

Carter Urges Joint Role For 'Stability'

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter said today the United States must abandon what he called its "Lone Ranger" foreign policy and organize free nations to share responsibility for a "just and stable world order."

Carter, the Democrats' probable nominee, called for collective action by the world's democracies in "creative alliances" to help stabilize world prices, ease military tensions and combat hunger and poverty. Carter painted his concept of "creative alliances" in broad strokes, giving few specific details.

He said it is time to form a partnership between North America, Western Europe and Japan, and that there is a need for increased unity and consultation with Israel, Australia, New Zealand and other democratic societies.

Carter also said in a speech prepared for the Foreign Policy

Association that:

—NATO forces must be re-equipped with up-to-date weapons to balance modernized Warsaw Pact forces, but he said the costs must be shared by NATO partners, not borne solely by the United States, and that no effort should be spared to seek a balanced reduction of forces on both sides.

—Increased cooperation between East and West is desirable "but we will never seek accommodation at the expense of our own national interests or the interests of our allies."

—He is "particularly concerned" by the nation's "role as the world's leading arms salesman" and that the United States and its allies must work to reduce the flow of arms into developing nations.

—It will be possible to withdraw U.S. forces from South Korea over a time span to be determined after consultation with both South Korea and Japan, but the United States should make clear that "internal oppression" in South Korea is "repugnant to our people."

The Foreign Policy Association is composed of academicians and others who meet periodically for seminars.

Carter said that under the Nixon-Ford administration "there has evolved a kind of secretive 'Lone Ranger' foreign policy — a one-man policy of international adventure. This is not an appropriate policy for America."

"We have sometimes tried to play other nations one against another instead of organizing free nations to share world responsibility in collective action."

He said there must be "an international policy of democratic leadership and we must stop trying to play a lonely game of power politics."

WORKER THREATENED — Striking state employees shout at woman worker as she crosses picket line outside a Massachusetts state office building in Boston. Superior Court Judge Thomas E.

Morse ordered mediation to end the strike by state employees that he says is bringing the state "to the edge of anarchy." (AP Wirephoto)

Massachusetts Employees Ignore End-Strike Order

BOSTON (AP) — Picketing was reported heavier today at most state facilities as the pay-dispute strike by public employees went into its third day despite a court order to end the walkout.

Howard Doyle, president of the coalition representing the state workers, said this morning he would not order strikers back to work despite the court order. Striking workers at two sewage treatment plants did return to work to halt raw sewage from emptying into Boston Harbor and pickets were lifted at some state hospitals.

But police and union spokesmen said more people were picketing at most state office buildings, welfare offices, prisons, and other state facilities across the state.

The governor's office said about 20,000 of the state's 65,000 employees continued to stay out. Union officials said they do not know how many people are striking or honoring the picket lines.

The impact of the strike on average Massachusetts residents has ranged from inconvenience to major disruption. —In some cases, welfare checks were delayed, causing hardships for those on public assistance.

—At the Registry of Motor Vehicle offices, issuance of new license plates and transfer of automobile registrations were postponed.

—Employees of private construction companies working on state contracts find they are out of work. There are no state inspectors to visit the construction sites.

—Some couples will have to revise their wedding plans. State public health officials said a state laboratory has stopped accepting blood samples for the premarital blood tests required by state law.

—Bathers swim at their own risk at state beaches where there are no lifeguards on duty.

However, in many cases, the average Massachusetts resident is not terribly concerned. An announcer on a Cape Cod radio station asked for calls Tuesday from residents affected by the walkout: "Not a single person called on the subject," he said.

Judge Thomas E. Morse, at a court hearing Tuesday, ordered union leaders back into court today to explain why they should agreed to the appointment of a mediator — Eric Schmeitz of New York City — to enter the dispute. Morse ordered both sides to begin meeting with the mediator today.

The statewide strike by public employees — the first in Massachusetts history — is prohibited by law.

Morse issued a temporary injunction against the strike when it began Monday, but his order was not obeyed. Morse prohibited obstructive picketing at such facilities as prisons, bridges, water treatment plants and mental hospitals, but he refused to ban all picketing.

State services continued to suffer Tuesday as the governor's office said more workers stayed out than on the first day of the strike.

The state, in its third contract proposal, offered the workers an average pay raise of $2,175 over a three-year period. The unions are demanding a $3,600 increase and a two-year pact. The average wage is now $9,360.

ARTIST'S VIEW OF LANDING ON MARS — This is an artist's conception of the Viking Mars lander as it heads for a touch down on the Martian surface at the prime landing site, Chryse, slated to take place July 4. The view is to the west with Earth about 20 degrees below the sun. Parachute in left background carries aeroshell from which the lander detaches at a distance of about 20,000 feet from the surface. The Mars landing will culminate a 440-million-mile Viking journey from Earth. (NASA Photo via AP Wirephoto)

Viking I Landing Area Photos Are Pouring In

By RICHARD SALTUS AP Science Writer PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Photos of the Martian site chosen for Viking 1's July 4 landing streamed in from space to the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, where scientists will study them closely to make sure the area is safe for the rocket's landing.

The 58 photos were taken in about six minutes Tuesday by Viking's twin cameras from its newly established orbit. They came to earth late Tuesday and early today via radio transmission.

"We've made a lot of estimates (of the nature of the surface) from what little evidence we have, and the proof of the pudding is starting to come in today," said Dr. Harold Masursky. He is a member of the Viking orbiter photography team and is a U.S. Geological Survey scientist. The landing site is called Chryse. It's a basin area at the mouth of a huge valley where water may have flowed at one time.

Pieced together in a photo mosaic, the pictures will be studied by geologists to determine what the surface is made of and whether boulders, potholes or soft sand pose any hazards for the three-legged Viking lander, which will separate from the mother ship.

For the rest of June, the spacecraft will circle the planet — and pass the landing area — once a day. Mars is about half the size of earth but its day, called a "sol" by scientists, is slightly longer than earth's: 24.6 hours.

Also on Tuesday, Viking studied infrared radiation emitted and reflected from the landing site. Such measurements tell geologists about the thermal properties of the surface and give clues to the composition of the rocks and soil.

Another instrument examined the thin atmosphere of Mars for traces of water vapor. There have been encouraging signs that such vapor — water in its gaseous form — may be more abundant than had been calculated from earlier observations. Such findings could slightly improve the chances of finding life on Mars.

Masursky said liquid water is not believed to exist on Mars because of the planet's low atmospheric pressure. But near Chryse and many other places on the planet are features that have the unmistakable look of dry channels that were carved by flowing water.

If water was once abundant on Mars, he said, the atmosphere must once have been heavier — providing enough pressure to keep water in its liquid form.

"Something must have been different," he said, "and we'd like to find out what it was."

Favors Utility Changes

RALEIGH (AP)—Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt called today for complete reorganization of the state Utilities Commission in order to win public confidence in the utility rate-making process.

Hunt, seeking the Democratic nomination for governor, said in a position paper that members of the commission should be judicial officers, or judges, and should be completely divorced from administrative duties.

Hunt called for a philosophy of "tight regulation of public utilities" and said that "for too long, utilities regulators have viewed the ratepaying public as a secondary concern."

He also called for placing the commission staff "under a separate administrative authority with a mandate to represent the using and consuming public." The staff would be administered by an executive director appointed by the governor.

"This would redress the current imbalance of resources now favoring the utility companies," Hunt added. "The staff role would be entirely behind a public viewpoint."

Hunt said that reorganization of the commission is needed because it "has not done its job of fairly balancing the interests of the ratepayer and the company stockholder" and has not "taken the initiative to secure fair and economical utility rates for the public." As a result, he said "public confidence in our Utilities Commission has plummeted."

"To insure that public access and participation will be implemented, a Consumer Advisory Council to the commission staff should be created," Hunt stated.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A New Jersey Teamsters union leader, Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, and three other men have been indicted on federal charges of kidnaping and conspiring to murder another New Jersey Teamsters leader 15 years ago, the Justice Department announced today.

The four men were charged in the disappearance and death of Anthony Castellito, who was secretary treasurer of Teamsters Local 560 at the time of his death in 1961.

Provenzano, 59, now is secretary treasurer of the teamsters local. He also has been a focus of investigators' interest in connection with the disappearance and apparent death of former Teamsters president James R. Hoffa.

The sealed indictment was returned in U.S. District Court in New York on Tuesday and opened today.

$3,470,212 Budget Is Adopted By Farmville's Board After Hearing

By CAROL TYER Reflector Staff Writer FARMVILLE — A $3,470,212.87 budget was adopted by Farmville Commissioners for the fiscal year beginning July 1 following a public hearing on the budget here last night.

A 55-cent per $100 evaluation tax rate was retained, as it has been for several years.

General fund revenue and appropriations equal out at $938,283.57. Revenue include 1976 taxes, $201,162.50; prior years' taxes $13,450; other income (privilege and beer and wine licenses, building permit fees, etc.), $335,712.80; electric fund contribution, $360,365.31; contribution from water and sewer fund, $24,853.59; and appropriated fund balance, $2,739.37.

Appropriations for the year are as follows: $93,956.45 for administration; $199,439.63 for the Police Department; $24,277.07 for the Volunteer Fire Department; $19,554.31 for the Inspections Department; $335,196.45 for the Street and Sanitation Department; $89,058.09 for the Recreation and Parks Department; $23,146.92 for the Library; $17,283.45 for Cemeteries; $62,000 for Powell Bill (street improvements); a $10,000 contingency fund, and $64,371.20 for non-departmental uses. The Debt Service Fund is $491,541.15. Some $91,541.15 of this comes from the Water and Sewer Fund and $400,000 from the expected sale of bonds.

Revenue from the electric service of the town and other related revenue is $1,586,911.15. Of this $1,226,545.84 will go to operate the Electric Department and $360,365.31 will go into the General Fund, as was previously noted.

Water revenue is expected to be $201,000; sewer revenue, $175,000; and other related revenue $17,946, totalling $393,946. A total of $277,551.26 will be used to operate the Water and Sewer Department; $91,541.15 will be contributed in the Debt Service Fund, and $24,853.59 will go into the General Fund.

The $6,000 capital reserve fund will go to the Fire Department. The $53,531 Revenue Sharing funds will be used as follows: $11,050 for administration; $23,100 for the Street and Sanitation Department; $7,500 for the Water Department; 5,500 for the Fire Department; $5,200 for the Recreation and Parks Department; and $11,181 for Cemeteries.

The budget for the fiscal year that will end next Thursday, June 30, totaled $2,590,714.11. Much of the large difference is accounted for by the $400,000 bond sale revenue and debt repayment figure included in the coming year's budget and also the increase in cost of electrical power purchased from Carolina Power and Light Company.

The budget was compiled by Town Administrator W. A. Martin and Town Clerk, Mrs. Margie Nichols Tripp, and considered by the Commissioners in a number of workshop sessions, including one that began at 7:30 p.m. last Thursday and concluded at 2 a.m. Friday.

Call Meeting

The City Council will have a special call meeting Thursday night, June 24, to adopt the city and Greenville Utilities budget for 1976-77. The special session at city hall will get underway at 7:30 p.m.

New Soviet Space Laboratory Launched, Orbiting The Earth

MOSCOW (AP) — Another Soviet space laboratory was orbiting the earth today amid expectations that Soviet cosmonauts would be sent up to man it.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, announced the launching of Salyut 5 Tuesday to conduct "scientific and technical studies and experiments as well as further improvement of the design, the onboard systems and equipment of the orbital station."

Tass said nothing about plans to man the station. But a Western space specialist in Moscow predicted this would happen "sooner or later."

Tass said Salyut 5 was functioning normally, circling the earth every 89 minutes, with its orbit ranging between 136.1 miles and 161.5 miles from the earth.

The last Soviet space station, Salyut 4, was launched on Dec.

26, 1974, and a two-man crew was put aboard 17 days later. The cosmonauts stayed in space for 30 days. Another pair was put aboard in May, 1975, and set a Soviet space endurance record of 62 days. An unmanned spaceship, Soyuz 20, docked with Salyut 4 last February, and in March Tass reported that the space station was still in orbit.

"One cannot assume Salyut 4 is now dead," said one Western specialist. "The Soviets have already demonstrated their ability to keep more than one major space mission alive and in control at once."

The last manned Soviet space mission was the joint Apollo-Soyuz flight with the United States last July. The United States plans no manned space flights until 1979, when a space shuttle, a reusable airplane-like craft, is to be tested. There have been three flights of U.S. Skylabs, the equivalent of the Salyuts.

Cookbooks Help Brides

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

A bride who takes no joy in cooking isn't apt to find salvation in the current crop of new cookbooks.

A trend back to scratch cooking, minus packaged, processed ingredients, is evident, happily for those who appreciate good food, less so for home cooks with little time for or interest in meal preparation.

Only the latest edition of the Better Homes and Gardens New Cookbook (Meredith $8.95) covers convenience schools of cooking as well as international fare made from basic ingredients. As always, this book mirrors American tastes and changing cooking habits. It is a particularly good primer for completely inexperienced cooks who want to try a few recipes for currently popular appliances (slow cookers, microwave ovens, for example) before investing in expensive cookbooks written specifically for such equipment.

Woman's Day Cooking for Two (Random House $7.95) can be recommended only with reservations. Its information about kitchen equipment, shopping and food storage is good, but incomplete for persons who have never cooked before. My biggest beef (pun intended) is the chapter on small cuts of meat: of 20 recipes, 15 are for ground beef and 10 of the 15, for plain and garnished hamburgers. Are people really so devoid of imagination that they need to be told to put blue cheese and sour cream or bell peppers and onions on burgers? Better values in terms of basic helps and inventive recipes are in Informal Dinners for Easy Entertaining by Maria Luisa and Jack Denton Scott and Great Dinner Parties by Barbara Myers (both Simon and Schuster $8.95). Many of their four-serving recipes can be divided easily if leftovers are unwanted, and many can be prepared ahead.

Dozens of Mrs. Myers' recipes prove that simple fare such as poached fresh peaches in cream or Peruvian squash soup or spinach with ricotta can be superb if the ingredients are top quality, and the cooking done with care.

Recipes and menus in The Six-Minute Souffle and Other Culinary Delights by Carol Cutler (Potter, distributed by Crown $9.95) are somewhat fancy for regular daily use, but splendid for entertaining. The author, a working wife herself, provides excellent directions for making dishes ahead and reheating.

Two delightful family cookbooks of traditional regional recipes should be used with care. Each contains a canning recipe for low-acid food with directions for open kettle processing that could lead to deadly botulism poisoning, and one recommends the use of plastic canning jar lids, a relatively new type that some home canning experts have expressed doubts about.

The plastic lids and one risky recipe are in A Family Harvest by Jane Moss Snow (Bobbs-Merrill $10). Mrs. Snow's home-canned tomato soup and the home-canned bean recipe in The Taste of Country Cooking by Edna Lewis (Knopf $10) should be pressure canned to reach temperatures high enough to destroy any botulin toxin present.

Undoubtedly many old-timers escaped food poisoning because it was customary to boil freshly opened home-canned food rapidly for quite a while before serving. Mrs. Lewis notes this in her directions for pork-flavored home-canned green beans. She recommends cooking the drained beans "rather briskly 25 to 30 minutes" in stock made from the pork and fresh cold water. Prolonged, rapid re-cooking either destroys the toxin and renders the food safe, or reveals its danger by an off odor and/or unpalatable appearance.

Part of the risk in both recipes lies in reheating the foods according to current custom. We are so conditioned to bringing commercially canned products only to serving temperature that we tend to forget home canning cannot match the safety regulations, imposed on the canning industry to prevent just such grave accidents.

Teen Has Trouble Getting Summer Job

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old boy who was able to graduate from high school early because I passed the required tests. My problem is I need a summer job, but nobody will hire me because I have had no experience. Abby, how can a person get experience if nobody will hire him?

I am a responsible, hard-working boy who has never been in any kind of trouble, and I'm willing to do anything—run errands, wait on tables, sweep the floors, answer the phone, box groceries—you name it. And if I don't know how to do it, I will learn.

So far I have applied for 22 jobs, but nothing has materialized.

Abby, how can a person without pull or connections get a job? I'm beginning to think it's impossible.

DISCOURAGED

DEAR DISCOURAGED: Go back to some of the places you've applied and tell them that you are honest, dependable, hard-working and so eager to prove your worth that you'll work for one week with no obligation on their part, and if they feel you don't qualify, they owe you nothing.

