

$8.5 Million Budget For City Schools Presented To Board

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer March is budget preparation time for public schools, and in the first stages of 1976-77 budget plans for the Greenville City Schools, Supt. Glenn Cox Monday night unveiled a proposed school budget totaling $8,523,725.67.

29 and April 5, and if necessary, a final workshop on April 12. The first workshop will be for public input on the budget, with the time and place to be announced during the week. Cox explained that the proposed current expense budget contains an increase "on the local funding part of about $500,000 or about 27 percent above last year."

proposals for construction of the new middle school on the property off Hooker Road. This item accounts for $2,182,574.67 of the total $2,576,845.67 proposed capital outlay for the coming school year. Included in this proposal will be a request that County Commissioners approve a Literary Fund loan of $500,000 to the city. These are funds available for loan to school systems with a good credit standing and can be repaid by the city, Cox said, "at a good interest rate, about four and one half or five per cent."

Some expected cuts in state support for the coming year, Cox said, will be "the possible loss of four or five teachers from state funds." He said this would be due to the state formula where the number of teachers paid for by state funds is keyed to the number and grade distribution of students. "Last year we gained eight teachers, though our enrollment was down a little. This was because of the placement of students in the right places, for example, our increased first grade enrollment." The formula will not work in the same advantageous manner for the 1976-77 school year. Other losses in state funds will be in the operation of plant and maintenance divisions of the budget. In an action relative to the current (1975-76) budget, school board members approved the go-ahead on use of $10,000 to begin work on tennis courts to be located at Elmhurst School. The funds are already allocated for this project. All board members (Continued on page 6)

N.C. Teacher Chosen For Nat'l Honor

NAT'L TEACHER OF THE YEAR — North Carolina's Teacher of the Year, Ruby S. Murchison of Fayetteville has been selected National Teacher of the Year.

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's Teacher of the Year for 1976 has been selected as national Teacher of the Year. Ms. Ruby S. Murchison is the second North Carolinian in five years to win the honor. James M. Rogers Jr. of Durham was 1972 National Teacher of the Year.

Ms. Murchison, a seventh grade language arts and social studies teacher at Washington Drive Junior High School in Fayetteville, was honored by President Gerald Ford today at the White House.

Ms. Murchison was nominated for the honor by Dr. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, and selected by a panel of eminent educators over nominees from nearly every state.

"This national honor for Ms. Murchison is shared by our 50,000 dedicated teachers in the public schools of North Carolina," Phillips said. "We are delighted that our teachers have been recognized for their excellent performance in our 2,000 schools."

A veteran of 22 years in the classroom, Ms. Murchison has taught language arts and social studies at Washington Drive School for 14 years. She has worked extensively with gifted and talented students and has assisted with state and national teacher-training workshops. A North Carolina native and a graduate of North Carolina A&T State University, where she received both bachelor and master of science degrees, Ms. Murchison previously taught at elementary schools in Bath, Lillington, Linden, Fayetteville and at Western North Carolina University Summer Demonstration School in Cullowhee.

Harold Wilson To Resign As Premier

WILSON RESIGNS — British Premier Harold Wilson waves as he leaves 10 Downing Street. The Prime Minister announced his resignation plans. (AP Wirephoto)

By JAMES R. PEIPERT Associated Press Writer LONDON (AP) — In a surprise announcement that stunned Parliament and rocked the stock exchange, Prime Minister Harold Wilson said today he will resign as soon as Laborites in the House of Commons pick a new leader. Wilson, who turned 60 last Thursday, cited age as the reason.

A special meeting of Labor lawmakers was called for tonight to begin preparations for electing a successor. Wilson's resignation does not necessarily mean a general election is imminent, but his successor may wish to seek a fresh mandate from British voters when he or she takes over. Wilson's five year-term would have expired in October 1979.

Lawmakers at Parliament poured out of committee rooms into the corridors when news of Wilson's announcement reached them. The prime minister had given no public hint that he was about to resign, and many members of Parliament at first refused to believe the announcement.

On the stock exchange following Wilson's announcement, people were "dashing around all over the place," one dealer said. "It was chaos and confusion for 10 minutes." The pound opened at $1.920 and went down to $1.916 after Wilson's announcement. The Bank of England intervened and the rate then improved slightly to $1.9170.

Wilson's government suffered a stinging 28-vote defeat in the House of Commons last Wednesday on its plans to slash public spending by $6 billion. The defeat was caused by a revolt of 37 left-wing Laborites.

Mrs. Carter In Area Tomorrow

Two appearances in the local area by Mrs. Jimmy Carter, wife of the Democratic presidential candidate, have been scheduled for tomorrow.

Mrs. Carter will hold a news conference at the Pitt-Greenville Airport beginning at 11:45 a.m. followed by a dinner in New Bern scheduled for 6 p.m. The dinner will be held at the New Bern Shrine Club, located on Race Track Road, New Bern.

Ford Backers Are Confident Illinois Will Support Him

By MIKE ROBINSON Associated Press Writer CHICAGO (AP) — Backers of President Ford were confident of turning back the challenge of Ronald Reagan and winning their fifth primary victory today as voters went to the polls in Illinois.

Democratic voters were choosing between former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris and Sargent Shriver, onetime director of the Peace Corps.

As polls opened in the first Midwestern primary race, a wet snowfall had plastered sections of central and southern Illinois, creating hazardous highway travel and a deterrent for some voters.

Five inches of snow fell in southwestern Illinois, but the National Weather Service said skies were clearing when the polls opened and were expected to remain sunny for the rest of the day.

Carter and Shriver both criticized Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on Monday in their final campaign stops before the Illinois primary, and Wallace insisted that his partial paralysis would not impair his ability to be president. He then criss-crossed the state by plane, touching down at Mount Vernon, Danville, Alton and Springfield.

Some See Last Hope In Revenue-Sharing Fight

By DON McLEOD Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The fight being waged by the nation's municipal leaders for the preservation of revenue-sharing is seen by many of them as the last battle between the cities and ruin.

The cities, with large concentrations of industrial and construction workers, minorities, elderly people left behind in the rush to suburbia, are hardest hit by recession and inflation and slowest to recover. Brightening economic indicators are little solace.

In a speech Monday to 2,000 city officials gathered here, President Ford spoke of "the pace and the strength of our current economic recovery."

While the national unemployment rate is down to 7.6 per cent, the mayors say it is as high as 45 per cent in some inner cities. At the same time, working persons are fleeing to the suburbs and the cities' tax bases are eroding. Many say they have reached the limit to which they can raise property taxes — their citizens can stand no more.

Reserves, borrowing power and taxpayer patience are running out at once. And in the teeth of this, most cities are heading toward tax increases — some of 30 per cent or more. The crisis is reaching prosperous suburbs where income can no longer keep up with costs and where schools, which lured many from the city, are being cut back.

The cities and counties, reaching what many of them claim is a depression rather than a recession, are caught in an election year tussle between Congress and the President.

Local officials suggested a year ago that a federal antirecession program be adopted to pump recovery funds into the cities, which were suffering the most unemployment. Congress passed a $6-billion jobs bill in response, but Ford successfully vetoed it as too expensive and counter to his philosophy that jobs should be encouraged in the private sector rather than through government hiring.

Now, revenue-sharing is nearing the end of its five-year charter with Ford and the Democratic Congress once again locked in battle.

By its expiration Dec. 31, general revenue-sharing will have pumped more than $33 billion into state and local governments. But inflation has forced the governments, which once thought of it as extra money, to use the funds for necessities.

About one-fourth of local government budgets come from federal grants, and general revenue-sharing is about one fifth of that.

Inflation, local government says, has reduced the value of revenue-sharing dollars by 24 per cent. Ford has proposed an extension that would add about $1 billion over 5 1/2 years, but the Democratic version being drafted in Congress would hold grants to 1976 levels.

Meanwhile, the House inter-governmental relations subcommittee, working on a measure to extend the program, voted on Monday to turn over funding for revenue-sharing programs to the House Appropriations Committee. That would require the appropriation panel to give approval each year for money sent to localities under the revenue-sharing program, a procedure that critics of revenue-sharing say is necessary to provide some check on how localities are using the money.

Reagan Making Stop In Kinston

KINSTON — Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan will fly in to Stallings Field here on Saturday at 3:30 p.m. for a campaign appearance. Reagan, who will arrive by commercial airline, will be accompanied by U.S. Senator Jesse Helms.

Plans also call for the GOP officials to be accompanied by actor John Wayne.

self provisional military governor of Lebanon last Thursday and demanded Franjeh's resignation.

Khatib and Col. Raouf Samad, the commander of the Mt. Lebanon area, joined forces with Ahdab Monday for a three-prong advance toward the presidential palace four miles east of Beirut. But Palestinian guerrillas of the pro-Syrian Saika organization blocked part of the advance amid reports that President Hafez Assad of Syria was backing efforts to arrange a peaceful exit for Franjeh.

Saika guerrillas were entrenched behind street barricades today on the southern edge of Beirut, stopping the advance of an armored force of Khatib's men from southern Lebanon.

Warning Shot By Lebanon's Rebel Forces

By FAROUK NASSAR Associated Press Writer BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Army forces opposed to President Suleiman Franjeh said they fired a warning artillery shot at the hilltop presidential palace today as the Christian president tried to negotiate a face-saving way of meeting demands that he resign.

"We only fired one round of artillery at his palace this morning," said Lt. Ahmed Al-Khatib, whose force of Moslem deserters from the regular army has taken over army garrisons in many parts of Lebanon. "It was just a warning, just to make his knees quiver."

Khatib did not say whether the shot hit the palace, and there was no confirmation of his claim from the palace or the office of Brig. Aziz Ahdab, the commander of the Beirut garrison who proclaimed him-

"Our company has tried offering service through the night during the week and it doesn't work, he said. There's just no demand. We still offer it on weekends. Postal Service Has 'Huge Pile' Of Damaged Mail

By JEFFREY MILLS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service disclosed the existence of a huge pile of damaged mail at the Chicago post office only after congressional investigators had learned of the problem, two Capitol Hill sources say. The Postal Service, in an announcement Monday, said that 3.7 million articles, mostly books, were being stored in the Chicago post office after new mail-handling machinery had torn them from their original wrappers. One member of the House Post Office Committee later called the announcement "the first major admission by the Postal Service about the bulk mail system. The only problem is that we already knew about the situation in Chicago."

The $1 billion bulk mail system, which is scheduled to be completed this month, uses automated methods of handling parcels and sacks of second-hand third-class mail.

A House subcommittee has been investigating the bulk mail system for months and will hold hearings on the subject later this month.

Subcommittee Chairman Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., last week found thousands of damaged parcels during a surprise visit to the Detroit post office.

A subcommittee staffer, who had visited the Chicago office, said, "We knew about the Chicago situation so they figured they would go ahead and release it."

A Postal Service spokesman replied, "We simply decided to go public with the findings of our own internal investigation and to take some action based on it."

