

N. C. Today Nat'l Political Battleground

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
Ronald Reagan, his challenge to President Ford shaken by a fifth straight setback, was in North Carolina today to prepare for the next of the primary elections, while Democrats—also gearing up for North Carolina—prepare for a new contender.

Sen. Frank Church summoned backers to the mountain mining town of Idaho City today to enter the run for the Democratic nomination. Church, noting his late start, compared his campaign to the race of the tortoise against the hare.

Church joins a half-dozen major contenders for the Democratic nomination, including California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who got into the race last week.

Alabama Gov. George Wallace, whose campaign for the Democratic nomination—like Reagan's on the Republican side—has been staggered by early primary losses, was on the stump in North Carolina Wednesday, ahead of the others.

Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter was due in the state today. He has defeated Wallace in primaries in Florida and, on Tuesday, in Illinois. However, he trailed Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, Rep. Morris K.

Udall of Arizona and Wallace in Massachusetts.

The two Southerners are on the Democratic ballot in North Carolina along with Jackson, Udall, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. Bentsen dropped out of the presidential race several weeks ago.

For Jackson and Udall, however, April 6 primaries in New York and Wisconsin are getting the emphasis.

Jackson throttled his active campaigning in North Carolina last week when New York changed its voting system to make it easier for others with less money—like Udall—to win delegates. Jackson began touting the New York primary and predicting victory for himself there after his first primary victory in Massachusetts.

And Udall, who claims to be the leading progressive candidate, is giving his best efforts to Wisconsin, which he says is a must-win state for him.

Reagan arrived in Greensboro, N.C., Wednesday to begin a campaign he hopes will reverse Ford's domination of the early primaries. Ford is expected in the state for a week end of campaigning.

The President's supporters in Washington and North Carolina were quick to predict that a sixth Reagan loss would all but end the former California governor's challenge.

But Tom Ellis, Reagan's state campaign chief, dismissed the speculation as "a political ploy."

"We've been plowing this furrow too long and there are too many people committed to Reagan for that sort of ploy to have any effect on their desire to elect a conservative president," he said.

The challenger scheduled appearances today in Greensboro, Morganton, Fayetteville, Hickory, Winston-Salem and Raleigh.

Wallace, who won the 1972 North Carolina primary, predicted victory in the state again but said he would stay in the race even if he loses. In Greensboro Wednesday, Wallace's topic was busing—something that has won him support in the state in the past—but with a different message.

"People are still opposed to busing," he said. "But we've become so resigned in this country to having to accept things. In 1972 I used it as an issue. But there's no use to talk about integration and segregation anymore because the viewpoint of the people is that it's over. Anyone who says it's coming back is misleading you."

As in Illinois, Wallace broached the issue of his health. "I just want to point out to all of you that my health is good. Some of the best doctors have said I'm all right," he said.

The Alabama governor has been paralyzed from the waist down and confined to a wheelchair since he was felled by a would-be assassin's bullet during the 1972 presidential race.

Meanwhile Wednesday, there were these developments on the political front: —Ford's campaign committee denied reports that White House counselor Rogers C.B. Morton would succeed Howard "Bo" Callaway as head of the President's campaign.

Callaway was voluntarily relieved of his duties after reports he improperly sought as Army secretary favorable treatment from the government for his Colorado ski resort.

Campaign officials said, meanwhile, the President would fly to North Carolina Saturday for stumping in Charlotte, Asheville and Hickory and at a small airport on the border of Avery and Mitchell counties.

—In Washington, the Senate defeated a move to end public financing of presidential election campaigns after this year.

—In New York, Udall continued to garner support from backers of Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh, who suspended his own candidacy after Massachusetts' primary. Patricia Galloway, Udall's Buffalo-area campaign coordinator, said the Arizona representative would have slates of delegate candidates in all four congressional districts in western New York.

Bayh had been considered among the strongest of Democratic candidates in New York until his withdrawal from the campaign, and Udall has been trying since then to put together slates in most of the state's 39 districts.

Udall, in Madison, Wis., conceded the entry of Brown and Church could cut into his backing as a liberal candidate.

—Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, in Chicago, said Reagan "has some outstanding qualities" which may make him valuable as a member of Ford's cabinet. But Rockefeller said he sees no reason why Ford would pick Reagan as a running mate for the November election.

Rockefeller told a news conference it would be hard to understand why Ford would choose "someone to the right of him" as candidate for vice president. Rockefeller announced months ago he will not seek renomination.

Sen. Church Bidding For Presidential Nomination

FRANK CHURCH . . . his hat's in the ring.

By QUANE KENYON
Associated Press Writer
IDAHO CITY, Idaho (AP) — Sen. Frank Church joined the field of candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination today, declaring that the federal bureaucracy must be harnessed and that important issues are being ignored by other candidates.

"Peripheral questions preempt the debate. There is no sense of overriding purpose; no serious discussion of the fundamental choices which determine our future course," the Idaho senator said in a statement prepared for announcing that he was becoming the eighth candidate now seeking his party's nomination.

Church said that contrary to the opinions of others, it was not too late to enter the race.

He also said the image of the government must be restored, and he said his time on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee gives him an advantage in foreign policy.

Church flew to Idaho Wednesday to announce his candidacy from the wooden steps of the Boise County Courthouse in this historic mining town of 150 people. His father-in-law, former Idaho Gov. Chase A. Clark, announced his candidacy for governor in 1940 at the same spot.

"The first priority on our political agenda is the restoration of the federal government to legitimacy in the eyes of the people," Church said.

"The vast majority of federal employees are honest, law-abiding citizens, but nobody, no matter how highly placed in the government, has the right to break the law, to open our mail, to photograph our cables . . . to open tax investigations against persons not even suspected of tax delinquency but targeted for political harassment instead."

Six Democrats are still in the race for the party's nomination after four weeks of primary elections, and a seventh, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. of California, entered the national race last week.

Of the candidates in the race, Church is closest in philosophy to Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall. And Udall already has staked claim to the leadership in what he calls the party's progressive wing.

Church, 51, said his first goal will be the Nebraska primary May 11—after the April 6 primaries in New York and Wisconsin, which Udall has said are important to his own campaign.

Church has made it clear his strategy is based on a strong showing late in the game—and arrival at the Democratic National Convention this summer with a sizable bloc of delegates. As the long primary election campaign wears on, he has said, others are sure to run into financial trouble.

He contends his own financial footing is sound. He qualified for federal matching funds several weeks ago, and backers began a massive mailing Tuesday aimed at raising $3 million. The wide exposure he got in his role as chairman of the Senate committee that investigated U.S. intelligence activities has been considered a key factor in his decision to run for president.

Church entered the Senate nearly 20 years ago and ranks 13th in seniority. He was recently in the public spotlight with the intelligence committee inquiry and with a subcommittee's probe of bribes paid by American firms abroad.

Prior to that, he was best known as a leader of the antiwar movement in Congress. He coauthored the 1970 Cooper-Church amendment barring use of American combat troops in Cambodia.

He voted for an amendment to bar funds to support American troops in Indochina after 1971 and also opposed development of supersonic transports and a national no-fault auto insurance program.

Church's liberal and antiwar positions ran against feeling in his conservative home state, but he won election to his fourth term in 1974 with little trouble.

Night-Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Forty-one persons were reported killed and 37 wounded in fighting during the night between Moslem and Christian private armies as Lebanon's feuding politicians reported they had reached tentative agreement on another Syrian peace plan.

Mortar and rocket explosions kept much of Beirut's population awake throughout the night as leftist Moslem and right-wing Christian militiamen duelled in the city's devastated hotel district.

There was also firing in Beirut suburbs and between the Moslem city of Tripoli, the home of Premier Rashid Karami 60 miles north of Beirut, and Zagharta, President Suleiman Franjeh's native Christian stronghold.

Simon Says: Trend Is Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon says the economic recovery is better than anyone predicted and that inflation and unemployment may drop sooner than expected.

There is a "fair chance" that unemployment will drop to below 7 per cent this year and also that inflation will decline to about 2 per cent within three years, Simon said Wednesday.

It was the most optimistic outlook for the economy yet expressed by a top Ford administration official and came against a background of reports of steady improvements in almost all sectors of the economy.

"I don't know anyone who forecast the vigor of the economic recovery," Simon said. He said he was especially pleased with the "very positive development" of a record increase in new housing starts reported by the government Tuesday.

"I think there is a fair chance that unemployment will be below 7 per cent at the end of this year," Simon told reporters. Last January, the administration officially estimated a jobless rate of between 7 per cent and 7.5 per cent by the end of the year.

Simon said the underlying rate of inflation in the economy now is about 6 per cent, but he said he believes the annual rise in the cost of living can be reduced to 2 per cent in two to three years.

The nation's inflation rate has not been below 2 per cent since 1965, when price increases that year averaged 1.9 per cent. Prices rose 6.9 per cent last year, and the administration is forecasting a 5.9 per cent increase in 1976.

Simon repeated his intention to step down as Treasury secretary at the end of this year. "I'm going home in December," he said.

He volunteered to reporters there are "an awful lot of people suggesting" that he run for governor of New Jersey, his home state, in 1977, but he said, "I haven't made up my mind."

Reversed Itself

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, reversing itself after a thinly-veiled denunciation from one of its leaders, now agrees that 25 congressmen should go to London to accept England's loan of an original copy of the Magna Carta for the Bicentennial.

The House agreed 294 to 90 Wednesday to send the delegation to London for ceremonies accepting the 760-year-old document and to bring it back for public display in the U.S. Capitol.

If the Senate agrees to a minor technical correction, Congress' resolution approving the mission will be sent to President Ford. Britain's offer to lend one of four remaining original copies of the Magna Carta to this country was rebuffed by the House last week when it rejected the proposed trip as a junket for the 25 congressmen.

But Deputy House Democratic Whip Jim Wright of Texas indirectly accused the House Wednesday of "quibbling, petty arguments" and trying to show "how chintzy" it could be.

Wright disguised his denunciation by asking the members how they would feel if they had made such an offer to some other country and its legislators engaged in such a debate.

Opponents such as Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., said they welcomed Britain's offer of the Magna Carta but opposed sending so many congressmen over to pick it up.

Opponents' efforts to limit the delegation to five members with a $10,000 expense ceiling was rejected 306 to 94. House leaders were unable to say how much it will cost to send 25 congressmen to London.

Whitley Named To Akins Staff

Waverly Akins, one of seven Democrats seeking the party's nomination for lieutenant governor was in Greenville yesterday to announce the selection of A.B. Whitley as his campaign coordinator for the counties in the First Congressional District.

"I am fortunate to have a man with the experience and contacts that he has," Akins said. "He is a welcome addition to this campaign and I am sure he will make a big difference toward a winning effort." He is a hard working man . . . a great addition to my campaign.

Whitley, a prominent painting and decorating contractor, said Akins is the kind of candidate the people want and need as government leaders. "He can get things done in Raleigh," Whitley said. Whitley is past president of the Carolinas Painting and Decorating Contractors of America and serves as a committeeman for the national association. He is also on the board of directors of Pitt Technical Institute and the East Carolina University Foundation as well as a member of the Board of Trustees of Chowan College. Akins visited Greenville following a speech in Kinston (Continued on page 2)

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

TREES, FINALLY

Last Sept. 3 I ordered, after seeing an ad in The Daily Reflector, 12 trees for $20.98 from the Nursery Barn in McMinnville, Tenn. They were supposed to be shipped between Oct. 20 and Nov. 10. They didn't come, so I wrote twice and finally called Dec. 19, telling the president, Mr. Womack, that I wanted a refund. He refused, asking me to send a letter explaining the situation, which I'd done twice already, and that he could not do anything else. Would you try? W. F.

Hotline wrote on your behalf Jan. 2 and our letter was ignored, too. So last week we called the company. This time, surprisingly, we talked to a lady, who promised that your trees would be in the next mail. They apparently were. You report you got 11, and will send them a note asking for the 12th one. You say you still would have preferred the refund, as you'd already gone out and bought more trees, but are willing to put this difficult situation in the past, now that you have some satisfaction.

BURNING'S ILLEGAL

Is it lawful for people to burn trash in the backyard with the scent blowing all over the neighborhood? At suppertime we can't eat for the odor blowing through our house. I thought it was against the law to burn garbage in the city limits. M. B.

Open burning is illegal anywhere in the state that there's any kind of public refuse pickup says Greenville Fire Inspector Jerry McLawhorn. He suggested you pass this information along to your neighbor. Then if it's not heeded, call him and he'll be glad to go and talk to the people, too, he said.

Strike Ties Up Canal

BALBOA, Panama (AP) — The American governor of the Panama Canal Zone is threatening to seek a court injunction to end a wildcat strike by American employees of the canal company that has created huge traffic jams at both ends of the waterway.

Gov. Harold R. Parfitt said he would call in the military to break the strike if necessary.

A canal company official said 83 ships were waiting to go through the waterway linking the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. He said only 11 ships were going through each day, compared with a normal average of 35 to 40 ships.

The last strike on the canal, in August 1973, tied up 118 ships for several days.

An estimated 700 pilots, tugboat crewmen, lock mechanics and other personnel began calling in sick Monday. They are protesting changes in pay schedules, reduction of fringe benefits and a freeze in pay raises and seniority promotions that are part of an economy campaign to reduce a $14-million deficit expected this year.

Schools' Grant

A grant of $4,820 to the Greenville City Schools was announced today by Rep. Walter Jones.

The grant was one of several in Eastern North Carolina approved by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, based on applications for financial assistance for schools in federally affected areas.

