Fourth Of July Thrills Linger

By JULES LOH
Associated Press Writer
Oh, what a weekend it was. The fuse was long, too long everyone said, but when the grand Bicentennial skyrocket went off it lifted America's spirit and uncovered its pride and, at least for the moment, crowned America's good with brotherhood from sea to shining sea.

It was as if the entire nation put aside its cares and sorrows and thought at last of its own best dreams. "After two centuries there is still something wonderful about being an American," President Ford said, standing on Thomas Jefferson's front lawn at Monticello, and the nation answered, Amen.

"If we cannot quite express it," he said, "we know what it is. You know what it is or you would not be here."

And where were you? Americans have a way of remembering where they were at the precise moment of national trauma: Dec. 7, 1941; Nov. 22, 1963.

But in his lifetime will Thomas Gates, the American envoy in Peking, ever forget that on the Fourth of July in the year of Our Lord 1976 and the year of the Republic 200 he ate hot dogs with the members of his staff at a Ming Tomb in the world's largest Communist country?

Will any of the million surrounding the Washington Monument, ohing and ahing at the grandest fireworks display in history, forget that when it was over that huge crowd, that happy throng, spontaneously burst into "God Bless America"?

Will any of the five million - five million - who lined New York harbor and the Hudson River ever forget those majestic square-riggers and the glory of 10,000 sails along the flank of the first capital of the Republic?

Across the land, it was a Super Bowl of superlatives - the biggest, the loudest, the best and the brightest, a blur of extravaganzas months in preparation. But the surprise of the Bicentennial was the spontaneous warmth and gaiety and, yes, patriotism where the crowds assembled.

In Boston, they would remember bursting into "Happy Birthday" after listening to the Declaration of Independence read from the balcony where it was first read in that city in 1776.

In Lexington and Concord, where the fight for liberty began, they would remember a special cheeriness at the traditional children's games of hula hoop spinning, bike racing and watermelon eating.

The same easy, happy spirit prevailed at other national shrines.

At Fort Mchenry, at a booming rocket display at dawn's early light . . . at Gettysburg, where William Williams of The AP reported about a re-enactment: "They gave a war here and thousands of Americans came," 30,000 with picnic lunches . . . in Washington, the city everybody seemed to run against this year, where storytellers and puppets entertained laughing kids at West Potomac Park . . . in Philadelphia, where the President joined thousands for formal ceremonies at Independence Hall, and also where a subway rider broke into "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and immediately the other riders, in all the cars, joined in . . .

And at other cities and hamlets across the nation, some celebrating traditionally, some gaudily, but all gaily: In San Francisco, where they rang cake car bells; In Kokomo, Ind., where a lusty parade featured a big red tractor pulling a float with a 10-foot ear of corn; In Los Angeles, the city of excesses, where a bunch of kids had the bright Bicentennial idea of concocting - why not? - a 30-foot-long banana split;

In Shreveport, La., where Mildred Walker Scopes, widow of the man whose contribution to America's history became known as the Monkey Trial, sat down to lunch at a table dressed in red, white and blue clothes;

In Sun City, Ariz., where Lewis Siger laid out $4,500 to rig his house with all 50 state flags, plus a red, white and blue cattle trough in his front that shoots water 20 feet in the air;

In Promontory Point, Utah, where they built two mock railroad engines facing each other just as the real ones did that day of Manifest Destiny in 1869 when the golden spike was driven;

In New Orleans, where they unveiled a bronze statue to Louis Armstrong, that pioneer of America's own music form;

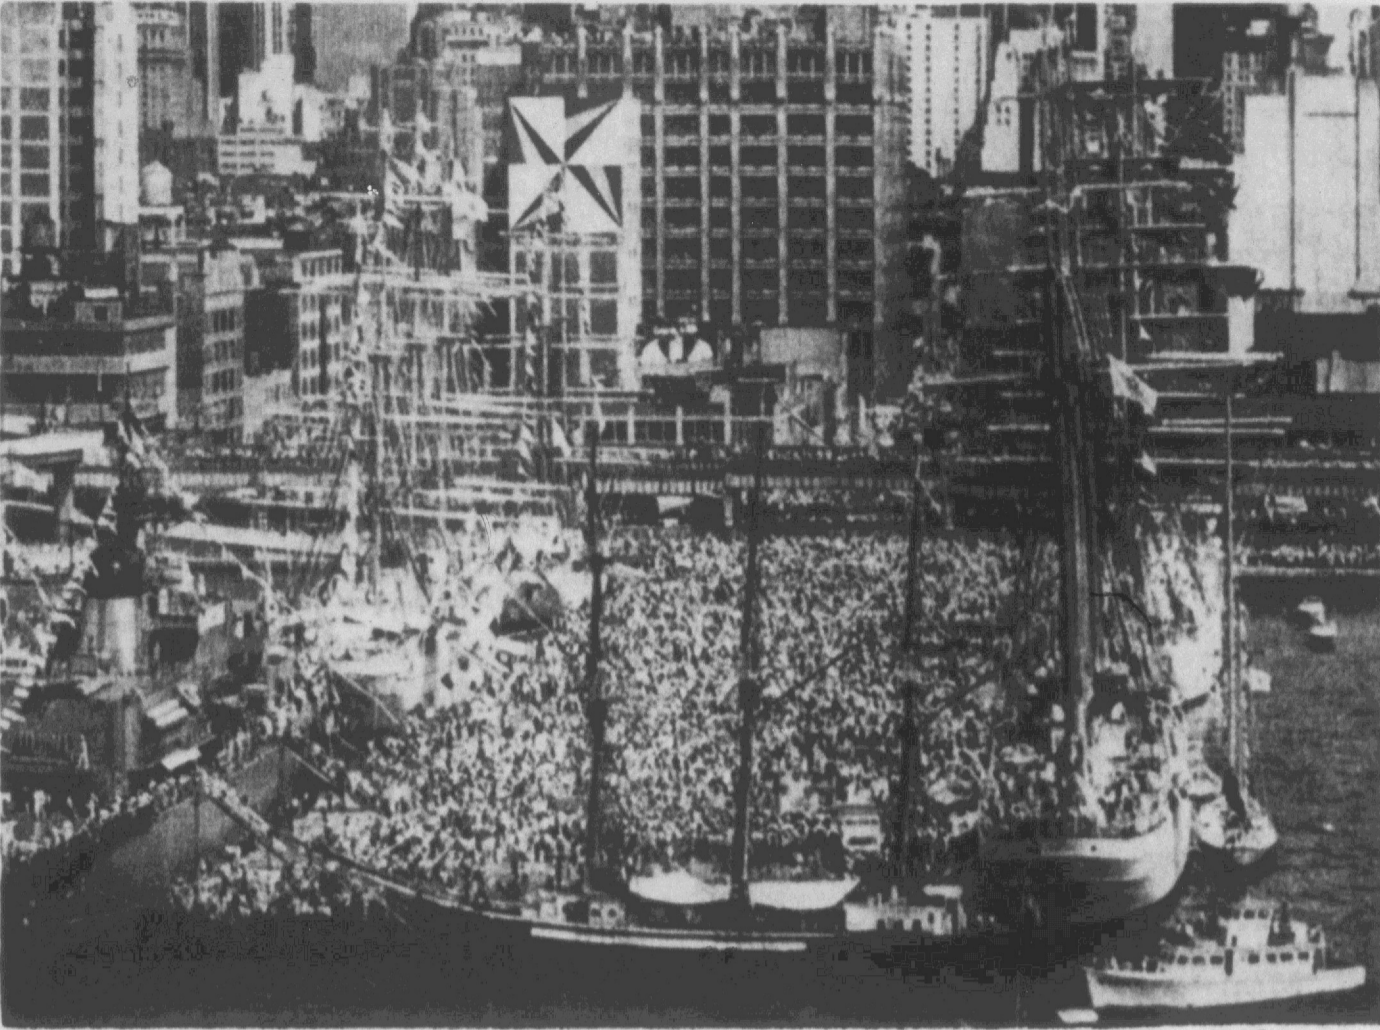

On Little Diomed Island, that tiny Alaskan outpost on the Bering Strait a scant three miles from Russia, where all 130 residents turned out for blanket tossing and other Eskimo diversions;

And in gutsy Rexburg, Idaho, where on Monday, a month to the day after their town was nearly washed away by a flood, they borrowed enough floats from other towns to put on a parade. "We aren't so hurt that we can't show our love for our country," said Marion Forsyth, who lost his home and farmland.

Meanwhile, in the Old World . . .

England, which suffered a profound decline in the world's power structure while its impudent former colony rose to the top, was, as always, civil. It celebrated the American Bicentennial with more than 100 special events across the country, including fireworks, concerts, picnics, softball games and a round of furious Frisbee. Meanwhile, Queen Elizabeth, who occupies the throne the colonies broke away from 200 years before, was on her way to pay her respects to the aging upstart.

Construction Of Hospital Is '85 Per Cent Complete'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Commissioners were told this morning that construction on the new hospital is 85 per cent complete and that hospital employees should be able to obtain useful occupancy of the north wing and bed towers of the new facility by August 15 to begin installing equipment and training, but that the opening of the building may be delayed for three months due to the expansion of the facility for the East Carolina University

School of Medicine. Ralph Hall, construction manager for the project told commissioners this morning that current work on the building is progressing "very well." He said although finishing work is "dropping behind our schedule," the expansion of the boiler house and additions to the front of the new building (part of the medical school expansion) are moving along well.

The problem, he told commissioners, may result from the proposed expansion of emergency room, x-ray, surgery, kitchen and dining and psychiatric areas of the building necessitated by the medical schools additions. This work, he say, may cause a three months delay, primarily due to the lack of security for equipment in the building during the period.

Commissioners, who expressed concern over any delay in opening the facility, agreed to meet with ECU and University of North Carolina officials in an effort to resolve the question. Commissioners and hospital officials have indicated repeatedly in talks with ECU and UNC officials that modifications of the new hospital for use by the medical school should not delay the project or result in any expense to the county.

Commissioners also approved the expenditure of more than $822,000 for equipment for the new facility.

Jack Richardson, Pitt Memorial director told commissioners that bids received for equipment for the new building were under the $850,000 budgeted.

The board, in other business this morning, approved plans for the Evanswood Subdivision as

Ross, John Mewborn and Allan Hahn to the Mental Health Area Board; adopted a resolution requesting the state to pave a drive at the Staton House Fire Department; and named Norman Wilkerson of Greenville as acting coroner until a replacement for E. W. Harvey can be named.

Harvey, who held the post for 17 years, resigned effective June 30, recommended by the Planning Board; reappointed Charles R.

Proposes N.C. Adopt Shift In Tax Burden

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate George Wood today proposed shifting state tax burdens to make the state's system more progressive. Wood ignored proposals to repeal the sales tax on food and the inventories tax on manufacturers' goods in his reform package.

He proposed repealing the intangibles tax; raising the inheritance tax exemption from $10,000 to $60,000; raising the income tax rate to eight per cent on income over $30,000; and taxing corporate income above $50,000 at seven per cent rather than six per cent.

Wood also suggested removing the $80 and $120 ceilings on sales taxes for farm equipment and luxury items such as airplanes. He would also remove the $15,000 exemption from dividend income received from North Carolina corporations, and give local governments all of the revenues from state liquor taxes.

Wood said the net effect of his tax proposals would be a $10.3 million annual increase in revenues to local governments and little or no change in revenue to state government because his tax package would balance increases with decreases.

Wood said he ignored the sales tax on food and the tobacco tax because he saw little realistic chance that the legislature would approve changes in them.

He said he believed in the concept of a progressive tax system in which people with the lowest incomes paid the lowest tax rates. He conceded that North Carolina does not now have such a system because the burdens of the sales tax are heavier on the poor.

He said his proposals would not make the system progressive but would bring it closer to that goal.

HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

A-NEGATIVE BLOOD NEEDED

The family of eight-year-old Arthur Ray Waters has asked Hotline to appeal for three persons with A-Negative blood type who would be willing to go to Duke Hospital the morning of August 10 to give blood for "Little Ray." He is to undergo open heart surgery on this day.

A-Negative is, of course, a rare blood type. The family understands at the present time, at least, that the blood cannot be given here and taken there, though, of course, if it can be worked out later, this will be done for the convenience of the donors. Transportation can be provided by family friends, if this were to be a problem for any potential donor.

The Waters live on Rt. 1, Greenville. Their phone number is 758-0453.

Mr. and Mrs. Waters also have asked that anyone who can give blood at the Bloodmobile here to replace in Ray's name to please do so. The Bloodmobile will be at Wright Auditorium tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and will be at the Moose Lodge August 16, 17, and 18.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

DILL

In response to yesterday's Hotline item about where to get fresh dill, we were told this morning that it's available at Lassiter and Worthington's pick-your-own farm near here.

The farm is located across from the fire tower on Road 1708 which, from Greenville is to the right just beyond Bell's Fork on Highway 43 South. Inquiries may be made by calling 756-2231.

Russians Orbit 2 Cosmonauts For Mission

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a Soyuz spacecraft with a two-man crew today to carry out "joint experiments" with the Salyut 5 space lab which was put into orbit on June 22, the official news agency Tass reported.

The Soyuz 21 spaceship was launched at 3:09 p.m. Moscow time (8:09 a.m. EDT) to carry out near-earth space exploration, Tass said.

The launch is the first manned space flight since the joint U.S.-Soviet Apollo-Soyuz operation last July.

The cosmonauts aboard were identified as Col. Boris Volynov, the spaceship commander, and engineer Vitali Zholobov.

They radioed back that the spacecraft's onboard systems were functioning normally and the cosmonauts have begun carrying out the flight program, Tass said.

The spacecraft was launched at the Baikonur space center in Soviet Kazakhstan, 1,400 miles southeast of Moscow.

Tass quoted Volynov as saying the flight "opens a series of manned flights" scheduled under the five-year plan inaugurated this year.

Volynov, 41, is an experienced astronaut, a member of the space program since 1960 and previously commander of Soyuz 5, launched in January 1969.

Tass said he also served as backup commander of space-ships "more than once."

Flight engineer Zholobov, 39, is making his first space flight. An army officer, he enrolled in the space program in 1963, and was stand-by backup flight engineer for Salyut 3.

He is the 35th Soviet cosmonaut to go into space.

Court Overrules Okla. Death Penalty Terms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today struck down Oklahoma's death penalty law.

The action followed the court's ruling last Friday that the death penalty is a constitutional punishment for murder but may not be imposed generally under laws which make it mandatory.

In Friday's decision the court struck down mandatory death penalty laws in Louisiana and North Carolina.

Ruling today in six Oklahoma cases, the court set aside the death sentences of six inmates and sent the cases back to the court of criminal appeals of Oklahoma.

"The imposition and carrying out of the death penalty under the law of Oklahoma constitutes a cruel and unusual punishment" in violation of the Constitution, the court said. The Oklahoma law makes death mandatory for a limited number of crimes.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White and William H. Rehnquist did not join in the ruling on the Oklahoma law but merely said they favored sending the cases back to the lower court for further proceedings in light of last Friday's ruling.

In another follow-up action to Friday's decision, the court sent 33 North Carolina death sentence cases back to the North Carolina Supreme Court for action in line with the Friday ruling.