The Postal Service, in addition to revealing the loose items in Chicago, acknowledged there are additional problems caused by new mail-handling machinery "in which the bugs haven't all been worked out yet."

The parcel-mailing problem mainly involves book packages sent by commercial mailers, rather than ordinary parcels sent by individuals or small book-shippers from book clubs to members.

"We are today requesting the major book mailers to use stronger wrapping materials," the spokesman said. In addition, he said the Postal Service will process by hand those parcels of books weighing 25 pounds or more, instead of putting them through the automated system.

N.C. Poll Indicates Carter Out Front

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—A statewide poll shows Jimmy Carter has a substantial lead over George Wallace among North Carolina Democrats who intend to vote in the March 23 presidential primary.

The poll released Monday gives Carter 31.6 per cent, Wallace 20.9 per cent and Sen. Henry Jackson 7.5 per cent of the voters surveyed on March 11-12. Some 26.9 per cent of the sample were undecided with the rest divided among other candidates and no preference. The poll was taken by Dr. Walter DeVries of Duke University, a professional pollster who has worked in many campaigns in several states, for the Raleigh News and Observer. In the telephone poll, a total of 563 Democrats were contacted at random in six different areas of the state. According to DeVries, the poll had an error margin of 5 per cent.

This means that any percentage found could be 5 per cent higher or lower than the true figure for all Democratic voters in the state.

pleased with the outcome of the poll. "It's wonderful. But it means that everyone behind us is going to work five times harder. We'll have to work ten times harder," she said.

The News and Observer said the Republican vote was not polled because to do that would have required another complete survey.

C.J. Hyatt, Wallace's state manager, said he was not concerned about polls and he still feels Wallace is leading.

The poll was taken after the Florida primary but before Jackson decided not to campaign further in North Carolina.

The Democrats interviewed in the poll cited high prices and unemployment most often as the principal problems facing North Carolina. But 68.7 per cent of those polled said they had no solution for the problem they believed most important.

It showed the three candidates running in the same order they finished in Florida. However, Carter had a bigger lead than the 35-31 margin by which he defeated Wallace in Florida and Jackson had considerably less support.

Some 51.3 per cent of those polled said they agreed with the statement that "the Congress should pass a law that would provide jobs for those people who can't find work in private enterprise."

If the undecided vote were eliminated or parceled out in the same ratio as the decided vote, Carter would have 48.8 per cent, Wallace 32.3 per cent, Jackson 11.8 per cent and Morris Udall, Fred Harris and "no preference" would share the remaining 7.1 per cent.

Of the 563 persons sampled, 17.2 picked inflation-cost of living as the most important problem facing North Carolinians. Another 15.3 per cent picked unemployment and the need for more jobs. This made 32.5 per cent who were concerned with economic issues.

That would constitute a major defeat for Wallace, who won the 1972 North Carolina primary with 50.2 per cent of the vote over favorite son Terry Sanford and U.S. Rep. Shirley Chisholm.

Crime and law enforcement were mentioned by 9.1 per cent and the quality of education by 5.6 per cent.

Supporters of the Alabama governor have predicted from the start that he would surpass that performance in the primary this year. Following the defeat in Florida, however, they have beefed up Wallace's schedule of pre-primary appearances in North Carolina to a full week, beginning today. That is much more campaigning than he did here in 1972.

Such emotional problems as busing, utility rates, housing, drugs and alcohol and welfare all were cited by less than 2 per cent of those sampled.

Carter plans to be in the state for only two days later this week. Without saying what his margin would be, he has predicted he will win in North Carolina.

Linda Ashendorf, Carter's state campaign manager, was

Report Pressure Is On VOA To Share Its Transmitting Facilities

The Voice of America may be pressured by Congress to share its transmitting facilities with Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, Congressional sources say.

The New York Times reported Sunday that pressure is being applied by members of the House International Relations Committee and the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee in light of suggestions by the Spanish Government that the two radio facilities stop using transmitters in that country.

Leases for Free Europe and Liberty transmitting facilities in Spain expire at the end of the week. Some officials believe the Spanish government, even if they renew the leases, may allow the station to operate only a few more months.

The new Spanish monarchy wants to re-establish diplomatic ties with the Soviet Union and feels the presence of the Free Europe and Liberty transmitters could be an obstacle, officials say.

The United States leases the site at Pals, north of Barcelona, for $250,000 a year.

Radio Free Europe beams broadcasts to Eastern Europe in six languages from the Pals station and from transmitters in Portugal, while Radio Liberty, for the past 15 years, has been broadcasting information and entertainment programs to Russia in 19 languages.

The Central Intelligence Agency opened Free Europe and Liberty stations in the 1950's. They have been financed by the U.S. Government and supervised by the Independent Board for International Broadcasting since 1971 when the CIA link was disclosed.

The Voice of America is part of the United States Information Agency. USIA director James Koegh has sought to maintain a distinction between VOA and the Free Europe and Liberty, saying that the VOA "represents the United States Government."

A year ago, when it was feared that Portuguese officials might ask Free Europe to close its Lisbon station, officials said Koegh grudgingly agreed to share transmitting facilities in Greenville—beaming programs to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union—on a contingency basis. But the USIA director, according to sources, does not want to share facilities if the Spanish Liberty and Free Europe station is closed.

At present, the British Broadcasting Corporation uses VOA facilities in Greenville to beam broadcasts to Central America.

According to Ruth Walter, an official in USIA's public information office in Washington, D.C., VOA and the BBC have an "informal reciprocal arrangement" whereby they trade "time for time" so "we can reach areas where we're having problems."

She said VOA transmitters in Greenville beam BBC English language programs to Central America, while VOA uses BBC facilities on Ascension Island to broadcast Portuguese language programs to Brazil.

The Voice of America airs programs in 36 languages from 113 transmitters world wide.

Say Callaway 'Pressed' Agriculture Officials

By WILLIAM C. MANN Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Two Agriculture Department officials requested a meeting with Army Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway, during which Callaway sought approval of a plan to expand his Colorado ski resort on public land, a Denver newspaper said today.

The Rocky Mountain News quoted J. Phillip Campbell, who was undersecretary of Agriculture at the time, as saying the meeting in Callaway's Pentagon office July 3 was to wish their old friend and fellow Georgian well in his new job as President Ford's campaign manager.

Callaway used the meeting on his last day as the Army's top civilian to press for approval by the U.S. Forest Service of a plan to expand the resort, located on land leased from the federal government.

"If we wanted to rig this thing, we would have done it long before," Campbell told the newspaper on Monday.

Campbell attended the meeting along with another Agriculture Department officer, Richard A. Ashworth, and Rexford A. Resler, deputy chief of the U.S. Forest Service.

The Forest Service is an agency of the Agriculture Department that would have to pass on the proposed $9-million expansion of the Crested Butte ski area, of which Callaway owns controlling interest.

The FBI and the Agriculture Department are investigating efforts of Callaway and the Crested Butte Development Corp., the resort's operator, to obtain permission for the expansion.

Also, Sen. Floyd K. Haskell, D-Colo., a frequent critic of Forest Service handling of ski area permits, says he will hold Senate subcommittee hearings on the matter.

President Ford announced during the weekend that he was relieving Callaway of his campaign duties, at the former Georgia congressman's request, at least until the Crested Butte questions are settled.

Both Ashworth and Campbell told the Rocky Mountain News in telephone interviews on Monday that they requested the July 3 meeting, the newspaper long before," Campbell told the newspaper on Monday.

Ashworth said from Washington it was to have been a routine meeting, both to discuss the expansion plans and to bid Callaway farewell from his government job.

"We have meetings like this often," he said. "There was nothing unusual. He was leaving office, and they had asked us to take a routine look into the status of the Crested Butte application."

A district ranger at Gunnison, Colo., near Crested Butte, had made an unofficial recommendation that the expansion plans be rejected "at this time." Last December, 5½ months after the Pentagon meeting, the Forest Service issued a draft document on Crested Butte that favored the proposed expansion onto virgin Mt. Snodgrass, adjacent to the resort.

Crested Butte's ski slopes are on public land, like those of almost all Rocky Mountain ski areas. A final Forest Service study into the proposed expansion's impact on the environment and other considerations, a requisite to any decision on new development, still has not been issued.

Campaigning For Jackson

By WILLIAM C. MANN Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP)—James Ramsey of Roxboro, state campaign manager for Sen. Henry Jackson said today Jackson's North Carolina campaign is "alive and well."

"Our people are working harder than ever at precinct and county levels to assure that he fares well in the primary," Ramsey said in commenting on Jackson's decision not to campaign personally in North Carolina during the remainder of the presidential primary campaign in order to concentrate on the New York and Pennsylvania primaries.

"Naturally, we were disappointed when Sen. Jackson announced his decision to spend more time on campaign efforts in New York and Pennsylvania," Ramsey said. "However, going after 452 delegates, which is what New York and Pennsylvania have together, is strategically more productive than going after a share of North Carolina's 61 delegates. I think his decision was sound and his priorities in order. That's the kind of decision-making we need in Washington."

Ramsey said the Jackson headquarters in Raleigh, manned by staffers and volunteers, remains active, seeking support through telephone contacts. Ramsey said he expects Jackson to finish third among Democrats in the March 23 primary with just over 20 per cent of the vote.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You don't hear a lot about Senior Power, but it's there. There are 20 million Americans older than 65 and they are easily the most discriminated-against minority of all.

That's why today, I'm giving equal time to grandmothers.

A while back, I did a column on what grandchildren could expect from grandparents. With an assist from a sharp grandmother in Rye, N.Y., here's some demands from grandparents.

1. Do not feel free to join me in the bathroom or run screaming to your mother when I throw you out. She may feel you are ready to be introduced to the mysteries of the human anatomy, but I don't.

2. When we're at the table and I am trying to get you to eat your din din, please don't call everyone's attention to the fact that I am talking to you with my mouth full.

3. Please, under no circumstances, fool around with the wires under my wheelchair.

4. When I am babysitting and have an important long-distance call, don't run out of the front door screaming and leaving me locked in. Granted you must have freedom, but I also have a nerve problem.

5. Please don't tear up my phone book just to keep busy while I am talking to a door-to-door salesman.

6. Please do not fill up the bathtub with water and float my hairbrush and comb in a solution of hair rinse, perfume, bath oil, and bath powder. That makes me cry throughout an entire evening.

7. Do not become hysterical when the toilet flushes blue. It is not something you have done.

8. Do not play football with my best pillow near my antique hurricane lamp.

9. Unless you are a prodigy and a soloist with the Cleveland symphony at the age of four, do not sit down at my piano with sticky fingers.

10. When my legs are crossed and you jump on my foot for a "ride" do not be surprised if my leg falls off.

11. Try to understand I do not have unlimited toys around. Although the dog has movable parts, most of them cannot be replaced.

