligence from making public in its final report any classified information without approval from President Ford. H Res 982 was later passed.

Supporters said the White House had agreed to furnish the committee classified material only on the condition that Ford's approval precede any disclosure. Opponents said the executive branch often uses the security classification system to suppress embarrassing information, and that Congress is obligated to fight any such decision. Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Rose did not vote.

JOBS—Passed, 321 for and 80 against, the conference report on a bill (HR 5247) engineered by Democrats to cut unemployment by the creation of some 600,000 jobs and stimulate the economy by other Washington-originated pump-priming measures. It was sent to President Ford for his promised veto. The bill clashes sharply with the basic Administration strategy of holding down government spending while using measures such as corporate and individual tax cuts to stimulate the private sector and thus create jobs.

The bill authorizes $2.5 billion for fiscal 1976-77 grants to state and local governments to put people to work on public works projects such as school construction and street repair. It also provides for a $1.5 billion, 15-month program of "countercyclical" cash payments from the Treasury Department to communities hard hit by unemployment, so that taxes need not be raised or services cut. The bill's third title funds programs such as urban redevelopment and wastewater treatment grants.

One supporter, Rep. James Wright (D-Tex.), said that with jobless benefits costing billions annually, "It just does not make sense to spend that kind of money on unemployment compensation and not to spend $6.1 billion... to put 600,000 of those people back to work."

An opponent, Rep. Robert Lagomarsino (R-Calif.) said the need for a massive jobs program has passed, and that the bill "is the old political pork barrel wrapped up in a new package... in time to kick off everyone's election campaign."

Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin and Taylor voted "yea."

Jones and Broyhill voted "nay."
Rose did not vote.

Senate

DAY CARE—Rejected, 37 for and 54 against, an amendment to eliminate government requirements on staff quality at day care centers receiving federal aid. The requirements, resented by many state officials as costly and overly bureaucratic, are intended to assure adequate adult supervision at the centers.

The amendment was proposed to HR 9803, which extends the effective date of the staff standards from Feb. 1, 1976 to July 1, 1976, and authorizes $250 million per year to help states comply. HR 9803 was later passed and sent to conference with the House.

In support of his amendment, Sen. Robert Packwood (R-Ore.) argued that the federal standards are "at best difficult to determine, and at worst, arbitrary." An opponent, Sen.

Walter Mondale (D-Minn.), said the requirements are justified by a demonstrated need for child safety in day care centers.

Sens. Robert Morgan (D) and Jesse Helms (R) voted "yea."

MILK SUPPORTS—Failed, 37 for and 51 against, to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to override President Ford's veto of SJ Res 121, which would have raised milk price supports to 85 per cent of parity and required quarterly adjustments to maintain that parity level.

Parity, the price support level of a given base year, is an inflation-adjusted index of farmers' buying power.

This vote sustaining the veto means that the present 80 per cent of parity level for milk supports remains in effect, although subject to adjustment at the discretion of the secretary of agriculture.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wisc.), a supporter of the override, said the 80 per cent level is so low that the farmer

"is averaging out (to) less than the minimum wage." Opponents generally agreed with Ford, who said in his veto message that the measure would have increased federal spending, boosted consumer milk prices and encouraged overproduction.

Morgan voted "yea" and Helms voted "nay."

Firm Gives Aid To Vacationers

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. (UPI) — At least one New Jersey firm is telling employees get away from it all at minimal injury to the family budget, the Prentice-Hall publishing house reports. It says United Jersey Bank, of Hackensack, has two fully equipped motor homes available for employees and their families to use for up to six-day periods. All the employees pay for is the gas and a small daily rental fee.

Now Tracking Down Parents Who Deserted

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The hunt is officially on by the state and federal governments for fathers and mothers who don't support their children.

Federal specialists say they hope the program will save taxpayers an estimated $1 billion of the $5.6 billion paid in aid last year to families of dependent children.

Until last year, most states had no machinery to track down runaway parents. However, a new federal welfare law now makes it necessary for all states to establish an effective program to trace deserters. About $300,000 in federal funds was infused into the program last week when Congress overrode a presidential veto.

In the last 12 months, 44 state programs have been approved by the child support division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Louis B. Hays, deputy administrator of the program, says, "It is a rare opportunity for the average state to undertake activity that benefits states as well as families and children."

Hays added that a study done for HEW shows that 50 per cent of the parents who desert their children have the ability to support them. Federal administrators say that almost 99 per cent of the deserters are fathers.