Also sent back to a lower court for further proceedings were three cases from Louisiana.

The court refused to review nine death sentences from Georgia and six from Florida. The court upheld death penalty laws in the two states last Friday.

Sees Better Offerings For Ga. Leaf Markets

ATLANTA (AP) — Heavy

May rain that ruined flue-cured tobacco in some south Georgia fields may have improved the quality of leaf that survived, state Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said today.

When Georgia markets open later this week, Irvin predicted, there will be "much better offerings" than growers brought to market for last year's openings.

"Much of the tobacco that was not seriously damaged by rain was actually helped," Irvin said.

"In many areas we have a thinner, better-quality leaf resulting from the excessive moisture, and this plus larger plantings of the more-preferable 'old line' varieties should make for much better offerings than we had last year."

However, he said the rain damage may have cut the potential harvest on the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco belt by 15 per cent.

Irvin said 18 sets of buyers will be on hand for the opening of markets Thursday compared to 12 sets at last year's openings, and he said the extra buyers should allow growers to sell more tobacco early in the season and wrap up sales by early September.

Last year sales dragged on into October.

Sales begin Thursday at warehouses in Metter, Statesboro, Baxley, Vidalia, Alma, Blackshear, Douglas, Fitzgerald, Tifton, Adel, Nashville, Moultrie, Pelham, Hahira, and Valdosta in Georgia and Jasper, Live Oak and Lake City in Florida.

Friday openings were set for Claxton, Hazlehurst, Waycross, Pearson, Quitman and Thomas-ville in Georgia and Madison and High Springs in Florida.

Georgia growers sold about 153 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco at an average price of $101.50 per hundred pounds last year, said an Agriculture Department spokesman who blamed a lower-quality crop for part of the decline from the previous year.

The record 1974 crop of 159 million pounds brought an average price of $103.23 per hundredweight.

Hijacker Gives Up

PALMA DE MAJORCA, Balearic Islands (AP) — A Libyan

airliner hijacked on a flight within Libya today landed here with 86 persons aboard and the hijacker surrendered, airport sources said.

The hijacker, identified only as a man opposed to the Libyan regime of Col. Moammar Khadafy, gave up to airport police and turned over two toy pistols and two knives to the chief of the airport, the sources said.

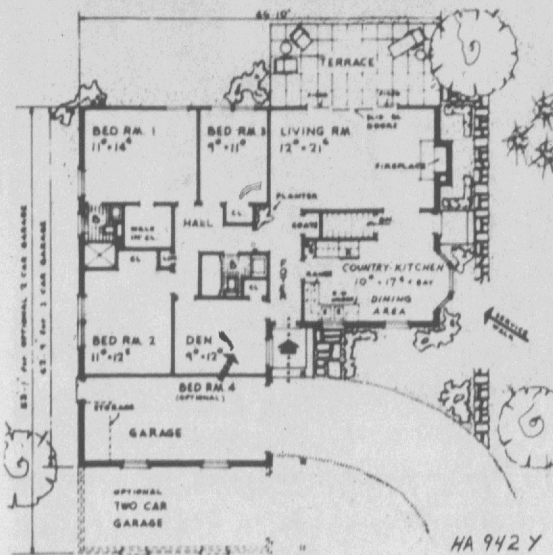

They said nobody was injured and the passengers were being looked after by airport authorities.

Officials in Algiers said the hijacked Boeing 727 jetliner had landed previously at Boufarik air base, 20 miles south of Algiers, after being refused permission to land at the Tunis and Algiers airports. The base is the headquarters of the Algerian air force.

Algerian authorities said the plane stayed at Boufarik only about 10 minutes, then flew on to Palma de Majorca. There was no information on whether it refueled in Algeria.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

INFORMALITY IS THE theme of living in this small ranch house. The living room has sliding glass doors to the rear terrace. The kitchen, with a dining bay window, allows ample room for family dining for most all meals. And a flexible floor plan arrangement provides a multi-purpose room accessible from two sides. Thus, it can be used as a den or an additional bedroom, according to need. Plan HA942Y, designed by Herman H. York, has 1,352 square feet. Quiet A Luxury In Crowded City

By PAUL LOONG
HONG KONG (UPI) — Peace and quiet in this booming, overcrowded city are luxuries available only to the very rich or the very deaf.

Almost everybody else lives in constant noise, day and night. With 85 per cent of the 4.367 million population huddled together in some 15 square miles of urban space, each person is within earshot of dozens, perhaps hundreds, of others.

Aside from normal household noises such as television, radio and quarreling, there is the distinctly local dissonance — the earshattering game of mah jong, sometimes played throughout the night.

Traffic noise reaches its peak shortly after dawn and stays that way until long after nightfall. The early morning lull in the streets is often shattered by gangs of motorcyclists riding without mufflers.

Heavy construction in this city, which seems to be perpetually tearing itself down and rebuilding, is legally permitted to start at 6 a.m. and continue until 8 p.m. Roadworks are almost incessantly under way, with four private utility companies and various government departments at work.

Early this year, the government launched a month-long antinoise publicity campaign "to make the public aware of the problem of noise around us," an official said. More such campaigns are planned, although they will be, like the first one, mainly publicity, he said.

Legislation extending the ban on night construction for two more hours — from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. — and a total construction ban on Sundays and holidays is being drafted and should be passed this year, officials said.

Both the antinoise campaign and the new legislation are considered "half-hearted and insufficient" by local critics and some Chinese newspapers.

For example, director of Public Works David McDonald says it is "not practicable at this time to introduce legislation to make the use of quieter piling equipment mandatory, due to a lack of such equipment in Hong Kong."

One local columnist has caricatured that statement as "Catch-22": no such equipment here, therefore no such legislation; and since there is no such legislation, there would be no such equipment brought here.

The noise problem for some 60,000 residents and students in 57 schools in the Kowloon City district is aggravated by an average of 130 incoming and outgoing flights from adjacent Kai Tak International Airport. Built-up areas in the district nestle almost right up to the runway and aircraft approach and leave the airport at rooftop levels.

Students in the area complain that aircraft noise drowns out much of their 40-minute lessons. They said during peak air traffic hours in the afternoon, a plane roars overhead every three or four minutes. Teachers in these schools complain of a lack of concentration among their students. "It is very difficult to hold their interest in what you're teaching when you get interrupted so many times in one lesson," one teacher said.

When the matter was brought up at a recent session of the Legislative Council, the local lawmaking body, Director of Education Kenneth Topley said although aircraft noises "disturb tuition" in schools in the area, it did not "seriously interfere with tuition."

Topley ruled out as too costly proposals to double-glaze school windows to keep out the noise. He said examination results have shown that education of students in the area had not been adversely affected by aircraft noise.

"The director of education should let his children try it," one teacher said. With the government announcing there is "no quick and easy solution to the problem," noise, it seems, is here to stay.

'Wild Horse Annie' Battling Ranchers

Italy's Speechmakers Hint Continuing Crisis

By MICHAEL J. DUFFY
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Speeches by the Italian parliament's new Communist and Christian Democratic presiding officers hint at continuing political crisis.

Aminore Fanfani, the Christian Democrats' leading anti-Communist, called after he was elected president of the Senate Monday for a repudiation of "confused assemblyism" that would blur the lines of division between opposing parties.

Pietro Ingrao, a symbol of Marxist orthodoxy, after his election to head the Chamber of Deputies, spoke of a need for a "new relationship among the political forces."

Ingrao in effect was calling for the next Christian Democratic government to consult with the Communists before formulating their major policies. And Fanfani was rejecting any such role for his long-time foes although they ran only four percentage points behind the Christian Democrats in the national elections two weeks ago.

Ingrao, 61, became the first Italian Communist elected to head one of the houses of parliament as the result of a deal forced on the Christian Democrats by the Communist gains and the refusal of the Socialists to return to a center-left coalition with the Christian Democrats.

The Christian Democrats' next attempt to put together a government is expected to start at the end of the week. They are hoping that the Socialists, who make up the third largest party, will change their position and come back to the cabinet.

Italy's desperate economic situation is the biggest single problem facing the new parliament and the future government, but the Christian Democrats have not come out with any new policies yet. Inflation is running at a rate of 35 per cent, unemployment is at 7 per cent, there was a 3 per cent drop in the gross national product last year, and the lira has made only a slight recovery from the disastrous slide it took earlier this year.

By RUSSELL NIELSEN
RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Velma "Wild Horse Annie" Johnston battled more than 20 years for a federal law protecting the West's wild horses from cruel treatment and slaughter.

She got it, and now has a U.S. Supreme Court ruling to back it up.

Ranchers are up in arms about it. The Bureau of Land Management is caught in the middle.

Mrs. Johnston began her crusade for the "wild ones" in the 1950s when she saw a truckload of them headed for a packing plant where they were to be processed as pet food.

Wild horse roundups were commonplace. "Mustangers" used airplanes and trucks to run them down and force them into corrals. Mrs. Johnston was appalled by the frequent examples of inhumane treatment.

She earned her nickname during her many appearances before the state legislature and Congress. In 1971 Congress passed the present law which bans the use of airplanes and mechanized vehicles in roundups, and gives the bureau the responsibility of managing the animals.

But once they received such protection, the wild horses and burros multiplied rapidly. From an estimated 17,000 when the law was passed, their population doubled within a few years.

Ranchers whose cattle graze on public land complained the wild horses were using too much of the sparse forage and water, leaving too little for domestic livestock. Eventually, sportsmen complained that the competition was harmful to game animals and fish.

The BLM complained it had neither the money nor manpower for roundups which would hold the herds to proper size. Cowboys trying to rope a wild horse usually find themselves eating dust. The wily animals are wary of corrals and traps.

The bureau asked Congress to amend the law so airplanes and mechanized vehicles could again be used to capture the horses when necessary. Meanwhile, it hired wranglers to trap them in corrals at desert waterholes.

Mrs. Johnston appealed to animal lovers throughout the country to "adopt" the surplus horses. Many have been turned over to foster owners.

But the bureau says it is a slow and costly process, and its longrun worth is debatable.

"We have placed about 200 from our first extensive roundup in Stone Cabin Valley near Tonopah," said BLM spokesman Carl Gidlund. "It costs about $400, of which $40 goes to the contractor, to catch a horse and hold it until it is adopted."

"It may be at least a week before the foster owner arrives to pick up the animal. We have to feed it and provide veterinary service until then. The law says we can't give the foster owner clear title to the animal. Likely as not, when it gets to the point of taking the horse, the person may have second thoughts and decide he doesn't want it, after all."

"Down the road, the adoption program will reach the saturation point. With lack of forage and water, and with pressure from ranchers, hunters and fishermen, I'm afraid it will become inevitable we'll have to kill many horses on the range," Gidlund said.

Ranchers were hoping the U.S. Supreme Court would uphold a New Mexico decision that the federal act was an unconstitutional infringement on the rights of states to regulate wild animals which compete with commercial livestock for grazing land.

Instead, the high court held the law was within the constitutional authority of Congress to regulate federally owned land. The blow to ranchers came only a few days after the court, in the Devil's Hole pupfish case, ruled in effect that when the federal government acquires land for public use, it also obtains the needed water rights to preserve the land, despite state licensing of water rights.

Mrs. Johnston was elated at the Supreme Court's wild horse decision, but she agrees there may be trouble ahead.

"My organization has done everything to combat the proposed amendment permitting use of airplanes, but I think it will pass," she said. "Some roundup contractors would be careful, but there will always be those whose main concern is to get as many head as possible, since that's how they are paid. We also oppose transfer of title because that opens the door to killing the animals."

"The law does provide for humane destruction of excess horses," she said. "Nothing should be allowed to increase beyond the limit of the land to sustain. But if we didn't have the law protecting the wild ones, you would be able to write this story in blood."

She said not all free-roaming horses are wild. Some are privately owned, and may be reclaimed upon proof of ownership and payment of owed grazing fees. If they are unclaimed, they may be auctioned, possibly for slaughter. The unclaimed, unbranded horses are considered wild and should be kept in control and balance, she said.

"We are going to do everything possible to absorb excess animals. It's man's encroachment on their habitat that is constantly shrinking it. The adoption program is one avenue of protecting the horses. If it reaches the saturation point, at least we can say we did everything possible."

Best Aids In 'Bereavement'

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — When someone dies in a family, what do you say or do to help the sorrowing? What is least helpful?

These questions led David L. Haun of Cushing, Okla., to study three aspects of bereavement and the funeral experience for his research toward a doctorate in home economics at Oklahoma State University.

His study sample included 471 clergy and 200 bereaved in Oklahoma plus 184 funeral directors in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Kansas. The clergymen represented 18 different religious denominations and each of the bereaved had lost a family member within the year before the study.

Haun's findings about the bereaved showed the main things said to them that were most helpful were good memories about the deceased and values in his or her life that were really appreciated.

"Also mentioned as helpful were religious comments on the strengths of the deceased or the help of God in the bereaved's own life," said Haun, a minister of the Christian Disciples of Christ.

"Many times people say, 'I am afraid I'm going to say the wrong thing or I don't know what to say.' And people coming in after the death seemed almost afraid to mention the deceased by name."

"But if you know something good, say it, because the sorrowing want to ventilate their hurts," he continued.

He found it takes no great ability to do the right thing with the bereaved because they are not particular about what is said or done, as long as it is positive.

The bereaved tended to say the people they remembered most favorably were those who came quickly as soon as they heard of the death. Haun found the sorrowing didn't feel people had to stay very long. But many said friends came and stayed until relatives got there.

"Helpful things done were simple things like answering the door, straightening up the living room, doing the dishes or taking care of the children — things anybody would be able to do."

"Then after the funeral was over, the bereaved appreciated simple things such as people inviting them out to eat, calling them on the telephone, stopping by and saying 'Just wanted to see if you wanted to go and play cards or do something else this afternoon.'"

After the funeral was over, the bereaved needed some help. They begged people not to forget them, to let them talk about the deceased and show their emotions.

Most of the bereaved said they had a hard or extremely hard time adjusting to the death experience. The degree of adjustment difficulty experienced depended on the relationship of the deceased and their level of religious orientation.

Those losing a child tended to have a more serious adjustment difficulty than those losing any other relative, including a mate. This finding differs from earlier research.

The bereaved with a higher level of religious orientation reported easier adjustment to the death experience.

Among suggestions the bereaved gave to help others face grief after death of a loved one were developing a meaningful religious faith, keeping busy and remembering the good things.

They also suggested making funeral, business and family arrangements in advance; understanding various stages of grief they will experience, and accepting death as a normal part of life.

Contrary to much current literature, Haun found most people in his sample openly discussed death in their childhood homes, without reluctance or hesitation on the part of their parents.

Most of the bereaved preferred burial for disposing of their bodies. While funeral directors objected to donating one's remains to science, many clergy saw nothing wrong with it.

Over 95 per cent of the bereaved felt very positive toward the funeral director, saying they felt no serious pressure to buy or do anything and would recommend the funeral home to others or use it again themselves.

