Search Estate For Clues To Bus Hijacking

PRESS SHY — Frederick Woods III is shown talking to officials in a sheriff's car outside his estate in the Portola Valley of the San Francisco Peninsula early today. Woods told officers he didn't want members of the press on his estate during the search for evidence in the kidnapping of 26 school children and bus driver last week. (AP Wirephoto)

By PETER H. KING Associated Press Writer REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — A heavily armed force of deputies swooped down on a lavish 100-acre estate near here early today, searching for evidence in the Chowchilla school bus hijacking. The estate, six miles south of here, is owned by Frederick N. Woods III, who also owns the rock quarry in Livermore where 26 schoolchildren and their bus driver were buried in a makeshift, underground prison for 18 hours before digging their way out. Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins said officials also wanted to talk to Woods' son, 24-year-old Frederick N. Woods IV. The elder Woods had told one interviewer on Wednesday that he didn't know the whereabouts of his son. "I was told by the sheriff's office not to say whether I have one son or 10 sons," Woods said. Houchins said he also was interested in talking to two of young Woods' friends — Richard Schoenfeld, 22, and James Schoenfeld, 24, sons of J.B. Schoenfeld, a podiatrist in nearby Atherton. A highly placed source in the Alameda County sheriff's office told The Associated Press Wednesday that one young man being sought in connection with the kidnapping was connected to the rock quarry. The source said the other two were sons of a prominent San Francisco area physician. Houchins emphasized at a news conference late Wednesday night that the younger Woods and the Schoenfeld brothers had not been named in any arrest warrant. Officials also emphasized early today that no arrest warrants had been issued in the case.

"The three are subjects of the investigation" into the kidnapping, Houchins said. "I would be interested in talking to them. I would not arrest them." Alameda County sheriff's officials had said earlier Wednesday that Woods "and his boy are being investigated routinely." Houchins said more than 100 vehicles were found on the estate, including one which he said authorities were interested in, a tractor usually used to pull trailer trucks. The children and the driver were imprisoned in a moving van trailer. Under the command of sheriffs from Alameda, San Mateo and Madera counties, the caravan of sheriff's deputies left the San Mateo sheriff's office Wednesday night and was accompanied to the Woods estate by Charles Bates, FBI agent in charge of the San Francisco office. The elder Woods was served with a search warrant signed by a San Mateo County judge. His house was searched and he and his wife were the only people at home, Houchins said. Some 60 law enforcement officers then scattered about the property on a fine-comb search of 15 buildings on the estate in Portola Valley on the San Francisco Peninsula. Standing by as backup team was a Special Weapons and Tactics team from San Mateo County. Published reports said Wednesday that the kidnapping last Thursday, which authorities said was carried out by three armed, masked men, may have been the work of a "drug and gun cult" involving members of wealthy families. A source told The AP that the families of all three men sought in the case have residences on the San Francisco Peninsula, of which San Mateo County is a part. Meanwhile, the Sacramento Bee reported Wednesday, "The arrests of at least seven sons of wealthy San Francisco Peninsula families are imminent." The investigation shifted here after clothing and other articles taken from the bus driver by the kidnapers were found alongside a Saratoga area road, about 20 miles south of Redwood City.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

SHOULD ASK FOR NAMES I am a 17-year-old high school student, and I think I have venereal disease. I do not want to go to the health department, because I'm afraid I will have to name my contacts. I also do not want my parents to find out I'm being treated for VD. Would a private doctor ask me to report my partners? Name Withheld.

According to Ann Sherwin, lab technician with the Pitt County Health Department, a private doctor should, as a matter of public health, also require you to name your partners.

Ms. Sherwin emphasized that your name would remain completely secret. Only professionals handle such records, and the chances of your parents finding out are virtually nil.

She also urged treatment for you and your contacts. Since 9 out of 10 women have no symptoms, they can carry the disease for several years without knowing it, and can become sterile as a result. Treatment is vital for both you and your partners.

BOUGHT OUT I ordered some rose bushes in February from Morrison Nursery Company in Morrison, Tenn. I received my cancelled check for $7.87 in my March bank statement, but have got nothing yet. I wrote a letter and it wasn't answered, and I tried to call, but the operator could find no such listing. D. B.

Hotline wrote on your behalf June 17. Our letter apparently was forwarded to the Savage Farms Nursery of McMinnville, Tenn. James Savage wrote to tell us that his company has purchased the Morrison Nursery and that he was issuing a refund check to you "to settle this matter." You report you received a $7.87 check the same week.

Eastern Prices Dipped

RALEIGH (AP) — Flue-cured tobacco sales averaged $88.74 per hundred pounds Wednesday on the Eastern North Carolina Belt compared to the record $90.25 on opening sales the day before. The Federal-State Market News Service said volume was heavy and primings comprised 65.1 per cent of the offerings. Nondescript accounted for 20.4 per cent and no-grade 6.5 per cent. The South Carolina and border North Carolina markets sold 4,788,484 pounds for an average of $95.36, an increase of $1.04 from Tuesday. Volume of sales ranged from light to heavy. Two markets on the Middle Belt, Aberdeen and Fuquay-Varina, sold 1,129,372 pounds for an average of $90.36, a drop of $1.64. The market news service said the Eastern Belt officially sold 6,928,240 pounds on Tuesday's opening for $90.25, a gain of $5.34 from the opening sales last year. Growers placed 37.8 per cent of the gross sales with the Stabilization Corp. under the government loan program. On opening day last year the amount was 57.5 per cent.

Wants Doctors Join In Politics

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Richard E. Palmer, new president of the American Medical Association, says he hopes more physicians will get involved in politics. Palmer, a pathologist from Alexandria, Va., cited the recent election of Lake Jackson, Tex., physician Ron Paul to Congress as a good sign because it means he can help interpret medical needs in the most important political groups in the nation. Since taking office June 30, Palmer has set a goal of uniting the medical profession.

By RICHARD SALTUS AP Science Writer PASADENA (AP) — The first Martian weather report shows nippy morning temperatures of 122 degrees below zero on the Red Planet, under skies not blue but pink. Dust particles floating in the thin atmosphere scatter sunlight to paint the sky pink, scientists explained today, even though it looked an earthy blue in Viking 1's first color picture. "It is red, but not as red as the surface," said Dr. Carl Sagan.

The color was false in the first picture because Viking's cameras have not yet been adjusted to reproduce colors on Mars with perfect accuracy, said project officials. A more serious problem was also revealed late Wednesday. The seismometer designed to detect marsquakes did not turn on properly after Tuesday's landing.

Unless it can be fixed by radio commands from earth, the instrument will not be able to carry out its work of recording quakes and probing the interior of the planet, said Deputy Mission Director Lou Kingsland. Scientists had hoped to have the use of seismometers aboard both the Viking 1 and its twin, Viking 2 — due for a landing later this summer — in order to determine the location of any marsquakes. If only one seismometer works properly, only the number, not the direction of the quakes can be registered. Dr. Seymour Hess, meteorology investigation team leader, said the weather station aboard the robot lander recorded temperatures ranging from 122 below zero Fahrenheit to 22 below, although the latter was not the highest temperature of the day. He said there were light winds shifting from the east to the southwest during Viking's first Martian night. The highest wind speed was 15 miles per hour, far gentler than the winds of several hundred miles per hour known to blow on the planet. Sagan, a member of Viking's lander photography team, said another scientist, Dr. James

Heartening

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials who feared several months ago that North Carolina would end the fiscal year with a big deficit got some heartening news Wednesday. Revenue Secretary J. Howard Coble estimated that the state closed the fiscal year June 30 with a credit balance of more than $30 million.

Coble told a news conference the general fund revenue shortfall would amount to only about $23 million. Some budget officials estimated last winter it would run as high as $80 million.

Coble said that funds appropriated but not spent would be sufficient to take care of the shortfall and still provide the credit balance of more than $30 million. He reported that general fund collections in June totaled $95.4 million, an increase of 28.26 per cent over the $74.4 per cent collected in June last year. For the fiscal year, the collections were $120.6 million or 8.30 per cent over the previous fiscal year.

Highway fund receipts in June amounted to $32.7 million compared with $29.8 million a year ago. Coble noted that sales and use tax collections in June showed an increase of about 12 per cent while gains of nearly 20 per cent had been registered the previous three months. He said this may be an indication that retail sales may be leveling off.

Pollack, had determined the pinkish hue of the Martian sky. It had appeared much brighter than expected in Viking's first black-and-white photos, and had appeared blue in the color picture until further analysis revealed the sky's true color. The robot lander's camera snapped a pair of photos Tuesday of the spot where, a week from now, a telescoping arm has been preprogrammed to scoop up a sample of Martian soil. That will mark the beginning of biological tests in the hunt for Martian life. Meanwhile, with one Viking experiment station on Mars working well, officials have decided to be bolder with the second Viking and aim it for a northerly site riskier but more likely to harbor Martian life. The decision to target Viking 2 for a landing in the north — rather than at an alternate site near the Martian equator — came after more than two dozen meetings at which officials and scientists weighed a multitude of factors. The northern site, on a vast rolling plain called Cydonia after a town on the Greek island of Crete, is of great interest to scientists. There is believed to be at least five times more water vapor in the air than there is near Mars' equator. Also, because the area is not far from where the north polar icecap extends in the winter. Late Bulletin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, with an attack on unemployment as a major goal this election year, today overrode President Ford's veto of a $3.95-billion public works jobs bill, enacting it into law.

"We have it locked up," said House Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill. But O'Neill was not so confident about overriding Ford's veto of another bill: a $3.3-billion military construction authorization. A vote is also expected today on that veto.

Supporters of the public works bill say it would create 200,000 construction and other jobs while protecting another 90,000 state and local government jobs. Sen. Walter Mondale, the Democrats' vice presidential nominee, said he couldn't understand Ford's veto because "the worst thing you can do is deny people work. This country needs work."

Ford had called an earlier $6.2-billion version of the bill, which he successfully vetoed, "little more than election-year pork barrel." He made clear he considers the new version little better. "This bill will not create lasting jobs," Ford said, "but will instead create more inflation."

Supporters say the bill will create jobs in the construction industry because it authorizes $2 billion in grants to state and local government for public works construction projects that can be started in 90 days. They say the 90,000 state and local government jobs will be saved by a $1.25-billion authorization in the bill for antirecession grants to maintain government services in areas with high unemployment. Democratic leaders, particularly in the House, set creation of more jobs as their major legislative goal at the start of this year. The tentative $413.3-billion federal spending target Congress approved for next year earmarks about $6 billion for programs supporters say would create or save about a million jobs. Ford vetoed the $3.3-billion military construction authorization bill because a rider congressmen tacked on to it prohibiting the Pentagon from closing any bases in their districts without a year's advance notice to Congress.

Republican Sen. Jesse Helms voted against overriding. His Democratic colleague from North Carolina, Sen. Robert Morgan, was not listed as voting.

Beirut Factions Split By Small Buffer Zone

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabian peace troops in armored cars set up a small buffer zone between the warring Moslem and Christian sectors of Beirut today, but fighting raged on other fronts of the Lebanese civil war. About 150 Saudi soldiers from the Arab League peace force consolidated their positions during the night at the chief crossing point through the no man's land dividing Beirut. There was frequent sniper fire, but the white-helmeted Saudi soldiers did not retaliate. Arab League representative Hassan Sabri Kholi said the sniping was not alarming, and he was hopeful. "Though still a shaky start and very small, the newly established buffer zone could be spread to separate combatants along the entire dividing line," the Moslems' Beirut Radio said. "The attempt is the first genuinely positive test to re-establish communications between the two sectors of the capital and head off the dark specter of partition," the broadcast added. Meanwhile, the Christian Phalange party claimed leftist Moslem militiamen led by Palestinian officers tried to capture the Phalange headquarters in Beirut's downtown business district. "The attackers were beaten were set ablaze during the fighting. Security sources said fire engines could not reach the area because of the battle. Hospitals and security sources estimated that more than 100 persons were killed and 112 wounded during the night, bringing the total estimated death toll in the 15-month-old war close to 33,000. McCall Lists His Top Priorities For State

Rev. Wallace McCall, Republican gubernatorial candidate listed crime, secondary road improvement, and education as his three major campaign issues during a Greenville visit Thursday.

"I propose to reopen the local prison farms to offer relief to our 13,000 prisoners in our 10,000 capacity prisons," the Rosman native said.

"This idea would give the prisoners more room and cut the state's expenses for the prison system. I would not favor raising taxes for the improvement of the existing prison units," he said.

"I feel that we need to reduce the options that the judges have in administering punishments. Similar crimes should warrant similar punishments," McCall said.

McCall said that he favored improvements of the secondary road systems in the state.

"Last year 37 per cent of all fatal traffic accidents in our state occurred on secondary roads. I would like to stress making improvements on these roads," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying federal officials have "failed in their duties" to monitor desegregation, a U.S. District Court judge is ordering the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to take action against 46 school districts in every section of the country except the South.

The order could lead to withholding of federal funds from school districts that are not in compliance with federal desegregation laws.

Included in Sirica's order were school districts in New York City; Los Angeles; Chicago; Tucson, Ariz.; Omaha, Neb.; and Hartford, Conn.

Plaintiffs in the case had argued that HEW officials failed to enforce the desegregation regulations throughout the country with as much enthusiasm as in the South.

None of the school districts listed by Sirica was in the South. A similar court order involving schools only in the South was directed at HEW officials several years ago, and a government study released last month said fewer students attend "intensely segregated" schools in the South than in any other section of the country.

In response to Sirica's order, Martin H. Gerry, director of HEW's Office of Civil Rights, said the government has already taken proper actions against the 46 school districts. He contended the districts are voluntarily desegregating "in virtually all instances."

Sirica cited "substantial delays of from 1 1/2 to 8 years" in completion of HEW investigations of compliance by the 46 school districts, "during which time the school districts involved have continued to receive federal financial assistance."

But Gerry said Sirica was ruling on the basis of old information.

"I regret that the judge felt it appropriate to take this action, particularly in light of his open acknowledgement that the record in the case before him was stale," Gerry said. "The record before the judge was indeed stale."

Gerry said 21 of the school districts cited by Sirica have voluntarily agreed to compliance plans, four others are involved in enforcement proceedings, one is before a federal court and HEW is preparing to take formal enforcement action against 10 others.

He said three other districts "have submitted or will soon submit voluntary compliance plans which most likely will be accepted." The investigation of New York City schools is incomplete and the "voluntary compliance process" has not been completed in the remaining districts, Gerry said.

In his order, Sirica broke the 46 districts into three categories. He ordered HEW to begin investigations of 14 districts within 60 days and initiate compliance hearings against them within 120 days if they are found to be in violation of civil rights laws. Sirica ordered hearings to be scheduled in another 26 cases.

Sirica said the final six cases involved school districts already found to be in violation. But he said HEW had failed to initiate any action against the six and ordered the department to move against them at once.

Scouting Award To Dr. Johnson

Dr. F. Milam Johnson was presented the "Wood Badge Beads" award Wednesday night at the Boy Scouts of America, East Carolina Council Executive Committee meeting at Camp Bonner.

The "Wood Badge Beads" are awarded to scouters who qualify for entrance and complete the ten phases of the Wood Badge program.

The first phase is an eight day concentrated program emphasizing learning the eleven competencies considered most appropriate for developing better scout troops and scout directors. The scouter is taught to view his role as a manager of learning to increase his effectiveness in scouting.

During the week of training, each Wood Badge learner writes a ticket which expresses his commitment to scouting and depicts the things he will do during the second phase of the program to fulfill his promises. Dr. Johnson completed this phase of the program at the regional Wood Badge course at South East district No. 68 held last August at Buzzard's Lair in the Cape Fear Council.

The second phase is an extended period of six months or more during which the scout works with a coaching counselor to implement the things he has committed himself to perform. Heber Adams served as Dr. Johnson's coach.

Dr. Johnson has served as District Scout Commissioner for Pitt District for two years and is currently chairman of the East Carolina Council Committee for the 1977 National Scout Jamboree.

He will also be a coach counselor for the East Carolina Council's Wood Badge program to begin at Camp Bonner in September.

REV. WALLACE McCALL

"I propose to give teachers a 10 per cent raise to at least make their salaries equal with the national average. I would also support smaller classrooms and more and better selected materials."

"Most of all I would like to accomplish moral leadership to present confidence to the people of this state," McCall said.

McCall is a graduate of Brevard Junior College and has attended several trade schools. He owns several small businesses in Rosman and is the assistant pastor of Zion Baptist Church. He is married and has two children.

Watergate Reform Measures Call For Financial Disclosure

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate legislation that is advancing through Congress would force members of Congress and other federal officials to disclose their sources of income for the first time, and reform-minded House Democrats are pressing for quick approval.