12. I'd like very much to respond to your pleas of "carry me, Grandma" but frankly you took the words out of MY mouth.

Now Grandma, if your grievance committee was only old enough to read this, you'd have it made.

Centennial Cookbook Contains Various Hints

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
Bookseller Eleanor Lowenstein usually isn't interested in cookbooks published after 1860. The volume that changed her mind is a battered copy of "The Centennial Cook Book and General Guide" by Mrs. Ella E. Myers, a combined cookbook and guide to Philadelphia. It was published in the City of Brotherly Love in 1876 to commemorate the nation's Centennial.

Miss Lowenstein is the author of "American Cookery Books 1742-1860," a bibliography that she said stops at 1860 because that year marked the end of an era and the beginning of the Civil War, after which life in America changed.

Her Corner Book Shop on New York City's Fourth Ave. is a leading source for out-of-print and rare books about gastronomy and textiles. In an interview, Miss Lowenstein said her search for the Myers book began last summer, when the Smithsonian Institution sought her help in locating a copy that people could handle at a Bicentennial exhibit. She had none in stock, so she advertised for it.

Just before Christmas, she was offered two copies. She turned down one because its title page and several other pages were missing. When the second copy arrived recently, "I thought it would be a pity if it were displayed one year at the Smithsonian and then buried. I would like to make it available to the public.

A couple of publishers have expressed interest in publishing a facsimile copy of the Myers book to commemorate the Bicentennial, and she is writing an introduction describing the background of the period in which the book first was published.

Producing a facsimile requires taking the original apart to photograph each page separately.

"This one is falling apart already," Miss Lowenstein said. "It's in very good condition to reproduce. The binding is shot and the pages are loose, but no pages are torn and none are missing.

"Rare books are becoming very scarce, and this would be a way of keeping them alive and available to the public."

"This book grows on you," she said, leafing through it. "It's all theory on my part, but I think it probably was published as a souvenir of the Centennial.

"The general guide (section) is a guide to Philadelphia and the Centennial, with drawings of Philadelphia landmarks of the time. Most of it is actually a cookbook—190 pages."

Like others of the period, it devotes chapters to folk medicine, housekeeping, even farming and buttermaking.

The household hints include directions for keeping fish alive without water for two weeks or longer. It's hard to believe that Mrs. Myers was serious when she wrote that fish could be preserved alive by stuffing their mouths with bread steeped in

Although her directions are skimpy, another sign of the times, some of her recipes are not only good, but also practicable even today. Green tomato pie, for example, is made with sliced tomatoes, sugar and ginger, grated lemon peel and lemon juice, baked under a thick crust. Another is Scotch apple pie sweetened with a little sugar and "half a pot of Scotch marmalade" (probably orange).

No Way To Avoid Uninvited Guests

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had a New Year's cocktail buffet party at home to which 50 people were invited. We kept our guest list down because of limited space and budget.

The day of the party, six invited guests called to say that they had houseguests and to ask if they could bring them along! What could we say? So we had all these extra people in whom we had no interest whatsoever. They took up the space and ate and drank what could have gone to our own friends.

It seems to me that when people are invited to a party and they have houseguests, they should decline the invitation and not ask the hostess to entertain their houseguests, too.

How does one handle such rudeness?

BEEN HAD

DEAR BEEN: Sorry, but when you're stuck, you're stuck. When invited guests ask to bring their houseguests along, there is no way to tell them they are not welcome.

I can see where uninvited guests might present a real problem at a sit-down dinner, which I would not hesitate to point out, but a cocktail buffet can usually be stretched to handle some additional guests.

DEAR ABBY: Why does my boyfriend have to get drunk before he says, "I love you"?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Because he needs the "courage" either to lie or tell the truth.

DEAR ABBY: Get a load of the following, published April 3, 1919 in "The Alabamian," the weekly newspaper of the 167th Infantry, in the Army of Occupation of Germany with the Rainbow Division:

EASY ON PANTS
Pants are made for men, not for women. Women are made for men, not for pants.

When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man, that makes a pair of pants.

Pants are like molasses: They are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold weather.

There has been much discussion as to whether "pants" is singular or plural. Seems to us that when men wear pants they are plural, and when they don't, it is singular. If you want to make pants last, make the coat first.

Bicentennial Tree Planting Held Friday

The Woman's Club of Greenville commemorated the American Revolution Bicentennial with a tree planting ceremony Friday afternoon on the Town Common.

Special guests were invited from the N.C. Federation of Women's Club, Greenville city officials, Senator Robert Morgan and Congressman Walter Jones.

Mrs. J.H. Kinnaman, chairman of the club's Arts Department, presided during the ceremony. The national anthem was sung accompanied by the Brass Ensemble of East Carolina University. The Rev. James Bailey gave the invocation and Mrs. Kinnaman welcomed members and guests.

Mrs. Kinnaman presented the bronze Bicentennial commemorative plaque which was accepted by Mrs. J. Lindsay Savage, president of the Woman's Club. The plaque was placed at the base of the tree.

Participants in the tree planting were Mrs. Savage, Mrs. Ernest Holt, president of District 15, and Mrs. Kinnaman.

The audience attended an informal reception at the Woman's Club. Miss Antonia Delapos sang "Trees," accompanied by Dr. Everett Pittman.

Refreshments were served by club hostesses during the social hour.

Joint Facility Holds Promise

Preliminary plans were unveiled for a joint Recreation-Library building at the Recreation Commission meeting last week.

The cost of such a structure has been estimated at $311,431 and it would be constructed in the East Greenville area, somewhere in the general area of the present East Branch Library on Tenth Street. The East Branch would be moved permanently into the new municipally-owned building.

The building would be built with Community Development funds and it is proposed that it include 10,381 square feet of floor space for the library. The recreation area would measure 3,818 square feet, the activity room 1,945 square feet and a vestibule of 958 square feet. The library would be four times the size of the present East Branch Library.

The plans must be approved by the Library board and then by the City Council.

Generally the joint recreation-library facility appears adequate to us. The building will be much more imposing than if two separate smaller buildings were to be constructed.

The recreation area would be in one side of the building with the library in the opposite side. We would hope that adequate access and parking would be provided for on each side of the building so that traffic bound for the two activities would not jam up.

We think both the city library program and recreation activities will benefit from this planned new facility.

A Spotlight Follows Governor Brown

California's Governor Jerry Brown doesn't appear to seek publicity, good or bad; but he gets it, and the publicity is good.

His carefully framed thoughts and words are grist for writers and the microphone. He's no glad-hander, no extrovert. Rather, the opposite seems to hold true. In short, he conducts himself as do few politicians on the American scene.

We're told he's the most popular Governor in California history. If that is true, it's for all the "wrong" reasons in the political handbook.

He sets an example by a spartan life. He knows how to say "no" and gain supporters. He thinks; and when he speaks he has something to say.

In the eyes of the multitude of Governor Jerry Brown admirers, he's the dedicated man... dedicated to sound government. It's his enthusiasm.

We hope that enthusiasm is not dampened by the stumbling blocks, the frustrations and infighting by self-seeking rivals. This country needs dedicated men; there never seems to be enough.

Gov't Shows Its Greed

Pause a moment, if you will, to attend a tale of sunken treasure and greedy government. The story has a point as old as Hamlet's complaint of the law's delays, the insolence of office. It is a point worth salvaging from the news.

The story begins on a Sunday in early September, 1622, when a fleet of 28 Spanish ships set out from Havana. Among the ships were nine great galleons, and among these was the newly built Nuestra Senora de Atocha. She was laden with 901 silver ingots, 250,000 silver coins, 161 pieces of gold bullion, 582 copper planks and 350 chests of indigo.

Forty-eight hours later, the Atocha and eight other ships were at the bottom of the sea, victims of a hurricane that swept the Florida keys. More than 300 persons drowned in the disaster; cargo losses exceeded three million pesos. The wreckage and the treasure were scattered for miles along the continental shelf. For several years the Spanish tried to find the Atocha, but salvage was then a rudimentary art. The Spanish failed; the sands shifted; and the treasure vanished.

Nearly three and a half centuries passed. In 1964, researchers at the Smithsonian Institution came across a list the Spanish had prepared in 1688 of sunken treasure ships. The Atocha's name led all the rest. Discovery of the document sent professional salvagers into frenzied activity. Emissaries rushed to archipelagoes in Seville to seek further information. They returned with confused directions that led the treasure hunters a hundred miles astray.

Mel Fisher, a native of Indiana transplanted to Florida, was among the professionals who took up the search. He formed a company, Treasure Salvors, Inc., in Key West, and for more than four years scanned the ocean bottom—in the wrong place. It wasn't until 1970 that Fisher fell in with Dr. Eugene Lyon, an archeologist who happened to be in Seville studying records of Spanish Florida.

Lyon, a native of Florida, knew the keys intimately. He concluded from the old documents that the Atocha must have been lost about 10 miles west of the Marquesas. Fisher moved his operation to the new site, and his search went on, and on, and on. Fisher ran out of money; he couldn't pay his divers; he couldn't repair his equipment. Flat broke, living on hope and faith, he kept looking. He found just enough—some coins here, a sword there—to keep his dream alive.

And on July 4, 1973, he found Atocha. His 14-year-old son Kane, exploring a sand crater, saw something "that looked like a loaf of bread." It was a silver ingot with a bar number of 569. Dr. Lyon checked the galleon's manifest. The bar number and weight exactly tallied. Just a week ago this past Friday, another Atocha bar was recovered.

Throughout 1974 and 1975, Fisher and his crew worked madly. The National Geographic Society provided a small grant. Trained archeologists supervised the gradual recovery of coins, bronze cannon, and other artifacts. The treasure is worth millions. And now the United States government proposes to snatch it away. The legal theory is that the Department of the Interior holds some "sovereign prerogative" over treasure found on the continental shelf. Or if that theory won't hold water, perhaps a 1906 statute dealing with Civil War relics may suffice.

A major court battle is shaping up. Thus far, Fisher is winning. On February 2, U.S. District Judge William O. Mehrrens entered a summary judgment in Fisher's favor, rejecting the government's theories altogether. But the government has won a stay of the order and will appeal. If the case goes to the Supreme Court, it could be three to five years before Fisher, who is once more broke, could touch his treasure trove.

Something is monstrously wrong when the power of the federal government can thus be used to crush a little fellow and to drown his enterprise in the law's delays. Fisher and his associates have put seven years and $2,500,000 into their quest. The search has claimed four lives, including the life of Fisher's first-born son Dirk. It is contemptible, simply contemptible, for a greedy government now to claim his prize as well.

Study Labeled Waste

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Male drivers are a lot less impatient in slow-moving traffic when they have a pretty girl to look at, according to a government-financed research project.

Humor and pathos also help calm male drivers caught in hesitant traffic, the study concluded.

Those findings were cited today by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., in singling out the $46,100 project as what he said was this month's "biggest or most ridiculous or most ironic example of government waste."

