Syrian Troops Begin Disarming Lebanese Troops

A LIFE OF QUIET MOMENTS—Shepherd Mike Ithurralde, 67, tends a herd of some 1,700 sheep with his dog, Pinto, in an open area at the base of Little Mountain near San Bernardino, Calif.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — About 7,000 Syrian troops with 150 tanks crossed Lebanon's eastern border today and began disarming Lebanese Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas, the Palestinian command reported. Beirut newspapers said another Syrian force of 2,000 troops with 65 tanks invaded northern Lebanon to stop Moslem attacks on the besieged Christian towns of Qibyat and Andket, in the Akkar region. Palestinian and Syrian sources in Beirut speculated that Syrian President Hafez Assad was starting an all-out attempt to impose order in Lebanon and end the 14-month-old civil war. However, no Syrian troops were seen in Beirut, and there was no independent confirmation of the reports of Syrian troop operations. Some Palestinian sources said they have information Assad plans to send as many as 50,000 troops into Lebanon to stop the war by the end of the month. Radio Damascus confirmed that Syrian intervention halted the attack on Qibyat and An-ket but made no mention of troop movements. It said Syrian representatives arranged a cease-fire agreement in which the Christians agreed to Moslem occupation of the Lebanese army garrison at Andket. Reporting the Syrian invasion from the east, a Palestinian statement said an armored brigade of 3,800 troops moved 14 miles from the border shortly before dawn and took positions on the north and west of the key mountain crossroads town of Choura, which is held by Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Army.

The advancing brigade then fanned out its tanks along the Bekaa valley road, set up roadblocks and disarmed passing Palestinian guerrillas and Lebanese leftist militiamen," said the statement distributed by the Palestinian news agency Wafa. Two other Syrian armored regiments pushed across the border at the same time into the village of Jedita, one mile east of Choura, and Saad Nayel, a nearby leftist village from which the Christian town of Zahleh has long been under Moslem shellfire, the statement claimed. Beirut newspapers reported that the Syrians had broken a two-month blockade around Zahleh, the region's largest town 35 miles east of Beirut. Another armored battalion marched on an air base at Rayak, six miles east of Zahleh, where a squadron of Lebanese jet fighters is immobilized by renegade Moslem forces of the Lebanese Arab army, the Palestinian statement said. The statement reported no fighting but said a number of guerrillas who resisted giving up their arms were taken prisoner. A reporter trying to reach the area was turned back by leftist militiamen 10 miles east of Beirut on the Damascus highway. They told him: "There will be fighting soon because the Syrian army is marching in."

Klan Witness Admits Identification Error

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley said today a witness has admitted he incorrectly identified one of the three reputed Ku Klux Klansmen he had named earlier as the killers of a black truck driver. The witness, Raymond C. Britt, himself an admitted former Klansman, had testified in court that a Montgomery bail bondsman, Sonny Kyle Livingston, was one of the three men. But during a lie detector test administered last week in San Diego, Calif., the attorney general said Britt admitted Livingston was not present when the truck driver, 25-year-old Willie Edwards Jr., was forced at gunpoint to jump to his death in the Alabama River 19 years ago.

Baxley said Britt still insisted during the lie detector test that the other two men—Henry Alexander, 46, and James York, 73—were there and that the black man, sobbing and begging for his life, was forced to leap into the river the night of Jan. 23, 1957. The attorney general said the witness stuck to his story that three men besides himself were present at the river bridge that night and has identified the other man, whose name Baxley declined to disclose. Britt has said all along that he and three other men abducted Edwards and drove him to the river because they thought he had made an improper remark to a white woman. The incident occurred during the days of racial violence in Montgomery following desegregation of city buses. Baxley said the lie detector test indicated that all of Britt's story was true except his identification of Livingston. "It was an honest mistake," the attorney general told The Associated Press. "There was so much going on at that time...they were riding the streets every night, beating people. He thought Livingston was there, but he admitted he was wrong and it was someone else."

Livingston, Alexander and York were indicted for first degree murder on the basis of the testimony given by Britt at a preliminary hearing. But the charges were dismissed by Circuit Judge Frank Embry on the grounds that the indictments did not allege the specific cause of the truck driver's death. His body was found in the river three months after his disappearance and it was so badly decomposed that an autopsy could not determine the cause of death. Baxley had said he would seek new indictments, but now, after the new disclosure by Britt, he says he is not sure. He conceded that the lie detector test "damages the credibility" of the witness. "But we're not going to forget it," he promised. "We're going to do a little more digging now. We still know a crime occurred. That man (Edwards) was horribly and needlessly killed. We're going to keep on plugging and hope we can do something about it."

Livingston, 38, had taken a lie detector himself in New York last month, and his attorney, Richard Jordan, said the results showed the defendant was telling the truth when he said he had nothing to do with Edwards' death. State and defense attorneys agreed later to have Britt submit to a lie detector test administered by a recognized expert. He had taken one in Montgomery under the supervision of Baxley's office.

Candidates Need Hairstyling Help

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — "President Ford's hairdo would look better under an old football helmet," and Calif. Gov. Edmund G. Brown "has the image of a court clerk rather than a governor," says a champion hairstylist. But Jimmy Carter "may need the most help of all the candidates," said Robert Trugman, who appraised presidential contenders' hairdos at a news conference after he won a styling championship here Monday.

"I'm not saying it's ugly," Trugman said, "but Carter needs help. He should wear his hair a little longer, but not all the way to the ears, to achieve a casual look." Trugman, 29, of Summit, N.J., won the state Open Masters Championship sponsored by the New Jersey Master Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association. Last fall, he won the hairstyling championship at the Midwest Beauty and Trade Show in Chicago. The stylist, who also operates a beauticians' school, dismissed Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's hairstyle as "old, worn out," and said Sen. Frank Church should have his hair cropped because he looks overweight on television. But Brown should wear his hair "a little longer" because its current length "makes him look older than he really is," said Trugman.

Rep. Morris Udall has a hairdo that gives him a Lincoln-like look and fits his Arizona origins, Trugman said. He said the styling of Sen. Edward Kennedy's hair gives him "the appearance of royalty." Trugman's highest praise, however, was for Ronald Reagan. He said the former California governor's appearance had benefited from his Hollywood background.

Time Bombs Explode In Army Headquarters

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Two bombs exploded at the headquarters of the U.S. Army's V Corps in downtown Frankfurt today, injuring 14 persons and causing extensive damage, an Army spokesman said. Thirteen of the injured were Americans and one was in serious condition, the spokesman said.

German and American authorities took two bombing suspects in custody at the scene, he said. The bombs went off about 1:20 p.m. One exploded on the ground floor of the huge office building in a section housing a military laundry, post office and other shops for military dependents. The other went off in a stairwell off the lobby of the separate officer's club to the rear. Witnesses reported windows and light fixtures along the corridors of the buildings were blasted out by the bombs. Hundreds of occupants were evacuated as authorities searched for more possible bombs.

"I was lifted well off my chair when the explosion occurred, but the windows on our wing of the building remained undamaged," a U.S. Army spokeswoman said. "In fact I noticed no damage on the outside of the building. However, I didn't dare walk right around through all the parked cars."

American Forces Network (AFN) in Frankfurt said glass littered the first floor hallway of the sprawling office building. Light fixtures were smashed in the ceilings and windows were blown out by the blast. The building was placed under reinforced security after a bombing attack four years ago but an informed source said "security has tapered off since then."

The earlier attack, on May 11, 1972, was blamed on the anarchist Baader-Meinhof gang. An American officer was killed and 13 persons were injured.

Identity Search Turns To Florida

MESIC, N.C. (AP) — The search for the identity of a homicide victim will turn this week to Florida and a missing drug case defendant, Pamlico County Sheriff Leland Brinson said Monday.

The body was unearthed May 18 from a shallow grave near the site of what was once a massive drug smuggling operation. Medical examiners said the body was that of a man about 50, who had been killed by a shotgun blast to the head. Since then, all efforts to identify the man have been fruitless. If he had been a Pamlico County resident, "we would have been able to identify him," Brinson said. Brinson said he and State Bureau of Investigation agent Isaac Edwards have exhausted all leads in the Pamlico coastal area and plan to take their investigation to Hallendale, Fla.

Former Hallendale Mayor John David Steele, 51, was one of eight men convicted on drug-related charges following the seizure of 22 tons of marijuana in Pamlico County last January.

A warrant was issued for Steele's arrest after he failed to appear in Wilmington last Thursday for sentencing in U.S. District Court.

Brinson said the FBI researched a list of 12 persons believed to be associated with Steele or the seven other convicted men, but turned up no leads.

The body was found by U.S. Customs agents acting on a tip that originated in Florida, Brinson said. The body was buried in an isolated, densely wooded area near a house trailer allegedly used in the smuggling operation.

Elderly Population Has Doubled In 25 Years

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — America's elderly population has almost doubled in the last quarter of a century, and all signs indicate that by the early part of the next century, it will nearly double again, the government reports.

A major new Census Bureau study of the nation's elderly and aging population shows that because the number of older persons is rising quickly while birth rates continue to fall, persons 65 and older will make up a growing proportion of the population.

The study, released Monday night, shows that there are now 22.4 million persons 65 and older in the country, and they make up 10.5 per cent of the population. This compares to 1950 when 12.4 million persons 65 and older comprised about 8 per cent of the population.

By the year 2020, when the bulk of the post-World War II baby crop turns 65, there will be almost 43 million elderly persons in America — and they will make up about 15 per cent of the population, the report shows. Social scientists say this growing proportion of elderly people will have a significant impact on America's economic

DIET DRINKS

Is there some way that local businesses that sell soft drinks could be persuaded to provide sugarless ones? There are many diabetics and other calorie- and sugar-conscious people who would appreciate it, I'm sure. J.B.