The law also provides that tracing and collecting facilities be made available to nonwelfare families. Hays said that since last summer his office has received about 14,000 letters asking for help from non-welfare families.

The purpose of making the program available to everyone is to help borderline cases where a family might be forced to go on welfare if the father didn't come through with support payments.

Once the parent is located, the law provides for a number of ways to enforce payment. One is the garnishment of wages. This also is the first time that wages of federal employees will be subject to garnishment for the purpose of child support and alimony obligations.

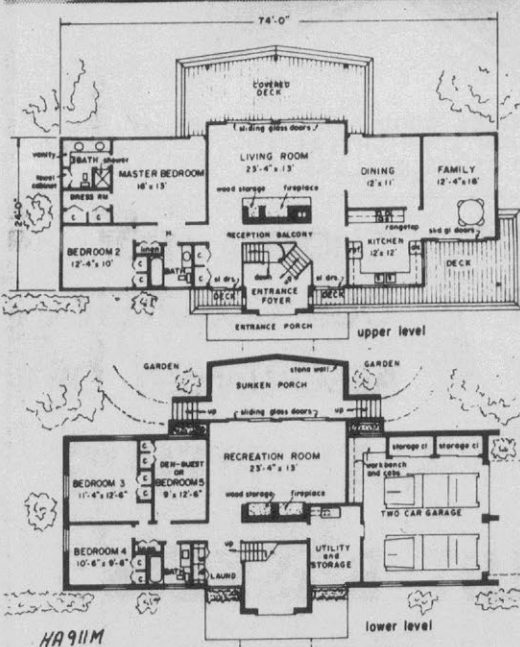

Fathers or mothers who wish to have their spouse located are now able to contact their state or local child support agency. The state agency will first attempt to locate the parent.

If unsuccessful, the agency can contact the federal parent-locator service, which will try to obtain the last home address or last place of employment from federal agencies like Social Security.

BOND RECORD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales of U.S. Savings Bonds totaled a record $7 billion last year, the highest sales figure for the E and H bonds since 1952. Of the total, a record $1.65 billion were sold in the final three months.

Plan Change In Working

By DOLORES BARCLAY Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The year 2,000: No more assembly lines. Laborers assemble products from start to finish. They design their own factories and shops. They take sabbatical leaves. Supervisors aren't bosses but consultants to the employees who run their own workdays.

That's the way it will be in the factory of tomorrow, according to Paul Dickson, the author of a new book on working.

These work innovations are not fantasies and will affect the greater part of the nation's work force, Dickson says in his book, "The Future of the Workplace." Some American and European companies now have these practices in operation, he said.

The Communications Division of Motorola, Inc., allows one person to put together, test and package the firm's pocket paging device. A Danish paint factory in Copenhagen was designed and planned by its workers. Time, Inc., International Business Machines Corp. and Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates, a Boston firm, grant employees sabbatical leaves with pay for a year.

Dickson said in an interview that less than 1 per cent of the workers in this country perform in such systems where he says individual potentials and talents are recognized.

Dickson, a 36-year-old former reporter for McGraw-Hill, Inc., who also wrote a book on think tanks, said he spent about three years researching the current work.

"We've really made tremendous strides in taking care of people in terms of health and benefits," he said. "But now the revolutionary thing that's happening is the content of one's job."

"This means giving people independence, letting people pick their own hours, within reason, giving them freedom and letting them form groups that boss themselves."

Labor unions are just beginning to realize that the content of jobs is negotiable, and will have to play a greater role in making work systems more enlightened, he said.

Dickson, like other proponents of job enrichment, says that workers who have greater independence and responsibility and less supervision tend to produce more and take pride in their work.

He said most employers and employees are reluctant to alter the "boss and be bossed" system because of fear of change.

"A lot of people are desperately afraid, but that fear is not well founded because supervisors and executives who would be displaced by this will have a whole new world opened to them," he said.

Instead of having power over coffee break and restroom privileges, he said, supervisors would be involved with long-range company planning and would have more chances to be creative.

An example of an almost unbosomed plant, Dickson said, is the General Food Gaines Pet Food plant in Kankakee, Ill. There, autonomous work groups make their own day-to-day assignments and recruit and hire new members. Time clocks and other regulators have been eliminated.

Ray Price Says He Is His Own Worst Critic

HIS WORST CRITIC—Singer Ray Price says he doesn't like to hear himself or see himself on television because he sees his mistakes. (AP Wirephoto)

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Ray Price doesn't like to hear himself sing.

