

Announce Airport Grant

THE PITT GREENVILLE AIRPORT runway stands to get much-needed improvements, thanks to Airport aid grants totaling more than $250,000, including $100,000 for Pitt-Greenville Airport, have been approved by Jacob F. Alexander, Secretary of the N.C. Department of Transportation.

The allocation for the local airport will be used to repave runway and parallel and connecting taxiway. Alexander noted that the money, disbursed in grants among the Pitt-Greenville and nine other airports in the state, is being made available under the North Carolina Airport Aid Program.

The state grant for Greenville will be matched by $100,000 in local money a state grant announced today.

with the city and county participating on a 50-50 basis. Most of the money, according to J. T. Little Jr., chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority has already been appropriated over the past four years.

In addition to the $100,000 grant for the local airport, a $3,500 grant was designed for Plymouth Municipal Airport and other disbursements approved for airports in Jackson, Avery, Alamance, Columbus, Rockingham, Surry, Robeson and Davison Counties.

The Pitt-Greenville Airport grant was the largest of the ten approved.

U.S. Economic Indicators Up

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that its index of leading economic indicators marked its biggest increase in six months during January, signaling a more robust economic growth ahead.

The Commerce Department said its composite index comprised of a dozen individual economic statistics selected for their capacity to foresee economic developments rose by 2.2 per cent in January.

That was the biggest increase since a 2.5 per cent jump in July and ended five months of virtual stagnation in the index. The January increase alone surpassed the total 2.1 per cent rise for those five months.

At the same time, Commerce revised to nine-tenths of a per cent the index increase for December. The increase originally had been reported as four-tenths of a per cent.

In the past, the index has anticipated economic turnarounds by three months or so, and the latest report signaled a stronger economic growth, particularly in the business investment sector, in the months ahead.

Factors contributing most to the January rise were the volume of contracts and orders for new factories and facilities and stock prices.

The monthly average of 500 stocks used in the government index showed a 9.2 per cent increase in January. The volume of new plant and equipment either contracted for or ordered during the month jumped ahead by 13 per cent.

The signals from Commerce's composite index were in line with other economic indicators showing that stronger growth in the economy is likely in the next few months. After an initial strong spurt in economic growth at the onset of the recovery last spring, growth slowed significantly over the fall and early winter.

But now consumer spending is continuing to be strong, and there are early signs that business is now prepared to begin spending more on increasing its capacity.

Only 11 of the 12 individual indicators in the composite index were available for the January report, but only two of them — holdings of cash and near-cash by business and consumers and the money supply — showed declines.

Signaling economic growth along with higher stock prices and bigger orders for business spending were an increase in the average work week, a reduction in the layoff rate for manufacturing, higher prices to producers of key wholesale goods, formation of more new businesses, increased orders for producers of consumer goods, a greater number of building permits issued, and slower deliveries by suppliers, which is taken as a sign of increased demand.

UNC Board Recommends 14 For Pitt Hospital Bd.

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors this morning recommended 14 persons for appointment to Pitt County Memorial Hospital's Board of Trustees.

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners are expected to name the state representatives to the hospital board at Monday's commissioners meeting, as well as two additional county appointees.

The new appointments are to be made in conjunction with the affiliation agreement between the hospital and the School of Medicine at East Carolina University. That agreement calls for 21 local appointments to the hospital board and 14 persons nominated by the Board of Governors.

At present there are 19 members of the hospital board. The new appointments will increase the board's size to 35 and provide a 60 per cent local — 40 per cent state presentation as called for under the affiliation agreement. The affiliation agreement makes Pitt Memorial Hospital the prime clinical training facility for the medical school.

Those persons recommended this morning by the Board of Governors include two Greenville men: Burroughs-Wellcome pharmaceutical plant manager Henry G. Leslie and attorney James T. Cheatham.

Others nominated include: Raleigh Carver, Elizabeth City, chairman of the Pasquotank Board of County Commissioners; Bill Neal, Roanoke Rapids businessman; Mrs. Nancy Norwood of Goldsboro; Louis Renn, a Jacksonville real estate agent and chairman of the Onslow County Board of Commissioners; Dean Rich, Raleigh, trust officer for North Carolina National Bank's eastern region; and William R. Roberson of Washington, former member of the N.C. State House of Representatives and Chairman of the Board of WITN-TV.

Other state nominees include: Norfleet Sugg of Pinetops, executive with Planters Bank and Trust Co. of Rocky Mount; Hal H. Tanner Sr., Goldsboro, publisher of the Goldsboro New Argus; Mrs. Martha Walston, member of the Wilson city council; Dr. Charles Watts, Durham, medical director of the N.C. Mutual Insurance Co.; Dr.

Jesse Williams, Fayetteville, director of the Cumberland County Health Department; and Mrs. Donald Diechmann, New Bern auto dealer.

The appointments to the Board of Trustees are expected to be for staggered terms, based on action by the County Commissioners Monday.

National Humanities Center To Triangle

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Humanities Center, which is to promote humanistic studies in America, will be headquartered at Research Triangle Park, N.C., the American Academy of Arts and Sciences announced today.

The center will be on a 15-acre site donated by the Triangle Universities Center for Advanced Studies Inc. which will also provide the center a $1.5 million building. Construction is to begin next fall and is to be completed in 1978.

In all, the center has been promised nearly $3 million from North Carolina corporations, private foundations and state agencies.

Research Triangle Park is the headquarters of many private and governmental research facilities including the Environmental Protection Agency, International Business Machines, Monsanto and Burroughs Wellcome.

The North Carolina site was reportedly selected over a number of "major" universities including the University of California at Berkeley, the University of Michigan, the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Texas.

The Humanities Center will be within 12 miles of three major universities—the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Duke University in Durham and North Carolina State University in Raleigh. "The (center) is thus surrounded by a wide spectrum of sophisticated, corporate, non-profit and governmental research enterprises and by the participating universities, their faculties, their libraries and their other resources," a news release from the Boston-based arts academy said.

For the first five years, the center's operating budget will be provided by the three universities with additional funds being sought from private foundations and government agencies.

The Triangle Universities Center was formed last December by the three universities to promote intellectual pursuits.

The humanities center will invite about 50 persons a year to be fellows and study a wide range of cultural, social or intellectual issues. The fellows will include a variety of vocations, from distinguished scientists to businessmen, government officials and journalists.

The New York announcement at noon today coincided with announcements by each of the three universities.

In prepared remarks in New York, Duke University President Terry Sanford said the center will be important in understanding a changing society and world.

Flu-Related Deaths Jump

ATLANTA (AP) — Deaths related to influenza and pneumonia jumped sharply above the epidemic threshold last week, the national Center for Disease Control announced today.

CDC statistics from 121 major U.S. cities show that at least 875 persons died during the week ending Feb. 21—most of them in the New England and middle Atlantic states.

An increased death rate in the western states also helped push the statistics up to epidemic levels, a CDC spokesman said.

CDC flu-watchers determine an epidemic threshold through a complex, shifting formula keyed to an expected number of deaths arrived at by study of statistics in previous nonepidemic years.

When the number of expected deaths is exceeded by a certain cushion factor—such as 50—the outbreak is considered to be of epidemic proportion. CDC officials had charted an expected level of 536 deaths for last week.

In a weekly report, CDC scientists said considerable flu activity was reported in all but three states—Maine, Rhode Island and North Carolina.

Widespread activity—defined as influenza recognized in counties comprising more than 50 per cent of a state's population—was reported in 15 states.

Regional flu activity—meaning flu tracked in counties comprising less than 50 per cent of a state's population—was reported in 18 states. Isolated activity—or cases confined to smaller, well-defined population units such as schools or military bases—was reported in 14 cases.

The influenza virus identified as A—Victoria has been responsible for almost all the confirmed outbreaks except for a swine-like virus which was confirmed in the cases of 11 Ft. Dix, N.J. Army recruits earlier this month and resulted in one death.

Ford Again Scores Energy Bill Delay

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is again accusing Congress of delaying action on energy bills, but congressional leaders insist they are not dragging their feet.

In a special energy message Thursday, Ford complained that the failure of Congress to act on a series of administration-sponsored bills is hindering the nation's drive to become energy independent.

Although many energy issues were resolved in a measure passed in December, Ford said the nation cannot begin to solve its remaining energy problems until he gets the additional authority he requested.

But Rep. John G. Dingell, D-Mich., said, "Remember, the President spent all last year making charges that Congress was not acting on energy measures, but we did act."

Dingell, chairman of the House energy and power subcommittee, added: "And our program — which he eventually signed — was far more comprehensive than his original approach."

The measure passed in December was the nation's first major energy legislation. It included gradual reduction of oil price controls.

Dingell added that there is a variety of energy-related bills before his committee "and we're acting on them as fast as possible. We've been working hard on the entire subject of energy."

In urging action on pending bills, Ford submitted two new proposals:

—Legislation setting deadlines for federal processing of pipeline projects to bring natural gas from northern Alaska and letting the President select a pipeline route subject to congressional approval.

—Allowing up to one trillion cubic feet of liquefied natural gas to be imported annually, which does not require congressional action.

Early Morning Wreck Is Fatal

An early-morning wreck today claimed the life of a 20-year-old

Route 1, Mount Airy man, Greenville police reported.

Investigators identified the victim of the one-vehicle mishap as Dennis Joseph Eggers.

The collision in which he was killed occurred about 12:55 a.m. on Fifth Street — 566 feet East of Cemetery Road — at the Greene Mill Run bridge.

Officers, quoting witnesses, said the Eggers car was headed East on Fifth Street at a high rate of speed when it left the roadway on the North side of the street, struck a sign on the left-hand shoulder, jumped the stream and landed on the bank on the East side of the run.

Investigators said Eggers died in the twisted wreckage of his small foreign car of head injuries. They estimated damage to the auto at $2,000.

Petrocomplex Impact Considered At Meeting

A state official says an area between Morehead City and Wilmington seems the most favorable location for development of a petroleum processing complex in eastern North Carolina.

Richard P. Wallace said a state study indicated that the area between the state's two ports could best support a "petrocomplex."

Wallace, coordinator of the study, reviewed the findings in a public meeting Thursday. The full report is to be released in March.

He said the study detailed the impact of such a complex from a social, economic and environmental standpoint.

He noted that such a development is only a possibility.

The Coastal Plains Commission made a study which concluded that construction of a deep-water oil terminal and onshore tank farms and refineries is feasible in the coastal areas of the Carolinas and Georgia.

The comments came at a hearing sponsored by the N.C. Department of Natural and Economic Resources and the ECU Regional Development Institute here yesterday. The meeting was held in the Willis building on First Street.

Coordinators Plan Weddings

By MINDY YOCHELSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When comic strip reporter Brenda Starr married longtime fiance Basil St. John on television in January, every detail down to the black orchid corsages was handled by a wedding coordinating company. The function of the eight-year-old business "is to take the burdens and the worries of preparation of a wedding off the bride's family," says Ellen Proxmire, wife of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., mother of five, and one of the founders of the Wonderful Weddings, Inc. In an interview, Mrs. Proxmire said she and two of her friends decided Washington needed such a business after her oldest daughter was married in a complicated, interfaith ceremony. The other founders are Gretchen Posten, wife of an attorney, and Barbara Boggs, daughter-in-law of Rep. Corrine C. (Lindy) Boggs, D-La.

The business takes care of everything from ordering invitations to recording the wedding gifts. It operates out of a converted one-bedroom apartment in the District of Columbia's upper Georgetown section, but its influence has spread to 70 cities.

About six years ago, the trio took in two more partners, Harriet Schwartz and Dorothy Mickler, and began handling convention tours. They also organize commercial parties for anyone who needs help in planning a social event. Mrs. Proxmire said weddings now represent only about 20 per cent of their business and convention tours, about 80 per cent.

The five women also run a five-day training school twice a year, at $500 per customer, for people who want to start their own wedding-coordinating businesses.

"We see that they are well on their way, but we are not responsible for their success. We have what I call a loose association," Mrs. Proxmire said.

Since their first wedding in December, 1967, the women have handled the nuptials of several congressional children, a Greek city planner and the daughter of then defense secretary Melvin R. Laird.

Mrs. Proxmire said of the latter: "In a wedding like that you have to be concerned about security. When his son was married, the wedding was disrupted by demonstrators, so all the guests were sworn to secrecy."

But the "climax of our career," Mrs. Proxmire said with a laugh, "was to marry Brenda Starr."

"We had the invitations designed, handled the guest list (including advice columnist Ann Landers), worked with the caterers, fiddled with the color scheme," she said.

Comic strip characters aside, Mrs. Proxmire believes her business is most helpful to a prospective bride who lives away from home and has only a modest budget or a working woman who doesn't have time for all the wedding details.

"A lot of different pieces go into the production of a wedding, and any one of them can cause difficulty," Mrs. Proxmire said.

In one instance, two sisters decided to appear in each other's weddings on the same day, but in different churches.

"They had a joint garden party at their home, on a day that was 115 degrees in the shade. No one had checked out the power capabilities of the electrical system in the house. The minute everything was plugged in, all our fuses blew — no fans, no stoves," she said.

"In addition we were trying a new bakery, and the next thing we noticed was the cake in a heap on the grass.

"We took the bottom layer off, pulled it down so it would hold firm and draped the base with leaves and ferns.

"Another time a limousine got lost with the mother of the groom from Greece, who didn't speak English. We've had a band that didn't show up at all, and a bride who fainted."

Mrs. Stroud To Conduct Workshop

The North Carolina Chapter of the Embroiderers' Guild of America, Inc. will meet Thursday at 10 a.m. at St. James United Methodist Church. Mrs. Betty Stroud of Kinston will conduct a workshop in the art of Deerfield Blue, which is embroidery worked in blue and white.

About 1890, Ellen Miller and Margaret Whiting moved and met in Deerfield, Mass. They became involved in local needlework and in 1896, they began the Deerfield Society of Blue and White Needlework.

Mrs. Stroud will give a detailed description of Deerfield Blue and show slides. She will conduct a workshop demonstrating stitches including the blanket, Romanian and Couche filling.

Members interested in participating in the workshop should call 752-0559 for reservations.

Women Move Ahead In Connecticut Politics

By PETER A. BROWN
HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Women are mining a political lode in Connecticut after prospecting for years without much success outside the doors of the state's smoke-filled rooms.

One reason for women's electoral emergence is given by Gov. Ella T. Grasso, the nation's first woman governor who did not succeed her husband:

"Connecticut has an enlightened electorate."

Secretary of the State Gloria Schaffer blossomed early as the leading Democrat in the U.S. Senate race. Sen. Audrey Beck, D-Storrs, figures prominently in efforts to solve the state's fiscal crisis.

It isn't just a few token women making it in politics either, says the Connecticut Women's Political Caucus, which claims women are more successful than men in winning office in the state.

A survey by the caucus said 64 per cent of the 1,278 women who ran for municipal office in the state last year won, with 65 per cent of the Democratic women victorious compared to 62 per cent of their Republican counterparts.

Women constitute 14 per cent of the legislature, almost double the national average.

Their leadership position is even stronger, with women heading five of the 20 standing committees.

There is a theory that Watergate with its predominantly male cast may have helped swing the political pendulum for women.

Connecticut politics traditionally have been heavily Democratic and tightly controlled by the party organization. In most states these characteristics have hindered women's chances for political office.

"Connecticut is head and shoulders above other states when it comes to involvement of women in politics," says Mrs. Beck, who is believed to be the first woman in the nation heading a state legislative finance committee.

"That's especially unusual when you consider how strong the party structure is here," she said.

Like Mrs. Grasso and Mrs. Schaffer, Mrs. Beck gives much of the credit to the late John Moran Bailey, who ruled the state Democratic party with an iron hand in a velvet glove for almost 30 years until his death in 1975.

Bailey, the party's national chairman in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, climbed aboard JFK's campaign at the parade's outset, despite questions from some skeptics about the viability of a Roman Catholic candidate.

"John didn't sit in any ceremony because of sex or religion, he looked for the best candidates," said Lt. Gov. Robert K. Killian.

"People here vote for the person and there has been great encouragement given to women, probably more than anywhere else," said Killian. And he should know.

Killian lost the party's gubernatorial nomination to Mrs. Grasso and backed down from a race this year for the U.S. Senate, at least partly because of Mrs. Schaffer's candidacy.

Mrs. Schaffer outpolled both Mrs. Grasso and three-term incumbent Ribicoff in the 1974 Democratic landslide and her candidacy is being taken very seriously by the incumbent, Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn.