Mrs. George Hamilton, president of the Eastern Diabetic Association, said she agrees with you that there is a great need for dietetic soft drinks on the menus of all places which serve or sell food in this area, and so few which do. "Our organization has a program occasionally on eating out," she said, "and we tell our members that, if there is no diet drink on the menu, they must order either unsweetened tea or water. This, we know, is especially hard for young people, and especially difficult in the quick-food restaurants they usually frequent."

She said she believes that most restaurant owners and managers do not realize the tremendous appeal that a diet soft drink would have. Persons who would wish to buy diet drinks probably usually say nothing, because they know they're not on the menu, she said. She suggested that anyone who wishes to have them added at his or her favorite restaurant tell the manager so, and also continue to ask for a diet drink each time they visit the restaurant.

12 SCLC Members Arrested Monday In Scotland Neck

SCOTLAND NECK, N.C. (AP) — Twelve members of the primarily black Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) were arrested Monday evening in Scotland Neck, N.C. for picketing without a permit.

The picketers were part of a crowd of 250 demonstrating for "equal justice" in the Sandra Dupree shooting case. The crowd converged on the police station after the arrests. Scattered rock throwing incidents were reported and resulted in at least two other arrests.

Golden Frinks, national program director of the SCLC and regional black activist, was held for questioning but was not arrested.

The 12 arrested protestors were booked at the Scotland Neck Police Department, and transported on state corrections department buses to Halifax County Jail, Halifax, N.C., to spend the night. They were arrested about 9 p.m. by Scotland Neck police, Halifax County deputies and state highway patrolmen. The demonstrators were pro-

No Regulations By 3 Agencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a legal mandate to wipe out discrimination in home loans, three of the four federal agencies that regulate mortgage lenders have never even issued antidiscrimination regulations, the Senate Banking Committee says.

And "despite evidence that discrimination is widespread," none of them has ever found a single institution guilty of discrimination, the panel reported Monday.

Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., called the agencies' record "a disgrace" and charged them with "eight years of outrageous inaction" since Congress passed the Fair Housing Act in 1968.

The agencies are the Home Loan Bank Board, the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Comptroller of the Currency. Only the Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates savings and loan associations, has issued antidiscrimination rules, it said.

The board includes "a civil rights compliance review in (its) examinations, but even that review is largely a checklist that accepts the institution's own assessment of its performance," the panel said.

"The Federal Reserve Board and the FDIC have a more limited similar review. The Comptroller of the Currency does nothing more than check to see whether the 'Equal Lender' poster is displayed."

At hearings in March, the bank-regulatory agencies argued the 1968 act "did not require them to take affirmative action," the report said.

Proxmire charged, "As a consequence of the agencies' general nonenforcement policy, serious patterns of mortgage-loan discrimination still exist. Surveys have shown that minority loan applicants with the same creditworthiness as other applicants are routinely rejected at much higher rates."

The nonenforcement policy has denied millions of minority Americans "the one clear opportunity to amass wealth available to people of modest means — home ownership," Proxmire said.

The four agencies regulate lending institutions that hold $125 billion worth of mortgages on homes built for one to four families.

The committee said none of the agencies keeps records that would facilitate detection of discriminatory lending practices. None has ever referred a discrimination complaint to the Justice Department, or filed a "cease and desist order" against an offending lender," it said.

Proxmire said that at the committee's urging, the agencies recently formed a joint task force with the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Justice Department to develop enforcement policy.

Sens. Jake Garn, R-Utah, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., took issue with the report, saying there was no hard evidence "that discrimination in mortgage lending is pervasive."

Soul City Gets Grant Extension

SOUL CITY, N.C. (AP) — HealthCo, a much criticized Soul City health clinic, has received a two-month extension of its federal grant.

The extension, which stretches the grant through July 31, comes in the wake of an unfavorable government study of the health facility.

The study, completed in March, charged that the clinic is poorly managed, that it does little to serve citizens in need and that it is dominated by Soul City founder Floyd B. McKissick.

HealthCo alleged that HEW's Public Health Service (PHS), who prepared the study, is biased. And Health Education and Welfare Secretary F. David Mathews ordered in April that another study be made by HEW's Bureau of Community Health Services.

Dr. Edward D. Martin, Community Health Services' director, said there is broad agreement in HEW for the need for a clinic in the Vance and Warren County area. At question is location and management.

Senator Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) criticized Mathews' decision to extend the grant, calling the Soul City project a "massive federal boondoggle."

Dr. G.A. Reich, HEW regional health administrator in Atlanta, told a reporter in April that a final decision on the clinic's future has been delayed "because the people at Soul City have gone political. They've contacted the people they know. It's gotten pretty far removed from the professional judgment in this case."

Reich's office had decided last December not to renew the HealthCo grant for 1976 but extended it through March 31 to provide for an orderly closeout.

Free Evaluation For Stuttering Children

Dr. Richard E. Shine and Graduate Assistant Ms. Martha A. Bright of the ECU Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology Department are interested in identifying young children who stutter. The Speech Pathologists are offering free evaluation services at the East Carolina University Speech and Hearing Clinic for children ages 3 to 6 years to determine if young children who stutter are advanced in their language skills.

Recent literature has led the Speech Pathologists to believe that young stuttering children may be more advanced in their language than their non-stuttering peers. Parents are urged to contact the ECU Speech and Hearing Clinic (758-6961, Ext. 229) to make arrangements for an evaluation.

According to the pathologists, research during the last few years has demonstrated that the most effective time to treat the disorder of stuttering is when the child is young; before the problem increases in severity and becomes deeply habituated.

Persons having a speech or hearing problem, contact the speech and hearing clinic for an evaluation.

Trade With Cuba Being Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite warnings from the State Department, some U.S. firms are discussing trade opportunities with Prime Minister Fidel Castro's government in Havana, a State Department spokesman says.

"We have discouraged these meetings," John Ordway said Monday. "We don't think they're in the best interests of the company or the countries involved."

The United States broke off all relations with Cuba in 1961 and imposed restrictions making it illegal for any U.S. company to conduct trade with Cuba or to sign contracts for trade.

"However, there is nothing illegal about discussing trade opportunities for when the embargo is lifted," Ordway said.

Ordway said the department was aware that meetings have been taking place in Havana but said he could not identify the companies or say how long the practice has been going on.

"We have urged great caution to avoid violations of the law," he said.

The contacts were initially reported by Miami television station WCKT, which said at least four major U.S. corporations have sent representatives to Havana in recent months at the Castro government's expense to discuss possible business opportunities.

Quoting unidentified sources, WCKT said the firms included one each from New York, Texas, Georgia and Illinois. The station identified only one firm — Pepsi-Cola of New York.

WCKT quoted Pepsi-Cola Vice President C.B. DeLoach as saying the firm had no representatives in Havana "at this time." However, the station said DeLoach declined comment when asked if the firm had ever sent representatives to Cuba.

WCKT also quoted a State Department spokesman as saying Pepsi-Cola had been warned previously about U.S. laws on trade with Cuba.

Some officials in Washington believe trade talks in Havana involve bargaining for sales by foreign subsidiaries of U.S. firms, or are aimed at giving U.S. firms an advantage once the embargo is lifted.

"They give us value for the dollar, and they show our people how that dollar is spent."

"Stedman Corporation manufactures fabrics, sportswear and underwear. The textile industry is a very competitive business. We have to keep our operating costs down to give our customers the most for their dollar.

"So when it came to choosing a health care plan for our employees, we chose Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage. They keep their operating costs down, too.

"Now, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina is showing our employees exactly how this fringe benefit is working for them. Each month, they send a personal Health Care Benefits Summary to our people who have incurred claims, listing what those claims were for and what was paid. It certainly helps people keep track of their health care expenses. And they can see what they're getting in Blue Cross and Blue Shield benefits.

"We have over 1,000 employees covered at six different locations. That amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars. And we want those dollars used as wisely as possible. So naturally, we have to look at all the options. We are convinced that, because of their excellent coverage and low operating costs, Blue Cross and Blue Shield gives us more value for the dollar than anyone else.

Brides-To-Be Making Own Gowns Scholarship Given To Marian Bailey

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
Bride-to-be Marguerite Knutson of Franklin, Ohio, has made her own wedding dress for her forthcoming August nuptials and plans to help attendants make their gowns, as well.

Bridal consultants say few other brides find time to sew for other members of the wedding, although some ask about making a coordinated shirt or a jacket for the bridegroom.

They said a woman who makes her own wedding dress is either an inflation fighter or an individualist or both.
Miss Knutson, 20, is a registered nurse at Kettering Hospital, Kettering, Ohio. She combined three different patterns to create a traditional white empire style gown of polyester chiffon over satin with seed pearl and lace details. She copied her lace-decorated cap with white net veil from an expensive model she saw in a department store.

In Houston, fabrics retailer Gunter Frankel said brides who want to save money are more likely to make their own dresses now because simple styles are fashionable. "We are selling a lot more jersey ... because the look in everyday clothes is a clingy look, and most women ... want to carry it over to their bridal gowns."
Frankel said a bridal pattern is basically an evening dress pattern that can be interpreted to suit the individual.

Many fabrics shops retain sewing teachers or a bridal consultant to help customers select fabrics, patterns and trimmings, and do the actual cutting and stitching.

There's even a sew-by-numbers kit that allows a bride to select among five lace-trimmed patterns and make the gown herself with fabric of her own choice.