The Watergate Reform Act, the first bill to respond to the scandals that brought down the administration of President Richard Nixon two years ago, was approved Wednesday in the Senate 91 to 5.

The measure, sent to the House, would require financial disclosure and create a permanent office of special prosecutor to investigate misdeeds at the top levels of government's executive, judicial and legislative branches.

The financial disclosure requirements would apply to federal judges, high administrators, the president and the vice president, as well as members of Congress.

Although some politicians make their sources of income and tax returns public, no federal law now requires them to do so.

Shortly before the Senate vote, rank and file House Democrats demanded that they be allowed to vote on financial disclosure during this election year.

The House Democratic Caucus approved a resolution making it party policy that such a vote be taken.

The Senate bill also would prohibit presidents from naming top officials of their campaign to serve as attorney general or deputy attorney general.

John Mitchell became attorney general after managing Nixon's 1968 campaign. He resigned to head Nixon's re-election effort in the spring of 1972, but quit shortly after the June 1972 break-in at Democratic National Headquarters in the Watergate office building here. Mitchell was later convicted with other top Nixon aides in the cover-up trial.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who offered the amendment to bar political operatives from the top Justice Department posts, said "it has become nearly standard practice for presidents to push this important and sensitive office into the partisan political arena by naming their campaign managers attorney general."

President Ford supported the bill creating a permanent special prosecutor. His reaction to Bentsen's amendment was not known.

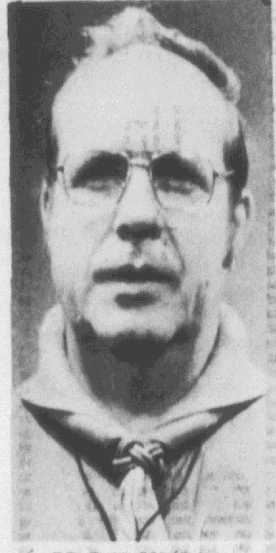

The special prosecutor would be appointed by the president to a single three-year term and would be authorized to investigate allegations of wrongdoing by the president, vice president, attorney general, other Cabinet members, the director of the FBI, federal judges and members of Congress.

In addition, allegations involving White House and congressional staff members could be referred to him.

Lutherans Examine The Church Policies

BOSTON (AP) — Members of the Lutheran Church of America today began an examination of church policy on busing for school integration, world hunger, amnesty for Vietnam war resisters and nuclear power.

The 3.1 million-member denomination opened its eighth biennial convention Wednesday with a business meeting and church service.

The 685 delegates are being asked to consider 95 resolutions proposed by area synods or districts.

The president of the group, the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, said the biggest problem facing the church and the convention is to meet both "deep personal needs" and "that great demand to be a citizen of the world."

He said "economic systems and governments have the responsibility ... to feed the hungry, to promote the general welfare and to liberate people from worldly poverty, oppression and injustice."

"Such a vision should not be coopted by atheistic Marxism," he added.

Some of the resolutions deal with relations among the three major Lutheran denominations and with other churches.

Dr. Marshall said his sect and the American Lutheran Church "should be moving toward merger as quickly as possible."

He said there are no differences in doctrine.

The presidents of both the ALC and the Missouri Synod, a third Lutheran denomination, are scheduled to address the convention later.

Mrs. Sadat Is Also A Scholar

CAIRO (AP) — Jihan Sadat, wife of Egypt's president, has entered the third year of studies at Cairo University after scoring an over-all grade of "excellent" in her university exams, the newspaper Al-Ahram reported.

Mrs. Sadat, 43, enrolled in the university's faculty of letters in 1974, one and two years behind her two married daughters.

The newspaper said Wednesday that Mrs. Sadat was first in her class in Arabic studies this year.

Women Fed Up With 'Males First'

By VERONIKA PFEIFER
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) —The German housewife is making progress toward equality in marriage and family matters, but she faces a tougher struggle to achieve American-style emancipation outside the home.

"When a woman wants a career, she must do her job twice as good as a man," goes the typical complaint of West German women fed up with the "males first" tradition in schooling, jobs and politics.

Hannelore Schmidt, wife of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, told American reporters recently "we have enough (sex-equality) laws. It's up to women to take advantage of the opportunities."

But feminists disagree. They claim most West German women are sexually and financially exploited by their husbands and blocked by male bosses from rising to influential positions in industry.

"They are slaves of a male society, both at home and outside. On the job, women remain the powerless executors of men," says Alice Schwarzer, spokeswoman of the 2,000-member Women's Movement.

Evidence of deeply rooted discrimination is borne in these statistics from the West German Family Ministry:

—Women are guaranteed "equal pay for equal work" by West German law, but are normally hired on lower wage scales and earn an average of 30 per cent less than their male colleagues in comparable industrial and white collar jobs.

—The 22.5 million women voters far outnumber the 19 million men voters, yet only 35 of the 518 members of the West German parliament are women; less than 10 per cent of judges and public prosecutors are women; and a minuscule 0.1 per cent of business directors are women.

—Educational opportunities are improving for young women, but 80 per cent still leave public schools with only a 10th grade education and less than a third of the nation's 800,000 university students are coeds.

Women's rights got a big boost this spring when parliament approved sweeping reforms of the marriage code dating to the turn of the century.

Newlyweds now have the option of adopting the bride's maiden name instead of the husband's for their family, and married women can resume using their maiden name by setting it in front of their husband's — a measure especially appreciated by successful professional women.

Beginning in 1977, the wife will have a full say with her husband in deciding family matters. Equally important, she can drop her housework and take a job without her husband's permission — grounds for divorce under the old code devised by the Prussian legislature of Kaiser Wilhelm II.

Under the new divorce law, "irreconcilable differences" or a one-year estrangement are grounds for dissolving the marriage, replacing the judicial requirement of determining a "guilty party" who is penalized financially or forced to give up the children.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Of all the styles the United States has to offer, it seems incongruous that "jeans would capture the imagination of young Russians.

It has been rumored jeans are capitalistic decadence, morally hostile to the socialist way of life and make men and women sartorially equal.

If any of that means you can't cough in them, they're right.

A pair of jeans aren't what I would recommend as a friendly hand across the sea. You can't build a relationship for lasting peace on something that shrinks three inches around the waist, two inches in one leg, three inches in the other, fades all over the towels, and has to be washed 287 times before you can sit in them.

It's the only thing in the last 200 years the Russians don't lay claim to having invented. That should tell you something.

Frankly, my sympathy goes out to the Russian mother whose child brings home his first pair of American jeans.

"What are they?" she asks.

"They're dzhinsys, Mama."

"How much did you pay for them?"

"Fifty rubles."

"FIFTY RUBLES! That's 65 American dollars. For a pair of work overalls your father changes out of before he comes into the house!"

"But Mama, all the comrades are wearing them."

"What else do they do besides stand in the corner by themselves?"

"I'll get you a pair, Mama, and you'll see how comfortable they are."

The next afternoon, Mama is so comfortable she can barely breathe. From the crotch to the waistband, the jeans, measure six inches. Mama measures twelve inches. Her blouse pops out of the jeans every time she clears her throat. When she walks, her legs sound like the German army marching into Poland.

"Sit down, Mama," suggests her son.

"I am sitting," she says. "And you say everyone in America is wearing them?"

"Yes, it makes them feel independent and free."

As her gripper pops open, Mama frowns. "Maybe we underestimate the Americans. Maybe they're tougher than we think."

Nurses' Leader Wants Voice Heard

By JANE SEE WHITE
NEW YORK (AP) — The new president of the American Nurses' Association isn't interested in talk — she wants to see some action.

At 61, Mrs. Anne Zimmerman has 21 years as executive administrator of the Illinois Nurses' Association behind her. She has some clear ideas about changes she wants to see made.

"I think we've got to be more aggressive about seeking an opportunity to have a meaningful and authoritative voice in decision-making in national health policy," Mrs. Zimmerman said here recently. Mrs. Zimmerman came through New York en route to her Chicago home after the conclusion of the ANA biennial convention in Atlantic City, N.J.

It's fine for the ANA to take positions on health policies and issues, she said, but those positions must have an impact.

For instance, she said, "we couldn't influence the Medicare regulation that allows unlicensed personnel to give medication in some circumstances, and I think it's no use to have a national pronouncement on our position if it doesn't change anything."

That means the ANA will do more lobbying while Anne Zimmerman is president, she said, both with elected officials and with the bureaucrats who write health care regulations.

And that means the ANA will seek to increase its membership — now at about 200,000 registered nurses — to bring in more of the approximate one million nurses in this country.

And she will make an effort to raise the collective political consciousness of her membership, she said.

"I hope we'll take positions on candidates, work for candidates, and I would even encourage our members to seek office themselves," Mrs. Zimmerman said.

A registered nurse, Mrs. Zimmerman has spent only nine years of her career in nursing — but she has served as executive director of the Montana Nurses' Association and the California Nurses' Association.

She will take a leave of absence from her Illinois post during her two-year term as ANA president, she said.

An ANA dues increase will make it possible for the organization's professional staff to be expanded, she said, and for the first time this year, the president will be compensated.

She will seek to cooperate with other professional health groups — such as the American Medical Association — in shaping national policy on some issues, she said, but she believes nurses should be able to have impact standing alone, as well.

"We have numbers, we have education, we have status and we have an obligation to influence national health policy," Mrs. Zimmerman said. "We've got to strengthen ourselves and do it."

CHINESE-STYLE SUPPER

Sweet-sour Pork Rice
Bean Sprout Salad
Fortune Cookies

SWEET-SOUR PORK
5 boneless pork loin chops (about 1 pound), cut in 1-inch squares

Marinade, see below
1/2 cup cornstarch
Corn oil

2 green peppers, cut in 1-inch squares
1/2 cup catchup

1-3rd cup cider vinegar
1/4 cup sugar

8 1/2-ounce can pineapple chunks in syrup, drained with syrup reserved

1 1/2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons cornstarch blended with 3 tablespoons water

2 tomatoes, each cut in 8 wedges

Mix pork with Marinade and let stand 1/2 hour; drain in a colander. Coat pork well with cornstarch. In a 12-inch electric skillet, heat 1 quart oil to 375 degrees; add pork; cook through and brown on all sides — about 10 minutes. Drain on paper towel and keep warm in a low oven. In a medium saucepan heat 3 tablespoons oil; briskly cook green peppers in it for a few minutes; remove with a slotted spoon. To oil in skillet add catchup, vinegar, sugar, pineapple syrup, salt and cornstarch-water mixture; cook, stirring constantly, until clear and thickened. Add green pepper, tomatoes and pineapple chunks and simmer, stirring, until heated. Stir in pork. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Marinade: Beat together until smooth 1 egg yolk and 1 tablespoon each cornstarch, soy sauce, sherry and water.

Threesome Hinders Romance Chance

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 26 and Bob is 27. We've been dating for over a year, and I am very much attracted to him, but I don't seem to be making any headway.

You see, whenever we go out, Bob always brings another fellow along. We have never been absolutely alone — just the two of us.

I've become very much upset with having an extra man on all our dates, and I want to do something about it.

Should I confront Bob with my feelings? Or would that be a mistake?

THREE IS A CROWD

DEAR THREE: A confrontation isn't necessary. If Bob were interested in a romantic involvement with you, you wouldn't have to insist on being alone with him. Three's a crowd. Lose him.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife and I often discuss remarrying, but we always get hung up on the question of money. Her net worth has grown substantially since our divorce, and mine has gone way down.

She feels that in a remarriage, her assets should remain hers as a sort of security, and that I should contribute the same as before.

I feel that if a couple marries, there should be a complete merger. In other words, since I was the sole source of support in our first marriage because I was "up," so to speak, financially, she would be the mainstay now that our situations are reversed.

We are both in our 50s and semi-retired and have no dependents. What do you say?

FOULED UP IN FLA.

DEAR FOULED: Your letter leaves too many questions unanswered. How long were you married? Why were you divorced? You say that her net worth has appreciated substantially since your divorce, and yours has gone "way down." Why? Did you gamble or make risky investments, or were you merely a victim of the times?

She may be justified in her concern about her "security," but knowing so few of the facts, I hesitate to offer any advice.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two children, 5 and 7. A very good friend of ours comes over about once a week for dinner and because he is such a good storyteller, the children always insist that he tell them a story.

In these stories, the bad guy always wins. I told him to please tell the kids stories in which the good guys win. He did, but the kids didn't like those stories nearly as much as the ones in which the bad guys win, so our friend went back to his old method.

I say it's a bad influence on children, but my husband insists it doesn't matter. I would like to know what you and some of your readers think.

UNSURE IN IDYLLWILD

DEAR UNSURE: I vote with you.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been in heaven for four years. I was 8 years old when the Lord took her away, but I can never forget a certain happening.

She once asked my sister or myself to do a small chore for her, like carrying out the trash. We argued so much about whose turn it was to do it that Mama sent us both outside and she did it herself.

Please put this in your column for girls who are lucky enough to have their mothers. Love,

Couple Honored On Anniversary

AYDEN — Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Turner Sr. and Mrs. R. H. McLawhorn Sr., honored Mr. and Mrs. John B. Beland on their golden wedding anniversary at the Beland home here recently.

The guests were received by Callie Stocks and greeted by Mrs. R. H. McLawhorn Sr. The receiving line was composed of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Beland.

Mrs. Callie Stocks invited the guests into the dining room where refreshments were served. Mrs. Hugh Turner Sr. presided at the punch bowl. The table was decorated with an arrangement of yellow gladioli and yellow and white daisies in a three branch candelabra. Throughout the house were arrangements of flowers.

Mrs. William Burke and Mrs. Henry Duemler invited the guests to the den where a four tier wedding cake was served by Mrs. David Montgomery. Assisting in serving was Miss Laura Turner.

Mrs. Robert Johnson presided at the guest register and good-byes was said by Peter Turner and Wayland McGlohon. About 200 guests were present.

No Closer Today Than In 1974

The world is past the mid-point of 1976 and despite the frantic avowals to "do something," nothing concrete has been accomplished toward making the United States independent of foreign energy sources.

Indeed, the opposite is true. Today, 45 per cent of the nation's petroleum needs are supplied by foreign sources as compared with about 32 per cent just a couple of years ago when the Arab petroleum embargo precipitated a crisis of then unimaginable proportions.

Alternative energy sources have been propounded; any one of which would have spelled a measure of independence. But every blessed one of the alternatives have run into zealots who seek to undermine them. . . or developmental costs that prohibit general application.

Even the American public is working against energy conservation. . . we say this generally, not pointing a finger at you. The fact is, however, the gas-guzzling big cars are again dominating the scene; more travel is being enjoyed by more people; the demand for more heating, more cooling, more lighting, more appliances is unabated. This is not all bad; Americans expect and anticipate growth. And growth means expanding demand on all resources.

Still, it all means the U. S. is escalating its vulnerability to energy strangulation if and when the weapon is applied or if and when the need outpaces availability.

One former presidential candidate, the Governor of California, warned Americans that lowered expectations (a term that can and does apply to all material things) are inevitable. True enough, looking ahead on the basis of present circumstances, that prospect does seem in store; but we are sure, too, that imposing limitations on the future is unacceptable.

There is no reason for such grim realities to come to pass if the talents and resources of the people are turned to resolving a two-year-old problem that is worsening while thumbs are twiddled.

National Immunization Seems Unlikely

As is customary on public issues, there's varied feelings toward the proposed "swine flue" vaccination project.

There are people who run at the sight of a needle; there are others who don't believe in "that germ theory" (and look on a virus as a product of the imagination).

Effectiveness of flue vaccines is argued, too; so the prospect of national inoculation against swine flue may be given high marks for conception and poor chances of accomplishment.