Proxmire said the study, financed by a National Science Foundation grant, was of "environmental determinants of human aggression." It was conducted by Dr. Robert A. Baron, then at Purdue University.

Proxmire said Baron's research involved having an assistant stop his car at a red light at a West Lafayette, Ind.,

40 Years Ago Today

March 16, 1936
The League of Nations's council, in secret session, agreed today to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demands for equality but flatly rejected his "condition" that the council must discuss his peace proposals.

Hitler had offered to send a representative to the council deliberations on German remilitarization of the Rhineland only on a basis of full equality in the conference and with the understanding that his recent offer of new peace pacts would be considered.

Six nations, headed by France, opposed Hitler's insistence on bringing his peace proposal up simultaneously with the discussion of the Rhine and reoccupation.

The vote was interpreted as tantamount to a qualified refusal of Hitler's conditions.

Siphoning Federal Dollars

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Perhaps more than any other factor, the federal system for doling out money is responsible for present problems in the North Carolina manpower program.

An internal analysis of state handling of federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) money shows that $9.5 million was spent in just six months to place only 73 persons in jobs.

That comes down to $136,811 per person trained. Are those figures accurate? Top state manpower officials frankly don't know. They do not have the reporting system capable of telling whether they are accurate.

Further, the local contracting agencies which are so prompt to make application for the federal money are not so prompt to report back what happened to the dollars.

20 Levels
In fact, between the U.S. Congress and the jobless fellow in a North Carolina community there are approximately 20 levels of bureaucracy which gets into the pot. The federal money comes from the U.S. Department of Labor, through regional offices, into the coffers of the State Manpower Office.

Local agencies such as community action groups, regional councils of government, city or county agencies, community colleges, and others apply for grants, get the money, and run programs seeking people who need job training, attitude adjustment work, and placement in jobs which the agencies seek out in many cases.

At every turn, there must come "administrative costs" from the top. How much is spent administratively? Manpower officials don't know the answer to that, either. They do know the state agency employs between 90 and 100 fulltime people. That costs about one million.

Local agencies also employ administrators, clerks, planners, and such — some fulltime, some part-time. Nobody knows exactly how many.

Then, for each contract there are grant writers and lawyers' fees and planners to write plans.

"Everywhere the money is touched, it's siphoned off. There must be 20 levels of government between Congress and the recipient," says Robert Griffith, a former radio newsman who was a campaign worker for unsuccessful GOP candidate William Stevens in his bid for a U.S. Senate seat. Griffith is information officer in the state manpower office.

Any Answers
How much information does he have? Very little, he confesses. The local agencies getting the money are prompt to file their applications; but slow to file follow up reports, Griffith says. The attitude appears to be that it's only federal money; and they are busy on more pressing things.

The ultimate test of a program must be who got helped and how many. "We don't know... we don't have the computer system operable and gathering accurate information from the numerous local agencies is just impossible," Griffith said.

Is performance poor? "We don't really know whether it is or not," Griffith said.

Kenneth Daly was chief of the planning and policy analysis section of the state office. He is not working there currently. It was his analysis which showed the heavy cost per trainee figures, and labeled numerous local programs as having "severe problems" with "performance worsening."

North Carolina is not the only state with problems, Daly said, and is fortunate not to have the charges of outright corruption and nepotism which are hitting in some other states. There is some evidence of political favoritism by the Republican administration of Gov. James E. Holshouser.

Aside from the typical federal boondoggle aspects of the money handling, the North Carolina program has suffered from having three directors in two years; from an early understaffing of the agency which was then shifted to an overstaffing; and from the dumping of $36.8 million in emergency job money during the recession on top of the ongoing training effort.

INSIDE REPORT

Keeping Pressure On Ford

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The harsh reality that not even the most brilliant turn of strategy can now salvage Ronald Reagan's challenge against President Ford in the wake of the Florida results poses an agonizing question for Republican conservatives: can his candidacy be long preserved to keep pushing the President rightward?

Considering how close Reagan has come to defeating the awesome mystique of the presidency, Reagan's key operatives refuse to concede what political realists regard as inevitable. But Reagan conservatives outside the Reagan inner circle are now concerned more with how to keep political pressure on Gerald Ford — "keeping him honest," as one conservative leader told us — than on actually beating him.

Thus, there is implicit conflict between Reagan's inner circle and the conservative movement supporting him that may grow more apparent in the days ahead. By keeping Reagan in the race to take advantage of some unforeseeable change in fortune, what the conservatives have gained in influence from Reagan's candidacy could be dissipated in worsening primary defeats and in accelerating attacks on the President by a desperate challenger.

This conflict was foretold hours after Mr. Ford's win in Florida, once a Reagan stronghold. Since there are no longer great expectations for Reagan in Illinois and North Carolina, top Reagan strategists stressed keeping him alive until May when they see better primary picking in Texas, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Nebraska and perhaps Indiana.

"May is too late," snapped a conservative Republican Congressman who had long urged Reagan's candidacy.

He and other conservatives fear a continuing string of Reagan defeats would diminish the potency of the Reagan wing. Indeed, that wing may be riding at its highest point right now following the razor-edge loss in New Hampshire and the thoroughly respectable showing in Florida.

The unanswered problem of the Reagan forces, however, is how to exploit that potency from here to Kansas City, with these obvious objectives:

Influence Mr. Ford on the Republican platform — particularly its national security section, its emphasis on balanced budgets and its attack on big government; Preserve for Reagan at least some special prerogatives on the selection of the vice presidential candidate (though Reagan (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

CALDRON AND ALMOND BRANCH

The prophet Jeremiah, as he began his ministry, declared that God had shown him two things. First, Jeremiah saw a seething caldron. This represented an overwhelming army which threatened to sweep down from the north and destroy the Jewish kingdom. But God also showed Jeremiah the branch of an almond tree, and the divine interpretation of this vision was, "I will hasten my word to perform it."

Jeremiah lived in an age somewhat similar to our own.

It was a period of threatening danger. But he did not allow the seething caldron and the horrifying prospect of what it might do if it spilled over to keep him from the realization that God's promise of protection, consolation, and power would console the Jewish people.

We cannot forget the seething caldron today in the form of the Mid-East, Angola, Ireland, and other trouble spots. Neither should we forget the branch of the almond tree, which is the sign of God's fidelity.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Education Bond Issue: I vote no. I take no issue as to the needs but strongly question the financing method which is deficit spending.

Our special interest legislature should have provided for these needs during the last session, and still can do so at the next session, plus the salary and wage increase for state employees.

There are three separate methods: 1. Reduce the number of state employees by only 10 per cent will produce annual savings of 48 million dollars. The number of state employees has doubled since 1960 (26,710 in 1960 to 53,323 in 1974). During the past five years, the increase has been 11,322 people. 2. Raise the tuition at state colleges and universities. For every dollar of tuition paid by students, our taxes are paying $5 for their education. Technical Institute tuition charges are ridiculous—tripling would not be excessive. 3. Raise the tax on cigarettes—but that requires guts.

The increase or decrease of dollars is the sole responsibility of the legislature. No one else can vote on money matters.

Businessmen Remain Cautious

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — After several years of overcapacity, recession, inflation and uncertainty, businessmen appear to be reluctant to commit themselves heavily to the current economic recovery.

The latest Commerce Department survey suggests that capital spending by manufacturers on new plants and equipment is likely to rise only 6.5 per cent to $120.06 billion this year after almost no increase at all in 1975.

A situation such as this hardly is in the tradition of American industry, which in the years following World War II has been generally optimistic, risking huge sums on the prospect of prosperity both here and abroad.

Government and private researchers have come up with several theories to account for the cautious attitude, but it is probably a combination of factors rather than any single cause.

Among the factors mentioned:

—The instability of markets during the past few years has made the big spenders wary.

—The political climate, at home and abroad, is uncertain. The rules of behavior for businessmen are changing at every level of government because of ethical, ecological and economic considerations.

—Some financial institutions may be less enthusiastic about lending money because of their own special problems. Some large banks are under scrutiny by federal regulators. Some insurance companies also have money problems.

—Evidence of over-expansion and bankruptcy, especially in real estate, still are too obvious to be ignored. They serve as monuments to an unrequited faith in the future.

Explanations with a far smaller component of fear also are being offered — the one making the most common sense being that with industrial capacity under 75 per cent, there is no immediate pressure to expand.

There is also some recent information to indicate that the reluctance to spend may be coming to an end. That suggestion is prominent in the latest Conference Board survey of capital appropriations.

Note the difference: Capital expenditures are actual outlays for new plant and equipment, whereas appropriations are authorizations to spend money in the future, perhaps a year from now.

The board, a private, non-profit researcher, found appropriations rose strongly in the final quarter of 1975, after declining for four consecutive quarters.

The nation's 1,000 largest manufacturers set aside $12.84 billion in that quarter, the highest appropriations since a record $16.38 billion was set aside in the third quarter of 1974. The quarterly increase was 22 per cent.

However, there's another aspect to that story; not all the money appropriated is always spent. Appropriations are an indication of mood; expenditures demonstrate a willingness to back the mood with cash.

Audit Shows 7 Agencies Are Large PR-Spenders

RALEIGH (AP)—An audit by the State Auditor shows seven major state agencies together are spending more than $1.7 million this year for public relations and related activities.

The seven agencies were surveyed at the request of the Governmental Operations Commission, a legislative watchdog body that has been studying the public relations programs run by different departments with a view of recommending some cuts.

The audit, released last Friday, indicates at least 98 people are employed in the seven public relations programs.

Potential areas of wasteful state spending are being sought by the commission, but the audit does not comment on whether the $1.7 million is too much or too little.

"We do not feel that we are in a position to make judgments on the need for or the cost-benefit relationship of the services provided by these groups; therefore, recommendations concerning the operations of public information projects have not been made," State Auditor Henry Bridges said in an introduction to the audit.

State Sen. I.C. Crawford, D-Buncombe, chairman of the commission, indicated that its members would use information contained in the audit in preparing a list of potential budget cuts for the coming fiscal years.

However, Crawford said he had not yet studied the audit and could not say exactly where budget cuts could be made.

The audit, described as a "limited scope operational audit," listed the number of employees, duties, functions and expenditures of public relations agencies for the following departments: Administration, Human Resources, Natural and Economic Resources, Public Instruction, Agriculture, Correction and Transportation.

intersection. "When the light turned green, the assistant would refuse to move the car for about 15 seconds," said Proxmire.

"The purpose was to determine when and how often the driver behind would become impatient and aggressive enough to honk his horn," the senator added.

To discover the effect of environmental determinants such as sexual arousal, humor and empathy, the researchers had a young woman walk past the stalled motorists in a variety of costumes.

In some cases she wore "an extremely brief and revealing outfit." Sure enough, instead of honking their horns, male drivers tended to smile, stare, whistle and shout, the report said.