Noting almost all of the women politicians began their careers in the legislature, Mrs. Schaffer, who served six terms in the state Senate, said one can drive to the State Capitol from the state's furthest point within two hours.

"Women with families can enter politics and not have to leave home for five days out of the week," she said.

Not surprisingly, the women who emerged from the Bailey machine did so running on the same traditional Democratic platform of a strong economy and social reform as did male candidates.

"We are not an especially liberal state," says Mrs. Beck. "The women who have done well here politically have done so on the bread and butter issues."

Mrs. Grasso, who last year angered some women by refusing to let state workers take time off to participate in a national feminist protest, says the reason for the success of women in Connecticut politics is that they infiltrated the system.

"The leadership in the management of party affairs for a number of years was exercised by two outstanding women, one a Republican and one a Democrat, who created a favorable climate for women in politics."

She said Katherine Quinn, for years Bailey's lieutenant and vice chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and Republican Vice Chairman Anna May Switaski paved the way for women candidates by becoming powers themselves within the party hierarchy.

Don't Wear Opal Ring If You're Superstitious

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Last summer, while running my fingers through the sand at the beach, I found an opal ring. I took it to a jeweler who appraised it at approximately $100. I would like to wear it, but here's the situation:

I have heard that bad luck is associated with the opal, and only people whose birthstone is the opal should wear it. My birthstone is not the opal, and I don't need any bad luck right now.

Have you ever heard of this superstition? What is your advice?

OTTAWA LAKE, MICH.

DEAR OTT: Yes, I have heard of this superstition. I am not superstitious, but if you are, don't wear the opal.

DEAR ABBY: My sister and her husband come to our town three times a year on business and always expect to be put up in our home.

Their behavior is unreal, and I'm considering putting them up in a motel on their next visit.

I don't object to couples holding hands and showing signs of affection in public, but you should see these two! They're like a couple of dogs in heat! He has his hands all over her and even under her blouse (at the dinner table, yet!), and my sister just giggles and thinks it's cute.

They've been married for 23 years, so there's no excuse for this. His filthy talk about their intimate relationship is too embarrassing to repeat. He brags in front of our teenaged children that he and his wife bathe together!

I can't ask my children to spend the whole time in their rooms when this moron and my sister visits us. My husband is a softy. He says we should look the other way when they're here. Have you ever tried to carry on a conversation with someone without looking at them?

Am I being a prude? Please advise me.

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: I'm for putting up the lovebirds in a motel, tree, kennel or some other appropriate place. And don't make up any excuse. Tell them why.

DEAR ABBY: As a steady reader of your column, I have noticed that you often say, "Mother Nature decides at what age a woman should stop bearing children."

That undoubtedly gives comfort to women who for one reason or another bear children in their later years. But I think you should point out that the older a woman, the older her eggs are, and as an egg ages, it deteriorates, increasing the chances of having a defective child—as with mongolism.

Perhaps many people are not aware of this rather unhappy fact of life.

HUMANITARIAN

DEAR HUMANITARIAN: You make an important point. I was remiss in failing to mention it, and I thank you for doing so.

STEAMED FIG PUDDING—You can make it in a slow cooker.

Slow Cooker Yields Steamed Fig Pudding

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If you have an electric slow cooker and haven't yet used it for steaming a wintertime pudding, you may be interested in the following recipe.

One note: we found the pudding's flavor much the same whether it was made with butter or margarine or suet. So if you don't want to use the traditional suet, don't feel it's a "must."

STEAMED FIG PUDDING

- ¾ cup soft bread crumbs
- ¼ cup milk
- 1-3rd cup sugar
- ½ pound-red figs, ground
- ½ cup (3 ounces) ground suet or ½ cup softened butter or margarine
- ¼ cup dark molasses
- ½ teaspoon grated orange rind
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- ¼ cup flour, stir to aerate before measuring
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon ground ginger

In a large mixing bowl stir together the bread crumbs and milk. Add sugar and figs; stir well. Add suet, molasses, orange rind and eggs; stir together thoroughly.

On wax paper stir together thoroughly the flour, soda, salt and ginger; add to fig mixture; beat to blend. Pour into a well-greased 1-pound coffee can or 1-quart mold.

Cover can with foil, shaping it into a tent so that there is ½ inch of space above the rim of the can; tie foil securely around can with string.

Place a trivet in an electric slow cooker and add enough hot water to have it come up 1 inch. (To make a small trivet, punch holes in a screwtop lid from a jar of mayonnaise or other food.) Place coffee can on trivet and cover slow cooker. Steam with control set on high for 4½ to 5 hours. Cool pudding on a wire rack for 10 minutes; unmold and serve with a favorite pudding sauce.

Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Consider Mail Delivery For Three Days A Week

By JEFFREY MILLS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service says it is considering cutting mail delivery to three days a week.

J. T. Ellington, a senior assistant postmaster general, said in an interview Thursday that three-day-per-week delivery is "one of the options" the financially troubled agency is considering in its campaign to cut costs.

Although more drastic cutbacks have been discussed, Ellington said, "Our most immediate option is reduction by one day in delivery service." Postal officials had said previously they are considering eliminating delivery on Saturday or one other day of the week.

Postal service officials have said the savings from elimination of delivery on Saturday would be about $350 million per year and savings would be somewhat higher if delivery is dropped on a business day.

Ellington said the possibility of three-day-per-week delivery was discussed at a recent meeting of the agency's board of governors.

"We'll have to see how things go in the financial area and then decide what we have to do," he said.

Other service cutbacks under consideration include ending special delivery, postal officials say.

"We are not excluding anything from consideration," Ellington said.

The Postal Service would have to seek the approval of the Postal Rate Commission, an independent agency, before eliminating any service.

The postal deficit is estimated to reach a record $1.5 billion for the fiscal year ending June 30.

One problem the Postal Service faces is that "everywhere we turn on cutting costs, somebody opposes it," Ellington said.

In one such action Thursday, a federal judge blocked the Postal Service from closing rural post offices to save money.

U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith issued a temporary restraining order against the economy plan and scheduled a hearing for March 3 on whether to make his order permanent.

The Postal Service said the order would result in a loss of about $5,500 a day. The agency has closed about 180 post offices since July 1 and is scrutinizing 600 others.

Forty members of Congress had filed the suit hours earlier, contending the closings constituted "a massive assault on the country's small communities."

Area HSA Board Will Meet Mar. 3

The Health Systems Agency governing board for Area VI will meet in Greenville at the Holiday Inn on March 3, with the business session beginning at 7:30 p.m.

On the evening agenda will be a report from the Bylaws Committee, chaired by Dr. James Piver from Jacksonville. Thomas Bridgers from Wilson, chairman of the Nominations Committee, will present proposals for an Executive Committee, composed of 25 members, and five officers.

Also, a progress report on the HSA application, being revised and readied for submission by April 16 to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for funding, will be given by Planning Committee chairman, Dr. William Laupus, Dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The session is open to the public.

Certificate To Mark The Event

WINTERVILLE — On Sunday night each person attending services at the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church will receive a certificate stating that they attended services at the church on the Fifth Sunday night in February, 1976.

There has not been a fifth Sunday in February since 1948 and there will not be another one this century. The next Fifth Sunday in February will be in the year 2004.

To celebrate the occasion there will be an informal singsgiving with the congregation and individuals taking part. A new quartet that has recently been formed within the church will sing.

The pastor, Rev. Willis Wilson, invites the public.

Another Charge

James Edward Spence, 32 of Hope Mills, has been charged with armed robbery in connection with a January 12 holdup of a finance company office in Jacksonville, according to Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon.

Spence, in custody here on armed robbery charges in connection with the February 19 robbery of the Beneficial Finance Co. office, has been charged in a warrant from Jacksonville with robbing the Avco Finance Co. of $1,233, Cannon reported.

Spence allegedly took $159 from the Greenville loan company office.

Blue And Gold Banquet Held By Pack 528

Members of Cub Scout Pack 528, sponsored by the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville, held their annual Blue and Gold Banquet recently.

Scout receiving awards during the banquet were Tim Brock, John Shaw, David Welborn, Van Jones and Lloyd Flanagan.

Entertainment for the evening was provided by Mike Thompson, a graduate in the School of Music at East Carolina University. Thompson's program consisted of various songs played on the classical guitar and banjo and was highlighted by his version of "Foggy Mountain Breakdown." Recognition for decorating the banquet room went to Lucy Adams, Peggy Sessoms and Audrey Kingsbury.

Revival Series Now In Progress

BETHEL—Revival services are now in progress at the Bethel Church of God and will continue through Sunday, March 7.

The visiting evangelist is the Rev. Doris Wingate of Vancouver. Services begin nightly at 7:30.

The Rev. Ernest Bateman, pastor, invites the public to attend.

Involvement Is Easy Process

The political process in our nation may seem mysterious to some, but in fact it is certainly not difficult to become involved in it.

The Democratic Party only recently held its precinct level meetings and registered Democrats living in a given precinct were free to attend.

The precinct meetings lead to county, district, state and then national conventions.

Janice Faulkner, who was Pitt chairman for McGovern and is currently Speakers Bureau chairman for the Democratic Party, is as interested in governmental affairs as anyone we know.

She was one of the speakers at a "Crash Course on Politics" sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt League of Women Voters.

Finding a place in politics is not difficult, Mrs. Faulkner advised.

"Read the newspapers, become acquainted with the precincts, know the boundaries of your precincts, and go to the board of elections for any answer of questions you have about your party."

"Politics is based on public appeal not charisma. You can become an effective political force by just knowing your neighbors and discussing your party and candidate favorites with them.

"If you want to support a candidate, make contact with the candidate and volunteer your time to work for his or her campaign. If you're not afraid of speaking out for your candidate wear buttons. If you believe in your candidate, it doesn't matter if he has a chance of winning, you can work hard and build your political experience.

"If you want to be actively involved, find a candidate who needs help. Politicians are ineffective unless they have grass roots support, the people who they can call on to ask others for votes."

It's as simple as that. If you don't like the way things are going, you can help change them by getting involved. If Congress and the White House seem far away, it's well to remember that the political process starts right at the precinct and county level. Participation by the public is the only thing that will make democracy work and the machinery is there in both parties by which we can all participate, if we are willing.

Extended DST Should Get Good Look

Last year the nation was on an eight month Daylight Time and a four month Standard Time basis.

The law expired, however, and unless action is taken by Congress, the old law of six months Daylight and six months Standard Time will take effect.

With the time to change over to Daylight upon us, Congress is right now considering a bill which would set up various formulas for the time change.

We liked the eight months Daylight Time, but regardless, Congress should take a long range look at the question and establish change-over times that we can depend on.

THIS AFTERNOON

School Change Inevitable

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — One of North Carolina's top financial and management experts thinks the present hierarchy in public education "defies success" and the people of the state should demand a change.

W. J. Smith, president and managing trustee of the Cameron-Brown Investment Group, was chairman of the public schools portion of the 1973 Governor's Efficiency Study Commission probe and resulting report.

At that time, mention was made of the frustrating management structure in which function an appointed State Board of Education, an elected State Superintendent of Public Instruction, an appointed President of the Community College System, and a Controller answering to the board rather than the superintendent.

Smith says he has thought about the arrangement often and thoroughly since the report was completed, and concludes that it cannot work.

Defies Success
"Trying to run any organization with three co-equals defies success," Smith said of the three officials who function under the State Board of Education.

"Such an arrangement invites, suggests, encourages, jealously, suspicions, and polarizations. The surprising thing is that the system has worked as well as it has, largely due to the character of the people involved," Smith believes. He thinks the problem goes beyond any personality conflicts which may exist, and is unworkable under any conditions.

"I'm not aware of any organization whether in private business or a governmental agency which has no chief executive officer... And if the financial officer doesn't answer to him, but can make end runs to the board... that is a repugnant thing," Smith said.

He thinks a policy board should set policy, and the chief executive officer should report to it, carry out those policies, and serve as chief administrator. "If he can't carry out the policies, they should fire him and get somebody who can," Smith said. Smith also finds fault with the inclusion of public schools and community college-technical institutes under the single State Board of Education.

"They will never be able to function with the two of them together... they are vying for funds in the wrong forum, both of them in the same room, face to face, with the Board of Education making the decisions. Those decisions ought to be made by the General Assembly or the Advisory Budget Commission," Smith said in suggesting the community college system should function by itself.

Legislative Study
Smith, who spent several years in Charlotte with the Cameron Brown subsidiary of First Union National Bank, met recently with the legislative commission rewriting state school law for consideration in the 1977 General Assembly.

Now living in Raleigh, Smith is a student at Wake Technical Institute in evening courses, and said he can see first hand the great need for highly specialized services offered in the community college system, and thinks it is strong enough, supported adequately by local governments and legislators, and successful enough to now stand alone.

He sees three separate and distinct demands for services being met by the public schools, community colleges, and university system, and suggested each should function independently.

Of the present conflicts involving State Schools Supt. A. Craig Phillips, Board Chairman Dallas Herring, Controller A. C. Davis, and Community Colleges President Ben Fountain, Smith says, "We the people ought to do something about that... we ought not permit a situation which allows these things to take place."

A subcommittee chaired by Charlotte-Mecklenburg School Board Chairman William E. Poe is currently studying alternatives for restructuring public education, and has decided to consider both the community college and public school question in its deliberations.

"Y'know sumptin', fella... there just ain't room enough in this here calendar for the both of us!"

Adios, New Hampshire

WASHINGTON—As the sun sinks slowly into the west, we bid farewell to the lovely state of New Hampshire, graveyard of presidential dreams and land of broken political promises.

New Hampshire, you are the mother of all primaries, and the nation is now a safer place knowing where each and every one of you stands on abortion, busing, gun control, detente, unemployment, tax rebates and Social Security, not to mention the Democratic and Republican candidates who crisscrossed your cold and Loeb-infected land.

What would we do without you, New Hampshire? How could we possibly get the ball rolling in the presidential Super Bowl if you didn't exist?

Every night the rest of us gathered in our living rooms, glued to our television sets, and watched your state in all its glory. By now we know every slushy street in Manchester, every leafless tree in Crawford's Notch, every snow-capped hill in Concord. We never saw so many people chopping firewood in our lives.

Yes, New Hampshire, we know more about you than anyone ever thought he'd want to know. We know you have rugged, independent people who speak their minds whether they're interviewed on ABC, CBS, NBC or public television. We've seen them in your supermarkets, your general stores, your gas stations and in your town halls, offering sage opinions on everything from Angola to the Lockheed bribe scandals.

The mystery is how people in New Hampshire had a chance to read about Angola or watch the news about Lockheed when they had to spend so much time talking to TV correspondents and newspapermen. The question that ran through all our minds as we watched you, New Hampshire, is: "When did your people sleep?"

If they weren't attending a political rally, they were being polled by Harris and Gallup; and if they weren't being polled by Harris and Gallup, their phones were ringing all night long with calls from every campaign

Other Editors Say National Primary?

(Raleigh Times)

Democratic presidential hopeful Jimmy Carter and his supporters will find it difficult to read into the New Hampshire primary results the fact that the Tuesday vote was just that: a primary vote and nothing more.

By the same token, President Ford's forces will by no means see the meager win over Ronald Reagan as a final defeat of the Californian. And though Morris Udall fared exceedingly well as second runner to Carter among the Democrats, the primary is only a beginning, only an isolated test tube, only a battle and certainly not a war.

Victory in New Hampshire is regarded as a bell-wether of what's down the road, and that is why it is difficult for all concerned, particularly the candidates, to realize that those much-coveted votes by the politically coddled granitcutters, ski salesmen, mill workers and farmers is by no means a final verdict in the political sweepstakes.

Unfortunately, though, because of the import it has been given, the New Hampshire primary tends to knock off some worthwhile candidates too soon and causes the public to tire of the Presidential race before it's barely begun.

The excess of money, shoe leather and media attention shown the New Hampshire primary will spill over in the coming week to the Massachusetts vote, and to the Florida primary after that, because everything there will be told in comparison with and relation to what happened in New Hampshire.

Primaries as a part of the presidential election process came into being because they seemed more democratic than the pure convention system which was run by politicians for politicians with comparatively little grass roots input. But there is room to wonder if we are to give the people a preliminary voice, why it couldn't be done in one national primary rather than in piecemeal extravaganzas which, as in New Hampshire, exhaust the candidates, drain their coffers and exaggerate the significance of each vote.