Last Week, Oil Imports Above U. S. Production

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States last week imported more oil than it produced for the first time in history even though Americans are demanding less oil now than they did before the Arab oil embargo.

The figures, released Wednesday by the American Petroleum Institute and confirmed by the Federal Energy Administration, show domestic production continuing a six-year decline and U.S. imports rising to record levels to meet demands that nevertheless are two million barrels per day below their peak level before the 1973 embargo.

Imports have been rising since the end of the embargo in early 1974 and crept above the 8-million-barrels-a-day level last week for the first time ever. Domestic production has been declining steadily from its peak of over 9 million barrels a day, recorded in 1970.

The result is that although conservation efforts, recession and mild winter weather since 1973 have lessened the amount of oil Americans use, the United States is more dependent on foreign oil sources than it was when the embargo was imposed.

The industry institute said total imports last week rose to 8,196,000 barrels a day. Domestic production, meanwhile, came to 8,013,500 last week, the API said.

Imports now comprise 45 per cent of the oil used in the United States. Last year, they accounted for 30 per cent, the API said.

Reasons for the decline in U.S. production are hotly disputed. Industry officials point out that prices of domestic oil are controlled and they argue that higher prices are needed to stimulate production. They say price controls have served to keep prices too low to provide incentives for new exploration — extremely costly when it involves searching the ocean's floor or searches in remote areas.

On the other hand, critics of the industry claim oil companies are deliberately deferring production to get higher prices. These critics maintain oil firms abandon old wells still containing oil rather than produce, at slightly higher cost, what is left in them.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The number of pet rocks sold over the counter last Christmas was no less than phenomenal. We received two. A male and female.

Now, I'm not the greatest rock lover in the world. Oh sure, they're sorta cute if they sparkle and are mounted on your ring finger. And I get a good feeling knowing my insurance company is built on one, but I don't get too choked up about having them all over the house.

The pet rock number was just as I knew it would be. At Christmas, the kids couldn't put them down. They fondled them, took them for walks, taught them tricks and every time we had company, they'd trot out the rock in the box.

Then I didn't see them for awhile until one morning at breakfast, I said to my son, "Hey, I bumped into your pet rock last night on the way back from a drink of water."

"Where?"
"With my foot?"
"The one with the cast on it. They're your rocks and you have to take care of them, do you hear?"

Within two months, the rocks began to appear everywhere. Under beds, behind doors, in the clothes hamper, in pockets, in the car, and we even found one grinding away in the disposal. "Look," I admonished, "I don't have time to fiddle with your pets. Why don't you find them a good home? After all, you never play with them anymore."
"What's to play with?" he grumbled. "All they do is sleep."

"No," I said shaking my head, "that's not ALL they do. They're multiplying faster than the King Family. Start looking for homes for them."

We put a sign out in front, Pet Rocks—1 cent each. It was like trying to unload pregnant kittens. No one, but no one wants a pet rock anymore.

I tried calling my friends and got answers like, "I'm sorry, but we live in an apartment," or "If I weren't expecting the baby in three months, I'd take one off your hands."

"Maybe we could take them out to a river and leave them."
"Abandon a pet rock?" I said. "What kind of an animal are you? Who would take care of them? They couldn't survive in the wilds."

To make matters worse, our other son brought in two stray rocks the other night and put them by the sink. This morning, I went to move them and under one was a pile of gravel.
Here we go again.

Nat'l Economy Top Tar Heel Concern

RALEIGH (AP)—Concern over the nation's economy and what the presidential candidates will do about it prompted more questions than any other issue in a North Carolina survey. Garry Hancock, president of North Carolina's Common Cause chapter, a citizen lobby group, said Wednesday 15,000 cards were distributed to citizens. They were asked to write down questions they would like the presidential candidates to answer.

Of 1,000 responses, more than half of the questions were about money issues, Hancock said. He added that 12 representative questions were submitted to the five Democrats and two Republican contenders entered in North Carolina's March 23 primary. Only one, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, did not reply. He said he had insufficient time.

Hancock said the citizens also expressed strong concern about foreign policy and integrity and accountability in government.

He noted that busing and abortion questions were not frequently asked.

Democrats Jimmy Carter, George Wallace, Henry M. Jackson and Morris Udall responded. So did President Ford and Republican challenger Ronald Reagan.

Briefly, this is a summary of how the candidates responded:

—On the question of what to do about inflation, Carter said, "The single domestic economic thrust should be toward employment." Wallace said the budget should be balanced, Jackson proposed "a five pronged energy program to get the economy back on track," and Udall said the money supply should be expanded.

President Ford said, "The government must stop spending so much and stop borrowing so much of our moneys." Reagan said inflation comes from excessive spending and proposed a "job data bank" to help the unemployed.

—On preventing government excesses against the people, Ford said he wants to reduce the size of the federal government. Reagan proposed transferring some federal functions back to the states. Carter called for a law requiring public access to government documents and Wallace said, "We must cut down this growing economy." Jackson and Udall did not answer.

On restricting intelligence agencies, Wallace said "we should take every step to protect the private rights of our citizens" but didn't cite any examples. Carter said he would be personally responsible, Udall said such agencies need strict guidelines and must be watched. Jackson didn't answer. Ford pointed to recent legislation he proposed and actions he had taken while Reagan said he opposes covert operations, but if they are necessary, they should be evaluated individually.

—On capital punishment, Wallace said he supports it,

Jackson said it can be a deterrent to crime, Udall said he doesn't believe it deters crime, and Carter stated it should be reserved for only the most serious crimes. Both Ford and Reagan supported it.

—On controlling welfare abuse, Ford said eligibility requirements should be tougher while Reagan said welfare "should be localized." Carter said those who can work should and there should be an adequate allocation for the other. Jackson proposed incentives to get those on welfare to work. Udall called for reform with a single, national program. Wallace said welfare cheating should be a serious crime.

On whether tobacco price supports should end because smoking is a health threat, Carter, Jackson, Wallace and Ford favored the support program. There were no answers from Reagan and Udall.

—On whether federal taxes are applied fairly, Carter said the "tax system is a disgrace and called for a simplified system. Wallace said the "super rich" should be forced to pay their share, Udall called for annual congressional review of tax laws. Ford cited changes he has proposed in the tax law. Reagan and Jackson did not answer.

Council Okays Special Grants

WILLIAMSTON—The Mid-East Emergency Medical Services Council last night approved requests from a number of providers in the five-county Mid-East area for more than $20,000 in equipment for emergency vehicles and hospital emergency rooms.

More than $19,000 of the amount is to be funded by a grant from the State's Office of Emergency Medical Services. The remaining funds will come from local sources.

The grant is designed primarily to provide equipment necessary for rescue vehicles in the area to meet 1976 standards.

Under the list of expenditures approved last night, six rescue squads and Pitt Memorial Hospital's emergency room would receive $4,507 worth of equipment.

Included in the requests approved for Pitt were $420 for Fountain Rescue Squad, $840 for Farmville Rescue, $840 for Bethel Rescue, $550 for Ayden Rescue, $480 for Winterville, $1,120 for Grifton Rescue and $252 for Pitt Memorial. The items included portable suction and bag mask resuscitation units, traction splints for adults and children.

Other counties and their totals included: Beaufort, $6,755; Bertie $2,900; Hertford, $2,830 and Martin, $4,588.

The largest items approved included an $1,800 mobile radio for the new Pamlico Beach Rescue Squad and $1,200 surgical lights for emergency rooms at the Pungo District Hospital and the Robersonville Township Hospital.

The grant funds are scheduled to be available July 1.

Two Injured In Four Collisions

An estimated $5,800 property damage resulted and two persons reported injured in a series of four collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported a car driven by Charles Donald Roark of Fullerton, Calif. collided with parked cars owned by Alys Smith Haney of Charlotte and Carol Leilani Davidson of Raleigh about 5:18 a.m. on Brownlea Drive, 60 feet South of the 14th Street intersection.

Investigators, who made no charges, estimated damage at $500 to the Haney car, $600 to the Davidson vehicle and $900 to the Roark car.

Ralph Lee Scott of 2702 Jackson Dr. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 4:40 p.m. mishap at the intersection of 14th Street and Ragdale Road.

Officers reported the Scott car collided with a car driven by Samuel Edwin Vincent of 2408 Slay Dr., causing an estimated $600 damage to the Scott car and $1,400 damage to the Vincent auto.

Thomas Warden Riggs of 912 College View Apts. and a passenger in the car he was driving were injured in an 11:22 p.m. collision on Cotanche Street, 260 feet North of the Fifth Street intersection.

Police said the Riggs car collided with an auto operated by Edward Freeman McCullen of 1600 Willow St., causing an estimated $700 damage to each of the two cars.

McCullen was charged with driving under the influence and operating left of center.

No charges were placed in connection with the fourth collision, a 4:35 p.m. incident on Greenville Boulevard, 300 feet West of the Greenville Drive intersection involving a car driven by James Norman Cashion of 1722 West Fifth St., and a car operated by Gregory Keith Nethercutt of Lewiston.

Investigators estimated damage at $175 to the Cashion truck and $225 to the Nethercutt car.

Cold Lingering In Western Carolina

By The Associated Press
The mountains remained cold today, with another overnight freeze threatening apples, but elsewhere in North Carolina it began to feel that spring was only two days away.

Maximums were in the 50s, except for the 40s in the higher elevations. But Friday, the highs will be in the 60s and 70s. Winds will shift to southerly and the state will begin to tap warmer air from the Gulf of Mexico.

And over the weekend—spring starts Saturday—temperatures will be in the 70s, with some 80s Sunday. There is a chance of scattered light weekend showers.

Snow fell in the northwest mountains Tuesday and early Wednesday, with Ashe County getting two inches. Roads became icy, and schools were closed in Ashe Wednesday.

The National Weather Service says surveys suggests there may have been minor damage to peach trees in the more susceptible low spots in the coastal plain. A leading grower, Clyde Auman of West End, says it's possible, but it's too early to tell.

Temperatures at 5 a.m. today were in the teens to the low 20s in the mountains, mid 20s in the Piedmont and coastal plain, and near freezing on the coast.

Freezing temperatures are forecast only for the mountains tonight.

The weather service says some apple buds in the mountains may have succumbed to the freeze.

Whitley...

(Continued from page 1) during which he emphasized the need for more intensive planning for industrial development and improved educational opportunities, as well as a strong law enforcement program.

He traveled to Rocky Mount for a meeting with campaign organizers there last night.

While in Greenville, Akins, a member of the Wake County Board of Commissioners and former Special Agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said he favors programs that will "move North Carolina ahead." The state now, he said, "is not the shining light of the South that we should be. Let's get moving again."

Akins said Eastern North Carolina has "taken the back seat for many years," but indicated it may be a blessing. "Now we can choose and be selective and develop in a way" that will be much better for the area.

The candidate said his campaign is "getting fully organized across the state... taking shape," with "enthusiasm growing every day."

The candidate, commenting on recent disclosures that the firm which held the state travel and promotion advertising contract has over-charged for its services and that a member of the Holshouser administration was an officer in the company, said good government is good business. "This is not good government or good business."

Akins emphasized, "You can't take advantage of government. The way it's been done (the advertising contract awarded) lends itself to mismanagement. If illegalities are found, they should be indicted," Akins emphasized.

"The state has run out of momentum. We need to upgrade industrial development," Akins suggested.

Most areas of the state want higher paying, good industry. "We are not competitive now." He suggested that the passage of the industrial revenue bond issue which will be on the March 23 ballot, will enable North Carolina to become more competitive in securing new industry.

Gather For Conference

Nineteen eastern North Carolina leaders of youth organizations attended a conference on outdoor activities at East Carolina University last weekend.

Sponsored by the ECU Department of Science Education, the conference was designed to instruct community youth leaders in providing learning experiences in the outdoors for the ten- to 15-year old age group.

Instructional staff at the conference included Dr. Carolyn Hampton, coordinator of the OBIS Resource Center at ECU, and science education faculty members Carol Hampton, Robert Dough, Charles Coble and Dan Nicholson.

Also participating in the conference were the following members of Nancy Dixon's fifth grade class from Wahl-Coates Elementary School here:

Scott Stallings, Jack Cox, Jodie Forbes, Pam Blake, Gregg Davis, Danny Wilson, Mary Ann Briley, Judy James, Mary Dawson, Gloria Adams, Douglas Webb, Alvin Clemons, Janie Keller, and Doug Smith.

Names of the 19 participating youth leaders include: PITT COUNTY, Greenville—Ann Harper and Diane Krage.

To someone with whom I'm on a first-name basis, it's "Good Morning, Abby."
To someone in a more formal manner, it's "Good Morning, Miss Van Buren."
And to anyone in general, it's just "Good Morning!"
I think the cheeriness of this is preferable to the legalistic "To whom it may concern" or the aloofness of "Dear Sir or Madame."

CORDIALLY, R.W. VOIGT

GOOD MORNING, MR. VOIGT: And what if the recipient opens the mail in the EVENING?

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (26¢) envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting my fourth child in May. My husband and I already have three boys, and of course we'd like to have a little girl this time because four is my limit.

My husband constantly tells me and everyone else he sees that if I don't have a girl this time, he will "divorce" me (He's only kidding of course, but it hurts me to hear it just the same.)

He has gone out and bought a lot of pink baby clothes, and he's even ordered baby furniture in pink! On Valentine's Day he sent me a card, saying, "THINK PINK!"

What should I give this expert needler for Father's Day in case I have another boy?

P.G.