"I'm my own worst critic," said Price, who's recorded a host of hits during a 25-year career. "I don't like to hear myself sing or see myself on television. I see too many mistakes."

Nevertheless, he plans to do something he's wanted to do for some time—record an album of Hank Williams' hits.

"Hank helped me get my start, so this is something I've wanted to do for 25 years," Price said during an interview at a recording studio while on a week's visit to Nashville. He lives in Mount Pleasant, Tex.

"I'd like for it to tell all about Hank; maybe we can put narration in between the songs," he said. "I know a lot of little things about Hank that are funny—after all, we lived together for several years."

"And I'd like for Hank Jr. to be in on the session. He's like a second kid to me."

Hank Jr. is recuperating from a near fatal fall last August in Montana.

"I wanted to do it when it was the proper time and I could do it right," said Price, who is also known as "the Cherokee Cowboy."

"I don't want anybody to think I'm riding his coattails. I want to do it because I think it should be done as a tribute."

Price also said he is working on a project "to further the country music industry," but after 25 years, he said he still hasn't decided what country music is.

"My music is based strictly on grass roots country music, but I haven't decided what country music is. I've always wondered if it's a 'Madison Avenue' word."

"Jimmy Rodgers was once called a hillbilly, then his music became known as country, and later it was country and western. But there's only 32 bars of music, no matter how you play it."

"To me, music is either good, bad or indifferent. You either like it or you don't."

Like many other country singers, he agrees that lyrics are the most important aspect of a song. "The story sells the song. The music is weighted to the story. It must be interpreted correctly."

"Country music is something everybody can relate to. Maybe it's a lesson to people, showing the pitfalls of life. It's the contemporary music of today, and 10 years from now it'll still be the story of what is happening to human beings."

The Beatles recorded several fine songs using a hard country sound, he said.

"Some of the rock songs have great lyrics, but for the most part I can't understand the lyrics because the beat is so heavy. The beat sells these songs."

He confessed his favorite recordings of his own are "For The Good Times" and "Danny Boy." Among his other big hits are "Heartaches by the Number," "Make the World Go Away,"

"I'd Rather Be Sorry," "Crazy Arms," "City Lights," "Same Ole Me," "Don't Let the Stars Get in Your Eyes" and "She Wears My Ring."

"I don't want to be looked up to," he said. "Only one person is—Jesus Christ."

Top-Spinning Finds Winner

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Four metalworkers who shared soccer pool winnings equivalent to more than $234,000 revealed they doped out the results of the matches with a homemade "perinola," a top used in gambling.

The perinola was spun to indicate winner, loser and point spread in each of 13 soccer matches featured in the weekly state-run "PRODE" betting pool. The winning card resulted after a year of such efforts.

Argentina Cuts Grain-Sowing

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — In the past two years there has been a drop of more than 3.8 million acres in the area sown with grain crops in Argentina due to poor farm prices, according to a farm spokesman.

Humberto Volando, president of the Argentine Agrarian Federation, cited the figure in a speech urging the government to change its policies toward the country's food producers.

Invention Due To Suspicion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Suspicion replaced necessity as the mother of invention of the first dial telephone.

Almon Brown Stowger, an undertaker in Kansas City, Mo., suspected that local telephone operators were switching calls to his competitor. So, according to Intellectual Property Owners, a nonprofit organization dedicated to the preservation of our patent system, he invented a system to complete calls without an operator.

After working with a collar box, pencil and hatpins, he developed the "Stowger Switch" and obtained a patent in 1891 from the U.S. patent office for an "automatic telephone exchange." The first such system was installed in 1892 at La Porte, Ind., with subscribers.

Retailers See Top Theft Loss

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Of all businesses victimized by theft, retailers suffer the greatest losses, according to the Bank of America's Small Business Reporter. It notes that of the 1974 losses of $20.3 billion by American business to criminals, about 20 per cent of the loss was suffered by the retail industry.

Russia Sees A Decline In Emigrants

By George A. Krinsky
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials have confirmed, with a greater sense of confidence than once accompanied such admissions, that the number of emigrants from this country declined in 1975 to about half of the number which left the previous year.

They say the reason for the decline — from 22,000 in 1974 to 11,700 in 1975 — is not so much because they closed the door but because Soviet citizens, particularly Jews, have not chosen to walk through it. Israel is rapidly losing its appeal as the Promised Land, and Soviet Jews are gradually realizing that this is their proper home, Soviet officials frequently say.