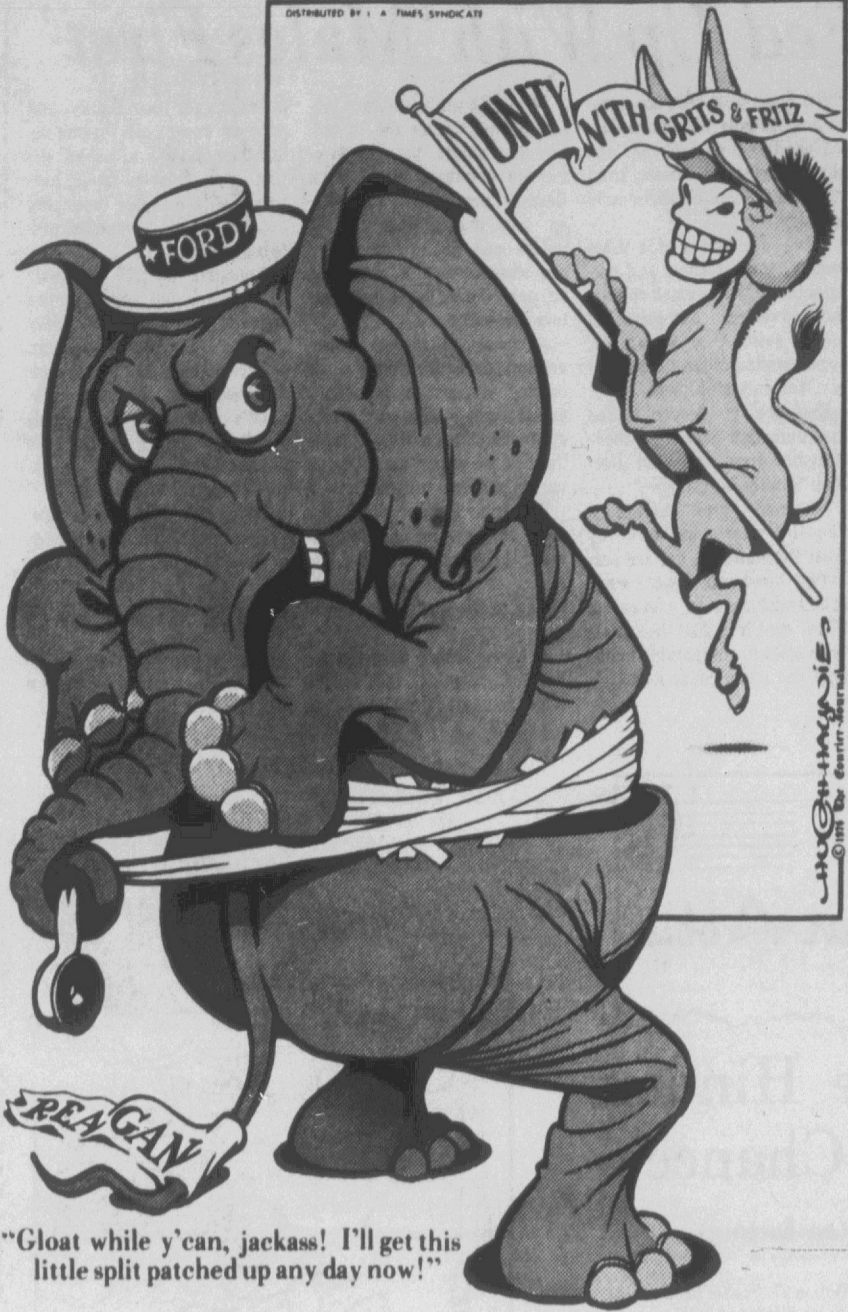

The immediate problem is an impasse over insurance coverage. Vaccine-makers understandably need protection, and if they can't find it the whole project may well go by the boards.

On reflection, it does seem probable the vaccine would be available to those individuals who ask for it; and there's likely to be many in that group.

Anyone who has read of the great 1918-19 outbreak, or has been told of the epidemic by its survivors, will in all likelihood be first in line for their shots.

It would be strange indeed that people who have the means at hand to stave off such a medical disaster would passively stand by and take their chances.

"Gloat while y'can, jackass! I'll get this little split patched up any day now!"

THIS AFTERNOON

Reading Number One Aim

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Shortly after taking the reins of the state's juvenile training school system, Raymond T. Shurling said he would fix some new priorities.

"Reading will become our single most important thing in the schools."

"If a child can't read, he can't do well in school, or elsewhere. The result is failures, leading to worse problems," Shurling believes.

Revamping the school programs to bring resources to bear on teaching reading has resulted in some unorthodox approaches. But there are some early, tentative signs that success can be gained.

Reading teachers are encouraged to improvise and originate their own teaching techniques and materials.

Many Problems Working with a training school population where the average IQ is 80 provides built-in difficulties. Complicate that with the fact that many of the children come from broken, unhappy homes where they received little instruction or encouragement on matters academic, and the problems compound.

But by concentrating on reading and working with new techniques, reading successes have soared as high as a year's progress in just 41 days on the average, with some reaching four years of progress in six months of training.

Several factors are at work, according to officials of the Division of Youth Services which operates the training schools.

A low student-teacher ratio of one to five allows complete individuality of instruction. Teachers have time to design and carry out completely individual instruction. Also, due to the teacher load, discipline in the classroom is no problem.

"We start them in reading, and stop with them, wherever they are," says Susan Smith, a teacher at Swannanoa Juvenile Center.

The reading labs generally are held in mobile classrooms, with pupils working at various points in the room. There is no formal lineup of desks, and each student works at separate jobs.

Perhaps the key factor, though, is the freedom for teachers to come up with their own materials and teaching programs.

What, for example, is more important to a child 15 going on 16 than a driving license; the learner's manual then becomes a most meaningful piece of literature.

For the teenager, Sears' catalog holds a world of interesting words and ideas.

Different Books Calendars, comic books, boxing and auto-racing magazines and other unorthodox materials are proving successful with students who see little of interest in ordinary textbooks.

Miss Smith, at Swannanoa, wrote her own textbook on English grammar, using members of The Jackson Five singing group, and their relatives, to present parts of speech and rules of grammar.

She brought in a bowl of fish, and the how-to manual on the care and feeding of fish become terribly important reading material to children who grasped the life-or-death significance of the words.

Dillon School teacher Danny Hutchinson says the biggest hurdle is attitude: "They have to be shown that a book is not an alien thing. Sometimes it takes the whole time they're here to get the right attitude."

"Then the student goes back to the public school where he gets back into the traditional, inflexible pattern that turned him off from learning in the first place," Hutchinson said.

Howard McRorie at Stonewall Jackson school said he class gained two years and four months in grade level, while one student moved from an eighth grade reading level to college level in only six months—completing a high school equivalency in the process.

Shurling thinks the social problems resulting from not knowing how to read cause many of the problems which lead to children being in state training schools. He hopes to remove some of those problems.

ALABAMA'S EXPERIMENT

Camera In The Courtroom

By REX THOMAS

Associated Press Writer MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—A new rule went into effect in Alabama nearly six months ago allowing cameras and microphones in court while trials are underway. But it has been used only a few times.

In the 38 judicial circuits where jury trials are held, only one presiding judge has submitted an implementation plan required by the state Supreme Court.

Chief Justice Howell Heflin suspects the news media has been a bit bashful about exercising its newfound right. The Supreme Court has opened the door for photo journalism, he says, and it's up to the newspapers, radio and television stations now to make it work.

He said editors and cameramen should "sit down with their local judges and district attorneys and, in a cooperative spirit," draw up the guidelines they will follow.

Heflin emphasized, as does the new rule itself, that judges do not have to permit pictures or tape recordings in the courtroom. But, he said, "I feel that most judges in the state will have an open mind...or will at least discuss it..."

Some judges made it clear from the outset that they will not permit cameras or microphones in their courts, but others promised, at least in some trials, to go along. It's up to each judge to make the decision in every case.

The rule laid down by the Supreme Court as part of a new code of judicial ethics went into effect Feb. 1.

It allows news photographs and radio and TV broadcasts in court only with the consent of the judge, the attorneys on both sides, the parties involved, and the witnesses.

And it must be done in such (Continued on page 5)

Public Forum

To the editor:

Is there any chance of Greenville's getting a "nice listening" music station—like WYYD, Raleigh, and the Goldsboro station (which I can't get to "stay in" on my radio)? If you don't like "rock" or "country," you don't listen to the radio in Greenville.

Some years ago in one of our large cities, a man was sent to prison for something everyone knew he didn't do. In order to shield a woman who was the real culprit, the man pled guilty and served a prison term.

While in prison he became well acquainted with his fellow prisoners, and after his release he decided to dedicate his life to the rehabilitation of men who faced the hard and distrusting world after a term in prison. He was later elected to a Board of Visitors of the very prison in which he had been held.

He might well have spent his time in prison working up bitterness against the injustices of life. Instead, he set to work, after being sentenced for a crime he did not commit, to make himself as useful as possible to his needy associates. And with malice toward none and charity for all, he now does his best to make the hard lot of prison inmates more tolerable. It is only a man of great character who can treat life's reverses in this fashion.

A Ticket To Vote 'For'

Very well. It is Grits and Frits for the Democrats.

Jimmy Carter is again teaching Sunday School, as inconspicuously as if he were hosting a prayer breakfast at the White House. Walter Mondale is photogenically fishing. The Democrats have fielded a strong ticket, and the question is: What is the Republicans' best bet now?

A good case can be made for Gerald Ford. A good case can be made for Ronald Reagan. Over this past weekend. A good case can be made for Ronald Reagan. Over this past weekend, after the Connecticut and Utah results were in, the Associated Press credited Ford with 1,066 delegates, Reagan with 1,020. A shift of only 23 would make them even-steven. The race remains much in doubt.

To be sure, the polls indicate that the Republicans' decision may have no meaning anyhow. "If the election were held tomorrow," Carter would annihilate Reagan and demolish Ford. Such polls amount to no more than light summer reading; they are pleasant fiction, and they keep the poll-takers busy. Pay them no never mind.

It is a truism of politics that elections turn more often on a candidate's liabilities than on his assets. We tend to vote against a Goldwater, rather than for a Johnson; we vote against a McGovern, rather than for a Nixon. Looking at the Republican balance sheets, one sees plenty of liabilities to spread around.

Discounting his age (65) and his former occupations (sports announcer, movie actor), an appraisal of Reagan suggests two areas of political vulnerability. He still has the image of an ogre, and he has yet to project a presidential aura.

The two handicaps are closely related. No "extremist" is going to be elected president, and when Reagan rattles on about $90 billion budget reductions, or the future of TVA, or the hypothetical use of troops in Rhodesia, or the tinhorn tyrant of Panama, he leaves an impression of ill-considered impulse.

Prospective presidents, if they mean to be taken seriously, must learn to guard their tongues. An electable candidate's purpose is not to frighten, but to reassure. Listening to Reagan, many voters—quite wrongly, I believe—hear the pitter-patter of hobnailed boots.

Ford has liabilities of a different sort. He is per- (Continued on page 5)

The Bicentennial gave the world an opportunity to pay tributes to this country for what it has done to advance the cause of freedom and human well-being during its 200 years. And the world responded in an enormous outpouring of good will toward America — proving once again that this country, for all its faults, is still respected and revered abroad as the "last best hope of mankind."

Heads of state and heads of government who have personally brought their greetings to the United States during this Bicentennial year include those from Norway, Israel, Ireland, Jordan, Sweden, Denmark, France, Spain, Belgium, Canada, Japan, and England. Scheduled yet to visit before the end of 1976 are the leaders of West Germany, Finland and the Netherlands Antilles.

The most colorful tribute from abroad came in the form of 225 majestic vessels that sailed up the Hudson River and past America's grand lady, the Statue of Liberty, on Independence Day.

Foreign commentators also seized the occasion to take America's pulse on its Bicentennial milestone. Although their comments have not been uniformly complimentary, they have provided good food for thought as our nation now heads toward its Tricentennial.

Alain Clement, writing in the liberal Paris newspaper Le Monde, for example, recently noted that "ever since the late 19th century Americanization has been synonymous with modernization." Clement, while lauding this country's peaceful progressiveness, says our citizens are deeply disturbed over recent domestic scandals. "Now they are awakening at peace but (are) not pacified," writes Clement. "America, feeling itself surrounded by darkness, is trying to reify the temple."

Syndicated columnist Carlos Alberto Montaner, in an encouraging article appearing in the daily El Nacional of Caracas, Venezuela, says the "Yankees" are important "for having raised their values to a universal level and impregnated all earthlings with the American way of life." And a British journalist, Stephen Barber, who has traveled through the hinterlands of America, writes that especially outside Washington, D. C. "Americans remain basically self-reliant and optimistic over the long term even though they love to grumble and pick at old sores over the short term."

Such tributes and comments emphasize again that the future of mankind still depends very much on the continued stability and power of America.

Stock Market Ignores Others

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market has largely ignored the erudite analyses and the projections, hopes and dreams of stock brokers and some advisers over the past few months, but undeterred they continued to truck along.

Some advisers, for example, had pointed out prior to the recent political convention that in the midst of the hoopla and excitement about a new and potentially strong Democratic candidate they shouldn't get discouraged.

It was even suggested, in fact, that they might become a bit excited, because a review of the data showed that the market tended to rise faster under Democrats than under Republicans, contrary to some popular assumptions.

As pointed out, the politicians didn't get very excited and investors didn't get very encouraged. Since Jimmy Carter's nomination the stock market has been weak. Some critics have even dared call it a Carter market.

John Wright, manager of huge portfolios for banks and other institutions, seeks to dis-abuse investors of whatever lingering notions they hold that Democrats are bad for business and consequently for the stock market.

From his base in Bridgeport, Conn., Wright observes that since World War II "the nation's real Gross National Product grew at a 5 per cent average annual rate during three Democratic administrations, versus a 2.2 per cent average rate during the four Republican incumbencies."

Both prices and dividends fared better under the Democrats, he reports. Stock prices rose at an 8 per cent annual rate under Democrats, 5.1 per cent under Republicans. Stock dividend income grew at 5.8 per cent versus 3.3. In its quarterly analysis,

B-1 Is Again Delayed

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as Pentagon chief Donald Rumsfeld was exhorting Congress not to "inhibit" defense spending, opponents of the B-1 bomber won another victory in their fight to delay production of the aircraft.

By a one-vote margin, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted Wednesday to hold up funds for the bomber until Feb. 1 to give whoever is elected president in November a chance to decide whether to go ahead with the plane.

President Ford and his GOP rival, Ronald Reagan, favor production of the B-1, but Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter has expressed reservations about the need for the supersonic bomber.

Rumsfeld called the decision "unsound." Rockwell International's B-1 Division said 3,000 workers would be laid off if the delay takes effect. But Sen. John Culver said the move was "a clear-cut victory for the American taxpayer and common sense in defense spending."

B-1 supporters are expected to try to reverse the committee vote when the defense appropriations bill reaches the Senate floor.

Defense Secretary Rumsfeld, at a news conference, urged Congress to restore $2.4 billion in Navy shipbuilding and research funds and to support Ford's veto of a $3.3-billion military construction bill.

The House was to vote on the veto today. "We have heard a great deal of talk about increasing U.S. military strength and eliminating waste in defense spending. The issue is whether that will be allowed to happen, as President Ford has advocated, or whether it will prove to be just conversation because we will be inhibited from doing that by the Congress," said Rumsfeld.

The Senate committee's bill would appropriate $104 billion for the Defense Department for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. That figure is $3.9 billion below the administration request and $1 billion under the amount approved by the House. (Continued on page 5)

40 Years Ago Today

July 22, 1936

Between 300 and 400 acres of tobacco and cotton were destroyed by a hail storm yesterday afternoon between Hassel and Bethel, R. H. Salisbury, Hassel merchant and farmer, reported today.

It was estimated that at least 200 acres of tobacco were completely destroyed by the storm. A section four of five miles long was hit by the worst of the storm, Mr. Salisbury reported.

Heavy rains were reported at Robersonville and Williamston. Much hail also fell in those two places, but damages were slight.

Loyal Spaniards stormed the Biscay Bay resort of San Sebastian with an army of 2,000 miners and with a mountain battery today in a desperate attempt to end a rebel uprising force.

U. S. Ambassador Claude G. Bowers apparently was a virtual prisoner in the summer embassy in San Sebastian. The American embassy in Paris reported it could not get in touch with him as wires were cut.

Control of the city was reported uncertain. —Barbara Mathews

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST A band of showers is due today from the southern Plains to the Northeast. Showers are also expected in the central and western Gulf and southern Florida. Elsewhere skies will be mostly sunny and warm weather for most of the nation. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press Officials have warned Raleigh residents that the capital city could face a critical water shortage by the end of the month unless sufficient rain falls. Scattered showers the next few days in the state are not expected to produce important rains. Raleigh's chief source of water, the Neuse River, is at its lowest level in eight years. No measurable rain has fallen at the Raleigh-Durham Airport since July 7.

The low to mid 60s in the mountains. Satellite pictures showed patchy cloudiness over western North Carolina early this morning. The thin cloudiness was moving toward the east. There were isolated thundershowers during the day, but over such small areas they were not mentioned in the forecasts. The outlook for Saturday through Monday indicates continued hot days with widely scattered afternoon thundershowers. Some cooler air reached into Pennsylvania this morning. The boundary between the warm air to the south and cold air to the north extended along an east-west line from New York state to Nebraska. High pressure over the Carolinas continued strong and forced the Pennsylvania cold front to remain north of the Tar Heel state.