Mrs. Jimmy Carter Greets Husband's Supporters Here

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman Editor

"We are excited about the campaign and our victories have not been accidents," related Mrs. Jimmy Carter, wife of the Democratic presidential candidate, during a news conference held here yesterday.

"I have been campaigning full-time since last April and we have Carters all over doing the same thing. Jimmy has a sister and an aunt in North Carolina, who are also campaigning. We are excited about the primary yesterday Tuesday in Illinois. North Carolina is important to us—we need your help."

"I have been asked if I thought it was important that I campaign. If I didn't think I was helping Jimmy's campaign, I would stay home. When I first started traveling and asking people to vote for my husband, they would ask me 'Vote for him, for what?," she said.

When asked if the constant campaigning disturbs your family life; is there any incompatibility? Mrs. Carter replied, "It brings our family closer together. When Jimmy was running for governor of Georgia, we all campaigned. We felt included with Jimmy. Now we are all working together for something. Of course, I miss our eight-year-old daughter, Amy, who stays with her grandmothers."

Mrs. Carter told the gathered supporters that two of her sons and their wives are in North Carolina now and that her husband is coming to the state Thursday. "... the Wisconsin primary is important to us and the whole family will descend on Wisconsin," she added. The Carters have three sons, Jack, Chip and Jeff.

A student spokesman from East Carolina University told Mrs. Carter, "We conducted a straw vote on campus and we have Carter winning the North Carolina primary with 56 per cent."

Mrs. Carter briefly told the gathered supporters of her husband's background "that makes him qualified to be a presidential candidate."

"Everybody in the country is looking for someone outside of Washington. We have no strings attached and have no obligations to outside groups. We have taken the campaign to the people, the good, hard working people."

"Jimmy says if the government can reflect the people, then people can trust the government."

"If I disagree on issues with Jimmy, I soon find out his feelings and he finds out my feelings. We will take different stands on issues and discuss them," she continued.

Mrs. Carter said the following things about her husband:

"Jimmy has taken some very definite stands on what he wants to do if elected president. He might not know everything, but he knows the basics."

"Jimmy is a leader and has a knowledge of foreign affairs that people are not aware of."

When asked about Betty Ford's outspokenness on various items, Mrs. Carter answered, "It is important for wives to be informed. There might be questions I will not answer, but so far there has not been any questions asked that I could not answer. I have worked with mental health and I will speak out on that subject."

Mrs. Carter has long had an interest in the field of mental health. As Georgia's first lady, she toured state and private mental facilities and served as a volunteer at the Georgia Regional Hospital in Atlanta. She has served as honorary chairman for the Georgia Special Olympics for Retarded Children, accompanying the Georgia team to California in 1972. She also served on the Governor's Commission to Improve Services for Mentally and Emotionally Handicapped Georgians.

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox extended the welcome to Greenville to Mrs. Carter, saying, "We are proud to have you in Greenville and I wish you all the luck in the world." Mrs. Carter was introduced to her husband's supporters by Les Meekins, of the Jimmy Carter Campaign, First N. C. District.

Traveling with Mrs. Carter was her husband's corresponding secretary, Maxie Wells. Mrs. Carter and her group arrived here from Monroe and then traveled to Rocky Mount. Also accompanying Mrs. Carter on her campaign stops across the Tar Heel State was an NBC news crew, who filmed Mrs. Carter during her time at the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

How To Address A Mixed Company

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Well, here we go again! A secretary requested a practical salutation for business letters to offices in which both men and women work. Obviously, the traditional "Dear Sirs" and "Gentlemen" are now out of date.

Some readers have submitted the following suggestions.

DEAR ABBY: How about "Greetings!" I borrowed that idea from Uncle Sam who used it extensively to draft men during World War II.

J.L. IN OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR J.L.: Sorry, the "Greetings" salutation would never catch on. We'd have "old soldiers" fainting all over the place.

DEAR ABBY: The Romans knew what they were doing. They never would have risked insulting the powerful women behind the successful men by excluding them, so they used the salutation, "Lectori Salutem," which means "Hail to the reader!"

CORRY H.

DEAR CORRY: Hail no! Most Americans have enough trouble with English!

DEAR ABBY: During a meeting I brought up the question about salutations that was raised in your column, and a lawyer sitting next to me came up with the ideal solution. Why not "Gentleperson"?

CLERGYMAN: INDIANA, PA.

DEAR ABBY: What's the matter with a straightforward, friendly "Howdy"?

FORT WORTH

DEAR FORT: Not worth much—outside of Texas.

DEAR ABBY: Re your column concerning salutation to groups: In the business and management seminars given by the University of California at Berkeley, we are suggesting that this problem be handled by omitting both salutation and the closing ("Sincerely," etc.), ending the letter as I have done below.

Plans Hinge On The Bond Vote

A five-year plan for growth of the North Carolina University system is nearing adoption by the Board of Governors.

It will be the first such comprehensive plan to be adopted by the board and, as such, it will set the guidelines for development of the state's universities under our unique system by which the Board of Governors oversees all of the 16 universities.

President William Friday called the document the "Foundation stone for educational planning." It will be a living document with amendment, deletions and additions made from time-to-time.

"When you adopt this, you literally take full possession of the University," Friday told the Board of Governors. "The programs of the University are yours, not by inheritance, but by adoption."

"The plan takes the conservative approach to development over the next five years. It authorizes the planning of 64 new programs, 24 of which were previously adopted by the board. All development, of course, depends on the state of the economy.

The plan depends heavily on passage of the bond issue or capital improvements for university campuses, to be considered by the voters next week.

For East Carolina University the plan recognizes the development of the long-fought-for medical school, and suggests that much of the resources available to the school will go into the health affairs area for awhile.

ECU would also make the break-through into the doctorate degree area, with authorization for awarding PhDs in fields related to the medical school. This would probably be the only doctorate degrees authorized for ECU any time soon however, since there is a surplus of PhDs in many fields.

The plan foresees the discontinuance of no campuses, and presumably no merger of any black campuses with predominately white institutions.

It reaffirms the emphasis on library enrichment on all campuses with high priority being given to this area.

The plan strikes us as a sound one for development of the university system in what still may be unsettled economic times. Under the plan there is flexibility enough for any campus to develop new ideas and seek to implement them. At the same time the plan is realistic enough to recognize that there are not going to be unlimited funds available for North Carolina higher education in the years ahead.

Must Find A Permanent Settlement

A Central Intelligence Agency estimated that there are between 10 and 20 nuclear weapons in Israel ready for use raises still further concern for that part of the world.

Israel has never admitted to having nuclear weapons but it was believed that the nation did possess them. The CIA estimate seems to support that belief.

There is not a great deal of doubt that Israel would use those nuclear weapons if its leaders feel the nation's very existence is threatened.

The only real answer is permanent settlement of Middle East problems, some solution that all the peoples of that area of the world can live with. Progress has been made in that direction, and that gives hope that peaceful solutions can be found.

THIS AFTERNOON

Guiding Principles Needed

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—There is no certainty in North Carolina as to the manner in which either society or the defendant will be treated in a given criminal case.

That lack of guiding philosophy lies at the bottom of numerous problems in the criminal justice system: different courts handing down different sentences for the same crimes; lengthy delays and defendants who escape by loopholes; victims of crime who feel cheated; society which looks with suspicion on law enforcement and the courts; crowded prisons which breed more crime.

Without some guiding principles, the system is subject to the momentary whims of the bureaucracy in which the comings and goings of individuals constantly and rapidly change the methods of dealing with the problem.

No Justice

In short, both certainty and justice are absent, and that should be remedied as the first course of business in any attempt to reform the state's criminal justice system, members of a legislative study commission have concluded.

Superior Court Judge Frank W. Snapp of Charlotte, a member of the commission chaired by Attorney Eddie Knox, former state senator from Charlotte, brought the situation into sharp focus at a recent meeting of the group.

On that commission are trial lawyers, district attorneys, law enforcement people, judges, and legislators. Plans are aimed at a package of reform legislation for consideration in the 1977 General Assembly.

Previously, State Rep. Herbert L. Hyde, D-Buncombe, presented the commission with his personal views, which he labels "radical" in some instances. Among his suggestions were the recognition that rehabilitation in prison is failing and should be provided only for those who volunteer; that paroles should be abolished in favor of certain sentences; that work be provided every able-bodied prisoner; that numerous victimless crimes such as minor traffic violations, prostitution, public drunkenness, use of narcotics, be decriminalized; and that broad discretionary powers of judges and police be taken away in favor of fixed remedies.

Snapp embraced many of Hyde's reform suggestions in a report which he delivered in hand-written fashion on a legal pad. His first priority is the question of philosophy:

A Policy

"The General Assembly of North Carolina needs to adopt a statement of the objectives of criminal punishment," he said, and suggested that the purpose of a system should be "to protect the public by deterrence of criminal conduct by imposition of a deserved punishment upon persons who violate the criminal laws; (and) incarceration of those guilty of serious violations of the criminal laws, or habitual criminal conduct; (and) to afford opportunities to convicted persons to voluntarily engage in rehabilitative programs."

Snapp continued, in his report, to outline specific steps in several areas:

—Classify crimes as to seriousness and set sentences, removing from judges the wide discretion they now exercise; the sentence should be the "minimum amount . . . necessary for protection of the public . . ."

—All sentences should be certain in length, and parole should be automatic on meeting certain terms and not subject to the whims of a paroles board.

—Reduce prison population by eliminating imprisonment for public drunks, non-support, and sexual acts between consenting adults.

—Rehabilitation should be voluntary, with no credit toward release for participation; put emphasis on group therapy.

—Smaller prison units with single cells should be scattered across the state with maximum of 200 inmates in each; youthful offenders should be kept separate.

—Restitution by the criminal to his victim should be imposed where appropriate.

Only The Intent Is Good

The road to hell, says the proverb, is paved with good intentions—and that is precisely the course the Congress is taking in a blundering effort to amend the antitrust laws. The end is right, but the means to that end are woefully wrong.

Permit a philosophical word. It is an article of conservative faith, if I understand my political gospel correctly, to fear excessive concentrations of power anywhere. This apprehension rests upon the conviction that power should be distributed sparingly, lest bad men abuse it—for it is likely that they will. We ought, therefore, to resist too much power in big government, big business, big labor, or whatever.

Philip Hart and Hugh Scott, in the Senate, and Peter Rodino, in the House, seldom have drawn a truly conservative breath. Nevertheless, they are on sound conservative ground in seeking to make antitrust laws more effective. The trouble is that the omnibus bill now before Congress is a thoroughly bad bill.

In the Senate version, the bill begins with elaborate findings of fact. Unhappily, some of these facts have never been found, and some of the findings are banal pronouncements. From this tenuous springboard, the bill dives into a series of grotesque remedies.

Title II, for example, would vest the Department of Justice with sweeping powers to compel secret oral interrogation or to demand documents from "any person," anywhere, who may have "any information" relevant to a civil antitrust investigation. Senator Hart enjoys a fine reputation as a great civil libertarian, but holy smokes! Where were his instincts for civil liberty when he drafted this section? The proposed power is an unchecked power to harass and to punish. No such power should be granted the department.

Title III similarly would endow the Federal Trade Commission with powers it has no business having. Under this section, the FTC could impose penalties up to $5,000 a day on any person or company that failed to comply on time with any order. Federal courts would be effectively forbidden to stay such penalties. Even if an FTC order were flagrantly wrong, a helpless defendant could be brought to financial ruin by this recklessly punitive provision. It is too much.

Title IV, the "parens patriae" section, is the worst section. This would authorize state attorneys general to bring their own antitrust proceedings in federal court ground rules that turn the law on its

Soviet Needs Grain

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

There are increasing indications that winter weather has damaged much of the Soviet Union's winter grain crop and that Russian farmers will be forced to replant large areas this spring, according to the Agriculture Department.

The development is leading U.S. officials to say there may be higher-than-normal Soviet grain buying abroad, possibly in the United States. That would be good news for grain growers and the agriculture industry at large. Whether it translated into higher American consumer prices would depend on the U.S. grain harvest this year.

The Agriculture Department has been saying for some time that the Soviet winter wheat crop got off to a poor start last fall as a result of drought. Thus, when winter cold forced plants into dormancy they were not adequately developed to survive.

"Cold weather in February threatened this vulnerable crop still more, particularly in the south where snow cover was sparse," the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday. "Considerable replanting to other grains is probable."

One favorable development for the Soviet Union has been that "snow has continued to pile up" in areas where spring wheat will be planted, meaning that the outlook for soil moisture appears good.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Bell said last week that the Soviet winter wheat crop was in poor shape.

40 Years Ago Today

March 18, 1936

President Roosevelt today asked Congress to appropriate $1.5 billion for work relief during the next fiscal year, beginning July 1.

In a special message to Congress, the Chief Executive reviewed the employment situation and proposed that the new funds go entirely to the Works Progress Administration.

"The trend of reemployment is upward, but the trend at its present rate is inadequate," the President said. "I propose therefore that we ask private business to extend its operations so as to absorb an increasing number of the unemployed."

He added, "If the employment gains are substantial, no additional appropriations by the next Congress for the next fiscal year, 1937, will be necessary."

Brown: Making A Deadlock

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Appeals from his liberal supporters brought Gov. Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown of California in recent days to the point of ending months of calculated suspense by deciding to enter the state's Democratic presidential primary.

Liberals, passionately against Sen. Henry M. Jackson, were not the only Californians anxious for Brown to enter the June 8 primary. Backers of Sen. Hubert Humphrey, whose chances entirely depend on a convention deadlock, were pushing Brown to prevent California's huge delegation from helping put any frontrunner over the top.