You may not be hired instantly, but I'll bet your name goes to the top of the list. Try it and let me know how you come out.

DEAR ABBY: Last weekend my husband's 24-year-old brother (I'll call him "Bill") came to town and stayed with us.

We planned to dine out with another couple and had engaged a 13-year-old neighbor girl to sit with our two little ones.

Bill was going out with his friends that evening and was waiting for us to finish dressing before he showered and shaved. He said he'd do that after we left and while the sitter was here.

I put my foot down and insisted that Bill shower quickly and leave the house with us. I didn't think it would be right for him to be alone in the house with a 13-year-old girl, even though he is a very nice young man. I knew that the sitter's mother would be horrified to learn that we left her daughter alone with a 24-year-old man, and I felt the girl herself might feel ill at ease.

Bill was furious with me, and my husband thought I was crazy to think there would be anything wrong in leaving Bill with the sitter. Was I wrong to feel that way?

TAKING NO CHANCES

DEAR TAKING: Yes. You owe Bill an apology.

DEAR ABBY: I am to be married in the fall and need your opinion about something that has caused considerable conversation in our family.

I have asked my favorite aunt to be one of my bridesmaids. She is 44 and very young-looking. She refused, saying, "Everyone would say I looked foolish with all those young girls, and it would spoil your day." (The other bridesmaids are from 17 to 26.)

I need your advice.

BALTIMORE BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I can't possibly know what "everyone" would say, and neither can your aunt. She's obviously more concerned with her own image than eager to participate in your wedding. Don't coax her.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Clubs Hold Convention

The national convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs was held last week in Philadelphia, Pa. Those representing the Junior Women's Club of Greenville were Karen Collier, president, Shelley Basnight, Vicki Bishop, Mary Shearin and Libby Swinson.

The 13 original colony states were hostesses for the convention. North Carolina received recognition for the most delegates present.

Soybean Has Chinese History

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The soybean, which has been called the "meat without bones," was known to the Chinese about 2,000 years before the birth of Christ and still serves as a keystone of the Chinese cuisine.

Soy sauce has long been a standby in this country as a seasoning, but now with the soaring cost of meats, the protein-rich bean is being used more and more as an occasional substitute for meat dishes. Actually, it can be used in most every kind of recipe from soup to nuts.

Eaten green, soybeans resemble our limas, but they are more often consumed as a dried, cooked bean. They are also ground into flour, which in turn can be processed into an instant soluble powder. Soybean milk, which can be made from either the flour or the powder, has proven a useful substitute for cow's milk and is used to make a curd product that is much like cottage cheese. This substance has been used for centuries in Chinese cookery and is known to have an even higher protein content than straight soybeans.

The protein content of this adaptable bean is formidable. Half a cup of cooked soybeans contains about 20 grams of protein and half a cup of soy flour contains about 30. Compare this with a whole cup of milk, which contains only eight grams of protein, and a quarter pound of chicken, which runs between 15 and 18 grams. The famed nutritionist, Dr. Carlton Fredericks, notes, however, that whereas soy is unusually efficient for a vegetable protein, it is still not quite as efficient as meat, milk, fish and fowl proteins.

A number of big food processing houses have been putting out soybean protein—meat substitutes for vegetarians and those who cannot afford a daily ration of meat or fowl. They feature frozen soy sausages, ham or chicken chunks among other things.

Soybeans seem to do best when combined with other ingredients. The process is usually simple once you have prepared them. Just soak dry beans overnight and simmer them in water about three hours till tender. Here is a recipe for soybean casserole that should help stretch your budget.

- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
 - 1 1/2 cups onions chopped fine
 - 2 cloves minced garlic
 - 2 1/2 cups fresh diced tomatoes
 - 1 cup wheat germ
 - 3 tablespoons brewer's yeast
 - 3 cups cooked soybeans
 - 2 tablespoons whole wheat flour
 - 1 tablespoon soy flour
 - 1 teaspoon oregano
 - 1 teaspoon thyme
 - 1 tablespoon molasses
 - 4 ounces white wine
 - Salt and pepper to taste
- Saute onions and garlic in the oil till tender, then add all other ingredients, mix well and place in a casserole. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven about half an hour or till bubbling. Serves 6. Good with a chilled dry white wine.

Lemon Chicken Dinner Is Family Taste Treat

LEMON CHICKEN
A low-sodium recipe.
1-3rd cup lemon juice
1-3rd cup honey
1 cup minced onion
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1/2 teaspoon finely crushed dried thyme
1/4 teaspoon pepper
3 whole chicken breasts,

split and skinned
3 tablespoons unsalted margarine
1 tablespoon cornstarch blended with 2 tablespoons cold water
Coat the chicken with a mixture of the first 6 ingredients. Refrigerate from 4 to 12 hours, turning over the chicken a few times. Drain chicken and reserve marinade. Brown chicken in margarine in a skillet and transfer to a range-top-proof baking dish; pour the margarine remaining in skillet and the reserved marinade over the chicken. Bake uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree oven, basting a few times, until tender—about 30 minutes. Remove chicken. Add cornstarch mixture to baking dish; cook and stir until thickened and boiling; skim off any fat. Spoon over chicken. Makes 6 servings.

Make Protein Bread At Home

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Some of the cooks who buy the "protein" breads available in supermarkets and bakeries have asked us how to bake such loaves at home. The most popular of these bought breads are made with special combinations of gluten flour and other flours and we have not yet tried to duplicate them. However, recently we baked an excellent all-gluten-flour loaf. Gluten flour, high in protein, is available in some health food shops and by mail order.

Because we had never before worked with gluten flour, we turned to our favorite all-round yeast-baking helper: "The Complete Book of Breads" by Bernard Clayton, Jr. Sure enough, Clayton has a recipe for Gluten Bread and the loaf we baked, following his ample directions, was perfect. With Bernie's kind permission, we are happy to pass along his recipe.

After sampling our loaf, we sliced it thin, buttered it copiously and toasted it in a slow oven until it was hard and crunchy. Stored in a tightly covered tin box in a cool place, the loaf stayed in excellent condition for several weeks and the munchers at our house thoroughly enjoyed it.

In introducing his recipe, Clayton says: "While gluten bread is a dietetic loaf, a toasted slice has a crisp bite and a pleasant nutlike flavor. The flour is expensive... (the loaf) will probably be reserved for special diets."

BERNIE CLAYTON'S
GLUTEN BREAD

- 2 1/2 to 3 cups gluten flour, approximately
- 1 package dry yeast
- 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt

1-3rd cup non-fat dry milk
1 1/2 cups warm water (105-115 degrees)

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
Into a large bowl pour 1 1/2 cups flour, yeast, sugar, salt and milk. Stir together. Add water and vegetable oil. Beat with a wooden spoon 1 minute or 100 strokes. Unlike other yeast doughs, gluten dough will immediately pull together in a ball and quickly clean the sides of the bowl. Gradually add flour, a tablespoon at a time, until the dough loses its wetness and can be worked without sticking to the hands.

Turn onto a board or counter top lightly dusted with gluten flour. Knead with a strong push-turn-fold motion for about 8 minutes. While the dough will be fairly stiff, it will become smooth and elastic under the hands.

Place the dough in a greased bowl, cover with plastic wrap and put in a warm place (80-85 degrees) until dough has doubled in bulk, 1 1/4 hours.

Punch down the dough in the bowl. Turn it out on the work surface and knead for 30 seconds to work out the bubbles. Press the ball of dough into a flat oval, about the length of the baking pan. Fold the oval in half, pinch the seam tightly to seal, tuck the ends, and place in an 8 1/2 by 4 1/2-inch greased loaf pan, seam down.

Place the pan in the warm place, cover with wax paper and leave until the center of the dough has risen to the edge of the pan, 1 hour.

Place in a preheated 400-degree oven 25 minutes, reduce heat to 350 degrees for an additional 20 minutes. Halfway through the bake period turn the pan. Loaf is done when it makes a hollow sound when thumped on the bottom.

Take from oven and place on cooling rack. If this is to be the bread supplement for only one person in the household, you may wish to slice just enough for three days, wrap and store; freeze the balance.

How's The Weather? Discuss Migrant Council Plans

WEATHER FORECAST—Warm weather is due today for most of the nation with cooler weather in the Northwest. Rain is forecast for the Dakotas and Nebraska. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The unstable air mass which has covered North Carolina for more than a week show no sign of departing. Therefore partly cloudy, warm and humid weather, with scattered showers, continued today.

Highs were in the 80s, except for the 70s in the mountains. Some showers packed heavy winds.

The slightly drier air which had moved into the western sections has left. The stationary front which was along the foot-hills and was responsible for the drier air finally fizzled out during the night, allowing moist air to move into the mountains again.

The moist air has remained over the state because of very strong high pressure, both at the surface and aloft, which is stationary over the western Atlantic. This has been a very effective block to cold fronts trying to come through North Carolina. The high shows no signs of breaking down and neither does the moisture. Tuesday's showers were scattered but locally heavy. Wilmington reported one and one-half inches of rain, Jacksonville an inch and one-third, and Hatteras a little over one-half inch.

On the western side of the state, Charlotte received one-third of an inch. Lows early this morning were on the mild side. Readings were from the low 70s on the Outer Banks and mostly 60s elsewhere.

Three local agencies — the Employment Security Commission, the Catholic Social Services and the Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers Association (MSFA) each had representatives attending a recent meeting of the Pitt County Migrant Advisory Council.

James Cox, Rural Manpower Representative of the Employment Security Commission, noted that despite minimal participation (a dozen local agencies had been invited), plans were made for laying the foundation for outlining main objectives of a Migrant Council.

The principal objectives reached by representatives of the three agencies include — learning what each agency has to offer so that migrants can be served more effectively; learning about problems migrant workers encounter in the community and ways of solving such problems; creating mutual respect between workers and area agencies; and planning ahead to improve worker-employer relations.

Some of the services provided by MSFA, as explained by Denisan Garrett is providing, through federally funded programs, money for food, travel, relocation, utility bills, rent and medical attention.

In addition, the MSFA has an employability plan to provide training at local technical institutes to enable migrant workers to reach a long range goal in education.

During the peak working season, MSFA also provides care for migrant families.

With the season for migrant workers coming up, Garrett has urged participants to refer migrant workers to the Ayden office in the event any migrant is in need of services. Also being planned for the Ayden area migrants is use of reading materials and basketball equipment to help occupy weekend hours.

Noting they would be working with limited funds, the representative of the Catholic Social Service informed they were able to provide services such as supplying food, paying doctor bills, emergency assistance such as burial funds and furnishing general recreational activities for migrants.

The main role of the Employment Security Commission in its migrant worker service includes complaint procedures and full job service for the workers.

Interested local persons who may wish more information on the status and availability of migrant workers should call Cox at the local Employment Security Office, 756-2686. The next meeting of agencies and interested persons to discuss the migrant worker situation is to be held at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, July 7 at the Employment Security Office, Bismarck Street.

Hearings On 3 Permits

Public hearings on requests for three special use permits are scheduled for Thursday night by the Greenville and City-County Boards of Adjustments.

The Greenville board will conduct a public hearing on a request by Joseph, Phillip and William Stewart Goodson for a special use permit in order to continue to utilize the structure located at 514 Watauga Avenue as a furniture store after the January of 1977 deadline.

The board will also consider adoption of the annual report and elect officers to serve for 1976-77.

Public hearings are scheduled by the city-county board on requests for special use permits by Robert H. Scott in order to operate a health club in the structure located in the Red Oak Shopping Center on the 264 Bypass, and by Mrs. Diane H. Mills in order to place a mobile home on the lot located on the Pactolus Highway approximately one mile beyond the city limits.

The adoption of the annual report is also on the joint board's agenda.

N.C. Republican Split Shows...

Gov. Jim Holshouser, who has been wrestling with a heavily Democratic Legislature during his term of office, faced members of his own Republican Party last weekend in a bid for a seat on the GOP delegation to the national convention.

The results were little different from his dealings with the Democrats in the Legislature. Holshouser lost.

As news reports indicated the state GOP convention was dominated by Ronald Reagan supporters and Holshouser, of course, is supporting Republican president Gerald Ford.

It is likely, however, that the Holshouser rejection by the GOP convention goes beyond the immediate question of who he supports for president.

The state's first Republican governor of this century came to the General Election four years ago after a bitter primary struggle. Even though he went on from the primary victory to win the general election in 1972, the party divisions still were there to plague him. And, faced with an overwhelmingly Democratic Legislature, the young Republican governor was even more crippled in carrying out his programs by the division within his party.

As presidential politics moved to the forefront this year Holshouser moved quickly to become a part of the Ford organization. But the state's other powerful Republican office holder, Sen. Jesse Helms lined up behind Ronald Reagan. The results, as everyone knows, was that Reagan won the Republican presidential primary, a definite setback for Holshouser, who was Ford's Southern campaign coordinator.

Not only that, but the North Carolina primary turned the Reagan fortunes around. He went on to win other primaries and is now hot on the trail of President Ford in the quest for the GOP presidential nomination.

Following his defeats at the GOP state convention, Holshouser nominated a Helms ally in a conciliatory move. "Perhaps the olive branch is the most important weapon in politics," United Press International quoted him as saying.

By then, though, Holshouser's olive branch was pretty battered. It appeared that of the two top GOP office holders in the state Sen. Helms was by far more in control of things within the party structure than was the state's first Republican governor of this century.

Casino Fun For Kiddies

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — In Nevada, you can send your children to summer camp and then go on a gambler's vacation — all at the same glittering hotel-casino.

Or you can take the kiddies to the circus for a day while you try your hand at the green felt gaming tables. That can be done in the same building, too.

Or you can put the children in game rooms run by many big clubs, or ring room service for a baby sitter while you step out for a night on the town.

It's all part of an effort by Nevada's billion-dollar gaming industry to keep parents from worrying about their children and stay longer and gamble more.

Despite the broad range of activities for children — which all cost money — it's not uncommon to see youngsters on sidewalks, peering into casinos which are off limits to them, just waiting for their parents to come out.

The most elaborate program for children is one run by the Las Vegas Hilton: a "youth hotel" complete with dorms, trained counselors, game rooms, outdoor play areas and an atmosphere distinctly like summer camp. A sign over the entrance says: "Who says mom and dad have all the fun in Las Vegas?"

The fee can run $50 daily but operators of the youth hotel say it's getting more and more popular with both parents and children, who oftentimes don't want to leave when their parents are ready to head for home.

"We don't just entertain the kids, we involve them," said director Craig Josenhans, outlining various games, arts and craft projects, outdoor recreation and other children's programs.

No other club has a program identical to the seven-year-old youth hotel, although several are expanding facilities for children.

At the Circus Circus hotel-casino in Las Vegas, children can watch high-wire acts, eat cotton candy and ride a carousel while their parents pump nickels into slot machines or play table games.

The dominant form of service for children remains the game room, usually a supervised area separated from the casino area of a club. There are also

Preparing Agenda For '77

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—Best estimates are that the 1977 General Assembly of North Carolina will be changed substantially as the result of some 30 per cent turnover—those who are not running, are seeking higher office, or will meet defeat either in party primaries or the November general election.

Regardless of newcomers and changes in store, though, the agenda for the 1977 session is currently being pulled together.

The Legislative Research Commission d a host of study committees under its supervision are continuing to meet and prepare reports and recommended legislation.

The reports will be funneled through the Legislative Research Commission which is jointly chaired by House Speaker James C. Green, D-Bladen, (who is running for lieutenant governor and if successful will preside over the Senate) and Senate President Pro Tem John T. Henley, D-Cumberland, who is seeking re-election.

Hand-Picked
Each of those two picked five colleagues to serve on the Research Commission, and from that group, each study area was assigned a "Commission Member Chairman" to oversee activities, and each picked co-chairmen to actually conduct the studies.

Scheduled for completion in time for the 1977 General Assembly are these studies:

Education—the relationship of the Community College system to the Department of Public Instruction and the State Board of Education. Key question is whether the system remains where it is or is set up with its own board; also, the question of need for training vessels as part of fisheries education in coastal high schools. State Senator Bob L. Barker of Wake is chairman.

Corrections—Speedy trials, use of inmate labor in corrections, prison enterprises, and females in prison are under study. Senator Luther Britt of Robeson is chairman.