A nationwide preference primary binding on each state's national convention delegates only so far as the respective state party organizations should choose in advance, deserves some serious consideration. It could hardly cost more than the state-by-state series and it could, in a single stroke, test the candidates' mettle and the mood of the voters and the country.

INSIDE REPORT

Detente: Pressure Is On

By ROWLANDE EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Close advisers of President Ford, agonizing over possible primary defeats of the President, are eyeing a new, hard-line foreign policy aimed squarely at the Soviet Union as one way of reversing the tide.

Indeed, a distinct minority of these advisers believe that such a dramatic presidential switch away from detente could conceivably work only if reinforced with a companion move: the replacement of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, original architect along with former President Nixon of the now-tarnished policy of detente.

Other presidential intimates strongly dissent, claiming that although Kissinger's standing in Congress and the Washington bureaucracy has plummeted he is still the lusterless administration's brightest star out in the hinterland whose ouster would backfire on the President, especially in the general election campaign.

Just how discredited detente has become in the eyes of rank-and-file voters is shockingly clear from highly reputable polls taken over the past few weeks by various presidential candidates in the primary states of New Hampshire and Massachusetts. One such sample shows the trend.

Item: The key question, asking whether detente has favored Moscow, Washington or both equally, received these responses from a statistically sound sample in Massachusetts, Sen. George McGovern's only winning state four years ago: favored the Soviet Union, nearly 70 per cent; favored the U.S., less than 5 per cent; favored neither, less than 3 per cent.

Item: Another key question asking whether the U.S. has been too tough, too easy or just about right in its Soviet policy brought this response from Massachusetts voters: nearly 70 per cent "too easy," less than 2 per cent "too tough."

Such findings in dovish New England help explain the rising attack on the Ford-Kissinger policy of detente by such non-dovish presidential candidates as Sen. Henry M. Jackson, Democrat, and Ronald Reagan, Republican.

Up to now, Mr. Ford has made not the slightest concession despite Reagan's hard-line speech in Exeter, N.H., earlier this month. Reagan charged that the military balance has been shifting toward the Soviet Union since 1970 "through the years of so-called detente."

In his recent campaigning, Mr. Ford has seemed on the defensive over the Reagan attacks on detente, claiming that U.S. military strength has "reassured our allies" (a

Strength For Today

THE HANDS OF GOD

"We need above all things to keep our minds filled with the realization that God rules all things," said Charles Gordon, a British general facing an overwhelmingly larger enemy force during a campaign in Africa in the 1880's. John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, had the same faith when he said, "I read my newspaper in order to see how God governs the world."

Such a faith also was exhibited by Abraham Lincoln: "No human council hath devised or hath any human mind worked out these things," he declared.

"They are gracious gifts of the most high God, who while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy." Lyman Abbot, the great evangelist, expressed the same thought when he said, "I no longer look back for the evidence that God is in history: I look to see him in history now."

What the immediate future has for us we do not know, but we can be sure that our loved ones, our nation, and the whole world are in the hands of a loving God.

Economic Issues Poorly Seen?

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Are economic issues presented correctly to the American public? Prof. Wapner Heller is among those who think not. He claims people are miseducated and misled, and that as a result they misunderstand.

Is the Federal government expanding like some "monstrous protoplasmic blob that threatens to snuff out economic freedom and initiative?" asks Heller. No, he says, that's a myth of some Republicans.

As are the views of so many other economists, especially in this election year, Heller's outlook often is tied to his political interests. He is a former chief economic adviser to both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson.

Heller's criticisms, possibly as a direct result of his politics, aren't so much directed at the educational system, or at economists specifically, as they are aimed at the administrations in power during "recent years."

They have, he suggests, engendered needless anxiety and a loss of faith in the American economy. He told some of this to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress earlier this month and is now recirculating some of the views to the news media.

About that "monstrous protoplasmic blob," for example, he maintains that the federal budget as a proportion of Gross National Product held virtually steady at about 20 per cent from 1953 to 1973.

It is projected to rise to 21.5 per cent in fiscal 1977, he concedes, but adds that "adjusted to a full-employment basis, the figure would be right back at 20 per cent."

Consider what he feels is another misleading assumption, the "crushing burden of federal debt." Says Heller:

"A striking chart included in last year's budget documents (but omitted this year) shows that the federal debt held by the public dropped from 82 per cent of annual GNP in 1920 to 26 per cent in 1974."

Seen in this perspective, he adds, the public debt is a far different and more manageable problem than the general impression abroad in the land.

A third area of widespread misapprehension, Heller continues, centers on the large deficits in the federal budget. He finds what he calls "two misimpressions" being fostered:

Oppose Opening Mail

By JEFFREY MILLS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — While President Ford wants to expand the government's authority to open mail, legislation is being drafted in Congress to limit use of a companion tool, the surveillance of the outside of an envelope.

Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., chairman of the House postal facilities subcommittee, has ordered the panel's staff to draw up a bill tightening legal restrictions on such surveillance, known as a mail cover. Such a procedure involves noting information on the outside of an envelope without opening it.

Mail covers now can be undertaken by the Postal Service on written request of a law enforcement agency. This procedure also allows opening of second, third and fourth class mail.

Wilson's subcommittee bill would require court orders approving specific mail covers, a measure opposed by the Postal Service. Such court orders now are required before government agents can open first-class mail and then only in criminal investigations.

The CIA and FBI for years opened mail illegally and the Justice Department is considering prosecuting persons involved. Neither agency obtained court orders authorizing the openings.

Ford proposed in a message to Congress last week that legal mail openings be expanded "to obtain vitally needed foreign intelligence information." Ford said he wanted to expand this to include investigations of spying, sabotage and terrorism. A search warrant would be required for these under the President's proposal.

Ironically, a source close to the CIA said new mail openings probably would not produce as much useful intelligence information as the old program. "The effectiveness of the old program was that the Russians were unaware of it. Since the cover was blown on it there won't be that much information of any use going through," the source said.

Meanwhile, a White House official who participated in drafting Ford's plan said such a proposal "absolutely would not" lead to programs of the magnitude of the former CIA and FBI programs. "That was a mas-

The Greenville High boys team closed out their regular season last night by defeating Williamston, 50-1.

The game marked the close of one of the most successful basketball seasons for the local high school in many years.

Carl Pierce, Joseph Hatem, George Lautares and Harry Rountree played their last basketball game last night. They will graduate this year.

The game was easy from start to finish and every man got to play, with many substitutes contributing to the score.

Thomas Parrish and Lautares ran neck and neck in scoring, each finished with 11. Hatem added 9.

Psychiatrist Uncertain About Falsehoods By Patty

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A psychiatrist who concluded that Patricia Hearst's account of fear in the terrorist underground was a truthful one says he can't definitely rule out specific instances of lying without lie detector tests.

Dr. Martin Orne, a University of Pennsylvania expert in detecting fabricated stories, said Thursday "it would take a polygraph examination" to uncover falsehoods Miss Hearst may want kept hidden within herself.

Orne was the second of three psychiatrists called by defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, who managed to get the comment about the polygraph on the record despite vigorous protests by the prosecution.

The third expert, Dr. Robert J. Lifton of Yale University, was scheduled to resume his testimony under questioning by Bailey today. He said Thursday that he examined Miss Hearst for a total of 17 hours in January and last week, but court was recessed for the day before he began discussing his report.

Meanwhile, the chief prosecutor, U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr., hinted outside the courtroom that the government has a surprise witness.

"Something is in the wind," Browning said when asked about rumors that the government had an important witness for rebuttal of Miss Hearst's testimony. He would not elaborate, however.

The government contends Miss Hearst was a willing participant in a San Francisco bank robbery two months after her kidnaping by the Symbionese Liberation Army. The defense has sought to show she took part in the robbery only because she feared for her life at the hands of the terrorist group.

As the fifth week of Miss Hearst's trial neared an end, Bailey was poised to fight for the admission of the results of three days of polygraph examinations of his client, which reportedly indicate Miss Hearst was telling the truth.

Orne had admitted under rigorous cross-examination by Asst. U.S. Atty. David Bancroft that he was trained to generally decide whether a person was lying and left specifics to machines and others.

Bailey spotted the opening and on re-direct questioning asked him about it. Browning has repeatedly said he will fight the admission of the polygraph results, and that show-down could come today.

"For testing the truthfulness of a single, isolated event, what is the best method?" asked Bailey.

Bancroft immediately jumped to his feet, and the attorneys approached U.S. Dist. Judge Oliver J. Carter for a hushed conference that lasted more than five minutes.

Carter announced he would let Orne answer the question but directed Bailey to then "cease his questioning in this area" until a hearing outside the presence of the jury is held on the polygraph tests given Miss Hearst earlier this year.

Orne then answered Bailey's question by saying, "The administration of a polygraph test by a competent technician."

The brief exchange was the harbinger of a major remaining struggle between the defense and prosecution.

Bailey contends the polygraph results are reliable and legitimate evidence that will establish the innocence of the 22-year-old newspaper heiress, who says she was frightened for her life when she joined her SLA kidnapers in the April 1974 bank robbery.

Browning counters that the tests are faulty and said outside court Thursday that "there is no precedence that I know of in this district whereby the appeals court has allowed the admission of polygraph results as evidence."

The jury will be excused while Carter hears testimony from both sides on the polygraph issue, which will come as soon as Lifton finishes his testimony.

Carter has hinted previously that he would be hard-pressed to justify admitting the tests with the weight of appellate decisions against such a maneuver.

During nearly a full day on the witness stand Thursday, Orne clung to his conclusion that Miss Hearst was not fabricating her story of the fright and abuse she suffered in 19 months of underground travels.

He conceded once that perhaps he should have "probed further" into a year of Miss Hearst's life on the run — from September 1974 until her arrest last Sept. 18.

"I had a limited period of time with Miss Hearst," he said. "I focused on the events I felt were most significant."

The defendant has testified she was forced to make the tapes, and the words she spoke were written by others.

The psychiatrist based much of his testimony on the contention that Miss Hearst, consistently fed opportunities to make self-serving statements, did not. She refused, he said, to embellish to her favor any situation, even the rapes in the closets where she was held captive after her kidnaping.

Miss Hearst said she was sexually assaulted against her will but did not put up a fight, fearing she would be killed.

She repeatedly skipped cues to put her answers to the psychiatrists' questions in tones that would make her look better, Orne said.

Bancroft, however, won a concession from Orne that several of Miss Hearst's actions shortly after her arrest could be interpreted as self-serving.

He specifically cited the discovery of weapons in Miss Hearst's last hideout, which she explained by saying SLA member William Harris would have been angered if she had not kept loaded weapons in the house. Could this not be self-serving, asked Bancroft. Orne agreed.

Bancroft also referred to the defendant listing her occupation on a jail log as "urban guerrilla" only because the matron demanded an occupation to be listed and her clinched fist salute as an attempt to please SLA member Emily Harris, arrested the same day.

"Could those be self-serving?" Orne was asked. He replied, "It's possible."

The wonder of it all is how your citizens could keep a straight face when the greatest politicians of our land grasped their hands and promised each and every one of them a rose garden.

Oh, what a show you put on, New Hampshire! It was better than Howard Cosell Live on Saturday Night; it was better than the Muhammad Ali fight from Puerto Rico; it was better than a Miss Teen-Age America beauty pageant.

You won our hearts, if not our minds, New Hampshire. As Theodore White will undoubtedly write in "The Making of the President 1976": "It all started in January when () stepped out of his station wagon into the snow-covered road of Keene, N.H., a road that would eventually lead him to the White House."

And so it's time to bid "au revoir" to you, New Hampshire. We'd love to watch you for the rest of the winter and spring. But we've got to move on to Massachusetts and Florida and West Virginia, wherever the primaries will take us.

I guess we won't see anything of you for the next four years. But keep chopping that wood and keep those home fires burning with copies of the Manchester Union. New Hampshire, you may be forgotten, but you're not gone.

In 1980 we'll all be back again: the TV correspondents, the newspaper columnists, the pollsters, the campaign workers and, of course, the candidates telling everyone what a great people you have produced and what a wonderful thing it is to talk to real Americans.

I know it's going to be lonesome up there now with no one to talk to. Yet someone might come back in November just to see how your people voted in the national elections.

But I wouldn't count on it. New Hampshire, you may be the mother of primaries, but as a factor in the election, you have as much clout as North Dakota.

dubious proposition to some of those allies) and that his own reputation during a quarter-century in Congress was that of "a tough Yankee trader."

Some presidential advisers believe that if Mr. Ford loses the early primaries, only a reversion to a hard-line Soviet policy could set the political stage for recouping his fallen fortunes in later primaries. They feel — and display the polls as evidence — that the impact on U. S. voters of the Soviet decision to train, supply and use Cuban mercenaries in Angola, 8,000 miles from Moscow, has been sharp enough to make such a switch credible and widely acceptable.

But in addition to this purely political rationale (which Mr. Ford himself has by no means adopted), a deeper justification for going hard-line on Moscow is also under discussion at high levels of the administration: that if the perception takes hold abroad that Mr. Ford is indeed being defeated by Reagan for the Republican nomination, he will be quickly transformed from one of the weakest Presidents to the weakest of all in U. S. history.

He suffers now as the first President never nationally elected, but if he appears to be losing to Reagan, that weakness would be gravely deepened. He would find himself bargaining with Moscow — for a second strategic arms agreement (SALT), for one example — from a highly vulnerable position, with Moscow correspondingly strengthened.

One top pro-Ford Republican leader told us this chilling prospect has "kept me lying awake in the dark of night, worrying who will govern our country if the President starts losing the nomination battle." He foresees a dangerous power vacuum, with the Democratic Congress, anti-Ford and working on its own election, becoming ever more intransigent on foreign policy.

In such an atmosphere, a presidential decision to harden the line on Moscow, refuse further concessions on SALT II and exploit the rampant anti-detente mood might be seen not only as a reflexive political reaction but also as an essential holding pattern until the new President takes command.

YOU Have Major Role In Prevention Of Crime

LOCK IT UP — Grifton Crime Prevention Officer Joey Herbert displays various door locks, window locks, and burglar and fire alarms. (Reflector Staff Photo by Susan Quinn)

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer
GRIFTON—"Crime Prevention only keeps honest men honest and the more prevention you use the more honest you make men," explained Joey Herbert, crime prevention officer in Grifton.
"The stronger the lock, the more honest the man. The harder it is for a possible intruder to get in, the more possible the chance that the intruder will go elsewhere because most intruders want to get in as easily and quietly as possible."

Security Systems
The different kinds of securities that citizens might use include one inch dead bolt locks, double cylinder dead bolt locks, alarm systems, window locks, solid core exterior doors, and identification of all property by engraving your N.C. license number of the item.

"The one-inch dead bolt locks are probably the best locks to use on a sturdy door. The only problem is that you have to use a key to unlock it from the inside during the night to assure you quick and easy exit in case of a fire. Some dead bolt locks also have releases from the inside which may turn when unlocking other locks on the door, or may unlock independently by turning."

Burglar alarms and deadbolt locks are recommended for mobile home trailers and for homes in the country.
Herbert is now initiating a new crime prevention program in Grifton called operation identification. Through this program each citizen may borrow one of the five engravers from the police station and engrave their N.C. license number on valuables.
Citizens may also display stickers on their windows which states that all valuable items within their homes are identified with their license numbers.
Herbert attended the Justice Academy in Wilson and has trained in the neighborhood-watch program. He has been a police officer in Grifton for several years.
The following is a list of other crime prevention tips issued to citizens by Officer Herbert:
(1) Report any suspicious activity in your neighborhood to your local police department.
(2) Install effective locks on doors and windows.
(3) Use proper lighting at night. Give your home that lived-in look. Have lights shine on the house, not in the eyes of neighbors or police.
(4) Discontinue milk and newspaper deliveries when away. Have a neighbor collect your mail and circulars.
(5) Keep shrubbery trimmed away from doors and windows. Burglars like to hide behind bushes while working on your windows and doors.
(6) Lock your car when you park and never leave packages or valuables where they can be seen. Lock them in the trunk. Make sure you remove the ignition key. Use concealed areas in stationwagons.
(7) Certain type women's handbags invite trouble. Practice holding onto your purse rather than hanging bag on arm or shoulder.
(8) If threatened by a robber, do as you are told. Surrendered valuables can be replaced—a life cannot. Get a good description and call Police immediately.