When the young woman wore a clown mask or "hobbled along on crutches and wore a bandage on her left leg," there also was less horn honking.

"While this piece of research may appear ridiculous to most American taxpayers," said Proxmire, "the National Science Foundation ... must have had something like the following in mind:

"To reduce the tension and aggression of drivers caught in the middle of traffic jams in American cities, the foundation seems to tell us we should organize thousands of bikini-wearing young women, clowns and women with broken legs, to strut, dance and stagger across the streets at every busy intersection in every big city in every rush hour from now on."

struction, Agriculture, Correction and Transportation.

The audit included both state and federal funds spent on public relations, "public education" and related activities.

The audit's findings included the following: —The Department of Correction has four persons doing public relations work who are paid by state funds. The department also has eight people paid by federal funds to prepare a "master plan" for educating the public about correctional programs.

—The Department of Human Resources spends the most money, nearly $425,000. About $200,000 of that is used to run the information and referral system. The system enables citizens anywhere in the state to call in an find out where they can obtain needed social services.

—Auditors had some difficulty in determining total costs, primarily because some public relations costs are combined with budgetary items for other programs.

—The state Office of Employment and Training, which administers a variety of federally funded manpower training programs across the state, has a public relations staff of four, all paid by federal funds.

—The state Department of Public Instruction records a daily telephone message, which draws about 19 calls a day at a cost to the state of $33 a month. The message contains the latest news about public education.

Craft Class Is Set For Juniors

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will begin a new craft class for juniors starting Wednesday, March 17th. The classes will be held from 7:00 until 9:00 every Wednesday night.

Any youth between the ages 7 and 14 are invited to attend. The charge is $5.00 for seven lessons. Some of the crafts included will be decoupage easter eggs, counted cross stitch and others. All interested youth should come to Elm Street Center, Wednesday night at 7:00.

Fire Damage For Apartment

Greenville Fire Department officers reported heavy damage resulted to a kitchen and smoke and heat damage to other parts of an apartment at 700 Cotanche St. early this morning.

Greenville Police discovered the blaze at 5:10 a.m., notified the Fire Department and evacuated the apartment building.

Firemen, who quickly extinguished the fire, said the blaze started in the kitchen. They listed the cause as undetermined.

An occupant of the apartment, fire officers said, had his hair singed, but otherwise was unharmed.

Combing London For Irish Gang

By ED BLANCHE Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard detectives combed London today for the hideout of an Irish terrorist group after a man bombed a subway train, shot and killed the driver, wounded another man and shot himself in the stomach as police closed in on him.

One source said detectives were "following up some leads."

The bombing just after 5 p.m. Monday in the Cockney East End was the third attack on London's transportation system in a month.

Cmdr. Roy Habershon, head of the Yard's antiterrorist squad, told a news conference the bomber was an Irishman and the bombing had "all the hallmarks" of the Irish Republican Army or one of its splinter groups.

The IRA's Provisional wing, after more than six years of guerrilla war to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the province with the neighboring Irish Republic, has threatened a new offensive in London. Irish terrorists are blamed for more than 275 bombings in English cities in the last four years in which nearly 60 persons were killed and some 900 were wounded.

Habershon said the bomber was about 35 years old and was in critical condition in a London hospital. He said the man apparently injured himself when the charge, five pounds of explosives in a leather bag, exploded prematurely seconds after he primed it on the subway train as it pulled out of the West Ham station and headed for central London.

Nine passengers in the car with the bomber were taken to a hospital and treated for shock, police said. The blast blew the doors of the car off and ripped open the roof.

The train slammed to a halt. The bomber, bleeding from the head and with one arm mangled, jumped onto the track and ran. The driver of the train, a West Indian named Julius Stephen, chased him. The bomber pulled out a pistol and shot him at close range, police said.

himself seems out of the question for the post);

"Confirm Reagan's right to speak for the President and the party on big issues, particularly on national security, during the campaign.

Nothing remotely akin to Richard Nixon's genuflection to Nelson Rockefeller before Nixon's 1960 presidential nomination — the notorious Fifth Avenue pact — is envisaged by conservatives. "There's not that much difference anyway any more," we were told by one Southern party leader who privately favors Reagan. "Reagan got about as much out of Ford as he could just by running. Now we have to hold onto what we got."

But how much did Reagan really get and how much more might be achieved? Except for scuttling Vice President Rockefeller and the President's about-face to veto the common situs picketing bill, Reagan's gains thus far are found more in the administration's rhetoric than in any perceptible changes in program and policy.

When state chairman Clarke Reed of Mississippi visited the White House last month to protest the Ford-Kissinger policy of detente, he was breezily informed by political counselor Robert T. Hartmann that "detente" was no longer in use — thereby scooping Mr. Ford's own announcement of that fact. To the Clarke Reeds, however, substituting pro-detentist William W. Scranton for anti-detentist Daniel P. Moynihan at the United Nations suggests the word is dropped and the policy remains.

Thus, conservatives doubt whether continued pressures on Mr. Ford from a continued Reagan primary campaign will produce a harder line in the administration's national security policies. Their fear is the degeneration of Reagan's extraordinary performance against an incumbent President to evermore humiliating defeats.

Moreover, in his belated overt criticism of the President, Reagan undercut his own influence within the party by suggesting Mr. Ford is a symbol of the party's Watergate problem. That infuriated the President's partisans and disturbed Reagan's own followers. "Dragging all that out again was just horrible," an angry pro-Reagan Congressman told us.

Yet, Reagan aides believe his sharpened criticism of Mr. Ford — on national security grounds — the last six days before the Florida election drastically reduced a huge lead built by the President in the closing few weeks of the campaign. "We are through with euphemisms," one Reagan insider told us. "We'll hit at Ford directly, not at Washington."

Such talk is bold. But there is an undercurrent of feeling on the Republican right that this is a desperate last gasp that will neither help Reagan nor change the President's course.

U.S. Breaks Relations With African Govm't

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suspended diplomatic relations with Equatorial Guinea because the small African nation violated "accepted norms of international diplomacy" by barring two American diplomats, the State Department says.

U.S. officials also said Monday the suspension came after an official of Equatorial Guinea sent an "insulting" letter to the two Americans as they concluded a visit there earlier this month. The letter was followed by a telegram last week declaring the two officials persona non grata, thus barring them from the country.

The two Americans were Ambassador Herbert J. Spiro and Consul William C. Mithoefer Jr., who serve in neighboring Cameroon but are also accredited diplomats to Equatorial Guinea.

The United States has not maintained a full-time diplomatic mission in Equatorial Guinea since 1971, when a U.S. diplomat there murdered another American official in what was alleged to be a "quarrel over a homosexual act."

Equatorial Guinea, a little larger than Vermont, is located on Africa's west coast. It obtained independence from Spain in 1968.

The country has supported the activities of the Soviet Union and Cuba in Angola, but U.S. officials said there was no previous indication from Equatorial Guinea that it was dissatisfied with the activities of its allies."

At the invitation of Equatorial Guinea's President Francisco Macias Nguema, Spiro and Mithoefer visited the country from March 4 to 9 and were accorded a warm reception, State Department officials said.

However, at the end of the visit, their escort officer, Deputy Protocol Director Santiago Ensobiya Nchama, handed the Americans a five-page letter that cast "unwarranted and insulting slurs" on them, a State Department spokesman said.

While refusing to release the letter, a U.S. official described the letter as a "rambling, polemical, at times almost incomprehensible document and difficult to summarize in a rational way."

"It begins with the assertion that it is a private communication and not written in the name of the Equatorial Guinean government."

The letter attacks various features of U.S. foreign and domestic policy, citing the war in Vietnam, nuclear arms proliferation and treatment of blacks in the United States.

The U.S. official said, "Mr. Santiago uses insulting and unwarranted language to describe Ambassador Spiro and states among other things that the U.S. government is engaged in subversive activities against Equatorial Guinea — which we categorically deny. The letter ends by predicting the downfall of the U.S. 'world empire' and

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market bounced back from two sessions of sharp decline with a gradual advance today.

Trading remained sluggish, however.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 28.81 over the past two trading days, had recovered 4.56 to 979.06 by 11:30 a.m. today.

Gainers held a 3-2 edge on losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Newton D. Zinder at E. F. Hutton & Co., noting the absence of any heavy trading volume, said he viewed the upswing as simply a technical response to recent market declines.

Wall Street seemed to feel few ill effects from international monetary uncertainties and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson's surprise announcement of his plans to resign once a successor is chosen.

Zinder and other analysts said overseas uncertainties might in fact have drawn some foreign money into the U.S. stock market. "But that by itself wouldn't be enough to turn the market around," Zinder observed.

American Telephone & Telegraph preferred shares were the most active Big Board issue, gaining 3/4 to 60 in trading.

that included a 155,200-share block at 59½.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 21 to 53.54 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .13 at 103.52.

grade broilers to be picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 1,156,000.

North Carolin hen trading was slow today with supplies heavy, demand very light and too few sales to report prices.

Frederickson, owner of an aviation service at Polson's airport, said he first thought the bird was angry and looking for a fight when it began hanging around the airport and following his plane in flight.

But later he recognized the bird as a different sort of proposition.

"He thinks the airplane's a tin hen, I guess," said Frederickson.

The cock pheasant taxis down Polson's small airstrip whenever Frederickson takes his airplane up for a spin. The flier said the pheasant takes off at about 20 miles an hour and churns along a few feet behind the left wing until his single-engine aircraft outdistances the bird.

The bird is usually back waiting at the airport when the plane returns.

Frederickson said the cock pheasant is faithful to his little craft and doesn't seem interested in any of the other airplanes.

Three Of Four Are Protected

NEW YORK (UPI) — About three of every four persons in the United States has private health insurance protection against catastrophic medical expenses, the Health Insurance Institute says. The group says that four of every five persons so enrolled had available benefits exceeding $50,000, with some topping $100,000. Only 10 years ago the common maximum benefit generally was no higher than $10,000.

Edward's proposal to sell. This will be considered at a later date. Under the current rental contract, the school system is renting the facility at $650 monthly. Edwards said he would need to raise the monthly rental to $850 once the current contract expires.

A sizeable delegation of teachers was on hand to give support to the first of two proposed calendars for the 1976-77 school year. The one they support has a pupil orientation date of August 31, with a final student school date of June 10. The second calendar has a pupil orientation date of September 7, the day following Labor Day, with final student date of June 17.

Action on adopting a school calendar for 1976-77 will be taken at a later school board meeting. Dunn said that he wanted to have opinions of parents before the board makes a decision.

The resignation of one teacher, the election of four teachers and a leave of absence for two teachers were all approved by school board members.

In approving the leave of absence for the remainder of the school year—one for a teacher to continue her education, the other for reasons of health, board members also approved a policy of granting leave of absence to teachers within the framework of the state policy on that matter. It is the consensus of board members to draft a permanent local policy to cover such leaves in the future.