Bill Price, retail sales manager for the kit manufacturer, said the kits work on the same principle as paint-by-numbers kits sold at hobby shops. He estimated that a bride whose kit-made dress cost about $100 might pay four or times as much for a couture garment of similar design and quality.

Some bridal consultants and fabrics retailers who do lot of business with wedding parties say the high price of ready-to-wear apparently is secondary in a bride's decision to sew her own.

Yet "volume is up, very definitely, because of the price of ready-to-wear and the construction," says fabrics retailer Edna Goldenberg of Sacramento, Calif. She said many brides want to make wedding dresses that they can wear later for parties.

"The trend is going back to more elaborate fabrics, more laces, more dressy fabrics than they wore for a while."

She said her shop sometimes sells fabrics for the whole wedding party, including the bridegroom and, in one recent case, for tablecloths for the reception.

In a Minneapolis fabric shop, bridal consultant Carol Shaughnessy is a designer, pattern-maker and sewing teacher who creates custom designs on request. She estimates that 80 per cent of the brides she serves make their own wedding dresses because they are dissatisfied with readymades or commercial patterns, or because the high cost of altering a readymade would increase the price too much.

She said most prefer simpler designs than are generally available.

Bridal assistant Terry Pence said most brides "have a picture of what they want, and it's just a matter of changing one or two details. More girls are coming in who are interested in the quality of the dress and their own individual look ... We're in an area where there are three or four readymade bridal shops, and some girls look at dresses all day and are dissatisfied and come to Carol."

Ms. Shaughnessy said some brides' dresses are made by members of the bride's family, or even their mothers-in-law-to-be.

Note to editors: the wedding dress kits are made by Stern and Stern Textiles, Inc., 1359 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10018, and sold through retail stores.

The North Carolina Branch of the International Order of The King's Daughters and Sons has awarded the 1976 International Scholarship to Chautauqua to Marian Elizabeth Bailey of Greenville.

Ms. Bailey is the first from North Carolina to ever receive an International Scholarship to Chautauqua.

She is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. James H. Bailey and is presently an English major at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Chautauqua is a cultural and spiritual resort in the upper plain of the Allegheny Mountains of New York.

Ms. Bailey graduated from Lumberton High School where she was awarded "Who's Who In American High School Students."

She attended Columbia College and has studied the Middle East Crisis as a delegate to the United Nations Study Tour and was delegate to the Board of Commission on Missions of the United Methodist Church. She has also held lead roles in various theater productions.

She recently went to Managua, Nicaragua, as a member of a volunteer emergency work team which provided relief from the 1972 earthquake.

Ms. Bailey aspires to a career in journalism and public relations in the field of geriatrics.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I wanted to switch the wardrobe in my husband's closet from winter to summer last week, but he was wearing it.

To look in his closet, you'd think he had a change for all seasons. But as the kids said one day, "You are now landing in Daddy's closet. Please turn your watches back 20 years."

As I picked my way through the rack of clothes I had to admit it was like a Bicentennial salute to the history of men's clothes. He had a necktie that dated back to the Hoover administration.

There was one suit that had come in style, gone out again, and was coming in again.

Then I did a thing I had not done in our entire married life. I cleaned out his closet.

Out went the Hans Brinker pants that remained standing when he sat down.

Out went the gold coat sweater that he held together by hooking a moth hole over the button.

Out went the ankle-length winter coat that made him look like a rabbit out of "Fiddler on the Roof."

Out went the belt that fit him when he and his waist were both 28.

Out went the X-rated bathing suit that used to be a PG.

Out went the sports coat with the Ruptured Duck Discharge pin still on the lapel.

Out went the loafers with the original pennies on them.

Out went the sweatshirt that read, "KILROY WAS HERE!"

Out went the seersucker bathrobe with a copy of Boy's Life in the pocket.

Out went the wading boots with the hole in the toe.

Out went the undergraduate warm-up jacket that no longer fit over the postgraduate stomach.

I knew he had discovered my "surprise" when he raged into the kitchen shouting, "What happened to all my clothes? There's nothing in my closet except two shirts, a card table, and a carton of cancelled checks. What did you do with them?"

"They are in a big truck on their way to the Salvation Army."

"Well that's just great. I don't go on your side of the closet and clean house. From here on in — STAY OUT OF MY CLOTHES!"

Such a big deal over nothing. Today, the truck brought his clothes back. I figured they would.

BIG TOLL

CHICAGO (UPI) — The 1975 home accident toll of about 25,000 persons was five times the Revolutionary War battle dead, says the National Safety Council.

More than 3.9 million suffered disabling injuries in home accidents last year, the council added. That figure is nearly 1.5 million more than the entire population of colonial America in 1775.

DEAR ABBY: In response to DISGUSTED IN CHICAGO, who complained about the service in a restaurant: No! Walking toward the door without paying will not do it.

Last year, my husband and I waited one-half hour for the bill in a fashionable Palm Springs restaurant. In desperation, my husband finally went to get the waitress himself. She said she'd be "right over."

We waited for another 15 minutes, and he again went looking for her and saw her through the kitchen window talking to the help. Finally, after waiting for another 15 minutes, we got up and stood by the exit door for five minutes. Everyone was looking at us and knew what we had in mind, but when the waitress still didn't come, we walked out without paying our bill for $26.

It was not even a busy evening. I hope she had to pay for our bill. What would you have done?

MADELEINE

DEAR MADELEINE: I'd have located the manager, paid my bill (sans tip) and told him why he shouldn't expect to see us again.

DEAR ABBY: I am going into the hospital for four or five days to have silicone breast implants. A good friend of mine who is also my neighbor has offered to look after my two children during the day in her home.

My problem is another neighbor who is in and out of my house several times a day. She is quite a busybody, and I don't want her to know where I am and why.

I've thought of telling her I'm going to visit my mother who lives out of the state, but then she's wonder why I wouldn't be taking my pre-schooler. I could also tell her I'm going to the hospital for a D and C.

Or I could just leave and not tell her anything, but she would see my husband taking my kids to my neighbor's house and back, and she'd be sure to ask him where I was.

The neighbor who is caring for my children knows the facts and can be trusted not to say anything, but I don't want Mrs. Busybody to know. What should I tell her?

WANTS PRIVACY

DEAR WANTS: Tell her you're going to the hospital for minor surgery. Period. (P.S. And if she presses for more information, tell her it's a personal matter.)

DEAR ABBY: A quote from your column, "Violence begets violence," calls to mind the words of the late Martin Luther King Jr. (from his book, "Stride Toward Freedom"): "To retaliate in kind would do nothing but intensify the existence of hate in the universe. Along the way of life, someone must have sense enough and morality enough to cut off the chain of hate."

Thanks for trying, Abby.

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column about the daughter who is the only one in the family who visits her sometimes senile mother in a convalescent home. (Her sisters and brothers can't stand the smell, and they get too depressed seeing old people.)

I'll tell you a better one than that: My mother is 80, and lives in her own little house, which has no hospital odor. And she's not a bit senile. One of my brothers lives right next door to her, and he stops in to see her maybe once a month for a few minutes.

The other brother lives only 15 minutes away from her, and it's the same thing with him. Neither brother has ever offered to mow the lawn, rake the leaves, or do any painting or repairing for her. Do you know who looks after my mother? My husband—her 60-year-old son-in-law! (My brothers are not yet 50.)

By the way, my brothers run to the altar rail every week. Not that there's anything wrong with that, but it takes more than prayers to make people good Christians. Right, Abby?

BIG TREND
NEW YORK (UPI) — Heat transfer printing that began as a fad on T-shirts is expanding into men's and women's apparel in a big way, says W.J. Ferracane, vice president of an HTP dyes manufacturer.
Ferracane said 150 million linear yards of HTP fabric are being made now, compared with only 60 million yards two years ago. He said the biggest use is on women's innerwear and outerwear, men's sportswear and shirts. It also is being used on nonapparel items such as tote bags, upholstery fabrics, draperies and rugs.

If Dad's A Good Sport, His Tie May Show It

NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever the trendy fashion of the moment may be, there is one consistent staple — a man's tie. It reflects his personality, his state of mind, even his profession, and in a manner of speaking his life style, says the head of a tie manufacturing company.

The selection of a man's tie is often dictated by his profession, and just as often by his hobbies — especially if he is a sports buff. The latter might flaunt his sportsmanship by wearing a tie depicting his hobby — tennis, golf, baseball and such, D. Gordon Williams points out.

Doctors, lawyers, executives, stockbrokers and the like tend towards understated patterns and colors. Stripes are the most popular choice, though this does not preclude panels, borders, and under-the-knot-pattern ties for those who like to "dress up" to their profession, according to Williams.

"It is a mistake to assume that devil-may-care personalities are the only ones who prefer flamboyant neckwear," says the president of Countess Mara. "In my experience I have known men to buy bold, colorful ties in moments of depression, or just to make some personal statement of independence."

"And this does not apply only to young men. Older gentlemen often declare themselves by wearing a bright, exotic tie," he adds. Nevertheless, navy blue is the consistent No. 1 color choice, whether solid or providing a navy blue background for stripes, prints or patterns.

An important factor in selecting the right color to wear is the consideration of a person's natural coloring of skin and hair, says Williams.

Men with dark skins and brown hair look well in masculine colors of nature — brown, warm tans, stone grays and, of course, navy. Fair-haired persons should select light tones in greens, blues and golds, while ruddier-skinned individuals should choose deeper tones.

"Tall men are at an advantage since they can wear a great variety of colors, but men who are short and rather stout should stick to subdued hues, such as dark blues, browns and black," he notes.

"An individual who habitually wears dark clothes is very likely a somber person, and he would do well to wear bright-colored ties, which are sure to liven up his appearance. For exuberant and excitable personalities, subdued colors act as a sedative."