Jewish activists here, while conceding that Soviet emigrants have faced many problems in Israel, vehemently reject the official line that fewer Jews want to leave this country. The real reason emigration is drying up, they argue, is because Jews are more and more frightened to even apply to leave.

Jews here have come to learn, the activists say, that most applicants are turned down on a pretext that they possess state secrets or on a technicality which would hold them in a form of bondage to some disgruntled relative. And once having applied, applicants find themselves in a limbo where they have lost their job, friends, peace of mind and, in some cases, their safety.

"Taking that first step is like plunging into an ice cold stream without knowing where the opposite bank may be," Benjamin Levich, a theoretical physicist who has waited four years to leave, said in a recent interview.

Jewish activists claim that applications are turned down for state security reasons on grounds that a young man served in the Soviet army, even as a simple private eight years earlier, in one case. Another case they cite is the former drummer in the Red army band who was tagged with the state secret label.

Soviet officials dismiss these complaints as paranoid, self-serving nonsense from a handful of Zionist troublemakers, maintaining that Soviet law is clear and reasonable in the matter of emigration.

Boris Shumilin, deputy minister of internal affairs, pointed to the U.N. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights of 1966 to justify the state position in a recent interview with the official news agency Novosti:

"The latter envisages that the right of a person to leave his country to become a permanent resident of another country can be restricted in cases connected with the protection of state security, public order, health or moral standards of the population or the rights and freedoms of others."

Furthermore, Shumilin stated that less than 2 per cent of exit applications have been "postponed" and that merely applying for an exit visa does not "as a rule" jeopardize one's job or social status.

A year ago, authorities decentralized the record-keeping process so that outsiders can no longer keep track of emigration applications and their status.

More Than Half Are Still Around

WASHINGTON (AP) — Of all Americans who have lived since the Revolution, more than half are still around.

John Warner, administrator of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, notes that a decade after the country's birth, the United States' population — from the Atlantic to the Spanish settlement on San Francisco Bay — was a bit more than four million.

Census figures reveal that about 400 million persons either were born here or have immigrated since then, compared with a current U.S. population of about 215 million.

KEEP FIT

BAD REICHENHALL, West Germany (UPI) — In line with the growing "keep fit" campaign in West Germany, this Bavarian health resort offers wood-chopping courses to its guests.

Tourists also are given the "opportunity" to shovel snow off the town's streets.

Symphonic Wind Ensemble To Present Concert

The ECU Symphonic Wind Ensemble, conducted by Herbert L. Carter, will present its Annual Winter Concert Friday, February 13, in Wright Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. John Heard and James Houlik of the ECU School of Music faculty will be soloists with the group. Vaclav Nelhybel, nationally-known composer, will be guest conductor of one of his own compositions.

On Saturday night, February 14, at 7:30 p.m. in Wright Auditorium, there will be a concert by the Symphonic and Concert Bands of the State High School Band Clinic. Nelhybel will conduct the Symphonic Band and George Naff of the ECU School of Music will conduct the Concert Band. Lewis Van Haney, noted trombonist, will be soloist with the Symphonic Band. The public is invited to attend both concerts.

Offer Advance Concert Tickets

Advance tickets for the Rose High Stage Band performance Thursday night are available from any student who is a member of the stage band. James Rodgers, Rose High band director, adds that at-the-door tickets will be available at least half an hour in advance of the 8 p.m. performance time. The concert features Loonis McGlohan as guest musician. Tickets are priced at 50 cents for student and $1.00 for adults.

hope the husband isn't named Rolls. It could cause a series called "The Rolls-Royce Road Ramblers" or worse.

If that doesn't happen, there'll still be a lot of ramblers on the road if four other Old West projects become series next season.

James Arness, late of Dodge City, may be on the path as Zeb Macahan, a mountain man helping his brother's family move West in an ABC series called "How the West Was Won." Viewers got a taste of it last month when ABC aired the series' pilot, "The Macahans."

If the Macahans get bogged down on the Oregon Trail, they may be able to flag down Rod Taylor; he might be out there in an NBC Western series called "The Oregon Trail."

And if both parties need fresh horses, they might be able to do business with Don Meredith, who may show up in another NBC road Western called "Banjo Hackett," about a horse trader and his orphaned nephew.

Then they could join "The Quest," a Western NBC says is about a search by two brothers for a sister the Indians have kidnapped.

