Greenville Host For State YDC Convention

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Carl Darden of Greenville was installed last night as president of the Young Democrats of North Carolina at a banquet attended by hundreds of Democrats from across the state.

Darden told the Young Democrat Club (YDC) members and candidates that attended, "we become over-confident and complacent at times. I hope we're not becoming complacent now . . ." in light of the August primary.

He urged the YDC members to "get involved in your precincts and we can elect Democrats," in the November general election.

Other state Young Democrat officers installed by Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt at the meeting included Alinda Foote of Winston-Salem, vice-president; Larry Leake of Asheville as national committeeman; Elaine Capps of Dunn as national committee woman' secretary, Nancy Hall of Kinston, and treasurer, Doug Clark of Kenansville.

In addition to the state-wide officers, the chairperson and secretary-treasurer for the 11 congressional districts in the state—including Bill Belk of Kinston (chairperson) and Betsy Brammer of Williamston (secretary-treasurer) from the First District were installed.

North Carolina's junior Senator Robert Morgan was the keynote speaker for the evening. The former state Attorney General, member of the N.C. General Assembly and chairman of Carolina University Board of Trustees stressed his pride in America and in its government, and in politics.

He said "there is probably not a single one of our great American institutions which does not have some inevitable flaw in it. One of them, which has been bothering me a lot lately, is the flaw in our institution of a free press—the fact that only bad news is news."

But the Senator said, "I don't want to suggest that this is a mistake on the part of the press. The inclination of the media to ferret out fraud, misconduct and malfeasance has probably saved this nation more than once. But it is a fact that the by-product is an enveloping atmosphere of negativism which we as a people live and breathe. I think we can be forgiven if we just get tired of it now and then."

Morgan continued, "I am a politician and I am proud to be one. It is an honorable profession, as vital to the American experiment as a free press. We, at every level, serve the country well, and I can say on the basis of my recent visit to the English Parliament, we do so with behavior and good manners that are probably the best in the world."

Saying the members of Congress strive constantly to proceed with dignity and good manners, even in the middle of divided opinions and hot debate, Morgan pointed out that the best way for a Senator to draw the "wholehearted dissapproval" of his colleagues is to get out of hand on the floor of the Senate.

"In fact," he continued," when a senator or congressman does get too rambunctious, it is news—and it is reported in the Congressional Record.

"Worse misconduct gets reported internationally, of course. This is the way things have to be.

"Right now, we have one congressman accused of putting a mistress on the payroll, and we have another one under indictment for allegedly extorting bribes," Morgan noted.

"I can make no comment on the merit of the cases," Morgan said. "But I sure can say they and other cases like them will always be isolated. It grieves me for people to say, in reaction to the Wayne Hays situation, 'I'll bet they all do it.'

"No, they all don't!" the Senator emphasized.

"I was thinking about this on the floor of the Senate this week," he explained. "There I was, with two senators I really admire—Senator Mike Mansfield and Senator Philip Hart. Both of them are retiring after this Congress. And both of them are completely admirable men."

"You can tell a group by the leaders it chooses, and I feel safe in pointing to the leadership of the Democratic Party to show what kind of people we are.

"I don't claim that we as a party or as a people are not going to produce some bad eggs from time to time. But I am certain that if you took the 535 members of Congess" and a like number of businessmen or

House Speaker Carl Albert To Retire At End Of Year

By ELMER LAMMI

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Speaker Carl Albert, 68, announced Saturday he will retire at year's end and go home to Bug Tussle, Okla., raising prospects of a House leadership power struggle during the Wayne Hays sex scandal.

The 5-foot-4 inch Rhodes Scholar with the sing-song drawl said he had served long enough — 30 years in Congress, five as speaker — and had achieved his highest career goal. "My decision," he said, "is irreversible."

His heir apparent for the speaker's chair is Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, the House Democratic leader from Massachusetts. He called Albert "one of the great speakers of all time" and said he had been "maligned" by critics calling him weak.

O'Neill said he would formally announce his own candidacy for speaker on Monday, backed by 165 "unsolicited" endorsements from House members. But White House sources said they expect rivals to give O'Neill a battle.

One possible challenger is Rep. Phillip Burton of California, leader of the House Democratic Caucus. In any event a scramble is certain for the second-ranking position if O'Neill moves up, with Democrats Burton, Richard Bolling of Missouri, John McFall of California the main contenders and several others.

In a retirement announcement released at the Capitol and in Oklahoma, Albert said, "During my leadership, the House has become a more democratic and open institution," and noted he had served for three decades.

"For my part, that is long enough," he said.

At the White House, President Ford called Albert "a very dear friend of mine and I'm of course sorry that he is going to leave public service ... He'll be missed."

30,000 Flee Their Homes

Idaho Dam Collapses

By PETER GILLENS

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — An earth-filled dam as high as a 30-story building collapsed Saturday, spewing a wall of water down the Upper Snake River Valley in a torrent of death and destruction that forced 30,000 persons to flee their homes.

Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus in Boise said the sheriff of Bonneville county (Idaho Falls) estimated loss of life at 150.

The governor urged people still in path of water to stay away from the lowlands.

"This was part of the problem on the upper part of the stream," he said. "They went out to watch it from the banks and ridges and became victims of it."

The governor said he flew over the city of Rexburg and saw water pouring in and out of second story windows.

"The destruction was total devastation," he said.

A newsman who flew over the scene said: "You could actually see the wall of water oozing down the valley. We saw a herd of cattle stampede and run into the wall of water." And a newspaper photographer said, "we saw cows floating, barns moving."

A UPI reporter who flew over the disaster area said the dam was one-third ruined.

"One end of it broke off," he said. "The river cascaded down. In Sugar City I can't see any streets. It looks three feet deep. All farmland is inundated. As far as I can see it is brown ...

"Cattle huddled up on high spots. I didn't see any human activity on the ground. The mud and water was up against the window levels of the homes."

Paul Jenkins of KID-television flew over the area and said:

"You can see some of the tops of trees and that's just about it in some towns ... Sugar City's a bedroom town for Rexburg, and a lot of college professors live there. It's a growing community — or it was."

Bert Fox, a photographer for the Ogden, Utah, Standard-Examiner, said: "It was a river of mud about eight miles wide and 20 miles long. Downtown Rexburg was under water, about a car deep."

Sen Frank Church, D-Idaho, dropped all his presidential campaign plans, and his aides said he would fly to Pocatello Sunday for a personal tour — with the governor — of the disaster zone.

Steve Wade, a public information officer for the Bureau of Reclamation, said in a brief statement at an emergency headquarters set up in Idaho Falls: "We'll be going over it with a fine tooth comb in the days that follow."

Judge Is Porno Fan

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — State Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Charles Galbreath unabashedly says he's an "avid fan" of pornographic literature.

Galbreath endorses the pornographic content of Hustler magazine in a letter printed in its July issue — with his Court of Criminal Appeals letterhead attached.

"As the only appellate judge, to my knowledge, who has officially admitted that he enjoys reading some pornographic literature, I am an avid fan of your young publication," the 50-year-old judge wrote Larry Flynt, Hustler's editor-publisher.

Contacted about the letter, Galbreath explains it stemmed from his "championship of the First Amendment, which includes guarantees of free sexual expression."

Stiff Sentences Given Members Of Drug Ring

By DAN LOHWASSER

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A federal judge handed down stiff prison sentences Saturday to convicted members of an international drug ring that smuggled an estimated $300-million worth of heroin into the country aboard military aircraft.

The alleged ringleader of the gang, 52-year-old Leslie "Ike" Atkinson of Goldsboro, a retired Army sergeant, was sentenced to 25 years in prison and a fine of $50,000 on counts of conspiracy and possession of heroin.

Atkinson and eight others were convicted Friday following a 17-day trial. The tenth defendant in the case, Army Warrant Officer William King Knight, 30, of Washington, D.C., was acquitted.

In handing down the sentences, Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. labeled heroin "a cancer on our social order" and ruled that Atkinson's sentence should run consecutively to a 19-year term he already is serving on another heroin charge.

Dupree noted that all the defendants are blacks, and said it was tragic that "so many of the victims are black people who are disadvantaged to start with."

Convicted with Atkinson on both conspiracy and heroin possession charges were his son-in-law and daughter, Mike and Sharon Atkinson Arrington of Raleigh. Sentencing for the two was put off until Aug. 3 because Mrs. Arrington is due to give birth this month to the couple's first child.

Others sentenced, their terms and fines were: Rudolph Valentino Jennings, 49, of Goldsboro, 10 years and $25,000; William Thomas, 40, of Goldsboro, 15 years and $25,000; Army Sgt. William Kelly Brown, 38, of Augusta, Ga., 10 years and $5,000; Monroe Lorenzo Martin Jr., 43, of Long Beach, Calif., 10 years and $5,000; James McArthur, 40, of Fayetteville, 10 years and $10,000.

Mike and Sharon Arrington will remain free on bonds of $250,000 and $100,000 respectively and Gillis will remain free on a $25,000 bond.

Seven of the nine persons convicted in the case were present or past members of the armed forces.

Lawyers for eight of the defendants said the verdict would be appealed. McArthur's attorney said McArthur did not want to appeal.

Federal officials believe that Atkinson netted nearly $140-million from the $300-million or more of herion smuggled into the country during the six years the ring was in operation.

Drug Enforcement Administration agent Don Ashton said the ring was the largest known to operate between Thailand and the United States.

He said the heroin was made in Thai laboratories and was smuggled into the country in several ways, using the expertise of soldiers stationed in Thailand and the United States.

The final destination, agents believe, were street dealers in New York, Baltimore, Philadelpha, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Atlanta, as well as Goldsboro, Atkinson's home before he began serving his term at the federal penetentiary in Atlanta.

$17.2 Million For Highways

PLYMOUTH, N.C. (UPI) — The state Board of Transportation has set up a program to funnel money to road projects in the state's smaller towns and cities.

Also at its meeting Friday, the panel approved apparent low bids totaling $17.2 million for 35 highway projects in the state.

The program to help the smaller towns will divide about $6 million among the state's 14 highway divisions within the Department of Transportation. Each area will get about $430,000 for approved road projects.

The board was told that the smaller towns have been ignored in the department's long-range plan for funding road projects.

Projects approved for the program ranged from less than $2,000 for one in Robersonville to one of more than $139,000 for a project in Franklin.

The largest of the apparent low bids accepted by the board was $4.62 million to turn U.S. 264 in Nash and Wilson counties into a four-lane highway.

A $3.2 million bid for work on Interstate 4 at Black Mountain north of Asheville was approved by the panel.

The Black Mountain extension will eliminate a major bottleneck through the area where heavy traffic jams occur daily.

Board members also urged continuation of the controversial Wendover Road inner loop project in Charlotte. Local residents have complained that the project would damage into their neighborhood.

More N.C. Women Are Delegates

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Women's groups which have been pushing for more women delegates to the national Democratic convention got a boost Saturday from the state Democratic party nominating committee.

Out of 15 at-large delegates recommended by the committee, 10 were women. Six of those women will be pledged to Jimmy Carter and four will be pledged to George Wallace on first balloting at the New York convention.

Out of 10 alternate delegates recommended, two women were pledeged to Carter and two were chosen for Wallace.

Last week several potential white male delegates, led by former Gov. Robert Scott, asked that their names be withdrawn

Two Doctors To Man Emergency Room

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Two physicians have been contracted by Pitt Memorial Hospital for a project that will ultimately lead to full-time coverage of the medical centers emergency room.

Hospital administrator Jack Richardson said Dr. Howard Gradis of Greenville and Dr. Julian Coleman of Jacksonville will begin their duties in the hospital's emergency room at salaries set at $50,000 per year.

"We have two physicians to work full time at the hospital, beginning July 1," Richardson said. "To give us full time coverage like we would like to provide, we need four physicians."

Richardson said Gradis and Coleman will provide "limited coverage", while administrators are "trying to develop a schedule" using volunteers from the hospital staff. "This means we'll have gaps in full time coverage," the administrator said, until two additional full-time medical doctors can be hired. "We are continuing to look," he said.

Both Richardson and Gradis, who will be Director of Emergency Room Services, emphasized that the hospital's emergency room is for emergencies only.

"We want to encourage the public to continue to visit their family doctors rather than use the emergency room as an outpatient clinic or alternate to using their local physician," Richardson said.

"This is an emergency room and we're going to be treating emergencies only," Gradis said. "If it gets stacked up," with non-emergency cases, "we can't take care of emergency patients like we should."

Gradis said, "The important thing for people to recognize is that the emergency room is not just another clinic for people who don't have a doctor or are mad at their doctor or don't want to wait (in an office). It's got to be for the acutely ill and emergency patients."

The new emergency room director said, "We are limited by space" at the present hospital, explaining, "we are sort of getting ready to be able to operate at maximum efficiency when we get into the new emergency room."

Gradis is giving up his private practice in general surgery to take the hospital post. A Cleveland, Ohio, native, Gradis came to Greenville in 1950 and opened his office in 1951—the same day the "new" hospital opened.

Coleman, a Kinston native, has practiced in several areas of the country both as an anesthesiologist and as an emergency room physician. He has been an emergency room physician at an Onslow County hospital for the past year.

Committee To Study Idea Of Elected Schoolboard

Mayor Percy Cox appointed a three-member committee Thursday night to study possible procedures for an elected school board in the city and to make suggestions for the City Council to consider.

Cox, in appointing Council members Mrs. Mildred McGrath, the Rev. William Hadden and Dr. Frank Fuller to the committee, asked that they have their report ready by Sept. 1.

City Manager Jim Caldwell explained during the Council meeting that the board could elect to draw up an amendment to the local act that created the city school board or have an amendment introduced in the 1977 General Assembly.

Mrs. McGrath said that she felt the committee should also look into the matter of merging the city and county school boards.

Cox said that, "I don't know if we are ready for that yet." He noted that the merger situation could be studied and brought back for consideration at a later date.

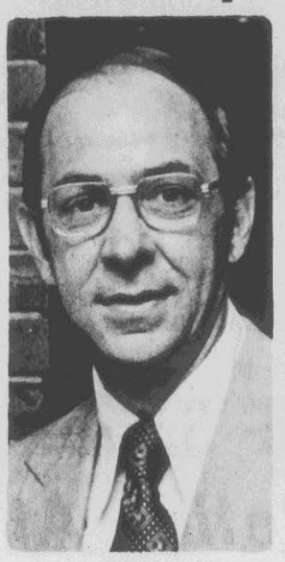

Several key appointments were made by the Council during the meeting, including the selection of Miles Frost to fill the seat on the Greenville City School Board vacated by Dr. Badger Clark, and naming of Bobby Pettis to the board seat vacated by Lester E. Turnage. Clark resigned from the school board and Turnage declined to accept another term.

Resolutions of appreciation were authorized to be sent to both retiring members of the school board for their service.

Councilmen Clarence Gray nominated local mortician Donovan Phillips for the seat vacated by Turnage but Pettis received the appointment in a vote of the board.

D. C. Wade Jr. was appointed as a first alternate on the Greenville Board of Adjustments. The position of second alternate on the board was held in abeyance until a later date.

Gen. William Lee Honored

DUNN, N.C. (UPI) — Nearly two dozen of the nation's military leaders — past and present — will be on hand today for the official unveiling of a marble statue commemorating Gen. Willaim C. Lee, who introduced the use of American parachute troops during World War II.

Thousands of area residents also are expected at the ceremonies to honor Lee, a native of Dunn who planned the airborne startegy for the D-Day invasion of Normandy on June 6, 1944.

Dunn Mayor Abe Elmore said it was appropriate to dedicate the $12,000 statue, carved in Carrara, Italy, on the 22nd anniversary of the invasion and during the Bicentennial year.

"General Lee has been honored around the world, but his hometown up until now has done very little," Elmore said. "We think it's time that this distinguished native received this hometown tribute."

Lee created Americans first paratrop division, later known as the 101st Airborne Division. The airborne philosophy he developed is still used today.

A heart attack prevented him from taking an active role in the D-Day invasion, but paratroopers remembered him by yelling "Bill Lee" instead of the customary "Geronimo" as they leaped from their planes.

Mrs. William Lee, the military hero's widow, got a friend to drive her downtown Tuesday to get an early peek of the commemorative carving.

"I am crazy about the statue," Mrs. Lee said. "And I'm looking forward to seeing so many old friends."

Besides thousands of Dunn natives expected to attend the unveiling, other "old friends" will include Gen. Mark Clark, former commander of the 5th Army; Gen. Hugh P. Harris, former commander of the 7th Army, and Lt. Gen. Henry E. Emerson, commander at Fort Bragg.

Morgan Wants Delegate Chairmanship

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., Saturday said he wants to be chosen chairman of the North Carolina delegation to the national Democratic convention.

Morgan was one of 15 persons recommended Saturday as an at-large delegate pledged to Jimmy Carter. A state Democratic convention next weekend at Raleigh will have to approve the recommendations made by a state Democratic nominating committee.

Morgan said as a senator he would be the logical choice to head the delegation since the state has a Republican governor.

Lt. Governor Candidates Spoke At Forum Here

By BETTY HATCH
Reflector Staff Writer

Seven of the ten candidates for lieutenant governor spoke Saturday afternoon at an open forum held at the Holiday Inn.

The forum, was attended by Herbert L. Hyde, Waverly Akins, Kathryne McRacken, James Green, Frank Stephenson, Jr,. Howard Lee and John M. Jordan, all Democrats.

After each delivered a two-minute address, the panel was questioned by members of the audience.

The first to speak was Waverly Akins, a former FBI special agent and Wake County Commissoner. Akins is a native of Fuquay-Varina.

"I am very concerned about the direction this state has taken over the past ten years," said Akins, an East Carolina University graduate. Akins listed North Carolina's main problems as lack of industrial development, the fastest growing crime rate in the nation and the lowest industrial wages in the nation.

James Green, Speaker of the N. C. House of Representatives, stressed his experience as an eight-term General Assembly member.

"I represent a person who has served with both branches of the General Assembly," said Green. "We need to continue to provide the very highest level of services possible while maintaining fiscal responsibility."

"I have been trying to tell the people in this state of the need for education" stated Herbert Hyde, of Asheville, now serving his second term in the N.C. House of Representatives. He emphasized the need for equal opportunity in education, for an improved criminal justice system and for lower utility rates. Hyde has also served one term in the N.C. Senate.

John M. Jordan of Saxapahaw, a N.C. Representative for Alamance and Rockingham Counties, praised Eighth District Representatives Sam D. Bundy of Farmville and Horton Rountree of Greenville for their legislative work.

"While we have here a tremendous state with many accomplishments, there is still much more that has to be done," said Howard Lee, mayor of Chapel Hill for the past six years. He suggested good leadership as the key to a future of better-paying jobs and tax reform. Lee added that he would support the party's nominee, although he would prefer to see the "Lee cavalry" sweep the state.

A Red Springs teacher, Mrs. Kathryne McRacken, expressed her belief that "only through education can North Carolina go forward." The existing 25 per cent illiteracy rate should be destroyed, she said, and "all children should be taught a marketable skill to attract industry." She noted that better jobs and higher living standards can be brought about only by a better educational system.

Frank Stephenson, Jr., of Murfreesboro has served as Director of Admissions at Chowan College for ten years.

"I have traveled an average of 50,000 to 60,000 miles in this state every year for the past ten years," he explained, "I have seen the educational system from the inside. As lieutenant governor, I would be out across North Carolina working with communities in education."

Stephenson noted that one of the lieutenant governor's duties is membership on the N.C. Board of Education.

When questioned by the audience, some of the candidates spoke out against a recent legislative attempt to deprive the lieutenant governor of power to appoint committees and committee chairman.

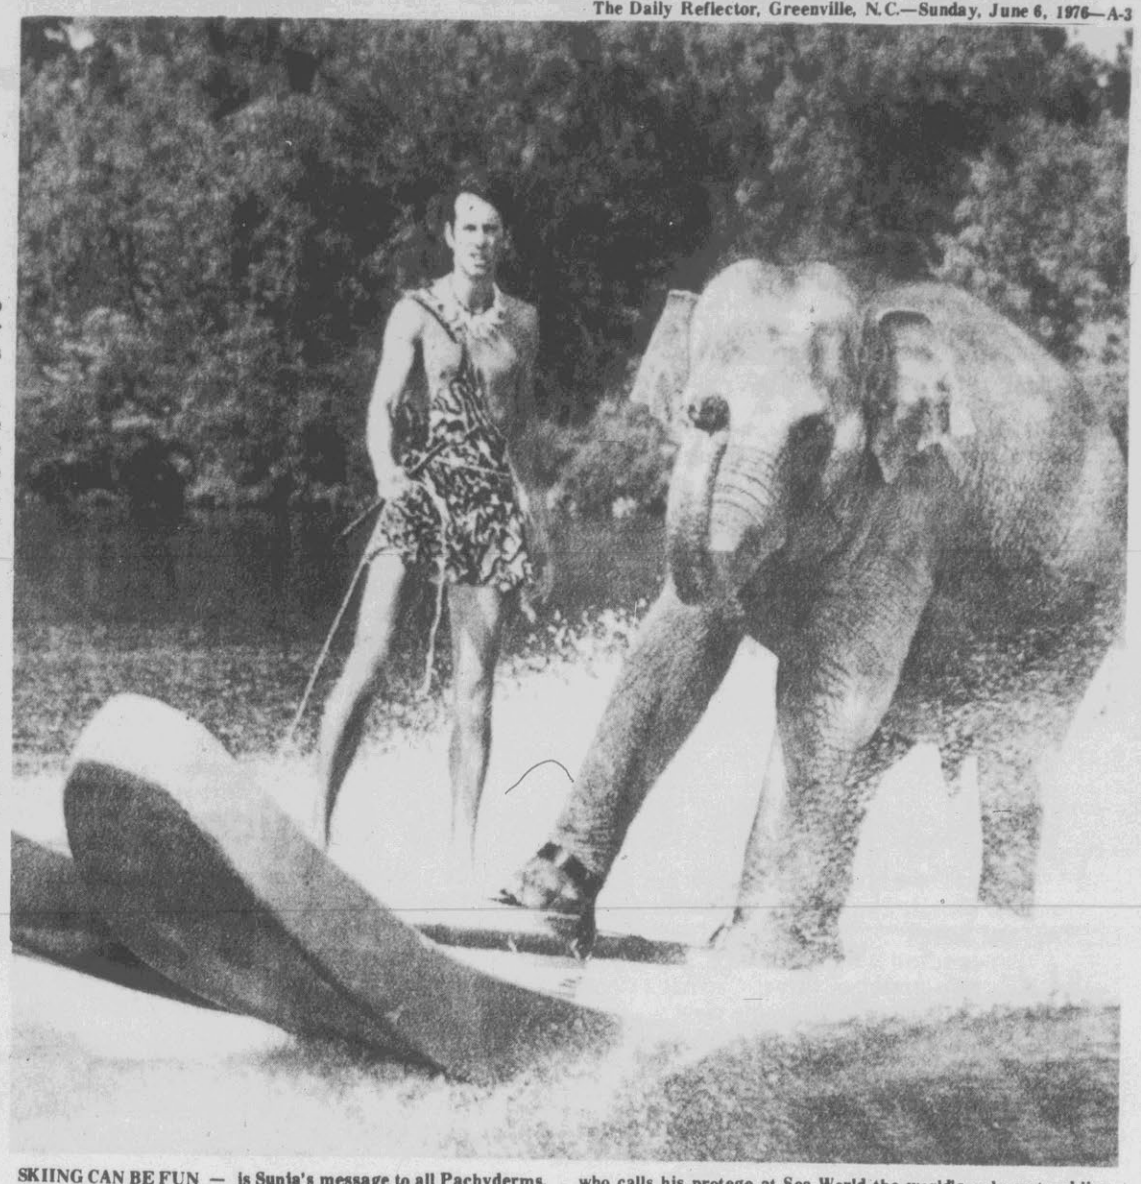

"A January poll showed that 65 per cent of the people of the state are opposed to this because it means taking power from the people," said Akins. "We need to strengthen the power of the executive and legislative branches of government."

"I am opposed to stripping the office of these appointive powers," Stephenson declared. "If it is stripped, the budget and staff should be reduced, and the office moved back to the Capitol from the Legislature Building."

"I am not opposed to changing the system," said Jordan. "I am opposed to changing it now but not in four years."

In response to another question, Green said he considers education "the number one priority in this state." He added that over 70 per cent of the total tax dollar is spent on education

"Public education in North Carolina is in serious trouble today," Stephenson suggested. He listed pay raises for teachers and better school supervision and discipline as possible solutions.

Oppose's Syrian Invasion

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Saturday the United States had not been consulted about Syria's invasion of Lebanon and opposed it.

Kissinger flew to New York for talks with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim devoted largely to the Middle East.

"We were not consulted on the latest military moves in Lebanon," he said after the meeting.

Egypt Closes Syrian Embassy

CAIRO (UPI) — Egypt ordered withdrawal of its entire diplomatic mission from Damascus and the closing of the Syrian embassy in Cairo, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Saturday.

Members of the Syrian embassy staff were asked to leave Egypt within 48 hours for their own safety, the spokesman said.

He said Egypt took the measures following an attack on its embassy in Damascus earlier in the day by hundreds of students who burned furniture and beat up some embassy officials.

Israelis Clash With Arabs

NABLUS, Israeli-occupied Jordan (UPI) — Israeli troops clashed Saturday with bottlethrowing, tire-burning teen-age Arabs demonstrating on the anniversary of the start of the 1967 Middle East war which ended in the Israeli occupation.

It was the only trouble reported on the West Bank of Jordan, where nine Arabs have died and dozens more have been injured in recent waves of anti-Israeli violence.

Witnesses said baton-swinging troops broke up a procession of teen-aged Arabs who marched up and down the main street of Nablus, carrying the Palestine Liberation Organization flag and chanting anti-Israeli slogans.

Says Wreck May Possibly Murder

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The auto wreck that took the life of Karen Silkwood may have been murder, according to a journalist who says documents she's seen suggest Miss Silkwood — a nuclear plant processing employe — was carrying information on the blackmarketing of plutonium when she died.

Mrs. Jacque Srouji, who was fired by the Nashville Tennessean because of her special connections with the FBI, also says she has seen evidence suggesting that plutonium stolen from U.S. nuclear plants is being sold to foreign nations.

KKK To Give Black Man $1,000

LAKE WALES, Fla. (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan will give $1,000 to a black man next week for his work in helping law enforcement officials crack the Central Florida ski-mask terrorist case, a Klan official said Saturday.

John Paul Rogers, grand dragon for the United Klans of Florida, said his group will give the check to Sam Coleman, a former convict who served as an undercover agent for the Florida Department of Criminal Law Enforcement.

farmers and forced them to open up their lives the way politicians do, "we would come out on top.

"I wish you would speak out, the next time you hear politics dismissed as a 'dirty business'. "Morgan added." I tell you what's that truth—it bothers me no end to see them media focusing on one example of abrasiveness and alleged dishonesty, while Make Mansfield and Phil Hart, who are both epitomies of gentleness and honesty, move so quietly into retirement without much notice."

According to the Senator, each member of Congress "must spend his career laboring in one or two specialties of law and government . . . mostly out of the light of publicity. We get asked, of course, for our opinions on the transitory events of the day—but our real work is likely to go mostly without press coverage unless something happens to make it news."

Morgan concluded by saying "Americans will have responsible and effective government because they have a genius for it which has not left them for 200 years now. You are demonstrating, by being here tonight and by laboring at the local level for your candidates, that this genius is still being exercised.

"But I am convinced we as a people cannot govern ourlselves according to the habits of exaggeration and negativism.

"It is true the government has gotten out of hand at times; imperfect laws have been passed at times; the people's money has been wasted at times.

"But it would be wrong to exaggerate the size of our mistakes in governing ourselves. Contrary to the present exaggerated notion, Congress is not a bunch of fanatics passing hastily-drawn legislation for the deliverate ruination of freedom and enterprise."

In addition to the installation of officers, a number of awards were presented.

Outstanding Young Democrats in the state were named. These and their home counties are: Sally Howard, Cabarrus; Evelyn Davis, Cleveland; Larry Hoyle, Lincoln; Frances Porter, Forsyth; John Privette, Pitt; Judy Hipps, Haywood; Martha Lowrance, Guilford; Vance Barron, Guilford; and Nelson Connor, Cleveland.

The Wake County YDC was named the outstanding Young Democrat club in the state, while the UDC at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill was given the award as the outstanding college club in the state.

Employees Unpaid

EDENTON, N.C. (AP) — "I have people who are hungry right now," because the 10-county Albemarle Regional Planning and Development Commission has't paid its 350 employes for the last two weeks, says Ray Beckler, the acting director.

W. Speight Burris, an auditor from Elizabeth City, says "sloppy bookkeeping" over a long period is responsible for the financial crisis. "There were accounts transferred between accounts and not paid back," he wrote to the federal Economic Development Administraton. "Some of the accounts would show surpluses and some would show deficits."

The commission funnels more than $1 million in local, state and federal funds to local agencies annually. Manpower and family-planning are its largest programs. It is an economic planning agency for the 10 eastern North Carolina counties of Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hyde, Pasauotank, Perquimans, Tyrrel and Washington.

Syrians Establish Hqs. In Lebanese Foothills

By DOYLE McMANUS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian forces set up a headquarters in the foothills of Mount Lebanon Saturday and dug in frontline positions for an apparent extended stay. Moslem leftists appealed to the U.N. for help in getting the Syrians to leave.

Moslem Leftist and Palestinian leaders met under Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt and sent an appeal to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim saying the Syrians were "preparing a horrible massacre" and asking his help in getting the Syrian troops out of Lebanon.

UPI correspondent Michael Ross toured the Syrian-held Bekaa and reported that the occupying army set up a headquarters at the Lebanese air base at Riyak, 14 miles from their forward positions in the Mount Lebanon foothills and 34 miles east of Beirut.

Jeeps and armored personnel carriers roared up and down the roads leading into the base and bulldozers dug roadside emplacements for the two dozen tanks stationed in the immediate area.

Maj. Mahmoud Mattar, an officer in the Syrian-sponsored "Vanguard of the Lebanese Arab Army"—a new group the Syrians have formed from Lebanese forces they overtook in their advance—explained Damascus' strategy.

The Syrians' aim, Mattar told Ross, is "to move slowly, neutralizing areas first by a show of force, then by a threat of force and as a last resort by using force sternly."

Farther south in the Bekaa, a leftist soldier manning a roadblock admitted that if the Syrians attacked his position, "we would ask them to turn back. But if they insisted, well, we'd have to surrender."

The leftist parties asked Waldheim "to intervene immediately to stop the invasion of our country and demand the withdrawal of the Syrian forces."

"This military invasion has taken place without any legal justification and without any request from a responsible Lebanese authority," the message to Waldheim said.

"Instead of restoring order, this (Syrian) army is preparing a horrible massacre of the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples," the message said.

(At the U.N., Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger conferred with Waldheim and said afterwards that the United States did not know in advance of Syria's invasion of Lebanon and that Washington opposed it. Kissinger said U.S. policy "has been to oppose outside intervention.")

Jumblatt also said he had conferred by telephone with Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat, Libyan Premier Abdel Salam Jalloud and Algerian and Iraqi officials, and that a "tripartite delegation" would fly to Damascus to plead the leftists' case. He did not specify who would be included in the delegation.

The 12,000 Syrian Army regulars occupying the broad eastern Bekaa valley and the northern Akkar region dug into their positions but made no move to advance further against the leftist forces who have so far retreated before every Syrian move.

POW's May Be Alive

PARIS (AP) — A North Vietnamese diplomat hinted some American prisoners of war may still be alive in Southeast Asia, the commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Paris reported today.

The commander, Beon G. Turrou, quoted First Secretary Do Thanh of the North Vietnamese Embassy as saying Hanoi has information about a missing pilot from Michigan and "about many other things."

Turrou said he thought "this intimated that some POWs may be there," meaning still alive and jailed in Southeast Asia.

The pilot, U.S. Air Force Capt. Robert L. Tucci, was shot down over Laos in 1969 and now is the object of a search by a VFW post in Fraser, Mich.

Turrou said Do Thanh reiterated that Hanoi would not supply any information on the Americans — either MIAs or POWs — until the United States made a conciliatory economic gesture toward North Vietnam, presumably meaning war reparations.

City Budget Should Be Studied

The City Council has received a proposed 1976-77 budget of $30,390,041 from City Manager Jim Caldwell.

The budget includes $6,329,546 for municipal government operations and $24,060,495 for Greenville Utilities. The city's funds come from ad valorum taxes, state funds, some federal revenue sharing and various other sources. The Utilities budget, of course, is met largely from revenues generated by the sale of electricity, water and gas, and the sewer charge.

Under the proposed budget the tax rate would be raised by four cents. It was 60 cents per $100 evaluation in 1975-76 and the increase would put it back to the 64 cents rate which was in effect in 1974-75.

If the increase in the tax rate is finally approved by the City Council the extra four cents will raise approximately $113,600 in new funds.

The proposed budget submitted by City Manager Caldwell seems to be strongly an operational one. He says the budget includes only $85,250 for capital improvement projects.

"While most General Fund expenditures are above the current year's budget and estimate, this reflects increased personnel services due to merit increases, higher cost of supplies and materials and increasing utilities," Caldwell said.

A major new area of municipal service to be financed is the public transportation system. Cost for this in the next fiscal year is proposed at $81,845. This continues the city's committment to the planned bus transit system.

Of major concern is the prospect that revenue sharing funds will run out before the end of the fiscal year, since Congress has not yet acted to renew this program.

All-in-all the proposed budget doesn't seem inflated for a city with a growth such as Greenville is experiencing. Nevertheless, the council and the city manager should study the proposed expenditures carefully. Reductions — no matter how small — that would not harm the city's overall programs should be made.

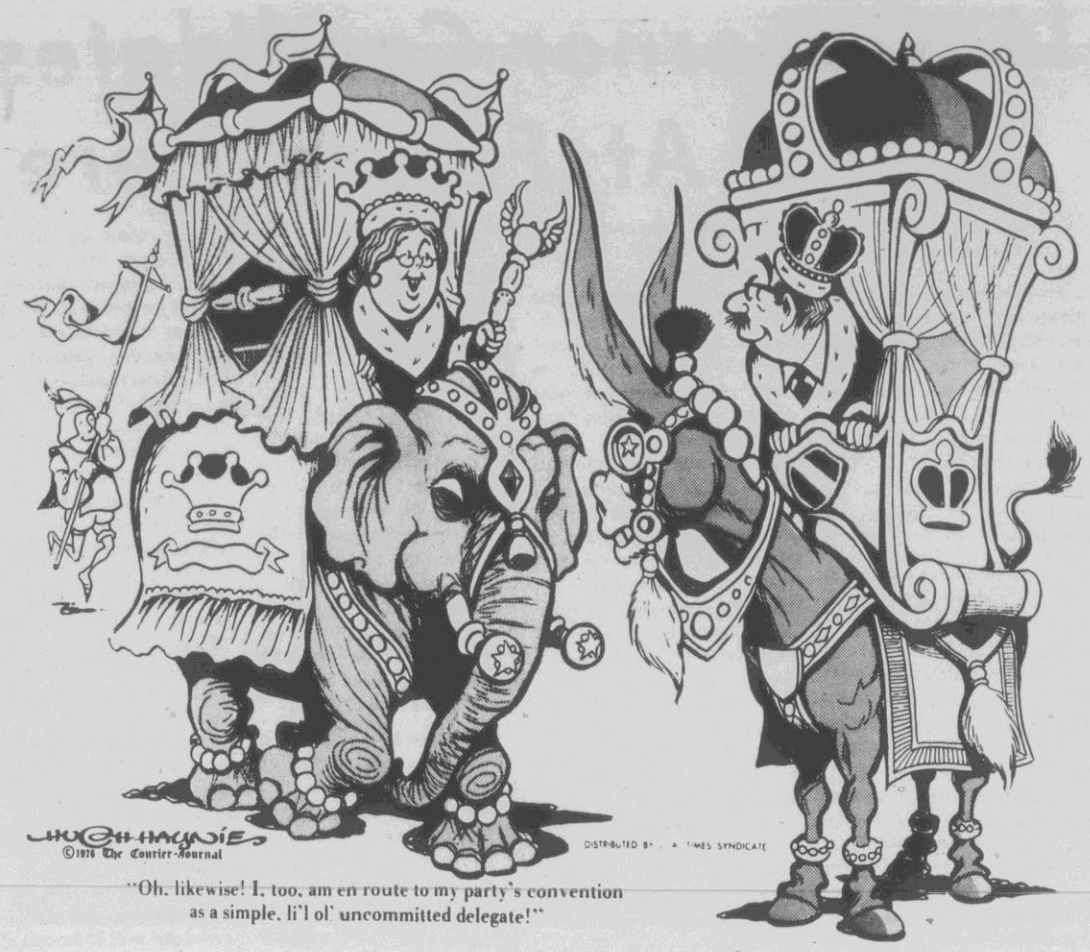

'Wellcome' Is Charming Choice

The Pitt County board of education has named the new Belvoir-Stokes-Pactolus Middle School Wellcome School.

The new school is being built on U.S. 13 opposite the N.C. 903 intersection virtually within a stone's throw of the Burroughs-Wellcome plant.

The name honors the pharmaceutical facility, which has become such an important part of our community, and its founder.

We like the name of the school. Not only is it a nice way to honor this unique industry, but it will also readily identify the location of the new school.

"Oh, likewise! I, too, am en route to my party's convention as a simple, li'l ol' uncommitted delegate!"

School Law Leaves Gap

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — North Carolina's compulsory school attendance law was designed primarily to keep teenagers in school. You can't drop out until 16.

But with continuing importance attached to early childhood education, the law has a problem at the bottom as well.

That means attendance in first grade and public school kindergarten, now geared to go full coverage for the first time next September, is voluntary.

Hardly any states make kindergarten enrollment mandatory and school officials expect it will be a long time before North Carolina considers such a course.

Other Concern

The close relationship between public school kindergarten and the state's new early childhood screening program could, however, speed public concern over the need for some mandatory provisions.

The object of early childhood screening is to spot and correct emotional, mental, or physical learning problems early.

Planners even now are working on ways to tie together the screening of four-year-olds by the Department of Human Resources and enrollment in kindergarten in the public school system under jurisdiction of the Department of Public Instruction.

If early diagnosis and correction of problems is supposed to result in more successful experiences in school, then the link is obvious.

But the screening program, as well, is voluntary and requires parent initiative.

What worries a lot of experts is the fact that the very children most likely to be found with potential learning problems needing attention are also the ones most likely to have parents who do not voluntarily take the initiative to participate in the screening program or even public school kindergarten.

Why Bother?

State Senator Ralph Scott, D-Alamance, is the brother of a governor (Kerr), and the uncle of another (Bob), and widely held a man of ability and popularity on his own sufficient to have been governor.

Asked recently why he never made the bid, the Senator snorted, "Why should I bother . . . I've done everything I wanted to." Naturally, by his connections, years of experience, and postion as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee which controls all state spending, "Uncle Ralph" exercises more effective power than even the governor, in many instances.

That particular post—and the power which goes with it—is another backstage arena involved in the effort to change the method of appointment of senate committee members and chairman.

Removing that prerogative from the lieutenant governor and vesting it rather in some form of seniority system control by a special committee could mean that a particularly ambitious legislator with senior experience could preside over state spending via the budget process for a good many years.

Why should such a person need to be governor when by reason of the power and knowledge gained over many years as chairman under "seniority" rules, he would out-muscle our state's weak governor who lacks veto or right to run for a second term.

With a new lieutenant governor every four years who can name his own chairman, the odds of such power being extended are slim.

Sunday Morning Notes

If members of the Cox family ever decide to buy monogrammed luggage as a group, there had better be plenty of Zs available.

The children of Biggs and Jutry Jemimah Hart Cox will be gathering in Winterville today for a family reunion. In addition to being brothers and sisters, they all have something else in common—a given name beginning with Z.

There was no particular reason for the Z names, although the family joke is that the parents didn't have much else to give the children so they decided on the unusual initial.

At any rate, you might say this is Z-Day in Winterville.

Dr. Lloyd Elliot, president of the George Washington University was speaker at the 67th East Carolina University commencement exercises last week.

As is proper, he was introduced by Dr. Leo Jenkins, ECU chancellor.

Dr. Elliot thanked the chancellor for his introduction, but, he said, he had a better one once.

Scheduled to speak at one graduation, Elliot said. "The fellow who was to introduce me didn't come so I had to introduce myself."

The condemnation of Third Street School has created a problem for Margaret Register, Pitt Board of Elections secretary.

It seems the school is used as the polling place for Greenville precinct No. 3; thus if school can't be held in the condemned building neither can the elections.

"Yeah," laughed the owner as he took a look. "It's a quail. I couldn't have found one in the entire county, if I had been hunting."

Summer Is A Bore

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Millions of children are about to put their books aside and start summer vacation, but one educator says they'd rather stay in school because learning is fun and sitting in the sun at the ol' fishing hole can be a bore.

"The modern school has become so stimulating and interesting that summer can be a letdown to a child," Dr. Bradley Loomer, a professor of education at the University of Iowa, said in an interview.

He estimated 80 per cent of America's children enjoy school more than their parents did and don't relish vacation as much.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Vindictive Politics

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A vein of vindictiveness in the man most likely to be the next President of the United States was uncovered in Cleveland Memorial Day when a beaming Jimmy Carter greeted with total delight the news that Sen. George McGovern had fired two young political aides.

Although the smoking gun has not been found, insiders familiar with Democratic politics do not doubt that Carter caused the Memorial Day mini-massacre. He has long wanted McGovern to get rid of indefatigable left-wing political operative Alan Baron as his press secretary. The other dismissed McGovern aide, legislative assistant Jack Quinn, was the victim of shrapnel from the direct hit on Baron.

Baron's absence from McGovern's payroll cannot make the slightest difference to Carter's highly probably nomination. What matters is that the incident tends to support claims by Carter's old enemies back in Georgia that his admirable intelligence, discipline and dedication are accompanied by vindictiveness extraordinary even for a politician.

This was displayed two weeks earlier when objections from Carter caused an old Georgia political foe, former Gov. Carl Sanders, to quit a seat on the national platform committee. Although Sanders could not do Carter any damage today, he is at least a peer who lost the brutal 1970 campaign for governor to Carter. Alan Baron, 32, is but an obscure staff-level operative. Nevertheless, his persistent year-long opposition has inflamed Carter's wrath all out of proportion to Baron's meager effectiveness. The irrationality makes the reaction all the more disturbing.

Baron began to suspect that Carter was making trouble for him late in March when Sen. McGovern called him in for a heart-to-heart chat. McGovern revealed that his former campaign manager, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, had advised that Baron was too far to the left for McGovern's image (advice denied to us by Hart).

To Baron, it was more than coincidental that this followed two events: first, Baron urging liberals to dissuade Hart from endorsing Carter; second, Baron publicly quoting McGovern as saying Carter sought to be his running-mate in 1972, a direct contradiction of Carter's disavowal.

When Baron told friends that he was No. 1 on Carter's enemy list, it seemed boastful exaggeration. But confirmation came from Jimmy Carter. Campaigning in New York, Carter called Baron one of his bitterest political enemies. A few days after McGovern's heart-to-heart chat with Baron, Carter told a reporter he was confident McGovern would soon fire Baron.

It did not happen that soon, but liberals close to McGovern considered Baron a cooked goose — not for lack of competency and not for lack of compatability with McGovern. "The Carter people were pressuring George," one McGovernite explained to us.

The Carter camp was outraged by recent news accounts of the two McGovern aides attending two not-so-secret meetings of the sputtering stop-Carter coalition (one held in Baron's Washington apartment). The last straw was Baron being quoted in the New York Times of Sunday, May 30, calling Carter "a positive evil, surrounded by a staff committed to no ideals, like Haldeman and Ehrlichman."

That night McGovern telephoned Baron in Cleveland, where he was helping Rep. Morris Udall's campaign against Carter in the Ohio primary. McGovern told Baron there was a "fire storm" of protests against his and Jack Quinn's participation in the stop-Carter coalition; he would have to fire Quinn. Baron obtained McGovern's promise, however, not to do anything

Other Editors Say We'll Remember

(The Raleigh Times)

Dying on Memorial Day morning was not far from appropriate for Martha Mitchell. Psychologically she was surely the first casualty, and among the unfairest, of the bloodless trauma of Watergate.

Liberation for women came too late to help Martha, a survivor from another place and time. Back in Pine Bluff and later at the party-school University of Miami, "girls" were expected to pretty themselves up, chatter entertainingly, and not think too heavily. These Martha did, but the protective male umbrella she supposed to be the other half of the bargain blew inside out in the harsh winds of new times and troubles.

When we sophisticates were mad at Martha for wanting to crucify Fulbright or ride to the defense of Nixon's court nominees, we dismissed her with contempt as superficial. When she said she didn't bow to England's queen because Americans shouldn't, we were to startled to agree. When she complained that no one would believe what she knew about Watergate, we wondered—but thought she was paranoid for hinting she'd been bullied into silence.

Then the trees in the forest, in James McCord's memorable phrase, began to fall. And sympathy for Martha, perhaps no fairer than the earlier contempt, awoke. When her husband, the disgraced attorney general, abandoned her with no money, sympathy grew. It peaked this month when we heard she was gravely ill and without funds. But there was no noticable outpouring of money or love for Martha even then.

Now she is dead, of an agonizing disease, at 57. Perhaps the epitaph "Last of the Southern Girls" fits Martha better than it ever fit Raleigh's much more up-to-date Barbara Howar. Southern girls are no longer so defenceless as Martha Mitchell, and it's a good thing.

We are sorry that of all those who strutted and fretted on the Watergate stage, Martha had to be the first to die. She didn't deserve it. She had long since lost gaiety, careless banter, parties, power, and love. And without these, life can't have meant much.

But we hope someone will put roses on her grave.