Study Rate Guarantee To Savings Bond Buyer

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—Small investors in U.S. savings bonds would be guaranteed a 4 per cent interest payment from the Treasury under the House-passed debt limit bill awaiting Senate scrutiny.

triotic purchases of Series E savings bonds." It would cost the Treasury an estimated $26 million in additional interest outlays during the upcoming fiscal year starting Oct. 1.
Under current Treasury policy, interest on E bonds is only computed every six months. A person who buys a bond and holds it, for example, for five and one-half months, would collect no interest when the bond is redeemed.
For those who hold the bonds for between six months and one year, interest of 3.7 per cent accrues at the six-month mark, and only rises above 4 per cent if the bonds are held for longer than one year.

The 4 per cent minimum annual investment yield on Series E bonds would be computed monthly. But there would be no change in the existing rule that all buyers hold bonds at least 60 days before redemption.

Of the two kinds of U.S. savings bonds — Series E and Series H — the Series E bond is generally considered the most important one for the smaller investor. While H bonds are in larger denominations, E bonds can be bought in smaller amounts on a regular basis — such as through a payroll deduction plan.
The bill, which was approved 212-189, would raise the national debt ceiling to $617 billion through June 30. The administration advocated $630 billion through June 30 or $645 billion through Sept. 30.
If the current temporary $595 billion limit vanishes on schedule at midnight March 15, the ceiling automatically would plunge to the permanent $400 billion level. Because this would be well below actual debt by that time, it would mean a swift stop for federal operations since the government could no longer legally pay its bills.
While Congress never lets the situation reach that crisis stage, there are political fights over a new number and date as the time draws near for action. This time, when the House passed it, there were 166 Democrats and 46 Republicans on the winning side. The opponents included 97 Democrats and 92 Republicans.

Senators are to start considering the new $627-billion national debt limit legislation in their Finance Committee next month about the time the federal debt is likely to begin bumping up against the current $595 billion ceiling.
Before passing the bill increasing the ceiling by $32 billion Wednesday, the House adopted an amendment which would require the Treasury to pay a minimum 4 per cent annual interest on U.S. Series E savings bonds held at least two months before redemption.
Rep. Fortney H. Stark, D-Calif., chief sponsor of the amendment, termed it an effort to give "the small investor a decent return for (his or her) pa-

Swimming Pool Is Fish Pond

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Dave Tillman, 64-year-old retired businessman who loves kids and fishing, has converted the Olympic-sized swimming pool at the apartment complex where he lives into a fishing pond for kids.
He has the permission of the management to hold a fishing contest in April for the children who live in the 400-unit Pinehurst garden apartments.
He is stocking the 144,000 gallon pool with fish he has caught and which are being donated by other fishermen.
He began stocking it in September, after it was closed to swimming until May.

Overdoses Of Darvon May Result In Restrictions

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — New restrictions may be slapped on the nation's most popular prescription pain killer because of a sharp increase in fatal overdoses and concern about addiction.

This spring, the Food and Drug Administration will take a new look at the safety of propoxyphene, which is best known under the brand name Darvon, FDA sources say.

As the FDA inquiry is started, another federal agency will renew its plea for restrictions on the drug. The Drug Enforcement Administration plans to make a new request for limits on propoxyphene because of evidence it is addictive.

The most serious report of overdose deaths came in North Carolina, where the chief medical examiner's office said there has been an "alarming increase" in such deaths.

Dr. Arthur McBay of the examiner's office says at least 45 people died of overdoses of Darvon and other propoxyphene products in North Carolina in 1975 — three times the number of heroin overdose deaths and twice the number of fatal overdoses of barbiturates.

Only two deaths were attributed to the drug in the state in 1969, he said, but that figure soared to 30 in 1974 and 45 last year.

There have also been reports from several other states and one foreign country of increases in deaths from propoxyphene overdoses, McBay says.

Nationwide, overdose deaths from propoxyphene have increased, but not as fast as in North Carolina, says Ernie Caraballo, head of the DEA's drug abuse warning network.

Overdose deaths from Darvon and other propoxyphene products were estimated nationally at 409 from July through December 1974, he said, compared to 389 for the same period in 1973. Based on reports from medical examiners for the first three months of 1975 — the latest data available — he said 510 deaths from overdoses of the drug are projected for the first six months of 1975.

The DEA's renewed petition for restrictions on propoxyphene prescriptions is based on the agency's contention that the drug can cause "traditional dependence" like narcotics and is now being used as a second drug by heroin addicts. DEA sources say the agency's presentation — an update of its 1973 petition rejected by the FDA — should be ready in about two months.

Restrictions proposed by the DEA in 1973 and under consideration by the FDA are relatively minor: a six-month time limit on one prescription with no more than five fillings of that prescription.

Both the FDA and the Eli Lilly and Co., the developers and marketers of Darvon products, say it was McBay's report of increased overdose deaths in the Journal of the American Medical Association that spurred this re-examination of the available data.

Steve Kennedy of the FDA drug abuse section says the FDA Controlled Substances Advisory Committee probably will consider propoxyphene at its next meeting early this year — particularly McBay's report.

Russ Durbin, a Lilly spokesman in Indianapolis, said the company is also examining McBay's data.

But Lilly is still confident of the safety and effectiveness of Darvon when taken as directed by a physician, Durbin emphasized.

He added the proposed limits on prescriptions would have little effect, since he said a prescription for Darvon is filled an average of twice every six months — well below the proposed limit.

Lilly opposed the DEA's request for such a limit in 1973.

McBay supports such controls on propoxyphene, saying that such limits will cut down on overdoses.

Restrictions on barbiturates helped slash overdose deaths from that class of drugs in North Carolina from about 35 a year to about 20 a year now, McBay said.

Most of the propoxyphene overdoses in North Carolina were suicides, but some were accidental, McBay said, a pattern that apparently is reflected nationwide.

McBay said a fatal dose of propoxyphene is about 20 capsules of the 65 milligram dose, although the fatal dose is slightly smaller if combined with alcohol. An average Darvon prescription is 24 or 25 capsules.

Darvon is one of the largest selling drugs in the world, and McBay said his letter to the national medical journal was designed to warn physicians of the drug's dangers.

"Our hope was to arouse physicians to the fact that this is a toxic material," he said. "At one time, it was given out like candy."

Exact sales figures are not available, but Darvon-65, a combination of propoxyphene, aspirin and other chemicals, was the third largest selling drug in the country in 1974. The four other forms in which Lilly sells Darvon — Darvon, Darvon

N, Darvocet-N and Darvon N-A.S.A. — also ranked among the top 200 drugs in the country that year.

Lilly did tell a Senate subcommittee that it distributed 128 million free doses of Darvon products to U.S. doctors in 1972.

Lilly's patent on a major form of propoxyphene ran out in late 1972. Now more than 50 companies market some form of the drug, although Darvon products still are the largest sellers by a wide margin.

French Telephone Use Creates 'Unbelievers'

By ELIAS ANTAR
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — The French are divided into two categories: those waiting to get a telephone and those waiting to get a dial tone.

So goes a longtime joke symbolizing public feeling about France's telephone system.

Long neglected by successive regimes, it has become a technical and administrative morass of scandalous proportions for an industrial country.

"Telecommunications have suffered and are still suffering from a state of underdevelopment not worthy of a great country like France," said Aymar Achille-Fould, Minister of Posts, Telephones and Telecommunications — PTT.

A tabulation by American Telephone and Telegraph puts France in 19th place out of 20 countries, only a shade ahead of Spain. Sweden leads the world with 45.08 lines per 100 inhabitants, followed by the United States with 36.22. The current French figure is 13.2.

Only half the calls made in Paris get through on the first try, a parliamentary report said, yet telephone rates are among the highest in Europe and have just been hiked again. It takes an average of 18 months to get a new line installed and in many cases up to five years.

The United States and several European countries have fully automatic systems. There are still 400,000 manually operated lines in France.

"There will be only 15 days' delay for a new phone in the 1980s," Achille-Fould declared before Parliament, but the country only snickered.

Achille-Fould joins a long line of hapless predecessors. He promised Parliament a communications utopia, but not before 1982. The PTT will invest 18 billion francs ($U.S. 4.1 billion) in modernizing the system this year and by 1982 France should have 19.5 million lines. With population growth, that works out to 35.4 lines per 100 people — less than the present U.S. figure.

"I'll believe all this when I see it," said Jean Francois Berry, President of the French Telephone Users' Association — AFUTT — whose members include 500 firms and 4,500 individuals. "For the moment it's all just words, and we've heard them before."

A local call in Paris now costs the equivalent of about 9 cents and there are no free monthly calls included. To get a phone one must pay an "installation tax" of $182 and a monthly subscription charge of $8.

Then there is the billing problem, currently the focus of AFUTT efforts. The PTT does not compile itemized bills, but lists only total charges for local and long distance calls.

Need Appointment For Merit Exams

Beginning March 1, appointments for taking state merit exams will be mandatory.

The Office of State Personnel announced that applicants who want to qualify for a state competitive service job can schedule the time, location, and merit exam by calling 800-662-7094 or in Raleigh, 829-3850. Scheduling will allow better utilization of test centers in Asheville, Boone, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Raleigh, Fayetteville, Greenville, and Wilmington.

State Personnel has eliminated nine underused testing locations, usually at colleges, in Murfreesboro, Mt. Olive, Morehead City, Elizabeth City, Bolling Springs, Rocky Mount, Greensboro, and Cullowhee.

Each month about 1,800 applicants take one of 150 different merit exams to qualify for jobs in social services, mental health and public health. When jobs become available in the 16 state competitive service agencies, applicants are considered in order of their test scores.

Merit exams are administered by the Recruitment and Testing Division of State Personnel with assistance from local Employment Security Commission and Department of Human Resources Offices.

Information about jobs requiring merit tests is available from local Employment Security Commission offices.

Stock Exchange-listed issues. Trading was active. Brokers noted an atmosphere of disappointment over the Dow's unsuccessful efforts to reach the 1,000 level over the past three sessions.

They also said investors were showing some uneasiness over the prospect of a possible upward trend in interest rates.

Weekly statistics from the Federal Reserve showed a rise in the basic measure of the nation's money supply, and there was speculation that that might prompt the Fed to follow a more restrictive credit policy.

As the Market opened this morning, New York's First National City Bank raised its prime lending rate from 6 1/2 to 6 3/4 per cent. Citibank had gone to 6 1/2 several weeks ago, but no other major banks had matched that reduction since.

On the positive side, the government reported that its index of leading economic indicators posted its biggest rise in six months during January.

Texaco was the most active Big Board issue, off 1/4 at 25. A 25,000-share block traded that price.

The NYSE's composite index lost .32 to 53.30 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped .41 to 103.76.

Vote Limits On Growth At Campuses

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors voted today to place strict limits on enrollment growth at the university's 16 campuses next year.

Under the limits, total university enrollment could grow by no more than 3.5 per cent, about half the growth rate of the previous two years.

Dr. William Friday, president of the university, said the limits were necessary because the legislature had not granted enough money to fund unchecked growth.

In addition, he said, some campuses, particularly North Carolina State University in Raleigh, had far exceeded their enrollment projections by admitting all qualified applicants.

Friday said each campus would have to take "the necessary steps" to stay within the limits, but he did not say whether that would mean turning away qualified applicants

Lottery-Winner Is Broke Again

HAMILTON, Canada (AP) — Sandor Nagy, 49-year-old ex-janitor and violin enthusiast, spent a $100,000 lottery check in seven months. Now he says, "It's only money. I was happy before when I had nothing. I'll be happy again."

Nagy won an Ontario lottery July 24. Afterwards, he opened a restaurant, threw parties, played the horses and visited his native Hungary, where he gave money to his ex-wife and six children.

On Wednesday, Nagy closed his restaurant. "If I won $100,000 again, I would just spend it, but no more restaurants. I just like to have a good time and play my violin," Nagy said in an interview.

Tadpoles Keep Ponds 'Alive'

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Tadpoles play a pivotal role in keeping freshwater ponds alive, clean and young, according to a Pennsylvania State University biologist.

Dr. Dianne B. Seale, research associate at Penn State, says that the polliwogs, working below the pond's surface like miniature filtration systems, suck up scum formed by algae, bacteria and pond debris.

Dr. Seale explains that while some of the substances pass through the tadpoles virtually unchanged most gets trapped in their wastes and a smaller quantity nourishes the tadpoles and leaves the pond when they do — as frogs.

Prison Construction Program Is Aired

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Corrections Secretary David Jones announced today $22 million prison construction program designed to add 1,016 single cells to the state prison system by late 1978.

Jones said about $10 million of the work will be done with prison labor on 12 projects that will add 544 new single cells to the system.

The program will include a new high-rise prison at Salisbury with 472 single cells which will cost an estimated $12.9 million. Jones said the Salisbury project is expected to be let to contract in May or June.

Completion is set for late 1978, he said. Jones said that the use of prison labor will help solve the problem of prison idleness and will provide the new facilities in much shorter time than if the projects were let to contract.

He estimated the cost savings through the use of prison labor at about 40 per cent.

Other projects included: —A 24-cell unit at the Yancey County prison unit at Burnsville at a cost of $386,800. —A 24-cell unit at the Yadkin County unit at Yadkinville at $361,000.

—A 28-cell addition at the Franklin County unit at Bunn at $399,900.

—A 144-cell facility at the Caledonia prison at Pillery at $3 million.

—A 144-cell addition to the Odom prison at Jackson at $3 million.

—A 28-cell facility at the Currituck County unit at Maple at $393,000.

—A 28-cell complex at the Columbus County unit at Brunswick at $460,900.

—A 24-cell addition to the Scotland County unit at Wagram at $401,100.

—A 24-cell facility at the Stanly County unit at Albemarle at $352,700.

—A 28-cell addition to the Mecklenburg County unit at Huntersville at $465,400.

—Twenty four cells at the McDowell County unit at Marion at $352,800.

Report Rape At Gunpoint

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — A woman was forced at gunpoint to ride with a man and a youth from a nightspot in Gaffney, S.C., to Gastonia, where she was raped, police report.

Cleveland Millwood, 29, of Gastonia, and Ronald Dean Gregg, 17, of Kings Mountain, were arrested and charged with raping the 20-year-old Cherokee County, S.C., woman, authorities said. The accused were held without privilege of bond for a hearing today in state District Court.

A resident of Gastonia heard a description of a car on his citizens band radio. He alerted police to a car where the arrests were made Thursday night.

Jerry Lewis In Hospital Care

HOUSTON (AP) — Entertainer Jerry Lewis has been hospitalized at Methodist Hospital for what a Baylor College of Medicine spokesman said is treatment of recurring neuralgia.

A spokesman for the research center said Thursday the neuralgia condition is confined to Lewis' neck and back. Neuralgia is an acute pain along the course of one or more nerves.

"He is doing fine," the spokesman said. "It is nothing serious. He should be out and on his way in three or four days at the most."

Air Raid Claim Believed Mask

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Cambodian government charged today that American jets bombed Siem Reap, the provincial capital near the Angkor ruins, killing 15 persons and wounding more than 30.

The U.S. Embassy in Bangkok said the charge was "ridiculous and completely without truth."

There was speculation that the accusation was an attempt to mask a large-scale attack by Cambodian foes of the Communist regime. Refugees fleeing into Thailand recently have reported extensive dissident activity in the Siem Reap area of northwest Cambodia, including small-scale armed attacks. But there have been no reports that the insurgents had any access to aircraft.

Radio Phnom Penh said "an American imperialist F111" jet dropped three bombs in the center of Siem Reap at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday. It said a second attack occurred at 2 p.m. that day, and the jets flew north toward Thailand.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said there are no F111s in Thailand, and "no U.S. planes from anywhere were involved in any such incident."

Siem Reap is in northwest Cambodia. The broadcast said the first bomb weighed more than 1,100 pounds and left a crater in the market place more than 21 feet deep and 30 feet across.

It said the afternoon attack destroyed the hospital and accounted for the casualties. The dead included soldiers, farmers and others, the broadcast said.

Phnom Penh did not specify what kind of jet or jets were involved in the second alleged attack.

"The government of democratic Cambodia condemns absolutely and with great anger the very savage aggression of the imperialist Americans on the province of Siem Reap on Feb. 25," the broadcast said.

The U.S. and Thai governments have announced that all American combat planes have been withdrawn from Thailand, and that only a few logistic and general purpose aircraft remain.

We talked about the possibilities of utilizing service organizations in the United States like the Kiwanis Club International to work for closer associations with other countries."

Each year the Kiwanis International has a theme. This year the theme is "Touch A Life".