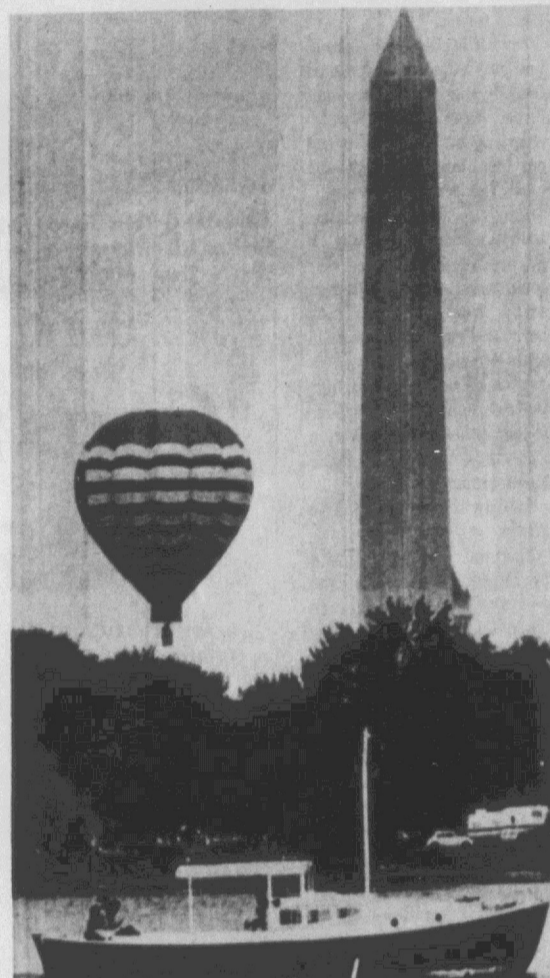

Over 90 per cent said they saw more value in funerals now than before their bereavement experience, mentioning most often religious values and the opportunity for friends to offer the family comfort in their sorrow.

Over 60 per cent of the funeral directors wanted the casket open at the time of the funeral, compared with almost 80 per cent of the clergy who wished it to remain closed. Haun found the bereaved almost evenly divided between wanting the casket open or closed.

No Charges In Collision Here

No charges were reported following investigation of a 12:35 p.m. collision here yesterday at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road.

Officers reported a car driven by Barbara Louise Lamb of Richmond, Va. and a truck driven by Timothy Jesse Butler of Cherry Point collided, causing an estimated $150 damage to each of the two vehicles.

Home Ceremony

WASHINGTON — In a private ceremony Elsie Weatherington Buck and Terry Wayne Woolard pledged their double ring vows before Carson Tyson. The wedding took place Saturday, June 26, at the home of the bridegroom.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Nathan W. Weatherington of Vanceboro and Mr. and Mrs. Russell V. Wollard of Washington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a cream beige polyester cotton-voile over taffeta gown. The bodice was styled with a V-neckline, highrise midriff with covered button trim. The sheer long sleeves were accented by bands of lace with lace ruffling on the cuffs, the same ruffle lace motif outlining the V-neck.

The floor length skirt was finished with a deep flounce, and she wore a beige picture hat and carried a nosegay of yellow sweetheart roses, daisies and baby's breath with satin streamers.

Mrs. Tammy Mills Whitehurst, a niece, attended as matron of honor.

Dwight Woolard, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride is a graduate of D. H. Conley High School. The bride is a graduate of Bath High School.

Both are employed by

Mrs. Terry Woolard

National Spinning Co.

A reception was held following the ceremony.

The wedding table was covered in white lace highlighted by a three-tiered wedding cake. Punch was poured by Mrs. Sylvia, sister of the bride.

Mrs. Ernestine Wollard, mother of the bridegroom, served the wedding cake after the first traditional slices were cut by the couple. Miss Lorna Dee Weatherington of Greenville, a niece of the bride, presided at the guest register.

Doctor's Bills Like Car Payments?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to say that her husband had gone to a doctor six years ago and had a complete physical examination. The doctor told him he needed an operation. She said her husband never had the operation and never went back, and he's never felt better in his life. This reminds me of the following:

Doctor to Patient: "You're in bad shape. You should have an operation."

Patient: "How much will it cost?"

Doc: "Eight thousand dollars."

Patient: "Gee, Doc, you know I don't have that kind of money."

Doc: "I'll make it easy for you. Give me $3,000 down and pay me $100 a month until the bill is paid."

Patient: "That's just like buying a new car."

Doc: "I am."

NO DOPE IN N.J.

DEAR ABBY: I have put off writing to you long enough. I have fallen out of love with my husband. We've been married for eight years, we have two beautiful, healthy children and a nice home. I don't have to work, I have a car of my own, and from all outside appearances I have it made.

My husband is a good father, is generous and is easy-to-live with and I know he loves me, but I am sick to death of faking it in the bedroom. I just don't feel a thing for him romantically. I respect him and I really like him, but he's more like a big brother than a husband.

I haven't told him how I feel because I just hate to hurt him. He's such a decent guy. He really deserves better than a wife who can't return his love. We talk about everything but this. Please help me.

TIRED OF ACTING

DEAR TIRED: Tell your husband that you and he should see a marriage counselor. Then do it. If you can't work through the problems that have made you more of a "sister" than a loving wife, level with him. You're right. He deserves better. And there's much more to marriage than you're getting.

DEAR ABBY: I have something to say to HISTORY BUFF who claims that a double-wedding ring ceremony has no meaning. According to him, his old German Bible (1888) says the wedding ring signifies that a woman is no longer a free and independent person, but she's in bondage to her husband. She owes him obedience as a subject owes obedience to his master.

Well, in MY book, a double-ring ceremony joins a man and woman together in holy matrimony as equals.

So, HISTORY BUFF, stick it in your ear and blow it through your nose. For your information, I am only 12, and I plan to have a double-ring ceremony whether you like it or not!

A STRONG VIEW AT 12

DEAR STRONG VIEW: My guess is you're speaking for the second generation of women's libbers, right?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Acting, Writing, Farming, Politics--She Did It

By DAN TEDRICK
Associated Press Writer

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — The theater playbill said "be-loved...delightful" in front of Izetta Jewel's name.

In history's list of remarkable women, the superlatives will be even grander.

Today, 92 and in a convalescent home here, she recalls success in a half-dozen careers — politics, farming, travel, social work, journalism and acting.

The secret, as the Fairmont, W. Va., Times once wrote, is her "grit."

As the first woman ever to address a national political convention, she "woke even a bored and tired audience," wrote Heywood Brown. A delegate nominated her for vice president.

President William Howard Taft got word of the sinking of the Titanic in 1912 while in Washington's Poli Theater but stayed on, enraptured by Miss Jewel's performance.

President Woodrow Wilson called her his favorite.

Helen Hayes was as thrilled at Izetta's birthday party in 1973 as she was as a child, playing a small role in a stage play in which Miss Jewel and Otis Skinner were the stars.

The League of Nations was her pet as she spoke out frequently and tirelessly before and after it was born. In Tientsin, China, she was received by a boy emperor.

In Rome, she met Mussolini while she attended the International Suffrage Congress.

In 1921 she was political chairman of the new National Women's party.

She twice sought the Democrats' U.S. Senate nomination from West Virginia, barely losing the second time and by a wider margin the first.

A native of Hackettstown, N.J., and daughter of an actress, Izetta Jewel trained for the theater at several eastern schools and began acting at the age of 15 in Boston. She played in stock company productions on both coasts, becoming the leading lady of the old Poli Theater.

A newspaper said Izetta was "the highest paid of any stock company star in the business" and had 35 marriage offers before she picked Rep. William Gay Brown Jr., D-W. Va., in 1914.

The young congressman died two years later, leaving his widow a reported $3.5 million and their daughter, Izetta Jewel, nicknamed Juno for Junior.

He also left three large farms in Kingwood, W. Va., which his widow took over. In no time she was a member of the first national women's committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation and a well known raiser of purebred milch cows.

In 1925, she married Hugh G. Miller, dean of engineering at George Washington University. Miller later taught at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., where his wife was named commissioner of public welfare.

In 1928, she was featured in the first play ever televised, sent from Schenectady's Station WGYA to a set with a three-inch screen in the home of a local electronics pioneer.

In 1944, after years of volunteer work in such Franklin D. Roosevelt efforts as the Works Progress Administration, she campaigned for FDR's fourth term and the Millers retired to southern California.

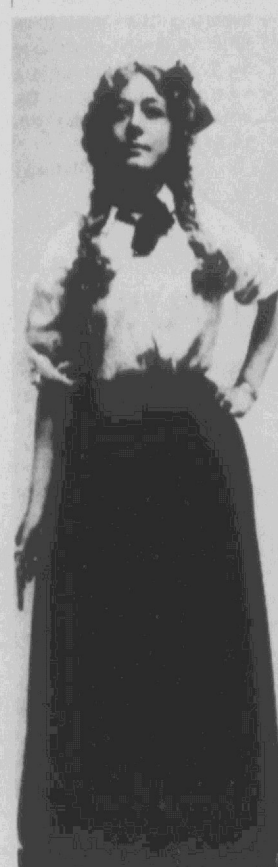

Miller, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel, died in 1965. Their daughter is the wife of John C. A. Watkins, president and publisher of the Providence Journal Co. in Rhode Island.

A radio commentator's job in San Diego was the next challenge for Mrs. Miller, who was promptly elected a vice president of the American Women in Radio and Television.

The Portland Rose Festival, which named Izetta its first queen in 1908, honored her in its 50th anniversary parade in 1958.

Although she is now confined to a wheelchair at the Torrey Pines Convalescent Home in this posh San Diego suburb, until just recently she swam daily in the usually chill Pacific.

Hat Designer Says Youth's Dressing Up More

By JOY STILLEY

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Olive, a big man who has made it big in the world of millinery design, started out small — in a 65-by-84-inch "salon."

"I had my own shop in an old popcorn stand I rented in Greenwich Village. There was room for only one customer at a time," recalls the 190-pound, 6-foot-1 Olive.

He sold hats and accessories — scarves, blouses and jewelry — which he made in the little room he lived in, where there was barely room for his sewing machine.

Olive started out as a costume designer, after studying at the Art Institute in Chicago. Working for "anything that came along" from opera to Las Vegas night club reviews, he sketched, designed, fitted, remade and improvised.

"Then I came to New York thinking they were waiting for me," says the personable designer, who wears steel-rimmed glasses, a mustache and goatee. "But they didn't even know I was here and in order to survive I started making sketches for Seventh Avenue (New York City's garment district)."

Famed couturier Norman Norell asked whose hats were on the sketches and when he learned Olive had originated the designs to "balance the figures" suggested he go into the hat design field.

"In school we had had to learn to make everything, including hats and shoes, but I had never really made hats before," says Olive, who took an apprenticeship with hat designer Chanda. "I got a workaday knowledge of hat production there, but it took another 15 years to learn, working in the custom department of stores and for top hat designers."

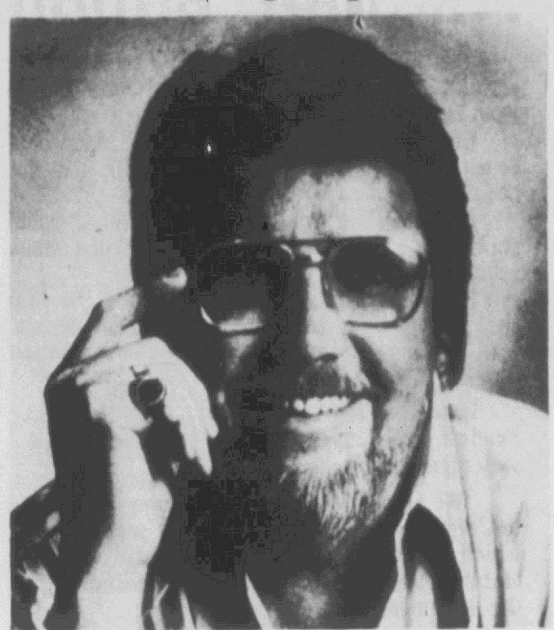

Olive remembers the first hat he ever made — a saucy little Easter sailor, navy, trimmed with navy veiling with white polka dots, a white dove and navy blue bird perched on the crown.

"I was on a bus and saw a lady walking on Fifth Avenue, wearing my hat with the veil on backward and I could hardly wait to get off and tell her so," he says with a laugh. "I caught up with her and she only said, 'Oh, but that's how I prefer to wear it.'"

Now he designs 95 per cent for the wholesale trade, while the rest is custom work. And he travels some 20 weeks a year for in-store, television and charitable function appearances "to educate myself as to the needs of women from Oshkosh to Beverly Hills and to serve as ambassador for my product."

"The younger customer is dressing again," he reports.

"Your rebellious flower child with the thrift shop granny dresses is conforming more now, though not losing her originality."

FRANK OLIVE

"She knows she doesn't have to wear a navy hat, shoes, gloves, all matching. She'll wear jeans with a designer belt and a great antique bracelet with utilitarian things and mix it all together. She doesn't have Sunday best."

Olive, who has recently started designing "soft and comfortable" hats to go with airline uniforms keeps in close touch with fashion trends.

"I work with the major designers, with fiber people, with shoe people. I take what I know of fashion trends, and accessorize the head for the proper balance," he explains.

Olive says hats should fit a woman's lifestyle as well as suit her costume. "Remember, a hat is an accessory; it must not dominate either you or your costume," he adds.

The 40-year-old bachelor, who has an apartment in Manhattan, enjoys cooking, growing plants and doing gros point rugs.

"I've already done 13 area rugs in my own design," he says. "Eight are in my big living room and five are in the closet."

By ERMA BOMBECK

This thing with Congressman Hays, who allegedly hired a secretary who couldn't type or answer the phone, has really opened up a can of worms.

Some men are so devious. One guy told his wife he hired a secretary who was handicapped. It turned out she was married.

A group of us were working on an embroidered sampler the other afternoon and were talking about our husbands' secretaries. "Come to think of it," said Jan, "John's secretary doesn't type, take dictation, answer the phone or file."

"You got straight through to your husband without going through a secretary?" we asked.

"Don't be ridiculous!" she said. "She doesn't speak English. She's French."

"That sounds reasonable. A man needs to expand his mind," we nodded.

"Joe's secretary is bright enough," said Marci. "In fact I helped him select her."

"That's smart," we said. "Only one thing bothers me. On her application under 'sex' she wrote in 'yes.'"

"A man needs a secretary with a good sense of humor," we nodded.

"Ken's secretary is a real stitch," said Margaret. "I don't have to worry about her. She really keeps Ken loose all the time."

"Like how?"

"Like they assigned her to the secretary pool and she reported wearing a bathing suit."

"A man needs someone around who can relieve tensions once in a while," we nodded.

"Well, I trust my husband implicitly," said Judy, dialing her husband's office number. Speaking into the phone she said, "Hello darling. Miss you. Come home early. I'm at Erma's and we just had the most stimulating discussion. Why don't you call me at home at three?"

"You got straight through to your husband without going through a secretary?" we asked.

"Oh she doesn't answer the phone," said Judy. "I was recording my message on tape."

"Maybe they're at lunch," we suggested.

"She doesn't come in that early," said Judy.

We all worked in silence on our sampler which read, "NO MAN STANDS SO TALL AS WHEN HE STOOPS TO HIRE A HOMEMELY SECRETARY."

Another Bailout Plan Offered

Another bailout plan emerged at the economic summit conference being held at San Juan, Puerto Rico last week.

Under the plan a multibillion dollar fund would be established to aid western nations with financial problems.

It is possible that the United States would contribute as much as $2 billion to the fund which might total $6.1 billion.