It was hot in North Carolina today, and hazy in some areas. Temperatures got into the 90s, except the 80s in the mountains and on the Outer Banks. It also will be mostly in the 90s Friday. Lows tonight will be in the upper 60s and low 70s, except was generic and not specific. Ford is stuck with this albatross. He cannot shed it. The President's ineptitude on the campaign trail remains a cause for disbelief. He has somehow contrived, against every rational prediction, to nullify the advantages of his own incumbency. He keeps bumping his head on his own possibilities. He is perceived as a minor-league Ike. On the Democratic side, Carter has abundant liabilities also. He is too lovable by half. Before the campaign ends, he is likely to be perceived as the dearest little con man who ever sold a case of political swamp oil. When he brought up the pardon Thursday night, his vaunted credibility very nearly collapsed; this was one subject, said the candidate who would never lie to us, that he would never bring up. There will be time enough to examine the liabilities of Jimmy Carter. The Republicans' hour of decision is close at hand. Looking only at the negatives, and leaving the positives for another day, I incline toward the view that Reagan is politically a better choice than Ford. He bears no responsibility for Watergate or for the pardon; no one has ever called him a weak campaigner. If the mood of the country is indeed "anti-Washington" or "pro-change," Reagan is the less vulnerable. In the remaining days before the Republicans meet at Kansas City, both committed and uncommitted delegates will want to rethink the situation. The Democrats' ticket is formidable; it is not necessarily unbeatable. The GOP's task is to field a ticket that Republicans and independents will vote for, but it is equally the party's task to field a ticket they will not instantly vote against.

Frustrated By Waiting

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An average of 81 persons per day call the Charlotte police emergency number and hang up in frustration over the long wait before their call is answered, police said Wednesday. Assistant Police Chief S.M. Harkey said figures show the department lost 2,442 of 34,621 telephone calls, or one in every 14, during June. Harkey said the department does not have enough people to answer the emergency number. The department has a tape recording which tells callers who wait more than five rings to hold and their call eventually will be answered. Many callers, however, hang up in frustration after hearing the recording, police say.

Chemical Spill Burned Three

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A water-treatment chemical discharged into a Durham city creek Wednesday night burned three teenagers working in the stream the next day. "It was a short-lived spill," said Terry Rolan, assistant director of Durham water resources, "but it was potentially dangerous."

process drinking water. About 828 gallons of the alkaline chemical were released into the creek by water plant supervisor Albert Yates. A load of the chemical had been accidentally dumped into the filter plant's mixing basins earlier that day. Rolan said Yates decided to get rid of it for fear that it would damage the equipment. "He did what he thought was the right thing," Rolan said. "In retrospect, the best thing would have been to leave it in the mixing basins until Thursday morning so that we could have all talked it over." Rolan said Ellerbe Creek is customarily used for overflow from the water treatment plant. He said Yates tested the creek when he discharged the chemical and found that it did not show up in his sample. The city was notified Thursday morning of the chemical imbalance by the conservation corps. Extra water and neutralizing chemicals were then released into the stream. Water officials said the correct chemical balance was restored by late Thursday afternoon.

(Continued from page 4) manner that it will not detract from the dignity of the court proceedings, distract any witness from giving testimony, degrade the court, or otherwise interfere with the achievement of a fair trial. And before it can be done, the Supreme Court said, the presiding judge in each circuit, along with the district attorney, local bar association president and chairman of the county governing body, must submit a detailed plan specifying the kind of equipment to be used and where cameras, lights, wires and transmitting equipment will be located. Only the the 13th Circuit in Mobile, where Joseph M. Hocklander is the presiding judge, has submitted a plan. The Supreme Court approved it, but said it was so minutely detailed in parts that "there may be times when some of the provisions...should be waived." At least two other judges, Richard P. Emmet in Montgomery and William I. Byrd in Lafayette, allowed newspaper photographs without formally notifying the higher court. Byrd permitted pictures of the first all-woman jury ever empaneled in Chambers County. Under the plan submitted from Mobile, however, that would not have been allowed. Photographers in that circuit can take pictures of a trial only if they "will not identify any member of the jury." In some other circuits, discussions are underway to take advantage of the opportunity to take pictures in court. But in Aniston, managing editor Steve Traylor of The Aniston Star says "we have talked to the judges and most were lukewarm to the idea." However, he said "we hope they will file a plan." News director Jerry Levin of WBRCTV in Birmingham says "I intend to move on this. I feel it's very important. I think it's the media's place to take the initiative. We've had preliminary talks with a few people about it." At WAPI-TV in Birmingham, news director Wendell Harris says "we have not approached anyone on it," but "we think we'll make a request to the presiding judge in Jefferson County in the fall so we can get the groundwork laid for later coverage of a trial." Not all members of the news media agree that picture coverage in the courtroom is wise. Editor John Bloomer of The Birmingham News says "it would have to be a very unusual case with unusual concern and moment for the public for us to try to take pictures in a courtroom. I am strongly averse to utilizing a courtroom for sensationalism of any kind." "Our society is dedicated to a fair and impartial trial for any defendant," Bloomer says. "and this is the first priority of any citizen, including the newspaper. It is essential to maintain a courtroom that guarantees both society and the defendant a fair trial." The Supreme Court itself intends to allow cameras and broadcast equipment in its courtroom. And Heflin's office is working with photographers and TV cameramen in Montgomery to adopt its own plan. When it is worked out, Heflin says, pictures will be allowed.

Opponents of the plane scored a victory last month when the Senate voted to delay production of the B1 until Feb. 1. But the delay was dropped in a Senate-House conference committee. The motion in the appropriations committee to hold up the B1 production funds passed by a vote of 13 to 12.

Ga.-Fla. Leaf Prices Rising

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Prices continued to rise in heavy sales Wednesday at markets in the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco belt, the federal-state Market News Service reported. Prices on Wednesday averaged $108.23 per hundred pounds, up $1.48 from Tuesday's average. Sales Wednesday totaled 5.86 million pounds. The sales lifted the season total to 57.5 million pounds sold at an average of $99.17 per hundred pounds, the service said. A fire early today destroyed an estimated $750,000 in tobacco at two warehouses in Blackshear, Ga., but Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said insurance would cover the losses, and growers there can designate their remaining tobacco for sale at other warehouses.

Irish Police Hunting Assassins

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Irish police said today they have arrested 13 suspected Irish Republican Army men in the biggest manhunt in Irish history, mounted for the killers of British Ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs.

The ambassador was killed by a bomb detonated under his car just after it left his home on the southern outskirts of Dublin Wednesday. The blast seriously injured British diplomat Brian Cubbon, killed Cubbon's secretary, 26-year-old Judith Cooke, and wounded the ambassador's Irish chauffeur, Brian O'Driscoll. Police spokesmen declined to identify the arrested men or to say what charges they may face.

At Londonderry in Northern Ireland, the British army arrested Rory O'Brady, president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, and Sean Keenan, a battalion commander of IRA Provisionals. Police said the army had handed the pair over and the men were being questioned.

Police arrested David O'Connell, 39, reputedly a past commander of the IRA Provisional wing, and Joe O'Neill, a political organizer, in a Dublin suburb a few hours after the ambush.

Nobody has claimed responsibility for the bombing, but police blamed the IRA's provisional wing or a splinter group linked to it. The Provisionals are waging a guerrilla war to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The IRA Provisional wing attacked the homes of a number of British civil officials in Northern Ireland earlier this year. It said they "share as much responsibility for the oppression in our country as the warlords of the British army."

Several thousand Irish troops and police searched for the assassins. Police manned roadblocks outside Dublin 24 hours after the bombing. A reward of $36,000 was offered for the killers.

A police spokesman said they were hunting for three men seen running from the ambush scene. It was not known if any of the men were among the 13 arrested.

Police said the bomb was planted in a drain under the road and was detonated by remote control by at least three men hidden in a thicket about 200 yards away.

Police officials said they suspected the terrorists were after Cubbon and not the ambassador. Cubbon, permanent undersecretary of state in Northern Ireland and the top British civil servant there, was on a visit to the Irish republic from his post in Belfast.

A senior police officer said, "The ambassador had been here for less than two weeks. It's entirely likely the people responsible for his death were after someone else in the car."

"We feel there was no real reason for the IRA to murder the ambassador, even though he was Britain's representative here," another police official said. "We believe there are strong grounds for suspecting he was not the real target of this outrage."

Cubbon and Miss Cooke arrived in Dublin Tuesday night. He and the ambassador were on their way to see Foreign Minister Garrett Fitzgerald when the car was blown up.

St. Vincent's Hospital said Cubbon was in an intensive care unit with a fractured spine and other serious injuries.

Arrest N.C. Skyjacker On His Landing In N.Y.

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Ira David Meeks, 32, of Gastonia, charged with hijacking a sightseeing plane over his hometown and directing it to Cuba in 1970 was arrested Wednesday as he stepped off a commercial flight at Kennedy Airport in New York.

FBI agents said they arrested Meeks after he arrived aboard a British West Indies Airways flight which originated at Barbados. Agents declined to give details of the arrest.

The FBI said Meeks and Diane Vivian McKinney, 24, also of Gastonia, had engaged a single engine Cessna Skyhawk for a sightseeing flight about 6:30 p.m. on April 22, 1970.

After they were airborne, said the FBI, Meeks ordered the pilot, Boyce Stradley of Gastonia, to fly to Havana.

The FBI said Meeks was armed with a revolver during the skyjacking.

Stradley recalled that he landed the plane at nearby

Rock Hill, S. C., and refueled as the hijacker threatened to blow the plane up if authorities came too close.

Stradley then flew to Jacksonville, Fla., landing shortly after 11 p.m. at International Airport. He next flew to Fort Lauderdale, took on more fuel, and then began the hop to Havana.

Arthur's Chapel Holds Services

BETHEL ARTHUR — Services will be held at Arthur's Chapel F.W.B. Church Thursday night through Sunday morning, with a prayer service beginning each evening at 7 p.m. 30 minutes before the regular service.

Thursday night the service will be led by Elder J. S. Lucas and St. John's Church of Farmville; Friday night by Elder Tyrone Turnage and Rock Spring Church; Saturday night by Elder Robert Gorham and Dildy Chapel Church; and Sunday morning by Bishop J. N. Gilbert and the United Male Chorus and the Sunrise Usher Board.

The woman was arrested in July 1975 when she returned to the United States after being released by Cuban authorities, the FBI said.

When told last year of Miss McKinney's return to this country and her arrest, Stradley told The Associated Press, "I feel as though the girl was a victim of circumstances. She was very young."

He recalled, "I didn't get out of the plane and didn't cut the engine off from the time we left Gastonia about 7 p.m. until we landed next morning in Havana at 5:40."

The pilot said of Meeks, "The fellow never gave me any problem except that he held a gun on me all the way down." Stradley flew back to Gastonia shortly after leaving his passengers in Cuba.

The FBI refused to say how they learned Meeks was attempting to re-enter the United States or acknowledge if he had notified the bureau ahead of time that he wanted to surrender.

Agents said Meeks was indicted on two counts of air piracy and one count of kidnapping in 1970 by a federal grand jury at Statesville. They said his companion faces the same charges and is currently awaiting trial.

Soviet Union Spreads Teaching Of Russian

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is stepping up efforts to spread the use and knowledge of the Russian language around the world.

"It would be quite wrong to say we're in a race with English or other languages to get more people to speak Russian," says Prof. Vitaly Kostomarov, head of Moscow's Pushkin Russian Language Institute and a leader in the Soviet language campaign.

"The point is to enrich people with a knowledge of Russian in addition to their own language." Whatever the reason, however, the campaign to teach foreigners Russian is now more active than ever before.

The Pushkin Institute, which opened two years ago to help direct the effort, already has 2,500 foreign Russian teachers taking its correspondence courses. By 1980 a gleaming new language school for foreigners is planned to open in Moscow, supplementing facilities that already give courses to 11,000 foreigners a year in this country.

Meanwhile, some 2,000 Soviet teachers have fanned out around the world to teach Russian — 30 per cent more than five years ago. The Soviets say Russian is now taught in 87 countries, compared to 60 in 1971.

As for teaching aids, the Pushkin Institute has an annual budget the ruble equivalent of $13,000 to distribute free materials to overseas classes. The two-year-old Russian Language Publishing House has turned out more than six million copies of Russian textbooks and dictionaries.

"I think, with the greatest regret, that up to recent times we have been doing less to propagandize the Russian language than France, Germany, the United States and England have done in connection with their languages," Kostomarov said in an interview.

He favors even more effort beyond the present campaign, including a program to give Soviet medals to outstanding foreign Russian students the way France encourages foreign students of French.

According to Western statistics, Russian holds third place among world languages with about 200 million native speakers. Most of them are in the Soviet Union. Mandarin Chinese leads all world languages with 750 million speakers and English is second with 300 million.

The Soviets, however, say up to 400 million people may have at least some knowledge of Russian. They claim most scientific and cultural knowledge is available in Russian — they say English is the only competitor in this respect — and Russian also has political significance to the people of the world.

"In the consciousness of millions of people, the Russian language is linked with communism, with dreams of happiness, with the difficult construction of a new society," one Soviet reference says.

Kostomarov attacks what he calls "the myth of the exceptional difficulty" of mastering Russian. He claims it is no harder than English—and that, in general, "all the languages in the world are approximately identical in complexity or identical in simplicity from a scientific and objective viewpoint."

McLawhorn On Hunt Committee

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, Democratic candidate for governor, has named Charles L. McLawhorn of Route 1, Winterville as an eastern area key of the Farmers for Jim Hunt organization.

McLawhorn, a Pitt County Dairy farmer and egg producer, will be in charge of Pitt, Greene, Lenoir, Pamlico, Craven, and Wayne counties in organizing support of Farmers for Hunt.

"Agriculture is North Carolina's most important industry," Hunt said, "and I believe we need a strong champion of the farmer in the governor's office."

Hastings Named Area Chairman

J. Harry Hastings of Hastings Ford, Inc. in Greenville will serve as the 1976-77 Pitt County Area Chairman for the North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association.

During his term, Hastings will act as liaison between new car and truck dealers in this area and the state and national dealer association.

The speaker will be Elder D. D. Garrett Jr. of Greenville. The public is invited to attend.

Skating Is His Transit

MEMPHIS (AP) — Billy Hart thinks he may have the key to the ideal rapid transit system. The key fits a pair of roller skates.

Hart, 23, an employe of a car repair shop, started roller skating to work after he "had a little light wreck in the car about a month ago and the transmission wouldn't pull."

He now braves Memphis' morning and afternoon rush-hour traffic five days a week for the 5-mile trip.

"People wave at me and carry on. At a stop light I holler, 'Hey,' and we carry on," said Hart. "Pretty nice people are all I've run up on since I've been skating."

Hart also avoids traffic pile ups. "I just jump up on the sidewalk and keep on skating," he said.

While Hart has brought something new to Memphis in transportation, he doesn't expect his personal transit system to gain many followers.

"I haven't seen too many people on skates lately," he said. "Not even children. It looks like most of my friends have grown up and don't skate any more. They put the skates away in the closet."

Hart thinks he'll be able to afford another car in a month, but he says, "I'm still going to keep by skates in the trunk."

"Even after you get grown you ought to keep on skating."

Lean To Reagan, Rockefeller For Vice President

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's delegates to the Republican National Convention who are expressing their preference name Ronald Reagan and Nelson Rockefeller most often for the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket.
But both men have said — with varying degrees of firmness — that they would not take the vice presidential nomination at the convention opening in Kansas City in three and half weeks.

Reagan is going all out for the right to recommend the party's vice presidential candidate himself. He lags slightly behind Ford in the tight delegate race for the GOP presidential nomination.

The first choice for vice president of the Reagan delegates with a preference was former Texas governor and Nixon administration official John Connally. On the strength of this Reagan support alone, Connally was the contender most often named for the second spot.
Ford meets today with Rockefeller, and later with the New York GOP convention delegation, which includes a large number of uncommitted delegates who may be a key to Ford's chances to beat Reagan.

The Associated Press delegate survey found only about 40 per cent of the 1,982 delegates interviewed gave a preference for the No. 2 spot.
Of those Ford delegates who said they had a choice, Reagan was at the top of the list. Of the 97 delegates naming the former California governor for the second spot, 78 were Ford backers. Most of the rest were uncommitted delegates.

Just about a week ago, however, Reagan made as strong a statement as anyone could want about the vice presidency. "Under no circumstances whatsoever will I accept the vice presidential nomination," Reagan said in response to a question in Newark, N.J.
Ford has said he has not ruled anyone out of the vice presidential race if he is nominated, including Reagan and Rockefeller.

Continuing the current line-up with Rockefeller as vice president was the next ranking choice of the Ford delegates with a preference. Rockefeller was named by 66 Ford delegates for vice president, most of the 75 delegates who named him.
But Rockefeller took himself out of consideration for the vice presidency last year, after some Ford supporters said he was a liability in Ford's race with Reagan.