Thanks to his immense popularity, Brown might well win 170 out of California's 280 delegates despite the new proportional representation rules that ended the state's old winner-take-all system. That many delegates not only would throw down the frontrunners but give Brown unique bargaining power at Madison Square Garden next summer. Filing deadline for a Brown-led delegation is March 26.

Actually, Brown's left-wing backers — not diminished in their loyalty by the governor's fiscal conservatism — were initially urging him to run in order to block Gov. George Wallace in California long before they perceived a threat from Jackson.

Jackson's victory in Massachusetts March 2, however, intensified their urgency. Stanley Sheinbaum, a rich intellectual active in Southern California left-wing politics, has been particularly active in privately pressing Brown.

Pressure on the Humphreyites is more public. The call for Brown to run which came from state AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer John Jennings is universally recognized as a Humphrey move. So is last week's statement by campaign consultant Joe Cerrell, manager of Humphrey's 1972 primary campaign in California, that Brown should run to stop Wallace.

But Brown has also received similar advice from close associates whose principal interest is neither anti-Jackson nor pro-Humphrey. He has long been

Strength For Today

SERVICE IS FIRST

Jonathan Edwards, the great New England preacher and philosopher of the early eighteenth century, was famous all over the English-speaking world, yet, after a quarrel with his congregation, he was fired from his church in Northampton, Massachusetts. Neither vindictive nor distraught because of this occurrence, Edwards packed his few possessions and went to New Hampshire to serve as a missionary to Indian tribes there.

Here the great theologian and philosopher, whose works were read in England and Scotland, patiently explained the Scriptures to little groups of Indians who could neither read or write. Then, after a year of this humble service, he received a letter asking him to become President of the College of New Jersey, now Princeton University. Edwards accepted this call in the same calm spirit in which he undertook his service to the Indians.

Happy is the man who puts service before promotion or demotion.

Tax Inequity Partially Righted

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — An inequity of the federal income tax system that denied many wage-earners a tax shelter for their retirement funds has been at least partially corrected, but many eligible workers have failed to respond to the change.

Beginning last year, wage-earners not covered by a qualified private or government retirement plan — excluding Social Security and Railroad Retirement — became eligible to establish their own Individual Retirement Accounts.

Those who do so are allowed to deduct up to 15 percent from their gross taxable income to a yearly maximum of $1,500. Taxes are deferred until retirement, when brackets are lower. Taxes are then applied only as the money is used.

For tax purposes, IRAs

thus offer wage-earners who are not enrolled in a group plan some of the same tax benefits as those who are. Only a small percentage, however, have taken advantage of IRAs, perhaps because of a lack of understanding.

Here are some commonly asked questions at seminars conducted by the American Bankers Association. Answers were provided mainly by Earl E. McGuire, Jr., vice president of the Bank of Asheville, N.C., and chairman of the ABA's IRA Workshop Committee.

—For IRA purposes, what is considered income?

Income for this purpose includes salaries, wages, fees and tips. It excludes interest, rentals, royalties and alimony. Generalizing it is the money currently earned with the sweat of one's brow.

—Where can I invest retirement money?

In any or all of the following: savings plans in banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions; in trust accounts invested in stocks and bonds; annuities and endowment insurance policies; mutual funds U.S. Retirement Bonds.

An individual may have more than one IRA account, but the total invested cannot exceed $1,500 in one year, or 10 percent of income, whichever is less.

—Are there restrictions on use of the funds?

Stiff ones. You cannot withdraw money before age 59½ without a tax penalty and distribution must begin by age 70½. If you withdraw funds, you must pay a penalty of 10 percent of the amount withdrawn, plus regular income taxes.

You may move from one type of IRA to another only once every three years, although you can switch from one mutual fund to another under the same management as often as you like.

—Suppose I leave a job, where I have a pension plan, and go to work for a company without one? Can I use my previous pension money to establish an IRA account?

You might have the option of leaving the money with your former company and beginning an IRA from scratch. You might have the option also of accepting the pension money in a lump-sum payment.

If you accept the second option, you may reinvest tax-free some of this money in an IRA within 60 days of receiving it. Beginning with the next tax year you may begin making personal contributions.

However, only the money contributed to the plan by your company may be so invested in an IRA. Your

Cubans Bedding Down
Intelligence reports that Cuban wives are now joining their army husbands in far-off Angola, at first treated with skepticism here, are now being taken deadly seriously for the first time — an ominous indication of Fidel Castro's long-term intentions for his Cuban Africa corps.

Although exactly how many is now known, families of Cuban "advisers" to the new pro-Soviet government of Angola have been flying to southern Africa in large enough numbers to make secrecy impossible.

Indeed, information available in the Ford administration does not rule out the possibility that the women may not be limited to wives of Cuban "advisers" — the earliest batch of Castro's men who went to Angola. They were followed later by front-line units of his regular army. Thus, the wives may also include wives of the army regulars.

This new development reinforces a growing conviction at high levels here that Prime Minister Castro is no longer fearful about political or military repercussions from his dangerous African game, which now may be shifting to Rhodesia. With wives moving in, Castro obviously plans to keep at least some Cuban military men in Africa for a long time.

A footnote: Castro stripped his military leadership of some of its highest officials for duty in Angola with his 12,000 to 14,000 Cuban troops, including the chief of staff of the armed forces ministry and the vice minister of the interior.

Dobrynin's Flu — Although the prospect for a new strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II) has been less than even for the last two months, the severe illness of Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin is delaying even further another negotiating trip to Moscow by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Odds on such a Kissinger trip this spring are now well under 50-50.

Dobrynin returned to Moscow for last month's Communist party congress, with every intention of coming back to Washington immediately after the congress ended. It was assumed here that he would bring the Soviet response to the latest American SALT plan, to be followed by a probably Kissinger trip to Moscow.

Instead, Dobrynin came down with a virulent type of flu and has been confined to bed, with reports reaching here that he is now fighting off pneumonia. Every day of the ambassador's illness delays study here of the Soviet response to President Ford's latest negotiating position.

But even without Dobrynin's illness, the debate in the U.S. over detente and administration policy toward the Soviet Union, heated up in the presidential primary campaigns, has meant a worsening political climate for SALT II, quite apart from deep disagreements between Washington and Moscow over the American cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber.

The likely result: no SALT II in election-year 1976.

the law on its head.

Suppose, for example, that a politically ambitious attorney general decided to charge a state's milk producers with gouging consumers to the tune of a penny a quart. Under the vague terms of this section, he would not have to prove damage to any consumer; he would have to show only some damage to the "general economy of such state" that might "with reasonable probability be causally related to the antitrust violation." What kind of due process is this? What a flimsy burden of proof!

The treble damages that could be awarded under Title IV would not benefit consumers. The damages would be awarded the state, for whatever the state wished to do with them. What is authorized, in brief, is a plan for extortion pure and simple. Prospective defendants would be insane not to settle out of court.

Title V would give the Justice Department a virtual power of veto, in advance, over proposed private corporate mergers or acquisitions. Again, it is too much power. Title VI, unbelievably, would destroy the secrecy of certain grand jury proceedings. Title VII would create a new class of "complex" antitrust cases in which court-appointed experts would act as prosecutors, witnesses and judges.

Too much, too much! Fifteen months ago, when an act became effective to increase criminal punishments in antitrust cases, I yelled hooray. It is fine with me to send a corporation's president to prison for three years, and to fine him $100,000, for willful violation of the antitrust laws. Soak the corporation itself a million dollars! Such punishments, imposed after fair trials, should prove an effective deterrent to unscrupulous executives. But the pending omnibus bill is an omnibus botch. It ought to be voted down.

Winter wheat accounts for about 40 per cent of total production, with the remainder coming from crops planted in the spring, he said.

But most of the wheat produced by the Soviet government for city consumers comes from winter crop areas, Bell said. Most of the spring crop is consumed on farms where it is produced. "I think the possibilities of having a normal winter wheat crop in the Soviet Union (this year) is nil," Bell said. "I think it will be below normal."

Bell added that without a normal winter wheat crop "the chances of above-normal imports into the Soviet Union are higher than they would be under normal conditions."

Even with evidence that there has been a deterioration of Soviet winter grain prospects, officials caution that it is still too early to make predictions on what the total 1976 Russian harvest may be.

'Lying Around'

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Jacob Alexander, secretary of transportation, says a state investigation has turned up between $5 million and $11 million in state funds "just lying around idle."

During a speech Tuesday to a Republican gathering, Alexander said the money had been stashed away in hidden bank accounts "waiting for the Democrats to come back to office in 1977."

Gov. Jim Holshouser, who attended the dinner, said he was aware of the investigation but was unaware of the findings.

Alexander said some of the money had not been turned in because of "sloppy house-keeping" and that most was drawing interest.

He said the funds were from completed highway and state projects on which the books had not been closed.

Pled Guilty To Reduced Charge

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — State Rep. Larry Eagles, D-Edgecombe, pleaded guilty Wednesday in Edgecombe District Court to a reckless driving charge and was ordered to pay a $100 fine and court costs.

The charge had been reduced from driving under the influence.

District Judge Allen Harrell handed down the sentence.

Eagles, 66, a three-term legislator, was arrested here Nov. 30 and charged with drunken driving after scoring a 1.3 on the breathalyzer test, court records showed.

He also faces trial next Wednesday on a drunken driving charge stemming from a later arrest.

personal contributions cannot be reinvested in an IRA, since they have previously been taxed.

—How important is age? Very important. How you approach this investment depends on your current age, the age at which you expect to retire, the length of time you expect to draw payments and, most importantly, the amount of income you seek.

If you expect a long retirement, you may prefer the lower return of an annuity that guarantees fixed lifetime income. If Social Security will be your only resource, you may want the dependable return of a savings account.

If you have outside resources that permit you to take risks, you may seek capital gains and try to swell your retirement fund. But remember, the greater the reward, the greater is the risk in obtaining it.

—What features should I look for?

The institution handling your account should be able to explain the terms of your IRA and give you an indication of the expected rate of return. You may ask if the account will have a guaranteed termination value.

The institution should agree to furnish periodic statements on the status and value of your account. Some IRAs have high front-end charges and frequent transaction costs, and some will have negligible or even no fees.

You should ask if you can vary the amount of your contribution from year to year. You may be required to decide immediately what type of retirement payments you want, or you may be able to postpone that decision until retirement.

Had Enough Of Governor's Job

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Calvin L. Rampton, governor of Utah for the last 12 years, says he won't seek a fourth term.

The 62-year-old Democrat said he intends to return to his law practice, which he gave up when he won his first term in 1964.

Rampton disclosed his intentions Wednesday in response to a reporter's question at his monthly televised news conference.

Navy To Erase 1,359 Civilian Jobs By Closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says 1,359 civilian jobs will be eliminated in the planned closing or downgrading of 80 bases, mostly Navy facilities.

The planned reductions announced Wednesday is the second of three being planned by defense officials, and was projected to save $56 million a year.

The Air Force announced last week it would close or trim 51 bases to save an estimated $150 million annually. And the Army is preparing its list of reductions to be announced last.

The Pentagon said the Navy closings and reductions would affect more than 14,000 military and civilian personnel in 29 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and Guam.

The action involves 74 Navy installations, including 45 small reserve centers. Also involved are six installations of the Defense Mapping Agency, the Defense Supply Agency and the Army.

Undersecretary of the Navy David Potter said only two or three of 19 larger facilities affected would be closed completely. Before closing or cutting the large bases, the Navy first must conduct detailed studies to see what the local impact will be, he said.

The studies, which could take up to nine months, will consider environmental factors as well as community impact on housing, schools and employment, the Navy said.

The Pentagon said the streamlining action calls for about 2,100 military personnel to be transferred from support to combat assignments, and studies must be made of facilities where operations may increase because of transfers.

Potter said the $56 million savings, expected to begin in October 1977, was equivalent to the cost of operating nine destroyers for one year and the cost of overhauling three such vessels.

The states most affected by the latest action are Florida, Pennsylvania, Texas, California, New York, Tennessee, New Jersey and Indiana.

Potter said the Naval Air Stations at Key West, Fla., Memphis, Tenn., and Corpus Christi, Tex., "will be examined to determine the impact of closure or reduced activity." However, Potter added that the Key West facility probably would be kept in operation, but at a reduced level.

Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes, D-Fla., said an earlier decision to trim or close Saufley Field near Pensacola, Fla., was changed after he contacted the Navy. The Navy said Saufley "will be restudied as a training-management complex."

Sikes said the restudy was what had been planned all along under an previous agreement he had with the Navy.

Potter said the Navy Resale Systems Office in Brooklyn, N.Y., possibly will be closed, with its surplus goods functions going to Illinois.

In addition, he said the Philadelphia Naval Hospital may be closed or its services reduced and medical training functions consolidated.

In non-Navy actions, the Defense Supply Agency will determine whether to close or reduce activity at the Defense Clothing Factory, which employs about 1,600 civilians in Philadelphia.

The Defense Mapping Agency will consider whether to close one or more of its topographic center field offices located in Providence, R.I., Louisville, Ky., San Antonio, Tex., and Kansas City, Mo.

will be disestablished and closed by June 30.

Greenwood — The Naval Reserve Facility, Greenwood, will be disestablished and closed by June 30.

TENNESSEE
Memphis — The Naval Air Station, Memphis, is being studied for possible termination of air operations in fiscal year 1977. The study will consider the relocation of flying units to other active air stations. 580 military and 100 civilian positions could be affected.