But whatever the profession or personality, Williams advocates that a man's tie knot should always be centered, and that the knot should meet properly with the shirt collar.

Non-Interest Is Distressing

There should be a goldmine for political activists among the unregistered young citizens.

A recent poll by George Gallup organization found only 44 percent of the citizenry in the 18 yrs.-to-29 category are registered. That means there's an untapped vein waiting to be tapped.

It crossed our mind, too, that the party which converts these large numbers of non-voters into registered voters have a something better than 50-50 chance of adding these uncommitted to their party's ranks.

Why? Because if spokesmen for "X" party are making the pitch to get somebody registered, that "somebody" is going to feel somewhat flattered that "X" party wants him or her . . . and so register.

True, some missionary zeal is required; some button-holing and personal approach appears necessary. The blanket invitation didn't attract nearly half of the 18-28 category.

For a number of years we've suspected the party label is losing some of its old power; and that suspicion most voters ballot for the individual was borne out in recent primaries where the crossover was permitted. The trend has shown up in elections, too.

However, the real value of political affiliation is that voice in caucuses and primaries to select the best candidates to put on the ticket come election day.

Getting back to those unregistered young non-voters: their non-interest is distressing. In their early years legislation is being passed that will affect their futures and pocketbooks for the rest of their lives. If they don't like the result, the blame comes close to home. One vote does make a difference. There's an army of non-voters out there waiting to be convinced; but it will take something more than just sitting back to bring them into the arena of action.

It's Mistake To Write Off Kissinger

It's a mistake to "write-off" Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

The Daily Reflector editorially wondered, soon after his diplomatic coup in accomplishing a cease-fire and pullback of armies in the Middle East, how long the luck of Super-K would hold. It was an occasion, too, for predicting stumbles.

Sure enough, there were stumbles. The crowds of admirers shrunk to the point where the secretary is believed by many to be a political liability for Candidate Gerald Ford.

In the last ten days, however, Sec. Kissinger diplomatically rebuked the Swedish press corps; received word that Cuba was pulling its troops out of Angola; saw some success in Stockholm toward ending the Swedish-American cold war; launched Greece and Turkey on a new round of talks to settle the Cyprus feuding; announced it was not time to open an over-all Middle East peace settlement campaign.

All in all, not a bad week for even "Super-K".

THIS AFTERNOON

Reaction To VD Charge

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — More than 30 years ago, one of America's most widely read and controversial writers pointed a finger of guilt at our nation for refusing to recognize the epidemic proportions of venereal disease.

Citing numerous statistical sources and particularly data regarding the men then being drafted as World War II intensified, Philip Wylie in "Generation of Vipers" reached this conclusion:

"A program we would set up automatically to stop chickenpox would stop syphilis and gonorrhea. There is no such program. There is no intention of having such a program. It may be that America will never be able to institute such a program."

The Taboo

To follow such a sane course, Wylie maintains, would necessarily mean the taboos surrounding venereal diseases and the prevalence of sexual contact would have to be exorcised. "I submit, then, that our national attitude toward sex . . . is so disoriented, so unreal, so prejudiced, and so wishful that it is not an attitude at all, but a hallucination," Wylie wrote.

The willingness of a young health expert employed by the North Carolina General Assembly to attempt to exorcise that taboo by calling public attention to what he terms venereal disease infestation of "pandemic" proportions has created considerable discussion across North Carolina.

John H. Young, analyst in health activities on the staff of the General Assembly, maintains that among the most sexually active age group (15-24 years) in North Carolina, one out of three will have contracted gonorrhea sometime during those years; and among low-income, non-white ghetto-dwellers the rate would approach one of two.

Young's startling projections are not provably by statistics, but he is not alone in standing firm that available data, known laxness in reporting venereal diseases, and experience combine in lending credence to the projections. His conclusions in an earlier column in this space were thrown somewhat out of kilter by the erroneous treatment by the writer of the most important element. It was written here that one of three in the high school and college age bracket has gonorrhea; leaving the impression that this would be true at a given time.

Young defends his conclusion that one out of three would be infected at some time during those years—not at a given time.

Why Argue?

In the face of numerous questions from state and local public school health officials regarding his comments, Young says the most puzzling thing is: "Why waste time arguing statistical data when nobody can refute the fact that we do have an epidemic . . . why don't we take advantage of the public interest to demand the funds and support to wipe out the disease?" Young earlier discussed the fact that the incidence of gonorrhea among young, black citizens had increased 100 per cent in one year. That, to him, is even more alarming than his "projections."

Young's contention that little support is given to combating venereal diseases is backed up by several sources, including a letter from Richard G. Steeves, health director in Cleveland County. Steeves notes that North Carolina receives about $650,000 in federal funds, and the state provides another $187,000 each year.

"Hardly enough to even say that our state is contributing to any kind of meaningful program. Cleveland County is spending approximately $25,000 a year," writes Steeves, who notes that local health departments are concerned, but obviously not well equipped. That was also one of Young's major contentions.

Steeves takes exception to the projected infection rate, but without denying that a problem does exist. He points to the interesting situation in which VD reports reflect numbers of cases but often the same person has the disease several times. "In the 15-19 year age group, there is a re-infection rate of 3.2. So, in actuality, there are only one-third the number of people involved that the total figures indicate," he writes.

Come Home To Israel

By GARY PUTKA
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Jewish Agency, the Israeli government's official recruiter of new settlers, has launched a campaign to bring back large numbers of Israelis who have left the country because of fears of war and a faltering economy.

Israelis are leaving the country almost as fast as newcomers are arriving. The Jewish Agency now spends 40 per cent of its time trying to get them back.

The exodus has offset Israel's efforts to pull out of one of its worst immigration slumps.

Israel's central bureau of statistics recorded 17,500 new immigrants in 1975, lower than every annual total since statehood except 1953, 1966 and 1967.

At the same time, 17,000 residents quit the country, nearly cancelling the immigration gain — bitter news to most Israelis, who consider emigration a kind of desertion.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has condemned emigrants as "faint-hearted deserters from the campaign." But the increased outflow prompted the Jewish Agency to add a "Returnees Department" to its Jerusalem headquarters.

It has advertised in foreign newspapers encouraging Israelis to return, and stepped up contacts between emigrants and its emissaries abroad, who normally look for new settlers.

Many of those who leave are former immigrants unable to adjust to a new life-style. Others are native Israelis who say they are fed up with the burdens of military duty, the constant threat of war and economic problems.

Official estimates say as many as a quarter of a million Israelis — 8 per cent of the nation's population of three million — are living abroad, 100,000 of them in New York City alone.

While public feeling against emigrants runs high, the government has approved extensive assistance for returnees, including reduced-cost apartments, special mortgage loans, relaxed customs duties and sometimes even the price of a ticket back to Israel.

"We try to make it easy for them to come home," says Zev Bielsky, head of the Jewish Agency's return desk, which supervises the aid programs.

"Most Israelis who went abroad did so for economic reasons — jobs or housing — and they won't come back unless we solve their problems."

Demos Chasing Buckley

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Half a dozen liberal Democrats have announced their hope of winning the Senate seat now held by Conservative-Republican James L. Buckley. They are jumping on Gentleman Jim like so many squirrels on a hickory nut. They are likely to find him a very tough nut to crack.

Few persons would have believed this five or six years ago. Buckley won New York's Senate seat in 1970 when warring liberals split the opposition vote. It was Buckley's first bid for high office, and most observers thought it could well be his last; no such fluke was likely to recur. His seat was seen as an easy morsel, just right for Democratic munching.

Incredible as it may seem, in a state that ranks among the most liberal in the nation, Buckley now looks remarkably solid. His prospects are picking up. Part of this is owing to his character, part to his record, and part to his Democratic opposition.

The thing is, Buckley is a gentleman. He speaks softly; he does not rave or rant; he rarely seeks publicity as such. If he has spoken a cutting word about a colleague, it does not come readily to mind. Of the nine freshmen who took their Senate seats in January, 1971, Buckley surely would win the title of "most respected." He is not only a gentleman; he is also a gentle man.

Few first-termers make much of a mark in the Senate. Virtually no minority first-termers ever makes a mark at all. As a conservative Republican in a liberal Democratic body, Buckley could easily have disappeared from view altogether. It hasn't worked out that way. His personab charm, his political philosophy and his quiet persistence have paid off in three pieces of legislation that can be recalled offhand.

Each of the three bills reflects Buckley's principled conservatism: He abhors the excessive power of the state, especially as that power tramples upon the privacy, the liberty and the property of the individual.

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

We Extended School Program students resent the closing of the Third Street School building. We do not find it necessary to defend our Program, for our records speak for themselves.

Tuesday of week before last, following the Monday night meeting of the school board, an attorney, parents from Eastwood subdivision, and city officials (including the Mayor) visited our school building. We feel that the building was inspected and subsequently condemned as a direct result of parental reaction to the new redistricting proposal.

Building Inspector Alton Warren told some of our instructors that public facilities like schools are supposed to be inspected annually. He said that because there had not been ample time and personnel, Third Street School had not been inspected in nearly 18 months. Doesn't it appear ironic that both time and five inspectors became readily available Thursday morning of the same week? The manner in which the school was inspected was most unprofessional. The inspectors completely disrupted the learning situation by jumping up and down on floors, walking into the restroom unannounced, and talking boisterously.

We agree that the building is in terrible shape, and we are aware that the Board of Education had proposed to renovate the building this summer. Our school did not get in the condition that it was in week before last. Why the urgency? It saddens us to think that elected public officials would not consider the traumatic experience, emotional impact, and disruption of education that being told to get out within 40 minutes had on us.