40 Years Ago Today

June 6, 1936

Republican rivalries grew more tense today as a variety of opposition camps fought strenously to undermine the mounting claims of the supporters of Alf Landon.

Sharp words poured in upon the Landonites, who overnight had boosted their estimates of the Kansas governor's first ballot strength at next week's convention to 400 votes. That would be only 102 short of the number needed for a first-ballot nomination.

For the most part, the disposition of the Landon managers was to accept the attacks without retaliation. Talk of trying to force a first ballot choice quieted somewhat as friends of the Kansan sought to calm the storm and to assure all rivals they would have a run for their money.

Nevertheless, the Landon claim of 400 votes drew immediate sharp replies from both the Know and Borah camps and was followed in a few hours by circulation of an unsigned handbill urging the delegates to "look the field over."

PASSING FANCY

Traffic experts tell us that one of the most frequent causes of death on the highway is the motorist with a compulsive desire to pass everyone else on the road.

It is also true that on the pathway of life many a traffic wreck occurs because of the vaulting ambition of some people to get ahead of everyone else. Some people wind up in jail because they are not willing to stay in line and take life's rewards as they come. But quite apart from those criminally inclined, there is a multitude of people who want to surpass others by weilding power, accumulating money, achieving high position. In the process they exceed the speed limits, break all the rules of the road, and often involve themselves and others in fatal traffic collisions.

Overseas Job May Be Frustrating

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're dreaming of one day taking an overseas management job at a fabulous income you may run into more frustration than you would have had a few years ago. The bloom may be off the rose.

Executive search firms here say that in some instances Americans have priced themselves out of the market, and that many foreign countries also have made such jobs far less attractive.

"My searches have been considerably more difficult than a year ago," said Howard Johnson, a searcher.

Until recently, he said, an American middle management executive with specific experience needed by Arab nations might seek and obtain twice and even three times the $22,000 to $42,000 salary he was being paid here.

With that income would come other benefits, including long home leaves, sometimes with expense-paid stopovers on the Riviera. "An American could come back in two years with a nest egg it would take 10 years to build here," he said.

Now, said Johnson, director of Middle East recruiting for the search firm of Eastman and Beaudine, the Arabs are turning to British managers, who are willing to work for only a fraction of American demands.

While the Arabs have great respect and probably preference for American technical and mangerial skills, he said, they also respect managers from Britain, where many upper class Arabs were educated.

At the same time, American corporations operating in Europe are finding it more expensive to staff their operations with Americans. Many have brought executives home and others are said to be considering doing so.

Replacing the Americans are native European managers who have closed the gap in managerial abilities by working in U.S. companies and by attending some of the European business schools opened since the mid-1960s.

Herman Warmbold, an officer in the firm of Staub, Warmbold & Associates International, believes the days may be over when an American company in Europe could inexpensively staff its operations with Americans.

Until about 1972, he explained, the dollar was high in buying power, but that advantage waned with devaluations. Moreover, inflation raged in Europe.

Rising taxes added further to expenses. For years after World War II many European nations were anxious to have American troops within their borders, and thus gave the military and other Americans partial relief from taxes.

Gradually, however, Europeans began to protest the tax advantages enjoyed by Americans. In the late 1960s and early in this decade several countries moved to bring taxation of Americans into line with that of natives.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

"Majority Rule!"

With this ringing slogan the International Revolutionaries and well intentioned dupes have signaled the demise of another nation. In this instance little Rhodesia is apparently a threat to "lasting world peace" through its practice of minority rule. I suppose we will soon read in print that this friend of the West has been lovingly liberated from the scourage of capitalism and self government.

Surprisingly, the U. S. through its Secretary of State has announced it will apply whatever pressure necessary, short of direct military aid, in helping rid the African continent of the last vestiges of a democratically governed country. How nice! In order to pacify a few African dictators in the name of justice and world peace, the American public is being asked to acquiesce in one more tragic Kissinger sacrifice. In other words, give them all of Africa (Asia, South America and Europe, too) and this benevolence will finally satisfy their powerful appetites. Neville Chamberlain tried the very same psychology on Adolf Hitler some 35 years ago and if my memory serves me correctly, that rendition of Statesmanship didn't bring world peace either.

If you look at the African continent in perspective you will discover that 32 of its countries are virtual dictatorships. By most reasonable and fair minds this is a far cry from the majority rule concept. Who elected the recently formed government of Angola? How many votes did it require for Kenneth Kaunda to select himself "dictator-for-life" of Zambia?

To carry this all one step further, why not majority rule in Russia, that cradle of freedom and self government? Closer home, where is the ground swell of demand for majority rule in Castro's Cuba?

Even Stokey Carmichael, civil rights firebrand of the 60's, on his return from personal exile in Africa, declared Rhodesia and South Africa provided the most freedom and opportunity of all the countries of Africa.

Anyway, goodbye, Rhodesia. South Africa, you're next.

Headlines On Surgery Not Quite All They Said

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

CHICAGO— Back in January, the report of a House subcommittee headed by John E. Moss of California made some sensational headlines. This was understandable, because the subcommittee made some sensational findings. Its report dealt with "unnecessary surgery" in the United States.

"The report indicates that unnecessary surgery has deleterious effects upon the American public. It estimates there were approximately 2.4 million unnecessary surgeries performed in 1974 at a cost to the American public of almost $4 billion, and it further estimates that these unnecessary surgeries led to 11,900 deaths last year."

These figures were what an old city editor used to call "three-alarm figures." The subcommittee report sent up great clouds of ominous smoke. For a few days, until other alarms had to be covered, the report was page-one news. The inference widely drawn from the report— it was the inference meant to be drawn — is that surgeons are little more than knife-happy butchers, eager to carve up any prospective patient with money to pay a fat fee.

Now the American Medical Association has come up with a stringing critique of the subcommittee report. Sad to say, for a string critique of the subcommittee report. Sad to say, for such is the nature of news, the AMA critique has run no firebells at all. One sensational charge is worth two reproachful denials. Because the subcommittee's findings and estimates got so much publicity, the AMA's reply merits at least a few column inches.

Go back to the three-alarm figures: 2.4 million "unnecessary" surgeries, imposing almost $4 billion in unnecessary costs, resulting in 11,900 unnecessary deaths. According to the AMA, none of the figures is valid.

Take the first figure. The subcommittee came up with its sensational charge of 2.4 million unnecessary surgeries in 1974 by first estimating that 14 million patients underwent surgical operations in that year. In a bewildering shuffle of terminology, the report then confused "surgical operations" with "surgical procedures," which are not the same thing at all. The subcommittee then decided "to use 17 percent as the rate of unnecessary surgical procedures."

Where did the subcommittee get the 17 percent? This figure was drawn primarily from a study by Dr. Eugene G. McCarthy of elective surgical procedures recommended to 1,350 New York union members in 1972 and 1973. In his study, Dr. McCarthy emphasized that "as a result of a number of factors, the findings presented here cannot be applied to the general population undergoing elective operations." Nevertheless, the subcommittee proceeded to do precisely what Dr. McCarthy said could not validly be done: It leaped to the conclusion that the 17 percent factor could be applied nationwide.

More than this. Dr. McCarthy was careful not to use the term "unnecessary surgery." His study dealt with procedures that were recommended but "not confirmed." His principal purpose was to find if hospitalization costs could be significantly reduced, without serious risk to patients, by requiring that a second consultation be held with a specialist before elective surgery is undertaken. Dr. McCarthy himself defined his study as "preliminary," and he himself pointed to its statistical shortcomings.

None of this mattered to a subcommittee seeking headlines. By multiplying 14 million patients by 17 percent, the staff came up with 2,380,000 surgeries unnecessarily performed. It was a zinger of a figure. Then, in the same cavalier fashion, the subcommittee took a figure. Then, in the same cavalier fashion, the subcommittee took a figure of $1,650 for a surgical hospitalization in 26 counties of New York and multiplied it out to determine that "the American public spent $3.92 billion in 1974 on unnecessary surgery." The shocking figure of 11,900 deaths was developed by applying a flimsily supported factor of 0.5 percent to the basic estimate of 2.4 million unnecessary procedures.

Probably this is dull stuff, and no wonder the AMA's rebuttal attracted so little attention. The truth of the whole business, a lay observer may surmise, is that— yes, many surgical operations are in fact "unnecessary," either because a contemptible surgeon wants a fee or because a good surgeon honestly guesses wrong. In either case, the number of such operations, the cost, and the mortality have been vastly overblown.

as learning centers and kids don't get a chance to stretch mentally," Loomer said. "There's television and that's about it."

The educator said most parents are not meeting the challenge of making summer vacation as interesting as classroom activities.

"Parents are unware of the things going on in schools today," he said. "They have only their past to draw from when it was mostly sitting and reading."

Vacation takes up one-fourth of a child's learning years — three out of 12 years he or she will spend in elementary and high schools — and that is too much time to waste in humdrum or mere entertainment, he said.

"Mental development drops off during the summer break for a great many children because there is no home stimulus," Loomer said.

Most kids would rather think of summer as a time to learn as many new things as possible, he said, and are ready to be up and doing things by the time they would start school.

Loomer suggested that parents group possible summer activities in categories that will help a child's mental, emotional, social and physical development and those that will "brush up" a child's reading, computation and verbal-communication skills.

Most children today are emotionally well-balanced and feel good about themselves, he said, but summer group activities help them learn more about their strengths and weaknesses and ways to overcome the latter.

Because summer neighborhood groups are informal, they're great places for social and emotional growth, Loomer said. The groups take the place to some extent of family activities during the summer for children.

Travel is a challenge for a child, but Loomer estimated that less than 25 per cent of American families now take such vacations.

"An ideal situation would be to keep schools open on an information basis — as sort of a resource center — for kids in the summer," he said. "But the problem there is economics."

Whatever the explanation, however, by the time Baron and Quinn (also campaigning for Udall in Cleveland) returned to Washington, McGovern had announced publicly that both were sacked. McGovern explained to Quinn, 27, who had left the faction-torn Udall campaign to join McGovern's staff two weeks earlier, he had undergone tremendous pressure.

Baron asked McGovern whether Carter had talked to him about this; McGovern refused to say. When Baron said he would have to publicly respond, McGovern replied (according to Baron): "Do it, Alan. Personally, I think that Carter is a dangerous man." While not remembering use of the word "dangerous," McGovern told us he is indeed concerned with the prospect of Carter as President.

Why, then, would McGovern fire two assistants, without warning, for opposing the candidate he opposes? His explanation to us, denying any pressure from Carter, that he could not tolerate staffers publicly involved in a stop-Carter movement, encounters widespread disbelief among Democratic politicians. They have no doubt, if no proof, of pressure set up by the Carter campaign.

With Baron and Quinn returning to Cleveland for the end of Udall's Ohio campaign, their personal misfortune will not affect Jimmy Carter's relentless drive for the nomination. But it has caused shudders among Democratic politicians as they view in their prospective leader an implacable hostility to any opposition—a character trait all too familiar in the White House.

Facing South

Itinerant Tinker Made Things Go

OXFORD, N.C.—The itinerant tinkerer who mended household oddments on our back steps in Oxford, N.C. carried a small kit of tools and a self-effacing assertion: "I can fix anything from an auger to a Gatling gun." That probably wasn't excessive. He was wise and as ageless as a Tennessee mule; he could have been anywhere from forty to seventy. And now he's gone.

The virtual extinction of this hobo scissor-grinder leaves a void as ominous as the Grand Canyon where stories, poems, essays, dramas and travelogues flourished in the insular South. While most of these vast hypnotisms were spoken at kitchen doors, some of the heady magic endures on the printed page, and in the minds of those who listened.

The hobo I remember walked into our back yard one morning, appropos to nothing, as if he had stepped from a low-flying cloud. He had come, he said, "to sharpen the madam's scissors, to mend her pots and pans." But he sat on the back steps a minute, smoking a tailor-made cigarette, as he gave a charming lecture on two or three of the picture-cards that could be found in packages of cigarettes those days. (J.B. Duke hit upon the happy practice of bolstering the early, flimsy, pre-cellophane cigarette packages with brightly-colored cards that depicted series of authors, athletes, scenic events, natural life, American heroes; many bug-eyed boys collected authors or ball players as resolutely as plushy experts collected Renoir. When I was in fifth grade in Oxford, I had collected better than 200 scenic events from local smokers. At my teacher's suggestion, I arranged these for what may have been Oxford's original "show and tell."

The erudite hobo had been intimate with Mark Twain, Jack London and O'Henry and presto, without oppress of toll, our back steps became a magic carpet carrying small children to the Mississippi, the Klondike and Central America. By the time the scissor-grinder had met Jack London, my mother had slipped from the kitchen to listen silently on our big back porch. We enraptured children didn't know, cared less, that the verbal leger-demain about Jack London was a disarming come-on to enable the hobo to pick up a little change and a free meal by mending oddments. Mother, the high priestess of pots and pans, returned silently with an assortment of scissors and kitchen knives, and a glass of the locust-and-persimmon beer that we made at home and kept in a barrel on the porch. Her refreshments, be they wet or dry, triggered a brief treatise on gourmet foods and the hobo's assurance that no incredible succulence ever served by the Caliph of Bagdad could compare with Mother's.

In our short lives, we had hardly been farther from Oxford than sight of the smoke of our chimney, but the morning flew on linnet's wings as we traveled with the scissor-grinder to creation's far, exotic marts, via a traverse more magical than King Solomon's carpet (the one with singing blackbirds solidified into a canopy). Memory is not always illusion, and while the scissor-grinder sharpened, he spun his golden verbal filigrees: the almost infinitesimal brook that chugged across our lawn became the Nile; Papa's haystacks were the Pyramids, and his huge manure pile the Matterhorn; and our ancient hedgerow was a mysterious South American jungle.

The semi-annual visits of the scissor-grinder were bookmarkers for our family's fine furies and minor heroics. And I can sign an affidavit that the discovery of the Big Rock Candy Mountain in our back yard heightened our appreciation in the classroom. Indeed, public education took on new life when it verified the sagas spun by the scissor-grinder. And there were pertinent demurrers: my hearing him say that Port Said is pronounced "Sa-ed" enabled me to correct my teacher, deferentially, of course.

If the infectious old hobo's "reach exceeded his grasp," if he would have to have been two hundred and forty years old to have seen so many, touched so much, the enchantment was never defaced by arithmetic.

His comings, as precious as those of the four distinct local seasons, added glorious cubits to young lives in that dead world before talking pictures, radios and television. There must be an enduring legacy because I have been writing about him and his bucolic magic all these years.

This Woman's Hair No Crowning Glory

Remember the old saying that a woman's hair is her crowning glory? Well, my hair is another story. I was bald when I was a baby. After that, it was all downhill.

When I was a little kid, my mother kept me in a butch cut. It was the only way she knew of to circumvent my twin cowlicks. But she got a bit tired of people telling her what a charming son she had, especially when I was 13, and there was still nothing about me to cue her friends into the fact that I was a girl. That was when she decided that it was time for a new hairstyle.

The resulting permanent was certainly a change. If my mother had only been far-sighted enough, that hairstyle could have been my ticket to movie stardom. I was perfect for one of the choicest parts in Hollywood — Igor. For weeks afterward, whenever we had a thunderstorm, my father would stick me out on the roof as a lightning rod.

As the years have gone by, I've tried everything to liven up my head. I've tried hot rollers — but the only thing they did was give me second-degree burns on my scalp. I tried hairspray — but the only thing that did was glue the hair ends together so that when I combed it, all the tangles jammed up at the bottom of my head, and I looked like I was wearing a wreath of pinestraw around my neck. I even tried creme rinse — but everytime I used it the rollers all slid out, and my head looked like an off-season ski jump.

Finally, I found a hair stylist who would tolerate my hair's unique personality, but now even she is mad at me. Last week when I went in for a haircut, she greeted me with, "I demand an apology!"

"What for?" I asked. "I've been bringing my hair to you for months, and you've never complained about its bad manners before."

"That's not it," she answered. "It's what you wrote in your last column. You said you had split ends. You do not have split ends!"

What difference does it make? A mess is a mess, no matter what's responsible."

"Not true! Split ends would be my fault, and the condition of your hair is not my fault. If you'd spend more than five minutes once a week on your hairdo, you might look better. So don't blame it on me."

"Okay, okay, I'm sorry. But it doesn't make any difference how much time I spend with my hair. Last week I spent three hours at one stretch visiting with it, and all it did was lie down and die. You don't know what that does to my inferiority complex. I must be a real bore."

"I accept your apology," she said sympathetically. "And I have an idea. Let's try the wedge cut on you."

"That's not the one I saw in the paper that's shaped like the Concord, is it? The model looked like she had been attacked by a sonic boom."

"No, the wedge cut is the one that Dorothy Hamil, the skater, has."

And with that she went to work. She clipped and she clipped, and pretty soon my hair began to look like hair instead of twine.

"There," she said finally. "It's done. Now, your hair looks just like Dorothy Hamil's."

"It sure does," I said wistfully, staring into the mirror. "Now, if I just had her face. . ."

Georgia Governor First To Feel Weight Of New Disclosure Laws

By DICK PETTYS
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Gov. George Busbee has become the first subject of a state investigation under the Georgia version of a campaign financing disclosure law now embraced by most Southern states.

Busbee has been charged in complaints by Common Cause, the open government lobbying group, with violating both the disclosure law and state banking laws by disguising a $181,-000 loan from a hometown bank as smaller individual contributions from 44 donors.

The governor denied the charges, but an investigation is under way by the newly created State Ethics Commission.

The Georgia disclosure law — adopted in 1974 — requires candidates to report periodically their contributions and expenditures of $101 or more.

The ethics commission, which has subpoena powers, was not created until 1975, but a ruling by the state attorney general held that the body could investigate violations alleged to have occurred earlier.

Most Southern states have either adopted or strengthened existing campaign disclosure laws during the years that corresponded to the Watergate scandal, but requirements and enforcement provisions vary greatly.

Florida's law requires candidates to disclose all contributions and expenditures regardless of amount.

Louisiana's law — ruled unconstitutional by a court which held that it violates the right of free expression — required all candidates to report total contributions and expenditures, but to itemize only those over a specific amount, such as $1,000 for a gubernatorial candidate.

The case has gone before the Louisiana Supreme Court.

Alabama's law, requiring reports of all spending and of contributions of $10 or more, also requires disclosure reports by committees formed to support or oppose questions submitted on the ballot to the voters.

Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley gained convictions of six influential Alabama organizations in 1973, including the state Chamber of Commerce and the Alabama Farm Bureau, for failing to file disclosure statements in a campaign against a proposed constitutional amendment.

However, the convictions were reversed in 1974 by the state Court of Criminal Appeals, which charged Baxley with discriminatory enforcement of the law. The state Supreme Court declined to review the decision.

As a result of the reversal, Baxley has declined ever since to prosecute individual candidates under the law.

In Florida, where the disclosure law is enforced by an elections commission created in 1973, one criminal charge has resulted from an investigation by the commission.

Former state Rep. John Miller, D-Hollywood, was accused of using a state-paid aide to collect campaign funds in his successful 1974 campaign.

Miller denied the charge, but was indicted last August on charges of perjury, fabriacting evidence and tampering with a witness. He pleaded guilty, resigned from the House, was sentenced to 18 months in prison and served three months.

Here's a rundown on laws in other Southern states:

—Tennessee's disclosure law, passed in 1975, takes effect this year with the general election. It requires candidates to disclose all campaign expenditures and contributions exceeding $100.

—South Carolina's law, adopted several years ago, requires candidates to list contributions of $100 or more and to list their financial interests in some areas.

—Mississippi's law requires statewide or district candidates to report gifts of $500 or more and candidates for county offices to report donations of $100 or more. However, the generally accepted interpretation of the law is that a person is not a candidate until he officially qualifies for office.

—North Carolina's law, adopted in 1974, has recently been amended to require candidates to file disclosure reports only twice before the primary: one early in the year that would show little and one 10 days before the primary, which critics say would come too late to allow intense scrutiny before the voting.

Busbee's troubles in Georgia began when an Atlanta newspaper published stories based on a forthcoming book about campaign financing in the South. The book contends that Busbee circumvented the disclosure law to conceal his bank loans at a time when he was criticizing other candidates for theirs.

The complaints by Common Cause required action by the State Ethics Commission, whose rules require complaints before an investigation can be started.

Busbee's early disclosure forms reported contributions in mainly $5,000 amounts from about 44 contributors. His later reports described the same funds as "advances" and reported that the campaign was paying them back.

Both banks supported a bank holding company law which Busbee pushed in early 1974 before his gubernatorial race when he was still majority leader of the Georgia House.

Busbee says friends and relatives agreed in 1974 to borrow money from the bank and contribute to his campaign to form an advertising war chest, with no expectation of receiving repayment. But he said he promised to repay the money to the contributors if his campaign flourished.

He says the money was correctly listed as donations rather than as bank loans, even though some of the repayments he eventually made were sent directly to the bank to apply against the loans.

A state bank examiner has testified before the ethics commission that no banking laws were violated in the arrangement. The commission is scheduled to meet again soon to hear the results of a questionnaire it mailed to the 44 contributors.

N.C. High Rise Prison Houses Young Offenders

By TED HALL
Morganton News Herald
Written for the AP

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Terry Olverson isn't exactly thrilled to be in prison, but since he has no choice he says he's fortunate to be in the Western Carolina Correctional Center near Morganton.

"This is the best prison in North Carolina," says the Greensboro native, who is serving a sentence of one day to 12 years for four counts of armed robbery.

Olverson is one of 552 inmates in North Carolina's only high-rise prison.

The 16-story facility for offenders under age 18 rises from what once was a corn field at the base of the South Mountain range in Burke County. On first glance the modern building in the picturesque setting looks more like a motel. But a closer inspection reveals barred windows and a 12-foot tall, barbed-wire-topped fence.

The $6 million corrrectional center received its first inmates in May 1972. Before its construction, and since, it has been regarded as a model unit for the North Carolina Department of Corrections.

Former Corrections Secretary V. Lee Bounds introduced the high-rise prison concept in North Carolina in the mid 1960s, and pushed for construction of the Western Correctional Center. In 1969, with funds for the Morganton high-rise assured, he urged the General Assembly to approve three similar units for the state.

Site preparation for the first of those additional units is underway in Salisbury. But the move to continue the high-rise concept has drawn criticism.

One critic is former State Sen. Eddie Knox of Charlotte, who heads a study commission on correctional programs. He has charged that Western Correctional Center is one of the greatest mistakes ever made. He has called upon the General Assembly to withdraw funds for the Salisbury high-rise.

Administrators, guards and prisoners at Western say they are puzzled by the recent criticism. They maintain that the facilities and program at the Morganton high-rise are second to none among the 77 units in the North Carolina prison system.

A majority of the state's prisons are constructed like college campuses, with scattered buildings and inmates housed in dormitories. Western Correctional officials who have worked at dormitory-type units agree that problems are fewer in the high-rise.

Supt. Mack Jarvis says that one of the greatest advantages of the high-rise design is the ability to separate inmates on different levels according to their behavior.

At Western, new inmates are admitted at high-level floors, where restrictions are heavy and privileges few. Prisoners accumulate points by conforming to regulations and avoiding conflicts. As their points mount, they earn the right to be transferred to a lower floor where the environment is less severe.

The fifth floor is the lowest level for inmates. By the time they reach that floor, they're almost ready for release.

The multi-floor features which Jarvis views as the concept's greatest advantage also presents problems.

For one thing, it requires more guards to operate Western than a dormitory-type unit of comparable size. Jarvis estimates it takes twice as many guards in a high-rise because guards must be assigned to each floor at all times.

In addition, it's impossible to spread personnel thin during quiet periods because there are so many different floors which must be manned.

The center has 130 corrections officers, and Jarvis has requested an additional 21.

The high-rise design also makes it more difficult for guards and prisoners to move about in the building. No more than 15 prisoners can be moved at a time in each of the three inmate elevators. Jarvis says it takes 20 to 30 minutes to move 250 inmates to the recreational field.

However, he says the built-in security of the high-rise more than compensates for the disadvantages in the design.

No inmate has ever escaped from inside Western Correctional Center, although several have scaled the fence around the recreational field or fled while taking part in community programs outside the prison.

Jarvis believes the security features built into the center benefit inmates as well as guards and administrators. Each prisoner has his own small room, which is double-locked at night for his protection and for the security of the prison.

"I've actually had boys beg to stay here and not have to go to a dormitory-type unit," Jarvis says. "In those units, it's every man for himself. Here, inmates are behind a locked door at night, and they don't have to fear being attacked or being sexually assaulted. But in a dorm, your're sleeping right out there with maybe 150 people."

In the four years Western has operated, reports of sexual assaults have been almost nonexistent.

While Jarvis and other officials at Western are sold on the high-rise concept for youthful offenders, they have reservations about its usefulness for adult inmates.

Recently, a report, later denied, that the Knox Commission would suggest that adult inmates be moved into the high-rise sent shock waves through the Western staff.

Jarvis was apprehensive about the idea because he said it would be dangerous to allow 40 to 60 adult inmates to congregate on a floor the way youthful offenders do.

The superintendent estimated it would cost at least $500,000 to renovate Western to house more-hardened adult inmates.

HIGH-RISE PRISON—Only the barred windows and the fence distinguish the 16-story Western Carolina Correctional Center from a motel. The facility for juvenile offenders is North Carolina's only high-rise prison. It's in a picturesque mountain valley near Morganton, in sharp contrast to its quiet, rural surroundings. Screen Writer Sheldon Now Writing Novels

By JOHN LEIGHTY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Sidney Sheldon doesn't care if he never writes another award-winning screenplay.

That's because he's too busy writing best selling novels.

"I've never had as much fun as I've had making novels," Sheldon said over lunch at Ghiradelli Square. "I have a tremendous amount of freedom."

And prosperity, he might add.

His latest book, about the rise of a comedian to stardom in Hollywood, had only been out three days and stores had already ordered 100,000 copies.

"I never want to write another screenplay," said Sheldon, who has already received a $500,000 movie offer for his latest work, "A Stranger In The Mirror." (Morrow, $8.95).

Long a talent on the Hollywood scene, Sheldon gathered material for his latest book by interviewing the people who make us laugh. He gained memories and experiences from Marty Allen, Milton Berle, Red Buttons, George Burns, Jack Carter, Buddy Hackett, Groucho Marx and Jan Murray.

The character he then created, Toby Temple, was a mixture of comedy and pathos whose life was destined to be intertwined with a beautiful heroine and climax in tragedy.

"Everything in the book's true," said Sheldon. "It encompasses everything in Hollywood I have seen through the years."

"Hollywood's a Venus fly-trap," he added. "The honey traps everybody. It's still one of the most exciting places in the world. There are stars and there are great directors."

Sheldon said thousands of beautiful women and handsome men flock to the Southern California Mecca annually with stars in their eyes — and naturally, most of them don't make it.

"Those with talent and ambition — if he or she will keep going — they'll find it's going to happen. They might find, however, that it's harder to be a success than a failure. It's usually hard to handle success."

Sheldon, whose previous book, "The Other Side of Midnight," was an instant success, says although he loves Hollywood, he's planning on writing his next novel, of which 650 words are already penned, at a villa in Rome.

He said he has enjoyed writing more than 200 television scripts and 25 major motion pictures, along with six Broadway plays, but he's now "in a different world."

"I can now write what I want to write without anyone pressuring me or telling me anything," Sheldon said.

Pardon For Tokyo Rose?

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A presidential pardon for a woman convicted of treason for her work as "Tokyo Rose" during World War II has been recommended by a committee of the California Assembly.

The Criminal Procedure Committee passed a resolution Wednesday asking for a full pardon for Iva Toguri d'Aquino to restore her American citizenship and clear her name.

Mrs. d'Aquino was convicted of making propaganda broadcasts to American servicemen in the Pacific. She served 8½ years of a 10-year sentence and paid a $10,000 fine.

If someone in your family has a drinking problem, you can see what it's doing to them.

But can you see what it's doing to you?

Former POW Seeks Return Of Handmade Flag

SEEKS RETURN OF FLAG—Lt. Col. John A. Dramesi is shown during a March, 1973 news conference as he displayed an American flag he secretly sewed as a prisoner of war during the Vietnam conflict. When he returned home, he gave the flag to then-President Richard M. Nixon. Now Dramesi would like it back, but the flag is impounded along with the famous Nixon tapes and other White House items. BLACKWOOD, N.J. (AP) — As a prisoner of war, Lt. Col. John Dramesi secretly sewed an American flag. When he was returned home, he gave the flag to then-President Richard M. Nixon.

Now he'd like it back.

The flag, however, was impounded, along with the famous Nixon tapes and other White House items, after Nixon resigned.

"People are asking me where they can see the flag," Dramesi said. "The fact is right now they can't see it."

Dramesi said he doesn't know where the flag is. "I guess it's buried, well, who knows where. I'm not even sure," he said.

It took the colonel a week and a half to make the flag at the "Hanoi Hilton," the main American POW camp in North Vietnam.

He kept the flag hidden from the North Vietnamese, but it became a source of pride and encouragement to American prisoners who would often display it at night out of view of their captors.

When Dramesi was repatriated in March 1973 after six years in captivity, he sewed the flag between two plain white handkerchiefs to suggle it past the North Vietnamese.

When he disembarked from the repatriation plane at Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines, Dramesi proudly waved the flag.

Later, in the spring of 1973, at a reception for freed American prisoners hosted by former President and Mrs. Nixon at the White House, the flag was again displayed prominently.

Dramesi said the flag was a gift to the nation although it was delivered to Nixon.

Dramesi emphasized that Nixon has not made a claim on the flag. He said the problem is that it is caught up in the legal battle concerning the fate of all the other memorabilia of the Nixon White House.

Dramesi, a native of Philadelphia, is awaiting promotion to full colonel and expects a new assignment soon. He is now a squadron commander at the Montana Air Force Base.

Sentenced 120 Years

SYLVA, N.C. (AP) — Mountain man Lloyd Green, 24, of Pumpkintown, has been sentenced to 120 years in the murder of three men.

The state contended he had acted with his brother-in-law, who wanted two of them killed to prevent them from testifying against him in a robbery.

The victims were described as friends of Green and his brother-in-law, William Ray Hyatt, 32. Their bodies were found in the Tuckaseigee River last September. They had been stabbed, and their throats were cut.

They were Roy Wayne Buchanan, 21, of Caney Fork; and brothers Gerald Franks, 25, and Billy Joe Franks, 20, of Zion Hill.

In Defiance Of Judge's Order

City Council Members Sentenced

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — One of five city council members sentenced to jail for defying a judge's order to vote for a measure that could raise taxes says he feels "disgusted that this can happen in the United States of America."

"I think the judge is usurping power," Councilman Henry Martinez added Friday after he and four colleagues were found in contempt of court by Superior Court Judge Harry Margolis.

The five were expected to appeal Margolis' order to report to the county jail by noon Monday and stay there until they change their votes on a resolution to reassess city property values.

An attorney for the five said he would apply for an emergency stay of the sentence on grounds it is unconstitutional for a judge to punish elected officials for following the dictates of their consciences and their constituents.

Margolis found the five in contempt of his order requiring Newark to assess its taxable properties at realistic values. No study of real estate values has been conducted since 1961, despite a county rule requiring cities to re-evaluate their property every five years.

A new evaluation of Newark's 49,000 properties presumably would bring a tax increase because values have risen since the last study.

Council resolutions for a new survey have been defeated 13 times in the last four years, most recently on Wednesday by a 5-4 vote with Martinez joined by Anthony Carrino, Sharpe James, Donald Tucker and Marie Villani. All said they would vote the same way in the future despite the jail sentences.

Each of Essex County's 22 cities pays a percentage of the state and county budget. O. Vincent McNamy, president of the county tax board, said other cities have complained that Newark's refusal to re-evaluate forced them to pay a disproportionate share.

Newark, a decayed, poverty-ridden city which has seen its industrial and middle class residential tax base flee to the suburbs in recent years, already has one of the highest tax rates in the state.

The council members said they were afraid that increasing property assessments might lead to even higher taxes, speed-up flight to the suburbs and a greater tax burden on those who remain.

BULLISH ON EQUALITY—Helen O'Bannon discusses Friday's settlement of a federal discrimination suit against Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith. Despite her victory, Mrs. O'Bannon says she has no intention of leaving her present job as a member of the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission for the securities business. (AP Wirephtoto)

Child Bearing Becomes Industry

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — "Child bearing has become an industry," says an official of the Child Welfare League of America. "Today, ordering a baby is like putting in an order for a new Vega.

"You buy the color you want, you buy the model you want and all that anyone cares is that you've got enough money to pay for it," Merwin R. Crow, the organization's assistant executive director, said Friday.

Black-market babies are a booming business in this country, he told the Portland City Club. "The high price for an infant today — granted he or she is white, physically fit and mentally okay — is between $40,000 and $50,000.

"A low-cost baby would be between $7,000 and $8,000," he said. "And maybe you could get a 'Friday Surprise' for under $7,000."

Crow estimated that about 5,000 children in the U.S. are sold on the black market annually to "wealthy, childless couples who will do anything or pay anything for children."

He added, "If people don't realize what black-marketing of babies is doing, the wealthy will win. Simply because someone has $40,000 or $50,000 to spend doesn't mean they will make good parents.

Crow said there are about 100,000 legally adoptable children in America, "but most of them are not white and some have physical and mental problems."

Washington's Senior Citizens

Older People Live In Fear

By AMY SABRIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — They say they are prisoners in their own apartments, and not even safe there.

They say they are afraid to walk the streets of their city and the halls of their public housing buildings because they've been mugged, beaten, or taken by con artists.

They say they are angry because, after working hard all their lives, they have not obtained the peace and respect they feel they deserve.

And they say they want the government to take their tax dollars and do something about it.

These are Washington's elderly, who, because of their frailty and loneliness are particularly susceptible to crime.

About a dozen of these elderly victims testified this week before the House Select Committee on Aging at a hearing held in the Edgewood Terrace Senior Citizens Center in northeast Washington.

"In a free country ... you can't hardly live for being afraid you'll be ill-treated by the same kind of animal you are — a human being," James F. Kelley, 74, said. Kelley's wife had been mugged.

"I just can't see why the citizens of America who have worked hard for this country and gotten to this golden age, and can't be respected," he said, tears brimming in his bright brown eyes.

"There have been several robberies and people have been beaten up in my building. Two of them never came back from the hospital," Ors. Sinclair Wylie said. "It makes you feel like you are living in a prison. I even call my apartment 'Cellblock 1003,' " Mrs. Wylie said.

About 35 per cent of all crimes committed in Washington, D. C. are against people over 50, Del. Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C., testified.

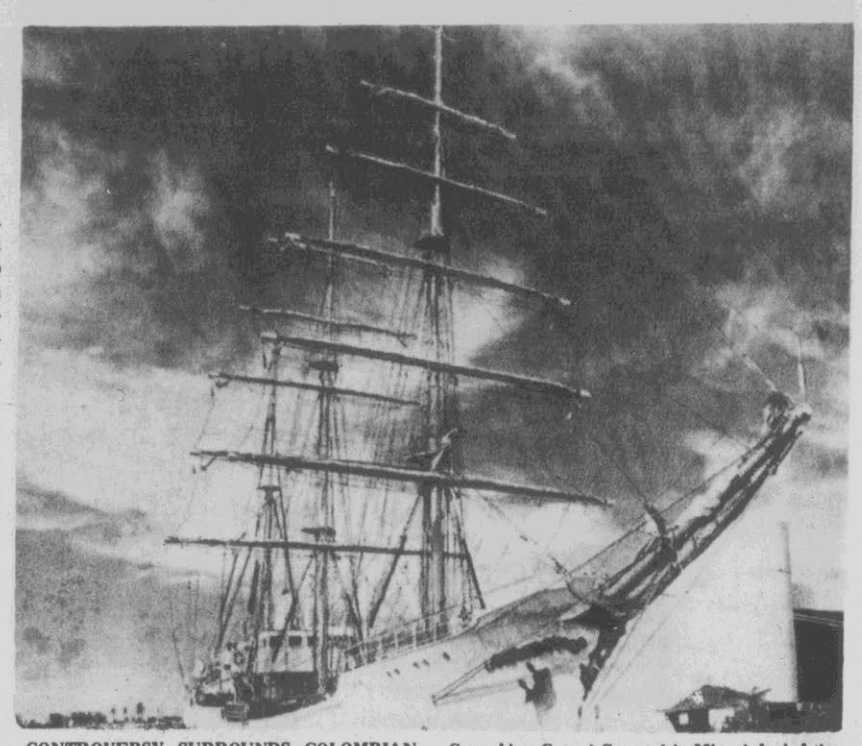

But psychological consequences of crime are perhaps more traumatic for the elderly than are the physical ones, Fauntroy said, causing senior citizens to curtail trips to the bank, market and church.

Because of the need for someone to talk to and declining mental awareness, senior citizens are easy marks for confidence men, said police Lt. Kenneth Moreland. Only about five to 10 per cent of those who have been taken in by a con artist report the crime, Moreland said. They are embarrassed or feel they did something illegal.

All who testified decried a lack of security in the National Capital Housing Authority senior citizen buildings. It's easy for alcoholics, robbers and con men to get in and out, they said.

Mrs. Tomme Pierre, head of a resident council from those buildings, said most security guards are untrained, underpaid students.

Most of those who testified had either been mugged themselves, or had neighbors who were victimized. Many cried as they recounted being attacked on busy streets in broad daylight.

A Year Of Record Earthquakes

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 21 significant earthquakes recorded so far this year have killed some 24,000 people worldwide. That makes this the deadliest year for quakes since 1970, says the U.S. Geological Survey.

The 21 significant earthquakes do not represent an unusual number for the first five months of the year, the agency said. But the death toll is up dramatically from 1975 when a total of 1,350 persons were killed in quakes.

Survey scientists said Friday the 24,000 deaths so far this year make 1976 the deadliest year for tremors since earthquakes wracked Peru and Turkey in 1970, killing more than 67,000 people.

Most of the deaths this year came in the Feb. 4 quake in Guatemala, which killed an estimated 23,000 persons. On May 6, another earthquake hit northeastern Italy and took about 900 lives.

The agency said the 21 quakes were labeled "significant" because they caused deaths or extensive damage, or because they registered at least 6.5 on the Richter Scale.

This year's earthquake in Italy was 6.5 on the scale and the Guatemalan quake registered 7.5.

Geological Survey scientists said the number of quakes in the "major" catagory was running behind normal so far this year. The long-term average is about 16 to 18 major tremors a year, but so far this year only six were recorded by the National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo.

DEADLY YEAR FOR EARTHQUAKES—Lucia Guion, 63, tells what happened when an earthquake struck her village of Attimis, Northern Italy on May 6. Remains of her home are visible in background. According to the U.S. Geological Survey the 21 significant earthquakes recorded so far this year have killed some 24,000 people worldwide, thus making 1976 the deadliest year for quakes since 1970. The May 6 killer quake in Northeast Italy took about 900 lives. (AP Wirephoto)

Vietnamese Woman Fights Adoption Of Her Children

By GORDON HANSON
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A Vietnamese woman who escaped from Saigon after turning six children over to an American adoption agency continues her battle to regain custody of the children.

But adoptive parents and the Denver-based Friends of Children of Vietnam claim the children don't recognize the woman as their mother.

And, said Cheryl Markson, executive director of the adoption agency, "We have evidence that two other children living with her are not hers."

Four of the children have been reunited with Doan Thi Hoan Ahn, 33, at her new home in Great Falls, Mont., but two other children have been placed in adoptive homes in the United States and France, countries which became havens for children who were flown out of war-torn Vietnam in Operation Babylift.

"I saved the babies' lives," said Miss Ahn in a telephone interview Friday. "All I have left is my babies. My babies are to be my consolation the rest of my life."

Miss Ahn contends the agency people "hate me so bad they won't talk to me." She says the agency is withholding information which would help her find the youngest child, Than Phong Doan, 2, in France.

Miss Ahn says she surrendered custody of the six children to the adoption agency in Saigon on April 24, 1975. Communist troops were approaching the city and the last Americans were leaving.

The children were flown to America and, with hundreds of others, were placed for adoption

One child, Doan "Ben" Van Vinh, 3, had been placed for adoption with Johnny and Bonnie Nelson of Forest City, Iowa. Miss Ahn won custody of Ben through a ruling by District Court Judge L.E. Plummer.

Miss Ahn received a recent letter from a French adoption agency, which said it has "no real basis which allows us to establish a link" between Miss Ahn and the boy in France.

Margarine For Marines Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, U.S. Marines could always expect real butter, as long as they weren't on C or K rations.

But Navy Secretary J. William Middendorf II now wants to change that by switching to margarine in both Navy and Marine kitchens for cooking purposes.

He has asked the Congress to allow butter only on mess hall tables.

In addition to saving money, he said, such a butter ban might cut down on the number of Navy and Marine heart attacks.

Are Marines and sailors getting fat and soft?

Not at all, says Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who is fighting the proposed change in the 1933 Navy Ration Law.

Aspen, who represents a major dairy state, said the average number of heart attacks in the two services that lead to death or disability discharges each year is 360.

And, he added, there is not "one scintilla of conclusive evidence" that the switch would make any difference in the service people's health. Aspen said switching to margarine would add millions to the military grocery bill and would hurt daiy farmers.

But Middendorf told the House Armed Services Committee in a recent letter that the services now buy only 30 per cent of the butter on the open market. They obtain the rest from the Commodity Credit Corporation's stocks, purchased by the government through the dairy price-support programs.

He wants to shift from the mandated 100 per cent butter and use three pounds of margarine for every two pounds of butter.

Where Have All The Herring Gone?

ROCKY HOCK, N.C. (AP) — "Where have all the herring gone?" asks J.D. Peele and other fishermen who for years have hung their nets along the Chowan River but can no longer find plentiful catches.

The answer is complicated, but one thing is certain — fishermen who once saw schools of thousands of spawning fish pass by this rural community on their way from Edenton to Holiday Island every spring have seen their business steadily decline in recent years.

"About nine years ago we were landing in the neighborhood of 16,000 boxes (100 lbs.) with our own nets," Peele said. "Ever since then the catches have gone steadily down, hitting a low point two years ago with 3,200 boxes."

Peele, along with three brothers and a newphew, fish everyday using about 150 nets.

"Back when we fished 18 nets and landed in Colerain, we often landed over 100,000 fish a day," he said. "On May 3, 1962, we caught 187,000 herring in those 18 nets. On May 3rd this year, 150 nets totalled 2,845 fish."

Fishermen say one of the big factors in the decreasing herring catches in the Chowan River, which flows through the northeastern corner of the state to the Atlantic Ocean, is offshore fishing.

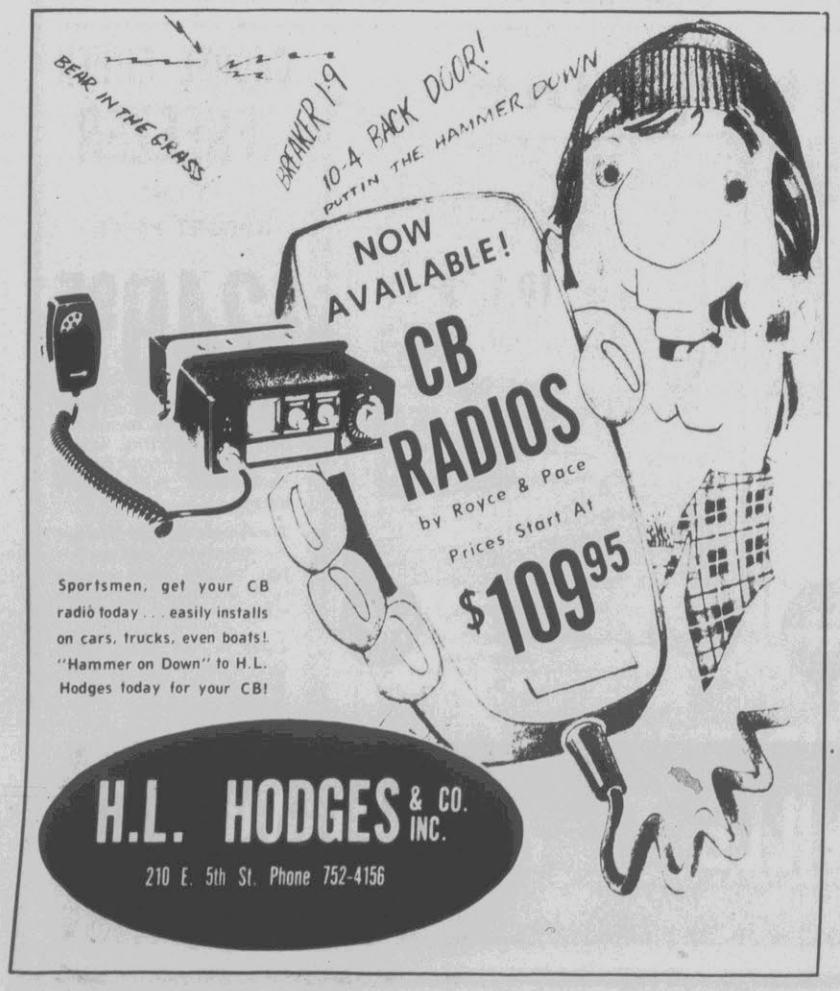

"As the boats off shore multiply, our catches decrease," says Peele, who is a Chowan County commissioner. "If they weren't catching anything they wouldn't be staying there. They'd move on."