First Federal Offices Acquiring A New Look

NEW LOOK . . . First Federal Savings and Loan on Evans Mall is sporting a new look following complete remodeling, including a redesign of both the front and rear sections of the building. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

First Federal Savings & Loan Association is in the process of completing interior and exterior remodeling at its downtown office on the Evans Street Mall.

Interior remodeling, which included a reorganization of various aspects of the firm's office structure, involved the addition of approximately one-third more square footage made possible by the use of the former Tadlock Insurance Agency offices located next door.

A First Federal spokesman said that the wall separating the two offices was removed and the additional space allowed for the relocation of the firm's loan department and bookkeeping section to the new area.

The addition of the adjoining office also increased the overall lobby area, the spokesman said.

Other interior changes included the addition of a loan closing room, lounge area for employees, new furnishings and wall covering, and improved reception area.

A key feature of the overall remodeling, it was noted, was the addition of a convenient rear entrance off the pedestrian walkway for First Federal customers. The firm, it was pointed out, is emphasizing two main entrances rather than front and rear doors.

Landscaping of the area around the rear entrance is also scheduled.

Both the front and rear exterior sections of the office have undergone changes, according to the spokesman, including the installation of Spandrel reflective glass and off-white stone aggregate. The company name sign has been installed on the aggregate section.

First Federal's popular time and temperature sign has been relocated to the Washington Street side as mall regulations prohibit overhanging sign fixtures.

First Federal has offices in Greenville, Farmville, Ayden and Grifton.

Singers And Teachers Gather This Weekend

More than 350 high school and college singers and their teachers will be gathering Friday and Saturday on campus at East Carolina University as the guests of the School of Music.

The event is the annual student auditions and conference of members of the North Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Teachers of Singing (N.A.T.S.).

This year's special guest is Elena Nikolaidi, mezzo-soprano, formerly a member of the Metropolitan Opera and currently a member of the faculty of Florida State University.

Students attending the two-day conference will sing for both the adjudication comments and the opportunity to go on to the Regional N.A.T.S. auditions which will be held in Columbia, S.C. in April. One singer from each of 15 categories will then progress to the regionals where cash prizes are awarded winners.

Category winners are to be featured in an open recital at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, March 20 in the Recital Hall of the A. F. Fletcher Music Center.

In addition, a formal banquet will be held in Mendenhall Student Center Friday evening, March 19, at 8:30 p.m. to be followed by a program of music in the Recital Hall. This event will be presented by members of the E.C.U. music faculty, including Antonia Dalaphas, Robert Daniel, Virginia Linn, Richard Lucht, Charles Moore and the Concert Choir, directed by Brett Watson.

Dr. Charles Moore, coordinator of the two day conference, notes that in addition to high school students, there will be college students and teachers from nearly all colleges and universities in the state, with a guest group from Longwood College in Virginia.

Farmville Man Is Elected To CP&L Board

A.C. Monk, Jr. of Farmville was one of two new directors elected to the Carolina Power and Light Company's Board of Directors Wednesday.

Monk is president and treasurer of A.C. Monk and Co., Inc., of Farmville, left tobacco processors and exporters. He also serves as a director of Monk-Henderson Tobacco Co. in Wendell and Wachovia Corporation and Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., N.A. of Winston Salem. Monk is a former president of the Tobacco Association of the United States and the Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association.

George H. V. Cecil of Biltmore is also a newly elected CP&L director.

Computer Expert Speaks Friday

Dr. James M. Ortega, director of the Institute for Computer Applications in Science and Engineering at Nasa's Langley Research Center, will speak at East Carolina University Friday, March 19.

Ortega's seminar lecture, "Numerical Methods on Vector Computers," is scheduled for 3 p.m. in room 213 of the Physics Building.

The public is invited to attend.

May Need Drug

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bradford Bishop Jr., wanted for the slayings of his mother, wife and three sons in their Bethesda, Md., home March 1, had been under psychiatric care and was using a drug to prevent depression, according to George Quinn, agent in charge of the FBI office here.

"We feel Bishop needs a refill (of the drug) right now," Quinn said. FBI agents are checking pharmacies and medical societies across the country in an effort to locate the missing State Department official.

Bishop was last seen March 1 a few hours before the bloody slayings in his split-level home in the affluent Washington suburb. The bodies were found the next day in a shallow grave near Columbia, N.C.

The 39-year-old Bishop had been under psychiatric care "for a period of time," Quinn said today.

He said the prescription drug Bishop was taking, Serax, had last been refilled in January.

Without the drug, Bishop could suffer from withdrawal symptoms that might include depression, anxiety and loss of appetite, Quinn said.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THIS RAMBLING RANCH, with western accent, contains a central foyer touching on all main areas. The highlight of the house is the rear living and dining rooms under a cathedral ceiling and separated by a rugged fireplace. Sliding glass doors lead to a covered terrace and large patio. The effect is private, yet open. The informal part of the house to the left of the foyer is a housewife's dream. The bedroom wing is separate and quiet. Architect for Plan HA914P, with its 1,653 square feet of living space, is Samuel Paul, 107-40 Queens Blvd., Forest Hills, N.Y. 11375. Anyone wishing to ask questions about the plan can write to him, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Education Bonds Said Meeting Today's Need

By NOEL VANCEY Associated Press Writer RALEIGH (AP) — Spokesmen for the University of North Carolina system say that $43.2 million proposed for new buildings on university campuses is needed mainly to meet existing enrollment levels and is not for expansion.

The people will vote March 23 on whether to issue bonds to finance the construction program. It includes funds for building projects at 13 of the 16 UNC campuses. The other three campuses have been taken care of through direct appropriations.

UNC President William C. Friday says that "most of the building projects included in this bond issue had received planning money from previous sessions of the General Assembly" so that the action of the 1975 legislature in approving the bond proposal was "a reaffirmation of legislative sentiment that the prospects were worthy although the money was not available for direct appropriation."

The bond proposal has the support of Gov. Jim Holshouser, Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, House Speaker James C. Green, State Treasurer Edwin Gill, former Gov. Terry Sanford who is now president of Duke University, and most of the candidates for statewide office in the August primary.

Two notable exceptions are Coy Privette, a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor and State Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Privette, a Baptist pastor who resigned his pastorate to enter the race for governor, called the bond proposal "irresponsible" and "bad business." He said "there is definitely no need" for some of the buildings. He added that "perhaps there is some justification" for one or two of them. He identified a $6 million classroom-office building proposed for the University of North Carolina at Charlotte as one of these.

Jordan said his reasons for opposing the bond proposal are the same as Privette's.

In supporting the bonds, Gill said that "the state can afford the bonds and the university needs these buildings."

Hunt said the bond issue "is to meet some very pressing needs which are vital to the programs already being provided on these (UNC) campuses."

Friday said that the only expansion of the bonds would finance the $6 million classroom-office building at UNC Charlotte. He said the remaining construction would house existing programs without increasing enrollments.

Also on the ballot March 23 will be an amendment to the state constitution to permit state and local governments to issue revenue bonds to finance hospital facilities.

A spokesman for the North Carolina Hospital Association which is backing the amendment, said recently it knew of no opposition.

In supporting the proposed amendment, Sanford said its passage "is one way the state can hold down the costs of hospital care of its citizens. Its benefits are straightforward. Tax-exempt revenue bonds issued by the state will cost less than conventional financing."

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—The North Carolina graded feeder pig auction sale Wednesday at Norwood totaled 765. U.S. No. 1, 40-50 pounds 110.25; 50-60 pounds 101.75; 60-70 pounds 91.25; 70-80 pounds 83.00; U.S. No. 3, 40-50 pounds 96.75; 50-60 pounds 90.75; 70-80 pounds 63.00.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—The trend on the North Carolina hog market was steady to 25 lower today. Wilson 45.25-46.25; High Falls 44.25-45.25. Rocky Mount 45.25-45.75; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Elizabethtown, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg, Benson, 46.00; Kinston 45.25-46.25; Tarboro and Bethel unreported, Salisbury 45.00.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was weaker today, supplies moderate, demand light, weights.

The North Carolina dock weighted average price is 41.62 cents per pound this week for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers to be picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 1,147,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined steadily today, bowing to concern over the interest rate picture.

Trading was relatively light. The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 7.95 at 978.04. Losers outpaced gainers by more than 2-1 in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said buying interest had been dampened by the market's uninspired showing Wednesday, when it failed to hold most of an early gain.

They also noted talk that the wide spread by which bond yields currently exceed stock yields might prompt a flow of funds out of stocks and into interest-bearing investments.

Such a possibility was raised in an analysis by the brokerage firm of White, Weld & Co. quoted in this morning's Wall Street Journal.

Gulf Oil was the most active Big Board issue, down 1/4 at 22 3/4. A 237,000-share block traded at 22 3/4.

Union Camp, also active, dropped 1 1/2 to 92—the price at which a 1 million-share offering of the company's stock came out.

See Italian Communist Alliance

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — The ruling Christian Democrats moved closer toward an alliance with the Communists today as they began a party congress in the wake of their first public consultation with their traditional foes.

Most of the four-day Christian Democratic congress was expected to be devoted to discussion of whether to move to the left and toward some sort of accommodation with the Communist party, Italy's second largest.

The Vatican urged the Christian Democrats not to abandon the anticommunism that has been one of the chief planks in the Roman Catholic party's platform since it banned the Communists from the government in 1947.

But the gravity of the economic situation, the apparent inability of the Christian Democrats to improve the situation alone and the growing strength of the Communists was driving Premier Aldo Moro steadily toward some sort of arrangement with them.

Moro invited Communist party Secretary-General Enrico Berlinguer for consultation Wednesday night before his minority government issued austerity decrees designed to halt the tailspin of the lira and to improve the economic situation. The lira has lost 15 per cent in value in international exchange rates in the last two weeks.

Although the Christian Democrats and the Communists have cooperated privately before on such issues as abortion reform, it was the first time that the Catholic party had publicly admitted giving the Communists a formal hearing.

After the 90-minute meeting, Moro's minority cabinet approved an austerity program designed to raise a billion dollars to replace treasury losses caused by futile efforts to strengthen the lira. The emergency measures included a new 14 per cent gasoline tax, raising the cost of premium gas to $1.69 a gallon; an increase in the interest rate on loans from 8 to 12 per cent; and increased sales taxes on cars, liquor and a number of other items.

The Communists made another gain Wednesday when the Socialist party joined them in a leftist coalition government for the Lazio region, which includes Rome. It was the seventh of Italy's 20 regional governments to come under leftist control, and although the Rome municipal administration remained with the Christian Democrats, they are expected to lose it to the Communists in municipal elections during the summer.

ABC Suspension Was Suspended

The State ABC Board suspended permits issued to Mrs. Virginia C. Radford for the R and M Grocery at 3014 South Memorial Dr. for 45 days, then suspended the suspension on condition no further violations occur within a six-month period. The board took the action at its March 15 meeting in Raleigh.

Rampants Take 9-1 Opening Game Win

VMI Opens Its Bid In Easterns

By MARSHALL JOHNSON
AP Sports Writer
GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — Three of the teams in the NCAA East Regional basketball semifinals tonight weren't expected to be there, but don't try to tell Rutgers Coach Tom Young that makes it any easier for his fourth-ranked unbeaten Scarlet Knights.

"Obviously, on paper, it's not as attractive as the Mideast," says Young, referring to the field at Baton Rouge, La., that includes top-ranked Indiana, second-ranked Marquette, sixth-ranked Alabama and 10th-ranked Western Michigan.

"But, as far as we are concerned, it takes only one game to get knocked out," adds Young, whose Scarlet Knights, 29-0, take on the Connecticut UConn, 19-9, in the opening East Regional semifinal at 7:05 p.m. at the Greensboro Coliseum.

The 9:10 p.m. nightcap sends DePaul's 17th-ranked Blue Demons, 20-8, against Virginia Military's upstart Keydets, 21-9, who upset seventh-ranked Tennessee, 81-75, last Saturday night in Charlotte.

The survivors play at 12:10 p.m. Saturday and the winner will earn the first berth in the March 27 NCAA semifinals at Philadelphia.

Rutgers barely got past Princeton, 54-53, last Saturday, and Young doesn't look for any more slowdowns like that against Connecticut, a 98-83 regular season victim of his Knights.

"We'll go back to playing the way we like to play," says Young. "They like to run, too. I think you'll see a game in the 80s."

Connecticut Coach Donald "Dee" Rowe agrees — to a point.

"They make you play their way. We like to run a little bit ourselves, and I'm hopeful we can slow the pace down a little bit."

DePaul, which advanced by beating Atlantic Coast Conference champion Virginia, 69-60, and robbed Greensboro of a so-called "home" team, figures to have too much height for VMI, which shot a sizzling 66 per cent in beating Tennessee.

Veteran DePaul Coach Ray Meyer, who has 529 career victories, says, "VMI was totally a surprise to me. They are a well coached team. They are good outside shooters. They don't have to rely on an inside game and they will cause us many, many problems."

VMI won't be lacking for support. The school has declared today a "reading" day and approximately 800 of its 1,100 cadets are expected to be on hand.

As to whether his Keydets can match up with DePaul's height, VMI Coach Bill Blair says jokingly, "I don't let them see the other team. When we come out on the floor, they'll have to hunt for us."

The one thing bothering Young is the fact that Rutgers has played Connecticut once this season.

"I don't like to play anybody a second time, especially in a tournament. They'll have more respect for us this time," he says.