We hope the Board of Education will continue its plan to renovate the building.

We appreciate the opportunity to have used the city-owned facility at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets, and we are grateful for the cooperation and assistance the city officials have afforded us. We are concerned, however, that after the first week of July, we will again be "homeless."

Party Leaders Nix Aides

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The refusal of state party leaders to take campaign direction from President Ford's politically untutored White House staff reached a peak at a secret three-hour session nine days before the vital Michigan primary election.

The May 9 meeting, dubbed by Michigan Republicans as the "Mother's Day Massacre," lasted more than three hours in Detroit's Metro airport and ended in their complete triumph over White House-connected aides playing various roles in Mr. Ford's error-filled campaign.

Party professionals now are praying that the Michigan lesson, with White House aides sharply downgraded, will be followed in the June 8 Ohio test.

The Michigan triumph was not immediate. When Sen. Robert Griffin and Gov. William Milliken, top party leaders in Michigan, strongly proposed that President Ford dip back into history and take a whistle-stop train ride across the state, they met a barrage of protests from the White House aides.

Byron M. (Red) Caveney, chief White House advance man and a Nixon holdover, fought the whistle-stop as too expensive, too demanding on staff and too risky for the President's security. Caveney was overruled by the President himself when Griffin telephoned an appeal to Mr. Ford following the airport session.

The Milliken-Griffin plan to preempt planning and coordinating the all-important Michigan primary — following five out of six primary wins by Ronald Reagan — was set in concrete before Rogers Morton, the Ford campaign chairman, William Seidman, a top presidential aide and long-time Michigan crony of the President, Caveney and other White House staffers arrived

There appeared little hope for the new British liner to take the blue ribbon speed record from the French liner Normandie, but it was necessary to await the official figures from the bridge of the Queen Mary before the final outcome could be determined.

The giant liner was not expected to reach her new pier in the Hudson river until later this afternoon.

The powerful elected officials were doing a slow burn at what they regarded as inexplicable and costly campaigning errors by Mr. Ford's White House aides.

One particularly galling incident: a statement advertising Michigan as the nation's worst unemployment area which was issued by the Labor Department just before Secretary of Labor William J. Usery came to the state as one of Mr. Ford's "advocates."

But the biggest change ordered by the Griffin-Milliken team was to reverse Mr. Ford's negative policy on Reagan's courtship of crossover Democratic voters. Up to the Michigan primary, the President, on advice of political primitives in the White House, had harangued

Strength For Today

SEEDS OF RUMOR

A child one day told his mother a scandalous and probably untrue story he had heard about one of the neighbors. The mother might have lectured the child severely about the evil of spreading gossip, but instead she told him to pick and bring to her all the dandelions he could find which had gone to seed.

When the child had done this she then ordered him to stand in the yard and blow the little white fibers away. The child did this with gusto, thoroughly enjoying the game. But he was disconcerted when the mother then told him to find all the fibers and bring them back to her.

"Of course you can't find them all," said the mother in answer to the child's remonstrance. "Nor can anyone pick up all the words of gossip and rumor that he has thoughtlessly spread around. Furthermore, everyone of those words, like the dandelion fibers, carries a seed. Every rumor, therefore, will create others just as false and damaging as itself."

New Twists On Old Favorites

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

Manufacturers trying to tempt consumers with new foods and fads have come up with some unusual twists on familiar favorites.

Take the hot dog, for example. According to the American Meat Institute, manufacturers produced 1.6 billion pounds of federally inspected franks and wieners in 1975. On a per capita basis, assuming 10 hot dogs to the pound, that works out to 76 franks and wieners for every man, woman and child in the country.

For years, frankfurter manufacturers have been turning out five-inch hot dogs. Bakers, meanwhile, have been turning out six-inch rolls. No one is sure why.

Swift & Co. has decided to change all that. It's producing a premium-priced, seven-inch hot dog. Now the meat can stick out from the roll. "The first mouthful and the last mouthful is going to be meat," said a spokesman, explaining that children seem to like it that way.

There will be eight of the seven-inch hot dogs in a one-pound package — another move to match the bakers who usually put eight rolls in their packages while the meat processors have been marketing 10 franks to the pound.

A pound of long hot dogs, displayed at a recent convention of the Super Market Institute in Dallas, will cost about 10 cents more than a pound of short hot dogs. That's because of improved packaging and a "different formulation," said a Swift spokesman.

The content of both varieties will be basically the same — beef and pork — but the longer hot dog will have a "mild flavor" more popular with children, said the Swift spokesman.

Some people, of course, prefer their hot dogs on regular bread and there's another new product just for them. It's a kitchen utensil that slices a hot dog so it curls into a circle during cooking. You can put the finished product on a round bun or a square slice.

Also on display at the supermarket meeting was a hot dog made from turkey meat, billed as "the leaner wiener." It will sell for less than regular frankfurters and joins chicken and fish hot dogs already on the market.

There is nothing to prevent manufacturers from making hot dogs from just about any meat they want. There are restrictions, however, on what they can call their products and different names mean very different things.

As a result of a 1971 court ruling, manufacturers cannot refer to hot dogs as "pure," "100 per cent" or "all" if there are any additives, including seasoning. Starting July 1, the standard applies to other meat and poultry products as well.

U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations require that frankfurters contain no more than 30 per cent fat, 10 per cent added water and 2 per cent corn syrup by weight.

In addition, frankfurters which contain by-products such as lips, tongue and snout, must be clearly labeled as "frankfurter with by-products or variety meat" and may not include more than 15 per cent poultry meat. Other additions such as soy protein or dried milk also must be listed on the label.

Gubernatorial Candidates To Spend Record Sums

RALEIGH (AP) — Because they believe voters might become tired of politics this summer, North Carolina gubernatorial candidates plan to sink record sums into their pre-primary election advertising campaigns.

against Reagan's earlier success in winning crossover votes from Wallaceite and other Democrats. Instead, in Michigan he went after independent and Democratic crossover voters himself. One post-primary poll showed that nearly half his total vote — in a primary turnout that shattered all records — came from non-Republicans. Ohio offers less but somewhat similar rewards.

A footnote: Inept presidential campaign aides, as identified by party leaders, include hard-working but untutored presidential staff chief Richard Cheney, several of the Ford advance team (largely inherited from Richard Nixon) and chief scheduler Jerry Jones, also a Nixon holdover.

Jerry Brown's Ego Trip

Failure of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California to lift a finger to prevent Jimmy Carter from bagging most of Missouri's uncommitted delegates raises doubts whether he is on an ego trip instead of a serious campaign for President.

Early in May, knowledgeable political operatives urged Brown to stop in Missouri for a Democratic fundraising dinner, while en route from Denver to Washington for Maryland campaigning, and to visit Missouri Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton in Washington. The latter might have stopped Eagleton's move toward Carter; the former might have earned Brown enough friends to neutralize an Eagleton endorsement of Carter.

But Brown did neither, and much of the state's delegation entered the Carter camp with Eagleton.

This confirms suspicions among old associates that Jerry Brown, while basking in the glow of fervent young crowds, is not inclined toward the hard pick-and-shovel work unavoidable in effective presidential campaigning.

The Paralyzed Government

Official papers recommending administration positions on clean air legislation have languished in the White House for nearly three weeks — another sign of paralysis caused by Mr. Ford's frantic presidential campaign.

Federal Energy Administration (FEA) officials have been gnawing their nails for weeks awaiting a green light for proposed Senate testimony. They have been spared embarrassment only because of unrelated Senate delays.

The incident is not isolated. Some federal agencies, confronting paralysis at the preoccupied White House, have taken policy positions without presidential approval.

The problem is not merely that Mr. Ford and chief of staff Cheney have spent unprecedented time on the road for an incumbent President. In addition, senior aides left behind in Washington also are preoccupied by Ronald Reagan's challenge.

A footnote: Presidential decision-making can be speedy — when connected with primary elections. Imperturbed by local supporters while campaigning in California, Mr. Ford made a snap decision May 24 to endorse a bill overturning a court decision protecting porpoises from tuna fishermen.

The candidates have hired media production and polling companies to help them overcome political boredom or the summer doldrums. At least three gubernatorial hopefuls are expected to spend near the legal limit of $363,900 for television, radio and newspaper advertising.

"You have to wonder about the effectiveness of a media campaign when the Democratic National convention will dominate in July and the Republican National Convention will dominate in August," said Walter DeVries, a pollster working for Democrat George Wood. Candidates are fighting the summer campaign problem for the first time this year. Previously, primaries were held in May rather than August.

Charles Dunn, manager of Democrat Ed O'Herron's gu-beratorial campaign, called the new summer campaign "one of the great unknowns" in the governor's race. O'Herron will come close to spending the $363,900 limit to overcome possible voter disinterest in politics, he said.

Several Democratic candidates will face another problem: Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat, has become widely known during the four years he has served as lieutenant governor. Some of his Democratic opponents feel they have to increase their own name recognition in the state to offset his popularity. Democratic hopeful George Wood has hired Magus Productions of Philadelphia, which has worked for presidential candidate Jimmy Carter and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) to prepare his media advertising campaign. And he estimates he will spend close to the legal limit before the primary.

Hunt is using the talents of David Sawyer to promote him this summer. Sawyer is a New York television producer who handled Charles D. (Pug) Ravenel's gubernatorial campaign in South Carolina. He too plans to spend several hundred thousand dollars for primary advertising.

Sen. Tom Strickland, a Democrat, said he will spend a Records Act thus gives college students—and the parents of public school pupils as well—guaranteed access to the records maintained in their files. His bill prohibiting the Department of Transportation from requiring the pernicious "ignition interlock" was a splendid blow against smothering bureaucracy. And the Buckley Amendment affecting the Consumer Products Safety Commission gives the businessman some recourse against the costly errors and misjudgments of this agency.