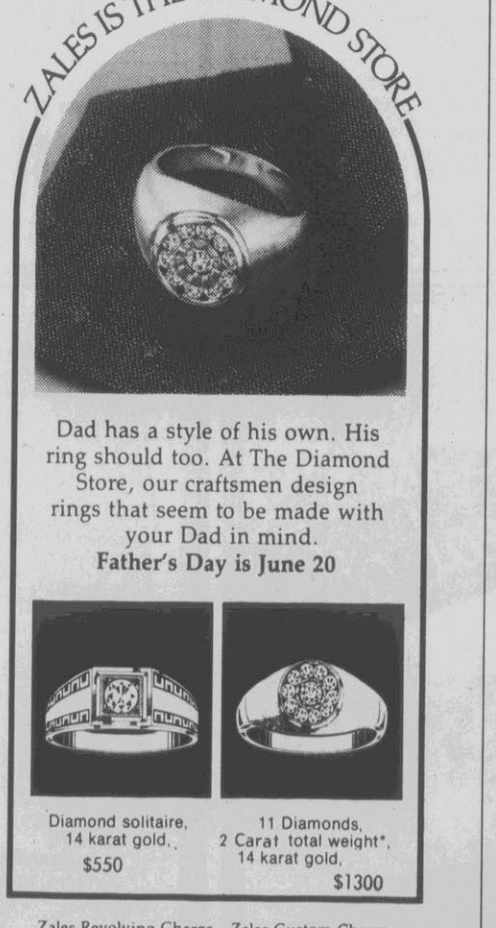

Other factors hurting the catch are the weather, which was poor during the biggest run of fish in April, and pollution of the water, Peele said.

"The truth is we're in a guessing game. If we did know what the problem was with the herring, we could take care of the problem," he said. "I've got buyers calling me from all over looking for herring. All we have left is 500 boxes and I'm saving them for my long-time customers."

The fish caught by Peele are sold for use mainly as bait by other fishermen. The herring roe is also sold, and brings a high margin of profit.

Although the fishing decline has been severe along the Chowan, Peele doesn't think fishermen have damaged the herring population

Gives Aid To Victims

The Pitt County Red Cross recently received a requested quota of $1,171 as part of $5 million that the American Red Cross is sending to assist victims of Typhoon Pamela which destroyed parts of Guam and surrounding islands May 20-21.

The typhoon created extreme damage on the islands of Guam, Wake, Truk, Tinian, Saipan, and, Rota according to Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Executive Secretary of the Pitt County Chapter of the Red Cross.

"Current information indicates that more than 13,000 families of Guam will require immediate assistance from the American Red Cross. In addition at least 2,000 from the island of Truk and an unknown amount from the other islands," Mrs. Taylor explained.

The United Fund of Pitt County supported the Pitt County Red Cross' quota by contributing $1,000. Citizens interested in contributing to the local Red Cross quota may send contributions to Pitt County Red Cross, P. O. Box 586, Greenville, N. C. 27834.

PLAN YOUR HOME

Hershell

DESIGN OFFERS LARGE ROOMS, DISTINCTIVE APPROACH

By Jerry Bishop

Using the gently sloping lines of the attached garage to best advantage, the Hershell, a three bedroom plan, departs from the common box-like two story dwelling. The design chooses spacious rooms and adds distinctive touches throughout the plan.

One such unusual touch is the window treatment. A series of small windows light the foyer and stack upward to meet the roof, brightening the interior and adding interest to the facade.

The closeted foyer, in managing the traffic pattern, gives immediate access to formal living areas, to stairway to second floor, and to bordering full bath and laundry. For zoning purposes, the floor plan shows informal living areas at right and formal living-dining room at left.

Whether your taste runs to formal dinner parties or lively gatherings of friends, the living-dining area is well-designed.

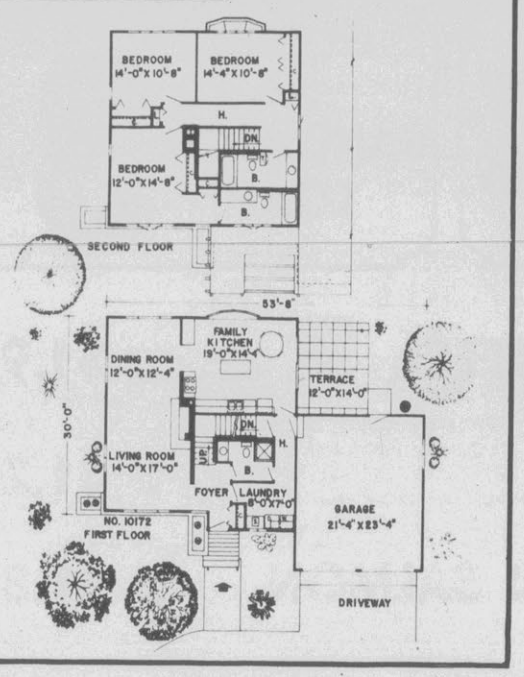

No attempt is made to divide the rooms, which together span the width of the home. For atmosphere, a wood-burning fireplace crackles in the living room and windows supply an abundance of natural light. A floor-to-ceiling masonry wall extends from the fireplace, textures the room, and adds character.

Informal living areas focus on the 19-ft. family kitchen, benefitted by the island counter and bay window. Family dining space is provided, and the entire area is visually enlarged by the sliding glass doors to terrace.

The main level also includes a step-saving laundry room, a full bath with shower, and a handy connection between garage and kitchen.

On the upper level, three sizable bedrooms include a master bedroom lavished with double closets, dressing area, and full bath. Another full bath serves the remaining bedrooms.

Storage Space Helps Neatness

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In providing rooms that accommodate the needs and aesthetic preferences of their youngsters, parents may find that proper planning and easy care go hand in hand, adgises long-time interior designer Mary Knackstedt of Harrisburg, Pa.

Mary K., as she is known, has had a wide variety of decorating ventures including one for 1,500 orphaned boys at Hershey, Pa., a community that was founded in the early 1900s. Her interior design involved about 150 units which were being expanded and renovated to accommodate the needs of the boys and the community.

"People often complain that their children are sloppy, but I have found that many children are not given things that are necessary to keep their rooms in order," she says.

What does a child need in a room? In addition to a bed and a comfortable chair, needs include convenient easy-to-reach wardrobe and storage areas, good light for study — things like that, she explains. And children should be asked what they like in color and pattern to make their surroundings more pleasant and to encourage prideful occupancy of their rooms.

"At Hershey the boys were consulted and blue was found to be an overwhelming color favorite, with red second. In fact, they preferred intense colors to pastels. They like patterns that are real — horses that look like horses — things that can be recognized. They like traverse draperies that can be opened and closed," she notes.

She was surprised, she said, and "learned quite a bit." She had thought they would like colorful graphics and splashy contemporary patterns. In fact, she had planned to use drawings made by young children, but the boys turned them down.

Older boys tested furniture for comfort and as a result some dining chairs were raised to accommodate them. Choices in furniture were so consistent that scaled-down sizes are now used for younger boys as well. All boys need shelves and storage space that is accessible "so they don't need to crawl around on floors looking for things," she contends. And carpet is preferred flooring "because they like to sit on floors."

Two boys share a room: 14 are in a house with four adults. A living area has a television and other recreational features and a cozy wood-burning fireplace. Every effort is made to make the houses seem like real homes, Mary K. explained.

"These boys are quite special. About 70 per cent of them go on to college. Some prefer a trade and each year at least one house is built by the boys." The boys are 4 years to 15 years old when they enter the orphan home.

Mary K. was hired in 1959 to do a small job and then became involved in the 10-year, multi-million-dollar expansion program that is continuing. She worked on the large public buildings — the central headquarters, classrooms, clinics, banquet hall, chapel, library and auditorium, and the houses for the boys. With many years of experience, she was well prepared, she explained.

"My father believed I should have a trade so I was apprenticed to a tailor, where I worked every day after school. I learned to make every garment a woman wore and even to make a man's suit. There are 2,300 stitches in the well-tailored man's collar," she said, laughing.

Later she ran her father's furniture factory and his drapery rooms and didn't blink an eyelash when she had to order the "equivalent of six miles of carpet" for the Hershey projects. She received further training at Pratt Institute and considers herself well prepared to work as a coordinator between manufacturers and designers.

"I really enjoy working to solve human problems, such as the hospital psychiatric ward I'm working on, and I like to develop concepts — whether it is trying to accommodate children in a home or discovering why houses aren't selling. As for that, I think many builders lack sensitivity. They are kitchen-bathroom oriented, but they don't consider adults need getaway space. That requirement is particularly important where there are several children," she maintains.

Baskets Make Fine Displays

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

The growing popularity of hanging baskets for plants has led to the development of attractive, decorative supporting brackets. One hardware firm is producing brackets with hammered finish in black and in gold, in sizes 5 by 7 inches, and 9 by 11 inches.

Hanging baskets are a fine way to add color or greenery to many places indoors, outdoors, on porches or beneath the eaves.

Mesh plant containers have been in use for a long time, but for outdoor use containers that do not dry as quickly are better. Containers made of plastic, metal, wood, pottery and clay are good. It is advisable to set plants in these hanging baskets in a loose, well-drained soil mix with bottom drainage.

Water often because hanging baskets under sheltering eaves or trees do not get dew or light rain. Sun shining on the sides of the container warms the soil more than it would a flower border. Further, because of wind and breezes around the open plant the humidity is lower than that of plants near the ground or other plants.

These factors mean increased water loss from leaves and soil, making regular and frequent watering important, even to daily watering in dry weather.

For most efficient watering, take down the plant. Put it in a tub of water for a while, then hang it back up. If dripping is a problem, drain before rehanging. If the container is equipped with a saucer let it catch the drip, but do not consider the saucer a reservoir for watering plants.

If removal is difficult, water the hanging baskets in place. Fill the top sufficiently for the water to drain through. If the soil is so dry that it has pulled away from the sides of the container, water may run through without properly wetting the soil. Avoid such drying, but if it happens, take down the container and soak thoroughly. Or you can water every couple of hours for a while until the soil has expanded to fill the pot.

Because more frequent watering is needed, hanging basket fertilizer washes out more rapidly. In summer, apply a soluble fertilizer about every two weeks (follow label instructions) or use newer, long-lasting pellets.

It is better to fertilize about a day after plants have been watered normally. Avoid feeding when the soil is dry.

There are many plants for hanging baskets. We have written about ivy and foliage and other house plants for hanging baskets. Annuals also flourish — petunias, marigold, portulaca, lantana and verbena in full sun; begonias, impatiens, geraniums or fuschia in semi-shade; Swedish ivy, wandering jew, myrtle, ajuga and English ivy in shade, with little sun.

Harboring Is Charged

Fairchild appeared before a U.S. magistrate and was placed under $5,000 bond on the charge of harboring William Roberts.

Roberts was arrested in Charlotte last week on a federal warrant issued in Los Angeles on April 10, 1975, charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for alleged grand theft and forgery in California, the FBI said.

FEWER DEATHS

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Safety Council says preliminary data shows 1,000 fewer workers died in on-the-job accidents in 1975 than in 1974.

The council says this resulted in an all-time low death rate of about 14 per 100,000 U.S. workers.

Gardening Questions

Q. Is overhead sprinkling a good method of irrigating a vegetable garden? If so, when is the best time of day to irrigate?

A. Overhead irrigation is totally acceptable, but there are some disadvantages. These include greater loss of water through evaporation, increased chances of foliar disease development, and the possibility of discouraging bees from coming into the garden while the water is on. Soaker hoses or sub-irrigation are other choices, but sometimes they aren't practical. As for the best time to irrigate, I would suggest starting about 3 to 4 p.m. and turning the water off in time to allow the plants to dry off before nightfall. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. How can I control crabgrass in the garden? I am growing tomatoes, squash, peppers and onions.

A. There is no easy way. The best method is to mulch the area after setting plants or after seedlings have emerged. Otherwise, pull the weeds by hand or hoe them out. There are no chemical herbicides that can be used in general applications because of the diverse plants in the garden. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. I have a scuppernong arbor that was planted about 1860. It is about 60 feet by 100 feet in heavy clay soil, and it has not had any fertilizer for about 30 years. What cultural practices will keep the old grape arbor in good health? (H.M., Bullock)

A. Obviously you or someone has been doing the things the vine likes or it wouldn't have survived for 115 years, so I hesitate to make any recommendations. If the vine becomes unproductive, you might try severe pruning and fertilize with about 25 pounds of 8-8-8 in early spring. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — An all-purpose fire extinguisher designed to fight the three most common causes of household fires.

Manufacturer's claim — That this extinguisher will handle class A fires (those that start from wood, paper, fabric, plastic and rubber); class B (from greases, oils, gases, solvents and paints); and class C (live electrical fires) ... that the non-toxic chemical used is a monoammonium dry phosphate with a discharge range and time factor of 13 feet in approximately 10 seconds after the handle is squeezed ... and that the extinguisher is refillable and has a rust-proof, molded wall hanger.

THE PRODUCT — A residential water purifier that meets standards of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Manufacturer's claim — That the water from the cold water lines enters the unit, which is installed under kitchen or bathroom sinks ... that the unit removes sediment, inhibits bacteria growth and gets rid of objectionable odors, rust, chlorine, dangerous insecticides, soaps, detergents and other pollutants ... that, because the unit has no moving parts, no filters to replace, no internal parts to rust or corrode, and no adjustments to make, it is maintenance free ... and that when the chemicals and impurities are removed from the water, it changes the taste and flavor of ice cubes, coffee, tea, lemonade and other beverages made with water.

Manufacturer's claim — That the patch is impregnated with polyester resin and is ready to use on any metal, wood or fiberglass surface ... that, after cleaning the damaged surface, one liner is removed from the patch, which is then pressed into place ... that, after the patch has hardened in sunlight, the top liner is peeled away ... and that the product can be used on gutters, downspouts, rust-outs on autos, holes in canoes, screens, etc.

Q. — I understand it is possible to use dry ice in the removal of resilient floor tiles. Can you tell me how this is done?

A. — Yes, but first a word of caution. The dry ice must be handled very carefully. Have the dealer where you purchase it tell you how this should be done. The dry ice is placed into a wooden frame which is set on the tile and left there a few minutes. Using a hammer, chip out the tile, then move the frame and repeat the operation as many times as is needed. There are several other methods of removing floor tiles. Probably the safest — although it requires the most elbow grease — is to rent a tile scraper, a kind of giant putty knife. Insert the scraper between the seams of two adjoining tiles and force it downward and slightly sideways until one of the tiles is loosened a bit. From then on it's a case of scraping off the tiles and adhesive as you might scrape peeling paint from the side of a house.

Q. — What's the procedure for finding out whether a discoloration is dirt or mildew?

A. — Wet the affected area with a household bleach. If it is mildew, it will turn white in about 5 minutes. If it doesn't turn white, it's dirt.

Q. — Please settle an argument. Is it necessary to use a sealer over a wood stain if the final finish is to be varnish?

A. — The word "necessary" makes a flat yes or no difficult. It may not be necessary, since I have seen some finishing projects where the sealer was not used, but my own preference is for use of the sealer. When the final coat is to be varnish, I use a coat of shellac diluted 50 per cent with denatured alcohol. However, if you have already purchased the varnish, read the label carefully to see whether the manufacturer has made any specific recommendation about the type of sealer, if any, to be used over a stain. That's because there are so many different kinds of varnish on the market these days if is important to read the instructions about the compatibility of one product with another.

Tales Of J. Edgar Hoover Are Beginning To Circulate Now

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With J. Edgar Hoover four years in his grave, it's safe for those who feared him to tell their stories of his imperiousness, his vanity, his eccentric behavior. They are double-edged yarns, revealing both a man's amusing oddities and also his remarkable power over men and the course of a nation throughout a half-century.

Few presidents' matched Hoover's influence over America's culture and its government. None held such power for so long.

For most of his 48 years as director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he ruled without challenge, never rebuked by an adoring public, never seriously questioned by Congress. Presidents, even those who wanted him out, backed away from the confrontation.

Shortly before his death in May 1972, the horror stories began to emerge from Hoover's FBI.

The reports described wiretapping, burglaries, buggings, files of nasty gossip about politicians, the campaign to discredit Martin Luther King, the efforts to harass and disrupt nonviolent civil rights organizations and antiwar groups as well as the more militant left-wing and right-wing dissidents.

Year by year, the scandalous allegations mushroomed and were confirmed as many of the FBI's own files were forced open to the public.

Year by year, FBI men themselves began to feel free to tell what they knew of The Boss, a man they sometimes treated as God or at least his 20th-century surrogate in Washington.

As the times changed, the people and their representatives in Congress became more receptive to a critical examination of one of their most secret agencies.

The trend has produced a wealth of new material about the man and his power. Some of it has been collected in three recently published books examining, in one form or another, what Hoover was and what he ought to have been.

"He was, above all, a lonely man," concluded Sanford J. Ungar in "FBI, An Uncensored Look Behind the Walls," the most comprehensive of the three works. "His life was the FBI and there were few diversions from it."

For all his devotion to the bureau, Hoover ran it in a way that inspired more fear than affection from his subordinates. His agents slaved to please him, knowng that their failure would be met with swift and severe punishment.

This image of Hoover as ultimate master gave rise to some bitter jokes, related by Ungar and heard from others as well. As one story goes, Hoover and his constant companion, Clyde Tolson, are walking along a beach.

Tolson surveys the vicinity and reports to Hoover: "Okay, Boss. The coast is clear. Now you can practice walking on the water."

The fear of Hoover was so great within the bureau that some agents went into contortions to carry out his commands. Or at least to persuade Hoover that they had done so.

Former agent Joseph L. Schott, in his book, "No Left Turns," reports that some pudgy agents panicked when Hoover began enforcing weight restrictions in the late 1950s.

But one hopelessly overweight agent in the Washington field office pulled a slick con job, escaping both Hoover's wrath and a cottage cheese diet.

After he was told to lose 22 pounds in 30 days, the agent went to a secondhand clothing store, bought an oversized suit and shirt, and immediately wangled an appointment with Hoover.

Wearing his baggy clothing, the agent lied to the director, "I just wanted to come by and tell you how much I appreciate you instituting this weight program. I've lost 25 pounds and feel 25 years younger. My doctor says I need to lose another 20 pounds, but I ought to spread it over the next six or eight months."

Hoover was pleased, and the agent happily went back to lunches of spaghetti and meatballs.

It was well-known within the bureau that a sure way to curry favor with The Boss was to send him flattering notes and expensive gifts.

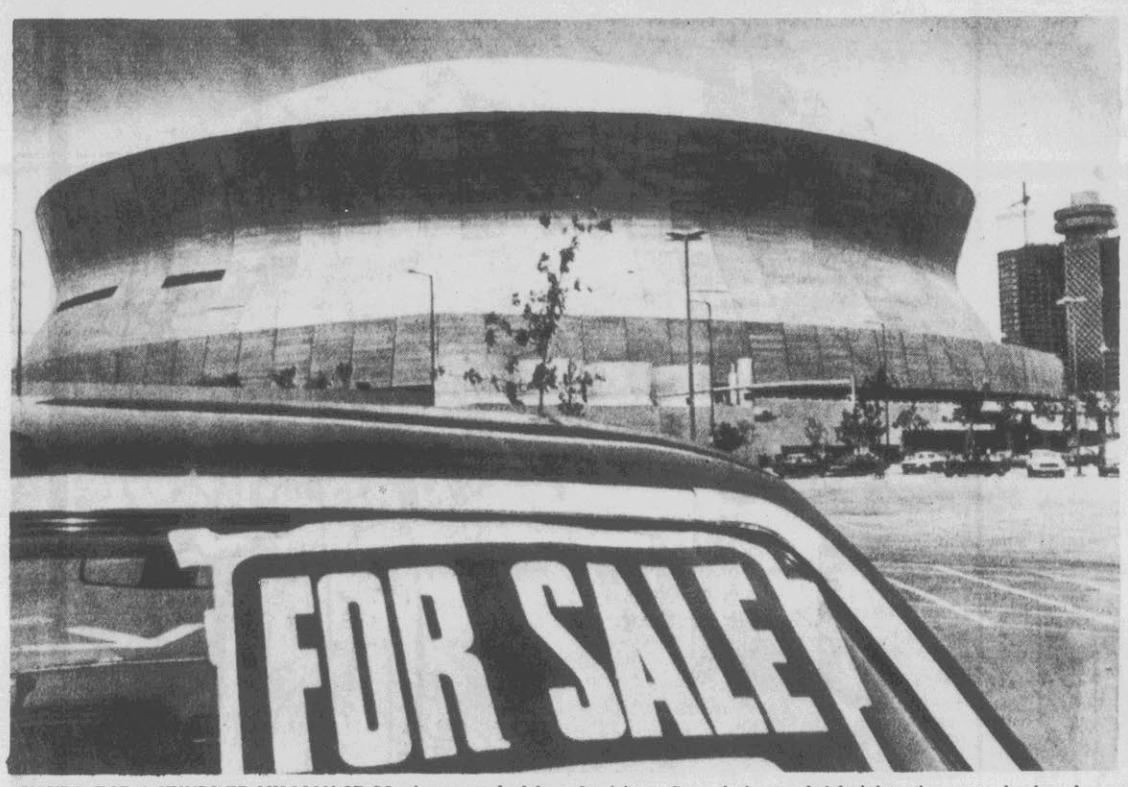

"Hoover was always hitting us for gifts," said former Assistant FBI Director William C. Sullivan in an interview with writer Ovid Demaris for his book, "The Director."

Ungar reported, "Sometimes, if Hoover was not particularly fond of a gift, he would not hesitate to give it someone else in the bureau ... On one occasion, office assistant Sam Noisette was surprised and pleased to receive an expensive pair of cuff links from his boss; then he discovered that they were engraved with JEH on the back."

The stories go on and on, pieces in the jigsaw puzzle of a man who once was a hero to millions of children who dreamed of being G-men. When they grew up, some found him to be their villain.

Some stories show Hoover as a prejudiced man, biased against blacks and Harvard graduates, and women as anything but servants of men. Some illustrate his fondness for horse-racing and the luxury spas of Florida and southern California. Some show him as a man with many comrades but few intimate friends.

In the repertoire of Hoover anecdotes collected since his death, there's no suggestion of romance or sentiment or grief or sympathy, no hint of a capacity to laugh at himself. A peculiar omission, as peculiar as the man.

YOURS, FOR A HUNDRED MILLION OR SO—A car marked for sale is parked near the $163 million Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans that may be on the market as well. There Is No Detente Visible At Wall Dividing City Of Berlin

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

BERLIN (UPI) — "So much for East-West detente," said the American tourist on the West Berlin side of Potsdamer Platz.

For behind the wire fence patrolled by armed soldiers, East German work crews were rebuilding the Communist wall which has divided this former capital of Germany since August of 1961.

The new wall of concrete is higher than the original grey cement brick one. It is being painted white, apparently to make it easier for the border guards to spot and shoot moving targets. Instead of the old barbed wire, it is topped with tubing which revolves to prevent would-be refugees from getting a firm grip on top when scaling the wall.

I inched closer with my camera and two soldiers carrying submachine guns moved up. I backed off and so did they.

"If they really believed in detente, they would be tearing down that monstrosity instead of strengthening it," the American said as he headed toward his tour bus.

A tour of the wall is a "must" for visitors. A wide area on the East Berlin side has been cleared of buildings, creating a "no-man's-land" dotted with watchtowers, bunkers and other fortifications and antitank obstacles. Civilians are barred from this strip.

There are no such restrictions on the West Berlin side. In fact, there are several observation stands, including the one from which the late President Kennedy looked into East Berlin during his visit in 1961, almost smack up against the wall.

West Berlin guide Bernard Lucht also pointed out the bronze commemoration plaque at the restored Schoenberg Town Hall where Kennedy electrified more than two million West Berliners by declaring: "Ich bin ein Berliner. (I am a Berliner.)" The square in front later was named in honor of the assassinated U.S. president. The tower houses the famous Freedom Bell, donated by Americans after the 1947-48 Soviet blockade, which is rung at noon daily.

Other top sightseeing attractions include the shattered Kaiser-Wilhelm Memorial Church, left in ruins as a reminder of the devastation of war, which Berliners have dubbed the "Hollow Tooth." Services now are held in an adjoining new church, with beautiful stained glass windows and a separate bell tower, irreverently nicknamed the "Lipstick and Compact."

The church is on the main street of Kurfurstendamm, more familiarly known as the Ku'damm. The two-mile-long boulevard is lined with shops, beer halls, restaurants, beer halls, theaters, beer halls, outdoor cafes, beer halls, wine cellars, beer halls, night clubs and beer halls.

And Berlin swings around the clock, offering a variety of entertainment to please most tastes and pocketbooks. The beat goes on all day, for example, at the Kudorf on Joachimstaler Strasse, an underground complex of about 40 bars with dancing to live and canned music. Admission is 2 marks, or about 80 cents, which entitles you to one beer.

For relaxation there are the world famed Berlin Philharmonic, operas, concert halls, museums, zoo, aquarium, botanical gardens and parks. On the outskirts, there are the Wannsee and Lake Havel for boating and other water sports and Grunewald and other woodlands for picnicking, camping, hiking and riding.

We visited Berlin with other U.S. journalists as guests to sample an interesting travel package developed by Hilton International and the KD German Rhine Line.

Resettlement Village Is No Paradise

By PAUL CHUTKOW
Associated Press Writer

KHICHRIPUR, India (AP) — Prasad the sweeper sat in front of his storm-drenched hut in the new government resettlement village outside New Delhi and expressed concern about what happens when the monsoon comes.

The daily rains of July and August still were weeks away but one recent night-long storm had given Prasad and the thousands of poor people recently relocated from New Delhi a bitter taste of what's ahead.

The storm of May 23 flooded Prasad's mud hut thigh-deep with water and collapsed others. It clogged drainage and sewage trenches with muck and painted with a gray-brown mud the half-dozen villages spread on an open, low-lying plain beside the Yamuna River.

New Delhi proper was hard hit too, with four people killed by lightning, but only minor flooding was reported in the city.

On the plain where Prasad had been promised a new life, the rains left large pools of stagnant water, good breeding grounds for the mosquitoes which are again spreading malaria across the Asian subcontinent.

"I don't know what's going to happen when the monsoon comes," Prasad said. "We are poor people. There is no money for better houses."

"Many people will die," said a neighboring laundryman. "Malaria."

Whether malaria has hit Khichripur harder than other areas is not yet possible to determine, but the laundryman, Prasad and his four children and many of their neighbors all recently have had the debilitating and sometimes deadly disease.

The storm and malaria aside, conditions in the new villages have improved in the nine months since the federally controlled Delhi administration began bulldozing city shacks and huts as part of a major facelifting for the Indian capital.

More buses are ferrying the poor the 10 miles to their jobs in the city. Permanent houses are replacing the settlement's shacks and mobile medical units are making more frequent stops, the villagers say.

There still aren't many nearby jobs, though, and the people say the government has provided little or no compensation for the costs of moving, erecting new houses or loss of jobs.

But the Delhi administration says it is making progress with the massive problems of resettling an estimated 250,000 people and maintains that in time the villages will be far better places in which to live and work than the poor people had before.

Much of the anger expressed by the poor just after their relocation has been replaced by resignation.

With political activity curtailed under the national emergency and only the Patriot, a pro-Moscow daily, reporting the resettlement problems, critics charge there is little the people can do and the situation will only get worse.

Fat Albert May Go To School

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A television series your children now watch for fun may soon be shown in their classrooms for education.

The show is "Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids," an animated series that has been part of the CBS Saturday daytime lineup for the past four years.

It will be back in the fall, too, but in addition eight episodes that already have been aired are being marketed to school districts around the country by McGraw-Hill Films for use in kindergarten through third grade classes beginning in September.

Ed Meell, editorial director for McGraw-Hill Films, says that as far as he knows this is the first time a commercial television series, as opposed to public television's "Sesame Street," has been put to use in schools.

That "Fat Albert" fits the bill should come as no surprise to anyone who has seen the show. From the outset it successfully has merged education with entertainment, and it helped change the nature of children's commercial television by leading the way in bringing in professional educators to consult on each episode.

Based on characters invented by Bill Cosby, "Fat Albert" features a group of black kids who live in the ghetto and each week get involved in situations that are designed to convey information and prosocial values to the audience.

The episodes being offered to schools, for instance, deal with such topics as drugs, lying, stereotyping, making new friends, going to the hospital and accepting personal limitations.

"That's the beauty of this series," says Meell. "Each one of these topics are things kids face very day. And the idea is brought out without preaching. They can discuss it afterward and be able to identify very, very well."

Teaching guides to help instructors develop such discussions also are being distributed by McGraw-Hill. They were prepared by the chief consultant for "Fat Albert," Gordon L. Berry, assistant dean of UCLA's graduate school of education.

Norm Prescott and Lou Scheimer, who run Filmation Studios and produce "Fat Albert" along with many other children's shows, are elated to see the program put to such use.

"You dream about something like that," Prescott exclaims. Scheimer attributes the show's success to the effective working relationship between the consultants, who suggest themes and oversee their development, and the Filmation staff, which turns the ideas into entertaining stories.

Frost To Interview Nixon

By DAVID DUGAS

NEW YORK (UPI) — David Frost has become a movie mogul just when his career as a television personality is approaching its zenith by way of an exclusive interview with Richard M. Nixon.

Frost dropped in at his New York office long enough to talk about those mutually exclusive subjects, Nixon and moviemaking.

They are of undeniably different weight.

Frost waded into the movie business a couple of years ago with a film, "Charley One-Eye," starring Richard Roundtree, Roy Thinnes and Nigel Davenport.

"The star of the picture was a one-eyed chicken, of all things," Frost said over a breakfast coffee, juice and cigar. "It was a powerful film or an awful film, depending on what you thought of it."

Undeterred, in any event, Frost now has "executive produced" (meaning pulled together the talent and financing) two wildly different pictures.

"The Slipper and the Rose," based on "Cinderella" with Richard Chamberlain and Gemma Craven, has opened to rave reviews from London critics.

"Leadbelly," just released in the United States, is Gordon Parks' dramatization of the life of the legendary singer-composer who became a musical phenomenon after spending half his life in prisons and on chain gangs. The film works in more than a dozen Leadbelly songs, including "The Rock Island Line" and "Midnight Special."

"I like to make things happen," Frost says. "I like conceiving the project, finding the writer and director and being involved in that whole process of making it happen."

He has three more pictures in the works.

Then there is Richard Nixon.

Last August, a year to the day after the scandal of Watergate forced Nixon out of the White House, Frost announced that the former President had agreed to submit to a series of interviews to be conducted and produced entirely at Frost's discretion.

"I have sole editorial control, sole control of content and of editing," Frost reaffirmed. "Mr. Nixon has no right to know any of the questions in advance, nor indeed to see the edited programs before they are broadcast."

Frost will tape a dozen two-hour sessions, 24 hours in all, to produce six hours for television. The taping is to begin at Nixon's San Clemente, Calif., home in November and December. January will be devoted to editing, with the programs "to air simultaneoulsy in the United States and 60 other countries in February and March," he said.

"That was the one thing Mr. Nixon felt strongly about," Frost said, "because he didn't want to be accused of influencing the election. It was always going to air after the election and it was left open whether we were going to start taping immediately before or immediately after the election. We decided to start afterwards because I felt he'd be that much more relaxed, talking about Republicans and Democrats, if the elections were out of the way. And it fits in with Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, the Washington Post newspaper reporters who broke many of the major Watergate revelations and later co-authored the book "All the President's Men," recently published a sequel, "The Final Days." Their account of Nixon's last days in the White House pictures him as drinking heavily and sometimes speaking incoherently.

"There was a review that said the one absentee from the book 'The Final Days' is the star of it, because he wasn't spoken to," Frost said. "Of course that's the unique thing we have and the interest all over the world is building and building.

"The great thing about it, of course, is that it combines the human interest — why did he do what he did, what is this man really like, what made him tick? — with the historical interest of so many unanswered questions.

"It's got both of the things I've always said are really the prerequisites of the perfect interview. He's by far the most interesting man to interview in the world. And there are no restrictions."

"There is no official provision for Pat or any of the rest of the family to be there," Frost said. "That would be an ad hoc arrangement. And obviously other participants in the drama may take part.

"I mean there may be an incident which Richard Nixon recounts from his point of view and we want to hear the story from the point of view of the other person who was present at the meeting. That's why it's such a big budget production. We want to have that ability to go and see how the story looked from someone else's point of view, to play that cassette to him and continue the dialogue.

"We shall use newsreels, too. As the helicopter leaves the White House, what was he thinking at that moment? Obviously the sole star will be Richard Milhous Nixon."

The series is budgeted at "close to 3 million dollars," Frost said. But he won't say what Nixon will be paid. "One makes guesses. I do have a pledge with him that I won't actually say what it is."

Frost interviewed Richard Nixon once earlier when he covered all the leading candidates for the 1968 presidential election. Nixon said he felt Frost had been fair in editing their 40-minute session into nine minutes of TV.

"Quite apart from the bidding" of other parties for the difinitive Nixon interview, Frost said, "that may well have been a factor in his feeling that he could grant these extraordinary editorial controls 100 per cent to me."

Frost's organization issued a press release saying Nixon "does not have, nor did he seek any editorial control."

"That 'nor did he seek' is the really remarkable part," Frost said.

"I'm sure he'll never sit down and confront his past again in the way he's going to do in these 24 hours on these terms."

Further Studies Of Ancient City

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The Tiwanaku Archaeological Foundation plans to explore further the ruins of the ancient city of Tiwanaku near Lake Titicaca in Northwest Bolivia. Tiwanaku is believed by some to be the oldest city in the western hemisphere.

Dr. Robert V. West, Jr., who is chairman and chief executive officer of Tesoro Petroleum Corp. and chairman of the foundation, said that excavation to date on the site has revealed several magnificent buildings and a wealth of artifacts. He said that ruins on 800 acres have yet to be explored.

Recent archaeological studies indicate that a highly advanced civilization existed in Tiwanaku as early as 1500 B.C.

Ira David Wood III, also a native of Enfield, is directing the historical drama. Wood is founder of "Theater In The Park" in Raleigh and has worked in drama and literary productions on the Outer Banks and in other parts of North Carolina.

Casey Jones Museum A Favorite

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP) — It's been 76 years since John Luther Jones left Memphis' old Poplar Street station and rode the Cannonball Express into immortality in song and legend.

But still the people come to the old frame house where Casey Jones lived with his wife and children, to partake of a bit of railroad nostalgia and breathe a bit of a legend.

Visitors to the Casey Jones Railroad Museum average about 250 a day and there have been as many as 800 trooping through the wood-floored house to inspect the memorabilia of a lost age.

Outside the house, surrounded by a 10-foot-high brick wall, stands a sister engine of the Baldwin locomotive in which Casey died at Vaughn, Miss., April 30, 1900. Like Casey's engine, the locomotive bears the number "382."

"When Casey had his accident, it only did about $1,300 damage, but it killed him," explained J. C. Barlow, a retired insurance man who manages the museum for the city of Jackson.

"They put the engine back up on its tracks and repaired it. The IC (Illinois Central Railroad) used that old engine right on up into the '40s, then cut it up for scrap. When they opened this museum in 1957, they brought this old engine in. It's almost like Casey's."

The Casey Jones of song and legend has grown far larger than life, but the fact was Jones was one of the top-ranked locomotive engineers of his day.

Folklore and a dozen versions of the song about Casey moved his last run to the west and placed the wreck itself on "Reno Hill." According to the legend, Jones could have saved his life by leaping from the cab as did his firemen.

This part of the legend is true, according to information in the museum.

Jones, who was filling in for a sick engineer, left Memphis 95 minutes late with the crack Cannonball Express, a mail-passenger train. He had almost made up the time when he reached Vaughn, where the rear end of a northbound freight stuck out on the main line at a sidetrack.

Jones didn't see the warning lantern until too late. Ordering his fireman, Sim Webb, to jump, Casey reversed the throttle, slammed the brakes into emergency and stayed in the cab. Jones was the only fatality.

'Time And Time Again' On Piccadilly Circus

Leonard must be at odds with the conventional world. How else could he have earnest conversations with a garden gnome?

Leonard, the main character in Alan Ayckbourn's successful London stage comedy Time and Time Again, makes his American television debut on Piccadilly Circus, Monday, June 14 at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 25.

British stage and screen star Tom Courtenay plays Leonard, a rat race defect who is living with his sister Anna (Bridget Turner) and brother-in-law Graham (Michael Robbins).

Leonard and Graham do not get along. Their relationship deteriorates even more after Graham invites an employee named Peter (Peter Egan) and his fiancee Joan (Cheryl Kennedy) to tea and both Graham and Leonard are smitten with Joan. The rivalry for Joan's favor establishes the comical plot.

Except for Egan, members of the original stage cast recreate their roles for the public television version.

Promising Young Writers In 'Crucible,' 'Rebel'

At a time when the American literary output is heavily oriented to the hit-novel, books on "in" subjects, and a seemingly endless flow of printed matter on self-analysis, the short story as a commercial publishing venture has almost ceased to exist.

This lamentable gap in what is one of the most rewarding literary forms is increasingly being filled by regional publications, particularly magazines sponsored and supported by colleges and universities.

All of which brings us to two local literary efforts, both spring 1976 issues—the Crucible of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson; and Rebel 76, East Carolina University's literary magazine.

Many similarities exist between the two. Both contain a mixture of short stories, poems and art work. Technical standards—in paper quality, reproductions and format are praiseworthy in each magazine.

Beyond these commonly held characteristics, there's a number of basic dissimilarities. Principally, the contents of Crucible represents stories and poetry drawn from writers all across the state, contributors of a fairly wide spectrum of ages. Contributors to Rebel 76 are, for the most part, students at ECU.

As a result, the material in Crucible reflects a more mature viewpoint and a greater degree of stylistic discipline.

In these two small, compact collections by Tar Heel writers, (56 pages in Crucible; 69 pages in Rebel 76), there's a number of stories and poems that afford a high degree of reading pleasure and an even greater promise of better things to come from the generally very young body of talent represented.

Bill Toole's short story, On The Money Wagon (Crucible) is an abrasive, at first puzzling story. Written in a style best described as rhythmically angular, it has the propelling power that excites and at the same time exasperates. . . . "I don't mean they didn't care or love. They did. They do. But share his agony and maybe eventually understand it—I think he sensed somehow that only you had the capacity for this . . ." or . . . "This was part of the tradition, part of the mystique of old GD and to be fair to him, part of—maybe the centerfold of the American mystique . . ."

The disappointment of this gritty, gut-emotion story of father-sons actions and interactions is that it's a short story which needs expanding into a novel.

A different type of story is Archie Gastor's A Small Man, in Rebel 76. A heart-warming, tall-tale flavored story, A Small Man has the true ring of rural North Carolina, in mood, dialogue and setting. It's low level, homespun flow leads to a surprise ending, but one totally without contrivance. The narrator, Dewey Hobson, is introduced as a man who "passes roughly half of his work-day sitting at the warm end of a discarded church pew, talking."

The Rebel's brief biographical notes tell us Archie Castor "is a relatively unknown writer from the Greenville area. He owns an antique store. This is his publication debut." It can certainly be hoped we'll be reading more of his distinctive work.

Jeff Rollins' A College Story (Rebel 76) captures the inner chaos of a young man experiencing a first encounter with sexual agony. Void of the shock value prevalent in much contemporary fiction, Rollins' finely structured story is original, convincing and to use a phrase currently not in favor, it's a beautifully cadanced story. Rollins, an ECU sophomore, is editor of Rebel 76. Here is another young writer with exceptional promise.

Summer Girl, Helen Copeland's short story (Crucible) is indicative of the scope and variety of stories published in these two magazines. Dealing with the crush of a young girl for a college student nine years her senior, Summer Girl is sensitive, and credible, a charming old-fashioned story in a contemporary setting.

—"The fears we love must be broken to clear the way for loves we may come to fear."

These lines, from the poem Sally Soapsud (first prize winner in poetry, Crucible) gives a brief hint of the worth of some of the several poems in the two magazines. There's a considerable amount of best forgotten poetry in each, along with an occasional line or verse that does what good poetry must do—set the reader's mind and heart singing with the joy of heightened awareness.

As in past issues of Crucible and Rebel, art work is a strong plus point. This is especially true of Rebel 76, in which 17 pages are devoted to reproductions of prints, drawings and paintings by ECU artists, including several fine color pages.

It can be hoped these two publications will receive the wide readership they so richly deserve. It's in magazines such as these that new and rewarding talents get their first public exposure, and that all important opportunity to feel their efforts have been appreciated.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By WILLIE MAE GIBBS

Barbara Howar, author of LAUGHING ALL THE WAY, has again exhibited the talents of a born novelist in her new book, MAKING ENDS MEET. Funny and witty and wise—Making Ends Meet is the story of Lilly Shawecross. Bright, attractive, successful, Lilly is very much a woman in her time, caught up in the contemporary woman's quest for herself. Her odyssey takes her from South Carolina to the fashion world of New York to the corridors of the Nation's Capital. She is attracted time and again to men she calls the "walking wounded"—her silent, but overpowering father; Vincent Lazlo, a dazzling young fashion designer and homosexual who introduces her to sophisticated New York; her former husband Harry Shawcross, the wrong marital choice to guide her destiny, who endeavors to force the round peg of Lilly into the square hole of social and political Washington. Still it is in Washington that Lilly—aged forty, divorced, with two children, and faced with the dilemma of surviving—tackles the task of accessing the life she has led and the company she has kept and attempts to bring together all the loose ends of her life. Making Ends Meet says a great deal about women's struggle with men and themselves, as well as the other side of the coin.

In THE CANFIELD DECISION, former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has created a suspenseful novel of political intrigue, sexual dalliance and high drama played out in the power cities of the world among men and women who vie for the tangible rewards and hidden spoils of high office. The year is 1983. A lame duck President is in office. Trouble is brewing in the Middle East; unrest mounts at home over President Hurley's domestic policy. Vice President Porter Canfield—48, of a wealthy and prominent family, married to a proper, high-society Philadelphia wife—is the model of a model V.P. Beneath his quick intelligence, pose and charm, he is ruthlessly ambitious. There is increasing talk that Canfield is bitten by the presidential bug. THE CANFIELD DECISION is the story of Canfield's struggle for power, his love affair with the beautiful and able secretary of HEW, and the circumstances that send him on a fateful journey to a startling climax. Mr. Agnew's story is a fascinating one as real as today's headlines.

RICH FRIENDS, a stunning, large canvas novel by Jacqueline Briskin spans two generations in the lives of the prominent Van Vliet family. The story opens in California, summer 1946. The war is over, but life is just beginning for Em and Caroline, heiresses of the powerful Van Vliet family. News of Em's wedding has filled the society pages for weeks. On a sunny afternoon under clear blue California skies, an elegant garden reception is held for the lovely bride and her almost acceptable young husband. Their future held such promise that no one could have guessed what lay ahead for the young couple, and for the Van Vliets. Jacqueline Briskin has portrayed in this powerful and moving novel a world of passion and menace, peopled with brilliantly vivid characters.

A Short History About Tarborough Academies

Tarborough And It Academies—A Historical Analysis Of The Tarborough Male and Female Academies From 1973 to 1910. By Harry Allen Jones, Jr. Greenville. Era Press. Illustrated, 48 pps., paper. $2.25.

In light of the problems faced today in finding new money for school funds, perhaps officials should consider an act passed by the General Assembly of North Carolina in 1793. In that year, the state's governing body authorized "establishing an academy in the Town of Tarborough . . ."

To pay for the school, the assembly authorized trustees "to raise by way of lottery . . . a sum or sums not exceeding one thousand pounds." Lottery tickets were to be sold at 40 shillings each with the top winning ticket giving the lucky holder 200 pounds.

Harry Allen Jones, Jr. speculates the lottery was never held, as his research failed to show further results of the proposed lottery.

Curriculum in the early 19th century was a far cry from that of today's public schools. In 1815, the "curriculum of the academy consisted of reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, Geography and the use of the globes ($16.00 per year) and a study of the Latin and Greek languages and the different branches of mathematics ($22.00 per year) . . ."

After the academy was opened to females (thus the academies of the title), the curriculum was "expanded to include chemistry, astronomy, natural philosophy, rhetoric and history." Females also could have "instruction in plain and ornamental needlework, painting on velvet and music."

A constantly changing parade of male faculty is recorded from 1815 until Frank Wilkinson appeared on the scene in 1858 to become a familiar figure for over a quarter of a century.

One instructor, Robert Lindsay, took over the academy at the tender age of 18. A native of Lochmaben, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, the gifted Scot soon moved on to brighter prospects in Alabama, and in 1870 was elected governor of that state.

Jones feels one of the shortcomings of the first and later Tarboro academies was that "the academy tried to teach too many subjects." At one point, genteel young gentlemen were taught Hebrew, Greek, Latin and French as well as English.

Jones' small book shows clearly that the world of private academies in the 19th century was one far removed from today's complex field of public education. The book is a good example of regional history thoroughly researched and made available to readers interested in another facet of 19th century history—and nostalgia.

KINSTON — A one-man show of color prints by Raleigh photographer Bob Mitchell will be the June exhibit feature by the Kinston Arts Council in their gallery at 108½ West Caswell Street.

The show, titled "A Visual Experience," is made up of selected portraits and pictorials from the artist's works.

Mitchell is photograph director at Mitchell Photography, a professional studio; and manager of Prolab, a custom color laboratory, both located in the North Hills Shopping Plaza in Raleigh. He has been a professional photographer for over 20 years. Some of his works were included in the N. C. Arts Council traveling exhibition in 1971; and one of them, a portrait, won a medal. He has won awards and has exhibited in both state and national professional photographic shows.

Mitchell and his wife, Ruth will be guests of honor at a reception opening the show today at 3:00 p.m. at the gallery.

"I have been committed to color photography, both personally and professionally, for most of my career," Mitchell said in an interview. "As the mature form of a visual medium that is almost 150 years old, it offers the serious photographer his greatest opportunity for expression. It also demands the utmost of him in creative ability, craftsmanship and technology."

Pirates Take 7-0 Summer Season Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Terry Durham scattered six hits as he hurled the East Carolina University Pirates to a 7-0 victory over Methodist College last night. It was the first game of the North Carolina Summer Collegiate League's 1976 season.

The Pirates banged out 10 hits, one by each batter who went to the plate during the evening, and two of them were for extra bases. Pete Paradossi cracked a triple, while Charles Stevens contributed a double.

The Bucs also took advantage of mistakes by the Monarchs, scoring runs on each of the two errors Methodist made.