A request for the advanced biology class to take a weekend field trip away from Greenville was approved.

Because the Easter holidays fall on the date of the regular April school board meeting (April 19), the board voted to hold the April meeting on April 26.

Girl On Trial For Her Life

RALEIGH (AP)—A 16-year-old Raleigh girl went on trial for her life Monday in the beating death last August of an 81-year-old widow.

Dist. Atty. Burley B. Mitchell Jr. said he is trying Kathy Sue

Stokes on a felony murder charge which means jurors will have to choose between innocent and guilty of first degree murder. The automatic sentence for first degree murder conviction is death in the gas chamber.

Miss Stokes, her sister Linda, 20, and brothers Timothy, 14, and Steven, 13, were charged in the death of Euphia D. Adams whose battered body was found on her front lawn Aug. 6. The four children of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stokes lived near the victim.

Jury selection began Monday and continued today in the trial.

The prosecution is contending that Mrs. Adams was murdered when the four young people went to her home to commit robbery.

Linda and Timothy will be tried later. Steven, because of his age, was not subject to trial as an adult. He was determined to be a delinquent and confined to an institution until he is 18 years old, the maximum penalty allowed by state law.

Woman Named To Police Dept.

GRIFTON—Mrs. Pat Kilpatrick has been employed as a Grifton Police Officer, Dispatcher. Mrs. Kilpatrick has worked since November as a volunteer dispatcher. She has completed 15 hours of search and seizure training and will begin her 160 hour basic police training May 10.

Mrs. Kilpatrick, a resident of Grifton for 19 years, is originally from Oklahoma and Texas. She is a multi-media instructor and a first aid instructor and attended the Outward Bound School in 1963 in Minnesota.

She is the mother of four daughters and is married to Lester Kilpatrick.

Bank Robbers Struck Manager

DURHAM (AP)—Two men armed with revolvers held up a branch of the Northwestern Bank in Durham County today and struck the bank manager in the head before fleeing.

Initial reports from authorities had said he had been shot, but later they said he had been struck in the head.

The sheriff's department said the extent of his wound was not immediately known. He was not immediately identified.

The bank is located on Highway 54 near the Research Triangle.

Officers said the men, wearing sunglasses, sped off in a red car.

Authorities reported finding the car shortly after the robbery. It was parked on a back street off Durham's Fayetteville Highway.

Virginia Tech Coach Suddenly Is Replaced

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP)—Don DeVoe, who led Virginia Tech to an 88-45 record and the National Invitation Tournament title in his five years, has been replaced as the Gobblers' basketball coach by Charlie Moir of Tulane in a move that apparently was less than harmonious.

Tech Athletic Director Frank O. Moseley announced Monday night the appointment of Moir, 46, who's had a highly successful career in six years at Roanoke College and three at Tulane.

The announcement said the change was made after DeVoe declined to renew his contract so he would be free to apply for the job being vacated at Ohio State, where he graduated in 1964, by Fred Taylor.

But, in a Monday night interview with the campus radio station, WUVT, DeVoe said, "I was given an ultimatum of either signing the contract and remaining at the university or else."

While DeVoe admitted he wanted the opportunity to be interviewed for the Ohio State job, for which he said he is "just one of many candidates," he added he was told, "If I didn't renew my contract, there was the possibility I might be replaced."

Calling DeVoe, 34, a "fine young coach," Moseley commented:

"We understand his situation and desire to return to his alma mater if he's tendered that job

But he's declined for more than a month to sign a new contract, and we feel that our program dictates immediate action, especially in firm recruiting commitments."

In a statement the university released with the announcement of his replacement, DeVoe had said, "Virginia Tech and the Blacksburg community have been wonderful to me, and I'll be eternally grateful for the opportunity of having been here."

He added, however, "I'd have never forgiven myself if I hadn't kept open my apparent chance for the Ohio State job. After all, that's home, and that's what most coaches dream about."

The replacement of DeVoe came only hours after one of his assistants, Sonny Smith, was named the new coach at East Tennessee.

DeVoe, who served five years under Bobby Knight at Army and one as a graduate assistant to Taylor at Ohio State before coming here in 1971, applied unsuccessfully in the last three years for vacancies at Northwestern and Illinois, Big Ten members like Ohio State.

Besides winning the NIT title, DeVoe this year coached Tech to its best-ever regular season record, 21-6, but the Gobblers were beaten 77-67 in overtime last Saturday by Western Michigan in the first round of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Moir played both basketball and baseball while attending

Appalachian State and spent three years in the Cincinnati Reds' baseball organization before turning to basketball coaching.

He won two state championships at Stuart, Va., High School and two more and a second-place finish in three years at Mt. Airy, N. C., High before coming to Tech in 1963 and serving as an assistant under Coaches Bill Matthews and Howie Shannon.

During that time, he was the chief recruiter of the personnel that led Tech to the NIT in 1966 and the NCAA Midwest Regional finals a year later.

Moir was named NCAA College Division Coach of the Year after guiding Roanoke to the College Division national championship in 1972. He went 12-14 his first year at Tulane, the only time he's had a losing record.

In the last two years, however, Tulane was 16-10 and 18-9, the latter during the past season the best record for the Green Wave since 1948.

"I certainly consider it a virtual homecoming," said Moir. "It's the area where myself and my family have always wanted most to make our permanent home. With what I consider the facilities and possibilities at Virginia Tech, I plan this to be my last move."

Parsons Top Racer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Benny Parsons is back in the lead for the national stock car driving championship.

Parsons regained first place as a result of his third-place finish in Sunday's Southeastern 500 at Bristol, Tenn., while Richard Petty wrecked early in the race.

Petty had moved past Parsons last week.

Cale Yarborough, the Bristol race winner, also passed Petty in the NASCAR Grand National point standings.

Parsons has 788 points, Yarborough 732 and Petty 710. Then come Dave Marcis 669, Bobby Allison 651, Richard Childress 631, J.D. McDuffie 620, Darrell Waltrip 603, James Hylton 602 and Lennie Pond 584.

Petty clung to first place in money winnings after five races on the 1976 circuit with $73,540. David Pearson is second with $65,475, followed by Yarborough $53,125; Parsons $46,805, and Waltrip $36,355. The next race will be the Atlanta 500 Sunday.

Owners Now Awaiting Players' OK Of Plan

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Major league owners have reluctantly accepted the "one-and-one" option concept for the next several years and proposed a future reserve system that would tie a player to his team for eight years.

Lee MacPhail, American League president and a member of the owners' players relations committee, described the proposal as far-reaching and the result of an inner struggle that made it far from unanimous.

"But, in order to get spring training started and baseball back on the track and a reasonable future reserve system ... we have agreed to go along with it," MacPhail said. "It is our last and final proposal ..."

The owners' bid for labor peace in baseball was handed to Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' association, and a reply requested by April 1. Miller said his group would take it under consideration.

The proposal did not unlock the spring training camp gates. That still depends on the players' association reaction to the offer. The owners and baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn have said that spring training will open when progress is made in the negotiations.

The two sides were to meet again today, and Miller scheduled a meeting Wednesday in Tampa with the association's 24-member executive board. Miller noted that the owners attached to their proposal a memo that opening of spring training was contingent on a favorable recommendation by the board to the players.

In the 10-page owners' proposal, they agreed to abide by an arbitrator's decision in the case of pitchers Andy Messersmith and Dave McNally, which gave them free agent status after they had completed their one-year contract, then played the following year without signing a contract — the one-and-one clause. Two federal courts upheld this landmark decision.

Ironically, Messersmith's free agency is effective today, just seven days after a federal appeals court supported last year's decision by arbitrator Peter Seitz that made the pitcher free to deal with all 24 clubs.

The free agency offered the rest of the players is slightly different than that won by Messersmith. While Messersmith can deal with any major league club, players granted free agent status under the owners' plan would be placed in a pool, and be allowed to negotiate with a maximum of eight teams.

The teams interested in a free agent would be picked in inverse order of standings of the previous season — last shall be first and on up the standings. A club losing a player conceivably could be one of the eight teams chosen to bid for him.

Under the owners' plan, if 16 or fewer players are in the selection pool, no club could sign more than one; from 17 to 40 players, not more than two, and from 41 to 64 players, not more than three. Any club may be eligible to sign as many players as it may have lost.

The plan contains a repeater's right. After once becoming a free agent, a player becomes eligible to ask for a trade after he completes an additional three years of major league service. Or he could become a free agent again after an additional four years and an option year.

Under this "one-and-one" formula, some of baseball's biggest stars are eligible for free agency at the end of the 1976 season — Tom Seaver, Rod Carew, Reggie Jackson, Vida Blue, Sal Bando, Carleton Fisk, Carl Yastrzemski, Bobby Grich, Bobby Bonds, Bert Blyleven, Thurman Munson, Graig Nettles, Dick Allen, Willie McCovey, Rick Monday, Ted Simmons and Dave Cash.

Many of the owners fought the proposal offered to the players Monday. They contend it means bankruptcy for their franchises.

A spokesman for August Busch, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, said, "I'm afraid Augie will feel he has been sold down the river. Don't be surprised if he sells his franchise." The owners' proposal was presented after eight months of negotiations covering 30 sessions. Two days were needed by their committee to hammer out the document, which calls for a seven-and-one reserve clause to become effective after the 1976-77 seasons.

Under the seven-and-one, a player with seven years major league experience could play out an option year and become a free agent. The same system as used in the one-and-one — the player pool, the eight bidders in inverse order, the limit on the number players allowed any one team are effective in the seven-and-one formula.

There is one difference between the one-and-one and the seven-and-one as presented by the owners. There is no compensation for a team losing a player under the one-and-one free agency. In the seven-and-one plan, the team losing a player receives compensation of two times the player's annual salary up to $75,000 a year, plus the team's rank in attendance times $5,000.

Thus, if a player earns $75,000 a year, the team he leaves would get $150,000, and if 24th in attendance, an additional $120,000 or a maximum of $270,000.

This formula is reduced by one-third for each year over eight of the free agent's major league service.

The owners' proposal also included $1,000 increases in the minimum salary from $16,000 in 1976 to $21,000 in 1979; a lowering of the roster limit from 25 to 24 in the event of a two-team expansion and to 23 in a four-club expansion; and a $7,700,000 contribution to the player benefit plan in each of four years through 1979.

Spurs Dig In On Colonels

By MIKE CLARK
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE (AP)—Guards Jaes Silas and George Gervin of the San Antonio Spurs know a green light when they see it. Just ask Spurs' Coach Bob Bass. Better yet, ask Coach Hubie Brown of the Kentucky Colonels.

A frustrated Brown watched Silas and Gervin turn Kentucky's defense to mincemeat Monday night, combining for 70 points as San Antonio rolled past Kentucky 118-105 in an American Basketball Association game.

The game was the only pro basketball action Monday night. "They've got the green light any time they want it," said Bass of his guard combo. Silas, hitting 13 of 20 shots from the field, has 37 points while Gervin scored 33 points on a 12-of-23 shooting night.