Financially troubled Italy might be the first recipient of aid from the fund and Great Britain, with its ailing economy, might be another nation which would receive aid.

Leaders of the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany issued a statement on the plan.

"We recognize that problems may arise for a few developed countries which have special needs, which have not yet restored domestic economic stability, and which face major payments deficits," the statement said.

It would be expected that nations receiving aid would put their fiscal houses in order by balancing their budgets and taking other austerity moves.

Sending money to other nations is not very palatable, but this may be a necessary and even desirable move for the United States to make if we are to protect the free enterprise system.

The communists have already made gains in recent Italian elections and if economic conditions worsen there we can expect still further communist strength.

We might look on the western aid program as a form of insurance similar to the Federal Deposit Insurance which protects our banks. If one segment of the western economy weakens the troubled country can draw on the fund set up by the allied nations. It should be expected, of course, that once Italy or Great Britain or any other participating country gets back on its feet economically it, too, would contribute to the fund. This might be the only way the free enterprise system can be maintained worldwide.

Mostly Locally Contrived Celebrations

Americans celebrated the 200th birthday of the nation Sunday in a way which surprised even our citizens.

For the most part, the celebrations were planned locally and citizens joined in with anthusiasm and patriotism that hasn't been seen perhaps since World War II days.

It was a great day for our nation, and after years of kicking ourselves we seem at last to be developing a new appreciation of how fortunate we are to live in the United States.

A Push For Foreign Trade

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—It will take some months—possibly a year or two—but North Carolina is moving to the front in capturing foreign trade activities.

Two factors are at work: —There is growing interest across the state in Foreign Trade Zone legislation tucked away in the state's appropriations bill by the recent session of the General Assembly.

—Trade experts foresee a major shift of industrial firms from Japan and Western Europe to the United States.

Charlotte is in the lead in terms of establishing Foreign Trade Zone facilities. The Chamber of Commerce in that city pushed the idea early, gaining support from officials of the State Department of Natural and Economic Resources and from the State Ports Authority.

Law Passed
Then, Chamber President William J. Veeder and the Mecklenburg legislative delegation worked at getting state authority to use federal Foreign Trade Zone provisions adopted by the General Assembly even though only budgetary matters were on the agenda at the May session. That was accomplished by wording which allowed the industry-hunting agency to spend money for the purpose.

Charlotte sources remain mum on what is developing in that area as a result of the push for Foreign Trade Zones, but it is known that things are moving in the direction of a facility of several acres in the form of an industrial park, in which several foreign firms would be quartered.

The attractiveness of the Foreign Trade Zone concept is that goods could be imported from foreign areas for warehousing and distribution, manufacturing processes, or assembly and processing without the import duties being paid at the time of receipt.

Duties would be collected when imported items were shipped for sale in the United States. If the assembled or manufactured item were exported to another foreign country for sale, the duty would never be collected.

Establishing a Foreign Trade Zone in a community is both costly and time-consuming. Strict federal regulations must be complied with, and heavy security steps are required, thus, automatically limiting the size of such a zone. Customs officials must keep strict control of the imported goods from the port of entry to final shipment out of the zone.

The benefit to a community, Charlotte Chamber President Veeder says, will be in the form of jobs created by the new firms.

Six Ports
North Carolina has six ports of entry—two on the coast and four airports. The Raleigh-Durham area, in addition to Charlotte, is looking into the Foreign Trade Zone concept.

There are now some 23 areas of the country which have such zones under a 1934 federal law, with some close competitors of this state moving rapidly to get into the predicting a ripe market for expansion of industry as the result of pending shifts in the world economy.

Labor costs in America have traditionally been higher than those in Japan and Europe, but economists now see that pattern changing due to increased cost of "social legislation" abroad in which industrial firms pay higher costs of health services and other items for their employees.

The result is interest among foreign industrialists to escape the socialist trend by migrating to the United States, and experts also expect the direction of such moves to be to the South in search of better climate, lower labor costs, and workers who are more devoted to their jobs; the same factors which have been attracting companies leaving the northern states in this country.

States industry hunters say the combination of Foreign Trade Zones and revenue bond financing for industrial development give them a potent tool in working with foreign clients.

The Judges And Literacy

The U. S. Supreme Court winds up its annual term this week, leaving to others the wearisome task of reading what the Court hath wrought. After four hours of groping through the ground fog of jurisprudential prose, I am minded to grumble a journalist's word or two. Why do judges write such wretched stuff?

Many of my lawyer friends privately share this layman's critical view. They venture several reasons. Most judicial opinions are hard to read, they say, because the subject matter is complex; opinions cannot be simplified without sacrificing precision to clarity. The language of the law is in part an unknown tongue to ordinary readers. Finally, most of the high court's majority opinions are the end products of the committee process; and in the history of mankind, no committee ever wrote anything that could be enjoyably read.

Doubtless such reasons explain a good deal. Allowing for all that, I still am minded to grouse. High court opinions don't have to be tedious. The country has known good judges who were good writers also. Go back, sometime, and read the collected opinions of John Marshall. The great Virginian wrote sentences that fell like shafts of sunlight, illuminating the whole of the law. Holmes and Brandeis and Jackson turned many a fine phrase. More recently, Frankfurter, Douglas and Black exhibited pith and punch. They were lively writers. Alas, we have a dull lot now.

Between June 10 and June 25, the Court delivered itself of 22 opinions. On a recent rainy afternoon I read them all, from Tennessee v. Duniap through Massachusetts v. Murgia. It would have been easier work to cut high grass in the noonday sun. In the whole turgid mass was not a single good sentence. Not one. Rehnquist almost made it. In a dissenting opinion involving the Serbian Orthodox Church, he twice came close to a lucid line. In the first attempt, he lost to verbosity, in the second he left an orphaned antecedent.

Otherwise, the afternoon was altogether grim. It would be pleasant if the Chief Justice, as first among the nine, would introduce his brothers to the interesting punctuation point that follows upon this word. That dot, he might say, is known as a period. Sad to say, the Chief has yet to be introduced himself. He writes a sentence of 65 words as sardonically as he writes a sentence of only 58.

Rehnquist, bless his conservative heart, tries hard. At least he breaks up his long sentences with short ones. But he cannot resist the out-of-town word. Thus he speaks of "a lacuna in the statute." In ordinary parlance, a lacuna is a gap, a hole, a blank space. Why not say so? And acknowledging that there is, of course, no

Other Editors Say Likely To Worsen

(The Wilson Times)

If it were as easy to find a way to stop the increase in "hard-core" crimes as it is to predict the growth, the statistics would be more valuable. Past experience shows the increase in crime but very little is being done anywhere to help the conditions.

We recently saw two young boys in their early teens being carried to the courthouse after first being taken to the police station. There is no question as to the number of young persons going into crime as a way of life. Yes, more young people are getting longer prison sentences. "Hard-core" prisoners with longer sentences are causing the most serious crowding at Central Prison in Raleigh, the state's major maximum security unit.

Conditions are bad now, but not as bad as they will become, as officials foresee things getting much worse as the trend toward crime increases. By the end of 1977, an inmate population of 15,056 is expected, by the end of 1980 it may hit 16,750 and by 1983, 17,398.

This is not a situation to look forward to as there are more than 13,150 prisoners jammed into space designed to hold 10,075. Plans call for adding 1,016 new cells at 13 prison units across the state. Some additional space is being developed at juvenile training schools as that population declines.

But the future conditions of the prisons are obvious as shown by a report, "A Changing Direction," just published by the Department of Corrections.

Reviewing the history of the system in North Carolina, taking stock of the present, and looking ahead caused Ralph D. Edwards, director of prisons, to observe, "The future will require expanded prison facilities if the goals of reasonable protection for those in jail as well as for the general public are to be reached."

The most significant trend was the young ages of those sentenced and longer terms for more serious crimes. Now you can find the statistics which prove the young are becoming criminals at an early age, but to date no one has come forward with a plan to stop the trend.

Connally Gains Support

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. — Only minutes after former Texas Gov. John B. Connally laid them in the aisles Wednesday evening with a slam-bang attack on Jimmy Carter, spiced with uplifting optimism about Republican victory in November, party leaders in this conservative Republican stronghold were quietly promoting a Ford-Connally presidential ticket.

Calling Connally's 30-minute off-the-cuff pep talk "the greatest" ever delivered in Suffolk County (where Ronald Reagan read his speech last October), Edwin M. (Buzz) Schwenk, county Republican leader, told us that Connally is the "obvious" vice-presidential choice if Ford wins the presidential nomination.

Indeed, added Schwenk, Connally's presumed Southern appeal was by far the best Republican riposte to Carter's own Dixie Accent. This was true, he said, even if Reagan did not mean what he said in Mississippi 10 days ago, that there was "no way" he himself would accept the second spot on a Ford ticket.

Schwenk's studied enthusiasm for Connally as Mr. Ford's running-mate followed the party's annual fund-raising banquet at the gaudy Colony Hill Inn here (which netted over $200,000). Republican operatives here felt the mere fact Schwenk privately plugged a Ford-Connally ticket strongly implied that he and six other uncommitted delegates to the Republican national convention are locked up for the President. Schwenk refused to tell us when or how the seven delegates he heads — nearly half this state's acknowledged uncommitted bloc of delegates — would finally make their decision.

But others among the seven said privately that, barring some totally unexpected development, all would move into the Ford camp en bloc, denying Reagan a delegate conquest which would have carried immense rewards, both arithmetical and psychological. Schwenk's appraisal of Connally as the much-preferred vice-presidential choice — if Mr. Ford wins the nomination — sent a shock of pleasure through Texas Republican state chairman Ray Hutchison, who accompanied Connally here and who has been aggressively promoting a Ford-Connally ticket.

What gives the project a solid foundation is Connally's acceptance by most Republican conservatives, including Reaganites, plus Connally's unique assets as a Southern counterpoint to Carter. The problem is Reagan — and Connally's political immobility. If Reagan loses the presidential nomination, the vice-presidential spot would be his for the asking, no matter what Mr. Ford — or any other anti-Reagan Republicans — wanted.

Far more subtle, however, is the problem of Connally having to remain politically blind, deaf and dumb. Connally must scrupulously preserve his present neutrality in the Ford-Reagan battle. The slightest move toward Mr. Ford, for example, would alienate most Reagan delegates and automatically bar the vice-presidential door. Likewise, undercover campaigning by Connally for the vice-presidential nomination —

HAS GOD RESIGNED?
A printer recently made a mistake in setting up a church bulletin. A responsive reading was supposed to contain the line, "The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice." But the printer set the type to read, "The Lord resigneth, let the earth rejoice."

There are are many people who believe that the Lord has resigned. They think that he has turned the management of the world's affairs over to Satan, or to dictators, or to scheming politicians and chiselers. But everyone who bases his reasoning on such an assumption is due for a rude awakening. The chaotic condition of much of the world might lead an observer to believe that the Lord has resigned. Evils seem to multiply with no end in sight. But anyone who thinks that this situation means that the Lord has resigned is making a great mistake. The Lord still reigns over the universe and at the end of all things will vindicate the righteous.

Peace Corps Abroad

By DAVID MINTHORN

Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — "The Peace Corps," says Hedwig Maurach of West Germany's Volunteer Service, "is our ancestral mother. It's a shame American volunteers have been made scapegoats for the Vietnam War and the CIA."

Inspired by the U.S. Peace Corps, West Germany and other western European countries have sent thousands of skilled volunteers overseas for grassroots aid projects in former colonies and emerging nations of Asia, Africa and South America.

The European aid workers keep low profiles and try to avoid the type of political controversies that forced the Peace Corps to leave eight countries in recent years.

West German volunteers must sign pledges that they won't involve themselves in host country politics while overseas. "We've never been asked to leave a host country. That's one of the advantages of not being a world power," said Miss Maurach.

France, Britain, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Austria also sponsor volunteer services like the U.S. Peace Corps, but they put more stress on experts — doctors and nurses, agronomists, engineers and craftsmen — rather than America-style generalists and classroom teachers.

At its peak in the mid-1960s, the U.S. agency had over 15,000 volunteers in 48 countries and a budget of $114 million. Now it has 6,690 volunteers in 68 countries and $67.1 million for fiscal 1977.

Michael P. Balzano Jr., director of Action, overseer of the American program, says the Peace Corps can only meet 70 per cent of host country requests for highly skilled volunteers.

"We think the Peace Corps has reached its optimum size given international and domestic problems," he said last month.

West Germany's government-sponsored service now has 850 volunteers overseas—mostly in Tanzania, Ecuador, Peru, Zambia and Cameroon — down from more than 1,000 at its peak in 1969.

Dr. Ralph W. McDonald pulled a 2,418-vote majority in Pitt County in the Democratic gubernatorial run-off primary, although the bitter administration foe was defeated by party stalwart Clyde R. Hoey of Shelby.

Unofficial returns for the county showed that Pitt voters favored Paul Grady, also defeated, for lieutenant governor.

Thad Eure, nominated for secretary of state, was the only winning candidate on the state ticket for whom the county cast a majority of its ballots.

The Greenies took two of three games played since Thursday of last week by defeating the New Bern Bears 5-0, dropping a game to the Ayden Aces Saturday by a 6-3 score, and nosing out the Snow Hill nine yesterday with an 8-7 score.

Dangers Of Numbers Obvious

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Now it is the White House itself that claims the latest government statistics, which show the jobless rate in June rose to 7.5 per cent from 7.3 per cent the month before, are incorrect.

There are more important observations to be made than to point out the ironies of that position. Every American should recognize, for example, the dangers of numbers that are not nearly as perfect as they might seem to be.

But we cannot forget that it was the White House that previously took such pride in calling attention to the numbers, and which in fact has run its economic policy by the numbers. Over the past year, when these economic numbers were improving, the White House used them to demonstrate what a good job it was doing. It almost never called attention to the later revisions.

Time after time those numbers—for sales and inflation and Gross National Product and more — that looked so good on the initial release were quietly revised later to show that things really weren't quite so good.

But seldom did anyone take pains to tell the people this. In claiming that the rise in unemployment from 7.3 per cent in May to 7.5 per cent in June was due to faulty seasonal adjusting, the White House may have an argument, despite the Bureau of Labor Statistics' claim to accuracy.

Seasonal adjusting not only is tricky, it is fraught with possibilities for error. It is not nearly the scientifically accurate measurement that we assume it to be. It went wrong last year; it may be wrong this year.

The ideal of seasonal adjusting is to remove the recurring factors that are peculiar to a certain time of year, such as the bulge in jobs during Christmas and in sales during Easter, so as to detect the underlying patterns.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics has had problems with this factor and has even gone back and corrected its errors. By its own admission it goofed on some months last year, and it has changed some procedures this year.

Because problems also have occurred in collecting raw data — acknowledged by the bureau but not very well publicized — there is almost never any assurance that the figures announced are a precisely accurate indication of economic activity.

While only God knows what bad decisions human beings have made by the numbers, the immediate and urgent danger is that, coming on the eve of our presidential nominations, we might even elect a president by the numbers.

Without even knowing what the numbers mean.

Daughter Plays A Big Business Role

By ROBERTA G. WAX
BUENA PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Marion Knott has not only watched her parent's farm grow into a multimillion dollar amusement park, she has been responsible for much of the growth.