Durham struck out 11 batters in his initial start of the summer, while he walked four, all in the early innings. Several times, Methodist was able to work up threats against the Pirates, but each time, the Bucs were able to come up with the defensive plays they needed.

Methodist put just two runners as far as third base, in the fourth and in the eighth. The runner got to third in the fourth with just one out, but Durham struck out the next two to get out of that jam. In the eighth,two were out when Dave Roller and Buddy Gooch got back to back hits (the only time they got two hits in an inning), but an infield out ended that threat.

Three other times, Methodist got men on second, but like the other two frames, they got nothing for it.

East Carolina scored its first two runs in the second inning. With one out, Bobby Supel cracked a single to center field and moved up on a wild pitch. He took third on a sacrifice, and scored on another wild pitch.

Paradossi's triple resulted in a run in the third. He led off with the blast over the center fielder's head, then scored on Robert Brinkley's sacrifice fly to right.

Two more came in the fourth, running the lead out to 5-0. Stevens opened with a double to right and with one down, he scored when Carraway singled to center. Carraway stole up, and reached third on a hit by Howard MCullough. Brinkley followed with a hit, scoring Carraway.

But in the eighth, they got two more runs. Supel walked, but was cut down when Stevens grounded to third. Griff Garner singled to left, and a wild pitch moved up both him and Stevens. McCullough then reached on an error, scoring both Steverns and Garner.

Williamston Wins East Title With 5-3 Decision

WILLIAMTON—Just two victories separate the Williamston Tigers from a second straight state 3-A baseball title following last night's 5-3 win over Pembroke.

The win brought the Tigers their second Eastern Championship in a row, and they will face the winner of the East Lincoln-Fred T. Foard game in the championship series this week. The best of three series will be played at the home of the Western champ.

Pembroke scored first, getting all three of its runs in the third inning. Travis Sampson singled and Chris Locklear got a hit. Herbert Oxendine singled, driving in Sampson. David Deese followed with another hit, scoring Locklear, and Oxendine scored on an error.

But Tommy Gardner buckled down and the Tigers stopped any further uprising.

Williamston came right back to tie it up in the bottom of the third. Mike Koesy and Ken Herman both walked and scored on a triple by Tim Hardison. Hardison then came home on an error.

In the fifth, the Tigers got what proved to be the winning run. Greg Roberson singled and Herbie Rogers walked. Eddie Odom ran for Roberson and scored on an error when Herman reached.

The insurance run came in the sixth. Eric Godard and Roberson walked and Koesy singled in Godard.

Error Leads To Oakland Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland's Don Baylor stole second base and went all the way home on a wild throw by New York catcher Thurman Munson in the ninth inning Saturday, giving the A's a 7-6 victory over the Yankees.

Baylor beat out an infield single with two outs in the ninth inning and stole second base on the first pitch to Sal Bando. When Munson's throw sailed into center field, Baylor scored to break a 6-6 tie.

Sparky Lyle, 4-4, the fourth Yankee pitcher, was charged with the defeat. Rollie Fingers, the third A's pitcher, finished the game and raised his record to 3-5.

The A's erased a 6-4 Yankee lead in the eighth when Phil Garner drilled a two-run triple on the first pitch thrown by Lyle.

Astros Edge Chicago, 4-3

HOUSTON (AP) — Wilbur Howard drove in the winning run with a seventh-inning single and J.R. Richard broke a personal four-game losing streak Saturday night as the Houston Astros defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-3.

Enos Cabell led off the seventh with a single and took second on Roger Metzger's sacrifice before coming home on Howard's hit off loser Oscar Zamora, 3-1.

Richard, 6-5, worked the first 7 2-3 innings, allowing only six hits while striking out five. Ken Forsch finished up and gained his 12th save of the season, tops in the majors.

A double by Jerry Morales and Manny Trillo's two-out single gave the Cubs a 1-0 lead in the fourth. Houston tied it in the bottom half of the inning on Cesar Cedeno's eighth home run.

The Cubs used an unearned run to take a 2-1 sixth-inning lead, but the Astros scored two runs in their half of the sixth. Bob Watson's RBI drag-bunt single and Jose Cruz' triple put Houston ahead 3-2 before Chicago tied it in the seventh on two walks, a single and an error.

Phillies Lose Third Game, 4-2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ken Reitz knocked in three runs with a two-run homer and an infield single Saturday as the San Francisco Giants sent the Philadelphia Phillies to their third consecutive loss, 4-2.

The outcome marked the first time this season the National League East-leading Phillies have lost three in a row.

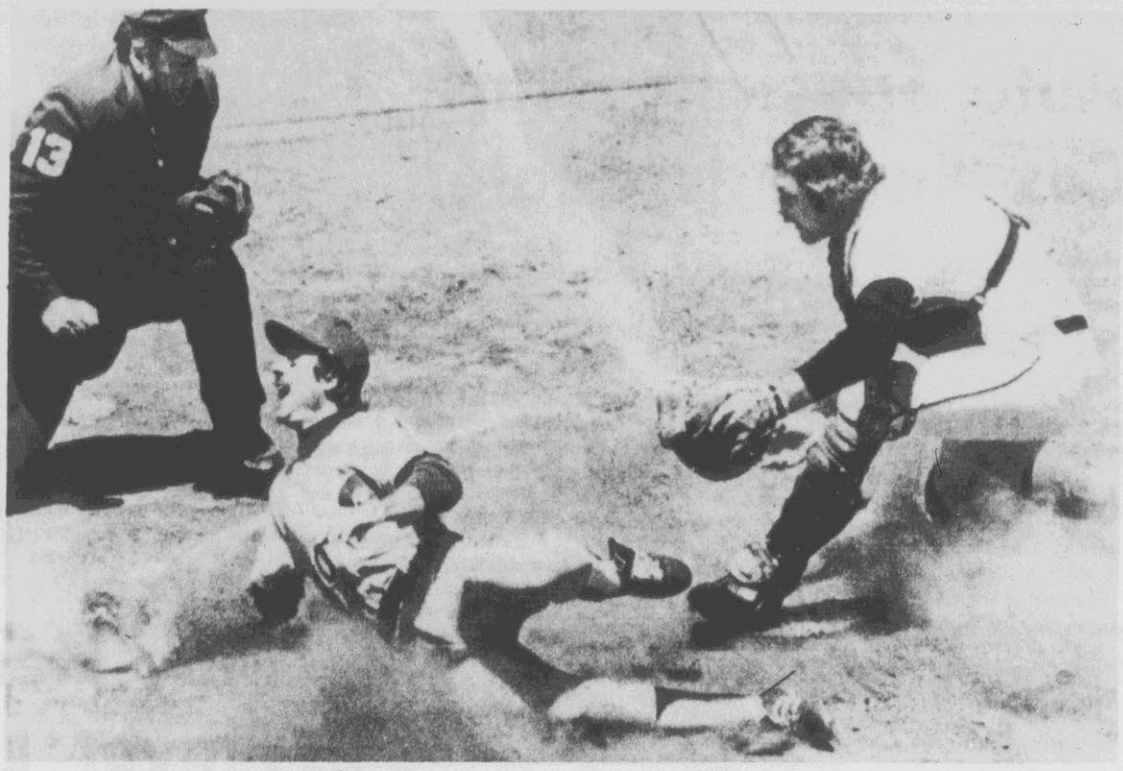

Right-hander Ed Halicki, 4-8, struggled through the first six innings for the victory, and was bailed out of a seventh-inning jam by Randy Moffitt as the Giants defeated Steve Carlton, 5-3.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the second on Bob Tolan's one-out double, an infield single by Garry Maddox, and Tim McCarver's run-scoring single.

Bobby Murcer's leadoff single and Reitz' fourth homer of the season, a 400-foot, two-out shot in the bottom of the second pushed the Giants ahead to stay.

San Francisco scored a run in the third on Halicki's single, Carlton's wild pitch and Gary Matthews' two-out double. They added a run in the sixth on Murcer's single, Chris Speier's sacrifice, a ground out and Reitz' infield hit.

Halicki was removed in the seventh after successive singles by pinch-hitter Johnny Oates, Dave Cash and Larry Bowa gave the Phillies their second run.

BOWA BLOCKED OFF—Larry Bowa, of the Phildadelphia Phillies, is blocked at home plate as he attempts to score on an infield out by teammate Jay Johnstone in the first inning of Saturday's game. Jaycees Take First With Win

Five runs in the third inning helped the Jaycees take a 6-3 win over the Optimists and take over first place in the North State League by a half-game.

The Jaycees are now 7-2 while the Optimists are 7-3. The Jaycees could extend that to a game or they could fall back into a tie this afternoon. They play Union Carbide at Elm Street at 4:00 p.m.

The Optimists scored first getting a pair in the third. Rudy Stalls walked and Mike Iaboni reached on a three-base error scoring Stalls. Sammy Hodges singled scoring Iaboni.

But the lead disappeared in the bottom of the frame. Mark Harris walked and Louis Fletcher reached on an error. Mike Pollard doubled scoring Harris and Fletcher came in on a wild pitch. Walks to Henry Goodson and Chuck Coggins loaded the bases and Danny Woods' double drove in two more runs.

John House scored the third Optimist run as Sammy Hodges reached on an error in the fifth. The Jaycees matched it in the bottom of the frame with a homer by Pollard.

Purtzer Falls From Lead Into Big Tie For First Place

By ED McFALL

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Rookie Tom Purtzer, who lead after the first two days, bogeyed the 18th hole Saturday to end a seesaw third round and cause a five-way tie through three days of play at the Bicentennial Golf Classic.

Purtzer had taken a one-stroke lead into third-round play at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club but could not hold on to that advantage with a round of one-over-par 72 that included a double bogey, a hole-in-one, four bogeys and three birdies. His 54-hole total was 208, five-under par.

Deadlocked with him were Ken Still, Larry Nelson, Jerry Pate and Jerry McGee.

One stroke in back of them were Masters champion Ray Floyd and Terry Diehl, while Grier Jones, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Lyn Lott were at 210.

Purtzer, just finishing up his first year on the pro tour and trying to win his first tournament, had a chance to hold the lead. But on the 18th, his drive was in the left rough, his second shot went over the green and his third shot came back four feet short of the pin. He missed his par putt.

Still and Nelson climbed into contention with five-under-par 66s in a tournament that has seen a number of lesser-known pros scramble into contention for the $40,000 first prize.

Purtzer's ace was on the par 3 ninth hole where his 9-iron shot hit about six inches behind the hole and spun in. The jubilant Purtzer, who has won only about $6,000 since joining the tour last year, rushed over and kissed his wife as the gallery cheered.

The ace offset a double bogey suffered on the preceding hole where his drive and second shot stayed in the left rough, his third was on the fringe, and he three-putted.

McGee, Pate and Rodriguez had started the day one in back of Purtzer, but Rodriguez suffered a double bogey on the same ninth hole that Purtzer aced, and he finished with a 73.

However, McGee and Pate had even-par 71s despite both of them bogeying the 17th.

Still, appropriately wearing a Philadelphia Phillies' baseball hat that he said was a gift from an "old friend," manager Danny Ozark, had an eagle on the fifth hole that enabled him to make the turn at four-under. He added a birdie on the 17th.

Graniteers Take Win Over Pepsi

Alan Dickens and Stevie Holloman collaborated to pitch the Graniteers to their fifth win and a 7-4 victory over Pepsi-Cola, Saturday.

The Graniteers are now 5-5 while Pepsi has yet to win a game.

Both teams scored a run in the first. The Graniteers got theirs in a single by Mike Tucker. A sacrifice fly by Ken McKenzie drove in Pepsi's.

Bubba Briley and Alan Dickens drew walks opening the second and Holloman was hit by a pitch. A walk to Tony Ellis forced in a run and Tucker singled in Dickens.

The Graniteers pushed over four more tallies in the fourth to get all they needed. Two runs scored on an error and John Byrd hit a two-run single for the 7-1 lead.

Pepsi got two in the fifth on an error and a bases-loaded walk to Robert Lilley. Scott Wilson doubled in the sixth and scored on MacKenzie's single for the other Pepsi run.

Tim Shank had two hits for Pepsi and Mike Tucker and Art Pittman two each for the Graniteers.

Wild Pitch Helps Cleveland Beat Chisox

By JOE MOOSHIL

CHICAGO (AP) — John Lowenstein, a defensive replacement, tripled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning and then scored on a wild pitch Saturday in leading the Cleveland Indians to a 5-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Buddy Bell opened the 10th with a walk off Clay Carroll, 3-2. Then Lowenstein, who came into the game in the seventh with Cleveland ahead 3-2, tripled to right center and scored on the wild pitch by Carroll.

Cleveland starter Pat Dobson had a five-hitter going into the eighth when Nils Nyman beat out an infield single with one out, stole second and scored on a double by Chet Lemon to tie the game.

The White Sox had jumped to a 2-0 lead. Jim Spencer drilled his third homer, in the second, and Pat Kelly singled across a run in the fifth after Downing had singled and Rich Coggins had walked.

Holtzman Wins Fifth As Baltimore Falls

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ken Holtzman pitched a five-hitter and Doug DeCinces drove in the tie-breaking run with a sixth-inning single as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Minnesota Twins 5-1 Saturday.

Consecutive singles by Tony Muser, Ken Singleton and DeCinces produced the winning run after Joe Decker, 2-4, had retired the first two batters of the inning.

The Orioles added three runs in the seventh off Bill Campbell, who beat them in relief Friday night. One scored on a single by Lee May, whose home run in the fourth had snapped a scoreless tie.

The Twins scored an unearned run in the sixth when Steve Brye sliced a two-out double to the right field corner and came home as Reggie Jackson dropped Roy Smalley's fly in short center. Minnesota had two of its hits in the eighth.

Minnesota muffed a scoring chance in the third when Dave McKay opened with a walk and moved to third on a sacrifice and a wild pitch. He was tagged out on a botched suicide squueze attempt, when Brye failed to connect on a 1-2 pitch and struck out.

Brett, Mayberry Carry Royals

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY (AP) — George Brett smacked three singles and John Mayberry drove home a pair of runs as the Kansas City Royals, aided by two unearned runs, whipped Milwaukee Saturday 5-4 in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader.

For Brett, whose .349 batting average going into the game led the American League, it was the 10th three-hit performance of the season.

Milwaukee first baseman George Scott staked the Brewers to a 3-1 lead with a two-run triple, then committed a two-run error in the next inning.

After Kansas City loaded the bases, Scott fielded Bob Stinson's sharp grounder cleanly, but threw wildly over the head of catcher Darrell Porter, allowing Mayberry and Hal McRae to score.

The Royals took the lead in the fifth when McRae's sacrifice fly scored Amos Otis, then added another run in the seventh on a sacrifice by Mayberry.

Bold Forbes Holds On For Win Over McKenzie Bridge

By ED SCHUYLER, JR.
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes took the lead at the start and held it by fighting off a furious closing rush by McKenzie Bridge Saturday to win the $195,000 Belmont Stakes.

The question had been: could Bold Forbes carry his speed over 1½ miles? The answer was: "Yes"—but barely.

Great Contractor moved up on the turn to challenge Bold Forbes as Best Laid Plans, who has been second most of the way, faded. Then McKenzie Bridge sailed down the middle of the stretch to pass Great Contractor and just missed getting Bold Forbes.

The time for the 1½ miles was 2:29 flat as Bold Forbes cut out fractions of 234-5 for the quarter, 47 for the half, 1:11 for the three quarters and 2:014-5 for the mile and a quarter. The three-quarter time was a full two seconds slower than in the Preakness, when Bold Forbes burned himself out and fell prey to the stretch runs of Elocutionist and Play the Red.

Bold Forbes finished a neck in front of McKenzie Bridge, who has never won a stakes. McKenzie Bridge was another neck in front of Great Contractor, who in turn was eight lengths to the good of Majestic Light.

Completing the order of finish were Aeronaut, Play the Red, Mullineaux, Best Laid Plans, Close to Noon and Quick Card.

The victory by Bold Forbes, owned by Esteban Rodriguez Tizol and ridden by Angel Cordero Jr., marked the third time in 15 years a Derby winner who lost in the Preakness has come back to win the Belmont. Chateaugay did it in 1963 and Riva Ridge in 1972.

Bold Forbes paid $3.80, $3.40 and $2.80. McKenzie Bridge, owned by Mrs. Douglas Carver, returned $5 and $3.80. Great Contractor, owned by Howard P. Wilson, returned $3.80.

It was a top riding performance by Cordero, who helped Bold Forbes save enough of himself for the stretch, when McKenzie Bridge, ridden by Darrel McHargue, came thundering up from seventh place with one-quarter of a mile to go.

A few more yards and McKenzie Bridge would have been the winner—but in the Belmont, they pay off on who is in front at the end of a mile and a half.

Immediately after the race, Cordero said he told the horse, "Get me to the eighth pole (an eighth of a mile from the finish) and I'll take it from there, baby!"

Cordero broke the colt he calls his Puerto Rican Rolls-Royce on top and, after the first quarter of a mile, led Best Laid Plans by two lengths. The margin was up to six lengths after another quarter but was down to 1½ after a mile.

Best Laid Plans managed to stay in the runner-up position for another quarter but was six lengths back and had had it as Great Contractor was moving on the outside into third place.

Burleson's Hit Beats Angels, 4-3

By PHIL CANNADAY
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Rick Burleson cracked a two-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning, scoring Doug Griffin from second base and giving the Boston Red Sox a 4-3 victory over the California Angels Saturday.

Griffin walked and went to second on a pitch that got past catcher Andy Etchebarren before Burleson got his game-winning hit.

Designated hitter Tommy Davis had knotted the score at 3-3 in the top of the ninth with his first homer of the year. The slam over the left-field wall also brought home Bob Jones, who had reached first when a throw from first baseman Cecil Cooper went over the head of pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, who was covering.

Jenkins, 5-6, tossed a five-hitter for the victory. He gave up a single in each of the first two innings, then he set down 17 consecutive California batters before giving up a home run to Ron Jackson in the eighth.

Frank Tanana, 7-4, held the Red Sox in check until the fourth inning, when the Red Sox loaded the bases and Cooper slapped a two-run single.

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dwight Stones of Long Beach State, making a promise he could keep, broke his own world high jump record with a leap of 7 feet, 7 inches Saturday at the 55th annual National Collegiate Track and Field Championships.

Stones, an Olympic bronze medalist with his sights on a gold in Montreal this summer, set the old mark of 7-6½ in 1973 while competing for the Pacific Coast Club.

The cocky Stones predicted he would set a world mark at the NCAAs because he felt he wouldn't reach it in the Olympic Games this summer at Montreal. Stones described the Olympics as a drag.

His effort Saturday, anything but a drag, marked the ninth time he set a world record in the high jump and the 19th time he has gone over 7-5.

Stones said the high jump at the Olympic Games takes five hours and is nerve wracking. He predicted high jumpers at the Games will not be able to keep their muscles loose for so long a period.

The 22-year-old Stones was at Munich in 1972, finishing third and sufferring from a lack of experience.

But he went back to Munich in 1973 in a dual meet against West Germany and jumped 7-6⅝, then a world record.

The NCAA record was 7-4, set by Rey Brown of California Poly at San Luis Obisopo and Tom Woods of Oregon, both in 1973.

The other prime prospect for setting a world record here was Arkansas State's Earl Bell, who last week set a pole vault world mark of 18 feet, 7¼ inches.

Bell won his speciality Saturday but did not really approach his record, scaling the height 18-1¼, which was a meet record. The old mark was 18-1, set by Bell and Dan Ripley of San Jose State, last year at Provo, Utah. Long Beach State's Don Baird, was second at 17-7. Bell tried at 18-7 but failed.

Meanwhile, Texas-El Paso's James Munyala ran away from the field in the final 150 yards to win the 3,000 meter steeplechase and Villanova's Eamonn Coghlan took the 1,500-meter run with a strong stretch kick, both runners setting meet records and defending their titles.

Munyala, the durable Kenyan, kicked away from Brigham Young's Henry Marsh and Tennessee's Ron Addison to win the steeplechase in 8:24.86. He broke the NCAA meet record of 8:28.1, set by Doug Brown of Tennessee in 1973. Marsh was timed in 8:27.8, also breaking the old record.

Coghlan, who had won three straight NCAA titles and nine IC4A crowns during his spectacular years at Villanova, burst into the lead at the top of the stretch and went on to edge Wilson Waigwa of Texas-El Paso by two yards in 3:37.1, the equivalent of a 3:54.6 mile. Waigwa, who ran last most of the race, edged Oregon's Matt Centrowitz, both running under the old mark, Waigwa in 3:37.26 and Centrowitz in 3:37.29.

The NCAA 1,500-meter record, 3:39.7, was held by Dave Wottle of Bowling Green. He set it in 1972.

McKenzie Bridge Takes Second

At this point, McKenzie Bridge was seventh.

Then, as Great Contractor, ridden by Jacinto Vasquez, closed on Bold Forbes, McHargue brought McKenzie Bridge on like a streak. He shot past Great Contractor about midstretch and, as a crowd of 57,519 at Belmont Park roared, he chopped away at Bold Forbes' margin with every stride until he was just a neck away.

But then, there was the finish line and the 108-year-old Belmont had it first start-to-finish winner since Riva Ridge did it four years ago.

Byrd also walked, scoring Tyson, and a walk to Dawson scored Williams with the seventh run.

Pitt. Plaza tried to rally, coming up with one in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Cox tied it up with one in the second. M. Thurber singled, stole second and gained third on a passed ball. He scored on J. Wilson's out.

The Graniteers picked up six more in the top of the third. A. Hudson walked and advanced on a passed ball and an out. He scored on an error. J. James reached on a fielder's choice and Barnes singled. T. Gartman reached on a two-base error, scoring James, and D. Alligood walked, loading them up. J. Whitehurst was hit by a pitch to force in one run, and R. Uhlman reached on an error, scoring Gartman. Walks to Hudson and T. Brown forced in Alligood and Whitehurst.

Cox added two in the third. R. Sutton walked and moved to third on passed balls. G. Stackhouse walked and stole second. M. Sasser also walked, and a walk to J. Wilson scored Sutton. Stackhouse scored on a passed ball.

The Graniteers got what proved to be the winning run in the top of the fourth, scoring a pair. James singled and Barnes got a hit. Both advanced on a passed ball and Gartman reached on a fielder's choice scoring James. Barnes scored on Whitehurst's out, making it 9-3.

The Graniteers picked up two more in the sixth, while Cox got one in the fourth, and three more in the sixth.

Borg Sputters; But Gets Win

PARIS (AP) — Bjorn Borg, seeking to win this tournament for the third year in a row, sputtered briefly but quickly regained control to move into the fourth round of the French Open Saturday, the day before his 20th birthday.

Borg, the No. 1 seed, defeated Antonio Zugarelli of Italy 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 in the first sunny weather in Paris in a week, which brought out a record crowd of 12,596 to Roland Garros Stadium.

There were no upsets, but Sherwood Stewart of Goose Creek, Tex., came closest to pulling off a surprise, winning the first two sets from Jaime Fillol of Chile, seeded ninth, before losing the last three.

Eddie Dibbs of Miami became the first American to advance into the fourth round, beating Victor Amaya of Holland, Mich., in a four-set match in which both Americans insulted the French officials.

The big crowd also had a shock when Spain's Jose Higueras fell to the red clay of the center court writhing in pain with a broken arm in the fifth set of his match with the French ninth seed, Francois Jauffret. Higueras forfeited the match and was taken to a hospital. The score at the time was 7-5, 2-6, 6-7, 6-4, 1-2.

Borg's problems came both in the second and third sets when he fell behind 1-3. Winning 4-3 in the third set, Zugarelli had two break points, but lobbed long and double faulted. Borg broke through on a deep cross-court backhand that the crowd screamed was out.

The other top seed to play, Manuel Orantes of Spain, No. 3, won easily over Julian Ganzabal of Argentina 6-0, 6-3, 6-4.

In the third round of women's singles, fifth seeded Fiorella Bonicelli of Uruguay was eliminated by Renate Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 2-6, 6-4.

Carolina Dairy, Builders Take Second Babe Ruth Wins

Home Builders and Carolina Dairy got their second wins and College View its first in Babe Ruth League games Saturday.

Home Builders went eight innings before getting a 1-0 win over NCNB. College View scored a run in the top of the fifth to edge past Pepsi-Cola, 2-1, and Planters Bank was shackled on one hit as Carolina Dairy took an 8-0 shut out.

In the opener, NCNB threatened first putting two on in the second. NCNB again threatened in the third but had one runner thrown out at home and left the bases loaded. The bankers put men on in the fourth fifth and sixth without a score.

Home Builders first runner reached in the second on a error. A single put one on in the third, on error in the fourth and two walks in the fifth but no run scored.

College View had its first threat choked off in the first on a double play. Then in the fourth, College View put Lindsey Winstead on with a walk and he stole second. An out moved him to third and he scored on a passed ball.

The lead didn't last long as Pepsi matched it in the bottom of the inning. Pepsi had put men on in each of the first three frames without a score. Calvin Parker led off the fourth with a single and stole second. Mike Norfleet's double scored him.

John Haynes walked and a wild pitch put him on second in the fifth. He took third on an out and scored the winning run when Steve Hawkins reached on an error.

Mike Williams' no-hit bid was broken in the seventh on Mac Stokes' lead-off single but Planters was unable to generate any offense. Planter's loaded the bases in the sixth on three walks but did not score.

Carolina Dairy got all it needed in the third. Mitch Meeks and Wayne Stokes both walked and Williams reached on an error loading the bases. Woronoff reached on an error scoring Meeks and a hit by Rufus Sutton drove in Stokes and Williams.

Siderowf Wins On First Playoff Hole

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Dick Siderowf, a Wall St. stockbroker, today won his second British Amateur Golf title in four years, beating John Davies of England on the 37th hole, the first extra hole of sudden-death overtime.

Siderowf, who captured the title in 1973, won the 35th hole to square the match.

On the 36th hole, he narrowly missed a 10-foot putt that would have won the match in regulation. The hole was halved and the marathon duel went on to the 37th.

Davies had won the 34th hole to go one up with two to play, putting the pressure on Siderowf, 38, from Westport, Conn. It was the first time the Englishman had been ahead since the sixth hole in the morning.

But it didn't last long.

After seven hours of play, it came down to the 37th hole. There, Siderowf sank a putt of six feet and Davies missed one from four feet. Siderowf won the hole with a four to Davies' five.

That made him the third two-time winner of this prestigious event, joining Lawson Little, who did it successively in 1934 and 1935, and Frank Stranahan, who won in 1948 and 1950.

At the 32nd hole, Siderowf drove into the notorious "hell bunker" and went on to make a bogey six. Davies had a par 5 and drew even.

Siderowf had gone one up at the 30th hole. Davies drove into the rough from the tee and shanked his second shot. The American won the hole with a par four.

Siderowf, who was one up after this morning's round, had gone ahead by two holes when he won the 26th hole. But then he lost two out of the next three holes and his lead disappeared.

Siderowf three-putted at the 27th and 29th, holes Davies won, and the two finalists were even as they marched to the 30th hole.

Siderowf had lost his morning lead at the start of the afternoon round. At the 19th, he pulled his drive, recovered with a good iron shot, but then three-putted from just off the green. Davies won the hole with a par four and drew even.

In the morning round, Siderowf shot a par 72 on the 6,914-yard Old Course at St. Andrews.

May Heads Player List

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scott May, college basketball's Player of the Year, and Indiana teammate Quinn Buckner headed the 15-man list of players selected today for the United States Olympic basketball team.

The squad, which reports to head Coach Dean Smith at Chapel Hill, N.C., next Wednesday, includes four of Smith's North Carolina Tar Hell players—6-foot-10 centers Mitch Kupchak and Tommy LaGarde, 6-5 forward Walt Davis and 6-2 guard Phil Ford.

The 10-man selection committee also chose 6-10 Scott Lloyd and 6-8 Mark Landsberger, teammates at Arizona State.

The other forwards besides the 6-7 May are 6-7 Kenny Carr of North Carolina State, 6-5 All-American Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame, 6-6 Ernie Grunfeld of Tennessee, 6-7 Phil Hubbard of Michigan and 6-6 Steve Sheppard of Maryland.

Besides Ford and the 6-3 Buckner, the guards selected were 6-4 Otis Birdsong of Houston and 6-3 Tate Armstrong of Duke.

The team was announced by Ben Lewis, secretary of the U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee, and Smith, who conducted the week-long tryout camp.

In the five weeks between the time the team reports to Chapel Hill and its first game in Montreal, three players will be cut, leaving 12 to compete in the Summer Olympic Tournament.

"This was not my team of 15," said Smith. "Everybody had his own team, the 10 members of the selection committee, the 14 coaches, even the newspaper men. But you have to appreciate the calibre that we have here."

Smith said the 15-man team selected differed in three places from the squad he had in mind, "but I won't say where."

Of the 15 chosen, three—LaGarde, Grunfeld and Birdsong—were members of the United States team at the Pan-American Games last fall.

This team will be out to regain for the United States the gold medal it failed to win for the first time four years ago, when the Americans lost their first Olympic basketball game ever, a hotly disputed final game against the Soviet Union in the 1972 Summer Games at Munich.

Union Carbide Nips Kiwanis

Union Carbide nipped the winless Kiwanis team, 7-6, Friday in the North State Little League.

The victory boosted the Union Carbide record to 3-6, while the Kiwanis are now 0-10.

It took eight innings before it was all over, however.

The Kiwanis picked up three runs in the second inning. John Parnell walked, as did David Welborn. Jay Holly walked, loading the bases and Eric Lee was hit by a pitch, scoring Parnell. Jeff Boyd walked to score Welborn, and a walk to Greg Davis brought in Holly.

Union Carbide came back with two in its half of the second. Jeff Wilson reached on an error, as did David Moon. Jon Catlett walked, and Steven Bath singled in Wilson, but Moon was thrown out at the plate. Mike Livingston walked, and Dwayne Fisher reached on an error, scoring Catlett.

The Kiwanis added three more in the fourth for a 6-2 lead. John Jordan walked, as did Boyd and Brian Hill singled in Lee. Spencer Mayo grounded out, but scored Boyd, and a passed ball let Hill in.

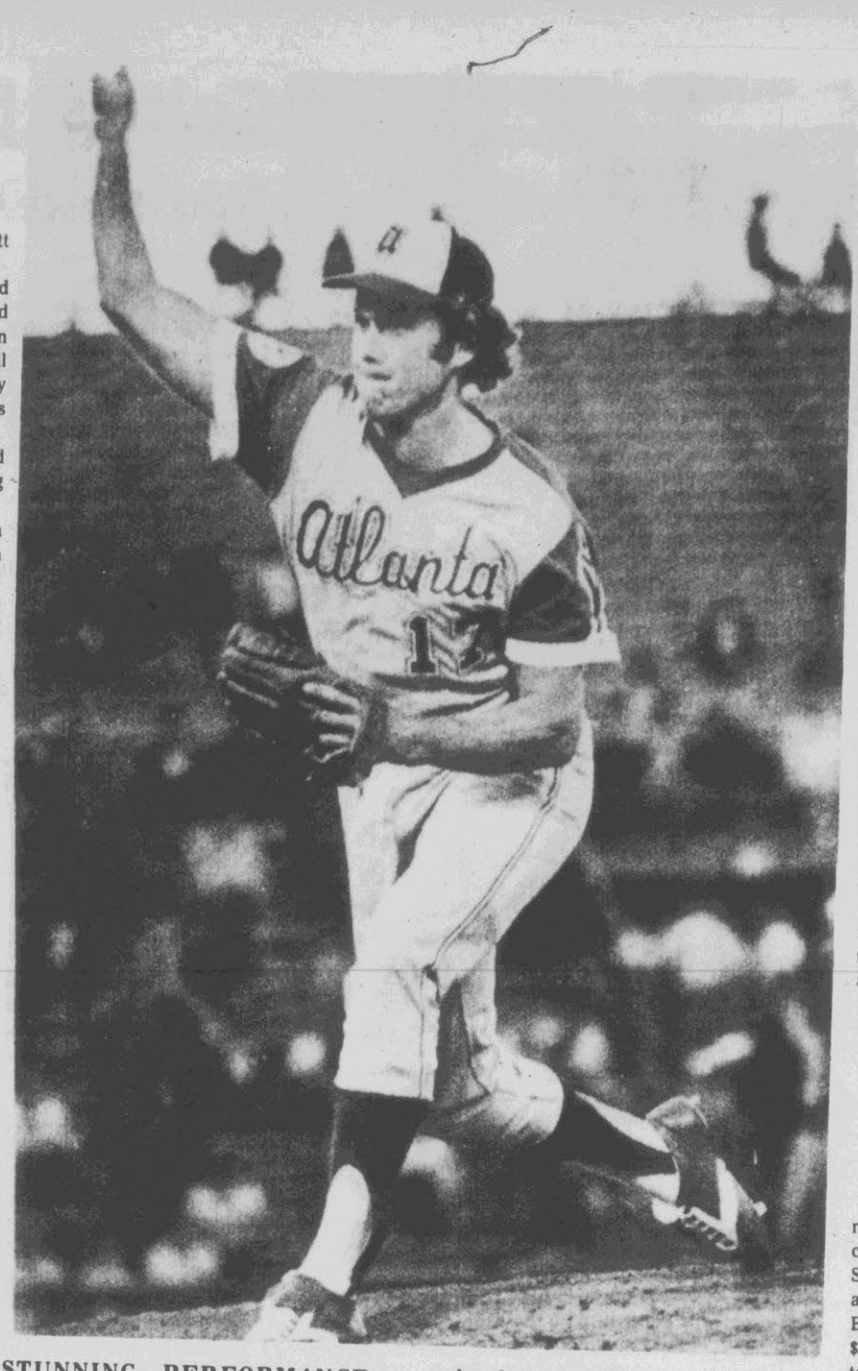

Union Carbide started back with two in the bottom of the fourth. Livingston walked and Fisher reached on an error. Greg Wright reached on an error, scoring both runners.

In the sixth, Union Carbide tied it up. Fisher reached on an error and Wright doubled. Chris Joyner reached on a fielder's choice that scored Fisher, but got Wright at second. Vince Hankins then doubled in Joyner to knot it at 6-6.

It finally ended in the eighth, when Wright led off the frame with a solo home run for Union Carbide, giving it the win.

Wright and Hankins each had two hits for UC. No one had more than one for the Kiwanis.

STUNNING PERFORMANCE—Atlanta's Braves pitcher Andy Messersmith finally looked like a million dollars Friday night as he just missed on a bid for a no-hitter against the Montreal Expos. Pepe Mangual got a ninth inning hit to spoil the gem. (AP Wirephoto)

Messersmith Misses Bid For No-Hitter

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

For eight innings, the only wind at Jarry Park was the swish of Montreal bats.

Then came the ninth. "I made one mistake and I missed by three or four inches," said Andy Messersmith.

Elsewhere in the National League, the New York Mets blasted the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-0; the Houston Astros blanked the Chicago Cubs 1-0; the Cincinnati Reds routed the St. Louis Cardinals 11-2; the Pittsburgh Pirates turned back the San Diego Padres 7-2 and the San Francisco Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1.

Mets 11, Dodgers 0

Dave Kingman smashed three homers and drove in eight runs to back Tom Seaver's three-hit pitching as New York routed Los Angeles. Kingman, setting a Met record for RBI in one game, slugged a two-run homer in the fourth, a three-run homer in the fifth and another three-run shot in the seventh. His performance gave him 20 homers for the season, tops in the major leagues.

Seaver, 5-4, ended a personal four-game losing streak with his first victory in a month.

Astros 1, Cubs 0

Houston's Mike Cosgrove scattered six hits and the Astros overcame Rick Reuschel's two-hitter to beat Chicago. Houston left fielder Jose Cruz hit an infield single in the second inning and went to third base on the play when Reuschel threw wildly to first base for an error. Cruz scored on third baseman Enos Cabell's groundout.

Cosgrove, 2-3, preserved his shutout by pitching his way out of Chicago threats in the first and fifth innings.

Reds 11, Cardinals 2

Cincinnati exploded for five runs on seven hits in the opening inning and trounced St. Louis with the aid of George Foster's 10th home run of the season. St. Louis right-hander Lynn McGlothen, 5-4, was the victim of an early barrage ignited by Ken Griffey's one-out triple.

Pirates 7, Padres 2

Jerry Reuss pitched a four-hitter and slump-ridden Richie Hebner drove in two runs to lead Pittsburgh over San Diego. The Pirates took a 4-0 lead in the second inning off Padre starter Dave Freisleben, who suffered his first loss after a pair of shutout victories last week over Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Giants 5, Phillies 1

San Francisco hammered six extra base hits off Jim Lonborg and snapped the 10-game winning streak of the Philadelphia right-hander. Lonborg, 8-1 this season, was battered for six hits and four runs in the first inning, while dropping his first game since June 30, 1975.

Sailors Embarking On Long Voyages

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — The biggest fleet of lone sailors ever to try the Atlantic began its odyssey by dodging freighters in the English Channel and howling for more wind to boost assaults on speed records to the United States.

The weather was sullen gray and the wind a disappointing 10 knots as 126 competitors sailed into the crowded shipping lanes Saturday at the start of the fifth single-handed transatlantic race.

They included a grim British ex-marine who had just buried his wife, a Frenchman with a space-age yacht the size of a navy frigate and a 28-year-old Englishwoman with a borrowed sloop and month's supply of paper panties.

The biggest, fastest yachts figured to reach the open ocean Sunday and swap the perils of the channel traffic jam for those of fog, storms, icebergs and loneliness on the expected three-week voyage to Newport, R.I.

France has the strongest contingent of big boats aiming to crack the 21½-day record set by skipper Alain Colas in the last race in 1972.

Colas is determined to cut that to 18 days this year in the controversial, 236-foot Club Mediterranee, a steel-hulled, four-masted schooner nearly 10 times the length of the smallest entry.

It is the largest vessel ever sailed by one man. Ordinarily it would carry a crew of 20 or more. The race committee barred use of his satellite-and-computer-assisted navigation system, but Colas angrily declared he would sail the $1.27 million yacht to victory anyway, saying that to quit would be "childish."

Critics argue it is not safe for one man, despite Colas' skills, to sail such a huge craft alone, even with the help of push-button sail-controlling gear.

Hot competition is expected from other Frenchman: Yvon Fauconnier in the 128-foot schooner ITT Oceanic, Jean-Yves Terlain in the 70-foot catamaran Kriter III, Eric Tabarly in the 73-foot ketch Pen Duick VI and Joel Charpentier in the 63-foot schooner Wild Rocket.

Britain's main hope is in the deadly serious efforts of Mike McMullen, an ex-marine captain and yachting writer whose wife was buried Friday after she was electrocuted Wednesday trying to retrieve an electric sander that had fallen overboard.

McMullen, sailing American millionaire Paul Mellon's 46-foot trimaran Three Cheers, said he would make Newport in less than 20 days "or else." He carried food for only 20 days and only 10 gallons of water. The Three Cheers finished fifth in 1972.

The leading American contender is Michael Kane, whose 62-foot trimaran Spirit of America has a red-white-and-blue mainsail that looks from a distance like the Stars and Stripes. It is the first race for the new yacht, which sailed over from America with a crew.

Most of the smaller entries are opting for the kindlier weather of a southern route past the Azores Islands, even though that adds 450 miles to the 2,850-mile Northern Great Circle route.

England's Clare Francis, one of four female skippers in the race, crossed the Atlantic in 37 days three years ago and plans to push the 38-foot sloop Roberton's Golly Cross in 30 days this time.

California Edges Wisconsin Shell

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — California ended Wisconsin's domination of college rowing's biggest event with a stunning victory in the varsity eight-oared finals of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association championship here Saturday.

California's eight-oared shell stroked the 2,000-meter Onondaga Lake course in six minutes and 31 seconds. The Princeton rowers came from behind to nip Wisconsin for second place.

The Badgers had been heavy favorites to win their fourth varsity eight-oared rowing championship. They had beaten the California shell by a half-deck in a preliminary race Thursday.

Pennsylvania took the Jim Ten Eyck Memorial Trophy away from Wisconsin for the first time in four years by capturing the over-all team title with 259.8 points. Wisconsin was second with 186.8 points.

California led throughout the closely rowed race with Wisconsin's defending champions in second until Princeton nipped the Badgers at the end.

California Coach Stephen Gladstone's crew was expected to give Wisconsin the strongest fight for the Varsity Challenge Cup. But California's nearly wire to wire victory came as a surprise here.

It was the first time in his four years as coach that Gladstone had brought a crew to the regatta, regarded as the national championship of collegiate rowing.

Women's Golfing

Evelyn Ward and Mary Fran Miller scored a 21 to win a Scratch and Scramble Low Net tournament held at Brook Valley Country Club.

In second place were Sandra Smith and Jenny Wiggers with a 56.

NCNB, Home Builders Claim Ruth Victories

NCNB captured its second victory while Home Builders came up with its first in the Babe Ruth League on Friday night. NCNB nipped Planters Bank, 3-2, while Home Builders ran past College View, 9-2.

In the opening game, Planters opened up the scoring with a run in the top of the first. William Sneed walked and stole second. He moved to third on an out and scored on a single by Mac Stokers.

NCNB tied it up with a run in the second. Skip Topping walked and stole second. He took third on a wild pitch and scored on a suicide squeeze bunt by Don McGlohon.

NCNB took the lead in the fourth with another run. Joey Mattheis singled to open the frame and stole second. He was sacrificed to second and scored when Topping reached on an error on his squeeze bunt.

In the sixth, Planters tied it up. Calvin Jones reached on a two-base error and moved up on an out. He scored on a wild pitch.

NCNB got the winning run in the bottom of the inning. Mark Shank walked and Cliff Fearington reached on an error on his sacrifice bunt. The error allowed Shank to come all the way from first.

Home Builders opened up the scoring in the second game with a pair in the second. Terry Skinner walked and was sacrificed up. Allen Clark was hit by a pitch and both scored when Gavin Ray reached on an error.

In the third, Home Builders added another run. Doug Nicol walked, stole second and took third on an error. Reggie Selby hit a sacrifice fly to score him.

The fourth saw two more come in. Mickey McGrath walked and Jeff Worthington reached on an error. Ray walked and a passed ball scored McGrath, while another let Worthington in.

College View picked up its only runs in the fifth. Mark Jones walked, as did Lindsey Winstead and Steve Hawkins, loading the bases. Rickey West reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Jones, and Winstead.

Home Builders came back with one in the bottom of the inning. Ronnie Chapman singled and moved up on an error on the play. He stole third and scored on Skinner's out.

The final three came over in the sixth. Ray reached on an error and Chris Ross reached on a fielder's choice. The two pulled a double steal, scoring Ray, but Ross was finally thrown out trying to go to third. Selby doubled and Chapman reached on an error and stole up. Both scored when Skinner reached on an error.

Foyt Is Glad May Is Over

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — A.J. Foyt, holding court for the first time since losing the rain-soaked, disputed Indianapolis 500 to fellow Texan Johnny Rutherford last Sunday, says he's just glad the month of May is finally over, regardless of the outcome of the race.

Foyt, humorous, feisty, talkative like he usually is away from Indianapolis where he is generally cold, impatient and short tempered, said the Indianapolis 500 this year was about to drive him crazy before the whole thing was over.

"Any longer and I would have sent myself to a psychiatrist," Foyt explained in a lively interview as he prepared for Sunday's Texas 500 stock car race at Texas World Speedway. "The problems in qualifying, in practice, the Janet Guthrie thing, the pressure—all month seemed like a nightmare.

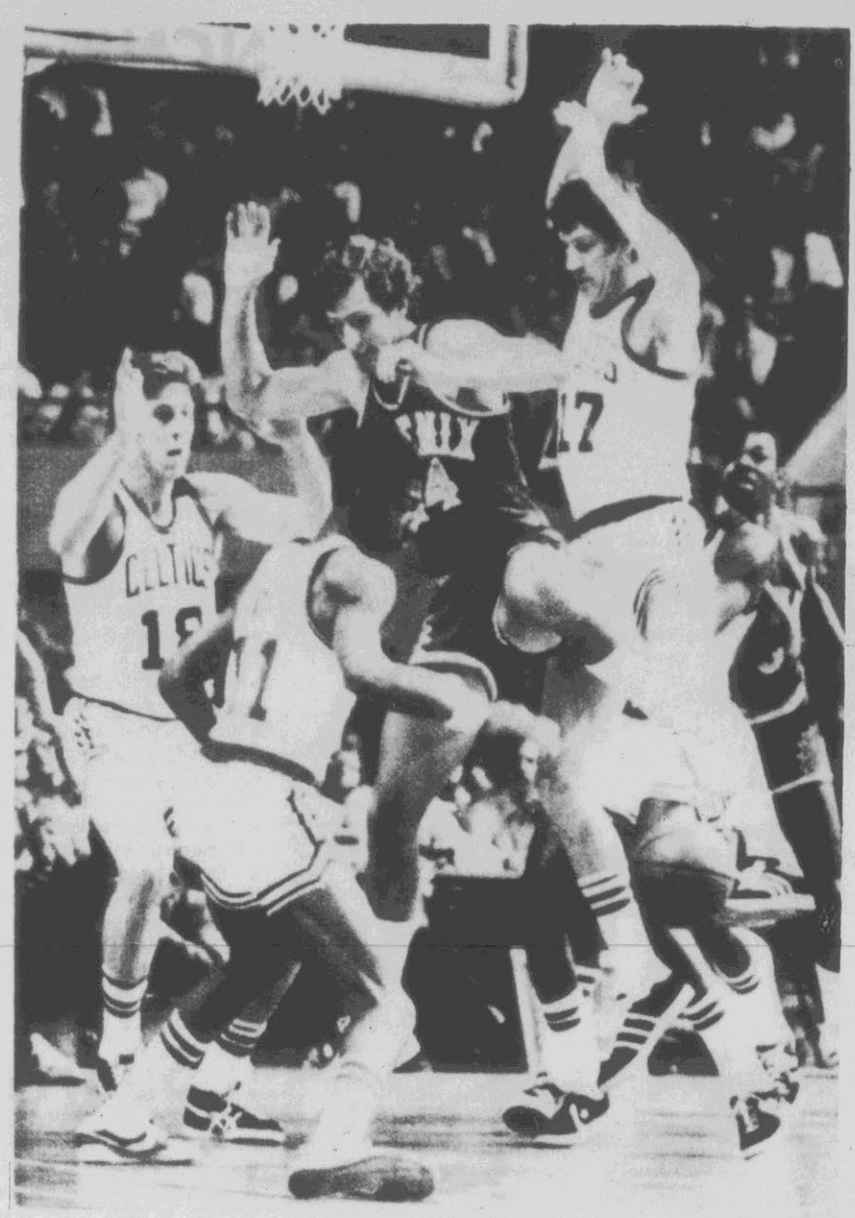

"Then the race gets rained on again. I'll tell you, it was maddening."