"The touch a life theme is to direct the Kiwanis clubs to expand their service projects to at least add one new service projects to their schedules this year. There are 6,800 Kiwanis Clubs and I anticipate that there will be at least 10,000 additional service projects this year.

"The North Carolina and South Carolina Kiwanis District has 171 Clubs. It is an active district and one of our top districts in Kiwanis International," Osborn said.

Aside from all of his civic activities, Osborn also has a family. His older daughter is married. His three younger children are living at home with their aunt and uncle who have moved into the Osborn home to allow Mrs. Osborn to travel with her husband.

In his view leisure hours, which Osborn explained that he has very few of this year, he likes to play tennis and read.

After his visit in Greenville, Osborn will immediately travel to Cleveland, Ohio, then to Chicago and Lexington later this weekend. Other later travels include a trip to Europe this summer and a tour of the Orient.

January's Job Count Better

RALEIGH (AP)—Nonfarm employment in North Carolina during January showed an increase of 34,200 over the same month last year.

Labor Commissioner T. Avery Nye Jr. reported Thursday that employment held firm or showed slight increases in most state manufacturing industries last month.

Nonfarm employment totaled 2,025,300.

Compared to December, employment dropped 17,900, due primarily to normal seasonal declines in several employment groups, Nye said. The seasonal cutbacks included 10,100 in retail trade following the Christmas rush, 3,000 in education, 1,500 in tobacco stemmeries, 1,100 in services, 1,000 in construction and 800 in transportation.

Nye said the increase over January last year indicates "the economy is in a recovery stage."

He noted that job levels remained unchanged from December to January in the state's largest industries, such as textiles, apparel, lumber and chemicals. The furniture industry showed the largest increase of 400 employees.

Average hourly earnings of North Carolina's 757,700 factory workers increased five cents to $3.70 in January, Nye said. However, the workweek dropped by 0.7-hours to an average of 39.9 hours. The shorter workweek caused weekly earn-

Clergyman Gets Sentence For Crime Spree

EXETER, England (AP) — An Anglican clergyman was sentenced to seven years in prison after a two-year crime spree which included holding up a bank with a fake bomb.

The Rev. Stephen Care, a 32-year-old bachelor, looked pale but otherwise showed little emotion Thursday in court.

"We're going to be like Rob-in Hood," he told his housekeeper, Stella Bunting, 59, when she asked if he was doing wrong.

Mrs. Bunting, wearing spectacles and a hearing aid, was granted a conditional discharge for two years after admitting she took part with Care in a holdup at a school.

Total value of the stolen property was $38,000, Prosecutor Neil Butterfield said.

The Rev. Mr. Care carried out the raid on the bank in Plymouth "with considerable preparation and forethought" when he was short of money. He entertained on an extensive scale and had expensive tastes, Butterfield said.

BOMB SCARE—A bomb scare at the Wachovia Building in Fayetteville Thursday temporarily disrupted Gov. James E. Holshouser's speech to a group of supporters for President Gerald Ford. Ford supporters moved out of the building and across the street to a city park where Holshouser continued his address. No bomb was found. (AP Wirephoto)

Pirates Host ASU In Tourney Opener

FANCY DRIBBLE—Winston-Salem's Carlos Terry exhibits some pretty fancy dribbling as he tries to maintain control. Winston-Salem defeated

Elizabeth City State last night in the CIAA Tournament in Hampton, Va., 77-74. (AP Wirephoto)

The 1976 basketball season has come down to Saturday night. It's win or pack up time for the Southern Conference teams, including East Carolina's Pirates.

This weekend, the first round of the annual Southern Conference tournament will be held at the sites of the top four seeded teams. The Bucs, who finished in a three-way tie for third with Richmond and Appalachian State, gained the fourth seed on a point-spread basis. That gives them a home-court berth against Appalachian. The game starts at 7:30 p.m. in Minges tomorrow.

Elsewhere, first place Virginia Military will be at home to last place Davidson; second place William and Mary hosts seventh place Furman, while Richmond entertains The Citadel.

The four winners move on to Greenville, S. C., for the semifinals and finals next Wednesday and Thursday. The four losers pack up their gear.

And as usual, the tournament doesn't come at a good time for the Pirates. "We're always in exams when the tournament rolls around," Coach Dave Patton said. "It isn't like this game in the only thing on our players' minds. They've had examinations all week and this hinders our preparations."

Patton expects a tough game from the Mountaineers. "We will have to play a very good game to win. They are a very fine team capable of beating anyone in the conference. So if we are not at our best, they'll be the ones going to Greenville next week."

Patton feels that the Bucs must be smart and patient and get the good shots. "We have done this the last couple of games. I just hope we can continue to do so."

The coach doesn't see Appalachian changing its tactics during the tournament. "We look for them to do the same things they've been doing. They'll work for the good shots. They've been hitting a very good percentage in their last two games, too. And the way things have been for us recently, everyone has shot the eyes out of it. So we're going to have to play a good enough defense to make them take bad shots."

"We're in a game-to-game situation now. If we lose, we're through. There's no tomorrow to make up for it now. We only play if we win," Patton said. "So if we're not ready, we won't have another chance."

The Bucs go into the game with an 11-4 record, and a two-game winning streak. The Bucs topped Georgia Southern, 91-85, last Saturday, and took Western Carolina, 75-62, on Monday.

The Pirates are averaging 72.1 points a game and allowing 78.7. They've been rebounded by just one rebound all year, 1,000 to 1,001.

Earl Garner leads the Buc scoring with a 15.0 average, while Reggie Lee has a 13.0 mark and Al Edwards is at 10.9. Larry Hunt is hitting 9.4 per game, and Wade Henkel, 8.0.

Hunt is the leading rebounder at 9.4 per game, with Garner next at 6.0.

Appalachian is 12-13 overall.

and won two of its last three games. They beat Western Carolina in overtime, 84-83, then lost to VMI, 78-74 at Lexington, Va. They beat Georgia Southern Monday, 84-68.

The Mountaineers are averaging 69.2 points a game, and allowing 72.8. They've been outrebounded, 1,058 to 1,109.

Darryl Robinson leads the scoring with a 15.2 average, with only Calvin Bowser, 14.5, also in double figures. Mel Hubbard has a 9.8 average and Bob Pace at 9.8. Pace and Robinson are due to start at the guards, Bowser and Mark Campbell at the guards. Hubbard, their center, is questionable, due to an ankle injury.

Hubbard is also the leading rebounder at 8.1 per game.

Top reserves include guard Alvin Gentry, and forward Tim Leahy, who hit 20 against Georgia Southern.

"We'll need strong play from everyone to beat (East Carolina) down there," first year coach Bobby Cremins said.

"We'll have to shoot well, play good defense and run our defense properly to win."

Cremins added that he is very pleased with the progress his team has made this year. "We are looking better each game and we've improved tremendously since the first of the season. We are still a young club, but we've matured and we've learned a great deal of basketball this season."

This year the league is seen as one of the closest around from top to bottom. Observers would not be surprised to see any one of the lower seeded teams make it to the final four. If any team does seem to have an edge, it might be VMI over Davidson.

In recent weeks, Furman has beaten South Carolina and upset East Carolina. The Citadel may be the most improved team in the league since the season started, and of course as East Carolina fans know, Appalachian has been a thorn in the side of Pirate teams since joining the conference.

ECC Girls Are Set To Battle

Being in the right place at the right time is an important factor in girls basketball. And the team that is in the right place the most often next week will win the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament.

The tournament opens Monday night at Farmville Central, the first time Farmville has hosted the post-season affair. Things are pointing to an exciting week of basketball both for the boys and the girls.

Girls teams usually do not have the type of shooters that can consistently hit from 15 and 20-feet out. So they have to move in closer and try to get as many rebounds and second and third shots as possible. And that means being in the right place.

A few exceptions to the rule are North Pitt's Kathi Manning, Conley's Alice Costin, Ayden-Grifton's Audrey McCarter and Farmville Central's Jennifer Counterman who all can paint rainbows.

But the rest of them would rather be closer to the nets.

The team that has been in that right place most is Southern Nash which can win the title tonight. They can do no worse than a tie with second place North Lenoir which is a game back at 10-3.

North Pitt could have moved into third place by itself and given Southern Nash the title had they beaten North Lenoir Wednesday night. But the Panthers lost falling back into a tie for third with Farmville Central.

North Pitt is led by Kathi Manning 12.5 points per game and Joy Forbes, 9.9 points per game. Farmville Central has been led by Wanda Phillips and Miss Counterman.

C.B. Aycock is tied for fourth and Ayden-Grifton. The two play tonight to settle that dispute. McCarter is leading the area in scoring with a 13.9 average. The Lady Chargers can get strong under-the-board strength from Cindy Potter and Karen Hasely. Helping on the scoring will be Toni Smith and Vertha Dixon.

Conley's girls are in fifth. The Valkyries have had their problems this year, the main one being depth. Alice Costin is the best they have and one player can not carry a team through the upcoming tournament.

Bringing up the rear is Greene Central but the Ewes don't always play like they are last. Teresa Whitley is seventh in the area in scoring hitting 10.2 and Vanessa Hooker is 20th.

The girls tournament has all the indications of being just as exciting as the boys tournament is hoped to be. With four teams with winning records and four with losing records but six of them within five games of the top, it could really be a battle.

Cox Has 1st Loss

Krispy Kreme upset previously unbeaten Cox Realty last night in the Women's Basketball League. The loss kept Cox from winning the title outright, and kept alive Krispy Kreme's hopes of at least a share of the title.

The victory came by a 69-40 score. Krispy Kreme built up a 34-15 lead at the half and outhit Cox in the second half, 35-25 to take it. Vangie Jones led Krispy Kreme with 18 points, while Lou Swaim had 17 and Debbie Allen had 14. Lyn Kearney and Jolly Jones each had 13 for Cox.

In the second game, Little Mint took a 35-25 win over winless Book Barn. Little Mint held an 18-10 lead at the half. Vivian Humphrey led Little Mint with 16, while Sandra Spivey led Book Barn with eight.

Nash Tops Rose Girls

RED OAK—Northern Nash took a 47-30 victory over the Rose High School girls' basketball team last night. The loss eliminated Rose from a shot at a post-season tournament bid.

The Division I teams will include only the top four teams in its tournament next week, dropping the bottom two. Rose had to win its final two to have a chance at a berth in the affair.

Northern gained the upper hand early, moving to a 10-6 lead. The Lady Knights came on with a 12-7 second period, building a 22-13 lead at the half. Northern continued to pull away in the third period, 13-6, as its lead climbed to 38-19. They finished off the Lady Rampants, 12-11.

Linda Mackin led Northern Nash with 16 points, while Hope Baker had 12 and Kathy Weaver had 10. Patricia Jenkins led Rose with 12.

Rose will host Wilson on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in its final game of the year.

Rose—Jeffreys 7, C. Taylor 7, Jenkins 12, Leggett 2, Payton 2, P. Taylor, Carney, Knott, R. Cox.

Three Area Basketball Teams Enter Tournaments

Two area conference basketball tournaments will get underway this weekend, involving 1-A and 2-A teams.

Friday night, the 2-A Eastern Plains Conference begins first round play. This round will continue through Tuesday at various sites. Saturday night, the 1-A Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference begins its tournament at Washington High School.

In the Eastern Plains, Friday night's action will be at North Johnston High School. The first game, at 6:30 p.m., finds second-seeded North Johnston against seventh place West Edgecombe. In the boys' game at 8 p.m., North Johnston, which finished second, meets North Edgecombe, the seventh place finisher.

Saturday night, play moves to Saratoga. In the boys' game, Saratoga, seeded third, meets South Edgecombe, ranked sixth. Third place girls' finisher Saratoga then meets number six Roanoke in the 6:30 p.m. opener.

Then, on Tuesday, at West Edgecombe, South Edgecombe's girls take on North Edgecombe in the 6:30 opener, followed by West Edgecombe's boys against Roanoke.

Elm City's boys and girls, which won their regular season titles, received byes into the semifinals. Semifinal and final play will be at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, starting Wednesday. There will be two games each night, Wednesday through Friday, when the finals will be played.

The Beaufort-Hyde-Martin event starts Saturday at Washington with three games. In the opener, Belhaven, the girls' champ, takes on Mattamuskeet at 6 p.m. Boys' winner Pantego takes on Bath at 7:30 p.m., with Chocowinity meeting Jamesville in a 9 p.m. girls' game.

Monday, Aurora meets Belhaven at 6 p.m. in a boys' game, Bear Grass takes on Bath in a 7:30 p.m. girls' game, and Mattamuskeet faces the Bear Grass boys at 9 p.m.

Tuesday, the Pantego girls meet Aurora at 7 p.m., with the Chocowinity boys facing Jamesville at 8:30 p.m.

Soccer Team Hosts Wilson

The Greenville Soccer Club will hold its second match of the season Sunday afternoon.

The Greenville club will play host to Wilson at 2 p.m. at the East Carolina soccer field, adjacent to Ficklen Stadium and Minges Coliseum.

Greenville carries a 1-0 record into the match.

Semifinals will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, with the finals on Friday. Girls' games will be at 7 p.m., and boys' at 8:30 p.m. each night.

The other area tournament open next week. These include the Division I on Tuesday at the upper-seeded teams' home courts, the Eastern Carolina Monday at Farmville Central; and the Northeastern on Monday at Williamston.

Student Tickets

Student I.D. cards will not be valid for admission to Saturday night's East Carolina-Appalachian State, university officials said yesterday.

Because the game is a part of the Southern Conference Tournament and not a regularly-scheduled game, different ticket issuing practices are in effect for the game.

Students at East Carolina, along with faculty and staff members, will be allowed to purchase tickets at $1.75 upon presentation of I.D. cards. All other tickets will be $3.50.

Garden State Park in New Jersey will have a thoroughbred racing meeting lasting 112 days. It runs from Feb. 2 through June 10.

Duo Seeking SC Mat Crowns

Don't even try to explain what the word "pressure" means to Wendell Hardy and D.T. Joyner, the two freshman stalwarts on the Pirate wrestling team. Try coming straight out of high school to a nationally ranked collegiate team and replace two former Southern Conference champions and NCAA team members. It's not easy, and Hardy and Joyner will be the first to admit it.

Nevertheless, both of the Virginia natives have responded to the challenge quite well and should get the number one seed in their respective weight classes when the Southern Conference Wrestling Championships open today in Charleston, S.C.

"It's been tough enough trying to make the transition from high school to college wrestling," said Hardy, a native of Chesapeake, Va. "And when I think about how good Jim Blair was during his career here, I was always the best in high school and it really wasn't that tough, but college wrestling is an entirely different picture."

Hardy was the top 118 pounder in the state of Virginia last year. During his senior year at Western Branch High School, he had a 20-0-1 record and won the District, Regional, and State Championships. He was recruited by William & Mary, Richmond, and the Naval Academy, along with many other top schools in the country before finally selecting East Carolina.

Hardy's overall record this season stands at 9-8 with a 7-5 dual meet slate. His biggest win of the season came against highly touted Tom Dursee of William & Mary in the Pirates 36-3 victory over the Indians.

"That was the biggest win for me so far this season," said Hardy. "I know he's really going to be tough to handle in the tournament but that's who I'm going to have to beat to win the conference title. I'm just going to have to be ready."

Hardy's close friend, D.T. Joyner, has been faced with the difficult task of replacing Willie Bryant in the heavyweight division. Joyner actually came to East Carolina on a football scholarship and played right behind Willie Bryant at defensive tackle during the fall.

"When you get right down to it, I guess I really like football more than wrestling," said Joyner, a native of Norfolk, Va. "But I really like the individuality of wrestling and going one on one against your opponent. It puts a whole new perspective into the sport."

Probably the most amazing fact about D.T.'s wrestling career is that it only began during his senior year in high school. After he finished his football career at Norview High School, D.T. was encouraged to go out for wrestling. All he did was win 25 matches en route to the District, Regional, and State championships.

Joyner has an 8-6 overall record with an impressive 7-3 dual meet mark this season. He pinned UNC's Dee Hardison in just 3:33 to insure the Pirates of a close 23-14 victory over UNC, and he was most impressive in a narrow 3-2 loss to N.C. State's Tom Higgins.

"I guess I'm just a very lucky person," admitted Joyner. "I go out and wrestle one year in high school and win the state championship. You've just got to be lucky to do something like that. And then I've also been lucky to have such great coaching in high school as well as here. Billy Hill and Ike Sherlock have shown me so many things."