Sex Discrimination—a committee is seeking to identify all laws which reflect sexual discrimination and need rewriting; also looking at revisions in law on sexual assaults; chaired by Senator Billy Mills of Onslow.

Health and Environment—this study is looking at the continuing fuss about rescue squad training requirements, certification of ambulance drivers and attendants, also at services to the blind and water projects. Senator Willis P. Whichard, D-Durham, is chairman.

Criminal Law and State Property—compensation for victims of crime is one area of this study, as is the impact of tax exempted state property on local governments. The committees, chaired by State Rep. Liston B. Ramsey of Madison has already completed much of its work on paperwork in the courts and problems with the revised criminal codes.

Local Government—mass transit, and building code enforcement (or lack of enforcement) are being debated by this group chaired by Rep. Hector Ray of Fayetteville.

Finance—two areas of study by this group are fire and casualty insurance rates, and the state sports arena. Rep. Guy Revelle of Conway is chairman.

Other subjects include the state retirement system, and a probe of wrecker service and hearing aid business practices conducted by Rep. Thomas B. Sawyer of Greensboro.

Outside the work being handled by the Research Commission, two other major areas are subject to action as the result of study commission work.

The Land Policy Council continues to meet and conduct public hearings leading to a statewide land management proposal; and a committee to rewrite state public school law will report before the next session.

Then the major work in 1977 will develop: how to fund state programs and agencies at present levels, even at increased levels, while attempting to hold the line on taxes.

He Never Met Miss Ray

WASHINGTON—I know it's hard to believe, but I met a high government official the other day who never met Elizabeth Ray. The reason it's hard to believe is that according to Miss Ray's book, "The Washington Fringe Benefit," she met every person of importance within a 50-mile radius of the nation's capital. In fairness to Miss Ray she didn't claim she slept with everyone she met (though the Guinness Book of Records has suddenly shown a great interest in her), but she does insist she knew everyone from Eugene McCarthy to Henry Kissinger.

The high government official, who asked that his name not be mentioned because he had never met Miss Ray, didn't seem to have any logical reason to explain why their paths had never crossed.

"I'm not much of a party man," he said, "so maybe that's the reason she left me out of her book."

"But surely, sir," I said, "you could have been in a restaurant where she was dining. She said she met a lot of important people in restaurants."

"I've wracked my brain," he replied, "but I don't think I ever ran into her in a restaurant. If I had she surely would have remembered it."

"What about at the Washington Redskins games? In her book she claims she met almost everyone of importance at the Redskins games."

Other Editors Say Fretting And Health

(Greensboro Daily News)
The striking thing about a story carried in this newspaper the other day—"Emotional Factors Linked To Cancer"—is that it simultaneously simplifies and mystifies our understanding of the causes of disease.

The story concerned the results of several recent studies linking human emotions with the incidence of cancer. In one study of 100 persons with leukemia and lymphoma, for example, the victims in all but a few cases had suffered the loss of a loved one before developing cancer. In a 30-year test of 1,337 entering medical students at Johns Hopkins University, those who subsequently developed cancer generally shared the personality traits of people with suicidal tendencies or mental illness — loneliness, emotional repression, introspection and the like. Medical experts say one possible explanation of the connection is that psychological stress may interfere with the body's ability to produce cancer-resisting antibodies.

The link between emotions and disease should hardly come as a surprise. In common parlance, when we say someone has "worried himself sick," we acknowledge the role mental attitudes play in the contraction or prolongation of illness. The will to live, or to get well, is a vital force beyond the ability of medical technology to supplant.

Of course other factors have been shown to contribute just as significantly to the development of cancer and other diseases: Cigarette smoke and environmental chemicals, for example, are well-established cancer-causing agents. But when all is said and done, we are still woefully lacking in knowledge about disease. Generally we are medically much better equipped to treat disease once it occurs than to prevent it before it happens. Dr. Lewis Thomas, president of the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, has recently written that "most illnesses, especially the major ones, are blind accidents that we have no idea how to prevent. We are really not all that good at preventing disease or preserving health — not yet anyway — and we are not likely to be until we have learned a great deal about disease mechanisms."

So the moral is at once comforting and disturbing. To the extent that we can control our emotional and mental states, we may in fact have some control over our susceptibility to certain diseases. But emotions and mental attitudes are notoriously difficult to master. More often than not we are mastered by them.

Quality Housing Is Still Costly

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — In case you missed the original announcement, it should be recorded that in May the average purchase price of a new single-family home fell to $46,300, a drop of $2,200 from the record-high price a month earlier.

It is understandable that you might believe those figures to be the result of a typographical gremlin, but they are not. It is possible too that they are another of those well-known statistical flukes, but maybe not.

The fact is that there are some solid reasons why the prices of some new homes might have dropped. Some are smaller editions, many are minus the refinements of a year ago. And some sellers have been having problems. This latter cannot be ignored; if you think you've had troubles in buying a house your local builder can reduce you to tears with his frustrations in trying to sell a house, even at a minuscule profit.

So what do we deduce from this latest news? That it pays to wait? If you so conclude you are battling the odds. You might very well find yourself in the same trap that snared many young householders of the 1960s, who were convinced that housing prices would stabilize.

Well, they did, for a while. But while housing prices were stable, and only briefly, interest rates rose. And they rose and rose, fully 50 per cent in 10 years. And they were still rising, as of May. Housing prices weren't stable for long either. They too rose and rose, doubling in about 10 years and leaving those who waited holding in their fist a down payment that grew less and less adequate.

Although nobody can say the next 10 years will be a repetition of the past 10, and despite the recent good news, the trend is still upward for both purchase price and financing. What happened in May isn't likely to be repeated.

Price for land, materials and labor are ascending. Many areas are imposing costly building limitations in order to preserve the purity of their water. Operating costs are rising too.

Will there be a technological breakthrough that might lower costs? Attempts so far have yet to prove themselves as permanent or broadly acceptable, and many have failed.

Remember the factory house? It's still being produced and the quality is good. But mass production hasn't really caught on; the industry is still largely one of small stick builders operating locally.

The no-frill house? Promising. But some builders maintain they really can't produce a quality house by stripping away distinctive features and then manage to sell at a profit. Still, it continues to offer limited hope.

Mobile homes? Possibilities. But shipments of these units, which had surged to one-half million units several years ago are now back to one-half that, although rising again. Bears watching.

Cooperatives and condominiums? Many buyers have had very successful ex-

THE INSIDE REPORT

Moynihan In N.Y. Jungle

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK—When this state's Democratic hierarchy refused to endorse Dr. Daniel Patrick Moynihan for the U.S. Senate while acknowledging he is their best if not only chance to win, they proved to be untouched by the lust for victory afflicting Democrats elsewhere this year.

Scattered hissing and heckling that greeted Moynihan when he addressed the state Democratic committee at the Statler-Hilton's grand ballroom reflected deep hostility. Why such rancor and why the endorsement of the candidate surest not to win in November, 67-year-old New York City Council president Paul O'Dwyer? The reasons explain a generation of self-inflicted misery for New York Democrats: disproportionate power by black politicians, small-time city hall intrigue and feverish ideological fratricide.

The only reasons Moynihan may yet be nominated in the Sept. 14 primary are organized labor and the state's best county leader, Joe Crangle of Buffalo.

Because of their backing, Moynihan is asking rank-and-file Democrats, so different in lifestyle from the poisonous infighters at the Statler-Hilton, to cast a rare primary vote.

Actually, there was remarkable consensus even among the infighters: a national hero after his headline performances as United Nations Ambassador, Moynihan can defeat Conservative-Republican Sen. James Buckley in November; the other three Democratic candidates—O'Dwyer, former Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark and Rep. Bell Zabus—are all too far left and too eccentric to win.

But Moynihan faces implacable opposition from black Democratic leaders (led by Manhattan Borough president Percy Sutton), who cannot forgive his 1965 treatise on the black family. Though these black leaders have been unable to turn out black voters, their veto power strikes terror in the New York Democratic hierarchy.

So, borough leaders from New York City turned down Moynihan.

Somewhat surprisingly, so did Gov. Hugh Carey, who was nominated in 1974 by trampling over city leaders. Originally intrigued by Moynihan, Carey yielded to the black veto—echoed within his official family. Left-leaning state youth director Peter Edelman, Robert Kennedy's boy wonder aide a decade ago, threatened to quit if Carey backed Moynihan. When Moynihan (a member of the national platform drafting committee) asked for an audience with the governor to talk about planks affecting New York, he was turned down flat.

Still, the question persists why the choice was O'Dwyer, who lost by 1.1 million votes as Senate nominee in 1968, while Hubert Humphrey swept New York. The answer: looking ahead to the 1977 city election, Democratic leaders—in-

Strength For Today

WORTHY TO PRAY? Sometimes as we pray we have the feeling that surely God will not answer the prayers of anyone as unworthy as ourselves. For our own comfort, however, we should fully appreciate the truth taught in Scripture that God is a Father, and that He understands our weakness and imperfections.

The answer to our prayers depends not upon ourselves but upon God. If we are sincere and repentant we can be sure that in spite of our unworthiness God hears us. It is not that we are which makes miraculous answer to prayer possible, but what God is. God does hate evil, and unrepentant sin is like a barred gate between the petitioner and God. But when we repent, God puts our sins behind us.

His response to our prayer is conditioned not by what we have but what we are now, what we want to be, and what we believe He can do for us. —by Elisha Douglass

Pollution Closes 70 Miles Of Long Island Shores To People

By The Associated Press
"I noticed little sand crabs along the beach and they're all dead," said a woman who went to Jones Beach to see the pollution that has closed 70 miles of Long Island shoreline. Raw garbage, tar and grease, refuse and fecal matter have been fouling the beaches along Long Island's south shore for more than a week. The situation has put the beaches off-limits to thousands of swimmers in the popular summer recreation area and has begun taking its toll of ocean life. Mil-ions of tiny shrimp and crabs have floated ashore. Fire Island, a 30-mile stretch of beaches in Suffolk County, was newly declared safe for swimming on Tuesday, but the beaches remained closed. And officials in neighboring Nassau County ordered all the county's south shore beaches closed. In addition, Suffolk County health officials advised the county to place 20 more miles of beaches toward the outer tip of Long Island out of bounds to swimmers. Surfacing with all the debris were charges Tuesday that New York City and some New Jersey communities were responsible for the pollution and that the federal Environmental Protection Agency was not responding aggressively. "The major source is New York City," Supervisor Al D'Amato of Hempstead, on Long Island, said. He said New York City and the northeastern New Jersey communities were the only places that discharge untreated sewage into the water. The source of the pollution remains a mystery. There has been speculation that it came from a dumping ground for New York City garbage 12 miles offshore, from the Hudson River, from passing ships or from sludge that escaped in a recent sewage tank explosion on the south shore. "We've had many theories as to where the stuff is coming from, but nobody actually is out there looking for the source," said Suffolk County Health Commissioner Mary McLaughlin. She and John Klein, the county executive, have asked the EPA to determine the sources of the pollution "and take effective action." They said the assault on the coastline has become an environmental concern. Health officials in Nassau and Suffolk counties have advised anyone who was in the Long Island ocean waters recently to take advantage of free hepatitis shots.

Says Politics 'Responsible'

SEATTLE (AP) — A great-granddaughter of Theodore Roosevelt has announced wedding plans, and her mother says politics was responsible. Sarah Williams and Washington Secretary of State Bruce Chapman are to be married in August.

"I was born into a political family; politics got Bruce and our family together, so the marriage is a natural," Mrs. Andrew Williams, mother of the bride-to-be, said Tuesday.

Sarah Williams, 28, is a special education teacher who is completing work on a masters degree at Seattle University.

Chapman has been secretary of state since 1975. He has announced plans to seek re-election.

uding Mayor Abraham Beame—wanted to get rid of O'Dwyer, considered a wild man by bankers so crucial to the bankrupt city's future. Consequently, the Senate endorsement was exchanged for O'Dwyer's exit from city hall. The probability Sutton would replace him as council president neatly splices black and city hall politics.

All this had its intended effect on Pay Moynihan, who, like other outsiders, lacked the stomach to brave the New York Democratic jungle. But Crangle, undaunted by the black pressures, persisted. Dining with Moynihan last week, he pressed him to run. When Moynihan expressed horror over the acerbic tongue of Bella Abzug and her reformer allies, Crangle replied: that is why you must run—defeat that kind of politics.

The decisive factor was organized labor. AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer Lane Kirkland and COPE (Committee on Political Education) director Al Barkan had been pleading for Moynihan as a domestic liberal candidate with hard-line foreign policy views. But would they really help? At Crangle's suggestion, Moynihan telephoned Barkan and got this promise: $100,000 for the primary.

What Moynihan can expect all summer has become obvious since his June 10 announcement. When Moynihan was named co-chairman of the platform committee's foreign policy task force, Mrs. Abzug erupted with threats not only to ruin platform committee harmony but also to torpedo the presidential campaign in New York. Moynihan withdrew as co-chairman.

At the Stalter-Hilton, the strategy of Mrs. Abzug—Moynihan's strongest primary opponent—was unveiled: concentration on Moynihan's service in Republican administrations. An Abzug flyer, featuring a photo of Moynihan with Richard Nixon, asks: "What kind of Democrat do you want for your Senator?" Doug Ireland, Mrs. Abzug's campaign manager, referred to Moynihan as "Tokyo Rose for Nixon and Ford."

Brandishing the Abzug flyer, Crangle reminded the state committee that Moynihan supported the 1968 Humphrey-Muskie ticket while many who now question his Democratic credentials defected that year. What Crangle did not say is that O'Dwyer himself, though the Senate candidate, refused to endorse the national ticket until two days before the election.

Typically, that meeting ended with O'Dwyer incensed that he had not been endorsed until the third ballot, blaming Moynihan and Crangle for manipulating that delay. With much more of this nonsense confronting the effervescent Moynihan, patience, self-discipline and perseverance—qualities he sometimes lacks—will be necessary for his nomination. On that may rest the best Democratic chance to end the 24-year succession (except for the brief Kennedy interlude) of Republican Senators from New York.

There has been criticism of the slot arcades on grounds such facilities train children to become gamblers. There has also been criticism because some parents let their children hang around near casino entrances while they gamble inside.

periences, but many people still resist them as a substitute for conventional housing. And in some the prices and maintenance costs are high. Cluster housing? In this technique the individual lots are reduced in size in order to provide more common green spaces. Some have been successful, but for the most part they haven't substantially lowered costs.

The fact remains that most Americans like what is called conventional housing, and there is at the moment rather little long-range hope of any meaningful lowering of prices while quality is maintained.

like you to meet my secretary. She can type four words a minute."

"Sir, do you think the fact you weren't mentioned in Miss Ray's book could hurt your career?"

"Well, let's say it can't help it. That book is a 'Who's Who of Washington.' You're not anybody if Miss Ray didn't meet you. This town pays attention to things like that. I haven't had one call from a newspaperman or woman since my name was left out. I don't mind telling you it hurts."

"Perhaps she disguised your name because you were one of the people in the book she had an affair with," I said, trying to cheer him up.

He shook his head sadly. "No, I read about every person she gave a phony name to, and none of them fitted me. I might as well learn to live with it. I never met Miss Ray and she never met me. I think the public will have to accept the fact and decide for themselves if they still want me to serve the people."

There were tears in his eyes. "Everyone makes mistakes, sir," I said gently. "It's a rotten deal that you never met Miss Ray, but in a few months people will forget it."

"What a fool I was," he sobbed. "If I had known she was going to tell all I could have had my Redskin seats changed to her end of the football field."

No Walkabout For Elizabeth II On Her U.S. Visit

By ROBERT MUSEL
UPI Senior Editor
LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth proves that even the woman who has everything can't have everything.

She was looking forward to her Bicentennial trip to the United States in July not only because she wants to help celebrate the 200th anniversary of American Independence but because this time she felt she would be able to walk among the people.

The "walkabout" is a custom the Queen and her husband, Prince Philip, have initiated in recent years in a number of Commonwealth countries and both she and her subjects have been happy with the closer contact.

The American invitation added an opportunity to mix in the same way with the people who might have been her subjects if King George III had kept his cool in 1776.