Foyt, 42, who says he entertains no notions of retiring, feels nothing much was decided in the race, which ended after only 255 miles. Foyt still believes Rutherford illegally made up at least nine seconds on him during a caution period, but he is most upset that officials refused to restart the race after the initial rainstorm "although they obviously could have."

"Everybody knows they were stalling. Anybody else would have gotten the whole show in, or at least most of it. There was at least 45 minutes more we could have raced. Tom Binford is a nice guy, but he has no business being chief steward in a $1 million race," Foyt snorted.

The winner of nearly $3 million in prize money over a career spanning more than two decades again defended his plan of running only one car—even though he entered four. "I felt we had to concentrate 100 per cent on winning," he said.

About his backup car,a tantalyzing, super-car capable of running everything else—including Foyt's front line Coyote—off the track, Foyt explained, "I would only have run it for two people—Mario Andretti or Lloyd Ruby—if they would have needed a ride."

CAN'T GET IT—A Phoenix rebound slips through the pack in the first period Friday night in the NBA championship series at Boston Garden. Celtics Finally Stop Suns In 3 Overtimes

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Coach Tommy Heinsohn felt ill and begged off the usual post-game interview. Jo Jo White slumped in a chair and asked no one in particular: "Would you believe we've got another game in Phoenix Sunday?"

That was the atmosphere in the Boston Celtics' dressing room early today, 3 hours and 8 minutes after they had tapped off in a pivotal game with the Phoenix Suns Friday night at the Garden.

The Celtics, bidding for an unprecedented 13th National Basketball Association championship, blew a 22-point first-half lead and then edged the Cinderella Suns from Phoenix 128-126 in triple overtime for a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven showdown.

The game was a heart-stopper as the Suns fought back throughout regulation, forcing Boston captain John Havlicek to sink one of two free throws to send the game into the first overtime.

White, a veteran sharpshooter, saved his best for the overtime periods, hitting for 15 of his game-high 33 in that stretch. He got plenty of help from young Glenn McDonald and Jim Ard, pressed into action after Dave Cowens and Paul Silas fouled out.

McDonald came off the bench after Silas fouled out in the third overtime of the longest championship round playoff game in NBA history. He sank two baskets, breaking a 118-118 tie. Later he converted two pressure free throws.

Ard, who spends most of the time on the bench as Cowens' understudy, said he had lost track of the number of fouls on Boston's veteran center.

Havlicek missed a corner jumper as the first overtime ended 101-101. Then he appeared to give the Celtics a 111-110 victory by banking a running shot as the buzzer sounded for what apparently was the end of the second overtime.

Many of the Celtics hurried to the dressing room. Fans swarmed onto the court as Phoenix Coach John MacLeod desperately tried to get the attention of the officials. He finally did. The Celtics had to return to the floor. MacLeod then called a time out, with one second left.

The Suns already were over the limit on times out, so the Celtics were awarded a technical foul, White making the free throw. Then, taking the ball in at midcourt, the Suns set up Gar Heard, who hit on a game-tying jump shot from the key, forcing still a third overtime.

Boston spurted to a 126-120 lead and was in front 128-122 with just 31 seconds left. Then the Celtics had to survive a pair of baskets by former teammate Paul Westphal and a near steal in the closing seconds.

"It's going to be another war just like this one was," Havlicek said in looking ahead to Sunday's game. "That's what playoff basketball is all about. I think the situation that exists is going to create basketball interest in June which has never been seen before."

Floyd Returns To Kemper Field

By RICHARD LOWE
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Masters champion Ray Floyd, who says "for five years I played without purpose," brings his revitalized game this week to the Kemper Open, where his golf tour comeback was nurtured a year ago with a long-sought victory.

Floyd joins 150 other pros in the nationally televised four-day $250,000 tournament, which begins Thursday.

Floyd calls last year's win in the Kemper not so much the start of his comeback "but the culmination of the comeback."

"I didn't really like to play golf," says Floyd of the lean years. It was just a way to make money and move around the country."

His comeback actually began, he now says, a year before the 1975 Kemper when he skipped the last three rounds of a tour stop in Jacksonville, Fla.

"My wife and I — we'd just been married a few months — sat down and had a long talk. She made me realize that I had to work at it if I'm to achieve anything," he says.

"Now I have some goals. It's maturity. I'm working harder at the game now than I ever have. My lifestyle has changed. I'm a more mature person."

Between Jacksonville in 1974 and Charlotte in 1975, Floyd's earnings were in six figures but, he says, "of course, I hadn't won and the Kemper was important in that respect."

This year, Ray Floyd will have to contend with sentimental favorite Arnold Palmer, who has a local car dealership, and Lee Trevino, Tom Weiskopf, and Gary Player for the $50,000 top prize.

A crowd of 85,000 is expected at the Quail Hollow Country Club.

Palmer, four-time Masters champion who has been a Quail Hollow member for three years, won the inaugural Kemper in 1968.

Bridesmaids Lee Trevino and Gary Player have combined for three second-place finishes, two thirds, and two fourths.

In 1975, Player was the third round leader, only to lose to Floyd on the last day.

Tom Weiskopf, the only two-time champion, posted Kemper wins in 1971 and 1973. With a total of $86,000, he is also the all-time Kemper money winner.

Jack Nicklaus is absent this year, but he never plays the week before the U.S. Open, which is the following week in Atlanta.

In 1971, the long 7,160 yard course brought Weiskopf, Player, Douglas, and Trevino together in a four-way tie. Weiskopf won the tournament in a playoff.

The field will also include 46-year-old "comeback" Don January, Al Geiberger, Billy Casper, Gene Littler, J.C. Snead, Hale Irwin and John Mahaffey, who finished second last year.

Bill Booe, Kemper Open's executive director, and James Hood, the Quail Hollow pro, say the course is in good condition and will favor the long, accurate hitter off the tee.

"The condition of the course is real good, but the fairways are not as good as we wanted because of the weather," said Hood.

"The course is not as wet as you would think. We've got absolutely good roll on the greens but they're not as hard as we would like them.

"I would say 10 to 12 under par is a good score but you can't tell with these fellows. So much depends on the weather," said Hood.

Booe, who is pleased with the big-name field, said, "We are going to provide a good tournament and a good playing surface.

"This tournament will be a good warm-up for the Open in Atlanta next week, and the players know this is a well-run contest with a hefty purse."

Gardner-Webb Captures Golf

BURLINGTON, N. C. (AP) — Gardner-Webb won the NAIA golf championship by a stroke Friday, with Elon, another North Carolina school, second. U.S. International University of San Diego, Calif., finished third by three strokes after going into the final round of the 72-hole tournament in first place with a four-stroke lead over Gardner-Webb and a 10-stroke lead over Elon.

NAIA is the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. Thirty-two district winners and Elon, which didn't win in its district but got in as the host team, competed over the Alamance Country Club course.

Gardner-Webb's four best shotmakers required 1193 strokes, an average of a just under 75 a round. Elon finished with 1194, and U. S. International with 1196.

Will Brewer of David Lipscomb in Tennessee won the individual championship. His final round of 74 gave him a 289 total, five over par-71 for the the 6,800-yard course.

Bill McIntyre of Sam Houston State, Texas, shot a final-round 75 and Chuck Scott of Elon a 73 to tie for second at 290. Tony Randall of Francis Marion in South Carolina was next at 295 after closing with a 75.

The 12 low players and ties made up the NAIA All-America team. Rounding out the honor group were:

296 — Jim Franklin, Francis Marion; David Braxton, Elon; Tim Skogen, Wisconsin-La Crosse.

Texas Wesleyan was the defending team champion but finished seventh. Team finishes after the three leaders were: Francis Marion, 1205; St. Bernard, 1213; Sam Houston State, 1219; Texas Wesleyan, 1220; Florida Atlantic, 1227; Wisconsin-La Crosse, 1235; Edinboro State, 1236; East Central Oklahoma, 1238; Christian Brothers, 1239; Pembroke State, 1239; Willammette, 1258; Taylor, 1263; Moorhead, 1267; and Emporia State, 1274.

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., won the men's singles final of the Northern Tennis Tournament Saturday, beating Australia's Paul McNamee 6-3, 8-9, 12-10 in a two-hour duel.

Then Tanner joined David Lloyd of Britain to win the men's doubles final 6-1, 6-3 over South Africans Edward Edwards and Graham Silberman.

Twins Hang On, Take Win From Baltimore

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

It would have been easy to go through the motions. The Minnesota Twins were trailing 6-0 in the second inning of a game that appeared to be a Baltimore runaway.

With the score as lopsided as it was, Twins Manager Gene Mauch slipped relief pitcher Tom Burgmeier into the lineup during the second inning. Suddenly Burgmeier, who hadn't pitched much, and Larry Hisle, who hadn't hit much, came alive. Burgmeier worked 6 2-3 innings of six-hit shutout relief and Hisle hit for the cycle. A 6-0 laugher had become a 6-6, extra-inning tie when Hisle strode to the plate in the 10th inning.

He'd been hitting second in the order most of this season, collecting seven sacrifice bunts along the way. "I thought maybe I'd get another one," he said after Butch Wynegar slapped a leadoff single in the 10th.

But Mike Flanagan's pitch was too good to be true, and Hisle—who had doubled and scored in the fourth, tripled home two runs in the fifth, and singled in the eighth—knocked the delivery into orbit.

Hisle didn't want credit for the 8-6 triumph Friday night. "I thought Burgmeier was by far the star of the game," he said.

In the other American League games, California trimmed Boston 5-4 in 10 innings, Oakland nipped New York 6-4 in 11 innings, Kansas City edged Milwaukee 4-3 in 10 innings, Chicago clipped Cleveland 4-1 and Texas bombed Detroit 14-3.

Angels 5, Red Sox 4

Bill Melton's 10th-inning single drove in pinch-runner Rusty Torres with an unearned tally to lift California past Boston, which produced 14 hits in a losing effort.

A's 6, Yankees 4

Ken McMullen scored Bert Campaneris with a pinch single in the 11th inning to give Oakland its overtime triumph over New York. Sal Bando's sacrifice fly produced the insurance run.

Claudell Washington's second-inning home run had given the A's a 2-0 lead, the Yankees came back with three in the third—a lead they couldn't hold.

Royals 4, Brewers 3

John Mayberry, awarded first base when hit by a Jim Slaton pitch, scored on Hal McRae's 10th-inning double to give Kansas City's Dennis Leonard his fifth victory in six decisions.

The Royals' Amos Otis clubbed his 10th home run of the season in the fifth inning, taking over the AL lead in that department.

White Sox 4, Indians 1

Jorge Orta drove in two runs with a triple and a double, Ralph Garr had three hits and Pat Kelly stole two bases and scored twice to lead Chicago past Cleveland—the White Sox' 13th triumph in 17 games.

Rangers 14, Tigers 3

Danny Thompson, acquired last Tuesday from Minnesota, cracked four hits including a three-run homer to pace the Texas rout of Detroit.

Thompson had two singles in an eight-run Rangers fourth inning.

Records Fall For Germans As Olympic Trials Wind Up

By HUBERT J. ERB
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's phenomenal women swimmers set four more world records Saturday as its Olympic trials to pick a team for Montreal concluded in East Berlin.

The five days ended as they began with another world mark by incredible Kornelia Ender. The official news agency ADN said she churned the 200-meter individual medley in 2:17.14. That bettered the old mark held by teammate Ulrike Tauber of 2:18.3.

But the 16-year-old Miss Ender also lost one of the five world records she set this week when Ulrike Richter led off a 400-meter medley relay team with a 1:01.51 first-leg effort, reclaiming the world standard for the 100-meter backstroke.

On Wednesday, Miss Ender had lowered the mark to 1:01.62 from Miss Richter's earlier record of 1:02.6.

ADN said a competing medley relay from the Dynamo sports club in East Berlin did 4:13.4 to set a world mark for the entire 400-meter distance involving all four swimming strokes.

Earlier Saturday, Rosemarie Gabriele twice bettered her own record for the 200-meter butterfly, lowering it first to 2:12.84 and then to 2:11.22. Her old mark was 2:13.6.

In the five days of trials, the East German women smashed 14 world records.

According to ADN, they now hold the world record in all the women's events that will be contested at the Montreal Games in July.

By comparison, the East German men fared poorly with only two world-record efforts, each of them by Roger Pytell. He first snatched the 200-meter butterfly mark from America's Mark Spitz and then lowered the time to 1:59.63. It was the first time anyone had gone this grueling event in less than two minutes.

The most impressive of Miss Ender's records set this week was a crash through a barrier long denied women swimmers, a time below two minutes for the 200-meter freestyle. She did it in 1:59.78 to lower her own mark of 2:02.27.

There is no question now that the swimmer her teammates call "Conny" will have a chance for at least five gold medals in the Olympics, perhaps even going for more if her form and the scheduling of events allows.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Former University of Kentucky basketball guard Reggie Warford has accepted an assistant coaching job at Iowa State University, the Paris, Ky., Daily Enterprise has reported.

In a copyrighted story for its Sunday edition, the Daily Enterprise said a UK spokesman confirmed that Iowa State head Coach Lynn Nance, a former UK assistant coach, had contacted the 6-foot-1 Warford last week and that Warford had accepted the post. Warford also confirmed the reports and said he would be going to Ames, Iowa on June 12 to assume his duties, the newspaper said.

Air Fare Hike Requested

By LEE MITGANG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Airline fares have gone up nearly 10 per cent in the past seven months, but a group of major domestic carriers were pressing last week for a new two per cent hike.

The latest request for a rate rise that would take effect in July if approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board was made by seven of the top 10 domestic airlines. It was made at a time when the industry was reporting a 12 to 13 per cent overall increase in air traffic during May.

The traffic increase represented an encouraging continuation of a year-long improvement in the air travel picture. It was particularly welcome since May normally is not a heavy air travel month.

The three airlines that have not joined in the latest rate filing—Delta Air Lines, National Airlines and Northwest Airlines—also indicated no plans to raise rates at present.

"The industry doesn't need any more rate increases," said airline analysts Robert Joedicke of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

He noted in an interview that the fact three airlines were not joining in the new rate request probably would doom the proposed increase.

Passengers who purchased tickets in May for travel on or after June 1 got some good news last week if their airline was American, United or TWA. Because of a CAB ruling, the three carriers said such passengers would be entitled to fare refunds, most of them 5 per cent but some as high as 10 per cent on promotional excursion flights.

The reason was that the CAB had permitted airlines to cut their discounts on excursion fares by 5 to 10 per cent, effective June 1, but the three airlines were quoting the higher fares on tickets sold during May for flights the following month. The CAB ruled that such passengers were entitled to the refund.

Thus, said a TWA spokesman last week, a person who bought a transcontinental excursion ticket last May for travel in June or later would be entitled to a $9.70 refund, five per cent of the purchase price.

Meanwhile, French Transport Minister Marcel Cavaillet said last week that France and Britain had agreed not to continue building the trouble-plagued supersonic Concorde aircraft.

He said further construction of the plane would be unreasonable, since so far only nine have been ordered out of 16 currently planned. No U.S. airline has bought Concorde.

The French government said it was prepared to cooperate with the United States and European countries to keep supersonic passenger technology alive, provided that French industry could keep a leading role.

Estes Signs Agreement

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Officials of Estes Express of Richmond, Va., and Bestway Express of Columbia, say an agreement has been signed under which Estes will acquire the business and certain other properties of Bestway.

Bestway is a subsidiary of The State-Record Co. of Columbia. Specific terms or conditions of the agreement were not announced Thursday.

Robey W. Estes, president of Estes Express, said the operation of Bestway would be strengthened and improved if current business levels are maintained.

Estes currently operates in Virginia, North Carolina and northeastern South Carolina. The company, which has more than 750 employes, operates 23 terminals throughout its system.

The transaction is subject to approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the South Carolina Public Service Commission.

MORE JOBS—The U.S. government reports that the nation's jobless rate fell from 7.5 to 7.3 per cent in May. The drop in the unemployment rate brought an end to a two month period in which joblessness had not improved. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

SLOWDOWN—Wholesale prices increased three-tenths of a per cent in May, down sharply from the April increase due to a slowdown in price rises for farm products, the U.S. government reports. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Claudine's Hearing Aspen's Big Show

YOU DON'T SAY— It's not that fishermen have been casting their lines among the tombstones of Pottstown, Pa., West End Cemetery. Nor have hunters been stalking game among the monuments. It's just that borough officials ran short of the plain "no trespassing" signs. The local citizens had been taking short-cuts through the cemetery and youthful vandals had been causing problems. By DEBORAH FRAZIER

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — For this Colorado Rockies resort, the only act in town this month stars singer Claudine Longet in a preliminary hearing for the "love nest" slaying of former world pro skiing champion Vladimir "Spider" Sabich.

It's the slow season in Aspen. The majestic winter snow that draws thousands to the ski dislopes had melted and the tourist trade has yet to begin.

But most local residents had rather see Tuesday's hearing cancelled.

"We'd really rather it weren't happening here in the first place," said Mayor Stacy Stanley. "People have started to forget about it now. But I guess the media will see that that won't last."

The French-born Miss Longet is charged with criminally negligent manslaughter in Sabich's death. She told authorities a .22 caliber pistol accidentally discharged while Sabich was showing her how to use it.

Miss Longet, 35, and Sabich, 31, had lived together for two years in an $250,000 chalet he built for her and three children from her marriage to singer Andy Williams. But, friends said their affair went on the skids and the dark-haired, handsome Sabich asked Claudine to find another place to live by April 1.

Sabich was found on the hall floor of his home March 21 with a single bullet wound in the abdomen. He died enroute to a hospital with Miss Longet by his side in the ambulance.

Williams rushed to Aspen from Hollywood and accompanied his tearful ex-wife to court the morning after the slaying. He also attended her arraignment April 8 on the manslaughter charge and held her hand as she left the courtroom.

A conviction could mean a one-to-10-year sentence for Claudine, who married Williams after a stint as a Las Vegas showgirl.

Reaction to the Sabich's death was strong among the town's 5,500 residents. The California native was well known and liked — almost a local hero. Townspeople had backed him for years, even through the accident-prone stages of his career.

No such support was evident for Miss Longet. She did not attend Sabich's funeral in California and was avoided by other mourners at a memorial service for the skier in Aspen.

Sabich, winner of the world pro skiing crown in 1970 and 1971 and fifth place finisher in the 1968 Olympics, suffered several serious injuries which kept him from other triumphs. He had hoped to make a comeback last season, but at the time of his death his earnings amounted to only $280.

"He was a bright, gregarious individual," Greg Lewis, world pro race publicist, said after his death. "If skiing had a Joe Namath, then it was Spider. He will be missed by everyone in the town and on the tour."

However, Mayor Stanley said people have stopped talking about the shooting, at least in public. He said most residents left just after the snow, seeking the sun of Mexico, the pace of the east or other vacation diversions.

Miss Longet also left after her arraignment. She has been staying with friends in California and meeting with her attorney, Charles Weedman, who once defended Charles Manson cultist Steve "Clem" Grogan on first-degree murder charges. Grogan was convicted.

District Attorney Frank Tucker, a longtime friend of Sabich, will base his case on Miss Longet's diary and testimony from her 12-year-old daughter, Noelle, who was in the house when Sabich was killed. In the diary, Miss Longet reportedly describes her waning relationship with Sabich.

"I think we have sufficient evidence to support the charge," said Tucker, who attended college with Sabich. "The diary is an interesting piece of evidence and Noelle will be an important witness."

The whereabouts of her other children, Bobby, 6, and Christian, 10, at the time of the shooting was not disclosed. Bobby was named after Sen. Robert Kennedy, a friend of Williams and Miss Longet.

A change of venue for Miss Longet's case would be welcome in many quarters of Aspen.

Hughes Medical Institute Is Secretive, Complex And Closed

By STANLEY M. BROWN

MIAMI (UPI) — From behind closed doors and drawn drapes on the third floor of a rented building, Kenneth E. Wright doles out millions of dollars to biomedical research in the name of Howard Robard Hughes.

How much money Wright dispenses as director of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute isn't known, nor is the exact number of persons who get the money or details of the research the institute funds.

It's a typical Howard Hughes operation — secretive, complex, and closed to public scrutiny. Unlike most, medical foundations, the Hughes Institute does not issue annual reports.

But if the document filed with a Las Vegas court April 29th naming the institute as the major benefactor of Hughes' estate is in fact the eccentric billionaire's true will, Wright could find himself directing the largest private medical research institute in the nation.

Wright, who met and impressed a Hughes associate while working his way through the University of Miami Business School as a hotel doorman, refuses to discuss Hughes, his will or the institute.

One former Hughes researcher in Miami, Dr. Robert Boucek, says the institute's obsession with secrecy "borders on the ridiculous, but that's the way The Old Man wanted it."

In a statement filed with the Internal Revenue Service in December of 1974, the institute reported it employed 60 researchers and 14 laboratory workers at its Miami headquarters and at medical school hospitals at Baylor, Duke, Johns Hopkins, Peter Bent Brigham, Stanford, University of Utah, University of Washington, Vanderbilt, Washington University at St. Louis, Yale and the University of Miami.

The Hughes Institute rents the upper two floors of a four-story building on the campus of the University of Miami Medical School, which has enjoyed a long and rewarding relationship with the foundation.

Dr. William Harrington, dean of the UM's Department of Medicine, says the Hughes Institute has granted more than $6 million to UM medical researchers since 1956. He said the Hughes money and name helped the UM Medical School go from obscurity in its early days "to where we are now damn close to competing with the best. It would be hard to project where this school would be without the Hughes contributions."

Harrington said UM researchers currently receive about $250,000 a year from the Hughes Institute, although in years past they received more than twice that amount.

Because it has no direct connection or contract with the UM Medical School, and because Hughes researchers are paid directly by the institute, few outsiders know the size and scope of the grants or what research the money supports.

There are five researchers working in labs at the Hughes Institute. The UM Medical School has identified them as Adel A. Yunis, M.D., Murray Epstein, M.D., Antero S. So, M.D., Gerald S. Levy, M.D., and John J. Marshall.

All five Miami Hughes researchers declined to discuss their work, but authorized Dr. Harrington to say that they are "producing interesting results in genetics, hematology, hormone interaction and the effects of body retention of salt."

In medical circles, a Hughes research grant carries a lot of clout. A five-man advisory board headed by the institute's medical director, Dr. George B. Thorn of the Harvard Medical School, hand picks Hughes researchers and, reportedly, gives them a free hand to pursue their special interests.

Although the Hughes grants are seldom enough to support each individual's research, they carry enough prestige that the researchers have little difficulty obtaining additional funding from other sources.

Much of what is known about the Hughes Medical Institute surfaced in April of 1973, when Dr. Thorn was called before Congressman Wright Patman's committee investigating loopholes in the tax laws covering charitable trusts and foundations.

The Howard Hughes Medical Institute was incorporated in Deleware in December of 1953 with Hughes as the sole trustee. What followed was a series of complex maneuvers in which the Hughes Aircraft Corp. was split off from its parent company, the Hughes Tool Co., and was "given" to the medical institute.

This ostensibly assured the medical institute a substantial income. But the arrangement included a provision that allowed Hughes Aircraft to plow the bulk of its earnings back into its own research and development program. And the agreement reportedly required the medical institute to pay off an $18 million loan from the Summa Corp., a Hughes holding company.

Some congressmen intimated the medical institute was simply a tax shelter for Hughes. Patman noted during the hearing that between 1954 and 1961, the Hughes Medical Institute spent only $5.7 million for medical research while the Hughes Aircraft Corp. was earning nearly $77 million in profits.

The IRS reportedly has been "studying" the Hughes Medical Institute for several years.

When asked by Patman to describe some of the work done by Hughes medical researchers, Dr. Thorn said they had done "pioneering" work in cortisone, cardiac catherization, the toxic affects of antibiotics, kidney diseases, kidney transplants and added: "The kidney dialysis program was initiated by a Hughes investigator."

The first medical director of the institute was Dr. Verne R. Mason, who attended Hughes when he crashed an experimental plane in California in 1946. Hughes broke nine ribs, his nose and his shoulder, fractured his skull, and suffered third degree burns and a collapsed lung in the accident. Hughes and Mason became close friends during the long convalesence.

Steam-Powered Train On Track

By PATRICK LAMB

CHAMA, N.M. (UPI) — The summer of '76 could mean a mighty big year for the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad — one of the nation's last steam-powered trains that winds along a 64-mile route on the Colorado-New Mexico border.

The narrow-gauge, coal-burning railroad between Chama and Antonito, Colo., is owned by the states of Colorado and New Mexico and leased to Scenic Railways, Inc., a California firm. The first passenger train run is set for June 12, with the season closing Oct. 10.

"All indications are that we'll have a good year," said Robert E. Keller, Scenic Railways president. "We think tourism will be up in general this summer, partially as a result of the Bicentennial. The fact that it's an election year and the economy is continuing to improve also will help.

"As of a couple of weeks ago we had 250 advance tickets sold. That was 14 times as many as we had before. Although that doesn't necessarily mean that we'll have 14 times as many riders this summer, it does show we should have a heck of an improvement."

Scenic's plans call for four trains a week — Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays — and only one-way each day.

"We will add trains if there is a demand," said Keller. "We think it's fairly likely that we will go to six trains a week by the end of summer."

One-way fares for adults will increase $1 to $16, including a return trip by bus.

The railroad, established in 1880 and used for scores of western movies, was purchased from the Denver and Rio Grande in 1971 at a cost of $295,000 to each state. Scenic Railways has invested about $500,000 in the railroad, which showed a small profit last year.

"We are looking forward to a good year in financial terms this year," Keller said. "We've run it for five years now, so it ought to be turning around for us financially."

The railroad hauled 24,770 passengers last season and passenger agent Clovis Butterworth estimated the train could carry as many as 38,000 passengers this summer. Scenic's summer operations have been accident-free but the Denver and Rio Grande often encountered mishaps in the wintertime.

Keller said crews are tuning up the locomotives in Chama while waiting for heavy winter snows to melt on the route, which ranges from sagebrush country to the Alpine beauty of 10,015-foot Cumbres Pass.

"We plan to have a work train out in about two weeks," said Keller. "We'll be able to get a better picture of what we'll need to do then."

Indian Village Remains Reveal A Way Of Life

By TERRY WOSTER
Associated Press Writer

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — For James Gillihan the joy of finding remains of a 300-year-old Indian village is often accompanied by sorrow that much of the evidence of that early civilization was destroyed in the excavation.

Gillihan, South Dakota's director of cultural preservation, felt both of those emotions recently when workmen clearing land for a housing site at the edge of Pierre unearthed animal bones, broken pottery, arrowheads and other remains of an Indian encampment.

"It's a real find, and it appears that this could have been the site of a fairly large camp," he said as he used a small hand trowel and a paint brush to alternately dig and brush away ashes and dirt covering treasures of the past.

Gillihan plans to work for the next several months on the area, about 80 yards long and 50 yards wide. The site is adjacent to a local boarding school for Indian children.

By the time Gillihan was notified of the remains, workmen had already leveled an area about three times the size of the one he is studying. Gillihan says considerable information about the village had probably been bulldozed under before he reached the scene.

Gillihan studied the pottery pieces and decided, tentatively, that the camp was probably active 250 or 300 years ago.

"The design of the pottery matches what you find in Arikara Village of about that period," he said. He said the Arikara were driven from the area by the Sioux early in the 18th century.

"We'll be better able to pinpoint it when we sift through all of the different things we find here and compare them with artifacts whose dates and origins are documented."

He was able to persuade the owner of the land to leave the small area unworked until he has had time to go through the various mounds that dot the site. And that could take months, since he must rely almost entirely on volunteer help.

"The Indian people dug pits in the middle of their houses. It was the only way they could store deer or buffalo meat to keep it cool and prevent it from spoiling for a while," Gillihan said. "When the food was gone, they'd often throw the garbage into the pit and cover it. That's why we're finding the bones and broken pots.

"And, of course, an arrowhead or bone digging tool got mixed in once in a while, and we're finding those here, too."

Ashes and bits of charcoal could be valuable in a carbon-dating process to help pinpoint the date.

Using the hand trowel, Gillihan plans to peel back the soil for 20 or more feet around the pits, hoping to stumble onto remains of poles that will indicate the size and locations of houses in the village.

Ever-Younger Drug Abusers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Drug abusers are getting younger and younger, according to a radiologist who spoke on x-ray and drug addiction to science writers here recently.

A 1966 medical study cited the late 20s as the mean age of death of drug addicts. But based on his experience at Johns Hopkins Hospital the past few years, Dr. A. Everette James, now chairman of the department of radiology at Vanderbilt University Hospital, Nashville, says this no longer appears true.

"When we see, hear or read of 'hard-core' addicts that are in the 12-15-year age group, even we physicians find that a fact that is emotionally difficult for us to deal with," Dr. James said.

OUR USED CARS ARE GUARANTEED

12 Months or 12,000 Miles.

Most good used cars, if they're guaranteed at all, are only covered for a month or two. At Tarheel Toyota, we're just as willing to back our good used cars as our good new cars. So we guarantee the motor, transmission and rear end for 12 months or 12,000 miles. This warranty applies to all cars selling for $1000.00 or more on a 50-50 basis with all work being done in our shop. It doesn't apply to any sports cars, high performance engines or 4-speed transmission (except economy cars). If you're in the market for a BETTER USED CAR, COME OUT AND LOOK AT OURS. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed.

Nelson-Wallace Inc. Real Estate "Since 1950"

As Exclusive Sales Agents for WEDCO homes in

LAKE ELLSWORTH

May 18, 1976

Mr. William E. Dansey
P. O. Box 443
Greenville, N. C. 27834

Dear Bill:

We have lived in Lake Ellsworth for a little over two years now and have truly enjoyed watching the development grow. After two years we felt that a letter of appreciation was long overdue, but sincerely written.

Bill, right from the time we entered into our contract to buy, it has been our pleasure to be associated with WEDCO. Like any new home, we had some problems, but the manner in which they were remedied was most satisfactory. We have great pride in our home and enjoy our daily lives in Lake Ellsworth.

Lake Ellsworth has been designed to offer so much for every member of the family. There are many areas for our children to play and lots of friends to play with. The lighted tennis courts, the club house which rents very reasonably to residents, the pool in the summer and the lake for fishing: all are real benefits of living in Lake Ellsworth. One thing Terry and I really appreciate is the land you let us use for a vegetable garden. This area seems like country living within the Greenville City Limits.

Now that the Lake Ellsworth Civic Association is organized and functioning, the residents are looking forward to more community activities for both children and adults. We hope you can attend some of our activities.

Thanks Bill, for making Lake Ellsworth such a nice place to live.

Sincerely,

Rich and Terry Pike

We now have available several of these fine homes, together with all the above amenities, for those who are ready for the good life in Lake Ellsworth. These homes vary in style and price to suit the most discriminating buyers. To see them and select the one you prefer, call one of our Associates today.

Unless Congress acts fast, your phone bill may go up as much as 60%.

A change in national regulatory policy by the Federal Communications Commission, if unchecked, is likely to cost all homes and small businesses a big and unnecessary increase in their telephone bills.

In the name of introducing what it calls "competition" to the telephone industry, the Federal Communications Commission has taken steps to permit firms other than publicly regulated telephone companies to provide point to point private line communications service between cities—an action that would make these non-telephone firms, known as "specialized common carriers," directly competitive with the nation's telephone companies.

Yet, unlike the telephone companies, these new firms would have no responsibility to provide local telephone service, or any other service which might prove unprofitable. In other words, they could "skim the cream" of the market, which regulated telephone companies are not permitted to do.

The result of this regulatory action will be to siphon off substantial telephone company revenues from long distance and other services—revenues that have long been a major factor in helping to keep the costs of local phone service at reasonably low levels.

To the extent the telephone company loses long distance and other revenues which support local service, it will be necessary to increase charges to local telephone users—which are mostly residential and small business customers.

The increased charges for local telephone service could be substantial. In fact, your telephone bill could go up as much as 60%, because of FCC action.* We want to avoid all unnecessary increases, and we know you do, too.

Today, people in the United States have telephone service that is acclaimed as the best anywhere in the world at the lowest prices.

This didn't just happen. It was brought about, in large measure, by the very policies the FCC is now abandoning.

In the early days of the telephone industry, there was wasteful duplication of telephone systems, both between cities and within cities. Telephone users often had to subscribe to several competing systems to talk to everyone who had a telephone.

To end this costly duplication, and make local telephone service available to everyone at the lowest possible cost, the states and the federal government enacted laws establishing telephone companies as public utilities. Each telephone company was given an exclusive authorization to serve a specified area.

As a substitute for competition, State regulatory commissions were given authority to regulate every aspect of telephone company operations, including the rates telephone companies may charge and the maximum amounts they can earn on their investments.

With the passage by Congress of the Communications Act of 1934, a national policy of non-duplication of telephone company facilities used for special and long distance service between cities and different states was centralized and established.

We believe that time has long since proved the value of this policy, and that the recent FCC policy on competition can only result in returning to a competitive structure of the industry that has already been proven to be contrary to the public interest.

We believe the FCC has ignored a Presidential directive of November, 1975, by not thoroughly examining the probable economic and social consequences of this action.

Further, we believe that in taking this action—which, in effect, establishes a different national policy in the communications field—the FCC regulators have assumed authority never specifically given to them by the Congress.

Fortunately, there is still an opportunity to redirect this ill-advised and costly new FCC policy.

Legislation in the form of Senate Bill S.3192 has been introduced in Congress to reaffirm the intent of the Communications Act of 1934.

Known as the Consumer Communications Reform Act of 1976, this new legislation, if passed, will:

- Reaffirm the national policy of a universally available telecommunications network structured to provide high quality, low cost services to all users.
- Declare that actions to encourage competition for long distance and interstate private line services are contrary to the public interest except when innovative services and markets are established.
- Reaffirm the authority of individual States to regulate the interconnection to the telephone network of customer provided equipment and facilities used for local exchange services.
- Require the FCC, prior to authorizing a non-telephone company to provide specialized services, to examine all evidence to assure that the authorization will not be a cause for increased charges for local telephone service.

In the interest of our customers United Telephone is supporting this legislation.

As our customer, we believe it is in your best interest to give it your support.

If you would like to do something now to help keep your total telephone costs as low as possible, we urge you to write, wire or phone your Senator at the address below, and ask him about Senate Bill S.3192.

But remember, time is of vital importance. Because unless Congress acts, and acts fast, to undo what the FCC has brought about through its policy of contrived competition, your phone bill is certain to go up.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

We knew the kids would take it the wrong way, but we had to do it anyway. "Children, your father and I want to get our own apartment."

One looked up from his homework and the other two even turned the volume down on the TV set. "What are you saying?"

We are saying we'd like to move out and be on our own for awhile."

"But why" asked our daughter. "Aren't you happy here? You have your own room and the run of the house."

"I know, but a lot of parents our age are striking out on their own."

"It'll be expensive," said our son. "Have you thought about utilities and phone bills and newspapers and a hundred little things you take for granted around here?"

"We've thought it all through."

"Spit it out," said our daughter. "What's bothering you about living with us? Did we ask too much? What did we ask you do to? Only cook, make beds, do laundry, take care of the yard, keep the cars in running order and bring in the money. Was that so hard?"

"It's not that," I said gently. "It's just that we want to fix our own apartment and come and go as we please."

"If it's your car you wanted, why didn't you say so? We could make arrangements."

"It's not just the car. We want to be able to play our phonographs when we want to and come in late without someone saying, 'Where have you been?' and invite people over without other people hanging around."

"What will you do for furniture?"

"We don't need all that much. We'll just take a few small appliances, some linens, our bedroom suite, the typewriter, the luggage, the card table and chairs, the old TV you never use, some pots and pans and a few tables and chairs."

"You'll call every day?" We nodded.

"Mom, do me a favor. Don't wear those white socks when you meet your new neighbors. And Dad! Let your hair grow."

As we headed for the car I heard one son whisper sadly, "Our parents have grown up." His brother said, "They'll be back in a week!"

Homemade Formula For Mint Is Refresher

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

We've tasted all kinds of herbal teas. How can you avoid it? They're so "in" that friends bring them as gifts; hostesses serve them at the drop of a teabag.

But it wasn't until we tasted a simple homemade formula for Mint Tea that we were fired to offer you a recipe for a herbal infusion. If you try it we hope you, too, are enthusiastic about it. In cool weather, Mint Tea is delightful served hot. In warm weather, Mint Tea is wonderfully refreshing served iced.

MINT TEA

1 tablespoon whole cloves
1 cup loose tea leaves
½ cup dried mint flakes
2 tablespoons dried diced orange peel

Wrap cloves in a piece of clean old sheeting or tripled cheesecloth. Pound with a mallet or hammer until finely crumbled. In a mixing bowl stir together the crumbled cloves, tea, mint flakes and orange peel. Store in a container with a tight fitting cover. Makes about 1½ cups.

To brew, use one rounded teaspoonful of the Mint Tea mixture for each teacup of freshly boiled water used. Use boiling water to rinse out the inside of the teapot so it will be warm. Add the Mint Tea to the teapot; pour the boiling water over it; stir. Cover and let stand for about three minutes. Pour through a tea strainer into teacups. Pass sugar for those who wish it. To use for iced tea, pack tall glasses with ice; pour the hot Mint Tea over the ice; serve with spoon-sippers and pass finely granulated sugar for those who wish it.

Note: The dried orange peel called for is widely available because many herb and spice companies pack it.

MORE ABOUT MINT

The British photographer and mountaineer Tom Stobart, in his fascinating book titled "Herbs, Spices and Flavorings" (McGraw-Hill), writes that mint is commonly used in Spain and Italy. It is his belief, however, that "mint does not combine well with garlic." Thus he does not recommend it for Spanish and Italian dishes in which garlic is used.

Stobart goes on to say that "In all the countries of the Levant and Middle East, mint is again a common flavoring, as it also is in India."

We have always met up with mint tea served "as is" or with lemon or lime or-and sugar. Stobart writes that in India mint tea is served hot, sweet and milk-flavored.

Communications Plays Big Part In Woman's Life

By DAN HALL

REDDING, Conn. (AP) — Talk isn't cheap to Pamela Loren — or her clients.

It is responsible for her $100-a-month answering service, a New York-based, international firm of 32 full-time employes that she operates with the meticulous attention of a grammarian.

It ushered her into a telephone romance with Morton P. Levy, the man she eventually married. They now have homes in Redding, New York's Park Avenue, and Caracas, Venezuela.

And it is a main strength of this unusual couple's marriage, she says.

"We can tell each other anything," the distinctive-looking, former high fashion model said in an interview.

Communications is the common element running through the story of Miss Loren, the 33-year-old mother of three, holder of a master's degree in sociology and board chairman of Loren Communications.

At age 20, after four years of modeling in the fashion world of Chanel and Balenciaga, her life took a sudden turn while she was working in New York City.

She subscribed to a answering service to keep track of modeling jobs but the service frequently lost her messages and left a poor impression of how people communicate by phone, she recalled.

One beneficial sidelight was a chance telephone conversation, arranged by one of the service's talkative operators, between her and a client of the same service. The client turned out to be Levy; they met for dinner and, six weeks later, they married.

With encouragement from Levy, an international financier now based in Caracas, she founded her own answering service. Within a year, she said, it had grown to its current size, 350 clients including physicians, business executives, politicians and theatrical figures.

Today her penchant for turning communications into a useful tool helps her manage a business, family and self-training schedule, all of which she says is like "juggling eggs over your head."

Miss Loren, an energetic talker whose choice of words reflects the care that is evident in her elegant wardrobe, does not view her business life as a mere pastime.

"Communication is, without a doubt, the most powerful tool we have," she said. "And communication means not just information but also emotion."

She studies Spanish and Italian three times a week with an instructor. Her interest in language encouraged her two years ago to add to her company's wide range of services a secretarial-guide service to visiting business and governmental figures from foreign countries.

At the same time, she is mother to Christina, 10, Cristopher, 8, and Stirling, 3.

To help her coordinate obligations as executive, homemaker and mother, she has a staff of five: chauffeur, secretary, servant, nursemaid and gardener.

Miss Loren does not pretend to be a "role model" for most other women. But she sees her successes as an example of the satisfaction to be gained in exercising one's good points to the "critical limit."

Minister Should Be Censured

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd Inc

DEAR ABBY: I would like to pass on some very valuable experience to women who might find themselves in the situation that I was in 10 years ago.

As an attractive 55-year-old widow, I was wined and dined and courted by a very desirable widower in his early 60s. He proposed marriage to me on the condition that his children approved of me. (He had two sons and two daughters—all married.)

Well, I passed their inspection with flying colors, but I wish I hadn't. When he was well, his children came first. Now he is sick, and he's all mine.

STUCK WITH AN A.K.

DEAR STUCK: Nobody gets a lifetime guarantee of good health. YOU could have become sick and been all HIS.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died recently. We had only two years together, but ours was a perfect marriage. Never a cross word. He was a saint. We both had been married before, raised our children and lost our spouses through no fault of our own.

At my husband's funeral, I was shoved over on the bench behind the organ where I wasn't even able to see the casket. To add insult to injury, the minister preached a whole service, referring only to my husband's ex-wife. (She was a member of the church and I wasn't.)

The final insult came afterward, when the minister sat holding the hand of my beloved husband's ex-wife. I was so angry and hurt I could hardly bear it.

If I had it in my power, I would dig my husband up and bury him in a private cemetary with a private service. I know he is not at peace where he now lies. He loved me too much to have me hurt this way.

Please print this so that ministers will give more consideration to widows instead of ex-wives.

CRUSHED IN MADISON

DEAR CRUSHED: The privilege (and responsibility) of making the funeral arrangements for your deceased husband was yours, not his ex-wife's. (She apparently got to the minister first.) Unless you failed to assert yourself as you should have, the minister deserves to be severely censured for having handled the service as he did.

DEAR ABBY: First, some joker wants to sue his parents for $100,000 for having circumcised him when he was an infant and unable to defend himself.

Then someone writes in and suggests that his mother sue the idiot for "womb rent."

DALE P. SCOBEE: HOOD RIVER, ORE.

DEAR DALE: It seems only fair since the mother was stuck with the delivery charges.

IT'S RENTED.

Family Works Way Across U.S.

By CLARENCE D. BASSETT

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The robust Smith family from the Missouri hamlet of Collins is literally picking its way across the USA, from Anchorage to Albany, in a year-long odyssey which began on the Fourth of July.

"We decided this could be our way of celebrating the Bicentennial," said Paul R. Smith, a Missouri strawberry farmer, who set out with his wife, Maria, and their two teen-aged children to discover America.

So far the Smiths have shuttled 42,000 miles between dozens of jobs in 43 states and have learned — according to daughter Marlene — "how to pick everything that grows on a limb."

And if their Volkswagen "beetle" with 93,000 miles holds up, they hope to make the other seven states by this July 4.

"We're studying history," Smith said as he and his family visited the New York capitol last week. "History, to all of us, is very interesting and we're learning just as much as we can."

The family last July leased its strawberry farm outside of Collins, Mo., a town of about 150 people, and left with about $500 in cash and "faith that things would work out, that we'd be able to get work when we needed to."

By working in the fields and taking odd jobs, they have since returned the $500 to the Missouri bank.

"We found out we just didn't need it," Smith said with an easy Missouri accent.

They have logged 42,000 miles in their car, which has a large carrier strapped on top and the names of all the states they have visited crowded on the back.

To cut down on expenses, they have camped out most of the time. On a 2,000-mile excursion to Alaska, their tent was often the only shelter available.

"Out of a month between the time we left Seattle, went to Anchorage and returned, I think we only spent one night in a motel," Smith said. "Sometimes it was only a question of whether a grissly or a black bear would win."

Joseph, the 15-year-old, notes with both pride and regret that all four were forced to sleep in their tiny car "35 times."

"You can't really sleep, you just pretend you do," he said.

On the other side of the coin, the Smiths enjoyed luxury for a week at a Waikiki beach hotel. Their Hawaiian trip was financed by six weeks' work in California's Salinas Valley, which netted the family the $2,000 price of a package tour.

"One week we were picking chili peppers, and, wow, the next it was luxury in a Waikiki beach hotel," said Marlene, 18, who plans to enter college in September if they make it to Indiana in time to take her college entrance exams.

The low point of the trip occurred as they were working in the orchards of Washington's Wenatchee Valley. Smith fell as he picking peaches and broke his left arm.

"It was most depressing because it was a question of how well we could do, me being our biggest source of revenue and all," Smith said.

And then, less than a month later, Joseph, fell from an apple tree and broke his right arm.

"We are a robust family," said Smith, a wiry and tanned 42-year-old farmer, "and we like to feel free and everything."

"We made out and as we were leaving the Wenatchee Valley, we stopped by this sign they have welcoming you to the valley, showing a picture of an apple and a peach and everything. There we were, both of us in casts. My wife was enbarrassed to take the picture, but it was fun."

Economy has been the watchword to stretch every dollar the most miles. They camped in a California orchard where they were picking apricots.

"We didn't attend movies or anything like that," Smith said. "The library was one of our favorite pastimes."