Lucky or unlucky, D.T. Joyner, and his cohort Wendell Hardy, would sure like to come back with a Southern Conference title to their credit and be on their way to Tucson, Ariz., for the NCAA Championships.

Nicklaus Pulls Into TPC Tie

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus finished off his interrupted first round with a birdie on his 17th hole today and, with a six-under-par 66, tied Fred Marti for the lead in the $300,000 Tournament Players Golf Championship.

Nicklaus and 32 others were stranded by darkness on the 7,128-yard, par 72 Inverrary Country Club course Thursday night and were forced to complete play shortly after dawn today.

Nicklaus, five under par with two holes to go when play was stopped, returned to action with a birdie four on his 17th hole then completed his round with a par.

A lengthy rain-delay Thursday morning had set some starting times back as much as two hours.

"It was the right decision," Nicklaus said. "We might have been able to finish, but it would have been close. There really wasn't that much daylight left. I've been in tournaments where this happened before, but I was always in the early half of the field and I never before had to go back out and finish my round the next day."

He wasted no time getting started in the heavy, early morning dew. Nicklaus, who has blown two chances to win earlier this season, put his second shot in a greenside bunker on the par five eighth, his 17th hole, blew it out to six feet and made the putt.

That lifted him out of a tie with 46-year-old Don January, British Open champion Tom Watson and J.C. Snead, who had completed their 67s on Thursday. Barry Jaeckel, whose round also was interrupted by darkness, completed a five-under-par 67 early today.

Jaeckel, son of movie actor Richard Jaeckel, had a chance for a share of the lead but missed a six-foot birdie putt on his final hole.

Dale Douglass completed a 68 on the rain-softened greens that helped contribute to the generally excellent scoring in this event that is billed as the championship of the touring players.

Jim Masserio posted a 69 for his delayed round and Hale Irwin, winner of the Los Angeles Open just last week, finished off 70.

The event, which seeks major tournament status equal to the game's Big Three, is one of two designated tournaments on the schedule this year, tournaments in which all leading players are required to compete.

Baker Unhappy With His Showing As Dave Marcis Claims Pole Spot

By RICHARD WATERS
Associated Press Writer
ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — "Dad gum it, I just can't get with it on qualifying," moaned Buddy Baker after Dave Marcis won the pole position for Sunday's 11th annual Carolina 500 stock car race.

"I thought I was going to run through the first turn sideways," said Baker, who put his Ford on the outside front row starting spot Thursday with a speed of 138.156 miles an hour.

Marcis won the inside front row slot after his Dodge toured the North Carolina Motor Speedway circuit at a near record-breaking speed of 138.287 m.p.h. The top qualifying speed of 139.048 was posted by Bobby Allison six years ago.

"I guess I went in too fast and let off too quick," said Baker. "I can't complain about starting on the outside front row Sunday. I can remember a bunch of times when I was behind Pearson. This time he starts behind me."

Pearson and Richard Petty, whose crashing finish in the recent Daytona 500 is still the talk of the Grand National circuit, will start on the second row — Petty on the inside, Pearson on the outside. Petty had the third quickest speed of the day. His Dodge was clocked at 138.005, a shade faster than the 138.34 turned in by Pearson's Mercury.

Both Pearson and Marcis said they ran perfect laps. "Anytime you run and don't have more than two hundredths of a second difference, you're getting the job done. The conditions were perfect," said Marcis.

"I could run as deep as any of them in the corners" of the 1.017-mile, 22-25 degree banked track, said Pearson. "I guess they were getting me down the chutes (straightaways) since my car was handling perfect. As fast as I was running, it was a perfect lap. I guess we just weren't running fast enough."

Fifteen drivers qualified Thursday for the 492-lap, 500 mile race, third of the season since last week's Richmond, Va., event was rained out and rescheduled for March 7.

The other drivers, their speed and cars were: Bobby Allison, 137.294, Mercury; Dick Brooks, 136.635, Ford; Benny Parsons, 136.330, Chevrolet; Cale Yarborough, 136.289, Chevrolet; Darrell Waltrip, 135.738, Chevrolet; Bruce Hill, 134.695, Chevrolet; D.K. Ulrich, 132.973, Chevrolet; Terry Bavin, 132.770, Chevrolet; Bobby Isaac, 131.857, Chevrolet; Walter Ballard, 131.705, and Frank Warren, 131.357, Dodge.

A.J. Foyt and Lennie Pond are expected to headup the 15 second-day qualifiers. The final six slots in the 36-car field will be decided Saturday.

Foyt apparently had a business commitment Thursday, said Hoss Ellington, owner of the Chevrolet that the U.S. Auto Club veteran will drive.

Pond said the engine for his Chevrolet wasn't ready.

Although Petty didn't take the pole, at least two drivers feel he will be the driver to beat. Pond and Parsons, who qualified seventh, agree that Petty's chances are good because he has won seven events here, including four Carolina 500s.

"Richard Petty is the man to beat anywhere you go," said Pond. "They've got everything right from the floor sweeper at the shop to Joppa Lee (Petty's father and head of Petty Enterprises). You know, they're just almost flawless. They have the people. They've proved it 177 times," the number of Petty's career victories.

The players have been calling for the opening of the camps since the owners, saying they can't negotiate and play baseball at the same time, locked the doors and hid the keys last Monday.

Several teams have begun practice sessions on their own, including a dozen players from the Philadelphia Phillies. "We all chipped in and bought the balls and some bats," said Phillies slugger Greg Luzinski.

Meanwhile, the reserve rules no longer presented the largest roadblock to the players' migration south since there has been give and take in that area.

Final Shoving For ACC Places

By The Associated Press
It's time again for the February numbers game in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

The regular season will wind up Saturday. There could be plenty of slipping and sliding before it's decided who plays who in the championship tournament beginning next Thursday in Landover, Md.

North Carolina has the first-round bye, having clinched the regular-season title. For North Carolina State to finish second, which the Wolfpack holds by a game over Maryland, it must beat Wake Forest or, if it loses, Maryland must beat Virginia.

If State and Maryland finish in a tie, the second spot would go to Maryland because the Terps beat State twice this season, each time by 18 points.

Clemson has finished its ACC season—it is home to Florida Southern Saturday—and now is fourth. But the Tigers could be tied by Virginia and Wake Forest if both these teams win. A three-way tie would mean a draw for positions at ACC headquarters in Greensboro on Sunday.

If only Clemson and Virginia tie, fourth would go to the Virginia Cavaliers, because they beat Clemson twice.

If only Clemson and Wake Forest tie, a draw would be necessary because they split their games.

There also could be a threeway tie for fifth. This would come about if Virginia and Wake Forest lose and Duke wins at North Carolina. In this case, Duke, Wake Forest and Virginia all would be 4-8 and a draw would be needed. But if these three teams all lose, Virginia and Wake Forest would tie for fifth and would draw for the position since they split their series. Duke would be seventh and last.

The Duke at North Carolina game at 1 p.m. and the N.C. State at Wake Forest game at 3 p.m. will be televised regionally. The Virginia at Maryland and the Florida Southern at Clemson games will be played at night. ACC teams are idle tonight.

North Carolina State needs one game for 20 victories, giving the ACC three 20-game or better winners six years in a row. North Carolina now is 23-2 and Maryland 20-5.

Also, Duke at 13-12 is the only ACC team in danger of a losing season. Never have all ACC teams had winning seasons—the same year. A Duke victory Saturday would assure this, regardless of how the Blue Devils do in the tournament.

Veeck Again Maverick About Opening Doors

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
The baseball owners were under attack from outside and inside as they planned to place some modifications on the bargaining table today in their 22nd negotiating session with the players association.

The external opposition came from the players association, which hasn't seen much progress in the continuing negotiations on a new labor contract with the owners. A spokesman for the owners' Player Relations Committee said the owners today were going to revise some specifications in their "eight-and-one" plan, whereby a player could become a free agent in his 10th major league season.

Then there was the internal dispute with one from their own ranks. Bill Veeck, the maverick owner, strayed from the pack once again in cracking the owners' solid front to delay the opening of spring training.

Veeck, the new owner of the Chicago White Sox, said Thursday that he was opening his camp in Sarasota, Fla., for 25 non-roster players.

"The gun is loaded and pointed at my head," said Veeck, who had threatened to open the doors to all his players. "There is absolutely nothing else we could do."

"They could have taken away the franchise and kept us in bankruptcy the rest of our lives."

American League President Lee MacPhail said Veeck was "not in violation of anything. He cleared it with the league office."

When told of Veeck's "loaded gun" statement, MacPhail laughed and said: "We told him if he defied league orders there would be disciplinary action."

"I feel the matter of spring training is, was and should be a matter of self determination," Veeck said. "Obviously, the other 23 clubs do not agree."

Badger Coach Has One Printable Word For Indiana Team: Awesome

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Indiana Hoosiers have been called a lot of names this season, but Wisconsin Coach John Powless can think of only one that fits: "Awesome."

"I don't know of any other word you could use to describe them that you could print," says Powless.

The Hoosiers have been tough on everybody and particularly so on Wisconsin, so you can see why he feels that way. When they met earlier in the season, the nation's top-ranked team ran away from the Badgers by a 114-51 score.

Thursday night's 96-67 pasting not only was similarly embarrassing but secured Indiana's fourth straight Big Ten title.

"Over two years, I'd have to say Indiana is the best," Powless said. "It's really something to go two years undefeated in this conference."

The Hoosiers, only one of two major undefeated teams in the country, won their 25th straight game this season with the help of a 41-point show by Scott May.

"When he shoots it, you're lucky if the net ripples," Powless noted. "The only way to stop him is make sure he doesn't play."

While the Big Ten was being nailed down, the Pacific-8 Conference was being shaken up. Washington, the nation's eighth-ranked team, defeated No. 17 Oregon 67-62 to make that race a little more mad. The victory moved the Huskies within a half-game of front-running UCLA.

Elsewhere, Louisville nipped Southern Illinois 73-72; Massachusetts beat Providence 81-79 in overtime; Seton Hall whipped St. Peter's 95-77; Manhattan routed Fordham 90-57; Texas Tech stopped Houston 93-85; Creighton turned back Oklahoma City 74-58; New Mexico State outscored Drake 105-99; Texas-El Paso defeated Brigham Young 51-50; Utah downed New Mexico 73-69 and Tulsa jolted West Texas 80-76.

Wisconsin lost its 14th straight game as Powless, who has resigned effective at the end of the season, and five Badger seniors made their final home appearances. Wisconsin took a 6-0 lead, but the Hoosiers struck back to grab a permanent lead at 9-8 on a May basket. The teams battled on nearly even terms until Indiana outscored the Badgers 11-2 for a 34-20 advantage. The contest was never in doubt again.

The Big Ten title officially sewed up a berth for Indiana in the NCAA playoffs, something that had been generally conceded to the Hoosiers all season.

Chester Dorsey scored two key baskets at the end and Washington shot 70 per cent from the floor in the second half to beat Oregon. The loss halted Oregon's nine-game winning streak and knocked the Ducks out of a three-way tie for second place in the Pac-8 race. Washington, 9-3 in the conference, now shares second place with Oregon State, which stopped Washington State 69-55. UCLA, which was idle, is on top with a 9-2 mark.

Reserve Leads Bullet Victory

By The Associated Press

It was hardly a classic performance. Seven points in 18 minutes. But for Tom Kozelko, a little-used Washington Bullets' reserve, it was 3½ times his season's average.

And for the New Orleans Jazz it was more than enough to spell defeat.

Kozelko jammed his seven points into the first few minutes of the fourth quarter Thursday night, helping to turn a six-point Washington lead, 85-79, into a 13-point bulge, 96-83. Washington coasted the rest of the way for a 118-108 National Basketball Association victory to climb within one game of first-place Cleveland in the Midwest Division.

The Phoenix Suns bombed the Atlanta Hawks 115-97 in the only other NBA game played. The American Basketball Association was idle.

Kozelko, a 6-foot-8, 220-pound center in his third year out of Toledo, spends most of his time giving Elvin Hayes or Wes Unseld a brief rest. But Hayes got in foul trouble Thursday night and Kozelko got a chance to work up a sweat.

Kozelko's efforts may go largely unnoticed by some people but Bullets' center Wes Unseld isn't one of them.

"He works hard all the time," said Unseld. "He scuffles and scratches."

The victory was a team affair for the Bullets who averaged a 105-104 loss to the Jazz Wednesday night in New Orleans. Five Washington players scored in double figures and two others had nine points. Phil Chenier led the attack with 26 points and Unseld, Dave Bing and Len Robinson had 17 apiece.

Pistol Pete Maravich, as usual, was the big gun for New Orleans with 32 points despite sitting out most of the second quarter after getting into foul trouble.

Suns 115, Hawks 97

Rookie Ricky Sobers and Paul Westphal scored 27 points each as Phoenix handed Atlanta its fourth straight loss. Sobers, who started in place of the injured Dick van Arsdale, also had seven rebounds, seven assists and six steals. John Drew led the Hawks with 32 points.

Phoenix played without prize rookie center Alvan Adams, who did not suit up for the game because of a knee injury.

McKeever Is Top Player

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Rodney McKeever of The Citadel, who says "I was a better player this year because I played on a better team," today was named Southern Conference basketball player of the year.

The 6-foot junior from Charleston, S.C., the only repeater from last year on the All-Southern Conference team, received 35 votes in balloting by members of the Southern Conference Media Association to 12 for Ron Carter of Virginia Military Institute.

Five votes were cast for John Lowenhaupt of William and Mary, three for Ron Satterthwaite of William and Mary, two each for Will Bynum of VMI, Jim Strickland of Furman and Earl Garner of East Carolina.

"I'm happy but not really surprised," said McKeever of the honor.

"I thought if our team played .500 ball, I might be chosen player of the year. We didn't play .500 ball, but with a few breaks we could have finished in the conference's first division," said McKeever. The Citadel was 6-7 in the league, 10-16 over-all.

McKeever set single-season school records with 216 field goals and 113 assists. He scored 531 points in 26 games for a 20.4-point average and now has scored 1,336 points in 69 games in his career—the third highest total at The Citadel.

He took 409 shots from the floor, hitting on 52.8 per cent, and was 68.8 from the foul line, where he hit 99 of 144.

"It certainly has to be an honor for Rodney. It's a tribute to his desire," said Coach Les Robinson of The Citadel.

Robinson said McKeever is "a very gifted player with the potential to play beyond college. He's one of the top penetrators in college ball. He has as many basketball genes as anyone in America."

"Things were much easier this year because we had better talent. I didn't have to score as much," said McKeever.

The Bulldog ace said his big aim now is to beat Richmond's Spiders in the opening round of the Southern Conference tournament Saturday night at Richmond. The Bulldogs defeated the Spiders twice in the regular season.

The semifinals and finals will be played next Wednesday and Thursday on Furman's home court at Greenville, S.C., where in his three seasons McKeever against Furman has scored 26, 34 and 38 points.

It's no wonder he said "I'd like a return trip to Greenville. That seems like a second home to me."

Bayi Making First Outing

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Filbert Bayi, Tanzania's goodwill ambassador prepping for an expected match against world mile record holder John Walker of New Zealand in the 1,500-meter race at the Olympics, makes his 1976 New York debut tonight in the National AAU Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Bayi, the world 1,500-meter record holder and considered a co-favorite with Walker in the metric mile at the Summer Games in Montreal, is expected to win the AAU mile title for the second straight year.

His only major opposition figures to be provided by Paul Cummings, a consistent winner at one mile and two miles this season but not yet in the Tanzanian's class. Bayi ran his first race in the United States this year at San Diego last Saturday night and finished a close second to Rod Dixon of New Zealand.

Bayi, a 6-foot, 130-pounder who set the 1,500-meter record of 3 minutes, 32.2 seconds on Feb. 2, 1975, heads a strong contingent of world record holders in the AAU meet in which the top Americans finishers in each of 24 individual events will be invited to compete against the Soviet Union at Leningrad on March 6.

Among them are middle distance runner Rick Wohlhuter, sprinter Ivory Crockett, hurdler Guy Druet of France, pole vaulter Dave Roberts and shot putter Terry Albritton.

Albritton is the newest member of the club. He set the world outdoor amateur shot put record of 71 feet, 8½ inches last weekend in Hawaii.