Reagan has ruled Rockefeller out of any position in his administration because of "philosophical differences."
Connally was ranked No. 1 among the delegates, the vice presidential choice of 224 delegates. Most of Connally's support — 71 per cent — came from delegates committed to support Reagan for president.
Only 29 of Ford's delegates said they would like to see Connally as vice president, putting him in fifth place among the President's backers, in contrast to the first place he ranked with Reagan backers.
A Reagan-Ford ticket has far less support than a Ford-Reagan team that is supported by some Ford backers.
Only 25 delegates — all Reagan supporters — named Ford for vice president. That is about a third of the delegates who said they would like to see a Ford-Reagan ticket.

Reagan has not included Ford on his list of possible vice presidential contenders. Ford has not given any indication he would even consider the second spot.
Following Connally and Reagan in the AP survey results were Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee with 83 delegate mentions and Rockefeller with 75. Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson was named by 60 delegates. Ford and Sen. William Brock III of Tennessee were each named by 25 delegates.
Sen. Charles Percy and Rep. Philip Crane, both of Illinois, were picked by 23 delegates apiece for the second spot. Rounding out the top 10 delegate choices was James Buckley, the Republican-Conservative senator from New York.

Privette Sees Fat Cats Aided

By The Associated Press
Republican gubernatorial candidate Coy Privette says that "some fat cats" and other citizens with influence are shown preferential treatment in enforcement of liquor and other laws in North Carolina.
Privette made the statement at a news conference in Greensboro Wednesday. He said that if elected he will try to close the loop holes in the liquor laws. He did not elaborate.
But he said he was not going to close any liquor stores.
Earlier, Privette told a news conference in Raleigh he will release a major position paper on education next week.
Democratic gubernatorial candidate George Wood issued a statement today saying that state employees must be paid on a scale with persons in similar positions in private industry.
"I will keep the salary scale for state employees on a par with that found in private industry," he said.
Meanwhile, Jessie Rae Scott, Democratic candidate for commissioner of labor, said legislative action is needed to end discrimination against women, blacks and elderly workers.
She said that if elected she will work to seek anti-discrimination laws. She made her remarks in a speech before the American Business Women's Association.

Ed O'Herron, Democratic candidate for governor, said the next commander of the State Highway Patrol should come from the patrol's ranks.
"To say that we must go outside the ranks to find an acceptable commander for the patrol is not only a slap in the face for the many very good men in the organization, it is also a slander on the training program the patrol has instituted over the years," O'Herron said in a prepared statement.
He pledged that if elected he will reduce the highway patrol detachment at the Governor's Mansion to the very lowest possible total.

Defrauded Two Banks

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Police fraud investigators believe a man who presented himself as a priest and didn't pay a $100 bill at a Charlotte motel last month may have switched into a doctor's white jacket and defrauded two area banks.
He deposited $4,595 worth of bad checks in branches of the First Union National and the North Carolina National Bank in Charlotte, and then withdrew at least $3,088 from those accounts in Gastonia and Charlotte.
Police say he may be the same man who represented himself as Father Gordon, a Catholic priest from Snowmass, Colo., and as Dr. J.T. Reynolds.
As the purported physician he deposited phony counter checks drawn on the First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. of Raleigh. Police said there is no Dr. J.T. Reynolds licensed to practice in North Carolina. They also said the told the teller at one bank in Charlotte that he was moving his medical practice and bank account from Raleigh to Charlotte.
"When you think about it," said fraud investigator Max Godfrey, "what doctor would walk in a bank with a white coat on? He'd probably be in a business suit. They (the banks) got took."

Water Low For Raleigh

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh officials are warning that the city could face a critical water shortage by the end of the month unless sufficient rains come.
The Neuse River, at its lowest level since 1968, is Raleigh's chief source of water.
The below-normal rainfall for the year is also worrying farmers.
The Outer Banks community of Kill Devil Hills has expressed concern. It has urged water conservation by residents but sees no serious shortage problem.
Raleigh's potential shortage has been caused by a lack of rain in the upper Neuse River watershed northeast of the city.
Meteorologists at the Raleigh-Durham Airport have measured only about a half inch of rainfall for July, 2.68 inches below normal. Most of this occurred between July 3 and 7. Since then no measurable rain has fallen.
John Cyrus, chief of the field crops section of the state Department of Agriculture, said, "Lack of rainfall hasn't affected crops very much or very badly except in a few isolated areas."

Heavy Drilling Off Gulf Coast

HOUSTON (UPI) — An industry association reports 174 wells, including 162 wildcats, were drilled in the Gulf of Mexico off the Texas coast in 1975.
Of the 163 wildcats drilled, 155 were dry holes. The seven completions were gas wells.

Found First Of 1,000 Bottles
WASHINGTON (AP) — There was no urgent note from a shipwrecked sailor inside, but a bottle fished out of the Gulf Stream recently by a Florida teen-ager did contain a message — from the magazine "National Geographic World."
Fifteen-year-old Mark Cummings' discovery was the first of 1,000 bottles dumped into the ocean during May by the magazine. The bottles, placed in the water at the rate of 250 per week by the liner Song of Norway, were intended to help map the flow of ocean currents.
Each bottle contains a message in five languages asking the finder to fill out the enclosed cards and return them to the magazine's offices in Washington.

Gem Mine Is Reopened

HIDDENITE, N.C. (AP) —The Emerald Valley Mine, where a cave-in killed two men last week, has reopened to tourists who pay $4 to prospect for emeralds and other minerals. James Richard Draedyn, 51, of Planatation, Fla., and Delmas Joseph Harrison, 26, of Belmont, N.C., were killed July 11 when a wall of dirt caved in on them in a 19-foot open pit.

The accident area has not been reopened. The mine owner, Mrs. Lois Rist said steps are being taken to increase safety at that site, but she refused to elaborate. The mine covers about 200 acres.

T. Avery Nye, state commissioner of labor, says that tourist mines such as the one at Hiddenite are covered by state Labor Department safety regulations.

"We've always been inspected by the state and we're always complied," Mrs. Rist said. "It's not that we've been uncautious before. I don't think we have, but we're certainly going to be much more cautious now." Nye said a state investigation of the accident should be completed by the end of the week.

No Strike

RALEIGH (AP) —Raleigh firemen have voted not to strike for increased pay. Hubert Altman, a spokesman for the Raleigh Fire Fighters Association, said Wednesday the vote by firemen was far below the two thirds needed to call a strike. The balloting was done over a three day period. Altman declined to release the figures.

Fire Chief Rufus Keith had written firemen warning that they would be fired for participating in a strike. The backdrop to the vote was an unsuccessful 10-day strike by sanitation workers that ended Friday. The workers went back to work on the city's terms.

Extortion Try Probed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) —A man claiming to be a field marshal of the "Cypriot Independence League" recently tried to extort $50,000 from a Winston-Salem woman.

Elizabeth Dyer Bean reported that on July 8, she found an envelope addressed to her on her doorstep. It said that she and her family would be in danger if she did not come up with $50,000 by that evening. The author warned her not to notify authorities and said he had been watching her from some time.

Mrs. Bean immediately called her lawyer, who notified police. They set up a scheme in which she drove to her bank, picked up a money bag of money and drove to the designated pick-up spot.

Police are now working on the theory that the extortionist tried to use politics to disguise his true motive—fleeing Mrs. Bean of the money. She is the daughter of a R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. board of directors member.

LIGHTED COURTS

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (UPI) —Construction of six new asphalt tennis courts has been completed at the Marriott resort, Sam Lord's Castle, on the island's southeast coast. The courts are lighted.

Name Mountain For Hale Boggs

WASHINGTON (AP) —A mountain in Alaska has been named for the late Rep. Hale Boggs, D-La., his widow says. Boggs, majority leader of the House, and Rep. Nicholas Begich, D-Alaska, were on a plane which disappeared during a flight over Alaska in 1972 and has never been found.

Rep. Lindy Boggs, elected to the seat after her husband was officially presumed dead, said the U.S. Board of Geographic Names has approved the naming of Boggs Peak, a 4,440-foot mountain in the Chugach Mountains, six miles northwest of Whittier.

A nearby peak, she said, is being named in memory of "The Guinness Book of World Records."

Mrs. Jim Hunt Is Pitt Visitor

Mrs. Jim Hunt, in Pitt County yesterday campaigning for her husband, a Democratic candidate for governor, said she does not aspire to a political career herself but she does think women should be in top governmental positions.

"I have no ambitions whatsoever along that line," she said. "It is good for women if that is what they want. I think we need both men and women in government."

Mrs. Hunt said they both support the Equal Rights Amendment and added, "I'm certainly for equal pay for equal work."

She attended a reception Wednesday morning at the home of Mrs. E. Hoover Taft, Jr. She was also honored at a reception in Farmville at noon at East Federal Savings and Loan, and at two afternoon teas in Greenville, given by Mrs. Janice H. Faulkner and Mrs. Joseph Steelman.

"We seem to have good support in this area," she noted. "I am here because I enjoy campaigning for my husband."

Jim and Carolyn Hunt live on a farm in Wilson County between Raleigh and Wilson with their four children—Rebecca, 16; Baxter, 13; Rachel, 11; and Elizabeth, 8.

No Conventions For First Six

WASHINGTON (AP) —National political conventions are ordered the first six presidents of the United States did not have to go through.

George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe and John Quincy Adams were all chosen by party caucus, a system that was changed in 1832 when party leaders refused to nominate Andrew Jackson as candidate for the then Democratic-Republican Party.

Three-time Democratic presidential nominee, William Jennings Bryan, had this to say about conventions: "The convention is, in a way, a photograph of the nation. All the great forces that exert a potential influence in our country are here in person or by proxy..."

Texasgulf Open House Highlights July 25, 1976

There'll be plenty to see and enjoy for all in the family at Texasgulf's open house, Sunday, July 25. You'll find out how essential phosphate fertilizer materials are produced and how Texasgulf works with the land. Four highlights will include: (1) the 72 cubic yards dragline which scoops up 200,000 pounds of ore at a time; (2) the land-locked dredge, a major part of Texasgulf's successful land reclamation program; (3) calciners where ore is heated to 1,500 degrees to burn off organic materials; (4) conveyors deliver phosphate rock to the calciners and to plant operations; (5) a phosphoric acid plant which produces high quality commercial grades of acids for fertilizer materials; (6) the tank farm where all raw material is unloaded and all liquid products are shipped; (7) modern environmental control equipment, part of more than $16 million in equipment to protect the quality of air and water surrounding Lee Creek; and (8) cattle graze on man-made land. Reclamation of the land to a more productive state than before mining was begun is part of Texasgulf's overall mining plan.

Souvenir Medal For Families

The bronze North Carolina Bicentennial medal will be given to the first 7,000 families attending the Texasgulf open house program. The medal is in antique bronze with high relief art. It is 1 1/2 inches in diameter. The front side, left, depicts scenes from North Carolina, while the reverse side shows the State seal.

Sunday, July 25, 9:30 A.M. Until 8 P.M.

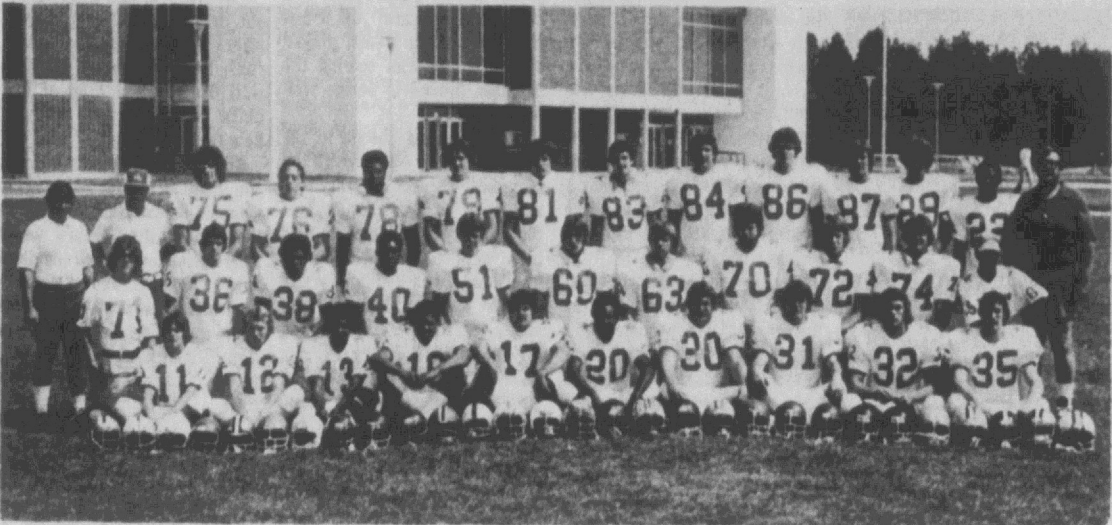

FOR YOUR INFORMATION: OPEN HOUSE FACTS—Texasgulf personnel who are ordained or lay ministers will conduct a religious service Sunday, July 25, at 10 a.m. It will be in the Maintenance Conference Room and visitors at the open house are welcomed... we're suggesting that Texasgulf employees, and Beaufort and Hyde families visit between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. in order to avoid the large crowds expected in the afternoon.

The Texasgulf site is north of Aurora—take Highway 33 to Aurora, then look for the Texasgulf sign and follow SR 1940 to the plant site. Join us for a wonderful open house! We're looking forward to seeing you and your family! Sunday, July 25.

By CHIP LAMBETH Reflector Sports Writer Run scoring singles by Sonny Wooten and Bobby Supel in the bottom of the third gave East Carolina the two runs it needed to take a 4-3 victory over Atlantic Christian in the Summer Baseball Leagues last night.

The Pirates raise their record to 18-12 while winning pitcher Pete Conaty lifts his to 7-5. Conaty went the distance in the rain-lengthened game striking out six, walking one and giving up five hits. Only one ACC run was earned.

Home Runs Carry North State, 12-4

By CHIP LAMBETH Reflector Sports Writer Home runs runs by Roger Williams, Billy Brannigan and Jeff Porter knocked in eight of the North State All-Stars' runs and Mike Pollard pitched a shakey one-hitter as the stars beat the Greenville Tar Heels, 12-4, yesterday.

The Pirates spotted ACC a run in the second as Keith Stuts singled, took third on a hit by Donny Kootz and scored on an out.

College Stars Meeting Steelers

By JOE MOOSHL
AP Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Great running, a strong defensive but a questionable quarterbacking corps is what the College All-Stars will unveil Friday night when they meet the two-time Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers Friday night in Soldier Field.

The midsummer football classic in which the pros hold a 30-9-2 edge will be nationally televised (ABC, 9:30 p.m., EDT).
Down through the years the All-Stars have had the talents of such great name quarterbacks as Sammy Baugh, Cecil Isbell and Otto Graham and recent standouts like Roger Staubach, Steve Bartkowski and Bert Jones.

The No. 1 pro draft pick this year was Richard Todd of Alabama but Todd did not report to camp, leaving the quarterbacking duties to Mike Kruczek of Boetion College. Craig Penrose of San Diego State and Jeb Blount of Tulsa.

One of them will get the starting job and all three might get to play because of their various abilities. Coach Ara Parseghian is hoping one of them will get the hot hand which will enable the All-Stars to end an 11-game losing streak to the pros.