Her latest contribution to Knott's Berry Farm is the new Roaring 20s area, which includes an amusement arcade, theater and rides and a newly opened Roaring 20s Airfield.

Youngest daughter of park founders Walter and Cordelia Knott, Ms. Knott's involvement with the farm came early. Born in the old farmhouse that still stands in the park, she helped pick the boysenberries that gave Knott's its early reputation. Later, she worked as a waitress in the family's chicken dinner restaurant.

"I'm very proud of the place, of the way its grown," said Ms. Knott, 54, now director of design and planning. "I love the expansion, the excitement and the growth."

Her favorite part of the park, she said with a twinkle, is "the Roaring 20s, of course. That's my baby."

Three generations are involved in operating the farm, with the Knotts' son and three daughters each handling a different managerial position.

"I've always been interested in the creative and design phase of the business," Ms. Knott said. "I'm not too good at sitting at a desk."

According to a family policy "if you think of an idea, you're usually assigned to carry it through." That is how she became involved in designing both the Roaring 20s exhibit and Fiesta Village, "a tribute to the Spanish and Mexican heritage that is so important to California."

She said all park expansions coordinate with the park's general nostalgia theme. The first, Ghost Town, was built by Walter Knott in 1940 to entertain the long lines of patrons waiting for his wife's fried chicken dinners.

Fiesta Village, she feels, is compatible with that original theme, as is the Roaring 20s exhibit. Just as her father made Ghost Town a tribute to his parents, who came to California on a covered wagon, so the Roaring 20s, she said, is a tribute to her parents who began their farm in that era.

The Airfield, she said, is another extension of the era, because aviation "was such an important part of our history in the 1920s. That was the big thing to do when I was a girl, go down to the airfield."

The new area, she explained, "changed our image" from strictly a nostalgia place to an all-around amusement park and boosted summer attendance by a million persons.

"So many people that came to the park as children thought we didn't have anything new for them. And an amusement park is about the best form of family entertainment today."

Ms. Knott, enthusiastic about her work, personally tests each ride before it is bought, then works closely with the design department and supervises most aspects.

Knott's Berry Farm is only about 10 miles from Disneyland, but Ms. Knott said she doesn't feel any competition at all with that giant amusement facility.

"We're different from Disneyland or any of the other theme parks. Where those other parks are based on a fantasy or future theme, we're based on nostalgia, on history."

"I feel we complement each other. Southern California is a destination point for vacationers. We feel the more things there are for people to do, the more they want to come here."

Ms. Knott, mother of a son, 30, who also works for Knott's, and a daughter, 26, is divorced from her husband of 30 years, but the two still have a close relationship. He is in charge on park ride maintenance and "is my best friend in the world. It's a great arrangement."

She said she found it hard to raise a family and be involved with the farm.

"I probably spent more time at the farm than I should have while my children were growing up. It's not impossible to have a family and a career, but you have to fix your priorities. But I was born here and it was a normal thing to get involved."

Another advantage to being born to the farm, she said, was her position as a businesswoman in a male-dominated world.

"Being an owner gives you a little more weight," she said, smiling. "But you still have to establish your credibility."

Sometimes, she noted, it's hard to separate the family from the business. They have business meetings every Thursday, but even family gatherings often turn into business forums.

However, she noted, the business has kept the family very close and she can't foresee a time when Knott's Berry Farm would cease to be a family affair.

"It wouldn't be the same. I couldn't possibly work all my life for something and then give it up."

conceivable only if Mr. Ford beats Reagan — would expose him to similar alienation.

Indeed, to position himself most advantageously would require Connally to ingratiate himself with the Reagan camp by supporting Reagan for the presidential nomination. But overt support for Reagan might actually help Reagan beat Mr. Ford — and at the very least would turn the President against Connally.

Thus, Connally maintained strict neutrality at a pre-dinner press conference here, but his praise for Mr. Ford as President ("a very excellent job... a whale of a record") seemed downright fulsome compared to Connally's judgment only several months ago.

Beyond that Connally dare not go, leaving him in a political posture of suspended animation, dependent on the winds of fortune. Even that posture, however, finds him closer to a return to political power than at any time since a federal court cleared him of political bribery charges in 1975.

The pro-Connally enthusiasm of more than 2,000 Republicans here Wednesday night — a low turnout — showed how pathetically eager the Republicans are for some signal somewhere that the 1976 election is not already wrapped up for Jimmy Carter. Connally's rhetoric supplied it.

Such spell-binding fervor, absent in the gray pedestrianism of Mr. Ford's White House, might rescue a Ford presidential campaign from insufferable boredom. To Buzz Schwenk and some other Republicans here, that is almost as important as Connally's conservative regionalism. And to Connally, it means an unlikely but potentially strategic base in the Northeast for a possible Ford-Connally ticket.

absolute rule against spitting infinitives. I nominate Rehnquist for a special award: He splits 'em in Latin. He posed the question, whether "the power of Congress may be thought to ex proprio vigore apply to the poerr of the Puerto Rican legislature."

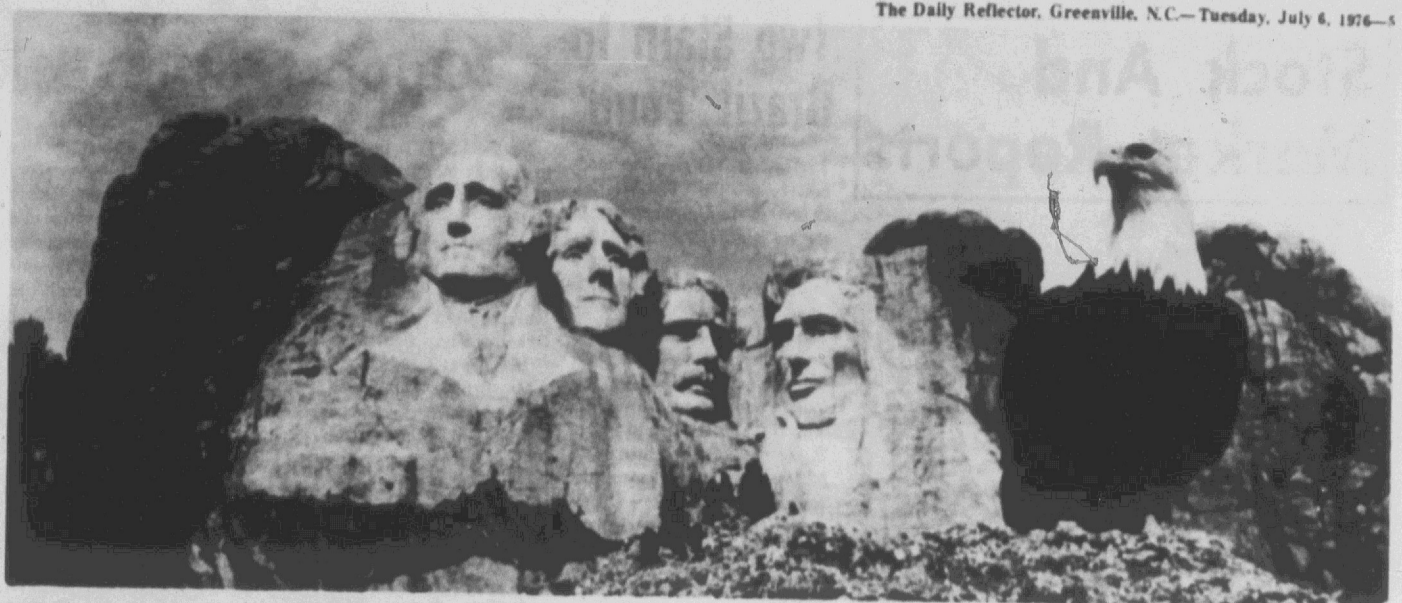

All of the justices, save only Blackmun, have trouble with "since." In its primary meaning — the meaning that comes first to the ye and mind — "since" denotes the passing of time. It means from then till now, or from some particular past time to the present. When "since" is used in place of the honest "because," the eye flickers and the mind stumbles.

Stevens, the newest member of the Court, is the worst offender on "since." He is addicted not only to the single since, but to the double and even the triple since also. Perhaps Blackmun might take him to lunch, for Blackmun gets it right: "Because the New Hampshire statutes speak in such a way. . . ."

Work on him, Harry: Other members of the Court slip slovenly into "claim," when they mean "contend," "charge," "allege," or simply, "say."

Careful writers do not "claim the reasons were false." Stewart cannot resist the temptation to say, "The fact is that. . . ." Marshall forgets that "none" is singular: "None of the cases are to the contrary." White has it right: "None of the cases reaches. . . ."

Is such criticism mere nit-picking? I deny it. These birds are busy writing the supreme law of the land. They are dealing with the great gut issues of our country — racial tensions, sexual discrimination, employment, education, politics, religious freedom, criminal trials. Yes, they must try to write precisely. But do they have to write precisely turgidly? Can't they write precisely lucidly instead?

BICENTENNIAL SALUTE — The State of North Carolina will be honored August 4-5 at Mt. Rushmore National Memorial in South Dakota's Black Hills when the N. C. flag flying over the memorial will be presented Herschel V. Anderson, of Charlotte, designated by Gov. J. E. Holshouser to receive the flag for

Operating 5th Ave. Skin Game

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
NEW YORK (UPI) — For more than an hour, pretty Korean-born Leslie Kim worked on the face of the Southerner with scuffed shoes who wanted to find out how the Beautiful People stay pretty.

There he was, stretched on his back in a toga, his head wrapped in a towel, his lotioned hands stuffed in warmers like tiny electric blankets, a vaporizer blowing in his face with Mozart wafting softly through the little cubicle.

He was sweating. He was wondering how it would feel to have gooey egg embryo smeared on his face.

But that would come later. Right now Miss Kim had to clean up his mug, get rid of the pimples, blackheads, whiteheads and other trash down in the pores.

With the care of a teenager's mother, she scrubbed, probed, pinched and rubbed in her lotions, using gleaming electronic tools to vacuum the pores and massage the skin.

This is pampering, Fifth Avenue style.

Except for the humiliation of having a pretty girl pinch your blackheads, it's not bad. It makes your face tingly, if red for a while.

A client with $25 in his or her pocket is greeted with a demitasse of coffee Christine Valmy's newest salon (equipped and decorated for a cool $500,000) next door to Vidal Sassoon's in the plaza at the corner of Fifth Avenue and 59th Street.

It's the neighborhood of Tiffany, Gucci, Bergdorf Goodman, the Plaza Hotel and the Autopub, where full-sized racing cars hang from the ceiling.

The decor is dazzling, Shamrock green and white, with mirrors for walls and furniture of glass and shiny metal.

Christine Valmy's is one of many unisex facial saloons springing up around Manhattan. Clean skin is in, for women and men.

Some offer a head-to-foot overhaul, such as one Fifth Avenue salon that charges $80 for a six-hours of exercises, steam baths and body massages, ending with a facial, makeup, hair style and pedicure.

Another has a special section for teenagers with acne. At least one caters to clients with black skin.

And several, including Ms. Valmy, have developed their own techniques, equipment and skin care products, which may be purchased, of course.

Ms. Valmy is in the skin game in a big way.

The striking Roumanian-born wife of a West German industrialist, who arrived in this country 14 years ago with $15 in her pocket, owns several such salons up East and has sold franchises for some 700 others around the country.

She has plants in Pinehurst, N.J. manufacturing products and equipment for the salons, an enterprise that recently won her the title of the Garden State's "Small Businessperson of the Year."

(According to Ms. Valmy, a small business is anything under $10 million a year in volume.)

Over a lunch of smoked brook trout and salmon at Manhattan's ornate Metropolitan Club (she prefers American beer to champagne), Ms. Valmy talked of the problems of commuting each month to Frankfurt, Germany, where she owns one home, keeping up her house in New Jersey, and furnishing a 23-room castle overlooking Long Island Sound at Amnack, N.Y., which she just purchased.

"I decorated my bedroom in each house identically so I would always feel at home," she says.

Tall, brunette and groomed like a mannequin, Ms. Valmy is a non-stop talker with a musical accent. The subject, usually, is skin.

"People don't understand skin," she says. "There is no education about what skin really is. You know what your heart does, what your liver does, but you don't know what skin does. The skin's role is to protect the body from the environment."

"Most women treat it like a painting. They just cover it with paint."

"When a woman looks in the mirror she sees only her hair, eye makeup and lipstick, in that order. Her next concern is her figure and diet."

"But everyone else sees your whole face, and especially your skin."

Getting her first big break in America with a salon in the Waldorf-Astoria, Ms. Valmy developed her own "byogenic skin care technique" for revitalizing the skin, including the egg embryo live cell face mask.

Visitors to her newest salon may be shown a small laboratory with jars of herbs lining the shelves and an incubator full of fertile eggs growing embryos. There are private makeup rooms with bulbs simulating daylight and a classroom where corrective makeup techniques are taught. She also has a program for persons undergoing plastic surgery, before and after.

In one of the 12 private rooms, the client reclines in subdued light, either red, blue or green, depending on the client's mood.

"The red light is to cheer you up," explains Ms. Valmy's daughter, Marina Limb, who manages the salon. "The blue one will put you to sleep. The green one calms you."

It takes one hour and 10 minutes for Ms. Kim to rid the client's face of its debris. Like the others, Ms. Kim, 29, was trained at Christine Valmy's International School for Estheticians and Makeup Specialists.

"When do I get the egg?" asks the man getting his tingling face sprayed with a soothing, scented mist.

"That comes later, your next appointment," she says.

year contracts, and about one-third extend for an extra year," Miss Maurach said.

German volunteers, whose average age is 26, must have expertise in a specialized vocation and fluency in at least one foreign language. About half of them are university or technical college graduates.

Unlike the Peace Corps, the German aid group even accepts married couples with children. Volunteers receive tax-free allowances of up to $360 a month, free housing and medical care, 30 days of annual vacation and $3,300 readjustment pay at the end of their two-year stay.

Ernst Roensch, a 30-year-old Bavarian engineer, is building a pipeline to bring 2,000 Nepalese villagers their first running water.

The pipeline is desperately needed in the village of Mamling where he works. In Nepal, up to 80 per cent of the population suffers from debilitating intestinal disorders caused by impure drinking water.

Before starting, Roensch spent weeks haggling with Nepalese bureaucrats over cement, pipe and other supplies. Then he led 100 native bearers through malarial jungle to deliver the materials.

Met with indifference, Roensch adopted the villagers' way of life and learned their dialect. He has trained two villagers to maintain the water line after he completes the project.

Stock And Market Reports

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today, still straining against resistance at the 1,000 level in the Dow Jones industrial average. Trading was moderate.

The 11:30 a.m. reading showed the Dow Average of 30 blue chips up .24 at 1,000.08.

Gainers held a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers noted nothing special in the economic news to stir the market out of its prolonged neutral trend.

They said traders still seemed leery of doing much buying with the Dow at the 1,000 level because of its repeated failures to break past that point this year.

Auto stocks retreated on reports that the Federal Trade Commission was considering a study of the industry that could lead to antitrust action.

General Motors slipped 1/2 to 67 1/2; Ford Motor was down 1/4 to 56 1/2, and Chrysler eased 1/4 to 19 1/4.