Bass, however, noted that those gaudy scoring totals didn't tell the whole story of his team's victory.

"We passed well, and our team defense was the best it's been all year," said Bass. "Billy Paultz, (Mark) Olberding and (Allen) Bristow didn't score much, but they played defense, set picks and found the open man."

The open man, understandably, was usually either Silas or Gervin. After spotting Kentucky an 18-8 first period lead, the Spurs cruised into a 26-26 tie and then sparred with Kentucky until midway through the third period.

After Kentucky had earned a 73-73 deadlock on Louie Dampier's three-point play with 5:35 remaining in the quarter, San Antonio scored 13 straight points to settle the issue. Silas hit five of his baskets during that streak.

Kentucky, which couldn't get closer than 10 points the rest of the way, "got subpar performances from our key people," said Brown.

One of the disappointments was center Artis Gilmore, who had just 17 points and 13 rebounds. Paultz finished with 21, including 17 in the first half to help keep Kentucky within range.

"I came in here tonight thinking we were really going to get after these people," said Brown, whose fourth-place Colonels blew a chance to move within a game of third-place San Antonio. "But ... we've been through this before."

Kentucky was led by Dampier, Maurice Lucas and Johnny Neumann, who had 19 points apiece.

Refurbished Yankee Stadium in New York reopens April 15 with the home club facing the Minnesota Twins.

Danny Kaye Can Big Award Accept Changes Is Appealed

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When he was in England to conduct the London Symphony Orchestra, a reporter asked Danny Kaye why didn't he make some more comedy films. His reply: "Because movies are not like they used to be, times are not like they used to be, and most of all, I am not like I used to be."

For the same reason he rejected the notion of a return to the London Palladium, where his postwar appearances made him something of a national hero. "Sure, I could probably go back there and do the same routines and get a fine reaction," he said. "But it wouldn't be the same. There was something about that era that made it just right, and I would never be able to recapture what happened 20-25 years ago. It would be walking backwards."

"Likewise I don't want to go to Las Vegas; I've done that. Another television series? Those four years I did on CBS were among the most enjoyable of my life. But I wouldn't want to repeat. Nowadays I just want to do the things I want to do."

Right now he is on a fairy tale kick. He recently taped a new version of "Peter Pan" in London, playing Captain Hook to Mia Farrow's Peter, with a score by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley. The special has appeared in England and CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Duke Power Co. has appealed an order that it pay a 20-year-old former employee $80 a week for the rest of his life for what he says was an accident on the job that left him with permanent brain damage.

Duke also appealed last week's order by a deputy commissioner of the North Carolina Industrial Commission that it pay the medical expenses of Michael Johnson of Charlotte. He collapsed Sept. 14, 1974, while scrubbing the inside of a metal tank with a chemical cleaner at a Duke facility.

The utility does not have to pay Johnson anything pending the appeal. He suffered brain damage that has left him crippled, nearly blind, and with a damaged memory, it was testified before the deputy commissioner.

Duke contends in its appeal to the full three-man commission, as it did in the hearings before the deputy commissioner, W.C. Delbridge, that the chemical did not cause Johnson's injury. It has offered no explanation of what did cause it.

Admit Crash Responsibility

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Eastern Airlines has admitted it is responsible for the fiery crash of one its jetliners near Charlotte in which 72 of the 82 aboard died.

It is believed the first public admission by Eastern of responsibility for the crash 18 months ago. It was made Monday at the start of the civil suit for $5 million damages by the widow and four children of Rear Adm. Charles Ward Cummings, 51, of LaJolla, Calif.

Mrs. Cummings and the children were in the courtroom. Judge James B. McMillan told jurors in U.S. District Court that attorneys for Eastern and for the plaintiffs had agreed that "Eastern is legally liable for the crash itself. They have admitted there was fault in the operation of the aircraft."

Warren C. Stack, Charlotte lawyer representing Mrs. Cummings, will attempt to prove that the airline was negligent in the operation of the flight, and should also be assessed punitive damages. Any such damages would be divided among Mrs. Cummings and plaintiffs in any later suits.

The flight had originated at Charleston, S.C., and there were to be stops at Charlotte and Chicago. The plane crashed while making a landing approach to Douglas Municipal Airport in Charlotte.

Stack told the jury the pilots "violated at least 14 federal rules, or Eastern rules, or employ handbook rules. Any acts of omission by (Capt. James) Reeves or (First Officer James) Daniels, or both, are binding on Eastern."

"Both of them deviated horribly from the requirements of their job and flew this thing into the ground."

John Golding, attorney for Eastern, said, "Everything about this flight was normal...until they (the crew) made a mistake about the altitude." He said they were flying too low, but that the crash was due to an unusual series of circumstances that Eastern should not be punished for.

The runway was changed at the last minute to one with less sophisticated landing equipment, the air-traffic controllers did not notice the plane's low altitude, and patchy ground fog contributed to the crash, he said.

Greenville Police would like to know who the sandwich goblin monster is.

Chief Glenn Cannon said employees of Stewart Sandwiches reported at 8:11 a.m. yesterday that someone broke open a window of one of their trucks at 821 Dickinson Ave. and took $52.89 worth of sandwiches from the vehicle. Damage was estimated at $45.

Local Moose Earned Award In Greensboro

Greenville Moose Lodge Governor James Flemming presented lodge Membership Committee chairman Jerry McLawhorn three plaques awarded at the N.C. Moose Ass'n Mid-year conference in Greensboro for achieving the quota of 180 new members since July, 1975. That was the major recognition achieved by the lodge at the conference held over the weekend. A number of Greenville Moose and their wives attended the March 12-14 session.

Secretary E.M. Baldree announced the lodge had received a rating of "Excellent" for its work in the field of civic affairs for the quarter (from Mooseheart) ending January 31. Community service committee chairman Wm. Barnes reported excellent response to early announcements of the Blood Pressure Clinic conducted by the Moose. The service is free. He suggested all members remind friends of the program being conducted Wednesday evenings (6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.). Barnes reminded the blood pressure check-up for Pitt County residents was an early indicator of possible future health problems, and advised regular check-ups as provided by the lodge.

Entertainment committee chairman Otha Joyner reminded the dance for teen-age children of lodge members, and their invited guests, would be held Friday, from 8:30-to-12:30 a.m. Music will be provided by the Fudge Ripple Band.

Need Donations For Book Sale

Anyone wishing to donate books for the annual used book sale sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters may call 752-0199 or 752-1072. Pick-up of donated books can be arranged, if necessary.

The book sale will be held April 10. According to Ilene Blok, chairperson of the sale, the books will include both hardbacks and paperbacks (excepting magazines and comic books), covering a wide variety of fiction and non-fiction topics for all ages.

Funds derived from the book sale will be used for projects and publications benefiting the local community.

3♠ Pass 3♥ Pass
4♥ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♦.

Bridge literature has devoted much ink to the standard safety plays. However, there are many opportunities for safety plays that are barely touched upon in most writings. Consider this hand.

South bid his hand intelligently. By electing to jump shift with three clubs after his partner's one spade response, South left himself in position to simply raise his partner's heart preference to game without having any qualms about missing a possible slam. Had North had any extra values, he could have cue-bid his ace of diamonds in search of bigger things.

West got his side off to a splendid start by leading a low diamond. This attacked the only side entry to dummy's long suit. However, declarer was not sufficiently worried about the contract. Since holding up the ace of diamonds would have served no useful purpose, declarer rose with the ace and led a trump to his king. When West failed to follow, it began to dawn on South that he could be in trouble.

Hoping to induce a defensive error, declarer led the king of spades. West won the ace, cashed a diamond and exited with a club. Declarer eventually lost a trump and a club for down one.

Bad luck? No, faulty technique! Despite the 3-0 heart division, once East follows to the first heart at trick two, declarer could have guaranteed his contract with a safety finesse in trumps.

He doesn't have to peek at the opponents' cards to make this play with a combined holding of ten trumps. To prove our point, let's assume that West wins the trick with the queen of trumps.

Best defense is to cash a high diamond and exit with a club. Declarer wins, draws the one outstanding trump and leads the king of spades. West can take the ace and continue with clubs, forcing out declarer's last stopper. But now declarer can enter dummy by leading a low trump to the seven and discard his club loser on a high spade. He would lose only one trick each in trumps, spades and diamonds.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.25 in cash or check, payable to NEWS-PAPERBOOKS, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648.

Patty Termed 'Restless Rebel'

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The government, depicting Patricia Hearst as a restless rebel seeking a cause, has rested its rebuttal case in her trial for bank robbery by once again using her own words against her.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. disclosed Monday that a stone necklace discovered in her purse the day of Miss Hearst's arrest matched one found under the charred body of a terrorist she has bitterly denounced during the trial.

He then played a tape from the underground in which Miss Hearst mentioned the necklace as a sentimental link with the slain Symbionese Liberation Army member. After playing the tape, Browning rested the second phase of his case.

Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey was poised to begin rebuttal testimony today.

Bailey strenuously objected when Browning asked U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter if he could play a brief portion of a tape the jury heard earlier.

Bailey argued that Miss Hearst's trial for bank robbery, now in its eighth week, is long overdue for conclusion. But Browning insisted that the jurors hear her mention the necklace on her last tape from the underground.

In the June 1974 recording, Miss Hearst eulogized six SLA soldiers who had died in a gun battle with Los Angeles police three weeks earlier. Among them was Willie Wolfe, called "Cujo" in the underground. Miss Hearst said on the tape that Wolfe had been her lover. In court, she said he raped her and that she despised him.

"The pigs probably have the little Olmec monkey that Cujo wore around his neck," said the voice on the tape. "He gave me the little stone face one night."

Miss Hearst, 22, testified that SLA member Emily Harris wrote the script for the tape and that she was forced to read it.

Browning, however, called three quick witnesses Monday who said that a matching necklace was found in her purse when she was captured last Sept. 18.

All of Miss Hearst's seven tapes sent from the underground have been played in court and some of her writings, replete with revolutionary rhetoric, have been read.

Browning's final major witness was Dr. Harry L. Kozol, a Boston psychiatrist who examined Miss Hearst five times in January.

He described the newspaper heiress as a bored, rebellious teen-ager searching for an outlet to her frustrations. "The cause found her," he said of her kidnapping by the SLA on Feb. 4, 1974.

Kozol said Miss Hearst was an unknowing "spiritual sister" to radicalism prior to her abduction.

"This girl was a rebel," he said, as Miss Hearst listened with little trace of emotion. "She had gotten into a state where she was ripe for the plucking. She was in a receptive state of mind."

In the terrorist underground, the 69-year-old psychiatrist said, Miss Hearst found "a way to get rid of the terrible turmoil within her."