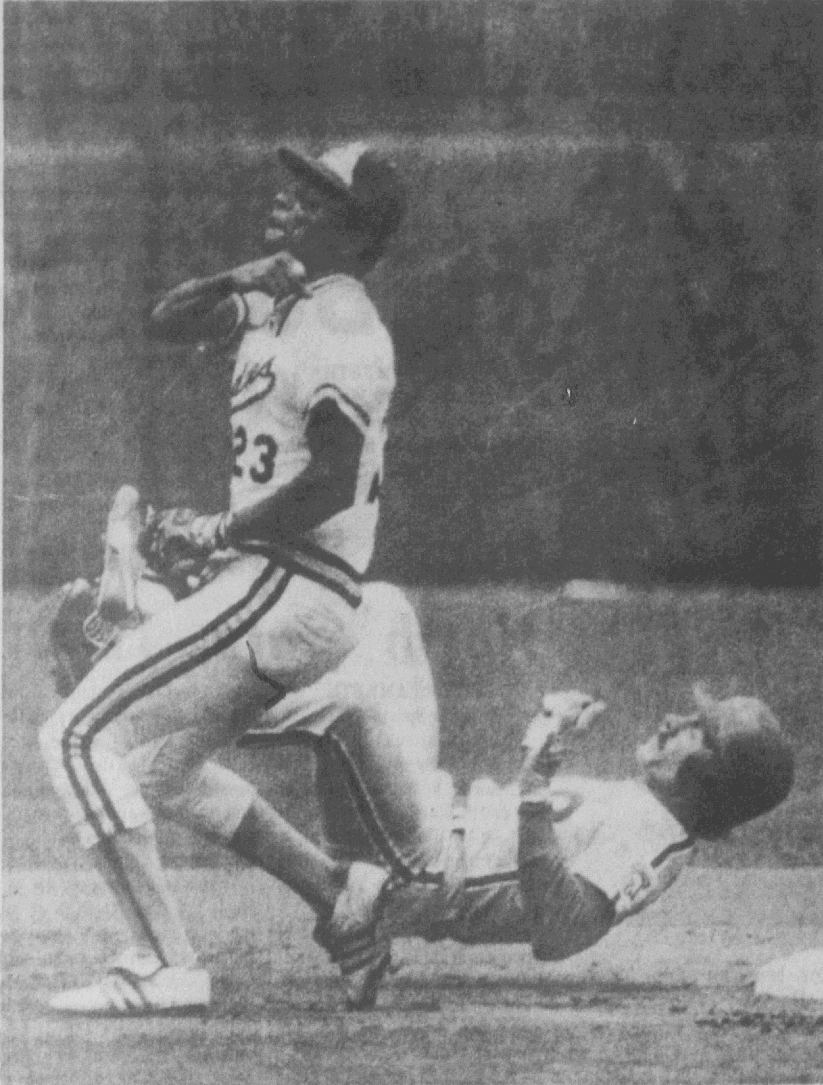

The All-Stars have not won a game in the series since 1963 when they upset the late Vince Lombardi's Green Bay Packers 20-17.

"Each excels at a particular type of skill and each may have a little shortcoming," said Parseghian. "But there's no perfect football player."

"Significantly, all appear to have tremendous competitive instincts, which is a super asset. Kruczek probably is a little faster, but Penrose and Blount probably can throw the ball better. I think all three are excellent leaders in the huddle and they have the respect of their teammates," said Parseghian.

All three have tremendous credentials statistically. Kruczek set an all-time pass completion percentage record of .673, hitting on 225 of 337 attempts in three years at Boston College to erase the record of .631 held by Staubach, now one of the National Football League's top passers with Dallas.

Penrose led the nation in passing last season with 198 completions in 349 attempts for a .567 percentage. He threw for 15 touchdowns and 2,660 yards. Blount completed 356 of 654 passes for 5,123 yards in his career at Tulsa. He threw for 13 touchdowns last season.

Expos Taking On New Look After Trade With

MONTREAL (AP) — Things may be starting to look up for the Montreal Expos, whose first-half performance in the National League this season has drawn criticism from the media and complaints from the fans.

The Expos, undeniably one of the worst teams this season with a record of only 27 victories against 55 losses, have taken on a new look in the last couple of days because of a trade with the New York Mets.

The look will be a little more different again tonight when they close out their three-game series against the Atlanta Braves.

The Expos announced just moments after they beat the Braves 4-3 Wednesday night that catcher-outfielder Gary Carter, whom the Expos had been counting on heavily this year because of his all-around ability, will return to action tonight.

"You're playing tomorrow night," Expos Manager Karl Kuehl told Carter as the player was leaving the clubhouse shortly after Wednesday night's game.

Carter's reaction was to holler: "All right," and he bounced out of the room with a grin all over his face.

The addition of Carter, plus newcomers Del Unser and Wayne Garrett from the Mets, have the Expos feeling a little better and it may have them winning a little more often than they have been.

The victory against the Braves Wednesday night was the first since June 19-20 that the Expos had won two games in a row and Unser, who arrived in Montreal just a few hours before the game, played a part in the win, scoring the run that proved to be the winner.

Unser, batting second in the lineup, led off the seventh inning with a walk. He moved up to second on Mike Jorgensen's third base hit of the night and then went to third on Andre Thornton's walk.

With former Expo pitcher Mike Marshall on the mound for the Braves, Larry Parrish forced Thornton at second but Unser was able to race home with the tie-breaking run and give Montreal the win.

The Expos had battled back to tie the game with three runs against Atlanta starter Dick Ruthven in the bottom of the sixth. Jose Morales' pinch-hit single that drove in two runs was the key hit.

"If there's a better pinch-hitter in baseball, I don't know who he is," said Kuehl. "He's been hitting the stuffing out of the ball for us all year."

Up until that time, Ruthven had been breezing along with a four-hitter and appeared as though he might pitch his fourth complete game of the season against the Expos. The three previous times he had faced Montreal, Ruthven had gone the route and had allowed only two runs.

"Ruthven looked good to me out there," Kuehl said. "Even after he gave up those three runs, I thought he was pitching well. He's owned a lot of ball clubs this year with the way he's been pitching."

The Braves had gone in front 3-0 against Montreal starter Don Stanhouse with a run in the third on Jim Wynn's single after Stanhouse had walked Jerry Royster and Rod Gilbreath. In the sixth, Stanhouse, gage up successive singles to Ken Henderson, Dave May, Darrel Chaney and Biff Pocoreba.

Nadia Is On Top Of The Gymnastics World

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

MONTREAL (AP) — Little Nadia Comaneci stood on the victory stand, smiling, her arms held high like an empress acknowledging the fealty of her loyal subjects.

In the wings, Olga Korbut wiped away a tear.

It was the end of a storybook chapter in ladies' gymnastics. At 21, Olga, the one time wonder child from the Soviet Union, was over the hill. In her place, wearing an Olympic gold medal instead of a tiara, stood Nadia, 14, just a twig of a girl out of Romania, the new queen of the uneven bars and balance beam.

Could Nadia, in her moment of glory, be looking at the distressed Olga and wondering what might be waiting for her in Moscow in 1980? Somewhere — in Leipzig, Louisville or Liverpool — some 10-year-old tyke must be swinging on a bar and coveting Nadia's medal.

"I think 10 years is the limit for a gymnast," the tiny Romanian said only last Tuesday. She has been in the sport seven years already. She will have served her sentence a year before Moscow.

Today, however, she is on top of the gymnastic world — hailed across continents and oceans — and Olga, who won three gold medals and a silver four years ago to send the sport into unprecedented popularity, is left only with memories.

It was a day for celebrating and a day for weeping Wednesday at Montreal's Forum.

The nerveless tyke from Romania whizzed through her four demanding routines — the horse vault, uneven bars, balance beam and floor exercises — with such daring and precision that she swept easily to the ladies' individual all-around championship.

Ludmila Tourischeva, the USSR's defending titleholder, a poised veteran of 23, finished third behind a spectacular young teammate, Nelli Kim, 19, and announced her retirement.

Olga Korbut scored a poor 9.5 on the balance beam, where Nadia scored her fifth perfect 10, and finished in fifth place.

Larissa Latynina, Olga's coach, was livid over the seemingly unjustified low score for her once star pupil. Olga herself plunked herself into a chair and broke into tears. She couldn't believe it herself.

Miss Latynina, in full view of the Forum's 16,000 sellout house, strode to the officials' box to make a protest.

"They told me," Miss Latynina explained afterward, "that Olga had exceeded her time limit on the balance beam and had been penalized two-tenths of a point."

It was a silly copout for the judges — an ugly, unnecessary gesture in the case of a young girl who had them all mesmerized four years ago. At Munich, little Olga could have stayed on the beam all day if she had chosen. She was untouchable.

So go the judges in the Olympic Games. Like the thousands of spectators and millions of TV viewers, they were caught up in the wave of "Nadia-mania."

Feuerbach Almost Cut From Team

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — Shot putter Al Feuerbach and discus thrower Mac Wilkins, the top qualifiers in their events at the U.S. Olympic trials, came very close to getting tossed off the American team.

"Yes, there was a possibility we could have gotten thrown off the team," Feuerbach revealed Wednesday, shortly after checking into the Olympic Village. "But it was a risk worth taking."

The two field event specialists took their gamble recently when they refused to board the American team bus that carried the track and field squad from its original training site and screening area at Plattsburgh, N.Y. — some 60 miles from Montreal — to the Games.

Instead, they stayed behind.

While training there, in virtual privacy for two or three days, they were besieged by numerous telephone calls from U.S. Olympic officials, informing them that their spots on the team were in jeopardy. Then, Feuerbach and Wilkins drove up to Montreal at the behest of the U.S. officials, but they still didn't go to the Village.

Instead, they went to a hotel. "We went there (to Montreal) because we were told by the officials that some very important things had come up," disclosed Feuerbach.

After some more wrangling on the phone with the officials, Feuerbach and Wilkins got back into their rented car and headed for Three Rivers, Que., where they had been invited to train by members of the West German track and field team, who also were working out there.

Meanwhile, far, far away, another huge contingent of track and field athletes, from the two other European powers — East Germany and the Soviet Union — were in serious training at Quebec City.

"The West Germans invited us as their guests, to eat with us, use their doctors or their trainers, and do virtually whatever we wanted," said Feuerbach. "Mac knew a West German coach and athlete who were training there."

"When we got there, we didn't realize it was going to be as good as it was, that it would be an actual training facility (at the University of Quebec at Three Rivers)."

Ford Almost Had To Play Center

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer
MONTREAL (AP) — Mitch Kupchak was so frustrated he wanted a whistle.
Coach Dean Smith was so concerned he thought 6-foot-2 Phil Ford might have to play the post in the second half.

All-American Scott May was so involved in the game he didn't even know the United States was in serious foul trouble when they trailed European champion Yugoslavia by four points at halftime.

The Americans overcame the adversity with a brilliant second half comeback that produced a 112-93 victory, clinching a spot in the medal-round semifinals of the men's Olympic basketball tournament.

It kept Uncle Sam on a collision course with the Soviet Union, which virtually clinched a medal playoff spot in the other bracket by easily handling previously undefeated Canada 108-83.

The United States and the USSR each have 3-0 records, with the Americans automatically going to 4-0 tonight over Egypt, which has withdrawn from the Olympic Games.

"I got mad and was upset," said Kupchak, the 6-foot-10 center from North Carolina. "I wished I'd had a whistle, but then I'm a player and I really wanted to play."

The officials, David Turner of Great Britain and Manuel Tavaros of Brazil, called the game extremely close. As a result, three U.S. centers had 11 fouls called against them in the first half—four each on Tom Lagarde and Phil Hubbard and three on Kupchak.

"It was a very different game because of the foul situation," said Smith. "I thought Phil Ford was going to have to play the post in the second half. I was real concerned at how it was being called."

But May, who had 26 points, and All-American Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame, who had 27, teamed with Ford to trigger a second half comeback in which the United States outscored Yugoslavia 61-38.

Oakland Lacks Defense And Offense, Loses 10-1

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland A's haven't been the same since Catfish Hunter left — and no one knows it better than Catfish Hunter.

"Oakland doesn't have the defense now," says the New York Yankee pitcher.

On Wednesday night, they didn't have the offense, either — losing a 10-1 decision to their former teammate.

"There are only four guys playing regularly on the A's now," said Hunter. "And there are only 10 players at the most who are still there that I played with in 1974."

Hunter, who came to the Yankees after escaping from Oakland through a legal loophole in his contract, has treated the one time world champions with utter disdain since 1974. Hunter holds a 5-1 edge over the team he once led to three world titles.

In the other American League games, the Baltimore Orioles beat the Texas Rangers 6-4 in 12 innings; the Minnesota Twins turned back the Boston Red Sox 5-1; the Chicago White Sox took a doubleheader from the Detroit Tigers 4-1 and 3-0; the Milwaukee Brewers stopped the Kansas City Royals 5-0 and the Cleveland Indians defeated the California Angels 6-2.

Hunter, 12-8, scattered nine hits and got ample batting support from Thurman Munson. The Yankee catcher drove in five runs with a three-run homer and two singles.

The only run off Hunter came in the first, on Joe Rudi's RBI single. Munson hit his home run in the fifth inning and run-scoring singles in the first and eighth.

Orioles 6, Rangers 4
Paul Blair, hitting only .206 at game time, socked a two-run homer off Joe Hoerner in the top of the 12th inning to lead Baltimore over Texas. Blair's blast, his second of the season, followed a walk to Bobby Grich and gave the victory to reliever Tippy Martinez, 3-0.

Twins 5, Red Sox 1
Bob Randall drove in two runs with a third-inning double to help Dave Goltz and Minnesota defeat Boston. Goltz, 8-8, stopped a personal five-game losing streak as he pitched the first seven innings.

White Sox 4-3, Tigers 1-0
Lamar Johnson drove in two runs and pitcher Chris Knapp won his first major league game with a four-hitter as Chicago beat Detroit in the first game of a doubleheader.

Bucky Dent drilled a two-run triple in the fourth inning and Bart Johnson scattered six hits to carry Chicago to a sweep in the second game.

Brewers 5, Royals 0
Von Joshua and Tim Johnson collected two hits apiece as Milwaukee beat Kansas City with the help of six errors by the Royals.

The victory went to Bill Travers, 11-7, who gave up four hits in 6 2-3 innings, walked six, threw two wild pitches and hit two batters. Al Fitzmorris, 11-6, who made one of the Royals' errors, was victimized by the faulty support.

MONTREAL (AP) — Gals are gals at the Olympic Village.

Dr. Gilles Gariepy, who heads the sex testing medical group, said Wednesday there have been no surprises.

Dr. Gariepy said the tests are aimed at discouraging anyone with an abnormality from attempting to compete as a woman.

MONTREAL (AP) — Hairdresser Ginette Jodoin at the Olympic Village says her establishment is more popular with the men than the women.

Study Helped Smith Now That He's A Dodger

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

When Reggie Smith was with St. Louis earlier in the season he had a hunch he might be traded, so he took a cram course. His subjects were the Cardinal pitchers.

The hunch came true last month when the Cards dealt him to Los Angeles and now Smith is teaching a slam course ... and the St. Louis hurlers are receiving falling marks.

Smith has hit five home runs in a Los Angeles uniform ... all in the last 10 games ... and all against the Cardinals. Two of them came Wednesday as the Dodgers topped St. Louis 7-6 in 10 innings.

"I would be lying if I didn't say that I got more satisfaction hitting this way against the Cardinals," Smith admitted. "But the main satisfaction is the fact we won the game. It seemed like my name kept coming up in trade talks all the time, so I just made an extra effort to study the Cardinals' pitchers. I guess it paid off."

In other National League contests, the Cincinnati Reds blanked the New York Mets 4-0, the Philadelphia Phillies trimmed the San Diego Padres 5-1, the Pittsburgh Pirates took a pair from the Houston Astros 5-1 and 4-1, the Montreal Expos nipped the Atlanta Braves 4-3 and the San Francisco Giants edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1.

While Smith jolted his former St. Louis teammates with solo homers—his 12th and 13th—in the third and fifth innings and a pair of singles, another ex-Cardinal, pinch hitter Ted Sizemore, singled home an unearned run in the bottom of the 10th inning off St. Louis reliever Al Hrabosky to give the Dodgers the victory.

Reds 4, Mets 0
Fred Norman retired 21 of the first 22 batters and extended his career record at Riverfront Stadium to 30-7 with a four-hitter. The 32-year-old left-hander, senior member of the Reds' staff, allowed only a fourth-inning triple by John Milner until the eighth.

The Reds got the only run Norman needed against Jon Matlack in the fourth inning when Ken Griffey singled, stole second and scored on a single by Joe Morgan.

Phillies 5, Padres 1
Jim Kaat won his 10th game with ninth-inning help from Gene Garber while Tommy Hutton hit a three-run homer, his first of the season. Jay Johnstone led the Phils' 11-hit attack with a double and two singles.

Pirates 5-4, Astros 1-1
Spot starter Larry Demery allowed two hits after flirting with a no-hitter for 6 2-3 innings in the nightcap. In the opener, Jerry Reuss scattered nine hits and Bill Robinson socked a two-run homer. Pittsburgh's Frank Taveras stole three bases in the twin bill to take over the NL lead with 32.

Demery, making only his fourth start of the season, had a no-hitter until Jose Cruz singled with two out in the seventh.

Expos 4, Braves 3
Montreal erased a three-run deficit in the sixth on Jose Morales' two-run pinch single and a game-tying hit by pinch hitter Tim Lincecum. The Expos then pushed across the winner in the seventh on a walk, Mike Jorgensen's third hit, another walk and Larry Parrish's grounder. Reliever Dale Murray notched his first victory of the season after eight losses.

Giants 2, Cubs 1
The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the top of the ninth on Joe Wallis' homer off John Montefusco, who hurled a three-hitter, but the Giants came back with two in the bottom of the ninth. Marty Perez and Gary Matthews opened the rally with singles and Bobby Murcer punched a bunt into left field for a run-scoring double. Chris Speier's sacrifice fly produced the winning run.

Gary Hall, a medical student at Cincinnati, says he's taking a lifetime vacation from competition after his bronze medal finish in the 100 butterfly.