Scotland Yard, which is charged with her domestic safety — usually taken care of by a single armed bodyguard — was not happy about the idea but in the last analysis agreed it was the responsibility of the U.S. government and the cities she would visit — Washington, Philadelphia, Boston and New York.

But the word that drifted back to royal circles from security conferences in the United States was that officials feel a walkabout would present too many dangers.

Everyone agreed the vast majority of Americans would welcome the novel touch of informality. But one official put his finger on the problem:

"We have too many kooks in this country," he said.

So from the time the Queen and her husband step ashore July 6 at Penn's Landing near Philadelphia — where William Penn landed — they will be under the same tight security that would apply to any head of state.

One factor in the decision was the violence in Northern Ireland which the British believe is largely financed by pro-Irish sources in America.

The Queen and Prince Philip are flying in a subsonic plane the weekend of July 3 to Bermuda, where they will board the royal yacht Britannia for the rest of their visit.

The Queen was under a great deal of pressure to fly in Concorde and give that super-sonic newcomer a commercial boost.

Royal circles say the Queen was willing, as she always is, to try something new, but her advisers felt it would be more in accord with the historical significance of her journey to land in the footsteps of the British founder of Pennsylvania who also arrived by sea.

These sources confidently expect the Queen to use Concorde on another long distance occasion — probably to Australia next year.

French President Giscard d'Estaing's example in flying to the U.S. on the French Concorde is not considered pertinent. The French president does not have a yacht.

The state visit of the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh officially begins the morning of July 5 when the royal couple disembark from the Britannia in Philadelphia for a crowded 12 hours.

The Queen will receive a commemorative medallion and lithographs at City Hall, they will tour the Liberty Bell pavilion and the observation deck of the Penn Mutual Building and the Queen will host a luncheon aboard the Britannia.

The main event of the day will be in mid-afternoon when the Queen presents a Bicentennial Bell, the gift of the British people to the American People, at the National Park Center Bell Tower.

There will be an afternoon tea for the governors of many states and their wives on the royal yacht and an early evening reception at which the Duke of Edinburgh, a talented amateur painter, will host American members of the Royal Society of Arts.

The Philadelphia story ends with a banquet and reception given by the city at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

The next morning the Queen and Prince Philip fly to Washington where they will receive full military honors on their arrival at the White House and President Ford and Her Majesty will both make speeches. There will be lunch at the White House, a wreath-laying at Arlington National Cemetery, a visit to the Lincoln Memorial and a reception at the British Embassy.

There will be more speeches at a state dinner at the White House stressing that out of the family quarrel of 200 years ago has arisen a historic friendship and alliance.

After spending the night at Blair House the Queen will meet heads of the missions of Commonwealth countries, attend a dedication service for the nave of Washington Cathedral and then receive foreign diplomats at the British Embassy.

She and her husband will be guests at a luncheon in the Capitol given by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and Speaker of the House Carl Albert.

In the afternoon she will visit the rotunda of the Capitol to see one of Britain's most precious documents, an original of the Magna Charta of 1215 loaned for the Bicentennial; the exhibition of London treasures at the Smithsonian Castle and the "Eye of Jefferson" exhibit at the National Gallery. She will receive the key to the District of Columbia from the mayor.

Meanwhile the duke will attend a performance of the Scottish Military Tattoo.

Later the royal couple will give a banquet and reception at the British Embassy.

The next morning, July 8, they will fly to Newark, N.J. and proceed by car to pick up the Britannia, which will land them at the Battery at the foot of Manhattan in New York City.

British-born Mayor Abe Beame will proclaim the Queen an honorary citizen of New York in a ceremony at Federal Hall and the royal couple will be luncheon guests of the Pilgrims of the United States and the English-Speaking Union.

They will visit one of New York's oldest buildings, the Jumel Mansion in Harlem, and attend a reception given by the British Societies in New York at Lincoln Center.

After a dinner on board Britannia they will sail to New Haven, Conn. from where they will fly to Charlottesville, Va.

There will be a ceremony at Cabell House in which the Queen will grant the Commonwealth of Virginia the arms used by the Virginia Company of London and later by the Royal Colony and Dominion of Virginia. The royal party will see the Virginia Bicentennial Center and Thomas Jefferson's home, Monticello.

Later they will fly to Providence, R. I., and drive through Newport where they will unveil a commemorative plaque.

They then sail the Britannia to Boston, the last American stop before Canada where the Queen is scheduled to open the Montreal Olympics later in the month.

They will disembark at the Coast Guard Base in Boston Harbor the morning of Sunday, July 11, and attend morning services at the Old North Church of Revolutionary War fame.

They will tour the Old State House and attend a lunch given by the mayor. Later they will review the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and other units at historic Faneuil Hall and board the oldest warship of the American navy, the Constitution.

The American tour will end that night with a reception on the Britannia and the royal party will sail for Halifax, Nova Scotia.

BLIND DELEGATE—Peggy Pinder, 23, is believed to be the only blind delegate to the Republican national convention. A magna cum laude graduate of Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Miss Pinder will attend Yale University law school this fall. She's a Ford delegate, and the President also attended Yale. A Supplement Of Corrections

By MICHAEL R. FRANCO
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — The Rochester Telephone Corporation's 1976 telephone directory is 99.72 per cent accurate.

Now the upstate utility is trying to help the remaining 0.28 per cent of its customers who were not so fortunate.

Rochester Telephone (RTC) has mailed out a phone book supplement, correcting the 840 mistakes in this year's regular directory. The supplement fixes wrong names, numbers and addresses. It adds listings which were inadvertently omitted.

"We aren't aware of any other phone company that has taken this step," said David Caples, RTC directory marketing manager.

The 7-by-14 inch supplement was sent out with phone bills. It has an adhesive strip for attachment to the inside cover of the regular, 768-page phone directory.

"We hope you'll refer to it whenever you're in doubt about a listing in your phone directory, whether it's a regular listing in the white or yellow pages," the supplement says. "Just a quick glance can save you time."

The 840 errors or omissions in a phone book of about 370,000 listings doesn't seem like much.

But Caples said that 0.28 per cent error rate "is more than RTC usually has" because of a new computerized offset printing process.

Most customers check their own listing in the directory when it is first delivered to their homes or business, and contact RTC if there is a mistake.

"We get right to work on it, and errors or omissions usually are corrected in the operators' master lists within 24 hours. In some cases, we assign operators to intercept wrong numbers and redirect them."

One of this year's "victims," the suburban Fairport U.S. Naval recruiter, accepted the inconvenience gracefully. "I don't think we were affected very much by the wrong phone number," he said. "The phone company was very good about fixing their records quickly, and now maybe the supplement will save people from dialing the wrong number."

The emergency phone number for the Fairport Village Fire Department also was listed incorrectly.

"We had an emergency situation for a few hours after the book came out here because no one could reach us by dialing that new listing," said Fire Chief Gary Dozier.

District Of Columbia's Accounting Found A 'Mess'

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The District of Columbia may be heading into dire financial straits, but it's impossible to tell because the capital city's accounting is such a mess. Congress is being asked this week to spend $20 million for an accurate fiscal profile of the District.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, chairman of the Senate District Committee, says the funds would help correct deficiencies in city bookkeeping practices. A nine-volume audit of the city's finances found much to correct. The accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. said a comprehensive audit is impossible because city records are in such disarray. The firm said it could not even tell if the city is running a debt or a surplus.

Eagleton, a Democrat from Missouri, said $20 million would pay to put the bookkeeping in adequate shape to gauge the District's financial condition.

"I don't think Washington is on the imminent brink of financial catastrophe, but if we don't take the necessary corrective actions, the city might be in five years," Eagleton said.

The Andersen report said the District is losing millions of dollars each year through inaccurate records and unsound fiscal practices. Here again, said Andersen, it was impossible to say how much money the District actually was losing in federal aid and revenue collections.

The Andersen report noted the city's financial records contained "many inaccurate numbers and ... major omissions of financial data." Blame for the muddled bookkeeping was placed equally among Congress, the executive branch and the District government.

The report said D.C. had $1.7 billion in unfunded liabilities in its pension program, and more than $100 million in delinquent accounts in its hospital billing systems. Two out of every three payments the city made to public assistance recipients were in error, the report said.

The city has exercised little control over its federal grants, overspending some while underspending others, the audit said. And the report said that because of lax record-keeping it is impossible for the city to determine whether 120,000 water and sewer customers are being properly billed or which bills have been collected.

The Andersen report, released last weekend, was ordered earlier this year after Eagleton noticed "some very disturbing similarities" between Washington's financial plight and that of New York City's.

Washington's problems aren't of the same colossal magnitude as New York's, but its books and records are in the same atrocious shape, it has been operating at a deficit, its unfunded pension liabilities are more than $1 billion and, like

New York, it supports an enormous payroll," said Eagleton.

Part of the problem is the sloppy job Congress did in managing the district's affairs prior to 1974, Eagleton said.

D.C. Mayor Walter Washington said the findings will lay the groundwork to improve the city's credit rating and reduce its bond costs.

To Ask For More Funds

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina's private colleges will ask the legislature for more state aid says Dr. Cameron West, president of the North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

He said Tuesday he was heartened by the U.S. Supreme Court decision the day before which supported direct state aid to church-related colleges. He said financial support to private colleges should be increased to a level more closely related to costs.

Dr. West made his comment following a talk to a Charlotte civic club. He would not comment on whether the Supreme Court decision would lead the state's private colleges, some church-affiliated, to seek direct state aid rather than increased tuition grants.

During the 1975-1976 academic year, North Carolina distributed nearly $8.4 million in tuition grants to residents enrolled in the state's private colleges. A $200 grant goes directly to each student enrolled full-time in a private school. Another $200 per full-time student is put in a pool and distributed to colleges according to need.

The annual cost to taxpayers for education in the state's public universities is $2,100 a student. West said, "Obviously, some figure between $400 and $2,100 is needed to develop a balance."

He said private schools in the state could admit 6,000 more students if the money was available, while public campuses have closed their doors to

Shirley Talks Protocol Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shirley Temple Black says she's looking forward to "shaking up anything I see that needs shaking up" in the area of White House protocol.

Mrs. Black, 48, testified Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is considering her nomination to be White House protocol chief. There's little doubt she'll be confirmed.

Accept Bids

FARMVILLE—In a special meeting the Farmville Commissioners have accepted low bids on the construction of the new waste treatment facility for the town, subject to the approval of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the N.C. Division of Environmental Management, and the Farmers Home Administration.

According to Town Administrator W.A. Martin, the bids were as follows: Section I—Crain and Dembo, $4,238,852; Section II—Kinston Plumbing and Heating Company, Inc., $18,517; Section III—Kinston Plumbing and Heating Company Inc., $44,158; Section IV—Electricon Inc., $335,000; Section V—E&R Inc., $302,985; and Section VI—Charles F. Smith & Son, Inc., $1,217,983.

If all goes well, work may be underway before the end of the summer, Martin said.

Communists Celebrate Rome Election Victory

PATIENTLY WAIT— Hundreds of supporters, long lines of them sitting on the sidewalk, wait outside the Italian Communist Party headquarters in Rome for final returns of elections for city government of Rome. The Communists emerged as the largest party in Rome municipal elections that might give the City of Popes a Marxist mayor. (AP Wirephoto)

BY EDWARD MAGRI
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — "Rome is red and Italy will be," thousands of Communists chanted Tuesday night as they celebrated their victory in Rome's municipal elections.

Tens of thousands marched from the party headquarters to the city hall a block away on the Capitoline Hill. Holding hands, they danced around the square Michelangelo designed. Some climbed up on the equestrian statue of Emperor Marcus Aurelius to decorate it with hammer-and-sickle stickers and red flags.

Elections for a new city council in the center of Roman Catholicism and in about 100 other municipalities were held Sunday and Monday along with the national parliamentary elections. The Christian Democrats came in first nationally despite strong Communist gains, but in Rome the Communists won 30 of the municipal council's 80 seats to 27 for the Christian Democrats.

The vote was 676,618 or 35.5 per cent for the Communists, 630,776 or 33.1 per cent for the Christian Democrats, and more than 600,000 for seven other parties. The Christian Democrats were the largest party in 1971 with 28 per cent.

No party has won a majority in Rome since World War II, but the Christian Democrats have always led the voting and controlled the city government by forming coalitions with other non-Communist parties. The Communists said now they would try to form the coalition and take over, as they already have in Turin, Milan, Venice, Genoa, Bologna, Florence and Naples — every other major city on the Italian mainland.

The Roman vote was another pointed rebuff to Pope Paul VI, for the Pope is the Bishop of Rome, and local parish priests and Catholic groups were mobilized to try to contain the Communist advance.

But with less than a third of the city going to Sunday mass regularly, fewer and fewer voters respond to papal appeals. Instead they listened to the Communists' promise to bring to Italy's capital the social-minded, efficient administration that has made Bologna, northern Italy's Communist showpiece for 30 years, a widely acclaimed model city.

No Penalty In Collision

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A young lieutenant found negligent in the collision of two Navy ships has been released without penalty after the military judge and his skipper praised him as too good an officer for the Navy to lose.

But the defendant, Lt. (j.g.) Kenneth M. Knull, said Tuesday after hearing the guilty verdict at his general court-martial that he plans to resign his commission.

Knull, 26, was officer of the deck when the guided missile cruiser Belknap struck the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy during night flight operations last Nov. 22 off the Italian coast.

Eight men died, 48 were injured and damage to the two vessels exceeded $100 million.

The Belknap's skipper, Capt. Walter R. Shafer, who was below deck watching a movie until just before the collision, was acquitted of negligence last month.

Knull could have received a maximum sentence of dismissal from the service, forfeiture of pay and three years in prison.

Capt. F.L. Salomon II, the Navy judge, said he decided to dispense with a penalty because the Navy "can ill afford the loss of officers of your caliber."

During the seven-day court-martial, Knull was praised by superiors and subordinates as a fine officer and Shafer, testifying as a character witness during the sentencing phase of the proceeding, recommended him for promotion.

"He was an outstanding officer in every way, and he still is," Shafer said, describing the young officer's "heroic efforts" in fighting fires and rescuing men after the collision.

Knull's lawyers said the accident was not his fault and cited illegal and confusing lighting aboard the Kennedy, an incompetent bridge watch and inadequate supervision by Shafer.

more studies are made. Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the U.S. Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, said vaccination of the young should begin by late fall or early winter following studies of what type of vaccine at what doses should be used.

The bodies recommending a go-ahead with the adult part of the program were the Advisory Committee on Influenza Protection to the CDC, and the Panel on Viral and Rickettsial Diseases of the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Biologics. Both committees' recommendations will go to Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Cooper can order implementation of the vaccination program after it is set up.

In their deliberations, the committees considered results released Monday of the first human trials of swine flu vaccines.

Those studies with more than 5,000 persons concluded that the vaccines appeared safe and effective in adults. However, they showed side effects in children were higher than expected with the most effective vaccines.

While these side effects — including mild fever, general malaise and headache — were no more severe than with other flu vaccines and showed in only a small percentage of children, researchers said a mass-immunization program would leave too many youngsters affected.

Further tests with children will be completed in August, the committees said, and then a program for younger Americans can be put together.

An A-strain of influenza virus — dubbed swine flu — surfaced at Ft. Dix, N.J., last winter and scientists say it could recur in the general population in future flu seasons. This flu is similar to one that in 1918 killed 20 millions persons throughout the world.

Naturalization Dreams Delayed

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A bureaucratic delay means that 102 Fayetteville-area residents who have fulfilled the requirements for naturalization probably won't be able to become U.S. citizens until after the July 4th Bicentennial.

Their naturalization applications, some nearly eight years old, sit in the vault of the clerk of court's office in Fayetteville. The papers need only a signature showing the applicants have taken an oath before a federal judge.

But because of the delay, a court date in September has been set for the oath-taking.

Last year, federal officials in Washington shifted responsibility for North Carolina citizenship applications from Norfolk, Va., to Atlanta. The official said the Norfolk office had enough to do. But the shift gave two persons in the Atlanta office responsibility not only for North Carolina but for four other states.

A reporter for the Fayetteville Times uncovered some apparent confusion over who sets the court dates for naturalization.

The deputy director of the Atlanta office put the responsibility for asking for a court date on the clerk of U.S. District Court.

Maps Plans For To Open HQ Fourth Wedding In Winterville

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A spokesman for Frank Sinatra says the singer has completed plans for his fourth wedding.