Wohlhuter is the most acclaimed of the group. The former Notre Dame star and 1972 Olympian holds two world marks — at 880 yards and 1,000 meters. He will be trying for his third straight 1,000-yard victory in the AAU meet, against a formidable field including Brian McElroy, Byron Dye, Ken Schappert, Keith Francis and Orlando Greene.

Druet, the top-ranked hurdler in the world, holder of the world 110-meter hurdles mark and the silver medalist in the 1972 Olympics, will have much tougher opposition in the 60-yard high hurdles. His rivals will include 1974 No. 1 Charles Foster, 1972 Olympic bronze medalist Lt. Tom Hill of the U.S. Army and 1968 Olympic champion Willie Davenport.

Roberts, holder of the world pole vault mark at 18-6½, also will be facing a strong field, including former indoor amateur record holder Wladyslaw Kozakiewicz of Poland, 1972 Olympic bronze medalist Jan Johnson, 1975 AAU champion Roland Carter.

A&T Captures 1st Round Win

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — Defending champion North Carolina A&T and Morgan State, which shared the regular season lead, take on underdogs in tonight's semifinals of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference basketball tournament at the Greensboro Coliseum.

Roper's missed shot and scoring with 22 seconds remaining in the overtime.

S. C. State called timeout to set up a final shot, then Marvin Fields missed from 22 feet with eight seconds left. Monroe rebounded and N. C. Central ran out the clock.

N. C. Central, down 41-31 at halftime, managed to tie the game at 72-71 at the end of regulation on a field goal by Roper with one second to go. The victory gave the Eagles a 2-10 and 6-19 record while dropping S. C. State to 8-4 and 17-7.

James Sparrow, named the league's player of the year, dropped in 26 points for N. C. A&T, while Dexter Boone added 16 and Sinclair Colbert 15 in the Aggie victory over the hapless Maryland-Eastern Shore Hawks, who finished with a 1-12 and 2-20 record.

Howard pushed its mark to 5-7 and 8-16, getting 17 points from Vadnay Cotton and 16 from Tony Bates. The loss dropped Delaware State to 4-8 and 6-17.

Morgan State enjoyed a first-round bye while N. C. A&T was beating Maryland-Eastern Shore, 96-70, in a first round game Thursday night. In the other openers, Howard beat Delaware State, 68-57, and North Carolina Central upset South Carolina State, 82-81, in overtime.

Morgan State, 11-1 in the conference and 20-4 overall, meets Howard in tonight's first game at 7, while N. C. A&T, now 12-1 and 18-5, follows against N. C. Central, a team the A&T Aggies have beaten three times this season.

Floyd Monroe, who finished with 19 points, turned out to be the hero for N. C. Central, rebounding teammate Edward

World Day Of Prayer Set For Mar. 5

Many Expected Attend Program

ELIZABETH CITY—Several members of the University Church of Christ and Mount Pleasant Christian Church, Greenville, will be attending the 29th annual Gospel Rally - Homecoming Tuesday and Wednesday at Roanoke Bible College here.

Services begin at 7:20 Tuesday evening at S. L. Sheep School Auditorium with Robert Berry leading congregational singing. Berry and his wife, Donna Sue, form a musical team.

Mrs. B. D. Phillips will speak on "Great Personalities of the Restoration Movement."

On Wednesday morning, Stephen Thornton, '72, Vinton, Va., Reginald Webb, '69, Elizabeth City, and Thomas Perry '62, Palm Springs, Fla., will be the alumni speakers. Their topics are the Biblical view of truth, peace and liberty, respectively.

Knofel Staton, author of 13 books and professor at Ozark Bible College, Joplin, Mo., speaks Wednesday afternoon on "Equipping the World with the Word."

Wednesday evening Ralph K. Bennett speaks on "Who Will Go to the King?" Bennett is an associate editor of the Washington bureau of The Reader's Digest, covering national and international affairs.

To close the Bicentennial rally, the 50-voice Tidewater Choir will sing "I Love America" following Bennett's address. Mrs. C. L. Hershberger of Virginia Beach, Va., directs the patriotic musical by John W. Peterson and Don Wyrzten.

On-Campus Day for high school students (grades nine through 12) begins 8 a.m. Tuesday. Students will attend three sample classes, The Family, Christian Evidences and Old Testament History. Chapel will follow featuring the Jericho Brothers and The Exhortations, two student groups that sing contemporary Christian music.

College evangelist Barry McCarty will speak on "How Firm a Foundation," a presentation of the historical validity of the Christian faith.

Garrett Lewis, RBC's student recruiter, will present the need for full-time Christian workers. His talk will survey the condition of the world and public education and will offer a solution.

In the afternoon, campus guests will participate in a "bug race." Four people will race to push a driver and small car across a finish line. Following the race, college students will perform "Sorry, Wrong Number."

World Day of Prayer will be celebrated Friday, March 5, by Church Women United, who will join in a chain of prayer with millions of people in 169 countries.

The worldwide service is sponsored by the International Committee for World Day of Prayer which has appointed Church Women United as the official sponsor of the celebration in this country.

Here in Greenville, Church Women United invite all to join in this world-wide fellowship at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 10:30 a.m. and at Cornerstone Baptist Church at 8 p.m.

The youth of the community will hold their service Sunday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 8 p.m.

Participating in the celebration will be Mrs. Robert Messner, Mrs. Thomas M. Vicars, Mrs. William Meyers, Mrs. Frazier Sanders, Jeff Barber and Miss Linda Lambert.

This will be the 90th year of the celebration of World Day of Prayer.

Annual gifts from the offerings are made for a Christian ministry in national parks, for scholarships for women through the World Council of Churches and to the International Committee for the World Day of Prayer for leadership training.

Offerings also make possible gifts for short-term projects often related to the celebration theme. This year gifts are being made through Church World Service and UNICEF for projects in Niger, Malagasy Republic, and Bolivia to provide a safe and accessible water supply and source of protein.

Contributions are being made for legal defense and family assistance for political prisoners under repressive regimes, for political refugees from Latin America who need physical, psychological, and economic rehabilitation and to projects helping women.

Churchman Is Advocate Of Divorce Ban Change

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Although Roman Catholicism teaches that marriage can't be dissolved, a noted American expert on Church law says justice demands that the Church recognize that divorce sometimes is right.

Some, by so-called "internal forum" decisions of conscience, conclude their marriages are valid and receive Communion anyhow. This was openly allowed in some dioceses until 1973, when the Vatican ordered it stopped.

But Msgr. Kelleher said it still goes on widely. Even so, it "casts a shadow" over the lives of those involved, he said. "It's utterly inadequate. It makes the couples excepted to the law."

As for the stepped-up marriage tribunal operations, which he had a key role in shaping and under which annulments have increased 20-fold to about 15,000 annually in this country, he said they still are based on "bad law." He added:

"No Pope, no bishop or group of bishops, no lay group or individual psychologists or psychiatrists are able to say a marriage never existed once a couple says 'I do.'"

The only clear warrant for annulments, he said, is in "tragic instances of idiocy or gross psychosis."

However, he said, under present tribunal practice most annulments are given on a basis of finding that one of the partners was emotionally imma-

Msgr. S.J. KELLEHER
Msgr. Stephen J. Kelleher, a onetime ecclesiastical judge who has become a crusader in behalf of divorced, remarried Catholics, says present Church procedures, even though variously modified, remain demeaning.

"In law, the only just solution is a positive appreciation in the Church of the value of divorce when a marriage has become irrevocably intolerable to the partners in it," he said in an interview.

He said Church marriage tribunals, such as the one in the New York archdiocese on which he was presiding judge for six years, should be abolished, even though they've speeded up and eased procedures for annulments.

No matter how streamlined, he said, they can never handle more than a tiny fraction of cases of the estimated five million Catholics now in second marriages or married to divorced persons.

Under Church law, they're automatically barred from Communion — a cause of "tremendous anguish and suffering," he said, not only for them, but for children and rela-

Evangelist Will Speak

The Rev. John T. Woodley, pastor of Landmark Baptist Church, announced that Evangelist John L. Gamble of Lynchburg, Va. will be the guest speaker for four days of services, beginning Sunday.

REV. JOHN GAMBLE
Woodley said that the evangelist will speak at Elmhurst School Auditorium on W. Berkley Road at both the 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services this Sunday, and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at 7:30 p.m.

Gamble, a North Carolina native, was ordained in the ministry by the First Baptist Church of Lenoir in 1938 and since his ordination has crisscrossed the United States and Canada in country-wide, city-wide and church campaigns.

He has held meetings in such churches as the historic Highland Park Baptist of Detroit, First Baptist of Charleston, S.C., the Calvary Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., and on several occasions has ministered in the largest church of Canada, the Peoples Church of Toronto.

For some 15 years, Gamble was heard as an associate of Your Daily Devotions, broadcast over a Raleigh radio station.

He is married to the former Polly Mason of Lynchburg and they have two children.

Two Wrecks On Thursday

An estimated $2,850 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted when cars driven by Robert Lee Abbott Jr. of 2105 Southview Dr. and Cheryl Ann Edwards of 103F Eastbrook Apts. collided about 7:57 p.m. at the intersection of 10th Street and River Bluff Dr.

Investigators, who charged Abbott with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $1,400 to the Abbott car and $1,200 to the Edwards auto.

No charges were reported following collision of cars driven by Lauretta F. Creekman of Farmville and Marvin Hoyle Turner of 1003 Overlook Dr. about 8:04 a.m. on Greene Street, four-tenths of a mile North of the First Street intersection.

Police estimated damage at $50 to the Turner car and $200 to the Creekman vehicle.

Cain Named To Crusade

RALEIGH—Bill Cain was named Area Vice Chairman for the Pitt County Unit for the American Cancer Society's annual crusade by Coach Moyer Smith, state crusade chairman, at the recent Mid-Winter Conference.

BILL CAIN
Cain accepted the position because of his "deep concern for the urgent need to control cancer and the necessity to help win the battle through wide-spread public education."

"Our theme is 'We Want to Wipe Out Cancer in Your Lifetime,'" declared Cain, "and, I dedicate my service to help win the war against cancer. Great advances have been made in recent years with new drugs and more advanced methods of surgery and radiation."

"Every dollar that is given to the American Cancer Society helps support vital programs of public education, research, and patient services," expressed Smith at this meeting of approximately 300 North Carolina volunteers.

Americans occupied Santa Fe in 1846 when Gen. Stephen Kearny led troops into the city during the Mexican war and was unopposed.

Dr. John Gamble will be guest speaker for Landmark Baptist Church on Sunday at 11:00 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. and also on Monday thru Wednesday nights at 7:30 p.m. Meeting will be held at the Elmhurst School Auditorium on West Berkley Road.

Frustration and FAITH

Do you gain any real comfort from that old cliché about dark clouds having silver linings? Who can peel a cloud to find its happy lining?

But frustration has been a blessing to many men. It has driven self-centered souls to seek a new fulcrum for life. It has brought men to God... acknowledging human failure... seeking divine strength.

And as they have found in the Church comfort and courage they have learned anew the spiritual meaning of defeat and victory.

The One that this world crucified is King of Kings. Beyond a cross and a crown of thorns our greatest aspirations await us.

Entertainment Troupe Works To 'Recruit'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Theirs is not a one-day performance schedule because of the lack of demand for their talents. Rather, it's because they are so much in demand and are trying to fill a broad need in a brief time span that they are racing from one appearance to another this week.

"They" in this case are the 11 members of one of five "At Work" performance modules sent out by the North Carolina School of the Arts (NCSA) in Winston-Salem to entertain, educate and hopefully to interest talented high school students to consider enrollment in the school.

At D. H. Conley High School on Thursday morning, members of the "At Work" unit touring five schools in eastern North Carolina received an enthusiastic response from the student audience.

On stage were dancers Margaret Dabney of Buffalo, N.Y. and Stephen Underwood of Chapel Hill; drama majors Paul Garrett of Cincinnati, Ohio, Maureen Kennihan of Raleigh, and Kent Shelton of Lynchburg Va.; musicians Patricia King, vocalist, from Carlisle, Pa., and guitarist Orlando Haddad of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

NCSA student technicians providing support to the performers were Roland Valentine of Rocky Mount, lights technician; Greg Goldsmith of Alexandria, Va., stage manager; and Steve Frye of Los Alamos, N.M., technical assistant.

The musical event featured Brazilian guitar student Orlando Haddad and vocalist Patricia King in a medley of traditional and contemporary Brazilian songs.

Immediately following the approximately one hour demonstration-performance show, student performers began striking sets, racing in and out of the auditorium so that the job would be completed in time for them to mingle with Conley students in the school's cafeteria during the lunch hour.

and high school students had been quickly established at the schools they had visited.

"The program has a two-fold purpose," she added, "to instruct and entertain, and to serve as a recruitment program for talented students."

The "At Work" performance module idea was conceived, written and directed by Duncan Noble, Assistant to the Dean, School of Dance, NCSA, with assistance from Lesley Hunt of the School of Drama faculty; and Scott Schillin, Assistant Dean, the School of Music. Choreography is by Ruby Crump, NCSA graduate in dance.

Engineer To Be Speaker

An engineer from Florence, S.C., will speak to the Greenville Chapter of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International Monday at a dinner meeting.

Coleman Ratterree, a graduate of Clemson University where he received his engineering degree, will give his testimony. The meeting will be held in the American Legion Building located in Greenville on St. Andrews Drive. The dinner will be served at 7 p.m. and Ratterree will speak following a short program at 7:45 p.m. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Two other highlights of the program will be a musical by Herbert W. Lee. He will sing and play on the accordion, his composition entitled "The God Who Is There." The Rev. and Mrs. Wayne West of Williamston will also sing.

A native of Rock Hill, S.C., Ratterree is a project engineer with a paper mill in Florence. He is an elder in the Presbyterian Church, U.S. and a member of Hopewell Presbyterian Church, Florence. He is married and has two children. He will be introduced at the meeting by Hugh McGowan Jr. of Greenville.

Correct technique doesn't always guarantee that you will make your contract. However, there are many deals where, if you lay your groundwork correctly, you will make your contract no matter how you continue.

There was nothing unusual about the auction. At his second turn North had to decide whether to support his partner's spades or rebid his clubs. Since his opening was minimum, he concluded that a club rebid would be less encouraging to his partner. But when South now showed a second suit, North could raise comfortably and South went on to game.

West led his fourth-best diamond, and when dummy came down declarer saw that his contract was by no means secure—he could easily lose a trick in each suit. East won the ace of diamonds and shifted to a spade, and declarer won the king. The queen of hearts lost to the ace, and declarer was faced with his first problem when East returned a second spade.

After some thought, declarer decided that it would be too risky to finesse. East quite likely had a doubleton spade, and if West won the queen of spades and returned the suit, declarer would be down before he had a chance to get started. So he won the ace and drew the remaining trumps. As the cards lie, declarer was now certain of his contract no matter how he proceeded.

He could cash the ace and king of clubs and continue with a third round of that suit. East would win, but since he would be down to only diamonds he would have to give declarer a ruff and sluff. Dummy's spade would go, and the last three tricks would be taken in dummy with two clubs and a trump. Or declarer could exit with a spade after cashing the ace and king of clubs. This time West would be employed. Now declarer would ruff the diamond return in dummy, discarding his club loser, and score the last three tricks with two spades and a trump in his hand.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.25 in cash or check, payable to NEWS-PAPERBOOKS, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648.

General 'Conned' President Johnson In Farewell To Unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Army general conned President Lyndon Johnson into thinking he was honoring troops being sent to Vietnam in 1968. But the soldiers LBJ saluted weren't going anywhere, and the real battle-bond troops were at a beer bash the Army didn't dare disturb.

The Armed Forces Journal says, and the Army confirms, that Brig. Gen. Donald Blackburn staged a fake farewell to accommodate Johnson when LBJ made a spur-of-the-moment decision to see the GIs off. President Johnson apparently never knew that the 82nd Airborne Division troops he honored at Ft. Bragg, N.C., were really soldiers just back from Vietnam, and some who hadn't been there at all.

The incident occurred at the height of the 1968 Tet offensive, when Johnson was most troubled by the conduct of the war. The Journal says the real 82nd Airborne was about to leave for Vietnam when LBJ made a surprise flight to Ft. Bragg to see them off.

"Lyndon Johnson was an emotional man," the Journal said. "His visions of those men at Ft. Bragg moved him deeply. He decided, on the spur-of-the-moment, to fly down and see them off."

But "the next battalion to leave for Vietnam was having its own farewell, an all-day beer bust and barbecue," said the Journal. "Blackburn didn't want to call off the farewell picnic, many of the men were bringing their families, they deserved the time together."