Louisiana was another "working state," with Smith taking a job as a cable technician. "I didn't have the slightest idea how to do it when I started," he said before," she said.

Mrs. Smith worked as a dishwasher. "I'd never seen a big machine like that before," she said.

Their tour has included many historical spots along the way. "We don't have too strict of a plan, we just like to keep loose and go this way or that as it moves us," Smith said.

For four days they rode New York subways. "We were lost most of the time," Marlene said.

"But New York State turned out to be one of our favorite states, although we started out sort of dreading what we would find," Smith said.

"Everyone has been so helpful," Mrs. Smith added. "We'd ask someone where something was and never did anyone ignore us. Often they would turn around and walk with us, tell us which subway to get on or drive along with us following to where we wanted to go."

By July 4, the Smiths hope to visit Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa.

The next working state will be Indiana.

"And we'll make it," Mrs. Smith said, "as long as the car and the jobs hold out."

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"The Quilt" was initiated by Mrs. Shelby Bullock for her second and third grade class at the Grifton Elementary School as a special art project.

The quilt squares were started in January of this year and were completed by March. The 28 white squares are 12 by 15 inches and are bordered in bright red. The squares depict scenes and symbols during America's 200 years including the Alamo, the Mayflaower, U.S. map, Capitol, Statue of Liberty, Wright Brothers airplane, Liberty Bell, Betsy Ross, Confederate flag, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and the U.S. flag.

The ideas for the various squares were coordinated by Mrs. Bullock after they were discussed in the classroom as part of the childrens' social science studies.

The various pictures and scenes were either appliqued or embroidered by the children. Mrs. Ruth Moore of Grifton spent many afternoons assisting Mrs. Bullock and the children.

After the squares were completed Mrs. Bullock sewed them together, added lining and blue floral backing.

The quilt has been displayed at a PTA meeting at the school, at the Shad Festival held in Grifton and at a church Bicentennial homecoming.

"The idea of embroidering and appliquing appealed to the girls and boys alike—each child took pride in doing their special square," said Mrs. Bullock, who resides in Greenville.

Customers Save At No-Frills Super Market

By GERALD KOPPLIN

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — A midwest food chain based in nearby Hopkins, Minn., has found an alternative to both plush supermarkets and cement-walled food warehouses that to retail customers.

It has converted a supermarket in a middle-class neighborhood of Brooklyn Center, a suburb of the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, into a no-frills store where customers save money by packing and bagging their own purchases.

The savings can amount to 10 per cent, or $3 on a $30 grocery bill, said Kenneth Egertson, extension marketing economist at the University of Minnesota agricultural campus in St. Paul.

"There'll always be those who don't think the $3 is worth it," Egertson said in an interview. "They want the service many of us have come to expect at a supermarket."

"You have to be willing to stand in line longer, bag groceries and sometimes mark prices," said Egertson. "It depends on how much one values his labor."

Egertson said keys to saving money are buying fewer highly processed and packaged foods, shopping the ads and looking for specials. He said consumers can do little about most other food costs that are affected by inflation and productivity.

He said food prices have risen more than 15 per cent yearly since about 1972, and an additional five to eight per cent hike expected this year.

Store manager Andy Yantos said the no-frills marketing concept has brought so many customers into his huge octagon-shaped store that he had to add help at the cash register.

Egertson said warehouse marketing has been growing throughout the United States for several years, and cooperative grocery stores near university communities have provided retailers with many warehouse marketing ideas. The no-frills store falls somewhere in between.

"I like this idea of taking what I want, instead of having it done up in a package," Mrs. Schumann said. "The prices are also cheaper."

"I don't like to buy a packaged fruit or vegetable and find the bottom one spoiled. We only need one or two of each, not a whole package."

Don and Nancy Brown of Fridley, Minn., were doing their monthly shopping, accompanied by their son, 1, and their daughter, 5. Brown is 26, and his wife, Nancy, 21.

"We always bagged our own fruit in Oregon where we came from," said Mrs. Brown. "You know what you are getting."

At the no-frills market, canned goods are displayed in boxes, avoiding labor costs that result from stocking shelves. Food can be bought by the case or in individual units, and sides of beef and loins of pork for the freezer.

Consumers who bring their own bags and boxes save three cents on each one. They also do their own packing at the checkout counter.

The store offers a five-cent savings per dozen on large eggs for customers who bring and pack their own egg cartons.

Customers at a cooperative near the agricultural campus also can pack their own eggs if they supply cartons. State health regulations forbid store personnel to provide this service if old cartons are used.

Engagements Announced

Mr. Arthur Lee Banks of Greenville announces the engagement of his daughter, Miriam Yvette, to Larry Smith, son of Mrs. Nina Smith of Greenville. The wedding will take place June 19.

Mr. and Mrs. David F. Pridgen of Fountain announce the engagement of their daughter, Diane, to Thomas Melson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Melson of Powells Point. The wedding will take place this month.

HEAVY SNACKING

CHICAGO (UPI) — The average person consumes six to seven snacks daily, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board. The trade organization said children up to age 12 and women between the ages of 25 and 44 are heavy snackers, having up to 20 food contacts daily.

A reception following the wedding was held in the church fellowship building.

The refreshment table was deocorated with a centerpiece of yellow and white cushion mums, daisies and roses. The three-tier cake decorated a separate table and was served by Elizabeth Cobb of Saratoga. Punch was poured by Mary Cox, aunt of the bride. Sandy Bass, cousin of the bride, served at the register.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Small appliances accounted for 26 per cent of the housewares sales dollar volume last year, says Home Furnishings Daily. A study conducted for the National Housewares Manufacturers Association by Bee Angell and Associates, Inc., said cook and bake ware was the second largest category, with 11 per cent of the retail sales.

Live Records Come Into Own

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International

Musical year 1976 will likely be remembered for a number of things, from the assimilation of disco into rock 'n' roll to the release of a stupendously insipid pile of trash aimed at making big bucks from the Bicentennial.

But it may be best remembered as the year "live" records finally came into their own.

The history of live recording is nearly as long and as checkered as that of the recording industry itself. Beginning in the mid-1920's and continuing through the Big Band era and the progressive jazz of the 50's, limitations of technology combined with limitations of corporate imagination to keep recordings made in front of a live audience restricted to a second-class status. Few such records were made and, as record-buyers got used to the super-high fidelity sound possible in the studio, even fewer were purchased.

By the 60's, recording technology had progressed to the point of making creditable live recordings feasible, but except for some excellent collections from the ever-innovative rhythm and blues artists (notably Sam Cooke, James Brown and Otis Redding), there was little worth mentioning.

The problem was the hardware. The best recording equipment of the day was scarcely portable and it was nearly impossible to achieve the ambience of a genuine live set by bringing an audience into a cramped little studio. So if you can't bring live music to the studio, you bring the studio to the music—on wheels.

Suddenly in the last couple of years of the 60's, live sets started turning up on nearly everyone's "best of the year" lists. Albums like The Who's "Live at Leeds," the Stones' "Get Yer Ya Yas Out" and "The Allman Brothers Band Live at the Fillmore East" were, in their engagingly raunchy fashion, some of the finest of the day, made possible largely by the advent of multi-track mobile studios.

Now, with more than half of the 70's already past, it appears that live recording has moved into the front line of popularity for the first time in a half-century of development. Not only are live albums among the hottest sellers — there were seven in Billboard's top 50 LPs one recent week, with a couple more on their way up — but for the first time, they have proved capable of "breaking" an act with the public.

It happened first with Kiss. The leather-and-greasepaint kids finally hit it big after four studio albums with a live version of "Rock 'n' Roll All Night" and an album, "Alive!" (Casablanca NBLP-7020). The public went for Kiss' live sound first, then moved back to buy up their previous studio efforts.

More recently, veteran British rocker Peter Frampton arrived in much the same fashion, aboard his "Frampton Comes Alive" LP (A and M SP-3703).

And now, one of the best and most underrated American rock 'n' rollers of all time — Detroit's Bob Seger — seems to be headed for major recognition at last, with his searing "Live Bullets" album (Capitol SKBB 11523).

One gets the feeling there may be a trend here, somewhere. It will be interesting to see where it goes.

Skyways Help Revive Downtown Minneapolis

By LOTTE SEIDLER

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — In its 14 years of existence, the Minneapolis Skyway System has done more than keep toes warm in winter and tempers cooled in summer.

The skyways, along with the Nicollet Mall and the IDS tower, have helped revive downtown Minneapolis.

Overhead, glass-paneled tunnels, the skyways glide over busy downtown streets connecting buildings on adjoining blocks. Actress Mary Tyler Moore walks along one at the start of her Saturday night television show.

"The best in the country by far," said O.D. Gay, executive vice president of the Minneapolis Downtown Council.

In the early 1960s Minneapolis suffered from pains common to many American cities: the flight of the more prosperous to the suburbs and suburban shopping centers.

An unusually stable downtown business community and Minneapolis' frigid winters combined to make the skyways good sense and good business.

Businessmen put up the money for the first skyway and the temperatures, which often stay below zero for days, provided the extra incentive.

"We stumbled on it by accident," said Gay in an interview.

One businessman, Morris Baker, thought of building an elevated walkway connecting his department store to another as early as 1952. He held on to his idea through the years and along with Edward F. Baker — an architect who was no relation — worked on a series of second-level walkway plans.

When downtown business grew anxious about the flight to the suburbs, the Nicollet Mall was conceived. Eight blocks of Nicollet Avenue were developed into a $3.8 million mall with trees, fountains and benches and at Christmas time, sparkling lights. No motorized traffic was permitted except for taxis, buses and an occcasional prowl car.

A few years later the 57-story IDS Tower — much of it glass reflecting the sky and the clouds — taller than any other building in the Twin Cities — was constructed half way down the mall.

With the IDS Tower as their hub and the mall as a guideline, the skyways spread.

Early fears that ground level foot traffic and businesses would fall off as the result of the skyways have failed to materialize, Gay said, partly because of fast convenient escalators. Store rents on second and third floors have gone up.

Presently there are 16 skyways connecting department stores, banks, hotels and the IDS Tower which contains everything from an ice cream parlor to an observation area.

Skyways are air conditioned in summer and heated in winter. They make fine comfortable windows to view snow falls or blizzards.

They're expensive, with estimates of $200,000 to $275,000, for an 80-foot long, 20-foot wide bridge, for construction and the rearrangement of traffic patterns in existing buildings.

Jenkins Is Speaker

JACKSONVILLE—"Finding the right job is important to achieving success in life," says Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina University.

Speaking to graduating seniors Friday at Onslow Academy, Dr. Jenkins urged the seniors to "Match what you can do, to what you want to do, in selecting a career."

To do this, Jenkins said you must first "Analyze your ability."

"If you are good in math and really enjoy it, maybe you should look for a career in engineering. Or, if you like science then choose medicine or some other science related field. An interest in children probably means you would make a good teacher," Jenkins said.

"Before you complete your decision, ask yourself what you like to work with. Do you like working with people, with things or with ideas?"

"Then shop around. There are 50,000 types of jobs in America," he said.

"Most of all," Dr. Jenkins said, "Make your own decisions, change if you make a mistake and have the desire to succeed."

Linda Kasabian Is In Trouble Again

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — When Voytek Frykowski staggered bloody and dying onto the front lawn of the home of actress Sharon Tate, a horror-struck 20-year-old girl told him, "Oh God, I'm so sorry."

Four months later, in December 1969, Linda Kasabian of Milford surrendered to New Hampshire state police. She was one of several members of a cult founded by Charles Manson wanted in connection with the murders of Frykowski, Miss Tate and five others.

She was granted immunity from prosecution in return for her testimony and became the state's star witness in the trials of Manson, Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Charles "Tex" Watson. The four were convicted of murdering Miss Tate, Frykowski, hair stylist Jay Sebring, coffee heiress Abigail Folger and Steven Parent on Aug. 9, 1969.

Her testimony also helped convict Leslie Van Houten, who joined the group the next night to murder Los Angeles merchant Leno LaBianca and his wife Rosemary. On orders from Manson, Linda Kasabian accompanied the killers to both murder scenes. But she did not participate in the killings, the main reason she was granted immunity.

"From the first interview I believed her story, and I felt that a jury would also," chief prosecutor Vincent Bugliosi wrote in "Helter Skelter," an account of the killings and the trial. "There were no pauses in her answers, no evasions, no attempts to make herself appear something she was not. When a witness takes the stand and tells the truth, even though it is injurious to his own image, you know he can't be impeached."

She returned to New Hampshire, remarried and as Mrs. Linda Christian, lived a secluded life in the Milford area, where as late as April reliable sources said she was drawing welfare.

She managed to avoid reporters until April 19, when she was arrested with 10 others on charges of rioting and threatening police.

The group built a bonfire in Litchfield to "have an Easter party," one of her friends said. They ignored a statewide warning of severe fire danger, then tried to halt firemen from extinguishing the blaze.

She was arraigned in Nashua District Court on charges of rioting, interfering with fire apparatus, shouting obscenities and resisting arrest. She was released in $1,100 bail.

Apologize For Damage

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Six boys from good families have apologized for vandalizing a cemetery. The youths, aged 14 and 15, have proposed to make partial restitution by helping to clean and improve it.

More than 100 grave markers, many irreplaceable because of their age, were broken or shattered in the Chestnut Hill cemetery the night of May 7. The maintenance building also was watersoaked. The cost of repair and replacement has been estimated at up to $500,000.

The City Council accepted the letters of apology as information Tuesday. The city attorney advised that nothing more than this be done, because the boys are to appear in a private hearing in juvenile court next Tuesday. Because they are under 16 and considered juveniles under North Carolina law, names of the boys have not been made public.

Wants To Marry Him

LONDON (AP) — Rosabella Burch, the twice-married companion of J. Paul Getty, says in the British magazine Woman she wants to marry the 83-year-old, five times married American oil millionaire.

Getty, reputed to be the world's richest man, was quoted in the magazine story as saying he is "far too old" to wed again.

"Of course I want to marry him. I'd be lost in the world if anything happened to him," the Nicaraguan-born Mrs. Burch said in the magazine interview.

TV SHOWTIME

For The Week Of June 6-12, 1976

'Entertainment '76' To Be Colorcast

Ten internationally known show business personalities have been selected as inductees for the Entertainment Hall of Fame Foundation's third annual two-hour awards presentation, "Entertainment '76," to be colorcast Saturday, June 12, 10 p.m. to 12 midnight on NBC Channel 6-7-28.

The awards will honor those 20th century creators and performers whose lifetime contributions to the lively arts have entertained American audiences and enriched the nation's culture.

The concept and objectives of the Entertainment Hall of Fame Awards are stated in their motto: "Honoring creators and performers not for what they last did, but for what they did that will last."

The inductees, selected from a list of 71 nominees by the entertainment editors of major newspapers throughout the United States, include Ingmar Bergman, James Cagney, Bing Crosby, Alfred Hitchcock, Arthur Rubinstein, Orson Welles and, posthumously, Louis Armstrong, Enrico Caruso, Pablo Casals and Gilbert & Sullivan.

The Foundation's Board of Directors, headed by Dr. John R. Hubbard, President of the University of Southern California, each year appoints a Select Committee, each member of which nominates two living and two posthumous candidates.

Nominations are then turned over to the entertainment editors, each of whom votes for a total of 19 candidates, six living and four posthumous.

Previous inductees were Irving Berlin, Charlie Chaplin, Judy Garland, George Gershwin, D. W. Griffith, Katharine Hepburn, Sir Laurence Olivier, Eugene O'Neill, George Bernard Shaw and Tennessee Williams (1974); and Fred Astaire, George Balanchine, Jack Benny, Humphrey Bogart, Walt Disney, Duke Ellington, Bob Hope, Cole Porter, Richard Rodgers and Igor Stravinsky (1975).

Saturday Night Has New Glow

Saturday night has always been a special night. Years ago it was the night the huge galvanized tub was hauled into the kitchen, placed beside the wood stove and used by the family for their once - a - week bath.

Then came 'indoor plumbing,' baths became commonplace, and the night was then delegated as the time girls washed their hair and boys shined the familys' shoes.

As these girls and boys grew up, the night became memorable for many reasons — dates, dances, the "Hit Parade," movies, etc. In other words, it was the evening when socializing and entertainment reigned supreme.

Then came Oct., 1975, and the night took on a new luster and meaning for millions of people. Now there's a abrupt exodus from parties, pizza parlors and theaters as people rush to the nearest TV. Even the 'old folk' are trying to 'psyche' themselves into staying awake until 11:30.

What's causing the stir? A crazy, definitely different, very 'with-it' and - at time senseless show, "NBC Saturday Night." When 'Saturday Night' (11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., except for the first Saturday of each month) premiered, viewers were generally speechless.

"NBC Saturday Night" is the conglomerate effort of a combination of unique people who are obviously all on the same zany wave length. At the helm is producer Lorne Michaels, who has gathered around him what could be TV's most widely diversified group of writers and actors.

"Our writing staff is made up of the best creative talents in the industry" said Michaels, adding, ". . . unfortunately, the industry is tuna fishing."

Typical. If the last part of Michael's comment doesn't make sense, don't worry. It's not supposed to, and it's indicative of 'Saturday Night.'

Chevy Chase, who doubles as a writer and performer for the show, usually opens the show by falling to the floor in such a realistic way that viewers, assuming it is an accident, gasp in horror. But it's not. It's planned. He also opens his regular Weekend Update newscast parody with, "Good evening. I'm Chevy Chase and you're not."

Dumb? You bet. But funny — and again typical.

The other on - camera contributors, the Not Ready For Prime Time Players, are equally off-beat, and they fill the 90 minutes with provocative and ridiculous entertainment.

If the show aired earlier — or on another night — would it evoke the same favorable response? One wonders.

Whatever may be the reason for its appeal, "NBC Saturday Night" is a breath of fresh air blowing through the sometimes stale, stagnated world of taped, stereotyped and generally dull television programming.

CHEVY CHASE — has emerged as one of the personalities more readily identified with "NBC's Saturday Night." He appears in topical comedy skits with other repertory company members, is featured regularly in the show's opening, which usually ends with one of his patented "falls," and is perhaps best known as the commentator on "Weekend Update," a regular newscast parody.

Happy Birthday America

There probably isn't one of us who hasn't yet or won't sometime consider the advantages of waffling a bit on the date of our birth. Of course, if we gave in to the temptation, the revision would be about the year not the day. Not so with the birthday we're all about to celebrate on July 4th. The word is out it's the 200th year. When you're talking countries, that's a nice not too old, not too young age. But what abut the day? Well . . .

CBS News Correspondent Walter Cronkite, the man who will anchor the CBS News day-long and night-long "In Celebration of US" on July 4, was ut on the spot. "What is the way it is?" he was asked.

"There is considerable confusion about just what we are celebrating on the Fourth," Cronkite said. "If you have to pick out one day as the birthday of the United States, July 4 is a good choice. But so is July 2, July 8 or August 2. And to understand all this, you have to understand just what did and didn't happen 200 years ago that day.

"On July 4, 1776, the Second Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, either voted on or otherwise adopted, authorized, approved or accepted the wording of the final draft of the Declaration of Independence. There is no evidence that anything else of great importance happened that day. Indeed, we could find no evidence that the approval of the Declaration was actually voted on that day—meaning a show of hands or anything else you could actually count. But there is doubt that the feeling of the Congress was to accept the document. We also could find no evidence that in 1776 the events of the Fourth itself was considered the most dramatic or climatic happenings of the year, or that those assembled thought what they did that particular day would be the act that would go down in history as one of the nation's most memorable events.

"Probably, if you could poll the delegates to the Second Continental Congress and ask them what day in those hectic weeks in the summer of 1776 was the most important, they might very well choose July 2. It was on that day that Congress made the bold and historic decision to proclaim independence. For the next two days, they debated how to announce that proclamation. The Declaration of Independence was that announcement.

"The first recorded citywide celebration that resembles our version of Independence Day came in Philadelphia in 1776, but it was on July 8. That was when the Declaration was read in Philadelphia at the State House. There were cheers, bells and volleys from the militia.

Helen Doss' Life Portrayed In 'The Family Nobody Wanted'

Helen Doss's life has been crowded with children and with love. And, recently, she spent a month watching a significant and inspiring part of that full life pass before her eyes as she served as technical advisor for a motion picture made for TV.

The film, "The Family Nobody Wanted," an ABC-TV "Saturday Night Movie" airing June 12, 8:30 to 10 p.m. on Ch. 3W-5-12, stars Shirley Jones as Helen Doss, who with her husband Carl (played by James Olson), adopted 12 racially-mixed children in the years immediately following World War II.

"The Family Nobody Wanted" received a National Education Association endorsement, and this was the first time a made-for-TV prime time movie was so honored.

"We were one of the first couples to adopt children of various races," recalled Helen, a plesant-looking, middle-aged woman. "These children were considered unadoptable. Carl and I always felt we had hearts with a surplus of love and what better way to give this love than to children who had really never known affection."

After the 12th child was added to the family, Helen wrote a book, "The Family Nobody Wanted," in 1954. It was an immediate best-seller and today is in its 24th printing and is required reading in many schools around the country. The film is adapted from this book and producer William Kayden asked Helen to oversee her own story.

"This story is mainly a quiet drama of love," pointed out Helen, who today lives in Tuscon, Arizona. "It covers a period of several months in our lives in 1947 when bigotry and misunderstanding nearly drove us away from a small town where Carl had come to take over the ministry in a local church."

At the time, some called the Doss' adoption efforts an "experiment."

"Not to us it wasn't," said Helen emphatically. "It was rather an experience. It was really our family. We wanted children and I couldn't have them. So we adopted and I feel we paved the way for other couples."

One day Shirley Jones asked Helen if she felt it was all worth it.

"I honestly never gave that a thought," she replied. And after getting to know the dozen youngsters playing her children in the film, Helen added: "I'd like to start all over again by adopting these kids."

Soaps Expanded, Games Added

ABC's two longest-running daytime serials, "One Life to Live" and "General Hospital," will expand to 45-minute formats, two new game shows will be added to the network's daytime schedule this summer, and, later this year, ABC will begin daytime network programming one-half hour earlier, at 11 a.m., it was recently announced to network affiliates.

Edwin T. Vance, Vice President and National Program Director, ABC Entertainment, said that, beginning July 26 when the serials expand, ABC will be programming more daytime dramas than ever before. He emphasized that the network would strengthen its current game show line-up with the premiere July 12 of two new shows, "Hot Seat" and "Family Feud," but "to have our most effective and competitive game block in the new daytime structure, it is essential that we begin our schedule a half-hour earlier, at 11 a.m., instead of 11:30."

In accordance with the newtork's policy of announcing such moves at least six months in advance, Mr. Vane said ABC would start its daytime schedule at 11 a.m. beginning in late December.

Mr. Vane said that these moves are initial steps toward the long-range goal of two major program blocks — non-serials to start the schedule and three and a half to four hours of serial for the remainder of the day.

Fred Silverman, President of ABC Entertainment, said that although game-audience participation shows will continue to be a basic staple for daytime, ". . .our emphasis will be on the serial dramas. . . they produce those superior demographics among young women and, though traditionally slower to get started, they develop the strongest viewer loyalty and can enjoy virtually unlimited life."

"Hot Seat," hosted by Jim Peck, features married couples as participants, with one partner connected to a metered lie-dector that registers emotional reactions. "Family Feud" is hosted by the popular comedian and well-known game show celebrity, Richard Dawson. In the program, two families compete to match answers with those given by respondents in a nationwide survey.

Weaver's Success Continues

FOREIGN REGION— Series star Dennis Weaver (as Marshal McCloud) finds he must use local transportation to locate a missing beauty contestant in "Our Man in Harem" a "McCloud" segment of the "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie" to be colorcast June 6 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 6-7.

Since his days as Chester on "Gunsmoke," Dennis Weaver's success story has grown constantly.

For Weaver, the acceptance of "McCloud" (a segment of "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie," 9 to 11 p.m. as a hit series is gratifying, but it's more gratifying to him that his audience has accepted him as a leading actor. It proves that Weaver's decision to walk away from the security of a hit show to strike out on his own was the right one.

Now, after six years in a TV series that grows in popularity ("McCloud" has also been nominated twice in the last two years for Emmy Awards), Weaver has these accomplishments to reflect on: Two Emmy nominations as Best Actor (in 1974 and 1975) for "McCloud"); elected by his peers to lead the Screen Actor's Guild as its president; a versatile actor consistently sought after for TV movies; a recognized country music singer and songwriter whose musical talent is sought for guest stints on top variety and talk shows; two released record albums.

A native of Joplin, Mo., Weaver enlisted in the Navy during World War II, rising to the rank of ensign. This was followed with a stay at the University of Oklahoma, where he helped his track team to the national championships. He was a runner-up in the 1948 Olympic Games trials, placing sixth in the nation over 36 entrants.

After graduation from Oklahoma, Weaver enrolled in New York's Actors Studio. He made his debut on Broadway in 1951 and toured nationally in "Come Back, Little Sheba."

It was Shelley Winters who gave Weaver his biggest studio boost. She met him at Actors Studio and praised him so highly to her studio — Universal-International — that he was signed to a contract.

During the next year Weaver appeared in four major films. Then he was offered the role of Chester in "Gunsmoke," spending nine years with that series.

Then came starring roles in the series, "Kentucky Jones" and "Gentle Ben."

Weaver, who received an Emmy in 1960 for his Chester Good portrayal, is also very proud of the "Family of the Year" award given to him and his wife Gerry by their neighbors for "outstanding moral, social and civic leadership."

Weaver, is a vegetarian and he does regular physical workouts.

Beware Of Sharks

The elegant beauty of the unspoiled waters of the Gulf of - Mexico, off the northeastern tip of Yucatan, and the mystery surrounding the only sharks known to sleep, are explored in "The Sleeping Sharks of Yucatan," a special in the ABC News series, "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," Sunday, June 6, 7 to 8 p.m., on Ch. 3-12.

Cousteau's scientific curiosity leads him to investigate the phenomenon, reported by native divers, of sharks that retire to underwater caves for rest and sleep. This is unique behavior among sharks, who must constantly swim in order to receive enough oxygen to breathe.

Along with his divers and cameramen, Cousteau descends to study these sharks' special physical adaptations. Spectacular film footage is recorded when the dangerous bull sharks react to the intruders.

Equally exciting are scenes of divers swimming among giant devilfish (manta rays) as they prowl about the gaunt ribs of a sunken Spanish galleon.

Using a coverted airplane and a helicopter, Cousteau also films Chichen Itza and other fabled Mayan ruins.

While skimming over the coral gardens, reefs and lagoons of the clear waters off Yucatan, Cousteau sees what appears to be two giant oil slicks. The men return in a helicopter for a closer look and discover that the grat globs are what Cousteau terms an "endless wall" of small fish, about 12 inches long, known as French grunts. Divers descend and are filmed as they wanter through this amazing concentration of marine life.

'Kojak' Filmed In New York

The "Kojak" series, starring Telly Savalas as a New York City homicide detective lieutenant, is scheduled to shoot 10 hours of programs in New York City, starting this summer.

The series, which is entering its fourth season on CBS-TV, is broadcast Sundays, 9 to 10 p.m.

"We feel that New York is extending us a number of important courtesies and that filming there will give the show a more realistic look," said James McAdams, producer of the popular series. "Location work on a show of this type is a real plus to the impact of the drama."

Dan Frazier as Capt. McNeil, Kevin Dobson as Det. Crocker, and George Savalas as Stravros co-star with Savalas, who plays Theo Kojak, a flamboyant detective operating in the tense and complex world of a New York homicide unit.

"Kojak" will start the new season with a two-hour special episode. Guest stars are to be announced.

HANDS OFF!

Historical Drama Airs Monday

Omar Sharif and Catherine Deneuve star in "Mayerlining," a historical romantic drama detaling the life and tragic romance of Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria-Hungary in the 1880's on "The CBS Late Movie" Monday, June 7, at 11:30 p.m., on Channel 9-11.

Bored with a life of pleasure-seeking and rankled because his father, Emperior Franz-Josef (Mason), refuses to invest him with royal authority and responsibility, Prince Rudolf (Sharif) is ready for rebellion.

At this time, he falls deeply in love with the beautiful 17-year-old Baroness Maria Vetsera (Miss Deneuve) despite the act he is married.

When the Vatican refuses to annual his marriage, his rash behavior causes the violent disapproval of his father, and mother, Empress Elizabeth (Miss Gardner).

Reluctant to renounce lives rooted in tradition and protocol, and receiving pressure from outside sources to end their romance, the lovers take tragic steps to solve their dilemma.

TRAGIC LOVERS — Omar Sharif, as Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria and Catherine Deneuve, as 17-year-old Maria Vetsera, portray star-crossed lovers in "Mayerling" a romantic historical drama to be colorcast on "CBS Late Movie" Monday, June 7 at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 3N-9-11.

Three Programs On Night Schedule

"The Streets of San Francisco," "S.W.A.T." and "Dan August" will join ABC's Late-Night program schedule this fall, it was announced by Edwin T. Vane, ABC Entertainment.

Mr. Vane also described the network's strengthening and expansion of the night - by - night vertical structure of Late - Night programming:

"The Streets of San Francisco" will air on Thursday evening, the same night the series airs in prime time, immediately followed (approximately 12:40 - 1:50 a.m.) by "Dan August" starring Burt Reynolds.

Encore presentations of "S.W.A.T." starring Steve Forrest, will air on Friday night in the same time spot currently occupied by "The Rookies," and that series will move to Wednesday to be followed (approximately 12:40 to 2 a.m.) by ABC's Mystery Dramas.

The "Movie of the Week" series, now playing on Wednesday night, will be moved to Tuesday evening.

Monday nights in the fourth quarter will contain no Late - Night programming because of "NFL Monday Night Football" telecasts, but starting in January, ABC will bring back the popular Late-Night Specials with encores of highlight programs from the past along with at least ten original specials.

Steven Ford Is Davidson's Guest

President Ford's 20-year-old son Steven, McLean Stevenson, Florence Henderson and Ed McMahon guest-star on "The John Davidson Show" Monday, June 7, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7-28. This is the third of Davidson's summer comedy-variety programs.

Young Ford, with the aid of an automatic bucking machine, demonstrates for Davidson the finer technigues of rodeo riding (which he is studying with rodeo great Casey Tibbs). Later he chats with his host about how the Secret Service affects his dates, his mother's attitude toward his rodeo career and his future plans.

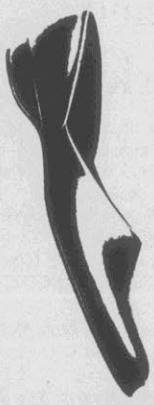

Davidson opens the show with "Let Your Love Flow," then joins McLean Stevenson for "Walking My Baby Back Home." Stevenson also does a solo, "Love."

Florence Henderson sings "Let It Shine" and then she and Davidson do a medley of Paul Williams's "Let Me Be the One" and "I Won't Last a Day Without You."

Davidson does some stand-up comedy with Ed McMahon, during which several members of the studio audience become involved. Later Davidson sings "I Let You Walk Away," after which he and McLean Stevenson close the show with a musical spoof of Women's Lib called "I used to Know the Rules."

Carole King Performs On TV

COMPOSER-SINGER—Carole King wrote the music, sings the songs, and performs as the voice of Rosie the heroine, in "Maurice Sendak's Really Rosie: Starring the Nutshell Kids," and animated special written by Sendak, to be rebroadcast Tuesday, June 8 (8-8:30 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9.

It may beggar belief, but Carole King, a composer and singing star whose recordings have sold in the millions and who holds four Grammy Awards, had never performed on television — until "Really Rosie" came along.

For her television debut in "Maurice Sendak's Really Rosie: Starring the Nutshell Kids," an animated special to be rebroadcast Tuesday, June 8, 8 to 8:30 p.m., CBS. Ch. 9. Ms. King composed an original music score, sings the songs, and performs as the voice of the heroine, Rosie.

Incidentally, the special also marks the television debut of writer - director Sendak and Ms. King's two teen-age daughters, Louise and Sherry Goffin, who provide background vocals for their mother's songs.

There's no doubt that Ms. King is a genuine superstar in the music world. So, why hadn't she worked in television before? The answers have to do with priorities.

As she explains it, "Performing live can be joyous, and the audience's response can be exhilarating for an artist, but it can also be de-energizing and taxing.

"Really, the most important thing to me is writing," she continues. "I'd rather devote my entire energy to creating new songs, because they are all I have to give to my audience, and that I can do through records."

Why did she choose to make her debut with "Really Rosie"? The answer to that question: motherhood and Brooklyn.

Ms. King is the mother of three daughters and a son. Their ages cover a wide enough range for Sendak's many books to have been in the "top 10" in her household for years. So when she and Sendak got together on "Really Rosie," she was almost as familiar with his many characters as he was. Their rapport was instant and mutually inspirational.

And, who says you can't go home again? Carole King knew she could with "Really Rosie," because the story's locale is the Brooklyn, N.Y., in which she and Sendak grew up. The stoops and street scenes on the animation storyboard suggested the sounds that became the songs for something special.

The story of "Really Rosie" revolves around the imaginative exploits of Rosie, the dynamic little heroine of Sendak's popular book, "The Sign on Rosie's Door," and her friends, kids who otherwise populate Sendak's four-book "Nutshell Library." Rosie's songs range from the instructive "Alligators All Around," through "Pierre" (the plaintive tale of a boy who said "I don't care") to the heart-rending "Ballad of Chicken Soup."

Says Sendak: "I wrote 'The Nutshell Library' over ten years ago, and Carol has enhanced and deepened the poems with her music. She's given new meaning and dimension to my words." High praise indeed from one of literature's brightest talents.

Broadway Star

Tovah Feldshuh, the award winning Broadway actress, made her daytime television dramatic debut on ABC's daytime serial, "Ryan's Hope." Ms. Feldshuh created the role of Martha McKee in four episodes of the serial which aired May 25, June 2, 3, and 4.

Ms. Feldshuh has just completed her starring role in the hit Broadway play, "Yentl," for which she won an Obie, the Theatre World Award, the Drama Desk Award for Best Actress in a Play and a Tony nomination for Best Actress.

A graduate of Sarah Lawrence College, the accomplished young actress won a McKnight Fellowship to the Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis where she created over 20 roles in two seasons. She made her Broadway debut in the musical, "Cyrano," and has also appeared on Broadway in "Dreyfus," and in the American Place Theatre's revue, "Straws in the Wind." Ms. Feldshuh's television credits include a role in "Scream," an "ABC Movie of the Week," and guest appearances on the "Kojak" series.

Ms. Feldshuh is currently in rehearsals at the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Connecticut, where she will appear in two productions during the coming season. She will play Abigail in "The Crucible" and Celia in "As You Like It."

Converse Performs On Stage, TV

Frank Converse, who is seen as the rebellious truck driver Will Chandler in 'Movin' On" (airing on Tuesdays from 8 to 9 p.m. on NBC-TV), is a native of St. Louis, Mo., who received his early training on the stage in New York City.

He still heads for the stage whenever he is away from a film or television camera. Last summer he appeared in Bertolt Brecht's "Artuo Ui" in New Haven, Conn.

Active in repertory theatre, he has performed in such plans as "The Seagull," "Death of a Salesman," "Night of the Inguana" and "A Man For All Season." In New York, he originated the role of Billy Einhorn in "The House of Blue Leaves," and appeared in"First One Asleep Whistle."

In two seasons with the American Shakespeare Festival he was in "King Lear," Richard III" and "Much Ado About Nothing."

His face is familiar to television viewers because of roles in such programs as "Mod Squad," "Medica! Center" and "The Bold Ones." He has also starred in two series, "N.Y.P.D." and "Coronet Blue," as well as in the daytime drama, "The Guest Room."

Reared in Bucks County, Pa., and educated at Phillips Adademy, Andover, Mass., he earned his B.S.A. degree at Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh, where he met and married his wife Carol. They reside in New York City with their children, Allan and Celia.

The weekly one-hour series deals with the contrasting approaches to life of an unlikely pair of truckers as they travel through various cities across the country.

Co-starring with Converse is Claude Akins as Sonny Pruitt, a veteran truck driver, part Daniel Boone, part George Patton and 100 percent John Wayne, who "carries anything, anywhere, anytime anyone pays."

Traveling to where the job pays — one day Seattle, another day Denver — they run into their share of scrapes, though both can take care of themselves. Using the open road as a proving ground, each cautiously accepts the other, admitting to himself a certain respect for the other's style of life.

Taylor, Caine, York Star In Comic Drama Sunday

Elizabeth Taylor stars as a shrewish wife with a cheating husband and a talent for revenge in "X Y & Zee," a comic drama of a marital blitz making its television premiere as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," June 6, 9 to 11 p.m., Channel 3-5-12.

Michael Caine and Suzannah York are also starred as the two other players in a game of changing partners.

Robert Blakeley (Caine) is a man who loves not wisely but too often, and his wife, Zee (Miss Taylor) doesn't like it one bit. When Robert roams from the homefire to the hearth of a lovely widow (Miss York) without bothering to keep it a secret, Zee furiously reacts first by smashing up his car and then confrinting the two in a jealous rage.

Robert is singularly unimpressed by these ploys and others even more dramatic as he proceeds with his plan to leave his wife, so Zee tries a new tack — she 'befriends' her competitor.

With such a friend, the young widow needs no enemies.

Kevin Thomas of the Los Angeles Times found the movie "written with stinging wit but also great compassion," and the Washington Post's Gary Arnold said Miss Taylor "sustains this new film (and) one eagerly awaits her eventual emergence as the most beautiful of brassy screen comediennes." Variety's critic praised the "powerful drama" and its "outstanding performances" in "one of the most articulate scripts in recent film history."

(This film deals with mature subject matter. Although this film has been edited for television, parental judgement and discretion are advised.)

X,Y AND ZEE — Elizabeth Taylor (rear) is offering cold comfort to Susannah York (foreground) in "X, Y and Zee" a modern comedy of marriage and mischief making its television debut on ABC-TV's "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Sunday, June 6 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 3W-5-12.

International Actor Has Big Dreams

"Big plans, we had nothing but big plans. And in those peaceful, utterly optimistic days that followed the Second World War, it looked as though anything was possible — anything."

Actor George Voskovec was recalling his dreams of using theater to help unite the world. A native Czechoslovak who is now an American citizen, he portrays a Greek patriarch in "Nicky's World," the "CBS Late Night Movie" airing June 8, at 11:30 p.m.

Before the war, Voskovec, then working in the Czechoslovak theater, made satire and pointed social comey his specialties. Under the threat of Hitler's impending takeover, he fled his country and spent the war years in America, where he beamed countless radio programs into his occupied country.

"After the war, I returned to Cezechoslovakia with the plans of rebuilding a national theater," said Voskovec. "I felt that a bridge between East and West, via something so popular and present as the theater, was culturally important.

"And so I imported American plays into Europe. And I hope to make film in Czechoslovakia in two versions, Czech and English, to export to the U.S.

"I felt oddly equipped to handle the two cultures," said Voskovec. "I had learned the art of comedy from such American film comedians as Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton and Charlie Chaplin.

Winner Takes All

Shirley Jones stars as a compulsive gambler in "Winner Take All" (formerly titled "Time Lock"), to be rebroadcast as the "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" June 10, 9 tp 11 -.m., on Channel 6-7, 28.

Eleanor Anderson's (Jones) addiction to all forms of gambling becomes progressively worse and threatens to ruin her marriage. Her husband, Bill (Laurence Luckinbill), who married her after his wife died, doesn't suspect she is a gambler and has no idea she has lost $30,000 of his savings.

Co-starring are Sam Groom as a charming but unscrupulous gambler; Joan Blondell as Beverly Craig, manager of a poker club, Joyce Van Patten as Edie Gould, a gambling friend of Eleanor; and Sylvia Sidney as Anne Barclay, Eleanor's mother.

The drama was filed at a poker club in Gardena, Calif., at the Hollywood Bowl and at various other Los Angeles locations. The teleplay was written by Caryl Ledner and directed by Paul Bogart.

HATCH JOINS 'STREETS' CAST

Richard Hatch has been signed to play the role of Inspector Dan Robbins in "The Streets of San Francisco," replacing Michael Douglas who leaves the popular series after four years to pursue interests in film production.

Joining series star Karl Malden (Lt. Mike Stone) as filming resumes for the series' fifth season, Hatch portrays a new police detective teamed with Stone after Steve Keller (Douglas) decides to quit the police force and take up teaching.

Has Exalted Opinion Of Himself

COCKATOO—Fred, the Cockatoo, is a high-flying Hollywood star who earns plenty birdseed as the housepet of Tony Baretta (Robert Blake) in ABC-TV series "Baretta" Wednesdays (9-10 p.m.) Top: Fred on Trainer Ray Berwick's head. The other birds (1); Samantha the Goose, and Baby, a Golden Eagle, who have both appeared in ABC productions, Middle, left: Fred snuggles up to Blake. Middle right: Fred displays his wingspread. Bottom, left: Fred rides a bicycle and bottom right: a buss for trainer Berwick.

"No, I ain't a parrot."

Personable Fred the Cockatoo, who unofficially shares star billing with Robert Blake of ABC-TV's "Baretta" series Wednesdays, 9 to 10 p.m., hasn't added that line to his repertoire yet but he may.

"You have no idea how many of his fans think Fred's a parrot," explains his trainer, Ray Berwick. "Fred would be furious if he knew. He thinks he's much more rare and definitely more beautiful."

Actually, the Encyclopedia Britannica defines cockatoos as "a group of parrots confined to the Australian region." But Fred—if he could read—would definitely peck away at this famous source, according to Berwick.

"The Encyclopedia goes on to say that their note is harsh and their powers of vocal imitations are limited," says Berwick, "and Fred wouldn't agree with that at all."

Fred's repertoire includes pedaling a bicycle, riding a scooter, imitating dogs and cats, and saying "hello," and "I love you" and "Freeze."

Blake has joked that he's getting jealous of Fred. "A TV newsman cancelled his interview with me one day after he found out Fred wouldn't be there," Blake said. "He told me the interview would be a lot more visually interesting on a day Fred was there. And he was right."

Off-screen, Fred shares the spotlight at his owner-trainer's home in Sherman Oaks, California, with such other screen celebrities as Samantha the Goose, who appeared in the "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" presentation of "Friendly Persuasion," and Baby, the Golden Eagle, whose credits include Andy Griffith's special, "Adams of Eagle Lake."

Keeps Monocle Out Of Sight

John Steed, a man of taste and breeding more than a man of vengeance (even though his series was called "The Avengers"), might call the story "The Case of the Disappearing Monocle." Or possibly "Props Do Not a Villain Make."

It began when screenwriter Sam Rolfe created a character called Shawcross, villainous organizer of a mercenary army slated to take over an African nation in "Matt Helm," the ABC-TV "Wednesday Movie of the Week," June 9, 11:30 p.m., On Ch. 3-5-12.

Writer Rolfe envisioned the character as an Englishman with dueling scars on his cheeks and a monocle over his eye. Evil, evil, classically evil.

Now comes the rug-puller, the twist that makes a tale. Producer - director Buzz Kulik signed suave, dapper Patrick Macnee — formerly the suave, dapper John Steed — to play the role of the unpleasant person who menaces Matt Helm (Tony Franciosa).

"I read about the scars and the monocle in the script." Macnee said during the filming, "and I felt that a villain with those trademarks just didn't suit me.

"That sort of villain is from the mold of Eric Portman, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Eric von Stroheim or Reinhold Schunzel. Shawcross is an Englishman — as I am — and dueling scars are basically German, dating back to Heidelberg days. As for the monocle — they're a bit out of fashion now, aren't they? I've worn one a few times in roles but I could never keep the bloody thing in my eye properly.

"You can see a few in England or on the continent, but they're more a mark of snobbery than villainy," he continued. "I didn't feel I needed a monocle to make me look English or villainous; I can jolly well be as nasty as the next chap.

"Playing Shawcross is quite a bit of fun, of course," he admitted. "I got to chew up a bit of scenery now and then and act every bit a genuine rat — that's what you Americans call a 'rotter.'

"I feel a bit bad about one thing, though — the prop man still has a monocle for someone to wear. But if they ever film 'The Conrad Veidt Story' — he's ready."

POLIS HAM HONORED

Polish ham Wladyslaw Konopka was honored recently by the Polish ham industry for being the greatest Polish ham in the U.S. in 1976. Konopka, who plans newsman Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" under the name of Ted Knight, reportedly capped off the event by swapping so-called "American jokes" over a round of Polish vodka.

ONLY 'BIGGIES' FROM NOW ON

Fred Astaire says he'll do no more "cameo' roles in upcoming features. He is definitely planning to continue his acting career, but only with the "right" (major) roles.

Pike's Peeks

By CHARLIE PIKE,
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — MacKenzie Phillips, who portrays Julie on "One Day At A Time," shows off her singing talents as a guest on the Jackson Family's summer show. She'll sing "Junk Food Junky."

It is definite but not official that daytime TV's "General Hospital" will go to a 45-minute format within the next month or so. That'll undoubtedly entail the addition of new cast members, and considering that the show has had 16 members of its cast pink-slipped since last September there'll probably be quite a few new faces.

As you may have heard. "Rhoda" is getting a divorce. Valerie Harper and David Groh will divorce in one of the new season's early shows, and very likely by mid season David will have a show of his own, but in a different character.

Other faces that'll be gone this Fall are John Amos of "Good Times," and Dick Schaal (Valerie Harper's husband) and Liz Torres of "Phyllis." They join previously mentioned Richard Masur of "One Day At A Time" who'll not be soon in their current roles come September.

Ted Knight, who just won his second Emmy for his portrayal of Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," has entered into an exclusive production commitment with CBS-TV for a musical-comedy special to air next season.

George Burns has accepted Princess Margaret's request to appear in a special Royal Charity Show at the London Palladium in June. This is his first appearance at the Palladium since 1927 when he appeared with Gracie Allen.