Sinatra will marry longtime companion Barbara Marx on Oct. 10 at the Beverly Hills home of actor Kirk Douglas, Lee Solters said Tuesday.

Sinatra was previously married to Nancy Barbato, Ava Gardner and Mia Farrow. The marriage will be the second for Mrs. Marx, the former wife of Zeppo Marx.

Freeman Gosden, the original "Amos" of the "Amos and Andy" radio show will be Sinatra's best man, Solters said.

Irma Worthington, Eighth District Democratic candidate for the N. C. House of Representatives, will open her official campaign headquarters in Winterville Saturday, June 26 at 11 a.m.

The headquarters are located at the Woodruff Gallery on Railroad Street in Winterville. Mayors and city and county officials from Pitt and Greene counties are expected to attend the headquarters opening ceremonies.

Mrs. Worthington, a native of Pitt County, is a retired teacher. She formally announced her candidacy May 18.

Painters Attack U.S. Tax Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of the country's highest-priced painters have called for a change in tax laws to make it easier for artists to donate works to museums.

Robert Rauschenberg and James Rosenquist came from New York City to push an amendment now being debated in the Senate.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., who presided at a news conference, said his amendment is also supported by the artists Jamie Wyeth, George Segal, Robert Motherwell, Andy Warhol and Andrew Wyeth.

Javits said under current law an artist may deduct only the cost of his materials when he donates a work of art. He said that has meant "a tragic loss of cultural enrichment to the general public."

Energy Problems Dramatized By Game

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — With just a flick of the switch, you too can form your own oil cartel, monopolize the world's supply or build your own nuclear reactor.

It's done with Dr. Bryan Valett's Energy-Environment Simulator, an analog computer that allows anyone the chance to control production and use of all energy sources.

"They can do most anything they choose," says Valett. "We had one group one time declare war and in about 20 years all the resources were gone because everyone had tooled up for war."

Since the simulators cost around $2,200 apiece, Valett doesn't expect them to become a 21st-century version of the "Monopoly" game, but in the past eight months some 32,000 persons have taken part in Valett's program to dramatize energy shortages. He expects the total to reach 60,000 by the end of this year after another 40 simulators are built.

"It's a generator of discussions," says Valett. "Many people are suspicious whether an energy problem truly exists. And many who believe it complain. Then why doesn't somebody do something about it?"

Valett is director of the Northwest College and University Association for Science (NORCUS), formed in 1963 at the Joint Center for Graduate Study to bring college faculty members to the nuclear energy facilities at Hanford for research projects.

The federal Energy Research and Development Administration has granted $125,000 to NORCUS to train personnel and to provide schools and organizations throughout the 22 western states with the simulator program.

"The program is a participation program by the audience. They actually get on to the machine," said Valett. The audience is divided into six groups, each having a control panel hooked up to the computer.

"Each unit controls one-sixth of the world's energy supply," he said. "The decisions they make affect what happens to each group. They must live with the decision they make."

"If they choose to produce more oil, or mine more coal, they have to discuss the consequences. There is a section on resource and development that allows them to develop new technology. But if they turn that button up they have to wait 10 years for any reserve to come out of the technology section because it takes about that long."

When Valett and design engineer Don Frame first tried to put together some kind of program to increase public awareness, they built a Rube Goldberg kind of hydraulic device using buckets of coal.

As the coal dropped into smaller and smaller containers it would demonstrate the in-efficiencies in the system.

"It was dramatic all right — but messy," says NORCUS associate director Dr. John Yegge. They then decided an electronic model would be more flexible — "and there wouldn't be anything to mop up afterward."

The first simulator — with complex dials, flashing lights and warning buzzers — took 17 days and $5,000 to build. The one in use now, with lap control boards to hand out to the audience, was designed by Dr. John Amend of Montana State University.

Valett has the parts manufactured elsewhere and the simulators are put together in workshops where the people who will present the programs are trained.

ENERGY 'MONOPOLY'—With a flick of the switch Dr. Bryan Valett, left, develops 12 new oil wells with his Energy Environment Simulator. Valett and Dr. John Yegge, right, both associated with the Northwest College and University Association for Science, use the analog computer to give students and "the man on the street" a chance to learn about energy shortages and use.

Someday, Precision In Earthquake Prediction

By BARRY J. SHLACHTER

Associated Press Writer
HAKONE, Japan (AP) — Earthquake predictions soon will be as precise as forecasting a shower in the rainy season, an organization of amateur seismologists here claims.

Using wells and homemade equipment, members of the Namazu No Kai, or Catfish Club, have predicted accurately two moderately strong tremors in the Tokyo-Yokohama region May 13 and June 6.

The quakes, which registered 4.4 and 3 on the Japanese scale of 7, were forecast two days in advance by carefully gauging the water level in numerous observation wells, said Yasue Oki, 43, founder and president of the 106-member group.

Oki said in an interview that well water has been observed to rise three quarters of an inch to an inch two days before a tremor, then another inch or so the following day. "The water table begins dropping several hours before the main shock," he said.

"Catfish Club members have experienced the same pattern in 20 cases, so we believe we can apply this technique to correctly predict earthquakes — just like weathermen forecasting the weather," he said.

A similar method developed in China gave them encouragement but little practical help because the Chinese reports lacked diagrams of water tables, he said.

Chinese seismologists recently claimed to have predicted several major quakes by changes in water level and in the particular behavior of animals prior to an earthquake.

His approach to forecasting quakes has brought some criticism from established seismological research institutes, but mainly the group has received encouragement, Oki said.

Launched in April, the club already has members in seven prefectures surrounding Tokyo. Oki said he hopes to have chapters nationwide by January.

Oki said the group took its name from the legendary catfish which reside under the earth and create tremors when angry. "The Japanese people believed this for thousands of years," he added.

Earthquakes are a major concern in Japan, where 142,802 persons perished in the 1923 quake which destroyed much of Tokyo and Yokohama. The government supports some earthquake research, but so far no money has gone to the Catfish Club, complained Oki.

"But it costs nothing to join," he added, "and our philosophy is very good while our equipment very poor."

Oki, a scientist who heads the Kanagawa prefectural Hot Springs Research Institute at Hakone, 70 miles southwest of Tokyo, and fellow workers conceived the well water technique after examining changes in hot springs before and during quakes.

Oki says that while established Japanese research centers utilize costly seismographs and tilt meters, the Catfish Club relies on the ordinary well and a homemade water gauge — "very cheap, but very sensitive" — to predict tremors. The gauges cost about $3, he said.

A New Look At Society

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — Four New York University professors will teach week-long seminars on cultural survival here this summer. The courses will attempt to answer the questions: "What is happening? Why? How can I survive?"

The New York University at Sun Valley program, run in cooperation with the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, includes "Cultural Change and Disorder," Aug. 9 to 13, and "Strategies for Survival," Aug. 16 to 20.

According to the workshop leaders, the courses center on the individual's relationship with a changing society, including such "system breaks" as women's lib, the sexual revolution, the scientific revolution, black liberation and the technological revolution.

Faculty members are Neil Postman, professor of media ecology and author of "Language in America" and "Crazy Talk, Stupid Talk"; Herbert London, professor of social studies and author of "The Overheated Decade: Gulf of Tonkin to Watergate"; Robert Gurland, chairman of the philosophy department and 1973 winner of NYU's Great Teacher award; and Sabert Basescu, adjunct professor of psychology in NYU's clinical psychology department and author of "Anxieties of the analyst."

PAPER INDUSTRY
NEW YORK (AP) — Paper was first made in America at a Philadelphia mill in 1690.

Today, the paper business is one of the 10 largest industries in America with 1975 sales exceeding $30 billion. Total world demand for paper, according to Robert S. Hatfield, chairman and chief executive officer of The Continental Group, Inc., has increased at an annual rate of almost 6 percent since 1954 and is now at 130 million tons a year.

'Smuggling' Drugs Into Body Cells

By Robert W. Atcher
CHICAGO (AP) — Biologists at Argonne National Laboratory near here are engaged in drug "smuggling."

Dr. Yeh-Erh Rahman and her co-workers don't operate over international borders, though. They are smuggling useful drugs into cells in the body.

If their successful work with mice continues, clinical tests with humans may begin in a few years, Dr. Rahman said.

The studies involve drugs used for treating cancer and poisoning by heavy metals, such as lead, mercury and plutonium. The drugs are encapsulated or placed inside liposomes — the smuggling agents. Liposomes are small spheres of fatty lipids or material similar to the lipids in cell walls.

"The liposome is not a foreign material to the body," Dr. Rahman said. "It is absorbed like normal cell material and digested."

Once the liposome is digested, the drug inside is released. In some cases, just such a smuggling operation is needed to deliver the drug effectively.

In cases of heavy metal poisoning, drugs called chelating agents are used to remove metals from the body. But, chelating agents can't cross cell walls.

The drugs can only remove the metal atoms found outside cells. Since the drugs aren't absorbed, they are quickly removed by the kidneys and excreted. This calls for frequent administration of the drugs. Eventually, the treatment may have to be stopped because the drugs may damage the kidneys.

In lead poisoning, the object is to remove metal before it can do any damage, Dr. Rahman said.

"Very little lead goes to the brain, but it does the most damage there. Brain cells can't renew themselves, so even if a little damage is done, the consequences are serious," she said.

By reducing the amount of lead in the entire body, the danger to the brain is reduced.

If the chelating agents are encapsulated in the liposomes, they can remove a greater fraction of the metal in the body because they get inside the cell.

In some cases, the liposomes-encapsulated drugs removed metals from organs unaffected by the non-encapsulated drugs.

The chelating agents are retained by the cells longer, according to studies the group has completed, contributing to the increased effectiveness of the encapsulated drugs.

In another advantage, the liposomes can be made with characteristics that are attractive to cells in certain organs. The drugs, once encapsulated, can be targeted to reach certain organs.

This targeting trait led to the group's work in drugs for cancer chemotherapy. Chemotherapy is most effective against young, rapidly growing tumors. The antitumor agents are absorbed and kill the tumor cells.

But, the antitumor drugs also kill normal cells. And, unlike the chelating agents, the antitumor drugs are destroyed by the body.

Actinomycin D, a powerful antibiotic, is used alone or with other drugs to treat Wilms' tumor (a form of kidney tumor in children), cancer of the testis and uterus, and cancer spread to the lungs.

The research team successfully encapsulated Actinomycin D to treat mice. By encapsulation, the drug is protected from destruction and can be sent to the organ where it is needed.

In the mice study, normally toxic doses of the antibiotic in liposomes were given in multiple treatments. The mice lived about twice as long as untreated mice.

Since many tumor cells have a high capacity for absorbing particles like the liposomes, drug delivery is facilitated.

The group will continue to investigate using other drugs in the liposomes.

"Ultimately, our goal is to direct a drug to the organ where you want it," Dr. Rahman said.

The greater retention and the ability to target the drug would allow lower doses to be prescribed for patients, thereby maximizing the benefits and minimizing possible side effects.

The Studebaker brothers arrived in South Bend, Ind., in 1852 to build farm wagons and prairie schooners and later formed a company to build automobiles.

Windmills Designed For Energy

By JAMES J. DOYLE
BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — The age-old windmill, but bigger and more efficient, may be the next development in the search for energy.

Two engineers of the Lockheed-California Corp., conducted a year-long study for the Energy Research and Development Administration and concluded that the building and maintenance of giant windmills will be a major new industry.

Within 20 years, Michael Dubey and Ugo Coty said, thousands of windmills placed around the country could generate enough electricity in the United States to save the equivalent of more than 2 billion barrels of oil a year.

But the windmills they have in mind are not the creaking, picturesque types that gave Holland a trademark.

In their paper, "The High Potential of Wind Energy," they discuss large wind turbine generators with rotors up to 350 feet in diameter, roughly the length of a football field with the end zones added.

The rotors look like long airplane propellers. They would probably be made of aluminum and steel and composite materials including glass-reinforced plastic, Dubey said.

Forecasts of energy demand in the United States show a continuously rising trend, Dubey and Coty said in their paper. They cited predictions that by 1995 electrical energy produced and sold by the utilities will reach 6.5 trillion kilowatt hours per year, three times the current amount needed.

"We are presently importing about 40 per cent of our oil needs and selling our heritage at an alarming rate to get it," they said.

Dubey said he sees no paradox in the return to windmills for energy.

During the past 50 years, he said, wind energy has been used to make electricity but the low cost of fossil fuel prevented any serious expansion. Now the cost of fossil fuels is rising, and at the same time there have been advances in materials and design technologies for wind turbines.

"Man has been an energy consumer since he built the first fire to roast a mastodon steak," he said. "At one time he relied on wind. There are reports of windmills as early as the 6th and 7th Centuries."

The objectives of the study were to identify areas where high wind conditions are prevalent and the applications of wind energy.

"The answers show that large wind energy conversion systems pay off economically, and that a major new industry is about to blossom in our midst," Dubey and Coty wrote.

In the study, wind data were gathered from more than 700 observation stations across the country. Annual wind power densities were found as high as 619 watts per square meter in some areas along the Oregon coastline and higher at Sandberg, Calif. The measurements were equivalent to a wind speed of 18 miles per hour.

But if only two per cent of the area studied had winds of 15.7 miles per hour, then 20,000 square miles would be available for wind turbines, they said.

The turbine chosen as a model for their study was the two-bladed rotor on a horizontal axis. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is testing a 125-foot diameter windmill at Sandusky, Ohio.

Prior to World War II, they said, a larger turbine, 1,250 kilowatts and 175 feet in diameter, was used to deliver energy into the utility power lines in Vermont.

They found that utilities would be the largest users with windmills as a supplement to other generating equipment, but nuclear and fossil fuel plants would remain the basic generating sources in the United States.

Dividing the country into nine regions they calculated the cost of energy for each region. In some areas, they said, wind energy would be cheaper now than fossil fuel energy.

ON THE ROCKS
LEASBURG, Mo. (AP) — There are blackboards against formations at Onondaga Cave here on which tourists may write graffiti. Chalk is provided by the management.

"They take pictures of what they write for souvenirs," says Robert Hudson, manager.

Among the things written have been: "My Car's Cooking with Gas — Six Miles To A Gallon," and "Why Can't More Political Speeches Be Inaudible."

Calm After 'Uprising'

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's black upheaval appeared today to have ended. Police reported no violence during the night and calm prevailing today in all the black townships around Pretoria and Johannesburg where there were disturbances Tuesday.

Brig. P.N. Van Zyl said published reports that six persons were killed Tuesday in the Pretoria township of Mamelodi were "without foundation."

The uprising started last Wednesday in the black township of Soweto, south of Johannesburg. The official toll is 140 dead and 1,128 injured, and all but two of the dead and 11 of the injured were black.

A breakdown of the casualties resulting from police gunfire and those killed or wounded by the mobs is still being compiled, police said.

The commissioner of police, Gen. Gert Prinsloo, claimed in an interview that his men used the minimum of force necessary to put down the riots.

Red Cross Class Begins Tonight

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt Red Cross, reminded persons holding current first aid and personal safety certificates that a first aid instructor course will begin tonight at 7 p.m. at Minges Coliseum.

The 15-hour course will be taught by Miss Nell Stallings, water safety representative of the Pitt chapter.

$2 Million Ayden Budget Adopted

AYDEN—The Ayden Town Board adopted its own town budget totaling $2,017,357 Monday night after a public hearing was held to discuss the budget.

The new budget is an estimated $117,000 increase over last year's budget, according to Town Manager Don Russell.

"The increase is primarily in the General Fund with increased sewer rates and capital expenditures," Russell explained.

The new sewer rates recently adopted by the board are $1.19 per 1,000 gallons which accounts for an estimated increase in the General Fund totaling $79,000. Capital expenditures will include additional equipment for the Street Department and the Sanitation Department. A new garbage truck totaling $30,000 will be purchased for the Sanitation Department and additional maintenance materials will be purchased for the Street Department. An estimated $70,000 of revenue sharing funds and $27,000 of General Fund monies will be used for street improvement including paving and curb and gutter projects.

The budget allows for a tax rate of 73 cents per $100 value. This is the same tax rate that was set by the Town of Ayden last year.

"Community Development Funds totaling $300,000 will be amended to the budget if the grant funds are approved," Russell said.