He alluded to her own testimony that she had nagging doubts about her impending marriage to Steven Weed in the months before her kidnapping. Several psychiatrists who interviewed her have testified that she viewed Weed as becoming unduly concerned with materialism.

Ferryboats See New Comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — After hitting a low of 140 in the late 1960s, ferry boats are making a comeback, according to Compass magazine.

The magazine, which is published by MOAC, a commercial marine insurer, says tangled traffic, disgruntled motorists and air pollution are the main reasons for the increased use of the boats in certain cities.

Every Family, Every Community Feel Regulators

By BROOKS JACKSON and EVANS WITT
ALLEN TOWN, Pa. (AP) — At 7:45 a.m., Nancy Ruddell sits down for her first cup of morning coffee, adding an artificial sweetener containing saccharin.

"Contains no cyclamate" reads the little packet of Shop Rite Superior Quality Sweetener. Cyclamate lacks saccharin's bitter aftertaste, but it cannot be sold for human consumption because of a U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) ruling in 1969.

This day that started at 6:15 a.m. is a mostly unexceptional one for Tom and Nancy Ruddell. They take their two children to school; Tom goes to work at Pennsylvania Power and Light; Nancy makes two shopping trips; and they give a small party.

But throughout this day and every other day, the Ruddells' lives — and those of every American — are shaped by federal regulations.

The effects of most regulations slip by unnoticed — like U.S. Department of Agriculture's fat content for the choice beef sold at the local supermarket.

Others are not so hidden — like the required seat belt ignition interlock on Nancy's red

Volvo 165 station wagon which she calls "a constant pain in the neck."

The extent to which federal regulations touch the Ruddell family is not unusual. Every family in this town — where the Liberty Bell was hidden from British troops in 1777 in the Zion Reformed Church — and every family in this country is affected by the rules made in Washington, D.C.

For most Americans, the federal role in their personal lives is largely ignored.

This, then, is a look at the regulations in a day in the life of one American family in this city of 109,000 in the rolling hills of eastern Pennsylvania.

6:15 a.m. — A burst from the alarm clock rouses the family. The clock reads that particular time because Congress decreed Daylight Savings Time ended when October did.

6:25 a.m. — Geoffrey, age 5, slips out of his pajamas that are flame retardant because the Consumer Product Safety Commission requires sleepwear for children to be so treated.

6:50 a.m. — Three quarts of Abbotts homogenized milk deposited earlier in the morning outside the back door are brought in by Geoffrey. Nancy makes a mix of the milk and reconstituted Shop Rite Instant Non-Fat Dry Milk, cutting the drink's calories and cholesterol. But the resulting mixture is also cheaper than ordinary skim milk because the U.S. Department of Agriculture sets a higher support price for skim milk than whole milk.

7:37 a.m. — Jennifer, 10, and Geoffrey take the Hess's brand of Fruit Flavored Chewable Multiple Vitamins. A bit later, Tom and Nancy both take a multivitamin made by the Treasury Drug Co. for the J.C. Penney Co.

The manufacture and labeling of vitamins are now regulated by the Food and Drug Administration, but Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., is sponsoring a bill to prohibit the FDA from regulating the potency of such diet supplements. This would mean consumers would be able to buy massive doses of various vitamins, whether or not the FDA concludes such doses have a medical benefit.

7:50 a.m. — Tom starts for work. The federally mandated seat belt alarm on his Audi sedan doesn't make a shrill buzz when he turns the ignition key. It's been disconnected. "It's my way of protesting the system," he says.

7:55 a.m. — Driving to work, Tom recalls the story of how a federal safety inspector ordered the wearing of hardhats and installation of guardrails at the workshop of the Trolley Museum in Kennebunkport, Maine. During the family's summer vacations, Tom spends much of his time working as a volunteer in restoring old trolley cars.

"They probably did us a favor, but, my Lord, it makes you think. They've even gotten to trolley museums," he says.

8:14 a.m. — Nancy backs her Volvo station wagon out of the garage on the way to take Jennifer to school. She pulls a small greyish box out of the glove compartment, presses its button and the garage door closes.

The box is a low-powered radio transmitter, a Wickes model 116-56, which was built according to meet Federal Communications Commission standards.

But FCC rules are just not something Nancy thinks about. She notices the label on the back of the transmitter for the first time: "This label is required by FCC rules. Do not remove."

8:19 a.m. — Jennifer carries her homemade lunch of a ham-and-tomato sandwich into the Union Terrace School. Many other students at Jennifer's public school will eat a lunch prepared at the school cafeteria, federally subsidized at about 23 cents for each lunch.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture requires that, to qualify for the subsidy, the school must serve a "Type A" lunch, which the department specifies must contain 2 ounces of meat or a meat substitute, ¼ cup of at least two vegetables or fruits, bread, butter and a half pint of milk.

8:35 a.m. — The federal government is constantly looking over Nancy's shoulder as she buys the family groceries at the big, brilliantly illuminated Shop Rite supermarket.

Nancy picks up a two-pound jar of Skippy peanut butter, which the FDA says can be called peanut butter because it is 90 per cent peanuts. Any less, the FDA says, it must be called "peanut spread."

The label on the can of sliced peaches lists the vitamins, minerals and calories that each serving of the fruit contains. The FDA is again responsible.

Much of the produce available at the market avoids much federal regulation, for it is produced and sold inside Pennsylvania. For example, there is meat on sale that is not USDA inspected, because it is not shipped across state lines and thus is not in interstate commerce.

1:10 p.m. — Tom goes over a report at his office. It shows, based on a poll of the company's supervisory officers, that 23 federal bodies either receive reports from Pennsylvania Power and Light or affect its business in some way. The Agriculture Department loans money for rural electric service, the Environmental Protection Agency controls smoke-stack pollutants at generating stations, the Federal Power Commission controls wholesale prices on interstate sales of electricity to other utilities, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission wants to know about PP&L's minority-group employees ... the list goes on.

So numerous are the govern-

Web Of Regulations Shaping Life Style Of All The People

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — Here on the banks of the Licking River, 299 miles from the U.S. Capitol in Washington, the federal government touches almost everybody.

Trucker John LeFever had to buy new, quieter tires. City water chief John Kinder was required to install $32,502 worth of handrails and grates at the municipal water and sewage plants.

Banker William T. McConnell pays exactly 5 per cent interest on savings accounts. Druggist Marty Schuster must fill out a four-part federal form — and pay a bit more — to buy some stimulants and painkillers from his wholesaler.

All because of federal regulations.

It could be any town. This one has many factories, about 41,000 inhabitants and an ornate 99-year-old courthouse.

But the impact of federal rules would be the same if the town were larger or smaller, or wherever in the United States it sat. The web of federal regulations shapes the activities of ... everyone.

The Druggist
Schuster, manager of Newark's two Arcade pharmacies, has never seen federal inspectors from two major agencies regulating his business, Drug Enforcement Administration and Occupational Safety and Health Administration. But he feels their impact.

When Schuster orders some controlled drugs such as amphetamines, he must use a four-part DEA form. "The wholesaler won't give his normal discount. That extra cost I have to pass along to customers."

The Trucker
LeFever, the strapping, ruddy-faced president of B&L Motor Freight, Inc., prospers under tight federal regulation. The Interstate Commerce Commission protects him from competition in many ways.

Environmental Protection Agency noise rules just forced him to buy new tires to quiet the howling of treads at high speeds, but he says he would have had to buy new ones anyway.

The Department of Transportation's rule for super-heavy brakes and sophisticated anti-skid computers added $90,000 to the cost of 50 recently purchased cabs.

The Factory Manager
Eric Gay, manager of the town's biggest private factory, is as hard to pin down as any federal bureaucrat. Ask him about federal regulations: "You're in a very sensitive area," he says, referring inquiries to Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. headquarters in Toledo, Ohio.

The plant once spewed pollutants so caustic they ate paint off cars in the company parking lot. State officials have twice fined the plant for spilling fish-killing poisons into waterways.

Now, after several years and millions of dollars, the plant is by all accounts cleaner, safer and less polluting.

OSHA still wants quieter fiber-making centrifuges, which pour out an ear-crushing 105 decibels of noise as the molten glass is drawn out like cotton candy. The company says it can't soften the machines' din, so employees wear hearing protectors and work in soundproof booths.

The Mayor
Mayor Richard E. Baker complains about federal controls, like the ones that required spending $32,000 on safety handrails at the waterworks. But he aggressively seeks more federal money for a housing project and an innovative "dial-a-cab" service for the elderly.

The Bankers
Park National Bank Executive Vice President William McConnell says his bank is "a little frightened" of new rules on disclosing interest rates, real estate settlement costs and individual pension accounts.

First Federal Savings and Loan President Richard Wilson says he takes the almost daily announcements of changes in Federal Home Loan Bank Board regulations home with him at night to try to keep up.

The Chip Man
Guy Pangle says government regulation is putting his little Mar-Cel Potato Chip Co. out of business. He says he spent $13,000 — putting him in the red — remodeling to satisfy federal, state and city rules.

The Radio Station Man
Bob Pricer, manager of radio station WCLT, hasn't seen a Federal Communication Commission engineer in years. But he thinks a Labor Department rule that driving a motor vehicle is a hazardous job for anyone under 18, will force him to stop hiring high school students to drive the station's mobile unit.

"I don't think we can regulate safety from the cradle to the grave," he says.

The Doctor
Dr. Ralph Pickett, medical director of the Licking County's only hospital, doesn't get too upset by regulations. "I have seen a lot of regulations come, and not very many of them go. I'm just glad we don't get all the federal regulation we pay for."

Trophy Earned By Recruiter In Greenville

The Department of the Army announced that SFC Rosario Cappello Jr., station commander of the Greenville Recruiting Station, has won the Commander's Trophy.

The department noted that the trophy is based on the high educational level of people a recruiter enlists over a six-month period.

A 15-year Army veteran, Cappello is a native of New Kingsington, Pa. The recruiter served tours of duty at various military bases in the United States and also completed a tour in Vietnam. He was stationed as a recruiter in Goldsboro and Kinston prior to his assignment in Greenville.

Cappello is married and is the father of three daughters.

"Our generation control computer lets us give our customers the lowest cost electricity possible—24 hours a day."

"Our family is being really cost conscious when it comes to electricity. That's why we're taking quick showers instead of baths."

How does Veppo's computer work for you?

Basically, it keeps track of all the electricity generators in Veppo's system. New information is constantly fed into the computer, which analyzes it and gives us a new economic generation reading every two minutes.

As your need for electricity changes, the computer automatically increases output of the most efficient generators available—or decreases output of the least efficient generators in operation. This means that at any given moment—day or night—the lowest cost generators available are operating. And we are able to give you the lowest cost electricity possible.

The use of the computer is just one way Veppo is helping to keep the cost of electricity down. You can help by following a few simple conservation steps. Like the shower tip above, which can save you at least 10 gallons of hot water per person each day!

So please. Use electricity wisely. It makes common sense. And dollars and cents.