Vogel's winning time was 54.35.

The relay team of Mike Bruner, Stockton, Calif., Bruce Furniss, Santa Clara, Calif., John Naber, Menlo Park, Calif., and Jim Montgomery, Madison, Wis., chopped more than seven seconds off its own record. Russia was second and Great Britain third.

East Germany's domination of the women's swimming events ended when the Russians swept the 200 breaststroke. Marina Koshevaia led it with a world record time of 2:33.35 and was followed by teammates Marina Lurchenia and Ljubov Rusanova.

Ulrike Richter of East Germany took the women's 200 backstroke with a time of 1:01.83, just off her own world record. Brigit Treiber of East Germany was second and Nancy Garapick of Canada third.

Colorado, Now 100, Still Has Wide Open Spaces

By C.C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer
ROCKY MOUNTAIN, Colo. (AP) — Colorado turned 100 this year, entering century No. 2 nostalgic for the days of tumbleweed streets and cowboys riding into the sun and wary about all the people coming to the New West.

And Colorado, still sparsely populated, is getting to be a popular place.

Park officials estimate that as many as three million tourists will roll into the state this summer to visit the Rockies, which are often snowcapped when the mercury registers 96 a few miles away on the flatlands.

The novice may explore any of 53 peaks rising above 14,000 feet; pan for gold near Golden; observe a tobacco spitting contest at Cripple Creek; watch a mock Western shoot-out at Estes Park or park his camper at Lake Granby and ask his neighbor to turn down his portable TV.

Vigilantes don't string up suspects anymore. Colorado citizens are more concerned about stockpiles of deadly nerve gas that they recently persuaded the government to remove from the vicinity of Denver's international airport, and about radiation from the Rocky Flat Nuclear weapons plant.

Where men once dug for gold and silver with pick and shovel, engineers using massive machinery are now hollowing out Cheyenne Mountain to expand the North American Air Defense Command's tracking facility.

In the late 1800's Denver boasted "the West's most wicked thoroughfare," along Holladay Street, with its "boarding houses for young ladies." A leading madam of the day, Mattie Silk, once fought a duel with another woman over a man. Neither woman was hit, but the man, who later married Mattie, was.

Today a woman who calls herself Ming Toy Epstein is among the dozens of women performing at Denver's nude bars, permitted since the state Supreme Court ruled the old anti-obscenity ordinance unconstitutional.

In 1875 the little river town of Denver had a population of 22,000; 55 saloons; 63 hotels; 34 cigarette and tobacco stores; 6 schools and 18 churches and one synagogue. Five years earlier the first railroad reached town, doubling the population.

Today more than 56 per cent of the state's 2.5 million residents live in the Denver metro area.

"The seemingly endless frontier of the West is gone," Gov. Richard Lamm said, adding it is time lawmakers realize that "states have carrying capacities, just like airplanes do."

Colorado's population has increased 45 per cent in the last 15 years, although residents have achieved zero population growth. Today an average of 134 new residents unpack each day. The number of mobile homes has doubled in five years to 68,000.

"We must stop thinking of bigger, faster and more and start thinking of smaller, slower and less," if the state and nation are to celebrate the next 100 years, he says. Lamm, 40, won election in 1974 after "opposing both motherhood and the flag," by supporting abortion and opposing Colorado as the site of the 1976 Olympics.

Denver, "The Queen City of the Plains," is a mile above sea level and has the second highest carbon monoxide level in the nation after Los Angeles. There were 2,442,145 registered motor vehicles in the state last December for 2.5 million people.

One of every 10 residents works for the Department of Defense, which provides an annual payroll of $1.35 billion. Just over $7 million worth of gold and silver was mined in 1975.

The federal government controls 23,939,394 acres of the state's range, forest and parklands — 36 per cent of the state and equal to Maine, Delaware and Rhode Island combined.

"The growing dependence on government aid and assistance is killing the community do-it-yourself spirit on which the West was founded," says Claire Stafford, news director of station KLMR in the eastern plains community of Lamar.

Colorado's "Sunset Bill," requiring government regulatory agencies to periodically prove their value or close shop, was passed this year and is the model for one now before Congress. Petitions to ban throw-away bottles, restrict nuclear power plant construction and increase taxes on mined minerals are being circulated this summer in hopes of November referendums. But the spirit of the Old West lingers. Lean men with wrinkled faces, dusty jackets and broad brimmed cowboy hats still make a living in the saddle, or at least behind the wheel of a four-wheel drive pickup truck with a CB radio and rifle rack at the back of the cab. State conservation officers note that farmers and ranchers are still permitted to kill marauding black bear without a license. Several hundred more are taken annually by licensed hunters. Only residents are permitted to hunt mountain goat and big horn sheep, but others come for deer, elk, antelope and mountain lion. And cattle and chickens outnumber the human population, 2 to 1.

WIDE OPEN SPACES — Horseback riders take a sunset ride as the Rocky Mountains form a scenic backdrop to an idyllic country scene less than ten miles from downtown Denver. Colorado is growing by leaps and bounds, having increased its population by 45 percent in the last 15 years, and is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year. (AP Wirephoto)

Rickshaws Are Nearly Extinct

By KHARK SINGH
HONG KONG (AP) — Rickshaws, a ubiquitous feature of the Hong Kong landscape, are fast becoming extinct in this British colony.

The most common and popular mode of travel since it was introduced into Hong Kong in 1888, the rickshaw has shrunk in numbers from the peak of 3,411 in 1924 to a mere 20 today.

An anachronism in modern day Hong Kong, the rickshaw was given a new lease of life in the 1950s and '60s by the large number of curious tourists and frolicking American servicemen.

Today, the tourist does not feel the same need to be driven around in a rickshaw to make his trip to this colony at the tip of southern China memorable and the flood of American GIs has been reduced to a trickle.

Contrary to popular beliefs, the rickshaw is not a Japanese or Chinese invention. In fact, the first rickshaw was designed by an American Baptist missionary, Jonathan Goble, in Japan in 1871.

According to some historians, Goble had the wooden carriage made so that his invalid wife could make long trips in the open air. Others say Goble's intention was to lighten the toll of the Japanese laborers.

At any rate, the jinricksha, or "man-powered vehicle" as it is known both in Japanese and Chinese, became so popular that it soon spread to China, Indonesia, Malaysia and even as far as India.

The Hong Kong Transport Department stopped issuing new rickshaw licenses in 1949. It has, however, not banned the man-drawn carriage altogether. The aim is to continue to renew existing licenses until the rickshaw puller grows too old to ply his trade.

Today's middle-aged rickshaw drivers still live in the past when their carriage was the king of the road.

One 60-year-old rickshawman said rickshawing was the "only livelihood" he knew.

He says he pays 30 Hong Kong dollars ($US6) annually to a rickshawmen's association that will take care of his "burial expenses" when he dies.

In the colony's congested roadways, there is little sympathy for the rickshaw "coolie."

"They are a dangerous nuisance," is the retort of most motorists when trying to overtake the sweating and panting rickshaw puller.

To some there is a romantic aura about the rickshaw and a leading hotel recently held a rickshaw derby to signal the end of a nostalgic era.

Say Costs More Than Doubled

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Good-year Tire and Rubber Co. says its domestic energy bill has more than doubled in the past five years, despite a reduction in purchasing and consumption.

Inflation has outstripped the company's 10 per cent reduction in purchasing and its 6.3 percent cut in energy consumption on each pound of product manufactured. In 1971, Goodyear paid out $33 million in energy costs, as compared to 1975's bill for $80 million.

LIZA ON STAGE 29—Liza Minnelli is "singing her heart out" before an audience of 600 at MGM Studios' Stage 29, starring in a new Martin Scorsese film "New York, New York," a big musical production. Minelli used to visit the stage when her father, director Vincent Minnelli, used the cavernous facility to film musicals in the late 40's. Recently specializing in drama, Scorsese has an affection for musicals of the past. (AP Wirephoto)

South Korean Govm't Action On Clergymen Stirs Concern

BY LEON DANIEL
SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Church leaders and Western diplomatic sources here share fears that a current wave of detentions may signal an all-out government crackdown on the clergy under President Park Chung-hee's tough anti-Communist law.

A dozen top leaders in Christian churches are among those who have been jailed without charge during the past few weeks. Government officials have confirmed the detentions, but they have not been reported in the Korean press, which is under tight government control.

Church sources said those jailed had been ministering to slum dwellers in this capital city of more than seven million persons.

"The government may be trying to eliminate any part of the church that has been working with the poor," said a church source who asked that he not be identified.

He said the government had succeeded in putting down student opposition to the Park regime but it evidently still fears an uprising among the poor.

He said the homes of those detained had been searched by national police who evidently "were looking for anything that might identify them as Communists."

The source maintained that none of those arrested could conceivably be Communists but the government had been trying to coerce citizens to brand the detainees as Marxists.

This would enable the government to prosecute the detainees under the anti-Communist law, which carries a maximum penalty of death.

Heretofore, government critics, including clergymen, have been sentenced to prison for violating presidential proclamations which prohibit criticism of the government.

Eighteen opposition leaders currently are on trial for criticizing the government. Among them is Kim Dae-jung, who ran for president against Park in 1971 in the days before the president assumed authoritarian powers.

Mrs. Kim said in an interview that the reason her husband is in jail and on trial is "political reprisal."

The government contends it must enforce tough laws because of the military threat from Communist North Korea, but Mrs. Kim has an answer for that.

"I want to see the restoration of democracy in South Korea," she said. "Without democracy there is little difference between South Korea and North Korea. There's no freedom in the North. If we have no freedom in the South we have nothing to fight for."

She said Park imposed authoritarian rule simply to remain in power.

"The greater the threat of aggression from the North," said Mrs. Kim, "the more we should demand democracy in the South. South Vietnam and Cambodia fell to the Communists because their leaders did not develop democracy."

Mrs. Kim said the United States has a "moral responsibility" to speak out against political repression in this country.

"This is because young American soldiers died here during the Korean War to defend freedom and democracy," she said.

Mrs. Kim said her telephone is tapped by government agents and her home is under constant surveillance by national police and agents of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

Adding Fat With Evening News

By CLARENCE ZAITZ
SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) —
The 6 o'clock television news may do more for obesity than it does for enlightenment, according to a psychiatrist who uses behavioral modification to help people lose weight.

James M. Ferguson, assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of California, San Diego, said people are triggered to think of eating by social, food, time, or environmental cues.

To many, 6 o'clock means dinnertime. And the evening television news means it is 6 o'clock, Ferguson explained.

But there are other cues which can touch off an eating desire, the doctor said. "Anything associated long enough with eating is likely to provoke a sensation of hunger."

It can be as unusual as the woman who always headed for the refrigerator the minute she opened the front door upon returning from shopping. For her, opening the front door was the trigger.

Ferguson gives some other examples: the vision or smell of food and food commercials on television, or a certain program which may have become associated with a 10 o'clock snack.

Food serves a lot of non-food functions, the psychiatrist says, and most overweight people rarely eat a lot because they are hungry. It is more likely they are conditioned to eat in response to other factors.

In the weight-loss clinics he has conducted at Stanford University and here, and also in his new book, "Habits, Not Diets — The Real Way to Weight Control," Ferguson stresses the need for his patients to "remove all reminders to eat."

He suggests taking the light out of the refrigerator, for example, and putting dimmer lights in the kitchen so food won't be readily seen. Keep all food hidden in containers if another suggestion. Leftovers are better thrown away than stashed in the refrigerator as temptation. If you save leftovers, he explains, label them for a particular use.

Though his underlying theme is behavioral modification, Ferguson admits the real modification is to the environment, and not to the individual.

People are conditioned to eat at a certain time, such as a mother is likely to eat when the kids come home from school and she prepares the routine snack. The desire to eat also arises from boredom and from anger, according to Ferguson.

A syndrome repeated in countless households, he said, goes something like this: eat a full meal, then sit down in a comfortable chair to watch television, get bored with the program, probably argue with the spouse, then head for the refrigerator to find something to eat.

When Ferguson screens applicants for his clinics he eliminates the depressed, those with mental problems and those with severe marriage problems.
"Where the priority is not weight loss, it just won't work," he explains.

He requires a detailed eating diary from his patients which leads to his admonition to eliminate food from throughout the house "and eat in the right place." If food is in the bedrooms, bathroom, attic, and on top of the television, he says, there is a tendency to eat it.

The doctor has some tips on eating — when it is done at the proper time — and the most important is "enjoy your food."
Other suggestions: pause between each bite and put down your utensils; delay between courses; ask for seconds, if necessary, but don't let anyone else serve you seconds; leave food on your plate.

Don't feel you have to eat everything, the doctor says.
"Better to put the food in the garbage than around your middle."

Wolfe's Home Opens Sunday

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —
The Thomas Wolfe Memorial, the Dixieland boarding house operated by his mother and in which the author lived his early years, will be opened to the public Sunday for the first time since extensive renovation was begun nine months ago.

It will be rededicated as a state historic site.

Among the guests present will be Wolfe's brother, Fred Wolfe, 82, of Spartanburg, S.C.; Ketti Frings, a Pulitzer Prize winning playwright and director who wrote the stage adaptation of Wolfe's "Look Homeward, Angel," and cast members of the production.

The house has been open to the public for a quarter of a century, but always on a seasonal basis. This marks a year-round operation schedule.

The house at 48 Spruce St. has been undergoing repairs, including the installation of heating and air conditioning systems, since it was closed last November.

The home was built about 1886. Wolfe's family move in from another home about 300 yards away when he was 6 years old. Wolfe lived there until he enrolled at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill at age 16. Wolfe died at the age of 37 in 1938.

The home was declared a National Historical Landmark in 1973. It is owned by the state and designated as a state historic site by the Division of Archives and History of the state Department of Cultural Resources.

On Saturday night there will be a performance of selections from the musical adoption of "Look Homeward Angel," which is scheduled to open on Broadway next year. Participating in the performance will be producer-director Philip Rose, songwriter Gary Geld, lyricist Peter Udell, and three actors. Sunday's activities begin with a concert at the house.

Both vulnerable. West deals.
The short trump hand, became the first to introduce the spade suit, and North allowed himself to be pushed all the way to six spades doubled.

As it turned out, the contract was played by the right hand—with North as declarer, a diamond lead would sink the slam, for West could ruff. From the South seat, the slam proved unbeatable.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead in dummy and cashed the ace and king of trumps.
When a diamond to the king revealed the break, declarer returned a diamond to the queen and ruffed a diamond.
All he had to do now was to play the king of clubs, and the defenders could make no more than their top club.

At the other table, North-South bid to six diamonds, but since North, the declarer, had little reason to suspect that East had all four missing trumps, he lost a trump trick in addition to the ace of clubs.

One of the more amusing incidents involving this hand took place when Israel held the East-West cards. West opened four clubs, which showed a solid, long major suit with at least an outside ace. East felt sure he knew which was his partner's suit, so he signed off at four spades. West interpreted this as a long, strong spade suit, so he cue-bid his ace of clubs in an effort to get to slam in a major. But now East decided his partner had forgotten this particular convention and really had a long club suit—so he passed!

The defense was not perfect, and declarer managed to go down only seven tricks.
However, 700 was a good score, for Israel bid and made six spades with the North-South cards.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 23, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You benefit today because of your knowledge of community affairs. A good day for examining contracts, statements for any errors.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact those who can help you in a business deal. Concise talks bring good results.
Evening is best for seeing friends and relaxing.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be active in financial affairs and get good results while the planets are favorable for such. Follow the good advice given you by a trusted adviser. Don't be too talkative today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get together with good friends and have a delightful time. A good day to plan a trip. Activity is keynote for today and tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can discuss personal problems with advisers and know that they will be kept confidential. You have better rapport with loved one. Be more gentle with this person.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan more time for friends you truly like and show your affection for them. Clarify personal ambitions in your mind; then proceed to attain them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to please higher-ups more and you can have greater benefits in the future.
Be sure appliances are working efficiently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are interested in expansion and can look into new projects with good results today. A new contact gives you information you are seeking.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to make deals that are favorable to you. Progress is keynote now.
Evening is ideal for romantic happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Meet with partners and work out new deals, come to right decisions on policy level. Get into civic work that results in goodwill.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find a new system that adds to your present efficiency and makes you a more valuable worker. Iron out problems with fellow workers.
Don't be so touchy and you get along better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show your finest talents to others and get ahead faster. Plan to do some entertaining. Your friends are just as far as your phone—call them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take time to make home improvements that make home more comfortable. A new interest could add much to your bank account.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those clever persons who can solve just about any problem there is and will also make an excellent salesperson. Be sure to give as fine an education as you can, but teach to control the temper which can be quite pronounced here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Carter Will Need Luck With Bureaucracy Goliath

A Carter Presidency
By NEAL R. PEIRCE
Carter and the Bureaucracy (Fourth in a series of five articles)

Having pledged himself to a stem-to-stern reorganization of the federal government, how can Jimmy Carter hope — if elected President — to get the cooperation of the huge, entrenched Washington bureaucracy, without whose aid he cannot govern at all? Columnist-author Neal R. Peirce probed Carter on this point in two extended personal interviews conducted shortly before the Georgian captured the Democratic presidential nomination.