Elvis Presley has become such a racquetball nut, he's agreed to lend his name to a chain of racquetball courts to build first in Memphis and Nashville.

Kept Hand Out Of View

What does a producer do when one of her principal actors breaks his hand in the middle of a movie's production?

"You photograph him very carefully . . . so the cast doesn't show," says Nancy Malone, a former actress who just produced her first film, "Winner Take All" (formerly titled "Time Lock"), to be rebroadcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" June 10, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7).

Luckinbill had driven into his driveway and had his car door half open when the family dog — rushing to greet him — jumped up against the door, slamming it shut on the actor's left hand.

"Thank goodness you're right handed," Ms. Malone told him when she learned the news.

"But I'm left handed," he replied.

"If it had happened before the picture started we could have written in a few lines explaining the cast," said Ms. Malone,. "But we had already filmed quite a few scenes of Larry without the cast so we had to finish this part of the film keeping his left hand out of camera range.

Hamner's Mother Visits 'The Waltons' Set

Earl Hamner's mother visited the studio where "The Waltons" is filmed and it was like being home—almost.

"The Waltons" is based on the boyhood memories of writer Earl Hamner, so everything has been done to recreate the Virginia atmosphere of the Blue Ridge Mountain home where his mother, Mrs. Earl Hamner, still lives.

Hamner recently drove his mother through the back lot of the Burbank, Calif., studios, where scenes around a large pond and over country roads are filmed for the series. Suddenly, they came to a clearing. Mrs. Hamner gasped to see what, at first glance, was her Schuyler, Va., home, along with the customary flowers.

The house is shaded by a pepper tree containing a tree house. From one limb hangs a rubber tire that the kids swing on. There are no pepper trees in Virginia, but they photograph just like the weeping willow that still offers shade to Mrs. Hamner during the dog days of summer.

Next to the tree is an open shed housing an old truck engine. The engine, mounted on a block with pully attached, is exactly like the one her late husband used to operate a power saw for cutting lumber.

Mrs. Hamner decided that everything was perfect, except that the front porch lacked the flower boxes she favors.

Reality Presented In 'Streets Of San Francisco

To the uninitiated, filming a television series in out-of-the-way places and colorful cities away from Hollywood's sound stages would be considered a vacation. To the veterans, it is something else again — but worth it.

The magnificent panoramas of San Francisco serve as the background for "The Streets of San Francisco", the series starring Karl Malden and Michael Douglas (Thursdays, (9-10 p.m.) on Channel 3-12. That scenery could not be duplicated on any sound stage, according to Quinn Martin, the executive producer.

The city's Chamber of Commerce boasts that three million people live on the six-mile-wide peninsula which is bounded by the Pacific Ocean on the west and by San Francisco Bay on the east. In between nestles of the city of winding streets and steep hills.

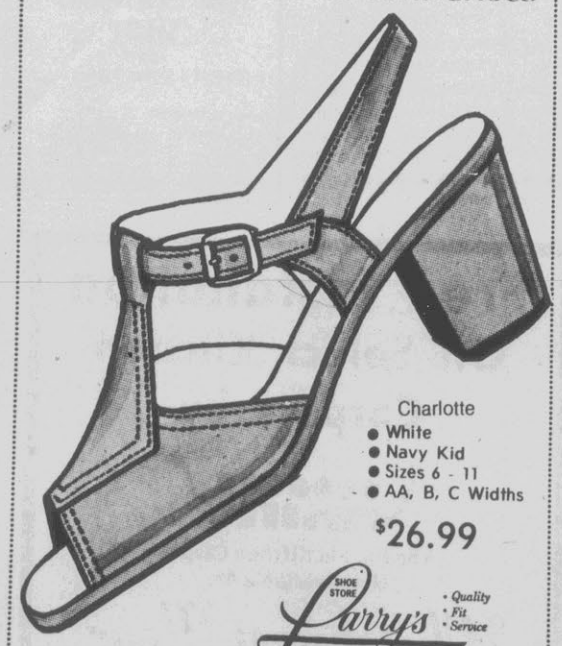

In this setting Malden plays Dectective Lt. Mike Stone and Douglas co-stars as his young associate, Assistant Inspector Steve Keller.

"Beautiful as the backgrounds are," Malden points out, "we are not using them just for the effect. Our stories are about the people who live in the many worlds which make up San Francisco. If it's part of the story to have Coit Tower or the Golden Gate Bridge in a scene, that's all to the good."

Home base for Malden and Douglas is a modern new building on San Francisco's Bryant Street where the Central Detective Bureau of the Police Department is housed. With the cooperation of the Police Department, scenes have been filmed in the morgue, the police communications room, police lab and the coroner's office.

The awareness of working at an actual morgue and not in a reproduction on a stage caused a certain amount of squeamish reaction among some of the company. According to Michael Douglas: "Knowing business is going on as usual and that we are not in a set gives a whole different feel to the scene.

The Salzburg Connections Airs

A chest of incriminating documents from World War II is the prize sought by both sides — one trying to bury the evil memories of the past and the other trying to expose its villains, and in the inernational spy thriller, "The Salzburg Connection," to be shown for the first time on television on "The CBS Friday Night Movies," June 11, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 9-11. Barry Newman and Anna Karina star in the film.

A vacationing American lawyer, Bill Mathison, finds himself involved over his head in a confusing succession of events during his stay in Austria. He and a newly-made widow, whose husband was murdered by neo-Nazi agents, search frantically for a chest of World War II documents that brought about the man's death.

Mathison, who cannot unravel the baffling chain of events that lead him into the plot, joins forces with CIA men against agents who will stop at nothing, including kidnapping and killing, to bury their own past.

The film was based on the novel by Helen MacInnes and was a 1972 20th Century-Fox release.

LAWYER— Barry Newman portrays an American lawyer who stumbles into a dangerous espionage game, in "The Salzburg Connection," to be shown on "The CBS Friday Night Movie," Friday, June 11 (9-11 p.m.) on Channel 3N-9-11.

Rider Has Big Problems

"Honkers" means wild bulls and wilder women when James Coburn stars as a fading rodeo rider trying to break his own bad luck in "The Honkers," rebroadcast as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" June 11, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12.

Lois Nettleton and Slim Pickens are also starred in the contemporary story of rodeo life that Los Angeles Times Critic Charles Chaplin said catches the "earthy, beery flavor of that world, the mixture of comradeship and competition, with an accuracy which is refreshingly unassertive."

Filmed in and around Carlsbad, New Mexico, the movie finds Lew Lathrop (Coburn) hoping to impress his hometown friends — and patch things up with his estranged wife (Lois Nettleton) I by living clean and riding well when the rodeo comes to town.

He rides well, but the rest of the plan doesn't work. His involvement in two barroom brawls and with one wild woman infuriates his partner (Slim Pickens) and completes the estrangement from his wife and son.

Pearl Bailey Is A Guest Of The Osmonds

Singer-entertainer Pearl Bailey, after decades as a headliner in just about every medium of show business, makes her farewell appearance as a spotlighted guest star of Donny and Marie Osmond, on their musical-comedy-variety show, "Donny and Marie," to be rebroadcast Friday, June 11, 8 to 9 p.m., on Channel 3-5-12. On her arrival to tape her final performance, she was greeted by producers Sid and Marty Krofft, longtime friends, who had asked her if she would elect to make the final appearance of her distinguished career on their show.

Also guest starring on this outing of the show are Ruth Buzzi, Sherman Hemsley of "The Jeffersons," the Osmond Brothers and the Ice Vanities. Iron Eyes Cody and Jim Connell are featured.

In a comedy sketch about New York City, Donny and Marie, who are being held captive by King Kong atop the Empire State Building, are joined by Sherman Hemsley.

Later Ruth Buzzi shows Jim Connell and Donny how to ruin the watching of an adventure movie when she joins them in the balcony. A western comedy sketch has Donny, Sherman Hemsley, Jim Connell and Ruth Buzzi playing a poker game for high stakes. The Ice Vanities number salutes the sport of surfing. The finale of the show is a rousing Cowboys and Indians production number.

Donny and Marie duo with "It Takes Two" and a medley of "You Can't Get a Man with a Gun," "The Girl That I Marry" and "Indian Love Call."

Marie sings "Lullaby of Broadway," "Snow Bird" and "Gentle on My Mind."

Jimmy Osmond sings "For Your Applause" and "Rhinestone Cowboy," and the Osmond Brothers team up with "The Last Days."

'These Are The Days'

"These Are The Days" is the ABC-TV animated children's series about the Day family, and the rich quality of American rural life shortly after the turn of the century. This delightful series is telecast on Sundays at 11 a.m.

Widowed Martha Day—the series' star—is energetic enough for two people while making a go of her farm together with her father-in-law, Grandpa Jefferson Day, who runs the combined post office and general store.

Martha is faced with the challenge and the formidable task of raising her three children, 16-year-old Ben, 14-year-old Kathy and 12-year-old Danny. The children are each experiencing difficult growing pains, but even in the worst of circumstances they never lose their powerful sense of concern for each other and for the family as a whole. In terms of both subject matter and graphic styles, this ABC-TV series represents an important innovation in animated children's programs.

Many well-known writers, story editors and actors contribute their talents to weekly episodes, each telling a complete and enriching story. Voices for the cast include June Lockhart as Martha, Pamelyn Ferdin as Kathy, Jack E. Haley as Danny, Henry Jones as Grandpa Day and Andrew Parks as Ben.

William Hanna and Joseph Barbera are the Executive Producers of the weekly series, which is directed by Charles A. Nichols. Iwao Takamoto is the creative producer.

Spy Returned

Tammy Grimes, Tom Ewell and Orson Bean are the stars of "The Spy Who Returned From the Dead," a spoof of undercover agent adventures in the "Tuesday Mystery of the Week" presentation June 8, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

Clyde Lebow (Tom Ewell) commands an American intelligence unit, operating under the cover of a sales executive for a cigarette lighter company. He is also a double agent who has a plan for returning to "the other side," in which he involves the unsuspecting husband-and-wife secret agent team of Bob and Cynthia Jason (Orson Bean and Tammy Grimes).

Times Changing

In the early 1950s, prior to completion of the NBC Television Network's Burbank, Calif., facilities, rehearsing for live Hollywood TV shows was almost "every man for himself," according to researchers for "The First Fifty Years," the four-hour special saluting NBC's 50 years of broadcasting which will be colorcast next November.

"The Colgate Comedy Hour" and sometimes "All Star Revue" rehearsed in the auditorium of the Masonic Temple on Hollywood Blvd. It was a large room with a small stage. If it was necessary to have quiet, stars moved upstairs into a room that was quite confining.

"All Star Revue," when Jimmy Durante was its star, rehearsed in back of a mortuary in West Hollywood. Sometimes talent entered at the same time a funeral was in progress. The room was long and narrow, and for comfort and ease of rehearsing, contained many folding chairs and wall mirrors.

Eddie Fisher rehearsed his show in a hall above a catering service on Third Street, quite a way from Hollywood. A pair of dance studios were used by many shows, one on Cahuenga Blvd., next to the bus depot in Hollywood, and one next to the Capitol Records Building, at Yucca and Vine, also in Hollywood. Now, virtually all shows originating at NBC-TV's Burbank Studios can rehearse and block scenes on the premises.

Renaissance Revisited

"Golden Spring," a special, one-hour Southern Baptist presentation examining the splendid age of the Renaissance, will be colorcast on NBC Sunday, June 6, 5 to 6 p.m. Alexander Scourby is the narrator.

The program, written by Philip Scharper, was filmed in Florence, Venice, Rome and the Vatican State by the NBC-TV Religious Programs Unit for the Radio and Television Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

"Golden Spring" is designed to take viewers back in time on a voyage of self-discovery to the Renaissance period, when art was not an escape from reality but rather a clear vision of what was real.

The program centers on the works of three of the titans of the period—da Vinci, Michelangelo and Raphael—as well as Giotto, Donatello, Vasari, Botticelli, Gozzoli, and Fra Angelico.

The special is the sixth telecast in the "Under God" series, eight programs presented by the major faith groups in their cooperative celebration of the American Bicentennial.

The NBC Television Religious Programs Unit producer of "Golden Spring" is Doris Ann; Joseph Vadala was director and cameraman. Film editor was Ed Williams. Dr. Paul M. Stevens, President, and W. Truett Myers, Consultant, represented the Southern Baptist Convention.

BICENTENNIAL COMEDY—Three young men of Colonial Georgia (1 to r — Gregory Johnson, Gary Epp, and Tobias Heller) plot, right under the Governor's (Jay Garner) nose to steal ammunition from the British stockade in a fictional Revolutionary war comedy "Liberty Boys," on NBC-TV's Bicentennial series, "GO-USA." The program will be colorcast Saturday, June 12 (12:30-1 p.m.).

'Liberty Boys' Air On 'Go USA'

An original fictional farce, "The Liberty Boys," set in Savannah, Georgia, will be presented on "GO-USA," NBC-TV's Bicentennial series, Sunday, June 12, 12:30 to 1 p.m.

The citizens of Savannah seem uninterested in the coming American Revolution, so three young men, Johnny (Tobias Haller), Clyde (Gary Epp), and Jackson (Gregory Johnson), engage in a mischief to embarrass Governor Wright (Jay Garner) and his secretary, Pringledipper (Carleton Carpenter) — they plot to steal gunpowder from the governor's mansion to give to the rebel troops.

Also in the cast are Claiborne Cary as Milledge and Tony Alyward as Private Cholmondoly.

Balladeer Oscar Brand sings his original composition, "The Liberty Boys."

Jon Surgal, who wrote the script and the lyrics for the ballad, directed the production. George A. Heinemann and J. Philip Miller are the producers.

Michele Will Tell

OOPS! I AM SORRY! Bob Burns, NOT Forrest Tucker, appears in the guise of Tracy, the gorilla in "Ghostbusters." Forrest plays the part of Kong. ALSO, because of a miss-print, the date of Roy Rogers' wedding was stated as being New Year's Eve, 1974. It was New Year's Eve, 1947.

TO J. HICKS, FLORENCE, LYNCHBURG, VA.: Comedienne Totie Fields is making an astounding recovery from the recent amputation of her leg. She is now undergoing therapy and will resume her night club tour this summer.

TO S. JAMES, FLORENCE, S.C.: Just a few segments of "Popi" had run when NBC-TV decided to 'ax' it. Since last Fall, the network has pulled many shows out of their schedule before they were given a chance to really prove themselves.

TO M.P.T., ENKA, N.C.: Sally Flynn did sing with Sandy Griffin on "The Lawrence Welk Show" before she married Clay Hart, who was also with the 'L.W. Show.' Hart was married to someone else when he and Sally met. As the saying goes. . . "That's show business!"

To P. BALLARD, DANVILLE, VA.: Louis Jourdan, that good-looking, smooth French leading man is— would you believe— 57 years old! His first film was "Le Corsaire" (1939). He has since starred in 18 films that were made in England and Hollywood. About the only thing he does now are those wonderful TV commercials for FTD.

TO T. KENT, ROCK HILL, S.C. Write to Donny and Marie Osmond c-o their show, 1330 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

TO C. GOINS, LAURINBURG, N. C. Thirteen-year-old Kristie McNichol plays Buddy in ABC-TV's "Family." She began her acting career at the age of five, when her parents, at the urging of friends, took her to a talent agent. She'd had roles in such TV series as "Love American Style," "Emergency! and "Tenafly." She also played the part of Patricia in "Apple's Way." She's now a student at Walter Reed Junior High School in North Hollywood.

TO V. EADDY, LAKE CITY, S.C.: You dreamed it. . . Gary Moore is very definitely alive and happier than ever now that he has licked his battle against alcoholism.

Tahitian Film Airs

The unusual story of a Tahitian boy who makes friends with a baby shark in a quiet lagoon near his village and then frees his pet when it grows too large is told in "Tiko and the Shark," a film from Tahiti to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Children's Film Festival," Saturday, June 12, 1 to 2 p.m.

In addition to special underwater scenes, "Tiko and the Shark," which was filmed entirely in Tahiti, includes a flavor of the cultural background of the island's primitive civilization.

Ten years pass. Tiko is now a young man who has all but forgotten his one-time pet. The village fisherman must now go into dangerous waters to make their catch. While fishing one day, Tiko rescues his brother from drowning, and is confronted by a full-grown shark. But there is a thrilling moment of recognition when he discovers that he is facing his childhood pet, Manidu the shark.

Carson Addresses Nebraska Graduates

NBC-TV star Johnny Carson went home to Norfolk, Nebraska, Sunday, May 23, and an audience of more than 2,200 heard the entertainer deliver a Commencement Day address at Norfolk High School, from which Carson was graduated in 1943.

"'It was tremendously received," said school principal Jeff Burkink, "and what I think impressed us all was Johnny's comment that he was glad he was asked to be present - that it was an honor for him to be there.

Carson arrived in Norfolk in mid-afternoon, accompanied by his wife, Joanna, his parents Mr. and Mrs. "Kit" Carson, and his brother and sister-in-law, Dick and Pat Carson. They rode in a motorcade accompanied by Norfolk Mayor Jim Miller.

Burkink said: "Johnny's speech, which lasted about 12 minutes was a combination of humor, reminiscing and a touch of the serious. After that, he opened the talk to questions from the 280 graduates.

"He told them you must have a sense of humor, that once you set your mind to do something, go do it, and not be static. Even if you're married and settled, don't be afraid to move on to something bigger. Also, he stressed how important it is to be happy in what you're doing."

Varied Program On CBS Sports

CBS Sports Spectacular will provide an unusually colorful potpourri of athletic events when it televises the National AAU Boxing Championships and the Daytona 200-Meter Cycle Race Saturday, June 12. CBS's Sports-Program - on - the - air begins at 4 p.m.

The AAU Boxing Championships will feature many of the American boxers who have their eyes set on the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal. Tom Brookshier and highly-ranked heavyweight contender Ken Norton will provide the blow-by-blow commentary.

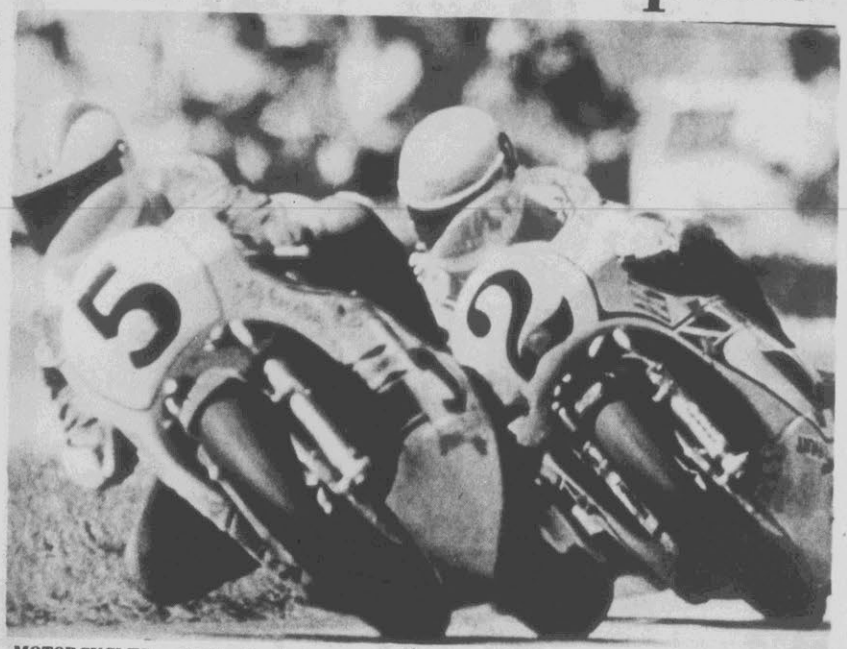

The Daytona 200-Meter Cycle event that features a grueling, breath-taking motorcycle race on a tri-oval track is only part of the annual Speed Week at Daytona Beach. Bikers from all over, as well as thousands of automobile fanatics, pack the resort area in anticipation of the biggest motorcycle event of the year.

The fifty-four riders from fifteen countries include three world champions and 75 American riders. The competitors spend Monday and Tuesday sorting our mechanical difficulties, practicing and participating in the important preliminary drills. Expected to rank high in this year's race are the Yamaha bikes, which are lighter by forty pounds over the older models.

Wednesday is set aside for the first annual Amateur Road Race Championships, sponsored by the American Motorcycle Association. Thursday of 'speed week' begins the serious action of qualifying laps, with many of the professional motorcyclists running at better than 110 miles-per-hour.

Motorcycles are extremely sensitive machines, requiring constant upkeep and adjustment. When the bikes are running at such rubber-burning speeds, drivers must guard against excessive overheating, constant tire wear and gear waring.

MOTORCYCLES — Professional motorcyclists burn rubber at better than 110-miles-per hour in the Daytona 200-Meter Cycle Race, one segment of the CBS Sports Spectacular on Saturday, June 12, beginning at 4 p.m. The program will also feature the National AAU Boxing Championships.

Floyd Defends At Kemper

Ray Floyd once considered himself a playboy, fast becoming disinterested in the competitive nature of professional golf. But Ray is now married, has shed about 20 pounds, and captured the 1976 Masters Tournament.

The Fort Bragg, North Carolina, native will defend his title in the 1976 Kemper Open. CBS-TV will broadcast third round action on Saturday, June 12, beginning at 5 p.m. Live coverage will originate from Quail Hollow Country Club in Charlotte, North Carolina, with a $250,000 total purse.

Ray, who attended the University of North Carolina, and is co-owner of the Cypress Lakes Club in Fayetteville, saw the recent Masters victory as a turning point in his career.

"Winning the Masters has given me a great mental life," he said, "especially since I tied a scoring record there; but I'm trying to concern myself now with winning golf tournaments on the PGA Tour. I'm planning on playing for eight straight weeks through the spring."

One of Floyd's prime rewards for his Masters' triumph is a starting place in the new World Series of Golf, to be played during September at the Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio.

"Firestone always has been one of my favorite courses," he said, "especially since I set the tournament record there when I won in 1969."

Floyd's 12-under 268 on the Firestone South Course is classified as one of the more brilliant performances in the game. He lowered the previous record of Ken Venturi by seven strokes. Raymond's 271 in the Masters equaled Jack Nicklaus' 11-year-old record.

Last season, he won in excess of $103,000, placing thirteenth on the money list. But the big event of the year for the North Carolinian was a victory in the Kemper Open, his first since the PGA National Championship in 1969.

"I've got some personal goals now after playing on the tour for five years without a purpose," Floyd said. "It's mostly a change of attitude. I don't let anything bother me."

He overtook Gary Player and held off a late surge by Jerry Heard to score the Kemper victory. The three-stroke victory earned Ray $50,000.

Bjorn Borg, that incomparable teen-ager who has increased his success in the fiercely competitive world of professional tennis every year, will bring his hot racket to the World Invitational Tennis matches. On Sunday, June 6, Borg will meet controversial Ilie Nastase in a televised match at 4:30 p.m. on ABC.

The young Swede, as every tennis buff knows, has long blonde hair that flops wildly when he powers a two-fisted backhand toward an unfortunate opponent. He has an uninhibited aggressiveness on the court that blends successfully with explosive speed.

Does Bjorn let his youthful ability go to his blonde head? Absolutely not; in fact, he illustrates a tremendous amount of maturity for one so young.

"Everyone talks of my age," he says. "I am never thinking of how old I am. This is my job. I just started earlier than most. So what if I am nineteen? I don't think I am extra unusual."

Despite his modest approach to his success, Borg has already won more than many tennis players can expect at forty. He grabbed over $70,000 on the WCT tour in 1974. Last winter, with the famed Green Group that includes Arthur Ashe and Rod Laver, he won his first 14 matches, including titles at Richmond, Virginia, and Bologna, Spain, finishing second to Arthur Ashe with a 27-7 record.

This season, he already has culminated the ultimate triumph on the WCT Tour by capturing the finals in Dallas. The blonde sensation will assuredly be one of the favorites at both Wimbledon and Forest Hills for the U.S. Open.

Borg's opponent will be the fiery Rumanian, Ilie Nastase, who recently took $100,000 in the WCT Challenge Cup Match. Nastase conquered 1975's tennis king, Arthur Ashe.

Both Borg and Nastase are almost impossible to beat at certain times, but tend to have letdowns at other times. But both are extremely competitive and always provide intense excitement of any avid tennis fan.

A SPECIAL GUEST

Twenty-year-old Steven Ford, son of President and Mrs. Gerald Ford, will be a guest on "The John Davidson Show" Monday, June 7.

Young Ford, an animal science major at California Polytechnic Institute in Pamona, Calif., shares with Davidson a great enthusiasm for horses. During recent months, Steven studied rodeo techniques with Casey Tibbs.

Davidson, formerly a horse breeder and owner of the famed Arabian showhorse, Poly-Royal, and the stallion, Finisz, has a small ranch in the San Fernando Valley (Calif.) called Poly Royal Farms.

Soccer Televised

The NASL Championship game in Seattle, Washington, will be televised Saturday, Aug. 28.

A minimum of six games will be broadcast in 1977, and a minimum of nine games will be presented on the Network in 1978.

"I believe that now that we have top-flight soccer being played in this country — symbolized by such as Pele of the Cosmos and George Best of the Los Angeles Aztecs — soccer can become a major American sport, living up to its status around the world," said Barry Frank, Vice President, CBS Sports.

"Contributing to its growth, of course, is the scope of the junior soccer programs around the country," he continued, "and I find soccer an exciting sport, with long - range potential as a television attraction."

CBS Sports broadcast three NASL games last year, including the championship and the United States debut of Pele in an exhibition match between the Cosmos and the Dallas Tornadoes, about which one sportswriter commented, "Except for a heavyweight championship fight, no sports event in New York history attracted so much attention."

Walters To Debut Monday

"ABC News With Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters" will make its debut on Monday, Sept. 20, at 7 p.m., William Sheehan, President of ABC News, recently announced.

"This unique dual anchor format combining the talents and experience of Barbara Walters and Harry Reasoner will give us greater flexibility and added depth in the coverage of news events. We view this as a breakthrough from the traditional presentation of television news coverage," said Mr. Sheehan, "and we are delighted to have Barbara on the ABC News team."

Howard K. Smith will continue to broadcast his commentaries from Washington.

Ms. Walters joins ABC News after several years as co-host of the "Today" show. Ms. Walters will participate in ABC News' "Issues and Answers" and host a series of specials in addition to her duties as co-anchor of the evening news program.

She will also join Harry Reasoner and Howard K. Smith in anchoring Election Night coverage on November 2, 1976.

CARPENTERS SIGNED FOR SPECIAL

Reiner Is Multi-Talented

Carl Reiner, actor, comedian, writer, director, producer, novelist, TV moderator, recording star and winner of 11 Emmy Awards, stars as Mr. Angel in "Good Heavens," which airs Saturdays, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on ABC-TV. He also served as the series' executive producer.

The versatile show business personality and executive is well remembered as a performer on "Your Show of Shows," with Sid Caesar, and as the creator of the Dick Van Dyke series.

Reiner was born in the Bronx, New York, and attended public schools there, including Evander Childs High School. His first ambition was to be a baseball player. His first job, as a machinist's helper, lasted all of one day. Then he enrolled in a drama school.

After eight months, he got his first role; second tenor in a touring Shubert production of "The Merry Widow." It flopped and Carl, to boot, was drafted into the Army. He was assigned to a Special Services unit in Hawaii where his First Sergeant was Howard Morris, later to become another of Sid Caesar's crew of comedy performers.

Following his military service, Reiner landed the lead role in the road company production of "Call Me Mister" and later played it on Broadway. He later appeared in "Inside U.S.A." and "Alive and Kicking" and then was signed for Sid Caesar's "Your Show of Shows."

After nine years with Caesar, Reiner came to Hollywood to appear in such movies as "Happy Anniversary," "The Gazebo," and "Giget Goes Hawaiian." The, while writing most of the episodes for "The Dick Van Dyke Show" and producing them, Reiner also found time to write a feature filmplay, "The Art of Love"; to appear in Universal's "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," and to make three hit comedy recordings with Mel Brooks.

Reiner's acting credits include "The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming." He has also directed "Where's Poppa?," "The Comic" (which he wrote with Aaron Ruben), and the movie, "Enter Laughing," based on his autobiographical novel.

People Quiz: How The Clock's Power Affects Us All

More what?

The long lean burnished brown look.

The smooth easy draw.

More what? More of a cigarette. That's what.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

FILTER: 21 mg. "tar", 1.5 mg. nicotine, MENTHOL: 21 mg. "tar", 1.6 mg. nicotine, av. per cigarette, FTC Report SEPT. '75.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR CARL ALBERT, Speaker of the House

I can understand borrowing the Magna Carta, but how can you justify the boondoggle trip to England by 25 Senators and Representatives, their wives and staff, headed by you, at a taxpayers' cost of $100,000?—J. La Zizza, New Milford, N.J.

● The invitation for 25 Congressmen and Senators to take part in the London ceremonies commemorating the loan of an original copy of the Magna Carta to America came from the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker of the House of Commons. It was not initiated by the Congress. I feel it would have been an insult to the British people not to participate in this historic ceremony. The cost of the London visit is estimated to be $30,000, not $100,000. I might point out the British are spending more than $1 million to celebrate our Bicentennial.

FOR OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN

● This one. I'm guided by the place I live, and I love where I live—on the beach in California. The people who make up our community are marvelous, a combination of young singles and young marrieds. Our homes are far enough apart to give us privacy but close enough for friendship and comfort. My immediate neighbors are a bunch of kids my age. I'm so happy here that I'm considering becoming a citizen.

FOR PHYLLIS GEORGE, sportscaster

Other than dropping your crown after winning the Miss America Pageant in 1971, what was your most embarrassing experience as Miss America?—Clifford Sampson, Lafayette, Calif.

● I believe it was when a man walked up and said, "You had such a beautiful voice, I can see how you won the title." I thanked him and didn't tell him I had played the piano—not sung—for my talent in the Miss America competition.

FOR JOE NAMATH

How do you cope with the idea of having a disappointing season after spending months of preparation?—Tom Cahill, Wilmington, Del.

● When you choose a career in professional sports, it requires both physical and mental conditioning. Just as players have to learn to play with pain, they must also learn to adjust to the misfortunes of a bad season. The only good thing about losing is that you have only one way to go—up!

FOR JOHNNY BENCH

Who was your baseball idol as a kid?—Janet Shaner, Council Bluffs, Iowa

● Mickey Mantle—a great player!

FOR HAL LINDEN, TV's "Barney Miller"

Did your parents want you to become an actor?—R.C., Washington, D.C.

● No they didn't. In fact, they're still waiting for me to make up my mind about what I want to be when I grow up.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Is it true that in a few years you plan to become active politically? If so, why?—R.C., Asbury, N.J.

● As a psychologist I see so many things that need fixing. I feel I've done as much as I can in my own profession. Now I want to try to work in a situation where I can have some effect on where our country is going. Most Congressmen are lawyers. They're not psychologists or psychiatrists, who understand the needs of people. So I feel I have a great deal to contribute because I know what people need and want.

FOR EDITH HEAD, costume designer

I know your hairstyle and glasses are your trademark, but don't you ever feel the urge to try other hairdos and contact lenses?—Mrs. Joy Allard, San Antonio, Tex.

● I've tried many other coifs and, since I work at a studio, have experimented with different wigs. The results were pretty frightening! I feel very comfortable in my "trademark" glasses, but one of these days I think I will give contact lenses a try.

FOR TOM LANDRY, coach of the Dallas Cowboys

Sportswriters call you "the coach who believes in miracles." Do you believe in "miracles" in daily life, too?—Joel Allard, San Antonio, Tex.

● I do believe in miracles in daily life. And the reason is that I believe all things are possible with God. My faith tells us that if we pray and believe, then we will be able "to move mountains"—and I believe that.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I always liked Betty Hutton and was shocked by news of her breakdown and her job as kitchen helper at a Rhode Island rectory. Are things looking up yet?—L.V., Jackson, Mich.

Betty Hutton

● Yes. She left the rectory last August, and now Betty, 54, is on the West Coast working on her autobiography, for which she's said to be getting a $50,000 advance. It'll come in handy. She was practically broke. Until 12 years ago she made as much as $150,000 a week, and she estimates she went through $9.5 million as a movie star. In the book, Betty (five times unhappily married; mother of three girls) will say her breakdown started with pills—pain killers to help dull the injuries she incurred making "The Greatest Show on Earth" movie. Last July, Earl Wilson arranged a benefit party for her, and the overflow audience of entertainers and VIPs convinced her she wasn't forgotten.

Has Women's Lib Gone Too Far–Or Not Far Enough?

Millicent Fenwick
Representative

Lori Wilson
State Senator

Phyllis Schlafly
Author

Betty Ford
First Lady

Shirley Chisholm
Representative

"We have come a long way, but we have a long way to go—and part of that distance is within our own minds."—Betty Ford

Five years after Women's Lib became a household phrase, FAMILY WEEKLY's editors decided to find out how some of America's outstanding women feel about The Movement's progress.

We asked seven politically oriented women these three questions: 1) Have women gone too far, or not far enough, in pressing for their rights? 2) How do you feel about the status of women today, and what would you like to see happen? 3) How has Women's Lib influenced your own life and marital status?

This is what they said:

REPRESENTATIVE MILLICENT FENWICK
(R.-N.J.)

Rep. Fenwick is the complete liberated woman. She even smokes a pipe. In Congress, she works on two committees, one of which is the Small Business Committee.

Women have had a reaction recently against Women's Lib—it's something like Future Shock. They aren't sure what will happen and feel it's too big a change to handle. Many are now jumping back to the security of being cared for and protected by a man.

But it's too late for that. In divorce cases, the courts are already acting as if men and women are equal, and they're not giving alimony—or much alimony—if the woman has a good job.

I'm not a 100-percent gung-ho libber because I don't like women being made to feel that if they don't have a job outside the home, they are some kind of second-class citizen. But I still want to see the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) passed—if only to give women an equal break. Let me give you an example. If a working woman and her husband both retire and the husband is getting Social Security, the wife cannot get full benefits unless she divorces him. This means older couples have to divorce each other in order to get the payments of two singles to live on!

The ERA lost heavily last November in two states—New York and New Jersey. I think this was because people saw it as a threat to the family. Many women did not understand how ERA would affect child support, alimony, Social Security and insurance, and it was not made clear that ERA is concerned with all women—the professional, the industrial worker, the homemaker, the business woman, the household worker.

But it would be a mistake to take the setback too seriously. Equal rights for women are obviously going to come, sooner or later. All the discussion and emotion which accompany debates on the Equal Rights Amendment will seem strange in a few years.

LORI WILSON
State Senator in Florida

Lori Wilson is part Cherokee and proud of it. She is the only woman in the 40-member State Senate and the first and only independent ever elected to any office in the state.

Women should win every historical award there is for patience. Almost 200 years after the birth of this nation, we still have more than half our population pressing for its rights. It is indeed a shame that to some, bra burnings and march-ins seemed necessary to get media and public attention. But during a long history of struggle, there may be controversial methods inspired by impatience.

I did not need to be "influenced" by Women's Lib. I was already liberated. I cut my teeth on the concept of liberty for all people. The question is simply one of equal treatment and equal opportunity for all people. It is part of my heritage, part of my soul. I have preached and practiced this philosophy with my own children—two daughters—and my stepson and stepdaughter. Fortunately, but not accidentally, my husband and I share the same general philosophy. Our individual basic right to be different and to achieve to the extent of our individual capabilities and motivations keeps us busy —but never bored!

AUTHOR PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY

Phyllis Schlafly is an opponent of the Equal Rights Amendment, which, she happily points out, was defeated in 16 states during 1975. She is also the author of seven books, the latest of which is "Kissinger on the Couch," and has a twice-weekly radio show.

There is a noisy minority of women today peddling the notion that women in America are "oppressed," that marriage is slavery and that the home is a prison from which women must be "liberated." But the plain fact is that most women would rather be loved than "liberated." They would rather cuddle a baby than a typewriter or a factory machine.

Women's Lib is waging a special war on Cinderella and other fairy tales which end with the heroine finding her Prince Charming and living "happily ever after." But what a tragedy to shatter a young woman's hopes and dreams by falsely telling her that "Prince Charming" doesn't exist. Of my own life, I can honestly say that no career achievement could ever match the rewards of a happy marriage, a faithful husband and six good children. The only influence Women's Lib has had on my life is to give me the fun of debating women's libbers and exposing their tunnel vision of life's challenges and opportunities.

Let me tell you where the American woman stands today. She is the most fortunate person who ever lived. She has more rights, more opportunities, more leisure, and more fulfillment than any human has ever had. State laws give her the right to be financially supported and provided with a home by her husband, to have her minor children supported by her husband, to get credit in her husband's name, to draw Social Security benefits based on her husband's earnings and to be provided for out of her husband's property after he has passed away. She has the right to enjoy her baby in her own home, instead of (as in some countries) being made to stay in the work force all her life. If she chooses a career, she has full and equal opportunity in hiring, pay and promotions guaranteed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972. She has full and equal opportunity for every type of education guaranteed by the Education Amendments of 1972. She has full and equal opportunity for credit under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1974. She can be elected or appointed to any position in the country.

Yes, we've come a long way, baby, since women had to toil endless hours sewing and washing and ironing clothes, spinning yarn and in endless preparation and cooking of food. We've already been liberated. Thomas Edison, who gave us electricity, was our greatest liberator.

FIRST LADY BETTY FORD

First Lady Betty Ford has long been a spokesperson for both Women's Lib and the Equal Rights Amendment.

The debate over ERA has become too emotional, mostly because of fears about the changes already taking place in America. Change by its very nature is threatening. But it is also often productive. The fight of women to become more productive, accepted human beings is important to all people of either sex.

I hope 1976 will be the year the remaining needed states ratify the ERA Amendment. It would be an important symbolic event during our 200th birthday to show the American experiment in human freedom continues to expand. But it will only be a beginning. As I see it, it is not enough merely to change laws. We also have to change our attitudes. I have been distressed by the lack of appreciation of the role of women as wives and mothers. In trying to open up new choices and opportunities, women must not underestimate their accomplishments in the home.

I've been lucky enough to have two careers. When I was young, I chose a career in dancing and loved every minute of it. I never thought there was anything else in the world that would turn me away from that career. But then I became a homemaker and reared four individual and delightful youngsters. I found that this career was equally challenging. Let's face it: being a homemaker is a profession—and we must look at it as such. We have to take that "just" out of "just a housewife" and show our pride in having made the home and family our life's work. Downgrading this work has been part of the pattern in our society that has undervalued women's talents in all areas.

What I'm saying is we have come a long way, but we have a long way to go—and part of that distance is within our own minds.

REPRESENTATIVE SHIRLEY CHISHOLM (D.-N.Y.)

Shirley Chisholm was the first black woman to be elected to Congress in 1968. For the past five years, she has been on the Gallup poll's list of the 10 Most Admired Women of the World.

A lot of people tell women, "You've come a long way, baby." But why is it that out of the 10,000 Civil Service employees in this country who make $26,000 or more a year, only some 200 are women? And why, as the Department of Labor has reported, do women who are full-time workers average only about 60 percent of what similarly employed men earn?

When I ran as a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1972, I was successful in opening up a national discussion on whether a woman could ever be President of the United States. Until that is no longer a subject for debate, the women's movement has not gone far enough!

I will not be satisfied until I see more women breathing the rarefied air that surrounds the business world, better pension benefits for working women, a national day-care program, an end to discrimination in vocational education—and until I look around the Congress and see that I am no longer some kind of oddity.

How has the women's movement influenced my personal life? It's something I don't go around shouting about, but I'll level with you. I'm the politician of the family. My husband, who's West Indian, is a gourmet cook who does all the cooking when I'm home. He enjoys it. I don't know what is right for you, but this is right for us.

GLORIA SCHAFFER

Connecticut Secretary of State

In 1970 Gloria Schaffer won her office by getting the largest Democratic vote in her state. When she was re-elected in 1974, it was with the greatest vote for any state candidate—Republican or Democrat. This year Mrs. Schaffer is running for the U.S. Senate against Lowell Weicker.

I must admit to having been quite "unliberated" when I decided to run for State Senate for the first time in 1958. I went to my husband, Eugene, and asked, "Can I do it, and should I?"

He considered the fact that the district we live in was a Republican stronghold, that the last Democratic candidate had lost by an enormous margin, and that only one Democratic candidate for State Senate had ever been elected from our district in history.

He said, with an amused air, "Sure, why not?" He never expected that I'd win or that I'd serve a total of six terms.

I can't deny that my husband, a real-estate developer, is sometimes less than thrilled when I'm preoccupied with my work or when my professional schedule conflicts with our personal plans. But I think that the compromise this kind of life demands has given our marriage an added measure of mutual respect.

I don't view the ERA as a "for women only" issue. Its ratification would eliminate discrimination against men, too, such as inequitable Social Security benefits, pension laws and so forth.

But I want to see a change in women's attitudes. For example, women consistently vote less often than men. Studies suggest that men are more informed than women about ERA. But, when they try, women have shown they can win high office. In fact, the win-rate for women running for state legislative seats last year was a very healthy 50 percent!

I'll never forget the night just prior to the 1958 election when I attended a parents' night at my daughter Susan's school. She was 8 at the time. The children had been assigned to write short biographies of their parents, and they were posted on the bulletin board.

When I entered the schoolroom, all the parents started to laugh. They had read Susan's paper which said of me, "My mother is always running for something . . . I sure hope she catches it!"

AMBASSADOR LOUISE GORE

Louise Gore is the woman who challenged Gov. Marvin Mandel of Maryland in his bid for re-election in 1974. At the 1976 Republican Convention, she will be Maryland's Republican National Committeewoman. For four years, she was U.S. Ambassador to UNESCO.

When I was elected to the Maryland House of Delegates back in 1962, I met with my newly elected colleagues to discuss which committees we would choose to serve on. Of the six of us—all male but me—I was the only one who asked for the Ways and Means Committee and was duly assigned. I was amazed and pleased. After all, where the money is, is where the power is!

But it wasn't long before the five men figured this out. They called me and politely suggested I give up the position to one of them. Well, you can imagine my answer. The air turned blue! Eventually, I waivered and consented to take another committee assignment. Today, thanks to Women's Lib, no man would have the nerve to suggest that a woman could not handle the job. I still get furious when I remember that day, and I tell about it now to show that Women's Lib has made a difference.

The real trouble with Women's Liberation is men! Men are afraid Women's Lib will drive women from home. But that's a lot of hokum. If a man is upset by Women's Lib, ask him to tell you about his mother or grandmother. Suddenly he'll be glowing with pride as he tells you how capable she was and the many sacrifices she made. Then ask him if he wants the woman in his life to be different—to sit all day watching TV or playing bridge. It's amazing how fast a man will see the light!

Today women have laws guaranteeing them equality in employment, credit and pay. But the ERA would provide a Constitutional guarantee that these laws cannot be changed in the future. During World War II, for example, there was an equal pay provision, but after the war this provision was quietly retired.

We need to correct the oversight of history and make the "We" in "We the people" mean women no less than men. The ERA will take care of that.

Smokers are talking about a new kind of cigarette.

It's MERIT. The remarkable new low tar cigarette made with the 'Enriched Flavor'™ process.

MERIT has only 9 mg. tar. One of the lowest tar levels in smoking today. Yet, taste tests proved that MERIT delivers as much—or more—flavor than cigarettes having up to 60% more tar.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

The Strange, Subtle Power of Time

True or False? How liberal or conservative you are when you vote is likely to depend on whether you're in a hurry or have plenty of time in the voting booth. (See number 2.)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People who have time on their hands—the leisure to do the things they want to do—are the luckiest people of all.

2. How liberal or how conservative you are when you vote is likely to depend on whether you're in a hurry or have plenty of time in the voting booth.

3. How well you remember something depends on what time it is.

4. For some people, time proceeds at a snail's pace; for others, time flies swiftly. You can tell which person is which by the way he walks.

5. Noise affects the speed of your internal clock.

6. The closest time ever comes to "standing still" is when we are gripped by some strong emotion, such as fear, anger, joy, etc.

ANSWERS

1. False. In a survey conducted by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, men and women were asked, "In general, how do you feel about your time—would you say you always feel rushed even to do the things you have to do; only sometimes feel rushed; almost never feel rushed?" Those who did not report always feeling rushed were asked if they had time on their hands—"quite often, just now and then or almost never"—that they didn't know what to do with. It was found that having a relative abundance of free time actually had somewhat of a negative effect on the individual's satisfaction with his spare time. The point of greatest satisfaction seemed to occur somewhere between the extremes of having plenty of time and not having nearly enough of it. But it was found that the people who were always rushed were much less dissatisfied with their life generally than those who were under no time pressure.

2. True. In University of Tulsa studies, college students voted their conscience on actual pending legislation in their state. To test whether time limits in the voting booth would affect the voting pattern, the students voted either (a) in a 2-minute limit or (b) in a non-restrictive time-limit condition. Results: those who had to hurry their decisions voted significantly more conservatively than those who took their time.

3. True—according to psychological studies at Britain's University of Sussex, which showed that the efficiency of a person's memory varies with the time of day and that "performance of subjects tested was better in the morning than in the afternoon." And previous research is cited showing that mental vigor and receptivity tend to lessen in the later hours of the day.

4. True. University studies have indicated that individuals with a faster gait tend to overestimate an interval of time. ("You mean it isn't noon yet? Did somebody forget to wind the clock?") While those with a slower gait tend to underestimate time. ("I just don't know where the time went. It can't be 12 o'clock already!")

5. True. Studies of subjects working under noisy conditions have shown that noise accelerates the rate of metabolism, resulting in a faster running internal clock. This makes actual clock time appear to pass much slower than it otherwise would. The noisier your surroundings, the faster will run your internal clock and the more the clock-on-the-wall time will seem to drag.

6. False. Time is more likely to "stand still" when we're lost in thought. ("I was so preoccupied with my thoughts that I lost all sense of time—it was almost as though it didn't exist.") As studies have shown, thinking entails a far greater sense of timelessness than feeling.