Asarco picked up 1 1/2 to 19 1/2. The company said it would get an infusion of $77 million in new capital from its Australian affiliate, including the purchase by the affiliate of 500,000 Asarco shares in the open market.

The NYSE's composite index rose .11 to 55.68 in the first hour, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up .22 at 105.39.

Two Slain In Brazil 'Feud'

ATLANTA (AP) — The moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. arranged to fly to Brazil today after his son-in-law and that man's brother were shot to death by a group of farmers.

Jule Spach, elected to the denomination's highest office earlier this month, left his furlough residence in Winston-Salem, N.C., for the trip to Belem in the northern Brazilian state of Para, a church spokesman said.

Spach, a graduate of Georgia Tech, has been a lay missionary in Brazil for the past 25 years.

His son-in-law, Bruce Davis, 29, was killed in the attack Sunday in which John Mallory Davis, 33, also died and the men's father, rancher John Weaver Davis, was wounded by gunfire, according to U.S. officials in Brazil.

Police said the incident came as a result of a land dispute.

John Weather Davis, a native of Alabama, who was reported by his daughter to be in fair condition on Monday, also had been a Presbyterian missionary in Brazil, leaving that position eight years ago to go into ranching and timber production.

The Presbyterian spokesman said Bruce Davis, husband of Spach's daughter Lynn, had a cattle ranch about 150 miles from his father's and had journeyed to his father's land "to try to help him work out his problems."

Brazilian police said the native farmers had complained that land was being taken illegally by John Weaver Davis, whose family owns one of the biggest farms in the state.

His two sons were to be buried in Belem.

Dr. McConnell On Commission

Dr. Robert William McConnell of Greenville, chief of radiology at Pitt Memorial Hospital, has been appointed to a 21-member North Carolina Radiation Protection Commission by Governor Jim Holshouser.

The commission was created by the General Assembly to work with the Department of Human Resources in adopting rules and regulations to be followed in the administration of a radiation protection program for the State.

Dr. McConnell will serve on the commission for a one year term.

Arrest Man On Varied Counts

Greenville police early this morning arrested Anthony David Baker of North Wilkesboro on charges of possession of marijuana, driving under the influence and carry a concealed weapon following an incident at the intersection of Charles Street and Sulgrave Road.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers stopped a car driven by Baker about 2:43 a.m. After charging Baker with driving under the influence, police found a small amount of marijuana in his possession. Investigators then found a .38 caliber revolver and a .25 caliber automatic pistol as well as a knife, concealed in the vehicle.

Hearing Loss Is Not a Sign of Old Age

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Bel-tone. A non-operating model of the smallest Bel-tone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this non-operating model now. Wear it in the privacy of your own home to see how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 2364, Bel-tone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria Street, Chicago, Ill. 60646.

As scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory went through the data from Arecibo Monday, Project Manager Jim Martin said: "I have heard no data that would shake our belief in the Northwest area."

The Northwest area is the flat plain — probably an ancient basin or dry lake — that became Viking's destination when the spacecraft's cameras found the original site to be inhospitable.

The cameras show the new site to be relatively free of mounds or boulders. But radar examination from earth can sometimes spot smaller hazards.

On Thursday, if the good news continues, Viking I will be ordered to adjust its orbit to bring it over the landing point. The landing is scheduled for July 17.

Adult Driver Course Slated

Pitt Technical Institute will offer a 60-hour course in Adult Driver Education. The course is divided into two sessions. The first is a 36-hour classroom session, and the second is a 24-hour driving session. The class will meet at the George Washington Carver Library each Tuesday from 7 to 10 p.m. Registration for the class is $19 per person.

All interested adults 18 years of age or older who are not enrolled in a secondary school should plan to attend the scheduled class session. For further information contact the Continuing Education Division of Pitt Technical Institute at 756-3130, ext. 38.

Fourth Of July...

Official Russia was almost civil. President Nikolai Podgorny sent congratulations to President Ford. But Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, couldn't resist a dialectic zing: U.S. history, it said, shows the "suffering and difficulties that a society of class exploitation brings to many millions of working people."

But in the same Communist capital, dissident Soviet sources reported a poignant message from 14 Soviet political prisoners to the American people.

"Neither barbed wire, nor machine guns, nor watchtowers, nor guard dogs — nothing can prevent us from being together with you on this great hour of world history."

Carter Is Endorsed By Most Demo Governors

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer
HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Jimmy Carter said today he will interview Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota as a possible vice presidential running mate Thursday. He also picked up the endorsement of about 30 Democratic governors meeting here.

Mondale is the second vice presidential possibility with whom Carter will meet. He talked with Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine on Monday.

The man who is virtually assured of winning the Democratic presidential nomination next week has said he plans to meet with at least five vice presidential prospects before and during the convention.

Carter made his announcement about Mondale at a news conference held with Democratic governors at the National Governors Conference where the former Georgia governor won near-unanimous support for his campaign for president.

"I want to make sure that during the campaign itself that I'm as well informed as possible so that I don't make a statement inadvertently that would contravene the purposes of our country or might be some disruption in the search for peace or good relationships with other countries."

Carter also applauded last week's Israeli raid on the Entebbe Airport in Uganda to rescue Israeli and other hostages held by terrorists. "I think the Israelis took the right action," he said. "I think it was a good move ..."

"I think their opposition to appeasing terrorists is a good deterrent to terrorism."

After his meeting with Muskie, Carter said he found no incompatibility with the 1968 Democratic vice presidential candidate.

He also said "Sen. Muskie and I both had a clear understanding that neither one of us was under any obligation" to make a decision immediately.

As chairman of the standing committee of China's National People's Congress, Chu had functioned since January 1975 as the equivalent of China's head of state.

In that capacity, he had met in Peking June 22 with Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser. He took over the job of meeting foreign dignitaries earlier in June after Communist party officials decided that 82-year-old Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung no longer would do so.

Chu also was a member of the inner ruling circle, the standing committee of the party Central Committee's Political Bureau.

Peking radio broadcast a joint announcement by the Central Committee, the Congress standing committee and the state council, the equivalent of China's cabinet. It said he died at 3:01 p.m. (3 a.m. EDT).

Chu was military commander of the 1934 Long March by Mao and 90,000 Communist followers, who marched 6,000 miles to avoid encirclement by Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang forces.

Chu, born in 1886 of a Szechuan peasant family, embarked on his long military career in 1909 by enrolling in the Yunnan Military Academy, where he was exposed to the revolutionary ideas of Sun Yat-sen. In August 1927, Chu and a band of followers participated in an abortive uprising in Nanchang organized by the late Chou En-lai.

Dodgers' Burt Hooten Uses His Magic On Philadelphia Phillies

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Burt Hooten's supernatural hold on the Philadelphia Phillies would seem to be a witch doctor's delight, but Dave Cash has a very earthy explanation for it.

"The big secret is his ability to stay ahead on the count against us," says the Phillies' second baseman.

Keeping one pitch — and one step — ahead of Philadelphia has been Hooten's forte. The Los Angeles Dodger right-hander has beaten the Phillies seven straight times since 1974 — including Monday night's 6-0 beauty.

Hooten, who once pitched a no-hitter against the Phillies while a member of the Chicago Cubs, allowed merely a single and double Monday night — both to Garry Maddox.

The performance embarrassed the Phillies before a crowd of 60,942 at Veterans Stadium — the largest ever to see them at home — and a national television audience.

"I guess he figures he can do it everytime he goes out there against us," said a resigned Cash.

In the other National League games, the Cincinnati Reds routed the Montreal Expos 11-2; the Atlanta Braves stopped the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6; the Chicago Cubs nipped the San Diego Padres 1-0; the San Francisco Giants outscored the St. Louis Cardinals 6-4 and the Houston Astros checked the New York Mets 7-3.

Hooten, who earned his sixth victory and first since June 9, when he beat the Phillies in Los Angeles, got hitting support from Steve Garvey and Bill Russell, each with a solo homer. Russell also singled home the Dodgers' third run.

Los Angeles took a 1-0 lead against Jim Lonborg, the Phillies 10-game winner who suffered his fifth loss. With two out in the first inning, Garvey hit his seventh homer of the season.

In the second, Russell led off with a home run, his fourth of 1976. The Dodgers made it 3-0 in the fourth when Reggie Smith blasted a one-out triple and raced home on Russell's single, giving Hooten all the runs he needed to tame the Phillies.

Reids 11, Expos 2 Joe Morgan drove in five runs, four on a grand slam home run, and Jack Billingham pitched an eight-hitter as Cincinnati walloped Montreal. Billingham, 6-6, walked two and struck out six in picking up his first victory in two decisions against Montreal this year.

The only runs off Billingham came on Pete Mackanin's leadoff homer in the fifth and Andre Thornton's homer leading off the seventh.

The Reds scored five runs on just one hit, Morgan's grand slam, in the sixth inning, to turn the game into a rout as they rocked five Montreal pitchers.

Braves 8, Pirates 6 Darrell Chaney capped a seven-run eighth inning with a three-run triple, helping Atlanta beat Pittsburgh.

A crowd of 48,467, drawn partly by the prospect of a giant fireworks display afterwards, saw Atlanta break a seven-game losing streak to the Pirates, who had not lost to the Braves this season. Atlanta wiped out a 6-1 Pirate lead with their rally.

"I've seen a lot of comebacks in my life," said Chaney. "but this one has to be the best."

Cubs 1, Padres 0 Steve Renko and Joe Coleman combined for a three-inning and Chicago scored an unearned run in the sixth inning to beat San Diego. Brent Strom was the victim of poor defensive work by his San Diego teammates when the Cubs broke a scoreless tie in the sixth.

Two of the three hits allowed by Renko, 3-4, who left after seven innings, were infield calls. Strom, 8-8, has been the victim of shutouts in four of his last eight starts.

Giants 6, Cardinals 4

Bobby Murcer smashed a double leading off the eighth inning and eventually scored on a double play to snap a 4-4 tie and help San Francisco beat St. Louis. Murcer's hit, his third of the game, came off St. Louis right-hander Harry Rasmussen, 3-7, and helped San Francisco left-hander Gary Lavelle to his third victory against four losses.

Astros 7, Mets 3

Bob Watson's two-run homer ignited a six-run Houston fourth inning, leading the Astros over New York. Houston right-hander Joe Niekro, 4-7, scattered seven hits over the first 6 2-3 innings before retiring in favor of reliever Ken Forsch.

Jack Gets Open Nod

BIRKDALE, England (AP) — The British oddsmakers don't think the winners of the 1976 Masters and U.S. Open will take a second Big Four title when the British Open crowns its champion on Saturday.

The bookies have established Ray Floyd, runaway winner of the Masters, and Jerry Pate, the 22-year-old American tour rookie who won the U.S. Open, as 25-1 longshots to take the American League's nine-man All-Star pitching staff, announced today by Boston Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson.

Johnson, manager of the American Leaguers for the 47th All-Star Game July 13 at Philadelphia, hopes his staff of five starters and four relievers can reverse the trend that has carried the National Leaguers to victory in 12 of the last 13 mid-season games, including last year's 6-3 triumph.

Four of the nine hurlers are All-Stars for the first time, including Fidyrych, the exciting non-conformist of the Detroit Tigers, whose crowd-pleasing antics include talking to the ball and getting down on his hands and knees to smooth out the pitching mound.

He leads the regular AL pitchers with a 1.85 earned run average and has a 9-1 record. The other All-Star newcomers are AL strikeout leader Frank Tanana of the California Angels, Bill Travers of the Milwaukee Brewers and relief ace Dave LaRoche of the Cleveland Indians.

Completing the staff are Boston's Luis Tiant, selected for the third time, Oakland's Rollie Fingers, also for the third time, Lee Trevino, winner in 1971 and 1972, had been listed at 16-1 but was forced to withdraw because of a nagging back ailment that has limited his play the last month.

Joining Pate and Floyd as 25-1 shots are Ben Crenshaw and Tom Watson, last year's winner.

Bird, Catfish Lead AL Staff

NEW YORK (AP)—Rookie sensation Mark "the Bird" Fidrych and five-time 20-game winner Catfish Hunter head the American League's nine-man All-Star pitching staff, announced today by Boston Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson.

Johnson, manager of the American Leaguers for the 47th All-Star Game July 13 at Philadelphia, hopes his staff of five starters and four relievers can reverse the trend that has carried the National Leaguers to victory in 12 of the last 13 mid-season games, including last year's 6-3 triumph.

and second-timers Rich Gossage of the Chicago White Sox and Sparky Lyle of the Yankees.

The veteran of the staff is Hunter, the New York Yankees ace right-hander, who has been named for the eighth time — six times while he was with the Oakland A's. Hunter has appeared in five All-Star Games.

He was tagged for two of the three runs the National League scored in the ninth inning last year, when it broke a 3-3 tie and sent Hunter to his second All-Star loss. He was the loser in the 1967 game.

The regular starters include Hunter, 10-7; Tiant, 10-5; Tanana, 10-5; Travers, 9-6, and Fidyrych. Tanana and Travers are the left-handed hurlers among the group.

Tiant's two appearances on the AL All-Star staff both have resulted in losses, in 1968 when he was with Cleveland and in 1974 when he was with Boston.

The relievers on the squad are left-handers Lyle and LaRoche and right-handers Fingers and Gossage, who has doubled as a starter and reliever this season.

Lyle tops the relievers with 16 saves, while Fingers has 11 and LaRoche has 10.

Johnson said he hasn't made up his mind yet on which pitchers will get into the game, and in what order.

Tournament Opening

LITTLEFIELD — Babe Ruth League Area Tournament Play opens tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School.

The Greenville 13-year-olds will meet the Pitt County 13-year-olds in the opening game tonight. The winner will move into a 7:30 p.m. Wednesday game against Washington.

The losers of the Tuesday and Wednesday games meet Thursday at 6 p.m., with the survivor meeting the lone unbeaten team on Friday at 6 p.m. A double championship game in the double elimination series will be held on Saturday, if needed.

The 14-15 Babe Ruth All-Stars of Greenville meet Pitt County in an 8 p.m. game on Thursday. The two will clash again on Friday, also at 8 p.m. If another game is necessary to decide the best-of-three series, it will be Billy Wooten of Farmville will serve as coach, with Bruce Gray of Chicod and Paul Sellitt of Ayden as his assistants.

Final standings in the Pitt County Babe Ruth League had Farmville winning with an 8-2 mark, while Chicod and Grifton tied for second at 7-3. Winterville was 3-7, while Ayden and Bethel were tied with 2-7-1 records.

played Saturday.

The game was the first in the league's tournament.

Winterville scored first getting two runs in the top of the first. Mitch Cox doubled and walks to Joey Joyner and Otis Payton loaded the bases. Kevin Pound reached on an error scoring Cox and Joyner.

Toler doubled with one out in the third and scored when Kenny Credle rounded out.

The Hornets rallied for two in the fourth getting a run on an error and a second on a hit by Buck.

Chicod had another opportunity to score in the sixth but failed.

Doug McRoy pitched a two-hitter for Winterville striking out 14.

Bad Dream No Problem Sunnyside To American Gymnast Is Winner

By HOWARD SMITH AP Sports Writer

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP) — Carrie Englert has been dreaming about the Summer Olympics in Montreal. Well, not exactly dreaming.