4 Collisions Here Tuesday

Four collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police resulted in an estimated $2,600 property damage, officers reported.

Investigators said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:35 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 85 feet West of the Red Banks Road intersection involving cars driven by Jacqueline Hawkins of 1708 South Greene St. and Elsie Bowen Boyd of Route 2, Pinetown.

Damage was estimated at $800 to the Hawkins car and $400 to the Boyd auto.

Police charged Miss Hawkins with violating a drivers license restriction and charged Mrs. Boyd with failing to yield the right of way.

No charges were made following investigation of a 3:30 p.m. mishap involving cars driven by Pauline Louise Cox of Ayden and Rebecca Sumrell Cain of Kinston.

Police, who said the mishap occurred on Evans Street, 140 feet North of the 16th Street intersection, estimated damage at $300 to the Cox vehicle and $275 to the Cain auto.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 10:40 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Forbes Streets involving cars driven by Gilbert Wheeler of Elm city and Patricia Jean Spitzer of Route 1, Winterville.

Wheeler was charged by investigators with failing to stop for a stop sign.

No charges were reported following investigation of an 8:23 p.m. collision on Meade Street, 85 feet South of the Third Street intersection.

Officers reported vehicles driven by James Weston Hodges of 304 South Meade St. and Jack Russell Bryant of 215 South Meade St. collided, causing $300 damage to the Hodges car and $125 damage to the Bryant truck.

Portrait Of Recipients

RALEIGH (AP) — The average North Carolina welfare family has a mother and two children. They live in a cheap, rented dwelling in a city. The mother has little education and no job.

Those are among the major conclusions of a state Department of Human Resources survey of welfare recipients in May, 1975. It was released today.

The study showed that the most frequent reason for families going on welfare was the failure of the father to support his children. The study found that 89.9 per cent of the fathers were absent from the home.

Of that group, 52 per cent were not married to the mothers; 23.5 per cent were separated or had deserted their homes; 10.4 per cent were divorced; 4.1 per cent had other reasons.

The data on the welfare recipients themselves showed that 70.4 per cent lived in urban areas; 72.7 per cent were black; the average family had two children; and they lived in private rented housing that cost them a total of $61.18 per month.

Most of the welfare mothers did not work; the study found 85.9 per cent unemployed. Only 25 per cent of them had graduated from high school.

The tadpoles that hatch out of frogs' eggs live in water less than a year.

Laura Brody Takes Tourney

Laura Brody fired a 79 to take a two-stroke victory in the Greenville Women's Invitational Golf Tournament yesterday.

The tournament was held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. The winner, playing on her home course, beat out Barbara Walker of Ayden and Harriette White of Greenville for the title. Both of them carded 81, but Walker took second on the basis of comparing cards.

Low net in the championship flight went to Tess O'Farrell of Carolina Pines.

Carolyn Jordan of Windsor took first place in the first flight, followed by Nancy Monroe of Greenville. Maybelle Pitt of Macropines was third. Marion Troutman of Scotfield took the low net honors.

In the second flight, Audrey Allsbrook of Scotfield took top honors. Bernie Rowl of Greenville was second and Mable Blount of Greenville finished third. Beth Fontana of Carolina Pines won the low net.

Dardie Longino of Greenville was the winner in the third flight. Celeste Wilkerson and Julia Painter, both of Greenville, took second and third, respectively. Put Carter won low net.

Audrey Boyd of Cherry Point won the fourth flight title. Lillian Rackley of Farmville finished second and Ann Moon of Brook Valley was third. Sue Banks of Quaker Neck took low net.

Janet McGlohon of Brook Valley won the fifth flight. She was followed by Genny Wiggers of Greenville in second and Izabel Rivers of Greenville in third. Joann Banks of Quaker Neck took low net honors.

NCNB Romps By Planters Bank

NCNB romped to a 16-2 victory over Planters Bank yesterday in the Babe Ruth League.

NCNB's Glenn Moore tossed a two-hitter at Planters in getting the victory. The two hits came back to back and helped account for the first run for Planters. Moore struck out four and walked one in the five-inning contest.

NCNB picked up eight hits in the game, and also took full advantage of 10 Planters errors.

The first run for NCNB came over in the first inning. Mark Shank walked and was sacrificed up. He took third on another out and scored on Will Barrett's single.

Planters tied it up with their first run in the bottom of the second. Micah Dixon doubled and Mac Stokes singled him to third. He scored on a fielder's choice hit by Charles Daise.

NCNB broke it open with 10 runs in the third inning as the team sent 16 batters to the plate. Shank led off, reaching on an error. Don McGlohon also was safe on an error and Joey Mattheis walked.

Barrett reached on a fielder's choice which was errored at second, scoring Shank. Mike Campbell's grounder was relayed to home, and errored there, scoring McGlohon. Moore single to drive in Mattheis and Cliff Fearington's hit brought in Barrett. Mac Stokes reached on an error, bringing in Campbell.

Shank got another hit, scoring both Moore and Fearington. McGlohon walked to load them again, and Mattheis singled in Stokes. Barrett walked, bringing in Shank, and a walk to Campbell closed it out, scoring McGlohon.

NCNB then added five more in the fourth, while Planters got its other run in the top of the fourth. Plant Bank 010 10-2 2 10 NCNB 10(10) 5x-16 8 2

Seeded Men In Wimbledon Wins

By JEFF BRADLEY

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Can a computer really predict who is going to win Wimbledon, the most prestigious tennis tournament in the world?

Arthur Ashe, the defending champion and No. 1 seed, says the talent of the 128 players who began fighting for the men's singles title is evenly divided and almost any player can beat any other player at any time.

But after the first two days' play in this year's $280,000 Wimbledon championships, all 16 of the men's seeds were safely through the first round and those who played second round matches also were winners.

It was different last year when the Wimbledon computer rankings went awry. Stan Smith of Sea Pines, S.C., lost in the first round, as did seeded United States contender Vitas Gerulaitis of New York. Those upsets were followed in round two by shocking defeats for Ilie Nastase of Romania, Ja Kodes Czechoslovakia, and the seeded Australian, John Alexander.

In contrast, this year's seeds have had 20 matches so far, won them all, and dropped a total of only six sets.

All eight of the women's seeds also have played and won their first-round matches, losing only one set.

The consistency of the seeded players is all the more surprising since Wimbledon's grass courts are somewhat of a novelty for top class stars these days.

With World Team Tennis attracting more of the top players onto synthetic surfaces, and the major European titles being played on clay, the fast and sometimes slippery surface of grass requires a different technique.

Adriano Panatta of Italy, No. 5 seed here after his triumphs at the recent French and Italian championships on clay, said Tuesday following his second-round victory, "For a grass court tournament, I think I'm seeded too high. It is almost impossible for any player to win the Italian and French, and then adapt to the different surface and win Wimbledon, too."

Ashe, 32, from Miami, Fla., struggled against Australian Allan Stone in his second-round clash, before winning 7-5, 8-9, 9-7, 7-5.

Davidson's Withdrawal Leaves Three In Loop

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Davidson is dropping out of the Southern Conference to seek national-level basketball competition and "reasonable competition" in other sports.

Athletic Director Thom Cartmill, elaborating on Tuesday's announcement, said, "We were the only school in the conference that didn't award scholarships in secondary sports (those other than basketball and football). Our football grants-in-aid are strictly on a need basis. The new schools (in the conference, Western Carolina, Tennessee-Chattanooga and Marshall, admitted this year) have heavily subsidized programs across the board, and we felt our teams competitively would be at a disadvantage. And our priority is a strong basketball program."

Davidson became the fifth school in the last year to withdraw or announce intentions of withdrawing from the conference in the last year. Its withdrawal is effective July 1, 1977.

It has been a member of the 55-year-old conference for 40 years.

Old schools remaining in the conference are The Citadel, Furman and Appalachian.

John Varner, assistant sports information director of the college at Davidson, N.C., 15 miles north of Charlotte, said Davidson officials consider one possibility as joining a new conference being discussed by six southern schools. They are East Carolina, South Carolina, Southern Mississippi, the University of Richmond, William and Mary and Virginia Military Institute.

"We're really exploring all possibilities," Varner said. "We're going to be looking around for a strong basketball conference, and will look at the ones already there. If not, we'll explore the possibilities of forming one."

Others withdrawing from the conference are Richmond, which leaves at the end of this month, and East Carolina, William and Mary and Virginia Military Institute, which have announced intentions of withdrawing effective June 30, 1977.

Cartmill said he considers formation of a new basketball conference preferable to joining an already established conference operating in a wider range of sports.

"We would like very much to be involved in forming a new conference, yes," he said. "The time is probably appropriate, with many schools now available and without conference ties, for forming such a conference."

Commissioner Kenneth G. Germann said the Davidson announcement came as no surprise to the other members, and will not further weaken the conference.

"We've been in touch with the three old members and the three new members and they have all made verbal commitments to continue to have a viable, competitive, meaningful conference," Germann said.

Jeff Wilson reached on an error and David Moon walked. Both moved up on a fielder's choice and Eric Sawyer singled in Wilson and Moon. Sawyer scored on a passed ball and Greg Wright walked and scored on a passed ball. Joyner was safe on a fielder's choice and he came across on a home run by Fischer.

Joyner and Vince Hankins drove in runs with singles in the third finishing the Union Carbide scoring.

Kiwanis scored its first in the second when Brian Hill stole home. Eric Lee walked opening the third and moved up on a passed ball. John Parnell singled him across with the second Kiwanis run.

Lee got a fourth inning single scoring Greg Davis who had singled his way on.

Joyner had three hits and Fischer two for Union Carbide.

1st Federal Tops Moose

Randy Warren's run scoring single in the fourth broke a 1-1 tie and First Federal added another tally in the fifth to take a 3-1 season ending victory over the Moose, yesterday.

First Federal had scored its first run in the second when Horace Barrett homered.

The Moose tied the game in the fourth. Barry Nichols reached on a fielder's choice and Eric Woodworth singled him to second. Keith Stencil slapped a hit loading the bases and a passed ball scored Nichols.

Cliff Warren singled opening the bottom of the fourth and he took second on a passed ball Warren singled him home.

Mont Carter led off the fifth with a double and was sacrificed to third. Barrett singled him over.

Warren pitched a two-hitter for First Federal striking out four, and walking two.

Prep League Title Is Still Up For Grabs

Cox Realty gained a 4-2 victory over the Graniteers and may have set up a clash for the title between the two in the final game of the year, set Saturday.

In the other Prep League game, Auto Specialty nosed out Pitt Plaza, 15-11.

Cox, now 8-2, has a game with Auto Specialty set Thursday, and a victory for Cox would send it into the final game with the Graniteers with a 9-2 mark, the same as the Graniteers, putting the title on the line. Even a loss could put them in a battle for the crown—or a share of it anyway.

Cox pushed over all four of its runs in the opening inning. Ricky Sutton was hit by a pitch and stole second. Grant Stackhouse singled and Steve Irwin reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Sutton. Marc Sasser singled to drive in Stackhouse, and an error on the play let both Irwin and Sasser advance. Mike Thurber singled, driving in Irwin, and a double steal brought in Sasser.

The Graniteers came back with two runs in the third. Tom Brown singled and stole up. Shelton Wilson also got a hit, and moved up on the relay in. Jeff James grounded out, but Bown scored on the play. Kenny Barnes then reached on an error, allowing Wilson to come in.

The Graniteers threatened on other occasions, but couldn't get a run in.

In the first game, Auto Specialty pushed over one run in the first. Mark Douglas walked and moved up on an error. He scored when Johnny Williams reached on an error.

In the second, Auto Specialty pushed over eight runs. Bert Singleton walked and so did Jamie Byrd. Woody Whichard singled, and Jeff Fisher reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Singleton. Arthur Fletcher's walk brought in Byrd, and Whichard scored when Douglas walked. Barry Tyson also walked, bringing in Fisher, and Williams singled in both Fletcher and Douglas, with Tyson scoring on an error. Williams was thrown out, but Larry Talbert got it going again with a walk. He stole up, and scored when Fisher reached on an error.

Pitt Plaza scored eight in the top of the third to cut the lead to 9-8. Steve Hall reached on an error and Reggie Morris walked. Kelly Kee reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Bill. Billy Dough singled, and Van Warren walked to score Morris. Andy Smith, Johnny Joyner and Dickie Haddock also walked, forcing in three more runs. Another crossed when Hall walked. Kee singled in the last two runs.

Auto Specialty came back with four to put it out of reach, 13-8. Douglas singled and Tyson got a hit. Williams drove in Douglas with a hit, and Singleton reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Tyson. Byrd walked, and Williams scored when Whichard went out. Walks to Fisher and Fletcher brought in Singleton.

Auto Specialty added two more in the fourth, while Pitt Plaza got two in the fourth and one in the fifth.

Union Carbide Tops Kiwanis

Union Carbide exploded for six runs in the second inning and went on to beat winless Kiwanis, 9-3, in the final North State Little League regular season game for both teams.

Union Carbide had opened the scoring getting one in the first on Dwayne Fischer's two-out double scoring Chris Joyner.

Jeff Wilson reached on an error and David Moon walked. Both moved up on a fielder's choice and Eric Sawyer singled in Wilson and Moon. Sawyer scored on a passed ball and Greg Wright walked and scored on a passed ball. Joyner was safe on a fielder's choice and he came across on a home run by Fischer.

Joyner and Vince Hankins drove in runs with singles in the third finishing the Union Carbide scoring.

Kiwanis scored its first in the second when Brian Hill stole home. Eric Lee walked opening the third and moved up on a passed ball. John Parnell singled him across with the second Kiwanis run.

Lee got a fourth inning single scoring Greg Davis who had singled his way on.

Joyner had three hits and Fischer two for Union Carbide.

Baserunning Tactics Decide Two Games

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
Who's on third?
Chris Chambliss.
Why?
Good question.
Who's on first?
Denny Doyle.
Oops... wait a second.
He's on second.

Because Chambliss hugged the bag instead of high-tailing it for home, the New York Yankees came up on the short end of a 3-2 score against the Cleveland Indians Tuesday night. And because Doyle was high-tailing it for second instead of hanging around first, the Boston Red Sox came out on the long end of a 6-5 score in a 15-inning marathon against the Baltimore Orioles. In the rest of the American League, Oakland trimmed Texas 5-2, Chicago clubbed Kansas City 14-8, Detroit mauled Milwaukee 10-4 and Minnesota beat California 10-6. In New York, it all came down to the bottom of the ninth. Cleveland was clinging to its 3-2 lead, but Chambliss led off the last of the ninth with a double to left-center field off Rick Waits. Reliever Dave LaRoche got Graig Nettles to fly deep right — and Chambliss raced to third after the catch. Up came Fran Healy, who sent a sharp grounder toward second base. "If Chambliss breaks right away, he scores easy," Indians Manager Frank Robinson observed. But Chambliss stayed right where he was — and when second baseman Duane Kuiper came up with a diving stop on Healy's grounder and a throw to first for the out, Chambliss still was 90 feet from home. Then he and the rest of the Yanks went home less when LaRoche got Willie Randolph on a routine fly ball to center.

Yankees Manager Billy Martin had a simple explanation for Chambliss' inertia. "The ball had to go through," he said. "We told him to wait if it didn't. If I use sandy Alomar as a pinch-runner, I have no one in the extra innings — and Chambliss is leading the team in RBIs." Charlie Spike drove in two runs. Norman drove in one run with a sacrifice fly. Cardinals 3, Mets 0. St. Louis right-hander John Denny continued his mastery over New York, pitching a three-hitter over the Mets. Denny, 3-4, registered his fourth career triumph over the Mets without a loss in two seasons. He struck out four batters without issuing a walk.

A four-hit first inning ignited by Bake McBride's single gave the Cardinals a 2-0 lead and all the offense they needed. Lou Brock and Ted Simmons drove in the runs. Astros 9, Braves 7. Bob Watson keyed a four-run rally with a two-run double in the eighth inning, leading Houston over Atlanta. Atlanta's Rowland Office extended his hitting streak to 27 games with a run-scoring double in the sixth.

Jones Misses Out On Breaking National Record With Free Pass

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
Randy Jones would give his left arm to take one pitch back. "As soon as I let it go, I knew it was a ball," he said. With the slip of that pitch, the San Diego left-hander let a National League record fall out of his grasp — Christy Mathewson's monumental no-walk record established 63 years ago.