But Young, who says he feels the end of an unbeaten regular season relieved some of the pressure on his team, adds: "If the players respect Connecticut, which I know they do, I'm not worried about how they'll play. If we play a good ball game, we should win it, let's face it."

coach's wife wants the NIT championship for an anniversary present.

Sloan's remark, delivered deadpan at a press conference Wednesday, was in reference to a remark made kiddingly by Rose. The 49ers' coach joked that he had to win, "or my marriage would be dissolved. She wants the NIT for our anniversary present."

The game has significant meaning for UNC-Charlotte. The 49ers have lived for some time in the shadow of North Carolina State's gaudy Atlantic Coast Conference—and life there hasn't been easy, according to Rose.

"It's been tough building a basketball program with those ACC teams around," Rose said. "You've seen our team—we don't have much depth. All we have is a lot of heart."

"They're a great basketball team," said Sloan. "No wonder most of the ACC teams don't want to play them."

North Carolina State has been one of the few ACC teams to acknowledge UNC-Charlotte's existence. The Wolfpack played the 49ers earlier in the season and beat them by three points in a questionable decision at home.

"Ever since we beat them, Sheldon Shipman (a UNC-Charlotte guard) has been saying that this is their chance to get even," Sloan said. "If we hadn't played them, there wouldn't be any of this 'get even' factor."

Charlotte, State In NIT Semifinal Contest

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the solid gold shows in New York these days is "The Wiz," a modern version of that old movie classic, "The Wizard of Oz."

The story involves a girl who is swept away in a root-lifting Kansas twister and finds herself in an odd, picturesque land chasing a rainbow and finding a magical wizard who makes her dreams come true.

If there's anything symbolic attached to it, the North Carolina-Charlotte basketball team went to see it Wednesday night. The 49ers are chasing rainbows, too—in the National Invitation Tournament title.

"This has been a dream come true for me," said Lee Rose, whose 49ers meet North Carolina State tonight in an NIT semifinal game. "I'm so shook up I can't eat."

After Providence and Kentucky play the opener of the semifinal doubleheader at Madison Square Garden, the Carolina neighbors will have their Civil War.

"It's really nothing personal, but I'd rather play anyone else in the world than North Carolina-Charlotte right now," said North Carolina State Coach Norm Sloan. "There's no way we can match their emotion. It isn't enough that UNC-Charlotte is a great team, that they're trying to make a name for themselves and that they want revenge from a loss to us earlier in the season. Now, their of the Carolinas, the opener will feature an intriguing difference in philosophies—Kentucky's inside power game against Providence's finesse.

"Our team is playing well now," said Providence Coach Dave Gavitt. "We were physically banged up earlier in the year, but we had a week's rest before the start of the NIT and this helped us."

Rose High School's Rampants finally got around to opening the 1976 baseball season yesterday. They did it on a winning note, downing 3-A Williamston, 9-1.

The game matched the two defending state champs in their respective classes.

The contest really wasn't as wide apart as the score might indicate. Williamston made a lot of mistakes that cost them runs. Rose was quick to take advantage of these mistakes.

Both teams collected six hits, but Rose had the more effective pitching.

Mike Belton started the game and gained the victory, hurling four innings before leaving in the chill weather. He scattered four hits, walked three and fanned two. Henry (Snake) Baker finished the game, allowing two hits, the lone run, and four walks. But he fanned six.

Only two of the nine Rampant runs were earned, as all three Tiger errors played a role in the scoring.

Williamston threatened in the top of the first as Butch Davis sent a shot up the power alley in right center for a triple with two down. A popup ended that threat

Eastern Wayne Rolls Over Rams

NEW HOPE — Eastern Wayne romped to a 13-6 victory over Greene Central yesterday. The two teams went scoreless in the first two innings before the Rams broke the ice in the third.

Dal Blizzard walked for Greene Central, then stole up, scoring on Jay Carraway's hit.

Eastern Wayne came back with four runs in the bottom of the third. Ed Evans walked and stole up. Woody Sutton singled him in and Wally Jernigan got a hit. Howard Johnson reached on an error, scoring Sutton, Greg Gabrell then singled to score Jernigan and Johnson.

In the fourth, The Saints put the game out of reach with three more. Kenny Dobbins walked and Evans singled. An error on a pickoff play let Dobbins score. Sutton singled in Evans and a hit by Jernigan scored Sutton.

Eastern added five more in the fifth on four hits and two errors. Then got another in the sixth. The Rams came back with five in the sixth, but it was too late.

Floyd Adams and Thomas Hooker each picked up two hits in four trips for the Rams.

however.

Two walks and a single loaded the bases for the Tigers in the second, and a hit and an error put runners at first and third in the third.

A leadoff single and a walk put a man in scoring position in the fourth, but it wasn't until the fifth that Williamston scored. That came when Baker walked both Davis and Eric Godard with two down. Tommy Gardner then singled to left, scoring Davis. Another walk loaded the bases, but an infield out ended the frame.

The Tigers got a man as far as second in the sixth and seventh, but failed to score again.

Rose jumped quickly into the lead, scoring three in the bottom of the first. David Dixon walked and stole second. Belton reached on an error, and Jay Chenier ran for him. Mike Brewington lofted a ball to right that appeared to be an easy pop, but the wind carried it to the fence. Despite the runners holding in case of a catch, Dixon scored easily. With two away, and runners at second and third, Derek Brewington hit a slow grounder to short, beating it out as both Chenier and Mike Brewington scored.

In the second, Greg Sasser

Kuhn Orders Training Camp Opening

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Play ball! That familiar cry of spring was finally sounded by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Wednesday night and seconded by players union boss Marvin Miller, and if today's official start of spring training is some 2½ weeks late, the scheduled April 8 opening of the regular season seems assured. From Florida to California, the 24 major league teams prepared to go to work in earnest today with only three weeks to prepare for the start of the game which seems in danger of being replaced as the so-called national pastime by court battles and labor disputes. Thanks to Kuhn's dramatic decree ordering the owners to open the training camps "without further delay," baseball today comes out of the smoky, rhetoric-filled labor-management meeting rooms and into the sunlight where it belongs. Most teams were expected to begin serious workouts today and at least one club official said the short-circuited exhibition season could get under way as soon as Sunday.

"I think this is a constructive step," Miller said when he returned to his New York home from Tampa, Fla., late Wednesday night and was informed of Kuhn's order. Asked if this meant the season would open as scheduled April 8 with Houston at Cincinnati in the National League and New York at Milwaukee in the American, Miller replied: "I think so. There's been no threat of a strike by the players. The whole thing has been an owners' lockout."

Calvin Griffith, owner of the Minnesota Twins, said he hoped his team could play its first exhibition game Sunday against the Boston Red Sox. "This isn't as much time as I would like to have, naturally," said Manager Darrell Johnson of the American League champion Red Sox, who open the season April 9. "The regulars will need about 2½ weeks to get ready, but most of the pitchers will need more time. But we can overcome that just by being careful with them at the start of the season." Johnson said he won't let any pitcher go more than five innings when the regular season begins and will use three or four pitchers a game "until their arms are as strong as they normally would be at that time of the year. I won't rush anybody for fear of injuries, but we'll get our work done."

At least one manager, Danny Ozark of the Philadelphia Phillies, is considering spring drills and intrasquad game during the day and basic fundamental drills at night until the exhibition games begin to make up for lost time. General Manager Phil Seghi of the Cleveland Indians felt three weeks was plenty of time to prepare for the season. "Are you kidding?" he said. "Certainly it's enough time. The only reason spring training starts so early is because of tradition. Years ago, teams used to break camp early and barnstorm northward during the last week or two playing exhibition games. But we don't do that any more so three weeks is plenty of time."

However, it likely will take more than three weeks to settle the dispute that led to the owners' refusing to open the training camps as scheduled March 1. Another owners' meeting is scheduled here Saturday. The players' executive board asked that the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service be brought into the negotiations. The players representatives also requested that the basic agreement, which has expired, be extended until a new contract can be worked out and that the no-strike, no-lockout provision be reinstated. The owners were stunned Tuesday when Miller announced his personal rejection of their latest offer which contained the "one-and-one" concession which would have made any major leaguer a free agent by playing out one option year after the expiration of his signed contract. Many would have become free agents at the end of the 1976 season and virtually all by the end of the 1977 campaign. But Miller and many player representatives were dissatisfied because the proposal would have allowed free agents to negotiate with a maximum of eight teams while the arbitrator's decision in the historic Messersmith-McNally case last December gave pitcher Andy Messersmith of the Los Angeles Dodgers the right to deal with all 24 clubs. Miller was asked Wednesday why the executive board did not take a vote on the issue, as expected. "The document (owners' proposal) is incomplete," he explained. "It left too many open issues to be discussed. There was nothing to vote on. We considered the owners' proposal

Coach Angered After Jazz Loss

By The Associated Press
Apparently it only takes a couple of days for the New Orleans Jazz to forget most of their basketball lessons. "We won five games in six nights and should have been tired. Then we have two days off and come out like pussycats," Coach Butch van Breda Kolff snorted after the Jazz dropped a 112-107 National Basketball Association decision to the crippled New York Knicks Wednesday night. "We just can't stand prosperity. Instead of remembering how we win, we revert back to the same bad habits and the same bad shots. I keep telling them you can't shoot your way back into the game — you have to play your way back into the game."

Prep Playoff Action Starts

By The Associated Press
Willie Summers scored 25 points and Don Patterson 21 to lead Richmond County to a 103-71 victory over Burlington Cummings Wednesday night in a quarterfinals game for the North Carolina 4-A high school basketball championship. In another 4-A quarterfinals game at Greensboro, South Mecklenburg, aided by Todd Crowley's 18 points helped South Mecklenburg defeat Northern Nash 78-58. Richmond County and South Mecklenburg will meet in Friday night's semifinals. The other semifinalists will be the winners of tonight's two quarterfinals games. They will match McDowell County against Cary and Greensboro Page against Fayetteville Sanford. That also will be the format from the quarterfinals through the final of the 3-A, 2-A and 1-A tournaments, which began Wednesday night. Here is a look at them: 3-A at Durham: Chip Penick scored 24 points, 18 in the second half, to lead Graham past East Surry 80-68. Bobby Barnes of East Surry led all scorers with 27 points. East Bladen defeated Madison-Mayodan 61-55. Top scorers were James Keith of East Bladen with 17 points, some of them at critical times, and Donny Cardwell of Madison-Mayodan with 14. It's Pender County vs. Bandys and Washington vs. Hendersonville tonight in the completion of the quarterfinals. 2-A at Winston-Salem: Substitute Donald Sinclair hit for 16 points as Clayton stopped Union Pines 57-51. Knapp High of Currituck got 48 points from the Mercer brothers, Vincent and James, to defeat Southern Guilford 87-75. Jody Hackett had 25 points for Southern Guilford. Monroe plays Union and defending champion Elm City plays Avery county in tonight's completion of the quarterfinals. 1-A at Garner: Wentworth, unbeaten during regular-season and district play, broke open a close-game with a 12-point barrage in the third quarter to defeat Mattamuskeet 70-59.

John Gianelli scored 24 points and grabbed 13 rebounds in dominating three New Orleans centers and pacing the Knicks, who played without All-Star guard Walt Frazier, hospitalized with a sore back. Pete Maravich led the Jazz with 28 points. Elsewhere, the Milwaukee Bucks whipped the Los Angeles Lakers 109-96, the Philadelphia 76ers downed the Chicago Bulls 106-101, the Seattle SuperSonics trimmed the Buffalo Braves 122-111 and the Houston Rockets trounced the Atlanta Hawks 124-112. Bucks 109, Lakers 96 Gary Brokaw got hot in the third quarter to lead Milwaukee. Scoreless in the first half, Brokaw delivered nine points in a 2½-minute segment, helping the Bucks convert a 68-65 deficit to a 76-73 lead. Brokaw added five more points and Dave Meyers scored 10 of his 14 in the final period. The Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, hampered by foul trouble, finished with 21 points, only eight in the second half. Milwaukee center Elmore Smith led all scorers with 22. 76ers 108, Bulls 101 Doug Collins' lay-up gave the 76ers a 75-74 lead late in the third period and George McGinnis' shooting helped them win the lead in the fourth quarter. Fred Carter led the 76ers with 24 points and Collins had 23. Chicago's Mickey Johnson topped all scorers with 28.

Open Air Art

Climb the spiral staircase up into a stained glass tower. Or prance through a brightly colored metal sculpture, walk all around a group of larger-than-life size statues and picnic near another gleaming work of modern art. That's the appealing choice offered in a bright and breezy setting by the Hakone Open-Air Museum of Modern Arts, a pleasant park in the rolling foothills of Mt. Fuji, Japan. The works of art which make up the museum's collection come from many other parts of the world as well as from Japan. Here they get a magnificently spacious background against which they can look their best—and the museum's free and easy arrangement allows them to be fully explored, inspected and appreciated by visitors. Photographed by Toichi Sakakibara and Nick Ut.

Some Specifics Defiant Patty Heard By Jury

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Every-one yaks about violence on TV, but few ever cite specifics. So just for the heck of it several weeks ago, we began keeping track of the number of folks bumped off in network series.

With three TV sets aglow, we logged a kind of doom count while watching postfamily hour shows the evenings of March 1, 2 and 3. We quit after that, as brain rot was beginning to set in.

The findings: A total of 17 persons killed in three nights, expiring on 11 shows about private eyes or law and order. Ten died on NBC, five on ABC and two on CBS.