"I had a nightmare about the Olympics the other night," she said. "I dreamt I fell off the balance beam about seven times. I just kept climbing back on and falling off again. I kept thinking 'Oh, my God. All these people are watching...'"

Miss Englert, a pretty blackhaired charmer from Tallahassee, Fla., smiles when she tells the story. Nightmares aside, Miss Englert doesn't really worry about the Summer Games. For that matter, she doesn't really worry about anything.

If she wasn't already going to the Summer Olympics as a gymnast, she might be able to make it as a cheerleader.

"That's just the way I am," she said, smiling. "I like to stay happy. If you can keep a light atmosphere during workouts, it helps. I've never really been the kind to get upset at things."

Miss Englert, 18, stands 5-foot-

3 1/2 and weighs 108 pounds. She earned her way onto the U.S. team with a fifth-place finish at the trials in Los Angeles. For the past seven years, while other teenage girls have been going to proms and collecting boy friends, she's been collecting bumps and bruises on the uneven parallel bars.

"I'm looking forward to having a life of my own," she said, gazing at the gym equipment scattered around the Hobart College gym. "I guess I've missed a lot of social life. It always seems like I have to skip going out somewhere because I have to get up early, or I have to work out, or something."

"But I'm getting to do a lot of things other kids never do. Go places, meet a lot of people. And I still enjoy it all. I know how hard I worked to get here."

"Ever since I was young I remember watching the Olympics on television," she continued, "and I would always cry when someone won a medal and the American flag went up. Now I'm going. Isn't that something?"

Carrie's best chance for a medal in the Games is in the free exercise or the beam. She is national champion in both, but likes the free exercise much better.

"You can practice and practice but there's always the chance you will fall off the beam," she said. "For sure it's the most nerve-wracking event. It's so easy to fall off. Everyone does one time or another. You try not to worry about it."

Greenville's Sunnyside Eggs softball team captured the USSSA Class "C" State Championship this past weekend. By winning the State Tournament, Sunnyside Eggs claimed a World Tournament berth to be held Labor Day weekend.

Bailey Vending of Greenville finished 2nd and also claimed a World berth.

In this 32 team tournament, Sunnyside Eggs defeated Highland Ins. of Fayetteville, 10-4; Parker Stone of Lumberton, 12-1; Outlaws of Fayetteville, 18-6; Griffin's Exterminators of Goldsboro, 13-12; Foodline of Wilson, 13-0; and then defeated Bailey Vending by 5-1 to win the championship undefeated.

Roy Carawan was chosen Most Valuable Player by his teammates which were Ronald Vincent, Bill Kuykendall, Jerry Clark, Mike Aldridge, Randy Phillips, Mike Parrell, Addison Bass, Charles Meeks, Joe Roenker, Charles Vincent, Chuck Humphrey, Mike Board, and Marvin Jarman.

Borg To Miss Tennis Slam

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP)—Bjorn Borg, the 20-year-old Swedish tennis player who captured this year's Wimbledon mens' singles crown, won't be playing in the first Grand Slam of Tennis tournament in Myrtle Beach.

He will be replaced by Jimmy Connors, who agreed Monday to compete in the three-day tourney that gets underway Friday.

Tourney officials said Borg aggravated a muscle strain he had at Wimbledon and would be unable to compete. He has been ordered by doctors to rest.

Designed to pit the winners of the game's most prestigious tournaments against each other, the four-man competition will bring together on the clay composition court 1975 Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe, 1975 U.S. Open winner Manuel Orantes, Masters champion Ilie Nastase and Connors.

In future years, the tournament field will be made up of the previous year's Wimbledon, U.S. Open, French Open and Grand Slam winners. If any player should win more than one of the tournaments, the winner of the Italian or the Australian Open will be invited to compete. The tournament is expected to become an annual event held each January at different locations.

Sponsored by the Pepsi Cola Co., the three-day event offers a total purse of $150,000, with the winner claiming $75,000.

Second place will be worth $40,000, third place $20,000 and fourth place $15,000.

One match a day is scheduled for Friday and Saturday. The consolation game will be played Sunday, followed by the championship, which will be televised live. Pairings are to be determined at a drawing in New York today.

"The fact that Connors has agreed to play in the tournament is just great. Especially on the clay court," a tournament spokesman said Monday.

BACK-TO-BACK 65s SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Jack McGown of Port Jefferson, N.Y., shot a 65 in the morning and a 65 in the afternoon while playing in two foursomes at the Harder Hall course here. Boston Sweeps White Sox, Sets Sights On Catching Yankees

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

In 1967, the Boston Red Sox pulled off "The Impossible Dream."

In 1976, would you believe "The Possible Dream?"

"We had a lot of hits today and that's what we need to get going," outfielder Rick Miller said Monday after the Red Sox rapped out 11 hits and trounced the Chicago White Sox 11-2 to climb into a second-place tie with the Cleveland Indians in the American League East. "Now we can zoom to the top. If the Yankees lose 10 and we win 10, we're there. That's wishful thinking maybe, but that's the way we have to think."

If the Yankees lose 10 and Boston wins 10, the Red Sox will actually be one game in front. They trail by nine since New York dropped a 2-1 squeaker to the Kansas City Royals.

Elsewhere, the Texas Rangers rallied to beat the Detroit Tigers 8-6, the California Angels whipped the Indians 8-1, the Oakland A's downed the Baltimore Orioles 4-1 and the Milwaukee Brewers nipped the Minnesota Twins 3-2.

Rookie Butch Hobson and

Cecil Cooper drove in three runs apiece and Luis Tiant scattered 11 hits for his 10th victory as the Red Sox won for the sixth time in their last eight games and reached the 500 mark 37-37 for the first time since April, 29.

Hobson, called up from the minors last week, hit a sacrifice fly in the fifth and singled home two runs in the sixth. Cooper delivered a sacrifice fly in the third and a bases-loaded single in the eighth.

Royals 2, Yankees 1

The Royals scored both their runs with two out in the first inning on George Brett's double and singles by John Mayberry, Hal McRae and Al Cowens. Paul Splittorff posted his sixth consecutive victory with help from three relievers, including Steve Mingori, who put down a bases-loaded, one-out threat in the ninth.

The Yankees played the game under protest. In the ninth inning, Kansas City center fielder Amos Otis injured his shoulder trying to make a diving catch and was replaced by McRae, the designated hitter. Yankee Manager Billy Martin cited an American League rule specifying that any substitute other than a pitcher is only allowed five warm-up throws. Umpire Lou DiMuro, the crew chief, agreed with Martin that McRae took more than five although DiMuro tried to stop him.

Rangers 8, Tigers 6

Tom Grieve's bases-loaded single keyed a four-run seventh-inning rally that brought the Rangers to victory after they blew an early 4-0 lead. Five Rangers hit safely in the seventh, including Gene Clines, who had four hits, and Jeff Burroughs, who cracked a pair of doubles. Grieve's two-run shot came between run-scoring singles by Mike Hargrove and Lenny Randle.

Burroughs opened the scoring with a bases-loaded double in the first inning as Texas remained 3½ games behind Kansas City in the AL West.

Angels 8, Indians 1

Dave Chalk and Andy Etchebarren drove in three runs apiece and Gary Ross pitched a five-hitter as the Angels defeated the Indians for the fifth time in a row. They backed Ross with a 15-hit attack, their highest output of the season, against 10-game winner Pat Dobson and two relievers. Dobson was kayoed in California's five-run third as the Indians suffered their fourth straight loss.

A's 4, Orioles 1

Phil Garner's three-run homer and 2-2-3 innings of scoreless relief pitching by Rollie Fingers paced Oakland's victory. The A's got all their runs in the fifth inning against Rudy May on a walk, an error, Garner's homer, a double by Bill North and a single by Bert Campaneris. Fingers struck out Terry Crowley with the bases loaded in the seventh and went on to preserve Mike Torrez' first triumph since May 31.

Brewers 3, Twins 2

Milwaukee used a pair of errors by Minnesota first baseman Rod Carew to score three unearned runs in the seventh inning and Bill Travers scattered seven hits for his ninth victory. Gorman Thomas opened the seventh with a walk and Carew mishandled Jack Heidemann's bunt. Art Kusnyer also bunted but Carew's throw to third, in plenty of time to force Thomas, was wild, allowing both runners to score. Kusnyer eventually tallied what proved to be the winning run on Robin Yount's single, a walk to Don Money and Hank Aaron's checked-swing grounder.

Killanin Seeks End To Problem

MONTREAL (AP)—Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, is seeking a solution for the Taiwan question at the Montreal Games, which are only 11 days away.

The IOC and the Canadian government appeared still at odds over Taiwan though External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said officials of his department are willing to meet Killanin.

Some observers saw a turn of for the better Monday when Killanin — while non-committal—did not reject a government proposal that the IOC revive a 1960 formula under which Taiwanese athletes competed in the Rome Olympics only as Taiwanese without carrying the name of the Republic of China.

The Irish peer, who came to Canada Monday, asserted, however, that Canada's action—prohibiting use of the Republic of China's name, anthem and flag—could establish a dangerous precedent for the 1980 Moscow Games and other Olympics in the future.

Meanwhile, a Peking broadcast demanded that Taiwan—under whatever name—must be eliminated from Olympic competition because only the All-China Sports Federation can represent China in international sports contests.

Age Group Meet Scheduled

The AAU Age Group Championship Meet will be held at New Bern High School Stadium this Saturday, starting at 12 noon.

Events will be held in 11 age groups for both boys and girls and men and women. Plans call for the field events to get underway at noon, with the running events at 2:30 p.m.

A $1 entry fee per contestant is being charged, and ribbons will be given as awards.

Age groups and events are as follows:

6-7, 8-9 and 10-11 will participate in long jump, high jump, 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard dash and 880-yard dash. Relays will be held if at least two

Site Is Near Ready

MONTREAL (AP)—Eleven days before the opening of the 21st Olympiad, part of the east-end Games site appears far from ready as trucks and bulldozers continued to circulate within the fenced-in area.

With the Olympics due to open July 17, hundreds of athletes and journalists from around the world already have arrived to inspect the site, only to be treated to an array of barriers and barbed wire.

But workmen on the site were confident Monday the job would be completed on time and some complained that the press has not given them enough credit for their accomplishments.

During the weekend, workers were putting the last pieces of copper in place on the stadium roof, while within the stadium, electricians were completing the installation of lighting.

The first delegation of foreign athletes was officially welcomed to the Olympic village Sunday in a simple ceremony presided over by the village mayor, Yvan Dubois.

Dubois addressed about 50 Hungarian athletes through an interpreter, before presenting a key to the village to delegation head Fanos Pader.

The Hungarian national anthem was played as the country's red, white and green flag was raised on one of the 115 flagpoles provided for participating nations.

Fifteen runners involved in torch-bearing ceremonies to open the Games staged a one-hour dress rehearsal during the weekend, starting at the foot of the cross on Mount Royal, the extinct volcano preserved as a park which dominates Montreal.

Olympic organizers said the test-run went without a hitch as each runner ran one kilometer with the Olympic flame, carrying it finally into the empty, cavernous stadium.

"There'll be 70,000 people here on July 17, so things will be a little more dramatic then," said one official.

Cale Yarborough Moves Up After His Victory

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Driver Cale Yarborough roared into the No. 2 spot in this year's National Association of Stock Car Auto racing earnings competition with his victory in the Firecracker 400 here.

Yarborough, with $169,000 to his credit, edged out Richard Petty and was pushing David Pearson for the lead in the earnings sweepstakes.

Pearson has won 179,690, including his second-place money in Sunday's Firecracker 400. Petty has won $167,715; Benny Parsons $129,945 and Bobby Allison $102,705.

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP)—A record $201,045 purse has been set for the Aug. 8 running of the Talladega 500 Winston Cup Grand National stock car race.

Officials at Alabama International Motor Speedway said the purse is 28.8 per cent larger than last year's total prize money—$156,070. The Talladega 500 purse boosts total awards past $470,000 for all events at the 2.66-mile track this year.

Says Most Are 'Unfinished Symphony'

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
NEW YORK (UPI) — The doctor with the bronze dome put on a Kojak smirk when asked how many of Hollywood's sex symbols have had their bodies surgically remolded.

"I would say 75 per cent, and I have my doubts about the other 25 per cent," said Dr. Robert A. Franklyn, a plastic surgeon, breeder of race horses, author and confidante of show business stars.

He is in a position to know. A pioneer of modern breast implant techniques, Franklyn has helped more than 15,000 women fill their bras.

Over a plate of smoked salmon at a restaurant ironically called the Scoop, Franklyn was not surprised that more and more tell-tale scars are showing on the breasts of New York fashion models.

"Breasts had a little decline, but now they are having a comeback with the peek-a-boo and braless fashions," he said.

"Girls on the West Coast never wear bras anymore."

A man with a Telly Savalas appearance and the same tough self-confidence, Franklyn has been described as "the father of augmentation mammoplasty." He likens himself to a sculptor as he reshapes thousands of show girls, dancers, secretaries and housewives at his "body shop" in Los Angeles.

"Like with a sculptor, it has to look good to me," said Franklyn, who counts among his creations several Playboy centerfolds. "Beautiful women come in all shapes and sizes, but obviously some are unfinished symphonies."

As a Hollywood insider, Franklyn once read scripts for the late Marilyn Monroe, counted Kim Novak as a close friend, and was once married to actress Vanessa Brown.

As a pioneer "beauty surgeon" and first president of the American Association of Cosmetic Plastic Surgeons, in 1952 he developed a technique for enlarging breasts — at the urging of a flat-chested stripper — by implanting polyurethane sponges.

Silicone injections, which came along later, subsequently have been banned.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 7, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You get good ideas in the morning on how best to handle an influential person. Later, you lack satisfactory solutions to problems. Organize a plan of action for later in the week.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to April 19) Morning is best for contacting those who can be of greatest assistance to you. Try to please one who has been cool toward you lately.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time to improve your surroundings, but first try to find a way to work more harmoniously with a co-worker. Take steps to improve health and you'll have more peace of mind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan some kind of amusement that will take away that feeling of boredom you are now going through. More thought for the one you love brings fine response now. Be careful of go-beatons.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Talk out differences you may have with kin and relationships improve. Not a good evening to entertain, but fine for relaxation.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Morning is a fine time for communicating with others. Then take care of any necessary shopping. Be careful while traveling.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how to improve financial situation and then take steps to carry them out. A financial expert can help you in solving a problem now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan time to gain a personal desire. Accept an invitation that may be extended to you. Contact a friend who means much to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are able to solve a problem that has bothered you for a long time. Showing devotion to mate pays off handsomely in many ways.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You must find a better method of operation to improve your surroundings. Go to social gatherings where the views of others are similar to yours.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact a bigwig early and gain the backing you have been looking for a long time. Any public appearance you make can result in fine benefits. Keep active.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have fine ideas for gaining the goodwill of influential individuals you have long wanted to know.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put your hunches to work in the morning so you can make plans to put them into effect in the near future. Some particular thought for your mate adds to happiness of both. Be active.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have an early life because of the unusual charm in this nature. Be sure to give the finest education possible. Any profession with the public in general is fine here. Do not neglect sports. Teach early the fundamentals of religious beliefs.

Boulevard today get Teflon implants with a local anesthetic, mostly on an out-patient basis, for a $1,500 fee.