This is the fourth of a five-part series based on those interviews as well as others

Peirce has had with Carter over the past five years, and extensive consultations with top Carter aides, with independent observers of his performance as governor and experts on the presidency.

Peirce is a contributing editor of the National Journal, writes a syndicated column focusing on the problems of states and local governments, and is author of a series of books on the regions of the U. S., including "The Megastates of America" and "The Deep South States of America." He is also an elections consultant-commentator for CBS News.

The plan could scarcely be more audacious. Serve a single term as governor of Georgia, in the allegedly primitive South. Revamp the state government structure after a struggle with your legislature. Then presume to run for President of the United States. Promise wholesale reorganization of the mammoth federal executive branch, disrupting its lines of contact to special interest groups and powerful Capitol Hill committee chairmen. And in short order, totally reorganize one of the biggest, most entrenched bureaucracies of world history.

So far the game plan of Jimmy Carter — farmer, planner, technocrat, dreamer from Plains, Ga. — has succeeded brilliantly. But can his luck continue? Can David slay the bureaucratic Goliath? Or would Carter, even if elected, get his coup at the hands of the Washington establishment? Would he be forced to settle for a compromise reorganization that's mere window dressing? Carter's Georgia reorganization plan, which consolidated a hodgepodge of some 300 agencies and commissions into 22 departments, went miles beyond window dressing. Former Georgia Mental Health Assn. president Beverly Long says that Carter "overhauled and made sense of a state government that had been proliferating into an incredibly complex mess. He really dragged us out of the dark ages — and in so doing upset a lot of appeacrats."

Carter in interviews just before his nomination in New York expressed the optimistic belief that as President he could repeat his Georgia success, stepping through the minefields of bureaucrat, special interest group and congressional opposition to get reorganization approved.

Immediately on taking office, he would ask Congress for sweeping authority to reorganize the federal government — a power Presidents actually had from 1949 until 1973, when the authority lapsed. Presidential reorganization plans would have the force of law unless vetoed by either the Senate or House within 60 days.

Carter would appoint joint citizen-civil servant reorganization task forces to draw up specific plans. He says that the process "will require at least a year," and that 1,900 federal departments could be telescoped into about 200.

Beyond that, Carter refuses to be pinned down on elements of a reorganization plan. But if the Georgia record is any guide, whole new cabinet-level departments would be likely to emerge, others to disappear. Thousands of functions would be merged. Right now, Carter charges, the federal government's organizational structure "is an illogical, bloated, impenetrable bureaucratic nightmare."

Carter's plan of approach in Washington is remarkably close to the one he employed in Georgia. He first persuaded the legislature to give the authority to reorganize, subject to veto in either house. He then appointed some 100 bright young executives from industry, campus and state government itself to work on his reorganization task forces. He drove them mercilessly, but remained intimately involved himself. Rep. Elliott Levitas (D-Ga.) notes: "Carter knew every cranny of reorganization — the costs of restructuring the people involved. He really mastered it."

Major new departments were set up in such fields as human services, natural resources and community development. Old agencies weren't just grouped under "umbrella" secretariats, Carter claims; they were actually abolished, their functions shifted to the new departments. State planning and budgeting, long thought to be incompatible, were combined in a single office under the governor's direct control. Concurrently, Carter instituted zero-based budgeting, a method to identify overlapping or obsolete government functions.

If Georgians thought Carter's reorganization would make state government smaller, they were disappointed. During his governorship, state payrolls rose 24 per cent, the budget $2 per cent. The Carter camp argues that without reorganization, the increases could have been larger, and that those years (1971-75) were marked by heavy inflation and general government growth across the U. S. Carter's administration dramatically increased the delivery of state services, in mental health centers (a key interest of Carter and his wife Rosalynn), alcoholism and narcotics treatment centers, prisons, halfway houses and education.

What reorganization tells about Carter is that he's fascinated by government organization and service delivery — how to make government more rational, but also to serve people's needs, even if that costs more. With George's new, simplified structure, says "even the most inarticulate and timid and illiterate person can understand how to have a request or question answered or to register a complaint or to express an unmet need. We simplified government, clarified it, made it accessible."

Many Georgians agree with that but still say the reorganization overreached itself in its mammoth new Department of Human Resources, a "catch-all" combining welfare, public health, drug abuse, vocational rehabilitation and mental health. The laudable objective was to substitute "one-stop shopping" for "pillar-to-post referral. For people needing social services. But the various bread of social workers resented being thrown together. The department upset old patronage privileges of county welfare directors. And it proved a night more of administration, especially in its first years.

Carter told me that his Georgia reorganization was "drastic" and "extremely controversial because it was so profound." That was no accident — it's the way Carter likes to cause change. He abhors "incrementalism." If a governor or President tries to effect reform "one tiny little phase at a time," he says, "then all those who see their influence threatened will... come out of the ratholes and they'll concentrate on undoing what you're trying to do. But if you have a bold enough, comprehensive enough proposal to rally the interest and support of the general electorate, then you can overcome that special-interest lobbying pressure."

That's the way, Carter says, he would attack reorganization, tax reform, welfare reform or any other big, controversial federal issue.

Perhaps a bit naively, he thinks he can neutralize some of the predictable opposition to reorganization in Washington.

He believes he could make federal employees "my allies, not my enemies." In Georgia, he claims, when he demonstrated to civil service employees "that their professional careers could be more productive — the clear assignment of responsibility, clear delineation of authority, minimum of red tape... and much more productive delivery of services — they became strong (But that was not true, others say, in all departments.)"

As for the special interest groups — especially the "poverty-industrial complex" of social workers and others whose salaries soak up much federal aid destined for the poor — Carter believes he can assuage them through comprehensive welfare reform and national health care.

And he thinks he can win Congress over by appealing to its public service sense and by suggesting that low public esteem of the lawmaking branch could be raised if it shared credit for government improvement. He'll try to get congressional candidates to commit themselves to reorganization in the fall campaign.

That, in any event, is what Carter says now as the harmonizer looking for easy election to the presidency and a smooth start in office. But in his book, "Why Not The Best?" he predicted "violent opposition" to reorganization "from those who now enjoy a special privilege, those who prefer to work in the dark, or those whose private fiefdoms are threatened."

Last month he told me that if he had "an ultimate disagreement" with official Washington or reorganization, "I would take my case directly to the people." He believes the people "could prevail over public employees, they could prevail over special interest groups, they could prevail over the members of Congress."

Could Jimmy Carter, if elected, fulfill his promises to reorganize the immense federal bureaucracy? Could he effect "tight businesslike management and planning techniques, utilizing the full authority and personal involvement of the President himself?"

Drug Smuggler Gets 2 Terms, $10,000 Fine

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — John David Steele, 52, former mayor of Hallandale, Fla., was sentenced to two consecutive five-year prison terms and fined $10,000 Wednesday for participating in an attempt to smuggle 22 tons of marijuana into North Carolina last January.

Steele, the last of eight men in the case to be sentenced by federal Judge John A. MacKenzie, received the stiffest term.

Prosecutors described him as the ringleader of the operation, which was broken up at the coastal town of Mesc in Pamlico County of east-central North Carolina. Steele pleaded guilty earlier this year to charges of conspiracy to smuggle marijuana and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute. He had been sought for more than five weeks after failing to appear for sentencing.

He was brought to North Carolina after being arrested in Orlando, Fla., July 4. He pleaded innocent this month to a charge of jumping bail.

Steele and the others were arrested when local authorities and U.S. Customs agents seized the fishing trawler "Lillian B." It was raided as the high-grade Colombian marijuana was unloaded on an isolated fishing dock.

Still unidentified is a body found May 18 in a shallow grave near the site of the raid. A tip from an anonymous source led to the body near a mobile home believed to have been used by the drug smugglers, authorities said.

Others sentenced in the case included Steele's 24-year-old son, J. David Steele, and Ernest Hugh Mayo, 49, owner of the seafood operation where the boat was raided.

Activities And Programs For Pre-Teens Set

The first session in a series of several activities and programs for pre-teens is being scheduled by the Pitt County 4-H Office for Wednesday, July 28.

The special-interest meeting on "Pre-Teen Entertaining" will be held in the Agricultural Extension building beginning at 9:30 and will end by 11:30. Young people between the ages of nine and 12 are invited to attend according to Mrs. Sue B. May, home economics extension agent.

Future sessions will include decorating with flowers — fresh and dried.

The class number will be limited and pre-registration will be necessary by calling 758-1196 before 5 p.m. Friday of this week. No charge will be made but advanced registration is required.

Toledo Museum Acquires Work

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A major work by Spanish painter Bartolome Esteban Murillo has been acquired by the Toledo Museum of Art.

Otto Wittmann, museum director, described the 6-by-5 foot "Adoration of the Magi" as "the most important Spanish painting to be acquired by the museum in almost two decades."

The painting is said to have been painted around 1650 in Seville. Murillo lived from 1618 to 1682.

Bike Committee In City Friday

The North Carolina State Bicycle Advisory Committee will hold its July meeting in Greenville this week.

The meeting, scheduled for Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., will be held in the Greenville City Council Chambers, at the Greenville City Hall.

The Advisory Committee will be in Greenville to meet with local officials and citizens from eastern North Carolina. Bicycle issues of statewide as well as local significance will be discussed.

The public is invited to attend and offer thoughts and suggestions for improvements to the existing situation for bicyclists in North Carolina.

Among the issues to be discussed are the local bicycle program in eastern North Carolina, the Demonstration Program, bicycle safety and the work of the committee.

For further information, write to Curtis B. Yates, Bicycle Coordinator, N. C. Department of Transportation, P. O. Box 25201, Raleigh, N. C., 27611, or call (919) 829-2804.

Anniversary Of Church Sunday

Sunday marks the 24th birthday of St. James United Methodist Church and has been designated as Bicentennial and anniversary Sunday.

The order of worship will follow a service written by John Wesley almost 200 years ago. The program will be presented by the Rev. Roderick Randolph and will emphasize Methodist heritage.

A family picnic has been planned for Sunday evening at six o'clock and will be held on the church grounds. Kenneth Hite, one of the first chartered members, will give a brief history of the church. A birthday cake will be presented to the church.

The public is invited to attend the service and luncheon.

Jaguar Is Back In Zoo

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A deputy has shot Frosie the jaguar with a tranquilizer gun, and the 200-pound cat is back at the research institute from which she escaped. She had romped in the Chatham County woods for more than two days.

Her owner, Dr. Michael Bleyman, says she is in remarkably good condition. The jaguar, along with tigers, lions, a leopard and another jaguar, are kept at Bleyman's Carnivore Evolution Research Institute just outside Pittsboro.

The cat was spotted near dusk Tuesday less than a mile from the institute. "We were in the area where she'd been spotted, and I was running the flashlight along the edge of the road, when I saw her about 10 or 12 feet away," Chief Deputy W.C. Willette said.

"There she was, just sticking her head out. One of the other deputies picked up a tranquilizer gun off the hood of the car and shot her while I held the flashlight on her eyes."

Frosie then ran and was pursued by dogs brought by the deputies. She eluded her hunters until about 11 p.m., but it took two more shots of the tranquilizer before she could be loaded into a cage and taken home.

One dog used to trail the jaguar was missing following the capture. Willette said it is assumed Frosie killed it.

Diver, 65, Was Victim

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — A 65-year-old diver died Wednesday after becoming unconscious three minutes after surfacing following half an hour's work 110 feet down.

The diver, Fred Curran of Cornwallis Heights, Pa., was stricken on the research vessel Aquanaut off the North Carolina coast. It was not learned immediately what type of research was being done.

Curran was taken by helicopter to the Coast Guard Air Station at Elizabeth City, where a flight surgeon pronounced him dead.

A spokesman at the Coast Guard Rescue Coordination Center in Portsmouth, Va., said the 65-foot Aquanaut, whose home port is Barnegat Light, N. J., was approximately 30 miles southeast of North Carolina's Oregon Inlet.

The spokesman gave this account: Curran died after his second dive of the day. He received heart massage and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation aboard the Aquanaut, and revival efforts continued aboard the Coast Guard helicopter.

The first dive was at 9 a.m. and Curran was down 110 feet for 22 minutes. He underwent decompression for five minutes after that dive. The second dive was at 1:30 p.m.

The Coast Guard said it was not advised as to whether decompression was used after the second dive, but the diver's air tanks were empty.

Openings At Summer Camp

Youths ages 9-13 have an opportunity to close-out their summer with an exciting week at 4-H camp August 9-14, at Mitchell 4-H Camp near Swansboro.

A variety of activities including swimming, handicrafts, archery, landsports, canoeing, and sailing are featured in the camp week. Cost for the week is $45, to include food, lodging, insurance, instruction, and transportation.

For further information or to receive an application, contact Michael A. Davis, 4-H Coordinator, 758-1186.

EASY BUTTER

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Texas A and M researchers say it may have been easier for traveling women to make butter than those who stayed home.

The researchers say those who stayed home had to churn butter by hand, but women crossing the nation in covered wagons used the swaying motion of the wagon to accomplish the same thing.

Plains, Ga., Braces To Avoid Unwanted Effects

By LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer
PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Although delighted that their tiny community has become a tourist attraction, the people of Plains want to make sure it doesn't attract souvenir shacks, beer joints and hot dog stands as well.

The economic impact of Jimmy Carter's presidential nomination on his sleepy home town is just beginning to be felt. Tourists by the hundreds wander down Main Street every day, buying Carter posters and buttons at Hugh Carter's antique store and generally boosting business everywhere. The sale of Neal's Sandwich Shop, a tiny shack on the outskirts of Plains and the only place in town offering prepared food, apparently will be the first test of the town fathers' determination to maintain control over the expansion of Plains.

Boze Godwin, the young mayor pro tem, said the City Council would try to thwart the plans of the new owner to expand the shop by putting up a prefabricated, trailer-like structure. "We want new businesses, but only if they're permanent buildings," Godwin said. "We want to maintain the looks of the town." Last month, a delegation of businessmen and officials from Plains and nearby Americus traveled to Johnson City, Tex., the home town of former President Lyndon Johnson, to pick up pointers on how others dealt with such problems.

They now are engaged in long-term planning to insure the orderly growth of Plains, founded in 1890 when a railroad depot was located here and officially named the Plains of Dura, the site of a biblical battle fought by King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. State Sen. Hugh Carter, Jimmy's cousin and one of the town's leading businessmen, is not worried about the possibility of "riffraff" coming into Plains since, as he says, most of the vacant land within the city limits is owned by himself, Jimmy and another local family.

He and his cousin are not in a hurry to sell off the land Hugh said, pointing out that "neither one of us is starving. There is no urgent need." But he said he would consider selling one of his lots for the construction of a motel. This town of 683 people has no motels, hotels or restaurants. Reporters covering Carter and Secret Service agents guarding him have to stay in Americus, 10 miles away, or Albany, 38 miles from Plains.

Zoning ordinances, a new building code and the Carters' with control of the land hopefully will prevent the influx of undesirable businesses, town officials say, but they are worried about the land just beyond the city limits. "There is nothing we can do about development there," Godwin said. "We have no control over it. We'll just have to see what happens." Plains businessmen and officials also want to make sure that the Democratic presidential nominee has some input in the plans for Plains' growth.

"Jimmy is going to have to have a say-so in everything from real estate to tourists, from hot dog stands to car rentals," said junior high school principal Buford Reese. "We want him to be pleased with it." The invasion of tourists and newsmen already has had an appreciable effect on the businesses in Plains.

Godwin, who owns the only drug store in town, said his business has increased so much he is 10 days behind in orders and hasn't been able to keep up with his accounting.

He says he wants to stock more Jimmy Carter items, the number of which is skyrocketing. They include posters, tee shirts, buttons, postcards, bumper stickers, gold-plated peanut pins and even a hand-drawn map of Plains showing the Carter home, the depot, the press office and other attractions. "Tourists want all of these things. They expect them,"

Godwin said. "They'll buy anything." He added he had not raised his prices since the tourists started coming, recalling that Johnson City businessmen had told his delegation "to treat tourists nice and don't gouge them."

The residents of Plains have indeed treated their visitors well. They don't anticipate losing their excitement over their town's new-found fame, and they're not worried about any possible long-term bad effects. "Plains used to be the dullest town in Georgia," said a young woman resident.