Buckley is catching fire from some of his New York critics for his position on federal relief for New York City. He owes no apologies to anyone. When it was first proposed to put the city under control of a federal troika, Buckley balked; he later supported the Ford administration's program. Some of the city's radical libs profess to be outraged at his attitude. Many of the state's voters, by contrast, have nothing but praise for his restraint.

What of the opposition? Well, Bella Abzug announced last week. Ramsey Clark is in the field. The September primary also will see bids from City Council President Paul O'Dwyer, Assemblyman Andrew J. Stein, Utica's maverick Mayor Edward Hanna, and Abe Hirschfeld, a wealthy businessman. The sovereign State of New York, whatever its sins of omission or commission, has done nothing to deserve a Senator Hat or a Senator Noodle. Brassy Bella's ideas run mostly to gristle; and Clark's run mostly to fat.

It is widely reported that Daniel Patrick Moynihan, former ambassador to the United Nations, may enter the field. He is a bright-eyed and busy-tailed fellow, and on paper his record looks good. But Moynihan often tends to scratch the wrong way, and his acerbic intellectuality could turn off the common man. "I'm a Hegelian," said Moynihan on a recent TV show. Let him sell that image in Brooklyn.

Buckley's only declared opposition within the GOP comes from Congressman Peter Peyser of the 23rd District (Westchester and the Bronx). Peyser has middling-fair liberal credentials, but not much else. If he stays in the race, Buckley should dispose of him easily. The Democrats presumably will choose the Hat, the Noodle, or the Hegelian. In this politically unpredictable year, little can be predicted with great certainty; but against any one of those three, Gentleman Jim is a pretty good pick.

When you need a loan, you need money. Not a runaround.

At most banks, the person you ask for a loan has to ask someone else. But, at NCNB, the person you talk to...

...is the same person that gives you the answer. Without asking someone else. That's why you get fast, direct answers at our bank.

These days, a lot of banks are talking about loans. The interest you pay, the way you pay it, the times you can pay it.

But somehow, in all of the hoopla, nobody's been talking about one of the biggest hassles in getting a loan.

It's called "The Waiting Game." And here's how it's played: After your interview, you wait for an answer.

Sometimes a few days, sometimes even a week. Or more.

Here's why you're waiting. At most banks, somebody has to ask somebody else (who may have to ask somebody else) about okaying the loan.

The person you ask for the loan doesn't have to ask someone else.

Most of the time, the bigger the bank, the longer the wait. But not at our bank.

We've cut out the runaround at NCNB. The person you talk with about the loan can give you the answer.

The reason for this is simple.

We have $25 million a month to lend and we're going to lend it.

"Direct Answers" is just one way we're working to make it as easy as possible for you to get a loan.

And it's just one reason why we're lending money to more people than any other bank in North Carolina.

How can a bank ask you to sign forms only bankers understand?

One other way we're making things easier: the loan agreement you sign is written in plain English, not "bank talk" and mumbo-jumbo.

We don't have to do this, but we think it's worth it: You know what we expect from you, and, more importantly, what you can expect from us.

So, before you go anywhere else for a loan, come see us.

And see just what it's like to get the money without the runaround.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market posted a modest gain today on the momentum of last Friday's rally.

The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 2.01 at 977.24 after Friday's 9.66 point gain.

Advances held a moderate lead over losers in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Trading was light.

Brokers said investors seemed encouraged by the market's rally at the end of last week after the Dow touched a three-month closing low Thursday.

Stocks also seemed to be drawing further benefit from the announcement Friday that oil-exporting countries had decided to leave prices unchanged.

But analysts noted that rising interest rates were keeping many traders in a cautious mood.

A quarter-point increase in the prime lending rate from 6 1/4 to 7 per cent continued to spread in the banking industry today.

Texaco was the most active NYSE issue, unchanged at 26 1/2. Price changes in most other stocks were small.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index gained .07 to 53.38 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .19 at 103.35.

Sgt. Brown Testifies In Drug Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Army Sgt. William K. Brown took the stand in his own defense today. He testified that he was an unwitting dupe of heroin smugglers.

His testimony began the third week in the smuggling conspiracy trial of Leslie "Ike" Atkinson and nine others, including Brown himself. Like the three other defendants who have testified, Brown denied any knowledge of a heroin smuggling operation.

Brown said that when he was stationed in Thailand, a code-friend, William Wright, had approached him about shipping teak furniture home for him.

Brown said he agreed, but did not know that more than 100 pounds of heroin would be secreted in the furniture, as others have testified.

When the furniture arrived at his new station in Augusta, Ga., last fall, Brown said, he received a visit from Freddie Clay Thornton, whom he had met briefly while in Thailand.

Thornton spent a lunch hour at his house, Brown said. But he denied the damaging testimony that Thornton gave two weeks ago.

Thornton said that Brown helped him unpack the heroin from false bottoms in the furniture. And he said Brown was to be paid $100,000 for allowing his furniture to be used.

Brown denied that. But prosecutors, cross-examining him, asked questions about an apparently monitored telephone conversation he had with Thornton some time later after federal agents had arrested him and Thornton.

Elderly Population...

and social institutions. They say the country will have to consider changes in its pension, medical care and educational systems, as well as make decisions which will affect the quality of life of the elderly will enjoy.

Among other findings in the report:

—Only 5 per cent of today's 65 and older population are in institutions, like hospitals and nursing homes.

3—Females can expect to live about eight years longer than men; in 1974, women could expect to live an average of 75.9 years, compared with 68.2 years for men.

the Census Bureau's population division, shows that in 1975 there were 42 million persons over 65, about 32 million over 60, about 22.4 million over 65, about 8.5 million over 75 and 1.9 million over 85.

The figures show that the number of people in the country who are 65 and older has been increasing by three million or four million per decade or, roughly, 300,000 to 400,000 per year. The 65 and over population which stood at 12.4 million in 1950 is expected to increase to about 31 million by 2000, more than a third larger than it is now.

The elderly population of the future will be mostly female, and many of them will be widows; of those 65 and older, there are now 69 males for every 100 females, whereas 40 years ago, the ratio was about even. By 2000, there will be an estimated 65 males for every 100 females of the same age.

—Today three out of four men 65 and older are married and living with their wives, while only one out of three women of the same age is married and living with her husband.

—Today about one-fifth of men 65 and older work, compared with one-third in 1960 and almost half in 1950.

—In 1974 the median income for families with heads 65 and older was $7,298, less than three-fifths the median of $12,836 for all families. ("Median" means half of those surveyed fall above and half below.)

—Whites can expect to live about six years longer than blacks who, in 1973, could expect to live an average of 65.9 years.

The study, prepared by Jacob S. Siegel, a senior statistician several reasons, the Social Security system will be among those institutions affected by the growing numbers of elderly. Among the reasons: a larger percentage of the population will be collecting benefits, people can expect to live longer lives and collect benefits longer and people are retiring at younger ages.

"Prospective changes (in Social Security) can be financially covered by an additional period of work before or after 'retirement', higher general taxes, or larger contributions to the retirement system on the basis of a higher rate of worker contributions or a broader income base for the present rate of contributors," Siegel writes.

The reason for the rapid increase in the elderly population can be traced to the general rise in the number of births up to about 1920, the decline in the death rate and the heavy volume of immigrants prior to World War I, Siegel writes. As a result of the marked drop in the number of births between 1920 and 1940, the country can expect the growth rate of the 65 and older population to drop slightly between 1990 and 2010.

more moderate $75,000 on his primary campaign. He has hired Productive Communications of Greenville and O.B. Garris of Raleigh to produce his campaign film and advertising material.

Republican gubernatorial candidates face a much smaller electorate in August 17 and are spending less for advertising than candidates in the opposition party.

Republican David Flaherty said he will spend about $95,000 for summer primary campaign advertising. He has hired Owen Dudley and Associates of Greenville to produce his advertising. And F. Clinton White of New York, manager of Barry Goldwater's 1964 campaign, is being retained as a consultant.

Republican Coy Privett plans to spend up to $100,000 on pre-primary advertising. His media campaign is being managed by Smith Associates of Charlotte, producer of the Arthur Smith country music television show and the company that designed the anti-liquor-by-the-drink campaign during the 1973 referendum.

Jake Alexander, a Republican, has not announced his advertising budget but said his campaign would use all the advertising dollars it could raise. He has hired The Bandovers Co. of Phoenix, Ariz. to produce media advertisements.

GOP Wallace McCall and Democrat J.A. "Andy" Barker are also running for the gubernatorial nomination. But being relatively unknown in the state, they are not expected to spend much on political advertising before the primary.

Throwing Glove Helps Kaat Beat Chicago Cubs

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

All Jim Kaat has to do to beat the Chicago Cubs is throw out his glove it appears.

Actually, that's exactly what he did Monday.

The Philadelphia left-hander made a small but significant adjustment to his pitching delivery and the result was a 4-1 victory in the second game of a Memorial Day doubleheader.

"It wasn't anything major," Kaat said after his six-hitter followed a 7-5 opening-game loss. "It was the way I throw my glove out at the hitter. I wasn't doing it and had lost some of my velocity."

His velocity restored, Kaat's performance perked up considerably. Not normally a strike-out pitcher, he fanned six Cubs en route to his 238th career victory.

The victory gave the Phillies 22 triumphs for May, tying a club record, but more importantly, kept them in front of the Pittsburgh Pirates by 6½ games in the National League East. The Pirates also split a holiday doubleheader, losing the first game 13-2 to the New York Mets before a 2-1 victory in the nightcap.