"We tell them 'in at eight and out by noon,'" he said. "We even did two trapeze artists from the Ringling Bros. circus and they were back at work that same night. They told us their work was even better than ever because they didn't have to wear padded bras."

While breast enlargements and face-lifts are Franklyn's specialties, he also performs more drastic body shaping surgery, which sometimes requires expensive hospitalization.

"They come in here with no behinds and heavy thighs," he said. "We fill them where they have to be filled and whittle them where they have to be whittled. Plastic surgeons are patch-up or facade artists."

The doctor, who has written five books on beauty tips, built his business around show business personalities, but he contends most of his customers today are ordinary housewives or young girls out to attract a man.

"Then, again, a man will bring in his wife and say, 'Hey, let's redo this old nag,'" he said. "Most of our patients are quite flat. They could go on a beach and the police wouldn't know if they were boys or girls."

A husband, Franklyn contends, is more interested in his wife's chest measurements than the wrinkles on her face.

"As far as the face-lift, he doesn't care one way or another, because he's already looking at his secretary," he said. "And no middle-aged woman is going to compete with a 20-year-old girl."

Franklyn refuses to work on homosexuals. "I have to like what I'm doing," he said. "I can't operate on a man and turn him into a woman."

A native New Yorker, Franklyn got his medical degree at New York University and served his residency at Bellevue Hospital. Moving to California at age 25, he worked nights at a San Pedro shipyard hospital and days at his Hollywood office, where he moved away from reconstructive surgery into cosmetic plastic surgery.

Through his show business clientele, he became friends with movie moguls such as Darryl Zanuck, Jack Warner and Louis B. Mayer.

He dabbled in film production and the breeding of championship horses and dogs, finally putting together a stable of horses extending from France to South America and winning the famous Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe in Paris.

Franklyn just finished his fifth beauty book, called "Facial Shi Atsu," about a Japanese technique for preventing wrinkles by applying pressure at certain points. His other titles included "The Art of Staying Young," "A Doctor's Quick Way to Achieve Lasting Beauty," and "Instant Beauty."

A schoolmate on the famous physician Jonas Salk, Franklyn says some of his colleagues in the medical profession look on plastic surgeons as "magicians."

But, he says, "We get immediate results and we make our patients happy."

BULLFROG SEASON
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The bullfrog hunting season in Missouri opens at sunset June 30 and closes Nov. 30. Hunters and fishermen are limited to eight bullfrogs per day.

Depending on your choice of chemicals this year, you can spend as little as $5.00 or as much as $20.00 an acre to control weeds in your soybeans. And the surprising thing is that the least expensive chemical combinations may control weed and grass problems as well as treatments costing three or four times as much.

"You've got to find out what your problems are before you can really design an effective soybean weed control program," says Dr. Harold Coble, N. C. Extension weed control specialist. "If you've got grasses plus small-seeded annual broadleaf weeds such as pigweed, lambs-quarter or common ragweed, you can usually control all of these with a tank-mix such as Treflan-Sencor or Lasso-Lasso-Lorox," stated Coble.

"But if you've got grasses plus large seeded broadleaf weeds such as cocklebur, morningglory, giant ragweed, jimsonweed and velvetleaf, you're going to have to use a post-emergence chemical to control these tough broadleaf weeds."

A postemergence herbicide is needed to control the tough, broadleaf weeds. Here's where a grower can really save some money by choosing the least expensive chemical that will do the job for him.

"The secret of controlling the large seeded broadleaf weeds is to let as many weeds as possible germinate and then kill them before they begin to compete with your soybeans. Timing is critical here since most broadleaf weeds begin to compete with soybeans about 5-6 weeks after planting. You should apply your postemergence herbicide three to four weeks after planting. In short, the earlier you catch your weeds, the more money you can save with your postemergence applications.

Consider narrow rows, especially with late planted beans. Good broadleaf weed control depends heavily on getting a first, full canopy of soybeans and you can get a canopy 10-14 days earlier by changing from 38-inch to 30-inch rows.

Cultivate once about 10 days to two weeks after applying post-emergence herbicide to catch any late germinating weeds.

Over the years certain cards have become associated with bad luck. In fortune telling, the ace of spades signifies death. The nine of diamonds is known as the "Curse of Scotland" and one explanation for this appellation is that the order for the Massacre of Glencoe was signed on the back of this card.

At the recent world championships for the Bermuda Bowl, it seemed that the king of clubs had become an extremely unlucky card for the defending champions, Italy. Last year in Bermuda, the Italians won the world championship because the king of clubs was well placed in a crucial hand. This year,

PUBLIC NOTICES

NOTICE OF CHANGE IN LOCATION OF POLLING PLACE WITHIN PRECINCT AFFECTED GREENVILLE NO. 3

Pitt County
North Carolina
Pursuant to G. S. 163-128 Notice is hereby given of change in location of polling place in Greenville No. 3 Precinct, Pitt County, North Carolina.

The administrative decision pertaining to this change is recorded in Minutes of meeting of the Pitt County Board of Elections dated June 8, 1976. Following is excerpt from said minutes.

"Purpose of this meeting was to further investigate proposed location of polling place for Greenville Precinct No. 3. Elections for this precinct have been held in the Third Street School located on W. Third Street, Greenville, N. C. This building has been closed due to condemnation and is no longer available for our use. The Board members visited the West Greenville Recreation Center located on the corner of W. Fourth and Nash Streets and found it to be suitable for use as a polling place for Greenville No. 3 Precinct and was available. The Executive Secretary was advised to make submission of proposed change of location of polling place for Greenville No. 3 precinct to the Justice Department pursuant to Civil Rights Act of 1965."

The new location for Greenville Precinct No. 3 polling place is in the West Greenville Recreation Center located on the corner of W. Fourth and Nash Streets in Greenville, North Carolina.

This the 29th day of June, 1976.

NOTICE OF CHANGE IN LOCATION OF POLLING PLACE WITHIN PRECINCT AFFECTED GREENVILLE NO. 1

Pitt County
North Carolina
Pursuant to G. S. 163-128 Notice is hereby given of change in location of polling place in Greenville No. 1 Precinct, Pitt County, North Carolina.

The administrative decision pertaining to this change is recorded in Minutes of meeting of the Pitt County Board of Elections dated April 15, 1976. Following is excerpt from said minutes.

"Purpose of this meeting was to further investigate proposed location of polling place for Greenville Precinct No. 1. Elections for this precinct have been held in the Meadowbrook Recreation Center located on E. Mumford Road, Greenville, N. C. This building has been closed and is no longer available for our use. The Board members visited the V. W. Post Home which is located on E. Mumford Road just six tenths (6/10) of a mile east of the Recreation Center, and found it to be suitable for use as a polling place for Greenville No. 1 Precinct, and was available. The Executive Secretary was advised to make submission of proposed change of location of polling place for Greenville No. 1 precinct to the Justice Department pursuant to Civil Rights Act of 1965."

No objections were made to this change of location of polling place by the Department of Justice in the letter dated June 7, 1976.

This the 29th day of June, 1976.

Four Liberals Sought To Serve In Spain's Cabinet

MADRID, Spain (AP)—Premier Adolfo Suarez looked today for replacements for four liberal cabinet members who refused to serve in the new government he is trying to put together.

Interior Minister Manuel Fraga, Foreign Minister Jose Maria de Arellano, Justice Minister Antonio Garrigues and Information Minister Adolfo Martin Gamero said in letters to Suarez that "it would not be coherent with our ideology" to join the new government.

Fraga, architect of the government's liberalization program after the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco seven months ago, turned down a last-minute appeal from King Juan Carlos to stay on.

He said he would collaborate with reform but as a member of the loyal opposition. He heads the new Reform Party.

Suarez, a 43-year-old moderate rightist, was sworn in Monday, replacing conservative Premier Carlos Arias Navarro, whom Juan Carlos inherited from Franco. The king forced the premier out because he was not going ahead with political and economic reforms as quickly as the king wanted.

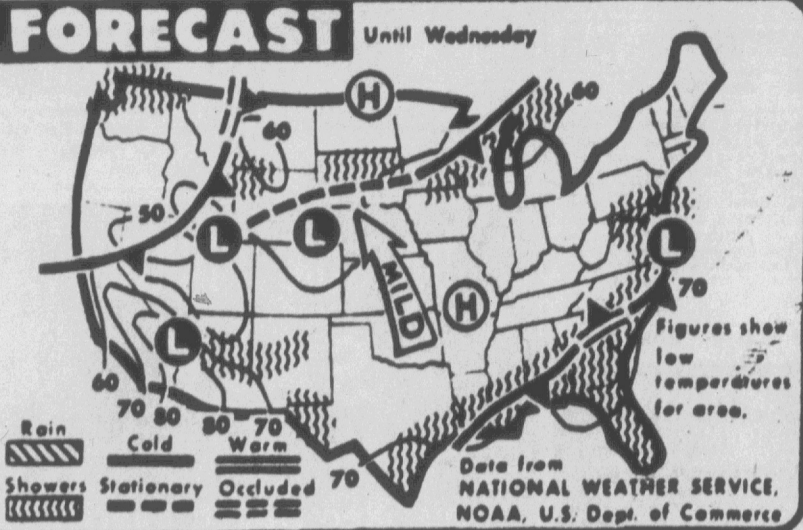

Suarez denied reports that he would give key posts to technocrats allied with Opus Dei, the Roman Catholic lay organization from which Franco drew 10 of the 19 cabinet members in 1969. It was then that Fraga was ousted from the government.

The Catholic newspaper Ya said it hoped the new cabinet would not represent a return to 1969 and Opus Dei domination.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers are due today for the Gulf and most of the Atlantic coast. Scattered areas of showers are also expected for the Southwest, Northwest and across the northern Plains into the upper Great Lakes. Mild weather is forecast for most of the country. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A stationary front located across South Carolina and Georgia continued to cause unsettled weather across the Tar Heel state today. This front will move back into eastern North Carolina tonight and Wednesday and weaken as the Bermuda high builds back across the southeastern United States.

As a result, scattered showers and thundershowers and considerable cloudiness will persist across North Carolina through Wednesday. Lows tonight will cool into the mid to upper 50s in the mountains and upper 60s and low 70s along the coast. Highs Wednesday will range from the mid 70s to the mid 80s.

With the Bermuda high building back across the area, the extended outlook holds a promise of fair weather for Thursday.

Considerable cloudiness prevailed across North Carolina Monday night until early Tuesday morning. Most showers and thundershowers during the period occurred across the southern half of the state with only widely scattered showers occurring in the north. Rainfall amounts were generally less than .25 inch.

However, a few heavy thundershowers occurred across the extreme southeast portion of the state. Cloudiness and rain kept temperatures on the mild side Monday. Afternoon temperatures Monday warmed only into the 70s with some 60s across the mountains. The warmest locations were Goldsboro, Raleigh-Durham and Rocky Mount. All reported highs of 79 degrees.

Some breaks occurred in the cloudiness Monday night. Where the breaks occurred, considerable fog formed. Lows ranged from the mid to upper 50s across the mountains to the low 70s along the south coast.

The skyward outlook for North Carolina calls for no severe thunderstorms tonight. Recreational weather outlook:

Scattered showers and thundershowers will continue to interrupt outdoor activities across North Carolina through Wednesday. Temperatures will range a few degrees below normal. Fair weather will return Thursday along with near-normal temperatures.

Reagan Hopes His TV Project Is Persuasive

By LYNDIA FILLMORE
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan says he hopes his appearance on national television tonight will persuade uncommitted GOP delegates to vote for him.

"It's an important speech," the former California governor said Monday before taping the half-hour talk at a Hollywood studio.

He said President Ford's television exposure at Bicentennial events Sunday and Monday had nothing to do with his decision to present his nationwide message.

"We decided a long time ago to do this," Reagan said.

"Kansas City is drawing close and there are a lot of uncommitted delegates. I would have liked to have made the taping closer to the convention, but we had to take the time when it was available."

According to an Associated Press survey, Reagan has 976 delegates to Ford's 1,004 with 179 uncommitted and 96 delegates yet to be selected. A total of 1,130 delegate votes are needed to win the Republican nomination.

Reagan again predicted he would win the nomination on the first ballot at the August GOP convention at Kansas City, Mo.

Before the taping, Reagan would say only that the TV talk would emphasize his idea of "what America is, and what I believe it should be," but a campaign aide said that Reagan concentrates on his theme of excesses in government and inflation.

Reagan said Ford's Bicentennial exposure was "what would be expected of a president."

"If it helps him, it hurts me," Reagan said. "If it hurts him, it helps me."

Reagan said the stunning Israeli commando raid to rescue 100 airline passengers and crewmen from Palestinian terrorists reminded him "of the way Americans used to act."

"The tragedy of it is that we still live in a world where countries will not join in and make it plain that they will not put up with that terrorism."

Some Help For Victims

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Volunteers at the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Rape Crisis Service say their program has made hospital treatment more comfortable for rape victims, but they are still concerned about treatment of victims by police and hospitals.

"We are still waiting an atrocious time at the hospital for medical assistance to the victim," said Karen Campbell. She is one of 40 volunteers who broke their service away from YWCA sponsorship this year and now support the operation independently with donations and other fund raising efforts.

The counselors say the average hospital wait before a physician examines a victim is four hours.

As a result of the service's efforts, local hospitals have changed procedures so that they no longer do such things as yell, "Where's the rape victim," according to Joan Gordon, another volunteer. Now a rape case is called a "code 600," she said.

"There have been some improvements at the hospital. They have closed off the family room for the victim now," said Ms. Gordon, who prefers that designation.

Since January the service has given safety programs for some 2,000 women and counseled 30 to 35 rape victims.

"I don't know if we will ever know for sure if we have done any good," Ms. Gordon said. "But if we've helped even one person, then we've done well."

Aurora Class Of 1926 Held A Gathering

The graduating class of 1926 of Aurora High School celebrated its 50th Anniversary Saturday, June 26 at the Palace Restaurant in New Bern. The celebration was the first reunion since the graduation.

Mrs. Cleve Wallace, class resident, presided at the reunion; Cola Deal presented the invocation.

Following the dinner Mrs. Elizabeth Warren entertained the class with music and songs from the 1920's and 1930's.

Classmates presented a brief history about their lives since their 1926 graduation.

Mrs. Dorothy Fisher and Mrs. Beatrice Bonner presented gag gifts to the class members.

Thirteen persons died when a U.S. Army bomber crashed into New York's Empire State Building May 20, 1945.

Class of '76.

Now there was a great bunch of guys. With an unheard-of, revolutionary, class gift. The Declaration of Independence. A document so powerful, it stirred a colonial people to take stock in a new idea: America.

And take stock they did. By purchasing U.S. Government securities. After all, we sure needed the money back then, and everyone knew it. But there were more than a few who wondered if this young, determined nation would pay it back.

Well, we did. Every last penny.

With interest.

And it's the same today.

Maybe that's why now millions of Americans take stock in their country every payday by buying U.S. Savings Bonds.

You see, when you join the Payroll Savings Plan, a little is set aside from each paycheck to buy Bonds. There's just no easier way to save. And certainly no safer way.

So take a tip from the Class of 1776 and buy U.S. Savings Bonds. You'll be voted most likely to succeed.

Take stock in America.

200 years at the same location.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first year). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.