The First High Relief Presidential Medals in Miniature

Limited Editions of Bronze, Silver and Gold

"Ladies and Gentlemen, The President of the United States"

Whether or not these words are accompanied by the stirring strains of "Hail to the Chief", they are enough to quicken the pulse of any American. The President is being introduced.

We will soon choose the President who will lead us into our 3rd century of independence. Who will he be? What mark will he make in history? What better time to reflect on the accomplishments of his predecessors than now with this rare and beautiful collection of Presidential Medals.

MEDALLIC ART IN MINIATURE

The late Ralph Menconi, legendary Sculptor of Presidents, had an uncanny ability to create incredibly lifelike portraits of his subjects. The deep ravines in Lincoln's face force you to share his grief for a nation torn by war. Teddy Roosevelt's enormous zest for living stands out in his robust checks. Eisenhower wears the easy smile that fostered the chant "We like Ike", and the countenance of Kennedy reflects the deep concern of our youngest President for America's future. In fact, each of Menconi's high relief medal portraits catches the character of its subject as no other Presidential sculpture ever has. So the latest medal in the series, of Gerald R. Ford, was completed in Menconi's style by noted sculptor Rolf Beck. The reverse of each of these magnificently detailed medals carries a stylized rendition of The Great Presidential Seal.

EDITIONS OF LIMITLESS VALUE

This collection is being offered in strict limited editions of Solid Bronze, Sterling Silver and 18 Karat Gold. In two centuries, only thirty-seven Americans have been called upon to take this solemn oath — the Presidential Oath of America.

LUIS TIANT JR.:

Baseball's Greatest "Washed-Up" Pitcher

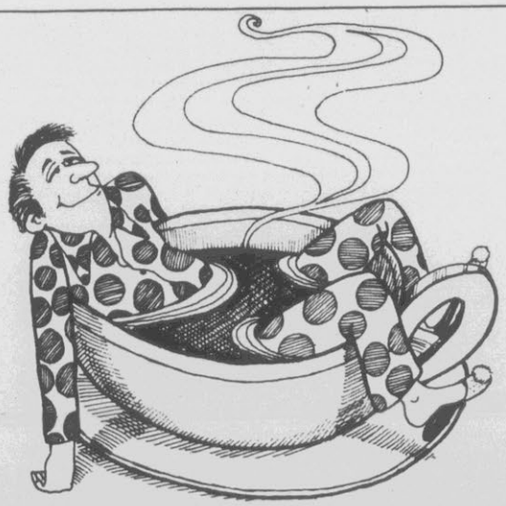

Good pitchers, like wine, can improve with age. In 1971 Luis Tiant Jr. was given his unconditional release by two major-league clubs on the grounds that he was over the hill and all washed up. Yet he went on to post two 20-game winning seasons for the Boston Red Sox and wound up last year's spectacular season with two great wins over the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series. . . . Luis, who's 35, is the son of Luis Tiant Sr., a first-rate pitcher in his day for a team called the New York Cubans. He pitched in such ball parks as Yankee Stadium and the old Ebbets Field. Luis Sr. advised his son not to take up baseball as a career, but Luis Jr. didn't listen and in 1959 went with the Mexico City Tigers. Later he joined the Cleveland Indians and had his biggest year in 1968 with 21 victories and the best earned-run average in the American League. Then he developed arm trouble, was traded to Minnesota and was cut in the spring of 1971. He got his second cut when he flunked a tryout with the Atlanta Braves. . . . "I had no place to go. I wanted to stay in baseball, but I didn't know what to do," Tiant recalls. A friend who was pitching for Louisville, a Red Sox farm team, convinced Louisville manager Darrell Johnson to give Luis a chance. Tiant did well enough to get promoted back to the majors and Johnson joined him later as manager of the Red Sox. . . . Because of the "cold war" between the U.S. and Cuba, Luis and his parents were separated for 14 years. But last summer Fidel Castro agreed to let the father and mother go to Mexico City and pick up visas for the U.S. Then came what Tiant Jr. calls "the biggest thrill of my life." Father joined son at the pitcher's mound at Fenway Park and father relived his days with the Cubans by hurling a few fast balls to thunderous acclaim from a packed house. . . . Tiant's long, Fu Manchu moustache, his "corkscrew" windup and his perpetual-motion antics on the pitching mound make him one of baseball's most colorful performers. He always works with a huge wad of tobacco in his mouth. "I don't chew to relieve the pressure, like the old-timers did," he says. "I chew to keep from drinking water. I found it's not good for me to drink a lot of water the day I pitch."

The Diet Watch

Those Nighttime Snacks!

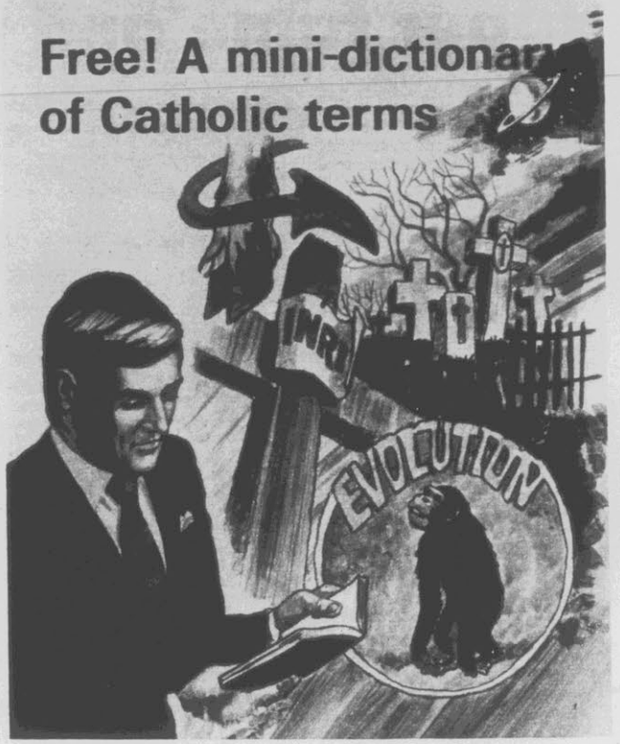

Oh, those before-bed cravings for a toothsome little snack! When we virtuously resist, we're likely to lie restlessly awake, feeling underprivileged until we finally get up and eat something, anything, fattening or not. The solution, of course, is to eat something in the first place—something so low in calories we won't feel guilty and unhappy. But what? Hot things, say psychologists, are more satisfying than cold because of their cozy "comfort" quotient. A hot drink by itself can satisfy. For a thick, hot drink, try a cup of hot tomato juice with a dash of celery salt, 45 calories. Something sweet and delicious? Pour hot raspberry or strawberry low-cal gelatine over half a cut-up orange—lots of comfort and only 38 calories. Or how about a hot milk punch? Make it with half skimmed milk, half water, with a drop of vanilla flavoring and a sprinkle of cinnamon on top, 44 calories.

For slightly more solid fare, try a steaming hot cup of canned tomatoes, made with half bouillon, a drop of lemon juice, a clove or two and a dash of pepper—30 calories. Eat it on a tray in bed, and feel privileged.

by Barbara Walthers

An astrological research team was recently assembled in Los Angeles to study Jackie's life. They found that at the very minute of her birth, her horoscope predicted, that super-fame and super-fortune were her destiny!

Let's take a look at some of the actual facts revealed by Jackie's horoscope. Jackie's Sun is in Leo, indicating a ruling role in life — and in her adult life she became as close to a queen as an American could get — the First Lady of the land!

In her horoscope, Pluto 18° Cancer, predicts that the men in her life will be connected with the liquid elements. This prediction certainly came true. The late John F. Kennedy was an avid amateur sailor and in the Second World War he first gained national attention for his daring exploits as a P.T. boat captain. And Jackie's second husband, the late and fabulously wealthy Aristotle Onassis, built his legendary fortune by establishing a vast shipping empire.

The planetary aspect Sun Sextile Jupiter in her horoscope shows that public service and publishing are major career interests. She won the Emmy Award for public service and has recently accepted an editorial position with a leading national publishing firm.

Jackie's rising sign is ascendant 28° Scorpio revealing that she loves travel and adventure. And her jet-setting life has been one of the world's most publicized adventures.

Venus 22° Gemini and Jupiter 10° Gemini in her horoscope indicate wealth in the house of partners — and both of Jackie's husbands have been wealthy.

One of the most telling predictions of all was the tragic day of John F. Kennedy's assassination. Transit Mars and Transit Venus were opposite Venus in Jackie's chart indicating grave danger to her husband. Transit Pluto was conjunct to her Mars, a heavy aspect of a dangerous situation in public groups.

HOW ASTROLOGY AFFECTS YOU

Jackie Onassis, of course, is not unique in the uncanny accuracy of her horoscope. Everyone born has a completely personal horoscope that is totally different from that of any other person in the entire world. To illustrate how astrology affects everyone, I'd like to share with you some of the research findings of the Institute for Applied Astrology.

"Hair" the most successful musical of all times had a full time astrologer. He advised them on every single step. He told them when and where to open. He got top credit right along with the writers and the director!

In 1908, an astrologer, John Hazelrig, said that every 20 years, when the Transits of Saturn and Jupiter are conjunct (come together) the President who took office that year would die in office. Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, Harding, Franklin Roosevelt and Kennedy did exactly that!

Carol Richter is astrologer to Hollywood. Hundreds of the famous have used his Transit astrology. People like Marlene Dietrich, Gloria Swanson, Ronald Colman, Tyrone Power and Danny Kaye. Carol Richter became as astrologer because Evangeline Adams, who was astrologer to Kings, Queens and financiers, told him astrology was his vocation according to the stars.

Hitler was conquering Europe as long as he followed his Horoscope as prepared by Karl E. Kraft. But when Kraft's charts told Hitler it was not the time to turn East to Russia. Hitler fired him. That was the beginning of the end for Hitler. (See Wm. Shirers "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich".)

Countless brilliant scientists, writers and geniuses through the ages have believed in Astrology. Great men like St. Thomas Aquinas, Sir Roger Bacon (father of modern science), Shakespeare, Sir Isaac Newton, Carl Jung, Einstein, and J. P. Morgan have all openly agreed that astrology works!

JACKIE'S ASTRO-PORTRAIT

Jackie is probably the world's best known woman. But, like the rest of us, she was born into this world at a time and in a place over which she had no control. However, as shown in her horoscope cast by our astrological research group, fate had great plans for her future. To really get to know Jackie and her fabulous life you've got to read about what her horoscope says.

MODERN SCIENCE PROVES ASTROLOGY WORKS

Recently in France a famous scientist named Michel Gauquelin decided to prove that Astrology was a fake. So he attacked it scientifically! In France the time of birth is on every birth certificate, so he was able to hire Astrologers to cast the horoscopes of 576 famous teachers of medicine. He was astonished to discover that most of them had Mars and Saturn heavily influencing their character! These are the signs that show a natural talent for healing. He refused to believe his own evidence, so he checked the horoscopes of famous lawyers, soldiers, politicians and artists. He found that in every single instance the people that were successful, were "doing what comes naturally" as shown on their astrological charts. Unfortunately the opposite also holds true. The people who fail at their work and in their lives are the ones who do the wrong things. They are square pegs in round holes: they are plumbers who should be doctors, mechanics who should be engineers, etc.

HERE'S HOW ASTROLOGY WORKS

Most people have heard about the rich, famous and successful people who use astrology practically full time, but they still think that astrology is the "fortune cookie" horoscope they read in their daily paper, or the Natal horoscope that they can buy for a few dollars. But this is not true, for astrology is an exact and demanding science.

To prepare a true, in-depth, total personal horoscope for you, an astrologer must first make a chart showing the sun, the moon, and all eight planets as they were at the time and place of your birth. This is where all other computer horoscope companies stop. But that is only half the job.

Next, the astrologer must relate "Transits" to your basic chart. Transits are the changes in the positions of the sun, moon, and planets as they move away from the positions they were in at your birth. And only the Institute for Applied Astrology does this!

When this Total chart is finished it is completely personal, completely different, and completely about you! And the written evaluation is what astrologers call your Total Horoscope. Natal astrology alone is like reading a good book about big game hunting and then going to darkest Africa on your own. "Total" astrology is like having a top professional hunter to help guide you through the jungle. The special knowledge contained in this horoscope can change your life in many wonderful ways. We all know, for example, that while none of us are good at everything, each of us are good at something. Your horoscope will tell you what you're good at. And armed with that knowledge you can forge ahead and be at ease and happy while you do it.

Your horoscope delves deeply into your personality, revealing your hidden talents. It will tell you about the areas where you have ability but may have been uncertain and afraid to try — things like writing or acting, art, sex, leadership, public relations, advertising athletics, etc.

Think of it this way: you only have one life to live, so why not get everything from it that you can! Why waste your time charging down blind alleys that can easily be avoided? You have a real duty to yourself and to your loved ones to make the most of each precious moment. And your Total horoscope can give you the edge you need to see your opportunities and take advantage of them.

For a limited time only, while the internationally known Institute for Applied Astrology is carrying on its extensive research program, you can get your Total Horoscope for only a duplicating cost. The casting and analyzing are done FREE! The article below tells you how to get your Horoscope. For the sake of your own personal happiness — don't pass up this unique opportunity. It's the kind of new chance for success that comes along only once in each person's life.

Limited Research Program Invitation

WHY WE GIVE YOU THE WORLD'S ONLY TOTAL HOROSCOPE FOR JUST OUR COPYING COST

by Lois Rodden, A.F.A.—P.A.I. Chief Astrologer

There are a lot of computer horoscopes on the market — and most of them are okay as far as they go. But that's just it — they really don't go far enough! Only the Institute for Applied Astrology can prepare your TOTAL HOROSCOPE for you because only we have "transits" stored in our giant computer.

Where the sun, moon and planets happen to be at the time of your birth is what makes up your Natal (birthdate) Horoscope. But that's only the beginning of a TOTAL HOROSCOPE, yet that's all you get from other computer horoscope companies. You see, the sun, moon and planets keep right on moving. They are in Transit. And day after day they keep forming new angles with your birth chart. These Transits show every single important period of your life! And no horoscope that does not include these transits is a TOTAL HOROSCOPE.

Now, for a limited time only, if you will help us with our research program, you can get your own personal TOTAL HOROSCOPE for just a duplicating charge. Since your TOTAL HOROSCOPE must be constructed anyway for our research you may have an exact duplicate copy for only $3.00 to cover our printing cost, plus just 55¢ for postage and handling. The preparation, the casting, and the professional analysis are provided without charge! To join our research program and get your TOTAL HOROSCOPE, here's all you do. Write down your time and place of birth, as exact as possible, on a piece of paper and send it to me. I'll cast and analyze your TOTAL HOROSCOPE as part of our current astrological research program.

Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will run from 14 to 18 pages — up to 10,000 words (three to four times larger than ordinary Natal [birthdate] Horoscopes) — and here are just a few of the important things it will do for you:

1 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will make you know yourself. That means you can make use of your strong points and fight off your weak ones.

2 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will analyze your character in depth giving you psychological facts that some people pay analysts a fortune for.

3 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will give you new insights into the talents and abilities you never before gave yourself credit for having.

4 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will show you how and when to use these talents to open up a better life and future.

5 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will show you how to get along with more people . . . thereby enriching your social, business and sexual life.

6 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will show you the people you are compatible with. It will make you understand how to use those people to get ahead. This covers every aspect of living — family, friends, business associates, partnerships, romances, etc.

7 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will show you how to form meaningful and exciting personal and sexual relations with the right partners — and how to keep these relationships strong and satisfying.

8 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will not only give you practical vocational and career advice but will show you the best times to use that information for maximum effect.

9 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE will be loaded with beneficial advice on money matters. It will tell you when to take chances and when to be careful. This is exceptionally important if you have a tendency to take risks.

10 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE covers all matters relating to your body and your health. It tells you the things to do and the things to avoid in order to enjoy the maximum in good health, normal weight and high energy.

11 Your TOTAL HOROSCOPE gives you positive information. When it tells you of possible bad periods it also tells you how to avoid or overcome them.

The Institute needs your horoscope to help complete our huge research program looking into the practical applications of astrology (Applied Astrology). This research program has been going on for some time and has been presented in COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, FAMILY WEEKLY MAGAZINE, THE LOS ANGELES TIMES HOME MAGAZINE, THE NATIONAL ENQUIRER, and other papers and periodicals. Right now, for a limited time only, if you help us by providing your birth data, you can benefit by becoming eligible to get horoscopes for yourself and even your family and friends.

Here's all you do—IMPORTANT: PRINT ALL OF THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION CAREFULLY ON A PIECE OF PAPER — IN THIS ORDER — (1) Name; (2) Full Mailing Address; (3) Month / Day / Year / Time of Birth; and (4) City, State and Country of Birth. Send it to us with the $3.00 copying charge and 55¢ for postage and handling, for each person's horoscope you want. Note: If you don't know your exact time of birth use 12:00 noon. You may even charge it to your BankAmericard, Master Charge, or American Express by including the following: (1) Name of Card; (2) Card Number; (3) Card expiration date; (4) Cardholder's Signature.

Mail this material to: THE INSTITUTE FOR APPLIED ASTROLOGY; RESEARCH DIVISION: 6331 Hollywood Blvd., Dept. FWE. Hollywood, California 90028.

We will, at no cost to you, feed your birth information into our giant computer. The computer will then calculate your Natal Chart including the sun, moon and planetary aspects. Smart Cooking
Day Before Payday

A Special Tangy Beef Stew

SOUTH AMERICAN BEEF AND VEGETABLE STEW

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 lbs. boneless beef chuck, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 large clove garlic, crushed
- 2¼ cups water
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 bay leaf
- 2½ teaspoons salt
- 1½ teaspoons ground cumin
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 4 cups celery, cut into 2-inch lengths
- 1 cup sliced carrots
- 1 teaspoon oregano leaves
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 4 ears fresh corn, cut in 3-inch chunks (or 1 pkg. [10 ozs.] frozen cut corn)
- 3 medium-sized tomatoes

Rupert Callender

South Americans eat this stew with the corn right on the cob. In our recipe you can "cheat" and use packaged corn.

1. In 6-qt. Dutch oven, heat oil. Add beef, a few pieces at a time. Brown well on all sides; remove beef and set aside.

2. Stir onion and garlic into drippings in Dutch oven; sauté for 2 minutes. Add 2 cups water, 1 tablespoon vinegar, bay leaf, salt, cumin and black pepper. Cook and stir, scraping drippings from bottom of pan.

3. Return beef cubes to Dutch oven and heat to the boiling point; reduce heat, cover and simmer for 1 hour.

4. Add celery, carrots and oregano. Heat to boiling; reduce heat, cover and simmer for about 45 minutes.

5. Blend flour with ¼ cup cold water and stir in a little of the hot liquid from Dutch oven. Add all to Dutch oven. Cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens.

6. Add corn chunks (or packaged corn) to stew. Cover and simmer for 5 minutes.

7. Cut ripe tomatoes into wedges and add to Dutch oven. Cover and simmer for 5 minutes longer. Makes 6 servings

PEPPER AND BANANA SALAD

- 1 medium head lettuce, shredded
- 1 red pepper, cut into rings
- 1 green pepper, cut into rings
- 1 red onion, sliced and separated into rings
- 2 bananas, sliced
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 hard-cooked egg, finely chopped or grated
- Bottled red-wine vinegar-and-oil salad dressing

1. Arrange shredded lettuce on 4 to 6 individual salad plates. Top with pepper and onion rings.

2. Toss banana slices with lemon juice and place on top of pepper and onion rings.

3. Sprinkle a little hard-cooked egg over each salad, along with 2 tablespoons salad dressing. Makes 4 to 6 servings

What's Smart: The U.S. Department of Agriculture says the average American will eat his way through 184 pounds of meat this year. Of this total, 67 percent will be beef. Beef prices have been declining since last year when the price of feed leveled off and farmers started bringing more cattle into the feed lots for fattening. This means consumers buying beef today are probably making a wise choice.

Learn Nature's Weight Loss Secret Of Glandular Control

How to Command your Pituitary Gland to order up to 756 times its own weight in fat to leave your body every single day

©1975 C.P.C.

By Joan Woodward

Use your head! Millions of overweight Americans could have slimmed down a long time ago by doing just that. For years, people with weight problems have desperately searched for ways to shed pounds. Ironically, even as they frantically searched, they were carrying the perfect weight loss secret right in their own head – their Pituitary Gland.

Allow me to explain. By learning Nature's Weight Loss Secret of Glandular Control, you can command your pituitary gland (nature's built-in fat evacuator) to order up to 1 pound of fat to leave your body every day. You'll continue to shed pounds until you reach your ideal weight – and then stay fat free forever. This weight loss secret works for everyone, whether 5 lbs. or 105 lbs. overweight.

But, best of all, you lose weight while eating the foods you love. In fact, you must eat to lose weight. That's the key to this weight loss secret.

As a reporter for the newsletter "Total Fitness Today", my job is to check out weight loss plans being developed across the country. Since I have a weight problem, I take a special interest in these assignments. When I heard about this revolutionary new weight loss secret, I decided to investigate.

I set up an appointment with Robert Ridgefield, the discoverer of Nature's Weight Loss Secret of Glandular Control. I started with tough questions.

HOW DOES THE SECRET WORK?

Q. How does the secret work?

A. The secret works by making food your ally instead of your enemy. There are two types of food in everyone's daily diet – 'triggers' and 'blockers'. By eating 'trigger' foods, you trigger or turn on your Pituitary Gland (nature's built-in fat evacuator). Once triggered, your Pituitary Gland secretes a fat evacuating chemical fluid. This fluid is transported throughout your body and transforms your body from a fat producing machine to a fat evacuating system. Your Pituitary Gland will work safely and naturally to evacuate fat 24 hours a day – even while you sleep.

Q. If these 'trigger' foods are in everyone's diet, why isn't my Pituitary Gland evacuating fat?

A. Unfortunately, even if your diet consists of 95% 'trigger' foods, it only takes 5% 'blocker' foods to prevent your Pituitary Gland from evacuating fat.

Q. How can I trigger my Pituitary Gland?

A. Not by willpower, not by concentration, not with exercise, but by eating. Only by eating 'trigger' foods and avoiding 'blocker' foods can you trigger your Pituitary Gland to evacuate fat. Remember, the Weight Loss Secret is a nutrition plan, not a diet.

Q. What are these 'trigger' foods, and how much can I eat?

A. These 'trigger' foods are the every day foods you love: juicy sirloin steaks, hearty helpings of beef stroganoff, spicy ham, double cheeseburgers, meatloaf, barbecued chicken, omelets, vegetables; like broccoli smothered with hollandaise sauce, cantaloupes, fruit cocktails – even desserts like strawberries with whipped cream, pumpkin pie, chocolate pudding, ice cream, and your favorite wines, liquors–even beer! You need not drastically alter your eating habits to get rid of the 'blocker' foods, because they don't make up that big a part of your diet.

WHY DOES THE SECRET WORK?

Q. You've told me how it works, but all weight loss methods look good on paper – they just don't work in real life. Why is this one different?

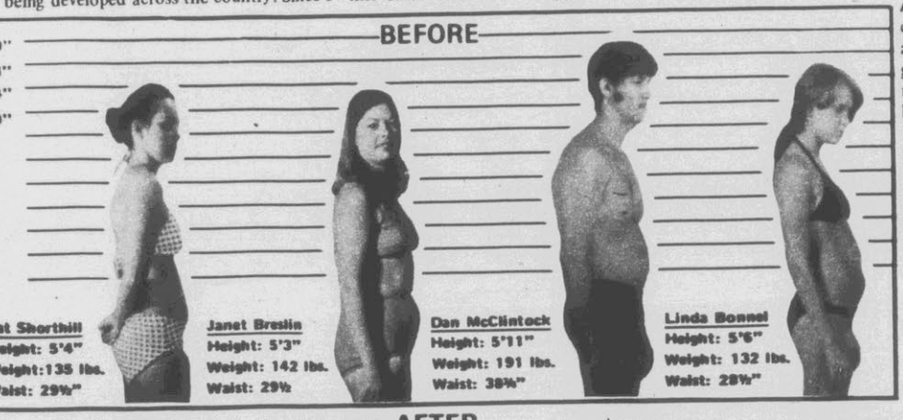

A. In order to understand why the secret works, you must first know why other methods fail. They fail for two reasons. First, other methods work against human nature, and therefore are doomed to failure from the start. People with weight problems obviously love to eat. Starvation is sheer torture. No one in their right mind is going to torture themselves for very long. Strenuous exercise is difficult, worklike, and boring. Diet pills leave you weak, nervous and prone to illness. Second, with most methods, the results, if any, come too slowly. So most people lose hope and quit.

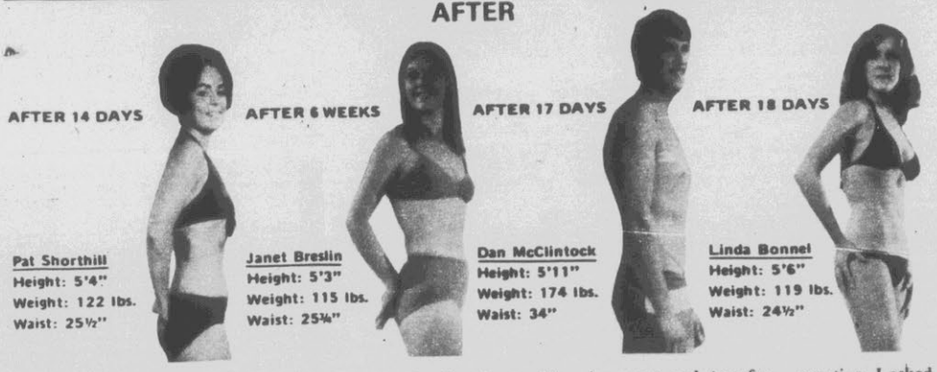

Q. You're right about why they fail. I know, because I've tried them all, without success. But, why does glandular control work?

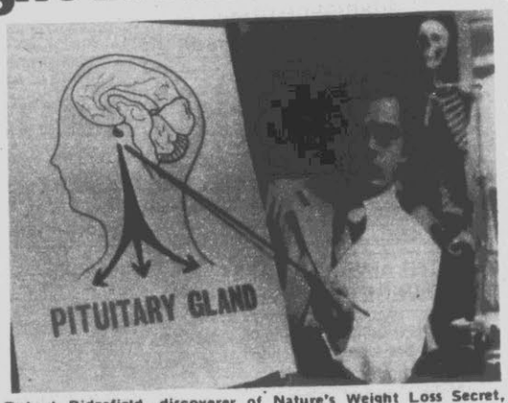

A. Again, two reasons. As I said, people are overweight because they love to eat. With Nature's Weight Loss Secret of Glandular Control, you must eat to lose weight. Therefore, overweight people will use it. It's as simple as that. The Weight Loss Secret has none of the drawbacks of other methods. There's no starvation, no willpower, no boring exercises, no health ruining diet pills, no weird fad dieting. It doesn't leave you weak and nervous. In fact, it makes you feel healthier and more vibrant than before.

Q. You said there are two reasons why this secret works. What's the second reason?

A. Nature's Weight Loss Secret of Glandular Control always succeeds because it gives fast, steady and permanent results. You start losing weight the first day. You can lose up to 14 lbs. in two weeks. With these kind of results, rather than losing hope and quitting, you will be encouraged to continue and lose even more. You will reach your ideal weight and be fat free forever.

Robert Ridgefield, discoverer of Nature's Weight Loss Secret, points to the gland that will make you thin. Your pituitary gland, weighing a mere 1/60th of an ounce, can command up to one pound of fat (756 x 1/60th of an ounce = one lb.) to leave your body every single day. Since all of us have a pituitary gland, everyone—5 lbs. or 105 lbs. overweight can learn nature's weight loss secret of glandular control. The article below will explain how you can reap the benefits of this amazing scientific breakthrough by losing as much as 14 lbs. in two weeks.

WHAT WILL THE SECRET DO FOR YOU?

By learning Nature's Weight Loss Secret of Glandular Control, you will:

- Lose all the weight you want, as much as a pound a day, while eating the food you love.
- Lose inches off your waist, hips, thighs, and banish ugly cellulite bumps.
- Never go hungry.
- Increase your energy and vitality.
- Look and feel younger.
- End your up–down roller coaster weight cycle by staying fat free forever.

After I lost my weight, my boss, Timothy Voros, the Chairman of the Board of Consumer Publishing, decided to try the secret. He lost 22 lbs. in 22 days. He was so impressed, he grabbed up the exclusive world wide rights to this revolutionary new weight loss secret. He then commissioned Mr. Ridgefield to author the text and ordered a small press run to be printed. This book is not available in any bookstore anywhere in the world. But, you can learn the secret right now by ordering the book direct by mail.

"You can lose all the weight you want, quickly, and keep it off permanently while eating the foods you love."

Q. One last question. You call the Pituitary Gland nature's built-in fat evacuator. Why is that?

A. The Pituitary Gland was evolved by nature as a survival mechanism to keep man slim and fit. Just as your heart pumps blood, your lungs breathe the air, your Pituitary Gland evacuates fat. Because it's natural, it's 100% safe.

At the end of our conversation, I asked Mr. Ridgefield if I could talk with people who had successfully used the secret. He did better. He introduced me to four people who were going to start the weight loss secret the following Monday, and asked me if I would like to join them.

I took a before picture of Pat, Janet, Dan and Linda. I then followed their progress every day and had an after picture taken. As you can see from the photos, their results were amazing. But, they weren't the only ones to achieve results.

I lost 4 inches off my waist, 3 inches off my thighs and 14 lbs. in 14 days. My whole life has changed. My clothes fit great. I look and feel younger. I've found new self-confidence. But best of all, my love life has improved. The Weight Loss Secret can do the same thing for you.

HOW CAN YOU LEARN THE SECRET?

If you wish to learn Nature's Weight Loss Secret of Glandular Control, simply do this: Write "Weight Loss Secret" and your name and address on a piece of paper and send it along with $6.95 in cash, check or money order. (Make checks payable to Consumer Publishing.) If you have Master Charge, BankAmericard, or American Express, you may charge your purchase by sending the following information: A. name of card B. credit card number C. card expiration date.

Mail your order to: CONSUMER PUBLISHING, 401 Market Ave., N., Dept. D–11, Canton, Ohio 44750.

Mr. Voros is personally backing this book with a 100% no risk guarantee. After following the weight loss secret, you must lose all the weight you want, while eating the foods you love. You must feel healthier, happier and look 10 years younger. If this does not happen, or if you are dissatisfied in any way, just send your book back. You'll receive every penny of your money back – no questions asked.

Remember, only a small press run of Nature's Weight Loss Secret of Glandular Control has been printed. To make sure that you get your copy, why not order right now, while you're thinking about it. If you have any questions, feel free to call me, Joan Woodward, at (216) 455–1474.

What in the World!

LORETTA LYNN
"You get used to sadness . . ."

Success has been a lonely business for country-western star Loretta Lynn: "As a country singer I write songs about marriage and family and the way normal folks live. But mostly I'm living in motel rooms and traveling on my special bus with my private bedroom in the back. I don't even open the shades in my bus any more. I've seen every highway in the United States by now, and they all look alike to me. I don't even feel comfortable in my own house any more. I get home for a day or two, and by the time I unpack my bags and see what's changed since I was last there, it's time to get moving again. It's kind of lonely on the road, and playing those road shows is a weird experience. One minute I'm out on the stage, usually dressed in long-sleeved, floor-length gowns, with my hair hanging down to my shoulders, smiling at my fans. There's such a feeling of love between me and those people. I know it shows on my face. Being on stage is the best part of my career. I just say whatever comes into my head, and I joke with my band, and we all have a good time. It's the only time when I really feel grown-up and in control of things. But I'm not really as happy as I act on stage. I've known a lot of sad times. I've had chest surgery and blood poisoning, and sometimes I pass out on stage from migraine headaches. I've had a bunch of death threats that we managed to keep secret for awhile. But you get used to sadness, growing up in the mountains the way I did. Being alone so much I often get to thinking about my younger days. It's funny how most of the things I remember are about being poor. I can remember waiting to get new shoes in the fall, walking across the first frost in my bare feet, sometimes sharing shoes until my feet got bunions on them. I could survive if we got poor again. In some ways, that was the best part of my life, learning to survive." From "Loretta Lynn: Coal Miner's Daughter," by Loretta Lynn with George Vecsey (Regnery, $7.95).

India's giant statue—and its rituals: Every 12th year for the last 1,000, Jain worshippers have gathered to pay tribute to their prophet of love and tolerance, Gomateshwara. But this year marked a special celebration as a helicopter flew overhead and dropped millions of rose petals on the statue to symbolize a resurgence of devotion to this once almost extinct religion. Carved from a solid granite boulder, the naked statue of the Jain saint is a formidable sight. It can only be approached by walking up 500 steps which are cut into the hillside of a southwestern village in India. Along with the shower of roses, the statue got its traditional bath of scented water, milk and precious oils while Jain chants were murmured.

The Save-Your-Dog Diet: Nutritional deficiencies and weight problems which can lead to serious heart, kidney and intestinal disorders plague millions of Americans and at least 2 million of the nation's 32 million dogs. Some dogs, like some people, can't tolerate a normal diet, and many dogs are victims of too much "good food," says an expert from "Animal Nutrition News." If your pet suffers from one of these disorders, the cure may lie in prescription dog food. But if your pet is healthy, keep him that way by not pampering him with an all-meat diet; it lacks the necessary minerals. Avoid those "reward" foods since they tend to unbalance diets and lead to obesity. (This advice applies to all creatures, both canine and human!)

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

HEAD TO TOW

A parking sign that gives me fits
And nearly turns me gray
Is one proclaiming "Violators
Will Be Towed Away."

I have a vision of a rope
A truck that tows is just ahead
And pulls and pulls like heck.

Or else the rope is round his heels
Crowds gather on the walks to watch
A sight that's sad but thrilling.

You say that it's the car that's towed
And not the driver? Yes,
You may be right, but I'll be very Careful nonetheless.

After a traffic accident, a man rushed from the sidewalk and leaned over the victim. He was roughly pushed aside by a young man who announced, "Stand back, please. I've had a course in first aid."

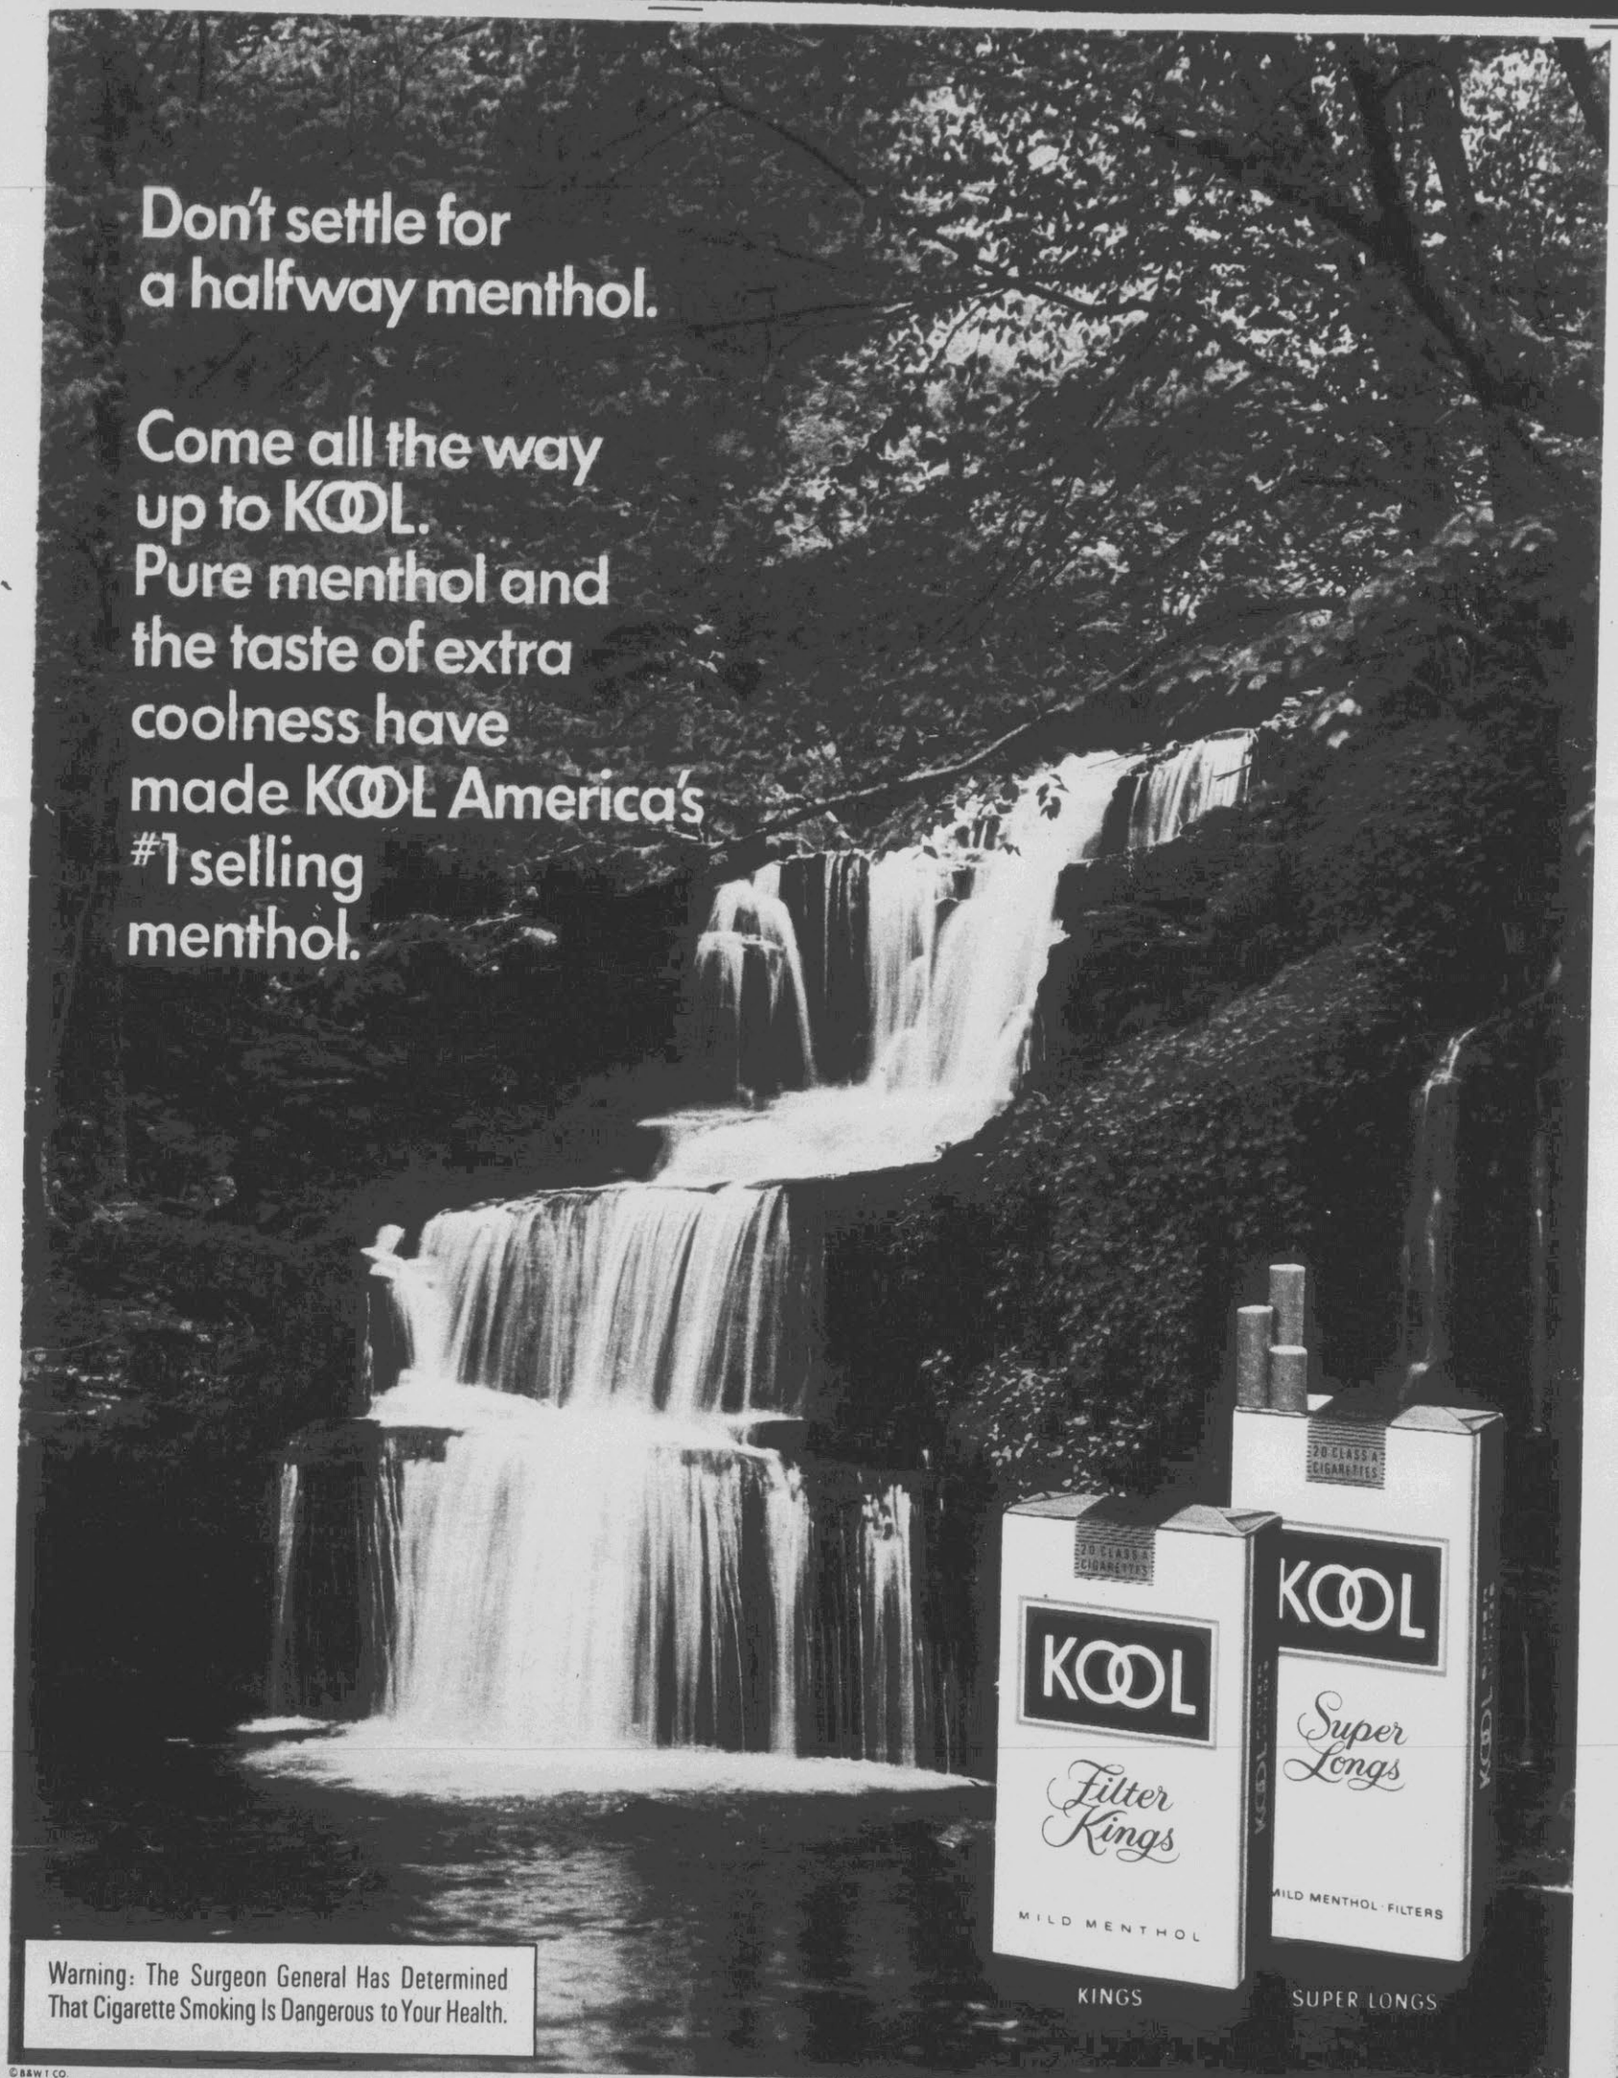

The first man looked on for a few minutes. Then he tapped the young man on the shoulder and said, "When you get to the part about calling a doctor, I'm already here." —Gene Yasenak

Our Story: IN DESPERATE NEED OF MONEY, DIONSEUS CALLS IN THE DEALERS IN QUESTIONABLE GOODS AND THEY COME EAGERLY, FOR THEY HAVE BEEN HERE BEFORE.

THEY PASS THROUGH ROOMS THAT HAVE BEEN STRIPPED, EVEN THE DECORATIVE CEILINGS, DOOR LINTELS AND MOSAIC FLOORS HAVE BEEN TAKEN.

ONE ROOM IS STILL LAVISHLY FURNISHED WITH MANY WORKS OF ART, AND THE BARGAINING BEGINS. THAT THESE OBJECTS ARE ALREADY MORTGAGED DOES NOT BOTHER THEM.

THE GAMING BEGINS. DIONSEUS PLUNGES RECKLESSLY AND BY DAWN IS PENNILESS. NOW COMES THE TIME FOR DESPERATE MEASURES. FROM UNDER THE TABLE HE TAKES THE CROOKED DICE.

"ENOUGH OF THIS CHILD'S PLAY. I WAGER MY VILLA AND ALL ITS CONTENTS! MATCH IT, AJAXOS, IF YOU HAVE THE COURAGE!"