"Jim went right at it," said Philadelphia second baseman Dave Cash. "He knew we had to win the game."

Elsewhere in the National League, the San Diego Padres outscored the Atlanta Braves 10-7; the Cincinnati Reds turned back the Houston Astros 4-2 and the San Francisco Giants whipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1 in 12 innings. A doubleheader between the Montreal Expos and St. Louis Cardinals was postponed by rain.

Kaat not only pitched well but also smashed a solo home run in the fourth inning. The Phillies, who have won 29 of their last 37 games, scored a run in each of the first four innings of the second game.

The Cubs got to Kaat in the fourth with a two-out uprising. Bill Madlock, hitting safely in his 12th straight game, and Mike Adams hammered doubles for a run.

Run-scoring singles by Mick Kelleher and pitcher Rick Reuschel, 5-3, snapped a seventh-inning tie in the first game and the Cubs scored three more times in the eighth to sew it up. Philadelphia left-hander Steve Carlton, 5-2, had a five-game winning streak broken in the opener.

Mets 13-1, Pirates 2-2
Jon Matlack hurled a five-hit ter and received 14-hit support as New York overwhelmed Pittsburgh in the first game. Doc Medich pitched a five-hitter and Duffy Dyer hit his second home run of the season as the Pirates won the second game.

"Anytime you get four runs in a doubleheader, lose the first game by a big score and then win the second, you have to be happy," said Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh.

Padres 10, Braves 7
Dave Winfield capped a six-run eighth inning with a three-run homer to give San Diego its victory over Atlanta. Winfield's seventh homer of the year broke a 7-7 tie and gave the Padres their sixth triumph in eight games. The defeat was the fourth straight for the Braves.

Rich Folkers, 1-1, the fifth San Diego pitcher, was the winner. Max Leon, 1-2, the third Atlanta hurler, absorbed the loss.

Reds 4, Astros 2
George Foster's two-run homer capped a three-run Cincinnati rally in the fifth inning, triggering the Reds past Houston. Right-hander Pat Darcy, 2-3, hurled the first five innings in picking up the victory. J.R. Richard, 5-5, allowed all three Cincinnati runs in absorbing his fourth consecutive loss.

Giants 7, Dodgers 1
Bobby Murcer smashed a two-run single in the top of the 12th inning to break a 1-1 tie as San Francisco erupted for six runs to beat Los Angeles.

The Giants loaded the bases against reliever Mike Marshall, 3-3, on successive singles by Larry Herndon, Derrel Thomas and Chris Speier. Then Murcer, who had grounded out four straight times and also flied out, singled through the Dodgers' drawn-in infield to score Herndon and Thomas. Before the inning was over, Ken Reitz doubled home two runs, Marc Hill singled home one and winning pitcher Randy Moffit, 3-2, singled home a sixth run.

Smith Beginning To Pick Olympic Basketball Team

By BOB CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The trim young men, stripped to gym shorts, were slogging their way through a one-mile run under a hot sun. For a moment, Red Auerbach wasn't sure whether he was watching Olympic tryouts for basketball or track.

But it was definitely basketball. The mile run was just one of Coach Dean Smith's methods for assessing the players trying out on an objective basis.

He also had them performing vertical jumps and running suicide drills Monday on the first full day of workouts. All 53 were weighed and measured. Auerbach and the other pro scouts in attendance paid little attention.

"What does running a mile have to do with playing basketball?" said the ex-Boston Celtics coach. "If (former Celtic great Bob) Cousy had had to run a mile, he'd have passed out. But between the baselines, he was as quick as anyone."

Smith, however, felt his tests served several purposes. They showed him something about conditioning, pride and determination. Past reputations didn't help much.

Walter Davis of North Carolina and Ernie Grunfeld of Tennessee made Notre Dame's Adrian Dantley look bad in the suicide drill. Players start at one end of the basketball court. They run to the foul line and back, to mid-court and back, to the opposite foul line and back and finally the full length of the court and back. Davis and Grunfeld left Dantley gasping in their wake.

The vertical jump from a standing start was another equalizer. High school player Darrell Griffith of Louisville recorded one of the best efforts, touching a wall more than 11 feet up even though he stands just 6-3.

Marquette's Bo Ellis was unable to finish the one-mile run and came under Smith's penalty. He will have to finish his mile before he can scrimmage.

"The mile run affects my thinking about players. It shows whether they have conditioning, pride and discipline. At North Carolina, we found a high correlation between those who played well on defense and the ones with good times in the mile run."

Unfortunately, Smith's tests failed to uncover a big man with exceptional speed or leaping ability, and that is what the team lacks.

"The team is weak up the middle. The best big men aren't here," said Auerbach.

He was referring to Indiana's Kent Benson, out with an arm injury; and Alabama's Leon Douglas, UCLA's Rich Washington and Centenary's Robert Parrish, all of whom declined to try out for other reasons. Auerbach said agents don't want players to try out for fear something will happen to hurt their bargaining power with the pros.

"It's terrible. This team is supposed to represent the United States, but there's no pride, no loyalty. I don't blame the kids. It's these agents; they're brainwashing the kids.

Without Benson, Douglas, Washington and Parrish, Smith is looking at one of his own, North Carolina's Mitch Kupchak, as well as Clemson's Tree Rollins, Arizona State's Scott Lloyd, Washington's James Edwards, and just about anyone else who stands close to seven feet and can walk into camp.

Smith called an ex-Duke player, Bob Fleischer, and invited him to try out. He said he was trying to contact UCLA's David Greenwood to see if he'd like to come to camp.

They ought to take the agents out and shoot 'em dead," Auerbach said.

Flair Seeking Recognition As Athletic Super-Star

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — If there is anything professional wrestler Ric Flair wants more than his $100,000 yearly income, it's recognition as an athletic super-star.

Flair, 26, a former high school wrestling champion from a wealthy Minneapolis family, enrages wrestling audiences across the Southeast with his long, bleached blond hair and arrogant ring behavior.

He is a "villain," one of the bad guys on the wrestling circuit who the fans love to hate.

When he's not traveling from one town to another, he lives in a $42,000 house in suburban Charlotte with his wife and daughter, who are discreetly ignored by his promoters, and broods over his lack of recognition.

"Do you think there's more than a handful of athletes making more money than me?" he asked.

"Last week I made $2,900;

the week before, $2,400; the week before, $1,700; the week before, $3,700. Nobody can take the --damn checks like I can."

Flair said wrestlers make more money than most other athletes and have more women following them from city to city.

He and his promoter, Jim Crockett, estimate he will make $125,000 this year. Of the 45 wrestlers on Crockett's circuit, seven besides Flair earn more than $100,000, cruising the circuit in luxury cars.

Some, however, make as little as $15,000 and must pay all their expenses.

Despite being in the upper echelon of his profession, Flair wants most of all to be as famous as Joe Namath or Pete Rose and resents what he considers denial of his deserved recognition.

He apparently, however, had other alternatives for making a living. His father is a Minneapolis physician and patron of the arts and Flair graduated from a prestigious prep school. He attended the University of Minnesota, but dropped out after two years.

"I was going nowhere," Flair said. "I knew what I wanted to do, but I could not organize myself."

Burfeindt Still Amazed At Putt

BALTIMORE (AP) — If Betty Burfeindt slips quietly back to the 16th green at the Pine Ridge Golf Course here the next time she's in town, it's understandable. She still can't believe the putt that gave her the 26th annual Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

"If I hit it the same way 20 times, it would probably never drop," the 30-year-old Miss Burfeindt said Sunday after posting her first tournament victory since 1973.

The winning 12-foot putt on the 16th, which left Miss Burfeindt beside herself trying to explain it, snapped a tie with Judy Rankin. Both competitors toured the municipal Pine Ridge course in two-under-par 71 Sunday and finished the final round of the 72-hole event the same way they started the day's play — one stroke apart.

The winner's 287 total was five strokes under par.

For a while, though, it appeared that a late rally would give Mrs. Rankin her third win at Pine Ridge in the last four years. Three down at the turn, she pulled even with birdies on the 12th and 13th holes following a bogey by Miss Burfeindt at No. 11.

But then came what the winner finally described as the miracle putt which nailed down the $8,000 first prize.

"When I hit it, I knew I missed it," she said. "I pushed it, sort of eased into it. The ball was two inches outside when it was only six inches from the cup, but it dove in — and I don't know how. There was no way that the ball was going to go against the grain ... but it did."

Miss Burfeindt's first prize gave her more than $46,000 for the season, while Mrs. Rankin added $5,650 to a tour-leading $61,191. Carole Jo Skala finished third, three shots off the pace at 290, while Jane Blalock, Jan Stephenson and Donna Young tied for fourth.

"When I hit it, I knew I missed it," she said. "I pushed it, sort of eased into it. The ball was two inches outside when it was only six inches from the cup, but it dove in — and I don't know how. There was no way that the ball was going to go against the grain ... but it did."

Miss Burfeindt's first prize gave her more than $46,000 for the season, while Mrs. Rankin added $5,650 to a tour-leading $61,191. Carole Jo Skala finished third, three shots off the pace at 290, while Jane Blalock, Jan Stephenson and Donna Young tied for fourth.

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
1 NT Pass 3 ♥ Pass

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Apparently, East had never heard that half a loaf is better than none. As a result, he turned a small profit into a large loss in quick time.

With ten cards in the major suits, South was understandably reluctant to play in three no trump. When he rebid his hearts he offered his partner a choice of suits in which to play, and North passed because he held three hearts and only two spades—with equal length, he would have preferred spades, since South might have a six-card spade suit and only five hearts.