But no doubt reflecting public ire about TV violence, six of the slayings — five on NBC, one on CBS — weren't depicted on-screen. They were dialogue deaths, meaning they were discussed, not shown.

Of NBC's five dialogue deaths, two occurred in "City of Angels," with "Jigsaw John," "Police Woman" and "Petrocelli" each logging one. CBS' sole dialogue death occurred during "Switch."

Of these six talked-about murders, two of the dead were male, a hotel guard in "Jigsaw John" and a car dealer in "Petrocelli."

The rest were women, two dispatched off-camera for "City of Angels" and one each for "Police Woman" and "Switch."

We put seven slayings in the doom count category of "victims" — folks slain by baddies — and again found women in the majority.

Four expired in the dialogue murders we've cited. A fifth, a prostitute, was run over on-camera in "Joe Forrester" by a pimp in a car.

The three male "victims" were the killed-in-dialogue hotel guard of "Jigsaw John" and the "Petrocelli" car dealer, plus an ex-con who was shot in the stomach and died on-camera in "Baretta."

In the on-camera area of doom on television, the menfolk seemed to have all the luck, or lack of it. Of 11 deaths visually depicted in the shows, only one involved a woman, the prostitute on "Joe Forrester."

She was the sole vehicular murder, too, although a motorcycle cop in "Police Woman" almost died that way when some hoods in a car smashed into a phone booth he happened to be occupying at the time.

Artillery of varied calibers accounted for the deaths of nine of the 10 male characters who died on camera the evenings of March 1-3.

What is the moral of all this? None, except maybe it's much safer to go out for a walk at night than to stay home watching all this.

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's final gesture of defiance, two days after her capture, was the last evidence her jury heard as testimony in her eight-week-old bank robbery trial came to a dramatic end.

"Gentlemen, the evidence is closed," U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter said Wednesday after the government played for the jury a profanity-tinted jailhouse recording between Miss Hearst and a childhood friend.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. and defense counsel F. Lee Bailey planned to present their closing arguments to the jury of seven women and five men today. Carter has said he will send the case to the panel Friday morning.

Bailey wrapped up his defense by calling the defendant's mother, Catherine Hearst, to testify that the 22-year-old newspaper heiress had been a "warm and loving girl" prior to her Feb. 4, 1974, kidnapping.

In 37 days, the jury heard from 67 witnesses and had more than 100 exhibits and pieces of evidence to consider.

The government tried to prove Miss Hearst willingly participated in the robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch 10 weeks after her kidnapping. Her attorneys argued she took part in the holdup in fear of death at the hands of her Symbionese Liberation Army captors.

Browning got the last shot Wednesday, playing for the hushed courtroom a taped recording of Miss Hearst in custody, bitterly protesting her Sept. 18 arrest to friend Patricia Tobin and declaring her commitment to "revolutionary feminism."

Sprinkled with laughter, sarcasm and salty epithets, the 20-minute tape enraptured the jury and was in sharp contrast with the quiet courtroom demeanor of Miss Hearst.

Many of the jurors bowed their heads and listened intently. One sat with his eyes closed the entire time, and a woman juror stared almost constantly at the defendant.

Miss Hearst and one of her attorneys, Al Johnson, followed the tape with a transcript they shared. Bailey left the courtroom and prowled the corridor, smoking cigarettes, until the tape was concluded.

Miss Hearst appeared unusually cheerful at a brief "house-keeping" session in the afternoon outside the presence of the jury. She smiled and chatted with an attorney while others discussed legal matters.

With the exception of the playing of the tape, Miss Hearst appeared relaxed and alert as her case neared the jury. She flashed a smile when her mother strolled to the witness stand. Her father, San Francisco Examiner president Randolph A. Hearst, had testified briefly Tuesday.

"She was a warm and loving girl," Mrs. Hearst said. "We always lived a very close family life. She and I shared a mutual enthusiasm for art so we always had a great deal in common."

Carter said throughout the trial that only the jury could determine whether Miss Hearst was a convert to terrorism when she robbed the bank with four SLA members at gunpoint. He told the jurors Wednesday that the time for their decision was near.

Holding nine cards of a suit missing the queen, the initial odds slightly favor playing for the drop rather than a finesse—about 16-15. However, on this hand South managed to increase his chances to 100 per cent with little risk simply by employing proper technique.

The bidding needs little explanation. South's jump to three spades offered his partner a choice between four spades and three no trump. With four-card support for his partner's major and no guard in the other, North had no trouble making up his mind in favor of the suit game.

West led the king of hearts, East overtook with the ace and returned the suit. A third heart was ruffed by declarer as East sluffed a diamond.

Obviously, the contract depended on bringing in the trump suit without losing a trick, for declarer had an inscaphable club loser. Rather than tackle trumps immediately, declarer set

Three Vehicles In Collision

An estimated $1,400 property damage resulted from a Tuesday afternoon collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets involving three vehicles.

Police identified drivers involved in the mishap as Cynthia Marie Merrified of 723 Clement Dorm, Randy Lee Rennix of Cary and Gary Thomas Mann of 135 Charlie Lane.

Rennix was charged with driving under the influence by investigators who estimated damage at $200 to the Merrified and Rennix cars and $1,000 to the Mann auto.

How N.C. Representatives And Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes March 4 through March 10.

House
MAGNA CARTA Defeated, 167 for and 219 against, a resolution (S Con Res 98) to send a congressional delegation to London to accept the loan of one of the original copies of the Magna Carta, in which a British king guaranteed rights to his subjects in the year 1215. The Senate had passed the resolution.

The historic democratic document was to have been presented to the delegation of up to 25 congressmen in U.S. Bicentennial commemoration ceremonies involving Queen Elizabeth. The congressmen were to have brought the Magna Carta home for a year's display in the Capitol Rotunda.

House Speaker Carl Albert (D-Okla.), a supporter, referred to the cost and said that "we can afford . . . to celebrate our separation from the British government and simultaneously our common heritage in the Magna Carta." The British offer "is one of the most important invitations we have ever had," he added, urging his colleagues "not to make ourselves a laughing stock" by refusing it. He vowed to try again for passage, and another vote is scheduled.

An opponent, Rep. Robert Bauman (R-Md.), said the resolution authorized "a sort of Bicentennial junket," and noted that "there is another historic document . . . called the federal budget." He said that from travel records he has seen, on any given day one "could probably find 24 members of the U.S. Congress in London."

Reps. David Henderson (D-2) and Richardson Preyer (D-6) voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), Stephen Neal (D-5), Charles Rose (D-6), W. G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."

Rep. Ike Andrews (D-4) did not vote.
FOREIGN AID Passed, 214 for and 152 against, a bill (HR 12203) appropriating $5 billion for this fiscal year to fund various foreign military and economic aid programs, including nearly $3 billion to help Israel and Egypt carry out the Sinai peace agreement. The bill was sent to the Senate.

The House turned back attempts before passage to reduce military funds for Israel. Added to the bill was an amendment banning use of the funds for assassination or political activity abroad.

A supporter, Rep. Garner Shriver (R-Ks.), said the U.S. "has legitimate interests which are promoted and protected by this bill — peace in the Middle East, security in other regions, refugee and humanitarian aid in the poorest countries, and U.S. investments and security in-stations around the world." An opponent, Rep. Joseph Gaydos (D-Pa.), said the bill "seeks to tie to the coattails of the very legitimate assistance to Israel many of the counterproductive, wasteful and thoroughly discredited foreign aid programs of the past 30 years." American taxpayers, Gaydos said, "ask that we stop playing Santa Claus to the world."

Preyer voted "yea." Jones, Fountain, Andrews, Neal, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "nay."

Henderson and Rose did not vote.

MEDICAL DEVICES Passed, 362 for and 32 against, a bill (HR 11124) to give the Food and Drug Administration broad regulatory powers over production, performance and marketing of medical devices such as heart pacemakers and intrauterine birth-control devices. The bill was sent to conference with the Senate.

FDA's powers against manufacturers of the devices now are largely limited to court action. This bill would establish three FDA-administered standards such as bans against misbranding or adulteration. Class II devices would be subject to construction and testing as well as general standards. Class III devices could not be marketed without FDA approval following through testing. Panels of experts would help

FDA determine classification for each device.

A supporter, Rep. Paul Rogers (D-Fla.), said tough controls are "crucial if the public is to be protected from unsafe and ineffective medical devices . . ."

"America today has all the regulations and all the red tape that it needs on its sore back," said Rep. James Collins (R-Tex.), an opponent, adding that such legislation is "going to develop heart trouble in all America."

Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones voted "nay." Hefner and Taylor did not vote.

Senate
ENERGY Passed, 52 for and 35 against, a bill (HR 8650) to save energy by instructing the secretary of Housing and Urban Development to set mandatory conservation standards of all new residential and commercial structures, and by helping low-income families insulate their homes. The bill was sent to conference with the House.

The standards for new buildings would set energy consumption ceilings but would not control design or materials. The insulation program would cost $55 million annually for three years in grants to states for the purchase of insulation materials for low-income families.

"This issue is not 'uniformity dictated by Washington,'" said

Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wisc.), a supporter. "The issue is whether the nation is really going to act to conserve energy."

An opponent, Sen. John Tower (R-Tex.), said the building standards could drive up construction costs, and that the federal role should be "that of encouraging this type of 'construction, not mandating it.'"

Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted

"nay." Sen. Robert Morgan (D) did not vote.

HATCH ACT Rejected, 31 for and 60 against, an amendment to allow federal employees to become active in state and local politics, while retaining present Hatch Act prohibitions against federal political activities. The amendment was proposed to HR 8617, a sweeping revision of the Hatch Act which would remove most restrictions on political activity by federal employees. A vote on final passage was pending.

A supporter, Sen. Hiram Fong (R-Hawaii), said the amendment is "a compromise between the status quo and unrestricted partisan politics for federal employees." Sen. Charles Mathias (R-Md.) said continuing the ban on federal political activity was necessary to "shield" public employees from "harassment . . . for political purposes."

An opponent, Sen. Gale McGee (D-Wyo.), said the amendment would "vitiate the bill." McGee asked: "Are we to say that federal employees can enjoy the full rights of participation as citizens of the several states, but not the United States?"

Helms voted "yea." Morgan voted "nay."

Barely Remembered Geo. Smilley Put Washington On Dollar Bills

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
 Associated Press Writer

An obscure federal employe while he lived — and almost unknown today — George Frederick Cumming Smilley by rights should be the most famous of American artists.

Fifty-eight years ago, working in metal for his government, Smilley engraved an image that has been reproduced by the billions, collected by the millions and generally coveted by all.

On May 18, 1918, Smilley etched the portrait of George Washington used to this day on the dollar bill. A dozen years earlier, he produced the less well known, though more sought after, likeness of Hamilton on the ten-spot.

"I think it's from a painting by Gilbert Stuart," said Leonard Buckley, foreman of designers at the Treasury Department's Bureau of Engraving and Printing. A check of the archives proves him right, but no one is sure which of two Stuarts Smilley used for his model.

Buckley is positive, however, that Smilley's is the only Washington the department affixes to its currency, bonds and other official notes. When the dollar shrank in 1928, so did the portrait. When silver certificates were abandoned a few years back, Smilley's Washington soldiered on.

Oh, sometimes the background is changed; to distinguish among documents and to foil counterfeiters. But that's Smilley's handiwork all right. "There was one master die," Buckley said. "The image is always the same."

Smilley's image is less distinct. The government may know more than privacy laws permit it to say, but people who thumbed through his personnel record say there isn't much to tell.

He was appointed to the bureau on Feb. 3, 1894 with a $6,000 salary; not bad in those days. On March 19 he took the oath of office. By 1909 his salary was up to $6,600, and nine years later he was named superintendent of engravers. In 1919 Smilley really came into the money; his salary jumped to $7,500. But when President Warren Harding retired Smilley by executive order on March 31, 1922, his pension was a pittance $648 per year.

The government isn't sure what became of him then. It seems certain he was not retained by the Post Office, an agency which also gets a lot of mileage out of George Washington.

"You look at the postage stamps," Buckley said in an interview, "and you can see there is quite a variety."

While Treasury Department portraits are virtual twins — thanks to Smilley — it's hard to tell whether some of the Post Office prints are even related. Thumbing through a stamp album you meet a weak-chinned fellow here, a periwigged President there, and a generally dour looking cuss elsewhere. Sometimes Washington seems to have forgotten his famous false teeth.

Often you can't be sure it's old George at all.

Buckley, a tall, thin 37-year-old, said the Post Office began printing Washingtons in 1847. Engravers were permitted a certain amount of artistic license, sometimes producing wildly dissimilar pictures from the same portrait.

Sometimes the work was farmed out to private firms. These days artists are commissioned. In many instances, the paintings used for models were merely artists' conceptions. The result is a conception of a conception. Were it law instead of art, such reproduction would be inadmissible as hearsay.

A series run in the 1930s purports to portray Washington's life. Some of the models weren't painted until after his death. And many portraits painted by Washington's contemporaries were merely from memory. Renditions of Washington as a young man are frequently pure imagination.

For years the stamps, despite their variety, had a sameness about them. They tended to the same pose. "Today there is more of a feeling of individuality in stamp designs," Buckley said. "If we have a portrait of Washington today we would try to get a different portrait than has ever been used on a postage stamp or at least come up with a different view."

Ford Proclaims Day of Prayer Gospel Sing To Be On Saturday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has proclaimed May 14 as National Day of Prayer 1976.
 "I call upon all Americans to pray that day, each in his or her own way, for the strength to meet the challenges of the future with the same courage and dedication Americans showed the world two centuries ago," Ford said in the proclamation issued Tuesday.