If everyone finds the road tiring, they could stop at the home of "The Young Pioneers," which ABC says is a possible series about two new-lywed teen-agers in the Dakota Territory of the 1870s.

There, they could brush off the trail dust, turn on the TV set and watch "Nunandaga," which will be about a Plains Indian family in the early 1800s, if ABC puts it in its 1976-77 schedule.

The show is an 1870s Western about an Eastern schoolmarm teaching in Colorado. If she chalks up good Nielsen figures, she'll probably be at the black-board when the class of 1976-77 opens.

Another next-season possibility, now in the CBS mulling mill, is a Western called "Royce." CBS says it's about a gunslinger named Royce who befriends a young woman with two kids.

She and the kids are on the road, having been deserted by her gambler husband (let's

Some folks thought the Old West died for good last season when CBS cleared the air of "Gunsmoke" after 20 years. They forgot that TV executives occasionally take a drug called Recyclemate.

ABC took it in September with "Barbary Coast," a San Francisco Western, but the show was a downer and has died. Still, CBS is trying it this Friday with a new series called "Sara."

GENERAL TENDENCIES. Use more than average care to avoid reacting to adverse conditions, or you could get caught up in the vortex of some difficulties that keep you from achieving your finest goals. Refuse to become emotionally unhappy. Channel forces.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use diplomacy with kin, or serious arguments could result. Quietly get rid of causes of friction. Don't say things you may regret.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You could ruin carefully laid plans if you speak out of turn with those who count. Quickly dispel discord. Use tact.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You want to spend beyond your means but should save more right now. Make the evening a delightful, social one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep promises and so avoid trouble, get benefits. Steer clear of the social where troublesome individuals may be.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle only truly important matters and don't get bogged down with trivia that could waste your day. An adviser gives good ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be understanding and helpful with one who is acting most emotionally. Don't take advantage of others because you can't get your way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Higher-ups could be demanding as they're under pressure, so don't lose your temper. Keep poised, even at home, and all is fine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't make any changes as yet in regular routines, but study into something that is more lucrative and interesting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Forget some tangent and carry out promises speedily. Mate is not in a good mood, so take it easy. Don't lose temper.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You could be wrong in thinking partner isn't doing right; say nothing. Avoid opposing one, or dangerous confrontation could result.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Although routines may not go so well because of planets, keep plugging along and you get enough accomplished.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Encourage those who feel upset today and who mean a good deal to you. Avoid one who could lead you into trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have the willingness to work at whatever duty is assigned, but will tire more quickly than others, so teach early to be more philosophical and see to it that you as parents lead your youngster in the right direction. Then there can be a wonderful life here instead of a difficult one. Give good religious training early.

The lure of a finesse is often irresistible. When this hand was played in a recent tournament, most declarers tried every finesse in sight. The winning line, however, was to take no finesse at all!

As the cards lie, three no trump is an ironclad contract. However, had the hearts split 5-3, as they would tend to do most of the time, three no trump would stand no chance while four spades can always be made. North chose wisely when he decided to correct to four spades with his four trumps and flat hand.

Most declarers approached the hand by winning the heart lead and immediately running the nine of clubs, finessing West for the jack. Though this failed, they were eventually able to force an entry to dummy in clubs in order to try the spade finesse, which also lost. Later, they reentered dummy with a trump to take the diamond finesse. Unfortunately this lost as well, and declarer was down one, having lost two clubs and the two finesses.

This was a most unlucky lie of the cards, but our commiseration for South must be tempered by the fact that he could have made the hand without resorting to a finesse. Correct technique is to win the king of hearts, cash the ace and now lead the queen of spades!

West can refuse to win this trick, but declarer persists with the jack, forcing West to win the king or sacrifice his spade trick. West can exit with a trump, but declarer wins in dummy with the ten. Next, he ruffs the remaining heart and now plays the ace, king and jack of diamonds!

Declarer does not care who wins the trick. Whichever defender takes the queen of diamonds is faced with the unappetizing alternatives of giving declarer a ruff-and-stuff, allowing declarer to get rid of a club, or breaking the club suit and giving declarer a free finesse. In all, declarer will lose only a trump, a diamond and a club.

Learn the secrets of winning more points! Charles Goren explains the "art" of doubling in his latest book. For your copy, write to "Goren's Doubles," c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648, enclosing $1.25 in cash or checks, payable to NEWS-PAPERBOOKS.