West led the top of his diamond sequence, declarer played low from dummy and East won the king. He shifted to a spade. Declarer rose with the ace, taking care to unblock dummy's queen, cashed the queen of diamonds and ace of hearts, then entered dummy with a trump to the king. On the ace of diamonds he discarded his singleton club, and cheerfully conceded a trick in each major to the defenders.

"Why are you clinging to your ace of clubs? Don't you believe in taking setting tricks?" West inquired of his partner.

"But I would have set up dummy's king had I cashed the ace," moaned East.

"It would help if you could count to 13," West retorted. "The bidding marked South with at least 10 cards in the major suits. From the opening lead, it was obvious that he held the queen of diamonds, and he followed with a low diamond when you won the king at trick one. Thus, you could account for 12 of declarer's cards. It was not very difficult to deduce that South could not hold more than one club, and that that card was due to go away on the ace of diamonds. Setting up the king of clubs couldn't possibly help declarer, so what was the hurry about shifting to a spade? If South had a loser in that suit, how could he avoid giving it up?"

Flowers For The Dead Youth

PUYALLUP, Wash. (AP)—The grave rarely has been without fresh flowers since the day of burial almost six years ago.

Old couples, young people and boys and girls bring bouquets. But none knows the identity of the youth buried beneath the stone with the poignant inscription:

"Here lies a young man
Known but to God
He surely is loved and missed

"By someone, somewhere."
"It's a very sad story—somewhere he has family and friends, I'm sure," said Wallace Olsen as he bent by the grave.

Olsen is superintendent of Woodbine Cemetery on a hill overlooking Puyallup, a town of 15,000, not far from Mt. Rainier.

"He went away, and maybe they still think he'll come back. But he won't. And they don't know that ..."

The youth, believed about 21, fell 75 feet to his death from a cliff during a rock festival in nearby Eatonville on July 3, 1970. He was one of about 10,000 young people attending the court-banned Buffalo Party Convention Rock Concert.

"Today a lot of people know the story, or are touched by the headstone, and they leave flowers," said Olsen. "The grave always seems to have fresh flowers."

Recalled Adel V. Siegel, Pierce County's deputy coroner: "We tried to identify him through the FBI, the military, Canadian authorities, almost everybody.

WEATHER FORECAST—Rain is forecast today for the Pacific Northwest and the northeast, with showers in the Rockies and spreading through the central portion of the nation and in the southeast. Warmer temperatures are expected in the southeast with cooler temperatures moving into the Great Lakes area. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Rather warm weather today will cool off somewhat Wednesday. A south to southwest circulation around the western extension of the so-called Bermuda high pressure system took hold of the weather over North Carolina yesterday and will continue its influence today.

Temperatures yesterday were slightly above normal. Readings in the 80s were reported about the state, with the Raleigh-Durham area reporting the warmest reading at 91 degrees. Even the mountains warmed into the 80s except for the higher peaks. Grandfather Mountain had a comfortable 68 degrees.

More of the same is anticipated today under partly sunny skies east of the mountains. The extreme western portion of the state will see an increase in cloudiness as the approaching frontal system west of our state begins to spread its effects eastward.

By SHELLY COHEN
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — "High and I do mean high," began the letter opened by a Fontana, Calif. mother.

For $20, a Pocasset, Mass., man offered to send to her son his latest publication, "Speed Made Easy."

But the young man in Fontana never got to see that letter. He was in a mental hospital, the victim of a bad trip on that same powerful street drug.

Federal postal officials do no more than tell the irate parents, who related that incident, that their hands were tied.

The same advertisements are going out to prison inmates, too, and it's all perfectly legal.

"We've had a lot of complaints against this guy," said a postal official in Boston, pointing to a stack of letters, "but it's not against the law."

For $20 sent to the post office box of Irving Penkethman in the quiet Cape Cod village of Pocasset, he promises to send his Publication No. 62: how to make speed — methamphetamine, a central nervous system stimulant — at home with easy-to-get products from "the local hardware, the corner drugstore and the nearest gas station."

"It's a hobby," said Penkethman of mail order business he has been running for nearly five years. "I'm not trying to get rich. I just want to turn people on to how they can turn themselves on.

"To get rid of all the dealers, the narcs (narcotics police officers), the heat, the paranoia, the bloodshed. That's where I'm at," he said.

A musician and music teacher by profession, Penkethman, 36, admits he is largely self-taught in drugs and chemistry.

"I got turned on to grass in '65, DMT in '66 and acid in '67," he said. "I got involved in a speed lab. We made about a pound a week for 12 weeks. We went on to mescaline, but we messed up, and I blew myself up."

So for the next two years, Penkethman said, he took chemistry courses, including a correspondence course offered by the state Department of Education.

"But I didn't finish because they had too many mistakes in their workbooks," he said.

Penkethman justifies his drug instruction business saying: "They're going to go out and buy it on the streets anyway. It's all over the place and a lot of it is really poor. If they do it for themselves, then they won't have to go out on the street and get poisoned."

Penkethman has come by what he says is a rather extensive mailing list by advertising his service in such drug-oriented magazines as "High Times." And as a special incentive he offers his list of publications, which usually costs $1, free to prison inmates.

"A lot of these chemicals and items are easily found in prisons and others can be smuggled in," said a postal official.

At least two prison officials were among those complaining to postal authorities about the advertisements.

Robert J. Klein, superintendent of the Davis Center, a facility for 16-to 21-year-old offenders in Davis, W.Va., complained to that state's attorney general after one inmate received the ad.

In Gulfport, Miss., Harrison County Sheriff Leroy Hobbs confiscated and forwarded to postal authorities Penkethman's flyer and list of publications sent to an inmate there.

Penkethman says he got some of his formulas from inmates. He says the process for "Speed Made Easy" came from a prison inmate who told Penkethman, in exchange for some of Penkethman's formulas, about how to make speed from a nasal inhaler product.

Prison officials and others complaining about Penkethman's business receive from the postal inspector a letter saying that the advertisements "while understandably undesirable do not in themselves violate postal statutes" and are protected by the First Amendment.

Likewise, Bourne Police Chief Henry D. Mailoini said he has received complaints about Penkethman's business, but "we don't have a thing on him. There's nothing we can do about him."

District Court records in Barnstable County show only one criminal complaint issued against Penkethman. In 1968 he was charged with illegal possession of a handgun. The records show he never appeared on the charge and is technically in default.

"What I'm doing is legal," Penkethman said. "After all, a lot of my stuff is based on government research."

One of Penkethman's sources is a government pamphlet on a 1964 symposium on psychoactive drugs for extracting essential oils from 20 plants.

"It was available for $4 from the U.S. Government Printing Office," he said, "and it contains enough so that someone who knows what he's doing knows just where to go."

A few more steps and those oils "can be turned into amphetamines.

Penkethman claims not to make much money from the publications, which sell from $2 to $20.

Youthful Prisoner Successful Author

SAN-QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — Free-lance writer Bobby Wheeler made $21,240 in the last year. He is engaged to be married next month, and he lives comfortably with almost no expenses.

He is serving a 10-year-to-life sentence in San Quentin prison for armed robbery.

Since last June, the 28-year-old convict has sold stories to Playboy, Penthouse, Redbook, Sports Illustrated and Boys' Life and worked on scripts for two TV shows — "Police-woman" and "On the Rocks."

He says prison life is comfortable, that he likes stealing, and that his return address probably helps sell his articles.

"The biggest problems with California prisons is that they're comfortable," he says. If they weren't, he says, "people wouldn't be as apt to come back."

Wheeler, who comes from a middle-class family in the San Fernando Valley, stole his first car at 14, then started burglarizing department stores at 15.

At 16, he says, he used his loot to take a dozen kids to Disneyland. "I started stealing as a way to impress people," he says.

Wheeler served eight years in prison for attempted burglary. He says he got lonesome after his release in 1972 and soon was back in jail.

"I'm more comfortable here than I am on the outside," he says. "I miss certain things, though — women, gambling and liquor."

He met his bride-to-be through her brother, who came to the prison with a baseball team. After their wedding next month, Wheeler will be allowed 19-hour "family visits" every other month.

He says marriage might be the beginning of a new life: "I want a kid. If I ever have a kid of my own, I'll never go back to prison."

But he says marriage alone won't change him. "By herself, she can't keep me out if I get it into my head I want to take a chance on coming back to prison," he says.

"I'm a thief because I want to be a thief," he says. "When I want to be something else I'll be that. Why? It's thrilling. And it's easy money."

Skateboard Buffs Brutalizing Bodies

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Doctors say skateboard enthusiasts are breaking bones, scraping skin and brutalizing other parts of their bodies.

James Wallace, 50, of Charlotte, can attest to that.

At the urging of his son, Wallace was becoming a skateboard virtuoso, until he "lost it...going about 120 miles an hour."

He put his front foot out, stumbled, flipped the board up into his mouth and nose, and made a crash landing on his left elbow.

He is now the $7,000 man, thanks to medical bills.

"(The skateboarder's) injury rate is probably the highest of any nonmotorized toy," says Dr. Donald G. Joyce, an orthopedist who treats many skateboard injuries.

The U.S. Product Safety Commission surveyed 119 hospitals across the country and found 1,253 reported in 1975, double the rate in 1974.

Area doctors say most of the serious injuries are fractures of the wrist, forearm or elbow, which occur when the rider is trying to break a fall. Doctors are also seeing head, shoulder and leg injuries.

But doctors say the worst accidents happen to parents.

"Daddy gets on it, gives it a whirl and breaks his fanny," said Dr. Richard Wrenn, a Charlotte orthopedist.

Doctors say the adult injuries are worse because more weight falls farther and harder than for children.