A gospel sing will be held at Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m.
 The guest singers will be the "Christianaires" or "Bob Worthington Singers" from Vanceboro, as well as other local church groups. The pastor, the Rev. G.A. Casper, invites the public to attend.

Set Cerebral Palsy Fund Drive In Pitt

"Cerebral palsy is the nation's number one crippler of children," said Mrs. Bill Sneed, campaign chairman for the upcoming house-to-house campaign to be held here March 22 through April 5.

The campaign is part of an annual fund raising drive sponsored by United Cerebral Palsy of North Carolina (UCP of NC).

More than 500 volunteers in Greenville and Pitt County have agreed to solicit funds and distribute educational materials for North Carolina's cerebral palsied, according to Mrs. Sneed.

Funds collected in this campaign will be combined with other campaign funds throughout the state to facilitate and help to expand UCP of NC facilities.

UCP of NC presently operates six developmental centers which care for, provide special education, and train cerebral palsied individuals to become self-sufficient. These centers are located in Charlotte, Raleigh, Kannapolis, Wilmington, Morganton and Greenville.

Planters' National Bank of Greenville has agreed to serve as treasurer for the campaign contributions. Contributions may be made at the bank. Pitt County campaigners hope to collect $7,000. For further information call Mrs. Sneed at 756-5195.

PWP Plans Discussion

Greenville Area Parents Without Partners will have an information discussion meeting open to all members and prospective members Friday at 8 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Terry Shank, a Greenville reactor and City School Board member, will talk on "Changing Directions in Your Life."

A board meeting at 7 p.m. will immediately precede the discussion meeting.

Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn, there will be a Spring Gala dinner and dance for members and prospective members. For this event, guests may be invited. Those wishing to attend should RSVP by Mar. 19 by calling 752-4488. For more information on PWP, one may call 752-3008.

Had 81 Fires

During the month of February, grass or woods fires led the list of calls for the rural fire departments, with 42 calls. Total calls answered by the county departments was 85, with 81 fires.

The call included nine houses, five mobile homes, seven buildings, 12 autos, two false alarms, four mutual aid, and four miscellaneous calls.

There was $191,400 involved in fires, $610,000 exposed to the fire, $103,310 lost in fires, and $98,090 saved by the rural departments.

The Ayden Fire Department had the most fires with 13.

Plan Weekend Of Activities

The Greenville Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses is planning special activities at the local Kingdom Hall this week in connection with the visit of Charles N. Jackson, circuit minister from New York.

A special program of questions and answers titled "New Things Learned" has been scheduled for Saturday night.

On Sunday, Jackson will deliver a sermon titled "God Prospers the Subjects of His Kingdom."

The Watchtower Society assigns traveling ministers throughout 210 countries and islands. All of the meetings are free and open to the public.

During the course of the visit, Jackson and other Jehovah's Witnesses will be making home visits on shut-ins and persons interested in Bible study.

12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES USED CAR WARRANTY

Most good used cars, if they're guaranteed at all, are only covered for a month or two. At Tarheel Toyota, we're just as willing to back our good used cars as our good new cars. So we guarantee the motor, transmission and rear end for 12 months or 12,000 miles. This warranty applies to all cars selling for more than $1000.00 or more on a 50-50 basis with all work being done in our shop. It doesn't apply to any sports cars, high performance engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). If you're in the market for a BETTER USED CAR, COME OUT AND LOOK AT OURS. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. (Owners name furnished upon request.)

Eager Bureaucracy Does More Harm Than Good

By BROOKS JACKSON and EVANS WITT
WASHINGTON (AP) — America's highway death rate is one-third lower than it was 10 years ago when Washington began requiring safety equipment on cars.

The level of eye-burning sulphur dioxide in the nation's air has dropped 25 per cent since federal environmental controls were imposed five years ago. If this decade of expanded federal regulation has saved lives and reduced pollution, it has also extended Washington's reach into the lives of individual citizens in ways never before experienced in this country.

Since 1965, the number of major regulatory agencies has doubled from 12 to 24.

This new regulation costs money. The record of progress has been uneven and claims of progress hard to justify. The five-year-old Occupational Safety and Health Administration, for example, has yet to produce solid evidence it has reduced job deaths and injuries.

Some of the agencies have made an obvious mark. The antidiscrimination laws enforced by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission have helped blacks and other minorities increase the number of technical and professional jobs they hold by one-third.

Traffic Safety
The record of the Traffic Safety Administration, one of the first in the recent surge of new agencies, shows in a nutshell the benefits and costs of the new wave of federal regulation. Highways are safer now. Deaths and disabling injuries have been averted, probably by the thousands. Cars cost more. And when the bureaucracy becomes too eager, it can do more harm than good.

When Congress established the agency in 1966, the traffic death rate had reversed its historic slide and had been increasing for five years. More than 50,000 were killed on highways that year, a record at the time.

Today, after nearly a decade of regulation, the death rate per passenger mile is the lowest since statistics have been kept. The rate has dropped each year since the traffic safety law was enacted and the number of persons killed in vehicle accidents is now below the 1966 figure.

Preliminary figures for last year show the death rate had dropped below 3.6 per 100 million miles, compared to 5.7 in 1966.

A dramatic number of auto fatalities were prevented in 1974 as the byproduct of the energy crisis. The gasoline shortage brought the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit, a reduction in highway travel — and 9,400 fewer highway deaths than the year before.

But last year, as speed edged up and travel resumed its upward climb, the actual number of highway deaths did not increase and the death rate per mile continued to drop.

Even Ford Motor Co., which says regulations are becoming excessive and too expensive, estimates that cars equipped to meet 1971 safety standards kill and injure about 25 per cent fewer people than unregulated cars.

Such protection costs money. Ford estimates its 1971 Pinto carried $120 in federally required safety equipment. That soared to $325 for a 1975 model with new side-door reinforcing beams, stronger roof supports, heavier bumpers and seat belt warning systems.

Putting On the Brakes
Some of the traffic safety agency's rules have been flops — like the bus-brake affair.

Last year, it required all new air-braked trucks, trailers and buses to carry bigger brakes and expensive computer systems to prevent the wheels from locking in a skid during panic stops.

But when the system's sensors on buses got out of adjustment by as little as six one-thousandths of an inch, the computer would release the brakes during normal braking speeds of about 10 mph and then slam on the brakes at around 5 mph, throwing passengers to the bus floor.

Bus companies began disconnecting their $1,200 "super-brake" system and Massachusetts threatened to lift the permits of any bus company using the federally required gear.

Finally, after three days of hearings and a two-month comment period, the agency temporarily suspended the standard on Jan. 7.

A similar, if slightly loosened standard is still in effect for semi-trailer truck rigs, despite protests and court suits by drivers and trucking firms.

Job Safety and Health

In the five years since it was formed, the highly controversial Occupational Safety and Health Administration has produced no reliable indication that it has saved many workmen's lives or prevented any significant number of serious job injuries.

In fact, there is still no agreement on even how many workers are killed each year in job accidents. The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates 5,900 died from job accidents or diseases in 1974, a projection based on reports by 600,000 employers.

But the National Safety Council says its analysis of death certificates shows work accidents caused 13,400 deaths that year.

As evidence of their effectiveness, federal job-safety officials point to a reported drop in the 1973 injury rates in such industries as logging, longshoring and roofing, the so-called "target industries" where OSHA concentrated early enforcement efforts.

Yet the rates of serious injuries — those which resulted in lost workdays — actually went up in three out of the five industries in 1973. In 1974, when no special enforcement efforts were made, the rate of serious injuries declined in three and went up in two.

In short, the statistics for the very industries where OSHA concentrated its efforts, show no trend in one direction or another.

If OSHA can't yet claim any clear victory, it at least has the satisfaction of proving its critics wrong on a number of counts.

Industry witnesses, for example, once predicted that OSHA's proposal to impose strict protection for workers in polyvinyl chloride plants would put 2.2 million people out of work and cost the economy at least $60 billion.

But OSHA was alarmed by 17 workers' deaths from a rare form of liver cancer linked to the chemical in lab tests with rats. Strict exposure limits were imposed.

What happened? In the year after OSHA's action, one plant did close, but four others opened and the price of polyvinyl chloride declined about 10 per cent below previous highs.

Once a Decade
Small businessmen also said they feared overzealous safety inspectors would ruin them.

But the average worker can expect to see one of OSHA's 1,400 compliance officers about once a decade, at present rates. Fines average $25 per violation. Employers appeal fewer than five per cent of all citations and even then they almost always remove the cited hazard, an indication OSHA inspectors generally stick to the book and avoid arbitrary rulings.

Safety at Home

One federal agency has exercised power to decree that an electric frypan is unsafe and to make it harder to open aspirin bottles. It may order that all new bicycles and lawn mowers be redesigned.

In three years of existence, the Consumer Product Safety Commission has banished 20 million items from store shelves and homes on grounds they were unsafe.

These included bottles that exploded, disposable cigarette lighters that flared up unexpectedly, electric ranges that shocked their owners and snowmobiles prone to sudden steering failures.

The commission has made mistakes. The courts voided the commission's seizure of 100,000 imported dolls from Bradley Import Co. in Los Angeles. The commission said the dolls were unsafe for children because the costumes were held on with pins. The court, noting that the dolls sold in fashionable gift stores at prices around $75, said there was no evidence the dolls were intended for use by children.

The commission is now pondering a controversial proposal to require new safety features on lawnmowers, which injured 63,306 persons last year, according to a survey of hospital emergency rooms.

Consumers Union, which the commission paid to study the matter, estimates the proposal would add $40 to the cost of a $125 push-type mower, for a variety of features including rotor blades that stop instantly. But this $40 estimate is based on a survey of manufacturers that the consumer group feels is unreliable.

Consumers Union also estimates the benefits of the proposal would be between $83 million and $580 million, depending in part on what value is placed on the pain caused by such injuries. In short, the commission can't be sure what the mower safety proposal is worth or what it would cost.

Pollution

In its five-year life, the Environmental Protection Agency has made measurable progress in cleaning up the nation's air and water.

The Cuyahoga River in Ohio doesn't catch fire any more. Sport fishing is making a comeback in the Great Lakes. Smog has been reduced in Los Angeles.

Dust, smoke and soot in the nation's air have declined about 15 per cent since 1970 and sulphur dioxide, 25 per cent. This year's cars spew 83 per cent less hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide than 1970 models.

Yet the job of cleaning up the air and water is proving more difficult and expensive than was widely appreciated five years ago.

EPA says much of the dirt in the air isn't industrial soot, but dust blown from fields and rural roads. Smog-causing pollutants come not only from factories and cars, but also from forests.

The public rebelled when EPA said it would take severe gasoline rationing to meet Congress' schedule for clean air in Los Angeles, a move that would have virtually eliminated private auto use. EPA withdrew the plan.

Some of the costs could not have been foreseen even five years ago. Oil producing countries sharply increased the price of low-sulphur oil that had been used to reduce air pollution. Expensive smoke-stack scrubbers will now be required to allow generating plants to burn America's plentiful coal and still meet antipollution standards.

An analysis by the Brookings Institution estimates the costs of meeting presently scheduled air and water standards could be $500 billion over the next 10 years — or more than $230 a year for each American.

ECU Anatomist Is Chosen For Council

Dr. Michael R. Schweisthal, chairman of anatomy in the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has been selected for membership on the newly-created N. C. Human Tissue Advisory Council.

The 13-member council will advise and make recommendations relating to the establishment and conduct of the N. C. Coordinated Program for Human Tissue Donations.

The program, created by the General Assembly last year, was provided for by House Bill 68, in recognition of North Carolina's "increasing need for human tissues" for transplantation purposes and for medical research and education.

According to the Bill, present needs for human tissues are not being met, due primarily to a shortage of human tissue donors. The program is designed "to facilitate the acquisition and distribution of human tissues, including human cadavers, so as to lead to bettering the public health" of North Carolina citizens.

The program will be part of the state Dept. of Human Resources health services division.

Dr. Schweisthal said persons in the ECU area who wish to donate tissues and organs for transplantation or who are interested in donating their bodies for medical education and research may write him at the ECU School of Medicine for further information.

He will serve on the council for a three-year term.

Asks Action On Mexico Justice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda says the State Department should provide more help in freeing Americans from Mexican prisons.

"In many cases, Americans accused of crimes are thrown in jail without trials and never get them," she said Tuesday while campaigning for her husband, activist Tom Hayden, who is seeking a U.S. Senate seat.

"The State Department pours millions into the Mexican economy annually. It should be spending more money to help some of our children and adults in Mexican jails," she told a meeting of American families related to 600 U. S. citizens in Mexican jails.

Gospel Music Sing On Friday

MAURY — A gospel music sing will be held Friday night at eight o'clock in the Maury Elementary School Auditorium. The featured groups will be the Melody Makers of Black Jack, the Miles Family of Pink Hill and the Vanguard Brothers of Mount Olive.

The sing is being sponsored by the Young Adult Class of the Little Creek Original Free Will Baptist Church, Rt. 1, Ayden. Advance tickets are on sale for $2.00 and tickets at the door will be $2.50. The church will use the proceeds for its regular functions and activities.

Refuse Actress A Work Permit

TORONTO (AP) — Canada's actors' union has refused a work permit to American actress Kathleen Widdoes, selected to play a Canadian women's suffrage heroine in a television special here.

The Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists said Miss Widdoes would be classified as a "nonqualified person" because she is not Canadian.