He decided "the 82nd Airborne was not going to let the President of the United States down. It would con him," said the Journal.

He instructed subordinates to call out a battalion from the division's other brigades and borrow the colors of the departing brigade.

In the rush to get together enough troops to fool Johnson, some of the men weren't told of the ruse. As Johnson spoke emotionally of their departure, some of the troops — just returned from Vietnam — were bewildered and no doubt uneasy at the idea they were going back.

Johnson told Blackburn he wanted to shake the men's hands, to say goodbye personally. "Blackburn thought he was going to have a heart attack," reported the Journal.

"Johnson was in rare form," the magazine said. "He was pouring out his heart like an evangelist welcoming newly baptized sinners to the flock, moving from one group to another as though he were trying to pump every hand in Austin only 15 minutes before the election."

Then, before he boarded his own plane, Johnson decided to board a troop plane being filled with troops who weren't really leaving.

"As Johnson started for the rear boarding ramp, Blackburn raced to the plane's narrow front door, scampered aboard and barely had time to shout, 'Men, not a Goddammed word except, Thank you, Mr. President!'"

Blackburn worried that the men just back from Vietnam might mutiny or shout obscenities at the idea of heading back, the magazine says.

With Johnson standing at attention, the plane lifted off carrying a very nervous cargo. After Air Force One departed for Washington, the Airborne's plane quietly returned home.

The next day the real troops flew off to battle.

Asked for comment, the Army said "the basic facts of the story regarding names, dates and places appear to be essentially correct."

Ponder Drug Theft 'Link'

ELKIN, N. C. (AP) — Police are trying to determine whether there is a connection between a costly warehouse fire and the theft of drugs from a hospital.

Two armed men wearing Army fatigues and ski masks forced two nurses in the pharmacy of Hugh Chatham Memorial Hospital to hand over a quantity of hard drugs Thursday night.

One of the nurses had been watching a fire in a storage building of the Chatham Manufacturing Co. blanket plant.

Police said the men, both carrying pistols and one carrying a shotgun, entered the hospital on Elkin's outskirts shortly after 9 p.m.

They quoted the nurses as saying the men put the drugs in a duffel bag and escaped in a car.

Jack Moore, chief engineer at Chatham, said motors and unused machinery were destroyed. He estimated the loss would run in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Police said that Mrs. Dell Griffin, an attendant in the pharmacy, had been told of the fire and went to the back door of the hospital to watch it when one of the gunmen forced her back to the pharmacy. He bound her. Then an accomplice held at pistol point a nurse who had come for some drugs.

Disapproves Marijuana

By The Associated Press
 WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says he disapproves strongly of the use of marijuana and recommends that parents speak firmly with children who use the drug.

During an interview Thursday with Miami newscaster Ralph Renick, Ford was asked what he would tell parents who found that their children were smoking marijuana.

Ford's son Jack, 23, was quoted last fall as saying he had smoked marijuana and "pot-smoking might be compared to the use of beer and wine in moderation."

"In that case, of course, I strongly disagree with any child, mine or the child of any other family, if that individual does smoke marijuana," the President replied.

"And when we have found in our family that there was any deviation, we have firmly spoken to them and the problem, if it ever did exist, has been solved," he added without elaboration.

MEET MONDAY

The Community Gospel Chorus of Greenville will meet at the Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church at 7:30 p.m. Monday. Members should bring their robes to the meeting.

MISS KOCHIE RICHARDSON, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burlee Richardson, was crowned Miss Afro-American Teenager of 1976 in a pageant February 22 at St. Gabriel School's auditorium. First runner-up was Miss Peaches Taft; second runner-up was Miss Karen Ebron. The pageant was sponsored by the Ebonette Organization of Greenville.

Will Reduce Fuel Charge

RALEIGH (AP)—Carolina Power and Light Co. said Thursday that as a result of the 22 per cent rate increase it received recently, it no longer needs as large a fuel charge as it has been receiving.

For this reason the company said it is asking the state Utilities Commission for an "approved fuel charge" for March of only .1 cent per kilowatt hour instead of the previously authorized charge of .464 cents per kilowatt hour.

W.E. Graham Jr., a CP&L vice president, said the .464 figure no longer applies. It said the new base rates which the commission authorized effective Feb. 20 include a larger fuel component than the rates previously in effect.

Graham said the purpose of the "approved fuel charge" is to permit the company to recover its actual costs of fuel when they exceed the amount allowed in the base rates.

Plan Saturday Night Events

The Carson Memorial Pentecostal Holiness Church, located on the Pactolus Highway, will sponsor a gospel singing and bake sale Saturday night.

The bake sale will begin at 6 p.m. with the singing to begin at 7 p.m.

The featured group will be the Lighthouse Singers of Wilson. There will be no admission charge but a free will offering will be taken with the proceeds going to the church building fund.

The pastor, Rev. Calvin Seymour, extends an invitation to the public.

Col. Kit Carson defeated the Mescalero-Apache and Navaho Indians in 1853.

More Poultry Is Seen In Agriculture Dept.

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—Agriculture Department economists expect substantial increases through this spring in the production of turkeys and broiler chickens compared with last year.

In an assessment Thursday of the poultry and egg situation for the first six months of this year, the department's Outlook and Situation Board also forecast only a moderate rise in wholesale prices of turkey and no change for broilers.

The report was silent on retail prices. However, prices paid by the consumer usually rise and fall with wholesale prices.

Except for the sharp drop for eggs from the last five months' levels and a nickel per pound climb in choice steer prices, the pattern was one of general stability at the wholesale level.

Whether that will translate into stability in supermarket prices depends more on the cost and profit situations that processors, transporters and the food chains themselves face, other USDA economists pointed out.

The report said chicken farmers got their highest prices in recent history last year, while turkey-farm prices are now turning up after a late fall decline.

The egg supply was expected to be exactly the same as last spring, continuing the downward trend of recent years which has been broken only slightly by wintertime increases in production.

Egg prices at wholesale, however, were expected to show a drop of a dime a dozen in the second three months from the first quarter, to between 52 and 54 cents.

Those prices still would be above a year earlier, the board said. They "likely will advance as demand increases for Easter but decline as usual in the spring."

For consumers, the forecasts indicated good beef, turkey and chicken supplies, some improvement in pork production and fewer eggs.

A booklet the department will be publishing in mid-March projects an average wholesale broiler chicken price of about 50 cents per pound in the summer months. That would be six to eight cents above the estimated spring average even though it would amount to no change when compared to the same period a year ago.

Those summer figures, the Agricultural Marketing Service said, depend on broiler production at the same level as last summer in response to lower spring demand. Larger supplies of pork and turkey at lower prices may produce that switch in consumer buying, it said.

The Outlook and Situation Board's projections for April through June showed production of 44.3 million cases of eggs, a decline of 1.8 per cent from this quarter; 2.27 billion pounds of broilers, up 12.7 per cent from winter and 10 per cent from last spring, and 345 million pounds of turkey, up a whopping 72.5 per cent from the winter quarter's average and 19 per cent above a year earlier.

Credibility Is Touchstone Of Reporting By BBC

By MICHAEL DENNIGAN
LONDON (UPI) — The story goes that Leonid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist party, is approached in the Kremlin by an aide who offers to get someone to sew a button on his pants.

Asked by Brezhnev how he knew a button was missing, the aide replied, "I just heard it on the BBC."

This Moscow underground joke testifies to the worldwide reputation earned in 43 years of war and peace by the British Broadcasting Corporation's External Service, the voice of the BBC overseas.

The External Service is the offspring of the BBC's television and radio network. Although it uses some of its parent's material, it is financed and run independently and produces the bulk of its own programming.

From Bush House in London's Strand overlooking the Thames River it broadcasts to the world 24 hours a day, offering news, comment, analysis, documentaries, English lessons and light entertainment in more than 40 languages.

In Eastern Europe, Africa, the Middle East and the Far East, it is often the only trusted source of local and foreign news that governments have suppressed or slanted at home, says the BBC.

In all it is on the air about 700 hours a week, beaming to the five continents through 76 shortwave and medium (broadcast) wave transmitters located at home and overseas. BBC officials say it is virtually impossible to gauge the size of its worldwide audience. But it includes, says spokesman Richard McCarthy, "dozens of African heads of state who tape news and other broadcasts in their own languages."

Recent surveys indicated a 30 per cent listening figure among adults for its Arabic language service in Lebanon and up to 15 per cent in Portugal, among others.

But a surer measure is the mailbag — 10,000 letters a year from France, 78,000 from Japan, 1,000 in one crisis week from Bangladesh — adding up to a regular 400,000 a year from all over the world.

A half dozen other nations broadcast to the world in more languages for longer hours and through more powerful transmitters — like the Voice of America and Moscow and Peking radios. Cairo's Voice of the Arabs is not far behind.

But the BBC claims one unbeatable ace in the competition for credibility. Its competitors are acknowledged propaganda organs of their governments.

The BBC External Service and its 3,500 employees say it is unique in that it exercises, though not without challenge, a sturdy editorial independence from the British government.

This is despite the fact that the British Foreign Office is the sole source of the external service's annual operating revenue — currently $46 million but due for cuts in a government economy drive. In return for the cash, the government has the right only to select the target area, the language and the duration of BBC transmissions there. Program content is the decision of the BBC and its editors alone, according to the ground rules.

But this has not prevented — in times of peacetime crisis — strongarm attempts by the government to make the External Service toe the official British line. The history of Bush House is strewn with traces of battles in which successive governments sought — and failed — to dictate a one-sided editorial policy.

"Suez was a kind of watershed," said Gerard Mansell, 54-year-old managing director of the External Service and the man who now runs it day by day.

In 1956 when Britain and France invaded Egypt, which had just nationalized the Suez Canal, British opinion split down the middle in one of the great political divisions of the century.

The BBC, said Mansell, saw its role to reflect this to the world outside in order to maintain its reputation for balance and objective reporting.

While on government orders the BBC broadcast warnings of coming air raids to the Egyptian population — to minimize civilian casualties — it also was telling the Egyptians and the world that 50 per cent of the British people violently disagreed with the military intervention.

"The problem was to define the national interest. What is the national interest?" asked Mansell. "Since this was a police action, not a wartime situation, we decided to report both sides of national opinion."

The Conservative party Prime Minister, Anthony Eden, was infuriated and sought to put the External Service under direct government control.

But Eden quit office and when a five-month investigation concluded the BBC had been nothing but impartial in its reporting the matter was dropped — except that the External Service's budget was "substantially reduced" as a kind of punishment.

In another clash a decade later, Labor party Foreign Secretary George Brown invoked seldom-used government powers — under the BBC's founding charter — to order a postponement of a broadcast to the Soviet Union of Svetlana Stalin's "Open letter to Boris Pasternak" during a period of delicate Anglo-Soviet government negotiations.

The BBC had no choice but to obey. But it made a point of telling its Soviet and East European listeners it was delaying the broadcast only on direct government orders.

Last year, Bush House ignored Foreign Office pressure to censor programs beamed to East Africa of news reports that might anger Uganda President Idi Amin. Amin at the time was threatening to execute a British writer who called him a "village tyrant."

"Credibility in our view is a major national asset and it depends on reporting the realities," said Mansell.

The pursuit of "balance" has gotten the BBC into hot water with foreign governments too, says Mansell. Sometimes it is wrongly mistaken for the official voice of London. At others it is like the messenger who is blamed for the bad news he is bearing.

Greece and Portugal are recent examples. Before the overthrow of the Greek military regime, listeners to the Greek-language service considered the BBC "the voice of truth and freedom," says Mansell.

But later, as in Portugal after the revolution there, "the BBC's subsequent reporting of events in their own countries was less to their taste," he said.

Greece followed up with charges of pro-Turkish bias in the BBC's reporting of the Turkish invasion of Cyprus in 1974. Mansell's defense is that the charges were "often based on no more than factual reporting of Turkish official statements side by side with those of Greek spokesmen."

However, the BBC did suspend two Portuguese newsmen for "lapses from objectivity" in the service beamed to Portugal. Supporters of Portuguese moderate socialist leader Dr. Manuel Soares accused the

BBC of putting out "Communist propaganda."

But at the same time, Mansell said, they were getting contrary protests from Portuguese radical leaders, including Brig. Otelio Saraiva de Carvalho and Information Minister Correia Jesuino, claiming Portuguese newscasts showed a "right-wing bias."

Inevitably, many of the External Service's journalists are emigres from their own countries, who could possibly be suspected of bearing a grudge against the regimes in their homeland.

But the BBC boasts that any suspect ones are quickly weeded out. In recent years they also have uncovered "two or three Soviet 'plants,'" and, say officials, they were disposed of "harmlessly and painlessly."

In another case, they discovered a staffer in the Greek section was sending transcripts of Greek service broadcasts to the military junta in Athens. He too was dealt with, they said.

Although in World War II, the External Service was mobilized in the war effort — principally to broadcast coded messages to resistance movements in occupied Europe — it is proud that it never used "naked propaganda."

This was a deliberate decision, officials say, in order to display Britain as an open, democratic society despite its desperate situation.

Then, as now, the only editorial opinions broadcast were not the BBC's own but were selections read from the daily and weekly press of Britain and other nations.

Today, Mansell sums up his role as not much different from that of his wartime predecessor.

"My own function is to create a climate and a freedom. I think we are a very open organization," he said.

SURPRISE — Builder-skipper Arnold Sager emerges from working model of the Soviet icebreaker "Lenin," which he built in 2,000 hours, and which is now on display at Frankfurt (West Germany) airport. While lying inside the model, the 48-year-old shoe maker blows the ship whistle and exhales cigarette smoke up the smoke stack. Finally, he lifts a hatch surprising the spectators. He has traveled more than 500 miles in the model which can make up to five miles an hour. (AP Wirephoto)

Closing All Of State's Local Draft Offices

William McCachren, the State Director of Selective Service for North Carolina has announced the closing of all local draft board offices by the end of February, 1976.

The closing is a result of a drastically reduced budget recommendation for the Selective Service System, and will cause what the National Director Byron Pepitone recently termed "a dramatically altered structure" of the agency.

In North Carolina 35 employees will be terminated February 28 and another five May 8. Throughout the entire Selective Service System, 1400 employees will leave the agency in February and another 200 in May. By the end of February 1977, the entire agency will employ only approximately 100 people.

For many years, all men were required to have their "draft" card in their personal possession at all times, but this is no longer required. If a Selective Service Status Card is lost or stolen there is no need to ask for a replacement card. Replacement cards will no longer be issued.

After the local draft board offices are closed in February all Selective Service records will be transferred to appropriate Federal Records Centers.

The State Directors' office will be the only Selective Service contact in North Carolina. He may be reached at: N.C. State Headquarters Selective Service System 310 New Bern Ave. Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Must Return Power Unit

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The federal government owns part of Gordon McNiven's heart. And when the atomic energy that keeps it beating isn't needed any more, McNiven must return it.

McNiven, 27, was picked to try a new concept in pacemakers — pacemakers with atomic power.

Pacemakers have kept hearts beating for 15 years, using batteries for power. McNiven's will run on a pellet of plutonium and could last as long as 25 years or more.

The plutonium belongs to the federal government, and if McNiven no longer needs the nuclear power, it must be returned to federal authorities.

The government is controlling development of nuclear pacemakers and allows manufacturers to release only 20 a month across the country.

McNiven's doctor is licensed as an "investigator" in the study of the device. McNiven, who has a wife and young son, was chosen as one of the first to use an atomic pacemaker, primarily because of his age. Though his family has a history of early deaths due to heart attacks, McNiven says the pacemaker could give him a normal life expectancy.

February.

With the exception of a few registrants who may be violators of the Military Selective Service Act, all registrants are now considered to be classified in Class 1-H, irrespective of any previous classification. Class 1-H indicates that the registrant is not currently subject to processing for induction or alternate service.

Topic Set For Forum

The weekly forum program, Great Decisions — 1976, has Latin America as its featured topic for study and discussion Monday evening, March 1.

The Great Decisions programs are being held at St. James United Methodist Church, 2000 E. Sixth Street. Programs each Monday evening begin at 8 o'clock. The series is under auspices of the International Affairs department, Greenville Woman's Club, and the Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University. Topical information is furnished by the Foreign Policy Assn.

Study and discussion leaders on Latin America and the U. S. will be Roy Schaal, Mrs. Etta Lewis and Mrs. Mary Faye Shires. The public is invited to attend and participate.