The free pass to Marc Hill leading off the eighth inning of Tuesday night's 4-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants stopped Jones' streak at 68 walkless innings. A few moments before, he had pulled into a tie with the great Mathewson of the New York Giants by striking out Darrell Evans to close out the seventh inning. But the streak had been weighing heavily on his broad shoulders.

"I fought off the pressure for a long time but about the fifth inning it caught up with me," said Jones. "Subconsciously I'm sure it affected me. It's kind of disappointing to go that long and then end up walking the guy." Jones, who had faced 296 batters before the pass to Hill, then lost all control by walking his second batter of the inning, Larry Herndon. Luckily it came after a double play had wiped out Hill and caused Jones no trouble. In the other National League games, the Pittsburgh Pirates outscored the Chicago Cubs 10-7; the Montreal Expos trimmed the Philadelphia Phillies 8-3; the Cincinnati Reds blanked the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-0; the St. Louis Cardinals beat the New York Mets 3-0 and the Houston Astros turned back the Atlanta Braves 9-7.

Jones improved his record to 13-3 with the help of Tito Fuentes' two-run homer in the seventh inning. Fuentes broke a 2-2 tie when he ripped his first home run of the season off Giant reliever Gary Lavelle with his broad shoulders. "I fought off the pressure for a long time but about the fifth inning it caught up with me," said Jones. "Subconsciously I'm sure it affected me. It's kind of disappointing to go that long and then end up walking the guy." Jones, who had faced 296 batters before the pass to Hill, then lost all control by walking his second batter of the inning, Larry Herndon. Luckily it came after a double play had wiped out Hill and caused Jones no trouble. In the other National League games, the Pittsburgh Pirates outscored the Chicago Cubs 10-7; the Montreal Expos trimmed the Philadelphia Phillies 8-3; the Cincinnati Reds blanked the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-0; the St. Louis Cardinals beat the New York Mets 3-0 and the Houston Astros turned back the Atlanta Braves 9-7.

Jones improved his record to 13-3 with the help of Tito Fuentes' two-run homer in the seventh inning. Fuentes broke a 2-2 tie when he ripped his first home run of the season off Giant reliever Gary Lavelle with his broad shoulders. Roberts Says World Record Is Necessary For Olympic Gold

By KEN DONEY
Associated Press Writer
EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Dave Roberts regained the world pole vault record with a mark of 18 feet 8 1/2 inches and promptly declared it "will take at least the same height or better to win" an Olympic gold medal.

four of the fastest times ever in the U.S. —Millard Hampton, a powerfully built 19-year-old headed for UCLA next fall, won the 200-meter dash as the top three finishers ran the fastest races of their lives. —Jane Frederick, a top prospect for a medal at Montreal, won the women's pentathlon and missed her American record by only 100 points. —Madeline Manning Jackson, 28, earned a third trip to the Olympics, becoming the first American woman to run 800 meters in less than two minutes. Roberts borrowed a pole from Arkansas State's Earl Bell, the man who took the world record from him in late May, after breaking his own pole on his first try at 18-8 1/2. He was given three attempts at that height, clearing it on the final try. "I touched the bar going up, but I didn't touch it very hard," Roberts, a second-year student at the University of Florida Medical School, said of his record vault. Bell loaned his pole to Roberts after missing twice at 18-8 1/2. He and Terry Porter, a 24-year-old Texan, both cleared 18-0 1/2 to grab the other Olympic berths.

Shorter, who won the 1972 Olympic gold medal in the marathon, will double again at Montreal. The 28-year-old lawyer, who runs for the Florida Track Club, won a tight, four-way race in the 10,000. Shorter, fifth in the 10,000 at Munich, broke away from Virgin, of Illinois, with three-fourths of a lap to go, winning in 27 minutes 55.45 seconds. Shorter will be accompanied to Montreal by Virginia, who was second in 27:59.43, and Bjorklund of the Chicago Track Club.

But the 24-year-old medical student's record-shattering vault was only one of the highlights of a big day at the U.S. Olympic track and field trials Tuesday: —Marathon champion Frank Shorter, Craig Virgin and Gary Bjorklund finished 1-2-3 in a 10,000-meter final that produced

Walker Pushes Early Selection

By DAN BERGER
AP Sports Writer
EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The United States should abandon the concept of a single, one-shot Olympic trial for its track and field athletes and begin picking the U.S. squad two years before the Olympics.

That's the idea being pushed by Dr. Leroy Walker, the head coach of the men's track team that will compete at Montreal starting July 17. Walker long has advocated selecting the U.S. team well in advance, but the subject heated up again last Saturday when sprinter Steve Williams, one of the world's fastest men, was injured and failed to make the American team.

Under my plan," said Walker, "if you have an injured athlete, you would do with him what any good coach would do — you'd rest him to make him whole. We would not have had to chance this situation with Williams being forced to run in the trials."

Asked if he'd like to select the entire team by committee rather than by a one-shot performance, Walker said, "No, I think the athletes should determine themselves, by their performances, who makes the team. If I were a commissioner, like in the National Football League, I'd already have the team chosen before I came out here."

The former head track coach at North Carolina Central University proposed a flexible program that might start two years before the Olympics. "For example, in 1978, we might have a major track meet. Call it the USA National Championships, or something. Then the top eight runners and the top 12 field event finishers would be considered our national team on call."

"We could then follow them closely, help coach them and if the President's Commission on Olympic sports recommends subsidies for these people, as I think they will, then there will be a recognizable group of athletes who would be eligible for the subsidies."

He said he would not eliminate the final Olympic Trials altogether. "There should be a trials setup, but it should have some flexibility built into it," he said. Williams, heavily favored to make the team, has asked — through his coach, Brooks Johnson — to be considered for a spot on the U.S. 400-meter relay team.

"Yes, I would say that if he was completely healthy he would be a fantastic anchor man," Walker said. "You'd be hard-pressed to find anyone in the world better than he is on the anchor of a relay, when he gets that 20 meters of acceleration..." However, Walker said present rules do not permit him to put Williams or anyone else on a relay team unless he or she already is a member of the squad in at least one event.

Rare Americana On Display At Morgan Library

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
NEW YORK (UPI)—One of the nation's least known troves of manuscripts, books, letters and documents linked to the early history of the United States rates as one of the sleeper exhibitions of the American Bicentennial.

Some 150 fascinating items have been put on display by the Pierpont Morgan Library, which owns all but 10 of them.

The Morgan is best known for its world-renowned collections of European, English and Near Eastern literature, history and art, which have overshadowed the Americana collected by the Morgan financial dynasty: Junius Spencer, Pierpont, and J.P. Never before has the material in this show been exhibited together.

With typical understatement, the Morgan has presented its show in the most traditional manner, in old fashioned waist-level showcases with prim identification cards for each exhibit. No Bicentennial hoopla here, and no need for it. The material on display has enough inherent drama to stand alone and unadorned.

The only letter in an American collection by Amerigo Vespucci bears the explorer's crisp signature in Latin—Emericus Vesputius. It was written 31 years before Vespucci's name was given to the New World in 1507. Should the New World have been named Emerica?

Explorer Verrazzano's letter containing the earliest known description of the North American mainland—a manuscript written by a scribe but with marginal annotations in Verrazzano's own hand—looks almost as fresh as the day it was received by Francis I of France in 1524. Verrazzano reported that the New York Indians were friendly.

Remarkable Revolutionary War letters include the Marquis de LaFayette asking Washington for the command of a division of the Continental Army, Cornwallis asking Washington for terms of surrender at Yorktown, and Burgoyne's signed copy of the convention of his surrender at Saratoga.

The only letter extant in the hand of Button Gwinnett, whose signature is the rarest of all the Signers of the Declaration, and his will are both on display. A letter from George Washington to Irish statesman Edward Newenham in 1788 expresses the hope that the United States "will be able to keep disengaged from the labyrinth of European politics & Wars."

Books from the libraries of famous men include Washington's copy of Thomas Paine's "Rights of Man," Louis XV's copy of Benjamin Franklin's book on electricity, published in Paris in 1752, and Robert Fulton's treatise on canal navigation, presented to Gen. Tadeusz Kosciuszko who in turn gave it to Thomas Jefferson.

Among the inspiring documents on display is one of the 15 surviving first printings of the Declaration of Independence, the first draft of the report of the committee of the Federal Convention of the Constitution annotated by Georgia's Abraham Baldwin, and the original proclamation of the Louisiana purchase (at an incredible four cents an acre) signed by Jefferson and James Madison.

An account of the battle of John Paul Jones' ship, Bon Homme Richard, and the British ship Serapis in 1779 in Jones' own hand is contained in a letter from Amsterdam written three weeks later. A presentation copy of the first Bible printed in America and in a non-European language—the Rev. John Eliot's translation in the Algonkin dialect—is shown not far from the sacred buckskin of the Apaches.

Other non-literary items scattered through the exhibition include locks of George and Martha Washington's hair, a snippet of Martha's wedding dress, a life mask of Washington by Houdon, LeMoynes' delicate watercolors of the flora and fauna of Florida painted on a visit in 1564, an advertisement for Franklin Fire-Places, and a piece of wood from Concord's "rude bridge that arched the flood."

The exhibition will continue through July 31.

Chavez Film At Student Center

A film, Fighting For Our Lives, about Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers, will be shown at 8 p.m. tonight at the Methodist Student Center, 501 East Fifth Street.

Nominated for an Academy Award in the documentary category, the film shows the struggle of farm workers for recognition of bargaining rights and for better working conditions.

Produced, directed, photographed and edited by Glen Pearcy, Fighting For Our Lives has music by Daniel and Luis Valdez, El Teatro Campesino, Joan Baez, Taj Mahal, Concepcion and Maria Elena Alvarez and Julia Salazar.

In color, the film lasts approximately one hour. There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

In 1290, the Jews were expelled from England, but they returned in 1650.

Offer Tour Of 76 Cities
PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The American Wind Symphony Orchestra of Western Pennsylvania has embarked on an historic Bicentennial cultural tour of 76 cities.
Performing aboard Point Counterpoint II, a million dollar floating center for the arts, the Pittsburgh-based Wind Symphony's romantic journey will focus attention on one of the nation's richest resources, its inland waterways.
The six-month voyage began April 30 along the Mississippi Gulfcoast and will dock at such diverse spots as Clearwater, Fla., Cambridge, Md., Niagara Falls, N.Y., Saginaw, Mich., and Lake Charles, La., before ending Oct. 10 in Brownsville, Texas-New Matamoros, Mexico.
Dancers, artists, craftsmen, composers, poets and sculptors will comprise the 65-member entourage that will present an in-residency program in each community.
Symposia in the arts, chamber concerts in living rooms, banks, schools and homes for the elderly and retarded as well as riverfront concerts replete with Roman candles will mark the Wind Symphony's stopover in each area. Children's performances will be given daily, and the symphony will present a concert of sacred music each Sunday in a house of worship.
After the tour, Point Counterpoint II — which encompasses two theaters, a multipurpose art gallery and exhibit area, and a spacious performing stage for the orchestra — will be used to teach arts and crafts in Western Pennsylvania river towns.

Summer Band Classes Readied
Details of Summer Band Classes at Rose High School have been announced by Summer Band Program Director Johnny Wooten. These classes are being offered to any band student previously enrolled in the band program of the city schools.
Classes are on skills, techniques and methods. The following schedule has been arranged for each day's session: 8 to 9 a.m., percussionists; 9 to 10 a.m., fifth and sixth grade students; 10 to 11 a.m., seventh grade students; and 11 a.m. till noon, advanced and performing students.
There is no tuition for the classes, which end on July 30. Interested students are encouraged to get in contact with Wooten at Rose High school.

Some 80,000 persons watched the first Memorial Day 500-mile automobile race at Indianapolis in 1911.

Here's How They Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 10 through June 16.

HOUSE
REVENUE SHARING — Adopted, 233 for and 172 against, an amendment preventing new federal controls from being imposed on state and local governments receiving revenue sharing program funds. The amendment was attached to HR 13367, a bill extending revenue sharing from Jan. 1, 1977, through Sept. 20, 1980, and providing that about $25 billion be distributed in that period to state and local governments. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate.

The amendment deleted from the bill provisions to strengthen antidiscrimination standards which recipients must observe, require states to report progress toward modernizing state government operations and guarantee that workers on construction projects funded with any revenue sharing money be paid at rates competitive for the locality. Also stricken by the amendment was a provision to distribute part of the funds on the basis of population below the poverty level.

Supporters said the amendment preserves the original revenue sharing concept of sending federal dollars to local governments with few strings attached. Rep. John Ashbrook (R-Ohio) said it would be ironic if the program "designed to strengthen local government would become the vehicle for even greater federal domination."

Opponents, who sought to keep in the bill one or more of the deleted provisions, generally wanted a greater oversight role for Congress in how revenue sharing funds are spent. "I do not know how urging any local government to be more efficient and responsive to its people is doing any kind of disservice to it," said Rep. John Burton (D-Calif.).

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Charles Rose (D-7), W. G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "yea."

TAX INFORMANTS — Rejected, 160 for and 187 against, an amendment to half the use of paid informants by the Internal Revenue Service. The amendment was proposed to HR 14261, a bill appropriating about $8.3 billion for fiscal 1977 operations of the Treasury Department, Postal Service and other agencies. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate.

The amendment provided that no funds in the bill could be used "to pay rewards, fees or other compensation to informers for information leading to the detection of internal revenue law violations."

Rep. Steven Symms (R-Idaho), sponsor of the amendment, said that IRS use of informants "smacks of a police state informer atmosphere that we do not need in this country. . . . What it amounts to is an Internal Revenue Service "turn in your neighbor's program."

Rep. Tom Steed (D-Okla.), an opponent, said the amendment "could very well be labeled the Tax Dodger Amendment, because there is no one in the country that can really benefit from such an amendment except those who are trying to evade the payment of their just and fair share of their taxes."

Jones, Henderson and Neal voted "yea."

Fountain, Preyer, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "nay."

Andrews, Rose and Hefner did not vote.

Seek Fill Gap In Psychologists

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Only five American Indians hold doctorate degrees in psychology, a statistic that has prompted the Oklahoma State University college of education to begin a new program.

Psychology Graduate Training for American Indians offers training to students who want to obtain masters' or doctorate degrees for work in community health centers and clinics serving Indians.

Program coordinator Gloria Valencia-Weber said a clinical doctorate degree would allow the graduate to head a clinic, a position now filled mostly by non-Indians.

The program is looking for students with bachelor's degrees or master's degrees or in junior colleges and financial aid is available according to program specialty, she said.

FOOD STAMPS, Rejected, 184 for and 222 against, an amendment to cut the fiscal 1977 appropriation for the food stamp program from $4.8 billion to $4 billion. The amendment was proposed to HR 14237, a bill appropriating $12.5 billion for Agriculture Department programs in fiscal 1977. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. John Rousselot (R-Calif.), sponsor of the amendment, said that $4 billion for food stamps next fiscal year is "not a miserly amount," and that the slash from $4.8 billion would affirm that the program "is truly to be for the people who find themselves disadvantaged and no more."

Another supporter, Rep. Charles Grassley (R-Iowa), complained that there has been much talk and little action on ending abuses such as fraud in the program, and he added that the fund cut "says that the Congress and the people who have been talking about reforming the food stamp program ought to either put up or shut up."

Rep. Henry Gonzalez (D-Tex.), an opponent, said that he has "heard all of the gruesome stories about how some obese woman would come into a grocery store and buy groceries, and then she stepped into a brand-new Lincoln Continental. . . . with the food stamp-purchased food." But Gonzalez said that "for each one who might abuse (food stamps), we will have 100,000 honest-to-goodness Americans who are destitute and qualify. . . ."

Jones, Fountain, Henderson, Andrews, Neal, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Taylor voted "yea."

Preyer and Rose voted "nay."

SENATE
LOBBYING — Rejected, 35 for and 50 against, an amendment to require high-level federal bureaucrats to keep a public record of oral and written communications from persons seeking to influence agency decision-making. The amendment was proposed to S 2477, a bill to strengthen the federal law regulating lobbying by giving the General Accounting Office enforcement powers and tightening requirements on who must register as a lobbyist and report lobbying expenditures. The bill was passed and sent to the House.

Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.), sponsor of the amendment, said that S 2477 as written is primarily aimed at regulating congressional lobbyists, and that his amendment "represents a reasonable approach to the problem of special interest lobbying in the executive branch." The amendment attempts to "strike a balance between the public's interest in knowing what kind of influence government officials are subjected to, and the government's interest in carrying out its business efficiently and effectively," Kennedy said, adding that it will "help discourage improper conduct."

Sen. Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.), an opponent, said that he recognized that "as a result of Watergate, we have to have greater disclosure than we have had" of the workings of government. But Metcalf said that requiring federal officials to log their contacts with those outside their agencies is an "added unnecessary burden" to their duties.

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

ENERGY DATA — Adopted, 46 for and 45 against, an amendment to establish an Office of Energy Information and Analysis in the Federal Energy Administration (FEA). The amendment was attached to S 2872, a bill extending the life of FEA until Sept. 30, 1977. The bill was passed and sent to conference with the House.

The office created by the amendment would become the central collection agency for information on energy supplies and energy company finances. The date would be available to FEA, Congress and the public.

Sen. Floyd Haskell (D-Colo.), sponsor of the amendment, said the new office would end the "destructive and crippling distrust" of energy information and forecasts prepared by the executive branch, because it would "remove the political heat from energy data and focus political scrutiny on the policy issues where it belongs."

Sen. Paul Fannin (R-Ariz.), and opponent, said the amendment would result in an "unnecessary duplication of existing laws and activities which are all directed at the common goal of enhancing the collection of energy data. . . ."

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

Conversations On Phone May Go By Glass

By RON HUTCHERSON
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — If the telephone company has its way, light beams traveling through glass filaments will carry future conversations.

Copper wires and electricity — as media for transmitting signals by cable — probably will be out of date on the Bell Telephone System's main trunks sometime in the 1980s.

The savings in copper alone could be tremendous for a corporation the size of American Telephone & Telegraph. The Bell system uses 500 million pounds of increasingly expensive copper wire a year.

On the other hand, glass fibers are made from inexpensive sand.

The laser beam system relies on the ability of a hair-thin continuous glass fiber to carry a beam of light up, down and around corners, and on the ability of a laser to produce 45 million pulses of light per second, according to Dr. Mauro DiDomenico Jr.

Dr. Joe H. Mullins, of the Bell system research arm's Atlanta laboratory, and DiDomenico, of its Murray Hill, N.J., laboratory, described progress in exploratory development testing at a recent San Diego Conference on Laser and Electro-optical Systems.

Tests under simulated field conditions in Atlanta "are working out very well," DiDomenico said.

"We're hoping that by the early 1980s we can introduce optical fibers into the (telephone) system. We now think the job is do-able."

He explained the laser system begins with the conversion of sound waves, or voice, to electrical impulses.

The electrical signals coming from a telephone excite a tiny gallium-arsenide laser crystal. The bombardment causes the crystal to give off small but intense beams of light.

Mullins said the laser — smaller than a grain of salt — can emit 45 million light signals a second. The light is channeled into hair-thin glass fibers that carry it to a receiving station where it is converted back to an electrical impulse and then into sound.

A single glass fiber can carry 672 simultaneous conversations, and a half-inch cable containing 144 fibers can handle 48,000 two-way conversations, he said. This makes one finger-thick glass cable the functional equivalent of six three-inch cables containing twisted copper wire pairs, he said.

Besides the saving in copper, DiDomenico said, the glass cables are impervious to electrical interference, short circuits and moisture.

Also an advantage is the saving in space, since cables are crowded into underground utility tunnels with water and steam lines and electrical cables.

DiDomenico said another significant factor is the ability of the laser signal to travel farther than an electrical signal before it fades. Repeaters or amplifying stations are required about every mile for the copper cables, but laser tests point to repeater spacing of four miles.

"We are convinced that we can transmit about seven kilometers (4 miles) routinely," DiDomenico said.

Initial use of the glass cables would be between telephone company central offices, with copper wires going to phone users, but Mullins said Bell hoped eventually to extend the glass cables to subscribers' homes.

The scientists said before the system can go into service, the endurance of laser crystals must be increased from the present 100,000 hours to up to one million hours, cable housings have to be tested for resistance to corrosion and breaking, and economic factors have to be assessed.

Jimmy Carter Busy Today On Fund-Raising Tour

By The Associated Press
Jimmy Carter, the Democrats' probable nominee for president, headed for New York and Washington today to enrich his campaign coffers, talk about foreign policy and confer with congressional leaders. Carter, who spent much of last week at home in Plains, Ga., returned Tuesday to the scene of his earliest primary election defeat and dismissed his fourth-place showing in Massachusetts as an error in strategy.

Carter, at a public fund-raiser, apologized "for not having spent enough time to do better in Massachusetts" in the state's primary March 2.

"I have always been well received in Massachusetts and the fact that I did not come in first here ... was not the fault of this state but of campaign strategy," the candidate said.

He said at the time he considered it more important to do well in early tests in Iowa and New Hampshire and in the first Southern primary election in Florida.

Then he was off for New York City and an address today to the Foreign Policy Association, to be followed by more fund-raising.

Carter, in remarks prepared for the Foreign Policy Association meeting, said the United States must abandon what he called its "Lone Ranger" foreign policy and organize free nations to share responsibility for "a just and stable world order."

He called for collective action by the world's democracies in "creative alliances" to help stabilize world prices, ease military tensions and combat hunger and poverty.

He painted his concept of "creative alliances" in broad strokes, giving few specifics.

In Boston, Carter was questioned about President Ford's announcement Tuesday that he would submit to Congress legislation to limit mandatory busing of school children.

The President, speaking at the national Jaycee convention in Indianapolis, did not detail his plans for busing legislation. But he said his proposal "will minimize court-ordered busing and will provide a means and a method to help local authorities in trying to handle the problem at the local level."

Carter reiterated his advocacy of voluntary busing, adding, "I do not believe it would be feasible to put a three-or five-year limit on a court ruling."

He referred to Atty. Gen. Edward Levi's statement that the administration may seek legislation imposing such limits on court-ordered busing in communities which are trying to desegregate public schools.

Carter also said he would not make public his choice of a running mate until after he has been nominated. He has 1,469 of the 1,505 Democratic delegates needed for the party's nomination.

Ford, meantime, leads challenger Ronald Reagan in their race for Republican nominating delegates, 1,009 to 931, with 1,130 needed for the nomination.

Reagan planned to visit Mississippi Thursday, where 30 delegates remain uncommitted, while First Lady Betty Ford prepared for a trip to Minnesota on Friday to stand in for her husband. State Republicans there pick 18 delegates.

Mrs. Ford was on the dais in New York City Tuesday evening for a dinner sponsored by the Jewish National Fund of America when a prominent Zionist leader, Dr. Maurice S. Sage, collapsed. Mrs. Ford led the 2,500 guests in prayer for Sage, who died less than an hour later.

In other political developments Tuesday:

—Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, who was among the candidates for the Democratic nomination, made public his 1975 income tax returns showing earnings of $71,656.32 and federal taxes totaling $18,648.40.

—A group of 48 House Democrats announced a drive to get the party's vice presidential nomination for Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr. of New Jersey.

Rodino was chairman of the House Judiciary Committee during the televised impeachment proceedings against former President Richard M. Nixon.

—The United Transportation Union, the nation's biggest railroad workers' union, endorsed Carter.

RECOGNIZED—Jim Beppard, (center) vice president of the East Carolina University Student Chapter of the National Environmental Health Association and Dicky Denton, (right) president of the chapter were recently recognized by the Eastern Lung Association for

Hog Jowls, Beans And Rice Are More Costly

ATLANTA (AP) — The inexpensive food poor people eat is going up in price at a faster rate than other food, says a federal official.

William Walker of the Community Services Administration told a Georgia Tech conference Monday that "hog jowls, chicken necks, rice, beans" and other inexpensive foods have been going up in price faster than "middle-class foods."

Walker said the nation's "nonpolicy" on food supply and nutrition for the poor "borders on irresponsibility," and he said the agricultural progress being made will not help low-income families.

"None of the nation's poor will be affected by the production gains of agricultural research," Walker said.

He said marketplace considerations determine how much food is distributed to the poor. "(Food) surplus is given to the poor to stabilize the economy," rather than to feed the hungry, he said.

Dr. Norman Hackerman, president of Rice University in Houston, Tex., and head of the policy-making board for the National Science Foundation (NSF) which conducted the hearing, warned that pressure for quick results could impede scientific progress.

Hackerman said NSF, which distributes large sums for scientific study, concentrates on basic research. "We're doing most things based on what we'll be doing 40 years from now; it's an investment in the future," Hackerman said. "The only problem is, we don't know which of those projects will be of any use."

He added, "The cure for cancer will probably come from basic research on cells, and not from some fancy project that experiments with a fascinating drug."

The forum was conducted to allow scientists to propose future projects.

One suggested that packaged food lit, along with its ingredients, the type of energy used to produce it, in hopes that consumers would favor products made with renewable energy sources.

Another proposed program of "people living experimentally in fields and forests" to restore the nation's confidence in "its ability to survive."

Youngsters Restore Showplace Garden

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Youngsters have restored the garden of a widow disabled by an automobile accident two years ago.

They are members of a church youth fellowship, and will do one or two yards a week for elderly or disabled people.

"I think it's wonderful, you hear so much about young people doing this, that and the other," said Mrs. Margie Cochran, who stood with the aid of a walker and surveyed their work Tuesday. "But these kids are wonderful. I'm so glad to have somebody doing something with my yard."

"You hate to see a place grow up that you've worked so hard on all your life. People used to stop when they were driving by, just to get a better look at the yard. I used to have almost a showplace here."

Her sizable yard in northwest Charlotte yard will never get the constant attention it once did from the 57-year-old woman, but it won't be a jungle, either.

She couldn't afford to pay anyone to keep it up. But three youngsters and a summer youth worker from their church raked and clipped Tuesday and restore much of the yard's beauty.

The teenagers from the First United Methodist Church's junior high school fellowship group did it as part of the group's summer service project.

They are Caroline Michael, 14; Jim Henderson, also 14, and Lauren Smith, 13, president of the youth fellowship. Working with them was Mary Clodfelter, 21, summer youth worker.

Miss Smith examined some rising blisters on her hands and said the group was having fun but doing hard work.

Jackson Family Needs Hour To Showcase Talent

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If anyone ever needed an hour to showcase their talent in a TV variety show, you'd think it would be the performer-packed Jackson family.

Yet the five brothers and three sisters who are starring in "The Jacksons" this summer on CBS-TV deliberately opted for a 30-minute format.

"We were offered an hour but we decided to do half an hour," explains Michael Jackson, who soared to fame six years ago as lead singer of the Jackson Five. He's now all of 17.

"We'd rather just give them (the audience) a little — make them want more. Then they'll be ready for us next week."

The Jackson clan was offered a weekly series by ABC two years ago but Michael says they turned it down because they were just too busy recording and touring to devote themselves to a one-hour TV show each week.

They still are, he notes — another reason for the 30-minute format. The family was able to knock off the four CBS summer shows — the second of which airs tonight — in less than three weeks.

Jackson says the musical clan is more willing to accept a long-running series commitment now — "there's a TV craze goin' on" — but if CBS wants them as a midseason replacement this winter, it will have to take them at half an hour.

Whether the network will buy the concept permanently he isn't sure, but he believes the channel-hopping public will. "America is on the move," he declared. "It's hard to make 'em sit still for an hour unless something's goin' on — like something 'dirty'."

The latter came with a sly grin from the shy high school senior. He spoke quietly at a table beside the swimming pool at the tree-shrouded home where he lives with his parents and three siblings. His pet parrot squawked loudly from its nearby cage. The five oldest sons of Joe and Katherine Jackson burst onto the national musical scene in 1970 with a string of records that hit the top of the sales charts and forever ended the days when their father had to operate a crane in a Gary, Ind., steel mill.

The original group consisted of Michael, Jackie, now 25, Tito, 22, Jermaine, 20, and three siblings. His pet parrot squawked loudly from its now 14, joined them on the concert circuit in 1973 and the three girls — Rebbie, 26, La Toya, 20, and Janet, 10 — followed in 1974.

Only Jermaine will not be seen on the summer series. Michael says he was busy recording ing a solo album at the time they taped the shows. Father Joe, the primary musical influence on the talented children, also got involved, serving as an executive producer. But Mother Katherine, who played clarinet in high school, would have none of it, Michael reports. "We couldn't push her up there," he said with a chuckle that indicated they really had tried. "She just sits in the audience and claps."

Exhibit Based On Reactions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Portrait Gallery's third Bicentennial exhibition, "Abroad in America: Visitors to the New Nation, 1776-1914," will run through Nov. 13.

The theme of the exhibit deals with foreign visitors to this country and their reactions to it.

Horse Show Is Set Saturday

PLYMOUTH—The Roanoke Saddle Club will have its second horse show of the season Saturday. Registration will begin at 5 p.m. Showtime is 6 p.m.

This show will have a Bicentennial theme, featuring an Early American costume class. There will be 20 classes, including English and western pleasure and game events. Judging the show will be Ms. Janet Reed of J. & R. Stables, Elizabeth City.

Admission to the show will be $1 for anyone over 12. Drinks, sandwiches, and snacks will be available at the concession stand. The showgrounds are located on Garrett's Island Road, Plymouth.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 24, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Unusually good for using best reasoning powers; put in action methods for expanding activities far beyond present boundaries. You are articulate and can convince others of the value of your viewpoints as well. Be outgoing.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan improvements with advocates for excellent results. You can gain that data that has long been denied you. Be on toes at all times.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Come to right decisions about how to add to your present abundance. A banking expert can advise. Make the evening a charming one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go out socially and have a delightful time. One of whom you are fond can be in a most receptive mood.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan a better way to handle personal affairs. Get those accumulated small tasks out of the way rapidly. Be careful of intruders.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 21) Contact good friends and improve rapport. State aims clearly and gain support of others. Be most careful driving, walking and so avoid possible accidents.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Handle public matters that will improve your position in the community. Improve credit rating, also. Relax tonight and replenish energy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some new ideas that will help you solve a problem come to you. Put them in operation quickly. Make new friends whose background is different from yours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Carry out ideas about making changes in agreements. Use more positive methods than in the past. Have a fine romantic time with mate in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Contact partners and work out better agreements. Good day for reconciliations with others, especially close ties.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can do fine work today so get at all those jobs early. Try to cooperate more with fellow workers and eliminate tensions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get out for recreation of your choice during spare time but be with congenials only. Put finest talents to work for more success.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Attention you give your home and kin can bring fine results at this time. Entertaining at home can be most enjoyable. Don't overspend.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have a different flair for expressing self than most and should be sent to schools where this can be taught to be utilized to real advantage. Teach to complete whatever has once been started, which will be the key to success here. Give good religious training early, and add musical lessons to the curriculum to train the ear.

where such an opening rebounded on its perpetrator. We do not object to feather-weight opening bids if their purpose is to accomplish something positive, such as directing a lead or preparing the groundwork for a possible sacrifice because of distributional features. East's hand meets neither of these criteria. He has only 11 HCP, and no decent suit, so his attempt to obstruct his vulnerable opponents could easily boomerang. South's first move over East's one spade opening was to double, since he had good support for the unbid suits. When his partner showed respectable values by competing freely at the three-level, South decided to cater to the possibility that North might have only a four-card heart suit. Since he had spades stopped, he tried three no trump. If North had no liking for no trump, the partnership could still maneuver safely back into a suit contract.

West led his fourth-best spade, and declarer was delighted when dummy appeared on the table. He won the first trick with the king to take the club finesse. This lost to the king, and the spade continuation forced out declarer's last stopper in the suit. Declarer could count eight tricks, and it was obvious that the ninth had to come from the heart suit. However, the finesse could be taken either way. Surely every reader will know why South was able to guess who held the queen of hearts.

Unless East's opening bid was semi-psychic, he was marked with virtually all the missing high cards once West showed up with the king of clubs. Thus, it was a simple matter for declarer to enter dummy with the ace of hearts and return a heart to his nine. When this won, he cashed the king in the hope of making an overtrick, but the queen didn't drop and he had to be content with nine tricks.

Perhaps declarer would have guessed the hearts had East remained silent, but he certainly had no difficulty after East bid. All East accomplished was to turn a 50% proposition into a sure thing—for his opponents.
